'Progress' Is '62 Keyword In U.S. Army

WASHINGTON (ANS) — Progress and modernization were keywords for the Army during 1962.

The reorganization of the Army, which affects the management of the Department of the Army rather than its combatant functions, became effective in February, 1962.

Evidence of the new look was clearly visible in the establishment of two new commands. The U.S. Army Combat Developments Command and the U. S. Army Materiel Command.

The Combat Developments Command of Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, began operations on July 1 at Fort Belvoir, Va.

"How should the Army be organized?"; "How should the Army be equipped?"; "How should the Army fight?" — These are the broad questions being answered by the new command.

Answers to these questions are sought through extensive study programs and refined through operations research, war gaming, field experimentation and troop testing.

Encompassed within the overall Combat Developments Command are 17 boards, agencies and 19 field agencies.

Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson, Jr., commanding general of the Army Materiel Command, marked the command's assumption of operational control on Aug. 1, as, "an unprecedented challenge and an unlimited opportunity."

With headquarters in Washington, D.C., the Army Materiel Command is responsible for most of the materiel functions formerly performed by the Army's Technical Services, including research and development, procurement and production, storage and distribution, inventory management, maintenance and disposal.

AMC operates through seven major subordinate commands and directs the activities of depots, laboratories, arsenals, proving grounds, test ranges, procurement offices and transportation terminals throughout the continental United States.

In explaining the challenge and the opportunity, Gen. Besson further stated: "It is a challenge because never before has it been so important that our Army have the finest possible weapons and equipment. It is an opportunity because never before had there been a single integrated organization specifically conceived and designed to provide the Army's weapons and equipment."

BABY DERBY WINNER . . . Mrs. Wayne Robertson holds her infant daughter Patricia, apparent winner in The Bayonet's "1963 Stork Derby." Little Patricia was born one minute after the new year was rung in, weighing six pounds, 11½ ounces. Her father is Acting Sgt. Robertson, Company D, 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division. The Stork Derby, held annually by The Bayonet in cooperation with Columbus area retail merchants, offers a host of prizes for the first baby of the year born to military parents.

Sabin Oral Polio Vaccine Will Be Distributed Here

Fort Benning military dependents will receive the Sabin oral polio vaccine in January by alphabetical groups at the Dependent Immunization Clinic in Bldg. 4223.

Preschool children and adults whose names begin with the letters A through G will be immunized Jan. 8 and 10 from 8 to 10 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.

The H through O group will receive the vaccine during the same hours Jan. 15 and 17 and the P through Z group Jan. 22 and 24.

Follow Schedule

The clinic will immunize dependents who attend off-post schools from 8 to 11 a.m. Jan. 12, 19, and 26, using the same three alphabetical groups.

Personnel are requested to adhere closely to the schedule to facilitate immunization of all post dependents.

Military personnel will be immunized according to schedules to be handled by units and dispensaries.

Officials urge all personnel, regardless of age or previous immunization with Salk vaccine, to take the oral vaccine.

Found Effective

Salk vaccine has been found effective in preventing development of polio but has not been effective in preventing an immune individual from passing the polio virus on to another person, officials said.

Sabin oral vaccine has been effective in preventing a case of polio and the spread of the causative virus to another person, according to Capt. Leonard F. Greenburg, chief of the Preventive Medicine Division of Martin Army Hospital.

"Since the Salk polio vaccine became available in 1955, incidence of this dread crippler has decreased," Capt. Greenberg said. "However, many cases still occur each year."

"In 1961, only 1,300 people in the United States had polio as contrasted with 8,200 cases in 1959," he continued.

Figures are not complete for 1962, but officials feel they will be a record low in medical history of the United States, the captain said.

Increase Due In Deductions From Wages

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The service member's net base pay will be slightly less this month. Social Security tax deductions will go from 3⅛ per cent to 3⅝.

The reduction will hardly be noticed by those eligible for quarters allowances since they will be receiving substantial increases under the new quarters pay boost.

This tax increase is required by law. Under current laws the tax will not be increased again until 1966. The maximum amount that can be deducted during the year is $174.

For persons who earn less than $4,800 per year, the tax will be deducted in 12 equal monthly payments. Deductions for those earning more occur during the months in which they earn their first $4,800.

An E-6 with over 14 years service will pay a monthly $9.97 tax on his $3,300 per year base pay throughout the year. A lieutenant colonel or the equivalent with more than 20 years service and a $745 monthly pay rate will pay $27.01 per month for the first six months, $11.94 for the seventh month and nothing more for the balance of the year.

The quarters allowance increase, more than offsetting the increased tax deduction for those drawing the allowances, will raise enlisted quarters pay 7.6 to 55.6 per cent over current allowances, depending upon the grade and number of dependents. It will boost officer allowances from 17 per cent to 28.8 per cent.

INSTANT CARGO DELIVERY . . . The Army's CV-2 Caribou delivers a palletized cargo by the "touch and go" snatch system during a recent demonstration at Fort Eustis, Va. The snatch system has many applications in forward combat areas. Landing fields are not necessary for the rapid discharge of cargo with this method. Relatively easy to install, the system employs water-filled cylinders with paddle wheels to generate drag on a nylon ribbon. A hook is dropped from the aircraft to a restraining ribbon anchored to the ground and the cargo is pulled from the rear ramp making a relatively smooth landing on the ground.

45 'Stars' Back After Filming Movie

Forty-five post personnel who participated in the production of a training film at Fort Polk, La., have returned to the post.

They are members of a basic platoon from Company B, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade. For the project, the platoon also include selected personnel from other companies of the 39th and 29th Infantries.

The platoon went to Louisiana Nov. 26 under the command of 2nd Lt. Jay P. Reakirt.

The film in which they appear is "The Rifle Squad and Platoon in Attack." It will be used at The Infantry School as a supplement to rifle squad and platoon attack training.

The movie was produced by the Army Pictorial Center, Long Island, N. Y. It was coordinated by the Editorial and Pictorial Office of The Infantry School.

In addition to participating in the production of the training film, the Fort Benning platoon staged a demonstration at Fort Polk Dec. 14, which was seen by 150 officials of the U. S. Continental Army Command, Third and Fourth U. S. Armies, and Reserve Component divisions.

The demonstration was planned to provide commanders a graphic picture of training requirements of Infantry squads and platoons on live fire attack courses.

U. S. Money System Once Big Headache

One of the most urgent tasks facing the newly-independent United States in the late 1700's was the establishment of a monetary system. In 1785, when the Constitution was adopted, money matters in the new republic were in confusion — most coins in general use were those of foreign nations.

This chaos was a hold-over from the colonial period when each colony legalized its own coins at whatever values it chose. Colonists used coins from many countries including France, Spain, Portugal, Germany, Sweden, the Netherlands and even Arabian coins brought in by pirates.

In fact, a Spanish coin variously called the pillar dollar, milled dollar or "piece of eight" was so familiar to the colonists that Thomas Jefferson recommended the adoption of a corresponding dollar as the basic unit of the new U.S. system.

Jefferson, as President Washington's Secretary of State, and Alexander Hamilton, the first Secretary of the Treasury, were mainly responsible for an Act of Congress, dated April 2, 1792, setting up the first U. S. mint in Philadelphia.

For a number of reasons progress at the new mint was slow — the system was entirely new, incorporating all new units based on the decimal system, and the arts of coinage were still unfamiliar. Pieces of eight continued to be used for about two decades.

The first coins — copper one cent and half-cent pieces, were struck early in 1793. Other coins provided for by Act of Congress were the gold eagle ($10), half-eagle and quarter-eagle; and the silver dollar, half-dollar, quarter-dollar, dime (then spelled "disme") and half-dime.

Congress required the coins to bear "an impression emblematic of liberty," the word "Liberty" and the date. Therefore, the obverse side of the first coins showed a bust representing the Goddess of Liberty. On the reverse side appeared a 13-link chain enclosing the motto "We Are One."

The word "Liberty" has been in general use since the first minting.

Light Beam Being Tested To Tell Range

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A crossbow far more accurate than the old-fashioned weapon used by William Tell to split the apple has been developed by engineers of Raytheon's Missile and Space Division.

The new "crossbow" is an electronic instrument firing a 20-foot lance of light to measure distances to targets in space or on the battlefield.

The engineers hope that this new highly accurate laser range finder will help solve critical ranging problems entailed in safe rendezvous of satellites and other space vehicles.

On the battlefield the device fires non-deadly spears of light which give target distances for pin-point shelling of the enemy.

Weighing less than 30 pounds, the portable ranger makes use of pin-thin beams produced by lasers and the principles of radar measurement.

With the speed of light, (186,000 miles per second), the light-lance zips to distant target and reflects back. A photo-multiplier tube and miniature computer work together to calculate instantly the time it takes for the beam's round trip. The elapsed time matched against the known speed of light gives quick and accurate distance measurement.

For field use it can be mounted on a rifle stock with the heaviest portion, the power supply, carried in belt or back packs. In the air the light-weight equipment can be nose-mounted on most planes.

Major Unit Play's 2nd Half Is Set

By Leo A. Zani

The Major Unit Basketball League will open its second half of play at Briant Wells Field House Monday night.

The official opening will set the 151st Engineers against the Student Brigade at 6:30. In the second game of the evening, the 10th Artillery will tap off against LAAC at 8 p.m.

The Student Brigade compiled a 5-2 record and finished in a three-way tie for second place as the first half ended and is one of the top choices to win the second half.

Their opponents in the first game, the 151st Engineers, found the goings tough in the first half of play, finishing with a 0-7 record. The Engineers' only bright star was Clarence Marble who finished out the first half of play with a 17.3 game average.

The 10th Arty, which finished third with a 4-3 record, produced the league's fourth highest score in Charles Barnett. Barnett ended with a first-half average of 18.1 per game.

LAAC, which finished with a 1-6 record is hoping that a win from the artillerymen can put them in top contention for first place honors.

We're a Year Older -- Don't Brood About It!

No matter when our birthdays fall, the advent of a new year makes all of us feel older — but is it anything to get discouraged about? We Americans have been called a nation that makes a cult of youth, and to some extent the charge is a valid one. We do put the accent on youth, but not necessarily at the expense of our senior citizens, many of whose eminence grows steadily with the years.

Take only one example—a man who has been around the musical world a long, long time. He's the noted maestro Leopold Stokowski whose career has been a series of spectacular triumphs on the conductor's podium. The white-maned Mr. Stokowski admits to being 75, but there are people who'll tell you he could add from five to 10 years to that figure.

Now, conducting a symphony orchestra is a physically demanding business—especially as the athletic Mr. Stokowski goes about it—and you'd think that a man in his mid-seventies would let up a bit and begin to take things easy.

Not this maestro. The man who molded the Philadelphia Orchestra into one of the world's great musical ensembles is still at it. In 1962 he made contribution to our cultural life by founding the American Symphony Orchestra which is now performing magnificently under his baton to wildly cheering audiences.

Countless other examples of Americans in their seventies and eighties still active and energetic in public life could be cited. Mr. Stokowski — ramrod-straight, supple and commanding — is a pertinent one because of his new orchestra's splendid debut. He isn't the type to let one more calendar year get him down. (AFPS)

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. David E. Rebbin

Last week we discussed what to look for when buying a car. This week we will discuss the subject, can you afford that car?

Let us suppose that you have found the dream car of your life. It's true that it does cost a little more than you really wanted to pay, but then doesn't everything?

The price on the windshield is $2,300. The salesman tells you that all you have to do is give him a down payment of $300 and then make payments of $75 per month for the next three years, which would cover the cost of the car plus finance charges and interest. You and your wife both agree that you can make it if you only tighten up your purse strings and cut out a few non-essentials.

Now, let's look at what may happen. Multiply out that monthly payment, and see what you get. I came out with $2,700, or $400 more than the price on the windshield. But don't forget that you have already made a down payment of $300. So that means that you actually have paid $3,000 for a $2,300 car.

But that's not all. The price does not include sales tax (about $90 in this case), nor does it include insurance that the finance company requires you to take out in order to protect their interest in the event of your death or the car's being destroyed in an accident.

When you figure this out, it comes to an extra $10 per month.

Then, let's say that you didn't read last week's article, and that you have to have $150 worth of repairs done to the car. Be careful—the sale of a used car carries no guarantee other than that the seller has title to the car unless the contract provides otherwise. Get any guarantees in writing.

In any case, say that six months later you decide that you cannot afford to keep the car, so you miss a payment. The finance company demands immediate payment of the whole amount due. You forgot to read the contract again. Most contracts give them the right to do this. Naturally, if you cannot make the payment, you can't pay the whole amount due, so they repossess the car and put it up for sale at a "public" auction.

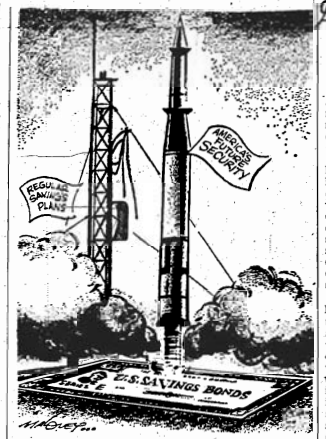
Usually, this auction is not public at all, but is attended only by a few people, most of whom are used car dealers. The bidding is almost always well below the "blue book" value of the car.

In any case, they sell the car for $1,200. But you're not through yet. Under Georgia Law, you are still liable to the finance company for the balance due under the contract.

In your case, let's figure it out. The original amount due was $3,000. You made six payments of $75 each, so the amount due now is $1,200, so you still owe the finance company $1,300.

In other words, the car has cost you $1,750 for six month's use. That means in effect, you rented a car for the sum of $290 a month.

True, this is an extreme case, but before you buy that car, stop and check, afford it after all!



WAC Anniversary 'A Debt and a Date'

"A debt to democracy, a date with destiny," spoke Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, first director of the Women's Army Corps. As these words passed her lips in 1942 they rang out to women from all walks of life who had chosen to serve their country as members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps—a Corps which was to gain new vigor and vitality and, in 1943, be redesignated the Women's Army Corps and, in 1948, become a part of the Regular Army.

From its small beginning in the early days of World War II, the echo swelled—by the close of the war approximately 100,000 women were paying the debt and meeting the date in the United States, England, India, Italy, New Caledonia, Africa, Australia, Hawaii, France, China, Leyte and the Philippines.

A Corps born of necessity and nurtured by sacrifice, today stands as a proud nucleus of 10,000 women, serving around the world—reliving the words, "a debt to democracy, a date with destiny."

Campaign for Concern

By Chaplain (Capt.) C. H. Garner

"I looked on my right hand, and beheld, but there was no man that would know me; refuge failed me; no man cared for my soul" — (Psalms 142:4)

Many campaigns we have known. In some of them we have participated with more or less success. But I believe we need a campaign for concern, and this campaign for compassionate concern should be given priority over some other campaigns, or carried along with all worthy campaigns to assure their success.

Fredrick Taylor, more in lamentation about Christians than in criticism of Christians, recently said: "It seems we have lost a word out of our Christian vocabulary, the word concern." A preacher with spiritual passion, knowing that the need of the hour is a Holy concern for the souls of men, made this assertion: "The average church member has not the slightest spiritual concern for the salvation of other people."

I fear many unsaved could indict us and find us guilty by looking at us and saying "No man cared for my soul." Are we really guilty under the indictment that we do not have spiritual concern for the salvation of the lost? Do we ever say to the lost what Whitfield said: "I am willing to go to prison and death for you, but I am not willing to go to heaven without you?" Will the unsaved ever give us attentive ears if they are convinced that our concern for their souls is only a casual care that is afflicted with intermittency? Are there not to many refined and self - satisfied, smugly comfortable, semi-humans, in their wholly good natured indifference, who dislikes anything which disturbs their rest? Are not too many Christians, with the unsaved, all around us, living with the smug contentment of country gentlemen rather than with the courage of Christian Crusaders? Are not the most appaling scandals and evils that threaten a nation's moral life passed by with a mere shrug of the shoulders?

Jesus especially cared but more than others could care, Jesus cared. He was concerned as in unspeakable anguish, He contemplated the catastrophe that would come to Jerusalem, and wept. By His back cut to shreds, by the merciless scourge, by His checks from which cruel fingers plucked out his beard, by the dirty spectrum that befouled His face, by the iron spikes that nailed His quivering flesh and jerking feet to the cross, by the thorns that punctured His Holy brow, by the thirst that was not quenched by vinegar and gall, by His agony of soul beyond the tortures of hell, Jesus declared that He cared for the souls of men.

In 1963 I urge upon all Christians everywhere a campaign of spiritual care for the souls of men.

Murphy was wounded in the leg, but continued firing and brought the attack to a halt, thereby saving his company from possible encirclement and destruction.

Opens Shelter Testing Center

FT. BELVOIR, Va. (AFPS) — A Protective Structures Development Center for the Office of Civil Defense has been opened here.

The Center is the first facility of its type — specifically designed to permit the Office of Civil Defense, on a continuing basis, to develop and test shelters, shelter equipment, occupancy procedures and radiation shielding techniques for the protection of the population in a nuclear attack.

In announcing the Center's readiness for operations, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Civil Defense) Steuart L. Pittman said:

"The Center provides the first facility to test new designs and new building ideas. Manufacturers can use it to erect shelters and components for evaluation.

"We urge individuals, business, industry and the architects and engineers of the country to make full use of the Center to increase the nation's fund of knowledge about nuclear protection."

DEATH-DEALING ENTAC STREAKS TO TARGET FROM ITS GROUND MOUNT

Infantry Missiles Deal Death Blow

Death to the Tank!

This is the mission of the Infantryman's missiles the SS-10 and the ENTAC. Using these weapons, a well trained gunner can turn a menacing "iron monster" into a flaming hulk at distances of approximately one mile.

And while guiding these missiles, which are capable of destroying any known tank in the world, the gunner can take advantage of cover and concealment, then move before effective return fire can be directed at him.

The ENTAC, which weighs only 26.7 pounds and is easily hand-carried, can be launched either from a dismounted position or from a vehicle located in defilade. The ability to be fired from positions in defilade, gives this missile a distinct advantage over other existing antitank weapons.

The SS-10 is similar to the ENTAC except that it is heavier and needs more guidance equipment. At present, it is being phased out of the weapons arsenal and replaced by the ENTAC.

TIS Course

The Infantryman learns to use these deadly weapons from the Missile Team headed by Maj. Earl H. Hale Jr., of the Antitank Missile Committee, Weapons Department of The Infantry School.

An example of the finished product of the Missile Team's instruction is Sp4 Engene Schroeder, a gunner from Elmhurst, N.Y. He has qualified with both the SS-10 and ENTAC missiles and has an impressive record of 33 hits out of 36 missiles fired.

To qualify for his instruction, Specialist Schroeder was required to have an "A" profile and 20-20 uncorrected vision. He also had to pass an eye-and-hand coordination test and a stiff comprehension examination.

Once in the course, Specialist Schroeder quickly learned that he was in for four weeks of intensive training - training which would teach him the "nuts and bolts" of these two missile systems.

Experienced Staff

SFC Warren Bouyear, who has been in the missile field several years, taught Specialist Schroeder and his classmates the description, nomenclature, and functioning of the missile systems. To insure that the students would be able to apply this information, MSgt. Virgil Webb then conducted practical exercises regarding malfunctions and maintenance of the missiles and guidance equipment. This enables the students to perform corrective actions in the field.

The foundation upon which the teamwork of the five-man anti-tank squad is laid is, of course, crew drill. SFC Bouyear taught the methods of ENTAC and conducted crew drill until each man was thoroughly familiar with the duties of every squad member.

A considerable portion of the course is devoted to gunner training. This training teaches each man to perform the gunner's most important function — that of "flying" the missile on a simulated flight. By a careful individual evaluation during this phase, experienced instructors like SFC Armando Sanchez could determine who within Specialist Shredder's class would have an opportunity to become gunners.

"When I first saw the Electronic Simulator used for training it looked like a 'monster' but SFC Sanchez made it easy to understand," Specialist Schroeder commented.

When using the simulator, the student has to control a blue dot of light, representing a missile, on an oscilliscope (something like a T.V. screen). "We did not spend more than 20 minutes of each hourly period on the device because of the strain on our eyes," related Specialist Schroder.

Prior to range firing, Specialist Schroeder was taught the "art" of engaging moving and stationary targets. He also learned the necessity for range cards in Technique of Fire to determine what can and cannot be done with the missles in a tactical situation.

Range Firing

Range firing, conducted in the final week of training, is as exciting as it is important for the students. This is where the squad members, like Specialist Schroeder, prove themselves after three weeks of preparation. Every student alternately takes part as squad leader, gunner, assistant gunner, or ammunition handler during these fire sessions.

The squad leader is determined by virtue of his rank. Those personnel selected by SFC Sanchez and the other instructors attempt to qualify as gunners. After each candidate has fired six missiles he is tentatively designated as either a gunner or an assistant gunner. The proud, new gunners then "fly" four additional missiles. The remaining students perform as ammunition handlers. Final determination as to which students will be officially designated "gunner" is made by a faculty board upon completion of the course.

The training these men receive at The Infantry School provides them with the skill and imbues them with the confidence needed to do their job as "TANK KILLERS."

Wasn't yesterday the hardest day of school this year?

Can you believe the holidays are over? That we have only a little more than three weeks until the end of the first semester?

Fort Benning is plunged once more into the dreariness of winter in Georgia. School is a drag and nothing ever happens.

But lest we forget too quickly the joys of the last two weeks, I'd like to remind you of just a few of the parties which made the season so festive.

After the JADA dance, Lynda Taft had a late party with plenty of food and music. Bridge was played. (Really I have gotten to the point where I think Bridge plays people!)

Last Saturday night Brat Barracks held a semi-formal dance. Music was by the Abstracts. Many people were there to enjoy the beautiful decorations. I understand Mr. Spurlin got some interesting photographs.

This same evening the Sigma Delta Beta sorority had a Christmas social in the Supper Club. The receiving line was in the Anzio Room of the Main Club.

All age groups had their New Year's Eve parties. They were all fun.

Perhaps even more than the parties, you remember the other side of the holidays . . . The Christmas caroling, the donation of baskets for needy families, going to the late service on Christmas Eve, exchanging gifts with your friends.

And now for the friends. All the "regulars" were home again — the gang from North Georgia, the circle from Georgia (Yes, Steve Huppert, that means you), the boys from Jacksonville State, and the Auburn crowd.

Then there were some who don't get home so often. Jerry Vassar from Williams and Mary, Bonnie Male from Sacred Heart, Liz Reynolds from Radford, Rich Caldbeck from Loyola (Chicago), John Staples from the University of Miami, Wayne Corder from the Air Force Academy.

Susie Bacharach, whose parents are now stationed in Germany, visited friends in Columbus and Fort Benning. Susie attends Washington State University.

Jeff Scott's parents are overseas too, and as a Christmas present from his grandparents, he got to come back to Benning from Fort Belvoir, Va.

Other visitors to Fort Benning over the holidays were Dave Johns, of Neptune Beach, Fla., and Janet Tominac who now lives in Hattiesburg, Miss. Dave stayed with Tommy Hawkins and Richard Sheely. Janet was the guest of Myra and Pat Paulick.

And then there is John Latin, who came all the way from Virginia Military Institute to escort me to the JADA dance, and then ceased basking in the Florida sun to come back up to go with me to the Sigma Delta Beta social. His feelings were just a little hurt because I inadvertantly omitted his name from this column last week. He is gone now. He is missed now, too.

In the old tradition, I should make public to you all my New Year's Resolutions. I probably should have asked a few prominent members of our group for their resolutions too. I did not, but I do promise that in the year of 1963, I will try to do better.

Mrs. Glenn Is Named Lady of '62

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The wife of the first American astronaut to orbit the earth has been named U.S. Lady-of-the-Year for 1962 in the annual contest sponsored by the magazine U.S. Lady.

A Marine wife for 20 years, Mrs. John H. Glenn Jr. was nominated for the title by Mrs. David M. Shoup, wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps. It is the first time that it has fallen to a Marine wife in the seven years of the contest.

A board composed of the wives of the service Secretaries and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, a representative group of servicewomen and wives of enlisted men chose Annie Glenn as best exemplifying "the highest qualities of self-less devotion to her family, her service, her community and country."

Mrs. Glenn's famous husband paid her a homelier public tribute when he addressed a joint session of Congress. Pointing to Annie Glenn in the balcony he called her "the real rock in my family."

First Lady's Ball Gown Joins Historic Collection

To one of the Smithsonian Institution's most popular exhibits has now been added the gown Mrs. John F. Kennedy wore at her husband's Inauguration Ball on Jan. 20, 1961.

The display, Dresses of the First Ladies of the White House, has just marked its 50th anniversary. With the addition of Mrs. Kennedy's gift it now includes dresses or other costumes of the nation's First Ladies from Martha Washington up to the present day.

It dates from 1912 when Mrs. William Howard Taft presented her own Inaugural Ball gown to the Smithsonian after two ladies prominent in Washington society proposed the idea. Former wives of Presidents and their descendants were invited to contribute to the collection which, since the Taft Administration, has received a dress from every First Lady in our history.

Not all are Inaugural Ball gowns, however, these numbering 14. Nor is the exhibit, which is housed in the Institute's Arts and Industries Building, limited only to the wives of Presidents.

Mariner Transmits Data From 36 Million Miles

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The voyage of the space-craft Mariner II, now space age history, has left the world's scientists fidgeting to get at the mass of statistics hummed 36 million miles across space.

The California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) manages this interplanetary mission, along with other similar programs for NASA.

Although the full significance of the Venus flight is unknown, NASA's Administrator James E. Webb described it as the "most significant and perhaps the most spectacular of our scientific efforts to date."

"This was really a crash effort," says V. C. Larsen Jr., JPL's assistant director for business administration.

Chief cause of the high-pressure deadline was the fixed firing opportunity when Venus and Earth occupy relative positins favorable to the voyage. This 54-day period occurs only once every 19 months.

The pressure was heightened by the failure of Mariner I, which was destroyed less than five minutes after lift-off from Cape Canaveral on July 22, 1962, because its booster veered off course.

The spectacular success of Mariner II's mission may throw considerable light on such scientific puzzlers as the composition of Venus' atmosphere and the temperature of the planet's surface.

A JPL man declared with understandable pride: "No other spacecraft — ours or Russian — traveled as far, telemetering back information all the way."

Among other accomplishments, Mariner II set a long-distance communication record of 36 million miles and executed the first successful guidance maneuver of space.

Two New Generals In Division

11:00 A.M. . . . Maj. Gen. Billingslea

Billingslea and Corley Receive Stars From Dept. of Army, New Year's Day

The Commanding General and Assistant Division Commander of the highly trained, combat-ready 2nd Infantry Division have been promoted to major general and brigadier general respectively, according to an announcement made by the Department of the Army on January 1.

Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea, the Division's Commanding General, was promoted to the rank of major general during ceremonies Tuesday morning at the residence of Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, Commanding General of the U. S. Army Infantry Center. Gen. Harrell presented the two stars to Gen. Billingslea while the latter was making a traditional New Year's Day social call at the home of the senior officer and commander of Fort Benning.

At noon on Tuesday Col. Jorn T. Corley, the 2nd Division's Assistant Division Commander, was promoted to the rank of brigadier general during ceremonies conducted at Gen. Billingslea's residence on Main Post.

Dual Promotion

The announcement by the Department of the Army and the promotion ceremonies conducted here were unique in several respects. For the 2nd Division, which is an elite member of the Strategic Army Corps (STRAC), this New Year's Day dual general-rank promotion is the first in modern day history within this fighting unit.

The two Generals are both graduates of the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., and each has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross twice. The Distinguished Service Cross is the Army's second highest decoration for valor in combat and is rarely occurs that this medal is awarded twice.

Gen. Billingslea was first stationed at Fort Benning in 1941 when he attended the Parachute School. Years before he lived at Fort Benning as a boy and attended Columbus High School. (He comes from an Army family and they were stationed here at the time.)

He served as Chief of Staff of the Eighth U. S. Army in Korea before being assigned as Commanding General of the 2nd Division in September of last year.

Gen. Corley has served here at Fort Benning on two different assignments. In 1957 he was Director of the Communications Department of the In-

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — A letter to Col. Maurice C. Holden, commanding officer of the 38th Infantry, from PFC Owen R. O'Neill Jr. started a chain of events that ended last week with his arrival here in Baumholder.

PFC O'Neill was assigned to Company E of the 38th Infantry at Fort Benning, but while on leave at his home in Springfield, Mo., entered the hospital to have his appendix removed and was not released in time to join the Battle Group when it departed for Germany under "Rotaplan."

When he got out of the hospital and reported back to duty at Fort Benning, he was assigned to the division's 87th Infantry.

Shortly after his reassignment to the 87th, O'Neill decided to write a letter to Col. Holden expressing his desire to rejoin Company E of the 38th in Baumholder. "I didn't know if it would do any good or not, but I wanted to try anyway," recalls O'Neill.

Upon receiving the letter, Col. Holden wrote to Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, explaining the situation and it wasn't long before O'Neill received his orders and found himself in Germany.

'Spaders' Train In Air Mobility At Lawson Field

By 26th Infantry PIO

Lawson Army Airfield was recently the scene of intensive activity as the men of the 26th Infantry began familiarization in air mobility techniques as employed by the 2nd Infantry Division.

The "Blue Spaders" practiced loading of C-119 and C-124 aircraft of the 302nd and 357th Troop Carrier Squadrons and of the 63rd Troop Carrier Wing.

Vehicles and personnel were loaded and secured in an effort to determine space requirements, load limits, and loading times. The operation was then reversed to permit information to be ascertained as to time required to unload the equipment.

'Marnemen' Take Two Day Tour to See 'Wall' and East Berlin

BAUMHOLDER, Germany— The first group of seventy 38th Infantry personnel has returned from a two-day tour of Berlin and plans are already being made to send 70 more to the Divided City at the end of this month.

Included in the tour were visits to historic Brandenburg Gate, Checkpoint Charley, the "wall" dividing East and West Berlin, and a tour through East Berlin itself.

The men made the trip from Baumholder Post to Frankfurt by bus where they boarded a military train for the overnight journey through East Germany to Berlin.

Before the beginning of the tour the following day, they were briefed by Maj. Gen. Albert Watson II, Commanding General, Berlin Command, and Brig. Gen. Fredrick O. Hartel, Commanding General, Berlin Brigade, on the mission of U.S. Army personnel in the city and what to expect on their first look at Berlin. Gen. Watson has been named U.S. Third Army commander.

The first step of the tour was the Bridge of Unity, a checkpoint on the border of the Soviet and American sectors and site of the Powers-Abel excrange earlier this year (Convicted Soviet spy Col. Rudolph Abel was exchanged in return for U-2 Pilot Francis Gary Powers.)

The group then rode through West Berlin pausing at such landmarks as the Olympia Stadium, site of Hitler's 1936 Olympics; the Funkturm radio tower, often referred to as Berlin's Eiffel Tower; Tempelhof Airport and the Airlift Memorial; the Brandenburg Gate; and Checkpoint Charley.

A stop at the Hansa district provided the men with a look at some of West Berlin's most modern structures including the American built New Congress Hall. The buildings there were built by NATO countries for the International Building Exhibition in 1957 and turned over to the city of Berlin.

On the second day, the tour bus passed through Checkpoint Charley into East Berlin. Here the men saw first-hand how little progress has been made under the Communists to reconstruct this part of the city after World War II. The only stop in East Berlin was at the Soviet Garden of Remembrance, a war memorial containing the graves of over 7,000 Russian soldiers who lost their lives in the Battle of Berlin.

Just before leaving the Eastern sector, the bus passed by "Little Red Square", site of Communist demonstrations in East Berlin.

BRANDENBURG GATE . . . A gate that once permitted several thousands of East and West Berliners to pass freely back and forth daily is completely sealed off to the Western World by a mere five-feet high wall. Except for a few tourists and many armed guards, the scene is quiet and without incident.

A LIFE TAKEN HERE . . . Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, (L) and Lt. Col. Sidney J. Roche, (R) stop but a brief moment at the spot where a young German boy was permitted to bleed to death some months ago after trying to escape to freedom. The West Berliners keep fresh flowers on the monumental spot daily.

7TH'S NEW HOME AT HARMONY CHURCH

'Cottonbalers' Fix Up New Living Quarters

By 7th Infantry PIO

The 7th Infantry, under the command of Col. William O. Morgan, completed its move to the Harmony Church area recently having been temporarily located in the area of the 69th Armor.

A great deal of credit for area improvement at Harmony Church must be given Company C of the 2nd Engineers which is commanded by Capt. Eugene J. Randall. For several weeks prior to the move Company C had busied itself with soil erosion projects, area improvement and modification of buildings to comply with requirements.

True to the 7th Infantry's motto, "Willing and Able," the men undertook a project that displays their admiration for the unit. They erected a picket fence around the once plain disposal can area. Once the first structure was completed, the men were not satisfied. They proceeded to build similar fences adjacent to all the mess halls from Company A to Combat Supply Company. A search of the area produced rough, unplained lumber which was cut to desired size and shape and erected in the form of a picket fence around the disposal areas.

Other projects include the establishing of a flag stand in front of Battle Group Headquarters and planting seed around the area. With the 7th Infantry encompassing such a large area these efforts on the part of the men will little by little make the 4400 Block of Harmony Church one of the exclusive spots on the reservation.

Col. Morgan commended the men on their achievements and for their enthusiasm toward the overall renovation and beautification of the battle group area. Other phases of work toward improvement is progressing.

Best Maintained Vehicles Awarded at 13th Trans.

The commanding general of the 2nd Division recently awarded two wrist watches and one wallet to winners of the Annual Best Maintained Vehicle Contest sponsored by the 13th Transportation Battalion.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea presented the awards in the 13th Transportation Battalion Motor Pool where the winners accompanied by their company commanders were assembled.

The Best Maintained Armored Personnel Carrier of the Year was awarded to PFC Norris F. Gryder, a native of Richmond, Va. The Best Maintained Truck of the Year was awarded to PFC Harold W. Crapo Jr. of Mattapoisett, Mass., with PFC Gerald G. MacDonald of Lansing, Mich., runner up.

The 2nd Division is believed to be the only division who has these annual awards. According to the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., the contest creates intense competition in the area of vehicle maintenance, and with the battalion operating over two hundred trucks and armored personnel carriers for division support, maintenance is a prime requisite for the successful completion of their mission.

This Surprise Was More Surprising Than He Knew

Without knowing it, a well-known figure in the 23rd Infantry, Lt. Joel W. Breeding, helped make arrangements for his own farewell party.

It all began when a couple of members of the S1 section conceived the idea of giving the Viet Nam-bound lieutenant a surprise going-away party at the office. It was decided that a good homebaked cake in his favorite flavor would be appropriate. One problem—getting the cake baked.

When asked by members of the staff section if he knew someone who might bake a cake for a party, Lt. Breeding immediately suggested Mrs. Janice Hansen, wife of Lt. Jon M. Hanse, executive officer of the 23rd's Company B. The Hansen's and the Breedings are good friends, so Lt. Breeding knew first hand of Mrs. Hansen's baking ability. He even placed a call to Mrs. Hansen on the spot, and made arrangements with her to bake the cake.

Of course, the Hanses were informed of all this later, and heartily went along with the planning.

Springing the surprise party on Lt. Breeding on his last day of duty was handled through the Adjutant, Capt. John A. Cooper, who asked Lt. Breeding to be at the designated time and place of the planned party for some official reason.

Lt. Breeding arrived in the battle group in March 1961, and served in succession as a platoon leader of Company B, the executive officer of Company B, the executive officer of Headquarters Company, the commanding officer of Headquarters Company, and finally as the assistant adjutant, his last duty position.

Spader's Silver Returns

By 26th Infantry PIO

For the first time in more than twenty years, the Battle Group Silver of the 26th Infantry was utilized in the Continental United States. The occasion was a holiday tea party given by Mrs. Arlin J. Kehe, wife of the 26th Infantry Commander. The tea, held in the Commander's residence, was attended by the wives of 26th Infantry Officers and selected guests.

Present were Mrs. Charles Billingsles, wife of the 2nd Division Commander; Mrs. Stanley L. Harding and Mrs. John T. Corley, wives of the Assistant Division Commanders; and Mrs. Francis Chance, wife of the 38th Artillery commander (the 26th Infantry's supporting Artillery Unit).

The history of the silver set used by the 26th Infantry at social functions dates back to 1924 when it was presented to the 26th Infantry Regiment by Miss Marion Davies. During the filming of a motion picture entitled "Janice Meridith", the 26th Infantry assisted the movie studio and in return was presented the silver set in appreciation. Miss Davies made the presentation on behalf of the company.

Accepting on behalf of the regiment was Col. James M. Graham, then Commanding Officer. Miss Davies was appointed an Honorary Colonel of the regiment at the time of the presentation.

Until recently given a place in the 26th Infantry trophy room, the silver has, by tradition, resided in the residence of the Commander. It has been, and still is, available to officers and warrant officers of the Battle Group for use at parties and social gatherings where the use of silver of this type is considered appropriate.

The set includes two large candelabras, two punchbowls, two trays, flower bowl, and tea service.

It was last used in the United States by Gen. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. at a formal dinner at Fort Devens, Mass., in 1942 prior to the 26th Infantry's move to combat duty in the European theater.

Mrs. Regan Active With Div.'s Indianhead Ladies

BY LOIS FOY

As I arrived at the modern brick home of Mrs. Stephan J. Regan, wife of the 69th Armor's sergeant major, in Colonial Park, I immediately knew one of the interests of this family, as I saw their 16-foot cabin cruiser in the carport. Mrs. Regan and her family spend many delightful hours in the outdoors, fishing, water skiing and taking in the beauties of nature. Once a year they try to visit the Army rest camp in Fort Destin, Fla.

Rosemary McLaughlin Regan, known to her friends as "Ronnie", was born and reared in Yonkers, N. Y. She married a native of Yonkers, newspaperman Sephan J. Regan, in 1945. Prior to their marriage Mrs. Regan's husband had served three years in the Army. In 1947, Mrs. Regan began her career as an Army wife, as SMaj. Regan re-entered the U. S. Army.

The first addition to the Regan household came in 1946 when Cheryl, now 16 and a junior at Baker High School, arrived. Next to appear was Stephan, now 15 and a sophomore at Baker High School.

A tour in Korea for SMaj. Regan separated the family in 1951. Then in 1952, the family ties were joined again when Sgt. Maj. Regan was assigned to Fort Holabird, Md. Maryland was their home until 1955 when once again traveling orders took SMaj. Regan to Orleans, France. Mrs. Regan and family joined him in France. While in Orleans, the family was increased when Cathy, now a first grader at the James B. Key School, arrived. Leaving France in 1957, the Regan family went to Kitzingen, Germany for a tour of duty. This tour was ended in 1958 when SMaj. Regan was assigned to the 69th Armor at Fort Benning.

Fort Benning was the birthplace of Edward, the fourth child for the Regans.

Mrs. Regan devotes most of her time to her large family. She is also an avid bowler, having been a charter member of the Indianhead Ladies Bowling League.

'Conqueror' Sgt. Makes Rapid E-6

By 87th Infantry PIO

What must be at least a local record for peacetime advancement was set in Company A, 87th Infantry, as supply sergeant Rodney E. Klose succeeded in earning promotion to the rank of staff sergeant after only twenty-two months in the Army.

He was recently presented with the good news by Col. Ralph H. Hughett at battle group headquarters.

SSgt. Klose's career began in February, 1961 when he entered the service at Middleburg, Pa., and was assigned to Fort Benning for basic training. He was sent to Company A which was then part of the Overseas Unit Replacement system, completed basic training and entered advanced individual training at the 87th Infantry.

Perhaps as a result of his civilian experience as a produce manager, he was called to the supply room to work for the supply sergeant of Company A. Here he advanced to the rank of Specialist Four as supply clerk, and when the supply sergeant's departure became imminent, he was promoted to sergeant.

His record in the supply room was so impressive that company commander Capt. Roy S. Dunaway recommended him for promotion to staff sergeant.

38th Grabs 2nd Place In 6 Mile Speed March

By 38th Inf. PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — Three platoons from the 38th Infantry compiled sufficient team points to capture second place among mechanized battle groups during the recent six - mile speed march competition held at Meinz, Germany.

This was the ROTAPLAN unit's first attempt at such competition and the going was rough. Cold weather, soft sand and a muddy route constantly harrassed the entries.

The 505th Airborne Battle Group of the 8th Infantry Division took all around team points although the 504th Airborne Battle Group of the 8th Division finished with the best time of the day, 57.40 minutes over the grueling course.

The best time for the 38th Infantry was 68.03 tallied by Company A. Other companies from the 38th furnishing platoons to round out the team were Company D and Combat Support Company.

In order for a platoon to receive an official time they had to complete the course with 28 of their original 33 men and cross the finish line in a neat and military order of columns of three.

Introducing the Chaplain

By Chaplain (Capt.) Lee A. Smith

It is often thought by some that the only task of the chaplain is that of conducting religious services. Although this is a primary duty of each chaplain, it is by no means his only function.

The first concern of the chaplain is that every person in his unit has the opportunity to practice his religious beliefs. This does not mean that every week a service of his denominational background will be conducted for him but, that within the major groupings of religion (Protestant, Catholic, Jewish) the opportunity for worship will be given. After these three services are scheduled specific denominational services may be conducted by the chaplain.

Conducting religious services is one of many activities of chaplains. A much larger portion of his time is spent in personal counseling. Religious and personal problems of the men in the unit are usually plentiful. The problem which most often arises concerns family relationships of various types. This means that the chaplain is involved with the dependents of the military personnel. The Army considers dependents an important part of the chaplains activities.

The chaplain is responsible for maintaining such services as are needed by all associated with the military. Weddings, funerals and hospital visitation for both military personnel and those related to the military services are frequent activities of every chaplain.

All these activities are provided in order that the morals and morale of the unit may be as high as possible. Thus, the chaplain is a part of the commanders staff advising him on the state of morals and morale of the command.

The nature of the many tasks of the chaplain requires that he be prepared to meet people both in and out of the service. That he be acquainted with services available within the military and civilian communities. He is truly a minister in unform

38TH ARTILLERY'S SSGT. WEISS AND HIS EQUIPMENT BOARD
Serves to Remind Soldiers of Value of Their Gear

Supply Sergeant Builds Equipment Board At 38th Arty to Reduce Damage, Misuse

By 38th Artillery PIO

SSgt. Richard T. Weiss has for sometime been plagued with these questions: "How Much Does It Cost?" and "What happens if I lose something?" What could be his job? He's chief caretaker of the TA21 section, 38th Howitzer Bn. (SP), 38th Artillery.

Even if you are not connected with a supply section of this nature you no doubt have heard similar questions. Maybe even you yourself have asked them or wondered about the answers. Supply Economy has been a problem for a long, long time and will remain a problem as long as there is an Army to supply. Sgt. Weiss, recently promoted to E-6, has helped this age old problem of supply economy in the 38th Artillery by showing the individual soldier the true value of his equipment. He has accomplished this by building a display board. This board gives the soldier a clear cut view of the cost of each individual piece of equipment and the total value of his equipment. Sgt. Weiss first got the idea in Augsburg, Germany while he was serving with the 13th field Artillery. He has had many compliments on his display board located in the S-4 building in the 38th's area on 14th Street. The equipment shown on the board is an individual's complete issue. The M-1 rifle on the display board, though very authentic looking, is a plywood replica made by Sgt. Weiss in his spare time. It has been said that when the S-2 of the 38th saw the photo above he immediately wanted to know what steps had been taken for the security of this weapon not kept in the arms room.

Sgt. Weiss feels that the new display board has given the men a clearer view of the cost of their equipment, and as a result they treat their equipment with a little more respect. A direct result, says the S-4 of the 38th, is a decrease in statements of charges and fewer turn-ins of damaged and abused equipment.

WEAPONS DISPLAY . . . A weapons display of basic infantry weapons ranging from the M-14 rifle to the Davy Crocket missile was put on at Harmony Church recently by the Weapons Department of the Infantry School at the request of the division commander, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea. The various committees showed Gen. Billingslea and his staff both new weapons that have been and will be integrated into infantry units, and weapons that are still in the experimental stages. Above, Capt. Harry L. McFarland (R) displays the features of the M-60 machine gun to Gen. Billingslea and Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander.

'Balers' Given Assistant Adjutant, CWO Is 2nd Division Korean Vet

By 7th Infantry PIO

The 7th Infantry has a new assistant adjutant and personnel officer.

CWO Lester A. Turley comes to the "Cottonbalers" from the 4th Armored Division in Germany via a brief tenure of duty with the 2nd Infantry Division Brigade.

A 38-year old professional soldier, CWO Turley is now in his 20th year of service. However, there is no desire for retirement, at this early age, especially since the Department of the Army extended him the opportunity of remaining in service beyond the date he completes 20 years.

CWO Turley entered the service in March 1943 from Gadsden, Ala. After 13 weeks basic training with the Chemical Warfare Service (later Chemical Corps), he departed for the Pacific Theater where he served in such places as the Fiji Islands, New Caledonia and Guadalcanal until January 1946.

7TH'S NEW ADJUTANT
CWO Turley

Not a stranger to the 2nd Infantry Division or to the "Cottonbalers," CWO Turley has fond memories of his first tour of duty with the 2nd Infantry Division from January 1947 until August 1951. During this period he served as first sergeant of a 4.2 mortar unit, 2nd Reconnaissance Company and 2nd Replacement Company. He accompanied the 2nd Division from Fort Lewis, Wash., to Korea during August 1950 and participated in six campaigns until his return to the States and Fort Rucker, Ala. in September 1951.

One of four brothers who have served in the Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and Army, CWO Turley became acquainted with the 7th Infantry through a younger brother, James, during the Korean Conflict. The younger brother was promoted from private to master sergeant in six months and received the Purple Heart, two Bronze Star Medals for valor and the Silver Star while serving with the "Cottonbalers" in Korea.

CWO Turley performed the dual functions of adjutant and personnel officer of the 602nd Engineer Battalion with the 47th Infantry Division at Fort Rucker for a two year period after his return from Korea in 1951. During 1953 and until April 1954, he was secretary to the General Staff and administrative assistant to the Chief of Staff, 47th Infantry Division.

In 1954 he departed the States for Germany where he served with the 521st Engineer Group as assistant adjutant and personnel officer. From 1957 to 1959 he was assigned to Headquarters VIII U.S. Army Corps in Austin, Tex., as assistant adjutant general. Back in Germany once more during August 1959, CWO Turley served 18 months with the 2nd Armored Rifle Battalion, 41st Infantry and for the past two years he was chief of the Personal Management Branch, Adjutant General Section, 4th Armored Division.

An active church member, CWO Turley is a deacon of the Batpist Church. He served as president of Protestant Men of the Chapel in three locations in Germany, and was active as a Sunday School teacher.

38th Artillery Sets Up Best Firing Bty. Trophy

By 38th Artillery PIO

Capt. William F. Dotherty presented a cherished trophy, shook hands, and congratulated his sole competitor, Lt. Jackie D. Sims, on winning the first quarterly "Best Firing Battery" Award given by the 38th Artillery on December 11.

The old adage that "competition makes the world go around" is certainly true of these two "firery" Firing Batteries of the 38th. At their own request to the Battalion Commander the Firing Batteries were inspected by a disinterested party on December 8. The inspection team, headed by the executive officer of the 15th Artillery, Maj. Edmund D. Rozecki, was comprised of officers and enlisted men, all from the 15th Artillery. The men and officers from the 15th inspected in their respective fields. Of the 19 fields that were covered Lt. Sim's Battery B came out ahead of Battery A in 13. From the results of the inspection Battery B was chosen the "Best Firing Battery of the 38th Arty."

As was mentioned, this is the beginning of the "Best Firing Battery" competition and it should be stated that this was brought about by the "esprit de corps of both Firing Batteries and their Commanders.

This award will be given on a quarterly basis and the winning battery will retain the trophy in their showcase for the three month period. If a battery should win the award four times in succession it becomes a permanent fixture in their orderly room.

By 87th Infantry PIO

The 2nd Division Reenlistment Plaque was won again last week by the 87th Infantry.

The award, which covers the months of October and November, was presented by division commander Brig. Gen. Charles Billingslea at division headquarters.

Enjoy Benning's Facilities this Year

Recreational Privileges Maintained for the Soldier

By Bob de Camara
2nd Division Sports Editor

It's 1963 for the 2nd Division and the rest of the world and time for members of the division to wake up to the recreational facilities about them.

An athletics program which stretches throughout the year is largely maintained through the efforts of your unit A and R representative and the special services offices at the division and Main Post. But the real food that keeps this program alive is the athletic ability and desire for athletics which members of the division usually show in the playing of good sports contests.

Besides these organized athletics, how many facilities for your enjoyment does Fort Benning provide which often go unused—perhaps unheard of—by members of this infantry division? Don't forget, athletics is only the A in A and R. Athletics and recreation is what your unit wants to provide you with. Each year the 2nd Division and Main Post spend a considerable amount of government money—taxpayer's money which includes you — to stock and keep the existing facilities modern and equipped. If the need exists, additional facilities are built.

Three Areas

The 2nd Division now occupies three of Fort Benning's four areas. With the move of the 7th Infantry to Harmony Church, the "Indianheads" now live at Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, and Harmony Church. Any one of these areas taken separately might be considered to lack certain facilities. Together they provide an abundance of facilities to be enjoyed inexpensively and close at hand.

On Kelley Hill is a new field house with three excellent, fast courts, plenty of wooden bleachers for spectators, and an electrical scoring system. (The division is seriously considering putting up a new gymnasium on Sand Hill if money permits). Harmony Church has one craft shop. Sand Hill has three craft shops staffed by qualified instructors to handle any overflow of woodworking and automotive enthusiasts. Two of Sand Hill's craft shops are for woodworking, and the third is an automotive shop on Arrowhead Rd. Closed Mondays, it is open every other day of the week to provide division members with space, advice and tools for working on their cars.

Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, Harmony church facilities. And don't forget Main Post. Every facility at Fort Benning, anywhere on post, is available to members of this division. It's more than available. The Army has provided these things expressly for servicemen and their dependents, for no one else, and the Army would like you to enjoy them.

Indoor Pool

Complementing the swimming pools at Sand Hill and Harmony Church, the Main Post maintains Briant Wells indoor pool in the Briant Wells Field House and Carey swimming pool, an outdoor pool located near Officer Candidate School.

Like to play squash? Next to the Old Post gymnasium on Ingersoll Street are two squash courts and two handball courts with equipment available. Are you some kind of photography nut? The Main Post photo lab is open seven days a week with a qualified instructor on hand at all times to help you with your hobby. Two theaters, two craft shops, two bowling alleys, a Hunting and Fishing Club, a library, field house, and gymnasium with boxing rings and boxing training areas plus the outdoor and indoor pools, photo lab and squash, tennis, and handball courts. This is what Main Post has.

On Sand Hill is a golf course (golf clubs available from Special Services), three craft shops, one of which is automotive, a bowling alley, tennis courts (rackets available from Special Services), an outdoor pool, two theaters, a service club, a library, and a gymnasium.

Harmony Church and Kelley Hill together have two service clubs, a gymnasium, a craft shop, a swimming pool, a library, a theater, and a field house with three basketball courts and an exercise room.

Hunt Club

Membership in Main Post's Hunting and Fishing Club entitles members to have a voice in the far-reaching activities of the active body. It entitles members to compete for generous prizes offered annually for success in hunting and fishing, enables members to rent association boats at a nominal fee, makes them eligible for participation in several organized activities throughout the year, including special hunts, dove shoots, a turkey shoot, and the Spring fishing and skeet tournaments. Hunting and fishing regulations, bag limits, and areas for hunting and fishing are furnished at the time the license is issued.

2nd Division special services has recently published a booklet containing facilities available to division members at Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, Harmony Church, and Main Post. This booklet also lists times facilities are available and their location and gives a brief description of each. The booklet will be distributed to division units soon. For additional information on Special Services facilities call your Special Services officer at 544-7304.

Main Post also publishes a resume of post facilities entitled "Guide for Newly Assigned Personnel." For further information from Main Post call Special Services at 545-1922.

This is the briefest listing of athletic and recreational facilities available to you, the individual, and your family at Fort Benning, although no listing of these benefits can be very brief. In the new year, let's try and wear these things out with good use.

38th Infantry Gives Man To All-Star Team

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — Thomas Payton, one of two players contributed to the 8th Infantry Division football team by the 38th Infantry, has been named to the USAREUR All-Star team.

Payton, from Company D of the "Marnemen", played college football at UCLA where he was an All-Conference player in his senior year.

Joseph A. Clune, Combat Support Company, 38th Infantry, also saw action with the "Pathfinders" in the latter part of the season. A 205-pound end, he earned his varsity letter in both basketball and football at Louisiana State University before entering the service.

Crack Shooters From Marksmanship Training Unit Shattered Records Around World During Past Year

By Sfgt. Lee LaCombe and Spl Hallie Robinson

From Tampa, Fla., to Moncton, Canada, from Texas to Nine Palms, Calif., to Ancient Egypt, the Army Marksmanship Training Unit blazed a trail of victories in weaponry, unsurpassed in the annals of competitive marksmanship, during 1962.

Not since the days of the English long bowmen has a group of marksmen become so widely known and respected.

During 1962, the shooters from the unit's three major divisions captured individual and team national and world titles and established new records wherever they went.

The neophyte of the unit, the International Division, matured and showed that it was prepared to take its place beside the longer established Rifle and Pistol Divisions.

GILBERT
Shotgunner

SFC Kenneth Gilbert captured the world 12 gauge skeet championship at Montreal, Canada, surviving a shoot-off against eight of the world's best shotgunners.

German Matches

In Germany, against some of the best shell-poppers in five countries, the MTU Skeet Team outshot all comers and MSgt. Henry Shaw walked off with individual shooting honors.

In smallbore and free rifle competition Sgt. Gary Anderson plopped the international shooting set on its collective ear in Caen by walking off with four gold medals, while setting three world records—a feat even more astounding by the fact that he had done very little practice shooting for several months prior to his selection as a member of the United States Team.

Anderson had completed his Regular Army service early in 1962 and had little time for concentrated practice. He participated in active duty training during August to try out for the U. S. Team.

Earlier in the year, Capt. Daniel Puckel broke the world's standing position mark with the free rifle in Germany with an 1149-point effort out of a possible 1200. He was also a firing member of the winning U. S. teams in the Free Rifle teams event.

At the National Matches, alumnus 1st Lt. Presley Kendall won the Smallbore Rifle Prone title and Capt. Tommy Pool took the Three-Position Smallbore Rifle Championship. For the International Division, it was an auspicious year.

Makes History

In three-gun pistol (caliber .22, .38, and .45) competition SFC William Blankenship became the first man in the 50-year history of the National Matches to win the U. S. title three times in succession and he did it the hard way, by coming from down in the pack in the last two events of the three-day championships.

In addition Blankenship added the National Mid-Winter individual and Interservice Pistol diadems to his championship crown. In the latter event he established a new match with a score of 265 points out of 2700 points.

In team matches soldier shooters either assigned to or training with the MTU were almost unbeatable, taking all of the team events at Camp Perry including the coveted National Trophy Pistol Team Match as well as the National Trophy Rifle Team Match.

SSgt. James McNally put the icing on the cake by taking the National Trophy Pistol Individual Match. It was his second major victory of the year and he had won the Southeast Regional title earlier, and subsequently won the Individual Pistol Championship at Buenos Aires, Argentina, as a member of the U. S. Team competing in the International Military Sports Competitions.

Many new records were set by the handgunners, but perhaps the most outstanding was the 300-16x fired by SSgt. Herschel Anderson over the National Match Course with the .22 caliber pistol at the Interservice Matches, establishing a new national mark.

The Rifle Division kept pace with the others bringing many awards back to the unit's trophy room.

The Army Eastern Team retained the National Trophy Rifle Team Championship with a score of 1466 points and set a new mark in the National Trophy Infantry Team Match of 1258 points, bettering that set by the same team in 1961 of 1234 points.

Army riflemen took two of the three other team matches at the Nationals.

WAC Shooter

In individual events Sp4 Barbara Hile, first member of the WAC to ever compete in the National Matches as a member of the MTU, retained her National Service Rifle Woman's Crown and SFC Vernon Read won the National Trophy Individual Rifle Match. Seven of the ten individual matches fell to Army riflemen also.

At the Interservice Rifle Matches at Quantico, Virginia, in August the M1 shooters walked off with both the 10-man team and the six-man team trophies — two of the toughest and most gruelling events of the week-long tournament.

Members of the Rifle Division dominated the awards bulletin at the Southeast Regional Matches with SFC Cecil Stevens garnering individual honors in the Grand Aggregate.

To round out the unit mission of improving marksmanship techniques with in the Army, soldiers from MTU travelled throughout the country and overseas to give instructing courses in coaching to other members of the Army.

Civilian & military competitors at matches attended by MTU personnel continually seek out the USCONARC champions to ask questions on how to improve their own shooting and they always find the Army marksmen ready and willing to help at any time.

MTU shooters have brought great credit to the Army, as evidenced by many letters of commendation from the Commanding General, USCONARC, as well as other Army commanders and officers from the other branches of the service.

But the shooters have little time to reflect on their past successes as a new shooting year dawns, because the competition is keen and hungry.

Each year brings improvement in weapons, ammunition, and shooting ability and what won last year may not necessarily repeat next year so the MTU shooters continually seeks to improve their own shooting ability to remain on top of the mountain in the shooting world.

3 Officers Honored At 9th Farewell

By 9th Infantry PIO

The officers of the 9th Infantry, commanded by Col. Clifford P. Hannum, recently honored three departing temporary duty officers at a farewell party at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

The honor guests were Maj. Phillip B. Remark, a Catholic chaplain on temporary duty with the 9th from the 5th Infantry Division, Ft. Carson, Colo.; Capt. Milton A. Snow, who has served with the S-3 section as liaison officer since October 31; and Lt. Samuel S. Matsuo, who was temporarily assigned to Headquarters Company's Engineer Platoon.

Capt. Snow came to the 9th from Boston Army Base, Mass.

Lt. Matsuo's regular assignment is with the 588th Engineer Battalion, Ft. Belvoir, Va.

These three officers were called upon to supplement the 9th's strength during the recent international tensions involving Cuba.

Dept. of Army to Start Defense Language School

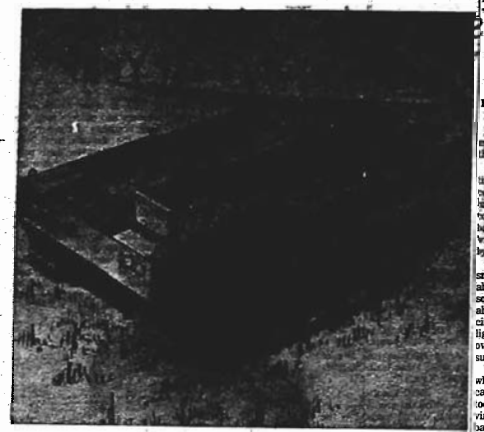
WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has plans to set up a new Defense Language Institute (DLI) in the near future. The Institute will provide technical direction and monitor all Department of Defense language training that is not provided at the service academies.

The Army said it will also assume responsibility for a major portion of full and part time language instruction in the various military services.

The DLI will set academic standards and supervise classes for foreign language instruction in the United States and overseas. It will also direct English programs for foreign military personnel visiting the United States.

All Defense language requirements will now be assembled and studied in one place.

TEAM CHAMPIONS . . . MTU won the ten-man and six-man team matches at the Inter-Service High Power championships at Quantico, Va. The winning six-man team was composed of (standing, L to R) SSgt. Herbert Duncan, MSgt. James Manning, SFC Raymond Campbell, Sgt. Willie Jordan, Sgt. William Lee, and Sp5 Justus Allen. Maj. Joseph Berry, front left, was team captain and MSgt. Harold Stafford, team coach.



ARMY'S LANCE . . . This is an artist's concept of the Army's newest battlefield missile, the Lance. The Lance is a highly mobile division support weapon with a nuclear and non-nuclear capability. Its development marks the first use by the Army of a pre-packaged liquid propellant.

47 Recruits Plead, But Sarge Goes

FORT KNOX, Ky. (AFPS) —When SSgt. Joe Pederson departed here en route for duty with the 3rd Armored Calvalry in Germany, he left by the back door of his barracks to avoid facing the 47 men he had been guiding through a basic training cycle.

Did he fear their collective ire now that he was no longer Big Man on the Drill Field? Not Pederson, who stands six-foot-one and tips the scales at 220.

No, if anything Sarge was still stunned by the events that made the White House, the Department of the Army and The Washington Post aware of his shipping out. Because his platoon wanted him to stay — at least until their training under him was completed.

They put their heads together, took up a collection and sent copies of this telegram to the Post, Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance and later to President Kennedy:

"Request Sgt. Joe Pederson who is pending overseas orders be retained to the end of the cycle. Need him to keep morale high. In middle of cycle would be great handicap to lose him who all platoon members obey, respect and like. Sergeant has shaped up high potential platoon and potentiality. Any help would be appreciated."

To a Pentagon spokesman the wire was "heartwarming" and it was brought to Mr. Vance's attention. A White House spokesman said it would be acknowledged. As for the Post, it ran a story that brought Pederson and his platoon wide publicity.

But none of this altered the fact that Sarge was Germany-bound leaving behind 47 admiring trainees. "His reprimands could blister the paint on the barracks," said Pvt. Alexander Hart, "but we loved him."

Men of TSB Fete 24 at Yule Party

Members of the 4th Student Battalion, Student Brigade, entertained 24 girls from the Ann Elizabeth Shepherd Home with a party here on Christmas Day.

Santa Claus distributed gifts to each child. At noon, following Santa's visit, the young ladies were treated to a Christmas dinner.

The event is an annual affair and is supported by donations from the servicemen in the battalion. The 4th Battalion is composed of airborne, Ranger and radio and automotive mechanic students, most of whom are temporarily assigned to the post.

Better Dental Health

You Can Avoid Poor Dental Health Habits

By Lt. Col Robert W. Merchant, Preventive Dentistry Officer

"Everything I enjoy is either illegal, immoral or unhealthy."

Haven't you heard this many times? After reading health columns a few times, you may have to come to a similar conclusion about the unhealthy part at least. Those of us who write the columns are unhappy about this too.

There is some enjoyment in smoking if you can forget about cancer. A highball has some allure if you can forget about automobile accidents and cirrhosis. Sweets are taste delights if you can forget about overweight, high blood pressure and tooth decay.

We could go on, but let's see what can be done so that we can have our cake and eat it too. It's not within our province to comment on the tobacco and alcohol. We know the potential harm and will let the preventive medicine officers discuss that with you.

What about the sweets? Do you have to eliminate them entirely? Probably it wouldn't be a bad idea, but you know and I know that you won't do it unless you are a most unusual person. What can you do to prevent the damage is something else.

You can drink water which has been fluoridated either naturally or by restoration of the proper fluoride content. This helps increase the resistance to decay. You can change your routine of diet and eat the desserts first. This is somewhat difficult to do when you are eating out and your hostess serves the dessert last, but you can do it at home.

You can stop eating the sweets between meals and substitute fruits — unsweetened — or better still, stop eating between meals completely. At mealtimes you can fill up on the meats and vegetables so you don't have room for the sweet desserts. You can practice moderation.

Failing all of these, you can eat and if you can't brush you can at least rinse your mouth thoroughly. The choice is yours. Be true to your teeth or they'll be false to you.

Do You Have A Question?

If you have questions on oral health, write to the Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

In addition, this division has four missile launchers, 798 armored personnel carriers, 2,413 trucks, 97 helicopters, six light aircraft and more than 1,000 radios and radar sets.

RECAP WITH DUKE'S 1-150 RUBBER

NEW MULTI-PURPOSE BUS . . . Getting a preview of the new 45-passenger bus as the first models roll off the assembly line are Lt. Col. L. S. Burr, Office, Chief of Transportation. Delivery direct to using units is scheduled to begin in January. With the seats folded and stowed, the buses can easily be converted for emergency use as ambulances for 18 litter patients.

New Field X-Ray Unit Is Portable

Diagnosis of battlefield injuries minutes after they occur will be speeded through a field x-ray unit developed by the U. S. Army Medical Equipment Research and Development Laboratory at Fort Totten, N.Y.

Weighing only 57 pounds, this new piece of medical equipment can be carried by one man. Based on a design conceived by Benjamin D. Pile, technical director of the laboratory, the x-ray unit features simplicity, mobility, and reliability in a compact package that will take diagnostic radiographs of any part of the body. It will be field-tested in early 1963.

The new machine uses either a conventional power source or its own power pack in situations such as a combat zone, where conventional electric power is not available.

This power pack operates on either 110 or 220 volts alternating current and incorporates a silver cadmium battery as the prime power source that drives the x-ray unit through a 400 cycle inverter. When battery operated, the unit has the capacity to take at least 165 radiographs without recharging.

The x-ray tube operates at a voltage of 120 kilovolts and a current of 1.5 milliamperes, furnished by a 400 cycle transformer, which adds to the machine's high utility and low power requirements. Both tube and transformer are housed in a small gas insulated cylindrical container.

These electrical factors of high voltage and low current reduce the amount of radiation to which the patient is exposed in addition to reducing the power requirements and weight of the unit.

The new machine was developed at the Fort Totten laboratory under contract with Bracke-Seib X-Ray Company, Inc., Pelham Manor, N. Y., with sub-contracting for electrical design and fabrication by Sperry Products, Inc., Danbury, Conn.

New Pamphlet Explains Problems Facing Nation

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — "Challenge to Americans" a 32-page pamphlet published by the Advertising Council, Inc., tells U. S. citizens of "The Struggle We Face and How to Help Win It."

An individual service member or civilian may obtain a free copy by writing to—Challenge, Box 1776, New York 17, N. Y. Libraries, clubs and other groups may obtain 10 free copies.

"It is essential," said the Advertising council in announcing the pamphlet, "that each citizen of this democracy understand the immense, swift-moving forces at work in the world today. It is equally essential that each of us, in his own way contribute to his country's strength in a time of danger."

The booklet deals with the challenges of (1) Awakening Peoples, (2) Scientific and Technological Developments, (3) International Cooperation, (4) The Communist Threat, and (5) Our Own Permanent Revolution.

Some of the Do's apply only to civilians, but service members have an equal interest in the solid background information provided by the pamphlet. The text has been approved by the Department of State.

Forewords are by President Kennedy and former President Eisenhower.

The pamphlet is the key in a nationwide campaign launched by the Advertising Council. Many magazines will carry double-page advertisements dealing with the five challenges. The story will be told through television, radio, newspapers and other media.

The Council, a nation-wide organization encourages public service on the part of its participating groups. It has been called "The Task Force of Business for Public Service."

New Guidance System Halting Flight Zig-Zags

WASHINGTON (AFPS)— An Army Pershing ballistic missile has performed deliberate zig-zag maneuvers in a flight at Cape Canaveral.

The Army said the missile's self-contained guidance system successfully brought it back to the proper flight path after pre-programmed bucking and twisting.

The zig-zag maneuvers were designed to test the ability of the Pershing's inertial guidance system to keep it on course.

Col. O. M. Hirsch, Pershing project manager, said the data available immediately after the firing indicated all test objectives had been met.

Instruments mounted in the nosecone transmitted continuous data to ground stations. The night flight was observed with the aid of tracking flares ejected from the war head section of the missile.

Surgeon Says

Physical Therapy Can Be Practiced at Home

Physical therapy is a means of treatment of disease and injury by physical agents. These agents include light, heat, cold, sound, water, electricity, massage and exercise.

At Martin Army Hospital the Physical Therapy Section is under the direct supervision of the Orthopedic Service and patients are treated only on prescription of a doctor.

However, there are many minor disabilities that may be treated at home. All of us at one time or another have suffered strained muscles or sprained joints. As mild injuries these may be treated with ice to reduce swelling and tenderness and so make it easier to move the involved joint in all directions.

It is necessary to keep motion so that the joint will not become stiff and cause further disability and discomfort. Early movement of the joint will decrease pain and help to reduce the swelling. Normal motion of any joint is easily demonstrated by noting the movement in an uninvolved joint.

Back strains can be very uncomfortable. A hot pack or in some cases ice massage may be used to relieve the discomfort. This is followed by active exercise.

The exercises include the following: Starting position for both exercises — back lying on floor with knees bent so that the feet rest flat on floor. (1) Placing the hands over the knees and bringing the knees to the armpits, holding this position for several seconds and then lowering the knees to arm length. (2) Situps with the knees bent, attempting at all times to round the back when coming to the sitting position.

It must be noted, however, that hot packs and ice massage should be used with care as it is possible to burn the skin or induce frostbite.

It must be emphasized that many minor injuries can be avoided by keeping oneself in good physical condition and using common sense when performing difficult tasks such as lifting heavy objects as it is possible to severly injure the back. Rather, place the feet comfortably apart and bend the knees keeping the back straight. Then simply lift the object by straightening the knees. In this way you use the strength of the legs rather than the back to do the job.

In any injury avoid aggravating the condition by causing more pain. If the condition does not improve in a few days be sure to see your doctor.

Satellite Checking Space Dust

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new earth satellite has been orbited to study tiny meteorites that could be a major hazard to manned space flights.

A four-stage Scout rocket shot the satellite — Explorer XVI — into space from Wallops Island, Va.

NASA said that early unrefined figures indicated that the orbit is at 52 degrees inclination from the equator with a high point of 733 miles and a low point of 466 miles. Time for a single orbit was reported as 104 minutes.

Scientists need to know whether the space particles are abundant enough to present hazards to space craft. Space designers also want to determine which materials are most resistant to such penetrating objects.

Accordingly the satellite is designed to measure micrometeroid puncture hazards directly by carrying samples of space craft structural surfaces, measuring particles having different momentums, and comparing the performance of protected and unprotected solar cells.

President: Slim Chance for U.S.-Soviet Accord

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy has told the Nation it will be some time before the United States can "come to any real understandings" with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. But he added "We are better off with the Khrushchev view than we are with the Chinese Communist view."

Without minimizing the dangers of Russia's goal of communizing the world, the President said, "We would be far worse off — the world would be — if the Chinese dominated the Communist movement."

In a filmed television-radio interview Mr. Kennedy stressed the international problems among the many items that have troubled him during the first two years of his administration.

The Chief Executive based his pessimistic view of the prospect for fruitful talks with Khrushchev on the fact that the Soviet Union only two months ago "upset the balance of power" by sending missiles to Cuba.

Mr. Kennedy said the Soviets had planned to announce their coup in November but were foiled by the determined stand taken by the United States in forcing removal of the offensive weapons.

As for the chances of physical inspection of the Cuban bases, he said, "A totalitarian system cannot accept that kind of inspection which really is desireable." He added that to open Cuba to prying eyes would be a long step toward opening up the Soviet Union.

"They are not going to open it," he declared.

With on-site inspection a dim prospect, Mr. Kennedy said, "The camera, I think, is actually to be our best inspector."

Asked whether the United States should try to widen the Soviet - Chinese rift, the President said attention should be given instead to the cause of freedom by helping suffering areas of the world.

Mr. Kennedy suggested that the Cuban affair showed Khrushchev our determination. He stressed, however, that the United States and the Western powers cannot let down their guard.

In assessing American-Soviet relations, he said there is no reason why two rich and energetic nations "Should not be able to live in peace." However, Communist expansion — particularly as evidenced by the Chinese Communists — is the major stumbling block.

Responding to a question, the President said he does not buy the argument that he should protect Khrushchev because his successor would be worse.

"I don't know what his successor will be like," the President said.

Reds Criticize Grid Play

Armed Forces Press Service

When Paul Dietzel, West Point's new grid coach, named his defensive team the Chinese Bandits, little did he suspect that the cold eye of Moscow had the Black Knights of the Hudson under scrutiny.

Now their skulduggery has been pinned down in fearless fashion by the magazine Soviet Sport which charges that "easy life" and "big money" lure football players in the U. S. Military Academy.

Not only that, snorts Soviet Sport, but the West Pointers are "educated in the spirit of the cult of rough force and egotism and scorn of other nations, other people. To cultivate such low instincts American football with its utmost cruelty is a godsend."

And how does the Point recruit its potential sadists of the stadium? Why, it's simple. "Coaches constantly conduct reconnaissance at civil colleges and universities and as soon as they see a fellow with broad shoulders and strong legs they start to describe wonderful prospects of a military career," the Red magazine says.

As for the Point's exacting curriculum of military science and the humanities — forget it. "Some specialists," Soviet Sport confides darkly, "even say that football is as important as the subject of general tactics."

Income Tax Pamphlet Is Offered

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A reminder of the approach of annual income tax time was received, as 1962 ended, by persons on the mailing list of the Government Printing Office.

The Printing Office periodically mails out pamphlets describing various publications available to the public. One of the last of these for 1962 listed the booklet titled Your Federal Income Tax, 1963 Edition.

This booklet, which sells for 40 cents, can be obtained from the U. S. Government Printing Office, Division of Public Documents, Washington 25, D. C. Its catalogue number is T22.44-963.

Containing more detailed information than the instructions which accompany Form 1040, it explains the preparation of income tax returns in plain layman's language with many examples and illustrations.

It tells what income it taxable and what items may be deducted. Home owner problems are explained in detail. A new Form 1040, completely filled in, is keyed to explanations in the 144 pages of text.

Army Guard, Reserves Add Priority Units

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Two types of high priority forces are included in the Army Reserve-National Guard reorganization plan announced by the Secretary of Defense.

One of these consists of units required to provide support for Active Army divisions in sustained combat and the other consists of six, self-sufficient division forces required to perform missions in the early stages of a war.

The readiness objective calls for these forces to be capable of deployment in from four weeks after recall for some of the supporting units and eight weeks for the others.

The personnel strength of these high priority forces will be raised to 75-80 per cent of full war strength, a substantial increase over current personnel strengths.

Approximately two-thirds of the Reserve Components will be assigned to priority units, a marked increase above the percentage of the present forces in a high state of readiness.

Army-Made Film Series Given to RC

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army Signal Corps has produced for the American Red Cross a series of 10 half-hour films to help teach home nursing in schools, clubs and other group meetings.

The series, titled The Home ed by actors Sheppard Strudwick, Jay Barney and Mason Adams and NBC newscaster Robert Wilson. Technical consultants were the Office of Civil Defense, the U. S. Public Health Service and the ARC staff.

Steuart L. Pittman, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Civil Defense, said the films "demonstrate the many nursing skills to be learned through taking home nursing training courses offered by the American Red Cross.

"In order to save lives in the event of a nuclear attack on this country, a fallout shelter system is being established," Mr. Pittman said. "A number of services related to the effective use of shelters requires a high degree of involvement of all levels of government and of all people.

"Preparation for the care of the sick and injured is one of these essential services," he continued. ""This knowledge, coupled with the fact we are concerned with tens of thousands of places in which this service will be required, dictates that large numbers of people will have to be trained."

TREE MOISTURE

The sap of a tree does not always go down in the fall and have higher moisture content in the winter.

ROAD Plan Is New Look for Army Divisions

WASHINGTON (ANS) — In early 1962, the Army looked in anxious anticipation as two famed fighting units, steeped in proud tradition, were reborn under the Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) concept.

The 1st Armored Division, under the command of Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Haines Jr., was activated on Feb. 3, 1962, at Fort Hood, Tex.

Activated during the Berlin crisis, the young "division in a hurry" began its days under an aura of urgency.

A rapid tempo of training whipped the many raw recruits of the division into soldiers.

Exercise IRON FIST, the division's first operational readiness test, took place in August. At the conclusion of the exercise, Gen. Haines said, "After six months of rigorous, intensive training, we have reached the climax of our journey. Exercise IRON FIST has proved that the men of Old Ironsides are tough, reliable, and resourceful."

The young "division in a hurry," reborn to crisis and reared in an uncertain peace, came of age as it gathered impetus and moved to meet another crisis — this time the Cuban crisis.

The 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) was activated under the command of Maj. Gen. A. H. Manhart, on Feb. 19, 1963 at Fort Carson, Colo.

The die was cast, the pace was set. Just 201 calender days from its activation was the date the division was due to be combat ready — Sept. 8, 1962.

Rugged, extensive, and intensive training was the order of each and every day.

Like the 1st, the 5th's big test came in August. Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II held the key to success. Could the Army's first and only mechanized Infantry division, equipped to be transported by air without sacrificing its punching power, meet the test?

Seven thousand men and 6,000 tons or cargo airlifted from Fort Carson to the exercise area in the Carolinas proved the mettle of the Fighting Fifth.

2.7 Million Documents Processed

More than 2,700,000 documents and reports have been processed at Fort Benning's Research and Analysis Data Processing Office (RADPO) since its establishment Jan. 1, 1962.

Youngest staff agency of The Infantry School, RADPO handles the majority of records for both resident and nonresident students.

Documents and reports handled by the office include student records, biographical data, machine - graded and hand-graded lessons and examinations, grade cards, transcripts of grades and certificates of completion of required courses.

In addition to student records, RADPO tabulates reports on supply control of ammunition required in Infantry School class problems and stock accounting of Army extension course training publications.

Plans are under way for further expansion of the services to The Infantry School, according to Maj. Charles E. Welch, chief of RADPO.

Coffee's Taste In Antarctica Called Unique

McMURDO SOUND, Antarctica (AFPS) — It's their claim, and it will probably be disputed by men in the frozen North, but members of the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) here insist that McMurdo Sound coffee tastes like no other coffee in the world.

It isn't the grind, they say, nor is it any espresso or rare Turkish blend—it's the water of Antarctica.

All of the continent's water is frozen, of course, and mining snow from designated areas around the camp site is an important McMurdo activity. It provides the water for laundry, shaving and bathing, cooking — and coffee.

Tons of snow are mined and hauled by traxcavator to the camp's melter in the course of a 12-hour work day. The water is then filtered and tested by medics to make sure that it's fit for drinking.

Whatever problems arise at McMurdo, winter or summer, drought will never be one of them — not with five and one-half million square miles of snow on hand. At the rate MATS men have been drinking coffee since 1957, it will take approximately 97 years to consume as many square miles of coffee.

Extend GI Bill in Call-Up

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — An extension of Korean GI Bill education and rehabilitation time has been given to Reservists who were called up during the Berlin buildup and to those whose enlistments were extended.

The extension will be as long as the extra time they served on active duty. Those who were called up or extended by Executive Order prior to Aug. 1, 1962, will be affected.

Similar extensions of training under the War Orphans Educational Assistance Act are also being granted to orphans whose programs of education are interrupted due to certain conditions beyond their control.

This will aid orphans who, because of personal illness or sickness in the immediate family, suffer financial hardship.

Good Driving Takes Good Eyesight

By David Winkler

"I just didn't see him." That was the excuse given the investigating policeman at the scene of a traffic accident that claimed three lives and seriously injured two others.

In this day and age of high speed driving and greater and greater volumes of traffic on our streets and highways, greater emphasis is placed on the responsibility of each individual motorist.

Too many motorists do not realize the extreme importance of good vision in driving safety. Ninety per cent of driving decisions depend on sight. Statistics compiled by the Association of Motor Vehicle Manufacturers indicate that one out of every four drivers on the highway today has subnormal vision.

Don't be smug just because you can look at a chart and read the letters until they get pretty small. That's not an adequate test, says the American Optometric Association. The chart tests just one of the four aspects of vision essential to safe driving. The four are:

Visual Clarity

1) Acuity. That's what the chart tests—how clearly you see without blur. AOA thinks 20-40 sight is minimum. That means you can see at 20 feet what you ought to see at 40. With 20-50 vision, you won't see a stop sign until you are 90 feet from it. At 60 miles an hour, you would be 227 feet beyond the sign before you could stop.

2) Depth perception. The ability to locate objects properly in space, it takes teamwork by both eyes. If you start to pass three cars and you find an approaching car bearing down before you get by, you have poor depth perception.

3) Field of vision. That's how much you can see on each side without turning your head or eyes. People with "tunnel vision" can see only what's straight ahead. It causes cracks ups at crossings.

4) Night vision. Dusk blinds some drivers as much as full darkness does others. "Night blindness" helps explain why fatal accidents occur three times as often at night as they do in the daytime.

The "Good" Driver

Most accidents involve "good" drivers. That is, drivers who think they are good, but who still manage to have that once-in-a-lifetime serious or fatal accident. In a study of fatal accidents the records of the drivers concerned verified this by revealing that: 7 out of 10 had no serious violations; 8 out of 10 had no record of previous accidents; 4 out of 5 were obeying speed laws.

To understand how correct seeing habits prevent accidents, it is necessary for the driver to understand something about the eye and how it works.

The seeing mind—For example, the eye itself does not see. It's the instrument of seeing. It detects images which are interpreted by the brain. So it's really the mind that sees.

Selection — The expert driver develops a few selective seeing habits that permit him to concentrate on important details. He shuts out non-essential parts of the traffic scene.

Attention shifts — When you are alert, your attention shifts automatically at least every two seconds as you drive. To make the two second eye shift habitual under all conditions, however, it must be repeatedly practiced.

Fixed Stare

Fixed stare — When you allow your eyes to hold on something that particularly attracts your attention, a dangerous fixed stare results.

Blank stare — The blank stare is even more dangerous since the mind is not interpreting the images sent it by the eye. This is most apt to occur when you are preoccupied or inattentive.

The Ford Motor Company recommends the following 5 seeing steps for safer motoring:

Aim High in Steering—the initial and continuing requirement in moving a vehicle is a suitable steering path. High-aim steering is the safest method of selecting this path.

Get the Big Picture—to the front, rear and sides so all factors in the traffic pattern which might affect the steering path can be accurately determined.

Keep Your Eyes Moving—in order to get the big picture in sufficient time to avoid conflicts.

Leave Yourself An Out—by maneuvering to keep a cushion of space around your vehicle. This gives you the time required to see and decide, and for taking the necessary action.

Make Sure They See You—by use of any means of communication available . . . the horn, lights, turn signals, stop lights or driver hand signals. Signal well ahead while there is still time for you to avoid a conflict if your signals are not observed.

Silver Bars Go To Lt. Drinkard

By 22nd Infantry PIO

The executive officer of the 22nd Infantry's Combat Support Company, Lt. Lawrence W. Drinkard, received bars of a first lieutenant in ceremonies held at battle group headquarters this week.

Lt. Drinkard arrived in the 22nd and Combat Support Company in June 1961, immediately after completing four years at North Georgia College with a bachelor of science degree in business administration. Through the Reserve Officer Training Corps at North Georgia, he received his commission in the Ordinance Corps.

His first assignment with the company was that of platoon leader, but this was interrupted by a period of temporary duty at The Infantry School, where he attended the Infantry Officer Orientation Course, followed by Airborne training. In August of this year his duty changed from platoon leader to executive officer of the company.

In addition to the parachutist badge, Lt. Drinkard also holds the Expert Infantryman's badge.

87th Firers Get 'Expert'

By 87th Infantry PIO

Over 70 per cent of the 87th Infantry fired "expert" during the recently completed training-fire qualification course.

Combat Support Company established itself with the highest number of experts despite the fact that it is not a regular infantry rifle company. Out of 131 firers, 114 fired expert for an overall total of 87 per cent.

Company E had the highest percentage of experts, edging out Combat Support by just a few percentage points. Company E was followed by Company A with 94 experts, Company B with 66, Headquarters Company with 61, Company D with 57 and Company C with 44.

Under Capt. Gray's guidance, Battery A achieved a near-to-perfect 93.86 per cent on its most recent Army Training Test.

Capt. Gray brings to his new assignment as S-2 of the 15th a wide variety of experience in intelligence work garnered both as enlisted man and as officer.

Sec. McNamara Asks Pay Boost Of 14.4% for Military Personnel

WASHINGTON (ANS)—The following is the statement made on Jan. 3 by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara on proposed military pay legislation:

"With the approval of the President, I will submit to Congress in January proposed legislation to increase the compensation of members of the Armed Forces.

"The proposed changes in compensation for service members are based upon a comprehensive staff study undertaken earlier this year under the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower). The Study Director was Mr. William Gorham, formerly of the Rand Corporation and presently Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower).

"The major objectives of the pay proposals are to:

"1. Provide fair rates of pay for service members.

"2. Improve the present pay system by correcting certain inequities.

"3. Provide incentives which will help solve our manning problems and thereby increase operational effectiveness.

"4. Establish a more equitable basis for adjustment of retired pay for service members after retirement.

"5. Provide for an annual review of the compensation of members of the Armed Forces.

"The estimated average annual cost of the pay increases to become effective in 1963, including the $285 million increase in quarters allowance authorized by the last Congress, is over $1.7 billion. Although the proposed increase is large, I believe it to be fully justified.

"To achieve the pay objectives I mentioned, the proposed legislation to be submitted to Congress will include these six main provisions:

"1. Provide increases in rates of basic pay averaging 14.4 per cent for officers and enlisted members.

"2. Provide an increase in the basic allowance for subsistence for officers from $47.85 a month to $77.10 a month, the rate currently in effect for enlisted men when rations in kind are not available.

"3. Authorize up to three years of constructive credit for both promotion and basic pay purposes for persons appointed as commissioned officers who at the time of initial appointment hold postgraduate degrees in fields specified by the Service Secretary concerned.

"4. Provide authority for a new system of "remote and isolated duty" pay for both enlisted members and officers in lieu of the present system of "sea and foreign duty" pay.

"5. Provide authority for a new system of variable career incentive payments for enlisted members keyed to critical skill. This proposed system would ultimately replace the present reenlistment bonus system.

"6. Provide for future automatic adjustments in retirement pay for retired service members based on increases in the cost-of-living.

TIS Students Addressed By General

Gen. Robert J. Wood, director of military assistance, International Security Affairs, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Washington, D.C., arrived here late Monday afternoon for a brief visit to the post.

Tuesday morning the four-star general visited Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

At 10 a.m. Gen Wood addressed a joint meeting of students in The Infantry School.

At noon he was the guest at an official luncheon in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

He departed from Lawson Army Airfield at 1:30 p.m.

Gen. Jones Is Honored On Arrival

Major Gen. Stanley W. Jones, chief of the Army Audit Agency, arrived here Thursday for a visit to The Infantry Center and for conferences with an Agency team which is conducting an installation audit.

Gen. Jones called on Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, Thursday afternoon preceding honors ceremonies at Chapel Field at 2 p.m. He received a 13-gun salute.

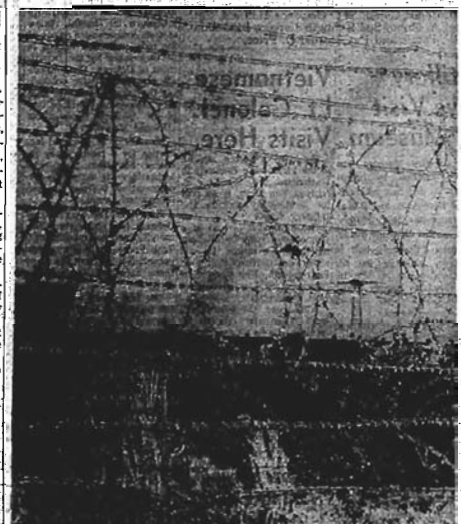
His first conference with the Army Audit Agency team was scheduled after the review.

This morning, Gen. Jones will be briefed by Infantry Center officials on the history and organization of The Center and The Infantry School. He then will tour the post.

This afternoon will be spent on-the-job with the audit team.

Gen. and Mrs. Jones, who will accompany her husband, are slated to depart Sunday at 10 a.m. from Muscogee County Airport.

It Gets Icy Here, Too



REALLY COOOLLLD . . . Georgia, being in the deep, deep South, is quite a climate change for troops reared above the Mason-Dixon Line. Though a recent cold wave sent thermometers to their lowest point here in more than a century, low humidity made it impossible for snow to fall . . . much to the dismay of some homesick "Yankees." This icy scene taken on Main Post shows that it can get chilly in the "deep south."

Polio Immunization Program Continues

A mass oral polio vaccine immunization program began here Tuesday with 481 military dependents receiving the Sabin vaccine before 2 p.m.

Pre-school children and adults whose names begin with the letters A through G were scheduled to be immunized at the Dependent Immunization Clinic, Bldg. 323, Tuesday and Thursday.

The H through O group will receive the vaccine during the same hours Jan. 15 and 17.

The P through Z group is requested to report to the clinic for vaccine Jan. 22 and 24, same hours.

Dependents who attend off-post schools should report to the clinic between 8 and 11 a.m. Jan. 12, 19 and 26, using the same alphabetical grouping.

According to statistics, since the Salk vaccine became available in 1955, incidence of the crippling disease has decreased, though cases of polio are recurred each year.

Only 1,300 persons in the United States contracted polio in 1961, as contrasted with 8,200 cases in 1959. Though 1962 figures are not yet available, officials believe it will show the lowest polio rate in medical history.

List EM Eligible For BEQ

Fort Benning enlisted personnel in grades E-1 through E-9 are eligible, with the approval of their unit commanders, for assignment to Bachelor Enlisted Quarters, according to a regulation issued by The Infantry Center Chief of Staff Office.

According to the regulation, "Assignments will be made according to rank and date of rank with precedence given with each grade to personnel who are not drawing quarters allowance for dependents."

The regulation also states that major commanders will insure that a sufficient number of bachelor non-commissioned officers are required to live in barracks to maintain proper leadership over lower ranking personnel.

VISIT MUSEUM . . . Members of Battery B, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery, the only unit to claim 100 per cent membership in The Infantry Museum Society, recently paid a visit to the museum. Explaining one of the displays to his men is Capt. Jack H. Percival (L), battery commander. With him (L To R) are 1st Sgt. Lorenzo Colon, SFC Clarence Holland, Sgt. Angel A. Onna, Sp4 Kenneth Larson, PFC Samuel W. Farris and Pvt. Harold D. Price.

terim some erosion has taken place in the real value of their compensation and there has been a substantial loss relative to the wage and salary gains of wage earners in the civilian economy. Although the proposed changes will increase military pay by an average of 14.4 per cent, the increases will be on a selective basis.

For example, in both officer and enlisted compensation the largest percentage increases in our pay proposals are at the point where men are normally completing their first term of service. Substantial percentage increases for the grades normally held at this time should materially help to meet retention problems in all the Services.

"I would like to emphasize that I believe that military compensation should be kept abreast of productivity and price changes in our national economy. I consider the establishment of an administrative procedure for annual review of such compensation as one of the most important actions to be undertaken by the Department of Defense. The immediate responsibility for conducting the annual review of military compensation will be that of the Assistant Secretary of (Defense Manpower)."

Preparation of proposed legislation for a military pay increase has been given the highest priority within the Department of Defense by Secretary McNamara.

The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Norman S. Paul, has established a Task Force on Military Compensation to perform the many tasks necessary in this project.

The task force will develop the legislation required to implement military compensation proposals after approval by the President and the Secretary of Defense.

It will serve as a center where information in support of the proposed pay bill can be collected prior to and during Congressional hearings. It will also prepare detailed presentations on the proposed legislation to be used by the Defense Department before Congressional Committees.

Three other Government departments — Treasury, for the Coast Guard; Commerce, for U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey; and Health, Education and Welfare, for the U. S. Public Health Service — will work with the task force.

Heading the group is Army Col. Leo E. Benade, who was staff Director for the Defense Study on Military Compensation set up early this year by Secretary McNamara. The report of the study group and its recommended legislative proposals are now being considered by the President's Panel on Federal Salary Systems.

Surgeon Says

Take Care to Guard Infants From Colds

By Maj. Anna A. Turek
Army Health Nurse, MAH

A common-cold virus is communicable and is transmitted from one person to another. For this reason parents should be careful to see that their children are not exposed to someone who has a cold or a contagious illness.

A baby is more susceptible to cold than an older child or an adult. For the baby, prevention of colds lies chiefly in keeping visitors or members of the family with common-cold infections from coming in contact with him. Keep him away from crowds of people, such as in shopping centers, movies, or in the neighborhood groups gathered in an overheated, poorly ventilated dwelling who are coughing and exhaling bacteria.

A baby, for his welfare, remain at home during his first year of life and see as few people as possible, until he makes an adjustment and builds some resistance to the world of bacteria.

This does not mean that he should be denied the pleasure of association with the family and intimate friends or relatives. Should they, however, appear to be in any way ill, they should not come near the child.

Daily Walks

Daily walks or play outdoors in fresh air in good weather will not subject the child to a cold. However, overdressing is an invitation to overheating, subsequent chilling, and the possibility of a cold. A child should be dressed lightly with loose, comfortable clothes. A toddler's outdoor clothing should be light enough in weight so that he can run and play freely. Clothes should be able to be removed easily.

Another contribution to prevention of illness and general good health, is a well-balanced diet with plenty of fruits, vegetables and drinking water. Adequate sleep and rest is most important. Too many children stay up late in the evenings, and do not get their required 10 to 12 hours of sleep.

When a cold develops in one member of the family, it is important to take precautions to prevent the spread of the germ to other members. This takes tact and firmness, with well-meaning friends as well as family members.

Wear Mask

When the mother has a cold, it is difficult to protect the other members of the family as the home centers around the mother. It is especially difficult with a new baby. In the case of the new baby, the mother may make arrangements to have some one else take care of the baby or children for a few days until the acute stage of the cold subsides.

If that cannot be arranged, she should try not to allow her breath to come near the child. She should cover her mouth with a small towel or a mask. She should also teach her family to cover a cough with a tissue, which should be discarded into a paper bag and later burned. She should wash her hands frequently, especially before handling food, food utensils and infant formula bottles.

Family epidemics of colds are difficult to prevent. The only way to prevent them is to keep the sick members of the family away from the well ones.

All these factors being equal, some children still seem to develop colds, some more frequently than others. Exactly why this is, is not known at present. But with reasonable precaution, many will be spared an illness and possible complications.

Artillery Pays Visit To Museum

The Infantry Museum was recently "invaded" by the artillery — in this case all members of Battery B, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery.

This special visit saw the artillerymen —the only unit in the Army claiming 100 per cent membership in The Infantry Museum Society —tour the museum's many display areas.

A highlight of their visit was the inspection of a photostatic copy of the original War Department general order recognized the award to the 10th Artillery of the Croix de Guerre with Gilt Star by the French Army for "remarkably prepared and brilliantly executed fire" during the climactic battle of the Marne in 1918.

All members of the unit wear the fourragere or shoulder cord denoting this award. It was in this battle the 10th earned its motto — "The Rock's Support" — since the unit was in support of the 38th "Rock of the Marne" Infantry during the struggle.

Vietnamese Lt. Colonel Visits Here

The Armed Forces attache at the Vietnamese Embassy in Washington, D. C., Lt. Col. Nguyen Van Chau, is on post for a three-day visit to The Infantry School.

The local visit is part of a tour of four Army installations for the Allied officer. He will visit Fort Gordon, Ga., Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and Fort Mason, Calif., in addition to Fort Benning.

While here, the colonel will meet Vietnamese officers attending Infantry School courses.

He will be briefed on the organization and mission of the school and The Infantry Center and will observe how the reservation is utilized in support of training.

Col. Chau is slated to depart Saturday morning for Fort Leavenworth.

Familiarize Yourself With Dentist's Terms

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

When your dentist speaks to you, he often uses terms which unfortunately are not quite clear.

We dentists are so accustomed to these words that we sometimes forget that to our patients they are a foreign language. It seems like a good idea to clarify some terms. Some of them you know, but let's get them in the record anyhow.

Carbohydrate — A specific type of chemical compound containing carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, but for practical purposes a food of the sugar and starch families and these are pretty big families.

Caries — Dental caries is nothing more or less than tooth decay.

Debris — A fancy word for not so fancy microscopic garbage and sometimes garbage which is not so microscopic like food particles and other gunk.

Dental Plaque — This is the "film" you hear about in toothpaste advertising. It includes components of saliva and other things, including bacteria (germs) and food debris. Before you brush your teeth sometime, scrape the part of your teeth near the gums with your fingernail and you can remove this plaque and actually see it.

Dentures — False teeth. Full dentures means they are all false. Partial dentures means some are natural and some are false.

Periodontal — This refers to the tissues immediately around the tooth. The odontal refers to the tooth and peri- to around just as perimeter has to do with something around an area as perimeter guard.

Periodontal disease — This then is disease of structures around the tooth, the gums the "periodontal" membrane and the bone.

Periodontoclasia — Another word for the same thing. The -clasia means breakdown or destruction.

Fyorrhea — Literally runny pus. This really is meant to refer to a very advanced state of periodontal disease. It is a poor term which we shouldn't use, but we do.

Occlusion — The relation of the upper teeth to the lowers when they come together. It may be normal or the doctor may speak of a malocclusion which simply means bad or for our discussion not normal occlusion.

These are a few of the more common terms we dentists use. If you have questions about others, contact the Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

Meet Held To Select Literature

Twenty military and civilian Protestant religious educators met here Tuesday through Thursday to select literature for use in Protestant Sunday Schools of the Armed Forces during fiscal year 1964-65.

Heading the "Unified Protestant Curriculum Selection Committee" were four chaplains from Washington, D. C.

They are Chaplain (Col.) John I. Rhea of the Armed Services Chaplains Board, Office of the Secretary of Defense; Chaplain (Col.) Paul McCandless, Office of the Chief of Air Force Chaplains; Chaplain (Cmdr.) E. Vaughn Lyons Jr., Office of the Chief of Navy Chaplains, and Chaplain (Maj.) Duncan Stewart of the Office of the Chief of Army Chaplains.

Other members of the committee were religious education authorities from various Protestant denominations.

There was a dinner for the committee at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Main Officers' Open Mess, with Sewall B. Jackson as host. Jackson is a representative of the Methodist Publishing House of Nashville, Tenn., and serves as consulate for Protestant unified curriculum material for the Armed Forces.

Lt. Gen. Truman Directs Military Mission to Congo

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Army Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman has been appointed to head a team of U. S. military officers on a mission to the divided Congo.

Gen. Truman, a relative of former President Harry S. Truman, conferred here with United Nations Secretary-General U Thant and the chief UN Congo officials. Gen. Truman called the meetings productive.

The general told reporters, "One of the purposes of this military mission which I head is to determine the extent to which United States equipment might help these requests," he said, referring to UN requests for "assistance and equipment."

"As you know," the general added, "the United States is very interested in how things are going in the Congo.

May Rebuild Theater In Which Lincoln Shot

The target date: April 14, 1965 — 100 years to the day that Abraham Lincoln was shot. If a project now under way by staff members of the Lincoln Museum gets final approval, that day will see the most famous theater in American history — Ford's Theater in downtown Washington — restored to its appearance of a century ago.

Congress has already appropriated $200,000 for preliminary studies on which to base the theater's restoration. At present it houses the Lincoln Museum, maintained by the National Park Service.

Ford's Theater was something of a jinx both before and after the fateful night of April 14 when John Wilkes Booth put a bullet into Lincoln's head during a performance of Our American Cousin. It was originally a Baptist church which John T. Ford bought and remodeled, only to have it razed by fire in 1862.

He replaced it with the red brick structure where Booth the actor was to set his last foot on a stage, breaking his leg as he leaped from the presidential box shouting "Sic semper tyrannis!" The luckless Ford had to close the theater, so strong was public feeling after Lincoln died.

Ford sold the building to the Government. It was rebuilt to provide office and storage space for the War Department, but in 1893 disaster struck again when its floors collapsed, killing 22 and injuring 68.

Today's Lincoln Museum dates from 1931, growing out of the famous Oldroyd Collection of Lincolniana — books, letters, newspapers, paintings, photographs, sculptures and such personal items as Lincoln's shaving mug and the family Bible.

Many objects on display are related directly to the assassination, among them the Victorian sofa and a George Washington engraving that decorated the President's box. Visitors can see Booths dagger and derringer pistol; also the door to the box with the peephole the actor cut in it. There are the opera-glass case Mrs. Lincoln dropped and the Treasury Guard's flag in which Booth caught his spur.

When the theater restoration project came under study, a lithograph showing the first-floor seating plan and the location of stairways and doors turned up in the Theater Collection of the Harvard College Library. Still another aid to the project is a collection of pictures made by Matthew Brady, noted Civil War photographer, showing the theater's structural details.

The FSJC for 1963 Merits Our Support

With the advent of the new year, three agencies with past records of splendid service to the Free World are again seeking support from Federal employees and members of the Armed Forces in the United States. All three—CARE, Radio Free Europe and the American - Korean Foundation — are non-profit organizations and all three benefit from the annual Federal Service Joint Crusade.

President Kennedy, in urging our generous contribution to this year's FSJC campaign between now and April 30, has quoted Edmund Burke's memorable maxim — "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing." That is as profound as it is simple, and the three agencies asking our help are all dedicated to fighting evil — the evil of hunger and want, the evil of Communist imperialism.

Cold figures alone reflect the fine record of accomplishment. Approximately 80 million perple in countries behind the Iron Curtain depend on RFE for contact with the West. CARE has shipped more than $500 million of food, tools, equipment and scientific and educational supplies to some 50 countries around the globe. In South Korea, still recovering from years of devastating war, a team of six doctors, six nurses and 13 university students sponsored by AKF in one week treated more than 1,000 patients in a clinic set up in a schoolroom. The record of humanitarian achievement is endless.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, FSJC National Chairman for the current campaign, has said that "Whether serving in uniform or in a civilian capacity, Federal employees are in the firing line of our national defense." Our target is "fear, hunger and poverty throughout the world" and FSJC offers us a single bullet to hit all three targets. (AFPS)

Welcome to a Lady ---

The most famous painting in the world is a small portrait 30 inches high and 21 inches wide. You don't have to be an art lover to recognize it. We all grow up with Leonardo Da Vinci's Mona Lisa in one way or another. And now the lady is visiting us, to be displayed at the National Gallery of Art in Washington and after that at New York's Metropolitan Museum.

It's more, much more than an event for just the are world, this unprecedented gesture by President Charles de Gaulle and the French Cabinet. In President Kennedy's words, "This incomparable masterpiece, the work of one of the greatest figures of the greatest Western age of creativity, will come to this country as a reminder of the friendship that exists between France and the United States. It will also come as a reminder of the universal nature of art."

The mysterious smile of this Florentine lady has haunted and baffled millions the world over. One explanation is that Mona Lisa del Giocondo had bad teeth and sought to conceal them; at any rate her husband, who had commissioned the portrait never owned it. Leonardo worked on it for four years, probably between 1503 and 1507, finally taking it with him to France where he sold it for 4,000 gold ducats. Today the painting is priceless.

Mona Lisa through the centuries has had a romantic and exciting history. Napoleon Bonaparte kept her in his bedroom when he was emperor. She was stolen in 1911 by an Italian who thought she rightfully belonged to Italy. He took her home and hid her in a trunk where she was found two years later. During WWII she was removed from the Louvre and hidden when the Germans overran France.

She is a welcome visitor to our shores, this matchless lady, and she well deserves the reception she will get from the President, members of Congress, and the hundreds of thousands of the admiring and the curious who will flock to see her during her stay. (AFPS)

CHAPLAINS CORNER

God Deals With Man

BY CHAP. (CAPT.) WILLIAM J. BARRAGY

God deals with man in many ways. One way in which this relationship may be viewed is through the eyes of law. In the government of the universe there are different types of law. Some of these laws are referred to as the "laws of nature," the "natural law of reason" and the "Divine positive law."

The laws of nature apply to all of creation. Examples of such laws should be those laws determined and used by the sciences. Likewise there is the common saying that "self preservation is one of the first laws of Nature".

The natural law of reason tells man that he should do good and avoid evil. Men in good faith may sometimes differ in their understanding of good and evil but all will admit that man should do good and avoid evil. The Apostles were warned that the time would come when they would be put to death by people thinking they were doing God a favor.

The natural law of reason or common sense will tell man many things. It will point to the need for love between parents and children, the need for private ownership of property and the obligation to honor God.

Many people might still wonder what is right and what is wrong. In order that there will be no confusion in important matters, the Creator has seen fit to tell us in no uncertain terms what we should do and what we should avoid. This expression of law may be called the Divine positive law. A part of this law would be the Ten Commandments. The natural law of common sense would tell people to honor God and respect the rights of others; Divine positive law confirms this fact.

There is a principle of law that says that a law without punishment is in effect no law. What is true with the laws of man is also true with the laws of God. One law frequently not kept today tells us to keep Holy the Sabbath Day.

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. David E. Rebbin

In the previous two weeks, we have discussed what to look for in buying a car and whether or not you can really afford the car. This week, we will look at the contract itself.

The first and cardinal rule when entering into a contract of any kind is to read the contract before you sign it. Do not sign a blank contract and leave the blanks for the salesman to fill in later. Would you sign your name to a check, leave the amount blank and then give it to a stranger? For the same reason, see that all blanks are filled in before signing a contract.

When you discuss the price of a car with a salesman, you usually discuss the cash price. That is, the price you would pay if you the cash in your pocket to pay for the car.

But, very few of us have that much cash in our pockets, so we have to pay finance charges, interest, and so forth.

On a "time price" contract, the cash price is usually greatly emphasized and later on in the contract you will see the down payment listed, then the "time price," usually given in terms of so many dollars per month for so many months. These amounts are usually not multiplied out for you on the face of the contract, and they are not easily computed mentally.

As the article last week read, if you don't watch out, this may add several hundred dollars to the actual purchase price of the car. Make sure that you know what the total price will be, including taxes and interest before you sign.

Let me emphasize again that you should be sure that all the blanks are either filled in or lined out before you sign the contract.

Read what your rights and responsibilities are under the contract. For example, most car sales contracts state that if a monthly payment is missed, the seller has the right to demand the rest of the money due at once. As was mentioned last week, failure to realize that such a provision exists in the contract may mean that you will lose the car and still owe money on it after you have lost it.

Again, let me emphasize unless it is in the written contract. Never mind what the salesman tells you about what a good guarantee they have; if it is not in the contract, you can't enforce it.

In Georgia, the only guarantee that the sale of used car carries is title. That means that the car dealer guarantees that he has the right to sell you the car. Unless you specifically include them in the written contract, no other guarantees are effective.

A lot of trouble with such contracts is that the used car dealer does not handle his own financing. As soon as you have signed the contract, he sells it to a finance company and has his money in his hand almost immediately. If the finance company does not have knowledge of any guarantee made you by the salesman then it does not have to honor any such guarantee.

The car dealer has his money already, so he is moving on to greener pastures to sell cars to other people, and so, many times, does not care to make good on any guarantee that was not included in the written contract. As a result, you have no recourse if the car was not exactly as the car salesman told you it was.

Let me add a word of warning at this point. In every state in the union, a car salesman is allowed to say that this car is one of the best that he has ever seen, when he really knows that it is far from being in the best of shape.

This does not mean that he can tell a direct lie, such as that it has a brand new motor in it. But it does mean that he doesn't have to tell you everything that he knows about the car either.

You have all heard about the car that was owned by the little old lady who only drove it to church on Sunday. Well, this is the type of thing I mean.

To sum it all up, make sure that you know what you are buying, and the terms that you are buying it on. When in doubt, see your legal assistance officer.

Sons of Famed Generals Attending Army Schools

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Three names famous in the nation's modern military annals appear on the roster of Army nominees to two of its senior schools.

All graduates of the U. S. Military Academy, they are the sons of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the late Henry H. "Hap" Arnold and the late Walton H. Walker who was killed in a jeep accident while commanding the Eighth Army in the first critical phase of the Korean War.

Lt. Col. John S. Eisenhower, 40, has been on leave without pay since April 1961, helping his father prepare the papers of his administration. He has been named a member of the next class of the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Also slated for the War College is Col. Henry H. Arnold Jr., 45, currently attached to Sixth Army Headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco. The colonel's father, who died in 1950, commanded the Army Air Corps in WWII. Engineers' Activation Here Cited

Jan. 5 marked an historical date in the annals of the 151st Engineer Group (C), for on that date eight years ago the organization was activated here at Fort Benning.

The colorful history of the 151st Engineer Group (C) commenced at Camp Swift, Tex., nearly twenty years ago when the parent unit, the 82nd Engineer Combat Regiment, was activated on Jan. 25, 1943, as a part of the Regular Army of the United States.

Throughout World War II, the 82nd Engineer Combat Regiment, subsequently designated the 1115th Engineer Combat Group, heaped laurels and glory upon itself as it progressed from Omaha Beach across the St. Lo, Vire, Seine, Mass and Roer Rivers to Gosler, Germany, during the period June 17, 1944, to May 9, 1945.

Campaign streamers which are now proudly borne on the 151st Engineer Group Flag were earned during operations in Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland and Central Europe.

On Jan. 25 appropriate ceremonies will be held in joint commemoration of the activation of the group and of its parent unit, the 82nd Engineer Combat Regiment.

Old Glory Tells Stamp Is Issued By United States

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Post Office Department's first regular stamp which doesn't carry the words "United States" or "Postage" is on sale.

The new five-cent American flag stamp shows Old Glory unfurled in the breeze with the White House beneath it. "The flag," says POD, "is deemed sufficient designation that this is a U. S. stamp."

In 1920 POD issued three commemorative stamps for the Pilgrim Tercentenary which, like the new stamp, lacked national identification.

Runnerup to Capt. Metts in the grand aggregate was Sgt. Bootle, who took first place in the Master Class with 2,595 points.

Space-Going Nuclear Plant Being Sought

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Three U. S. agencies have joined forces in a program to develop a nuclear power plant for "multi-manned space ships and orbiting electronic laboratories."

The minimum electrical power output sought would be enough to keep 5,000 60 - watt bulbs burning for 10,000 hours. The reactor will weigh anywhere from a ton and a half to several tons.

An Air Force spokesman said it probably would be six to 10 years before the first prototype of the reactor could be flight-tested, United Press International reported. He estimated the development costs at 250 million dollars.

The program will absorb the Atomic Energy Commission's "snap-50" project, for "systems for nuclear auxiliary power," and the Air Force "Spur," for "space power unit reactors." The combination will be known as "Snap-50 Spur," with the Federal Space Agency also cooperating.

The AEC and the Air Force are spending $4 million and $3.5 million respectively during the current fiscal year on the projects being combined.

The spokesman said no specific military requirement for such a reactor has yet been established, but it could be used to operate so-called "life support" instruments for lighting, heating and other purposes, in space ships carrying 20 or more men.

If ion engines using electricity as their power source are successful in space, the reactor also could be used for auxiliary power after the ship is in orbit.

Corregidor Room Is Site Of Engineer Wives' Tea

The Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the site of a tea held recently by the wives of the 151st Engineer Group, honoring the wives of Allied student officers.

A large Christmas tree, decorated by the women of the 806th Engineer Battalion, headed the festive decorations for the affair. Also placed around the room were several smaller trees with tiny gifts placed beneath the boughs. Tables were decorated in the traditional Christmas colors of red and green with gold trim added.

Christmas carols were played as the ladies and their special guests were served tea and punch.

Special guests included Mrs. John Kelly, Mrs. Royal Reynolds Jr. and Mrs. Charles Billingslea.

Other guests included Mrs. Paul Aussaresses, wife of the French Liaison Officer, Mrs. John Dent, wife of the British Liaison Officer and Mrs. Ronald Woodhouse of England.

Wives of Allied student officers included Senora Taver of Columbia, Senora Aceituno of Guatemala, Senora Succhi of Argentina, Senora Munoz of Chili and Senora Caldio of Venezuela.

The wife of the battalion commander of the 806th Engineer Battalion, Mrs. Felix R. Moss, headed the tea committee. Mrs. Moss was assisted by Mrs. Donald M. Ratliff and all of the ladies of the 806th.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Mahlon E. Gates wife of the commanding officer of the 151st Engineer Group and Mrs. Felix R. Moss.

Two big holiday parties were not mentioned last week in this column.

'Twas the night after Christmas and there was a party going on on Rainbow Avenue. Cars lined the street as a seemingly never-ending stream of teenagers poured into the home of Col. and Mrs. F. V. Harris. Little sister "Beanie" was kept busy answering the door as more and more guests arrived to join the fun.

Martha Harris and Bill Callahan were waiting in the newly re-done basement to welcome everyone. Truly this was a party where there was something to appeal to everyone.

There were two tables of bridge, and plenty of room for talking, lots of music for dancing, and the score from "West Side Story" for listening.

Several girls stayed after the others for a pajama party. Linda Taft, Kathy Gueymard, Kathy Aure, Susie Wells, and Nancy Williams were those who stayed to help "clean up" — things like left-over food, you know.

The Fort Benning Skeet Club was the place to be New Year's Eve for a real fun time. Harold Greer and Arnie Dryer were the jovial hosts for a majority of Benning high school and college students.

Two big fires and holiday decorations put everyone in a mood for all the "good ole" songs and dances of 1962. "Do you remember?", flew thick and fast as the time for the countdown drew near. The "good buddies" helped hail in the New Year and Lee Hankins was the first to put the bang into '63.

"Weze" reports that Mike Harvey is doing fine in Milwaukee, and is looking forward to seeing all his Fort Benning friends in the late spring.

Saturday night Linda Taft had a slumber party which was a surprising success, even though several of the post's most sparkling personalities could not be there. Kathy Aure, Myra Paulick, Nancy Williams, Liz Costigan, Sheila O'Conneli, and Martha Harris talked and talked and talked while playing "some exotic" card game.

After a formal ceremony to induct Cheryl Ely into the Sigma Delta Beta sorority, Mrs. F. V. Harris and Mrs. R. L. Whitt were hostesses for a tea held at the Whitt home. Special guests at the tea were Mrs. J. T. Ely, Mrs. J. W. Williams and Mrs. G. L. Brickhouse. Silver candy bowls were presented to Mrs. Brickhouse and Mrs. Williams in recognition of the work they did with the sorority last year.

It is interesting to note that both the Columbus High and Pacelli winners of the "I Speak for Democracy" contest are two Fort Benning boys — Sam Gibson and Pat Harvey. Both boys have lived in other countries and are particularly qualified to speak on "What Freedom Means to Me", which was the subject of the speeches this year.

Red Cross Observing 100th Year

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The world-wide Red Cross has begun a year-long observance of its 100th anniversary.

In an announcement made in Washington, E. Roland Harriman, Chairman of the American National Red Cross said, "For the past 100 years, the two ideals basic to the Red Cross movement, preservation of human dignity and prevention of suffering, have spread until they are now embraced by the citizens and governments of nearly every country."

Mr. Harriman pointed out that these ideals were first expressed by a young Swiss businessman, Henri Dunant. Shocked by the sight of thousands of wounded he saw untended after the Battle of Solferino, Italy, in 1859, Dunant wrote a book describing his experiences.

The book called for the formation of volunteer relief societies backed by "some international principle, sanctioned by a convention inviolate in character" to care for wounded in wartime.

Along with four other Swiss citizens, Dunant appealed to the conscience of the world and in February, 1863 formed what is now known as the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Their appeal bore fruit and in October, 1863, at Geneva, delegates from 16 European nations drew up a resolution that became the first "Geneva Convention for the Amelioration of the Conditions of the Wounded in Armies in the Field." This became international law the following year.

The volunteer societies Dunant foresaw are now the 90 national Red Cross, Red Crescent (in Moslem countries) and Red Lion and Sun (in Iran) societies.

In a centennial message to the member societies of the League of Red Cross Societies, John A. MacAuley of Canada, Chairman of the League Board of Governors, stated that "people of all nationalities, races and creeds, have been given life and hope through the humanitarian services of the Red Cross."

Earth Seen Blue Glow From Moon

NEW YORK (AFPS) — You are on the moon. You and your fellow space explorers have at last succeeded your pioneering flight. And what do you see?

Look up into the black sky. That blue globe you see is the earth. The planet you left has a bluish glow because its atmosphere scatters more blue rays than any other color. The sky is black because the moon scatters no light rays at all.

You are in a world of eerie desolation, airless and waterless. Your feet plough silently in dry moondust inches deep. There is no atmosphere to carry sound. There is no trace of life.

You look around and see on the horizon mountains higher than everest; you see yawning craters that could swallow a small state. From some of these craters curious streaks of brightness radiate for immense distances.

You have entered a new world — strange, sinister in its vastness and silence. Yet in one respect at least you are better equipped than Columbus, for earth scientists have provided you with excellent maps of the area where you landed — if, that is, you landed on the side of the moon that perpetually faces earth.

This is your introduction to the lunar world.

Voyage Is Same As Columbus'

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Nina II, a replica of Columbus' smallest ship on his New World voyage, arrived at San Salvador Island in the Bahamas after a 76-day Atlantic crossing.

The nine-man crew duplicated Columbus' voyage of 1492 right down to simple food and primitive navigational equipment and his first new world landfall, San Salvador.

The trip, originating at Palos, Spain, took 27 days longer than the time consumed by the original Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria.

The U. S. Navy aided the Nina II during the closing hours of the trip as a motor launch towed the little vessel through the reef-locked harbor. The Nina II had no charts of the San Salvador coastline.

The crew went ashore wearing 15th century clothing and carring Spanish weapons of the period. More than 300 San Salvadorians welcomed the voyagers with a huge beach party.

HOW FAST?

Studies conducted by the Bureau of Public Roads among 160 observers showed that most people know how fast they drive without looking at a speedometer. After 935 estimates of speeds, 42 per cent were too low, 22 per cent were too high, and 36 per cent were within 5 mph. Eighty-five per cent were never more than 12½ mph off.

IT'S OFFICIAL; 2ND WILL REVAMP

Several field exercises scheduled during the early months of this year for units of the 2nd Infantry Division have been cancelled.

Cancellation of these exercises has been brought about by a recent Department of Defense announcement giving the Army approval to proceed with plans for reorganizing Army Divisions, including the 2nd Infantry Division.

The reorganization of Army divisions is the result of a comprehensive study made by the Department of Army in keeping with new developments.

Althougb no date has been announced for the actual reorganization within the 2nd Infantry Division, officials stated that no major change in the number of personnel currently assigned is expected.

Div. Supports Dimes March Campaigning

Cannisters Out Until February

The March of Dimes is underway in the 2nd Infantry Division, its goal: funds to find preventives or cures for birth defects and arthiritis. It was this drive that recently helped finance a cure to defeat the crippling disease, Polio.

Beginning Thursday in division units, the campaign lasts until February 2. In spurring interest in this campaign within the division, the division's chief of staff, Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr. cited the successful development of the Salk Vaccine and the current drive toward defeating crippling diseases and birth defects saying, "These research and treat-

Corley trooped the line at an honors ceremony made up of troops of the 38th Infantry. On the reviewing stand with the general was Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander.

The 13-gun salute for Gen. Billingslea and 11-gun salute for Gen. Corley both were fired by the same artillery battery, Battery A, 15th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Warner B. Cole.

The division's commander arrived as a brigadier general in September 1962 to command the "Indianheads." His promotion to major general was announced New Year's Day. The major general has a distinguished military career including two awards of the Distinguished Service Cross.

The presence of 25th Infantry troops on the field during Gen. Corley's honor ceremony added special meaning to the event because of their association with a significant period in the general's military career.

of the required area are in the Yakima Firing Range.

An exercise of this type requires the cooperation of the civilian population living on land which Army leaders would like to use for the exercise. In order to produce a battlefield approximating as closely as possible the scope of modern total war, land outside military reservations has been necessary in recent years.

The Seattle District Office of the Corps of Engineers will begin contacting landowners in the area in the near future to obtain the necessary permission for use of their land.

Claims Procedures

Speaking of the success of damaged lands claims which worked out so well in last summer's huge exercise, Gen. Adams said, "Should any private property be damaged during the exercise, we will use the same claims procedures which worked so well in the Carolinas this summer where we held Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II, where almost all claims by landowners in that maneuver area had been settled in less than 30 days after the termination of the exercise."

As far as the need for gigantic staging areas which spars close cooperation between civilians and the military, the general remarked, "Training for modern warfare requires larger land areas than are now available to us on existing military reservations. We must ask our civilian neighbors to assist us in order to achieve the dispersion of forces necessary to train combat troops and airmen to meet the challenges of modern warfare."

A partner in Strike Command, the 2nd Division in the past has participated in the command's exercises. A former commanding general of the "Indianheads" who left the division this past fall is now chief of staff of Strike Command, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase left the "Second to None" for his new position in September.

With headquarters at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida, Strike Command is the Army's always ready, highly - mobile counterbalance to world aggression.

Generals

As a lieutenant colonel, Gen. Corley commanded a battalion of the 26th Infantry during World War II. During this action he received every combat decoration given by the Army except the Medal of Honor.

Since World War II, the general commanded a regiment during the Korean Conflict and now holds two distinguished Service Crosses and eight Silver Stars.

Special guests present to view both ceremonies included Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben E. Jenkins, of Columbus, Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, and Mrs. Harrell; Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and Mrs. Reynolds; and Mrs. John E. Kelly, wife of the deputy commander of The Infantry Center, presently on temporary duty in India.

For Any Emergency

87th Has a Speedy Alternate CP

By 87th Infantry PIO

A convoy consisting of four or five vehicles spaced at 75 meter intervals is observed moving cautiously down the road. This is an unusual group of personnel from Combat Support Company, 87th Infantry, traveling to a newly selected site of the alternate command post for the 87th Infantry. The commanding officer, Capt. Robert T. Smith Jr., points to a secluded spot off the main route and says, "This is it."

Without waiting for further orders a small group of well-trained men immediately go into action. Two portable radios, with assistance from a high antenna, establish communications with the battle group's command and Administrative nets. While this is being done, three men are busy erecting two command post tents. These are placed side by side and joined.

The alternate command post S-2 and S-3 sergeant is busy posting the latest information received from the main command post on the situation and planning map boards.

In less than twenty minutes after Capt. Smith had given the word to set up, the battle group alternate command post is in operation and ready to assume command if the main post goes out of action.

While the battle group assumes operational control of the Mortar, Assault Weapons and Reconnaissance Platoons and the Radar Section of the company, the alternate command post is formed from selected members of the Headquarters Platoon.

The company commander becomes the S-3, and the executive officer, Lt. Edward L. Shank, assumes the duties of an S-2. 1st Sgt. James A. Scott also has the duties of an intelligence and operations sergeant. He is assisted by the company clerk, Sp4 Robert J. Coleman. Security of the post comes from the drivers of the vehicles consisting of Sp4 Roy E. Will, Sp4 Kyle E. McAfee, PFC Roy Fleurnoy, PFC Douglas Stephens Jr. and PFC John B. Walborn. All these men are experienced radio operators in addition to their regular duties. They are trained to set up or take down the alternate command post in less than twenty minutes.

The entire setup is under the command of the battle group's deputy commander, Lt. Col. William D. Preston Jr. Here at the command post are his quarters and his office, and everything must be ready for him to assume immediate command of the battle group, if necessary, without interrupting the battle group's operation.

Combat Support's men have been experimenting for several months to determine the ideal command post arrangement. The two command post tents erected side by side present over 344-square feet of operating space. The two tent vestibules are placed in use also. One serves as the deputy commanding officer's quarters and office, while the other one serves as a blackout entrance and waiting room. The sides of the tents are rolled together and supported by a ridge pole to give a large single room 20 by 27 feet.

Equipment placed inside includes the radios, two large tables and chairs, a switch board and electric lights.

With security in place, communications well established with the main command post, the current situation posted on the maps, the operation continues around the clock until the work is given to assume command of the battle group's operations or the more familiar command is given, "Move out."

Later, the convoy of four or five vehicles, again spaced at a 75 meter interval, may be observed moving cautiously down the road to a new location.

ment efforts must be continued and deserve our wholehearted support."

Collection cannisters and publicity material were issued to unit project officers Wednesday by G-1.

The fund was originated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, himself a paralysis victim. It is in its 25th year. This year's campaign theme is "... for the life of a child," and will continue to support its old aim of assistance to polio victims as well as research and care in the fields of childhood diseases.

According to Maj. Robert A. McDade, project officer, "There is no quota in the 2nd Division March of Dimes, but we do encourage that members make a special effort to contribute to this cause."

According to a recent survey, there are more than 250,000 American babies born annually with significant birth defects. Additionally, there are 11 million Americans afflicted by arthritis or rheumatic disease, thousands of them children and adolescents.

The March of Dimes is working to solve problems where the need is greatest — in the field of birth defects and arthritis.

Ladies Get Smart New Club House

By LOIS FOY

The club house of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead received its official opening recently with its hosting of the ladies Christmas luncheon.

The club house was made available for use by the ladies in Nov. 1961 by the 2nd Division. Ground work for the club house was begun by Mrs. Walter Hutchko and her administration, and has been completed by Mrs. James A. Scott and her staff.

Members and their husbands have pooled their talents to create the smart interior of the club house. Floors were refinished, windows cleaned, curtains made and hung, and numerous other details accomplished. Paint was furnished by the Ladies of the Big Indianhead and a noncommissioned officer donated his leisure time to paint the inside.

The bamboo furniture now in the club house has belonged to the club for sometime. Funds recently allowed the club to have several pieces of the furniture re-upholstered to create the lounge.

Plans are underway for several holiday functions to be held in the club house as well as the monthly meetings.

23rd Inf. Ladies Attend New Year's Eve Party

By Mrs. Kenneth Schreiber

The 23rd Infantry officers, their wives and guests welcomed the new year with a gala dinner dance at the Custer Terrace Officers Club.

Acting as host, Capt. John A. Cooper, greeted each guest on arrival. The guests then were served a buffet style roast beef dinner in the main dining room.

The dining room was decorated by Lt. and Mrs. William Hayes; they were assisted by Mrs. Edwin Crowley, Mrs. Francis Curran and Lt. William McGondel. The table decorations included a picturesque winter scene with statuettes of a snow man and a snow woman. A three tier water fall with colored candles floating in it was encircled at the base with pine boughs and gold leaves.

Featured on either side of the main table were replicas of the crests of the 23rd Infantry and the 2nd Infantry Division. The large mirror behind the table was colorfully dressed with silhouettes of top hats, canes, champagne glasses, streamers and noise makers to signify the spirit of the occasion. Mobile snowflake swirls and crepe paper streamers completed the decorations.

Music for dancing was furnished by the Modernaires. They featured such numbers as the hully gully, the limbo and the twist.

Balloons, hats and streamers filled the air as the clock struck twelve and the band played the traditional Auld Lang Syne.

Facelifting Finished; This Library Ready for Business

By Colin Higgins

After an extensive facelifting the Sand Hill Library is once again dispensing its own brand of quiet, contentment and intellectual sustenance.

Huddled on the ends of leatherette sofas or buried in the thickness of large arm chairs the 2nd Division soldier can return and once again take his leisure in the delights of the printed word. Everywhere one looks one sees the library is doing "business as usual".

Here a solitary figure pours over "Moby Dick." There a young man meets Lolita. In the back a haphazard wanderer takes a tour through the stacks and stops at "Peyton Place".

In the reference room students ignore the noisy scratchings of pencils and look and ponder a map of the world. And there in the corner a gargoyle peers at "Famous French Cathedrals".

At the newspaper rack the Atlanta, the San Francisco and the Chicago soldier find smiles and memories in his hometown paper. The New York soldier picks up the Christian Science Monitor.

Across the room the eye wanders as pages are turned and knees are recrossed.

At the magazine rack a soldier takes his "Time"; another learns from "Life"; a playboy settles for "Esquire".

Music Room

The music room with its new curtains and carpeting radiates relaxation. All is quiet, save the faint strains of Straus, or Stravinsky, or occasionally static. The latter does not bother the lad in the corner who whimsically studies the pretty lass studying.

In her office Miss Jo Zinceau, the Sand Hill librarian, is lavish in her praise of the recent rennovations. "Both the inside and outside were repaired and repainted" she says. "A new furnace was put in, additional furnishings were added and the music room was redecorated. The whole operation has cost $3,000."

Questioned on the library facilities Miss Zinceau reported that there are at last count 13,902 books presently in the library with approximately 40 new books coming in each month.

(Of the 25 books listed on the New York Times Best Seller List the library has 15 including "Ship of Fools" and "The Thin Red Line" with "O Ye Jigs and Julips" and "Sex and the Single Girl" still, apparently, on order.)

Magazines

There are subscriptions to 62 magazines and the record collection presently totals 300.

Part of a chain of librarys that include the new one at Kelley Hill, the Sand Hill Library is operated under Main Post Special Services. It is open every day of the week including Sundays from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m.

"Though the library has a card-carrying membership of over two thousand and there are as many as two hundred who visit the library on a holiday night," Miss Zinceau says "we are still continuing to encourage more and more 2nd Division men to take advantage of the library's facilities. The library," she says, "can be very rewarding for those who take the time."

A quick glance around the library will show that this theme is being carried out. A shelf containing the "Great Books of the Western World" occupys a prominent position as does an eye-catching poster saying "Good Reading — The Key to Understanding." And there on the shelf between the Globe and Websters Dictionary are the bound copies of the Bayonet.

One of Nation's Greatest Living Heroes

Given Highest Award Serving With Division

One of the nation's greatest living heroes, a recipient of the French Croix de Guerre, the Italian Merite di Guerre and the Medal of Honor, served with the 2nd Division during World War I.

Immigrating from Holland in 1917, Sgt. Louis M. Van Iersel joined the U. S. Army and was assigned to the 9th Infantry, 2nd Division, then fighting through France. Throughout the war he distinguished himself, winning many awards for valor and bravery.

On July 18, 1918, although wounded three times, he refused to be evacuated and went to the aid of his wounded comrades, carrying 17 wounded men from no-man's land to the trenches. For this action he received the French Croix de Guerre and the Silver Star.

Later he displayed "initiative and intrepidity in silencing a formidable machinegun nest, thus powerfully contributing to the capture of five officers, sixty men and guns."

And just before the armistice Sgt. Van Iersel "in the face of seven machineguns and 350 German riflemen, led his patrol of five men through a barrage of enemy gunfire across the Meuse River and into enemy lines to secure intelligence pertinent to the forward movement of the 2nd Division. Swimming back, he gave the information to his superiors, saving countless American lives." For this action General of the Armies John Pershing presented to him the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest award for valor.

During World War II Van Iersel served in the Marine Corps for over three years and saw action at Guadalcanal and Bougainville.

Mr. Van Iersel presently resides in Sierra Madre, Calif.

New Major at Brigade Attended 'General' OCS

Receiving his promotion to major recently was Division Brigade S-1 officer, Maj. Joseph K. Westbury.

By 2nd Engineer PIO

Sp5 Carleton F. McIntire used his knowledge of military subjects, appearance and bearing to achieve the highest honor of the battalion. He has been selected to represent the 2nd Engineer Battalion as the Soldier-of-the-Year.

Prior to this selection, Sp5 McIntire was selected as the Soldier-of-the-Month for December and in subsequent competition took honors as the Tactical - Support - Command-Soldier-of-the-Month.

Having won these honors, Sp5 McIntire is settling down to the job of preparing himself for the division level competition.

A native of Springfield, Mass., he entered the Army in 1958 and received his basic training at Fort Dix, N.J. On September 1, 1961, he was assigned to the battalion. He is presently serving as a tractor operator with Company E, 2nd Engineer Battalion.

During his period of service Sp5 McIntire has been awarded the Good Conduct Medal.

Companies Test Strength in Field Training

By 9th Infantry PIO

After an extended holiday rest units of the 9th Infantry began training Monday with company field training exercises.

The training opened with a four-phase, day and night exercise which lasted 21 hours.

Using Blank Fire

The first phase, a blank fire exercise in which the rifle company was employed as a battle group advance guard, emphasized the composition and organizaton of elements of the advance guard in conjunction with security and communications.

In the second phase the rifle company was employed in the attack. In this phase emphasis was placed on troop leading procedures, fire support planning, organization for combat, tactical control measures, and employment of supporting weapons.

Phases three and four of the exercise consisted of a night attack by the rifle company on a close objective and the continuation of the attack during daylight hours. During darkness the company conducted an attack and consolidation, and at daybreak the attack continued using daylight techniques.

All phases employ aggressor troops and are controlled by umpires.

Company field training exercises are scheduled through the third week in January, and the last week of January will include a three-day battle group field training exercise.

BY 23rd Infantry PIO

The 23rd Infantry last week in separate promotion ceremonies upped a second lieutenant to first and a warrant officer from W-1 to W-2.

New Warrant Officer W-2, James S. Peabody serves as the unit supply technician for the 23rd Infantry, while Lt. Milo P. Johnson, newly promoted first lieutenant, serves as a platoon leader in Company B.

Both men joined the battle group in June 1961. Mr. Peabody became supply officer for the battle group, and Lt. Johnson, assigned to Company C, assumed the duties of a platoon leader.

VERSATILITY

The one word which best describes the characteristics of today's modern Army is "versatility." This versatility includes a built-in capability to deter war, and failing this, to defeat the enemy regardless of the time, the place, or type of conflict.

Holiday Sports Program Held at 1st

Six Sports Total Victory For Alpha's Competitors

By Bob de Camara
2nd Division Sports Editor

Before the entire assembled battle group last Saturday morning on the 1st Infantry parade field, trophies were distributed among members of the "Always First" for Christmas time company level sports competition.

Busy Program

The 1st Infantry ambitiously inaugurated and completed a self-contained sports program. Encompassed in the program's scope were six areas of competition: basketball, flag football, volleyball, track, horseshoes, and tug-of-war. Trophies were awarded to company winners in individual sports, and to the victor of the overall program went a king-size trophy.

Presented at a ceremonial review which also saw the presentation of the Soldier-of-the-Year award, trophies were accepted in the separate sports by captains of the winning company teams. The trophy for overall athletic excellence in the yuletide project was accepted for Company A —with 62 points — by John Earnesty, Alpha's Athletics and Recreation NCO. Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Infantry commander, made all the presentations.

Accepting trophies on behalf of the winning company teams were Wallace Brown, captain of Alpha's winning basketball squad; William McGarity, Company A, volleyball; William Roland, Company B, horseshoes; Roy Walters, Company A, track; Charles Cottrell, Company D, tug-of-war; Alvin Williams Jr., Combat Support Company, flag football.

Standings

The standings of the six companies participating other than Company A, the winner, were: Company D, second place, 41 points; Combat Support Company, third place, 7 points; Company C, fourth place, 4 points; Company B, fifth place, 32 points; Company E, sixth place, 51 points; Headquarters Company, seventh and last place, 13 points.

'ALWAYS FIRST' COMPANY TROPHIES

EARNESTY ACCEPTS OVERALL AWARD
Company A Totalled 62 Points

The purpose of the 1st Infantry's Christmas sports competition was at least three-fold. One, the program was designed to keep the men profitably occupied with something other than normal training routine during the holiday season. Two, to heighten battle group interest in athletics for future division and company level competition. Three, to involve battle group members in athletics who ordinarily do not have the opportunity or the interest to play.

The program was not designed so much for those men who would ordinarily trek down to the gym in their spare-time as for those men who would not. No individual was permitted to participate in more than two sports.

Points were earned in four of the six sports on the basis of two points per games won plus five points for winning the individual sport category. In horseshoes and track only one point was awarded per winning contest. Track consisted of two events, the mile relay with four man teams and the grenade throw.

Most of the sports were conducted on a single or double elimination basis. Ties in each separate sport were to have been resolved by single elimination play-offs. In case of a tie between companies for the overall sports award (something which did not happen), a three mile forced march with combat packs and weapons was to be conducted.

Company Basketball Concluded at 9th

By 9th Infantry PIO

In the 9th Infantry company level basketball tournament, Combat Support Company, commanded by Capt. Robert S. Sage, has displayed a team of undefeated champions. The squad, which is coached by Sgt. Clarence Coleman, combined teamwork and precision shooting to go undefeated in a single round robin tournament.

All games were officiated by Sgt. Norman Edmunds, 9th Infantry athletics and recreation NCO.

'Conquerors' Prepared For Div. Hardcourt Ball

At long last and after much anticipation, the 87th Infantry "Conqueror" basketball team is now being formed; and from all pre-season indications, the team looks even better than last year's division champs.

This year's team, which expects to play its first game Wednesday against the "Always Tough" 26th Infantry, will be coached by Joseph C. Gross and will be managed by the old pro, Burl Withers. Division hardwood fans may remember last year's coach, George Krajack, who led the "Conquerors" to a 13-1 record. Krajack is now assistant coach for the Clemson team in South Carolina.

The double round robin tournament will necessitate playing three games per week at both the Kelley Hill and Harmony Church Field Houses. After playing the 26th Infantry, the 87th will face two more teams that are always tough—Division Trains Friday and last year's runnerup, Div-Arty, on the 21st.

Returning members of last year's team include playmaker Lawery Jordan, who also averaged about 16 points per game; Ron Brooks, who averaged slightly over 19; and big men Warner Johnson and Ronald Guy.

TSB, 10th Artillery Win As Major Unit Basketball Opens Second-Half Action

By Leo A. Zani

The Major Unit Basketball League resumed play Monday night at the Briant Wells Field House — much to the woe of the scorekeeper. The points came fast and furious as The Student Brigade walloped the 151st Engineers 94-31, and the 10th Artillery put on another scoring exhibition, downing Lawson Army Aviation Command 93-40, in the nightcap.

In the first game of the evening, TSB could do no wrong hitting for a field goal average of 53.5 per cent and scoring over 20 points per quarter. On the other hand, the Engineers could do no right as they went down to their first defeat in the Major Unit's second half of play.

The closest the Engineers got in the game was when the score was set at 7-3. From then on the gap widened as TSB poured through point after point.

Lee Scores 26

Clinon Lee, a former University of Toledo track star, led the way for TSB with a 26-point performance. Lee, bottled up most of the first half, broke loose scoring 20 points after intermission.

The Brigade started off the second half with a 44-17 lead and continued their mastery over the Engineers with Carvey Jones breaking loose for 22 points. Mike Ryan also helped TSB's cause along by contributing 16 points.

The high point man for the Engineers was Easome Smith who scored 17 points in a outstanding effort.

10th Artillery Wins

The nightcap produced another high scoring affair with the 10th Artillery keeping abreast with TSB scored a 93-40 win over a helpless LAAC team.

Dwight Fulton was the high point man for the Artillerymen with 22 while Ben Colston hit for 21 points.

Playing a fast breaking type game the 10th Artillery scored at will and as the first half drew to a close the Artillerymen had the game on ice with a 46-26 lead.

The second half was of little help to the LAAC men as they tried desperately to hold down the shooting Charles Barnett and Keith Dierkes as the 10th Artillery rolled on to a 56 points second half performance. Final score, 10th Artillery, 93, LAAC 40.

3rd Field Hospital Wins Holiday Basketball Title

After losing its first game in the Holiday Basketball Tourney, the 3rd Field Hospital of the 428th Medics romped on to six consecutive victories including two successive wins over the tourney's second place finishers, Company B of the 29th Infantry.

Eight teams were on hand vieing for top honors as the tournament started its 10-day elimination series. As the tournament progressed, the competition grew stronger; and, at the halfway point, four teams were tied for first place. The last two days set the stage for undefeated Company B of the 29th to meet the once beaten 3rd Field Hospital.

Playing under pressure after being defeated by Company B of The Infantry Center Troop Command, the Medics had to overcome a 25-18 halftime deficit to score a 48-46 victory over the 29th quintet, thus sending the tournament into an extra game.

The second meeting between the two clubs saw the 3rd Field Hospital holding on to a slim two point half time margin. The second half wasn't to be denied from the Medics either for they gradually continued their scoring behind the shooting of Clifton Chandler and the fine backboard playing of Harold Deane. The final score was 51-41.

Jezior Takes Handball Title

In the handball tournament held at the Briant Wells Field House, Capt. Anthony Jezior won the singles championship while the runner-up in this event went to Capt. B. K. Doyle.

Capt. David Bourland and Capt. Grogory Mee placed first in the Doubles beating out Capt. Thomas Block and Capt. B. K. Doyle, who finished second.

Gen. MacArthur Named Referee In Athletic Feud

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy has appointed Gen. Douglas MacArthur as mediator in the dispute for control of amateur athletics between the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) and the National Collegiate Athletic Association NCAA).

The two organizations have been feuding over the sanctioning of track and field meets. Their dispute led the President to suggest that the two sides submit to arbitration or face the possibility that the United States will not have an Olympic squad in 1964.

Better Bowling

OWNING YOUR BALL . . . Surprising as it may seem, expert bowlers recommend that the beginner own his ball — provided, that is, he is going to continue bowling. The reason for this recommendation is that no one — not even a star — can reach consistent scores with a ball chosen at random. When buying a ball, however, it is best to have it fitted by a qualified person, as there are many factors to consider. For example, a ball should have just the right fit for fingers, and the angle which the holes are drilled in relation to the center of the ball should be one that allows free and easy release of fingers. An expert would know best how to fit you.

Shough's Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

The closing days of the 1962 college basketball season were certainly punishing to several of the leading quintets across the country.

Knocked from the ranks of the undefeated were such teams as Ohio State, Bowling Green, Auburn, Illinois and a fast-climbing Arizona State five. Only three teams —Cincinnati, Loyola Ill.) and Georgia Tech — in the United Press top ten remain among the ranks of the undefeated.

Cincinnati, the two - time NCAA champion, seems well on the way to a third straight title as the Bearcats recently racked up their 29th straight victory over a two-year period. No one seems able to stop the ever-confident Bearcats.

Georgia Tech seems to be the big surprise of the season, as the Yellow Jackets are managing to maintain their perfect record. The Atlanta-based quintet is presently supporting a 9-0 record and the number seven slot in the United Press weekly poll.

A sophomore - studded team, Tech was picked far down in the pack in pre-season ratings and was definitely expected to stay there. The Rackets have surprised everybody and especially Kentucky. The experts picked Kentucky as the Southeastern Conference's number one team, second only to Cincinnati in the nation. But the Wildcats suffered an early season defeat at the hands of Virginia Tech and a later defeat from Georgia Tech. The Yellow Jacket victory seemed to be the key to success as they are rapidly moving toward a place of national basketball prominence.

Another suprise team, Ohio State, may be losing their early season brilliance as they have recently suffered their second defeat. The Bucks, once rated as high as third in the country, were handed their first defeat by an improving Wichita five. Their second came Monday night with the lethal blow being dealt by third-ranking Illinois.

State has just entered Big Ten Conference play and the way things are going the Bucks may not fair as well as they have in past years.

Duke seems to be settling down after two early season defeats. The Blue Devils have still been able to remain in the sixth slot despite the defeats. Their fine All-American, Art Heyman, is the major reason behind their recovery.

Little Loyola, although the winningest team in the United States, is having a tough time acquiring a first place vote in the polls. The 35-man UPI board of coaches is boldly behind Cincinnati. By all indications, it will take the NCAA tournament to determine the country's top quintet.

One thing is for sure, 1963 will see some of the finest basketball the country has ever known.

'New' Victory Lodge Is Recently Opened

A ribbon cutting ceremony recently held at Victory Lodge marked the completion and acceptance of its new and expanded facilities.

The project included the addition to the existing building of a new kitchen, storerooms and utility room.

CAMPBELL WINS

Fort Campbell, led by the powerful running of fullback Ernie Wheelwright and passing of Tom Blanda, won the third annual playing of the Missile Bowl over a surprisingly tough Lackland AFB, Tex., eleven. Campbell's two TDs in the first half brought home a 14-10 victory over the men in blue.

Woodrow Wilson's Letters Show Warmth, Wit

Some people thought he was too aloof or just plain snobbish. He was attacked at every possible turn by small men who did not have the courage or foresight to join in his dedication to freedom and justice.

A few did think differently; in 1920 he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. But President Woodrow Wilson's struggle for the "rights of man" and the League of Nations, which he championed as the only hope for mankind, was met with rebuff by an apathetic American Congress.

He was to die of a stroke in December of 1924. His great dream for initial steps to unite mankind would have to wait until another time and another bloody war.

But President Wilson's image as a man who always acted and spoke with a chilly reserve is solidly refuted in a group of letters recently published in the American Heritage magazine.

The letters were written by Mr. Wilson to his first wife, Ellen Louise Axson, during their courtship from 1883 to 1855. The letters show the President as a warmhearted, humorous man. They were written when he was a young struggling lawyer just making ends meet with his practice in Atlanta, Ga.

Both the bride-to-be and Mr. Wilson were children of Presbyterian ministers. She was pretty and demure and had read "all the Classics."

"Can you love me in my every humour? Or would you prefer to think of me as always dignified?" he wrote.

Even then people seemed to regard him as a bit too proper and with a certain stiffness. "I am afraid it would kill me to be always thoughtful and sensible, dignified and decorous."

Mr. Wilson was obviously worried and wanted to set his sweetheart straight when he wrote, "It may shock you—it ought to—to learn that I have a reputation (?) amongst most of my kin and certain of my friends for being irrepressible, in secret circles, as a maker of grotesque addresses for the precarious elevation of chair seats as a wearer of all comic grimaces, as a simulator of sundry unnatural burlesque styles of voice and speech, as a lover of farces, even as a dancer of the can-can — But you'll find out soon enough what an overgrown boy you have taken as your 'lord and master'."

Unknown Pair Assists Lady In Yule Spirit

Christmas Day assistance rendered a lady motorist in need has brought a letter of appreciation to Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, and her unknown friends.

Cornelia Gillis of Cuthbert, Ga., experienced difficulties with her auto while passing through the reservation and was aided by two young men, presumably military personnel.

She explains her experience by the following letter:

The Commandant
Fort Benning, Ga.

Dear Sir:

I regret very much that I am unable to give you the names of the two fine young men to whom I am so indebted, but perhaps this letter could be posted conspicuously and reprinted in The Bayonet where they might see it.

On Christmas afternoon, just past the second overpass bridge beyond the Second Division, my car stalled around 4:30. As you know, it was a miserable afternoon and I was in a quandry as to what I could do. The first young man, with his wife, drove by on the other side of the highway headed for Columbus. They stopped and did everything possible to get my car started, altho he was handicapped by a broken arm. They said they lived about a mile further on at a trailer park. The second young man came up behind us and worked on the car to try to find the trouble, but without success.

The young wife wanted to stay with me while her husband went on to Columbus to run their errand, while the single young man drove on a side road about a mile to his barracks to phone for help.

. . . The soldier who was to call for help was back shortly with the news that my mechanic could only bring a wrecker and pull me back to town, but no parts for the car were available that night, if needed.

. . . All three of these young people exemplified the highest and finest of unselfish consideration and concern for a fellow traveler, without thought of their own inconvenience. I only wish I could express again my sincere appreciation to them personally.

. . . There will always be a warm place in my heart for the service that was so willingly and gladly rendered me.

Sincerely yours,
Cornelia Gillis,
Andrew College,
Cuthbert, Ga.

New Directive Defines Separations Policies

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Guidelines to insure that all military personnel receive uniform treatment under laws governing separation for physical disability have been published by the Defense Department.

The new policies, principles and procedures on such separations are covered in DOD Directive 1332.18. They require that the separate military departments submit copies of implementation within 60 days.

The directive is based upon the Veterans Administration schedule for rating disabilities but two attached annexes provide for particular DOD requirements.

Provisions are sufficiently elastic to meet the varying needs of the different services.

Since there are basic organizational and procedural differences between the military departments, the directive is not intended to establish uniform procedures where the measures already in effect do not result in decidedly different dispositions of members among the services.

Chapter 61 of U. S. Code 10, which applies to both officers and enlisted men of all services, requires that a member be unfit because of physical disability to perform military duty before he is eligible for retirement or separation under this law.

While a member may have medical conditions or physical defects ratable under the VA schedule, he will not be separated unless they render him unfit under the new standards.

This specifies that he must be "unable to perform the duties of his office, rank, grade or rating in such a manner as to reasonably fulfill the purpose of his employment on active duty."

The directive also outlines separation policies in considerable detail and defines precisely what it meant by the terms it uses.

ALL-AMERICANS

The first service academy football players to be named to All - American stature were Charles D. Daly, quarterback, and Paul B. Bunker, tackle.

The U. S. Military Academy Cadets were named to Walter Camp's 1901 All - American team.

ALLIED OFFICER PROMOTED . . , Khin Ohn (R), of Burma, is promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel in recent ceremonies here where he is enrolled in an officer career course at The Infantry School. The Allied student began the course in August and is scheduled to be graduated in May, when he will return to Burma. Officiating at the promotion ceremony is Lt. Col. James T. Carter, a career course director in The Infantry School's Office of the Coordinator of Instruction.

Gen. Lipscomb Tours Facilities

Major Gen. Thomas H. Lipscomb, deputy commanding general for material development, U. S. Army Combat Developments Command, arrived here Tuesday for a one-day orientation on facilities at The Infantry Center.

He was briefed on the mission and organization of the Combat Developments Agency.

The general was also oriented in the top 10 priority Infantry material items and on the visualization of Infantry combat operations in the 1970-1980 time frame.

In the afternoon he made an official call on Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Structure Of DOD Is Explained

The Defense Department's organization, and the functions of its component units are described and explained in a new pamphlet being provided by the Directorate for Armed Forces Information and Education, Department of Defense.

The pamphlet entitled "Our Departmet of Defense" (DOD Pam (1-7A) is available through Service information offices.

The development of the countrys military establishment is traced from the time Congress created the War Department in 1789, and the Navy Department nine years later, to the complex organization of the Defense Department of today.

In addition to describing the functions of the Secretary and Deputy Secretary of Defense, the pamphlet expains the organization of the various elements of the defense establishment and tells what their missions are.

Also included in the pamphlet is a brief description of unified and specified commands.

Guards At Tomb Hold Ceremony

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army sentinels who keep a perpetual watch at the Tomb of the Unknowns and participate year-round in wreath-laying ceremonies with U. S. and foreign dignitaries and patriotic organizations held their own such ceremony early Christmas morning at the famous shrine in Arlington National Cemetery.

For the fourth straight year, the guards purchased their own wreath and placed it at the Tomb. Twelve of the soldiers who maintained the round-the-clock vigil during the holiday season took part in this year's ceremony.

Host for the event was Sgt. Allen J. Eldridge, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. PFC Stanley R. Snyder, of Sandborn, Iowa, was wreath bearer, and Spc James A White, of Wallingford, Pa., placed the wreath at the base of the Tomb.

Members of the Tomb Guard are hand picked from the Honor Guard Company, 1st Battle Group, 3rd Infantry, Fort Myer, Va. Their parent unit, known as "The Old Guard," is a combat-ready infantry outfit which furnishes ceremonial troops for the Nation's Capitol.

One of the most visited of all American Shrines, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier attracts a daily average of 4,500 visitors.

1912 — FIRST LAUNCHING
Seaplane Is Catapulted

Catapult Turned Ship Into Aircraft Carrier

BY CLARK KINNARD

What set apart the feat of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., in May of 1927, was not its being the first flight across the Atlantic, but that he made it alone, 33 hours, 29 minutes of endurance in a small plane under circumstances that would be heroic even today.

More than 60 men had made transatlantic flights before Lindbergh, but in pairs or larger groups.

The era of transatlantic flying had begun eight years earlier, on May 16, 1919, when three U. S. Navy Curtiss-built seaplanes rose from Trepassey Bay, Newfoundland, and headed east. Near the Azores, two of the planes, lost in a fog, ran out of fuel and had to come down. The third, NC-4, reached its planned stop, Horta, on May 17.

After a short rest by the crew — Lieut. Comdr. A. C. Reed, Lt. E. F. Stone, Lt. Walter Hinton, Ensign H. C. Rodd, Chief Mach. E. H. Howard, Res. Pilot Lt. J. L. Breeze Jr. —and replenishment of fuel, the NC-4 went on to Plymouth, England, to complete the first successful oceanic aerial voyage.

A month later, two Britons accepted the challenge: John Alcock and Arthur Whitten rown, officers in the Royal Air Force, flew from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Clifden, Ireland, non-stop.

The flight of the NC-4 and its companions, NC-1 and NC-3, was the climax of seven years of intensive aviation experimentation and development by the Navy, beginning with the introduction in 1912 of a catapult that enabled planes to be taken to sea for scouting or attack purposes. The catapult had been devised by Capt. Washington Irving Chambers.

The same year, another Navy officer, Bradley Allen Fiske, patented a "method of and apparatus for delivering submarine torpedoes from airships" —the first self-powered and self-steering missile.

The Chambers catapult was demonstrated first publicly by Lt. Theodore Gordon Ellyson in take-offs from a ship at Washington Navy Yard.

CIVIC ACTION

Civic action is any action performed by military forces of a country, utilizing military manpower and skills, in cooperation with civil agencies, authorities, or groups, that is designed to improve the economic or social betterment of that country. Civic action programs enhance the stature of indigenous military forces and improve their relationship with the population. Thus, such programs can be a major contributing factor to the elimination of insurgency.

Airborne Seeks 100 Here

Fort Benning's quota for volunteers for airborne training for January has been set at 100 men.

The requirement calls for 70 prospective paratchutists from The Infantry Center and 30 from the 2nd Infantry Division.

The U.S. Continental Army Command established quotas for each installation in an effort to fill the increasing requirements of the Army's airborne units.

Because there is no planned Army accessions, the needed additional airborne strength must come from permanent personnel as well as from the training centers and recruiting service, according to Army officials.

Any soldier wishing to volunteer for airborne training should contact his unit training officer or non-commissioned officer.

Bogus Postage Stamps Had Propaganda Value

Phony stamps are the bane of the stamp collector.

Usually, when a collector finds a forgery in his collection, he writes it off as a financial loss. However, Maj. Ralph L. Barger, Chief of the Plans and Operation branch of V Corps G-2 Section, Frankfurt, Germany, is a collector who specializes in philatelic forgeries.

During World War II, both the Allied and Axis powers forged stamps for propaganda purposes and the major has spent the past 10 years collecting these unusual stamps.

Printed by Great Britain, the United States and Germany, the forged stamps fall into two classes — propaganda stamps based on real stamps but with changes in the design, either caricaturing the original figures or replacing them with other figures; and another type strictly designed to carry propaganda through the enemy postal system without cost or merely to disrupt the enemy's postal system.

For instance, in 1941 an Italo-German friendship stamp appeared in which Hitler and Mussolini faced each other. Underneath was the caption "Two people, One War." A very similar stamp was printed by the Allied powers in which Hitler snarled at Mussolini and the latter looked startled. The caption was changed to read "Two people, One Leader."

Another propaganda stamp circulated by the Allies in Germany replaced the right profile of Hitler with a full portrait of Heinrich Himmler. The new design was intended to needle Hitler into feeling that Himmler was aiming for his post and to stir up trouble in the Nazi camp.

The Germans hit back with a caricature of the British 1937 Coronation stamp issued for George VI and his Queen. In the German version, the Queen is replaced by Stalin and the date is changed to November 28, 1943 — the date of the Teheran Conference. The inference was that Great Britain had become a Soviet Socialist dependency.

Special postcards sold in Germany caricatured Winston Churchill and Neville Chamberlain. Both caricatures were marked "Not worth a Pfennig." A stamp that must have stuck in Hitler's gullet was that of Field Marshal Witzleben with a dateline that read "Hanged on 8 Aug. 1944."

During the cold war that followed WWII, this type of stamp continued to be printed in East Germany. In 1957, the words "UnGerman, Undemocratic Dictatorship" replaced the words "German, Democratic Republic" on an East German issue.

Maj. Barger specializes in these stamps, in other German issues, and in legitimate stamps issued by the United States and the United Nations. The major won an award for his collection in his first stamp show.

He has also shown his stamps at various U. S. military installations and may exhibit them at shows connected with German stamp clubs and collectors. Now that the beat of battle is over, the major's collection is considered an unusual curiosity.

X-15 Successful During Tests

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AFPS) — Pilot Joe Walker has flown the X-15 rocket plane on a stability test that had the craft re-entering the earth's atmosphere without its lower tail.

The plane reached an altitude of 157,000 feet or almost 30 miles. This was the highest the X-15 has been flown in a current series of tests to find out if it and other winged aircraft would be more stable without the lower tail.

The aircraft's speed of 3,886 mph, or more than five times the speed of sound, was almost 200 mph faster than programmed.

The visitors, who arrived Sunday, were entertained at an official luncheon Monday at the Main Officers' Open Mess. Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds, Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, was host.

The major portion of Monday morning was devoted to orientations on The Infantry School, The Infantry Center, and the utilization of the post in support of the training program.

During their visit, the Mexican officers observed an airborne orientation, demolition techniques, rifle company task force operations, Ranger and leadership presentations.

At Bramn Range, they saw demonstrations of tank weapons, followed by exhibitions of a rifle platoon in attack and armor platoon in attack at outlying training areas.

The officers departed the post Wednesday.

Simple Means Of Map Making Is Under Study

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Plastic relief map making is being simplified by a high-speed model carving system now under development by the Army.

Making of the master mold for these maps is a time-consuming, expensive job by present methods, needing highly skilled people to hand - carve the mold.

New Officers Join ICDA

Three new officers recently joined the staff of the Infantry Combat Developments Agency (ICDA).

Lt. Col. Willard E. Chambers has been designated acting chief of the Combat Material Division and Capts. Francis G. Lee and Raymond Suarez will be project officers in the doctrine and Organization Division.

ICDA is the Infantry branch of the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command, a material and manpower research organization with headquarters at Fort Belvoir, Va.

A highly decorated Infantry veteran, Col. Chambers came to Fort Benning from Headquarters Eighth Infantry Division in Germany where he was liaison officer with the 222nd Air Division.

Since entering the Army more than 20 years ago the colonel has been awarded the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and V Device Army Commendation Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Combat Infantryman Badge with Star and Master Parachutist Badge.

A 1942 graduate of the Officer Candidate School here, he also completed The Infantry School's associate officer advanced course, a course at the Army Information School and the associate Command and General Staff College course at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Capt. Suarez, also commissioned through the OC program here, was last assigned to the 2nd Battle Group, 3rd Infantry in Korea.

Since being commissioned in 1953, Capt. Suarez has completed the basic airborne course and the officer advanced course at The Infantry School. He is a 1961 graduate of Hofstra College in New York.

Capt. Lee was with the 1st Battle Group, 31st Infantry in Korea before being assigned to the ICDA. He received his commission through the ROTC program at the University of Rhode Island upon his graduation in 1957. He completed the basic officer course at The Infantry School in 1958.

GEN. KELLY ASSIGNED DUTY IN INDIA

Brig. Gen. John E. Kelly, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center since June 10, 1961, has departed the post for India, where he will become chief of the U.S. Military Supply Mission to that country.

Mrs. Kelly and four of their seven children, Richard, 12, Maureen, 11, Timothy, 8, and Erin, 4, will leave Sunday to join the general.

The one-star general succeeded Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles Jr., as deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center. During his 19-month tour, Gen. Kelly's influence was felt in many of the post's activities, particularly during the Reserve and National Guard call-up in the latter part of 1961.

Makes History

In September, 1962, Gen. Kelly took part in an Infantry School first when he and his son, 2nd Lt. Patrick O. Kelly, became the first father-son combination to receive their Parachutist Badges together.

The 51-year-old general completed the rigorous three-week course in time to make his fifth and qualifying jump at the same time as his 22-year-old son, marking another first.

Before coming to Fort Benning Gen. Kelly was G-3 and later deputy chief of staff for operations of the Fourth U.S. Army at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He went to the Texas post in 1960.

Assigned to Hawaii in 1957, he commanded the 27th Infantry "Wolfhounds" for 15 months before becoming deputy chief of plans and operations of the U.S. Army, Hawaii. He held that position until going to Fourth Army Headquarters.

Gen. Kelly's Army career began in 1932 when he was appointed to the U. S. Military Academy by the late Fiorello H. La Guardia, former mayor of New York City and later congressman.

Assigned to 29th

After graduating in 1936, he was assigned to the 29th Infantry here. In 1938 he attended the regular course at The Infantry School and the following year, the tank course.

In 1940, he was ordered to the U. S. Military Academy to instruct in foreign languages and was sent to the University of Laval in Quebec, Canada, to study French. In 1941 he received his master's degree from the university and returned to West Point as an instructor.

Departing the Academy in 1943 he went to Europe, where during World War II, he participated in four campaigns as a battalion commander with the 378th Infantry of the 95th Infantry Division.

Following the ceremonies, a reception honoring Gen. and Mrs. Powell will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the Supper Club Annex of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Gen. Powell has had a wide range of commands during his Army career. Before becoming CONARC commander in October, 1960, he was commanding general of the Third Army, a position he held for six months.

Commanded Post

From April, 1958, to February 1960, he was deputy commanding general for Reserve Forces at CONARC, and from August, 1956, to April, 1958, he was commander of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

On the occasion of his leaving Fort Benning, Gen. Powell, who earned his third star while directing Infantry Center and Infantry School activities, was cited by the mayors of the two cities, as well as the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association.

B. F. Register, then mayor of Columbus, praised Gen. Powell for his success in furthering the fine relationship between the military and civilians of the Fort Benning area.

Register also presented the holder of the Army's Distinguished Service Cross, a resolution from the City Commission commending him "for his service to the community and the contributions he has made in strengthening the ties of good will between the city and Fort Benning's soldiers."

The former mayor of Phenix City, Leonard Coulter, presented Gen. Powell with a resolution from the Citizens-Military Council which cited him for "extraordinary leadership and dedication" and further praised him for strengthening civilian-military relationships.

'No Better'

T. G. Reeves, representing the Chamber of Commerce said, "We have had some of the finest officers in the Army here but we have had no better post commander than Gen. Powell. His leadership has evidenced itself throughout his command to the betterment of the community."

During his tour as post commander, Gen. Powell earned his Army aviator rating at Lawson Field, taking his training in rotary wing craft.

In March, 1960, he moved to Georgia once again to assume command of the Third U. S. Army at Fort McPherson. He stayed there as the commanding general until receiving his fourth star the following October, and was then assigned to the position he now holds, CONARC commanding general.

He also has served as commanding general of U.S. Army Pacific, Fort Shafter, Hawaii, commanding general of the 25th Infantry Division, and deputy assistant chief of staff, G1, Department of the Army in Washington.

A native of Monmouth, Ore., the four-star general enlisted in the Oregon National Guard in 1919 and rose to the grade of sergeant. Following successful completion of a competitive examination and graduation from the University of Oregon in 1926, he was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Infantry.

During World War II, he served in Europe as chief of staff of the 75th Infantry Division from August, 1943, to February, 1945, and as assistant G1 of the First U. S. Army Headquarters from February, 1945, to May, 1945.

In Korea

Gen. Powell commanded the 17th Infantry Regiment during the Korean conflict when it was the only United States unit to reach the Yalu River on the Manchurian border.

He is a graduate of the National War College in Washington, the general staff course at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the company officer course here.

In addition to holding the Distinguished Service Cross, which he earned during combat in the Korean conflict, Gen. Powell wears the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Air Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge, Czechoslovakian War Cross, and the Chungmu Distinguished Service Medal and Presidential Citation from the Republic of Korea.

Arrival honors are slated for the retiring general at 11 a.m. Tuesday and farewell honors will be held at 10:00 a.m. the following day. Both ceremonies will be on Chapel Field.

Active Army, Reserves Converting to ROAD

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—A year of testing the Reorganization Objective Army Division (ROAD) concept with the 1st Armored Division and the 5th Infantry Division has resulted in a decision to reorganize the Active Army under ROAD and extend the reorganization to those Reserve combat divisions scheduled for retention.

Active Army and Army Reserve units will begin conversion immediately. The reorganization of active units will be accomplished on a phased basis and will be completed by late 1964 with the bulk of the reorganizing being done this year.

Conversion of Army National Guard divisions to the new structure will begin as soon as governors of the Affected states and the National Guard Bureau each agreement on troop list and stationing plans.

The Army said the Reserve Components are being converted to the concept in order to make them capable of compatible employment with the Active Army.

ROAD was originally announced in June 1961. The 1st Armored and 5th Infantry Divisions were organized under the plan last February. The concept places emphasis on increased flexibility, battlefield mobility and firepower.

Prior to ROAD the Army had three types of divisions —Infantry, Armor and Airborne. The new structure adds a Mechanized division and all have increased capabilities over the pentomic organization.

The most important factor of the ROAD concept is the ability to tailor divisions to battlefield requirements. Starting with a common base which includes three brigade headquarters, division artillery and other support and combat units, the division is tailored to, fit its mission.

Combat battalions are added according to the division's needs. To form an armored division, the majority of the added units would be tank and mechanized battalions. For an airborne division, emphasis would be on parachute Infantry battalions.

PX MANAGER HONORED . . . William B. Hallyburton, right, former general manager of the Fort Benning Exchange, receives a Certificate of Achievement from Major Gen. Ben Harrell, Infantry Center commanding general, presented by Maj. John G. Setaro, Exchange officer, upon his transfer to Wiesbaden, Germany, where he will take over duties as executive for the Continental Region of the Air Forces Europe Exchange. Hallyburton joined the Exchange Service in 1942 and transferred to Fort Benning in 1950 from Fort Gordon, Ga.

Lawrence Plott Takes Post Exchange Duties

A change of command in the civilian ranks was witnessed recently when Lawrence A. Plott took over duties as general manager of the Fort Benning Exchange, succeeding William B. Hallyburton.

Plott comes to the post from Wiesbaden, Germany, where he was regional executive, Continental Region, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, Europe.

A graduate of a nearby Chatsworth, Ga., High School, the new general manager finished his military service in 1946, and joined the Exchange Service in Europe the following year. He has travelled extensively, serving in Germany, Turkey, North Africa, and France. He has the distinction of starting the first Exchange in Spain.

Hallyburton, a member of the Fort Benning community for more than 13 years, is succeeding Plott in Wiesbaden, and will depart the later part of January.

Church Worker

The reassigned general manager has been an active member of the Wynnton Methodist Church where he served on the official board. His wife and five children have been active in school and community affairs in Columbus.

Post exchange personnel recently held a farewell dinner party for the Hallyburton family at which time they were presented with an engraved silver tray.

Mr. and Mrs. Hallyburton, with three of their five children, will fly to Europe from New York City, N.Y., on Jan. 30. Two daughters will remain in the States — Mary, who teaches school in Atlanta, and Jean, a student at Auburn University.

Physical Conditioning Cannot Be Neglected

Throughout military history successful commanders have made the physical condition of their troops a matter of primary concern. Many leaders who neglected or subordinated this aspect have gone down in defeat because of the physical failure of their men, even though their weapons and tactics were faultless.

Warfare is a grueling ordeal for soldiers and makes many severe physical demands. Under combat conditions, it takes tremendous physical endurance to withstand fatigue, to function alertly in the face of near exhaustion. And experience has proved that mental and physical conditioning is as important for those who give support to the combat units as it is to the fighting soldiers themselves.

In analysis, the strength and vigor of the Army is really no greater than the strength of our soldiers. The Army has long recognized this, for it is not content merely to maintain each soldier's health as it was at the time he began to wear Army Green. It accepts his good health as a basic starting point and seeks to increase his endurance and stamina through balanced conditioning programs. Thus, formal scheduled training time is allotted for physical training and this in turn is augmented by competitive games, sports and off-duty athletics.

The responsibility for keeping a unit at top physical condition rests with the small unit commander. Pressed as he is with many other vitally important training and operating missions, he must nevertheless assure that physical training is never neglected. He is called upon to use initiative and ingenuity in fulfilling his duty to maintain that high level of physical proficiency required for immediate combat.

While the commander must concern himself with the health of his soldiers no matter their location or job, the soldier also has an obligation to keep fit. Men, like the tools of war, must be kept in a state of readiness. The individual officer or enlisted man who allows himself to "go to pot" physically is seriously undermining himself and the strength of the Army. In these days of international crisis in every corner of the globe there will be no time for toughening of the body should war come. In short, every soldier and commander must give daily attention to achieving and maintaining peak physical fitness, for the vital mission of the Army — success in battle and security of nation — requires that its members be in top physical condition at all times.

NASA to Trace Meteors With 16-Camera Network

NEW YORK (AFPS)—NASA, the U.S. space agency, reports that a 16-station "prairie network" is being set up to scar the skies for meteorites which scientists believe may yield clues to the history of our solar system and possibly the distribution of life in it.

Automatic cameras for photographing meteors are being located in seven Middle Western states by the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory of Cambridge, Mass., in association with NASA.

NASA hopes that quick recovery of "falling stars" will give scientists a chance to study the chemical and organic structure of meteorites and the effect radiation in space has on them.

Four automatic cameras will be installed at each of the stations. Only bright meteors will be photographed at the stations, which are located about 197 miles apart, since smaller bits of matter falling through the atmosphere burn up in a matter of seconds.

Exposed films will be sent to the network's field headquarters at Lincoln, Neb., where photographs from two or more stations can be compared to plot the probable point of impact of these bodies and their orbital path in space before striking the earth.

Recovery teams from the Smithsonian Observatory will then go out to pick up the fallen space fragments for immediate study.

A sensor placed at each station seeks out Polaris — the North Star — at nightfall. If the sky is overcast, which would prevent the cameras from taking clear pictures, Polaris will not be visible and the station automatically closes down.

The Wrangling Reds: What Does It Mean?

Communist unity and Free World disunity — for years we've been fed the picture of the Soviet Union and Red China locked in an ideological smooch while the Western Powers squabbled among themselves. It was never a convincing lovefest but at least Mr. Khrushchev and Mao preserved a public appearance of amity on the world stage, however shrilly some of their puppets may have wrangled.

But now the differences between Moscow and Peiping — deep, bitter differences — — have been aired in the wake of the Khrushchev backdown on Cuba and the Chinese slash into India. It is the West's turn to chortle — or it would be if it weren't for the nature of the Communist Revolution.

In fact, the Free World might be dangerously deluded if it assumed that this Sino-Soviet split were irreconcilable. The U.S.S.R. and Red China differ not on their ultimate goal — world revolution — but on the techniques of attaining it. In the United States, as Free World leader, they recognize the chief obstacle to their success. They must remain bedfellows, spat and quarrel though they may, if they hope for victory of the Communist ideology.

"In Moscow," Secretary of State Dean Rusk has observed, "they're more subtle and sophisticated. They talk about peaceful coexistence. They are using such instruments as economic assistance and things of that sort."

Peiping, on the other hand, Mr. Rusk said, seems to want a more belligerent and military approach. This apparently is not Mr. Khrushchev's way — at least not now — as he indicated in the tense days of the Cuba crisis. But we should never forget that some powerful men around him feel differently — men who believe not only in rattling rockets but in using them.

Has the West profited at all from this hot dispute between the two leaders of the Communist Bloc? Yes — if only because it has shaken and disrupted Communist groups all over the world; their disunity is our gain. But let's never grow complacent about it. (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

America's True Power

It is utterly useless to stamp "In God We Trust" upon our coins unless it is also stamped upon our hearts. It is also useless to cry out against the materialism of Communist Russia and at the same time maintain more confidence in the power of the hydrogen bomb than we maintain in the power of God.

Faced by the threat of physical force, we are compelled to look to our physical defenses. In doing so there is always danger of becoming obsessed with the problem of physical defense, to the neglect of the spiritual. There is no denial for the necessity of arming against our foes and nations that have turned away from the Lord and put their trust in the sword. But, we are sometimes awe-stricken by the modern science that has unleashed such powers of physical destruction that the things known of old that can destroy a nation more effectively go unnoticed. Injustice, tyranny, falsehood, the hatred of brethren, the lack of compassion, the cult of cruelty — each of these launched upon our country from within, can bring ruin and woe more terrible than anything that scientists have invented.

The foolish and the faint-hearted are many, but there are many more who have never wavered from true faith in God. They interpose between us and every menace the strong shield that has protected us in the past and is able to keep us forever safe. That shield is the motto inscribed not only on coins, but also on the hearts and minds of millions of men and women: "In God We Trust."

Returns to Academy

After completing a course at the Command and Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., he returned to the Military Academy and served as an instructor in Spanish and French from 1946 to 1948.

On his return from Europe in 1953 he attended the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and upon graduating was assigned to the Combat Operations Research Group, U. S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va.

In 1954, in Korea, he commanded the 160th Regiment "Grenadiers" of the 40th Infantry Division. Later that year, he was appointed senior aide to Gen. J. Lawton Collins, U. S. representative on the Standing Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Surgeon Says

Appendix Difficulties Can Be Spotted Early

By Maj. George L. Johnson
General Surgery Service, MAH

Abdominal pain is a common ailment in all ages. The causes of abdominal pain are many and range from a simple "green apple" belly ache or "virus infection" to very serious conditions. Many of these conditions require very simple treatment measures, others require non-surgical treatment and the remainder may need surgery.

The most common emergency abdominal operation continues to be an appendectomy. This is called an emergency, because when the diagnosis is established the operation is performed within a short period for the safety of the patient, and not for the convenience of the patient or the surgeon. This is done in an effort to remove the appendix before it has ruptured.

When the appendix has ruptured, the disease frequently assumes different characteristics in treatment, length of illness, and seriousness. We must all face the fact that this can still be a serious condition if neglected, and can even be fatal.

We have not had any fatalities here (and we are very thankful), but in the past few months there have been too many cases of ruptured appendix. The purpose of this article is to stress some of the points associated with appendicitis in hopes that medical evaluation will be sought should the occasion arise.

All Ages

Abdominal pain is common to all age groups and is also the most common symptom associated with appendicitis. It begins as a rather vague uncomfortable feeling in the pit of the stomach or around the navel. Within a few hours it tends to become generalized over the entire abdomen, after which it localizes to the lower abdomen.

The pain tends to be steady in nature, but can be crampy with a residual aching between the cramps. Motion, such as walking or coughing, tends to make the pain more severe and knife-like.

Appetite usually is poor and there may be some associated nausea and even vomiting.

When appendicitis is early, there is usually little or no fever and no chills. There may be changes in this as the condition progresses, or in the very young child.

Diarrhea usually is not associated with appendicitis; however, do not seek false security in its presence.

It is important that anyone having any of the complaints listed above be seen by a physician. It is true that most of the time the condition will not be appendicitis, and may not even require medicine, but the doctor should make that decision.

We want to see everyone with abdominal complaints, at any time, day or night, and certainly want a return visit if symptoms should become worse after the first examination. Any abdominal pain which is getting worse or is persistent for more than a few hours should be checked here at the hospital.

The diagnosis of appendicitis requires an operation for treatment. This is not always an easy diagnosis for a physician to make. It frequently requires a period of observation in order to prevent an unnecessary operation. You, as a patient, may find this an inconvenience or find it difficult to understand, but it does represent the more ideal approach to treatment.

The intent of this article is not to make each of you capable of diagnosing appendicitis, but rather I would hope, that it might help some of you to know when to seek medical attention.

A cardinal point which everyone should remember is do not ignore abdominal pain which persists for more than a few hours. A word of advice, particularly to parents, do not give laxatives when there is unexplained abdominal pain.

Mark Powered Flight's Birthday

KITTY HAWK, N.C. (AFPS) — The 59th anniversary of man's first powered flight was celebrated here as Air Force and Navy jets flew over the Wright Memorial to the two brothers who pioneered the space age.

Tribute to Wilbur and Orville Wright was paid during the ceremonies by Air Force Maj. Robert M. White. Maj. White won astronaut wings for taking the X-15 rocket plane to a height of 59 miles.

Plans for the 60th anniversary include construction of an airstrip to be completed in time for the observance. A. Clark Stratton, assistant director of the National Park Service, said that a reproduction of the Wright Brothers' plane, the Kitty Hawk, will be built and put on display.

New PT Program Lowers Jump School Drop-Out Rate

By Bill Gardner

An expanded physical conditioning program initiated by The Infantry School's Airborne - Air Mobility Department is credited with a 20 per cent decrease in the number of "drop-outs" from jump training.

The program has added a considerable number to the average of 500 graduates a week, department officials said, and has resulted in the airborne training being extended from three to four weeks.

Responsible for seeing that prospective paratroopers are in top physical condition before moving into other phases of the basic airborne course is the Physical Conditioning and Motivation Sub - Committee, created in September as part of the Basic Airborne Committee.

Previous Plan

Previously, necessary calisthenics for jump students were blended with the other training in the course. This reduced the number of hours department instructors had to teach fundamentals of parachuting, which include among other things, how to fall, how to control the parachute during descent, and practice drops from 34 and 250-foot training towers.

In addition, the last week was, and still is, devoted to five qualifying jumps from an aircraft in flight.

The necessity for the new sub-committee was the result of a conference held in the summer of 1961 concerning the connection between poor physical condition and the rate of personnel failing to complete the course. It was found that this was one of the prime reasons for "dropouts."

In the added week, stress is placed on eliminating this deficiency. In fact, according to the committee's training officer, 1st Lt. Marvin B. Cox, there are a number of minimum requirements each student must pass.

"Each student must meet the minimum standards of the airborne physical training test," he said. "This includes four chin-ups, 80 knee benders, 20 sit-ups and 22 push-ups."

"In addition," he continued, "he must be able to run a mile in 8:45."

Daily Calisthenics

Leading up to meeting these requirements are a series of calisthenics administered daily by enlisted members of the commitee, all of whom must be at a peak of physical fitness themselves. Among these are exercises done while holding a heavy log on the shoulders, and trips through an obstacle course.

To mentally prepare the men for the rigorous days of training ahead, a number of hours are devoted to increasing the student's motivation.

"This includes classroom instruction and a movie on the role and history of the airborne," Lt. Cox stated.

"During this first week they are also introduced to a number of things they will see a lot of during the course," he added. "Among these are the mock door, the 34-foot training towers and the techniques of parachute landing falls."

"This is only an introduction," he continued. "Later the students will receive more thorough training in this."

Another aspect of the students' introduction to training is Infantry School Problem No. 5000, a 50-minute demonstration in which Airborne - Air Mobilty Department members show the highlights of the training the students will receive.

This particular problem has been shown to thousands of students as well as a number of visiting dignitaries and groups.

The new sub-committee has done its job so well it won the department's monthly best sub-committee award for January after only four months of operation.

The increase in the number of graduates is one reason why sub - committee members won the rotating plaque, but it is not the only reason. The Basic Committee, which controls the awarding of the plaque, cited the men for outstanding work in all phases of their job.

Included in this is the almost complete rebuilding of the physical training area and the revamping of the building that houses the group. In addition, the men were commended for the neatness of the training area and the military manner in which they conduct themselves.

The group, which includes four officers and 58 enlisted men, is headed by Capt. Donald D. Dowie.

Chief instructor is MSgt. Theodore P. Ziegler.

Junior Officers, Top EM Due Biggest Hike In New Pay Program

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Enlisted men in grades E-4 and up and officers in the lower grades will get the highest percent of increases in the military pay legislation being proposed by the Defense Department.

The overall average increase being recommended by DOD to Congress is 14.4 per cent. The highest percentages are aimed at those officers and enlisted men in grades generally held at the end of the first term in service.

A DOD official said chances are very good for favorable Congressional action on the pay bill bringing the uniformed services their first raise in five years.

Asked about the effective date of a pay raise, the official said that this would be a matter for Congress to decide, but estimated that the probable date would be Oct. 1.

Among the features of the proposal is one that would adjust the pay of service members who retired prior to the last pay raise in 1958 and are still receiving compensation based on their pay raise at that time.

The Defense proposal will raise their pay to conform to current pay scales. In addition, it would give them a "cost-of-living" adjustment of about five per cent when the new compensation bill became effective.

Prior to 1958, retired personnel received pay boosts along with the active military, based on the pay grade in which they retired. This was not authorized with the 1958 pay raise.

The Defense Department feels that retired pay should not be hitched to active duty pay for future increases, but should be adjusted when the national cost of living index indicates that adjustments are needed to protect the retiree's purchasing power.

When asked if he thought a military pay raise would have an adverse effect on the "Gold Dollar" situation, a DOD spokesman said he did not think it would be noticeable. He noted that servicemen and their families had cooperated with Defense efforts to reduce the outflow of U.S. gold and he was certain they would continue to do so.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, in an official statement on the proposed legislation, noted that more than three and a half years had elapsed since the last military pay raise and said the Defense Department was setting up procedures to review military compensation annually.

In a statement last year, when he announced the appointment of a military pay study group, Secretary McNamara said a pay raise was long overdue and that it was "disgraceful" to allow such a long period of time to pass without some review being made of the compensation rates.

The secretary said the military had suffered a substantial loss when their pay was compared to that of other wage earners, in the period since 1958 and said a continuing watch should be kept on military compensation to avoid repetition of the situation.

GARWOOD REASSIGNED

Second Lt. Ruben A. Garwood former Infantry Center sports officer, has been reassigned to The Infantry Center Billeting Section as assistant to Lt. Col. Roger A. Bertram, chief of the Housing Section at Fort Benning.

FLIGHT TRAINING NOW OPEN

In connection with the expansion of the Army's aviation school program, Fort Benning officials are encouraging all interested and eligible enlisted men to apply for aviation warrant officer training.

Eligible personnel, with certain exceptions, include enlisted men on active duty in the continental United States and having a high school education or the equivalency and who have completed basic combat training.

Exceptions are those individuals assigned to units alerted for or under orders for overseas service, or under assignment to such units.

Initial training is in rotary-wing aircraft. Some fixed-wing instruction is given, although the major emphasis is on helicopters. After completing initial training, personnel may move into the fixed-wing phase.

The course is 35 weeks, 20 weeks of which are taught at the Army Helicopter Pilot Training Center, Camp Wolters, Tex. The remaining time is spent at the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala. Successful graduates receive a warrant officer commission.

Persons in stabilized assignments will not submit their applications unless the major command specifically authorizes them to do so.

Similar requirements also apply to qualified officers and warrant officers.

Each applicant must pass a test series, known as the Army Rotary Wing Aptitude Battery. In addition, the helicopter training aspirant is also required to meet the standards of an officer leadership qualification report and subsequent examination by an officer leadership board, and a special medical examination for flying.

Officials stated that special attention should be given to all applications and major commanders should see that they reach the Department of the Army within 90 days after submission.

Famed Army Chorus Sets Jan. 31 Concert

The world famous U. S. Army Chorus with its 40 voices will perform at Theater No. 1 Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m.

All military personnel and their dependents are invited to attend the 90-minute performance which has won applause from coast to coast in every major city and countless colleges and universities across the nation. Admission is free.

Under the direction of Maj. Samuel Loboda, the relatively young chorus has reputation throughout the country.

The chorus, established by the secretary of the Army in 1956, is designed as an important adjunct to the U. S. Army Band.

Into the chorus have been instilled the same exactingly high standards which Gen. John J. Pershing laid down when he founded the band.

Each chorus vacancy that appears attracts many highly talented men to audition.

For nearly a decade preceding the formal organization of the chorus, Maj. Loboda, also assistant leader of the Army Band, had formed and worked with a chorus drawn from regular band instrumentalists with vocal training.

The popularity of the ensemble grew, along with requests for appearances, until scheduling conflicts began to occur, and a new unit was designed, capable of completely independent scheduling as well as supplementing band programs.

Two Crowned 'Best' NCO, Soldier From 28 Division Unit Candidates

Blue Spader Col. Ponder Assigned G-1

By Bob de Camara

An officer who won the Bronze Star Medal for valor near the banks of Austria's blue Danube during a World War II fire fight is the 2nd Infantry Division's new assistant chief of staff, G-1.

This same officer also taught at an all-Hawaiian high school administered with funds from a princess' estate and went through both the Reserve Officer Training Corps and Officer Candidate School because of a 1942 change in Army policy.

He spent three years in liaison work with industry, maintaining defense security, but likes his present assignment much better. The other has "so little to do with what our fighting divisions are doing."

Of Syracuse University

The "Indianheads'" new G-1, Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder, graduated from Syracuse University in 1943 with a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration. Although he had completed four years in the R.O.T.C., a change in its structure, eliminating the traditional summer camp, made it necessary for the colonel to complete O.C.S.

His first assignment after receiving a second lieutenant's commission took him to Camp

RECEIVING CONGRATULATIONS UPON SELECTION AS DIVISION'S TOP NCO AND SOLDIER (L-R) Gen. Billingslea, Sp5 Turner and PSgt. Hanson Immediately Following Announcement

By George Aubin

Two highly trained members of the battle-ready 2nd Infantry Division last week were chosen top noncommissioned officer and soldier for 1963.

Before several thousand troops, relatives and friends, a 9th Infantry platoon sergeant and a specialist five from the 2nd Aviation Company, were selected from thousands of division members to bear the titles Noncommissioned Officer-of-the-Year and Soldier-of-the Year.

PSgt. Melvin M. Hanson, Company E, 9th Infantry, the 2nd Division's Noncommissioned-Officer of-the-Year and Sp5 James R. Turner, ground controller operations specialist in the 2nd Aviation Company, the 2nd Division's Soldier-of-the-Year, were called forward from the ranks of 28 candidates to accept the congratulations of Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander and salutes from their fellow soldiers.

Saluted by Troops

PSgt. Hanson and Sp5 Turner mounted the reviewing stand with Gen. Billingslea and faced toward troops assembled at Wetherby Field for a review. At the command of Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, troops representing every major unit of the division saluted the two top doers for 1963.

To become the division's two top soldiers, PSgt. Hanson and Sp5 Turner had to undergo a rigid four-phase test in competition with 26 other candidates, each representing the

Upon completing nearly an eight-month bloc of combat operational training, the 87th Infantry's mission was climaxed by assuming a battle ready status for the Cuban crisis during the latter part of 1962.

During Col. Hughett's command, the unit distinguished itself in the division sports program.

Croft, S. C., where he served as a platoon leader at that replacement training center.

By the next year, 1944, he had joined the 71st Infantry Division's 5th Infantry on Fort Benning's Sand Hill. It was in Europe with the 5th Infantry that Col. Ponder entered combat and won a Bronze Star Medal. At the close of World War II, the 72st Division was deactivated and its soldiers sent home to the states. Col. Ponder stayed on as the regiment's S-3 officer in Salzburg, Austria, with the 5th Infantry, a Regular Army unit on occupation duty.

Col. Ponder left active duty in 1946, returning to the Army in 1948 and duty in Hawaii. From 1948 to 1951, he taught military science in the islands' most unique high school. Set in Honolulu, it was a private, military-type school open only to Hawaiians selected from a broad strata of the islands' society. Students received free tuition, room and board and free clothing as beneficiaries of the last descendent of Hawaii's ruling family, a wealthy princess. Besides basic subjects, and under the terms of the estate, pupils learned the traditions and customs of the islands as well as the Hawaiian language.

For Infantry Course

In 1951, Col. Ponder returned to Fort Benning and the Advanced Infantry Officer Course. Completing this, the colonel stayed on at The Infantry School as an instructor in the weapons department until 1955.

He then went to Korea for a year as S-3 and executive officer of the 24th "Taro Leaf" Division's 21st Infantry.

His next job was at Fort Holabird, Md., in Baltimore, with the "Industrial and Personnel Security Group." Here he coordinated security between the Army and industrial concerns with classified government contracts, checking on civilian employees and helping to keep private industry security conscious.

Col. Ponder left that assignment in 1959 and attended the 10-month regular course at Fort Leavenworth's Command and General Staff College. Following this he became assistant G-1 of the Central Army Group in Heidelburg, Germany, and was called in March 1962 to serve as executive officer of the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry in Germany.

Col. Ponder came to Fort Benning for the third time in the fall of 1962 when, under ROTAPLAN, the 2nd Division's 38th Infantry changed places with the 8th Division's 36th "Blue Spaders." Since January 7, Col. Ponder has been the "Second to None's" G-1 officer.

Photography of the home movie, family film variety is the colonel's hobby.

Col. Ponder and his wife, Esther, and two daughters, Carol Lou, 14, and Judith Anne, 10, live at Fort Benning.

Congress Applauded His Daring

BY 7TH INFANTRY PIO

German soldiers launched an attack on Company E, 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry, pouring over Anzio Beach at 9 a.m., November 11, 1943.

One American soldier, a gunner in Company E, held his position as his rifle company withdrew. What this soldier, PFC Floyd K. Lindstrom, accomplished in the next few moments, earned him national acclaim and the Congressional Medal of Honor.

With enemy fire increasing in his area, as mortar shells exploded and machinegun fire raked his company's deserted positions, PFC Lindstrom raced forward ten yards to a better position, hoisted a 112-pound machinegun to his shoulders and continued over rocky ground with enemy fire only 20 yards away.

He saw the enemy attack might succeed if one machinegun nest were not stamped out. Dropping his own machinegun, the soldier made a frontal assault, armed with his .45 caliber pistol in an up-hill dash. He miraculously escaped from being hit by a continuous chain of automatic fire, rushed on top of the German gunners and shot them to death with his pistol.

PFC Lindstrom was the first 7th Infantry "Cottonbaler" to win the Congressional Medal of Honor in World War II.

The 'Cottonbalers'

Anniversary Celebrated With Color

The 7th Infantry, the United States Army's most combat decorated unit, celebrated its 151st Anniversary last Friday at Harmony Church.

Commanded by Col. William O. Morgan, the 7th put on a display of equipment and facilities for the many military and civilian guests present. After the invocation by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) J. H. Fiser, division chaplain, the traditional presenting of the unit colors took place with Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander, presenting the colors to Col. Morgan at Battle Group Headquarters. With the assistance of Sgt. Maj. Chester R. Wesierski, Col. Morgan attached the colors to the lanyard while the division band played the National Anthem.

Following the ceremony, an open house took place with refreshments being served in the Headquarters Company mess hall. Military officials in attendance besides Gen. Harding were: Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., chief of staff and Col. William M. Summers, President of the U. S. Army Infantry Board.

After lunch, Col. Morgan, accompanied by General Harding and Corley, toured the battle group area.

The 7th Infantry was formed January 11, 1812 as the 8th Infantry Regiment. The 7th Infantry has fought in every war fought by the United States and has won more than 60 battle streamers for its regimental colors in addition to numerous unit citations and foreign decorations.

Under the leadership of Andrew Jackson during the War of 1812, the 7th first made a name for itself with the defeat of the British at New Orleans. In 1815 the War Department authorized the New Orleans Battle Honor for the 7th Infantry Regiment, allowing it to be the official custodian of the honor, by carrying the Cotton Bale on its Coat-of-Arms. Thus, the 7th gained its nickname of the "Cottonbalers".

The 7th Infantry has fought in the War of 1812, The Mexican War, the Civil War, Indian Wars, the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, World War I, World War II and the Korean Conflict.

Who Are They?

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead

By Lois Foy

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead was organized in October 1958 as the organization for the wives of the noncommissioned officers of the 2nd Division.

The purpose of the club is the study and propagation of subjects, agencies, and influences which tend to develop community responsibility, loyalty to country and higher civilization, as well as a social club.

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead engage in a variety of activities ranging from monthly coffees to bowling to parties for hospital patients.

Monthly luncheons are held at the Sand Hill Noncommissioned Officers' Open Mess on the second Thursday of the month, followed by business meetings on the fourth Thursday of the month at the club house.

Dinner-dances are sponsored quarterly for members and their guests, with all costs being borne by the club. This has been a popular social activity since it was first started in February 1959.

Coffee hours for patients and staff at Martin Army Hospital are sponsored by the club and hostessed by members once a month under the supervision of the Red Cross Ward parties are also held periodically for bed patients at the hospital. Members prepare cakes, candies, etc., for this occasion, and assist patients in playing bingo during the party.

Club members join together once a month and bake cakes for bingo prizes at the Service Club. Bingo at the Service Club began in April 1961 and is held on the last Saturday of each month. Along with the cakes, the club also provides other items for prizes.

Winter and summer bowling leagues are sponsored by the club. The first league was formed in October 1959, and since this time, bowling has been a popular activity among the members.

Easter egg hunt, Halloween and Christmas parties for children of members are provided by the club. Quarters' beautification contest and fashion shows are further examples of the club's activities.

Contributions of time as well as money are made to needy families, Fort Benning Parent-Teachers' Association, Fort Benning Dependent Schools. For two Christmases, members have bought and wrapped gifts for patients at the State Hospital in Milledgeville, Ga. Each year, on the anniversary of the 2nd Division, the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, in conjunction with the 2nd Div Officers' Wives Club, contribute a uniform to the soldier selected as Soldier-of-the-Year.

The clubhouse was acquired in November 1961. Members and their husbands pooled their talents to create an interesting and useful clubhouse. Business meetings, card parties, and other functions are held in the clubhouse.

All wives of Division noncommissioned officers are eligible for membership. Those whose sponsors are overseas, retired or deceased or whose sponsors are assigned to units other than the 2nd Division may also join as associate members.

Club officers were originally elected for a six month term of office until June, 1962, when the constitution was rewritten and the term of office was lengthened to a full year.

Mrs. Gilbert Newman was the first club president. She was followed by Mrs. Edison Wingate, Mrs. L. W. Smith, Mrs. John Popik, Mrs. Robert Harrison and Mrs. Walter D. Hutchko and the present president Mrs. James A. Scott.

TIME TO PACK . . . Preparing to crate her "objets d'art" in preparation for departure with her husband, Col. Ralph H. Hughett, commander of the 87th Infantry, Mrs. Hughett settles affairs at her Fort Benning home. Col. Hughett departs next week for a new assignment as chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Ecuador.

Born Atlantan, Mrs. Kehe Returns after 'Best Tour'

BY JAMIE ROEDER

A fairly recent arrival to Fort Benning is the subject of this week's Distaff Profile. Mrs. Arlin Kehe, wife of Col. Kehe, commander of the 26th Infantry, joined us here October 18 when the Kehe family returned home from Baumholder, Germany.

The rest of the family includes nine-year-old Jamie who is in the fourth grade at White School.

BORN IN ATLANTA Mrs. Arlin Kehe

Mrs. Kehe is the daughter of Mrs. William Keller of Decatur, Ga. She was born in Atlanta, Ga. Elizabeth Keller attended high school at Decatur Girls' High and later attended Agnes Scott College and the University of Georgia where she majored in art and history. Upon graduation she received her Bachelor of Arts degree in history. While living in the Atlanta area, Elizabeth was also a professional model.

In April 1948 she became Mrs. Arlin Kehe, wife of Maj. Kehe who at that time was assigned to the ROTC staff of the Atlanta high schools. Since that time the Kehe family has consistently moved every one to two years.

Mrs. Kehe lists reading, decorating and cooking as her favorite special interests. While at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., she was a member of the International Group and as such headed the committee which published a collection of international recipes. When hobbies were mentioned Mrs. Kehe quickly stated that she loves to go shopping and likes to play golf. She added that she plays golf, but does not play too well.

Organizations at Fort Benning to which Mrs. Kehe belongs include the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club, the 26th Wives' Club, and the Gray Ladies.

"Talking about military posts here and abroad, Mrs. Kehe believes that the tours of Germany and at Fort Leavenworth were her favorites. The Kehes were in Germany from 1960 to 1962 when the colonel was assigned first in Heidelberg and later received command of the 26th Infantry Battle group at Baumholder.

Another foreign assignment was Hawaii from 1954 to 1956. At this time the colonel returned to Hawaii with the 25th Division when they finished their tour in Korea. He commanded a battalion in the 35th Infantry. Waiting impatiently in California was his family who soon joined him for this tour on "the Pearl of the Pacific."

69th Meets For Coffee

Ladies of 69th Armor held their January coffee in the home of Mrs. Robert C. Culverhouse in Columbus last week.

Mrs. Culverhouse hostessed the event and Mrs. Thomas McKitrick, a new arrival to the battalion, poured for the guests. The serving table was highlighted with an arrangement of artificial sweet peas accented with live English ivy.

Newcomers to the battalion were Mrs. Thomas McKitrick and Mrs. Eldon L. Beavers. Guest at the morning function was Mrs. Joseph D. Kelly.

At Rota Service Center

They've Found Friends Working Together

Wives of 38th Infantry officers and enlisted men are paying a price for being separated from their husbands, receiving in exchange something that can hardly be measured in terms of dollars and cents.

Officers and enlisted men of the 38th Infantry are due back in the Spring from their six-month tour in Europe. In their absence their families inaugurated the Rota Family Service Center, a building located at Fort Benning with the aim of helping wives in whatever need might arise. Together, wives of officers and enlisted men have expanded this to a meeting place for coffees, business meetings and special activities.

One of the benefits this center has been to wives is the friendship it has inspired. Mrs. Maurice C. Holden, wife of the 38th Infantry commander, stated, "The wives have come to know each other and enjoy being together. This is particularly true of enlisted men's wives." Many of these wives have found a closeness and kinship with families like their own, temporarily deprived of husbands and fathers.

One element of this kinship was evident in a Christmas party sponsored by the family service center.

Dependents and children of the 38th met December 22 at the center's building 1101 in the Old Hospital Area. Committees of the ladies with Mrs. Byron W. Wamble and Mrs. Edgar R. Miller as chairmen, arranged and prepared the party. Over 150 dependents and children gathered for the event. Mrs. Dennis J. Harron was in charge of decorations.

The party began with group singing of Christmas Carols led by Mrs. Harry Peyton. Singing was followed by Christmas Movies, and the highlight of the party was the arrival of their Santa Claus, distributing candy stockings and gifts.

Serving cupcakes, cocoa and coffee to the assembled families were Mrs. William T. Wade, Mrs. William A. Regan and Mrs. Ismael Rangel. Movies were taken by Mrs. Dolph Brown and Mrs. Wayne Barnes. These movies will be shown to officers and enlisted men of the unit upon their return to the U. S.

During the holiday season the 38th Infantry center sent several baskets of food and toys to the needy. Martin Army Hospital received stockings filled with candy for children hospitalized during the holidays.

An enthusiastic group of NCO and enlistedmen's wives met recently for a monthly coffee when it was decided to form a 38th Infantry Noncommissioned Officer's Wives Club to carry on after husbands return from Germany. Election of officers will take place in February.

The wives also planned company coffees and luncheons to be held in homes during the coming months.

Hosting the group for this coffee were Mrs. Marcus A. Hayes and Mrs. Dolph C. Brown.

The NCO and enlistedmen's wives extended a warm welcome to all 38th Infantry wives to join them February 14 at 10 a.m. for the monthly meeting at the Rota Center.

Trains Uses Staples Home

The Medical Battalion ladies of Division Trains hostessed the January coffee held in the home of Mrs. John F. Staples. Mrs. Staples also poured.

Welcomed to Division Trains were Mrs. Lon Alexander and Mrs. John McCay from 13th Transportation, Mrs. John Hamilton and Mrs. Robert Spurling from the Medical Battalion and Mrs. George Armstrong, wife of the Division inspector general.

Guest at the event was Mrs. Benjamin S. Silver from the 23rd Infantry who gave a brief talk on the Protestant Women's Guild.

Ice-Cream Snowballs

At least one hour before serving, scoop ice-cream into almost roubd ball shapes with a small ice-cream scoop. Place shredded cocoanut on wax paper and roll the ice-cream balls in it until they are thickly covered. Place them in the freezing trays of your refrigerator and store to keep them firm. One quart makes about six snowballs.

Farewell Coffee Given by 23rd

Lt. and Mrs. Curt S. Peterson were given a farewell dessert coffee by Lt. Col. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Silver, executive officer of the 23rd Infantry, recently. The evening function was held in the Silvers' home at Ft. Benning.

Lt. Peterson was assigned as company commander of the Combat Support Company and is leaving for a Far Eastern tour of duty. Special guest of the evening was Mrs. Lucien Keller, wife of Col. Keller, battle group commander of the 23rd Infantry.

Air-Lifts Climax Chopper Training

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany —Rifle companies of the 38th Infantry last week completed three days of intensive helicopter training.

Each company made practical use of the H-34 and H-37 helicopters by air - lifting troops and equipment 15 miles from the Baumholder Post area to a training area and back again.

Preliminary training before the actual helicopter operations took place included practice loading, unloading, and sling and hook-up procedures.

Units were trained to have aircraft loaded with troops and equipment and in the air in just 40 seconds time and unloaded 20 seconds after touchdown in another area.

Basketball Starts Monday

Tournament Will Match Eight Major Unit Squads

By Bob de Camara
2nd Division Sports Editor

When the weather's crisp, it's time for football; but when the air gets cold as ice and everybody moves indoors, then the sport is — BASKETBALL.

Another season of 2nd Division tournament basketball is scheduled to begin on Monday evening with all eight major unit teams competing. Entries are: the 1st, 9th, 23rd, 29th and 87th Infantry Battle Groups; 122nd Signal, representing the separate Battalions; Division Trains; and Division Artillery.

Round Robin

Set up the same as last year, the tournament will consist of two single round robins. In this arrangement, each team plays every other team once in each round robin. In the event two teams tie for first place in the first or second half, one game will be played to determine the half winner.

The winner of the first round will meet the winner of the second round in a three-game playoff for the 1963 division championship, unless, of course, the same team wins both halves of the tournament.

Currently in the basketball top spot are the 1962 champions, the 87th's "Conquerors."

By now all unit teams should be conditioned, practiced and ready to roll. Following football season, the units began company level basketball competition. These tournaments serve two practical purposes. First, they provide athletics for more members of a unit than a division tournament does. And secondly, they give coaches a good chance to see what material they have available for division ball while getting the players in shape.

Twelve members, including coach and manager, are allowed for each unit team competing in the division basketball tournament. Names have been summitted to the Special Service officer by the required date (January 14), and since then, the players have been getting experience practicing together and setting up offensive and defensive patterns.

Rules Clinic

On Tuesday, Special Services held a basketball clinic for coaches and officials to go over the rules and conduct of the games. The games will be governed by the official basketball regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Twenty minute halves will be used in the games.

New uniforms for each team entered in the division contest will put sparkle on the hardwood courts. The uniforms consist of two jerseys and a pair of trunks in the unit colors for each player.

A complete schedule of the tournament games has been published and distributed to the units by Special Services. All basketball games will be played in the evenings at the Kelley Hill and Harmony Church Field Houses.

PLAYMAKER . . . In Germany, Russell Anderson (12), the 38th Infantry's playmaker, nets two points in game against 504th Airborne Infantry.

'Marnemen' Even Record In Basketball

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Ger— is the 8th Infantry Division Basketball Tournament, the 38th Infantry is all even with a won and lost two record.

Splitting the opening weekend series of the tournament, the "Marnemen" downed the 1st Battle Group, 18th Infantry, 80-62 in their first game only to be edged 61-60 the following day. Recently the 504th Airborne Battle Group defeated the 38th 98-89, but the ROTAPLAN unit turned the tables in the following day's encounter, beating the 504th 79-71.

Russell Anderson and Bob Marshall each are averaging 20 points a game to pace the 38th's scoring attack. Daryl Brost and Joseph Clune, who have pulled down a lion's share of rebounds, and Bennie Scott, another steady performer, round out the starting five for the Marnemen.

STOLEN BALL . . . As he did many times in the 38th Infantry's twinbill basketball bout with the 504th Airborne Battle Group in Baumholder, Germany, Bob Marshall (14) slyly steals the ball and races down court.

9th Infantry Basketball Team Ready for Games

The 9th Infantry basketball team, coached by Sgt. Norman D. Edmunds, is in full swing and practicing daily.

A determined and high spirited squad of men, full of drive, comprise the Manchu team.

With only three men returning from last year's team the "Manchus" are almost a completely new aggregation. No bold predictions are being made about the forth-coming season by the 9th Infantry cagers, but you can rest assured that they will be in there driving and hustling all the way from the first whistle to the last.

"We smell championship," says Coach Edmunds, "and we also want to taste it. We'll have a hustling, sharp-shooting, fast-moving team. All the teams in this tournament are well represented, and it will be a fight to the finish for the championship."

Team members include Raymond Flemtng and Frederick Byers, both of Company A, Stanley Moose, Robert Cline, Thomas Ware, Northern Brown, and Darrel Skubinna of Company A; Richard McCormick of Company C; John Underwood and Harold Dawson of Company D; Walter Young and Charles Foley, of Company E; and Cliff Billingslea, Joseph Godfrey, and Walter Ford of Combat Support Company.

Responsible Citizens Needed to Curb National Crime

BY DAVID M. WINKLER

Blaring out from newspapers recently were these items: "Killer of Three Gunned Down in New York;" "Yule Holdups Net Robbers $257,000;" "Girls Critical, Janitor is Held;" "2 Killed, 1 Injured in Market Holdup;" "Policeman Assaulted by Crowd at Beach Brawl;" "Boy 16, Leads Police on 100 mph Chase."

These headlines make tragic reading, but the tragedy of it all is really ours. The tremendous responsibility of the suppression and prevention of crime does not only belong to law enforcement agencies. It is the responsibility of each and every decent citizen to do all that is possible to stem the tide of our ever increasing crime rate.

No More Sitting Back

We can no longer sit back and view with disinterest the plight of a neighbor on our block or a businessman in our community who has become the victim of a criminal act. For each criminal act perpetrated against an individual is an act against all of society.

Crime might be likened to a cancerous growth, which if allowed to spread will not only effect a single individual, but will affect entire communities. Webster defines a cancer as "anything bad or harmful that spreads and destroys." However, one could easily supplant this definition for that of crime. No one can overlook the possibility of it spreading and destroying the youth of our nation if we allow it to go uncheckd.

In the words of J. Edgar Hoover, "It is a strange fact that many Americans have a detached attitude toward crime. They are seldom concerned with the plight of their neighbors who have been victimized by vicious criminals or the tremendous responsibility of the local law enforcement officer who is the nation's first line of defense against the predators of our society.

"Too often brutal crimes arouse only the emotions of morbid curiosity or mild sympathy for the victims instead of indignation and certed action against lawbreakers whose greed for easy living is matched only by their utter contempt for human life and rights."

The Statistics

How can decent law-abiding citizens overlook the fact that in 1961 a murder was committed every hour; a forcable rape every 33 minutes; an aggravated assault every four minutes; a robbery every six minutes? The tragic statistics of crime go on and on. It must be remembered that crime affects the whole public and not just the rights of an individual.

Mr. Hoover summed it up well when he said, "This country's citizens must awaken to the fact that the war on crime is not just the battle of the law enforcement officer. Every citizen has a stake when hoodlums prowl the streets brazenly cavalting atrocities which appall even veteran police officers.

"No one is immune to the attacks of depraved murderers, robbers, sex offenders and kidnapers. Our local law enforcement officers are a small patrol when compared with the Army of lawbreakers roaming America.

"Often the law enforcement officer's battle is a lonely one; too frequently the citizens who should be his allies are indifferent and apathetic. When the local policeman, the public's defender, is himself protected by the citizens he serves, then will criminals learn that law and order in this nation will never give way to the gunmen of the underworld."

Shough's Sports Scope

By Pete Shough

In Coronado, Calif., a 15-man rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association approved the biggest major change in college football in 10 years.

The change, the renewal of the free substitution rule, is probably the most longed for by college coaches. The new rule means the return of the specialist teams, the strictly defensive unit or offensive unit known in the 1940s and early 1950s.

Under the old rule many a coach stayed awake at night trying to concoct a way to get the best defensive player he had in years into action without hampering his offensive unit by removing a shifty-fast back that doesn't care the least for defensive. Now, the way is finally open to him.

Of course, the new rule has two stipulations, as all liberal rules must, and these are the limited substitution policy on fourth-down plays, and plays where the ball changes hands, such as punts or fumbles. During that time, a coach is only permitted to send in two players, preferably specialists, such as a punter and center.

The committee took another step to speed up the game as they voted to reduce the number of timeouts from five to four.

It remains to be seen how the new rule will take effect. It is my contention that the traditional campus football powers will be even stronger, with more players getting into action. More teams will be boasting of 20 or 30, and possibly even 40 letter-men returning next year. Teams will definitely be come highly specialized machines, with offensive and defensive units developed for only one purpose.

Such teams as Alabama, LSU, Georgia Tech, Mississippi, and the South's other big powerhouses of the college ranks will probably be the teams where the change is noticed the greatest. The reason behind this being the terrific defensive teams the Southeastern Conference and other southern independent teams can field. Free substitution will permit an even greater emphasis on defense or offensive offense, which ever the team prefers.

Fast-Breaking WACs Defeat Rucker Girls

Playing before a capacity crowd at the Briant Wells Field House, Fort Benning's "cagerettes" defeated the Fort Rucker WAC basketball team 70-33 to remain undefeated this season.

Sparked by the shooting of Harriette Blankenship and Josephine Grassia, the cagerettes took a commanding 19-8 lead in the first quarter. At one point, the Benning WAC's scored 10 straight points while the Fort Rucker girls, unable to find the shooting range and unable to cope with the fast-breaking Benning team, fell even further behind as the half drew to a close.

Behind 44-16 at the half, Rucker employed a zone defense but to no avail, as the cagerettes poured through their defenses on layup shots and fine ball handling.

The third quarter saw the Benning girls in complete control with a 59-21 lead. Collye Gray and Myrtle Gray set the pace for Benning as they outscored Rucker, 11-10, in the last quarter and the final score ended with the Benning WACs ahead, 70-33.

High scorer for the Benning team was Harriette Blankenship who netted 25 points with Josephine Grassia hitting for 21 points.

The cagerettes will be seeking their third straight victory when they travel up to Fort McClellen, Ala., Saturday.

Last year, Fort McClellan's WAC team won top honors in the service women's basketball division. They have no record as yet this year.

Three Teams Crowd the Top Slot As Action Moves Into Third Week

29th Infantry, TSB, Medics Tie for Lead

By PFC Lee Zani

The Student Brigade, 428th Medics and the 29th Infantry swept into a three-way tie for first place as the second week of play came to an end in the Major Unit Basketball League.

The three teams kept pace with each other by winning their last outing to remain unbeaten with identical records of two wins against no defeats.

In Monday night's action, the Infantry Center Troop Command had to go into overtime to down a fired-up 10th Artillery club before pinning them with their first defeat. Outplayed and outmanned during the whole of the first half, the Artillerymen found themselves on the short end of a 37-17 score.

As the second half started, the 10th went into a full court press and midway in the final period TICTC's lead was sliced to four points. Back-to-back points by Barnett and Colson for the 10th tied the score at 46-46 as the buzzer ended regulation play.

The overtime was controlled by TICTC as they built up a 53-48 lead and ran the clock out holding on to a 58-50 victory. Top scorer for TICTC was Bob Farley, who netted 20 points.

29th Infantry Undefeated

Action last Friday night saw the 29th Infantry remain undefeated in two games as they trounced the 151st Engineers by a score of 110 to 61.

Playing a zone-type game effectively, the 29th took the lead in the first minute of play and ran up a 56-32 halftime lead.

After intermission, Coach Martin's boys continued their pressure, building up a 56-point lead in the final period and handing the Engineers their second straight defeat.

Jim Norsworthy, from Campbellton, Fla., was high man for the evening, hitting 17 field goals and dropping four out of five from the free throw lane for 38 points. Teammate Artie Bain came on strong in the second half netting eight field goals to end his night's play with 27 points.

In the second game, the 428th Medics remained in a three-way tie for first place as they downed the 58th Infantry 78-65.

Behind at half-time 44-34, the 58th put on a strong bid to overcome the Medics and narrowed their lead to six points. Bob Johnson of the Medics then hit for five consecutive points to put the game out of reach of the Infantrymen.

George Bell was top scorer for the 428th with 34 points. Bob Davenport and Stanley Trayborn both scored 16 points for the 58th.

In last Wednesday's action, the Medics had to overcome a 33-28 halftime lead by The Infantry Center Troop Command before pulling away with a 76-62 victory. Harold Deane and George Bell led the way for the Medics with Bell hitting for 24 points and Deane closing out the night with 20 points.

TICTC was in control until the last two minutes when Edmund Standbury's two layups put the Medics out in front. TICTC's high scorer was Hudson Ray who netted 16 points.

In the nightcap, the 29th Infantry-behind the torrid shooting of Richard Shull-dropped the 58th Infantry 77-67. Shull hit for 23 points helping the 29th to pull away late in the final period after a nip and tuck battle. Artie Bain came on strong during the second half scoring 14 points and ended the night's play with 19 points for the 29th.

Bob Davenport and Stanley Trayborn both scored 16 points for the 58th Infantry.

The practice session was at a recent club meeting when eight new members received "Scuba Tabs" after completing the necessary training.

VOLLEYBALL ACTION

The 183rd Chemical Platoon defeated the 72nd Engineers in the 197th Infantry's inter-brigade volleyball league, 15-9 and 15-8. The game was the first of the 197th Infantry Brigade's season.

Better Bowling

GET GOOD APPROACH . . . It's how you approach a matter that counts most. This also applies to bowling. It doesn't matter how many steps you take during the approach, for that is up to you. However, certain things should be done during the approach. First comes pushaway, enacted during first step, for the most part. Second, the ball hits bottom of downswing at the end of the first step. Third, the ball starts the backswing on second step. Fourth, the ball reaches the top of backswing on third step. Fifth, the ball comes forward on fourth step, as left foot slides to the foul line. This is good bowling form, and all pros will use some variation of it.

2,500 Acres of Recreation Area Are Offered at Callaway Gardens

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Since its opening in 1952, the ever growing Callaway Gardens here has attracted thousands of Fort Benning personnel and their families.

Callaway Gardens is one of the most complete resort complexes in the United States and its 2,500 acres hold a wide variety of recreational facilities with something to entertain every member of the family.

Located a convenient 90 miles north of Columbus on U. S. Highway 27, Callaway Gardens offers a beautybound 18-hole golf course, a 175-acre fishing lake, quail hunting on a separate 1,000-acre preserve, all-weather tennis courts and the scenic splendor of the Southern Highlands, in which the gardens are located.

More than 15 miles of paved drives wind around the big lake and past 11 smaller feeder lakes. Along the drives, some 15-20,000 plants are placed each year and at any season of the year. There are numerous horticultural features to capture the eye.

Botannical Tour

A Gardens Greenhouse offers visitors a botannical "tour of the world" with a wide variety of tropical and subtropical plants gathered from the four corners of the earth. Here also the horticultural work of propagation, cross breeding and hybridization is carried out.

Near the Greenhouse is the serene Ida Cason Callaway Memorial Chapel, a non denominational chapel for the use of Gardens visitors for prayer and meditation. An organ concert is played each Sunday afternoon from 3 until 5 p.m. and is proving to be one of the most popular events at the gardens.

The Meadowlark Flower section has numerous walking trails, easily graded and well charted, where specimens of each plant are clearly labeled. Here is one of the world's largest collections of hollies and a wide variety of azaleas, rhododendrons and wild flowers.

Historical Cabin

In this section too is the 150 year-old authentic log cabin which is completely furnished in the style of pioneering days in Georgia.

A bird study trail is in the Meadowlark Flower area and the gardens is an official bird sanctuary, with over 190 species having been counted at various times. A great number of waterfowl makes the small lakes their winter home, including a flock of Canadian Geese.

Accommodations are in the 171-unit motel or in 79 family-style cabins, which are fully equipped for housekeeping. Meals are served in the motel dining room, which features many gardens specialties and traditional Southern cooking.

In mid-April, Robin Lake with its fabulous sand beach, opens for a full summer of swimming, boating, water skiing and other water sports.

In mid-June, a daily water ski show and daily performances by the famous Florida State University Circus add additional excitement to the beach facilities. Hundreds of picnic tables are located in the pine woods around the lake and the unique dining pavilion offers light lunches.

Reservations may be made by writing or phoning Callaway Gardens, Pine Mountain, Ga.

Your Dental Health

Brushing Is Useless Unless Method Right

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant

Did you brush your teeth after lunch today? Do you brush after each time you eat?

If the answer is yes, did you get them clean? You think so. Do you know so? Do you really know how to brush? Did your dentist ever show you?

Many people overbrush and undercleam through no fault of their own. We dentists have been negligent in this area and have not taught as many people how to brush as we should. Just buying a toothbrush and some paste and brushing the way you would scrub floors is not quite correct.

There are several ways of brushing which can be correct. A correct way for one person is not necessarily correct for another. One person may need a soft brush; for another the dentist may recommend medium or hard.

Except for the benefits of stannous fluoride in the toothpaste found acceptable by the American Dental Association, all toothpastes and powders are just about equally effective. More important than what paste or powder you use is how effectively your brush. To know this it is necessary to use a special solution or tablet. These tablets with proper instructions on their use are available at each of the dental clinics at Fort Benning. They may be had for the asking.

Individual help and instruction on proper tooth - brushing is also yours for the asking. If you need a decay prevention treatment too, ask your dental officer. We are only too glad to help your prevent dental disease.

In some respects your teeth are like a gun. Given proper care a gun will last a lifetime. Neglect it, fail to clean it and take care of it, and it will quickly become unless. Given proper care your teeth will outlast you. Neglect them and you can only keep them in a box.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

'Oasis City' In Berlin Is Toured By Gen. Watson

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Maj. Gen. Albert Watson II, former U.S. Commandant in Berlin and now Commanding General of the Third Army, personally said goodbye to the 183 inhabitants of Berlin's little enclave at Steinstuecken.

Gen. Watson and West Berlin's Mayor Willy Brandt flew in a helicopter to the little community within East Berlin surrounded by barbed wire fences.

Steinstuecken has been the target of Communist harassment for more than 10 years.

Young Actresses Give to Charity

A unique contribution was made recently to the American Red Cross here when three small girls donated the entire proceeds of an original play — 75 cents — to the organization.

Entitled "The Princess Who Found Out," the play was written by Deborah Merrit, nine-year-old daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Bruce Merritt, in collaboration with Barbara Galer, 7, and Robin Galer, 6, daughters of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert F. Galer.

The girls made costumes, rehearsed, advertised the play and produced it in the Merritt living room.

Fifteen children attended the show at five cents per ticket. When the young actresses had taken the last curtain call, they wrote a letter to the Red Cross with nickels, dimes and quarters taped to the lower margin.

With the salutation, "Dear Red Cross," the girls explained how they earned the money and closed with "We hope the money will help the Red Cross." Each girl signed the letter.

The visit to the Red Cross office developed into another dramatic episode for the young ladies, where they presented the donation to Harry L. McCulloh Jr., field director here.

In his acceptance speech, McCulloh said, "We appreciate the sense of responsibility that prompted you girls to put on the play to earn this money for the Red Cross. With such devotion as that in your hearts, I am sure that as you grow up your lives will continue to be a blessing to others."

Vet's Benefits Are Exempt From Taxes

All veterans' benefits are exempt from federal and state income taxes and need not be listed on income tax reports, Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler advised this week.

The same rule applies whether the benefit is received by the veterans or by his widow, children, or parents and is exempt whether it is in the form of compensation, pension, educational benefits, or GI insurance claims or dividends.

Other persons who claim recipients of veterans benefits as dependents, however, must include these benefits in computing whether they furnished more than one-half support of the dependent, as required.

Payments made on GI life insurance premiums are not deductible. Interest earned by dividends left on deposit is also taxable, but the dividends themselves are not.

Benefits received from the Veterans Administration also should not be confused with the regular salaries of service men, reservists, or National Guardsmen, which are subject to the same income tax as other income.

Veterans and others over age 65 or who are blind are also reminded that they are entitled to double exemption, as are all citizens in this group.

NEWLY ASSIGNED

First Lt. John F. Whittington of Shawnee, Okla., has been assigned to the Communications Department of The Infantry School where he will be a member of the Applied Communications Committee.

Air Force Rents Ground Station

NEW YORK (AFPS) — A transportable ground communications station has been leased by the Air Force from the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. It is expected to provide valuable experience in space communications to the military well in advance of development of a military communications satellite system.

Using the transportable transmitter - receiver station, military communications men will learn to exchange messages through communications satellites by arrangement with NASA and the commercial companies involved.

The program is expected to satisfy a need for operational experience in the communications satellite field. It will provide valuable data on the problems of using satellites for communications support.

Tax Refund Is Payable In Bonds

WASHINGTON (AFPS)— Income taxpayers who are expecting refunds from the Internal Revenue Service may now elect to take their refunds in the form of Series E Savings Bonds.

When the taxpayer signifies he wishes the E Bond return he usually will get both bond and check returns. Internal Revenue personnel will issue the smallest possible number of the highest denomination bonds and send the taxpayer a check for any balance of a dollar or more.

Taxpayers have been asking about the possibility of the Bond type of return for a number of years. It was made possible when the Treasury Department installed new high-speed data processing equipment to handle the 1962 tax returns.

Tax forms 1040 (long) and 1040A (short) have been arranged to provide an extra space in which taxpayers may elect Savings Bonds for their refunds.

The Treasury Department feels that both the Government and the citizen will profit by utilizing this new service.

Instructors' School Opens '63 Marksmanship Season

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

More than 100 hand-picked shooters recently kicked off the Third Army's marksmanship year here when they attended the 1963 rifle and pistol instructors' school sponsored by the Third Army marksmanship Training Unit.

The students, who represent all posts of the Third Army area, the Alabama, Florida and Puerto Rican National Guards, are receiving the highest quality instruction the Army can provide by utilizing personnel of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit (AMTU).

"Marksmanship and coaching techniques of the M-1 rifle and pistol, including the centerfire and .45 caliber pistols, were stressed in this clinic," Maj. James O. Duke, commander of the Third Army Marksmanship Unit, said.

Spread Knowledge

"Upon completion of the course," the major added, "The alumni will be expected to spread their newly acquired knowledge throughout the lower echelons of their parent units."

In essence this course is the beginning of a chain reaction which starts at Army level and works its way down to the company "rank and file," he explained.

With the ending of the lower level clinics, which give a large percentage of Third Army personnel a greater insight to the Army's basic skill, marksmanship, a chain reaction begins again but from the opposite direction, the commander stated.

This time it starts at the company level with the emphasis on marksmanship skill brought out in competitive matches.

Starting at the company level, the matches go from the lowest to the highest level which includes the Third U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Matches; the U.S. Army Championship Matches, both held at Fort Benning, and finally the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Turning to his own unit, Maj. Duke explained how the most proficient shooters in his Army area would participate in after the Third Army Matches and then would be selected to represent their Army area in the All-Army matches which pits six Army area teams and two overseas commands against one another.

Represent Army

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit in turn draws its firers from the best found in the All-Army championships and takes them as representatives of the Army against the other services and thousands of civilians in the National Matches.

The Third Army unit, although losing its most proficient marksmen, will still enter a team in the National Matches. This is done to further train and to allow the remaining shooters to compete for the Distinguished Badge for Excellence-in-Competition.

The instructors' course, held here Jan. 7-11, consisted of the nucleus of the Third Army's hopes in the marksmanship years to come. Each graduating member received a certificate of successful completion.

Among the recipients of the coveted certificate were three members of the Muscogee County Police Department and a representative of the Palmetto and Hialeah Pistol Club of Florida.

Lt. Col. McClain Attends Course

Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, commander of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, recently departed the post for Fort Knox, Ky., to attend the Senior Officers Preventive Maintenance Course, at the Army Armor School.

ICDA Hosts Two In Recent Visit

The Infantry Combat Developments Agency was visited recently by representatives of the Communications Electronics Combat Developments Agency, Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Office of the Chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C.

Maj. Bernard P. Matthey represented the CECDA and presented a briefing on the Random Access Discreet Address System (RADAS) to interested officers from the Infantry Board and Communications Department of The Infantry School.

Maj. David A. Beckner, representing the Tropical and Desert Branch, Environmental Sciences Division, OCRD, was primarily concerned with ICDA's role in formulating desert warfare doctrine for Infantry units from squad to brigade level.

Lt. Eads Is Honor Grad Of Infantry School Class

Second Lt. Billy G. Eads graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class No. 8, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors. Lt. Eads completed the eight-week course with the highest overall average in his class, 93 percentile.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, congratulated the class on the completion of the course and introduced the speaker for the graduation exercises, Col. Richard W. Keyes, commanding officer of the Infantry Brigade. Col. Keyes commended the class on their efforts throughout the course and presented the honor graduate with his graduation certificate.

Speaking to the graduating body, Col. Keyes said the class had been exposed to some of the finest training in the world, in preparation for their first duty assignment. This training, he said, would prepare the students for most situations that arise during the early part of their careers.

"This is not the last school training you will take," Col. Keyes continued, "And you will have to do much studying in order to keep up with current developments."

Col. Keyes stated that it is good to think about the distant future when an officer retires, but you must keep up with all facets of the present career before you can start on another one. This, Col. Keyes concluded was the one most important for the present.

Second Lt. C. Keith Grant Jr. was presented a silver trophy for winning the Military Stakes Competition. The Military Stakes award is presented for the highest proficiency on a practical test covering most of the subjects presented to students attending the Orientation Course.

The award was presented by Col. Keyes.

Observatory Opens in Utah

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A small dynamite charge triggered close by was used to actuate recording devices of the Defense Department's $700,000 Uinta Basin Seismological observatory near Vernal, Utah.

The opening of the new observatory marked another mile-stone in the Defense Department's program for research methods to enforce a nuclear test ban.

The Uinta Basin observatory is the third of its kind, with the fourth slated for dedication early in 1963.

The first such station was built in 1960 near Lawton, Okla., and the second was opened in 1962 near Baker, Ore.

History Course Offered

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The United States Armed Forces Institute (USAFI) has announced a new course, History of the Middle East (A 469). It is similar to residence courses in Middle Eastern history given by civilian institutions.

The new course is the only correspondence course in this subject available in the United States.

USAFI describes it as an up-to-date study of the lands, peoples, culture and institutions of the lands stretching across North Africa and Western Asia from Morocco to Afghanistan.

The course will soon be available to command Education Centers.

Copter Crews React Courageously During Viet Nam Air Assault

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Latest reports of recent battle action in South Vietnam reveal courageous acts by U. S. Army helicopter pilots and crew members in rescuing downed personnel.

In one operation Vietnamese troops were airlifted to the objective area in four waves, each involving 10 CH-21 copters carrying troops and five UH-1's providing fire support with machine guns and rockets.

The first wave landed and unloaded without incident. The second and third were delayed about an hour and a half by ground fog in both loading and landing zones. When these two waves did reach their landing zones, no ground fire was encountered and no enemy contact was made.

About 30 minutes later, a Civil Guard battalion in the area made contact with Viet Cong troops. The 120-man mobile reserve force was then committed to assist in the action and was landed by the fourth wave of helicopters.

Heavy Fire

As unloading and takeoff progressed, heavy small arms and automatic weapons fire broke out from dug-in and camouflaged troops in a nearby woods. All helicopters were hit but all except one got away. Another made a forced landing in a secure area about a mile and a quarter from the battle area.

Meanwhile, the five UH-1 Iroquis helicopters were strafing the Viet Cong force with aerial machine guns and rocket fire.

The major helicopter losses resulted from three determined efforts to rescue the crew of the one CH-21 which was downed.

The first CH-21 to reach the disabled helicopter was hit while picking up the crew and could not takeoff.

A UH-1 then attempted to rescue the two downed crews. On its final approach the Iroquis lost its blade, crashed and was demolished. One crew member was killed in the crash and the pilot was injured.

A third rescue effort resulted in damage to a CH-21 which was able, however, to proceed to a secure area for landing.

Only one of the helicopters participating was a permanent loss. The downed CH21's were expected to be flying again the following day. The Iroquis, although a total wreck, will be recovered and salvaged for parts.

The hard-core Communist battalion engaged in this operation is expected to be ineffective for sometime since more than 100 Viet Cong were killed.

Use of helicopters to provide transportation for Vietnamese forces will continue as a primary means of pressing offensive operations against the Viet Cong. Experience has shown that such operations permit penetration of otherwise inaccessible areas and deprive guerrilla forces of the initiative.

In 1962 U. S. Army aviation units flew over 80,000 sorties in support of operations in VIETNAM, about one-half of which were combat support missions. From Jan. 1 to Nov. 30, 1962, 115 U. S. Army aircraft were hit by ground fire. Only nine of these were shot down.

'It's a War' Zuckert Says Of Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — "This is not a ground war, not an air war . . it's a war..." Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert made this statement about the Vietnam conflict at a press conference following his recent tour of U.S. Air Force installations in the Pacific and Southeastern Asia.

Secretary Zuckert visited Air Force units in Japan, Korea Taiwan, Okinawa, Hawaii, the Philippines, Alaska and Guam as well as South Vietnam and said he was impressed with the far-flung mission of the U.S. Air Force and the splendid job it was doing.

Good, But Small

He said the South Vietnamese Air Force was good, but small, and he felt the work the U. S. Air Force was doing to help train it justified the recent expansion of U. S. special air warfare.

DSM Is Awarded to Gen. Powell At Massive Retirement Review

There are no new devices, weapons or management systems that can provide a substitute for Infantry leadership in combat, Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of the U.S. Continental Army Command, said at a retirement review in his honor here Tuesday.

The remarks were made at a farewell ceremony in which over 10,000 troops, missiles, artillery, engineer equipment, and aircraft passed in review, and Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, the Army's vice chief of staff, presented Gen. Powell the Distinguished Service Medal, in recognition of his military service.

"This is a proud moment for me," Gen. Powell told the large gathering, which in addition to the reviewing troops included many general officers, retired general officers, and citizens from the Columbus-Phenix City area, many of them friends he made when he served from 1956 to 1958 as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

Pointing out that his career began in 1919 as a private in the Oregon National Guard, the distinguished veteran of World War II and Korea said, "Despite the importance of new weapons and machines and the many changes they have brought to warfare, the basic element of Infantry has remained the man who knows how to fight and who has the courage and the will to win."

Compliments Troops

Gen. Powell went on to compliment the troops on their appearance, calling them "as fine, sharp, rough a looking group of fighting men as it has ever been my privilege to stand tall with."

"It is a real privilege and honor to take this final salute from you," he stated. "I leave the future of the ground combat soldier in your hands. I thank you and salute you."

The ceremonies began with the general's arrival, heralded by a 17-gun salute and a rendering of the national anthem by the combined bands from The Infantry Center, 2nd Infantry Division and the Third U. S. Army Headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga.

Then Gen. Powell mounted a jeep, and with the commander of troops, Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, inspected the three brigades of troops.

This was followed by the presentation of the Distinguished Service Medal, and Gen. Powell's farewell speech.

Lt. Gen. Waters Designated Next CONARC Chief

FORT MONROE, Va. — In a recent White House announcement, Lt. Gen. John K. Waters was nominated for four-star rank and designated as the next commanding general of the United States Continental Army Command.

Gen. Waters, a native of Baltimore and a West Pointer, will succeed retiring Gen. Herbert B. Powell at Headquarters, USCONARC. USCONARC, the Army's largest command, has prime responsibility for ground defense of the continental United States and conducts virtually all individual and unit training throughout the six continental U.S. Armies and the Military District of Washington.

Gen. Waters, presently commanding general, Fifth U. S. Army in Chicago, will be succeeded in that post by Maj. Gen. Charles G. Dodge, now Army Chief of Information.

Was DCS

Gen. Waters, from January, 1958, until March, 1960, headed the Materiel Developments Office at Headquarters, USCONARC, and recently took an important role at the command headquarters when he acted as deputy commanding general for several weeks during the Cuban crisis.

A World War II hero and veteran of Korea with a strong background in Armored operations, Gen. Waters became commander of the Fifth Army in May, 1962, following a tour of duty in Germany where he commanded the 4th Armored Division and the V Corps.

Gen. Waters attended Johns Hopkins University for two years before entering the U.S. Military Academy. He was graduated in 1931 and commissioned in the Cavalry.

As executive officer of the 1st Armored Regiment in North Africa in 1943, he was

Article 15 Is Effective On February 1

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The amended Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice becomes effective Feb. 1. It gives commanding officers the authority to impose more severe company punishment than was previously possible.

The amended article should benefit minor offenders. It allows the commander to impose appropriate non-judicial punishment for relatively minor, non-criminal offenses which would have formerly necessitated a court-martial.

Congress recognized that many minor offenses were too serious for the weak penalties of Article 15 and, last year, passed Public Law 87-648 to

Group From Canada Arrives Here Monday

Thirty-six members of the Canadian National Defense College, including the commandant, Maj. Gen. C. B. Ware, four members of the directing staff, an executive staff officer, and 20 students, will visit here Monday to Wednesday.

The visit by the Canadian group is being sponsored by the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff. Before coming to the post they will have toured military installations at Colorado Springs, Colo., Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., San Diego, Calif., and Barksdale Air Force Base, La.

They are scheduled to arrive at 5:35 p.m. Monday. At 7:30 p.m., an official reception will be held in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

He Plans For Active Retirement

Gen. Herbert B. Powell indicated Tuesday his post-retirement plans do not call for inactivity.

During a press conference prior to a retirement review in his honor, Gen. Powell was asked what would replace his swagger stick when he leaves the active Army.

"I think I'll have time to study this," the CONARC commander replied. "I will not be a cane."

Faith in Fighting Man Expressed by Retiring General

Faith in the quality and spirit of the Modern Army's fighting man was expressed here Tuesday by Gen. Herbert B. Powell, retiring commanding general of the U.S. Continental Army Command.

Speaking at a press conference prior to a massive retirement review in his honor, Gen. Powell commented on technological advances that have shaped the Army into its present peak condition.

"But," the four-star general emphasized, ". . . I think the greatest improvement the Army has effected since World War II is in the quality, the training and the capability of its personnel."

"We have never had young men in one Army—I speak of all components, Active Army, National Guard and Reserves — who were as well motivated, well trained, as well educated or as capable as we have now," he continued.

Gen. Powell observed that young men entering today's Army are a bit "softer" when they first don Modern Army green. But, he pointed out, they are easily trained and conditioned to combat readiness.

"They seem to be better coordinated, to develop just as much stamina and are just as rugged" as yesterday's trooper, he said.

"When you combine this with better education, better motivation, you have a terrific fighting man," the CONARC commander asserted.

Gen. Powell, who began his Army career in 1919, told reporters he would not adopt any other type of career if he were to begin again.

"You might say that, if you like this sort of a life with the hardships and the good times and bad that come with it, it is because you are proud to be associated with the wonderful people who are also in uniform," Gen. Powell commented.

Speaking of Fort Benning, the general said, "The training, the know-how that is maintained at a school like Fort Benning, is one of our great national assets. . . Fort Benning and her sister schools will continue to improve and be improved and to grow. I hope it is the last thing that is ever cut for economy reasons."

wounded and captured by the Germans and spent more than two years in a prisoner of war camp.

Other Assignments

In 1946 he was assigned to the War Department General Staff, becoming aide to the then Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson.

In other outstanding assignments, he has served as commandant of cadets at the U.S. Military Academy; as chief of the American Military Assistance Staff in Yugoslavia; as chief of staff, I Corps, in Korea, and as deputy commanding general, the Armor Center, Fort Knox, Ky.

He is a graduate of the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the Armed Forces Staff College.

Among his decorations are the Distinguished Service Cross, the Distinguished Service Medal, the Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the French Croix de Guerre with Palm. Gen. Waters is an Honorary Commander of the Military Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire.

Review

mander then moved to the reviewing stand, where accompanied by Gen Hamlett, and Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, he watched the troops from this Third Army post pass in review.

Units with elements participating in the review included in addition to the bands, the 197th Infantry Brigade, 151st Engineer Group, 29th Transportation Battalion, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, WAC Detachment, Center Troop Command, and the 428th Medical Battalion, all from The Infantry Center.

TSB Troops

The Infantry School Student Brigade included students from the airborne and Infantry officer orientation courses, the officer candidate school, and the school cadre.

Elements from the 2nd Division included the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry; 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry; 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry; 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry; 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry; 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, 7th Cavalry; 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 66th Armor; Division Trains and the Division Artillery.

Aircraft for the flyby, which included both fixed and rotary wing planes, came from Lawson Army Aviation Command, 2nd Division Aviation Company, and the U. S. Army Aviation Center at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Following the review, a reception was held in the Main Officers Open Mess for Gen. and Mrs. Powell. Tuesday evening an official dinner honored the retiring general.

Earlier in the day an honors ceremony for Gen. Powell was held on Chapel Field.

At noon he was the guest of honor at a luncheon in downtown Columbus.

Speaking before those in attendance, the general said that being here was a lot like coming home.

"Columbus, and the whole Fort Benning area, has been sort of a second home for me, just as it has for most Infantrymen in the past 44 years," he said.

Many Changes

Many changes have taken place during that time, he stated, pointing out that the Army mule had been replaced by the jeep, the old bolt action rifles have become M-14's, and the high collars and campaign hats have given away to modern Army greens.

He also commented on the growth of the Infantry school from it's early camp on the Macon road to the vast complex it has become.

Speaking primarily to the civilians at the luncheon, Gen. Powell said, "Without the whole-hearted encouragement and support given by you, and many of your fathers before you, The Infantry School could not have been nearly so successful in developing and preserving that truly professional soldiering capability which is essential for success in battle."

This profession of soldiering is the really essential thing, he said, urging that they never lose sight of the fact that there is such a profession.

"In our mad rush to produce more effective planners and managers," the general stated, "we must not overlook the even more important demand that we produce fighters.

men who have the know-how, the physical strength and the guts to do the job, when it boils down to just one man looking over the sights of a rifle at another man."

Before departing Wednesday morning, Gen. Powell toured the post, including Lawson Field, and much of the new construction that is increasingly expanding The Infantry School's facilities.

In the afternoon two problems presented to Infantry School students will be observed by the Canadian military college members. They include the leaders reaction course and an Infantry - tank team in attack.

429 Earn Parachutist Wings Here

Parachutist Badges were pinned on 429 Army men in ceremonies here Jan. 17 marking the completion of four weeks of training for the newly qualified military paratroopers.

Honor graduate of The Infantry School course was Pvt. Edward J. Kolerich.

Also in the class of 12 Army officers and 417 enlisted men were four sons of former soldiers who saw service with airborne units.

New Law

put teeth into the article.

Court-martial sentences were often too severe for the offense and resulted in conviction entries being made in the service records of both officers and enlisted men.

The amended article allows commanding officers, depending upon their rank and position, to impose longer restrictions, place officers in arrest in quarters, order correctional custody for enlisted members, impose forfeitures or detention of pay for all ranks, and reduce rates of enlisted members.

The amended article contains many safeguards. If the offender feels he has been punished unjustly or too severely he may appeal. He may demand trial by court-martial in lieu of Article 15 (except for persons attached to or embarked on a vessel). In addition the punishments, including reductions in grade, may be suspended at the time they are imposed, or at any time within four months after imposition.

Suspended punishments bring with them a probationary period of not more than six months. If during that time the offender demonstrates that he is deserving, the punishment can be remitted. If not the punishment will be enforced.

While the article looks more severe at first glance, it is expected to provide long range benefits to all service members. Some Army people estimate it will reduce summary courts-martial by 75 per cent, thus sparing some 30,000 soldiers the possibility of having a conviction entered on their record.

The new article will also lower the number of enlisted men who suffer reduction in grade for offenses which might more appropriately be punished by fine, restriction or one of the other "bigger sticks" the commanding officer can wield.

Local Police Addressed By Gen. Butchers

Maj. Gen. Ralph J. Butchers, the Army's provost marshal general, told a meeting of the Valley Law Enforcement Association here last Friday that law officers are public servants and must do their best to maintain a good image.

The Army's top law enforcement official was on post for a visit with Infantry Center and 2nd Division military police officials and was the honored guest at the association's meeting.

Other guests attending the joint meeting of police officers from the post and the surrounding area included Dixon Wadsworth, a member of the Muscogee County Commission and a military police colonel in the Army Reserve, and Superior Court Judge John R. Thompson, both of Columbus.

Interpol Confab

Gen. Butchers also told the group about some of the items discussed during the 1962 Interpol (International Police) Conference held in Madrid, Spain, at which he was an official observer.

He discussed some of the topics brought up before the international agency. Among these were the problems involved in the cooperation between the various countries, registration of automobiles in Europe in an effort to lower the theft rate, and the international aspect of auto thefts, juvenile delinquency and swindling.

22 TAC Members Take Jump Training

Fifteen officers and seven enlisted men from the U. S. Air Force's Tactical Air Command (TAC) entered the third week of airborne training here Monday.

With two weeks of instruction behind them, including intensive physical conditioning, parachute landing falls and procedures for making safe exits from an aircraft, the airmen looked forward to the 34 and 250-foot towers this week.

Teaching the fundamentals of parachuting to Air Force personnel is nothing new to instructors in The Infantry School's Airborne Department. Last year 304 airmen underwent similar training at the post.

According to the men presently taking training, TAC sends staff operational status fighter pilots and their respective wing commanders through the course.

In addition a number of personnel who belong to Air Force Combat Control teams must be qualified parachutists. The teams consists of men who jump into areas first to support troop carrier operations. In this sense they are similar to the Army's Pathfinders, vanguards of airborne assaults.

Heading the group scheduled to graduate Feb. 1 are Col. Gordan F. Bradburn, 314th Troop Carrier Wing, Stewart Air Force Base, Tenn.; Col. Frank J. Collins, Headquarters, Tactical Fighter Wing, Homestead AFB, Fla.; Col. Joel B. Paris, III, Headquarters, Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va., and Maj. Don H. Payne, Headquarters, TAC, Langley AFB.

Other officers include Capt. Robert G. Bell, 4520 Aerial Demonstration Squadron, Nellis AFB, Nev.; Capt. John W. Dawson, 474th Organizational Maintenance Squadron, Cannon AFB, N. Mex.; Capt. William C. Barnes, 4th TAC Fighter Wing, Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C.; Capt. Bert E. Mitchell, 614th Tactical Fighter Squadron, England AFB, La.; Capt. Joe E. Howard, 309th Tactical Fighter Squadron, Homestead AFB; Capt. Carl W. McKenzie, 335th TAC Fighter Squadron, and Capt. Fredick G. Tolman, 334th TAC Fighter Squadron, Johnson AFB, and Capt. Jerry O. Robinette, 559th Tactical Fighter Squadron, McDill AFB, Fla.

First Lt. Jack C. Doughty, 614th TAC Fighter Squadron, England AFB; 1st Lt. Jerry E. Smith, 306th TAC Fighter and 1st Lt. Michael M. Plecnik, 557th TAC Fighter Squadron, McDill AFB.

T-Sgt. William G. Leighton, A1C John L. Riley, A1C James Swindell and A2C Warren G. Quade, all of the 4506th Operations Squadron, Langley AFB, and A1C Lehman Booher, 3637th Combat Crew Training Squadron, Slead AFB, Nev., and A3C Henry R. Andrson, 434th Troop Carrier Wing, Columbus, Ind.

Writer States Moving Doesn't Hurt Children

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The nomadic life of a military family is frowned upon by some as a poor way to rear children. Not so, according to an article written by Marine SSgt. Ralph Deaver of Quantico, Va.

According to the sergeant, the knowledge and experience attained by military dependents is seldom matched by children who stay at the "old home place" until they marry or pursue a career.

He brings to the attention of all servicemen the "hidden" fringe benefits which are often taken for granted and possibly not even recognized.

"One of the fringe benefits often overlooked in discussions of a military career is the high level of 'Education by Travel,' 'Education by Association' and 'Education by Experience' attained by our children.

"Take my children for example. They know that Atlanta, Ga., has more than 20 streets, ways, roads, places, drives and boulevards designated 'Peachtree.' They know that Jacksonville, N.C., has an Old Bridge Street and a New Bridge Street, that tobacco fields border the road to Charlotte and that Durham, Winston-Salem and Raleigh are names of Carolina cities as well as tobacco products dispensed at the corner drug store.

"They have seen Route 66, the Mojave Desert and Hot Springs National Park. They've played along beaches of the Atlantic and Pacific, they've seen the Smoky Mountains, the Rockies and the Great Plains streak the sky above the cornfields of Illinois.

"They've viewed seven states from atop Chattanooga's Lookout Mountain, they've beheld the lush crops of the Mississippi Delta and they've looked at the nation's capitol down Pennsylvania Avenue.

NEWCOMERS WON

New to the 2nd Division at Fort Benning at the start of the past football season, the 26th Infantry swept to victory with an undefeated flag football record.

"And, for all these things they have learned, I neither deserve nor claim the credit. All they know and are may be accredited to travel, association with new friends, attendance at a diversification of public schools and all the other unique experiences of close proximity to military bases, military personnel and military personnel's children.

"You might say their knowledge of things is the product of on-the-job training — on-the-job training for LIFE."

Viet Nam Casualty Portrait of Soldier

General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, in an address last year at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., said of the American Soldier: ". . .In his youth and strength, his love and loyalty he gave — all that mortality can give. . .When I think of his patience under adversity, of his courage under fire, and of his modesty in victory, I am filled with an emotion of admiration I cannot put into words. He belongs to history as furnishing one of the greatest examples of successful patriotism; he belongs to posterity as the instructor of future generations in the principles of liberty and freedom: he belongs to the present, to us, by his virtues and by his achievements."

In today's world — in the cold war in Vietnam — American soldiers are giving "all that mortality can give" — their lives for freedom.

In answer to a request made by the government of the Republic of Viet Nam, United States military advisers and trainers are in that country which may well hold the key to survival of freedom in Southeast Asia.

The thoughts of all Americans whose loved ones have given their lives for freedom may be embodied in this letter from the father of an American soldier killed in action in Viet Nam.

"After graduation from West Point in 1959 and completion of The Infantry School, followed by airborne and ranger training, our son chose Korea as a demanding first assignment. He was completely dedicated to 'Duty, Honor and Country' and the life of a soldier. While there, in addition to his military duties, he actively sought to make friends with the Koreans, learn their language, and acquaint himself with this life and culture. Upon his return to the United States he served at Fort Myer, Virginia, for almost a year, and then volunteered for the new challenge of Viet Nam. He believed that his success with the Koreans together with his facility in French would be of especial value to his country there.

"His dedication and achievement in his work are fortunately memorialized in the words of a man who served under his command; a sergeant who wrote: 'His fierce devotion to duty and his tremendous talent for taking care of small details as well as large ones endeared him to his men. We knew him as one officer who 'always had time.' Even when he didn't have time, he took time. We always got the impression that we were second only in importance to the mission to be accomplished. This is what enlisted men look for in officers and this is also what causes men to follow such a leader with an unquestionable attitude.'

"We send you this letter to thank you for your condolences and to tell you about our son. Se are anxious that our nation remember him not just as another casualty of the cold war, nor even only as our son, but rather as a loss to the Army and to the Nation of one of its promising, courageous young officers."

(Excerpts from a letter written to President John F. Kennedy by Maj. Gen. William F. Train in response to the President's letter of condolence concerning Gen. Train's son, 1st Lt. William F. Train III, who was killed in action in Viet Nam (on June 1, 1962).

Poor New York City In Soviet TV Eyes!

Well, at last we have the word! Gotham is gruesome. Baghdad-on-the-Hudson is a blight. America's Wonderful Town is really a thundering brown antheap populated by bums, undernourished slum children, unemployed idlers, striking longshoremen and—bankers. These last lurk in a lair called Wall Street, "the street of big business and the empire of the dollar."

What's the authority for this grim portrait of the world's largest city? Why, none other than the Soviet television network which has been edifying its audience with a series of "documentary" films about life in the United States. One of these, called Streets of New York, introduces the city as "the show window of America" and proceeds to make it a pretty smeary pane of glass.

This approach is scarcely unexpected, of course. Soviet TV wouldn't be likely to picture New York in terms of Central Park, Radio City, the Easter Parade and Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. But it is a pity that the six million Russians fortunate enough to own television sets couldn't be treated to something of the excitement and splendor of a metropolis whose current building boom is one of the marvels of the century.

Granted that New York has staggering urban problems. It's not all Park Avenue and it doesn't have Moscow's marble-paned subways. In fact almost any New Yorker will sound off with a list of things about his city he doesn't like. But much as he gripes about some things, he loves the city.

No, Ivan Ivanovich, Streets of New York is a badly blurred video image. Pay us a visit and see for yourself. Sure, sometimes there are pro-Castro demonstrators in the United Nations Plaza—there are also anti-Castro marchers aplenty. We leave them be as long as they don't mix it up. And it's true that you'll find New Yorkers lounging on the steps of their Public Library at Fifth Avenue and Forty-Second Street. But it isn't because they don't have homes or jobs, Ivan. They simply like to eat their lunch there or read books there or just watch the passing crowd. And they're awfully attached to those big lions that flank the entrance, Ivan—along with a lot of other things about New York. (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Realizing Potential

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Basil A. Hrin

In all the current emphasis on investigation, research and analysis of data concerning human activity, one of the most underestimated and overlooked results is that which refers to the ordinary person's exploiting of his own personal resources.

Some experts have gone so far as to calculate that, except in unusual cases, hardly ever does an individual perform to over 10 per cent of his capacity. This is most startling and should be most disturbing in a sense that it ought to make each one of us aware of this defect in ourselves. The parable of the talents in the Gospels (Matt. 24 14 fol) should make it more impressive. We must not be content only to get by.

If there ever were an era when situations demanded greater, better, and more effective actions than now, it would be difficult to pinpoint. Of course, people have lived in times of danger before now and somehow the human race had managed to plod along. The reason, simply, is that one or another individual just gave all they were capable of offering and thus the situation was saved. Unfortunately, the contentment merely to survive has been for too long a determining factor.

We now require a concerted effort to be aware of our individual capabilities, particularly to become conscious that any total, no matter of what, is the sum of its parts, and though we may consider our contribution for good as puny, we should still offer what we are able, trusting that our example will inspire the next person to do the same. We should not wait for extreme stresses to make us prove what we can do, but rather consider this a habitual attitude. Getting through an IG inspection with flying colors doesn't make one a good soldier, but a daily program of working at it does. Imagine, if we could help boost the average only one per cent, how much that would mean to humanity as well as to ourselves. Only in this manner shall we enjoy a full and satisfied life and be able to reach our goal in after-life, the reward of our stewardship.

Troops Can Reduce Gold Flow Problem

WASHINGTON (ANS) — The shrinking of our gold reserves is a problem which should be understood by every American citizen, especially those who are stationed or living in foreign lands. The danger merits our continued awareness. A successful solution requires the cooperation of us all.

What has made this problem a critical one?

In nine of the ten years preceding 1960, we, as a people, had spent a great deal more money in other countries than other peoples and governments had spent in ours. This unbalanced exchange of money placed the United States in debt to many of the countries of the rest of the world.

This debt must be paid with American goods or with American services, or, upon request, with gold from our Federal reserves.

Our gold reserves, which stood at $24.9 billion in 1949, were reduced by more than $7 billion by the end of 1960.

What can those serving overseas do?

First of all, they can buy United States products and services from United States outlets such as post exchanges, clubs and open messes. During their leisure time, they can make maximum use of United States sponsored and operated recreational facilities.

One of the most painless ways by which those overseas can make sure they do not overspend is by participating in a systematic savings program. For enlisted personnel, soldiers' deposits offer the same financial protection as an insured banking institution and pay an even higher rate of interest. For officers, enlisted personnel and civilians, the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds by allotment or payroll deduction, offers a way to help our country and save at the same time.

The Army's goal is to obtain a minimum of 65 per cent participation of personnel in every unit overseas in soldiers' deposits or purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds.

The gold flow problem affects us all. We must accept the fact that a financial crisis that could one day face our federal government would also face each of us.

'62 In Review Luncheon Held by Infantry Wives

The Supper Club was the site of a luncheon held recently by the wives of the 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry, honoring the wives of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The theme "62 in Review," was written, directed and produced by Mrs. Stanley Traymore. Mrs. Joseph C. Prescott, head of the decorations committee, used black and white as the basic color scheme for the decorations.

Each table depicted an event of 1962 — The Eiffel Tower with various other French illustrations, figurines doing the 1962 dance craze, "the twist"; a bust of Fidel Castro surrounded by formidibly arranged rockets, a world globe and the perennial World Series baseball bat.

As Mrs. David M. McCleery narrated, a skit was enacted by ladies of the 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry, relating to special events of the past year.

A door prize was presented to Mrs. William McKee, one of the luncheon guests, subsequent to a formal drawing at the conclusion of the program.

Special guests included Mrs. Ben Harrell and her mother, Mrs. Pearl Campbell, Mrs. McKee and daughter, Mrs. E. C. Clark, Mrs. Helen Prytko, Mrs. Elaine Hoffman and Mrs. R. C. Russell Jr., of Columbus.

The wife of the battalion commander of the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, Mrs. John L. Kennedy, headed the luncheon committee and was assisted by the ladies of the 58th Infantry.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Richard W. Keyes, wife of the commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade and Mrs. Kennedy.

Shower Highlights Luncheon

A bridal shower was the center of attraction at the monthly luncheon of The Infantry Board.

The tables of the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess was decorated with pink pom-poms and ivy and interspersed with pink crepe paper umbrellas.

The shower was in honor of the former Miss Alicia Thorn, who became the bride of William M. Summers Jr. on Dec. 21, 1962. The gifts were presented to Mrs. William M. Summers Sr. to be sent to the couple, now residing in California.

Welcomed as a new member of the board ladies was Mrs. Mazick Rahaim. Many guests were also present for the luncheon. Mrs. Gordon A. Gunton, whose husband is the Canadian liaison officer, had both her mother Mrs. S. Eyford, who is visiting from Manitoba, Canada, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. R. Gunton who is from Montreal, Canada.

Mrs. Anna Jarvi accompanied her daughter, Mrs. Arthur House, and Mrs. Robin Montgomery was a guest of Mrs. Roy Inman. Miss Bettye LeFleur from New Orleans was a guest of Mrs. Lee D. Ellis Jr.

The luncheon hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. Roy Daems, Mrs. Victor Tiu, Mrs. Fred K. Mahaffey and Mrs. Charles P. Saint.

'Fasching' Theme of Special Subjects Department Wives Lunch at MOOM

The Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the scene of a luncheon for the ladies of the Special Subjects Department, The Infantry School.

Hostesses were Mrs. L. P. Dillon Jr., Mrs. J. H. Bremer and Mrs. C. W. Chapman. Mrs. W. H. Young Jr. welcomed Mrs. W. C. Burghardt and Mrs. B. B. Porter to the group.

Hostesses chose the theme of Fasching for their luncheon with a centerpiece of a "chimney sweeper" with Marzipan "pig," both signs of good luck. On the table were glasses, colorful streamers, confetti and chocolate June bugs.

Mrs. Bremer discussed Fasching in Bavaria, explaining it was introduced in the 14th Century when Catholics were strictly forbidden to eat meat during the Lenten season. They ate as much as they could before Lent. This led to gay feasts. The nobles also enjoyed these pre-Lenten days, but so they would not be recognized, they disguised themselves. This custom was soon taken up by the common people. By the 19th Century Fasching was declared a legal season.

A prince and princess are elected in every city or town on the 11th day of the 11th month at 11 o'clock. Eleven is believed to have mystic power. Also elected are 11 councilmen, 11 female guards and a court jester. The city government hands over a symbolic six-foot key to the royal couple on the first Saturday in January and from then they rule the city for 40 days. There are costume Parties every night. On the last Sunday there are big parades.

Shrove Tuesday, which is the last day of the Fasching season, is a holiday. Everybody dresses in a costume and roams around the town. Fasching ends at midnight. At this time the prince (a dummy) is burned and thrown into the river and another Fasching season ends.

Partly as a result of the nasty, rainy weather and partly because of the six weeks tests scheduled for this week, Fort Benning was unusually quiet last weekend.

Perhaps the absence of nine of the post's gayest young ladies contributed to the general calm too. Martha Harris, Kathi Gueymard, Linda Taft, Weze Williams, Sandy Duke, Nancy Williams, and Pat and Myra Paulick were the guests of Shiela O'Connell in her new home in Hilton Heights for a slumber party Friday night.

Weekend before last, Jimmy Smith was host at a party in his home. Those attending were Rica Spencer, Jack Colee, Joy Birdsong, Art Long, Lee Short, Steve Cleary, Pam Gates, Frank Wrunze, Karen Kendall, Bob Mays, Jean Dixon, Roland Keller, Casey Nottage, Brian Patterson, Betty Boisvert, Ed Filpcuz, Kathy O'Donnel, Ray Lynch, Vivienne Johnson, Mike Hayworth and Sandy Shaefer.

Before the party, Jimmy taped the music for dancing so there wasn't the necessity to change records in the course of the party. He also had a recorder planted in a corner and in so doing preserved some very interesting conversations.

The young people of Fort Benning participate in many worth while projects through their school, social service, and church clubs. Many though, help others as individuals. For quite a few teenagers, this personal offering takes the form of being a Sunday school teacher in the post's Protestant Sunday School system.

More teachers are needed very badly though. If you would like to teach, please go to the office of the Christian Education Center, located on Dixie Road, this Sunday and volunteer to teach a class or play the piano for some department.

Your Dental Health

To End Bad Breath, Eliminate Its Cause

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

"Even his best friends won't tell him."

Some toothpaste company used this one time, didn't they, in telling how their paste prevented halitosis? Some of them now use similar advertising to get across the same message. One has a little catchy tune that goes "It cleans your breath la de da da da."

You know what I mean. Since they advertise it, people must be concerned with it so let's discuss it this week.

Halitosis, or bad breath, comes from two words; halitus meaning breath and -osis meaning state or condition of. It may be caused by decayed teeth, gum infection, infection in the nasal passages or throat. More often it comes from an unclean mouth.

Sometimes bad breath persists even thought the mouth is clean and healthy. If this is the case, you should consult your physician because diabetes, lung cancer or other conditions could be the cause.

Now, for the advertising claims of toothpastes and powders and mouthwashes. Will they cure halitosis? Will burying a dead cat in the cemetery at midnight in the dark of the moon cure warts? No, but it will hide the cat and these toothpastes and mouthwashes will the halitosis — for a while.

To cure halitosis you must remove the cause. The decayed teeth must be filled, the gum or other infection must be treated and the mouth and teeth must be kept clean. You must brush the teeth and gums after each time you eat. You must also brush your tongue and you must clean between your teeth with dental floss or soft wooden cleaners.

Ask your dental officer. He will be glad to help you learn to brush your teeth and gums properly.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

'SECOND TO NONE' FIRST TO GO ROAD

The Department of Army announced Monday that the 2nd Division will be the first of 14 Army divisions to reshape its regular structure into the most heavily-gunned and most maneuverable in U. S. history.

The changeover, first in seven years for the Army, will be swift for the combat-ready 2nd Division and will be phased over several months.

Since 1956, Infantry and parachroop divisions have been formed under what the Army calls a "pentomic" structure groups of about 1,350 men each. In recent years, Army planners have seen the need for reorganization that would adapt divisions to the demands of fighting limited, non-nuclear wars, in radically different kinds of terrain around the globe, as well as for the atomic battle field. The new structure caused by reorganization of Army divisions is known within Army ranks as "ROAD," (Reorganization Objective, Army Division.)

The 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry and the 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry have already started reshaping into mechanized infantry battalions.

Elements of these two units are scheduled to depart for Europe in April for temporary duty under the Army's ROTAPLAN rotation system, and will replace the 2nd Division's 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry which has been in Europe since October 1962.

Mechanized battalions are essential in Europe to take advantage of the flat country and good roads whereas units in the United States will have more infantry battalions which are suited to swift movement overseas to deal with brush fire crises. Actual designation of new units will be announced as confirmed.

Maneuver elements of the 2nd Division will consist of four infantry battalions, four mechanized battalions and two tank battalions. However, because of the Division's participation in ROTAPLAN, two of the mechanized battalions will always be in Europe.

Infantry divisions now total 13,748 men at full strength whereas the new infantry division will total approximately 15,945 men at full strength.

Already Organized

The Army's newest divisions, the 1st Armored at Fort Hood, Tex., and the 5th Infantry at Fort Carson, Col., are already organized under ROAD. Both units were formed under the new divisional structure in February 1962, when President Kennedy approved their activation, increasing the Regular Army from 14 to 16 divisions on a permanent basis.

Army units in the Caribbean were reorganized into a ROAD brigade of three battalions in 1962.

Present Army divisions are of three types — Infantry, Armor and Airborne. The change will provide four types of divisions — Infantry, Armor, Airborne, and Mechanized, all with markedly increased capabilities over the pentomic organization.

Originally announced in June 1961, ROAD is designed to provide greater flexibility, battlefield mobility, and increased firepower.

Tailor Divisions

Most important factor of the ROAD concept is the ability to tailor divisions to battlefield requirements. Each division has a common base including three brigade headquarters, division artillery, and other combat and support elements. Combat maneuver battalions, infantry, tank, and mechanized infantry, are added to the division base to form units ready for any type combat situation.

According to the Department of Army release, "Reorganiz-

Elite Marksmanship Detachment Formed

By Peter Tatistcheff

Qualified firers in the 2nd Infantry Division will have a chance for high level competition this year with the formation of a provisional marksmanship detachment boasting a staff of experienced shooters.

The 2nd Division has brought together one officer, six noncommissioned officers and one enlisted man to staff a detachment that will bring the most qualified firers in the division to, among other events, the Third U. S. Army Championship Matches scheduled in May.

To Conduct Matches

The job of this detachment will be to conduct division bigbore and small-bore championship matches. As firing competition begins throughout division units and as the elimination process decides the best division shooters, personnel

SP5 TURNER—SOLDIER-OF-THE-YEAR FOR 1963

By Peter Tatistcheff

Editor's Note: This article on the 2nd Infantry Division's Soldier - of - the - Year for 1963 will be followed by a feature on the Noncommissioned Officer-of-the-Year. For the first time the division has chosen two men from the select of all division units to bear top honors, giving equal opportunity to persons beginning and well into their military careers. These are articles on the 2nd Division's "best."

Good fortune and aggressiveness are attributes easily mirrored in service records. They are attributes that shine from the record of the 2nd Infantry Division's Soldier-of-the-Year for 1963.

Some fellow soldiers might say of Sp5 James R. Turner, that he had more than his share of luck in the Army, that he was just "in the right place at the right time." But for someone who knows the full story, it is plain that above average incentive, a lot of clear thinking, patience and sweat by this 21-year-old soldier brought him to his "best soldier" title. Yet his slight stature and soft-spoken manner does not suggest a winner.

Variety of Training

Few soldiers with the amount of service he has, have had as wide a variety of training and opportunity. To score tops in the mental and physical tests demanded in selection of a Soldier-of-the-Year takes more than simple application or study. It takes experience. His record would suggest that it was through experience with a wide range of miliary subjects and contact with rigorous military physical training that Sp5 Turner was prepared for the division contest.

The son of an Army noncommissioned officer and veteran of World War II, Turner enlisted in the Army in 1960 in Baton Rouge, La., after graduating from high school.

A 2nd Division Special

After basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C., he came to the 2nd Divison's Company D, 8th Infantry, to become a "Heavy Weapons" Infantryman. Among the noncommissioned officers training soldiers in this company was twice winner of the Soldier - of - the - Year title, PSgt. Richard B. Alford, a person who, says Turner, "is pretty quiet when he is off duty. But he could scare you sick in bayonet training."

In February 1961, heavy weapons training ended and

Soaring Bond Programs Net Two Awards

The 38th Infantry "Blue Spaders" and the 7th Cavalry last week received recognition for outstanding savings bond programs.

The 38th Infantry was presented the Minuteman Flag with Star, the highest U. S. Savings Bond program award ever given in Georgia.

The 7th Cavalry was recipient of the Minuteman Flag for maintaining a 91.8 per cent participation in this program.

The Minuteman Flag with Star was given to the 38th for maintaining over 90 per cent participation for over a year. This unit was presented Minuteman Flags on two other occasions, achieving the latest high scores while serving in Germany in 1961.

Presenting the award to Col. Artin J. Kehe, 38th Infantry commander, was Mr. Maynard Ashworth, voluntary chairman of Georgia's third congressional district, and publisher of the Ledger-Enquirer newspapers.

The 7th Cavalry award was accepted by Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, cavalry commander.

The awards were presented in the office of the 2nd Division commander. Also present were Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, and Mr. Marvin L. Summers, district director of the Savings Bond program, and Maj. Rex T. Dittamore, division finance officer.

The flags may be flown by the units as long as they maintain participation over 90 per cent. The 38th Infantry flag will be on display in their trophy room.

As Mrs. Holden Hosts

Ladies Tour Rota-Family Center

A big calendar with April 15 circled in red greeted the guests at the monthly coffee of the 38th Infantry Officers' wives, held recently at the Rota-Family Service Center. April 15 is a familiar date to the wives of the 38th as it is the day when their husbands will return from their six-month tour of duty in Baumholder, Germany.

Honored guests at the event were Mesdames Stanley Harding, Royal Reynolds, John Corley, Ralph Hugett, Lewis Kunzig, T. J. Cassidy, Ralph Jones, William Morgen, Frederick Harris; John Staples, David Compton, Lucien Keller, Edward Poole, Arlin Kehe, John Arthur and William Conway.

Since the center was first set up last September, it has kept a guest book in the lounge to be signed by all its visitors. Mrs. Maurice Holden, wife of the battle group commander, asked the guests to add their names to the already impressive sized list before they began their tour of the center. Mrs. Holden told the ladies that the purpose of the tour was to show them the workings of the center, and how it had been set up in order to make it the great success that it is.

SIGNING THE VISITORS' BOOK

First to Office

The first stop for the group was the main office where they were shown the Activities Book in which wives can sign up for such varied activities as swimming, bridge, and canasta. This office is also where incoming calls are taken by the volunteer workers, who in turn log them in a separate book and then refer them to the agency or committee that can be of assistance.

The women of the battle group have volunteered their time to work in four committees under a committee chairman. They take care of emergencies, hospital calls, routine office calls, casualty calls and the publicity for the Center. The lending library available to all the dependents is also located here.

The highlight of the main office room is a large bulletin board covered with pictures and articles about the husbands and their duties overseas.

The next office visited was that of the coordinator and assistant co-ordinator, Mrs. Holden and Mrs. William Conway. Here are kept the complete files of every man in the battle group and his dependents. Included in the files are the locations of all the families in the event that it should be necessary for the center to contact them while the men are overseas.

Going across the hall from this office the guests viewed the kitchen and nursery where the volunteer workers can enjoy a quick snack and a cup of coffee — they can also leave their children here while they are working for the center.

Zodiac Signs

Ending the tour, the group found themselves back in the spacious comfortable lounge which Mrs. Dennis Harron had appropriately decorated for January with the twelve signs of the Zodiac — the main symbol being the one for the month of April, when the families of the 38th will again be reunited.

East Germany Birthplace Of Teacher Mrs. Sanders

BY LOIS FOY

Germany is the birthplace of Herta Ruth Sanders, wife of the sergeant major of the 12th Artillery. Born in East Germany, Mrs. Sanders earned her Home Economics Teacher's Degree there in 1944.

In 1949 she married Sgt. Maj. Carol W. Sanders who was stationed in Germany at the time. Later that year they moved stateside to Texas when Sgt. Sanders was assigned to Fort Bliss.

The stay at Fort Bliss was short for they were soon on their way to Fort Lewis, Wash. and then on to Fort Baker, Calif.

The Korean War broke up the family from 1952-54 and during that time, Mrs. Sanders remained in California. The family was united in 1954 when Sgt. Maj. Sanders returned to Fort Lewis, Wash. Travelling again in 1955 the Sanders went to Fort McCarthy, Calif.

Panama Zone

The Panama Canal Zone was home for the Sanders in 1956. While living here, Mrs. Sanders served as an instructor in Conversational German for officer personnel. She received a Letter of Commendation from the Army Education Center for her splendid work in this field.

Returning from the Panama Canal Zone in 1959, the Sanders went to Fort Sam Houston, Tex. In the same year, Mrs. Sanders was delighted to be able to return to her home country, when Sgt. Maj. Sanders was ordered to Karlsruhe, Germany. They lived in Karlsruhe for a year and then moved to Schwabisch Hall, where they lived until coming to Fort Benning recently.

Jerry, their only child, was born in 1950 at Fort Lewis, Wash. He is now attending school at Faith Junior High School, where he is a seventh grader. Chico, the pet of the family, is a lovable poodle which the family brought with them from Germany.

An Army Wife

Mrs. Sanders says she has enjoyed being an Army wife, but now that her husband is retiring, she is looking forward with a great deal of anticipation to settling down and having permanent neighbors and friends. She has met many nice people during her Army travels.

The Sanders now reside on post at Fort Benning, but after Sgt. Maj. Sanders' retirement in a few months, they hope to live in the area of Tallahassee, Fla.

TRAINING WITH SHIPS . . . Training recently at a port near Fort Stewart, Ga., equipment of the 69th Armor prepares to load on board ship, during armor training exercises.

An Experienced Soldier

SP5 JAMES TURNER

Turner went on to Fort Bragg, N. C. and "jump school" to take Airborne training. Passing the vigorous physical requirements of this specialized Army training, he served for five weeks with Airborne infantry duty with the 82nd Airborne Division. Snapping up the opportunity to become a finance clerk for his battle group, he went to 82nd headquarters to attend a two-week adjutant general's finance school.

As Finance Clerk

He finished the year out as a finance clerk when again opportunity came for more special training. A call went out for volunteers to attend training completely new to him. In February 1962 he travelled to Keesler Air Force Base near Biloxi, Miss., assigned to train at its Air Traffic Control Radar School.

Six months of radar training ended with an assignment back in the 2nd Infantry Division, this time with the 2nd Aviation Company.

Since his arrival as an air traffic controller specialist, Turner has risen to chief of the Visual Flight Rules (VFR) Control section, a part of the company's operations section. As part of his responsibilities, he maintains the section's Ground Control Approach (GCA) unit, helping in bad weather to vector pilots onto a runway. His general duties include assisting the aviation company in all field problems and maneuvers in problems of air traffic control. His rank also brings him the duties of squad leader in his platoon.

Though a veteran of few years active duty, Turner boasts participation in two of the largest peace - time joint service maneuvers ever held in the United States, and his current enlistment will bring him into a third. He has participated with "friendly" forces in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE in 1961 and as part of "aggressor" forces in Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II in 1962. The third installment will come in August of this year with Exercise SWIFT STRIKE III, recently set by the U. S. Strike Command.

Turner's extra - military activities and personal life reveal a planner who sets equal score by dreams and necessity. He is anxious to go to college. His dream is to travel to Alaska and set himself up in that relative frontier state working with his own newspaper.

In his spare time the Osyka, Mississippi, native is learning the television repair business. For sport activity he lifts weights at the Fort Benning gymnasium. Art courses during high school began an active interest in sketching and drawing and he still pursues interests in the fine arts.

His feelings toward winning the top soldier title in the 2nd Division were of relief and pride. Glad that the contest was over, Turner recalled the three months he spent in preparation taking the Army's Physical Combat Proficiency Test daily. "But the three months paid off," he said. "Of course this is a big thing for me," he added suddenly, "because it's the only thing I ever won."

2nd Division Staffs Exclusive Marksmanship Unit

ultimately will be subject to selection and retention by the Marksmanship Detachment for further training. Ultimately, the persons selected will be eligible to compete in Third Army Matches this summer at Fort Benning.

At present the detachment is in the process of organizing and further word as to dates of division matches will be forthcoming through "normal distribution channels."

With competition beginning in division units, the marksmanship detachment has stated that any unit wishing coaching and advice, marksmanship scoring sheets, and any information relating to marksmanship contests may call on their staff for assistance.

The unit hopes to see the division represented for the first time February 2 and 3 on the Monthly Open Pistol Match at Fort Benning.

In setting up the detachment, a lieutenant was brought from the 38th Artillery to take the job of commander, Lt. Ray Carney, former executive officer of Battery A, 68th Artillery, and present commander of the detachment, holds the National Rifle Association pistol classification of Expert.

Commander's Record

In 1962 division matches the lieutenant placed second in the .45 caliber pistol, slow fire (new shooter category). In the 1963 Third U. S. Army matches he took third place in the .22 caliber pistol, slow fire (new shooter category).

The Newburgh, New York native is 26 years old, graduated from Officer Candidate School in 1961, and served four years with the Air Force before joining the Army. Beginning service with the Air Force in 1951, the lieutenant once served as assistant crew chief for a B-47 photo reconnaissance aircraft.

The staff serving under Lt. Carney boasts solid firing experience. Six noncommissioned officers were chosen from division units for assignment to the marksmanship detachment. Each has an impressive record. The one enlisted man serving as gunsmith, brings special qualifications to the detachment.

SFC Richard F. Tompkins, classified Master, in charge of the rifle section, has been shooting for six years and holds two "legs" toward the Distinguished Marksmanship Badge. He is formerly of Company B, 23rd Infantry.

The unit first sergeant is SFC Albert Chapman. He is Master classified, with one "leg" toward the Distinguished Marksmanship Badge. This was earned at the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. He has been shooting for six years. He comes from Headquarters Company, 9th Infantry.

Assigned as gunsmith is Pvt George Armanino, a graduate of Oregon Technical Institute with an Associated Arts degree in Gunsmithing Technology. Included in his past experience is work with a micro-sight company. He is also the owner of a gun shop in San Francisco, Cal. He was assigned to the detachment from Headquarters Company, 23rd Infantry.

On Coaching Staff

SFC Burl Branham, a member of the coaching staff, has been shooting for seven years and has five years experience with All Army as shooter, coach and armorer. Master qualified, he comes from the 7th Cavalry.

SSgt. Jesse Yeatts, in charge of the pistol section, is the holder of the Short Course Center-Fire record for Third Army, winning with a score of 298x13 out of a possible 300. He holds three "legs," is Master qualified, and has been shooting for six years. He arrived to the detachment from Combat Support Company, 1st Infantry.

They've Got a Word for It --- GOMRAC!

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Springing up within the 23rd Infantry battle group motor pool area lately are several black-on-white signs with the capital letters "GOMRAC" standing out in bold letters.

To personnel working regularly in the motor pool, GOMRAC has already become part of their everyday on-the-job vocabulary. The signs are a constant reminder that "general overall maintenance requires attention constantly" — GOMRAC.

The GOMRAC program within the 23rd was initiated by Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver Jr., battle group executive officer. Col. Silver recently attended a preventive maintenance course at Fort Knox, Ky., where he was introduced to GOMRAC.

Upon his return to Fort Benning he immediately set up the program. The program stresses the importance of keeping individual vehicles and tools in a clean, neat, and serviceable condition at all times.

SPEAKS AND CONGRATULATES . . . Speaking recently at the U.S. Army Aviation School at Fort Rucker, Ala., Brig. Gen. John T. Corley (C), assistant division commander, reminded graduating aviators that their training was important to the future of the Army. Following his address the general presented an Association of the U.S. Army plaque to honor graduate, Lt. William H. Green (R), with Col. Warren R. Williams, acting commandant of the school.

By 1st Infantry PIO

In the ceremony held at battle group headquarters, Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Infantry commander, presented Murray with his honorable discharge. Lt. Douglas C. Morrow, assistant adjutant, read the orders awearing in Murray for the additional six years.

Prior to joining the "Always First", Murray served a 14½-month tour with the Eight U.S. Army in Korea.

All's Well in Sub-Zero Exercises

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany —Platoons of the 38th Infantry returned from the field last week after conducting three days of independent exercises in sub-zero cold and six to 15-inch deep snow.

The "Rock of the Marne" troops came back to Baumholder apparently none the worse for wear from their training — there were no cases of cold injury.

Acclimatized

The 38th rotated to Germany from Fort Benning three months ago and apparently, through acclimatization and cold weather indoctrination, has been able to avoid injuries from Germany's coldest winter in six years. The men had no access to any type of billeting during the exercise.

During the training, company executive officers were given the opportunity to command their units and staff supervision was kept to a bare minimum, consisting mostly of logistical and medical support.

During the exercise platoon leaders conducted training as they deemed necessary for their units including such things as night operations and cross-country patrolling.

The snow presented some problems for the Marnemen. Some holes in the ground were covered by drifted snow and several armored personnel carriers dropped into them during cross-country driving when the operator unknowingly came over one.

Wheeled vehicle movement off roads was nearly impossible until tracked vehicles had cleared the way.

One company had to move its command post when the weight of ice on trees caused some limbs to come tumbling into the middle of its area.

All rifle companies, Combat Support Company and a limited part of Headquarters Company participated in the training.

'Ready' Units To Get Awards

A new operational readiness program, instituted by the commanding general of the Third U. S. Army, will be implemented throughout the 2nd Division.

The new program concerns the awarding of Certificates of Proficiency to units who receive a commendable state of material readiness as determined by the Third Army Command Maintenance Readiness Inspection teams.

In general this means a unit must receive no unsatisfactory ratings and have a commendable maintenance operation.

The Certificate of Proficiency to date has been awarded to only four units in the Third Army area. One of these units was Company D of the 23rd Infantry at Fort Benning.

Chess Competition To Begin Sunday

A simultaneous chess exhibition and competition will be held at Service Club Two Sunday afternoon beginning at 1 p.m.

Like the two previous competitions held at the club, contestants will pit their chess-playing skills against Lt. Robert Karch, winner of several chess championships and competitions throughout the world.

Contestants will sit at tables arranged in a circle around Lt. Karch. As play begins, Lt. Karch will move around in a counter - clockwise direction, stopping before each player to watch him make a move, then making his own move and going on to the next player.

In the first competition Lt. Karch defeated all contestants within two hours. The second time after defeating 13 players he fell on the 14th.

Sunday's competition is open to the general public and appropriate awards will be presented to the first and second place winners or to the two longest players.

ASA Scores High at PT

Though most of the training of Company B, 303rd Army Security Agency (ASA) Battalion is classified, their recent showings on the semi-annual physical training test shows that their training is bringing results.

There were 120 members of the company who took the test held last month at Wetherby Field and the company average was 417, just 83 points short of the maximum total.

One member of the company, Pfc Russel Lee, a native of California did "max" the test with the final score of 500. Pfc Kenneth Supernant and Pfc Robert Best just missed the maximum total with respective scores of 497 and 493.

The company took the test on December 19 and 21 after undergoing an extensive training program.

Starting in September, four months before they were scheduled for the test, they began a rigorous daily routine of physical training. Every morning of the work-day week they did the Army "Daily Dozen" gradually working up to 12 repetitions of each exercise. This was followed by a half to a full mile run. Afterwards this program alternated every other morning with a two mile run.

Colonel Hughett Farewells Stress Many 'Experiences'

By The 87th Infantry PIO

At a battle group formation last week in the Kelley Hill field house, Col. Ralph H. Hughett, outgoing 87th Infantry commander, after a 15-minute farewell speech, saluted the command as a final gesture of appreciation.

Before addressing the battle group, the colonel released the names of high scorers in the recently completed weapons qualifications testing, accompanying his announcement with a presentation of awards.

"Achieved More . . ."

Col. Hughett's remarks to the men of the 87th Infantry, of whom he said he was most proud, emphasized that they had achieved more than any unit he has been associated with in the past. He said, "This has been probably the best experience in my 21 years in the Army." He considered it "a privilege to command the battle group," and asserted that it was "a rare occasion for a unit to go through as many experiences as you did."

Col. Hughett also made a few comments on the 87th Infantry's role in the new Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) concept scheduled to come into effect in the near future and which he said would not drastically alter the material structure of the unit. As for this year's training, he remarked that it should be "a most interesting year for you."

Col. Hughett's address was preceded by an awards ceremony for high scorers in recent weapons qualification and gunners' exams. The following awards were made: M-1 rifle, SFC William Thornton, Combat Support Company; Browning automatic rifle, PFC Edward M. Bevell, Company C; .45 caliber pistol, Sp4 Zenon Dudojc, Company E; light machinegun, Sgt. Dillard McNeal, Company B; 90 millimeter tank gun, Sp5 Donald J. Slovak, Combat Support Company; 90 millimeter M-56 self-propelled anti-tank gun, Sgt. Leroy Jones, Combat Support Company; 81 millimeter mortar, Sp4 James E. Moulton, Company A; 4.2 inch mortar, Sp4 Donald L. Giese, Combat Support Company; and 3.5 inch rocket launcher, Sp4 Monroe B. Kugler, Company B.

23rd Infantry's New Personnel Officer Arrives

By 23rd Infantry PIO

His military career began in 1941 when he entered the U.S. Air Force for four years. In December 1945, he became a civilian again, but re - entered military service in February 1949 in the U.S. Army as an enlisted man. Two years later, he became a warrant officer and has served in that capacity for the past 11 years.

The new personnel officer has a total of four overseas tours of duty already to his credit, three in the Pacific area (Korea, Japan) and one in the European theater (Germany).

Mr. Fallis and his family reside in Columbus, Ga.

Hand-to-Hand Combat Wins Medal of Honor

By 7th Infantry PIO

The Chinese Communist Spring Offensive just north of the 38th Parallel was the scene of one of the most heroic efforts in the Korean Conflict.

Company H of the 7th Infantry was forced to retreat because of injuries and ammunition shortages. While the survivors of the machine-gun squad fell back, Sgt. Hiroshi H. Miyamura covered them. He then charged the enemy, firing from the hip and cutting with his bayonet until he had killed ten of the Chinese in hand-to-hand combat.

Then the small, thin faced man rejoined his men, counted heads and administered first aid. With only four men remaining of the original 12, Miyamura gathered up the last few rounds of ammunition and ordered the men to retreat. With all the ammunition gone, he destroyed the machine gun and started toward the rear.

Surrounded by the enemy, Miyamura cut through by savage use of his bayonet and made his way to another U.S. machine gun emplacement. The Chinese closed in. Grenade fire wounded him in the leg but he fought on.

Again he grappled with the Chinese in hand-to-hand combat. He almost broke away but finally he was trapped in a tangle of barbed wire.

That morning when the company retook the ground there was an intense search for Miyamura's body. They didn't find it. Where he had held fast they did find the bodies of 67 dead Chinese. It was evident that if the brave sergeant was alive, he was now a prisoner of war.

Twenty eight months later at Panmunjom Sgt. Hiroshi Miyamura walked to his freedom from a prisoner-of-war camp to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Ski Champion Learned at Age 3

National Competition Not New To Jackson Hole's Award Winner

By 87th Infantry PIO

Jackson Hole, Wyo., is a unique little town.

A population of approximately 1,000 lies in the shadow of the Grand Teton Mountains of north-western Wyoming at the eastern edge of the Rocky Mountains and some 90 miles from the boundaries of Yellowstone Park. One of the most beautiful and rugged places in the country, it has always been a particularly well-known resort for summer and winter sports. Mountain meadows and forests support abundant animals and game such as deer, mountain sheep, moose, bear, duck, geese and the world's largest herd of elk. The town of Jackson Hole is surrounded by dude and cattle ranches, one of which is New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller's summer residence.

SKI CHAMP
John Curtis

Inhabitants

The inhabitants of Jackson Hole have lived with the caprice of nature and mountain land and have produced tough, hardy individuals, consistently outstanding athletes and sports men. The town boasts a number of those who were the original members of the 87th Mountain Regiment. Their talents were uniquely suited to the devices of the 87th crest of white mountain, alpinestock, ski pole and horseshoe as mountain climbers, skiers and mule skinners.

John R. Curtis, a native of Jackson Hole and a member of the 87th's Combat Support Company, is one such outstanding sportsman. Having put on his first pair of skis at the age of three, Curtis placed third in the giant slalom at the Jackson Hole Thanksgiving Race at the age of five. At the age of 12 he won first place in the downhill slalom at the Wyoming State Invitational.

During the years 1951 through 1957 Curtis won many honors and trophies in the International Ski Association which is comprised of the states of Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana and Colorado. (The ISA is one of the seven districts of the National Ski Association which covers the United States).

Representative

With his impressive record he was selected to represent the mountain states in the Junior National Championships of the National Ski Association during the last four of his high school years. During the 1956-57 season in his senior year in high school, he received the John Guest Memorial Trophy as the outstanding skier in the Jackson High School Invitational.

After accepting a skiing scholarship from Utah State University and with only a few weeks preparation, Curtis won the coveted "Ski Meister" Trophy, taking first place in the arduous events of slalom, giant slalom, snowshoe race and cross country ski run. While doing this he also managed to set an as yet unbeaten record.

Expert infantryman Curtis is a member of the survey section with the 87th and serves as a computer for the heavy mortar platoon. His hobbies in addition to skiing include water skiing, fishing, and rodeo.

Egg, 3 Leg, and Izzy Dizzy Races at DivArty Field Day

By DivArty PIO

If one were to hear someone shout, "Tie two of their legs together and make them run," is could possibly conjure up an image of cloak and dagger torture. But if these words were removed momentarily by, "The next game will be a tug-of-war," the proper perspective would be attained.

Such was the correct view of the recent Division Artillery Field Day Competition on the field across from the 193d Artillery Battalion Headquarters. With the men from all the Division artillery battalions massed on the field, the battalion commanders matched skill in the familiar egg race, first sergeants hit the front leaning rest position and lapped up dry crackers from a paper plate as they simultaneously did pushups and made attempts at whistling, and other artillerymen dizzily participated in what was called the Izzy Dizzy race. A bend over at the waist, hold a baseball bat to the forehead, spin around seven times, then run with the bat to the opposite end of the field where another team member repeats the process.

Lt. Col. Terence W. Huck, battalion commander of the 12th Artillery, won the commanders' egg race. SSgt. Clifford W. Tellis, 27th Artillery, won the first sergeant pushup contest.

TSB Takes Over First Place With Protested Victory

428th Medical Battalion Lodges Protest During Closing Seconds

BY PFC LEO ZANI

The Student Brigade took over tentative possession of first place in the Major Unit Basketball League by upsetting the 428th Medics 70-69, on Jack Barclay's lay-up shot with five seconds of play remaining.

Following the shot, the Medics lodged a claim protesting the basket and remaining seconds of play. The decision of this claim will be made by the league's president. He will decide whether the 70-69 decision will stand or if another game should be scheduled between the two clubs.

The victory gives The Student Brigade a 3-0 record while the Medics slipped into a three-way tie for second place with 10th Artillery and The Infantry Center Troop Command.

TSB Rallies

Finishing themselves on the short end of a 37-34 half time score, TSB rallied to knot the score at 51-51 mid-way in the second period. Both teams tried desperately to build up a lead. With five minutes left in the game, the Medics pulled ahead 59-56 only to have the Brigade men tie it for the seventh straight time.

With 52 seconds left in the game, Clinon Lee put TSB in the lead, 68-67. The Medics brought the ball up court with Bell setting up Deane for a running bookshot that swished through the nets and put the Medics back into the lead 69-68.

The clock showed 14 seconds left in the game as The Student Brigade put the ball in play, setting up Barclay's game-winning lay-up shot. Top scorer for The Student Brigade was Lee who hit for 22 points.

Once again the Medics' one-two punch of Bell and Deane grabbed top scoring honors with Bell pouring through 27 points and Deane pulling off 12 rebounds and hitting for 24 points.

Stop 29th Infantry

The nightcap saw another upset take place as the 10th Artillery downed the previously unbeaten 29th Infantry by a score of 82-75.

Ben Colston and Sim Glasco, who both scored 18 points, led the Artillerymen. Teammates Charles Barnett and Dwight Fullen also combined scores with both men netting 16 points for the 10th.

High man for the 29th Infantry was Jim Norsworthy who hit for 11 field goals and grabbed 11 straight at the free-throw lane.

Win First Game

In Friday night's action, Clarence Marble led the 151st Engineers to their first victory as they downed the 58th Infantry 72-64. Marble put on a superb individual performance by hitting for 14 field goals and four out of five shots at the free throw lane for 32 points in leading the Engineers to a come-from-behind victory.

Trailing 34-29 at the half, the Engineers tied the score mid-way in the second half at 53-53, on the strength of Marbles' six consecutive field goals. With about four minutes of playing time left, the elusive Marble scored on three straight jump shots to put the 151st in the lead by five points. Easome Smith and Bob Griffin then scored back-to-back to carry the Engineers to their first Major Unit victory.

High man for the 58th Infantry was John Walker who netted 21 points.

In the second game of the evening, Center Troop Command climbed back into contention with a decisive 89-46 win over a winless Lawson Army Air Command Team. TICTC's Herbert Charvis and Hudson Ray were more than LAAC could handle as Ray poured 35 points through the nets and Charvis ended his night's play with 24 points.

All-Post Team To Be Chosen By Players

A committee selected by officials of the Special Services Section at The Infantry Center will pick a team to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army Basketball Championships March 8-23.

Members of the committee will be chosen from players in the eight-team Major Unit Basketball League.

With the second half of the 1962-1963 league action in full swing, several players appear to be likely choices, dominating most of the play since the start of the season.

George Bell, a five - foot, seven-inch guard, heads the scorers in the second half. The southpaw ripped the nets for 43 points in leading the 428th Medical Battalion to a 104-103 double overtime victory in the first half championship fray.

Behind Bell in the scoring department is Jim Norsworthy. Norsworthy, a member of last year's Fort Benning team, heads the 10th Artillery team during the second half.

Clinton Lee is close behind in the scoring parade. Lee, a former track star at Toledo University, just missed setting the national low hurdles record in college.

Another standout has been Harold Deane. The former Virginia Tech player was a standout for the Medics during the first half of the season and appears to be well on his way to a fine second half performance.

Two more top performers this season are Hudson Ray and Herbert Chavis. Both play for Center Troop Command, runner-up for the first half title.

GREAT LAKES

The Great Lakes form the largest body of fresh water in the world and, with their connecting waterways, are the largest inland water transportation unit.

Bell Heads Post Scoring

George Bell, of the 428th Medics, is maintaining the lead as the Major Unit Basketball League's top scorer.

Bell, leading the league for the third straight week, has averaged 28.3 points per game to hold a slim one-point margin over second place Jim Norsworthy of the 29th Infantry.

Norsworthy, who has hit for 64 points and a 24 point average per game, leads in the foul-shooting department, hitting 18 of 19 from the free-throw lane.

Clinon Lee from Akron, Ohio, is in third place with 73 points and a 24.3 point average per game.

Fourth place is held by Artie Bain from the 29th Infantry who has netted 63 points and has a game average of 21 points.

Ex-Virginia star Harold Deane, is in fifth place with 60 points to bring his three game total to 20.0 points.

LOTS OF AREA . . .

The curve ball, delivered much the same as hook — lifted over the full line while hand turns counter-clockwise—covers considerably more alley than the hook. A curve is delivered from a position just left of the 1-pin. It is lifted out toward the 6-pin with the hopes that it will slice into the pocket. When properly delivered, it smashes between the 1 and 3-pins and chops into the 5-pin. It is this action which is required for a strike. Unlike the straight ball, which is easily deflected by the pins, the curve ball blasts into the pins and mixes them up.

All-Army Boxing Tournament Set In Washington

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Three military boxing tournaments sponsored by the Military District of Washington (MDW) will be held at Fort Myer, Va., in February and March.

The first tourney, the 2nd Annual MDW Invitational, is scheduled for Feb. 6-8. Last year this tourney attracted 90 service boxers from stations all over the world. Lt. Col. Leo F. Gaffney, MDW Special Services officer, expects this year's entry list to top 100. Bolling AFB mittmen, coached by "Pappy" Gault, will defend the MDW team championship.

The All-Army eliminations will be held Feb. 22-23, and the Annual Interservice Boxing Championships on March 6-8. All matches will be fought in Fort Myer's North Post gymnasium.

Items Join Air Display

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Small though they are, two items just added to the collection of the Smithsonian Institution's National Air Museum are unique in the history of manned flight.

They are the thermometer and barometer used by Dr. John Jeffries, the first American to fly in a free balloon, while making scientific studies of the earth's atmosphere in 1784 and 1785.

Jeffries' recorded data of altitudes of more than 9,000 feet brought him fame as "scientific discoverer of the trails which men still pursue, even into outer space."

But even without his pioneering research, his name would be secure in the annals of early flight, for Jeffries with his friend, the Frenchman Pierre Blanchard, on Jan. 7, 1785, made the first historic flight across the English Channel in a hydrogen balloon.

For the late 18th century it was a phenomenal feat. The two intrepid aeronauts ascended from Dover, England, at one in the afternoon and, traveling at 31 and one-half mph, came down at Calais two hours later.

Donor of the two items is Dr. James H. Means, son of a noted 19th century student of aeronautics. Dr. Means' wife was a direct descendant of Dr. Jeffries.

HIGHEST SCORE

In 1916 St. Viator (Ind.) defeated Lane College (Chicago) in one of football's highest scoring games, 205-0. Leo Schlick paced the victors by scoring 12 touchdowns and kicking 28 of 29 extra points, for a game-scoring record.

Ideals of Red Cross Spread in 100 Years

The American Red Cross Field Office here joins with the world-wide Red Cross movement this year to mark the centenary of its formation in Geneva, Switzerland, according to Harry L. McCulloh, field director.

"For the past 100 years," McCulloh said, "the two ideals basic to the Red Cross movement — preservation of human dignity and the prevention of suffering — have spread until they now are embraced by citizens and governments of nearly every country."

The basic Red Cross ideals, he pointed out, were first expressed by Henri Dunant, a Swiss businessman. Shocked by the sight of thousands of wounded he found untended in the wake of the Battle of Solferino, Italy, in 1859, Dunant described his experience in a book that was published three years later.

His book called for the formation of volunteer relief societies backed by "some international principle . . . sanctioned by a convention inviolate in character" to care for the wounded in wartime.

Geneva, 1863

In October, 1863, at Geneva, Switzerland, responding to Dunant's appeal, delegates from 16 European nations drew up a resolution that became the basis of the first "Geneva Convention for the Amelioration of the Conditions of the Wounded in Armies in the Field." This became international law the following year.

The volunteer societies Dunant foresaw now are the 96 national Red Cross, Red Crescent (in Moslem countries) and Red Lion and Sun (in Iran) societies.

In its 100-year span the Red Cross, born of war sufferings, has expended its humanitarian operations to bring relief to millions in time of peace, through its natural disaster aid and other programs, McCulloh said.

In the past year the American Red Cross, member of the League of Red Cross Societies, has participated in numerous operations of international character, McCulloh pointed out.

The latest of these was its role in moving medicines and food supplies to Cuba in exchange for prisoners of the ill-fated Bay of Pigs invasion attempt in 1961.

The American society also has participated in repatriation of thousands of refugees returned to their homes in Algeria after several years of wartime exile, has aided Iran and Turkish earthquake victims and thousands of families made homeless by floods in India, Pakistan and other areas.

Keeping Top People Services' Big Problem

BOSTON (AFPS) — The basic personnel problem of the Armed Forces is the attraction, development and retention in a career status of the expert professional personnel needed to handle the tasks of todays military structure.

Norman S. Paul, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, voiced this opinion in a speech to the Yale Club here.

"Needed as well," he added, "is the first-rate civilian who directly compliments his military counterparts in countless important ways.

He described the losses suffered by the Armed Forces when highly trained technicians; troop leaders and professional men leave the services. "While the problem continues to be serious," Paul explained, "I believe it is going to be solved in the long run."

This belief he based on two facts. First, the very nature and social image of the Armed Forces has undergone, and is undergoing, what leading military scholars have called "a basic trend formation."

Second, legislation with the objectives of bettering conditions of service has increasingly been in evidence in recent years, and more is on the way.

Today's officers and enlisted personnel are better educated, better informed, and better trained than their predecessors. They hold greater responsibility, and are broad and varied individuals possessing a familiarity with a greater range of occupation than at any previous time, he told the Yale men.

The secretary said that many things are being done to enhance military careers but emphasized that "this must be a continuing effort to prevent the waste of turnover in many areas of the Defense Department."

"To that end I believe there will be support for better housing programs, better family medical programs, higher travel, quarters, and relocation allowance, and most certainly, an improved pay scale for the services in general," he said.

The secretary noted the importance of these benefits in retaining personnel, and said, "Compensation will never be the whole story where professional service people are concerned, because money alone won't buy the type of dedicated sacrifice our country has always asked of its Defense forces.

"The test of whether or not we will continue to have the most effective Armed Forces in the world will depend ultimately on the motivation of the people involved in it. This is a combination of national and personal goals, of confidence in leadership and of a feeling that the efforts and sacrifices that the individual must make in serving his country, particularly in times of peace, are respected and recognized by the country as a whole."

Sound Call For Buglers

Company C, 4th Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, under the command of Capt. Jimmy W. Smith, is in the process of organizing a Drum and Bugle Corps.

Such a corps was organized approximately one year ago, but was terminated because of the lack of qualified personnel. The corps now needs qualified personnel that can perform in parades and full-honor ceremonies.

Enlisted men will be interviewed before being accepted into the corps. Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Drum and Bugle Corps must apply through appropriate channels of command.

President Asks Tax Cut, Federal Spending Slash

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy has asked Congress for three-year program of progressive tax cuts that could save taxpayers $8 billion this year and $10 billion annually by 1965. This tax cut, he said, would be accompanied by a slash in all Federal spending except for defense and space.

In his third nationally televised State of the Union message, the President said a tax cut is to stimulate the economy and create new jobs was "the most urgent task confronting Congress in 1963."

With Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin listening from his seat among the diplomatic corps on the President's left, Mr. Kennedy appealed to the Soviet Union to join with the West in easing tensions.

The President listed a number of particular ways in which the nation could be strengthened. Included were measures to increase facilities for training doctors and dentists, to assure the right of competent counsel in Federal court to every man regardless of his means, and to guarantee that the right to vote will not be denied any person on the grounds of race or color.

Other programs would modernize mass transportation systems, curb farm and stockpile surpluses, and expand the national parks and forests.

He also said that in Cuba, though the danger continues, the deadly threat of Soviet missiles and bombers has been removed.

In all, the President spoke for 42 minutes, before both houses in the packed House chamber. He was applauded a score of times during his message.

The state of the union, he said, is "good."

In the growing split between the Soviet Union and China he saw fresh evidence that Communism carries within itself the seeds of internal disintegration. He said the disagreement between Peking and Moscow was over means, not ends, and cautioned:

"A dispute over how best to bury the free world is no grounds for Western rejoicing."

Two Generals From Greece Visiting Post

Two general officers from the East Mediterranean republic of Greece arrived here Wednesday for three days of orientations and a tour at The Infantry School and Center.

Brig. Gen. George Zoitakis, chief of staff of B'Army Corps, and Brig. Gen. Nicolaos Karatzas, commanding general of the Greek Army's Heavy Weapons Training Center, will depart the post this morning.

The Allied generals' primary interest is in the organization, mission and functions of The Center and school.

Wednesday afternoon they were slated to visit Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, and receive briefings.

Thursday morning they saw a demonstration of Army tactics by an Infantry rifle company in attack.

Later Thursday they witnessed the Ranger Department's demonstration of hand-to-hand combat and saw officer candidates negotiate a leader's reaction course.

Gen. Zoitakis and Gen. Karetzas are planning to leave the post 9:25 a.m. Saturday.

TIC Credit Unit Schedules Meet

Charles E. (Chuck) Lyda of Columbus, past president of the Chattahoochee Valley Credit Union Chapter, will speak at the annual membership meeting of TIC Federal Union Tuesday.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Carpenters Union Hall, Broad and Ninth Street, Columbus.

Heading the business will be the election of the board of directors and special committees and a report of the year's activities. Directors have declared a 4.5 per cent semi-annual dividend for share holders of record Dec. 31, 1962.

Two $25 prizes will be given away at the meeting, according to Dock B. Slaughter, president of the local Credit Union.

Surgeon Says

Quiet Conversations Can End Bad Nerves

By 1st Lt. David L. Garber
Social Work Officer

"'My goodness, Sarah, you look down in the dumps today! Aren't you feeling well?'

"'I feel terrible Matilda! The doctor says he can find nothing physically wrong with me. I wonder if he thinks this pain is just my imagination? My husband says it is my nerves. I just don't know.'"

Does Sarah have "bad nerves?" It's hard to tell from this little bit of conversation heard over the backyard fence.

Most of us have heard or used the expression "bad nerves." In so doing, we are not referring to those anatomical wonders that make it possible for us to tell hot from cold, and which help our bodies to function adequately. The nerves that we are talking about are not made of body tissue, but they do affect the way we feel. To take this even further, they affect our ability to live adequate, useful lives.

Since "nerves" have such an important influence on our lives, we should look a little further into what they really are. Instead of saying they affect the way we feel, we should say they are our feelings.

People like Sarah who have "bad nerves" usually don't feel very good about many things. They may have a headache, a backache, or even a painful rash. If they examine their feelings about people, they will also find that they are very angry at someone or feel hurt or afraid. Often they find that they are angry at themselves.

One thing that most of these people have in common is that they are unable to do much about the feelings they have. They keep their feelings to themselves. They are angry and frustrated, as a result they sometimes feel depressed. These people are afraid, but they don't know why, so they become "nervous." It all adds up to a good case of "bad nerves."

Most people use "bad nerves" as a catch-all phrase for troubled feelings with which they are unable to deal. These feelings cause unhappiness and often make the every day routine seem impossible.

"Cures" are a dime a dozen. Anything from a back rub to "gin and tonic" are tried. Most "cures" help us feel better or people would not think that they were cures. But does a back rub really help us deal with the feelings that are giving us trouble? The answer is obvious.

Maybe we can find an answer by looking at it another way. Let's say that "bad nerves" are a warning that somewhere along the line our feelings or emotions are tangled. Since our feelings have so much to do with other people and situations, perhaps this is where we should begin to look. We cannot stop here; however. we must look at ourselves also. This will be hard for Sarah because she is only concerned with her pain. If her problem is "bad nerves," this is where she must begin if she wants to find a cure.

One of the best ways to find out what we are really like is to talk about ourselves. How we really feel, what in our lives bothers us. This way we begin to untangle some of the feelings that have tied us up.

We can begin by talking to ourselves, but another person is usually more helpful. Husbands or wives, our friends, the chaplain, even the commanding officer or first sergeant are good people to talk to about our feelings. Most of these people are more than glad to listen. Talking often relieves us because it gives us a better understanding of ourselves and the situation.

If we receive no relief from our talks with those around us, we can talk to professional counsellors. The specialist will help us to look at ourselves and recognize how we really feel.

Dahlonega Camp Work Completed

Company D, 806th Engineer Battalion (Const), recently completed the Mountain Ranger Camp project at Dahlonega, Ga.

This training project was a part of an annual maintenance and construction of the Mountain Ranger Camp facilities. This project was under the supervision of 2nd Lt. Edward K. Kobayashi and SFC Calude F. Billings, NCOIC.

The major portion of the construction work for the Dahlonega project was the enclosing of 34 tent frames. This consisted of placing roofs, sidings, and shutters on the existing frames which were previously covered with GP tents. The other construction work was the building of two latrines.

The earth-moving portion of repairing two and one - half miles of road of Yonah Mountain and one and one-half miles of road in the camp area. The Yonah Mountain Road was reshaped, drained by using diversion ditches and culverts, and graveled to provide a passable road during inclement weather. The roads in the camp area were graded, graveled and ditches cleaned to provide all weather gravel roads.

Polio Doses Must Begin This Month

To obtain complete polio immunizationbefore the onset of the polio season, immunization must begin before the end of January, according to officials here.

Military dependents who have not started immunization are requested to report Saturday from 8 to 11 a.m.

Sabin vaccine, which is administered by mouth in three doses at six-week intervals, provides a type of protection not available with Salk vaccine, officials said.

Salk vaccine protects the individual from contracting polio, but cannot prevent his becoming a carrier of the disease. Sabin vaccine not only protects the immunized individual from taking polio but makes it impossible for him to spread the disease to others.

Personnel previously immunized with Salk vaccine are requested to report to the clinic for Sabin vaccine.

CONARC Is Conducting Aerial Gunnery Training

FORT MONROE, Va. (ANS) —The U. S. Continental Army Command (CONARC) has announced that it is conducting a limited training program in aerial gunnery for Army aviators.

CONARC, single manager for Army training in the continental United States, is conducting the gunnery training, along with nap-of-the-earth flying techniques, at Camp Wolters, Tex., and Fort Sill, Okla., according to spokesmen for Army aviation activities. Gunnery training is given to students selected to fly observation-type helicopters during their normal course of training.

It was emphasized by CONARC officials that gunnery training is an additional qualification rather than a primary skill. In other words, the command is not training soldiers strictly as aerial gunners.

Training is being given with .30-caliber fixed machine guns mounted on reconnaissance and utility type helicopters. All training is in air-to-ground gunnery.

The Army for some time has been experimenting with armed aircraft, notably helicopters, and they have been employed in Viet Nam. The air cavalry troop of the new armored cavalry squadron employs armed helicopters as standard equipment.

Capt. Baker Takes Post At Airborne

Capt. A. J. Baker has been named chief of the Tower Training Sub-Committee, one of the four sub-committees in The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department at Fort Benning.

He succeeds Capt. Charrel F. Herron who has been assigned to the department's technical board.

In his new assignment, Capt. Baker, a veteran of three years service with the U. S. Air Force and almost seven with the Army, will be responsible for training students during the third week of the four-week basic airborne course.

Capt. Baker comes to the post from the 82nd Airborne Divisio, Fort Bragg, N. C.

He is a graduate of The Infantry School's officer orientation, airborne and Ranger courses.

He and his wife, Betty Louise, have a daughter, Terri Lynn, 10.

Band Cuts Commercial LP Record

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The U.S. Army Band will be represented on the long-play record market this spring with its first commercial disc, taped by RCA-Victor engineers here in Howard University's Cramton Auditorium.

The record was made possible after the AFL-CIO American Federation of Musicians was told that profits from it will go to the fund for the $30 million National Cultural Center. The center, sponsored by President and Mrs. Kennedy, will be built on the Potomac shore of the nation's capital.

Engineers who brought some 200 tapes to record a dozen selections by the band found its professional polish so high that, said a spectator at the recording session, "they only had to use about 50."

Department of Army Announces Changes in Volunteer Duty Policy

Personnel in grades E-1 to E-6 who hold approved volunteer applications for overseas assignment to Japan, Hawaii and Okinawa will have to resubmit them, according to a Department of the Army message redesignating overseas tour areas.

Previously it was possible to specify to which off the three the applicant wished to be sent. Now the volunteer can only specify that particular area. The choice is left to the needs of the service.

The three together, plus the Ryukyu Islands, constitute long tours in the U. S. Army Pacific area. This means that in certain instances enlisted men will be allowed to take their dependents. Long tours range from 24 to 36 months.

Another change affects volunteer applications to Laos, Thailand and Viet Nam. Formerly, applications for these areas had to be submitted through special channels. The change paves the way for submitting request through normal channels.

Personnel sent to these areas, which are designated short tours, will not be allowed to take their dependents. The normal length of short tours is about 12 months.

Would Grant High Medals In 'Cold War'

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Department of Defense is seeking legislation authorizing the award of major combat decorations for heroism in cold war fighting.

Introduced by Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance, the proposal would permit prompt recognition of the services and sacrifice of Armed Forces personnel involved in cold war actions. Present criteria authorize only the Bronze Star Medal for heroism or gallantry in this type of conflict.

The decorations involved are the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Navy Cross, Air Force Cross and the Silver Star.

Laws governing the award of these medals have traditionally been interpreted to apply only to distinguished service in actual conflict with an armed enemy of the United States.

As a result the awards generally have been made only in time of "hot" war.

The proposal would permit the awards to be made to members of the Armed Forces who perform heroic and gallant acts while serving as advisors or while assisting in the operations of friendly foreign forces engaged in armed conflict to which the United States is not formally a party.

'Tiny Tim' Is Retired

FT. EUSTIS, Va. (AFPS)—"The Mouse," "Saddle Back," "Mighty Mouse"—These are only a few of the names lavished by Transportation Corps troops on Tiny Tim, the little diesel-electric engine that has been retired at 20 from the Army.

Built in 1942, Tim wasn't exactly a cripple, but he did weigh only 45 tons—half the size of a regular diesel—and had only 300 horsepower and a top speed of 20 mph.

MTU-Air Force Meet Will Begin Shooters' Year

By Spt Ron Claxton

The Army Marksmanship Training Unit versus the U.S. Air Force in March will kick off a heavily laden marksmanship calendar for Match Headquarters here.

Rifle, pistol and automatic rifle teams of The Infantry Center's major commands are already in intensive preparation for competition in the Army's annual program.

Unit and battle group level matches are being completed and teams will begin practicing for The Infantry Center Rifle, Pistol and Automatic Rifle Championships slated for early April.

Following the post-level shoot, matches will include the Third Army Rifle and Pistol Championships in May, the U.S. Army championships in June and the Third Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Championships in September.

Much Promised

The snowballing effect, from lesser to greater, promises many new match records, new faces behind the guns and a basic skill — proficiency in firearms.

Since April, 1775, when "the shot heard round the world" was fired, the man behind the rifle has not changed.

What modern Army psychologists now call the "man-rifle" unit has endured through nearly 100 years and cam-

4 From Post To Represent U. S. in Brazil

At least four members of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit have earned spots in the rifle and pistol teams which will represent the U. S. in the 1963 Pan American Games, slated for Sao Paulo, Brazil, April 21-30.

SFC William Blankenship, national pistol champion, qualified for the Free Pistol Team. He will be joined by a trio from the Air Force.

Capt. Verle Wright, MSgt. William Krilling and 1st Lt. Lones Wigger all survived cut-off for the eight-man 300 meter and 50 meter rifle team.

An alumnus of MTU, Gary Anderson, who won three gold medals at the World Championship at Cairo last fall, was the top competitor in both events.

Col. Smith Succeeds Col. Smith

Lt. Col. Olin E. Smith assumed the duties of Infantry Center deputy chief of staff Monday, succeeding Lt. Col. Norvin E. Smith Jr.

The new deputy chief of staff comes to the post from the University of Omaha, Neb., where he spent from June, 1962, to January, 1963, completing requirements for a bachelor of science degree in education under the Army's Education Program.

The departing Col. Smith will go to the University of Omaha to complete his undergraduate degree work.

Col. Olin E. Smith was an instructor in The Infantry School Command and Staff Department in 1959. From 1960 until 1962 he served as secretary of the General Staff at The Infantry Center.

He and Mrs. Smith have three sons, Jim, 19, Bob, 15, and Steve, 9.

Col. Koch Honored by Chaplains

An annual appreciation certificate from the General Commission on Chaplains and Armed Forces Personnel in Washington D. C., was presented to Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., here Tuesday.

Col. Koch, commanding officer of The Student Brigade, received the coveted award accompanied by a letter, from the cooperative commission serving 33 Protestant denominations in services to all military chaplains and other Armed Forces personnel.

The award goes to that person on each military installation who in the opinion of the Protestant chaplains has rendered the greatest service to religious programs and activities.

The certificate stated that it is the desire of the 33 Protestant denominations to express appreciation to those religious laymen and laywomen who, by their creative service and devoted loyalty, make possible an effective religious program in the Armed Forces.

Col. Koch was cited for the high interest he took in the Protestant chapel program at The Infantry School.

During the past calendar year Col. Koch led the Protestant Chapel to its highest level of attendance.

The colonel also received a letter of congratulations signed by The Rev. Henry I. Louttit, Episcopal bishop and chairman of the General Commission, and The Rev. A. Ray Appelquist, executive secretary of the commission.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, made the presentation of the certificate.

Col. Koch came to Fort Benning in August, 1960, from the Military Assistance Advisory beside a stricken helicopter and evacuated crew members.

He then returned to the contested zone to rescue the copter's crew chief, who had not boarded the rescue craft.

The awards were made at a recent meeting of Fort Benning's chapter of the American Association of Army Aviators at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

During the meeting, Gen. Clarke told the aviators, "The true progress in any field of endeavor is made by an accumulative series of little plusses."

Aviation Problems

Gen. Clarke, during his speech, brought out some of the problems Army aviation meets today.

"He commented on the need for better aircraft, maintenance, proper tactics, answers to personnel problems, more funds and better salesmanship.

The general, a booster of Army aviation, also reviewed some of his experiences during World War II and Korea. He closed by saying, "You must remain enthusiastic members of the Army team, regardless of what developes. You are soldiers first and Army aviators second, and any other attitude can only set Army aviation back."

Other officers at the head table were Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding and Brig. Gen. J. T. Corley, both of the Second Infantry Division.

Col. Curtis L. Hankins, commanding officer of Lawson Army Aviation Command, introduced the officers and made closing remarks.

paigns. It has remained the key element to American victories from Lexington to Korea.

Enemy horror of the American rifle in combat has been the subject dwelled upon by countless military historians in writing of almost every major battle in which U. S. riflemen were engaged.

Fighting Man

A new definition of the future's fighting man is:

"The future combat soldier must be highly skilled, finely trained, tough, resourceful, extremely reliable and an effective fighting unit."

No combat veteran will deny the psychological boost received through knowledge that he was better with his rifle than any enemy. Neither will he deny that the presence of skilled and dependable riflemen on either flank was his greatest morale factor, regardless of the weapons in support behind him.

Competitive military marksmanship skill is meaningless unless it creates a universal understanding of the importance of the American soldier and advances his skill with his weapons, Gen. Paul D. Adams, commander - in - chief of the U. S. STRIKE Command, said to members of rifle and pistol teams at The Infantry Center for the All - Army championships in 1961.

"In our made rush to produce more effective planners and managers," Gen. Herbert B. Powell, commanding general of the U. S. Continental Army Command, told an audience at his recent retirement ceremonies at Fort Benning, "we must not overlook the even more important demand that we produce fighters, men who have the know-how, the physical strength and the guts to do the job when it boils down to just one man looking over the sights of a rifle at another man.

FORMER DCS HONORED . . . Lt. Col. N. E. Smith Jr., (L), former deputy chief of staff of The Infantry Center, is presented a Certificate of Achievement by Maj. Gen. PFC Collier Jump Class Honor Grad

The Infantry School awarded Parachutist Badges to 560 servicemen in ceremonies last Friday, climaxing four weeks of training for the newly qualified paratroopers.

Heading the class was PFC Arnsel M. Collier, who outscored a class that included 109 Army officers and 449 enlisted men, one U. S. Marine Corps enlisted man and a British Army officer.

The British officer was 1st Lt. D. O. Christie, a member of the Cameronians (Scottish Rifles), Lanark, Scotland.

Also included in the class were five sons of former military parachutists.

They were Pvt. Robert L. Reining, whose father, Robert Reining, of Akron, Ohio, served with the 82nd and 17th Airborne Divisions; Pvt. James C. Lee, whose father, William Lee of Pendleton, Ind., served with the 82nd; Pvt Gerald C. Lemaster, whose father, Gerald I. Lemaster of Arlington, Va., also was with the 82nd, and Pvt. Clifford D. Hamilton, son of Clifford E. Hamilton, Hastings, Mich., another veteran of the famed "All American Division."

Pvt. Lester H. Johnson's father, Lester E. Johnson of Wilmington, Calif., is the only parent of the class's second generation paratroopers who did not serve with the 82nd.

Former SSgt. Johnson saw his airborne service with the 11th Airborne Division, which gained famed in the South Pacific during World War II.

ARAS to Meet

There will be a meeting of the Association of Regular Army Sergeants Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the 2nd Infantry Division Noncommissioned Officers Open Mess. All members have been urged to attend.

U. S. Savings Bonds Wise Man's Refund

The new plan to give U. S. taxpayers the opportunity to take tax refunds in Savings Bonds is one that should prove a boon to individual citizens, as well as a constructive step in the direction of easing the Nation's debt management problem.

Public interest in this plan has been evident for a long time. A recent survey indicated that a significant number of taxpayers who received refunds last year might have taken them in Bonds if given the option. Individual taxpayers can benefit from the plan by making it a method of insuring that their refunds are not simply absorbed into household money, to vanish in day-to-day spending. The plan will permit the setting aside of the nucleus of a special fund for educating their children, planning for retirement, and the like. And for all taxpayers it represents an opportunity to own a real share in America while earning a good return on their money.

The Treasury hopes to benefit from the plan, too. At present more than 45 billion dollars in Series E and H Savings Bonds are outstanding, nearly one-sixth of the national debt. The Treasury is keenly interested in increasing the amount of money in Bonds, since every dollar in this type of security is a dollar less that the Treasury has to raise through the commerical banking system. The Treasury is also aware of the beneficial effect that Savings Bonds have in encouraging the habit of thrift and in helping to maintain economic stability in communities throughout the country.

Just as the Payroll Savings Plan has appealed to many people because it is an automatic way of saving, it is expected that the new tax refund plan will be popular for much the same reason. The Treasury hopes so.

It would be well for all citizens who are expecting tax refunds this year to consider seriously taking them in Savings Bonds — to benefit themselves and their country. A check mark in the proper place on the new tax forms can put you in an active role in supporting the Nation, and feathering your own nest at the same time.

Tomb of Unknown Viewed By Millions During 1962

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — About two and three-quarter million visitors, American and foreign, paid their respects at Arlington National Cemetery during 1962, the cemetery's annual year-end report revealed.

The visitors included over 100 delegations visiting the cemetery, one of the nation's most hallowed shrines, to lay wreaths at graves of honored dead.

Others came to present plaques and medals to the Unknown Soldier of WWI and his WWII and the Korean conflict.

During 1962, a daily average of 7,837 persons visited the cemetery where 116,500 servicemen and women and members of their families have been buried since it was established in 1864.

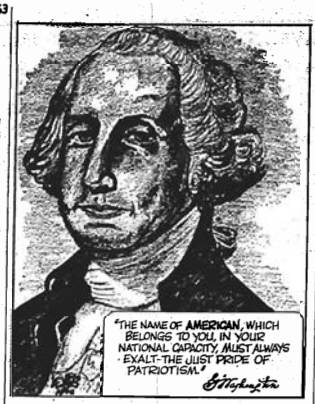
The cemetery area was once part of the estate of George Washington Parke Custis, the adopted son of George Washington and father - in - law of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

The Custis - Lee mansion, where Gen. Lee lived from 1830 to 1861, stands in the middle of the cemetery and is operated as a memorial by the National Park Service. It is open to the public year-round.

Ike Refused Top Medal

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower refused to accept the Congressional Medal of Honor while Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, arguing that "this has got to remain a medal for the soldier who comes to grips with the enemy at closer quarters," the First U. S. Army has revealed.

Later, when President, Eisenhower presented the Medal of Honor to a young war hero and said: "Son, I would rather have the right to wear this than be the President of the United States."



New Device Measures Tiniest Earth Movement

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — An instrument that can detect a distance change of as little as one-sixteenth of an inch between New York and Pasadena has been developed for the Air Force.

Called an extensometer, it is produced by Dr. Hugo Benioff of the California Institute of Technology under a contract with the Air Force Office of Scientific Research.

The Air Force said it was developed to measure strains in the earth's crust in the form of very long period waves that are produced by earthquakes and free vibrations such as are excited by earthquakes and tidal forces.

The extensometer consists of two long, fused quartz tubes set at right angles to each other and placed in the tunnels cut in the Sierra Navada Mountains 175 miles north of Pasadena.

One end of each tube is fastened to the rock wall of the tunnel while the free end writes its movement on a moving, time-correlated paper record.

Dr. Beinoff feels the sensitivity will be so great that the equipment also will be able to record the impact on the earth of radiation storms and perhaps indicate very faint gravitational waves predicted by Albert Einstein which nobody yet has been able to detect.

Duty-Free Importing Faces Cut

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The U. S. government has announced plans to block customs cheaters who send gift packages into the United States without paying duty.

Commissioner of Customs Philip Nichols Jr. proposed cutting the exempted value of gift parcels from overseas from the present $10 to $1.

The U. S. Treasury has lost considerable revenue because of widespread abuse of the exemption, Nichols said in a speech to the Federal Business Association of Maryland. He contended the reduction, all but wiping out the exemption, would virtually stop the flow.

Many cases of undervaluing or placing false invoices on parcels have been discovered, Nichols added, and mail-order parcels have been labeled as gifts.

Keeping in Condition Big Part of Our Job

A weapon, a machine, a vehicle — each is only as good as its care and maintenance. Neglect it at your peril — it may malfunction when you most depend on it.

Man Is the Ultimate Weapon — it's true even in this age of missilery and space marvels. The infantryman outranks his rifle, the pilot his plane, the astronaut his capsule.

It stands, then, that part of our job as members of the Armed Forces is keeping ourselves in good physical condition. We wouldn't be in uniform today if we hadn't been physically qualified when we entered the service. The doctors found us sound in mind and body then. How do we measure up now? Is President Kennedy's call for physical fitness aimed at us — or, rather, aren't we expected to exemplify its standards for the rest of our fellow Americans? You can bet we are!

True, it's not easy in all cases. Many of us are veterans of WWII, which means that we've reached middle age or stand on the threshhold of it. But just because we can't keep up with the kids in every department doesn't mean we can allow ourselves to go to pot through overindulgence in food or drink and lack of exercise. If we do that we're not only letting the service down; we're hurting ourselves.

All perfectly obvious and undeniable, you say. But look around you and ask yourself how many of the people you serve with could do with some determined dieting or physical conditioning through sports and games. If you're in a combat unit you will probably see few physically unfit men indeed. But a lot of us today have desk jobs more remote from programs of organized athletics. And for some of us it's wintertime — hibernation time.

So, after looking around us, let's forget about the other fellow and take a good hard look at ourselves. (AFPS)

Infantry School Report

MEETING COMMANDER
Col. and Mrs. Koch
Greet Student's Wife

No raccoon skin coats or coeds are in sight, but The Infantry School, like most large universities, definitely has a campus.

Actually, the 2nd Student Battalion in both home and campus to over 6,000 United States and Allied student officers who attend The Infantry School annually. Ranging from newly commissioned second lieutenants to field grade officers, the students attend one of nine officer courses included in The Infantry School curriculum, such as the Career, Associate Career Orientation, Communications, and specialist or familiarization courses.

It is the important mission of the 2nd Student Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Vern L. Joseph, to administer and support these officer classes.

The battalion consists of seven detachments, five of which administer students attending the Orientation Course. The remaining two detachments administer all other courses.

The primary function of all these detachments is to "support the student." This to devote maximum time and effort to his course of study. This is more important, because it is during these courses that the foundation is laid for future career development of the individual officer.

Another important part of the mission is to provide assistance and guidance to students who encounter personal or academic problems.

Orient Course

As the first duty organization for thousands of newly commissioned second lieutenants, the 2nd Student Battalion performs not only a large but also a very complex job. These officers come to Fort Benning to attend the nine-week Infantry Officer Orientation Course. They come from various colleges and universities throughout the nation and from the U. S. Military Academy.

A typical class may include members of the National Guard, Reserves, and Allied Officers, in addition to ROTC and Military Academy graduates. Students from the Adjutant General Corps, the Army Intelligence Corps and Judge Advocate General Corps also may round out the composition of a class.

All receive instruction at The Infantry Schol in leadership and the latest developments in weapon and tactics. Much of their instruction is devoted to practical application of essential military skills.

The job of processing and supporting the Orientation Course students falls to Capt. George C. Davis, Capt. Jerry W. Hendry, 1st Lt. Carl Coapstick, 1st Lt. Melvin L. McAllister and 1st Lt. Billy R. Prestridge, the detachment commanders.

However, another big aspect of their mission is to ensure that the stay of the student officer's wife and family is a pleasant one. This is made possible by a varied social program.

With the excellent support and assistance of the spouses of cadre officers, the new Army wives accompanying their husbands to Fort Benning are introduced to Army life through a program of orientation, tours, coffees, luncheons, receptions and class parties.

Capt. John M. Hall, commanding Detachment 1, and Capt. Wade Herring, commanding Detachment 2, perform an equally important job for students attending other Infantry School officer course. Included among these is the Infantry Officers Career Course, which brings approximately 400 officers to the 2nd Student Battalion annually to pursue a 35-week program of instruction.

Included as students in this class, along with Infantry officer, are representative from Armor and other branches of the Army, Allied students and members of the U. S. Marine Corps.

This course provides branch training and knowledge in the duties and responsibilities of Infantry officers at various levels of command. The course also qualifies them as nuclear weapons employment officers. While attending the CAR course, the student officer has no duties or responsibilities that would interfere with his studies or class attendance.

Prior to detail as a CAR student, the officer must be a member of the Active Army with a minimum of three years and preferably not more than eight years of commissioned service. An officer is selected by his branch career management agency.

The course demands the best in study habits. It is designed to stimulate the thinking and broaden the general military background of the student through presentations by experts in various military and associated academic fields that are of national and international interest.

The CAR student receives some 1556 hours of training. Emphasis is placed on command and leadership, tactics, weapons, and staff procedures. This course of instruction is the last purely branch training the officer will receive in his military career. This is one reason why the course is demanding and why it is so important to the individual officer.

Allied Students

As mentioned, members of the armed forces of other nations attend courses at the Infantry School, and normally each class has a number of Allied students. These students have been elected with a view toward maximum utilization of the knowl-

Women-of-the-Chapel Hear a Talk About the Iron Curtain Countries

The Fort Benning Women-of-the-Chapel heard a discussion recently of various aspects of Russia as seen by Frank Jordan of Macon, who was among Georgia farmers who toured the Iron Curtain country in April and May.

The presentation was highlighted by over 150 photographic slides taken during the Mercer University graduate's trip.

Jordan, who in addition to being a prominent peach grower, is also a member of the board of trustees of Mercer. He was introduced by Infantry Center Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker.

The trip was at the invitation of agricultural officials of the Communist country. Russian farmers were supposed to make a similar tour of Georgia.

Jordan said the Russians' trip was scheduled for October and November, however, it was canceled due to the Cuban crisis.

72nd Lecture

He began the session, his 72nd such lecture since returning, by describing the country as a land of paradoxes and mystery.

"What the Russians say, do and think is of great importance to the world because of their stated intentions of world domination," he said, adding that this is sufficient reason for U.S. citizens to know something of the people and their way of life.

Jordan also described the country's standard of living as being low, and showed a number of slides that supported this, particularly in the field of agriculture where mismanagement of the collectivized farm system, lack of incentives and antiquated equipment have combined to produce a low crop yield.

During the trip, the group visited a Moscow Department store, reputed to be the world's largest. Jordan and the other members found goods to be scarce, quality poor and most prices beyond the range of the average Russian.

Commenting on the Russian citizen, he said he found they like Americans in general, and are eager to imitate western ways, particularly in styles and fashions.

Church Crowded

At a Sunday worship service in a Baptist church in the heart of Moscow, Jordan found there are many Russians who are sincere Christians and sincerely desire to attend religious services.

He told of attending this service in a church that was designed to hold 1,000 people. The building was extremely crowded and the minister estimated the gathering at over 2,500.

"This was indeed inspiring," he told the Fort Benning women.

He cited various other deficiencies in the Russian standard of living, mentioning among other things a housing shortage. Jordan told of seeing an apartment building in which the units consisted of three rooms shared by two families, one in a room with the central one shared as a kitchen.

After they left Russia they went to Poland where conditions were considerably better.

However, he said not to be misled because it apparently isn't the Communist system that adds to the better standard of living.

He pointed out that 88 per cent of the farms in Poland are privately owned, and as a result of the presence of this personal incentive, the agricultural yield is much higher.

Gen. Norstad Lauds NATO Unity, Power

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Gen. Lauris Norstad says the North Atlantic Treaty Organization he headed for six years could respond immediately to any Communist attack, conventional or nuclear, and that the response could be instanteous.

"I am thinking now in terms of an all-out attack of some kind. There would be no problem at all," he said.

He added, "The Communists would have, one way or the other, by military or other means, moved forward in Europe had there not been a NATO."

Praising his former commander, Gen. Norstad said the promptness and the positive manner in which the NATO Council supported President Kennedy's Cuban quarantine was a moving experience.

"I think it was a very moving experience from their (the members') own standpoint, and should have moved the people of the United States," he said.

"This was proof of unity when unit was really important."

President's Budget Asks $53.7 for Defense

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The defense portion of the fiscal budget for 1964 presented to Congress by President Kennedy amounts to $53.7 billion.

About half the increase is accounted for by proposed military pay increases boosting expenditures about $100 million per month during the legislation's first 12 effective months. Added to that is the increased quarters allowance and the cost of increased retirement pay to those persons who will retire after the pay raise goes into effect.

The budget was developed primarily in terms of combat missions. Related missions of the various services have been considered together for budget purposes.

For example, the Navy's Polaris program is linked with the Air Force's Minuteman program instead of being tied with the Navy's shipbuilding program.

Strategic nuclear forces, continental air defense, tactical ground, sea and air forces and research and development are the four major categories.

The first category includes procurement of additional Polaris submarine and Minuteman missiles and continuation of RS-70 aircraft development.

It is further planned to provide, by calendar year 1966, a total strategic force including over 700 B-52 and B-58 bombers carrying more than 50 Hound Dog missiles, more than 1,100 ICBM's, and over 500 Polaris missiles.

The second category contains expenditures of $425 million for anti-missile missile systems and other continental defense measures.

The objective of the third category is to increase capability to meet the requirements of war, short of all-out nuclear war, with a balanced force. This means balancing equipment with men, airlift with equipment and men to be moved, and air support with combat divisions requiring such support.

The result will be a substantial increase in expenditures for Army equipment and munitions to a total $3.3 billion.

A 21 tactical aircraft wing program is desired. Airlift procurement will be stepped up to about 20 per cent above that of the current fiscal year and more than two and a half times the level of FY '61.

Defense is planning to build 80 new ships and convert 34 old ones. This excludes the Polaris submarines which are included in strategic nuclear forces.

This mission continues to emphasize increased readiness of Reserve and National Guard units.

Expenditures for research and development activities in all three services will be about twice the FY '62 amount. The new budget allows over $5 billion in this category.

Army research and development will be primarily of weapons associated with anti-guerrilla and anti-subversive operations. In the Navy the emphasis will be on anti-submarine warfare and in the Air Force on missile development and space systems.

U.S. History Rewritten By Soviet

MUNICH, Germany (AFPS) — An Englishman, not Christopher Columbus, discovered America, according to Russian geographer Dr. Samuel Varshavsky.

He claims that the real father of America was Nicholas of Lynne, who made his trans-Atlantic voyage in 1360 — more than a century before Columbus.

After studying old maps and documents, Varshavsky claims that the trip was first described by Lynne in Latin but that unfortunately the original manuscript was lost. However, excerpts from it have appeared in the works of later authors.

UNITED STATES ARMY READY FORCE

ROAD Simplified:

Alaska's Battalions Added to 9th, 23rd

By Peter Tatistcheff

The first major step in reorganizing the 2nd Division under the Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) concept is set to be completed—today when members of the 9th Infantry and the 23rd Infantry parade for the first time in brigade formation, in three battalions.

For some, the new names will provide a temporary confusion.

But it should not be too long before everyone concerned knows just what unit he belongs to. Preparations which began in early January will leave no unit without colors or unit history, and the changeover will require no retirement of colors.

Before Changeover

In brief, this is what happened. Before the changeover, the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry; and the 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry, were assigned to the 2nd Division. At the same time the 1st Battle Groups, 9th and 23rd Infantries were in Alaska.

The 2nd Battle Groups, 9th and 23rd Infantries, were redesignated as battalions. The 1st Battle Groups, also redesignated as battalions, migrated (on paper) from Alaska to Fort Benning. Three of the four resulting battalions, as of today, are organic to the 2nd Division and attached to a tactical and operational headquarters known as Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade.

This 3rd Brigade, therefore, consists of a Brigade headquarters with three attached battalions — the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 9th Infantry; and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry. According to a recent release, the remaining battalion (2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry) "will receive its full complement of men later as the division reorganization progresses."

An interesting historical note: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, to which these battalions are attached, descends from the old Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Infantry Brigade, an original part of the 2nd Division in 1917. It was inactivated in 1939 when the division was converted from the square to the triangular organization of three regiments.

Matters of acquiring unit histories, colors, guidons and trophies will be settled in the near future, with an assist from the U. S. Army Support Command in Philadelphia, which will issue base flags (flags without insignia, motto, or unit designation) and blank guidons as required.

Colors and trophies for the newly designated battalions will be adopted automatically from the old battle groups though there is some speculation that the 9th Infantry's renowned Liscum Bowl trophy may arrive from Alaska with an escort.

Liscum Bowl Coming

The Liscum Bowl, designed and smelted in 1902, dates back to the Boxer Rebellion in China, and is named after Col. Emerson H. Liscum, a

And It'll Be Tough

Anti-Guerrilla Course Set

BY COLIN HIGGINS

As headlines tell of the fight against guerrillas in Viet Nam, plans are going forward for tough counter-guerrilla, counter-insurgency training in the 2nd Division.

SUDDENLY IT'S ZERO . . . Sp4 Morgan F. Abney came to work one morning last week in the 2nd Division Trains motor pool to find these eerie "ice angels" formed overnight as water showered from a broken pipe in recent freezing weather.

A committee set up in answer to a Continental Army Command directive on counter-insurgency training has been working over the past months setting up the new training area and preparing the training schedule. Beginning Monday, companies will start going through the week - long course.

New Course Goal

The purpose of the new "Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course" is to teach the smaller infantry units the tactics of action and reaction when confronted with guerrilla type warfare. Special emphasis will be placed on the individual soldier. Tough and realistic training that can be applied in any type of terrain, either arctic or tropical, will be the prome objective of the course.

This objective is reflected in the new shield created especially for the course. It consists of the 2nd Division patch with the Indianhead replaced with mountains, crossed machetes and a hissing cobra.

The training, which will be developed into an annual cycle, will be taken by one company over a full week period. The company will go to the recently developed training area K-11 of the Fort Benning reservation where for the first three days they will undergo station type instruction lectures, conferences and demonstrations. The last two and a half days will be spent in the practical application of what they have been taught.

On Monday a company from the 1st Infantry will be the first to undergo the new train-

On the sergeant major's agenda will be the dedication of the 26th Infantry's trophy room and a review in honor of the battle group's organization day.

Also in attendance for the ceremonies will be Maj. Gen. John F. Ruggles, the oldest former "Blue Spader" still on active duty, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Division Commander and a

For Retirees

Elements Salute End To Pentomic Division

As the band played "Auld Lang Syne" to the twelve retiring members of the division at the review Monday it was also playing a farewell to the old pentomic structure of the 2nd Division.

The miniature review, held at the division headquarters parade field, was the last review under the old organization. Future reviews will be organized on the battalion structure as outlined in the ROAD reorganization, and the old battle-group division will be no more.

Monday's review was held to honor twelve members of the division retiring after completing more than 20 years service.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, congratulated the retirees and shook hands with each of them. A congratulatory message from Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, the Army chief of staff, was read and Gen. Billingslea added his own personal thanks and those of the division for the "fine service rendered."

Col. Frederick V. Harris, deputy brigade commander, was the commander of troops and he led the participating units as they passed in review.

Four of the twelve retirees were officers. They are Maj. Francis C. Whitcomb, 37th Artillery; CWO John D. Callahan, 702nd Ordnance Battalion; CWO Homer White, 2nd Quartermaster Company; and CWO, W2 Theodore W. Whipple, 122nd Signal Battalion.

The enlisted men are: SFC Lester Halpern, 38th Infantry; SFC William R. Cleveland, 69th Armor; SFC Clarence A. Paul, 12th Artillery; SFC Thomas W. Reese, 26th Infantry; SFC Obed D. Riley, 12th Artillery; SSgt. Issac Chavez, 27th Artillery; SSgt. Sebastian S. Pynes, 702nd Ordnance Battalion; Sp5 Edward J. Filipzuk, Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Artilleryman Tops Benning Course

By DivArty PIO

An artilleryman from Headquarters Battery, 37th Artillery, recently completed the personnel records course at the Adjutant General School at Fort Benning with the highest score in the class.

PFC Marvin R. Bays finished the course with a score of 99 per cent, with approximately 40 other men in the class.

PFC Bays, a native of Sandusky, Mich., was inducted into the Army in January 1962, took basic at Fort Knox and advanced training in artillery at the U. S. Army Artillery and Missile School at Fort Sill, Okla.

He arrived at Fort Benning in May 1962, going immediately to Battery B of the 37th, where he was a member of the gun section. An opening in the personnel section last August led to his being transferred to Headquarters Battery.

former wartime commander of the 3rd Battalion, 26th Infantry.

Sgt. Maj. Dobol is considered to be the ranking noncommissioned officer in the Army. He entered military service in May of 1938 and after a short tour of duty in Panama joined the 26th Infantry in 1940 to begin a stay that was to last for 22 years. While with the 26th Infantry, Dobol held every enlisted rank from private to sergeant major. He fought with the Blue Spaders throughout WW II earning four Silver Stars, the Bronze Star Medal with "V" Device, and five Purple Hearts for wounds suffered on the battle fields of Europe and North Africa. He has also been honored by foreign nations with the French Croix de Guerre and both the French (Medaille Militaire) and Belgian Fourragerres.

Sergeant Maj. Dobol left the 26th in August 1962 to assume his present duties as sergeant major of the 1st Infantry.

New Spader-Built 'Pad' Baptised at Kelley Hill

By 26th Infantry PIO

A new landmark was baptised by a helicopter recently at Kelly Hill.

Guiding in for a landing near 26th Infantry Headquarters at Kelley Hill, Lt. F. J. Otte of the 2nd Aviation Company, piloted his H-13 helicopter to a new landing pad constructed by 26th Infantry engineers.

Giving the "pad" an extra touch, the engineer platoon, under the leadership of M-Sgt. John L. Sale, embedded a concrete "Spade" in the landing circle. The rest of the landmark consists of concrete slabs sunken into specially leveled terrain.

The majority of the work was performed by the platoon's first squad, led by SFC James R. Baker and SSgt. Everett Johnson.

It is expected that the new landing pad will greatly facilitate the guiding in of rotary wing aircraft using the Kelley Hill area.

MRS. JONES PINS 'EAGLES' ON NEW COLONEL
Col. Jones (C) Promoted in Office of Maj. Gen. Billingslea

DivArty Commander Upped To Colonel at Headquarters

The commander of the 2nd Infantry Division's combat artillery punch was promoted to the rank of colonel Monday in ceremonies at division headquarters.

New silver "eagles" were pinned on Col. Ralph K. Jones by his wife, Evelyn, and Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, in whose office the ceremony took place.

Congratulated

Following the presentation, congratulations were offered the new colonel by Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley and by the division chief of staff, Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr.

Col. Jones has been at Fort Benning since July 1961 when he came to the 2nd Division as commander of its 15th Artillery. Following this, he served for a time as division assistant chief of staff G-1, and later an executive officer of the division artillery. It was from this position that he assumed command of artillery on January 14.

A 1943 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., Col. Jones is also a graduate of the Command and General Staff Col[illegible], Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and of the basic and advanced artillery courses at Fort Sill, Okla.

Receiving his second lieutenant's commission during World War II, the colonel was sent overseas and participated in the Central Europe, Ardennes and Rhineland campaigns. He holds the Bronze Star Medal.

Col. Jones and his wife have two sons, Patrick, 18, and Michael, 15, and a daughter, Nancy, 13.

former 9th Infantry Regiment commander who gave the unit their motto, "Keep Up the Fire."

The original Bowl is valued in excess of $50,000, weighing 90 pounds. Its capacity is 14 gallons, including a bowl decorated with four imperial dragons for handles, a ladle and a heavy circular tray.

It is also possible that the 23rd Infantry's massive Korea Bowl, cast from Combat Infantryman's Badges earned in Korea, might be brought to Fort Benning.

This giant silver bowl, made by silversmiths in Japan and set on a teakwood stand, was finished in April 1952 and has been in Alaska with the 1st Battle Group, 23rd Infantry.

To help out with historical implications in the current changeover, the Chief of Military History in Washington, will prepare and furnish automatically unit certificates of lineage. This particularly applies to the 4th Battle Groups, 9th and 23rd Infantries being activated in Alaska to replace the 1st Battalions now at Fort Benning.

Technically, here's what has happened on Sand Hill, home of the old 9th and 23rd Infantries. Three battalion areas have been made out of what were formerly two battle group areas. The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, remains in the old 9th Infantry area. The other two battalions are now located in the old 23rd Infantry area below Bourg Avenue. Third Brigade is working out of what was once 23rd Infantry Headquarters.

When the units parade today they will be led by new commanders. Commanding the 3rd Brigade will be Col. Lucien F. Keller, former 23rd Infantry commander. In command of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, is Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, former deputy commander of the 9th Infantry. The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry is commanded by Lt. Col. John H. Cochran, former 2nd Division Brigade executive officer. The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry is commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson, former deputy commander of the division's 1st Infantry.

Course

ing. It will begin with a short introduction and briefing and then pass on to the first set of stations — survival, shelter and field craft, arctic and tropical first aid, and the Mechanical Compass Course. After a break for lunch the company will spend the afternoon at Land Navigation. Another break for supper and the preparation of the bivouac area will be followed by the Night Compass Course.

Includes Mountaineering

The second day's schedule includes Mountaineering, Aerial Resupply, Introduction to Counter - Guerrilla Operations and Patrolling. At night there will be the Conduct of the Combat Patrol.

The third day of training will see the company being trained in ambushes and counter-ambushes with squads and platoons participating in immediate action drills.

38th Arty Records 6-Yr. Reenlistment

By 38th Artillery PIO

Adding six years to his military career recently was Sgt. Nemesio Torres-Paris of Battery A, 38th Artillery.

The reenlistment ceremony took place in the office of battery commander, Capt. William F. Doherty.

The sergeant is a native of Puerto Rico and came to the 38th in 1960 following service in Germany.

The company problem will be conducted on the last three days of training. It is designed to bring out the points taught during the first three days. Like the rest of the course, this section is intended to be as realistic as posible.

Lt. Col. William E. Conger, executive officer of the 26th Infantry, is in charge of the counter-insurgency program.

By 1st Infantry PIO

Sp4 Lewis E. Wood, Company C, 1st Infantry, recently took the oath of allegiance for his first reenlistment. Sp4 Wood took the oath for an additional six years to fill his own vacancy as fire team leader in Company C.

In the ceremony held at battle group headquarters, Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Infantry commander, presented him with his honorable discharge.

This Morning Began With a Call—'Alert'

By 38th Artillery PIO

Editor's Note: In mid-January Battery A, 38th Artillery participated in a tactical "alert," one of the many tests of a unit's readiness for any emergency, including all conditions of war. This is an account of what happened when the alert was triggered.

"THIS IS A TACTICAL ALERT . . ."

At approximately 5 a.m. those members of Battery A, 38th Artillery, accustomed to "late" sleeping in their quarters, heard telephones ringing and knew it could only be an emergency.

It was. The message was brief and urgent: "This is a tactical alert, report to your post."

Within forty-five minutes 100 percent of the present for duty personnel were assembled in the battery area, inspected for proper field equipment and moving to their section rooms and vehicles. Following diligently the loading plans for their sections the section chiefs supervised the loading of equipment.

The advance party moved out at 6:10 a.m. in the icy darkness to the tactical assembly area. Other elements of the battery, following hastily drawn strip-maps, departed within the next twenty minutes. Lt. John S. Dallas, Jr. led the track vehicle element into the area at approximately 7 a.m.

Camouflaging Complete

As dawn broke in the area, the camouflaging was complete and automatic weapons had been posted in mock defense. Chiefs of sections passed the tactical situations on to their men.

Breakfast was served but the pace was not slowed. An inspection was held by the battery commander and executive officer to determine if the complete table of equipment was present. Individual duffel bags and field packs were inspected.

"Again the reconnaissance part moved out and awaited in another area for the battery. Within minutes the battery moved to the reconnoitered firing position and began sending artillery fire missions to test cannoneers, communications and fire direction skills. The accuracy of gunners, chart operators and recorders was checked and the morning exercise continued to move on in an air of urgency.

An additional mission was given to the battery at this time. The presence of guerrilla forces in an area not far from their present position had been confirmed. The battery was to conduct a guerrilla sweep of a specified area while at the same time accomplishing their primary artillery firing mission.

Two maneuver forces under the command of SFC John S. Mauldin and SFC Eduardo Perez were organized and briefed. Another force under Sgt. Nemesio Torres-Paris with automatic weapons moved out to cover with machinegun fire the road adjacent to the area through which the two maneuver teams would sweep.

Into Guerrilla Area

At a prearranged time the two maneuver groups moved out through the guerrilla infested area driving the mock aggressors to cross the road already covered with automatic weapons. When the two groups reached the road the aggressor guerrilla force had been driven from the area and neutralized by accurate and concentrated fire.

Although it was now lunch time, the fire missions continued to be processed and artillery support delivered on schedule, the men eating in shifts.

Prior to returning to garrison and the conclusion of the test the battery commander signalled a gas attack and concurrently the executive officer ordered that the fire mission would go on with gas mask worn.

Arriving back in their quarters that evening, men of Battery A went to bed ready for a long uninterrupted sleep. After all, they confided, no one would call a tactical alert two days in a row, at least not when the initial test proved such a success. The telephone wouldn't ring early tomorrow . . . or would it?

VISITING THE DIVISION . . . Brig. Gen. Fillmore K. Mearns, XVIII Airborne Corps Artillery commander, (L), accompanied by Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, (C), and Col. Ralph K. Jones, division artillery commander, (R), arrives at division headquarters for a briefing. Gen. Mearns later toured division artillery before returning to Fort Bragg, N.C.

Once a Brahma Bull Rider, Now He's a Mural Painter

COWBOY, FLYER, AND PAINTER
87th's Sp4 Lawrence Vercelotti

By 87th Inf. PIO

A lonely cowpoke and his horse contemplate the vastness of the West in the mess hall mural of Combat Support Company, 87th Infantry.

This mural is testimony to just one of the many talents and accomplishments of a chart operator for the fire direction center of the mortar platoon, Sp4 Lawrence Vercellotti.

A native of Illinois Sp4 Vercellotti was born in Joliet, near Chicago, in 1937, and raised in the city of Lockport close by. A varsity letterman for three years, he graduated from high school at 17. Discontented and dissatisfied with the flat farmlands and industrial cities of the Mid-west he took the advice of Horace Greeley and so this young man went west.

'Go West, Young Man'

Having limited financial resources, he found that he had just enough money to take him to Pueblo, Colo. He knew no one in Colorado, in fact he had never heard of the name Pueblo before. But it was on the eastern edge of the Rocky Mountains, cow country, and 'Out West', besides, he liked the sound of the name. So he paid his fare, hopped the bus and travelled toward the setting sun.

Arriving in Pueblo, the young Mid-westerner went knocking on doors looking for a job. Luck was with him and in a couple of days he landed a job on the "Tripple R Ranch"—a cattle ranch sprawling over 25,000 acres, boasting a herd of over 1,500 prime white-faced Hereford cattle and a remuda of 200 horses. Spending the last money, he bought a Stetson hat, chaps, and a pair of boots and so made the transition from 'dude' to cowboy.

Throughout the summer and into the fall he worked as a cowpoke, taking part in the summer and fall roundups. But college beckoned and, turning in his saddle, he made the trip back home.

Entering Lockport Junior College, Vercellotti modestly admits "dabbling" in psychology. But his prime interest now was flying. Achieving his first solo flight when still 17, he soon became an accomplished pilot and has today logged over 30,000 miles.

The West however was not forgotten. Through 1956 to 1959 he took up rodeoing and became moderately successful in the Mid-west Rodeo Circuit in his specialty — Brahma bull riding.

After much travelling Vercellotti found that the sunshine and ocean of California were best suited to his taste and so at the age of 21 he went West again, this time to settle. He married a girl from California and took a job with United Airlines as a passenger agent at Los Angeles International Airport.

Sp4 Vercellotti entered the service as a recruit in the 87th under the old Overseas Replacement Program. Besides being chief decorator and art consultant of Combat Support Company and a crack chart operator in the fire direction center of the mortar platoon, his numerous awards and distinctions as a soldier include: acting platoon sergeant in Basic Training; second place in the company rifle competition; outstanding soldier in Asvanced Infantry Training; and the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

After completion of his military service Sp4 Vercellotti plans to return to California and a job as sales agent for United Airlines.

After completing the Basic Officer Course and the Basic Infantry Officer Course at Fort Benning, Col. Conger was assigned to the 5th Infantry Regimental Combat Team and served with this unit until 1951, rising to the position of company commander. In Korea he earned a Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal, Combat Infantryman's Badge, and the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation. A Communist shell sent him to the hospital and added the Purple Heart to his list of decorations.

Returning to the states, he made his second visit to Fort Benning, this time as a member of the Ranger Committee. He stayed at Benning until 1954, completing the Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

Col. Conger served as Army Attache to Austria, as tactical officer at the U. S. Military Academy, and as a training officer in Viet Nam before coming to the famed "Blue Spaders" of the 26th Infantry. His arrival at the 26th Infantry marks his third visit to Fort Benning. Col. and Mrs. Conger are currently residing at Fort Benning with their three children, Betsy, Carroll, and Julia.

He Bakes the Cake When Division Throws a Party

By 87th Infantry PIO

Many people, especially men of the 87th Infantry, have enjoyed the cakes which appear both on battle group and on division holidays. But not many are familiar with their creator, SFC Ernst Jaeger of Company A.

Those who are familiar with his productions, however, know that there are probably few men in the Army or out who can apply as much skill not only to the cake itself but to the decorative icing as well.

Experienced

SFC Jaeger's skill is based on experience which goes back to the time he was apprentice to a baker at the age of 9. Until 1942 he worked for various civilian enterprises, such as the South Dakota Olympic Commissary. With the advent of war, he enlisted in the Navy where his knowledge of baking was so highly praised he was made an instructor at the Navy Cooking and Baking school at Norfolk.

Out of the Navy in 1945, he managed a supermarket for a time and then decided to re-enter the service, this time the Army, in 1947. Since then he has been in Korea, with the 121st and 31st Evacuation Hospital Detachments, and in Japan with the 342rd General Hospital Detachment.

In 1954 he joined the 87th Infantry and has been with it ever since.

Sergeant Chosen for Amphibious Training

A staff sergeant of Company A, 87th Infantry, SSgt. Clayton G. Creech, has been chosen for special training at the joint Navy-Marine Corps Amphibious training unit at Little Creek, Va. Sgt. Creech recently joined the company from a previous assignment in Alaska.

Upon completion of this training, he will join three others in Company A, Lt. Arthur A. Ullman, 1st Sgt. George E. Wells and Sgt. Joseph D. Fish, in his special qualification in preparation for landing operations.

The amphibious training Sgt. Creech will receive will be primarily in the field of combat loading of all the types of vessels employed by the U. S. in landing operations, rather than in the tactics of landing. The problems he will deal with consist mainly of mathematical computation of loads and the order and location the various items must be stored in to insure quick and efficient unloading at the critical time of an actual landing.

Sgt. Creech will add this skill to a long list acquired at many Army schools. He is no newcomer to amphibious operations, having served during World War II with the Marine Corps.

In the Army since 1948, he has attended Military Police and Intelligence School in Germany, Supply Records Technician School at Fort Lee, Va., and during a four-year tour in Alaska, was an instructor in mountain and glacier climbing. In addition, he was a rifle team coach for four years.

A New Captain Joins Operations

Recently returning from a three-year tour in Europe, Capt. Fred P. Wisenbaker has been assigned to the 17th Artillery as assistant operations officer.

A veteran of 15 years service, he was formerly a member of the 8th Infantry Division Artillery, Baumholder, Germany. While stationed there he served as battery executive officer, reconnaissance and survey officer and liaison officer for this command.

The captain is a native of Anniston, Ala., and is a graduate of the Parachutist and Glider School at Fort Benning, The Chemical School, Fort McClellan, Ala.; and the Artillery and Missile School, Fort Sill, Okla.

He and his family will reside at 435B Craig Drive, Fort Benning.

9th Inf. Bid Farewell At MOOM Dinner-Dance

By Judy Willoughby

The officers and ladies of the 9th Infantry held a farewell party recently for the retirement of the organization known as the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry.

Festivities opened with a receiving line and refreshment hour in the Ball Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Receiving the guests were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Stanley L. Harding; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John T. Corley; Col. and Mrs. Clifford P. Hannum, commanding officer of the 9th Infantry; and Maj. Windell F. DeLaMare, adjutant of the battle group.

Dinner was held in the Supper Club. Following dinner, Col. Hannum presented the two new battalion commanders joining the 9th Infantry, Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul commanding the 1st battalion and Lt. Col. Jack Samson commanding the 2nd battalion. He then recounted the activities and accomplishments of the unit since its activation as the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry and its glories since its organization during the Indian Wars. Col. Hannum charged the new battalion commanders to carry on the proud traditions of the 9th Infantry. The officers and ladies then raised a toast to the 9th Infantry and repeated after their commander the battle group's famous motto: "Keep up the Fire."

The solemnity of Col. Hannum's farewell address to the old 9th Infantry was broken with comedy skits presented by Capt. Raymond P. Komaniecki, assistant S-4 of the battle group, and Lt. Edge R. Farley, platoon leader of Company A. Lt. Farley imitated the voice and style of the current top - selling record album, "The First Family." Capt. Komaniecki presented the anthropology of the tribe known as "Manchu Dragons." Both skits were warmly received by the guests.

Wives Club Sets Lunch

The time is not too far off for the reconvening of the monthly luncheons of the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club.

The February luncheon will be held February 12, at the Main Officers' Open Mess. The program will inform the ladies about the latest care of the hair and the 1963 Spring styles. Hostess units will be the ladies of the 1st Infantry and of the 2nd Aviation Company.

There is also still enough time to purchase the 1963 Division Engagement Calender published by the Club. With the new concept of Army reorganization becoming an actuality, this book will soon be a memento of this division to be treasured.

The 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club is now working in the field of profit, as the printing bill has been paid in full. Unit commanders' wives still have books for sale.

1st Sgt. Now Full-Fledged Div. Member

By 15th Artillery PIO

Battery B of the 15th Artillery Battalion has acquired a new first sergeant through "choice not chance."

First Sgt. Lester C. Severns, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., was assigned to the 15th Artillery by Department of the Army, after expressing the 2nd Infantry Division as his first choice of assignments.

Although Sgt. Severns has never been a "full-fledged" member of the "Indianhead Division," he considers himself a brother by way of his assignment to the 87th Field Artillery Battalion, during World War II. The 87th Artillery was, at that time, attached to this division.

Sgt. Severns brings to his new battery over ten years experience as an instructor to both Yale and Middlebury ROTC, and has served overseas in Panama, Europe, Iceland, and Germany.

Asked of his first impressions after four days with his new battery, Sgt. Severns replied, "I know that the 2nd Infantry Division has been in business through two wars and a police action. What is most gratifying to me, and what I hope is a good omen, is that my battery was chosen as honor battery of the battalion for the month of November, the month I was assigned."

New York Lawyer Now Assigned to 7th

By 7th Infantry PIO

"I hope someday to be governor of New York and eventually President of the United States."

Not many people can say that with much conviction. PFC Donald Tucker, courts and boards clerk for the 7th Infantry, says and believes that he will accomplish these marks of distinction. Without the slightest bit of egotism, he plainly states that these are the goals he has set for himself.

Not by any means unqualified, the New York lawyer has a long list of credits to back up this unusual statement.

Graduating from New York University with a Bachelor of Science Degree in economics, third in a class of 700, the Brooklyn native graduated from Brooklyn Law School in 1961 in the top five per-cent of his class. After passing the New York State Bar Exam on his first try, he practiced law in his office located at 348 Broadway, across the street from New York City Hall.

In addition to his outstanding scholastic record, "Tuck" has been very active on the political scene. He was president of the Kings County Young Democrats, captain of his local election district in Brooklyn and chairman of the Students for Stevenson, a city - wide student organization in New York City.

He was on the Executive Board of the principle Democrat Assembly headed by Emanual Celler, a member of the House Judiciary Committee in Washington, D. C. He has been awarded the Theodore Roosevelt Medal for being the outstanding speaker in a city - wide oratorical contest for college students. His name appeared frequently on the Dean's list throughout his college career.

Prior to entering the service at Fort Dix, N. J., PFC Tucker was given the opportunity of attending Naval Officer Candidate School but he refused it. A direct commission as lieutenant with the Judge Advocate General Corps has been applied for.

PFC Tucker and his wife, Carol Ann, live at 352 Hamilton Rd., Columbus.

2nd Division All-Stars to Meet Main Post All-Stars for Benning Basketball Crown

The end of the 2nd Division basketball tournament on February 20 is not the end of basketball competition for the outstanding players of the division league. The 2nd Division basketball all-stars, to be chosen later this month by coaches and officials, will meet the Main Post all-stars in a three-game playoff battle for the Fort Benning championship.

The dates for the playoff are tentatively set by Special Services for February 21, 22 and 23. In the event that a playoff should be necessary between the winners of the first and second halves of the division league, those games will be played on the three above dates, and the post championship games will be moved back to the 25, 26 and 27.

An upshot of the proposed meeting between division and Main Post cagers will be the selection of players from those games to represent Fort Benning at the 3rd Army tournament. The Fort Benning all-stars will travel to Fort Gordon, Ga., to compete from March 13-17 for the 3rd Army basketball crown.

Another feature of the "Second to None" basketball league this year will be the presentation of awards to the division's outstanding player and the division's outstanding sportsman.

DivArty Silences Signal To Keep Top Hoop Spot

By James E. Lindsey

Division Artillery quickly overcame a 6-0 deficit Monday night at the Harmony Church field house and went on to humiliate the Separate Battalions' cagers to the tune of 92-62. This victory, coupled with a "Spader" victory over Trains, puts DivArty in the league's number one basketball slot uncontested. It was DivArty's fourth win in as many games.

The first half of the game against 122nd Signal, representing Separate Battalions, was a defensive battle that saw the half-time tab stand at 39-20 with DivArty on the heavy side. In the second half, Signal's defensive efforts crumbled under the sharp-shooting assault of high scorer Willie Williams and second high scorer Hubert Barksdale. Williams match total reached 28 points while Barksdale made the quarter - century mark to maintain his position as the divison basketball

With the sound of whistles and adolescent war-whoops echoing across hardwood courts, two clerks of the 2nd Division G-4 section have undertaken the enjoyable task of coaching a Youth Activities Club basketball team.

Sp4 Roy R. Bonner, the Division's Report of Survey Clerk, and PFC William W. Katzman, the Division's Budget Clerk, are working to get their boys in shape for the upcoming league opener. They hope to lead their team, the "Rockets," to the Intermediate League championship.

The Youth Activities Club, (YAC), has a membership of young dependents of Fort Benning personnel. The Intermediate League is the oldest age group in the YAC basketball program. The intermediate ages range from 13 to-15 while the next youngest, those of the Doughboy League, are 11 and 12. The smallest athletes in the YAC tournaments are the eight, nine and ten-year olds of the Biddy League. YAC also maintains 20 girls' teams.

Coach Roy Bonner is a graduate of Bunker Hill High School in his home town of Bunker Hill, Ind. Before entering the Army, Roy attended the General Motors Institute in Flint, Mich. He has a long-standing interest in basketball, having played the sport in both high school and college. (General Motors Institute presents a four-year undergraduate program.)

For both Roy and Bill, however, the experience of being on the coaching end of basketball is a first. After just a couple weeks of first-hand observation from this side of the sport, Roy says that the coach's biggest benefit is "the enthusiasm and youthful energy that a coach can direct towards a common goal — the basketball goal by way of good sportsmanship."

From Canada

Bill Katzman was born in Windsor, Ontario, Canada. He is a graduate of Windsor's Kennedy High School and has a Bachelor of Science degree from Wayne State University in Detroit, Mich. Bill has the same coaching credentials as Roy, a player's knowledge of high school and college basketball.

"It's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game" is an old, old saying and an opinion that most professional coaches wouldn't dare to think out loud. But Bill is not a professional and he admits that this is the way he feels about coaching, especially at the YAC level.

The Intermediate League consists of four teams. The teams' nicknames change from season to season, depending on the personal favorites of the most-current crop of sports-minded youngsters. This season the Intermediate League will play a triple-round robin with each team playing every other team three times.

87th Evens Record In League Basketball

By 87th Infantry PIO

The 87th Infantry "Conqueror" basketball team, playing in what appears to be a much tougher 2nd Division league this year, evened their season's record last Monday night at the Harmony Church gym, barely edging out the 23rd Infantry 86-84.

Now 2 and 2, the "Conquerors" avenged an earlier defeat in flag football by trouncing the 26th Infantry "Spaders," 52-47, in the opening game. This was followed by two consecutive defeats — the first to Division Trains, 69-63, and a crushing 81-64 loss to a powerful DivArty team.

The "Conquerors" have yet to face three division teams. Playing on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week, the schedule calls for games up to February 20.

Lawery Jordan and Ron Brooks have provided the big scoring punch so far, each averaging about 15 points apiece. Willie Peoples has been the outstanding rookie and Sam and Warner Johnson provide the height.

The most recent win over the 26th Infantry introduced some rather odd scoring situations. Playing even up to the first half, the "Conquerors" poured in 22 points in the third stanza as opposed to the 23rd's 12, building up a 13 point lead. This advantage was quickly overcome by the 23rd's Ward who scored 14 points in the opening minutes of the last quarter. Trailing by 3 points in the final minutes, "Conquerors" Ron Brooks and Johnny Crittle hit on some fine driving shots which clinched the win.

Signal Bn. Falls to 1st

Recently in a game played at the Kelley Hill Field House, the 122nd Signal Battalion was defeated by the 1st Infantry, 62 to 52. This was the first game in the division tournament for both teams. High man for the "Communicators" was Carrie Flemming with 14 points.

The 122nd Signal Battalion is the official representative of the Separate Battalions in the division tournament. They won the opportunity to represent the Separate Battalions by defeating the 7th Cav. 41 to 35, and the 2nd Engineers 44 to 41 and 49 to 41 in the tournament held earlier this month. The other members of Separate Battalions are eligible to contribute a very limited number of players to Signal's representative team.

Trains Nips 1st Inf. Cagers for 3 in Row

By 1st Infantry PIO

Led by Walter Clarke, Division Trains scored their third consecutive win of the season in as many starts by edging the 1st Infantry 70-65.

Clarke canned eight field goals and four charity tosses for his 20 while his team mate, Orlando Pratt, scored 18 points on nine field goal conversions.

Division Trains took the lead at the opening tap and quickly went ahead 7-0, before the 1st came back with 8 quick points. The 1st continued to put on the pressure as they upped their lead by 9 points 22-13 with six minutes and 50 seconds left in the first half. Division Trains then put on a full court press with three minutes and 15 seconds left in the first half and cut the 1st Infantry's lead to one point as the half ended with the count 34-33 with the 1st out front.

The second half opened with both teams trading basket for basket until Belvain Carrington led a fast break for Division Trains and scored to put them out in front for good.

The victory enabled Division Trains to remain in a two-way along with Division Artillery.

Wallace Brown and Robert Dickerson led the loser's with 18 points each. The 1st Infantry now has a season record of one win and two losses.

Shough's Sports Scope

By Pete Shough

Loyola University, the second-ranking team in the country and holder of the nation's finest college basketball record, 18-0, is probably the most frustrated college basketball quintet of the season.

The Chicago-based team is of the opinion that they have a right to the first-place position in the weekly Associated and United Press polls but they won't have a chance to prove it until the NCAA tournament. Coach George Ireland's chargers got their first look at the Cincinnati Bearcats recently when the 'Cats racked-up their 33rd consecutive victory with a win over fourth-ranked Illinois. Of course, the undefeated Loyola five shared the opinion of Chicago area fans, that they can beat Cincinnati, and the way things are looking they will have their chance to try in the NCAA tournament.

Let's go back and give this a second look.

Although I have never seen this year's edition of the Cincinnati Bearcats or Loyola Ramblers play, I have seen the 1961 and 1962 Bearcats in action. And may I say that I have never seen such a more relaxed, confident team.

A match between these two teams would be the game of the year and a terrific wrap-up of the 1962-63 season. It would be the second time this year athletic fans would have a chance to see the number one and two-ranked teams in a season-end duel for first place. The first time, of course, was the 1963 playing of the Rose Bowl.

If this contest does ever become fact, I would look for Cincy to come out victorious and retain their national championship honors.

This prediction is based on several factors, but mostly on the Bearcat successes of past years. Cincinnati played two of the finest teams Ohio State has ever produced and stopped them both times.

Differences Are Solved

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Once again General of the Army Douglas MacArthur has reported to the President of the United States — "Mission accomplished."

Appointed by the President late in 1962 to arbitrate the dispute between the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association, General MacArthur did just that.

After just two sessions in a room at the Waldorf Astoria, the AAU and NCAA resolved their differences.

The major result is that track and field will return to normal on the competitive level. All suspensions of athletes because of the dispute are being lifted; so are boycotts of scheduled meets.

The general, long accustomed to dealing with disputants in the Far East, worked out a peace plan where neither the AAU nor the NCAA lost face.

5 Honored For Service

Five Army helicopter pilots who distinguished themselves in Viet Nam were decorated Jan. 24 in a Pentagon ceremony by Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, Army vice chief of staff.

CWO Donald W. McPeak, 36, Lebanon, Ind., was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism and Air Medal for meritorious achievement.

Air Medals also were presented to Capt. Boyd G. Hess, 33, Conestoga, Pa.; CWO John J. Cooney, 40, Marlboro, Mass.; and CWO Lester R. Huat, 39, Ridgefield, Conn. An Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal, representing a second award of the medal, was presented to Capt. Joe D. Underwood, 30, Rush Springs, Okla.

Mr. McPeak received the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroic conduct during a helicopter operation last August. While he was flying Vietnamese troops into combat, his H-21 helicopter came under small-arms fire which wounded his crew chief and showered him with fragments. Mr. McPeak braved the fire which damaged his helicopter, and landed his load of troops by hovering close to the ground.

STRAIGHT AND NARROW . . . Until you have mastered all the various points of delivery, the straight and narrow path of the straight ball will best serve you. The straight ball is thrown with the thumb pointing directly at the pins, fingers underneath. It is delivered at an angle aimed directly at the 1-3 pocket. The main advantage of the straight ball is that it is easy to control for the beginner and allows him full concentration on the other points of his delivery.

Airborne School Averaging 500 Grads Each Week

By Bill Gardner

The increasing needs of the Army for qualified military parachutists saw an average of approximately 500 students a week complete The Infantry Schools basic airborne course during the six months since the 1963 fiscal year began in July.

This represents a considerable increase over the 250 men instruction facilities were designed to train in December, 1961, when The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department took over training of all Army airborne students.

Before the consolidation of airborne facilities, volunteers were sent directly from training centers to airborne units where they received instruction in military parachuting.

Paratrooper instruction began more than 21 years ago when a test platoon was organized to function under the Infantry Board.

Volunteers were recruited from the 29th Infantry regiment and 200 men responded. Fifty of these were selected, including 48 enlisted men and two officers.

Over Lawson Field

On Aug. 16, 1940, members of the test platoon, wearing football-type helmets, standard Air Corps free-style, human escape and emergency test-type parachutes, jumped from a Douglas B18 plane at Lawson Field.

This marked the beginning. During World War II, the Parachute School as it was known after its establishment May 15, 1942, turned out 4,000 qualified parachutists a month. In 1954 it was noted that over 18,000 men had been trained.

On the occasion of the return of all basic airborne training to Fort Benning, Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School, said to the first class of 236 men, "More than a year ago, I requested that basic airborne training be returned to Fort Benning and now it has been."

"There are certain basic qualities of this training that you must learn," he added.

"It is hard and tough, mentally and physically," the commandant stated. "It is an individual endeavor that takes courage, determination, physical strength and agility. You have the finest instructors in the Army to train you. And you will have great personal satisfaction when you complete the course."

Graduate Weekly

Since that December day in 1961, airborne classes have been graduating weekly. Although most of the graduates are Army men, personnel from all branches of the Armed Forces received Parachutist Badges.

Last year saw cadets from the U. S. Military, Naval and Air Force Academies complete the course. In addition, numerous members of the Navy, Air Force and the Marine Corps qualified at the post. There also was a number of Allied officers from countries like Canada, England, Viet Nam, Indonesia and the Republic of China, to name a few, who took their training from instructors here.

The instructors, accustomed to a wide variety of students from raw recruits to veteran generals, are experts in their field. All of them are qualified parachutists and most of them are master parachutists.

To qualify as a master parachutist, a jumper must make at least 65 jumps. Included must be 25 jumps while wearing combat equipment, four night jumps with one of these as jumpmaster and five mass tactical jumps.

In addition, the master parachutist must be a graduate of the jumpmaster school, or have been a jumpmaster in one or more combat jumps, or jumpmaster on at least 33 non-combat jumps, and must have 36 months of airborne service.

As Gen. Harrell said, these men are the finest instructors in the world.

Safety, Quality

In teaching fundamentals of parachuting, safety and quality are two of the keywords. It is essential that each parachutist is in excellent physical condition and is trained to react instinctively in the event of an emergency or potential danger.

According to Col. Michael Paulick, a master parachutist who has been director of the department since August, 1961, "The objective of the course is to produce qualified military parachutists. A military parachutist must be physically able to fight upon landing."

"If he injures himself on the jump," he continued, "he may jeopardize his life or the lives of others, and as a result, the entire mission may fail."

The holder of the Distinguished Service Cross stated, "A student who cannot be expected to make safe parachute jumps will not be awarded the badge of the military parachutist."

To get prospective paratroopers to reach this goal, they are given four weeks of intensive training.

The first week is known as the physical conditioning and motivation (PC&M) week, and consists of administrative processing of students who come to the school from parts all over the world, intensive physical training, plus introduction to the training apparatus.

PT Test

At the end of the week the airborne physical training test is given. The test includes doing four chin-ups, 80 knee-benders, 20 sit-ups, 22 push-ups and running the mile in 8:45 or less.

Failure to pass the test means the student must repeat the week and build himself up to a physically acceptable level.

The second week, ground week, is devoted to additional physical training, plus falls and pre-jump procedures on the aircraft.

In the third week, tower week, the students continues his training in the techniques previously learned, with emphasis on his part of a "stick," or row, of jumpers making a mass exit.

In addition he is dropped from one of the three 250-foot towers obtained from the New York World's Fair in the early 1940's. During the drop students experience the feeling of floating earthward in a parachute and also learn how to control the 'chute during descent.

During the tower phase, there also is instruction in the use of the reserve parachute and procedures for emergency landing or landing in high winds.

Jump Week

The final week is jump week, the end process of what all previous training has been about. During this period five jumps are made from altitudes of about 1,250 feet.

The first two are individual tapouts and the final three are mass exits. The fourth jump is with full combat equipment, and the fifth one is a mass exit under conditions which would prevail during battle group or battalion size operations.

In addition the student receives instruction on pre-flight and in-flight procedures, preparation of equipment and weapons for jumping, and techniques of assembling with his unit following a jump.

On Thursday or Friday of the fourth week, depending upon when weather conditions allow the completion of the final jump, the student graduates in ceremonies presided over by Col. Paulick, or the department's deputy director, Lt. Col. John J. Lissner.

The jump badges are pinned on the graduates by the cadre who taught them.

One of the last things in the course the newly qualified military parachutist hears is the Parachutist Creed, read by one of the enlisted instructors.

The spirit of the airborne is reflected in its final paragraph, "I belong to the finest unit in the Army. By my actions and deeds alone, I speak for my fighting ability. I will strive to uphold the honor and prestige of my outfit, making my country proud of me and the unit to which I belong."

CHAPLAIN'S 100TH JUMP . . . Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes, The Student Brigade Chaplain, prepares for his 100th jump with the aid of Pvt. Rodger Gillman, (R), 43rd Company, 4th Student Battalion, TSB. This was the second jump for Pvt. Gillman. Chaplain Estes said he has averaged about one jump a month since he first received his parachute wings.

Famed Hot Dog Nurtured Here Known World Over

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — It is an axiom that wherever Americans congregate the "hot-dog" is sure to follow. Today, from quiet London corners to swarming Tokyo parks, this non-gourmet's delight is no novelty.

It was Harry M. Stevens, an English - born Ohio steel paddler turned baseball concessionaire, who originated the "red-hot" or modern day hot-dog.

In the middle 1890's, while sitting in a windswept ball park suffering from the cold, Stevens remembered passing a butcher shop while enroute to the field. He'd already introduced the score card and the peanut vendor to baseball fans and now he was about to bring in the hot-dog.

Quickly he sent a boy to the butcher-shop for 12 dozen sausages. Another lad was dispatched to a bakery for as many rolls. Stevens himself prepared boiling water to keep the sausages warm until placed in the roll.

The vendors were sent into the chilly stands with instructions to yell, "Red hots. Get your red hots here!" The venture was a sell-out in less than 10 minutes.

Business had been thriving for about 10 years when the leading cartoonist of the day, T. A. Dorgan, known as T.A.D. made drawings of a dachshund-type dog sandwiched in an elongated roll, with the caption reading "hot-dog."

Folks began to wonder what type of meat Stevens was selling at his redhot stands, and sales fell off. Soon, however, business returned to normal with the exception that the "red-hot" became the hot-dog. Today, this dish besides being called frankfurter, weenie, and the like, is still most universally known as the hot dog.

197th Infantry Wins Reenlistment Title

The overall reenlistment effort for the 197th Infantry Brigade this past quarter was highly successful.

This is the second consecutive quarter brigade has won the quarterly "First Term Regular Army" post wide competition. The brigade also came out first for the month of December, 1962, in all categories of reenlistments.

Gen. Clarke Briefs Career Class Officers

"Leadership is the master of organization," Gen. (Ret). Bruce C. Clarke, former commander-in-chief, U. S. Army, Europe, told students at The Infantry School Jan. 24.

Gen. Clarke, also a former commander of the Central Army Group, NATO, spoke to the combined Infantry officer career classes No. 1 and 2 in Theater No. 1.

"Good leadership is the attitude or relationship towards people you are directing or commanding. Poor leadership is failure to properly interest and motivate your people," the general said.

Gen. Clarke outlined the individual responsibility of each commander to his men and emphasized the need to study and learn the techniques of training.

Training improves the morale of the soldiers by showing them the importance of their jobs, the need to do well in their field, and the rewards derived through recognition of a job well done, Gen. Clarke explained.

The individual soldier should be allowed to exercise his own initiative in his work, he added. "'By allowing subordinates to retain their initiative they may make mistakes, but it is your responsibility to underwrite these honest mistakes," the general continued.

"'You can't be a good leader unless you're a follower. Translate things which you have followed into your command," Gen. Clarke concluded.

The speaker was introduced by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School.

Following the speech, a question and answer period on the role of the leader was conducted.

Famed '4x4' Served Well

In September, 1941, a rugged Army vehicle, officially designated truck, quarter - ton, four-by-four, was introduced in large-scale field maneuvers.

High ranking militarists were fascinated with its versatility but when it pulled antitank guns into usually inaccessible positions where "enemy" tankers had not even thought of looking, they were amazed.

Later, just weeks before Peal Harbor, Gen. George C. Marshall — the highest ranking officer in the Armed Forces—called it our main contribution to modern warfare.

It was the jeep. Not the modern version used today, but a boxy, nearly indestructible substitute for the horse.

The name jeep probably originated in the pronunciation of the Army designation G.P., for "general purpose," but no one is really sure because in the pre-war Army, particularly in the Armored Force, quarter-ton four-by-fours were called "peeps" (for larger command- and reconnaissance cars).

EM URGED TO APPLY FOR ACADEMY

Fort Benning commanders at all levels have been asked to encourage applications to the U. S. Military Academy from all qualified enlisted men.

Regular component personnel may only make application to the USMA on DD form 207 between Jan. 1 and June 30.

Members of the Reserve, National Guard and inductee personnel are personally responsible for making application directly to the College Entrance Examination Board, Box 592, Princeton, N. J.

These men will be selected on the basis of their performance in the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the Examination Board.

Only one hundred-eighty student spaces at the academy are divided equally between enlisted men of the Army and Air Force. Ninety spaces, averaging out to about 22 per year, go to men from the Regular components and 90 go to those in Reserve components, all of whom are required to be in the service for at least a year.

A joint Army - Air Force publication AR 350-55, AFR 213 gives detailed instructions for making application for Regular and Reserve components nominations.

Following are the sources and types of appointments to the academy:

Noncompetitive

Nomination of candidates for appointment to the academy from noncompetitive sources is entirely in the hands of the nominating authority and all applications must be addressed to him. The figures indicate the total number of such appointments from U. S. sources present in the U. S. Corps of Cadets at any one time.

Senator (4 each); representative (4 each); vice presidential (3); District of Columbia (6); Canal Zone (2); Puerto Rico (4); Sons of Medal of Honor awardees (unlimited).

Competitive

Appointment to vacancies within competitive groups are awarded to those fully qualified candidates within each category whose records and all around performance indicate the greatest likelihood of success in a military career. Candidates for these vacancies to West Point can qualify by taking the regular entrance examinations each year. These figures also represent the total number of such appointments present in the U. S. Corps of Cadets at any one time.

Army and Air Force Regular Components (90); Reserve Components (90); Presidential (89); sons of deceased veterans (40); honor military and honor naval schools (40).

If you are an enlisted man on active duty and meet the conditions specified in AR 350-55, you may make application to your commanding officer for a regular components competitive appointment to the academy:

(1) Seventeen years of age but under 22 as of July 1 of the year of entrance to the academy; (2) citizen of the U. S.; (3) have never been married; (4) a high school graduate or its equivalent; (5) of good moral character; (6) the capacity for leadership required of an officer; (7) sincerely desire to attend West Point and complete a military career as an officer; (8) have completed one year of active duty by the date of admission to the academy; (9) pass the medical requirements.

Those who are on active duty and who have been nominated to the academy, meet the physical requirements established for admission to the academy, and possess certain minimum academic standards, may be selected to attend the U. S. Military Academy Preparatory School at Fort Belvoir, Va.

A USMA Academy Catalogue may be obtained free by writing to the Adjutant General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D.C., or the Registrar, U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y.

Mail Tax Forms Now; Avoid Deadline Rush

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—One of the shortest periods in the year is that time between the day one receives his W-2 form and the deadline for filing his income tax return. Putting off preparation of the return for "just another week or two" usually results in a mad rush to get it finished and into the mail before April 15.

For those who earn less than $5,000, have no outside income, and claim no special deductions or exemptions, it is a simple task to fill out the 1040A short form and mail it to the Internal Revenue Service along with the original copy of the W-2.

This form does everything but file itself. List your total taxable income, your own exemption and those of your dependents, if any, and the amount of taxes withheld during the year. Then turn to a table accompanying the form to determine your tax.

The table includes a liberal allowance for such tax exempted expenses as gasoline taxes, interest paid on loans and mortgages, and others.

Taxable military pay includes base pay, proficiency, hazardous duty and overseas pay, and certain travel allowances and per diem pay. The latter two are taxable only if the amount received exceeds the person's actual expenses and then only that part in excess of expenses is taxable.

Allowances for quarters, rations, and clothing, and the dislocation payments received on PCS moves, are non-taxable income.

Your income tax return becomes more complicated if you have income in addition to your military pay such as salary for off-duty employment or dividends from stocks or savings accounts. In this case you may be required to make out the 1040 long form to take advantage of all deductions you may be able to claim. If your total taxable income exceeds $10,000, you must make out the longer form in any case.

The government furnishes a set of instructions with the forms, but they require careful checking to insure that all income and deductions have been claimed. Failure to do this may result in paying more tax than necessary or, even worse, failing to make a complete return which could get you into serious difficulty with the Internal Revenue Service.

Many people make out their own tax returns each year; others pay a "tax expert" to do it for them. Many go to their Legal Assistance Officer for advice on how to prepare the form. All of these are good procedures when done promptly and correctly.

The best procedure is to gather all your tax information promptly, including all W-2 forms and other records of income, all records of payment of personal and property taxes, sales taxes, interest, etc., and any other information that is needed for a complete and honest return. Then it is a matter of completing the form. If you feel you cannot do it properly, look for help, but do it in time to have it completed before that short, short three month period slips away from you.

Army's Caribbean School Unique

WASHINGTON (ANS) — A cross-section of the majority of the major Army Service Schools rolled into one and the only school in the U. S. Army establishment that teaches in Spanish purely military subjects, are two distinctions which make the U. S. Army Caribbean School at Fort Gulick, Canal Zone, a unique part of the Army.

A primary mission of the School is to support Army missions, attaches, Military Assistance Advisory Groups and commissions operating in Latin America by instructing Latin American military and paramilitary personnel in Army technical skills, leadership techniques, and doctrine covering military actions during peace and war.

To facilitate the accomplishment of this mission, the School was granted permission in 1956 to discontinue all instruction in English and present it in Spanish only.

Three instructional departments — Internal Security, Tactics, and Technical — conduct 26 courses varying in length and subject matter from a two-week Senior Officer Preventive Maintenance Course to a 40-week Cadet Course and a 40-week Command and General Staff Course. The latter is almost identical with the Associate Course given at the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

From its inception on Feb. 1, 1949 until June 1, 1962, the school had graduated more than 20,000 students.

The Staff and Faculty of 65 commissioned officers, two warrant officers and 258 enlisted men of the U. S. Army Caribbean School are carrying out one very important role in our modern Army — that of helping to train the armies of our Latin American neighbors in both military and technical subjects.

Rocket Age Began Back In 1232

Any history of the rocket and missile age will have to start a long way back in the files of time. As long ago, perhaps as the year 160 A.D. when Lucian of Greece wrote stories of trips to the moon.

Today the vast majority of people think of rockets and guided missiles as weapons spawned by the still growing space-age. Yet, revolutionary in power and performance as the modern versions are, the use of rockets dates back to 1232 when Chinese defenders of the city of Kaifeng shot self-propelled missiles at besiegers.

Still later, the ingenious Chinese developed a fireworks rocket, and by mid-13th Century rockets were introduced in Europe. There, for the next 500 years, they were employed occasionally in battle but also reached a high stage of development simply as fantastic pyrotechnic displays.

By 1799 the rocket had entered its first stages of military significance. At the battle of Seringapatam in India the Prince of Mysore's rocketeers used iron tip missiles to blunt a British attack.

It was a Briton, in turn, who was inspired by the Indians' success to explore the potential of the rocket. The result was Sir William Congreve's 62-pound sheet iron weapon; also the surprise rocket barrages which the British unleashed in capturing Washington during the War of 1812.

Could One Hypo End Tooth Decay Woes?

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

Feb. 3-10 is National Children's Dental Health Week. The children of today will be the adults of tomorrow. Then, they, like you, will be serving in our Armed Forces.

Who can forget the line-ups for shots? The first one is the most vivid. After that it becomes like so much else . . a routine, accepted part of army life.

You do remember the first one, don't you; the long line of soldiers taking off shirts at one end and putting them on at the other, divided by the tables with syringes, gleaming stainless steel pans, wrapped bundles which turned out to be filled with the tiny needles, rubber stoppered bottles of fluid, some cloudy, some clear. Using all these with sterile efficiency were the medical technicians.

There was a lot of good-natured joking covering the slightly nervous feeling that many of you had. You received your shots for one disease in one arm and something else in the other arm and you felt like a human pincushion. Someone said "Hey, how about a shot to prevent tooth decay."

TAKES TSB POST . . . Second Lt. Petro R. Sodol recently assumed the duties of company commander of A and E Companies, Infantry School Battalion, The Student Brigade. He succeeds 2nd Lt. Bob B. Whan, who was assigned to the 4th Student Battalion, TSB. Before coming here, Lt. Sodol was a member of the Machine Gun Committee, Weapons Department, The Infantry School. Lt. Sodol is a graduate of OCS, and has taken Ranger and Airborne Training.

National Children's Dental Health Week • Feb. 3-9, 1963

And of course, everyone laughed.

Now, let's look at the children of today when they become the soldiers of tomorrow. It may very well be that they will get a shot to prevent tooth decay.

Right now, experiments are being conducted at the National Institute of Dental Research in Bethesda, Md., with guinea pigs and hamsters which show a direct cause and effect relation between bacteria and dental decay. Germ-free animals can be fed a decay-causing diet and not develop any cavities, but they do develop typical tooth decay when exposed to a single strain of bacteria taken from the mouths of animals that have decayed teeth.

Further studies along this line may well lead to immunization of large numbers of people against tooth decay just as today you are immunized against smallpox, typhoid fever, tetanus and all the others.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

Friendly NCOs 'Nurse' Sophia Back to Health

NEW YORK (AFP) — The American Army in Italy lent a helping hand to Oscar-winning film star Sophia Loren recently.

The film star was confined to her villa by a virus attack. The sultry beauty's doctor had ordered her off the set of her new picture. He further told the movie star to get plenty of rest.

An NCO club next door to Sophia's hideaway, voluntarily setup "no noise" regulations and shut down the jukebox at an early hour. The piece de resistance was the last tune played every night — a popular Italian number "Good Night Sophia."

Low-Cost Laundry Available

Fort Benning personnel desiring low-cost laundering have been reminded of the Quartermaster Laundry's "payroll deduction laundry plan" by Quartermaster officials.

Under this program, all enlisted personnel are offered laundry service through the plan. The quality of finish is in keeping with military standards. Pick-up and delivery by unit supply sections makes the service convenient to personnel.

Army Regulations provide that 25 pieces may be laundered weekly at a cost of $4.15 per month, with a maximum of four days service time. Pieces may be all "finished work" (dress shirts, fatigues, etc.) or all "soft work" (undergarments, socks) or any combination of the two.

Enlisted men living on or off post are eligible for the service. Additional information may be obtained from unit supply personnel.

More Benefits Announced By AFEPBA

The Armed Forces Enlisted Personnel Benefit Association has again announced increased benefits for members.

For the second time in less than two years, and without raising monthly premiums, the association increased the schedule of life insurance coverage effective Feb. 1, 1963. The new schedule of insurance coverage is as follows: under age 30, $20,000; ages 30-34, $17,500; ages 35-39, $15,000; ages 40-44, $12,500; age 45 and over, $10,000.

The association was the first non-profit fraternal benefit association of its kind to organize and was the first to provide a low cost group life insurance plan for enlisted personnel of the Armed Forces on active duty. Subsequent to organization in 1956 the association expanded its benefits to provide family coverage, continued membership on retirement, and a complete automobile insurance program. Also available are emergency loans to cover a wide range of needs.

Descriptive booklets, annual financial reports, applications and automobile insurance rates may be obtained from AFEPBA, Ninth Floor, Warner Building, Washington 4, D.C.

The association, being non-profit, has declared and paid annual refunds each Christmas since organization. The latest refund was computed at the rate of $4.25 per month, which amounted to $51 for the fiscal year and reduced the net cost for each member to only $4.75 per month for group life insurance coverage.

Army Sounds Call for WO Pilot Trainees

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army is urging qualified persons to apply for warrant officer flight training in order to fill 1,000 slots for warrant pilots.

The need for additional flying warrant officers was caused by changes in the organizational structure of units authorizing warrant officers in lieu of commissioned officer pilots and activation of new units to meet overseas requirements.

Selected personnel will receive primary flight training at either Camp Wolters, Tex., or Fort Rucker, Ala., where the Army plans to expand its primary training facilities.

Applicants must have completed basic training before enrollment, must be between 20 and a half and 30 years old, be at least 64 inches but not more than 76 inches in height and weigh not more than 200 pounds. Class I medical standards for flying (chapter 4, AR 40-501) must be met.

Other prerequisites include a high school diploma or GED equivalent, a GT score of 115 or higher, and a record free of convictions by military or civil courts for violations.

In 6 Weeks, Unit Repairs 25,000 Cots, 300 Tents

The 54th Quartermaster Company has inspected and repaired 25,000 cots and 300 tents during the six weeks it has been operating, a mass production average of almost 1,000 cots and 10 tents daily.

The company returns approximately $13,000 worth of material to supply agencies every day.

The unit will, at the completion of its mission in July, have inspected and put intact, over $1 million worth of tents and cots.

The 54th provides field maintenance and overhaul for all types of quartermaster material (excluding air-cooled type equipment).

Under the command of 1st Lt. John H. Stephens, the unit is inspecting, classifying and repairing cots and general purpose tents used during the military buildup in Florida.

Steve's Factory

The shop, coined "Steve's Factory" in honor of Lt. Stephens, was fully functional within two days after receiving this mission.

"The high morale and efficiency of the men, plus excellent support from The Infantry Center Troop Command (TICTC) and The Infantry Center have determined the comparatively high rate of our unit's output," explained Lt. Stephens.

At the suggestion of Col. John H. Lattin, of TICTC commander, the men of the 54th installed an old public address system over which they play music. Accrding to Lt. Stephens, daily production has been boosted by 10 per cent.

Five - ton trucks from the 29th Transportation Battalion TICTC, hauling the tents and cots, are driven right into the shop. After unloading and categorizing the material to be processed, the units assembly line moves into action.

The tent repair men, including a heavy-duty sewing machine operator, two inspectors, a helper and a NCO crew chief, raise the tents on large booms and spread them out the way they would be in the field.

Huge Machine

After the tents are inspected for rips and tears they are marked and sewed by a huge machine about four times as large as sewing machines found in the home. Once again the tents are raised on booms for a final inspection. Once the NCO has certified that the tents are ready for supply agencies they are repacked and shipped out.

The cots are cleaned and classified after a primary inspection. Serviceable cots are wrapped in heavy duty paper, banded and shipped out within an hour on the same truck they came on. Unserviceable cots are sent to the repair line for additional work.

The 54th, the only company of its type in the Army, was organized in December, 1960, from the 222rd QM Company at Fort Lee, Va.

In October, 1961, the unit left Fort Lee and went to Ingrandes General Depot, France. The unit supported quartermaster maintenance shops at Ingrandes during the Berlin crisis.

The 54th returned to the United States and Fort Benning in August, 1962. Until the time of its current assignment in December the unit was attached to the 39th Transportation Battalion and supported The Infantry Center Quartermaster Section.

"We are now in the process of expanding our operations and facilities and at the completion of our present mission will continue to serve as a tent and cot repair shop," Lt. Stephens said.

69th Armor Crewmen Set New Record

A battalion record was set recently when Company B and elements of Company A, 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, fired the annual service course at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The record was set when all of the tank crews qualified in the service firing tables.

Of the 101 tankers participating in the firing, 37, including the company commander, Lt. Travis White, qualified as "expert." Nine of the "experts" turned in perfect scores.

Fort Stewart officials commented that the unit was the first to qualify all crews without a single disqualification on the record service firing course. Most crews scored maximum points on the dark as well as illuminated night firing tables.

The battalion's safety record was upheld when the men completed the course with no accidents, two days ahead of schedule.

Since the battalion was activated in September, 1962, it has won the 197th Brigade Safety award all but one month.

Drill, Command Personnel Lay Groundwork for OC's

"We teach the candidates to teach themselves," says MSgt T. G. Reynolds of the Drill and Command Section, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

"We don't give many formal classes, but we lay the ground work for what the candidates will be doing during the major portion of their time in OCS, as far as drill and command is concerned," he commented.

Among their varied jobs, the Drill and Command Section works with students who need help after hours, advise the coordinating officer for the "Blue Day" parade in the 18th week of OCS training and assist in the preparation for the annual Patterson Award Ceremonies.

Most of th cadre training program is carried out by the members of the Section. Also, members of the section give courtesy classes by request, on drill and guard to other units on post.

MSgt. Reynolds was only recently assigned to the Drill and Command section. Before coming here, he was assigned to a Military Assistance Advisory Group in Viet Nam. He saw action in the second World Was as a member of the 7th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, and in Korea with the 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Division.

Sgt. Reynolds holds the Silver Star, The Bronze Star, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infatrymman's Badge with Star and the Presidential Navy Citation.

He now lives in Columbus with his wife, Janet, and their daughter.

Capt. Bacon Joins Armor Committee

Capt. Stanley Bacon Jr., was recently assigned to the Armor Committee, Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School. Capt. Bacon is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, Armor Officer Basic Course and Associate Armor Officer Career Course.

His last troop assignment was with the 1st Squadron, 14th Armored Cavalry Regiment in Germany. Capt. Bacon is presently attending The Infantry School Instructor Training course.

Capt. Bacon is married and has one daughter. He and his family reside at 536-B North Valdez Courts in Custer Terrace.

New Officers Are Elected At Post Bank

At the annual meeting of the shareholders and the reorganizational meeting of the directors of the National Bank of Fort Benning, one new director and two new officers were elected for 1963.

Col. (Ret.) Nelson I. Fooks was elected to the board of directors, while Joseph B. Pate Jr. and Mrs. Sherrell Bennett were elected assistant cashiers.

Col. Fooks now works in the Human Research Office here and resides in Columbus. Pate is a former lieutenant colonel and is now serving as a loan officer at the bank. Mrs. Bennett has served as head teller since the bank's organization in 1957.

In a joint report, Brig. Gen. (Ret.) M. B. Bell, chairman of the board, and William A. Lyman, president, announced that earnings of the bank in 1962 were the highest since the bank opened for business in 1957. Per share earnings for 1962 were $2.06 as compared with $1.46 in 1961.

During the year, shareholders received a stock dividend of one share for each 11 held, and a cash dividend of 50 cents per share.

Total resources of the bank now exceed $6 million. The bank now has accounts in almost every state and in many foreign countries.

Directors re - elected were Gen. Bell, Col. (Ret.) Henry E. Kelly, William A. Lyman, Col. (Ret.) Dennis M. Moore, Col. (Ret.) W. V. Rattan, Col. (Ret.) Paul C. Serff, Maj. Gen. (Ret.) E. W. Smith, E. G. Sparks, and Maj. Gen. Carl T. Sutherland, USAR.

Officers re - elected were Gen. Bell, chairman of the board; Lyman, president; Sparks, first vice president and cashier; L. M. McDowell Jr., vice president; Col. Rattan, vice president, and Mrs. Joy H. Burnham, assistant cashier.

POST OFFICES

As of July 1, 1961, there was a total of 34,955 post offices throughout the United States and possessions.

Round-the-Clock Weather Data Now Available

Thanks to a new recorder installed recently at the Dial Center Office, Fort Benning residents can get the latest weather reports at any time of the day or night by dialing 545-5281 on their telephone.

The recorder, called the variable message cycle transcribed announcer, works like a direct line on a telephone or a microphone on a special remote unit which acts much the same as a tape recorder. Weather reports are phoned in to the main unit at the Dial Center Office from the 16th Weather Squadron at Lawson Army Airfield via a tape recorder

The main unit records the messages and repeats them when dialed. All controls for the recordings are on the remote unit at Lawson Field, with the exception of the volume control which is on the main unit at the Dial Central Office.

One Minute Setting

The unit is capable of recording messages from 12 seconds to four minutes in length. Presently, however, it is set to record those up to one minute.

The recorder is set to handle as many as five calls at one time, but James R. Boswell, who works in The Infantry Center Signal Section, said if the need arises, the unit can be set to take 10 calls at once.

The 16th Weather Squadron, using new electronic equipment which is much more accurate than the old, records four forecasts each day.

Forecasts include visibility, dew point, altimeter setting, humidity, present temperature, wind direction and speed, and a short and long-range forecast, including the high and low temperatures expected.

Forecasts are given at 6 a.m., 11 a.m., 4 p.m. and 9 p.m. Between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m two more recordings are made. These are not forecasts, however, but weather observations which are made at midnight and 3 a.m. The forecasts and observations are made seven days a week.

The recording unit was requested by the Air Force Weather Detachment. The Signal Corps installed it.

WHAT'S THE WEATHER? . . . James R. Boswell (R), who works in The Infantry Center Signal Section, explains the new weather recorder recently installed at the Dial Central Office to Col. D. D. Dixon (C), USAIC G-4, and Col. Braxton E. Small, Infantry Center signal office. The recorder gives forecasts and weather conditions to telephone callers any time of day or night.

Post Office Sets Stamp Honoring Mrs. Roosevelt

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A stamp commemorating Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the nation's 32nd President, will be issued Oct. 11, the 79th anniversary of her birth.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who died last November, will be the first wife of a President since Martha Washington to appear on a postage stamp. She was often called "First Lady of the World." Her death ended a long career of public service that culminated in her three-year task, as U. S. Delegate to the United Nations, of framing and obtaining passage of that body's "Declaration of Human Rights."

Chaplain Gets Far East Tour

Chaplain (Capt.) Mitchell C. Johnson, The Student Brigade chaplin, has received orders to go to Okinawa.

Chaplain Johnson started his Army career at Fort Polk, La. with the 190th Field Artillery Group in 1951. He served with the 3rd Division Artillery in the Korean Conflict, and was later assigned to the First Army area around New York and Boston.

He is the holder of the Korean Service Medal with two battle stars and the Army Commendation Medal with medal pendent.

Miss Nutt Joins Staff Of YMCA

Miss Virginia O. Nutt has been named program secretary of the Armed Services YMCA in Columbus, effective today, according to William C. Buck, chairman of the committee of management.

Miss Nutt comes to Columbus from Selma, Ala., where she was program director of the USO Club operated by the YMCA for the past three years.

She is a graduate of Spartanburg Junior College, Spartanburg, S. C., and of Scarritt College in Nashville, Tenn., from which she received the B. A. degree. She has also done graduate work at the University of Alabama.

After several years as a social worker in a Methodist Community House in West Virginia, Miss Nutt became a legal secretary with a law firm in Indianapolis, Ind. While in Indianapolis, she was a member of the volunteer staff of the Indianapolis Servicemen's Center, serving both in the social-recreation activities as well as in the administrative offices.

As an accomplished artist in the field of ceramics, she operated a hobby shop in Selma, Ala., for several years, before becoming associated with the YMCA's military programs in USO.

A reception will be held at the Armed Services YMCA on Saturday from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., just before the regular Saturday night orchestra dance. The GSO Advisory Board members will serve as hostesses and will present Miss Nutt to all servicemen who attend as well as the corps of junior and senior volunteers.

Mrs. Andrew J. Baldwin, president of the GSO Advisory Board, extends a cordial invitation to all military personnel to attend the reception and meet Miss Nutt, and to remain for the orchestra dance to follow.

Sp4 Smith Top Driver

Sp4 Michael R. Smith, Hdqs. and Hdqs. Detachment, 428th Medical Battalion, was recently selected the "Outstanding Driver of the Quarter".

He completed Basic Training at Fort Knox, Ky., in 1961. At the conclusion of clerical school, Sp4 Smith was assigned to the 428th Medical Battalion and is presently working in the battalion message center.

First Lt. Robert Grider, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment Motor Officer, was the Inspecting Officer and selected the Outstanding Driver by examining the maintenance of each driver's pioneer tools, OVMs and vehicle. The Outstanding Driver was presented a self-winding wrist watch by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. R. J. Caldbeck.

The other men chosen at the unit level to compete for the Battalion award were Sp4 William O. Hester, 600th Medical Co., (Amb), Sp4 Paul B. Hobson, 50th Medical Co. (Clr.), and the 3rd Field Hospital representative, PFC Gerald A. Niedert.

Post Club Sets Pistol Match Here

The regular monthly pistol tournament of the Post Rifle and Pistol Club will be held this weekend, and has attracted team entries from three branches of the service.

Thomas Kirkman, club secretary, said this week he has received entries from Fourth Army Advanced Marksmanship Training Unit, Third Army AMU, and 2nd Infantry Division.

He added that he also expects a group of Marines from Atlanta.

The two-day tournament will consist of a 2700-point aggregate for the individual chammatches.

All events will be fired with .22 caliber, .38 caliber and .45 caliber pistols.

Capt. Clyde Metts, Third Army AMU, won last month's tournament with a 2598 effort.

Engineer Joins Sharpshooting Ranks of MTU

SFC Cleno L. Anthony, Company A, 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), has been transferred to the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Sgt. Anthony, an outstanding marksman, was section chief in the Asphalt Paving Section of Company A. During the years 1960 and 1961, Sgt. Anthony was a member of the Third Army Rifle and Pistol Team.

Due to his marksmanship ability, he was awarded the Distinguished Rifleman Badge in 1961. In 1962, he won a position on the Eastern Region All-Army Rifle Team, and also established a new record in The Infantry Center Trophy Matches.

Sgt. Anthony presently resides at 239 32nd Avenue, Columbus, with his wife Sylvia, and their three children, Debbie, Bobby, and Jimmy.

Sp4 Paul G. Christ, 428th Medical Battalion, was recently presented a Certificate of Achievement for completing the Post Chemical, Biological School with top honors.

In a class of 58 enlisted men, Sp4 Christ finished the training with the highest cumulative average.

After being inducted in Dec. 1961, Sp4 Christ completed Basic Training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and then came to the 428th Medical Battalion. He attended the University of Southern Illinois and received a master of science degree in agricultural economics.

During his tour in the Army, Sp4 Christ is continuing his education thru the Armed Forces Education Program. He recently completed the first Semester of a USAFI course, "Group Study in Beginning Russian."

The Post CBR School has the primary objective of familiarizing the student with the numerous aspects of chemical, biological and radiological warfare. The instruction is a combination of classroom lectures and practical work.

In the classroom the men are taught how to identify and treat injuries incurred in CBR Warfare. Participants of the school have an opportunity to test some of the chemical agents, such as blister agents, nerve agents and blood agents.

Surgeon Says

Follow Simple Rules, Prevent Cold Injury

By
Capt. L. F. Greenberg, Chief
Preventive Medicine Division

The cold weather of several weeks ago made us aware of the fact that although we are in the "sunny south," severe cold weather can occur. And this cold is severe enough to affect the body.

Many of those afflicted with a cold injury are permanently disabled, having required amputation of a hand or a foot. The most important thing to remember about cold injury is that it is completely preventable.

There are several types of cold injury. Chilblains occur at temperatures between 32 degrees and 50 degrees when associated with high humidity. It also occurs when there is exposure to intermittent cold, i.e., warm one day and cold the next.

Immersion foot occurs under similar temperature conditions, but there is the additional factor of the actual immersion of the foot in water for periods of 12 hours or more. When the feet are wet or damp, but actually not in water, trench foot occurs.

Finally, when the temperature is below the freezing point of 32 degrees, frost bite may occur. When this happens, there is actual freezing and crystallization of the tissues. Regardless of the name we give it, the body is affected in a similar manner.

The severity of the injury depends upon the length of time that the person is exposed to the cold and moisture. Like burns, there are degrees of cold injury:

FIRST DEGREE — After the feet have been rewarmed, they assume a purplish - red color. Later, they will become swollen and fluid will collect under the skin. If the patient is at complete bed rest, this will clear up after several days. Recovery usually occurs without any after effects.

SECOND DEGREE —When blisters form on top of a first degree injury, we have a second degree injury. Blisters must never be broken as this allows an opening for bacteria to enter and cause a serious infection. Most people with this degree of injury will recover witout any after effects.

THIRD DEGREE — When the skin and underlying tissues die and become black, thick and hard, gangrene has occurred. Ulceration of the skin often occurs. Healing may occur after a long period, or it may progress to a fourth degree injury. The people usually have some disability.

FOURTH DEGREE — If the entire area, including the bone, has been involved with gangrene, a fourth degree cold injury has occured. Due to the total destruction of the involved part, amputation becomes necessary. This may involve the entire leg in the case of trench foot or frostbite.

There are several simple first aid measures to be followed when a cold injury has occurred:

1. If the feet are involved, the patient must be transported on a litter. He must not walk.
2. Remove all constricting clothing such as leggings, garters, etc.
3. Place blankets, clothing or other items over the affected area in order to warm it. However, do not place extremity into direct heat such as a fire or oven.
4. Do not rub snow into a frostbitten foot as this only increases the pain and worsens the condition.
5. Do not break blisters as this may cause infection.

Prevention is more important than treatment. Principles of cold injury prevention:

1. Keep clothing Clean.
2. Avoid Overheating.
3. Wear Loose Layers of clothing.
4. Keep clothing Dry.

Notice that each of these principles emphasizes a letter C, O, L, D which makes it easy to remember.

There are several other simple factors that will aid in the prevention of cold injury.

1. Wear adequate clothing to protect yourself from the cold.
2. Make sure that clothing fits well. Do not wear tight fitting clothing.
3. Change socks at least once a day.
4. Keep hands and feet dry.
5. Exercise mildly to increase circulation of the blood.
6. Eat a proper diet.
7. Use common sense.

In order to protect hourself from the dangers of the cold, remember these facts. They could save your life!

edge gained upon return to their countries. They come to learn not only what we are teaching, but also how we are teaching.

Allied officers attend one or more of the courses offered, including the Orientation, Career, Associate Career, Motor Transport and Communications Courses.

The battalion presently includes Allied students from 25 different countries, ranging from Argentina to Venezuela, and including representatives from Ethiopia, Iran, Japan, Pakistan and the Philippines.

Approximately 400 officers from 49 different countries attend The Infantry School each year. They add an international flavor to the campus and classrooms and by the time a course ends, both the American and Allied officers are enriched by having had the experience of living and working together and exchanging ideas.

As each of the many students — U. S. and Allied — reaches the end of his particular course of instruction, he can feel confident that The Infantry School has made every effort to make his stay a most rewarding experience, both professionally and socially. It is toward this goal that all activity in the 2nd Student Battalion is directed.

Gen. Rich of 101st Airborne Division Is Named to Succeed Gen. Harrell

Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., will succeed Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School. Gen. Harrell, who has been nominated for the rank of lieutenant general, will become chief of staff for Force Development, a new position being established by the Army. He became commanding general of Fort Benning Aug. 1, 1961.

Gen. Rich, a 1935 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, has commanded the "Screaming Eagles" since July 17, 1961.

A native of Bandy, Va., he is married to the former Lucille Elizabeth Schalker of Leavenworth, Kan. They have two daughters, Mrs. Joseph T. Palastra, 25, and Roselyn Stockton, 20.

Student Here

Gen. Rich came to Fort Benning in March, 1943, as a student in the Parachute School. He remained on the post until October, 1944, serving as S-3 and executive officer of the Parachute School and later as commander of the 2nd Parachute Training Regiment.

He is a 1939 graduate of The Infantry School.

In the early part of World War II, the two-star general was assigned to the 19th Infantry at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. He was S-2 and S-3 until September, 1942, when he became commander of the 2nd Battalion.

In October, 1944, Gen. Rich went to the European Theater where he served until July, 1947. During this period he was airborne adviser, G-3 Section, 6th Army Group; deputy chief of staff XXI Corps; G-1 (personnel officer) and chief of staff of the Oise (France) Base Section; chief of staff of the Western Base Section, and assistant to the deputy chief of staff, European Command.

At Staff College

The general's next assignment was at the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va. Between August, 1947, and July, 1950, he served success-

11TH AIR ASSAULT DIVISION WILL BE LOCATED ON POST

The Department of the Army has announced plans to form new air assault and support units here to test and further develop its air mobile concept for ground support.

The test division, to be designated the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), along with other test units, will be commanded by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, who has been serving as assistant division commander of the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky.

Test units will be formed here beginning on or about Feb. 15. The initial increment of military personnel and equipment required for the test will be drawn from existing Army resources.

Test units to be activated will include an air assault infantry battalion, a lighter version of the conventional infantry battalion, and a composite artillery battalion including 105 mm howitzers, Little John Missiles and light aircraft armed with rockets.

Aviation Group

An aviation group with a variety of aircraft and aircraft support equipment will be formed to provide surveillance, troop lift in the battle area, and air transport for supply and support functions.

Other supporting elements to be activated are an air-cavalry troop for reconaissance, a support group for administrative and logistical needs, a signal company and an engineer company. The test units will be grouped into a test model of an air assault division.

The test division will be supported by a test version of an air transport brigade, using both helicopters and fixed wing aircraft. In addition to its capabilities for combat echelon, the brigade also has the capability to "retail" to divisional units in the battle area the supplies brought to "wholesale" distribution point by the Air Force.

The air mobile concept calls for movement and support of combat movements in the battle area by simple, rugged helicopters and aircraft capable of operating in the environment of the soldier with primitive base facilities.

Relocate by Air

Further, the ground combat units are provided the capability of immediately relocating by air whenever it is tactically desirable to do so. This provides improved battlefield mobility to Army combat forces in the traditional role of sustained land combat.

Conceptually, the air vehicles used to provide air mobile units with their high degree of mobility will become as much a part of the unit as the truck, armored vehicles, cannons, or other ground equipment they replace.

The aircraft used for these purposes are designed to fly low over the immediate battle area and live and be maintained in the field with the combat soldier. They depend for their survival upon their maneuverability, their armament, their ability to make their movements conform to the terrain, and form a highly coordinated pattern of tactical operation.

Their primary role is to contribute to combat superiority on the ground by providing improved battlefield mobility for ground combat forces.

While increasing the Army's tactical mobility in the battle area, air mobile operation will not reduce the Army's reliance on the Air Force for air support — i. e., strategic airlift, intra-theater airlift, troop carrier operation, long range reconnaissance, interdiction of the battle area, counter-air and close air support. sively as student officer, instructor and secretary of the college.

Before entering the Army War College in 1952, Gen. Rich joined the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., as regimental executive officer. Later he served as G-3 and chief of staff of the 82nd.

In September, 1953, the general took command of the 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division in Korea. Before returning to the United States in 1954, he was deputy chief of staff of IX Corps.

Gen. Rich then served in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel in Washington until April, 1958.

The following month he became assistant commanding general of the 101st Division. He remained in this assignment for 15 months before being named commandant of cadets at the U.S. Military Academy where he served until he assumed command of the "Screaming Eagles."

The general was promoted to his present rank July. 1, 1961.

Among his awards and decorations are the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal, Army Commendation Medal, French Legion of Honor, French Croix de Guerre with two Palms, Polish Order of Ptlonia Restituta IV Class and Belgian Croix Militaire Pre Classe.

New CG

and Fort McPherson formed on Hedekin Field. He later met with representatives of the news media in his first press conference here.

Prior to his leaving Berlin in January, Lt. Gen. Watson received the Distinguished Service Medal, the Nation's highest peacetime award "for exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility," from Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., commander-in-chief, U. S. Army, Europe.

During his tour in Germany, Gen. Watson was 24th Infantry Division Artillery commander from Sept., 1958, to March, 1960. Promoted to major general, he commanded the 3rd Infantry Division from April, 1960, to April, 1961.

He was commanding general, U. S. Army, Berlin, and U. S. commander of Berlin from May, 1961, to Jan., 1963. In these positions, he was the U. S. representative on the Allied Kommandatura in Berlin.

mander of USCONARC, Jan 15.

"Deep. . .Pride'

"It is with a deep sense of pride, responsibility, happiness, and humility that I join you here today," Gen. Waters told those assembled for his arrival, which occurred on the eighth anniversary of the establishment of USCONARC. "We will strive together to maintain the outstanding record that each of you have achieved under the able leadership of Gen. (Herbert B.) Powell!"

Gen. Powell retired Jan. 31, at USCONARC, climaxing a 43-year military career.

This is General Waters' second tour at this headquarters command. He served here as deputy chief of staff for materiel developments from January, 1958, until April, 1960.

"My family and I look forward to our life here at Fort Monroe," the general said, "renewing old acquaintances and making new friendships."

Division

over; in the area of Air Force tactical air transport, additional support will probably be required to operate aerial lines of communications.

The air mobile concept and tactics to be tested are the result of studies ordered by Secreary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and conducted by a board headed by Lt. Gen. Hamilton H. Howze. These tactics have now become possible through the advances in light aviation technology made over the last several years. New tactics take full advantage of the serious gain in counter-insurgency operations. In addition, they will give an infinite capability to operate over the widely dispersed frontages and depth that can be expected to develop in any tactical operation involving nuclear weapons.

The commanding general of The Infantry Center will be test director for this program. He will locally be responsible for all activities involving the organization and training of the test units and for the conduct of the test which will follow.

CONARC Control

The test units will be under the control of the U. S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va., for the organization and training portion of the program. The Army's new Combat Development Command at Fort Belvoir, Va., will supervise the development and implementation of appropriate Army tests and evaluations.

While some of the units which will be used in these tests are already in existence, additional personnel and materiel resources must be provided, and personnel must be trained in the special skills required for air mobile operation. In addition, basic and advanced unit training of the test units must be completed prior to the initiation of field testing.

The Army training and test program is essentially a test of tactical teams, which will involve a series of field exercises designed to determine the combat capability of air mobile units under a wide range of warfare and terrain condition.

Maneuvers will commence with small unit problems with squad and platoon size and progress through company and battalion size problems to larger unit exercise. The field exercises are designed to evaluate the capability of the air mobile unit to shoot, move and communicate, and the effectiveness of the Army rotary wing aircraft as a means of resupplying these type units actively engaged in combat.

Personnel for the test organization will come from units stationed here, Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Rucker, Ala.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Fort Riley, Kan.

So far as possible, the integrity of existing units will be retained as they are fitted into the test organization. Selected personnel will be used to bring units up to full test strength and to provide needed specialists.

The Army tests are a prelude to a later joint test to be conducted under the direction of CINCStrike.

Fort Benning welcomed Gen. Kinnard with an honors ceremony on Chapel Field at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Highlighting the ceremony was an 11-gun salute provided by Battery A, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Artillery. Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, served as reviewing officer.

Gen. Kinnard, who has been at Fort Campbell since July, comes to his new post with over 20 years experience in the airborne.

The 1939 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy participated in the Normandy, Rhineland, Ardennes and Central Europe Campaigns during World War II. On the eve of D-Day, he parachuted into Normandy and six days later became commander of the 1st Battalion, 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment, which had become a permanent attachment of the 101st Airborne Division.

For his services in the war, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart. His foreign decorations include the Knight, Military Order of William from the Netherlands; Belgium Order of Leopold, Officer of the Crown, and the Croix de Guerre with Palme from both Belgium and France.

Col. Merchant Will Address Post P-TA

Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant, preventive dentistry officer, will be guest speaker at the post P-TA at 8 p.m. Feb. 12 at Faith School.

He will speak on child dental health in connection with the observance of National Child Dental Health Week this week.

The address follows a week of assembly talks in the Children's Schools by dental officers of the post.

Col. Cauger To Address Engineers

Lt. Col. Paul Cauger Jr., deputy district engineer of the Jacksonville, Fla., Army District, will be principal speaker at the Feb. 7 luncheon meeting of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Society of American Military Engineers.

The meeting is scheduled for 12 noon at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Col. Cauger's topic will be "Corps of Engineers Constructional Activities at Cape Canaveral."

Reservations may be made by telephoning LI 5-1491 or 5-2292.

The lieutenant came to the post from Hawaii where he was a member of Company B, 1st Battle Group, 35th Infantry.

Lt. Scooler served in the active Army Reserve from 1954 to 1957. After graduating from the Non-Commissioned Officer School at Ford Ord, Calif., he entered the active Army as a sergeant.

While serving in Korea, he was twice selected as Battle Group Non-Commissioned Officer-of-the-Month. Later, at Fort Hood, Tex., he won the Division and the Post Non-Commissioned Officer - of-the Month competition.

Awards

As outstanding Infantry OCS graduate, Lt. Scooler will receive a scroll, an inscribed service pistol and a check.

The Patterson Award was made possible by 120 friends of Secretary Patterson, headed by Winthrop Rockefeller and the late Gen. Julius Ochs Adler. They created a trust fund of $16,000 from which the annual memorial awards are made.

Nomination for the award is made by the secretary of the Army.

Robert P. Patterson's 21 years of government work included military service that earned for him the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart. He served as an enlisted man on border patrol duty in 1916 and as an officer in France in 1918 and 1919.

He was judge of the U. S. District Court, Southern New York District and a member of the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit before his appointment as assistant secretary of war July 21, 1940. He was named undersecretary of war Dec. 19, 1940, and Sept. 19, 1945, succeeded Henry L. Future Combat Chow Predicted as Yummy

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Nobody in the military service, past or present, will believe it.

Nevertheless, scientists say the combat soldier of tomorrow not only will eat his chow but like it too.

The National Academy of Sciences reports that "the foods for tomorrow's combat soldier, sailor and airman will look better, taste better and be better preserved; will be more acceptable, more edible, more digestible, more nutritious, more easily delivered and in and more easily prepared for consumption. They may even cost less than military foods of the past.

Equally important, they will also generate and maintain a high level of well-being and combat effectiveness in the fighting man, a spokesman said.

Meals for the serviceman of tomorrow will come in three categories: Ready-to-eat, heat-and-eat and ready-to-cook. Which one a soldier gets will depend on how closely anyone he is with the enemy.

Thanks to improved drying and heat radiation preserving methods, some 44 foods have been developed for consumption in the field without fuss or preparation.

Versatility Comes In Variety of Forms

Our modern Army is the most versatile fighting force our nation has ever known. It is indeed competent in many things, from small civic action operations to employment of powerful fighting forces supported by nuclear firepower; from movement by foot to rapid air moves over great distances.

Some measure of the variety of our abilities is found in the far-reaching range of places where American soldiers serve in these times. We are on every continent, in 80 countries of the world; in climates from the antarctic to rain forests; in terrain from desert to mountain to jungle; in cities, in wastelands, and on tropical islands; on the oceans, on the rivers, and on ice caps. Few places in the free world do not call on the service of the United States Army.

Versatility, of course, comes in many forms; in weapons, in equipment, in organization, and in tactics, for example. These four are all important but none so much so as a fifth: versatility in men. Without soldiers capable of directing and using the tools of versatility, they can have no meaning.

The United States Army fighting man must be mentally, physically, and psychologically able to move rapidly from one task to another. His training must be such that he can make this shift without loss of essential effectiveness. His outlook on his role in the service must never be narrowed to the limits of his particular primary assignment.

Information, Please!

Department of Defense Directive 1332.18 sets forth guidelines to insure that military personel receive uniform treatment under laws governing separation for physical disability.

"The United States and the United Nations," "The Sino-Indian Conflict," and "What Next In Berlin?" are all titles of For Commanders published by the office of Armed Information and Education, Department of Defense.

"Lessons Learned — The Philippines: 1946-1953," ALERT NO. 6A, provides a case study of some of the methods used by the Government of the Republic of the Philippines after World War II to eliminate the Huk movement, which threatened for a time to bring the Philippines under Communist domination. The pamphlet, published by the office of Armed Forces Information and Education, Department of Defense, is a supplement to Alert No. 6, "The Third Challenge — Unconventional Warfare."

Department Of The Army Pamphlet 20-62 "Africa, Its Problems and Prospects," contains information on the strategic, political, and economic factors that are emerging in Africa along with the upsurge of independence.

Voluntary Active Duty For Warrant Officers is the subject of Department of the Army Circular 601-7. The circular announces a program for the procurement of warrant officers with certain MOS qualifications for active Army duty.

Department of The Army Circular 37-24 calls attention to requirements for certificates and, or statements of nonavailability and, or impractibility (of utilization) of government quarters and mess. The certificates are necessary to support a member's claim for travel reimbursement.

Safety is the main theme of two Department of the Army publications, AR 385-55, "Prevention of Motor Vehicle Accidents," and DA Pamphlet 385-1, "Unit Safety Management."

DUSA Gala Charity Event Is Set for Tomorrow Night

CIGARETTE GIRLS ARE READY FOR BUSINESS

Tomorrow is the big night for Fort Benning officers and guests —the Daughters of the United States Army will present their annual gala charity event, the 49er Party, at the Main Officers' Open Mess and Supper Club, from 7 p.m. until 2 a.m.

Last year, over $7,000 was raised by the party for post charities, and Col. John F. Staples, military co-ordinator, has expressed the hope that even that figure will be topped this year.

Games, under the management of Col. Ralph L. Whitt, have been greatly expanded this year, and more space has been given the party in the club. In addition to the games, there will be bingo, handled by Col. and Mrs. N. I. Fooks.

Heads Entertainment

Mrs. Michael Downes has charge of entertainment, and, with Master of Ceremonies Maj. Daniel French, will present solos, accordian, guitar, a quartet, and can-can dancers, who are being coached by a professional dancing teacher, Rossie Gilmore.

Miss Gilmore operates the Fort Benning Ballet School, under the sponsorship of the officers' Wives' Club of the 2nd Infantry Division. She has danced professionally in New York, and is the artistic director of the Ballet Guild of Columbus. Mrs. Kathy Welch and her taxi dancers will sell dances to the guests.

There will be food, hot and cold, served from Maggie's Chuck Wagon from 7 p.m. until midnight, with breakfast served from midnight until 2:30 a.m.

Prizes are in store for the best and most appropriate costumes. Roving photographers will take pictures of the guests at their request. The Junior Army Daughters Association will operate a White Elephant Booth from 7 until 10:30 p.m.

Nursery Extends Hours

Tot Town Nursery will remain open until the party is over, with special rates for those attending the 49er Party.

Tickets are on sale through the units on post, at social functions, and will be sold at the door the night of the party.

There will be a horse-back parade on Main Post Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1 p.m., with Maggie's Chuck Wagon and mounted riders from the Junior Hunt Club of Fort Benning. The riders will be attired in western dress.

Chairmen are: Mrs. Michael J. Lally Jr., president of DUSA, and overall co-ordinator; Mrs. Michael C. Cornwell, cigarette girls; Mrs. William R. Lehrfeld, publicity; Mrs. Charles P. Saint, decorations; Mrs. William Bloemsma, advisor to the Junior Army Daughters Association.

Nursery Hours Are Extended For Party

Tot Town Nursery, sponsored by the Daughters of the United States Army, will remain open until 3 a.m. February 10 for parents going to 49er Party.

Special rates of 25 for one child, 35 cents for two children and 45 cents three or more children in the same family will be in effect. Discount cards may also be used at this time.

Patrons must have tickets to the party at time of registering children to be eligible for low rate. Refreshments and party favors will be furnished the children by DUSA.

Gen. Powell Says Farewell to Army

FORT MONROE, Va. — Gen. Herbert B. Powell bade a soldier's farewell to the Army he has served for more than 43 years in emotion-tinged ceremonies at this historic military post Jan. 31.

The veteran Infantryman, retiring as head of the U. S. Continental Army Command, bowed out in a blaze of military glory which included a thunderous 17-gun artillery salute and a last ride from the parade ground to the gates of Fort Monroe in a carriage drawn by two white horses, along a street cordoned with soldiers.

"Mrs. Powell and I are deeply touched by the honors accorded us this morning. . . I leave the Army with great honor, accepting the honor with thanks to the officers and men who have served with me," the general said in a voice filled with emotion.

Aides Heads List

Under Secretary of the Army Stephen Ailes headed the list of visiting dignitaries. He presented Gen. Powell the U. S. Army Chief of Staff's Scroll in recognition of "long and distinguished service to the Army and to the Nation."

The Oregon Distinguished Service Award was presented to Gen. Powell, a native of Monmouth, by Maj. Gen. Donald W. McGowan, Chief of the Army National Guard Bureau, as a token of "the admiration and respect of his comrades-in-arms and the citizens of Oregon."

Official host for the ceremonies was Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, deputy commanding general, Reserve Forces, Headquarters USCONARC, assisted by Maj. Gen. Briard P. Johnson, chief of staff, USCONARC.

On hand to add an aura of pomp and pageantry to the scene were the blue-clad Army Band and troops from the 1st Battle Group, 3rd Infantry (The Old Guard), Fort Myer, Va.; the Old Guard Fife and Drum Corps, costumed in Revolutionary War uniforms; and Fort Monroe units including the U. S. Continental Army Band and the 559th Military Police Company.

Flags Fly

Thousands of spectators formed a half circle around Fort Monroe's Continental Park, overlooking Hampton Roads, and watched intently from the porch and steps of a nearby hotel as the ceremonies got under way at 10 a.m. under gray skies. Flags of the 50 States and the Territories fluttered in the chill breeze contributed to the pageantry of the occasion.

Following the reading of the retirement order, Gen. Powell and Mrs. Powell said their farewells and then entered the Colonial equipage to be driven to the gates of Fort Monroe. Here they departed by sedan for a vacation at Jekyl Island, Ga., described by Gen. Powell as "our first real vacation in 15 years."

For Gen. Powell the events were the final tribute in a career which began in 1919 when, as a youth not quite 16, he enlisted in the National Guard in his home state of Oregon and started down the long trail of Army service followed by members of his family since Colonial days, in all our country's wars.

Once Beguiling CG

The trail led to many places —to Cooks and Bakers School in the early years, after commissioning via the University of Oregon ROTC program; to Europe during World War II as chief of staff of the 75th Infantry Division; to the remote Yalu River where in November, 1950, as a colonel commanding a regimental combat team, he planted the United States flag; to Fort Benning, home of the Infantry.

When Herbert B. Powell, after 33 years of service, exchanged his colonel's eagles for a brigadier general's star in 1952, things began to move very fast indeed. The Army, which he had followed for so long, began to follow him in increasing part.

From his three-star post as deputy commanding general for Reserve Forces at Headquarters, USCONARC, 1958-1960, he went briefly to Georgia to command the Third U.S. Army. He returned to Fort Monroe on Oct. 1, 1960, with four stars on his broad shoulders, to command the Army's largest peacetime military training establishment.

During his tenure the command, the Army's largest, experienced such major developments as the call-up of the Reservists in 1961, a major reorganization, and the tense weeks of the Cuban crisis, when Gen. Powell commanded U. S. Army Forces, Atlantic (USARLANT).

It was soldiering all the way, and those who know Gen. Powell agree that the Army couldn't have had a better man for the long pull.

Engineers Celebrate Eighth Anniversary

By Sp5 Dwaine S. Lott

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 151st Engineer Group Combat, held ceremonies at Victory Lodge Jan. 26 in joint commemoration of its eighth anniversary and of the 20th anniversary of its parent unit, the 82nd Engineer Combat Regiment.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center had the following words of praise for the group:

"On this anniversary of the activation of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 151st Engineer Group (C), I wish to extend congratulations and best wishes to all members of the command. At the same time, I would like to express my appreciation for the excellent assistance and cooperation being rendered by the unit to further the accomplishment of the overall mission at the United States Army Infantry Center."

The Engineer Group also received letters of congratulations and best wishes from Lt. Gen. Walter K. Wilson Jr., chief of engineers, Washington, D. C., and from Col. P. V. Kieffer Jr., Third U. S. Army engineer, on behalf of the commanding general, Third United States Army.

During the recent ceremony at Victory Lodge, wives and children watched their husbands and fathers celebrate the occasion in competitive games.

During the course of the egg-tossing contest between men and their wives, at least one wife was heard to protest her unscheduled egg-shampoo as her hands clasped the broken egg over her head.

A complete buffet dinner, sparked by charcoal - broiled steak, was served the men and their dependents, and was climaxed by a magnificently decorated cake, all prepared under the guidance and supervision of the Headquarters Company commander, Capt. Thomas McMurray.

Distinctive brochures of the unit history were presented to all personnel as momentos of the anniversary festivities.

The 151st Engineer Group, commanded by Col. Mahlon E. Gates, is primarily responsible for construction support for The Infantry Center and for providing many assorted teams for domestic emergencies.

In the summer months, the group has the important mission of providing training and logistical support to thousands of Reserve engineer troops undergoing active duty training here.

The group was awarded campaign streamers during World War II for its participation in operations in Normandy, Northern France, the Rhineland and Central Europe.

'Red Carpet' Unrolled To Greet Dobol

The senior ranking noncommissioned officer in the U. S. Army Friday arrived for a two-day visit with the 2nd Infantry Division. Ceremonies were held during the weekend honoring the 29-year veteran.

Sgt. Maj. Theodore L. Dobol, a member of the 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Kan., was honored here by the 2nd Division's 26th Infantry, a unit which will be deactivated soon under the Army's new Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Met By Spaders

Dobol, who previously served as sergeant major of the 26th Infantry for over 22 years, was met on arrival by Sgt. Maj. Benjamin C. Franklin, the current sergeant major of the battle group, and other "Blue Spaders" who have served in the unit for the past eight years. He then inspected the color and honor guards and was welcomed by Col. Arlin J. Kehe, commander of the 26th.

After being presented with honorary membership in the 2nd Division by the division commander, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, Sgt. Maj. Dobol and Maj. Gen. John F. Ruggles, from the office of the Secretary of Defense, cut a symbolic ribbon officially dedicating the "Blue Spaders" trophy room.

The party then moved to Essebagger Field where men of the 26th Infantry conducted their last review ceremony under their present pentomic organization, in honor of Dobol. On the reviewing stand with the sergeant major were Gen. Billingslea, Gen. Ruggles, Col. Kehe, Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Division commanders.

Gen. Corley, who is one of the most decorated infantrymen on active duty today, served with Dobol in the 26th Infantry during World War II.

Three-Battalion Parade Is First Step for ROAD

By Bob deCamara

First changes in structure of the combat-ready 2nd Infantry Division took place Friday at ceremonies on Wetherby Field, bringing this unit closer to reorganization announced early this year by Department of Army.

Following plans outlined in the Army's Reorganization Objective, Army Divison (ROAD) concept, the "Indianhead" division traded in two battle groups for three battalions.

First in Army

The 2nd Division is the first of the old Army divisions to undergo reorganization. Orders read at Wetherby Field changed the designation of the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry and the 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry to the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

These three battalions combine with the headquarters company to form the divisions new 3rd Brigade. It is under the command of Col. Lucien F. Keller, former commander of the 2nd's 23rd Infantry.

The sister battle groups of the two reorganized at Fort Benning are the 1st Battle Groups, 9th and 23rd Infantry. These two have been transferred on paper from Alaska to the 2nd Division to help form the 3rd Brigade.

The commanders of the already-formed battalions are Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry; Lt. Col. John H. Cockran, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry; and Lt. Col. Jack Samson, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

First Units Go Through Instruction

By 1st Infantry PIO

After years of intensive training with weapons and tools of the "Modern Army," 1st Infantry soldiers this week learned what it is like to fight a war with knives, string, matches, hammers, spears, bow and arrow, and most important — imagination.

First to be given the 2nd Division's new Counter Guerrilla Reaction training, men of Company E, 1st Infantry, spent this week in the woods, learning all about unconventional warfare.

Returning Saturday

The soldiers moved out Sunday morning and are expected back noon Saturday from the special course.

The division's Counter Guerrilla Reaction Course is being developed into an annual cycle for company-size units for a full week period. The purpose is to teach small infantry units tactics of action and reaction when confronted with guerrilla type warfare. Special emphasis is being placed on the individual soldier.

Tough and realistic training that can be applied in any type of terrain, either arctic or tropical, is the prime objective of the course.

Beginning the course Monday, the first station was "Survival," where the men were taught how and where to find water, what to eat, and how to prepare it.

to kill, skin, clean and prepare a rabbit over a fire.

The next station was "Field Craft" where SSgt. Billie Morgan, of Headquarters Company, showed the men differ-

Experience Not a Must For Chorus

Experience is not necessarily a prerequisite for joining the 2nd Division Chorus, but it would be welcome.

Currently in formative stages, a chorus is being organized, using the division band as a nucleus. Any member of a 2nd Division unit is eligible to try out. According to a recent release, "It is desirable but not imperative that participants in this chorus have previous choral experience. A good singing voice is the most important requirement."

Anyone interested in joining the chorus is urged to contact, through his unit commander, the division bandmaster for an audition.

The proposed chorus will perform at division functions and by request at unit activities, service clubs and day's reorganization review was Lt. Col. Richard A. Perkins Jr., former deputy commander of the 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry.

Following talks by Col. Clifford P. Hamnum, former commander of the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry, and Col. Kellery, the green tabs of leadership of the 3rd Brigade were presented to Col. Keller by the division's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea. Col. Keller then presented leadership tabs to the three battalion commanders. The ceremony concluded with a brigade review and refreshments, served on the field.

ent kinds of traps and how to make them. Among these traps were the hanging snare and the fixed snare traps.

Building Fires

Proceeding to a third station, they were shown different methods of building fires and the usage of both warming fires and cooking fires.

Station Four showed SFC Raymond McEntree of Company D, 1st Infantry, showing different kinds of shelters and how they are constructed. The main thing pointed out here was the speed involved in erecting a shelter.

Continuing on, the men next encountered the weapons station where SSgt. Wade Humphrey of Company E, 1st Infantry, showed how to construct crude defense weapons such as the stone hammers, spear, and the bow and arrow.

Sgt. Rufus Solomon, Combat Support Company, 1st Infantry, then showed how to construct fish traps and the many different ways to catch fish. Demonstrated were the arrow shape trap, the maze trap and the tidal wave trap, the last of which is used along shorelines.

On Tuesday the men scaled mountains and trained in aerial resupply. They also attended classes on introduction to counter - guerrilla operations and patrolling.

Under patrolling they learned steps involved in planning a patrol, actions taken at the objective, after which they had a demonstration of a raid on a guerrilla camp.

Subsequent training included an introduction to ambushes, including a demonstration film.

The last three days of the course saw Company E conducting a company problem designed to bring out the points taught during the first three days.

'1st' Sgt. Re-Ups For Own Vacancy

Sgt. Jose Brenes Escobar, Company A, 1st Infantry, recently reenlisted for an additional three years duty to fill his own vacancy as a team leader.

Marksmen Sweep Benning Pistol Match Expert Class

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

The pistol-packin' 2nd Division Marksmanship Detachment, only recently formed, last weekend sauntered to a clean sweep of "Expert" awards at the Fort Benning Monthly Open Pistol Matches.

Detachment "Expert" firers captured first place in every match in the expert classification. This was the first 1963 season appearance for the division's firing unit.

Commander Scores

Scoring for the detachment were Lt. Ray Carney, detachment commander; SSgt. Jesse Yearta, and SSgt. Carl Hawks.

Sgt. Hawks was declared grand aggregate winner in the expert classification with a score of 2478x45.

Expert teams also competed in the master classification though they were not eligible to place. Competition in this class included teams from the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, Third U. S. Army, Fourth U. S. Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps.

Plans are underway to represent the division at the forthcoming Snowflake Match to be held at Fort Benning the last weekend of February. This three-day match includes a team match in .45 Caliber service ammunition in addition to the normal .22 Caliber, Center Fire and the .45 Caliber team matches.

Looking forward to the upcoming contests, detachment commander, Lt. Carney, confided, "I feel sure we will do well in the Snowflake Matches if there are enough "Expert" teams to justify team awards in this classification. The minimum is five team entries."

Taking first place in every "Expert" match at the recent Fort Benning Monthly Open, members of the detachment won with the following scores:

.22 Caliber:

Slow fire—Yearta, 190x8; Timed Fire — Hawks, 196x8; Rapid Fire — Yearta, 196x7; National Match Course — Yearta, 288x7; Aggregate winner — Yearta, 868x30.

Center Fire:

Slow Fire — Hawks, 176x3; Timed Fire — Hawks, 189x4; Rapid Fire — Carney, 188x3; National Match Courses — Hawks, 276x7; Aggregate winner — Hawks, 822 x 15.

.45 Caliber:

local community affairs.

The new chorus will be built around the existing division band chorus made up of 34 band members. The objective of forming this group is to have a membership truly representative of the entire "Indianhead" division, and one which can perform on notice at any suitable occasion.

Dimes March Comes 'Live'

By George Aubin

A human testimonial to the work being carried on by the March of Dimes was brought to the men of Company A, 1st Infantry at their mess hall on Kelley Hill recently.

Mr. Julian Edge, March of Dimes Chairman for the Area National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis, was invited by the men of Company A to speak to them on the March of Dimes and the Work of the National Foundation of Infantile Paralysis.

With Several Patients

Mr. Edge, accompanied by Mrs. Lucy Britt, Area Secretary for the foundation, and several patients living in the surrounding area, gave the men a short history of the Foundation and the March of Dimes and then told them about the work being carried on locally and at Warm Springs, Ga.

Mr. Edge pointed out that the March of Dimes was the fund-raising organization for the foundation and that the foundation carried out the work and research in the fight against polio, arthritis and birth defects.

"Close to $30,000 was raised in this area last year and we hope to do the same this year. Of the funds raised, 25 per cent will be used for research with half of the remaining 75 per cent being sent to the national foundation and the other half to be used locally," said Mr. Edge.

At the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Edge passed out pamphlets on the March of Dimes and the work of the Area National Foundation to the men of Company A and invited them to come forward and talk to the people he had brought with him.

Armed with coffee, milk and cake provided by the mess hall and led by PFC Max L. Ervin, the men of Company A slowly drifted to the table where the patients were seated. They came in ones and twos at first, but soon Mrs. Richard Williams, Miss Carolyn Harrell, David Collins and Hoyle Peacock were completely surrounded by smiling and joking "Always Firsters." The men laughed and joked and listened while Mrs. Williams, who has had 19 operations, described the facilities at famous Warm Springs. "The facilites are wonderful. . . and spirit and morale are very high," said Mrs. Williams. She went on to tell about the various shops such as the brace shop where leg braces are made, the psychology department which encourages patients to develop their abilities and aptitudes to the fullest, the therapeutic pool for early polio and arthritic patients and all the many other facilites available to patients.

As the afternoon drew to a close, the men of Company A said their goodbyes and returned to their barracks while Mr. Edge and Mr. Lawton Grantham, who had arranged to transport the patients to Kelley Hill, returned the patients to their homes.

That night, the men of Company A, 1st Infantry went to bed with personal accounts of what their nickels and dimes, contributed to the March of Dimes, are doing for the many people in need of this aid in the United States.

Signal Maintenance Officer Signs Off

By 122nd Signal PIO

Retirement ceremonies were held recently for CWO Theodore W. Whipple of the 122nd Signal Battalion.

Receiving a Certificate of Appreciation signed by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff, the warrant officer served since April 1961 as division signal maintenance officer.

Sergeant Major Greeted with the 26th Infantry as a young lieutenant in 1931, commented on his experiences with the "Blue Spaders." He recalled how the skills of an infantryman were often taught him by the sergeants of his unit. Such colorful old sergeants as "Bonehead" Harrison and "One-eyed" Taylor were recalled by the general as he paid tribute to Army sergeants and Sgt. Maj. Dobol in particular.

The senior ranking NCO in the Army began his military career in 1933 and after a short tour in Panama, joined the 26th Infantry in 1940 to begin a stay that was to last 22 consecutive years. While with the 26th, he held every enlisted rank from private to sergeant major.

Fighting throughout World War II with the "Blue Spaders," Dobol earned four Silver Stars, the Bronze Star Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters and five purple Hearts.

Dobol left the 26th Infantry in August 1962 to assume duties as sergeant major of the 1st Battle Group, 5th Infantry, at Fort Riley, Kan. The sergeant major, upon his departure from Fort Benning, returned to Fort Riley, and a new assignment — as sergeant major of the newly activated 2nd Battle Group, 26th Infantry, now located there.

Named Year's Best

Came From Behind to Win

By Colin Higgins

Editor's Note: This is the second of two articles on men chosen top soldiers for 1963 in the 2nd Infantry Division. The information for this article was compiled after PSgt. Hanson was selected as Noncommissioned officer - of - the - Year for 1963. These are articles on the 2nd Division's "Best."

PSgt. Melvin M. Hanson's chronicle of success is a maddening story of the almost-ran who ended up running and winning despite the obstacles.

PSGT. MELVIN HANSON

First Picked Alternate

It all began in September 1960 when the recently arrived sergeant of 9th Infantry's Company E was chosen to represent the battle group as "alternate noncom" in the division's competition for Noncommissioned Officer-of-the-Year. This is where he got his first look at the annual competition — from the sidelines.

Two years later history repeated itself and Sgt. Hanson was chosen to represent the 9th, again only as the alternate competitor. Starting off this year's competition in the second spot, the sergeant watched "from the wings" as candidates began a rigorous training program in September.

Crises in Oxford, Miss., and Cuba resulted in postponement of the selection of the Soldiers-of-the - Year.

Just before Christmas holidays the division set another date for the competition. Testing would come January 7. The chosen sergeants again began their intensive training schedules and the division waited anxiously for the results.

Then fate entered the picture and the 9th Infantry's first place competitor was suddenly ordered to Airborne training and the amazed Sgt. Hanson was asked to represent the 9th officially.

Readily agreeing, the man, who admits that he "never expected to go," left his commander's office realizing he had little more than three weeks to get in shape for the gruelling competition.

Adding up his strengths and weaknesses, Sgt. Hanson found that his major fear would be the physical training test where he would be pitted against sergeants who had been training for this since September. Working out with a friend every morning at Weatherby Field, he concentrated on grenade throwing and cutting seconds off his mile run.

Studies Drill, CBR

In the afternoon he studied general military subjects, brushing up on such subjects as drill, the manual of arms and Chemical, Biological and Radiological warfare.

At this time also he began preparing his 30 - minute class lecture which later turned out to be one of his strongest point - getters. Out of a selection of eight topics Sgt. Hanson chose "the Control of Interest," a topic that has interested him since his teaching days at the Fort Benning Infantry School. His speech, aided with charts and visual aids, explained the ways and means available to keep a class continually interested in the subject being taught.

A 2nd Division Special

Finally the big day came.

On Monday morning Sgt. Hanson took the P.T. test, feeling that he had lost too many points at his old buddle-grenade throwing. That afternoon he took the written test answering over 100 essay-type questions on a wide variety of military topics.

His hopes rose after the delivering of his speech on Tuesday and the Board appearance on Wednesday left him hopeful but by no means sure he had even come close to winning.

Thursday saw the contestants lined up at Wetherby Field in front of many military and civilian spectators including Sgt. Hanson's wife, Ardelle, and his nine-year-old son, Ricky. Tension mounted as Maj. Gen. Billingslea began his speech. He thanked all the participants for the fine efforts they displayed throughout the testing and awarded all of them 2nd Division Certificates of Achievements. He then announced the winner. "I was more surprised than anyone," said Sgt. Hanson, the 2nd division Sergeant for 1963.

The top sergeant of the 2nd Division has over 14 years service with the Army.

Sgt. Hanson entered the Army in 1948 and took his basic training at Fort Riley, Kan. In 1949 he was assigned to the 6th Infantry Regiment in Berlin, Germany, and stayed in Europe for the next six years. During this time he managed to travel around Europe making a special visit to Norway and Denmark where some of his father's relations live.

In 1954 he returned to the U. S. and was assigned to the Reserve Officers Training Corps instructor group at the University of Miami. He stayed there until 1957 when he went to the Fort Gordon Infantry Center and then to the Fort Benning Infantry School where he was assigned to the Weapons Department. Here he taught both Officer Candidate School and Basic Officer Courses.

A tour in Keflevik, Iceland from May 1959 to March 1960 preceded his arrival to the 2nd Division. Keflevick is remembered as a tree-less, molten - lava rock, covered with sparse moss and permiated with the strong smell of dead fish from the local fleets in the bay.

Sgt. Hanson has been awarded the Expert Rifleman's Badge for both the M-1 rifle and the 106 milimeter recoiless rifle. In March 1953 he was the honor graduate of the 7th Army NCO Academy in Munich, Germany.

With Flowers and Birds

Artillery Luncheon Greets Spring

The ladies of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery recently held a luncheon at the Super Club Lounge of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Host unit for this function was the 12th Artillery. Mrs. Terence Huck was assisted by Mesdames Dillard Jones, Clifford Phifer, Robert Farr, James Compton, Jack Goodwin, Jame Price, Paul Pienody, Thomas Callahan, and Don Simanton in the planning of this festivity.

"Spring Is Just Around The Corner" proved to be an apt theme for the decorations. The ladies were looking for an early Spring and decided upon the use of seasonal flowers and artificial birds to carry out their motif. Green tablecloths covered the dining table and served as the ideal back-drop for the artificial snow used to bid farewell to "Old Man Winter" and the spring flowers chosen to greet "Milady Miss Spring." Bluebirds, snow birds, robins, and redbirds artfully arranged in this setting completed the scene. A spring flower centerpiece placed on the head table served as the luncheon's doorprize.

Three women, Mrs. Robert Garner, Mrs. James Ritchie, and Mrs. Leslie Preston, who will be leaving soon were bade farewell. Mesdames Joseph Boisvert, Charles Andes, Joel Gleen, Robert Langley, Daniel Redner, Quentin Fagan, Riley Pelzer, Thomas Simonovich, Steven Snipes, Charles Cobb, and Victor Dallas were welcomed to the unit.

Honored guests attending the event were Mrs. Charles Billingslea, Mrs. Stanley Harding, Mrs. John Corley, and Mrs. Sydney Sacerdote. On behalf of the ladies of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery, Mrs. Ralph K. Jones presented to Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Sacerdote a farewell remembrance. Each lady received a silver bowl.

Other guests also attending the luncheon were Miss Mary Beth Harding, Mrs. Thomas Valenteen, and Mrs. Michael Cornwell.

Distaff Profile

Collecting Cat Figurines Is Hobby of Mrs. Carter

BY JAMIE ROEDER

The distaff profile this week features Mrs. William C. Carter Jr., wife of Lt. Col. Carter who commands the 2nd Engineer Battalion of the 2nd Infantry Division. The Carters and their two children, Candace, 14, and Ray, 12, arrived at Fort Benning in the fall of 1962 from an assignment in Germany.

Their daughter, by the way, prefers to be known as "Candy" and is a freshman at Columbus High School. Ray attends Faith School at Fort Benning and is in the sixth grade.

Mrs. Carter was born in Seneca, S. C., as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Shanklin. She was named Virginia Doyle Shanklin, but soon found herself with the nickname of "Jenny." Her family later moved to Occoquan, Va., near Alexandria, where her father now resides.

Jenny attended school there and graduated from Occoquan High School. When she entered Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va., she selected an education major in the field of Business in the College of Commerce. While at Mary Washington, she was named to the honorary sorority, Alpha Phi Sigma.

Capt. William Carter Jr. and Jenny met in 1946 at Fort Belvoir, Va., He was assigned there and Jenny was employed on the Engineer Board. Orders soon took Capt. Carter to the Panama Canal Zone as his next assignment, but not before they made plans to be married. In October of 1946, Jenny boarded a plane, flew to Panama, and was married at Quarry Heights. Daughter Candy was born in the Canal Zone.

Capt. Carter was ordered to Korea when hostilities broke out in 1951 and was later ordered from Korea to Japan, assigned to the Headquarters, Armed Forces Far East Command at Camp Zama. In 1953 the Carter family was reunited when Mrs. Carter and the children arrived in Japan.

Jenny Carter believes that in the category of "unusual experiences," the tour in Japan was the most interesting. Housing for dependents was rare and so her husband bought land in Japan and built her a house. The language barrier proved to be the major problem. As a result, one incident found the workmen diligently varnishing the floors, but without cleaning them first. They applied their varnish over mud and anything else which happened to be on the floor at the time.

Jenny also found it difficult to get used to their driving rules. They, like the British, drive on the left side of the road. Japanese money also brought problems in getting used to. She stated that this was the first place they had been assigned where she knew no one from previous tours around the world.

To top everything off, shortly after moving into their new home her husband came down with pneumonia and was hospitalized in what she called "a nice warm hospital." During this time she and the children stayed in their new home which was not yet equipped with all the modern conveniences, such as heat and plumbing. They ate at a club and did everything else at the Club as well until finally the workmen worked all one night to install one radiator. In 1963 they were ordered home to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where the major attended the Command and General Staff School.

Jenny now is a board member of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club and a member of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Michael's Church. In the past she has also been a Gray Lady and Staff Aide.

Painting, sewing, and collecting figurines of cats are her hobbies. In the Carter home are several original oils created by Jenny. When cats are mentioned as a hobby, it should be strongly emphasized!

Jenny has a keen interest and devotion to Siamese cats in general and to an individual feline named "Tina," who resides with the Carter family, in particular. "Tina" is beautiful, independent, and fully cognizant of her place as a Sealpoint Siamese member of the feline aristocracy.

Beyond her presence is a vast collection of figurines in every size and description, but always in the shape of a cat. This collection has found its niche throughout the Carter home. Jenny obtained the items of her hobby in Europe and the Far East as well as in the United States. They represent eight different countries and are molded from many different substances, such as hand - carved wood, porcelain, bone china, and alabaster, along with ceramic art.

Two Danish Army Officers Visit 38th Inf.

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany —Two Danish Army officers spent last week with the 38th Infantry to receive an orientation on the organization and operation of a mechanized infantry battle group.

The officers, Lt. Col. Poul E. Frederickson and Lt. Col. Frede Gothardsen were chiefly interested in the M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier. They were briefed on the M-113's capabilities by the battle group motor officer, Lt. Marshall D. Randall, drove the vehicles themselves, and observed Company E of the 38th move to the field on a company-sized readiness test. They then observed Company E conduct platoon and squad-sized tactical operations with the APCs.

Other highlights of the officers' visit were observation of the 32rd Artillery sponsored NATO firing demonstration, 16th Infantry tactical heliborne operations, and tank gunnery instruction with the 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 68th Armor.

The Danish lieutenant colonels also met the 8th Infantry Division commanding general, Maj. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen and received a briefing on 8th Division training procedures. The instruction also included battle group staff section briefings, observing a battle group command inspection and company classroom instruction.

Their schedule included a tour of the Baumholder Post and the surrounding community. Escort officer was Lt. John Hitti of the 38th's Company B.

Mortars Fire With NATO In Live-Fire Exercise

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany —The mortar platoon of the 38th Infantry recently joined with eight artillery battalions from three North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) nations in a massive, all-day live-firing exercise on Baumholder Range.

The NATO shoot involved a British battery, two West German batteries, and five from the 8th Infantry Division, the 38th's parent unit during the Marsemen's Germany tour.

The 38th's mortar platoon, commanded by Lt. Roderick C. Martin, was the only unit to fire mortars during the exercise. The infantrymen were invited to participate in the exercise by Lt. Col. James W. Newman, commander of the 83rd Artillery, 8th Infantry Division. The 83rd arranged the demonstration in conjunction with the exchange visit to Baumholder of the 32rd (Le Cateau) Battery, Royal Artillery, British Army of the Rhine.

The mortarmen fired two time-on-target missions and two all - available - fires missions coordinated with artillery fires and five independent missions involving adjustment of fire.

The massive firing exercise was the first in the Baumholder area in a number of years where artillery units of various NATO forces combined to fire. The addition of heavy mortars added more flavor to the program.

Observers at the massive demonstration included Lt. Gen. John H. Michaelis, V Corps commanding general, and Maj. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen, 8th Division commander.

More than 900 troops took part in the exercise.

Brown finished his college education at LaGrange College, LaGrange, Ga., and majored in social science. While attending LaGrange, Brown continued to play varsity basketball.

Basketball Starts Into Second Half

By Bob de Camara
2nd Division Sports Editor

Part two of the division basketball double round robin is set for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Winner of the second half of season basketball will meet the winner of last night's first half play-off game for the division basketball championship when the second half ends sometime this month.

Division Trains and Division Artillery battled yesterday evening for control of the first half of the "Second to None" basketball tourney. At the end of the first half of season play, both teams were locked in a 6-1 tie.

Basketball control so far this year has been contested by Trains, Artillery and the 26th Infantry. Trains had only one loss, to the 26th. Artillery, with one postponed game against the 26th to play, had one loss, to Trains in the last regularly scheduled game of the first basketball half. And as that half ended, the 26th had one loss to the 87th Infantry with the postponed game against DivArty left to play. This game saw DivArty handily defeat the 26th Infantry, 75-62, giving DivArty a 6-1 record identical to Trains and necessitating a one-game playoff before the second half of division basketball could be started.

A couple of teams in the league have the reorganization "blues." The first units reorganized in the 2nd under ROAD, the 9th and 23rd Infantries, will have a difficult time fitting the tournament schedule into their new training schedule. Because of this, it is possible that the two teams will either combine or drop one team. Commanders of the 87th and 26th Infantries, units soon to undergo reorganization, have agreed to keep their basketball teams intact for the remainder of the season.

Drag Race Trophies Won By Two 'Spaders' at PC

By 26th Infantry PIO

Two 26th Infantrymen recently captured class victories at nearby Phenix City Dragway. PFC Kenneth Goodman of Headquarters Company and PFC Howard Tabat of Company D brought the "Blue Spade" to the victory circle of the quarter-mile drags.

Goodman, a native of New York City, guided his 1962 Triumph TR-4 to victory in the F-Sports Class in the respectable time of 18.65 seconds for the quarter-mile, standing start event. He reached a top speed of 72.65 mph.

Tabat, of Patchogue, New York, and his 1955 Cadillac "Eldorado" took H-Stock Automatic honors in 18.00 seconds with top speed of 74.58 mph.

Due to light rain during the competition, the racing surface was wet and best performance was not possible. Both men feel that with better track conditions they can beat these times and continue to dominate their respective classes.

This is the first time out on the Phenix City course for both. Tabat has had drag race experience at Islip Speedway in Islip, N.Y. This was Goodman's first trip to the quarter-mile strips. He had done some road racing on an amateur basis prior to coming into the service. Goodman is serving as information clerk in "Spader" Headquarters, while the weapons platoon at Company D claims Tabat as one of its members.

1st Infantry Dumped By 'Conquerors'

By 1st Infantry PIO

The 87th Infantry basketball squad led by Ron Brooks finished the first half of the season on a winning note Monday night as they toppled the 1st Infantry, 60-44.

Brooks finished the game with 20 points, swishing the nets on nine field goals and two charity tosses. His teammate, Willie Peoples, seconded his effort with 13 points on six field goals and one foul shot.

The first half opened with the "Conquerors" fast-breaking to a seven point lead. They continued the pressure with outside shooting by Peoples and widened the gap by four points with six minutes left in the half. With two minutes left, the "Always First" team had chopped the bulge back to seven points, but as the half died, the 87th brought it back to 11 points and left the field abead 29-18.

In the second half, both teams traded baskets with the 1st working on the point spread. With 14 minutes left in the game, a long set shot by "First'er" Jimmy Chanele cut the 87th lead to seven points, 37-30. The 87th came back again, driven by Brooks, and upped the difference to 13 points. As time ran out on the clock, the 87th walked off the floor 60-44 victors.

This loss gave the 1st Infantry 3 wins and 4 losses for the first half of the season. Jimmy Chanele led the losers with 11 points on five field goals and one free throw.

Signal Sends Boxer to All-Army Trials

BY BOB DE CAMARA

The Army's second-ranking light - heavyweight boxer is training in the Military District of Washington, D. C. for another crack at the All-Army boxing trials. The trials will be held on February 22 and 23 at Fort Myer, Va.

This fighter has also been the Bavarian amateur champion, the Austrian light-heavyweight champ and the U. S. Army, Europe, light-heavy king. In addition, one of his five boxing losses, a decision, was the result of a go-round in Sweden with the amateur brother of former world heavyweight champion, Ingemar Johannson.

Boxing Trips

Twenty-two-year old Luther C. Floyd has fought with Army boxing teams in Denmark, Italy, Spain, about 15 other countries, and before top U. S. military leaders from the Pentagon at Fort McNair, Va. Currently he's holding down a mechanic's slot with 122nd Signal's Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

As a member of the STRAC 2nd Division, Floyd doesn't get to travel and train the way he used to. Getting up at 4 a.m., he does road work daily, and daily from 5 to 7 p.m., he works out in Benning's Old Post Gym. It keeps him in good shape but not in the "best shape." Now he's got his traveling papers from 3rd Army to prepare for this year's All-Army trials. For 30 days before the trials begin, Army boxers from all over the world will gather at Fort Myer to whip themselves in shape for the event.

New Positions

1st Battalion, 9th Fills Job Spaces

By 9th Infantry PIO

The newly organized 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, has set up its headquarters where 2nd Division Trains was formerly located, and is fast ironing out the problems presented by the recent organization.

Lt. Col. Paul, a combat veteran of World War II and the Korean Conflict, served as deputy commander of the 9th Infantry from August 1962 until last week when he took over his new command.

Prior to this he served for three years in Greece with the Joint United States Military Assistance Advisor Group, and for this service was awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

He entered the Army in October 1940 as an enlisted man, earned the rank of sergeant, and in June 1942 graduated from Officer Candidate School and was commissioned a second lieutenant. Lt. Col. Paul has served in Alaska, Europe, Greece, Japan, and Korea.

From 1955 to 1959 he was assigned to the Plans Division, Chief of Staff for Logistics in Washington.

Executive officer of the new battalion is Maj. Charles W. Peer, former 9th Infantry S-4 officer. The new battalion's S-4 officer is Capt. John J. Cassidy. Capt. Raymond P. Komaniecki, former assistant S-4 of the 9th Infantry, is the new battalion's adjutant.

Maj. Roy J. Herte Jr., former S-3 of the 9th, is also S-3 officer of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. The new S-2 officer is Capt. Harold P. Austin, former S-2 officer of the 23rd Infantry. Capt. Austin's section also has PSgt. Melvin M. Hanson who was recently named Division Non-Commissioned Officer-of-the-Year.

Sgt. Maj. James L. Runyon, formerly with the 9th Infantry, is also assigned to the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

In planning the reorganization of the 23rd and 9th Infantries it was one of the aims of the planning committee to maintain unit integrity and to minimize the movement of personnel.

Therefore, most of the personnel of what were formerly Companies E and D of the 23rd Infantry have been assigned to Companies A and B respectively of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. Company C, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry is basically the same unit that was formerly Company C, 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry. Lt. Shane N. Soldato has remained its commander.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry is commanded by Capt. William L. McMullen Jr. and is comprised of elements of Combat Support and Headquarters Companies of both the 23rd and the 9th Infantry. Capt. McMullen was formerly 9th Infantry motor officer.

Company A, which was formerly Company D of the 23rd, is commanded by Lt. Dick T. LeClere; and Capt. Harvey R. Hougen, former assistant S-3 of the 23rd, now commands Company B, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

This battalion is scheduled to go to Germany under Rotaplan in April.

9th Infantry Sgt. Wins Div. S-O-M

By 9th Infantry PIO

Recently named Division Soldier-of-the-Month for December was Sgt. Marion D. Masterson of Company E, 9th Infantry.

Sgt. Masterson was selected 9th Infantry Soldier of the Month in November and again in December while serving as a squad leader with Company E but was recently transferred to Company A, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

He entered the Army in December 1958 at Quincy, Ill., his home town, and received Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training with the 87th Infantry here at Fort Benning.

Upon completing AIT, Sgt. Masterson was sent to Schweinfurt, Germany, where he served with Company A, 2nd Battle Group, 38th Infantry for 25 months. During this period he attended the Non-Commissioned Officer Academy.

In August 1961 he returned to the United States and was assigned to the 1st Battle Group, 5th Infantry at Fort Riley, Kan.

He came to Company E in March 1962.

In civilian life Sgt. Masterson was a life guard and swimming instructor and was a member of the Quincy Senior High School swimming team. His team won the Illinois State Swimming Championship four years in a row, beginning in 1954.

Sgt. Masterson plans to make the Army his career.

MSgt. Bumpous Going Viet Nam

By 1st Infantry PIO

MSgt. Ernest M. Bumpous, S-3 operations sergeant of the 1st Infantry, recently received orders reassigning him to Viet Nam.

A veteran of 12 years military service, he has served at various military posts in the United States as well as tours in Korea and Germany.

Prior to joining the "Always First" in June 1961, he served as operations sergeant with the 9th Infantry.

MSgt. Bumpous will report to the United States Army Element, Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG), Viet Nam.

He is the recipient of the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Officer Gets Army Medal

The developer of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) vehicle identification system has been awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

Capt. Lon C. Alexander Jr., maintenance officer of the 12th Transportation Battalion, was presented the award at a recent retreat formation by Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., 12th Trans commander.

The Army Commendation Medal was awarded to Capt. Alexander for "meritorious service" as maintenance officer in Turkey with the Allied Land Forces, Southeastern Europe. When Capt. Alexander began his tour of duty in Turkey, NATO vehicles had no identification other than a NATO license plate. Capt. Alexander devised a three-digit license plate system on which the first number identified the vehicle's unit and the last two numbers identified the type of vehicle. A great improvement was made in the control and dispatching of vehicles.

Capt. Alexander's duty in Turkey was his last assignment before coming to the 2nd Division.

The 27-year-old captain is a 1953 graduate of Columbus High School and a graduate of Georgia Tech University.

He and his wife, Jeannine, live at 502 Claradon Ave., Columbus.

87th Thinks

Their Support Company Has a 'Bag of Tricks'

By 87th Infantry PIO

The element of surprise is sometimes worth half the battle, and the 87th Infantry considers its Combat Support Company a veritable bag of tricks.

The eye of the battle group is the reconnaissance platoon, led by Lt. Joseph C. Gross, whose mission is to scout the enemy's whereabouts and activities, and inform the battle group commander of its findings. The reconnaissance platoon's main fire power comes from two M-48 tanks, escorted by five scout jeeps carrying 30 caliber machine guns. In addition, an armored infantry squad is transported about in an armored personnel carrier mounted with a .50 caliber machine gun.

Intended to keep enemy armor from annoying the line troops is the assault weapon platoon, led by Lt. Bobbie Chavis. Five M-56 90 milimeter self - propelled anti-tank guns, each with its own ¾ ton supply truck, are assigned particularly to anti-tank warfare. Not only mobile and forceful enough to knock out any known tank, SPAT's may be used also as artillery weapons.

The third big surprise of the Combat Support Company is the mortar platoon, led by Lt. Bobbie L. Dove, whose 4.2 inch mortars can deliver devastating indirect fire on the enemy lines. Although the mortars are considered really area type weapons, they destroy with alarming regularity even pin-point targets.

Sand Hill PX Is Now Self-Serve

The Sand Hill Main Branch of the Post Exchange, primarily accommodating personnel of the 2nd Infantry Division, has been converted to self-service with central check out.

The building has been freshly painted, the aisles are wide with merchandise displayed effectively on the new fixtures.

There are three cash registers for checking out purchases and the lines move quickly.

Large picture windows have replaced small windows so that the customers may view the overall store as they enter and modern and brighter lights have replaced old fixtures.

This branch operates seven days a week from 11:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Silver Bars Given Lt. W. McKissock

In a brief ceremony held at the 2nd Engineer Battalion, Lt. William T. McKissock was promoted to first lieutenant and his bars were pinned on by Lt. Col. William C. Carter Jr., the commanding officer of the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

Lt. McKissock, a graduate of the University of Texas, majored in chemical engineering. He came to the battalion in August 1962 after a brief assignment with Company B, 577th Engineer Battalion. Upon his arrival in the battalion, Lt. McKissock was assigned as Bridge Platoon leader in Headquarters and Headquarters Company. Later he was assigned to Company E of the 2nd Engineer Battalion and is now acting as executive officer of Company E.

The Student Brigade Clinches Top Slot in Second Half Action

The Student Brigade clinched the second half title in the 1962-1963 Major Unit Basketball League Monday night at Briant Wells Field House, downing the 58th Infantry, 77-65.

The alert brigade team, possessors of a perfect 7-0 record, earned the right to meet the first half champions, the 428th Medical Battalion, for the post championship to be decided in a best two-out-of-three tournament Feb. 13 through 15.

Second Lt. Gary Daniels paced the brigade to its seventh victory, hitting 15 times from the field and popping in nine free throws for 39 points.

Daniels, a former cage star at The Citadel in Charleston, S. C., chalked up 21 of the last 27 points scored by the brigade in a 70-67 win over the 29th Infantry last week. He scored 34 for the game.

Going into the final season action the Medics will be in second place with a 5-1 mark while Center Troop Command and the 10th Artillery are locked in third place with 4-2 marks.

Fourth place is manned by the 29th Infantry at 3-3, followed by the 151st in fifth place with a 2-5 record.

The 58th Infantry is in sixth place at 1-6 and Lawson Army Aviation is in the cellar, dropping seven straight.

PFC George Bell, a guard from Lexington, Ky., is leading scorer during the second half, bombing the nets for a 28-point per game average.

Bell has poured in 167 points in six games for the Medics.

Two members of the 29th Infantry claim honors in second and third place among the scorers.

PFC Jim Norsworthy is in second place with a 25 per game average and PFC Arthur Bain of Astoria, N. Y., is in third place with a 22-point per game average.

Second Lt. Harold Deane holds the fourth position in scoring, with 126 points in six games for 21 points per game. Deane plays center for the Medics.

Georgia Tech, the best the Southeastern Conference has to offer this year, just barely squeezed out their 17th victory of the season with a win over William and Mary, 50-49.

The Jackets were given the scare of the season when Dave Hunter, the game's top point getter and standout performer for William and Mary, made a last minute effort from the backcourt. If the ball would have slipped through the net, William and Mary would have put the finishing touches on a strong second-half scoring rush in the closing three minutes of play and put a cap on top of the season's greatest upsets.

Georgia Tech definitely showed they are also victims of the so called "Bad Night" when they failed to score any of their first 14 attempts, but once again Tech relied on their game-saving bench to lead the home team to victory. This time the duties were left up to Charles Spooner and John Herbert. Herbert came off the floor after scoring 12 badly needed Georgia Tech points.

No matter how close the final score was, the Bernard R. Anderson, first sergeant of Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, has been a professional soldier for more than 20 years.

Sgt. Anderson's career began on August 6, 1926, at Baltimore, Md., after waiting six months for an appointment to enlist in the Army. He was immediately assigned to G Battery, 4th Artillery in the Panama Canal Zone for recruit training, during which time he was promoted to sergeant. A short stateside assignment with A Battery, 561 AAA Battalion at Fort Stewart, Ga., followed.

In December, 1944, Sgt. Anderson was enroute to Europe for combat duty with the 8th Infantry Division. He attained the rank of staff sergeant while assigned to the 8th, prior to returning to the states for discharge in 1945 after six months of combat.

Re-Ups

Sgt. Anderson remained a civilian for 30 months, working as a coal miner in Arthurdale, W. Va., before deciding to resume his Army career. Sgt. Anderson was assigned to the 22nd AUSA until 1949.

An assignment to F Company, 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment, at Fort Meade, Md., followed and lasted until 1950. During his tour at Fort Meade has received the rank of sergeant first class.

In 1950, Sgt. Anderson joined K Company, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, for combat in Korea. After 33 days of intensive fighting, Sgt. Anderson returned to the States, suffering from multiple wounds received from a mortar burst. He spent the next six months recovering from those wounds in Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C. Upon release from the hospital he was assigned to Fort Benning, and E Company, Infantry School Detachment, where he remained until January, 1952.

Sent Overseas

His next assignment was a third tour overseas, this time with the 88th Ordnance Company in Germany where, in 1955, he became a master sergeant.

In 1956 he returned to Fort Benning. While with Battery B, 29th Artillery (Searchlight), he received his "supergrade" promotion in 1961.

On Jan. 7, 1963, Sgt. Anderson became the new first Battery, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

The sergeant lists the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Bronze Star Medal, and Purple Heart with Cluster as his most treasured decorations.

Legion of Merit Presented Retiring Col. John Lattin

In colorful retirement ceremonies Jan. 31, Fort Benning paid tribute to the commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command, Col. John H. Lattin, who ended 30 years of service.

Preceding a review on Stilwell Field where he received the Legion of Merit, Col. Lattin was cited for his work and support of the Fort Benning Doughboys at a ceremony in Briant Wells Field House.

In his capacity as headquarters commandant, Col. Lattin was an active supporter of the service champions of the 1962-1963 football season.

Under his direction, a brass cannon was made and fired after each victory of the Doughboys, who enjoyed an undefeated season.

Named 'Big John'

In recognition of his leadership and support, the cannon was named "Big John."

In the presence of the Doughboys, Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, presented the cannon to Col. Lattin.

In his remarks, Gen. Harrell entrusted the care of the cannon to the Special Services Section "and appoint Col. Lattin the honorary No. 1 gunner." The cannon was then given to Special Services with the nickname and dedication remarks inscribed on it.

From the field house, Gen. Harrell and Col. Lattin proceeded to Stilwell Field. They were greeted by an honor guard from the Officer Candidate School.

Before trooping the line, Col. Lattin was presented the Legion of Merit for meritorious service from 1952 to 1963.

During this period his duties included that of military attache on Taiwan, deputy chief of operations of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N. C., and duty in Turkey.

One of Highest

Gen. Harrell, in making the presentation on behalf of the Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance, noted that it was one of the highest peacetime awards that can be given.

He also mentioned two characteristics of Col. Lattin, his interest in the individual soldier and a high standard of interest in his assignments.

In closing Gen. Harrell said, we do not say good-by but "Godspeed and good luck."

In accepting the Legion of Merit, Col. Lattin briefly noted the change of the Army from the predominately horse orientated force to its present modern capacity.

"We serve in the greatest Army in the greatest nation in the world," Col. Lattin said.

In closing he asked all to "keep it the greatest Army," and then "you will keep it the greatest nation."

Units Reviewed

Units passing in review for the retiring colonel included "The Infantry Center Band, WAC Company, 29th Transportation Battalion, 54th Quartermaster Company, 1st Battalion, 7th Ordnance Battalion and Military Police Company.

Following the review, the band played "Auld Lang Syne" as it marched off the field.

In final tribute the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club paid its respects to a fellow paratrooper.

From an altitude of 10,000 feet, five parachutists dived for the field. They had red and purple flares attached to their feet.

Upon landing they presented Col. Lattin a baton that had been passed in the air, an instructor's certificate and a trophy.

The certificate was honoring Col. Lattin as a qualified instructor at Fort Benning while the trophy honored his support and service to the airborne.

197th Brigade Matches Controlled By 10th Artillery, 58th Infantry

By Spc4 Ken Claxton

The annual test of the Army's basic skill, proficiency in arms, was witnessed on the major unit level here recently when individuals and teams of the 10th Artillery and the 58th Infantry swept all but one first place in the 197th Infantry Brigade's competitive marksmanship matches.

Out of the 18 matches, one record fell. Sp4 Alfred P. Lopez and PFC Gordon E. Trimble, both of the 58th Infantry, teamed up in the automatic rifle mid-range course to add seven V's to the old record with a 530-25V score out of a possible 600-120V.

The V is the inner circle of the bull's-eye used in case of tie.

The record breaking duo copped two more first place laurels in automatic rifle shooting in the 500-yard rapid fire match, and the aggregate match for scores of 442-12V out of a possible 600-120V and 1516-69V out of a possible 1800-360V.

Other AR Match

The only other automatic rifle match, the 800-yard rapid fire event, went to a team of the 4th Battalion, 29th Infantry, for a score of 560-37V out of a possible 600-120V score. The team was composed of Sp4 Robert G. Thompson and PFC Harvey Wood Jr.

On the .45 caliber pistol scene, the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, dominated, with Sgt. Charles C. Stephenson taking first honors in all five of the individual events.

The first match was the 50-yard slow fire course which saw the lion's share winner post a 177-3X score out of a match fired, the 25-yard timed fire, went to the artillery sergeant for a 194-5X score out of the possible 200-20X.

The 25-yard rapid fire match fell for a 189-2X score and the National Match course event saw a 269-4X out of a possible 300-30X score posted by the pistol proficient sergeant for the win.

The last individual pistol match, an aggregate of the previous .45 caliber matches, went hands down to Sgt. Stephenson for an 829-14X score out of a possible 900-90X score.

The pistol team event saw Sgt. Stephenson anchor his four-man squad over the National Match course to a 1991-33X victory out of a 2400-240X possible.

The M-1 rifle competitions followed the one sided slant as the 1st Battle Group, 58th Infantry, copped seven out of eight wins with the other going to the 4th Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Aggregate Match

Sgt. Konelio Sagiao took first honors in the rifle aggregate match, making him the brigade's top rifleman. He posted a 597-24V score out of the possible 650-130V.

The 29th Infantry win came in the 600-yard slow fire event when Sgt. Henry W. McDougald blasted out an 89-8V score out of a possible 100-20V score.

The 58th claimed all the other wins as Sgt. Jessie F. Perez took the 200-yard slow fire match with a 98-6V total. Sgt. Jose E. Porras posted a 97-1V tabulation for first honors in the 300-yard rapid fire course.

Sgt. Saglao posted a third win in the National Match course event with a 234-11V score out of the possible 250-50V.

The last two rifle matches were in the team category and the 58th Infantry Blue took the first match, the National Match course, with a 1299-41V score out of the possible 1500-300V.

Another 58th team took first honors in the Infantry Trophy team match with a 471 score to cap the rifle events for the 58th.

Awards were presented after the competitions by Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 197th.

A team of the brigade's shooters was selected to represent the 197th in the post level match to be held in March.

Instinct Firing Method Demonstrated at TIS

Lucky McDaniel of Columbus, modern day Minute Man, took part in a recent marksmanship test sponsored by the Weapons Department of the Infantry School, designed to help determine the best method of bringing a "kill" on targets with a two to three-second exposure at the 15 to 80-meter range.

Major Charles E. Nix, project officer of the test, assigned to a small Arms Committee of the Weapons Department, said McDaniel was invited to give a demonstration of this relatively new "instinct shooting" method in conjunction with the department's research into the techniques of arms training.

McDaniel, who tours the country giving demonstrations and lessons, explained that instinct shooting is vitally different from more standard methods since the firer does not consciously take windage, sight alignment or stance into consideration.

Extension of Body

Using the weapon as an extension of the body and locking it into place, he continued, the instinct shooter disregards sighting, aiming and leading, and directs his vision to a point on the target, points the weapon and fires.

McDaniel said one of the most important points of his technique is concentrating on the correct spot on the target while shooting.

He explained that if the target is airborne, the firer must look at the top of the target to overcome the natural inclination to fire low on a flying object. When bringing a "kill" on a stationary object, he continued, the shooter must direct his vision to the bottom of the target.

McDaniel's students say he is not concerned with whether a pupil has shot all his life or never before seen a rifle. By teaching students a new concept of a weapon, McDaniel bolsters their confidence until they can name the exact spot a target will be hit.

McDaniel, who is recognized by many authorities as the top marksmanship instructor in the country, gave his demonstration before representatives of the Weapons and Ranger Departments, Army Marksmanship Unit, Human Research Office and Infantry Board.

107 Earn Prize Tab Of Rangers

One of the largest classes to complete The Infantry School's Ranger course was graduated here Jan. 30 as tabs were presented to 107 newly qualified Rangers.

Speaking to the class, Col. Sidney E. Sacerdote, chief of the Associate Arms Group of The Infantry School's Command and Staff Department, said, "There are two kinds of people in the military, those who have a badge of distinction and those who don't."

"You men have such a badge," he added, pointing out there are others, and the distinction of the Ranger tab is backed up by history and tradition.

Honor graduate was 2nd Lt. Will M. Remington. A 1962 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, Lt. Remington is scheduled to report to Fort Dix, N.J., for an overseas assignment.

1st Lt. Henry Erbe Joins Ranger Dept.

First Lt. Henry H. Erbe Jr. has been assigned to The Infantry School's Ranger Department at Fort Benning.

Lt. Erbe comes to the post from Erlangen, Germany, where he served with Company B, 2nd Armored Rifle Battalion, 50th Infantry from Jan. 28, 1960, to Dec. 28, 1962.

He is a graduate of Miami-bury (Vt.) College.

Col. Wolman New TICTC Commander

Lt. Col. Gus A. Wolman Jr. has succeeded Col John H. Lattin as commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Col. Lattin retired last week after 30 years of Army service.

The new commander served as deputy commander under the veteran colonel.

Lt. Col. Willie E. Miller has assumed the position of deputy commander.

Col. Wolman commanded the 29th Transportation Battalion before joining TICTC in September, 1962.

A 1943 graduate of the field artillery Officer Candidate School, the colonel served in the European Theater during World War II.

Col. Wolman holds a Bachelor of Science Degree from Texas A & M College. He has completed the Artillery Officers Advance Survey School, Air Transportability Course, Radar School, Transportation Officer Advance Course and the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College.

Col. Miller, who arrived at Fort Benning from Viet Nam in December, 1962, also serves as commander of Fort Benning's 7th Ordnance Provisional Battalion.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in October, 1943, after completing Officer Candidate School at The Infantry Center. He also attended airborne school and the advanced officers course here.

Civil Service Jobs Open To Retired Men

Retired or discharged military personnel who want to apply for a Civil Service examination are extended certain privileges in connection with the application, according to the Civil Service Board here.

Sidney P. Watson, executive secretary of the board, said civilians can apply for an examination only while it is "open." An examination is open during dates specified in the official announcement of examination, which is issued by the Civil Service Commission in Washington, D. C.

Military personnel, however, Watson said, may file an application for an examination after the expiration of the open period, as long as the applications is filed within 120 days of separation from the service.

A military man who is hospitalized one year or less following separation from the service may apply for any examination that was open during that time, Watson continued.

Application may be made while still in the service, Watson said.

If the examination is scheduled before the applicant's separation from the service, he should make arrangements with the proper military authorities for leave to complete the examination.

If the individual qualifies on the examination while still in the service, he will not be certified for appointment until he has notified the commission that he is available for appointment.

Special approval must be obtained for a military individual to be employed at an installation where he has served within the six months before his appointment to the Civil Service position, Watson said.

Military personnel interested in Civil Service employment are requested to visit the local Civil Service Board in Bldg. 1620. The board maintains a current list of opening and closing dates of examinations. Prospective applicants should review the list to determine positions for which they want to apply, Watson said.

Mouth Cancer Easy To See; Check Now

Five per cent of all cancers occur in the oral cavity!

In spite of the fact that most cancers in and around the mouth are easy to see, most patients are not aware of them. Early cancer of the mouth is usually painless and does not interfere with eating, talking or drinking and as a result is often unnoticed.

Sometimes the cancer is noticed, but is ignored. That sounds unbelievable, but it happens too often to too many people.

Have you looked closely at your lips, your tongue, the inside of your cheeks or your gums lately? Do you have any sores which don't hurt but have been there a long time? Do you have any unusual lumps or any spots of white on your lips or inside your mouth which look different from the rest of the tissues?

If you have any of these, you should visit your dentist at once for a complete examination and diagnosis of these changes. If what he sees makes him suspicious of cancer, he may do a biopsy or send you to a specialist in oral surgery to do this. A biopsy is the removal of a small piece of tissue for study under the microscope.

Most Common

Cancer of the lip is the most common type of these cancers which occur in and around the mouth. This cancer is found most often in blond-haired or red-headed, blue - eyed individuals who spend a lot of time out of doors in the wind and in the sun. Military personnel certainly fall in this group along with farmers and other outdoor workers. It may start as a swelling or very small harmless - appearing ulcer which does not heal, very similar to a canker sore.

Stand in front of a mirror and check your lips, tongue, gums and cheeks. If you find any area which differs from the rest, for goodness sake get it checked. Five-year cure rates are almost 50 per cent better for the cancers of the mouth which are smaller than a dime.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address IC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone Preventive Dentistry phone 545-7741.

Maj. Mason New Exec At TSB Unit

Maj. P. Lee Mason was recently assigned as executive officer of the 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, succeeding Capt. Arthur P. Wourms, who has been assigned to Viet Nam.

Prior to coming to TSB, Maj. Mason was assigned to the office of the secretary of The Infantry School, as chief of the Management Section.

Maj. Mason began his career in the Army here in August of 1946, but was sent to Italy later that year, where he joined the 88th Division. In 1947 he was sent to the 35th Infantry in Vienna, Austria, as a platoon lader.

He returned to the United States in 1949 to become part of the School Troops Command here. In the summer of 1950, Maj. Mason went to Korea to become a company commander and Battalion S-3 for the 14th Infantry Regiment, 25th Division. Back in the U. S. again in 1952 he became a battalion executive officer and company commander for the 3rd Infantry Regiment in Washington, D. C.

MAJ. MASON
. . . New Exec

Maj. Mason attended the Advanced Career Course of The Infantry School, and in 1955 went to the Transportation School at Fort Eustis as an Infantry instructor. Going overseas in 1957, he was with the G-1 and G-3 sections and later executive officer for the Northern Area Command, Europe, in Germany.

In 1961 he attended the University of Miami, where he received his A. B. degree, under the Operation Bootstrap program. He now lives on post with his wife, Linda.

Moon Shot Being Headed By Astronaut

HOUSTON (AFPS)—Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr., the first American astronaut to orbit the earth, has been assigned to head the supreme effort in the U. S. space program, project Apollo, the moonshot.

A spokesman for the Manned Space Center announced new assignments for the original seven astronauts. He specified that assignment to a project does not imply the astronaut would be the pilot of the spacecraft involved.

Lt. Cdr. Scott Carpenter is scheduled to pilot the lunar excursion phase of the moon-shot program.

The aim of this project is to fly a large spacecraft to the vicinity of the moon. A small spacecraft is to take off from the big one and explore the moon.

Maj. Virgil I. Grissom was assigned to Project Gemini—a rendezvous in space between two spacecraft to precede the moonshot.

Maj. Gordon Cooper Jr. will try 16 to 22 orbits of the earth in a shot tentatively set for April 2.

Cdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr., the first astronaut to make a flight, though it was suborbital, will be Cooper's backup man.

Cdr. Walter Schirra, who made six earth orbits, has been assigned to specialize in overall operations and training.

There were seven original astronauts. The seventh is Maj. Donald K. Slayton. Grounded by a heart murmur, he was named last September as coordintor for astronaut activities for the Manned Space Center.

Surgeon Says

Strict Weight Control Needed in Pregnancy

By Capt. Melvin E. Cohen

From a biological point of view, pregnancy and labor represent the highest function of the female reproductive system.

When we recall the many changes which occur in the maternal organism, it becomes apparent that the borderline between health and disease is less distinctly marked during pregnancy than at other times. Derangements so slight as to be of little consequence under ordinary conditions may readily precede pathological conditions which may seriously threaten the life of the mother or the child or both.

The normal pregnancy is associated with a weight gain of about 18 to 20 pounds. This weight gain is due to (1) tissue increase represented by the fetus or child, growth of the womb, afterbirth, breasts and so on; (2) any increased water retention which may occur. Obviously, the building stones for new tissue must come from the foodstuffs consumed during pregnancy or from the storage depots within the mother's body.

In the normal pregnancy the diet should be no more or less than that to which the patient has been accustomed unless weight gain is excessive. The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council recommends an intake of about 2,500 calories, provided the mother is not overweight at the onset of pregnancy.

Excessive weight gain in pregnancy is not good. There is convincing evidence that excessive weight gain usually associated with excessive fluid retention, which is secondary to sodium or salt intake, is the cause of no end of complications.

Initially, sodium or salt and water are retained without any evidence of swelling. However, with excessive intake of salt, swelling or edema becomes evident. The severest complication resulting from weight gain and swelling is toxemia. This disease is only present in pregnancy and is characterized by weight gain and edema, elevated blood pressure and albuminuria which is a protein in the urine.

Toxemia of pregnancy is the third leading cause of maternal or mother-death in the pregnant women in the United States. About 20 per cent of children born to toxemic mothers are stillborn.

As in most disease, prevention is the most satisfying and intelligent cure. Keeping weight down to a 20-pound gain throughout pregnancy or an average of two and one-half pounds per month may be difficult in some cases and will require careful dietary control and discipline on the part of the patient.

If the patient is overweight at the onset of pregnancy it is important to lose or not to gain any weight during the pregnancy in order not to jeopardize the mother's health or the infant's well being. In order to do this, a 1,200 calorie low-sodium or salt diet is recommended.

A low-sodium diet need not be monotonous or tasteless. You can eat many of the foods you have always eaten. You must use no salt in cooking or at the table. Salt substitutes are available at the commissary.

It is important not to use any patented medicine for relief from heartburn, as these are very high in sodium content. The doctor can prescribe medicine for relief that contains no sodium.

Many fruits and vegetables that are canned or frozen contain salt. It is important that you read the labels before buying any of these. It is best to cook your own plain and then remove your portion and season the rest for your family or else let them season the food at the table.

You should limit your milk intake to two glasses per day as this food is very high in salt content. The vitamin pills prescribed in clinic more than adequately compensates for any lack of calcium or vitamins present in a limited diet.

It is extremely important to drink at least eight to ten glasses of water per day in order to help get rid of the salt held in the tissues. No food should be fried or any fat added to any foods.

With the above precautions, close physician care and patient cooperation, many complications of pregnancy can be averted.

Ammo Area Project Is Underway

The construction of an ammunition holding area at Sand Hill began Jan. 23 with Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), under the command of 1st Lt. Claude S. Thompson, handling the project.

The initial phase of the work will consist of removing stumps from a 6,000 square yard area to be followed with the excavation of several hundred cubic yards of earth. When completed, this holding area will have an eight to ten-inch layer of 95 per cent compacted clay and gravel mixture, with a three per cent slope for drainage.

Concurrently, work will proceed on the construction of about a quarter-mile of access road and the placing of security lighting facilities. The project will be completed when the entire holding area is enclosed by 1,570 feet of cyclone fence.

Officers' Wives Tour 151st Engineer Areas

By Sp6 Dwaine S. Lett

Army wives were given an inside look recently at the way the Army lives in garrison and in the field when Col. Mahlon E. Gates, commanding officer of the 151st Engineer Group (Combat), invited all group officers' wives to a briefing and tour of group units.

The ladies assembled in the early morning at the class room of the 577th Engineer Battalion (Const), where, after being served coffee and cake, they were given a 30-minute briefing by Col. Gates. He outlined the organizational structure of the Defense Department in the United States and in oversea areas and explained the role of engineer combat groups in both peace and wartime situations.

Particular emphasis was placed on the missions of the 151st Engineer Group — operational readiness, construction, contingency planning, domestic emergency and support of ANACDUTRA programs. Col. Gates also stressed the vital role played by an Army wife in supporting military activities of all kinds.

Before mounting the two buses provided for their visits to the motor pool of the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) and to the field bivouac area of the 806th Engineer Battalion in Harmony Church Area, the ladies were divided into three groups for a walking tour of the facilities of the 577th Engineer Battalion. There they observed a display of heavy engineer construction equipment and were escorted by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. W. K. Jordan, on a visit to a barracks, mess hall, day room, communications room, arms room, tool room and supply room.

At the motor pool of the 586th Engineer Company, the commanding officer, 1st Lt. John Ronayne, demonstrated the company's capabilities for assisting Infantry troops in river crossing operations. In addition to assault boats and the foot bridge, the company displayed a light tactical raft used for ferry operations and a section of the heavy duty M4T6 floating bridge capable of carrying the Army's heaviest tanks. While participating in this portion of the tour the ladies were able to warm themselves a bit by "double-timing" across the foot bridge erected on dry ground.

At his bivouac site in the Harmony Church Area, Lt. Col. Felix R. Moss, commanding Officer of the 806th Engineer Battalion, had prepared eight displays for the ladies' benefit. Here they were conducted on a tour including water point operations, the motorized shop van, helicopters and radios, CP Tent, S2-S3 operations tent, pup tents and full field display and the field kitchen. The latter proved to be an exciting attraction as the ladies were served hot chocolate and cookies prepared on the field ranges.

After returning to the point of origin of the tour, and before departing to pick up their children who were kept under the watchful eyes of Group Chaplain Capt. John D. Logan, the ladies expressed their appreciation to the group commander for the informative briefing and entertaining tour.

Project officer in overall charge of arrangements for the group's "Ladies Day" was Capt. Gwyan Teague, commander of the Aviation Platoon.

Equator Is Site Of Oath-Taking

A monument marking the Equator near Quito, Ecuador, recently was the scene of the first two American enlisted men taking the reenlistment oath at the Equator. One of the men was Sp5 Bernard Stemmerman, a member of Company A, 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction).

Army Nurses Corps Celebrates Birthday

The Army Nurse Corps, represented at Fort Benning by 40 nurses, was 62 years old last Saturday.

The anniversary was commemorated with a regular day of duty at Martin Army Hospital.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center, commended members of the corps.

His message read, in part, "The contribution of your corps to the health and well being of the soldier and his dependents is invaluable in maintaining the effectiveness of the Army. The nursing skills, personal courage, high professional attainments and dedication to duty of the members of your corps are known and admired by all.

"I congratulate you on another year of distinguished service and wish you continued success in your chosen career."

Martin Hospital, a medical institution with the latest equipment and facilities, maintains a patient care program in which the Army nurse plays an important role, officials said.

Of the 40 nurses at the hospital 36 are women. They occupy quarters in a modern three-unit, 80 - occupant building adjacent to the hospital. Their building is equipped with kitchens and sleeping quarters.

Oldest of the women's military services, the Nurse Corps was established by an act of Congress Feb. 2, 1901.

Gen. George Washington, however, can actually be credited with initiating the creation of the corps. During the American Revolution, he asked Congress for a "matron to superintend the sick and obey the matron's orders."

Smallbore Rifle, Pistol Matches Planned by Army

By Sp4 Ken Claxton

Whether an Infantryman, technician, cook or administrator, the expert use of small arms is characteristic of any good soldier.

The Army's competitive marksmanship program attempts to encourage all men to develop their existing skill and to keep before them the Army's intense interest in marksmanship.

To further this basic skill, a competitive smallbore rifle and pistol program is being initiated into the Army's annual marksmanship scheme this year. The program will be inaugurated on the company level and like the other phases of the marksmanship scheme will snowball to an All-Army level.

Unike the other phases, this program will see the original company level teams remain as teams representing their individual company throughout the competition, Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, the Army's rifle and pistol match director here, emphasized.

"The companies," he continued, "will hold an intra-unit competiton to determine their best rifle and pistol team."

Each post and division in the continental United States and major overseas commands will fire an installation-wide match in March, with the top teams going to the Army area matches, he said.

The Army's Reserve and National Guard units are invited and encouraged to participate.

"But," he added, "the top teams will be sent in score only. These scores will be evaluated by the area commanders and the top teams will be forwarded to the final evaluation center, the U. S. Continental Army Command."

Winners and awards will be announced and presented at the Army Service Rifle and Pistol Championships here in June.

The match firing will take place on indoor ranges where available and entries are limited to one rifle and pistol team per company-size unit. Courses of rifle fire will be 10 shots for record in each of three positions, prone, kneeling and standing. The pistol course will be in three stages, 10 shots fired in the slow fire, time fire and rapid fire categories.

Both matches will be fired from 50-feet.

The events are governed by National Rifle Association smallbore and pistol rules.

fact is Tech won and retained their standing among the country's top teams.

Cincinnati and Loyola of Chicago are still listed as the top two college basketball teams in the country. The Bearcats added two victories to their long undefeated string in last week's action but persistent Loyola kept right on their back rapping up a couple victories themselves.

The Ramblers of Loyola became the first team in the country to win 20 games this season, but this still doesn't seem to be enough to push them where they want to be. They seem to be able to match the Bearcats in everything except the standings.

Rounding out the United Press poll comes Dukes (15-2), Illinois (12-2), Arizona State U. (16-2), Georgia Tech (17-1), Colorado (12-3), Stanford (12-4), Mississippi State (14-4) and Oregon State (14-4).

Of these teams, it is easy to see that Georgia Tech seems to be the only one out of place. Their fine record of 17-1 should win the Jackets a spot in the top five.

With basketball season entering its last complete month of play, a team with 17 victories already under its belt is iertainly a team that should be one to watch in the coming NCAA tournament in March. It could be that Tech, if they can continue to rely on the bench, is the dark horse for the title. It seems things are always a little rough on a team that enters the famous tournament undefeated.

Typical U. S. Lawmaker Is 52, Lawyer, Veteran

What is the typical Congressman? Who is he? How old is he?

The answers to these and other queries concerning the typical lawmaker came to light following a survey made of the 88th Congress by the Congressional Quarterly.

The typical Congressman is a 52-year-old male politician, probably a lawyer and a Methodist, with a record of military service.

The average Senator is 56.8 years old; the average House member 51.7. Newcomers to the Senate and House tend to lower the over-all average: new Senators average 43.7 years, new Representatives, 43 years.

Background for most members is Civil Service and politics, but 316 are listed as lawyers, 158 as businessmen, 61 as farmers, 50 as teachers, and 39 as journalists.

There is onlyone labor union official in Congress, freshman Representative Joseph G. Minish from New Jersey. There are three doctors and two ministers.

A total of 254 are veterans. There are 13 women—2 in the Senate and 11 in the House, a loss of seven from the 87th Congress.

There are five Negroes in the 88th Congress, all in the House.

Methodists lead among religions with 102; Roman Catholics come next with 99. There are 61 Baptists, mostly from the South, 60 Episcopalians, 11 Jews, 10 Unitarians, 8 Mormons and 2 Quakers. The rest are mostly of various Protestant denominations.

Youngest member of the Senate is the President's brother, Edward M. Kennedy, who became 30 years old Feb. 22, 1962. Legal minimum age for a Senator is 30. The oldest Senator is Carl Hayden, 85, of Arizona. (AFPS)

Point System for Traffic Violators Is Established for Military Posts

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A traffic violation point system similar to that used in a number of states has been established for all military installations. Violations of driving regulations under this system can result in the loss of on-post driving privileges.

The system applies to military and civilian personnel operating government vehicles on or off post; military personnel operating private vehicles on or off post; and dependents, civilian employes and contractors operating private vehicles on post.

Demerits will be assessed on a sliding scale, from one point for failing to comply with post registration requirements to 12 points for serious violations. Twelve points result in driving privilege suspension for six months or longer.

Commanding officers are not bound to the 12-point figure and can suspend or revoke an installation operating privilege without regard to the number of points.

Points assessed against a driver will remain in effect for 24 months, or, in the case of military personnel, until the end of their enlistment, whichever is earlier.

When transferred, the driver's DD Form 1409 (Vehicle Registration and Driver Record) on which the point record is maintained, will be forwarded with his personnel records to his new unit.

In the case of those who have lost their operating privileges, the new installation may continue the suspension or restore privileges on a probationary basis.

Twelve points, bringing automatic suspension, are assessed for such violations as driving while intoxicated; manslaughter, negligent homicide or assault with an automobile; intentionally leaving the scene of an accident involving death or personal injury; or operating a vehicle after suspension of driving privileges.

Any person whose installation privilege has been revoked or suspended as a result of the point system may appeal the penalty. Appeals or grievances of civilian employes will be processed in accordance with appropriate civilian personnel regulations.

The following regulations cover the point system; DSA Reg. 5720.1; AR 190-5; OPNAV INST.11200.5; AFR 125.14 and MCO 5110.1.

Life 'Mag' Features Airborne

A humorous article describing the tales of a former World War II parachutist who was trained at Fort Benning in 1944 and returned to the scene only last fall is told in this week's Life magazine.

Written by Elliott Chaze, the story deals with his experiences with the Basic Airborne School's jumpmasters and the rigorous training schedules.

The writer retraces his steps through the re-conditioning program every hopeful airborne trainee must complete and expertly describes the thrill of jumping from the 250-foot training tower after being out of step with parachuting for the last 18 years.

Al Hardy Wins March of Dimes Bowling Roll-Off

SSgt. Al Hardy of the Marksmanship Training Unit won the men's Open Division of the March of Dimes bowling tournament at Victory Lanes last Saturday with a three-game scratch series of 579.

Hardy, who was representing Victory Lanes against top bowlers from Columbus, tossed a 231 first game and finished up with a 171 and 177 for his winning total.

Bowlers in the roll-off had survived two previous eliminations involving more than 800 of the city's best bowlers. Two qualifiers were selected from each house and first place award was made in both the Open and Handicap Divisions.

LT. SCOOLER CONGRATULATED
By Mrs. Robert P. Patterson

Review for Gen. Harrell Scheduled on Monday

More than 3,000 Infantry Center troops will bid their commanding general an official farewell Monday at 2:45 p.m. with a massive review on French Field.

Farewell ceremonies for Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, recently named assistant chief of staff for Force Developmen, will be highlighted by a 13-gun salute with two ruffles and fourishes.

He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, presently commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky. Gen. Rich will arrive on post Feb. 25.

Army missiles, engineer equipment, armored personnel carriers, tanks, artillery, and 30 rotary and fixed-wing aircraft from Lawson Army Aviation Command will be featured in the review.

Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, will command the troops.

Four Brigades

Four brigades of dismounted troops, three elements of mounted equipment, the 30-aircraft fly-by and a composite colors unit will terminate the ceremony as they pass in review.

The dismounted brigades include the 1st, composed of troops from the 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Lt. Col. William L. Koob Jr.; 2nd, composed of troops from The Infantry School's Student Brigade, commanded by Lt. Col. Vern L. Joseph; 3rd, composed of troops of the 151st Engineer Group, commanded by Lt. Col. William K. Jordan, and the 4th consisting of troops of The Infantry Center Troop Command, commanded by Lt. Col. Willie Miller.

Capt. Jimmy W. Smith will command a 66-man honor guard and the composite colors unit. Colors will include the National, U. S. Army, Infantry School and 2nd Infantry Division flags, in addition to all national and unit colors of each Infantry Center and Infantry School organization.

The Infantry Center Band will combine with the 2nd Infantry Division Band under the direction of CWO Clyde W. White to play for the ceremonies.

A reception honoring Gen. and Mrs. Harrell is scheduled at the Main Officers' Open Mess following the review.

Academy Graduate

Gen. Harrell was born, in Medford, Ore., and began his Army career more than 29 years ago when he was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy and commissioned a second lieutenant.

Early in World War II, he was credited with being instrumental in the preparations for the massive amphibious landings in North Africa, and for mounting the invasion convoy of more than 1,000 ships which landed on the southern beaches of Sicily in July, 1943. During this period, Gen. Harrell was G-3 staff officer for the North African - Mediterranean Theater of Operations.

At the end of the war, the two-star general was G-3 of the Fifth Army in Italy.

He was assigned to Fort Benning in 1945, and served as a member of the School's Command and Staff Department.

After two years, Gen. Harrell became commander of The Infantry School troops. In 1949, he attended the basic airborne course and became a qualified parachutist.

In January, 1956, he became chief of the Infantry Branch, Career Management Division in the Office of the Adjutant General in Washington, D. C. He remained in this position until mid-1958, directing, monitoring and supervising the career development of all Infantry officers.

ARRIVING TODAY . . . Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles E. Brown Jr., the Army's chief of chaplains, arrives today for his first visit to Fort Benning since assuming his present position. At 11 a.m. Sunday the chief of chaplains will speak at services at the Main Post Protestant Chapel. He departs post Sunday afternoon.

Honor Graduate Of OCS Receives Patterson Award

Theater No. 1 was the scene Tuesday of the 11th annual Robert P. Patterson Award ceremonies as 2nd Lt. Albert G. Scooler was honored as the outstanding graduate of the Infantry Officer Candidate School of The Infantry School.

He is assigned to the 4th Armored Division in Germany.

Mrs. Patterson, widow of the late Secretary of War Patterson in whose memory the award was established, presented $500 and an engraved service pistol to Lt. Scooler.

"My husband would have appreciated the strength of character that made Lt. Scooler want to enter Officer Candidate School," Mrs. Patterson said. "Lt. Scooler picked a hard task — a tough preparation for more useful service."

"My husband had a concept that Lt. Scooler has fulfilled. He wanted the unusual potential, demonstrated by so many enlisted men, made available for fuller development by the Army," she continued. "He realized, however, that these young men needed real officer training such as our officer candidates are getting."

Assistant Secretary of the Army Paul R. Ignatius presented Lt. Scooler the Robert P. Patterson Memorial Award Certificate.

Secretary Ignatius, who escorted Mrs. Patterson to the post from Washington for the ceremonies, said The Infantry School has a significant influence on the Army.

"The Infantry School's teaching principles and techniques are emulated by the armies of our Allies all over the world," he said. "Training leaders such as Lt. Scooler and the other officer candidates is typical of the exciting missions The Infantry School undertakes in addition to its basic mission."

"The Infantry School is very important in this day when we are re-emphasizing conventional power and forces, as a matter of national policy," Secretary Ignatius continued.

"Robert P. Patterson, the combat soldier, was the role the late secretary was most proud of — and it is the one we honor today." Representing the Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, Lt. Gen. Albert

EMPHASIS PLACED ON ARMY AVIATION

The Army is exerting every effort to make maximum use of its trained aviation personnel to meet increasing aviator requirements, according to post officials.

Five things are being done to meet these requirements.

These include increasing production of aviators, revising retention policies, increasing emphasis on procuring aviators for active duty from the Reserve components, temporarily limiting career branch tours for aviators to a minimum of one year, and reviewing aviator assignments to insure that only those positions which demand aviator skills are filled by rated officers.

Earlier this year an expansion of the Army's aviation school program was announced by the Department of Army. Installations were urged to encourage all interested and eligible enisted men to apply for the aviation warrant officer training program.

EM Eligible

All enlisted men on active duty in the Continental United States, having a high school education or its equivalent and who have completed basic combat training, are eligible for the 35-week training. Applicants must not have reached their 30th birthday or be less than 18 at the time of application.

Individuals in overseas commands are eligible to volunteer for the training at any time. If accepted, those in long tour areas may be returned to the United States for flight training on completion of one-half of the normal overseas tour. Personnel in short tour areas will enter flight training on completion of their normal tour.

Twenty weeks of the 35-week course are taught at the Army Helicopter Pilot Training Center, Fort Walters, Tex. The remaining 15 weeks are spent at the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

On successfully completing the course, graduates, in addition to being rated Army aviators, are commissioned as warrant officers.

Jump School Announces Staff Changes

Changes in key personnel have been announced by The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department.

Lt. Col. O. G. Garrett, who has been chief of the Basic Airborne Committee since June 1, 1961, has been named deputy director of the department.

Succeeding him as basic committee chairman is Lt. Col. Victor K. Harwood, formerly chief of the department's Operations Section.

The new operations chief is Maj. Frederick Walters, who moves over to the department from the 197th Infantry Brigade, where he was S-3.

Col. Garrett is a veteran of more than 30 years Army service. A 1942 graduate of The Infantry Officer's Candidate School, he saw combat in both World War II and the Korean conflict.

His decorations and awards include the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infantryman's Badge with star, Master Parachutist Badge and

Division Activation Set Today

lect officers for attendance at appropriate service school and assign them to units and positions where their experience might be balanced between command, staff, instructor, advisor, specialist, and joint and combined staff assignments.

In Korea

In July, 1958, Gen. Harrell went to Korea as commanding general of the 7th Infantry Brigade. Later he became assistant commander of the 7th Infantry Division.

Aug. 1, 1959, he was promoted to major general and returned to the United States to become deputy chief of staff for operations, plans and training of the Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va.

He became commanding general of The Infantry Center Aug. 1, 1961.

Gen. Harrell is married to the former Harriet Campbell. They have two sons, Charles and Hunter.

Gen. Harrell's military education includes graduation from the regular officers advanced course at The Infantry School in 1940, the basic airborne course in 1949, and the National War College in 1952.

In addition, the general received education equivalent to graduation from the Command and General Staff College and the Armed Forces Staff College in 1947.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Parachutist's Badge, and the National Defense Service Medal.

Award

Watson II, commanding general of Third U. S. Army, Headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga., presented Lt. Scooler an Infantry School "Follow Me" plague. Gen. Watson said, "This plaque represents the future, your leadership."

His first visit to Fort Benning, Gen. Watson expressed pleasure in being able to participate in rendering honor to the late Secretary Patterson. Gen. Watson recently assumed command of Third Army.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School, told of the establishment of the Patterson award by close friends after the fatal plane crash that took the life of the late secretary in 1952.

This award is a continuing tribute to a great statesman," Gen. Harrell said. "Lt. Scooler, who receives the award today as the outstanding OCS graduate of 1962, has demonstrated the qualities of leadership the award was established to commemorate."

Accepting the award, Lt. Scooler, now a member of the 4th Armored Division in Germany, expressed appreciation to Mrs. Patterson on behalf of officer candidates, present and future, for providing them a great inspiration.

"Future candidates will be far worthier than I to receive such an award for the example that has been set for us will be followed and its influence will grow — ever increasing and carrying on the tradition of the Infantry," Lt. Scooler said.

After the award ceremony, there was an official luncheon for the participants at 1 p.m. in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. Patterson and Secretary Ignatius arrived on the post at 11:50 a.m. Tuesday. Arrival honors for Secretary Ignatius included a 17-gun salute.

Gen. Watson was honored with a 15-gun salute upon his arrival at 9 a.m.

Mrs. Patterson and Secretary Ignatius departed the post at 3:40 p.m.

Observance Of Engineer Week Set

Fort Benning engineers will join Columbus engineers in a display of engineering equipment during National Engineer Week, Feb. 17-23, on the median of Broadway in Columbus.

Personnel from the 197th Infantry Brigade, the 2nd Infantry Division and the 151st Engineer Group (Combat) will provide mobile and static equipment ranging from pontoon bridges to water purification units.

Post engineers and members of the Columbus Chapters of the Georgia Engineering Society and the Georgia Society of Professional Engineers are cooperating together to emphasize the contributions engineers have made to our society.

Store windows along Broadway will be displaying local high school students' exhibits from the recent Science Fair.

It is fitting that one of our nations great leaders and engineers, George Washington, birthday should fall during National Engineer Week.

lect officers for attendance at appropriate service school and assign them to units and positions where their experience might be balanced between command, staff, instructor, advisor, specialist, and joint and combined staff assignments.

In Korea

In July, 1958, Gen. Harrell went to Korea as commanding general of the 7th Infantry Brigade. Later he became assistant commander of the 7th Infantry Division.

Aug. 1, 1959, he was promoted to major general and returned to the United States to become deputy chief of staff for operations, plans and training of the Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va.

He became commanding general of The Infantry Center Aug. 1, 1961.

Gen. Harrell is married to the former Harriet Campbell. They have two sons, Charles and Hunter.

Gen. Harrell's military education includes graduation from the regular officers advanced course at The Infantry School in 1940, the basic airborne course in 1949, and the National War College in 1952.

In addition, the general received education equivalent to graduation from the Command and General Staff College and the Armed Forces Staff College in 1947.

His awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Parachutist's Badge, and the National Defense Service Medal.

Award

Watson II, commanding general of Third U. S. Army Headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga., presented Lt. Scooler an Infantry School "Follow Me" plague. Gen. Watson said, "This plaque represents the future, your leadership."

His first visit to Fort Benning, Gen. Watson expressed pleasure in being able to participate in rendering honor to the late Secretary Patterson. Gen. Watson recently assumed command of Third Army.

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commandant of The Infantry School, told of the establishment of the Patterson award by close friends after the fatal plane crash that took the life of the late secretary in 1952.

This award is a continuing tribute to a great statesman," Gen. Harrell said. "Lt. Scooler, who receives the award today as the outstanding OCS graduate of 1962, has demonstrated the qualities of leadership the award was established to commemorate."

Accepting the award, Lt. Scooler, now a member of the 4th Armored Division in Germany, expressed appreciation to Mrs. Patterson on behalf of officer candidates, present and future, for providing them a great inspiration.

"Future candidates will be far worthier than I to receive such an award for the example that has been set for us will be followed and its influence will grow — ever increasing and carrying on the tradition of the Infantry," Lt. Scooler said.

After the award ceremony, there was an official luncheon for the participants at 1 p.m. in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. Patterson and Secretary Ignatius arrived on the post at 11:50 a.m. Tuesday. Arrival honors for Secretary Ignatius included a 17-gun salute.

Gen. Watson was honored with a 15-gun salute upon his arrival at 9 a.m.

Mrs. Patterson and Secretary Ignatius departed the post at 3:40 p.m.

Observance Of Engineer Week Set

Fort Benning engineers will join Columbus engineers in a display of engineering equipment during National Engineer Week, Feb. 17-23, on the median of Broadway in Columbus.

Personnel from the 197th Infantry Brigade, the 2nd Infantry Division and the 151st Engineer Group (Combat) will provide mobile and static equipment ranging from pontoon bridges to water purification units.

Post engineers and members of the Columbus Chapters of the Georgia Engineering Society and the Georgia Society of Professional Engineers are cooperating together to emphasize the contributions engineers have made to our society.

Store windows along Broadway will be displaying local high school students' exhibits from the recent Science Fair.

It is fitting that one of our nations great leaders and engineers, George Washington, birthday should fall during National Engineer Week.

Q. If an individual desires to amend his enlistment contract, is he eligible for a re-enlistment bonus?

A. Yes, provided such extension by amendment is for two or more years. It is pointed out, however, that the bonus is payable only after expiration of the original enlistment contract and after extension by amendment has become effective and service thereunder actually has begun.

'Brotherhood Week' Basic to Service Life

Brotherhood week, since its first observance in 1934, has encompassed the week of Washington's Birthday — this year the 17th through the 24th of February.

Why Washington's Birthday? Well, could any time be more appropriate than that during which we honor our first President, the man who proclaimed that "the Government of the United States, which gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that they who live under its protection should demean themselves as good citizens."

The Founder of His Country thus laid down the principle of political and religious tolerance that was to be a bedrock of the fledgling Republic and a major stimulus to its growth as a great world power. Generations of victims of persecution abroad found refuge on our shores and the promise of a new life; and in turn their diligence, skills and energy sparked our prosperity.

Today, when millions of people in Europe and Asia live in bondage, the brotherhood of free men that America exemplifies has never seemed a more precious heritage. President Kennedy, as Honorary Chairman of Brotherhood Week, has said that "human brotherhood is not just a goal. It is a condition on which our way of life depends." And he has called on his fellow Americans to have "the strength and the will to make the brotherhood of man the guiding principle of our daily lives."

His words should find a ready response in the hearts of service people everywhere. Who understand the meaning of brotherhood better than we who come from all walks of life to serve in a common cause, committed to the great and common duty of our country's defense. Our uniform is our ultimate and unique badge of fraternity. (AFPS)

Gen. Watson's Message Upon Assuming Command

"It is with pride and sincere humbleness that I assume command of the Third United States Army. I am deeply conscious of the heavy responsibilities and obligations that I now acquire. Moreover, I feel greatly honored and am delighted with this assignment.

"I am aware of the outstanding caliber of the men and women, both military and civilian, who make up this important command and want to assure all of you that I shall put forth my best efforts at all times on your behalf of the Third Army.

"In turn, I shall count on your full effort and support. I am confident that together we shall maintain the high standards of this superb Third Army and that we shall successfully fulfill our vital mission."

Information, Please

A program to procure volunteers in grades E-2 to E-9 inclusive, for assignment to specific airborne and special forces vacancies projected to exist during the third quarter, Fiscal Year 1963, is announced in Department of the Army Circular 614-5. The circular gives details concerning the method of applying, processing of applications and the grades and MOS of existing vacancies.

Use Your Credit Wisely, It Can Be Great Benefit

Buying things "on time" can be convenient and provide many necessities otherwise out of reach; but if not done wisely the results can be frustrating and perhaps disastrous.

Top level experts, economic and legal, understand this. The trouble is some people who use credit don't.

The lure of easy credit and lack of judgment motivates people to buy all kinds of goods whether actually needed or not, although it is recognized if done wisely credit buying can be a great benefit.

You've probably experienced an urge for a new car, new furniture or new appliances just because your neighbor or friend had "exactly what you want." Well, multiply all of those urges by actually signing on the dotted line and you're headed for trouble.

Fixed Income

Being in the Armed Forces, you have a fixed income just as millions of other American wage earners.

If you decide to take the "bull by the horns" and buy that new car without considering other monthly obligations, you may suddenly wake up to find the "outgo" outdistancing the "income."

As one economist put it: Like drawing a nine to an ace-high straight in a poker game — it won't stretch.

According to statistics, consumer credit has been going up at a startling rate and a nationally known bankruptcy referee recently noted:

". . . A new generation of young people are coming along with a 'built-in appetite for luxuries' who will not only buy necessary household appliances, but television sets, autos, house trailers and above all, motor boats."

There is no complete solution, he declared, because the average consumer does not bother to figure interest or budget his purchases according to his income.

One Facet

Unhappily, that is only one facet of the story. Military legal assistance officers point out that each individual serviceman has the responsibility to keep his personal and financial affairs in good order and to incur only those obligations he can meet according to income and ability to pay.

The serviceman who becomes over extended and who cannot pay his lawful debts as they become due, loses his credit, embarrasses himself and his family and many reflect discredit on the Armed Forces in his community.

As one saying goes: It's no joke to go for broke.

The Third Challenge: Unconventional War

"Wars of Liberation" is a term commonly used by Communist leaders to describe their infiltration in the troubled areas of the world.

By introducing their methods of political subversion, supported by quasi-military action and military force, to accomplish their stated objective of world domination the Communists have inserted another element into the already complex area of military preparedness.

The U. S. Army is ready to meet this third challenge — unconventional warfare.

What is unconventional warfare?

It encompasses every known element applied in guerilla warfare, evasion and escape and subversion against hostile states. It is the blending of political, economic and civil actions with military skill.

Today's conflict in Viet Nam underlines the necessity for a strong Army, skilled and trained in the art of waging unconventional warfare.

At the request of the Government of the Republic of Viet Nam, American military advisors, trainers and pilots are filling the important role of helping freedom loving people to help themselves resist the threat of Communist aggression.

The spectrum of special warfare dictates that our Army be ready to fight as guerillas or against guerillas, to act as trainers and advisors in giving those who call upon it for help the aid they so desperately want and need.

To meet this third challenge, so blatantly and wantonly displayed by the Communist world is the demand of freedom in this age.

The outcome of the struggle of Communism versus Democracy may well lie in our ability to wage unconventional warfare.

Our Army is skilled, trained and ready to meet any war anywhere in the world where it may be called upon to meet the third challenge.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Two Golden Hours

BY CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.) ROY D. HIDY

"So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."

God has not revealed unto us how many days we have. It is well that he has not done so. Many people would worry themselves to an early grave if they knew what the future held for them. The important thing is not how many days we have, but how we live the days that God does, or has alloted to us. Days, hours or minutes lived for God are never lost, no matter where or how they are lived.

In high school, I had a professor whose favorite saying was, "Lost, somewhere between yesterday and today, two golden hours. There is no reward offered, for they are lost forever."

Two golden hours, yes, two golden minutes spent with God can transform a person's life. Doing God's will is applying our hearts unto wisdom. It is not vitally important that we know how many days, weeks or years that we have. It is important that we apply, or use our days wisely. When each day is lived for God we need not worry about the number.

"A day in thy courts is better than a thousand." The living of each day for God is applying our hearts unto wisdom.

Historic Doll Collection Represents First Families

"History is made not only by the people of a given epoch but also by the costumes they wore. The one cannot be studied without the other. Like love and marriage — like the horse and the carriage in a well known song they go together.

Miss Rosely Angel, of Egypt, Mass., has, it is believed, one of the most sizeable private collections of costume dolls in the world. A free-lance designer of children's clothes, Miss Angel took to historical costumes like a fish to water. She has been so successful at her task that she has taken out a copyright.

"I was born a collector," she says, and, seeing her collection of costume dolls, all life-size and looking like real children, one can we understand her passionate affection for them. Each of the dolls has a name and a period-oriented personal history that takes us back to the days of Abraham Lincoln and his children, Bob, Willie and Tad.

If Lincoln had had a daughter, the doll of that epoch might have looked exactly like Melanie, braided and jet-buttonned, with the military details popular during the Civil War period. In fact, her clothes are historically exact down to her underwear of starched cotton and embroidered flannel, worn under a heavily corded crinoline-like petticoat.

Esther Cleveland, born in the White House in 1893, is represented by a doll in a high skirted surah silk coat popular during Cleveland's second term. During the McKinley Period (1897-1901) boys and girls up to the age of three or even four were dressed alike in dresses with star-shaped ruffles and ample sleeves, black stockings and high button shoes (to keep the ankles steady). Such doll is called Flossie in Miss Angel's collection.

During President Rutherford Hayes' term of office (1877-1881) young Fanny Hayes favored white, and Kathy, the doll that represents her, wears a long-waisted dress with just the suggestion of a bustle. The President Taft period (1909-1913) is represented by a doll that recalls the Little Lord Fauntleroy style for tots of both sexes. The doll is called Tommy. Out of petticoats, but not yet in trousers, the little boy doll demurely wears bloomers to match his frock. Today, he would probably have to fight every kid on the block.

It is so that history is written not only in dry-as-dust books, but also in the costumes worn by the children that graced the White House from the days of Lincoln's little ones to those of Caroline Kennedy, just turned five, and her little brother John Jr., now a young man of two.

57 Attend TIS Wives Luncheon

The Corregidor Room of the Main Officers Open Mess was the setting for an Infantry School Weapons Department Ladies coffee recently. Hostesses for the occasion were the Ladies of Headquarters Section under the direction of Mrs. R. B. Marlin.

Lincoln's birthday was the silhouette of Lincoln's head. It was constructed of plywood and surrounded by red net, small American flags, large red and blue foam rubber stars and pennies. A side table was adorned with a likeness of a ship, in which red and white carnations and small American flags were cleverly inserted. Mesdames Thomas O. Richardson and Strather W. Hawkins were in charge of decorations.

Refreshments were served and Mrs. Lee P. McDevitt poured the beverages for the 57 ladies in attendance.

Mrs. R. B. Marlin introduced Mrs. Neil McLean and bade adieu to Mesdames Laurence E. Chloupek, Thomas O. Richardson and Kanemitsu Ito. Mrs. Caroline Chloupek and Mesdames T. W. Lemont and W. D. Bolus were welcome guests for the occasion.

Mrs. W. A. Smith provided cosmetics presentation. It consisted of an artful dissertation on and demonstration of skin analysis and make up by Mrs. B. J. Nave. Mrs. Francis H. Douglas was the model.

Mrs. Gilbert Zamora was the lucky recipient of the door prize. It consisted of a majestic eagle, made by Mrs. Strather W. Hawkins.

Local Beauticians Will Visit Hospital

Women patients at Martin Army Hospital will be invited to receive complimentary "hairdos" Monday in connection with the local observance of National Beauty Salon Week.

The hairdressers are members of the Columbus Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, Unit 12 of the National Hairdressers Association.

Johnson Finishes Civilian Course

Lemuel E. Johnson, civilian employee development officer of The Infantry Center, was recently presented a certificate of completion of a conference leadership course.

The certificate was presented by Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

Johnson attended the course, sponsored by the New York field office of the Civilian Personnel Branch of the Army's Personnel Division, at the Barbizone Plaza Hotel in New York City to be able to conduct similar courses here.

ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The Army furnishes ammunition, tanks, artillery, aircraft, and combat and support vehicles to allied countries under the Military Assistance Program.

Since I have been writing this column several interesting things have happened.

Lacy Wade, who now lives in Colorado Springs, Colo., reads this column in the copy of The Bayonet sent to her father. In one article, she read something about a new boy who had moved to Benning.

The name Richard Hodges sounded familiar to her, so she sent the article to Cathy Clark, in Fort Lee, Va. And of course, Richard was the same boy who had gone to school with both girls in Athens, Greece, coming to Benning just a year after they had moved.

Lucy was also instrumental in getting me in contact with another old friend. In a letter to Karen Jarrett, in Sabastopol, Calif., she enclosed a copy of this column. Karen, surprised to hear that I was still here, immediately wrote and asked me for a report on Benning activities from the last two years.

She also included some interesting notes about what she is doing, which I thought might be of interest to the many people who knew Karen and her sister, Kirsten. Last year, Karen was able to spend a "wonderful summer" at the University of California at Berkeley doing science research sponsored by the National Science Foundation. This fall she will enter pre-vet at the U. of California at Davis. From her enthusiastic descriptions of the state and the people, I think she could get a job anytime as a promotion agent with the state Chamber of Commerce.

Columbus Museum to Open $250,000 Wing

BY CLASON KYLE

With an exhibit entitled "American Traditionalists of the 20th Century," Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts Sunday opens a new $250,000 addition on the 50th anniversary of the famous "New York Armory Show."

The museum will also be continuing a drive for new members.

Organized by men of rebellion known as "The Eight," — plus a dozen others — the Armory Show opened Feb. 17, 1913. Its aim was to carry out a revolt against academic monotony. The result: Four thousand people attended opening night, over 100,000 during its month's stay at the 69th Regiment Armory and it paved the way for a freer approach to art in this country.

The Eight, who had exhibited with success in 1908, were Robert Henri, John Sloan, William Glackens, George Luks, Everett Shinn, Arthur B. Davies, Maurice Prendergast and Ernest Lawson. All of The Eight, are represented in the Columbus showing.

Besides these rebels are such famous American artists as Frederick Remington, Thomas Hart Benton, Edward Hopper and Thomas Cole. Others include John Marin, Childe Hassam, Franklin Watkins, Robert Brackman, Thomas Eakins, John LaFarge, Mary Cassatt, James McNeill Whistler, Grandma Moses, Georgia O'Keefe, John Singer Sargeant, Winslow Homer, Seong Moy and many others.

"Art in America" Magazine's own 50th anniversary issue commemorates the 50th Anniversary issue of the Armory Show. It also describes the 1908 exhibit of The Eight, saying: "Attendance was an overwhelming 300 persons a day; several dozen viewers kept the three small rooms constantly crowded. Seven of the 63 paintings were sold, four of them to socialite-sculptress Gerade Vanderbilt Whitney to form part of the nucleus for a future museum of American art."

The new wing of the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts more than doubles the structure's size.

The museum opens to the public at 3 p.m. Sunday.

New Building Is Going Up For Jumpers

Company B, 606th Engineer Battalion (Construction), under the command of 1st Lt. Claude S. Thompson, has begun construction of a 60 by 32-foot, steel building for the Airborne Air Mobility Department. The structure, is due for completion early in March.

The filling and compacting work for the foundation of the building has been completed, along with the placement of 1,920 square feet of concrete. Vertical construction consists of welding rigid steel frame members to provide a staunch skeleton for the application of corrugated steel roof and wall panels. Steel windows and doors will be installed along with the surface plumbing and electrical systems required to service the building.

In the past, Company B, through it's construction capabilities, has provided improved facilities for both the Ranger and Airborne Departments and recently completed a structure for the Florida Ranger Camp at Eglin Air Foge Base, similar to the one presently under construction here.

Your Dental Health

You Aid 'The Enemy' By Neglecting Teeth

Are you helping the enemy? Of course you're not. Not the enemy or potential enemy we usually think of. Then again maybe you are. And we know for sure many of you are helping the enemy of your teeth.

By now your dander may be up, for I said that maybe you are helping the enemy. When you waste supplies and fail to maintain your clothes and equipment you add to the cost of military defense.

"Oh", you say, "I don't do that. I've been considered for Soldier - of - the - Month three times, and they wouldn't think of considering me if I didn't take care of my gear."

Well, how about this? When you don't take care of your teeth you increase the cost of dental care. Had you thought of that? Many of you brush properly and after each meal, but you still help decay to continue.

Why? Because you eat sugar-containing snacks between meals and don't bother to even rinse afterwards. You think that's not important, because there's just a little sugar and that won't hurt much.

O.K. Let's take a look. Here is a small list of snacks with the sugar content listed.

Candy bar - 5 oz - 20 teaspoons sugar
Soft drink - 6 oz - 4 1-3 teaspoons sugar
Chewing gum - 1 stick - ½ teaspoon sugar
Doughnut (plain) - 4 teaspoons sugar
Apple pie (1-6 of pie) - 12 teaspoons sugar
Chocolate milk (5 oz) - 6 teaspoons sugar
Egg nog (1 glass 8 oz) - 4½ teaspoons sugar.

That's enough, isn't it?

Now what do you say? Are you helping the enemy of your teeth? Are you helping to increase the cost of dental care to the Army?

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Georgia or telephone 545 7741.

UNITED STATES ARMY STRAC READY FORCE

Fort Benning, Ga. FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1963 Page 9

Big Day Today

Units Help to Form 2nd ROAD Brigade

By 87th Infantry PIO

Following plans outlined in the Army's Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) concepts, a further vast change in structure of the 2nd Division is scheduled to occur today at ceremonies on Essenbagger Field redesignating the 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry as the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 87th Infantry, 2nd Brigade.

COL. DICKSON

The 2nd Brigade inherits the traditions and history of the old 4th Brigade, which during World War I was assigned to the 2nd Division and was composed of the 5th and 6th Marine Regiments. After the war the 5th and 6th Regiments were returned to the Marine Corps, and in 1939 when the 2nd Division was triangularized, the 4th Brigade was inactivated.

26th Infantry Departs

Also scheduled today the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry will be detached from the 2nd Infantry Division and will be transferred, less personnel and equipment, to the 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Kansas, the division with which it won most of its many battle honors.

LT. COL. CROSBY

Nearly half of the present members of the 26th Infantry will join the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry of the next experimental 11th Air Assault Division at Fort Benning. The majority of those remaining will join one of the battalions of the 87th Infantry and remain with the 2nd Division.

Slated today in separate action is the detachment and inactivation of the division's 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry.

LT. COL. PRESTON

Commanding the new 2nd Brigade is Col. Dwight B. Dickson, formerly deputy J-3 for special warfare, Headquarters, United Nations Command, Seoul, Korea.

Col. Dickson attended the University of Arkansas and was graduated from George Washington University where he received a Bachelor of Arts degree. He was originally commissioned in the Reserve Officer Training Corps in 1941.

A graduate of The Infantry School, the Command and General Staff College, the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, he served during World War II with the 6th Division in New Guinea and the Philippines, and later with the 11th Airborne Division and the 1st Division. Awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Army Commendation Medal (two awards), he was promoted to his present rank December 27, 1961.

Training to Go Mechanized

'April in Europe' --- Song of the 9th

By 9th Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, 3rd Brigade one of the 2nd Division's elite fighting units scheduled to go to Germany under "Rotaplan" in April, has begun an intense training program in preparation for movement overseas.

The purpose of the training is to maintain all units of the battalion at a state of training that will insure the capability of prompt reaction to any assigned mission upon arrival in Europe.

Much of the training will involve armored personnel carriers, as this unit must accomplish a transition from infantry considerations to those of mechanized infantry in all tactical training.

Training With APCs

Next week the battalion's three rifle companies will begin training with armored personnel carriers, and during the week of February 25 will train with APC's and a platoon of tanks.

One of the highlights of this week's training was a special patrol problem involving cross country movement at night, use of the compass and maps, first aid procedures, handling on prisoners of war, and use of the radio homing device, Antenna 339. This is a counter-guerrilla exercise involving an eight-man patrol from each of the rifle companies.

The situation is that a clandestine radio has been transmitting during the hours of darkness, and the patrol has been given the assignment of locating this transmitter and capturing or destroying its operators.

By use of the radio homing device the patrol locates the objective and captures two of the guerrilla operators, however, at this point a member of the patrol is wounded. The patrol must return to friendly lines and evacuate the prisoners of war and also must evacuate their wounded patrol member by improvised litter.

The problem takes all night and is graded by an umpire.

Exercise in March

A battalion - level field training exercise will be held the week of March 4, and an Army Training Test will be conducted the following week.

From now until after the Army Training Test the battalion will move to the field on

The 2nd Infantry Division Museum was recently donated a history of the 9th Infantry.

Col. Clifford P. Hannum, former 9th Infantry commander, presented a scrapbook of the 9th's history to Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commander, who, in turn, presented it to Lt. Col. Richards O. Stewart, division historian, for the division museum.

The book is made of black leather and the title, "The Dragon's Trail—A History of the 9th Infantry, is inscribed in gold letters. Imbedded directly below the title is the unit crest, the Combat Infantryman's Badge topped by the star signifying two awards, the unit campaign ribbons and the Distinguished Unit Emblem and Korean Presidential Citation.

The 9th Infantry was assigned to the 2nd Division September 22, 1917 and had fought in every major conflict engaged by the United States from the Indian Wars to the Korean Conflict.

'Always First' Radar Section Warns Early

By 1st Infantry PIO

The 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry has a radar section that is truly "Second to None."

In every war, there has been a need for early detection of the enemy. This has been accomplished in the past by aerial observation, patrols and various methods. Today the Army has an all-seeing eye, the "Cat Eyes" of the radar section, that provide detection during periods of darkness or reduced visibility. The radar sets used by the Combat Support Company, 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, are lightweight, portable and transistorized. They require no major disassembly for travel and one man can prepare the equipment for movement.

They are capable of detecting moving targets, such as men, or mobile equipment, and can also locate larger fixed targets. Their range varies but exceeds five thousand meters for large objects. Once an object has been detected, its location can be pinpointed as to range, azimuth and elevation.

The "Always First" radar section is staffed by SFC Eugene Wilson Jr., section leader; Sgt. J. P. Malone; Sp4 Ronald Schullo; PFC Herman Dowers; Sp4 William L. Farr; PFC Thomas E. Mangum; PFC Thomas H. Payne, radar operators.

It is the enthusiasm displayed in training activities which are a combination of Garrison and Field work that keeps the "Cat's Eyes" of the 1st Infantry always vigilant.

Actor Discovered

You Missed Him on TV? He's Now Serving 23rd

By 23rd Infantry PIO

A Hollywood actor named Michael Krempels is now in the 23rd Infantry.

Maybe you've heard of him or seen him in such Warner Brothers television productions as "77 Sunset Strip," "Surfside Six," "Cheyenne," Maverick", and "Hawaiian Eye."

Born in Scharosch, Rumania, in 1938, he came to the states at the age of 12. With secondary education in Fresno, Calif. and two years of college at Fresno State University (dramatics major), under his belt, he went to work with a chemical company in San Francisco. Soon tired of the test tubes, he bought two trucks and went into the catering business. Throughout this time he was winning ski trophies at Squaw Valley, Calif., with his friend Ty Hardin who acted in the recent film "The Chapman Report."

With his move to N. Hollywood, he was signed with Warner Brothers to do the TV shows. He also co-starred in the Allied Artists production of "Hitler" with Richard Basehart as a Nazi SS officer in 1961.

Mike reads biographies in his spare time and lifts weights daily at the Fort Benning Field House. Being a driver in the battalion is far from the bright lights of Hollywood. Nevertheless, Mike finds the Army an interesting experience.

Looking forward to the Rotaplan tour to Germany, he plans to put to good use his fluent German and his familiarity with the Rhineland.

AG Officer

attending Officer Candidate School at Camp Davis, N. C. He served in several artillery assignments in the United States before transferring to the Southwest Pacific and an assignment in the Adjutant General's Office, Headquarters of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur which was then located in New Guinea. Col. Guthrie was to remain with this headquarters through the remainder of the war, proceeding to Leyte, Luzon, Okinawa and, finally, Japan.

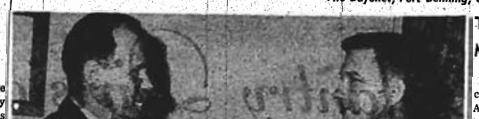
This began a most interesting phase of the colonel's Army service. As the power of the Imperial Japanese Army waned in the Pacific, the operational General Headquarters and its members traced the steps of the Japanese retreat to the empire mainland. After the advent of the atomic age broke the back of Japanese resistance but before the nation's surrender, half of the headquarters staff, including the five-star general and Col. Guthrie, were established on Japan to prepare the papers and arrange the Japanese surrender.

The colonel stayed on with General Headquarters in the Pacific until 1947 when he was shipped back to the states and his new job in the V Corps adjutant general section at Fort Bragg, N. C. following this tour and studies at the Adjutant General School, Fort Lee, Va., Col. Guthrie was assigned to the First U. S. Army on Governor's Island, N. Y., as chief of the officer's branch in the adjutant general's personnel section.

From 1952 to 1955, Col. Guthrie served in The Adjutant General's Office in the Pentagon as organization and procedures control officer.

More duty in the Pacific awaited Col. Guthrie after his graduation in 1956 from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. The colonel continued assignments in the personnel and administrative area, serving as Army member of the joint personnel division for the Hawaiian-based Office of the Commander in Chief, Pacific, Joint Staff. Col. Guthrie stayed on at CINC PAC in 1959-60 as executive assistant to Maj. Gen. John L. Ryan Jr., then deputy chief of staff, and now Lt. Gen. Ryan, commander of the Sixth U. S. Army.

In 1960 Col. Guthrie returned to The Adjutant General's Office at the Pentagon where he served until joining the "Indianheads" last Saturday as division adjutant general.



TAKING ANOTHER THREE . . . Reenlisting recently for three years additional service is MSgt. Irving S. Hodgson Jr., (L), supply specialist for the 2nd Division G-4 section. Congratulating the sergeant is Lt. Col. Edwin T. O'Donnell, division G-4 officer.

Two Commendation Medals Awarded

Two noncommissioned officers recently were awarded the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service while with the 2nd Infantry Division.

SFC Clarke L. Thornton, of the 184th Chemical Platoon and SSgt. James R. Parrish, of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 38th Artillery received the medals for service from June 1961 to January 1963 and 1962 respectively.

38th Sgt. Kittrell Assigned Korea

By 38th Artillery PIO

First Sgt. Jessie M. Kittrell, first sergeant for Battery B, 38th Artillery, has been assigned to Europe.

Prior to joining the Strategic Army Corps' elite 2nd Infantry Division, he served as first sergeant of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Division Artillery, 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

A native of Griffin, Ga., Sgt. Kittrell joined the Army in August 1943, took his basic, and immediately set sail for Europe with a tank unit.

While with Battery B, the first sergeant has seen the unit make outstanding scores on Army Training Tests, also winning the Division Artillery and 2nd Division Best Mess Award. This same unit was recently awarded the Best Outside Christmas Decoration Award for 1962.

THE ORGANIZERS FOR THE BALLET PROGRAM
(L-R) Mesdames Delaune (With Son Jed), Gilmore and Peabody

Two Original Spring Ballets Set

Two original ballets are being planned for the Fort Benning Ballet School's spring program to be given in May, announced Rossie Gilmore the school's director.

The first ballet has been written by an outstanding author of children's books, Mrs. Richard Delaune, wife of Lt. Col. Delaune of Fort Benning. It has been titled the "Tortoise and the Hare" and will be performed by the younger students of the school.

This is Mrs. Delaune's first original ballet, but her books for children have been published by three different publishers. Her first book was "Giraffes Can Be A Trouble". Her next were "Jeff Davis, Boy of the Confederacy" and "Jeb Stuart". Being released in March will be another in the Childhood of Famous Americans series titled "Babe Didrikson". Mrs. Delaune's mother handled the research on the last three books.

In charge of designing costumes and sets for the ballet will be Mrs. Raymond King with Mrs. W. W. Hoyle making the original costumes.

Linden Delaune, daughter of Mrs. Delaune, will take part in the first ballet.

Featured in the second ballet will be Vicki Morales, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mariano Morales of Columbus. Plans for this ballet will be announced later. Vicki is a prominent young ballerina in this area and will appear at Fort Benning in the musical "Bye, Bye Birdie" on February 7 and 8. This production was recently presented at Baker High School under the direction of Mr. Byron Grant.

The Fort Benning Ballet School was established in 1956 and is sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. Chairman is Mr. James Peabody.

Mrs. Conway Testifies To Rota-Center Success

BY LOIS FOY

Surrounded by four Great Lakes, Michigan, the "Wolverine State", is the home state for Edna Swartz Conway, wife of the sergeant major of the 38th Infantry.

Mrs. Conway calls Marenisco, a small town located in the northwest section of the state, near Lake Superior, her home town.

Mrs. Conway married Sgt. Maj. Conway in 1952 while he was teaching the Reserve Officers Training Corps program in Ironwood, Mich. They lived in Ironwood until 1954 when they journeyed to Fort Riley, Kan.

Operation Gyroscope in 1955 took the Conways to Aschaffenburg, Germany. Three years in Germany gave Mrs. Conway ample time to observe many of the European customs. Memories of visits to such places as the Black Forest and the recreation area at Berchtesgaden will long be with Mrs. Conway.

Beaning in 1958

Upon returning to the States in 1958, the Conways came to Fort Benning. Mrs. Conway and their three boys now reside at Fort Benning while Sgt. Maj. Conway is serving a six-month tour of duty with the 38th Infantry in Baumholder, Germany.

Leader of the three boys is Jeff, born in Ironwood, who is now nine years old and a third grader at the Frank R. Lloyd School. Gregory, born in Frankfurt, Germany, now six years old, also attends the Frank R. Lloyd School where he is a first grader Timothy, a four-year old, was born at Fort Benning, and keeps Mrs. Conway company throughout her day.

Fishing is an interest that the whole Conway family enjoys. Sewing is a favorite pastime of Mrs. Conway. She spends many worthwhile hours sewing, making many items that help complete her wardrobe.

As assistant coordinator for the Rota-Family Service Center, Mrs. Conway has been able to see first hand how the center is helping wives of men of the 38th Infantry since it was first organized in October 1962. Mrs. Conway says she knows the Rota-Family Service Center has served its original purpose in helping the dependents of the men of the 38th Infantry, both morally and physically. Many wives say just to know the center is there gives them a feeling of security, even though they don't need help — they know they have someone to call if the need should occur.

The Service Center is a joint venture of officers and enlisted men's wives of the 38th Infantry. Coffees, potluck suppers and other social events are planned by the center personnel. Approximately 180 wives participate in the center.

This 'Hip Pocket' Artillery Splits Seconds

BY 87th Infantry PIO

Speed, accuracy, mobility and experience combined make the 4.2 inch heavy mortar a battle group commander's "hip pocket" artillery. "Speed is the word," says Lt. Bobby L. Dove, mortar platoon leader of Combat Support Company, 87th Infantry.

When a mortar is told to move into position, team work and know - how are required to prepare the mortars for action. The mortar crews must be well trained and well disciplined, each member being able to do his job with uncommon proficiency. The teams in Combat Support Company have worked together for nearly two years, and can unload and set up their mortars in less than two minutes.

Brains and Teamwork

SFC. William Thornton, a man with 16 years military experience, and currently the battle group champion with the M-1 rifle, uses brain and team work to parallel their guns and set their mounting azimuth.

First of all, the forward observers, who are the eyes of the mortars, call back the fire missles from their position. They choose targets, mark their positions and send this information back to the fire direction center for processing. Two fire direction computer teams plot the information they have been given, supervised by Sgt. Virgil Peterson, fire direction center chief.

Here the chart operator first works out the range and deflection of enemy positions for the computer, who uses this information to calculate the charge to be placed on the round. The results are relayed in turn to the radio operator, section sergeants and gun crews. They set the deflection on the guns, place charges on the rounds and fire. The forward observer, by using deflection and range charges, adjusts the guns until they are exactly on target.

A complicated job? It takes them four minutes, from fire mission to mission accomplished. These men have a name for their section—"Sudden Death." They think they've earned it.

'Always First' Co. Sets Pace

"Echo" Company, 1st Infantry, commanded by Capt. Cecil J. Ramsey established another "Always First" recently by setting the pace for the 2nd Infantry Division Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course.

The company was the first to run through the new course, completing it last Saturday.

They began on Sunday, February 3, by setting up in the bivouac area and getting all prepared for the weeks vigorous activity. Monday they began the classroom instruction, receiving training on the mechanical compass, land navigation, field craft, mountaineering, survival, and squad and platoon immediate action.

Thursday began the practical exercise, everyone knowing that in the next two and a half days they would be tested and put through all the phases of the recent instruction.

Beginning at 7 a.m. "Echo" Company infiltrated the guerrilla infested training area and established operations to accomplish their mission. Moving through the large area, clearing as they went, "Echo" Company found and engaged the guerrilla action and completed their mission in the time allowed.

Capt. Massey (Chief of Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course) stated that Echo Company moved exceptionally well and commented on a job well done.

38th Arty Unit Plans Gun Tests

By 38th Artillery PIO

Gunners and gun men alike, cannoneers and section chiefs, drivers and artillery mechanics, all annually test their knowledge, adroitness and speed in basic howitzer section fundamentals. The test is known as the Annual Gunners Qualification Test, but gunners are not the only ones to take part in it. Training in depth is tested by requiring all artillerymen to undergo the various stations of the examination.

In Battery A, 38th Artillery, the gunners' test is taken with seriousness and a keen sense of competition between sections and between individuals within each howitzer section.

Stations within the test include direct and indirect "laying," sight tests and adjustments, use of gunners' quadrant, measuring deflection and elevation and knowledge of material, including nomenclature and assembly of the breech block.

Skills tested are not soon forgotten and training is continuous. This year's testing is under the supervision of Lt. John S. Dallas Jr., and MSgt. Richard E. Smart.

23rd Infantry Battle Group Transfers Colorful History From Alaska to Benning

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The "Indianheads" have acquired a new unit with a colorful and old history. Designated the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, the unit arrived at the 2nd Division this month, less personnel and equipment, from Fort Richardson, Alaska.

The history of the 23rd Infantry in Alaska is one of unique lineage. Maj. Gen. Jefferson C. Davis, commander of the 23rd in the year of 1867, was selected to represent the United States in the purchase and transfer of the Territory of Alaska from the Russian Empire.

The formal transfer took place in Sitka, then the capitol of Alaska, some 1,000 miles from Seattle, Wash. The transaction was known as "Seward's Folly", after the American Secretary of State who negotiated the purchase. Completing the transfer in October 1867, that same month the most severe storm in 40 years raked the land. The undesirability of Alaska as a military duty station was rapidly reaching an impressive peak. Its reputation for rain, sleet and snow had been fully verified before the 23rd's arrival there.

The 23rd Infantry rotated to the states in June 1871 to relive its part in the purchase of Alaska from Russia and, during the commemoration, was awarded the Totem Pole, a replica of which is now displayed in front of the "We Serve" Headquarters.

At every turn in its history and from its beginnings as America's ridiculed "ice box," the growth of Alaska has been protected and strengthened by the 23rd Infantry.

Trains Clinches Div. Basketball

By Bob de Camara

Division Trains outlasted Division Artillery Thursday night a week ago at Kelley Hill for the division basketball championship. A 62-56 score gave Trains control of the first half of the division basketball season and the championship when the second half of the double round robin season was cancelled due to division reorganization.

The game was marked by a lot of good passing and good plays. While the first half of the game was a contest all the way with Trains gradually creeping up on the DivArty lead and overtaking it, the second half belonged to the blue and orange of Division Trains.

The opening tap was taken by Trains. The score column was blank for the opening four minutes, and the first two points went to DivArty on a shot by Nicklos "Chief" Goodreau. DivArty led the game for the first quarter, and it wasn't until there was only five minutes left in the first half that a lay-up by Roscoe Lacy put Trains in the lead with a 20-18 tab. The half ended 28-25, Trains leading.

The second half of the ball game belonged exclusively to Trains.

Pro Football 'Steelers' Sign 1st Inf. Star

By 1st Infantry PIO

The Pittsburgh "Steelers" of the National Football League have signed a member of the 1st Infantry Combat Support Company to report for training in July.

Robert Dickerson, standing 6-feet, 4-inches tall and weighing 210 pounds, was signed at the close of the Fort Benning football season during which he played end for the "Doughboys."

Dickerson has a long sports history. He attended New Stanton High School in Jacksonville, Fla., where he played two years of basketball and football. As a senior at New Stanton High, Dickerson averaged 15 points a game and helped lead his basketball team to the City Championship with an 18-1 record. In football, his team compiled a 9-1 record.

Upon graduation from New Stanton High School, Dickerson enrolled at Bethune Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Fla., where he majored in Physical Education. While attending Bethune Cookman from 1957 to 1961, he played four years of football and was selected by his conference as an All-American, the Most Valuable Player and the Most Athletic Male, in 1959, at his college. In 1960 he added to his sports laurels by being selected again as an All - Conference football player.

Dickerson also starred in basketball for Cookman College and averaged 18 points a game for three years.

Entering the service in 1962, Dickerson boosted his sports record playing end for the Fort Benning "Doughboys," the 1962 National Service Champions with an unblemished 10-0 season record. Upon completion of the season, Dickerson was signed by the "Steelers" to report in July for training.

The "Always First" athlete also led Combat Support Company to the volleyball championship in the company level tournament and helped them place second in the United States Army Infantry Center tournament held on Main Post.

Sports Program Upset By Div. Reorganization

Reorganization of the 2nd Division has forced a cancellation of normally scheduled sports activities. Until reorganization is completed, sports in the division will be held at the company level.

This cancellation included the second half of the double round Robin basketball tournament. Division Trains, winner of the first half of basketball, has been declared the overall basketball champion team. Division Trains and Division Artillery met in a play-off game on February 7 at the Kelley Hill Field House for control of the first half of the division tournament.

At that time, the fate of division sports had not been determined. Division Trains won that game to become winner of the first half. With the recent announcement by the Special Services Office of the cancellation of high level sports until the division is reorganized, Trains became overall winner. The decision on sports was reached at a command level.

The Commanding General's Winter - Spring Sports trophy will not be presented this year. Rearrangement of the division is expected to be completed in time to conduct a regular Summer - Fall program. In this case, the Summer-Fall trophy will be presented.

The all-star basketball game matching 2nd Division stars against Main Post standouts is on. Originally scheduled for the 26th, 27th and 28th of this month, the games will probably be moved up due to the cancellation of the second half of division basketball. Selection of division all-stars is complete. League officials and coaches did the choosing. Winner of the "Indianhead" - Main Post game will be the Fort Benning champions.

Here are the names and teams of the 2nd Division basketball all-stars: Walter Clark, Orlando Pratt and Dennis Guimares, Division Trains; Hubert Barksdale and Melvin Turner, Division Artillery; Ronald Brooks and Lawery Jordan, 87th Infantry; Maurice Ward and Clint Johnson, 23rd Infantry; Anthony Showell and Dallas Miller, 26th Infantry; Ron Flemming, Separate Battalions.

They will not necessarily represent Fort Benning at the 3rd Army basketball tournament in March. Fort Benning representatives will be outstanding players from the Division-Main Post game. Both teams are eligible to contribute players to the team to represent the post at 3rd Army.

The division has also chosen this year a Most Valuable Player for basketball and a division "good sportsman." The Sportsmanship award went to the "Conquerors" Ron Brooks, a member of the 2nd's all-star team. Walter Clark of Division Trains was named Most Valuable Player in the division basketball league. He will play in the all-star game against Main Post.

At All-Army

'Manchus' Enter Fighter

By Bob deCamara

A 26-year-old featherweight boxer with the 2nd Bn., 9th Infantry is on temporary duty at Fort Myer, Va., for the All-Army elimination boxing matches to be held on February 22 and 23 in the military district of Washington, D. C.

The featherweight, SSgt. Eddy L. Smith, has been an amateur boxer for 10 years, and the small, solid rifle squad leader from "Charlie" Company has numerous trophies and awards to show for his efforts.

Eddy's most memorable episode in the decade of years spanning his fighting history is the 30 days training at Fort Bragg, N. C., for the 1960 All-Army trials. That year Eddy was runner-up to the 3rd Army featherweight (125 lbs.) championship and was sent by 3rd Army to represent the area in the All-Army event. (He was also featherweight runner-up in the 1960 Florida Golden Gloves.)

For 30 days Eddy trained. He and the other fighters lived in the old officers' quarters. They ate twice a day, at 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, the men ate steak. Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, they ate roast beef, and on Sundays, chicken. But steak and roast beef is only a small part of training for an All-Army Tournament.

The fighters got up at 7 o'clock in the morning. On alternate mornings they rested and did road work. In the afternoon they went to the gym where the real work took place. The first few weeks were largely spent building up stamina and speed, shadow boxing, jumping rope, punching the light and heavy bags. Three minutes work, one minute rest, like the rounds of a boxing match. Later the men worked "up and down" on the heavy bag, hitting it high and low, and sparring with each other. They did calisthenics on their own time and and were in bed by 9:30 at night.

At the end of 30 days, Eddy had trained down from his usual weight of 135 pounds through the featherweight class to the 117 pounds of the bantamweight. Although he didn't win the Army bantamweight crown that year, Eddy has a lot of other accomplishments to his credit.

In 1959, assigned to Fort Benning's 14th Infantry, Eddy was The Infantry Center's featherweight champ. And two years later in Korea, the year after his journey to the All-Army bouts, Eddy was the 1st Cavalry Division's 125-pound king.

Callaway Gardens Golf Course Provides Weekend Relaxation

the Infantry Center SPORTS FOLLOW ME

Callaway Gardens, located only 10 miles north of Columbus, has recently expanded its nine-hole golf course to a full 18 holes and added a new clubhouse.

The original nine holes, opened in 1952, and known as the "back" side, play to 3,133 yards while the newly opened "front" nine plays to 2,921 yards. The course plays a total of 6,054 yards with a par of 70.

The two nines offer a sharp contrast, with the backside fairways considerably wider and the greens not quite as heavily trapped. The entire course is noted for cleanliness of the rough and few balls are lost. Placed in a setting surrounding Mountain Creek Lake and the beautiful wooded glens Callaway Gardens is noted for, the course is a test for any athlete.

The 367-yard fourth hole with a sharp dogleg to the left some 200 yards from the tee, with the green placed on a peninsula of the surrounding lake is one of the most difficult challenges offered in the first nine. However, the final hole of the front nine, a 42-yard par 4, provides no let-up on the average golfer. A perfectly placed tee shot is needed to avoid a stream on the right side of the fairway.

A short 157-yard par 3 with the tee situated on an island accessible via an arched bridge provides the most picturesque hole on the course. To reach the green, a golfer must carry his ball over 85-yards of water to hit a well-trapped green also situated on an island. The green is reached via serpentine wooden bridge across the lake.

Two well-hit shots are needed to reach the green on the course's longest par 4, a 424-yard hole. Several traps guard the undulating green on the left and right front, while Mountain Creek Lake guards the entire length of fairway at the left.

The course finishes with a 65-yard, par 4 hole with an elevated tee. It requires an expert golfer to play the hole correctly as a slight tail-end hook is needed to avoid a steep embankment on the right side.

Another feature is the scenic beauty of the course, with many areas planted to native and ornamental shrubs. On every tee and green, and even in the rough, the golfer has a beautiful view.

Fees for golf are $3.50 per day and electric carts are $3 per nine holes. Entrance to the Gardens is free to guests at the Holiday Inn or in the family-style Callaway Cottages.

Golf professional is Hugh Royer Jr., winner of the 1963 Georgia State Professional Golfers Association tournament in January and the 1962 All-Army golf title. Greens Superintendent is Harold Baldwin, president of the Golf Superintendents Association of Georgia.

The mild Georgia climate affords year-round golf and in addition to the golf, Callaway Gardens offers a 2,500 acre recreation complex which includes fishing from Labor Day until June 1, over 15 miles of paved drives.

In the summer season, a 64-acre swimming lake affords a wide variety of water sports including water skiing, boating and canoeing, a daily water ski show and performances by the Florida State University Student Circus.

Robin Lake Beach at Callaway Gardens is host to the Masters Water Ski Tournament each June and has twice hosted the National Water Ski Championships.

Volleyball Clinic Is Set For Coaches

A Volleyball Clinic will be conducted from 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Thursday at Briant Wells Field House.

The clinic will be held for all units on the post, to train coaches and officials in the techniques of play and officiating to promote better company level competition within the commands, according to officials at The Infantry Center Special Services Section.

It also will be conducted to prepare teams for participation in post and Third Army championship tournaments.

Individuals selected to attend this clinic should have sufficient service time remaining in their units to assist in the volleyball program for the remainder of the season.

Names of individuals selected by units to attend this clinic must be submitted to the Athletic Department, Bldg. 933, by 4 p.m. today.

Individuals attending the clinic should be dressed in athletic clothing and gym shoes.

From 9 a.m. to noon Monday, an explanation of the rules and demonstrations will be given.

From 9 a.m. to noon Tuesday, techniques in serving, setting, spiking, offensive playing, blocking and defensive plays will be conducted.

The schedule for Wednesday will be the same as Tuesday with the same instruction hours.

On Thursday, from 9 a.m. until noon, a class on playing the game and officiating will be given, followed by a review of the Feb. 18, 19 and 20 lessons.

A final examination will be given following the review.

428th Medics Grab Win Over Fort Gordon Here

The Fort Gordon, basketball team downed Fort Benning's second half Major Unit Basketball League champions last Saturday night at Briant Wells Field House, but found the going a little rougher Sunday afternoon against the runner-up squad.

After grabbing a close 78-75 unbeaten Student Brigade in the first tilt, Fort Gordon received a clawing from the 428th Medical Battalion, 100-82.

The Medics, champions of the first half title, set their two top point producers loose for 74 points.

George Bell was near perfect, scoring 43 points while Harold Deane, chipped in with 31. Bell's 43 points tied a previous effort he made in the Medics' first half title win over The nfantry Center Troop Command, and left the five-foot, seven-inch southpaw with a sizable lead in the scoring.

The contest was more or less a breather for the Medics, the Gordon squad not quite as sharp as they had been Saturday against the Student Brigade.

The Medics were ahead 46-38 at halftime.

Fort Gordon played a different tune, however, Saturday night, going ahead in the final minute and a half to knock the Student Brigade from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Ahead 41-39 at halftime the Gordon team played on even terms with the Brigade until the waning moments of the game.

With a three-point lead and 90 seconds to go they went into a freeze and virtually stymied the Brigade defense.

Roosevelt Thompson sparked the Gordon squad with 25 points while the Brigade's Gary Daniels, scored 30 points.

The Medics and the Student Brigade began a best two-out-of three play-off tournament Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Briant Wells Field House to determine the post champions.

LT. MARTINDALE

Martindale Sets Course Record at Country Club

Second Lt. William Martindale of the Student Brigade took top honors in March of Dimes Golf Tournament held over the past two weekends.

Martindale blasted a record-breaking 68 on the Fort Benning Country Club's Lake Side course, according to Howard Holbrook, club pro. The old record was held by Charles Harper, pro at the Columbus Country Club.

The Texas golf star, playing in a foursome, birdied 11 holes, eight of them in a row.

He also boggied two holes, the first and the 14th, and made a spectacular shot on the 390-yard 11th fairway.

After slicing his drive into trees on the 11th, he recovered with a second shot that soared out of the rough, rolling to within three feet of the cup.

Capt. Charles W. Chapman of the Student Brigade took second place honors with Capt. Walter H. Ryan, also of The Student Brigade, placing high among the leaders.

Holbrook stated the pro shop is having difficulty in locating several participants in the weekend tourney who placed among the leaders and are in line for prizes. A list of the winners and their prizes will be posted at the pro shop.

The club pro also stated an unusual feat was accomplished over the weekend by Maj. Robert D. Hines of the Air Mobility Department, Maj. Hines, who recently returned from Viet Nam, scored birdies on every par three hole on the Pine Side, a total of four.

Info Digest Forecasts 1970 Army

Predictions of things to come will be featured in the Army Information Digest for February. The Army's Chief of Staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, and his Deputy Chiefs of Staff will describe what can be expected of the Army of 1970.

Their forecast is based on current thoughts and trends among top Army officials, and will deal with personnel, operations, logistics, and research and development.

Five years ago similar articles were written by Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, then Army Chief of Staff, and his deputies, describing what they expected the Army of 1963 to be like. A review shows their predictions to be remarkably accurate.

Name Kinard Coach of Post All-Star Team

SFC Bob Kinard was recently voted to coach the Fort Benning basketball team which will represent the post in the Third Army Basketball Tournament at Fort Gordon, Ga., in March.

Kinard, a unanimous choice of the eight major unit basketball coaches in The Infantry Center league, has submitted a list of players from the league who played Fort Gordon's team here last Saturday and Sunday night.

This all-star team will also meet a similar all-star team composed of players from the 2nd Division (Feb. 26 through 28).

The final selection of players to represent the entire post will be made at a later date, according to officials at The Infantry Center Special Services Section.

PFC George Bell, a southpaw guard from Lexington, Ky., and 2nd Lt. Harold Deane from Roanoke, Va., will be representatives from the 428th Medical Battalion.

Bell, sporting a 28-point per game average, is the leagues most prolific scorer, while Deane, a former Virginia star cager, owns a 22-point per game average.

PFC Jim Norsworthy and PFC Arthur Bain were chosen from the 29th Infantry squad.

Norsworthy had a 25-point per game average during the second half of the 1962-1963 Fort Benning Major Unit Basketball League action while Bain chipped in with a 22-point per game average.

PFC Carvey Jones and PFC John Barclay are representatives from the second half champions, The Student Brigade.

Both players were instrumental in the Brigade's 7-0 record during the second half league action.

PFC Hudson Ray from Pontiac, Mich., and PFC Herbert Chavis are both representatives from The Infantry Center Troop Command. Sp4 Charles Barnet is the final member of the team, a forward from the 10th Artillery.

Instruction Is Given On New Army Radios

Select students from the post have completed instruction on the operation and maintenance of a new series of radios recently standardized by the Army.

At The Infantry School Communications Department, a five-man team of enlisted men from Fort Monmouth, N.J., conducted instruction in the AN-VRC - 12 series of FM radios.

The team presented three eight-hour courses for radio operators, with approximately 30 students each day.

40-Hour Course

A 40-hour course on maintenance was conducted with 15 students enrolled.

Students learning to operate and perform maintenance on the new radios included personnel from the Communications Department, 197th Infantry Brigade, Infantry Center Signal Section and 2nd Infantry Division.

Capt. Francis O. Nugent, communications trends coordinator for the Communications Department, said the new series will be issued in the near future and will replace the FM vehicular radios used by Infantry, artillery and armor units.

"The Army will achieve standardization when the AN-VRC-12 radios are in use by all three arms," Capt. Nugent continued.

"There are many advantages of standardization," he said. "First there is uniformity of operation and maintainance. Then there is the great advantage in having the three arms use radios with the same frequencies. When a unit is attached to another, there will be no need for changing communications equipment, a l l radios will have the same frequency coverage."

Replacements

"'Another advantage," Capt. Nugent added, "'is the use of the 'modular concept' for repairs. A faulty part can be unplingged, removed from the set, and a replacement plugged in. The modular concept makes maintenance simpler and faster."

Chief of the team was SFC John W. Whitney. Other members were SFC Ulysses Moore, SFC Blaine L. Havice Jr., S-Sgt. Harry G. McGinnis and Spc Michael J. Cestaro.

They are members of the U. S. Army Electronics Research and Development Laboratory Support Battalion at Fort Monmouth.

"Our job," Sgt. Whitney said "'is to introduce to key men the fundamentals of operation and maintenance of new equipment before it is made available to units."

"We go to the factory which makes the equipment and receive intensive instruction from the engineers there before we start out to train men in the various Army areas." he continued.

Air Force Personnel Earn Airborne Wings

Fourteen officers and 10 enlisted men from the Air Force's Tactical Air Command (TAC) were among the 567 servicemen receiving Parachutist Badges after completing the Army Infantry School's basic airborne course at Fort Benning Friday (Feb. 1).

The airmen were headed by Col. Frank J. Collins of Headquarters, 31st Tactical Fighter Wing Group, Homestead Air Force Base, Fla.; Col. Gordon P. Bradburn, 314th Troop Carrier Wing, Stewart AFB, Tenn., and Major Don H. Payne, TAC Headquarters, Langley AFB, Va.

Higgins, was with the 82nd Airborne Division, and Pvt. George M. Lampman, whose father, Richard A. Lampman, served with the 503rd Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Pvt. Dennis A. Robinson, son of Ernest A. Robinson, who served with the 101st Airborne Division, and Pvt. Davy L. Mifflin, son of Leon Mifflin, another veteran of the 101st.

702 Troopers Earn Parachutist Badges

The largest class to graduate from The Infantry School's basic airborne course since the Korean conflict, 702 students, became airborne qualified Feb. 7 when they received Parachutist Badges in ceremonies here.

Graduating at the head of the record class was Pvt. John M. Carroll. He was presented a statuette of a combat equipped paratrooper and an airborne recording.

The class included 51 Army officers and 622 enlisted men, six Air Force officers and nine enlisted men, and one Marine Corps officer and three enlisted men.

A number of the men in the class were taking a step their fathers had taken many years before. These young soldiers are referred to by instructors in the school's Airborne - Air Mobility Department as "second generation paratroopers."

One of these graduates, PFC William L. Yarborough, is the son of a distinguished Army officer, Maj. Gen. William P. Yarborough. Gen Yarborough is the commanding general of the Special Warfare Center at Fort Bragg, N. C.

The fathers of the other second generation paratroopers returned to civilian life after World War II.

They include 82nd Airborne Division veterans Robert E. Creek of Decatur, Ill., father of Pvt. Jack S. Creek, and Jim A. English of Salt Lake City, Utah, father of Pvt. Lynn A. English; 101st Airborne Division veterans, George J. Linker Sr., of Philadelphia, father of Pvt. Linker Jr., and Richard C. Westerfield of Greenwood, Ind., father of Pvt. Harold W. Westerfield, and 11th Airborne Division veteran John V. Bozzone of Boca Raton, Fla., father of Pvt. John S. Bozzone.

Challenges Facing U.S. Outlined

Challenges facing Americans today and what can be done to meet them are subjects of a new phamphlet published by the Advertising Council, Inc., a nonprofit service organization with headquarters in New York.

Called "Challenge to Americans," the pamphlet may be obtained free of cost on a single pamphlet per person basis by writing to Challenge, Box 1776, New York 17, N. Y. Groups and libraries may obtain 10 copies gratis by writing to the same address.

The pamphlet aims to keep the American people posted on the world - wide forces which imperil the nation, and to stimulate citizens to help build a stronger country.

Although the pamphlet is intended chiefly for civilian readers, members of the Armed Forces will find much background and other material for a better understanding of the forces and their problems with which the nation has to deal.

President Kennedy and former President Eisenhower have written forewords to the pamphlet explaining the struggle the nation is facing and what Americans can do to help win it.

Topics discussed include: the challenge of awakening peoples; the scientific and technological challenge; the challenge of international cooperation; the Communist challenge; and the challenge of our own permanent revolution.

THE WHOLE QUOTE

"I am tired and sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. It is only those who have neither fired a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for blood, more vengeance, more desolation. War is hell . . ."
Gen. W. T. Sherman.

General Sees Tide Turning In Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army Chief of Staff, believes that politically, economically and militarily the tide is beginning to turn in favor of the government in the war in Viet Nam.

He described the fighting as a "nasty, tough little war, a series of forays, ambushes and murders designed to terrorize the population."

Gen. Wheeler characterized the Viet Cong guerrilla as a wily, tough, ruthless, well-trained and indoctrinated fighter, but said we are fast learning how to fight and defeat him.

He added, "The magnitude and quality of the United States effort in Viet Nam are truly impressive. Our first team is in the game in Viet Nam."

The Chief of Staff let it be known that the stakes in Viet Nam are nigh and the cause in line with American principles. The lives of 14 million people whom the Communists wish to enslave are in the balance.

He said, "The relationship between the American advisor and his Vietnamese counterpart is, in general, about as healthy and wholesome as one could realistically expect. Contrary to current reports, they usually agree on what needs to be done.

"Of course there will be local reverses; there will be casualties and victory will not come quickly," he warned. "But the tide is shifting. Barring major changes in the situation and given perseverence in South Viet Nam and in the United States, I am confident that freedom will prevail."

Surgeon Says

People, Not Tranquilizers, Solve Problems

By Capt. Edward Hanks

"Doctor, I need some pills for my nerves."

How often during a week the psychiatrists at the Mental Hygiene Clinic hear this statement. Few people today realize how recent a development in medicine the appearance of tranquilizers represents.

Until the 1950s, psychiatry, unlike most of medicine, had few drugs which could be used for those people suffering from nervous and mental disorders. Especially in the more severe forms of mental illness, treatment was long in duration and the results often discouraging.

Then came the tranquilizers. Within a short period of time, a bewildering assortment of transquilizers and anti-depressants, pills and capsules in every color of the rainbow, were available for use in patients with emotional problems. Many of the new drugs developed have proved themselves to be remarkably effective.

It would be hard for anyone not working in this area to realize the many changes which have occurred in the field of mental health as a result of the availability of tranquilizers. Many patients who would have needed long periods of hospital treatment now recover rapidly and can quickly return to their jobs and families. Others can now avoid the need for hospitalization.

Life has changed even for those patients who still need long-term hospital care, as the changes brought about in their conditions by the new drugs have enabled hospitals to open many wards which in the past have had to remain locked, and have allowed greater utilization of such activities as occupational therapy, schooling and vocational guidance.

Many people not suffering from any severe mental disturbance, but who are feeling tense, irritable or nervous, for any of a variety of reasons, have had tranquilizers prescribed by their physicians and have experienced considerable relief.

Unfortunately, certain problems have arisen with the availability of the tranquilizer drugs. People sometimes forget that these are potent medicines, should be treated as such, and should be used only as prescribed by physicians. Overdosages can often lead to dangerous complications.

There is another way in which these valuable drugs can be misused. People often experience emotional difficulties because of current troubles at home or work. It sometimes seems that people would rather take a pill than work on those problems which are causing them to feel upset. This is neither a good or sensible approach to sound mental health.

It is far better, whenever possible, to work at the solution to those problems which bother us than to attempt to push them out of our minds with the help of medication. To use the tranquilizers in this way can never lead to health.

As with so many other drugs in medicine, the tranquilizers can be of great value when used properly, but they can also be misused, and when they are, are of little use and may be dangerous. Above all, pills cannot solve problems . . . only people can.

Doctors Will Be Released

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department has good news for more than 1,000 physicians who were brought into the service during the Berlin crisis.

Most of these officers had to leave specialty training programs to enter the service and lost credit for the time spent in those programs. To permit them to resume this training near the beginning of the residency year, those whose activity duty tours end between Sept. 15, 1963 and May 1, 1964, will be offered releases no later than Sept. 15.

Physicians who are otherwise obligated will not be given this release option.

Lindbergh Test Pilot During Combat Flight

The name Charles A. Lindbergh brings to mind early exploits in the history of American aviation. His first trans-Atlantic flight in the "Spirit of St. Louis" is legendary.

But unknown to most Americans are his many contributions to the aviation effort in WWII.

Early in the conflict he test flew and helped solve mass production problems involving B-24 Liberator bombers.

As a technical representative for United Aircraft Corp., he was sent to the Pacific theater in early 1944 to study aircraft performance under combat conditions. Lucky Lindy's system of evaluation was easy. He piloted them in combat himself to see what they could do.

Although 42 years old, Lindbergh flew some 50 missions and was unofficially credited with downing two Japanese Zeros.

While flying with the 475th Fighter Group of the Fifth Air Force in P-38 Lightnings, he consistently returned with gasoline to spare in his tanks. Fellow pilots were frequently "down to their last drop." Mechanics on the ground took notice.

Long on experience in fuel conservation, Lindy had been setting his r.p.m. lower and his propeller bite higher during cruising. Although this was believed to be hard on the engines, mechanics found no ill effects on his craft after the flights.

Soon the word was passed throughout the forces and some 500 miles were added to the range of the Lightnings.

The fifth top-ranking Air Force ace, Col. Charles H. MacDonald, now retired, said "Lindbergh, in effect, gave us a new, much better airplane." The P-38 could now range far beyond its original limits, much to the enemy's consternation.

TIS Students Being Taught New Vehicle

Students at The Infantry School are getting a look at a new test vehicle in classes conducted by the Ground Mobility Department.

Designated the T114, the new tracked vehicle is expected to be issued to reconnaissance units in the near future, according to Capt. John W. Swarren, chairman of the department's Vehicle Capabilities Committee.

The T-114 is amphibious. It can span a ditch five feet wide and climb a 12-inch vertical well. It carries 110 gallons of gasoline and travels at 34 miles an hour. The range of the T-114 is approximately 300 miles.

An orientation on the new vehicle was recently added to Ground Mobility Department instruction on capabilities and limitations of Infantry vehicles. The instruction is presented for student officers in orientation, career, associate and refresher courses.

Students in the department's July 1. motor transportation, automotive supervisor and Infantry mechanics courses are slated to receive maintenance instruction on the T-114 after

Medic Tops CBR School Graduates

Sp5 Charles W. Armistead recently became the second consecutive member of the 42nd Medical Battalion to complete the post's Chemical, Biological School as honor graduate.

Prior to enlisting into the Army, Sp5 Armistead studied Theology at La Sierra College, Calif. After being inducted in April, 1959, he completed basic training at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. Sp5 Armistead spent 10 months with Company A, 42nd Medical Battalion, Korea, before joining the 42Bth here.

The CBR School has the primary objective of familiarizing the student with the numerous aspects of chemical, biological and radiological warfare. The instruction is a combination of classroom lectures and practical work.

In the classroom the men are taught how to identify and treat injuries in CBR warfare. The practical work includes testing various chemical agents and decontamination procedures.

SP5 C. W. ARMISTEAD Tops CBR Class

PFC R. C. Hittel Is Named SOM

PFC Robert C. Hittel has been named Soldier of the Month of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

The member of Battery C topped six others in all areas of competition. He serves in the fire direction center as a computer.

Draft Will Be Extended

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The peacetime draft will probably be a part of American life for at least four more years.

Authority to induct men 18½ to 26 years of age into the Armed Forces under the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951 is due to expire next July 1.

Reports say the President will soon request a four-year extension and the lawmakers are expected to pass the necessary legislation.

When the law last came up for renewal, in 1959, the House approved it by a vote of 681-21, the Senate by a vote of 90-1.

Captain, Two LieutenantsAssigned to 'Conquerors'

By 87th Infantry PIO

The 87th Infantry lists a recent gain of three new officers.

Capt. Clifton D. Lollar was assigned as commanding officer at Company B.

A graduate of Copiah-Lincoln Junior College in Wesson, Miss., where he was an all-state football player, Capt. Lollar received a direct appointment as a second lieutenant in 1952. He was graduated from The Ranger School and the Associate Career course and has been an instructor and tactical officer at the Infantry Officer Candidate School. Before entering the Army he worked as an interior decorating consultant.

Lt. John H. Moss was recently assigned as executive officer at Headquarters Company.

Lt. Signal Wins 3 Awards

By 122nd Signal PIO

Not one, but three safety awards were presented recently to the 122nd Signal Battalion by Maj. Gen. Billingslea, 2nd Division commander.

The presentation took place recently at the 2nd Infantry Division Awards Presentation and Parade.

Accepting the awards for the signal battalion was SFC Hiram C. Beebe, the battalion Safety NCO. Sgt. Beebe was congratulated by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Gus H. Grisard.

Two of the awards were the Separate Battalion Quarterly Safety Awards for July through September 1962 and for October through December 1962.

The third award was the Annual Award for the best safety performance among the Separate Battalions for 1962.

These awards are based upon a comparison of the number of vehicle miles and the corresponding number of accidents.

13-Gun Salute, Honors Ceremony Will Welcome Gen. Rich, New CG

MAJ. GEN. CHARLES W. G. RICH ★ ★ (See Story of Gen. Rich's Arrival on Page 2)

11th Division Has Col. Roberts As 1st Chief of Staff

COL. ROBERTS

Col. Elvy B. Roberts, an airborne veteran of 20 years, has been named chief of staff of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), which is to be assembled and tested at Fort Benning.

He comes to the post from Fort Campbell, Ky., where he was commander of the 506th Airborne Battle Group, 101st Airborne Division.

The 1943 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy is no stranger to Fort Benning, having attended The Infantry School's basic and airborne courses after being commissioned. In 1947 he attended the advanced Infantry officer course and later served with the school's Airborne Air Mobility Department from 1957 to 1949.

With 101st

After receiving his Parachutist Badge in 1943, Col. Roberts was assigned to the 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment at Camp Mackall, N. C. During the latter part of World War II, the 501st became part of the 101st Airborne Division.

While with the 501st Col. Roberts made two combat jumps. The first into Normandy, and the second into Holland. He also participated in the Ardennes and Central Europe campaigns.

After World War II, he was assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division's 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment, where he served as S-3 (plans and operations officer) and battalion commander until 1947.

In 1949, Col. Roberts attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and from there he went to Germany, where he was with the Personnel and Administration Division, Headquarters, European command.

At Staff College

Returning to the United States in 1953, he attended the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va. From January, 1954, to January, 1955, he was with the Joint Airborne Troop board at Fort Bragg, N.C. From 1955 to 1956, he served on the Department of the Army General Staff in the Organization and Training Division of G-3, and from 1956 to 1958 he was in the office of the Chief of Staff.

Graduating from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., in 1959, Col. Roberts was chief of the Plans and Programs Division of the U. S. Military Mission with the Iranian Army until 1961.

Among his decorations and awards are the Bronze Star Medal with V-device and Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge with two combat stars, Belgian Fourragere, Dutch Orange Lanyard and the Order of the Dutch Lion.

Col. Roberts is married to the former Durcilla Wilson of Irvine, Ky. They have three children, Catharine, 16, Sandra, 13, and William, 2.

18,000 Doses of Sabine Vaccine Are Distributed

If you happened to see anyone traveling around the post with a load of cubed sugar lately, you can bet he was from the 428th Medical Battalion.

In the past month the 428th has administered approximately 18,000 doses of Sabine oral polio vaccine.

The new oral vaccine, developed by Dr. Sabine at the University of Cincinnati Medical College, has proved to be superior to the Salk polio vaccine and is now being given to all military personnel and dependents.

The most significant advantage of the Sabine vaccine is that the dosage can be dropped on a sugar cube which can then be consumed orally. The Sabine vaccine has been proven to be an effective immunization against carrying the disease, whereas the Salk vaccine only insures against contracting polio. Additionally, full immunization, three doses of the vaccine, is expected to provide lifetime immunity to polio.

Capt. Leroy M. Barber Jr., battalion operations officer, coordinated the massive immunization program. Under the supervision of Lt. Ben E. Dickerson, the 3rd Field Hospital and 56th Medical Company (Clearing) each furnished four teams composed of four men per team to accomplish the program.

The efficiency of each team was displayed by their ability to immunize over 800 men per hour.

U. S. SAVINGS BONDS

The purchase of U. S. savings bonds is a method of saving money with the assurance of absolute security of principal and interest. While the money is being used by the Government, the bonds will be earning interest, and the owner will be accumulating a personal estate. Bonds may be purchased by monthly allotments or by cash.

Holiday Safety Is Urged

Fort Benning's military and civilian personnel are scheduled to have a holiday Feb. 22, as the nation commemorates the birthday of its first president, George Washington.

Falling on Friday this year, the holiday stretches the normal weekend into three days, allowing more time for activities. As in the normal case for long weekends, safety officials throughout the nation are encouraging people to be cautious in their activities, particularly motorists.

So far this year, Fort Benning drivers have an enviable record. According to Norman M. Evans, Infantry Center safety director, there have been no traffic fatalities involving post drivers since the year began.

"We want to keep the slate clean," Evans urged, adding his conviction that the people seem to be beginning to realize that the responsibility for safety lies in each individual.

Ceremonies to Welcome Commander on Tuesday

A 13-gun salute will welcome Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich at 4 p.m. Tuesday when he arrives on the post to assume the position of commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

The salute will be part of a colorful honors ceremony to be staged on Chapel Field.

Gen. Rich succeeds Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell who departed the post Tuesday for an assignment as assistant chief of staff for Force Development.

Participating in the parade will be an Honor Guard formed by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Jimmy Smith.

The salute will be fired by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, also of the 197th Infantry Brigade, with Capt. William E. Trent in command.

Music for the ceremony will be furnished by The Infantry Center Band, directed by CWO Clyde W. White.

Gen. Rich comes to the post from Fort Campbell, Ky., where he commanded the 101st Airborne, Division.

At Fort Benning, Gen. Rich will, in addition to serving as commanding general of the Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, have under his command the new 11th Air Assault Division activated on the post Feb. 15.

Commanded by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, who came to the post from the position of assistant commander of the 101st, the new division will serve as a test unit pioneering in the latest concepts of air-mobile fighting principles.

A 1935 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., Gen. Rich qualified as a parachutist at Fort Benning in 1942. He remained on the post after earning his parachute emblem, serving first as S-3 and executive officer of the Parachute School, and later as commander of the 2nd Parachute Training Regiment. Gen. Rich is a 1939 graduate of The Infantry School.

In the early days of World War II, Gen. Rich served in the Pacific Theater with the 19th Infantry.

In October, 1944, he went to Europe, where he served until July, 1947.

During this time he served as airborne advisor, G-3 Section, 6th Army Group; deputy chief of staff, XXI Corps; G-1 and chief of staff of the Western Base Section, and assistant to the deputy chief of staff, European Command.

Beginning in 1947, Gen. Rich was at the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va., first as a student and later as an instructor and then secretary of the school.

He was regimental executive officer, G-3 and then chief of staff of the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., between July, 1950, and August, 1952.

After a year of study at the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., he went to Korea as commander of the 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division. Before returning to the U. S. in 1954, he was deputy chief of staff of IX Corps.

Gen. Rich served as a member of the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel in Washington, D.C., from 1954 to 1958, when he was named assistant commander of the 101st Airborne Division.

In September, 1958, Gen. Rich became commandant of cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, a position he held until assuming command of the 101st in 1961.

Among his awards and decorations are the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal, and an Army Commendation Medal. He was been awarded the French Legion of Honor, French Croix de Guerre with two Palms, Polish Order of Polonia Restituta IV Class and Belgian Croix Militare Pre Class.

A native of Bandy, Va., Gen. Rich is married to the former Lucille Elizabeth Schalker of Leavenworth, Kan. They have two daughters, Mrs. Joseph T. Palastra and Roselyn Stockton.

USAFI Goal: Eliminate the 'Sign Language Soldier'

The days are gone when the American fighting man could get along with sign language in a foreign country, a smattering of knowledge in a single Romance language, or an awkward pleasantry for all occasions in French, Italian, Spanish or German.

Today the men and women of the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force are stationed in practically every corner of the globe to fill United States commmitments to allied and friendly nations, and to those peace - loving countries asking aid and assistance in their battle for national stature and freedom.

To meet vastly expanded needs the Department of Defense has been building its language instruction program with all the tools advanced instruction techniques can supply. Only the human application remains to put the American in uniform on easy speaking terms with the free world he is helping to protect.

Language kits are ready to introduce him to some 30 tongues. The United States Armed Forces Institute has extended its language training facilities to make spoken languages available on tape and discs to students in remote areas. The output of teachers for classroom instruction of servicemen has been greatly expanded. Experts from universities have been called into map - language - teaching programs for the major commands.

In short, soldiers are being aroused to assault the language barrier.

The aim of United States Armed Forces Institute (USAFI) language courses is to give the student an active knowledge of 1,000 to 1,500 words, enough to equip him for daily conversation in the environment where he is stationed.

Instruction in 24 languages is offered in the spoken language series, where emphasis is on hearing and speaking the language. The spoken language series is designed primarily for class study.

Armed Forces personnel, however, may enroll with USAFI on an individual basis. Language recordings are loaned to the individual student. Sometimes spoken language recordings are broadcast on Armed Forces radio stations or played on public address systems. Students use booklets to study on their own.

In addition to the spoken language series USAFI also offers "reading courses" in Grench, German, Italian, Russian and Spanish at levels usually found in the first year of college. The courses are intended to develop reading ability and may be taken as either high school or college subjects.

Foreign language study by "correspondence," another method available in USAFI's broad program for instructions, allows for greater adjustment to individual circumstances. The instructor can give his full attention to one student at a time. Individual difficulties in comprehension and expression can be analyzed in more detail.

Modern science has overcome much of the traditional disadvantages of studying foreign languages by correspondence. In the past the student could not communicate orally with his teacher. The use of phonograph records now opens the way for the instructor and his student to converse, however, and the student can obtain models of pronunciation for study and imitation.

The process of learning a language may be somewhat slower, because the student still must wait an exchange of correspondence before he can know the instructor's judgment on the nuances of his pronunciation. In this case the accuracy of the student's hearing and his ability to judge his own imitation of the record instructor's voice is of special importance.

Recorded Portions

USAFI now also uses the tape recorder on a limited basis for communication between student and instructor.

First the student works with his test and study guide to familiarize himself with the material to be covered. Then he listens to a disc or a tape recording by the instructor. Finally he imitates the instructor's pronunciations.

At the end of the lesson he records portions on tape and sends the tape to his instructor for analysis, comment and grading.

The instructor's recommendations for improvements are followed in subsequent tapes.

The tape recorder is also being used, USAFI officials report, to evaluate the linguistic abilities of its graduates. Officers and men already proficient in a language can be graded as to pronunciation and other language abilities.

American Heritage-- Don't Let It Perish

What is our American Heritage? It is many tangible things — like hotdogs, popcorn and hoedowns — that come to us through our history. Our heritage is also made up of intangible things handed down to us to keep and cherish as sacredly American.

Without doubt the most precious part of our heritage is freedom. If we had not rallied to freedom's cause — in 1776, 1812, 1917, 1941 and 1950 — that part of our heritage might well have vanished. If it had vanished it might well have destroyed the rest of our heritage.

Men and women in uniform, above all others, should never become complacent, for freedom is a perishable condition to be zealously guarded. Servicemen stand in the forward line of guardians of freedom across the globe.

Throughout our history the task of guarding and perpetuating the four basic freedoms has been the most important responsibility of those in the service. These four freedoms — freedom of speech, freedom to worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear — head the list of gifts that are our heritage as Americans.

How many of these freedoms do the people of the Communist world enjoy? Few indeed.

But to Americans these freedoms form the basic, vital core of our heritage and are the foundation of our way of life. Without them we would have no heritage. Without them there would be no America. Let us guard them well. (AFPS)

George Washington Said . . .

"There is a mark due to the United States among nations, which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it; if we desire to secure peace, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war." George Washington, Fifth Annual Address to Congress, Dec. 1793.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Time Is a Precious Thing

By
CHAPLAIN (1st Lt.) HENRY F. ACKERMANN

Four thousand years ago the Chinese Emperior Hwang-ti floated a small, leaky boat in a basin of water and thus invented the first clock. Time was told by the number of hours it took the boat to submerge.

Later, "water clocks" were devised by allowing drops of water to fall on miniature paddle wheels which turned gears moving an hour hand over the face of a disk on which the numbers from one to 12 had been evenly spaced. It was clever but there was one big hitch—the clocks froze up in cold weather. Knotted ropes which burned slowly, notched candles, and hourglasses came later.

Real clocks were first made around the 1300's by blacksmiths — and no wonder. They were enormous iron contraptions driven by bulky weights too big to fit into anything much smaller than a church steeple. One of them, built in 1360 for the king of France, was still running in 1852 and had been repaired only a few times in those 500 years.

Only time will tell whether the average household will one day boast an atomic clock similar to that now serving our National Bureau of Standards. It was built in 1949 after a Columbia University scientist used microscopic particles of ammonia to divide a second into 24 billion parts.

No matter how minutely you divide it, or how accurately you record it, time is extremely important. It is one of God's great gifts—the essence from which life is distilled. The value of it arises from the limited segment we are provided in this life and the fact that our use of it will shape enternity. Once the hand on the dial of time has moved forward, it can never be turned back. The proper use of "NOW" is therefore underscored.

Life at its very best is short, so caress each treasured moment, and use it wisely; for time is a precious thing which must not be "killed" but "invested."

GEN. HARRELL PASSES MASSED COLORS WHILE TROOPING LINE WITH COL. KEYES

Unit Guidons Line Gen. Harrell's Route As He Leaves Fort Benning

Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell made his final round of hand-shakes and departed the Infantry Center Tuesday morning at 8:30.

Representatives from almost every Infantry School Department and Infantry Center staff section gathered at the general's quarters to see him off. Gen. Harrell is en route to Washington, D.C., where he will become assistant chief of staff for Force Development, after serving as Infantry Center commanding general and Infantry School commandant since Aug. 1, 1961.

Seventy - four unit guidons, borne by students from the school's 4th Student Battalion, lined the general's route t Outpost No. 1.

The two-star general received official honors Monday when more than 3,000 troops of The Infantry Center paraded in a farewell review at French Field.

A 13-gun salute fired by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, started the ceremony. The battery was commanded by Capt. William E. Trent.

Gen. Harrell, accompanied by Col. W. Keyes, trooped the line while the combined bands of The Infantry Center and the 2nd Infantry Division played appropriate music. CWO Clyde W. White directed.

Gen. Harrell paid special tribute to the 2nd Infantry Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea; The Infantry Board and its president, Col. William M. Summers, and the Infantry Combat Developments Agency, commanded by Col. Kenneth Eckland, all Fort Benning units but not part of The Infantry Center.

He recognized Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., Infantry School assistant commandant, and Col. Keyes, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade for outstanding work and paid his command a general compliment saying, "I'm sure no commander ever left finer troops."

Following the 3,000 troops as they passed in review were Army missiles, engineer equipment, armored personnel carriers, tanks, artillery and 30 rotary and fixed-wing aircraft from Lawson Army Aviation Command.

A composite colors unit, composed of the national and unit colors of each Infantry Center and Infantry School organization and the colors of the 2nd Infantry Division, joined The Infantry Center Honor Guard to make up a 66-man unit under the command of Capt. Jimmy W. Smith.

GEN. HARRELL SALUTES COLORS

Passing of Colors Marks Activation Of New 11th Air Assault Division

The Army's newest division, the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), was formally activated in ceremonies here Feb. 15.

The unit colors were turned over to Lt. Gen. John K. Waters, commanding general of the U. S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va., by the division sergeant major, Chester R. Westervelt.

Gen. Waters then handed the flag containing the winged division patch to Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 11th Division commanding general.

Former Member

Also participating in the ceremonies was Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell, former commanding general of The Infantry Center and Commandant of The Infantry School.

Gen. Harrell, who departed the post Tuesday for another assignment, spent two years with the division the new test unit succeeds, the 11th Airborne Division.

All three generals addressed the crowd, which included many of the division's high ranking officers and non-commissioned officers. Each stressed the importance of the air mobile concept and their faith in the men's ability to carry out their mission.

In accepting the colors, Gen. Kinnard summed up the feeling of the men of the 11th by saying, "We are fully aware of the importance of our assigned mission and are proud to have been selected to accomplish it."

"We realize the sacrifices the Army is making and will make to produce this unit from existing resources," he stated. "We know what we prove or disprove will have a deep and lasting impact on the future Army."

"None of us underestimates the task that lies ahead," the veteran of World War II and Korea said, "but neither are we overawed by it. We are simply determined to mold such a team and function in such a way that we will fully prove the air assault concept."

The presence of Gen. Waters at the ceremonies marked his first appearance at the post since taking over as CONARC commander.

Among the guests were Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the post's other division, the 2nd Infantry Division, and Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, commanding general of the U. S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

The colors were brought to the post Feb. 13 by the first contingent of an authorized 2,000-man force, which will be utilized during the testing phase.

The division's first tactical exercises are expected to be held in the late summer or early fall.

11th Division Records Its 1st Re-ups

The new 11th Air Assault Division, presently undergoing activation processes here recorded its first divisional reenlistments on Feb. 15, the first day of operation for the division.

The reenlistment ceremony was conducted in the office of Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander.

The reenlistees were SFC James W. Day, Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company 11th Air Assault Aviation Group, Sp6 Thomas E. Lowery, 187th Transport Airplane Company, and Sp5 Richard M. Kearney, Hdqs. Company, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, all of whom reenlisted with the express desire to remain within the new division.

Following the administering of the reenlistment oath, Gen. Kinnard expressed his confidence in the new division and hoped that the reenlistment rate would be equal to that of comparative sized units, and that qualified men within the division will be encouraged to reenlist, not only for the betterment of the Army but to insure the success and rapid development of the 11th Division.

Aviation Slots Are Available In Re-Up Plan

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has set up a new reenlistment option allowing enlisted personnel with less than four years service who have reached their 18th birthday to re-enlist for the Warrant Officer Flight Training Program.

Qualified soldiers can reenlist for the program within 120 days of their expiration of service.

Those who successfully complete the course will be appointed warrant officers with assignment as fixed wing or rotary wing aviators. They will be required to serve three years active duty in warrant status.

Those who fail must serve the remainder of their hitch as enlisted men.

Current reorganization of units and activation of new units have emphasized the role of army aviation and the result is an increased requirement for Army aviators.

Recent changes in eligibility requirements have made flight training available to additional enlisted men and warrant officers in fields other than aviation.

Applications for flight training are being accepted from men serving both overseas and in the states. Those overseas may submit their applications at any time and if serving in a long-tour area may be returned to the U. S. for training after completion of half the normal tour. Those serving in short-tour area will enter flight training after completion of a full tour.

Applications may be submitted in accordance with instructions in AR 611-85 as changed in DA Message 327988, dated Feb. 1, 1963. Commanders and personnel officers at all levels are prepared to assist processing of applications.

Are You Missing Your Pay?

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Failure to report a change of address can mean financial hardship for the recipient of an allotment and makes extra work for military allotment offices.

The Army Finance Center, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., says it is concerned by the large number of allotment checks and Savings Bonds that are returned as undelivered mail.

Abou 80 per cent of the checks and bonds returned to the Army have been classified "undeliverable" by the Post Office Department because the address imprinted by the Finance Center is not up to date.

Primary responsibility for keeping allotment offices informed of address changes rests with the recipient. This is particularly true of dependents whose sponsors are overseas or otherwise separated from them.

Change of address cards are mailed with allötment checks at regular intervals and should be submitted promptly whenever the addressee moves, the Army said.

MOH Holder Rode Mule Into Battle

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Riding a mule into enemy lines almost 100 years ago, 1st Sgt. Francis Marion Cunningham earned the Medal of Honor, a commission and a 30-day leave, all in one day's fighting.

Company H of the First West Virginia Cavalry had been all but wiped out on April 6, 1865, at Sailors Creek, Va. The Blue uniforms were down to five when Sgt. Cunningham saddled a stray mule, rode through enemy fire and wrestled the Confederate colors from the startled Rebs.

Brig. Gen. George A. Custer, the youngest general in the Union Army, was impressed by Cunningham's heroic action and placed the sergeant on his personal staff.

At the end of the war he sent Cunningham to Washington where the soldier presented Secretary of War Stanton with the captured flag.

Stanton, after reading the general's account of the action and his recommendations, awarded 1st Sgt. Cunningham the Medal of Honor, a commission as a first lieutenant and a 30-day leave to celebrate.

TSB Officers Take 50-Mile Stroll on Post

Five officers of The Student Brigade recently completed a 50-mile hike in less than 10 hours and 11 minutes in a successful attempt to beat a Marine Corps time of 11 hours and 35 minutes.

Second Lts. Michael Moran and Ralph W. Mitchell covered the 50-mile course around the post in 10 hours and 11 minutes. During the hike they took only four breaks for a total of 12 minutes. They averaged about five miles per hour during the hike. Both officers graduated from Infantry Officer Candidate School the day before the hike.

Capts. Raymond Celeste, Richard S. Jarrett and James W. Jackson also beat the Marine time by finishing the hike in 11 hours and five minutes, 10 hours and 57 minutes and 10 hours 37 minutes respectively. These times are all from the start of the hike to the finish. These three officers are currently attending the Infantry Officer Career Course at The Infantry School.

None of the officers trained for the hike in any particular way and all had a full day before starting the hike at 2 a.m. Each officer carried 15 pounds of equipment, other than clothes and boots.

The original order setting down the period of marching time was outlined in a directive to the Marine Corps stating that a Marine should be able to march 50 miles in 20 hours marching time and taking no longer than three days to cover the route. The directive was made up by President Teddy Roosevelt in 1908. A group of Marines recently did the 50-mile march in 11 hours and about 30 minutes.

These 50-Mile Walks... 'No Sweat'

By Bob de Camara

It was just a "normal" training activity for the battle-ready 2nd Infantry Division the other night that prompted members of the division's 1st Infantry to bring another first to this elite "leg" division.

After a regular full Army day, which included calisthenics and organized athletics, and with less than two hours notice, 43 enlisted men and one officer of the "Second to None's" 1st Infantry Company A volunteered to take a crack at the 50-mile walk that's kept Camp Lejeune and the nation's capitol so busy lately.

After the "Always First" completed its successful first march, the "Indianhead" Division was "swamped" with men volunteering to walk the swamps. In fact, the number of people wanting to get in on the act had spiraled into the thousands, and commanding officers were having to make the uniquely difficult decision, for infantry officers, of deciding who should walk and who shouldn't. This was ingeniously solved by fitting the walks into the routine training procedures — let the 2nd Division out-train and outwalk them too.

Rough Terrain

The 1st Infantry's Wednesday night march that got the 2nd Division into the mood for the sport was navigated over some of the roughest terrain on the Fort Benning reservation, an Army reservation noted for its ideally rugged features. Excerpts from a 1st Infantry report on the trek illustrate the difficulties.

"The dirt roads had eroded forming veritable courses. . . large holes in the road. . . at one location the platoon was forced to navigate a stream by crossing two logs. . . at several locations trees had fallen across the edges of the route causing hazardous conditions" —and all this on one of the darkest nights of the month.

The 1st Infantry spokesman concluded in typical military understatement, ". . . the hazards were invisible until such time as the men were on top of them, thereby causing the men to exercise extreme caution that would not normally be required on a daylight road march."

Timed

The first five to finish this exercise had done the 50 miles in 14 hours and one minute of actual walking time, almost two and one-half days less than the time prescribed in President Theodore Roosevelt's original directive. The total marching time was 14 hours and 52 minutes, (51 minutes for breaks, 5 breaks in all.)

Leading the troops in was the commander of "Alpha" Company, Lt. Clay N. Mosley, and, walking alongside, PFC William D. Lyons, Spl Rene Amill-Rivera, PFC Thomas J. Bailey and PFC Rafael R. Benitez. Neither of the four enlisted personnel have had airborne or Ranger training. Their commander, Lt. Mosley, has had airborne but not Ranger training.

The "walkingest" men in the United States Army continued walking last Friday as eight 2nd Infantry Division units sprinted across the finish line after a 50-mile trek.

Although the division is walking as a part of the regular training program, the fact cannot be overlooked that one soldier checked in at the finish line with a time just over 11 hours.

The 'Chief'

Symbolically for men of the "Indianhead" Division, he was Pvt. Nicholas "Chief" Goodreau, a full-blooded Sioux Indian who recorded 11 hours and 25 minutes for the 50-mile test. The "Chief," of Battery B, 12th Artillery Battalion, was also clocked running the last mile at 10 miles per hour. This was not the best time recorded, however, as the next day three "Conquerors" broke that mark, one eclipsing it by more than two hours.

2nd Division units participating in last Friday walks were the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 3rd Brigade's 9th Infantry; the 3rd Brigade's 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry; the 2nd Engineers; and the 12th, 17th, 27th and 37th Artillery Battalions.

The following morning hundreds more of the 2nd Division troops volunteered to make the walk. Men of the Di-

Confused?

ROAD Concept Seen As Basically Simple

BY PETE TATISTCHEFF

Confused about what's going on in the 2nd Infantry Division? You're not the only one. In changing the structure of the 2nd Infantry Division to fit into the Army's Reorganization Objective Army Division (ROAD) concept, there is a tendency to view only the complex big picture.

It might help to step back now and take a quick look at the essential guidelines. ROAD becomes basically very simple.

At the present time the Army has three types of divisions—Infantry, Armor and Airborne.

The new ROAD organization provides for four types of divisions — Infantry, Armor, Airborne and a new type, Mechanized.

The four types of divisions will have a common base. In each division there will be three brigade headquarters.

As each division is organized, it will have assigned to it varying numbers and types of battalions — Infantry, Mechanized Infantry, Tank or Airborne.

The assignment of these battalions will depend on the geographic location of the divisions and the mission it may be assigned or expected to be assigned.

A division's mobility will be suited to its environment.

Those divisions in Strategic Army Corps (STRAC) will have more Airborne Infantry or will have combinations of battalions adaptable to a variety of assignments.

ROAD insures a division's internal flexibility, improves command and control structure and makes better use of existing resources. It allows for expansion by the assignment of battalions as necessary.

Under a new building block concept, each division has a common base ranging in strength from 6,000 to 7,200 men.

To each of these divisions will be assigned from six to 15 battalions, ranging in size from 750 to 850 men.

Every one of the new divisions could have a different number of battalions assigned. An "average" division would have the strength of approximately 15,000 men.

In all four types of divisions the division base includes a headquarters and headquarters company, one military police company, one aviation battalion and division artillery.

In the new division is one reconnaissance squadron, one engineer battalion, one signal battalion and one support command.

The support command includes a headquarters, administration company, medical battalion, a supply and transportation battalion and a maintenance battalion.

Varying numbers of combat maneuver battalions can be added to this division base.

Division Trains Becomes 2nd's Support Command

Under the Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) concept, the 2nd Infantry Division is going through constant reorganization and change.

This week was no exception as no less than seven units went through a series of large and small changes.

The Division Headquarters and Headquarter Company was reorganized with the 2nd MP (Military Police) Company being activated as a separate company. In addition, the old 2nd Infantry Division Brigade was disbanded.

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment and Band, 2nd Infantry Division Trains was redesignated as Headquarters and Headquarters Company and Band, 2nd Infantry Division Support Command and reorganized. Col. Arlin J. Kehe was named Support Command commander.

The 2nd Administration Company was reorganized with the result that unit personnel functions were transferred to Division Headquarters under the control of the adjutant general.

The 2nd Medical Battalion was reorganized with Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment being redesignated as Headquarters and Support Company. In addition, a third lettered company, Company C, was activated.

The 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, 7th Cavalry, was inactivated for eventual assignment to the 1st Cavalry Division as the 3rd Battalion (Infantry), 7th Cavalry. To take its place, the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry was activated with all personnel and equipment of the previous Reconnaissance Squadron being transferred to the 4th Squadron. In addition to the present three reconnaissance troops, an air cavalry troop, Troop D, will be formed as soon as aircraft and aviation personnel become avzilable.

The 2nd Aviation Company became the 2nd Aviation Battalion and consists of a Headquarters Company and Companies A and B.

Finally, the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery was reorganized. The 1st Howitzer Battalion, 27th Artillery was inactivated with the men and equipment being reassigned in Division Artillery. With the reorganization of the other battalions, the Division has three Direct Support battalions of 105 mm Howitzers, each consisting of a Headquarters Battery, three Firing Batteries, and a Service Battery. These battalions were designated as the 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery; the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery; and the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery. The 6th Battalion, 37th Artillery consists of Headquarters Battery, three 155 millimeter Howitzer Batteries, an 8-inch Howitzer Battery, and a Service Battery. The 1st Battalion, 12th Artillery will be expanded to have two rocket-batteries armed with Honest John Rockets.

ROAD Concept

According to an Army News Service release it is possible that some divisions would have two infantry, two tank and two mechanized infantry battalions assigned.

Any of the divisions could absorb up to 15 battalions of various combinations without overloading the division base.

Should the number of battalions assigned to a division be only six or seven, it is quite likely that parts of the division base, such as one of the brigade headquarters and parts of the support command could be eliminated.

To form forces less than a division (brigades) it will only be necessary to give a brigade headquarters sufficient portions of the division base to handle the number of battalions assigned.

For example, two Infantry battalions and a Tank battalion migbt be formed as a separate Infantry brigade. Two Tank battalions and a Mechanized Infantry battalion would make up an Armor brigade. (More next week.)

FOR STAFF; JUST EXERCISE . . . As infantrymen in the 2nd Division volunteered to prove 50-mile hikes were nothing at all, staff workers at division headquarters used their Wednesday afternoon athletic hours to walk 25 miles. Farewell Review Staged For 69th Armor Lt. Colonel

The elite 2nd Infantry Division's 69th Armor Battalion said farewell to its commander Monday morning on Sand Hill's Knight Field with a review.

Lt. Col. James T. Kolb has left the medium tank battalion to attend a 20-week long Spanish course at the U.S. Army Language School, Presidio of Monterey, Calif., and for reassignment.

The review had present Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, the 2nd Division commander, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, as guests. Commander of troops at the ceremony was Maj. David Termin Jr., executive officer of the 69th Armor.

Trooping the line of assembled troops with Col. Kolb was Sgt. Maj. Stephen J. Regan. Sgt. Maj. Regan will be transferred out of the 69th today to the 2nd Division Support Command. Following trooping the line, a farewell address was given by Col. Kolb to the men of the 69th Armor and to the division.

The ceremony was concluded by the troops passing in review before Col. Kolb, Sgt. Maj. Regan, the two generals and other guests. Refreshments were served on the field.

Following the Spanish course, Col. Kolb will be transferred for training to the Army's Special Warfare Center at Fort Bragg, N.C., and, following this, to the Military Assistance Institute in Arlington, Va. Col. Kolb is scheduled in March 1964 to become armor advisor to the Venezuelan Army.

COMMANDER'S VISIT . . . Visiting with the 2nd Infantry Division recently was the new Third Army commander, Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II (C). Greeted by Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, division sergeant major (R) and Maj. Gen. Charles Billingsles, division commander (L), the general attended a review in his honor at the Division Headquarters Parade Field.

87th's Hqs. Reorganized

By 87th Infantry PIO

Under the new Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) concept the 87th Infantry's old Headquarters Company is no longer strictly a company of medics and unit headquarters clerk - typists but is now injected with personnel of the former Combat Support Company.

Commanding officer of the new Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry is Capt. Robert T. Smith Jr., former commanding officer at Combat Support Company.

Capt. Smith was graduated in 1957 from Wake-Forest College, Winston - Salem, N. C., where he received a Bachelor of Arts degree in history. He was awarded a Reserve Officer Training Corps commission, after which he attended The Infantry School and the U. S. Army Intelligence School. Prior to arriving at the 87th Infantry he served in Korea from 1958 to 1961 as an intelligence research officer.

The resulting changes in the two companies are at the disposal of the battalion commander for providing the unit with command, staff, administration, ground radar surveillance, reconaissance, communications, forward air control, 4.2 inch mortar, nuclear, antitank, supply, maintenance and medical support.

A rather special group in the company will be the radar section. A ground radar surveillance team can spot moving objects in every terrain and weather at a distance of three miles; and used effectively, it practically eliminates a surprise attack.

Forces Set Fall Battles

"United States Strike Command (USSTRICOM) joint training exercise SWIFT STRIKE III will be held in the Carolinas between Fayetteville, N.C. and Augusta, Ga., from July 21 to August 16," Gen. Paul D. Adams, Strike commander-in-chief announced this week.

The 2nd Infantry Division is scheduled to participate in this exercise.

The United States Strike Command is a unified command composed of the combat-ready units of the U. S. Army Continental Army Command and the U. S. Air Force Tactical Air Command. It is a flexible, mobile, and highly-trained military force capable of rapid deployments to any place in the world. Field exercises of the scope of the SWIFT STRIKE exercises are essential to maintaining the high state of combat readiness, and rapid reaction capabilities required of the forces assigned to USSTRICOM for the execution of its mission of reinforcing other unified commands, or to conduct military operations in any area of the world as directed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Therefore, our soldiers and airmen must be trained in a realistic manner which can be achieved only where sufficient maneuver space is available.

SWIFT STRIKE III will pit two strong joint task forces of United States Strike Command ground and air elements against each other. Some 80,000 men of several division and smaller units of the Army and numerous Air Force tactical air units will battle each other over a large area of the Southeast, commencing with each side launching an extensive air campaign seeking to achieve air superiority in the assumed combat area.

"Training for modern warfare requires larger land areas than now are available to us on existing military reservations. We must therefore ask our civilian neighbors to assist us in order to deploy and maneuver forces adequately to train combat troops and airmen to meet the challenges of present - day conflict and to field test new equipment, organizations, and concepts", General Adams said. "The outstanding cooperation and support of these military objectives shown by the citizens of the Carolinas when we held SWIFT STRIKE I and SWIFT STRIKE II in 1961 and 1962 respectively, augurs well for the successful outcome of this year's exercise. Many of the people in those areas participated in the guerrilla and partisan activities of the opposing forces, and thus contributed directly and importantly to the overall success of the exercises.

"SWIFT STRIKE III will be the largest joint training exercise United States Strike Command has held to date and we will strive for maximum realism in maneuvering large joint forces," General Adams said. "The area we have chosen is particularly desirable because of the variety of terrain, and well-disposed Army and Air Force bases which contribute substantially to the effectiveness of the exercises, and reduce the costs of conducting them. Therefore, it is essential that we train our forces in the most realistic manner possible," he emphasized.

Representative of the Savannah District Office of the U. S. Army's Corps of Engineers will begin visiting landowners in the area immediately to obtain the necessary permission for use of their land in the maneuver.

"The same claim procedures which worked so well in SWIFT STRIKE II will be used to settle any claims that might arise for damage to private property" said General Adams.

"Within a short time after the conclusion of the exercise, all claims which had been received from local landowners had been settled satisfactorily."

USCONARC Chief Visits 'Indianheads'

The 2nd Infantry Division was paid a visit by the new U. S. Continental Army Commander last week.

Lt. Gen. John K. Waters, USCONARC commander, arrived at Wetherby Field on his way to the activation ceremonies of the 11th Air Assault Division. He was met by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingsles, 2nd Division commander; Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander; and Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., chief of staff, and was escorted to division headquarters where he attended a miniature review in his honor. The division's B Company, 1st Infantry and the Security Platoon of Headquarters and Headquartesr Company supplied honor guard to salute the CONARC commander. Capt. Clifton D. Lollar, CO of B Company, 1st Infantry, was the commander of troops.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Gen. Waters retired to Gen. Billingslea's office where the 2nd division commander gave him an account of the division's activities.

Mrs. Roeder Writes

Publicity Heads Change; Mrs. Schreiber Selected

BY JAME ROEDER

At this time I should like very much to express my appreciation for the confidence and cooperation that I have received during my term as publicity chairman of the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club. I also wish to say thanks to the officers and the individuals with whom I have worked. Without their able assistance, my job would not have been possible.

Introducing "Kay"

By the same token, I wish to introduce you to my successor, Mrs. Kenneth Schreiber, who will begin writing for this publication on Friday, February 22nd. She steps into the position of publicity chairman of the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club.

Mrs. Schreiber, better known as "Kay," is the wife of Lt. Kenneth Schreiber presently assigned to the 1st Battalion of the 9th Infantry. Her parents are residents of Tonawanda, N. Y.

MRS. SCHREIBER

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins saw their daughter graduate from Mount St. Mary Academy in Buffalo, N. Y. and go on to attend business school. During her years of education Kay was active in the school newspaper, debating clubs, the choral group, Sodality, and sports. Putting her business school education to use, Kay has also worked with the offices of a major telephone company and later with an airline.

The Schreibers met at Niagara University in New York and were married on Halloween in 1959. They have two children, Charles William and Susan Elizabeth. This is not their first tour at Fort Benning as the lieutenant attended a school course here in 1959. From here they were assigned to Fort Dix, N.J. They then returned to Columbus, where they now live, and Fort Benning in November 1962.

Kay lists as special interests theatrical productions, youth activities, and people. For hobbies she claims reading, writing, and garden dabbling. To be a successful Army wife and mother are her greatest ambitions.

Mrs. Schreiber will keep the same deadlines for data and photographs which Mrs. Roeder set up. Please turn your unit's social news into her by Friday noon. Since she lives off-post, news event data may be left at 305-B First Division Road, Fort Benning at the quarters of Mrs. R. Beard.

Ladies Invite Decorator To Speak

A colorful Valentine theme set the scene for the February luncheon of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead as more than 70 gathered for a double treat at the 2nd Division Non - commissioned Open Mess.

On this occasion Mrs. Stanley L. Harding, wife of Brig. Gen. Harding, assistant 2nd Division commander, was presented with an honorary club membership. Mrs. Harding graciously accepted the membership and thanked the ladies for an enjoyable luncheon.

Decorator Speaks

An informative program was planned for this affair featuring Mrs. Mary Francis Dickerson, accredited interior decorator. She spoke informally to the ladies on working with fabrics and colors to create interesting room arrangements in the home. Mrs. Dickerson set up a display table of fabrics and rug samples.

Several chairmen and members worked together in order to make this luncheon successful.

Words of praise were extended by Mrs. James A. Scott, president, to the following chairmen and members: Mesdames Wayne Cliff, hospitality chairman, Thomas Howatter, Clyde Hardin, Lawrie Rentirn, William McKinney, program chairmen.

The club scrapbook was displayed on a special table. This book denotes with pictures and articles the founding and history of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead.

The centerpieces of red carnations and white snapdragons were door prizes.

The program of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead is being expanded with the addition of sewing courses. An advanced class has begun meeting on Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. at the Club House. The beginner course is being organized for Thursday evening at 7 p.m. at the Club House.

Although this administrative year is coming to a close, ladies who are interested in joining the club may still do so.

Samson Home Scene of 9th Infantry Fete

A get-acquainted coffee was held recently by the ladies of the newly-organized 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry in the home of Mrs. Jack Samson at Fort Benning. Lt. Col. Samson commands this battalion.

Guest of honor at this function was Mrs. Lucien F. Keller, wife of Col. Keller who commands the 3rd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division. Mrs. Keller was also asked to pour. On behalf of the battalion ladies, she was presented with a corsage of red and white carnations.

The decorations followed a Valentine's Day theme and the serving table was highlighted by a large, red heart topped with a cupid and pink and red flowers. Name tags completed the motif and featured pink, red and white hearts pierced with an arrow.

38TH PARTY

A battalion party, held by the officers and ladies of the 38th Artillery recently, named the Main Officers' Open Mess as the scene for their festivities.

Guerrillas Chosen for Instruction Have a Curious and Important Job

By 1st Infantry PIO

In the age of the hydrogen bomb and the atomic stalemate, the scene of hot war battles are the underdeveloped regions of the world, where poverty, ignorance and hunger stalk the land and make it ripe for plucking by the Communists.

Since many of these marginal regions lie within tropics, it is imperative that the Army familiarize its soldiers with the kind of warfare that will most likely be experienced there. Counter - Insurgency training is a step in this direction.

Providing Guerrillas

The 1st Infantry initiated its Counter - Insurgency program this month and Delta Company of the battle group was chosen to provide a good number of the guerrillas whose job is to harass troops of the 2nd Division as they undergo the training.

The two guerrilla teams supplied by Delta Company, distinguished by the civilian garb and sawed off M-1's of its members are under the leadership of SSgt. Robert L. Parker and SSgt. Donald G. Castle. These two men are amply qualified for their job due to their training and experience in such fields as first aid, mountain climbing, and demolitions. Each six - man team consists of a team leader, an assistant team leader, a demolitions expert, an interpreter and a radio operator. The team must be proficient in the elements of survival; it must be able to supply its own food and improvise medical treatment. As a step to this end it attempts to locate drop zones in order to capture supplies. These supplies are kept in scattered cache points to permit the teams to travel far from their base camps or in case base camps should be discovered and destroyed. Since speed is of the essence, the guerrillas must carry the minimum equipment and supplies needed for performing their mission and surviving.

Playing the role as the guerrillas operating against the friendly forces, the variation of clothing worn by these individuals consists of nothing more than civilian type clothing, from buckskin trousers to Hawaiian sport shirts, to beards.

Maj. Lynn Will Return To S. Korea

By 13th Transportation PIO

Maj. Jack J. Lynn, executive officer of the 2nd Division's 13th Transportation Battalion, is scheduled to return soon to Korea, a country where he was cited by the government for his part in preserving post-war railway operations.

This second tour for the major in Korea recalls his work in Eighth U. S. Army's Transportation section during 1958. At that time he was railway operations superintendent, overseeing and helping control railway movement in the country, particularly of supplies and troops.

Following his first tour in Korea the major was awarded a commendation medal by the Korean Government.

While stationed at Fort Benning, he also served for 18 months as executive officer to the transportation officer at The Infantry Center. Maj. Lynn has served as a 2nd Infantry Division member of the Main Officers' Open Mess Board of Governors.

Lt. Lord is a graduate of North Georgia College, Dahlonega, Ga., where he received his Bachelor of Science degree in physical education. He also has attended The Infantry School at Fort Benning, completing both the Airborne and Ranger courses.

Commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in June 1961, he was promoted to his present rank in December 1962.

During his assignment at the "Always First" he has served as weapons platoon leader with Company A.

A New Battalion Takes on Field Tactic Training

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The first tactical exercise by the newly organized 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, 3rd Brigade, recently took place in the northwest part of the Fort Benning reservation.

The 600-man exercise stressed squad, platoon and battalion training. The primary purpose of the three-day effort was to organize the companies for the "Retaplan" tour to Germany in April.

This was the first of a series of training exercises by the 1st Battalion before its departure.

Under the watchful eyes of Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander and Col. Lucien F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander, Company A of the 1st Battalion, commanded by Capt. Louis C. Menetrey, performed a "platoon in dismounted attack."

A Squad Leader Chosen S-O-M

By 1st Infantry PIO

Selected 1st Infantry Soldier-of-the-Month for February was Sgt. Harold E. Meeks, a squad leader in the mortar platoon of Company E.

Sgt. Meeks was selected by a board composed of the battle group sergeant major and two company first sergeants.

He won in the competition over representatives from all the companies in the battle group.

Selection for the monthly honor is based on the individual's appearance, military knowledge and bearing, job competence and knowledge of current world wide events.

Sgt. Meeks received ten dollars and a letter of commendation from Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Infantry commander.

He will represent the "Always First" in competition for the 2nd Infantry Division Soldier-of-the Month for the month of February.

For Division Trains 27 volunteers crossed the finish line with a best time of 12 hours and 35 minutes.

'George' Washington Was Boxing Champ

By Bob de Camara

Twelve years of Special Services' experience qualifies SSgt. Floyd "George" Washington as one of the old hands in Army sports affairs. A large portion of those years the sarge has been active himself in boxing.

Washington was new to boxing when he entered the Army in 1949 at Fort Riley, Kans. The first two years of his enlistment he was busy learning the skills necessary to put on a good ring showing, and it was about two years after entering the Army that he had picked up enough experience ringwise to win the Tokyo Quartermaster Depot light-heavyweight crown.

Korea

During the Korean Conflict, Washington had no time to develop as fighter except out of the ring. Returning to the U.S. and Fort Polk, La., in 1952, Washington began his continuing Special Services career and sharpened himself in training, boxing, refereeing and judging bouts and coaching.

One of his memories of his tour at Fort Polk is the exhibition bout between the world heavyweight boxing champion and a fighter from Washington's stable, "King" Brown. In the second round of the bout that Washington helped judge-Brown proved no match for Ezzard Charles and took a satellite tour of the ringside seats, blasted off by a Charles right hand.

SGT. WASHINGTON

In the early summer of 1954, Washington was transferred back to Fort Riley, and, in January 1955, he began to add again to his collection of boxing titles, winning the Fort Riley light-heavyweight championship as well as the Topeka, Kans., Golden Gloves light-heavy title in that month. During the next two months, he fought his way to the Kansas City, Kans., Amateur Athletic Union light-heavy crown. The next year Washington wrapped up his active boxing career as runner-up in the 5th Army boxing tournament at Fort Carson, Colo.

In 1956 Washington turned to coaching and worked with the 10th Infantry Division's Special Troops. From this group he placed three men on the all-division squad. After the division tournament he molded a squad for the United States Army Europe matches and again was successful as several of his fighters won runner-up berths in the All-Europe tourney.

Coaching the 86th Infantry boxing team in 1958, Washington got 11 men on the 10th Division team which that year took second place, under his guidance, in the USAREUR bouts. In the same year he returned to the states, to Fort Benning, with the 10th Division which was redesignated the 2nd Infantry Division. After spending a year in civilian life, he reenlisted and, in 1959, was sent to Germany where he spent two years in Special Services officiating at sports events.

In 1961 Washington left Germany for the 2nd Division Special Services' office where he has been since. No longer boxing or coaching, the sergeant spends his off-duty hours officiating 2nd Division sports. Among other sports which he has officiated are basketball, volleyball, softball, track, swimming, baseball, boxing, tennis and football.

Woodsman Says

Swam Bears Prove Animal Intelligence

By Marvin E. Blackwell

Editor's Note: This is the first article printed in response to an appeal in the February 1 issue of the 2nd Division BAYONET requesting division hunters and fishermen to forward stories for publication. The BAYONET urges outdoorsmen to forward hunting and fishing stories or stories on little known habits of wildlife to the Public Information Office, Bldg. 3019.

Being interested in the ways and wiles of undomesticated animals, I have often listened to stories told by others that illustrate the intelligence of these creatures. These stories and my limited knowledge from personal observation bring me to the realization that the wild animal is much more intelligent than the average man realizes.

The story related here is one told to me by a friend who assured me that the statements contained herein are facts gathered by him over a two-year period, during which time he was engaged in preparing a college paper on the habits of bears.

The individual relating the story was born and reared on a farm in Virginia. The farm adjoined a swamp known as the Dismal swamp. This swamp is an extension of the Okeefenokee swamp in Florida and Georgia.

My informer stated that the bear is a notorious thief and often destructive. He stated that bears like fresh corn and wreak havoc on corn fields. The bear, it seems, will often use drainage ditches to enter the corn field and, after eating his fill, will gather corn to carry back into the swamp. In pulling the corn the bear looks as though he is gathering fire wood; and it is the process of gathering an arm load one or more ears of corn is dropped, the bear will purposely drop the balance of what he has gathered and start over again.

Bears often steal pigs from the barnyard. This is done by cutting one pig from the litter, and the pig is forced to walk to its doom. In other words, the bear does not carry the pig back to the swamp but forces it to walk and guides it to the swamp by gentle taps on the right or left side to keep it in a straight line.

The male bear, like most male animals, vies for the female of the species. One way in which this is done is this. The male bear goes through the woods in his particular way of operation and marks large trees by reaching as high as possible and leaving claw marks. This signifies to other male bears that pass through that neck of the woods the size of the ruler of that particular bear harem.

Often smaller male bears will, when there are many females around, roll logs up to the big trees bearing the markings of the biggest bears; and by standing on the log, they are able to put their mark more than a foot of much bigger bears. The logs are then moved away from the trees. When the big bear who rules that particular area surveys his domain, he is often frightened away, believing that a larger bear has moved into his bailiwick.

428th Medical Battalion Wins Post Basketball Title

Medics Stop TSB, 75-71, to Gain 2nd Straight TIC Championship

BY DAVE BRAUN

The 428th Medical Battalion won its second straight Infantry Center Basketball Championship recently, at Briant Wells Field House, putting down a determined Student Brigade five, 75-71.

The hard earned victory came in the third and final game of a best two-out-of-three tournament that saw the Medics cop the first encounter and the Brigade squad nail the second.

Following the initial tipoff, the Medics wasted little time in grabbing a commanding lead.

Paced by the towering jump shots of Harold Deane, the Medics seesawed between an eight and 13-point lead throughout the first half.

Lead At Half

The Medic's captain poured 18 points through the nets in the first half and sent them to the locker room at half time with a 47-34 lead.

A sudden splurge led by Gary Daniels of the Brigade tightened the contest shortly after the onset of the second half.

The former Citadel star from Canton, Ohio, took repeated rebounds off the boards and turned them into baskets.

But when the going got rough in the final minutes of the game, the poised Medic squad made their shots count and never let the blackshirted Brigade team catch up.

It was a team effort for the Brigade, Deane showing the way with 28 points while PFC George Bell was close behind with 20.

Daniels placed the Brigade team with 23 points.

Following the game members of both squads gathered around their respective benches for the presentation of winning and runner-up individual trophies by Maj. Roger L. Miller, Special Services Officer.

The Infantry Center All-Star Team, composed of the best players in the eight-team Major Unit League will vie with the 2nd Infantry Division All-Stars for laurels in a best two-out-of-three playoff tournament which began yesterday and will continue through today and tomorrow at Briant Wells Field House.

The following players are probable starters for the Infantry Center All-Stars against the 2nd Division, according to Special Services officials.

At the guards will be five-foot seven inch Bell and Carvey Jones a member of the Brigade team.

Starters at forward will be Jim Norsworthy and Archie Bain.

Norsworthy played for the 29th Infantry and Bain the 10th Artillery.

At center will be Deane, the Medics captain.

Other members of the All-Star squad are PFC Herbert Chavis and Hudson Ray, both members of the Center Troop Command, and Charles Barnett a member of the 10th Artillery.

Clough's Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

Cincinnati, Loyola of Chicago, Illinois, Mississippi State, Georgia Tech and Colorado, six of the country's top ranked teams, suffered from basketball's most dreaded fear — the upset.

High-riding Cincinnati, winner of 37 straight contests and two-time national NCAA tournament champ, found Wichita to be a little more than bargained for last Saturday night when the Wheatshockers stopped the Bearcats, 65-64. It was the fine effort of Wichita's Dave Stallworth when he dropped two free throws through the net in the closing seconds to put Wichita ahead at the final sound of the buzzer.

Formerly undefeated Loyola also had their hands full with a recovering Bowling Green (Ohio) team. The Falcons pinned a sound 92-75 defeat on the Ramblers. Bowling Green, a high ranking team early this season, seems to be on the road to recovery after being hit by the early season shakes. The Ohio team just couldn't work things out early this winter after being chosen as the country's second best team in pre-season polls.

Probably two of the biggest upsets this past weekend happened right here in the Southland. Tenth ranking Georgia Tech and Mississippi State were subjected to nights I am sure they would like to forget. Georgia Tech got theirs from Louisville, while the Maroons took it on the nose from Florida.

These two games were the truest upsets in the real sense of the word over the weekend since both Louisville (10-10) and Florida (12-10) are experiencing average seasons and were not considered to be a real threat to either of the big powerhouses.

Illinois' Dave Downey made an outstanding effort to keep his team on the winning track, but his record setting 53 points just weren't enough to stop a fired-up Indiana quintet. The Hoosiers managed to topple the Big Ten leaders, 103-100, in a strong offensive battle.

The loss was Illinois' second in Big Ten play, so the nationally-ranked five are forced into a tie with a rebounding Ohio State quintet.

Out west, last week's seventh ranked Colorado got their feathers ruffled as Iowa State stopped the Big Eight leaders. Colorado received their fifth loss of the season by a 13-point margin, 73-60.

With every team in the top ten having at least one defeat under their belts, the closing days of basketball action should prove to be much more interesting, especially the NCAA tournament. Cincinnati no longer looms as heavy favorite NCAA laurals, but they are still the team to beat. At any rate, this year's tourney will be an interesting one to watch.

Date Is Set For Manned Moon Shot

LOS ANGELES (AFPS) — After a year of studying the problems of sending men to the moon and back, government and industry officials have set 1967 as a reasonable date for the first manned lunar landing — "But we don't know what we'll run into before then."

The forecast was made by Charles W. Frick, Appollo project officer for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and John W. Paup, head of the Apollo program for North American Aviation, Inc., prime contractor for the spacecraft.

Building the three - man spacecraft, exclusive of booster development, will cost between a half billion and a billion dollars. The total program was estimated at $20 billion.

Frick said the final cost of the spacecraft would be determined in negotiations expected to be completed by March 15, at which time North American would have already spent about $100 million. He said he couldn't come any closer to an estimate of a cost before then.

The major technical problem is fabricating a heat shield able to withstand a 36,000-footper - second speed during reentry into the earth's atmosphere. This is 10,000 feet per second higher than the reentry speed of today's Mercury capsules.

Paup said the Apollo craft's re-entry speed would be greater because this vehicle would have no retro-rockets to slow it down during the return trip from the moon. "We needed to save the weight," he said.

Tournament Set at Club

The Fort Benning Country Club will host a Washington's Birthday Golf Tournament at the club tomorrow.

The tournament will be a "Dogfight" with entrants choosing their own foursomes and registering their group at the pro shop. Entry fee will be $1 and merchants will be awarded as prizes.

New Captain Joins TIS Weapons Dept.

Capt. William P. Wheeler has recently been assigned to the Weapons Dept. of The Infantry School.

Capt. Wheeler has recently returned from Viet Nam where he served with the Thu Duc Military School Center as training supervisor.

In his new position, Capt. Wheeler will serve as chief of the 2 in. mortar team in the Weapons Dept.

Will Baseball's New Rule Aid the Pitcher, Batter?

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The Major Leagues' Baseball Playing Rules Committee has voted unanimously to expand baseball's strike zone. The new area reaches from the batter's knees to the shoulders.

In the past, the strike zone was defined as that area between the batter's armpits and the top of his knees.

The new rule is designed to speed up the game by cutting down the number of walks.

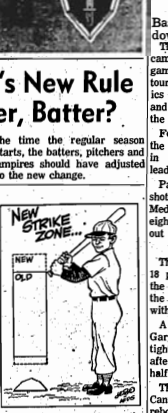
Batting star Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals thinks the new rule is not going to hurt the batters since most are high ball hitters.

Speed ball hurler Don Drysdale of the Dodgers said he didn't think it would affect him as he is a low ball pitcher.

The strike zone has never bothered San Francisco Giants' outfielder Willie Mays, but he doesn't know how it will affect the pitches. "As for me," says Willie, "I just go up and swing; that's all."

Veteran umpire Tom Gorman of the National League expects the new rule to open the game. "I think it will help the more finicky hitters who will receive more opportunities to swing."

However, all agree that by the time the regular season starts, the batters, pitchers and umpires should have adjusted to the new change.



VA Loans Available In Georgia

Funds for making direct VA loans in Georgia are immediately available and applications for such loans will be processed immediately, according to Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler.

The immediate availability of direct loan money is in contrast to the situation which has existed in recent years. Until recently veterans seeking direct loans have been placed on a long waiting list by the Veterans Administration, Wheeler said.

Wheeler quoted the Veterans Administration as stating that there is no waiting list at present. He was also advised that additional funds would be made available should any waiting list develop.

Direct GI loans are made only in counties where "guaranteed" GI loans are not available from private sources. Direct loans are not available in the Atlanta Metropolitan area and in the counties of the other large cities of the state.

Eligibility of many World War II veterans for GI loans is fast reaching a deadline, and some World War II veterans have already passed the deadline. Eligibility is dependent upon the length of the veteran's wartime service and the date of his discharge.

Anyone desiring advice or assistance in securing a direct GI loan should contact the nearest office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

HOOK IT IN . . . The hook ball and the curve ball are essentially delivered in the same manner: The ball is lifted out over the foul line while the hand twists from right to left. Whether you throw a hook or curve depends a great deal upon the alley. Some days you may find that your hook has turned into a curve. You must compensate for this situation. The hook heads at a near straight path down the alley until it approaches the pins. Then it cuts sharply to the left. It delivers a great deal of action when it hits the pocket.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, commended the class on its attitude during the course and gave a short address to the graduating body. He said that he knows the class is ready for the responsibilities of leadership and command.

The class, he continued, is prepared to carry on the proud tradition of the Army. They must be prepared for the worst and they must set the example for their men, Gen. Reynolds concluded.

Gen. Reynolds then presented the honor graduate his certificate and the Military Stakes Trophy.

Second Lt. Edward L. Janzen was presented a plaque for receiving the highest score in the Combat Proficiency test.

OC's Now Wear Blue As Seniors

Members of the 92nd Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade celebrated their reaching of Senior Status recently With "Blue Day Exercises."

The day marked the beginning of their final eight weeks of training.

"Blue Day," so named because the candidates wear new Infantry Blue shoulder boards and helmet liners after the reading of a General Order proclaiming the 92nd Company a Senior Officer Candidate School Company, is only second in importance to graduation to the candidates. At this stage of training the senior candidates do not as yet have officer privileges, but command the same respect as officers of their junior classmen.

Highlight of the day's activities, the Senior Status Review, was held at French Field. Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell was reviewing officer. He trooped the line with Col. Otto R. Koch, TSB commander.

24 Depart For Field Exercises

Five officers and 19 enlisted men from the 54th Medical Detachment departed the post Feb. 15 for Fort Ord, Calif., where they will participate in a Department of Army field exercise.

The helicopter ambulance unit is scheduled to report March 1, and will be gone for 121 days.

Eleven of the personnel are flying out via five H-19C helicopters.

Brain Wave Test Requires Little of Patient

By Capt. John D. Loeffler
Chief, Neurology Service

As far back as the 1700s, scientists suspected that electrical activity was somehow involved in the functioning of brain and muscle.

Almost two centuries passed before this problem was explored in human beings. In 1929 a German doctor, Hans Berger, announced that variations in electrical voltage could be recorded from the scalps of his patients and that epileptic seizures were accompanied by unusual variations in this voltage.

Since that time, the electroencephalogram, or brain-wave test, has developed into a very useful tool that helps doctors diagnose diseases involving the brain.

The test itself requires little of the patient except relaxation and about 45 minutes of time. Eight or more small electrodes are placed on the scalp, and the patient takes it easy in a reclining chair, and that's all. There are no electrical shocks associated with it, since the electricity goes from the patient's head to the EEG machine, just as in a heart tracing, or EKG, where the activity is recorded from the chest or limbs. In either case, the patient feels nothing.

The electrical activity from the head is so small that it must be fed into special electronic amplifiers and multiplied almost one million times before the voltage is strong enough to make little pens move over paper and draw wavy lines that represent the activity being recorded.

Because the activity is so fantastically small, little things can interfere with its recording; if the patient clenches his jaws together, or even sighs deeply, it makes the pens scoot off the paper.

Although a quiet and cooperative patient is required if the tracing is to be of any value, he should be awake. The brain activity of a sleeping patient is much different than that of one who is awake, and if anything is wrong, it is usually easier to discover while recording from an awake but relaxed patient. Other than this, no specific preparation is required of the patient.

The tracing itself consists of 60-100 pages or paper filled with eight wiggly lines, each page representing 10 seconds of recording and each line representing activity from a specific area of the brain. Even though the entire tracing is only a 10-15 minute sample of brain activity, it is usually enough so that a judgment can be made on the basis of test results.

This interpretation is done by someone with special training and experience, usually a neurologist or psychiatrist, who has seen many hundreds or perhaps thousands of tracings, while under the guidance of a recognized and experienced interpreter.

The brain-wave test is used mainly when the patient has symptoms that could be due to some disease or malfunction of the brain. These range from simple dizzy spells to convulsions, and to cases where a brain tumor may be suspected.

Sometimes the EEG can give a conclusive answer, that is especially so when convulsions are present, since there are very characteristic changes in the EEG in most people with convulsions. Other times, the test may only be suggestive that something is wrong but may not indicate what type of disease is present, or a perfectly normal tracing may result.

In any case, the EEG, when ordered by your doctor, is no strain on you and may give valuable information.

2nd Dose Of Vaccine Is Planned

The second dose in a Sabin oral polio vaccine immunization program will be administered to military personnel and their dependents beginning March 4.

Military personnel will be immunized by units.

A schedule for dependents at the Dependent Immunization Clinic in Bldg. 323 will be announced March 1.

A mass immunization program on the post began Jan. 8 when the first of three doses was administered. The third dose will be given the latter part of April and in May.

Gen. Throckmorton Urges Grads Of OCS to Develop Personalities

"No man should try to adjust himself to fit the mold of another man, regardless of how successful that man may be," Maj. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., said here Feb. 15.

Speaking to 144 graduates of The Infantry School's officer candidate (OC) class at 10 a.m. ceremonies in Theater No. 1, the two-star general emphasized that "every man must learn to employ principles of leadership to fit his own personality."

"You shouldn't try to be exactly like Gen. Douglas MacArthur or Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower," the Infantry veteran told the new second lieutenants, "rather you should learn the principles they applied and integrate them into your leadership traits."

Gen. Throckmorton discussed four basic prerequisites for military virtue.

Integrity 'Must'

"Outstanding integrity is an absolute must for an officer," he told the class. "Without strong character an officer cannot be an effective leader."

"Another necessity for growth and success as an Army officer," the general continued "is a high sense of duty."

He explained that while some businessmen could close their office doors at night and return "body and soul" to their families, an officer can never close the door on his responsibility to his command or to his country.

"An officer's sense of duty has to become a way of life," the speaker added.

The third prerequisite Gen. Throckmorton listed is a sense of discipline.

"Discipline is a state of mind," he explained. "It is the individual or group attitude which insures prompt obedience to orders and initiation of appropriate action in the absence of orders."

"A strong motivation for a military career is the other prerequisite," Gen. Throckmorton said. "Without a strong desire to do well, you cannot expect success in any field."

Continue to Study

The general stressed that an officer must continue to study and improve himself and his leadership ability.

"The Army presents a great challenge for officers today," he said. "New equipment, new organizations and a high challenge of readiness require, as never before, young officers who are enthusiastic, resourceful and ambitious."

The general presented the first diploma to 2nd Lt. Rodney D. Bither, honor graduate. Bither served 10 years as an enlisted man, reaching the rank of staff sergeant before entering OCS.

He received a plaque presented to the honor graduate of each OC class by the Columbus - Phenix City - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army.

Gen. Throckmorton also presented Lt. Bither an Infantryman statuette, symbolic of outstanding leadership, and a silver bowl, presented to each honor graduate by The Infantry School's 5th Student Battalion.

The integrated wholesale distribution system is to be installed over the next two years. It will consist of seven principal distribution depots carrying a wide range of commodities and four specialized support depots. The maintenance and upkeep of the facilities will continue to be the responsibility of the military department which has jurisdiction.

The Defense Supply Agency is the common supply agency for procurement and distribution to the military services of food, clothing and textiles, general, medical, industrial, construction, automotive, petroleum, chemical, and electronics items.

Preventive Dentistry P-TA Topic

More than 300 parents and teachers heard an address on preventive dentistry for children at Faith School recently.

The talk, illustrated with color slides, was presented by Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant, preventive dentistry officer and deputy dental surgeon on the post.

"It is possible for a child to live out his entire life span without a cavity," Col. Merchant said.

"Cavities result from the action of bacteria in the mouth on food particles left on the teeth after eating," he said. "Unless the teeth are brushed immediately, acids are formed which destroy the enamel on the teeth, leading to decay."

"Brushing the teeth after a meal or a between meal snack reduced the amount of acid," Col. Merchant said.

"You can make your teeth last a lifetime by regular dental care ... proper tooth brushing and limiting your intake of sweets," he concluded.

Col. Merchant's address to the P-TA was part of the post's observance of National Child Dental Health Week during which special programs on dental health were conducted throughout the post Children's Schools.

For his cooperation in the special emphasis on dental health, Dr. Joseph Conforti, director of instruction for the Children's Schools, was presented a citation by Col. Merchant.

The citation was signed by Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, post dental surgeon, and Col. Merchant.

Col. Merchant also gave Dr. Conforti citations to be presented to key personnel of the school system who were active in conducting the dental activities.

Miss Mary Faz Is Named Queen Of Dance Here

Miss Mary Faz, representing the 577th Engineer Battalion, 151st Engineer Group, was chosen queen of the Valentine Day March of Dimes Dance held recently at Service Club one.

Miss Pricilla Saines, queen of the 1962 dance, presented Miss Faz with flowers and a gift. Lady in waiting was Miss Gayle Cowart, representing the Ninth Street USO.

Members of the court were Miss Regina Tyalor, Ninth Street USO; Miss Mary Hardeman and Miss Christine Johnson, Fifth Avenue USO, and Miss Barbara Kramer and Miss Sandy Powell of the WAC Company.

A total of $177 was raised for the March of Dimes. The Service Club also raised $38 for the drive through its "state board," through which men's contributions were counted for their home states.

Your Dental Health

Would George Wear False Teeth Today?

Many know that the father of our country was a "false teeth", wearer.

It is also said he suffered many hours of agony due to the poor fit of his appliances. Now, let's see if he would reach the same fate today.

Washington was certainly an intelligent man to reach his high status in life. Undoubtedly, his parents were also intelligent, to figure that George cut down the cherry tree.

Now, being intelligent, his parents would make him brush after every meal and cut down his between-meal snacks. Little George still wouldn't tell a lie and instead of the stock question, "Did you brush your teeth?", his parents would be brushing with him.

Now, George is a surveyor in the wilderness. He still brushes because the habit has been formed, and there is always room for his toothbrush while traveling. Of course, he uses a fluoridated toothpaste, but he knows brushing is the most important part of his mouth care.

Time marches on, and now it is Gen. Washington. The general still brushes and he has all his teeth. The battle planning goes much smoother because he hasn't the pain of toothaches, or the discomfort of poor-fitting dentures.

Soon, the war is won, and our friend becomes President. All his teeth are fine, and he has, more time to spend on his duties, and less in the dental chair. His public appearances are not hampered by his ill-fitting dentures.

Yes, I believe George would have his teeth if he lived today. Perhaps the reason he cut down the cherry tree was because he was way ahead of time and wished to remove the temptation of between - meal snacking on cherry pie.

Admiral Sees Bolder Thrust Against Reds

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — According to Adm. Harry D. Felt, Commander in Chief, Pacific Command, the war in South Vietnam is going against the Communist Viet Cong insurgents.

The admiral said that there has been a steady decline during the past year of armed attacks by the Viet Cong. The weekly average for January 1963 was approximately 50 as compared to 118 in early 1962.

"The reason for the decline," Admiral Felt said, "is that the government forces are mounting more and more offensive operations and are taking the initiative away from the guerillas."

Admiral Felt further stated that the Viet Cong are losing more weapons to the government than they are capturing. Many of their men are defecting to the government because of food and medicine shortages.

These trends don't happen by themselves, he said, but result from a will to fight and remain free and from brave and expanding leadership.

"We Americans are playing a major role in supporting the undertaking with material and training and are just as determined as our friends that Hanoi will not subjugate the people of South Vietnam.

"Our friends trust us; have faith in us. We, on the other hand, have confidence that they will defeat Communist guerrillaism and establish decent civil control of the nation."

AU Branch Enrollment Is Climbing

The American University Branch here observed its first anniversary on post with the largest enrollment to date.

A total of 425 course registrations were completed by military personnel and their dependents. Students are currently involved in 26 courses, ranging from freshman to graduate level, in ten different fields.

For the first time, the university is offering Saturday morning classes. Subjects covered are English Composition I, Methods of Teaching in Secondary Schools, and Evaluation of Student Progress. Regular night classes are on Monday through Thursday.

Studies are currently being conducted on the correlation of the Fort Benning student to his campus counterpart in English and mathematics. Placement tests in both these areas have been administered and the study is designed to establish an appropriate cutting score of the local student body. Those who do not measure up are encouraged to take advantage of the Army Education Center's high school program.

Four-Man MTU Team Wins Sectional Match

A four-man team from the Marksmanship Training Unit won the Indoor Sectional Pistol Championships which ended here Sunday.

The quartet, consisting of national pistol champion SFC William Blankenship, MSgt. Richard Stineman, SFC William Horton and MSgt. Frederick Schaser, posted a total score of 1172 points out of a possible of 1200 to defeat the runnerup squad from the U.S. Air Force Pistol Team of Lackland AFB, Tex., by five points.

Capt. Franklin Green, one of the best handgun shots in the Air Force, eked out a one-point victory in the race for individual honors.

He posted an aggregate of 887 points out of 900 to edge Sgt. Blankenship by a single point.

SSgt. Floyd D. Thomson of USAMTU placed third with 882 and the next three places went to Air Force shooters.

Both Blankenship and Thomson set new national marks during the matches which began Tuesday. The former fired a 298 out of 300 over the national match course to erase the old mark of 297, and Thomson posted a 199x200 in the slow fire match to crack the old standard by two points.

Third Army Blue was third in the team division with 1162 points. SFC Carl O. Hawks of Third Army Marksmanship Unit was high expert with 821; WO Robert Reuschling of the Marine Corps Recruting Depot in Atlanta was high sharpshooter with 805; high marksman was Sgt. V. E. Chapin, USMCRD, Atlanta, with 791, and Sgt. John Mathis of Fort Stewart took the unclassified division with 772.

Women May Trail Men Into Space

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says it hopes to send women into space as scientists, navigators and hostesses — but not for some time.

In the foreseeable future space missions will be undertaken by test pilots, and there are no space test pilots among the female pilots of America.

Soviet cosmonaut Pavel Popovich said recently, "The world will soon learn about the first spacewoman." But the implied boast that she'd be Russian was taken with reserve in Western scientific circles.

SUBMARINER NOW AIRBORNE . . . It's a long way, both in distance and methods, from parachuting out of airplanes to diving with submarines, but former U.S. Navy submariner, SFC Howard Knable (R) spanned a good deal of the gap when he became airborne qualified after completing the recent basic jump course here. Sgt. Knable, an Army Reservist with Operational Detachment B-2, 2nd Special Forces Group in Pittsburgh, Pa., on active duty for the four-week course, spent four years plying the seas on Navy submarines before joining the Army Reserve.

Lanny Bassham Captures Junior Smallbore Crown

National junior service rifle champion Lanny Bassham, son of Maj. and Mrs. William Bassham, recently captured the Indoor Sectional Junior Smallbore rifle individual crown with an aggregate score of 387 points out of a possible 400.

Team honors in the match, which took place over consecutive weekends and ended here Feb. 17, went to Decatur (Ga.) High with a four-man total of 1516 points. Baker High School placed second in the open team division and first in the ROTC division with 1512.

Awards were presented to the winners Sunday, immediately following the final relay of shooters by Col. Raymond B. Martin, director of the Weapons Department of The Infantry School. Members of the department acted as match personnel during the shoot.

Charles Denany of Fort Benning won first place in the sub-junior division with a total of 316 points. Runner-up to Bassham in the open division was Stephen Foster of Athens, Ga., with 385. William Milam from Brown High of Atlanta was third with 380.

Foster was also the winner of the high individual ROTC trophy, and a firing member of the winning Decatur team. His teammates were Jimmy Reiber, Bobby Reiber and Albert Tate. Firing members of the Baker team which posted its score a week ago and then watched 24 teams take a crack at it, with only one succeeding, were Bassham, Tyler Parsons, Bill Rusher and Jerry Pullium, team captain.

There were 96 entries in the sectional tournament and they automatically qualify for the National Indoor Junior Smallbore Championships.

Their scores will be forwarded to the National Rifle Association and compared with scores posted at other sectional matches held around the country.

Gen. Brown Lauds Army Chaplains

The Army's new chief of chaplains, on a visit here last week, said he is "pleased with the quality of the performance" of the 1,300 chaplains engaged in the religious program of the Army.

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles E. Brown Jr., making his first trip to the post since becoming chief of chaplains, arrived at Lawson Army Airfield Friday afternoon.

"The chaplains program is receiving command support," he said, "because the chaplain works for the commander. The religious program at an installation is the commander's own program, with the chaplains carrying it out for him."

Pastoral Care Workshop Set to End Today

Twenty-nine chaplains of the Third Army area are attending a pastoral care workshop at Martin Army Hospital which ends today.

One of 15 workshops provided by the Academy of Religion and Mental Health, New York City, the week of study is under the auspices of the chief of chaplains, in coordination with the surgeon general of the Army.

Purpose of the conference is to give Army chaplains a nowledge of new developments in pastoral counseling and its relationship between religion and health in a military situation, officials said. The workshop will place special emphasis on hospital experience.

The opening session of the workshop was held Monday in the hospital's first floor conference room.

Col. William A. Todd, Jr., hospital commander, and Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, post chaplain, welcomed the conferees.

Project officer for the workshop is Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Jame B. Blunk, hospital chaplain.

Dr. Irving M. Rosen, clinical director of the Cleveland, Ohio, Psychiatric Institute and Hospital and director of the Institute's Social Problems Clinic, was guest speaker at a dinner Wednesday at the Main Officers' Open Mess for workshop participants hospital medical staff and guests.

Do You Want to Occupy White House?

The fulfillment of the American dream of living in the White House is technically possible for most American citizens. The probability that this dream will come true, however, is very small.

Thirty-four men have been President of the United States. Actually they have little in common. Beyond the qualifications set forth in the Constitution, they brought to the office a wide range of experience and background.

The Constitution requires only these three qualifications for President: (1) He must be a natural-born citizen of the United States (2) He must be at least 35 years old (3) He must have been a resident of the United States for 14 years.

The minimum age of a President is higher than that of a Congressman. Most Presidents have been much older than 35. President Theodore Roosevelt was the youngest man ever to hold the Presidency. He was 42 on Inauguration Day. Most other Presidents were in their fifties or sixties.

In the qualification of 14 years of U. S. residence, these years do not have to be continuous nor need they be 14 years immediately before becoming President.

This is to make sure that the President will be familiar with American customs and ways by having lived some time in the States.

Herbert Hoover, for instance, spent much time outside the United States. Nevertheless he was eligible for the Presidency because he had lived here more than 14 years. (AFPS)

Army Aviation Plan Changes Temporarily

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Army has instituted a temporary change in policy governing the assignment of officer aviators to ground duty with their basic branch.

Under the change, aviators will perform their branch ground duty for a period of 12 months and will then be reassigned to aviation duties. The 12 month tour replaces a normally longer ground duty assignment.

Those being reassigned under this change in policy will fill duty positions identified by Prefix 6 (Aviator) or by any one of the seven aviator military occupational specialties listed in AR 611-101. Headquarters, Department of the Army, will direct reassignment of personnel in the continental United States if a permanent change of station (PCS) is involved. If no PCS is involved, commanders listed in paragraph 9c, AR 600-105, may direct reassignment after obtaining clearance from the career branch of the officer concerned.

In overseas commands, aviators eligible for assignment from ground duty to aviation positions and who have completed five-sixths of their overseas tour will be reported to Headquarters, Department of the Army for reassignment to the continental United States.

It is anticipated that this policy change will continue in effect until such time as the current critical shortage of rated aviator personnel is reduced.

Books, Films Explain Goals Of Commies

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Directorate for Armed Forces Information and Education, DOD, has released two new pamphlets and a film that trace the Communist blueprint for conquest of the Free World.

The film gives pictorial accounts of how Communists are using unconventional warfare to gain their ends.

Unconventional warfare consists mainly of guerrilla warfare, "wars of liberation," and "popular uprisings."

The pamphlets are "The Third Challenge — Unconventional Warfare" (ALERT No. 6) and "Lessons Learned in the Philippines 1946 - 1953" (ALERT No. 6-A).

They are concerned with Communist guerrilla campaigns in Manchuria, Greece, the Philippines, Malaya, and Vietnam.

Gen. Rich Takes Command of TIC

Contributions Being Sought In Fund Drive

All major unit commanders are hoping to obtain maximum volunteer contributions in the 1963 National Health Agency and Federal Joint Crusade campaigns.

"The greatest emphasis by all units is being placed on this payday weekend," according to Lt. Col. Michael Pavio, project officer.

"The March 31 payday weekend will be used as a make-up period for those persons who are not present to contribute between the period of February 28 to March 5," said Col. Pavio.

Unit commanders will turn in contributions to the fund office in Bldg. 5 by March 10.

"The aim of this year's campaign is to equal if not pass last year's participation,"

GEN. RICH (LEFT CENTER) SALUTES COLORS
Behind New Commander Is Gen. Reynolds

Approximately 400 military personnel and key civilians of the Columbus - Phenix City area gathered on Chapel Field at 4 p.m. Tuesday to welcome Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich to the post as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

The two-star general succeeds Maj. Gen. Ben Harrell who is now assistant chief of staff for Force Development in Washington, D. C.

Throughout the large group of spectators, where "Follow Me" and "Big Indianhead" patches predominated, there was a sprinkling of patches of the 11th Air Assault Division. Not only new to the post but also a new unit, the 11th was activated here Feb. 15.

Following the honors ceremony, Gen. and Mrs. Rich received their guests in the main ballroom of the Main Officers' Open Mess. The receiving line, was in itself a tribute to Gen. and Mrs. Rich and to the position of honor that Fort Benning occupies in the surrounding civilian community. Civic, educational, professional and social leaders of the area paid their respects to the post commander and his wife, along with key military and civilian personnel of the installation.

Local commander for the honors ceremony was Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School. The honor guard was formed by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Jimmy Smith.

The salute was fired by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, also of the 197th, commanded by Capt. William E. Trent.

The Infantry Center Band, directed by CWO Clyde W. White, furnished the music for the parade.

Gen. Rich is no newcomer to the post. It was here that he earned his parachutist emblem in 1943, a turning point in his military career. A 1935 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., his biography is the story of successive assignments that lead inevitably to the place of leadership in the development of an air-mobile Infantry in which he now finds himself.

As commandant of the Army's largest educational institution, The Infantry School, commander of Fort Benning, the birthplace of the Airborne and sole trainer of parachutists, and in addition, with the recently added responsibility for the 11th Air Assault Division, Gen. Rich is in a posi-

Brigade Plans Organization Day

The officers and men of the 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Col. Richard W. Keyes, are preparing for their official Organization Day ceremonies set for March 9. The activation date of the 197th Brigade was Sept. 24, 1962, at which time the "old" 1st Infantry Brigade, the 197th's forebearer, was relieved of active duty and retired to military archives.

March 9 has been selected to honor the crossing of the Ludendorff Bridge, Remagen, Germany, by the 99th Reconnaissance Troop (mechanized), the brigade's historical parent unit, on March 12, 1945.

A full day of events are planned for members of the brigade. All military and civilian personnel from Fort Benning and the Columbus area are extended invitations to attend.

The festivities will "kick off" at 8:45 a.m. with a five-mile cross-country run with contestants from each of the brigades subordinate units competing. An Organization Parade will follow, on the Brigade Parade Field, with unit colors, guidons, battle honors and campaign streamers being officially presented to the various commands of the brigade.

At 11:15 a.m. a demonstration by the 29th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon will be held in the brigade's Bolling Bowl, followed by a barbeque lunch at noon.

Afternoon and evening events will include a jeep rodeo, a team combat physical proficiency test, a company commanders versus first sergeants tug - of - war, commanders versus sergeant majors pistol match, platoon close-order drill competition, dedication of the "Roll of Champions" showcase and a presentation of awards ceremony.

To terminate the day's activities, a military ball will be held in the Sapper Club of the Main Officer's Open Mess for the officers and their ladies. An organization day ball will be held at Service Club One for the enlisted men and their ladies.

The 197th Brigade Headquarters are located between Dixie and Indianhead Roads, across from Sightseeing Field.

2nd Dose of Sabin Oral Vaccine For Dependents Begins Tuesday

Military dependents here will be given the second dose of Sabin oral polio vaccine by alphabetical groups beginning Tuesday.

Personnel whose last names begin with the letters A-G are requested to report to the Dependent Immunization Clinic (Bldg. 323) Tuesday or Thursday between 8 and 10 a.m. or 1 and 3 p.m. Those attending off-post schools will receive the vaccine March 9 between 8 and 11 a.m.

The H-O group will follow the same schedule on March 12, 14 and 16 and the P-Z group on March 19, 21 and 23.

For people going overseas, at least 28 days must have elapsed since the last dose. For those remaining in the U.S., the time interval is at least six weeks, officials said.

The three doses of Sabin vaccine are designated Types I, II and III.

Personnel who received Type I at another installation are asked to bring their immunization records and report to the clinic for further immunization.

The second dose will be administered at the clinic in accordance with recommendations of the Public Health Service and the Surgeon General of the Army, officials said.

Personnel going overseas within 30 days will be given both Types II and III.

Dependents 30 years old or younger will take Type III as their second dose, to be followed by Type II in April or May.

Dependents 31 or older will take Type II as their second and last dose unless they request Type III.

The Public Health Service recommends that Type III be offered to individuals over 30 with "the full recognition that it involves a very small risk."

In September, 1962, adverse publicity arose from the incidence of some cases of polio that could possibly have been associated with the administration of Type III vaccine, officials of the Public Health Service said.

Of 15 million doses of Type III vaccine administered at that time, there were 11 cases

Gen. Rich is a 1939 graduate of the Infantry School. He was graduated from the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va., in 1948 and from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., in 1953.

Following his graduation from jump training here, he remained on the post to serve as S-3 and then executive officer of the Parachute School. Later he commanded the 2nd Parachute Training Regiment.

Again, after graduation from the Armed Forces Staff College, Gen. Rich served as an instructor and then secretary of the school.

Gen. Rich returned to West Point in 1959 to serve as commandant of cadets at the Military Academy.

During World War II, Gen. Rich served with the 19th Infantry in the Pacific before going to Europe in 1944. In the European Theater, he served as airborne adviser, G-3, 6th Army Group; deputy chief of staff, XXI Corps; G-1 and chief of staff of the Western Base Section, and deputy chief of staff, European Command.

Gen. Rich has served as G-3 and then chief of staff of the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C. He comes here from Fort Campbell, Ky., where he commanded the 101st Airborne Division.

At this installation, Gen. Rich will have under his supervision, instruction in Infantry officer basic and advanced training, Ranger, Airborne, Pathfinder and other specialized courses. Students under his command include Allied officers from many nations, Infantry, National Guard and Reserve officer candidates, and non-commissioned officers.

To this broad educational responsibility, coupled with command of The Infantry Center which supports The Infantry School, has been added the pioneering mission of testing the latest concepts of a highly mobile and flexible Infantry. The 11th Air Assault Division, commanded by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, former assistant commander of the 101st Airborne Division, will be the test unit for this study.

Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center, accepted a plaque recently for the post's outstanding contribution to the fund last year.

Col. Schneider spoke at the campaign's kickoff meeting as a representative of the commanding general.

The Fort Benning fund drive for the National Health Agencies and the Joint Crusade started Feb. 15 and will continue until March 31.

All military personnel and civilian employes are asked to contribute.

Vaccine

of polio that were possibly associated with administration of the vaccine, eight of them occurring in people over 30. Public Health Service officials consider the maximum potential risk to be less than one in a million, overall, and slightly higher for people over 30.

Because of this small risk, the Public Health Service advises that the decision to take Type III vaccine be made by the individual concerned.

Personnel going overseas are reminded that they may be going to an area where polio is more prevalent than it is in the U.S. For this reason, it is highly recommended by the Public Health Service that they take Type III vaccine.

For some people, the risk of contracting polio is higher than for others. Considered especially vulnerable to the polio viruses are parents of young children, pregnant women, persons in epidemic situations and those planning foreign travel.

Each type of Sabin polio vaccine protects against polio caused by a particular one of three most common polio viruses. Thus the three doses are independent immunizations and not boosters. Personnel who take Type I are protected from one virus, those who continue with Type II are protected from two viruses and those who complete the immunization with Type III are protected from these three most prevalent polio producing viruses.

Broken Vows Of Commies Are Outlined

The Kremlin's long record of broken promises is detailed in "Soviet Treaty Violations" (ALERT 5), a new illustrated pamphlet issued by the Directorate for Armed Forces Information and Education, Department of Defense.

The pamphlet will be available to military personnel through service information offices.

Soviet violation of international treaties began soon after the establishment of the Communist regime more than 45 years ago. The pamphlet lists the major agreements the Soviets made with other countries and explains how these agreements were broken when they no longer served Moscow's purposes.

The pamphlet also describes how the Soviet regime's viewpoint on the relative unimportance of promises extends to its relations with the Russian people and minority groups. It points out that while the Soviet constitution contains provisions for the protection of civil liberties and individual rights, the Communist regime has constantly ignored and violated these constitutional guarantees in practice.

OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTION . . . Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center, accepts a plaque for the post's outstanding contribution to the National Health Agencies last year. Presenting the plaque is Miss Mary Webb of Atlanta, representative for the Federal Campaign for the National Health Agencies. Col. Schneider spoke at the campaign kickoff meeting as a representative of the commanding general. Miss Webb also spoke at the meeting, along with a representative from the Joint Crusade. The fund drive for the National Health Agencies and the Joint Crusade started Feb. 15 and will continue until March 31.

New Aircraft ID System Simplifies Classification

NEW YORK (AFPS) — A few months ago, an Air Force pilot "scrambled" into his F-110 fighter, a Navy flier revved up his supersonic F4H-1 —and now they are both flying F-4-B's.

Yet all three planes are identical.

Last September the Armed Forces adopted a unified aircraft designation code, little publicized because of the Cuban crisis.

The new code, in its most uncomplicated form, consists of one letter and one number followed by another letter. The first letter designates the basic mission of the aircraft. The number designates the numnumber of operational designs supplied by one manufacturer to the Armed Forces. The final letter indicates modification of the series in production.

For instance, F-4B indicates the aircraft is a fighter (F), the fourth design delivered by its manufacturer (McDonnell), and the second, improved version of the same type (B).

The new uniform basic mission symbols are: "A" — attacks; "B" — bomber; "C"—cargo; "E" — electronic (such as radar picket planes); "F" —fighter; "H" — helicopter; "K" — tanker; "O" — observation aircraft; "P" — patrol; "S"—antisubmarine warfare; "T" — trainer; "U" — utility (the U-2 plane was classified as a utility plane in order to preserve its secrecy); "V" —vertical take-off and landing craft; "X"—experimental and research; and "Z" — lighter-than-air ships.

The code can be made more specific by prefixing the designation of the plane with a letter representing a modified mission.

Enlistments Are Open To Bay of Pigs Vets

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department has announced it will accept enlistments in the Armed Forces from Cuban veterans of the Bay of Pigs invasion — some of them for training as officers.

But a spokesman emphatically denied that the invasion veterans would be used as a special unit.

The new program will be generally similar to one already started for other refugees from Cuba, who now are permitted to volunteer for military training and then choose whether to remain in the service or join the inactive reserves.

The DOD announcement applies to former members of the "2506 Cuban Brigade," which conducted the Bay of Pigs invasion attempt.

The brigade had about 2,500 members when the invasion was made. Approximately 1,100 of those captured by Castro forces were released and sent to the United States last Christmas Eve.

The Pentagon estimated that between 1,000 and 1,500 members of the brigade might volunteer and qualify for training.

The volunteers would become, for practical purposes, members of the U.S. Armed Forces and be assigned to various units.

Under the program certain qualified Cubans will be trained as officers. The original program covered only enlisted training.

Basic training for enlisted men 18-34 years of age will be 23 weeks, while the course for officers of ages 21-45 will be 12 to 15 weeks.

Officer training will be at Ft. Benning, Ga. Enlisted men will train at Ft. Jackson, S.C., for the Army; at San Diego for the Navy and at Lackland AFB, Tex., for the Air Force.

Off-Duty Employment Can Have Drawbacks

Living isn't cheap these days, not even for service people who enjoy the fringe benefits of military installations. A man with a family, trying to put aside something regularly for his children's education and his own retirement years, often jumps at an honest chance to supplement his income by taking a part-time job in his free time.

Civilian business people in general like to employ servicemen; they trust them and respect their capacity to do good work. Likewise, local commanders are generally lenient in permitting a man to take an outside job once they're assured that it will in no way conflict with or impair his military performance.

So it becomes a matter to which the man himself should give some candid thought, whether he's already got a part-time job or knows where he can get one. Is it one that will prevent his getting enough sleep, thereby causing him to be late for duty? Is it one that will leave him, physically or mentally fatigued, thereby reducing his military efficiency? Is it one that requires lengthy travel back and forth?

These are all matters which concern him as a serviceman. But there is another important aspect. What about his wife and children? A job that keeps him away from home is bound to affect their lives by making him remote to the domestic circle. And when growing youngsters are concerned, there's no substitute for a dad's influence.

That's why it's definitely inadvisable for a serviceman to take a job impetuously just because it's available and he can use the money. True, it's preferable to going into debt, but isn't it even a better idea to first re-examine the family budget and see if expenses can't be trimmed? For a married serviceman is no different from a married civilian—he needs the relaxation and rest of his off-duty hours and the intimate human influences of his family. (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

A Call to Worship

By CHAPLAIN (CAPT.) JOHN S. STANNARD

Golf . . . picnics . . . visiting . . . washing and polishing the car . . . Sunday paper . . . Yes, and on top of these, the wonderful, restful sleep on Sunday morning keep us from missing Sunday School and chapel services we should be attending.

We realize that when there is one day that is set aside as non-duty, many items crowd in and all seem to be such good reasons.

But — taking care of our souls is far more important than any physical or material gains we could obtain, and here are some reasons why:

1. We are facing eternity. Tomorrow? Who really knows when we will leave this life and face Almighty God? Death is no respector of persons. It comes to the young as well as to the old, to the active soldier as well as to the retired. Death is sure and certain. We must plan for it now while life is with us and eternal decisions can be made. Going to chapel regularly will help us make the right decisions.

2. We need to know God. We need to know the God of the Pilgrims who kept them from perishing in the wilderness. The God who had their devotion and praise in spite of hunger, cold, and pain. This God who helped these valiant men and women begin our nation.

This same God is the God of Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson, Franklin and millions of other Americans who expended themselves that we might have freedom in our country. As Americans, we should know this God who has directed, preserved and guided our forefathers. Going to Chapel regularly will help us become acquainted with this Almighty God.

3. We are what we believe. The stronger our faith, the stronger persons we are. To be able to meet the tensions, problems and responsibilities of life takes more than we have in ourselves. We must have God's guidance and strength to have any success in living. This comes through faith in Him. Going to chapel regularly will assist us in the development of our faith.

During this pre-Easter season, let each one of us be serious with God and take time to worship Him regularly in our chapels. We need deep faith in God to succeed today and tomorrow, to keep our America strong, and to prepare ourselves for eternity.

Material Readiness Is Job For Every Man in Army

The soldier who has seen combat knows the true significance of the word, "readiness." It is the signal that a unit is ready to move, shoot, and communicate. It's the mark of a unit that has not only well-trained soldiers prepared to fight, but also trouble - free vehicles, weapons, and communications equipment ready for combat.

Today — in a period of uneasy peace — the combat readiness of a unit's arms and equipment is more important than ever before. The recent Cuban crisis points up this fact. The military hardware in the hands of troops today is what they may take into battle tomorrow.

In the Cuban experience, Army air defense units were en route from Fort Meade, Md., to locations in Florida even as the President spoke to the Nation on October 22 concerning the Cuban-based offensive missiles. The next day, elements of the 1st Armored Division were on their way from Fort Hood, Tex., to an area in the southeastern part of the United States. Many other Army units — including airborne divisions — were alerted for early action, if necessary.

This necessity for instantly responding — to move out in a matter of hours rather than days — underscores the importance of material readiness. The soldier headed for possible combat gains in confidence from knowing that the arms and equipment supporting him are in top-notch condition. His life, and the outcome of the battle, may well depend on the efficiency of the "tools of his trade." Advancing technology, bringing increasing quantities of complex weapons and equipment to the battlefield, has also brought added maintenance responsibilities.

All of this makes materiel readiness everybody's job — Officers, warrant officers, enlisted personnel — and civilians — at all levels are responsible for keeping what the Army uses in A-1 condition. The ultimate goal of all is a common one — to make sure the equipment in your unit, and every unit, will be ready to go if and when its needed . . anytime . . anywhere.

What You Can Do for Freedom

Speak up for freedom and America, especially when you are abroad. No soapbox oratory! No emotional harangues! If you know the facts, you can answer questions asked of you. When you hear Communist propaganda being repeated by persons who have been exposed to it, you can tactfully set them straight.

Award Winning Letter

Laziness Dangerous, Writer Warns Son

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter by PFC Gerald I. Silverman, U.S. Army Element, AFN, APO 09, New York, has been judged winner in the 1962 Freedoms Foundation Letter Writing Awards program. PFC Silverman was presented $1,000 and a George Washington Honor Medal for the letter which was over entries from all branches of the Armed Forces.)

Dear Son, .

When you read this letter I may be dead. You see, the world is choosing sides now for the eventual struggle between two forces, and its outcome will decide the future of mankind.

Perhaps you, too, are in the midst of a war, and you ask, Why?

They say that history is circular, that you can tell the future by the past. I hope that I, as your past, can explain some things to you; and if you learn from our mistakes you can live in peace and without fear.

Today there is a man called Nikita Khrushchev, who is trying to spread his diseased ideology throughout the world. Today it is Khrushchev, yesterday it was Hitler, and the day before that, Genghis Khan; tomorrow it might be O'Brien or Sanchez or Goldberg. No, the names and faces change, but the ideas remain the same:

Don't write.
Don't talk.
Don't think.
Don't pray.
Just do.

Son, the most precious thing we possess, dearer than life itself, is freedom. Men for countless ages have sacrificed themselves to keep the world free for their children. Yes, you must fight, as I and my father before me have fought, and as your children will fight.

Because, Son, freedom is not a right, given us at birth like a toy. Freedom is a responsibility. It's an intangible concept; but just as cold is the absence of heat, life without freedom is bondage, and freedom can be drained from us so silently, so subtly, that we do not realize it is gone. And then it is too late.

Do not think that the only enemy you must fight is the dictator. A bigot condemning a man because of his color is a tyrant depriving you of freedom. A big man bullying a little man is a tyrant depriving you of freedom. The rich man suppressing the poor man, the majority constricting the minority—they are all tyrants, depriving you of freedom. You are an individual; but also you are a part of society, and when one man unfairly spills one drop of his life's blood of freedom, then you are the less.

The petty man is more dangerous to your well-being than the blatant dictator, because the petty man is insidious, undermining the free society from within.

This man cannot be destroyed with bullets. It takes an honest concept to erase a prejudiced one. And often it requires more courage to speak out against injustice than to offer your life on the battlefield. Some persons find it easier to expose themselves to the cannon than to the raised eyebrow.

It is your responsibility to be aware of ignorance and hypocrisy and war against them. This battle is a never-ending one. It is not enough to salute the flag on Independence Day, if you forget Valley Forge the rest of the year. It is not enough to lay a wreath on a veteran's tomb, if you do not think of Gettysburg, of the Argonne, of Bataan. You must always maintain your vigilance against oppression.

Son, don't win the war with bullets and lose the peace with laziness. Freedom is your responsibility.

With love,
Your Dad.

VISUAL AIDS, INFANTRY MAGAZINE AMONG RESPONSIBILITIES OF EPO

Artists, Writers, Movie Makers All Play a Part in EPO Mission

"Where do you work?"

"The Editorial and Pictorial Office — EPO."

"EPO? What do they do?"

"Well, you see, they . . ."

So begins another complex explanation of the duties of one of the most diverse agencies of The Infantry School.

Actually, Col. Howard B. St. Clair's Editorial and Pictorial Office has such a variety of missions that it's almost impossible to make one general statement of what EPO really does. The best way to learn the nature of this many - talented organization is to look at each of its subordinate activities.

VISUAL AIDS

One of the reasons that Infantry School instruction is so famous is because of the excellent training aids utilized by the school. These training aids are prepared by the Visual Aids Section, headed by Capt. Douglas R. Babcock.

With a group of skilled artists, led by Allan Ramsey, the VAS produces everything from tiny 35mm slides to illustrations 15 feet high and 30 feet long.

A recent project demonstrates the section's versatility. An instruction department required a large number of M79 grenade launchers for a tactical exercise; however, none were available. VAS got the job of coming up with a solution.

Spc4 David Chandler and his carpenters simply created the needed launchers from wood. Not only did the models look like the real weapons, but they were so weighted and balanced as to be indistinguishable from the real product.

AFPP

One of the largest sections of EPO is the Army Field Printing Plant, headed by Lt. Col. Clarence W. Welch. Th plant prints all Infantry School training literature, as well as material for The Infantry Center and various Third Army installations.

The plant foreman, Collis Lehner, directs a staff of over 100 people using the most modern printing equipment and techniques. The plant prints more than a million pages of literature each day on its eight presses.

Among the material printed is a vast quantity of maps. Usually an Engineer function, this job has been assigned to AFPP because of the great number of maps used at The Infantry School.

PUBLICATIONS

The Publications Section of EPO might well be called "The Writer's Section." Lt. Col. Steve W. Mulkey's section publishes Infantry Magazine. Every two months Capt. Roger M. Deming, Lt. Steve Werbel and Lt. Robert Ruggles help to keep 10,000 subscribers around the world informed about the most current Infantry concepts.

But the Publications Sections does a lot more than turn out Infantry Magazine. Special Editor, Capt. Donald E. Gelke, and his assistant, Capt. Conrad J. Obregon, are responsible for the creation of such items as the Commandant's Periodic Letter to the Field, Infantry School brochures and pamphlets, speeches, and biographical sketches and introductions for speakers at the Infantry School. They also supervise the preparation of this Bayonet feature, Infantry School Report.

FILM SECTION

He doesn't have a beret or mongrammed canvas chair, but Maj. Robert F. Coveny, is a motion picture producer. He heads the Film Section of EPO.

Although the Section contains only one other person — the administrative assistant, Mrs. Barbara Peoples — Maj. Coveny's job is a big one. He is responsible for coordinating the production of all training films prepared here, which numbered 24 last year.

Subjects of films produced by the section have ranged from mechanical training with various weapons to the Code of Conduct. In fact, the Code of Conduct film drew praise from the Army chief of staff.

"Who writes the Manuals?" Part of the answer is Lt. Col. Donald C. Shannon's Training Literature Section of EPO.

The Training Literature Section is responsible for coordinating the production of Infantry - related Department of the Army training literature, including Field

The king and queen led out the traditional morocca dance, and the evening was completed with dancing to the music of the Handley Trio.

75 Hear Mrs. Spano At Meeting

Newspaper work is fun but it is also a great challenge and responsibility, 75 members and guests of the Armed Forces Management Association were told recently.

The speaker was Mrs. Sara Spano society editor of The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

"When you hold a newspaper in your hand, you hold the world in your hand," Mrs. Spano said. "And at five cents a copy, that is the biggest bargain in the world."

Life in a newspaper society editor's office was graphically presented as Mrs. Spano described encounters with the people and problems that comprise her day.

A "Song Feste" was led by Parley Davis of Columbus, accordionist.

Farewells were said to Col. and Mrs. Braxton E. Small. Col. Small will retire from the Army this month. He has served as The Infantry Center signal officer since 1958.

Student Officer Wives Welcomed To Fort Benning

An orientation coffee was held for the wives of the student officers attending associate career class No. 3.

Those who gave orientation speeches were Lt. Col. Vern L. Joseph, commander of the 2nd Student Battalion; Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes, Student Brigade chaplain; Capt. Wade W. Herring, commander of Detachment No. 2, and his wife.

Guests were Mrs. Reynolds and her guest, Mrs. Troxell, Mrs. Koch, Mrs. Joseph, Mrs. Estes, and Major and Mrs. P. L. Mason.

There was supposed to have been a Beatnik Dance at Brat Barracks last Saturday night. Quite a few people were planning to attend. Everybody was planning to dance and to have fun, talking to the people they hadn't seen since the last Brat Barracks party.

Saturday came. All day people were running in and out of the building, helping Mr. and Mrs. Spurlin and the decorating committee get the room to look sufficiently "beat." At 8 p.m. that night, the big surprise came. In the first place, EVERYBODY was there — mobs of people, all costumed appropriately unattractively.

And the band! They were something else! Known as the "Vi-Kings," they bounced music off the old barracks walls until shortly after midnight. There seemed to be nothing that they couldn't play — or the vocalist didn't sing.

It was a very good evening, thanks to the Spurlins, the Brat Barracks social committee, all the people who attended, and the Vi-Kings."

Benningites said good-bye this week to a family that has been here for a long time.

Col. Braxton E. Small is taking his family to Stockton, Calif., to make their permanent home. Of the Small sons, Bill is now a lieutenant in the Air Force, while Bob and Jim are students at Georgia Tech, the school from which Bill recently graduated. Peggy, the younger daughter is now a seventh grader at Faith School.

Dottie Small, who is a freshman at CHS is an active member of the Junior Army Daughters of America, and will be missed in that organization.

Mary Mike Magner, a freshman at Barry College in Miami, Fla., has made the Dean's List for the first semester. Mike was a member of Pacelli's first graduating class and a former president of JADA.

To be active in sports is very fine and usually a lot of fun, too. To coach a team in any athletic activity is an entirely different matter. The coach must have and show the patience of a saint, the skill of a professional, the leadership of a mother duck, and the tact of a diplomat.

Because there was not a sufficient number of adult volunteers to coach the YAC basketball teams this year, several teenagers have had to uncover the before mentioned virtues in varying degrees and take on this job.

Harold Greer brags on his team of 13-, 14- and 15-year-old boys. They must be pretty good!

Frankie Holbrook and Jimmy Bolies have the difficult job of coaching boys between the ages of eight and 10.

In the girls' league, Cathy Wessner and Wanda Hodges are helping coach their friends of high school age.

These find young people deserve our recognition and appreciation, not only because they are doing a good job, but because they reflect credit on all of us — simply because they are our friends.

All JADA members are reminded that the luncheon tomorrow will be held in the Supper Club. Also, reservations for the Father-Daughter Banquet may be made through Kathy Aure until Thursday.

1ST SGT. GREEN

Alfred F. Green, first sergeant of Battery A, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, began his career as professional artilleryman on Nov. 24, 1942.

Upon completion of basic training, he was assigned to the School Support Unit at Fort Sill, Okla., where he acquired a knowledge of artillery that has served him well throughout his career.

In 1943, Sgt. Green was assigned to the Ninth Army to France to participate in the Central Europe and the Rhineland Campaigns. After returning to the states, he was discharged from the service in February, 1946.

Sgt. Green spent three years in civilian life working as an electrical welder. Like all good artillerymen, he could not stay away from his old job and re-enlisted in the Army in January, 1949. At this time, Sgt. Green became a member of Battery A, 10th Artillery, of which he now — 14 years later — serves as first sergeant.

In July, 1950, Sgt. Green was assigned to the 57th Artillery Group in Korea. He participated in five campaigns and was promoted to sergeant. After receiving multiple wounds while fighting in the Chosan Reservoir, he returned to the states and became a chief of firing in the 3rd Cavalry Division.

In October, 1955, he became a member of the 11th Cavalry and rotated to Germany shortly afterward. He returned to the states in 1961 to become the first sergeant of Battery A.

Sgt. Green's military awards include the Silver Star, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Army Commendation Medal, the Good Conduct Medal with six knots, the Distinguished Service Medal from the Korean government, and the Korean Presidential Citation.

Infantry Museum Has Exhibit on Viet Nam

The fight against Communist expansion in southeast Asia over the past few years has resulted in considerable attention to be focused in that area by Americans in all walks of life — both civilian and military.

American service personnel stationed there in advisory capacities, teaching soldiers of Viet Nam modern ways in which to hold back a determined enemy, are returning not only with knowledge of new techniques in guerrilla fighting, but also valuable information about some of the lesser known peoples of that far away land.

Recently, The Infantry Museum was the recipient of an intriguing collection of weapons and utility objects made by a primitive hill-dwelling folk known among Americans stationed there as the "Mountain Yard natives."

Exactly what is meant by the term "mountain yard" is not clear. Possibly it is a phonetic corruption of some native term. Americans have a traditionally difficult time with tricky foreign words and expressions and frequently make a close-sounding substitution. (In World War I, both Americans and British referred to the Belgian village of Ypres as "wipers".)

The objects of Mountain Yard origin were donated by Sgt. Billy M. Jones who is currently assigned to the Communications Department. Most of the objects, which consist of iron spear-heads and one small cross-bow, were recovered from the ruins of a small village burned by Communist Viet-Cong guerrillas.

According to Sgt. Jones, the Mountain Yard peoples were, until recently, "'on the fence" as to their allegiance in the Vietnamese struggle against Communism. For a time, it appeared, these simple people seemed to favor the Viet Cong guerrillas and may have assisted them as guides or even supported them in raids on Viet Nam villages.

The current trend indicates that they are beginning to favor the Vietnamese. This might be the result of shabby treatment in the hands of the Communists. At any rate, assistance given by these hill folk to the Viet Nam soldiers in tracking down Communist guerrillas should prove valuable.

These and many other new displays may be seen daily at the museum.

Surgeon Says

Virus Got You Down? Try Rest and Liquids

By Capt. Mims C. Aultman
Chief
General Outpatient Clinic

"I have a virus."

Yes, you may have a virus. More than 80 human viruses have been discovered in the past 12 years. The illnesses produced by these viruses are varied. Symptoms may range from those of a cold, and aching painful muscles, to complete paralysis.

In general, viruses are divided into two types — those that affect the gastro-intestinal tract, and those that affect the nose, throat and lungs.

Both types are found worldwide, are spread by person-to-person contact, produce epidemics at times, produce illness in children more commonly than in adults, and may produce minor, insignificant illnesses as well as more serious disease.

Diagnosis is usually made on a clinical basis since laboratory methods require special facilities and are expensive and time consuming.

As a result of the work of Doctors Salk, Sabin, and others, we now have vaccines to protect us from the dreaded virus, polio.

The common cold is the most viral illness seen. Much work is being done to make a vaccine to give some protection against the cold, but many known types of viruses are involved thus making the preparation of a single vaccine difficult.

Military recruits are frequently hard hit by a viral disease resembling influenza. A vaccine for this has been used by the U. S. Army in some areas. More research is needed to perfect this.

Other viruses may cause fever, sore throat, pneumonia, eye inflammation, pleurisy, nausea and vomiting, diarrhea, and more serious illnesses. Older known viruses are those that cause measles, chickenpox and such.

"'Can't I have a shot of penicillin?"

No, a shot of penicillin or other antibiotics are generally of no value in treating viral infections. The more serious infections are hospitalized and treated in a prescribed manner. For the minor illnesses, aspirin, fruit juices, rest, plenty of water, avoidance of fatigue, and restriction of excesses of alcohol are recommended. Nose drops, and antihistamines offer some relief from the symptoms of a cold, but should be limited to a few days use.

Methods of prevention of viral illnesses are limited to avoiding unnecessary contacts with known cases, keeping general health good, and assuring good adequate diet and rest. Use of vitamins in adults is recommended only for specific cases where physician feels they are indicated. An adequate diet in otherwise healthy individuals provides required vitamins.

ARMY AUTOMATION

The desired state of readiness requires that human resources capability be known at all times. To meet these new demands on qualitative manpower requirements, the Army is now engaged in the development of an integrated automatic data processing system for personnel administration.

BAUMHOLDER, Germany —Rifle companies of the 38th Infantry recently completed twenty-one hour day and night tactical attack and defense exercises on the Baumholder ranges.

During the first phase of the attack exercise, occupation of the assembly area, planning for the attack, patrolling and reconnaissance were stressed as the companies received the attack order.

Units then conducted a supported daylight attack with fire planning, troop leading procedures, and control of the principal training points.

After the rifle companies seized their objectives, an order to conduct a night troops moved in on another close objective.

At the completion of the attack phase of the exercises, companies were deployed in the conduct of the defense, day and night withdrawals, and further reconnaissance and patrolling. *

The tactical problems were based on the opposing forces concept and controlled by officers from the 38th's battle group headquarters.

Combat Tours To Be Over For Mouser

By 1st Infantry PIO

Sgt. Maj. Wilson R. Mouser of Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry retired Thursday after 20 years of service with combat troops, beginning with his original enlistment at Fort Hayes, in 1941.

He was assigned to the 1st Armored Division at Fort Knox, Ky., and in September, 1941 was sent to the Philippine Islands where he was captured with other American troops in the Fall of Bataan. He survived the "Bataan Death March," which took the lives of many fellow prisoners, American and Philippine. They were forced to march for five days and nights without food, water or rest, with the exception of rest periods at noon, when the Japanese troops were fed. Failure to keep pace meant instant death.

Sgt. Maj. Mouser was imprisoned for 34 months in three different concentration camps, and was liberated by the 37th Infantry Division in 1945.

A native of West Virginia, he and his wife Polly, reside on post at 128 Ingersall Loop. Sgt. Maj. Mouser took over as sergeant major of the "Always First" in February 1962.

Parading Support Command Salutes an Incoming Colonel

Members of the 2nd Division's new Support Command honored their new commander Tuesday afternoon with a review on Sand Hill.

At a ceremony held on Wetherby Field, Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander, officially constituted the old Division Trains as the new Support Command and symbolized the changeover by pinning green tabs of leadership upon Support's new commander, Col. Arlin J. Kehe.

The new command embraces support units, reorganized that were previously attached to Division Trains. They are the 2nd Administration Company, the 702nd Maintenance Battalion, the 2nd Medical Battalion and the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

The former commander of Division Trains, Col. John F. Staples, who is on orders for assignment in Germany, thanked the assembled troops for the "support and cooperation" he had received during his command. He deemed it "a great privilege" to have served as commander.

Col. Kehe, the new commander and formerly commander of the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry, spoke of the "enlarged mission and greater responsibility" which the new command will have and said he is confident that the fine services performed in the past will continue and increase in the future."

The review began with the two colonels trooping the line in a Jeep. This was followed by the playing of the National Anthem and the change of command ceremony. After Col. Kehe's speech, the executive officer of the Support Command, Lt. Col. Marshall Whiting, who was the commander of troops ordered the assembled units to pass in review.

Leading the march past were representatives from the 13th Transportation Battalion, followed by representatives from the 702nd Ordnance Battalion, the 2nd Medical Battalion, the 2nd Quartermaster Company and the 2nd Administration Company.

Despite the cold weather, a crowd of spectators, friends and families of the units, assembled to watch the ceremony. They were fortified by hot coffee and Army blankets.

Also attending the ceremony were Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, the assistant division commander, and Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., the division chief of staff.

A Special 3-Man Mission Flies to 38th in Germany

By Peter Tatistcheff

Straddling two continents, serving in the United States and under tense conditions up against the iron curtain, has become a way of life for members of the 2nd Infantry Division. "Keeps things hopping," said Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Division commander, who with two other division members begins globe-hopping today on a mission crucial to division reorganization and Rotaplan activities.

TRAVELER AND CAMPAIGN STREAMERS
Sgt. Maj. Brown, One of Three

Gen. Corley, accompanied by Lt. Col. Richard A. Perkins Jr., executive officer of the 3rd Brigade; and Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, division sergeant major, this week will fly to Germany for approximately 18 days.

"Our first purpose," the general stressed, "is to visit our unit and see how they have done." The 38th Infantry, which in October 1962 was chosen by the Department of Army to kickoff the Army's latest unit rotation plan, Rotaplan, has been training with the 8th Infantry Division in Baumholder, Germany, and is scheduled to return to Fort Benning in April. Emphasizing the acute importance of their training mission in that outpost of the Free World, the general reported that communications from the 38th have shown the unit anxious to return after a tough European winter. The unit has reported its progress in training at least twice a month since October.

Lt. Col. Perkins will clear

General Stresses 'Aircraft Age' In Local MOWW Chapter Speech

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commander of the 2nd Infantry Division was the guest speaker at the February meeting of the Columbus-Fort Benning Chapter of the Military Order of the World Wars, (MOWW,) held recently at the Custer Terrace Officers Club.

Taking as his topic "The Future Trends in the Army" Gen. Billingslea said that with the new reorganization in his division and the recent activation of the air assault division the Army is "on the right track" toward finding a solution for today's war problems.

"The Army as of January (1963) is very encouraging," said the general. "Through men such as Gen. Howze and other imaginative men, we're trying to find a solution to cold war and total war."

Lt. Gen. Hamilton H. Howze, the U.S. Continental Army development chief, was the chief of the board that proposed the new air assault concept and Gen. Billingslea served on that board before coming to Fort Benning. The air assault division is designed for maximum mobility in dealing with hostilities in non-rail and non-road areas, a common characteristic of warfare today. Said Gen. Billingslea, the current age is "a logistic age of aircraft and not one of rail and road."

Units of today, he said, are getting more vehicles for greater mobility and more radios for better communications. With the reorganization under ROAD, units will have greater adaptability.

Costs are getting greater. Compared to the World War II cost of division equipment of $80 million and the "Pentomic" division's cost of $73 million, the ROAD concept's cost is $117 million.

But, says Gen. Billingslea, "We are heading in the direction we must go."

Gen. Billingslea was introduced by the commander of the local MOWW chapter, Maj. Gen. (ret.) Philip Gallagher, who was a tactical instructor at the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, when Gen. Billingslea was a cadet there from 1932 to 1936.

Special Mission

the way for other 2nd Division soldiers rotating to Europe in April to take the 38th Infantry's place with the 8th Division. This spring will see members of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry, loading their equipment for intensive training in Germany. Both units are attached to the 3rd Brigade. Col. Perkins will coordinate with 8th Division officials to arrange for a swift and efficient transfer and to assure logistical support for Spring and Summer training there.

"Reports on 38th Infantry morale," said Gen. Corley, "are very good. But they've come to the tail end of a tough winter and want to come home." Seeing to the needs of the 38th's enlisted personnel and the general morale of the unit is the job of Sgt. Maj. Brown, acting in his role of senior division noncommissioned officer.

The three representatives of the 2nd Division will see as much as they can during their 18-day visit. According to Gen. Corley, "I want to get the first hand impression of what has happened to the 38th since it began winter training in Europe. I am going to see how they train over there." Speaking about the difference between serving in the U.S. and Europe he stated, "Units in Germany are up against the Iron Curtain and this makes a difference. Their training is understandably more advanced. I consider it an important experience to have the opportunity to train there. The 38th had it tough with freezing conditions and they pulled through very well. Units that follow the 38th in April have Spring and Summer to look forward to. That's a good time to be in Europe."

The three "travelers" are scheduled to return to Fort Benning March 18.

Artillery's Reenlistment Story: A Tale of Weight

By DIVArty PIO

When Capt. Robert E. Camp, commanding officer of Headquarters Battery, Division Artillery, recently swore in for reenlistment SFC Joe M. Barfield of the battery's aid station, and MSgt. Joe R. Camp, communications sergeant, the time was ripe for revealing the interesting background to the reenlistment of the Sgt. Camp in Capt. Camp's camp.

Sgt. Camp, when he was given his reenlistment physical examination, was told the shattering news that he was 26 pounds overweight, and that a new regulation effective Jan. 1, 1963, dictated that overweight personnel applying for reenlistment would not be accepted.

"The doctor then told me," says Sgt. Camp. "You have exactly 29 days to lose that 26 pounds if you want to stay in."

Asked how he did it, Sgt. Camp says "it was easy, I just dieted. And in the diet I followed, I just didn't eat!"

1st Infantry Lieutenant Tops Class

By 1st Infantry PIO

A lieutenant from the 1st Infantry's Company C recently graduated top man in a class of 48 officers at the Little Creek, Va., Embarkation School. A 97 per cent score on the final examination earned 1Lt. Allan F. Sloan this honor.

Highlight of the training was a trip by the officers to Norfolk, Va., where they viewed various types of amphibious assault craft. The more strenuous part of the training was received at Little Creek. The officers often spent as much as two or three days working on a single combat loading ship problem.

1Lt. Sloan is a graduate of Clemson College, S. Ca., where he received a bachelor's degree in Ceramic Engineering. Following Clemson, the Army lieutenant attended the Harvard Business School in Mass., and earned his master's degree in business administration through the graduate program there.

At present Lt. Sloan is a platoon leader with Company C.

What's Inside ROAD: The Whys and Wherefores

Editor's Note: This is a continuation of an explanation of the Reorganization Objective Army Divisions (ROAD) concept which appeared in last week's edition of THE BAYONET.

In addition to the increased number of maneuver elements (battalions) in each ROAD division, the increase in conventional firepower will be considerable. For example, there will be a 45 per cent increase in 105mm howitzers, a 17 per cent overall increase in conventional artillery. Recoiless rifles will be increased by a factor of four and machine guns by a factor of three. The number of aircraft will be doubled. There will be about 600 armored personnel carriers in the mechanized divisions, but fewer in the Infantry divisions than there are at present.

While the non-nuclear firepower increases, there will be no less nuclear firepower available within the divisions —the Davy Crockett, the eight-inch howitzer and the Honest John and Little John rockets all being capable of delivering nuclear fires.

In summary, the new divisions will provide:

1. Flexible forces tailored to their environment and mission.
2. Improved limited war capability.
3. Improved non - nuclear firepower.
4. Forces tailored as to tactical mobility.
5. Mechanized forces for Europe.
6. Separate Airborne Brigades.
7. Improved command control and training of subordinate leaders.
8. Effective use of available resources.

A fundamental concept underlying the new structure is that of fashioning divisions to meet varying requirements. This is done with "building blocks" that are interchangeable within and between divisions.

These building blocks are the combat maneuver battalions that are assigned to a common division base.

Base Elements

The division base contains the elements required for all divisions. It includes the command and control elements; the division artillery; other required combat and combat support units such as reconnaissance squadron, an aviation battalion, a signal battalion, and an engineer battalion; a support command which provides administrative and logistical support of the division; and three brigade headquarters. The types of units that make up the division base are the same for all divisions; however, their equipment, organization, and methods of operating may vary depending upon the type of division and its mission.

Divisions are formed by combining this base with a varying mix of four kinds of combat maneuver battalions —infantry, tank, mechanized infantry, and parachute infantry. These battalions have a similar structure; however, their design and equipment provide combinations of mobility, firepower, and other combat characteristics allowing construction of larger combat forces with discrimination to fit environmental variables and combat tasks.

The tank battalion — a powerful unit with heavy armor - protected mobility, firepower, and shock action — performs its traditional role.

The mechanized infantry battalion is equipped with armored personnel carriers which provide lightweight, armor - protected, cross - country mobility.

The infantry and parachute infantry battalions are lighter units. They are suitable for a wide range of environments and missions, particularly those requiring movement by air and for employment in mountains, swamps, jungles, and other types of terrain where mechanized forces cannot be employed to best effect.

Varying numbers and kinds of combat maneuver battalions are combined with the division bases to produce variations of four kinds of divisions — armored, mechanized, infantry, and airborne. Many possible variations of each type can be designed to meet specific needs.

Armored and mechanized divisions are suitable for employment in such areas as Western Europe and an infantry division suitable for an area such as Korea; the airborne division might be used as a quick-reacting element of the strategic reserve.

The three brigade headquarters control combat maneuver battalions and other units which may be assigned to them. These brigade headquarters are the principal subordinate control elements of the division. They are tailored for the combat mission and normally will control from two to five combat maneuver battalions each. They are ideally suited to the formation of combined arms task forces of less than division size. Brigades normally will be commanded by colonels.

Like Allied Structure

The division - brigade - battalion echelonment is similar to the structure contained in the divisions of the British, West German, and French armies as well as those of some other Allies. This similarity will facilitate the conduct of operations with Allied forces.

The command, control, and support structure provides a capability of employing effectively up to fifteen combat maneuver battalions — five per brigade. At the other end of the scale, depending upon a division's assigned mission, it may be reduced to a strength as small as two brigades with six or seven battalions. The number of battalions normally assigned to a division, when resources permit, may be expected to be ten or eleven. However, when resources are limited, it may not be possible to maintain some divisions at this level of strength.

The tailoring concept permits effective use of whatever levels of resources are provided. When available resources are limited, the number of combat maneuver battalions assigned to the divisions may be reduced below the desired level and the combat and administrative support and control structure modified accordingly.

Organization of the division artillery is designed to facilitate direct support of the brigades, while insuring flexible general support of the division. Three 105mm howitzer battalions are provided so that one may be available for direct support of, or attachment to, each brigade. In addition, general support units reinforce these battalions with nuclear and non-nuclear fire and give depth to combat.

DIVISION REORGANIZES

Since late January the Division has made great progress in reorganizing its units under the ROAD concept. Today the 69th Armor will change over to the 1st Battalion of the 72nd Armor. The 1st Battalion will be at Fort Benning and comprise personnel and equipment of the former 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 69th Armor. The 2nd Division's new 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, will be organized on March 25 from elements of the old 4th Battalion, 13th Armor, currently at Fort Stewart. Although a part of the 2nd Division, the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, is scheduled to remain at Fort Stewart to support annual live-fire training tests for many tank battalions in the Third U.S. Army area and various other military installations.

Today the 702nd Ordnance Battalion will reorganize into the 2nd Supply and Transportation Battalion with the 13th Transportation Battalion being integrated into this new Battalion March 25.

From the entire Division, this leaves only the 1st Infantry and 38th Infantry to reorganize. Completion is not expected until after April 15, at which time the 38th Infantry is scheduled to return from six months duty in Germany under Rotaplan. Simultaneously, the 1st Brigade will also be organized.

The chart on this page indicates the structure of the 2nd Infantry Division after completion of its current reorganization. A breakdown of units within the Support Command will be shown on a separate chart later in this series of ROAD articles.

Announcing a Series

The next installment in this series of articles pertaining to reorganization of the 2nd Division will appear in the March 8 issue of THE BAYONET. This article will be devoted to the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, and will explain in depth, battalion and subordinate unit structure, naming commanders and staff officers.

87th's Turn To Score On Proficiency

By 87th Infantry PIO

This month the 87th Infantry has been conducting the Department of Army's new Combat Proficiency Test, a requirement throughout the 2nd Infantry Division.

Although intended to be given in ordinary fatigue uniforms and combat boots, the test otherwise does not at all resemble older ones, which consisted mostly of Army "daily dozen" exercises. Instead the new test utilizes five exercises imitating the sort of physical activity found in actual combat.

The 40 yard low crawl, dodge-run-and-jump relay, horizontal ladder exercise and mile run are timed exercises, and the grenade throw, something like a shot put, indicates accuracy and strength.

Highest scoring individual in the battle group, with a perfect score of 900, was Sp5 Louis Henshaw of Company B. Second highest was PFC Clarence G. Fogg, Company A, with a score of 486.

87th Officer Sent To Second Brigade

The former executive officer at Headquarters Company, 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry, Lt. John H. Moss, has been named commanding officer of the newly redesignated headquarters Company of the division's 2nd Brigade.

Lt. Moss attended the University of Michigan and was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1961, where he received a Bachelor of Science degree in marketing and a Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) commission.

Billingslea. Lt. Col. Hearn, with the help of the company's new first sergeant, SFC Mark A. Copa, cut the cake and passed it around to those present.

Capt. Vincent A. Apruzzese, company commander, led Gen. Billingslea and Col. Hearn to the company's new headquarters where Gen. Billingslea cut the ribbon signifying the activation of the new company.

As Rotaplan Date Nears
23rd Travels Hills, Holes in APCs

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, an brigade has entered a new strategic training phase in preparation for their ROTAPLAN tour to Germany.

The armored personnel carrier (M59), better known as the "Iron Horse," traveled the hills and mud holes of Fort Benning this week in three days of driver training.

Not knowing what the 21-ton hulk of steel would do, the new drivers were apt to be overly cautious at first. But in a short time, the "A.P.C." felt like an old friend.

The drivers began on a ... shaped trail, driving around a yet course. The following day the "tracks" and drivers moved to the advanced course where the inclines were steeper, the mud deeper, the trails rougher.

Following the advanced course, the class moved into an advanced night driving problem including a water crossing. The machines moved into Victory Pond and started across water. As soon as amphibious training ended, the men moved back to the motor pool in their carriers.

Before embarking for Germany this spring, the drivers will also pilot the newer, lighter M1-13 which will be used by squads in their European training.

Commo Units At 23rd Infantry Gets New Chief

By 23rd Infantry PIO

An officer instrumental in the preparation of the Division's current "Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course" recently arrived at the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, to assume duties as communications officer.

Lt. William A. Witt arrived at the unit from the 2nd Division G-3 Section where he helped plan platoon maneuvers for the Counter-Guerrilla Course.

USO Hostesses Dance For 1st Infantry Troops

By 1st Infantry PIO

Members of the 1st Infantry were privileged to have USO hostesses from Atlanta visit them recently for a day of entertainment and dancing.

Music was furnished by "The Plaids" headed by their organizer, Bobby Jones. They have been together for six months and have played at both the Biltmore Hotel and the Hilton Inn besides a number of other establishments located in the Atlanta area.

The girls displayed their talents including a modern jazz dance by Linda Coleman, who was making her first trip with the group. She is a USO volunteer who hails from Atlanta, Ga. Robbie Hargrove then sang a song entitled "It's So Nice To Have a Man Around the House," only to find that upon completion of the song the men applauded for an encore.

The day started out with Coffee Call at 10 a.m. where the men were served coffee and donuts after which they attended church at Kelley Hill. After church the girls were escorted by men from Headquarters Company, of the 1st Infantry to the unit mess hall for lunch. Upon completing their meal everyone returned to the service club where a representative of the commanding general expressed his sincere appreciation on behalf of Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of 2nd Division to the girls of the USO for their work.

With the band playing music from the stage the men of the "Always First" applauded the girls through quite a workout.

The day came to a close at 5 p.m. with the men escorting the girls to their chartered bus to say their final goodbyes.

By 3rd Brigade PIO

Sp5 Hollingsworth reenlisted for six years; he has over 15 years service to his credit.

Two officers of the 2nd Division's 17th Artillery retire from duty with week. Both joined the unit in October 1961 during the division's Intensified Combat Training Program.

Lt. William Z. E. Godbold, battalion S-2 officer and Lt. Robert W. Gladden, Battery B executive officer, plan to return to farming and engineering respectively.

NOT CONFUSING . . . Recent arrivals to the 2nd Infantry division include identical (but not so identical) twins Howard (L) and Marshall Bernstein, lieutenants assigned to the 122nd Signal Battalion. New York natives, both are law school graduates — Marshall from Harvard Law School and Howard from Cornell Law School. Wait! that's not right.

Infantry Takes Positions Beside Armor at Stewart

By 1st Infantry PIO

A wildly camouflaged armored personnel carrier last week moved carefully up a muddy road at Fort Stewart, Ga., pivoted into thick brush, dropped its ramp, and disgorged soldiers of Company C, 1st Infantry, ready or an ambush.

Led by SFC Glenn Kennedy, two squads of Company C took up positions around camouflaged tanks of the 77th Armor for an Army Training Test. With 90 millimeter guns for the armor and the infantrymen's rifles peering through the brush, they waited to inflict "heavy losses in equipment and casualties" on an aggressor enemy playing test the armor unit.

Adding to the reality of the problem were periodic gas attacks and simulated atomic blasts.

As Direct Support

Company C, 1st Infantry, commanded by Capt. Thomas J. McAniff, took part in this drama staged at Fort Stewart. They acted in direct support of the 3rd Battalion, 77th Armor while they went through their Army training tests.

During the first week Company C was split into two groups. The 1st and 3rd platoons practiced the test and then went through with a part of the armor battalion. The 2nd platoon and weapons platoon supported another segment of the 77th in a tank-infantry problem.

The second week saw the 1st and 3rd platoons involved in a company Army training test supporting the 77th while the 2nd and weapons platoons ran an independent control problem.

In the third week the final Army training test was given with Company C supporting the 77th Armor.

The overall problem was conducted by the 4th Battalion, 13th Armor, contributing aggressors, umpires and administrative control. The 714th Medical Company supported the control center with mess facilities. Leading the various platoons of Company C, 1st Infantry, were SFC Gerardo San Louis, weapons platoon sergeant; SSgt. Larry Tannichill, 2nd Platoon sergeant; SFC Glenn Kennedy, 3rd platoon sergeant; and PSgt. Leland McCray, 1st platoon sergeant.

The problem was highlighted by a visit from Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Division commander; and Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Infantry commander.

New System to be Used For Lunch Reservations

A new arrangement for making reservations for the monthly luncheon of the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club has been adopted.

With the advent of the division reorganizing under the ROAD concept and many people changing units, Mrs. Robert Kendrick, membership chairman, has formulated the following plan:

Effective with the March luncheon, each individual member will be responsible for phoning her own reservation in to a designated reservation chairman. These chairmen have been assigned alphabetical groupings as follows: (A-B) Pat DeHaven, 545-7846 and Virginia Woodside, 545-5730; (C) Terry Lenzi, MU 9-7270 and Annetta Hover, MU 9-5413; (D-E-F) Francis Cooper, 687-0317 and Nancy Hayes, MU 9-5417: (G-H) Edith McMullen, 544-3498 and Joanne Moore, 544-1439; (I - J - K) Donna Ritenour, 327-9741 and Donna McIntire, 545-1919; (L-M) Connie Crosby, 545-3406 and Marjorie Mendoe, MU 9-7573; (N-O-P) Dottie Hamilton, MU 9-4180 and Shirley Newton, MU 9-0605; (Q - R - S) Donna Wright, MU 9-7157 and Ann Baird, 689-8823; (T-U-V-W) Carleen Mason, MU 9-1419 and Marion Widrig, 544-1516; (X-Y-Z-Associate Members) Muriel Swango, MU 9-3361 and Trudy Callahan, MU 9-0522.

It is requested that members call the chairman indicated by the letter corresponding to the letter of your last name to make the reservation. Reservations must be called in no later than 4 p.m. Thursday prior to the date of the luncheon. Future luncheon dates are as follows: March 12th, April 9th, and May 14th. If you must cancel your reservation, kindly do so by calling the chairman by 10 a.m. Monday, the day before the luncheon. If it is impossible to reach your designated reservation chairman, Mrs. Kendrick can be contacted at 545-2147.

Keeping a record of our club's membership and checking these reservations is a giant job, particularly with all the units changing, so the club asks that you bear with them during this period of adjustment for the next few months.

Ambassador of Good Will While Stationed in Japan

By Lois Foy

Pennsylvania, the Keystone State, the area where coal mines and steel mills, rich farmlands and forests abound, forms the background for Ann Alexander Runyon, attractive wife of the assistant major of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. Monaca, home town for Mrs. Runyon, is located in the western part of the state near Pittsburgh.

While serving as a chemical analyst in a chemical laboratory, she and James L. Runyon made their marriage plans. In 1950, while Sgt. Maj. Runyon was home on leave, their marriage vows were taken.

Their first year of marriage was spent at Fort Bragg, N.C. The second year they journeyed to Fort Benning.

They returned to Fort Bragg in 1953 and the third member of the family, Walter now nine years old and a fourth grader at Frank R. Lloyd School, was born. In 1955, Danny, now seven years of age and a first grader at the Frank R. Lloyd School, joined the family.

A journey for Sgt. Maj. Runyon to Japan came in 1954.

BAKING SPECIALIST
Mrs. Runyon

Nine months later Mrs. Runyon and the two boys joined him at Camp Chickamauga, near Oita, Japan. Mrs. Runyon used the nine months they were able to remain in Japan to great advantage.

One might refer to her as an ambassador of good will for the United States. Entertaining Japanese guests in her home was not a rare thing. Students from the university in Oita, eager to learn American customs and especially their cooking techniques, were frequent visitors in the Runyon home.

Cooking unusual and unique dishes is a constant hobby of Mrs. Runyon. She delights in decorating cakes and cookies. Anyone attending one of the semi-annual bake sales held by the 9th Infantry wives will surely find some of Mrs. Runyon's talent displayed. Needy families are helped by proceeds of these bake sales, especially at Christmas time.

Fort Campbell, Ky. was home for the Runyons in 1956. Then in 1957, Korea beckoned to Sgt. Maj. Runyon. Mrs. Runyon and her two sons returned to Pennsylvania during his tour in Korea.

Upon returning from Korea, Mrs. Runyon's husband was assigned to the 82d Airborne Division at Fort Bragg. In October 1960, the Runyons again came to Fort Benning. Mrs. Runyon and her family now reside on post at Fort Benning.

Organization Coffee Is Held By 23rd Ladies

An organization coffee was recently held by Mrs. John H. Cochran Jr., at her home on Rainbow Ave., for the ladies of the 23rd Infantry.

Mrs. Cochran conducted a business meeting at which it was decided a Bake-Sale would be held to help support the Rota-Center.

Mrs. Keller poured coffee and tea, assisted by Mrs. Robert Kendrick.

SPRING IN COLOR

Fashions for the months of Spring 63 will feature pink, from the vibrant tones to that very soft "touch of pink". Green, bright, crisp and cool will be another color favorite this year. Colorful print blouses with feminine bows and delicate cuffs will lend that fresh bit of spring to an old suit.

USO Calls Div. Sergeant 'Serviceman-of-the-Year'

A 2nd Infantry Division master sergeant has been chosen "Serviceman of the Year" by the 5th Avenue United Service Organization.

MSgt. Lewis Gray, noncommissioned officer in charge of division Special Services, was awarded the honor at ceremonies celebrating the 22nd Anniversary of the 5th Avenue USO. For Sgt. Gray, this is the second time in two years that he has been chosen by this branch of the USO as an outstanding serviceman. Last year, Sgt. Gray, this wife and four children were named "Military Family of the Year."

The sergeant was chosen for the award due to his outstanding contribution and service to the USO. He is chairman of the membership committee and chairman of the program committee. Sgt. Gray is largely responsible for making the USO a "home away from home" for the soldier and for planning the numerous activities which afford diversion on off-duty hours.

The sergeant is a charter member of the Military Civics Club which arranges entertainment at the USO and at the post service clubs. Saturday evenings are usually spent by the sergeant hosting the weekly dances at the USO.

Long active in Army sports programs, Sgt. Gray was selected to coach the 2nd Division all-stars which were vying with the Main Post all-stars for the Fort Benning basketball crown.

Sgt. Gray, his wife, Della, and four children, June, 11, Deborah, 9, Stanley, 8, and Keith, 7, live off post in Columbus.

Division Cagers Nipped by USAIC

Main Post Wins All-Star Tourney in 2 Tight Games

By Bob de Camara

The Main Post basketball all-stars swept past the 2nd Division all-stars in the first two games of a best-out-of - three Thursday night at the Briant Wells Field House on Main Post. Both games were a struggle for the Infantry Center champions as they won the first 67-64 and the second 65-61.

Second Division high scorers were, in the opening tilt, Walter Clark with 29 points and Hubert Barksdale with 10. In the decisive game the next evening, Barksdale and Clark reversed the percentages shooting 24 and 13 points respectively. For the USAIC cagers, George Bell shot 17 points in the first game with Melvin Johnson trailing one point behind at 16. The second match gave Bell 27 points and Gary Daniels 16.

Div. at Half

Wednesday night at Briant Wells Field House before about a one-third capacity crowd, the visiting "Indianheads" got off to a good start in the tournament rivalry, sewing up the USAIC cagers in a 31-21 halftime lead.

Using a two-squad system instituted by Coach Lewis Gray and fast-breaking, the blue uniforms of the Division all-stars were all over the hardwood, smothering Main Post in a deadly assault at the nets and picking up most of the rebounds. Anthony Shewell, Warner Johnson, Walter Clark, Hubert Barksdale and Turner started for the "Second to None."

The second half opened with the division still in command of the ball game. Whittling away at the lead, it wasn't until 8:53 that USAIC went ahead on a contribution by Archie Bain. After this, USAIC pulled steadily away from the division cagers with the division's Walter Clark shooting 12 points in the last quarter to keep the score from being a run-away.

Final Game

The following evening the 2nd's netmen again traveled to Main Post for what turned out to be the final game of the tournament. Originally the games, except the first, had been set for Harmony Church Field House in the division's own domain. Changes in these plans put the 2nd's basketball standouts back on foreign hardwood for the decisive game.

The first half of the second game, completely contrary to the evening before, was all wrong for the division's cagers, and they rapidly picked up the short end of an 8-2 score.

Discarding an unpopular two-squad system which worked so well in the first half of the first game, the players were substituted individually. With the fast-break attack faltering, the rest of the half was an uphill battle, points by Barksdale closing the scoring gap at halftime, 34-31.

The "Second to None" tied up the ball game at "33-all" in the second half and went ahead 55-53. From this point on, the "Indianhead" and USAIC traded the lead back and forth until, with 26 seconds left in the game, USAIC was a bucket ahead at 63-61 and the division all-stars had control of the ball. Clark tried a driving layup after a time-out but lost the ball to the Main Post. One more score by USAIC ended the game, 65-61.

'Conqueror' Track Champ Hopes for '64 Olympics

By 87th Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry may boast a future Olympic champion among its ranks. Spc4 James A. Stoakley, Company A, who in addition to being a track champion, a jump-master and a Ranger, has attained national standing in Germany and America in the broad jump and hop-skip-and-jump.

Oddly enough, his career began with a partial paralysis of the leg. Doctors believe that unless he got a lot of exercise he would never walk normally. He began roller skating and developed his legs to the point where he became a champion in junior high school.

After a year at Fort Bragg, N.C. he went to Europe.

Now at Fort Benning, Stoakley hopes to find time for some more training as he plans to try for the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo.

'Marnemen' In Overseas' Basketball

The 2nd Division's men in Germany, the 38th Infantry "Marnemen," keep active in sports, playing a 24 - game basketball schedule in the 8th Infantry Division's season tournament.

These pictures were shot recently when the "Marnemen" met and defeated the 8th Division Trains by a squeaker 74-73 score. The 38th, expected back at Fort Benning in mid-April, is also getting sports experience against members of mechanized infantry and airborne infantry battle groups on the hardwood courts of Baumholder Post.

Besides a regular basketball schedule, the 38th participates in all 8th Division sports activities, including boxing.

Athlete, Coach, Official

Gray Coaches Division All-Stars

By Bob de Camara

Coach of the 2nd Divison all-star basketball team is MSgt. Lewis Gray. The sergeant is ranking noncommissioner officer in the "Second to None's" Special Services office.

Working with his all-stars daily at 1 p.m. in the Kelley Hill gym, Gray planned a fast-break and two-team system to run the Main Post all-stars into the hardwood.

The 2nd's outstanding cagemen met the Main Post cagers Wednesday night in the opening best out-of-three games for the Fort Benning basketball crown.

All-State

An all-state high school basketball star and a member of numerous post championship teams, Gray began his coaching career as a player-coach in 1949 with the 42nd Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion at Fort Bliss, Tex. His Triple A's that year won the Fort Bliss basketball championship and the Fort Bliss baseball championship.

In addition to is career as an athlete and coach, the sergeant has done much officiating. He is presently a member of the Columbus Officials Association which officiates high school sports contests, having monitored football, basketball and track at area high schools.

At Burke High School in Charleston, S. C., Gary played three years of basketball, football and baseball, being named to the all-state basketball team in 1941. Before the end of the next basketball season, Gray had been drafted by the Army and was unable to take advantage of the dozen sports scholarships offered him by such colleges as South Carolina State, Savannah State and Allen University.

Completing basic training at Fort McClellan, Ala., Gray spent a couple of months with the 93rd Infantry Division on maneuvers in Louisiana and then was sent with the 93rd to California's Mojave Desert where he again picked up his sports activities, playing regimental basketball and baseball.

All-Star Athlete

Medic Clark Spurs 2nd Division Sports

By Bob de Camara

The Most Valuable Player in the 2nd Division basketball league continued his valuable play, shooting 29 points in the opening game of the Division Main Post all-star basketball tournament. Although the division dropped the tournament in two games to The Infantry Center, Walter Clark is one of the big reasons for the close scores.

Clark is a veteran of the sports arenas. Besides his outstanding play at the division level, the 2nd Medical Battalion soldier is a bulwark of the 2nd Med teams, having guided them to the Division Trains football championship last year, the Trains basketball championship in the 1961-62 season and runner-up in the Trains basketball league this season.

MVP

Voted Trains' Most Valuable Player for the 1961-62 season, it is probable that when the Trains athletes convene at the annual dinner again this year Clark will be chosen to repeat the honor.

Basketball and football are only two of the many sports which interest Clark. Last year on Main Post, he completed in a track meet, tying for second place in the high jump and running on the 440 relay team which took second place in the matches.

For Walter Clark, sports competition goes farther back than high school. In seventh grade, he set the Indianapolis, Ind., junior high school high jump record. As a student at Indianapolis' Short Ridge High School, Clark high jumped six feet, five inches and ran the 100-yard dash in 10.1.

Graduating from Short Ridge High, Clark married and, in 1960, entered the Army. Following basic training at Fort Riley, Kans., Clark played for the 5th Infantry basketball team at Fort Riley and, in 1961, was transferred to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., for training as a medic.

Better Bowling

HARD SIDE . . . Right-handed bowlers usually have trouble converting spares on the right hand side of the alley. The opposite is true for a left-hander. One example of these hard spares is the three, six and 10-pin leave, or two, four and seven for left handers. Here a hook or curve ball bowler has an advantage. The ideal way to convert the spare is by angling the ball across the alley from the left side. It should catch the right half of the three pin, then straighten out to take care of the six and 10. The straight ball bowler has to rely on the six taking out the 10.

Shough's Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

March 23 marks the day of the 13th annual running of the world renown Sebring 12-hour Endurance Sports Car Race, sponsored by the Automobile Race Club of Florida.

This year officials of the country's most outstanding road racing are boasting that 1963 will offer the American sports car enthusiast the finest racing program ever held in the United States.

New bleacher seats along the twisting road course will give the average spectator the finest view ever of the international field of Grand Prix cars, featuring such famous name drivers as Bruce McLaren of New Zealand, Phil Hill of the United States, Ritchie Ginther of the U.S. and Graham Hill of England.

Over the past 13 years, the average speed of the cars for the 12-hour run has increased from 66.95 mph in 1950 to last year's 89.142 mph, held by Joe Bonnier and Lucien Bianchi, driving for Italy's famous Ferrari team. The average car completing the 5.2 mile course, which is laid out over an abandoned air strip, is expected to consume 300 gallons of gas, two gallons of oil, require at least two sets of brake changes and approximately six full sets of tires.

This year's Sebring will also feature a new world championship for specially built prototype cars, which are manufacturers' experimental cars, or pilot models. This is the only track in the United States that will have approval to run this type of car for the coveted world championship points.

The most exciting news is that Ferrari of Italy, manufacturer and designer of what some think to be the world's fastest road-racing cars, will be on hand with three experimental prototypes.

The post's 54 dental officers and four dental interns will commemorate the 52nd anniversary of the Army Dental Corps with open house from 2 to 4 p.m. today at A-14 Dental Clinic in Bldg. 1009.

The anniversary, which falls on Sunday, will be observed at the clinic with demonstrations of the latest dental techniques and displays on preventive dentistry, officials said.

Military personnel and their dependents are invited to attend the open house. Refreshments will be served.

Social Hour

Another anniversary event will be a social hour for dental officers and their guests from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The Infantry Center Dental Section is headed by Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, post dental surgeon. Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant is deputy dental surgeon and post preventive dentistry officer.

There are five dental clinics on the post, in addition to a Dental Service at Martin Army Hospital. The clinics are Dispensary A in Bldg. 65, A-14 in Bldg. 1009, Sand Hill in Bldg. 5401, Harmony Church in Bldg. 5401, and Kelley Hill in Bldg. 9052.

The post Dental Laboratory, under the supervision of Lt. Col. Virgil Woods, constructs all dental prosthetic appliances used at Fort Benning.

A preventive dentistry program includes instruction for patients on the practice of proper oral hygiene.

A dental intern training program is conducted by the post dental surgeon in affiliation with Martin Army Hospital. Four interns are trained each year. They are taught by members of the local dental staff.

Several eminent specialists from the southeastern area of the United States visit the post at regular intervals for consultation with the interns and dental officers.

Fort Benning is one of several Army installations conducting dental training by provision of the surgeon general of the Army. The program is approved by the American Dental Association's Council on Dental Education.

The idea of the Dental Corps dates back to 1859 and Dr. Edward Maynard who is considered father of the corps.

Dr. Maynard presented his concept of an Army Dental Corps to President Fillmore. The Otey Bill, passed by Congress in 1901, authorized the appointment of one dental surgeon for every 1,000 men in the Army. Thirty positions for dentists were established at that time, the first in the Army. However, history reveals that there were dentists in the Confederate Army.

The Army Dental Corps was formally established by law March 3, 1911.

From the original 30 dentists, the corps has grown to approximately 2,000 dental officers.

Prevention Emphasis Of New Army Dentists

By Lt. Col. H. D. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

On March 6, the Army Dental Corps will celebrate its 52nd anniversary.

For most of the 52 years our emphasis was on the monumental task of correcting the ravages of decay and periodontal disease. More recently we have switched our emphasis to prevention. Week in and week out we hammer on this theme, not because it is a duty but because it is something in which we wholeheartedly believe.

How much better it is to chew with your own sound, healthy teeth. Just as an experiment, try eating a meal without using your teeth. Yes, it can be done, using your lips and tongue.

When you try it — if you do — you will find that it is most uncomfortable and the result leaves a great deal to be desired. By the time you finish a meal, your jaws will ache, your tongue will be sore and the roof of your mouth raw. Your stomach may rebel because much of your food would be swallowed in big pieces. A dog's system is built for this gulping of food in large chunks but yours is not.

What have we proved? Not much really. We have shown that you can survive without teeth. We have shown also that survival in this way is so uncomfortable that it takes the pleasure out of mealtime. It would result in such poor dietary habits that it could eventually so weaken your natural defenses as to be a threat to life itself.

Our preventive dentistry program is intended to make this discomfort a thing of the past. Loss of teeth, gum disease and tooth decay can be prevented. Your dentist can show you how, but only you can get the results.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

Low Travel Rate Asked For Soldier

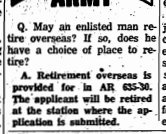
WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Half-price air coach fares for military personnel on leave have been proposed to the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) by American Airlines.

Similar to the leave fares now in effect on railroads and buses, the serviceman would need only to be in uniform and present a copy of his orders or leave papers to purchase the ticket. He would also be required to travel in uniform.

The airline has asked CAB, which must approve all airline fares, to approve the plan with an effective date of March 17.

American's proposal would give the 50 per cent reduction on one-way fares as well as on round-trips. The rail and bus leave fares are limited to round-trip tickets.

All travel on the reduced air coach tickets would be on a space available basis with no advance reservations.



Q. May an enlisted man retire overseas? If so, does he have a choice of place to retire?

A. Retirement overseas is provided for in AR 635-30. The applicant will be retired at the station where the application is submitted.

Conventional Weapons Emphasis Said 'Gratifying' by Col. Summers

One hundred - sixty Columbus Rotarians meeting at the Supper Club at Fort Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess Feb. 20 were told that new equipment in the Army doesn't "just happen."

The speaker was Col. William M. Summers, president of The Infantry Board.

"We hear a great deal about the tremendous advances that have been made in military weaponry, the exotic or sophisticated weapons systems that modern technology has created since World War II and Korea," Col. Summers said.

"However," he added, "cold war activities of recent years have pointed more and more to the need of applying our national technological capabilities towards the significant improvement of weapons and equipment to enable our Army to fight so-called conventional or unconventional wars and also to provide, through the Military Assistance Program, an equipment advantage to our Allies whose cold wars sometimes become quite warm."

This shift of emphasis to equipment is gratifying to the Infantryman, Col. Summers said.

"We are now seeing some of the new material resulting from our research and development program begin to flow off the production lines and into the hands of our fighting or combat soldiers," the speaker said.

"But new equipment doesn't just happen . . . it must be conceived of, funded, developed in prototype, tested to ensure that it will do the job desired, modified as required and then procured, distributed and supported in the field before it can be considered operational," he continued.

"Three agencies at Fort Benning are playing important parts in bringing about new developments that relate primarily to the Infantry as a combat arm," the colonel said. "They are the U. S. Army Infantry School, U. S. Army Infantry Combat Developments Agency and the U. S. Army Infantry Board."

"From the point of view of Infantry requirements, Fort Benning is real grass - roots country," Col. Summers said. "The school and the agency, working together, determine requirements and recommend the development of new weapons and other equipment the Infantry needs to fight with, how and where it will fit into organizations, and how Infantrymen will fight with it. Sometimes these projections take the form of real crystal balling."

"Working closely with the school and the agency," he added, "the Infantry Board monitors and assists in the development of new material and at the proper time conducts realistic service tests. In this way we determine whether or not the developed item meets the military characteristics for which it was designed."

Col. Summers illustrated his address with color slides of weapons and equipment that have been tested by the board in recent months, and some that are currently undergoing tests.

SGT. ESTELL

Airborne's 'Tac' NCOs Busy Men

Handling about 900 Airborne students a week is only a job for the tactical NCO's of the 45th Company, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

One of these NCO's is SFC Lawrence Estell. He and the other NCO's must draw and prepare all Airborne equipment for their charges for the four week course. They must also make sure all students are housed and fed properly.

Sgt. Estell must make sure his men have been processed in properly at the beginning of their training and processed out upon the successful completion of their training.

Sgt. Estell enlisted in the Army in 1947 and was sent to Fort Dix for basic training.

After graduating he was sent to the 82nd Airborne Division and later volunteered for Airborne Training.

At the outbreak of the Korean Conflict, SFC Estell volunteered for Ranger Airborne training and later served with the 2nd Airborne Ranger Company in Wan Ju, Korea.

Wounded in action in 1951, he was sent to the Army hospital at Camp Attiberry, Ind., for treatment. Upon release in 1952, he became an instructor here at Fort Benning with the Ranger Training Command.

During the following years he was assigned to Fort Knox, The Yukon Command, and the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky.

He has been assigned to Fort Benning for the last 5 years.

Shotgun Team Wins Tourney

Shotgunners from the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit walked off with many of the individual prizes and the team award at the Flamingo Skeet Tournament at West Palm Beach, Fla.

MSgt. Henry Shaw was runner-up in the .410 match with 47 birds out of 50. He won the AA classification in the .20 gauge with 99X100.

PFC Neal DiScianni took the AA classification in the .28 gauge with 49 birds out of 50. Maj. Henry Parr was second in the .12 gauge with 100 straight birds.

The trio combined with Maj. Robert Gaches and SFC Ken Gilbert to take the team match with a total of 492 birds out of a possible 500.

SFC Blankenship Ties National Pistol Mark

National pistol champion SFC William Blankenship of the Marksmanship Training Unit tied a national record as he ground his way to the individual championship at the Snowflake Pistol Tournament which ended here Feb. 24.

Blankenship had a three-gun, three-day total of 2659, only three points shy of the national mark for an aggregate. He was 33 points ahead of his nearest competitor, SFC William Horton of the MTU, who placed first in the Master Class with 2628.

The MTU handgunners made a clean sweep of the team matches, taking all four of the fired events and establishing a new national record in the hard ball team with a four-man score of 1148 with 37 shots in the x-ring. The National Rifle Association only recently decided to recognize marks set with .45 caliber pistols with service ammunition.

Blankenship's try at a national record came in the .45 caliber aggregate when posted a four-match total of 887 with 47 shots in the x-ring. This equaled the score posted by the Air Force's Capt. Franklin Green, who shot his last June at the River Bend Gun Club match at Norcross, Ga.

En route to his individual win, Blankenship also took all three of the sub - aggregate titles. He won the .45 with his 887, the Center Fire aggregate and the .22 caliber aggregate with identical scores of 886.

The Army's Red Team entry took two of the team events -- the .22 caliber and Center Fire with 1177 points and 1132 points respectively. On the Red club were MSgt. George Snavely, SFC Leland Wessel, SSgt. Robert Wilford and SFC John Lingle.

Army Green won the .45 match with 1162 points. Gunners were SFC R. L. Cochran, SSgt. James McNally, SFC Barry Slack an SFC Robert L. Jones.

Army Green, coached by MSgt. Arthur Purser, established the Hard Ball record with their 1148, although they were only two x-ring shots better than Third Army's Blue Team.

On the record-setting team were SSgt. Floyd Thomson, SFC William Horton, MSgt. Richard Stineman and SSgt. Herschel Anderson.

There were 93 entries and 16 teams firing in the event sponsored by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol club and sanctioned by the NRA.

Both the MTU and Third Army shooters will depart post in the next two weeks for Florida where they will participate in the annual Dixie Matches at Jacksonville and the National Mid-Winter Championships at Tampa.

FLAG AT HALF-STAFF

When flown at half-staff the flag first should be hoisted to the peak and then lowered to half staff. The flag should again be raised to the peak before it is lowered.

LT. DAWKINS ADDS LAURELS . . . First Lt. Peter M. Dawkins (L), renowned football player, recently added to his laurels here when he was named honor graduate of The Infantry School's Ranger course. Dawkins, twice a football All-American and winner of the 1958 Heisman Trophy, 1959 U.S. Military Academy graduate, Rhodes Scholar and one of the few U.S. citizens to become a star in the English soccer world, finished at the top of a class of 124 other Army officers. Grenade Launcher Mag Topic

The March - April issue of Infantry Magazine, published at The Infantry School, features an article on the M-79 grenade launcher.

Expected to appear March 1, the magazine will provide the only training literature available on the new M-79.

The article was prepared by The Infantry School Weapons Department and supplies a complete training program which a field unit can use in its instruction with the recently issued grenade launcher.

Academy Applicants Being Tested on Post

Candidates for admission to the U. S. Military Academy in July are undergoing academic, medical and physical aptitude examinations here.

Identical examinations are being held simultaneously at approximately 35 other Army and Air Force installations in the U. S. and overseas and will end on Saturday.

The local examinations, hosted by the 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Col. Richard W. Keyes, are being conducted by a board of officers, of which Lt. Col. William L. Koob Jr., brigade executive officer, is president.

Col. Roland M. Gieszer, commander of the 2nd Cadet Regiment at the Academy arrived Monday to act as adviser to the board. He was joined Wednesday by Cadet Lloyd T. Asbury, cadet commander of the 2nd Cadet Regiment who is assisting in briefings on cadet life.

Permission to take the examinations is limited to duly nominated candidates who have been nominated from one of the sources provided by law and to whom letters of nomination have been issued by the Department of the Army, Washington, D. C.

The authorized strength of the Corps of cadets and all sources of appointment and admission are specified by law. About 750 new cadets are admitted each year. The largest quota, representing about 85 per cent of the total, is alloted to the various states and congressional districts for which the nominations are made by senator and representatives.

Each senatorial seat and each congressional district may be represented at the Military Academy by no more than four cadets at any one time and new cadets may be admitted only as vacancies occur.

Applicants seeking a congressional nomination should apply directly to their senators or representative. Col. Koob advised that this be done a year in advance of the intended date of admission to West Point.

Only one class is admitted each year, the date of admission being the first Tuesday in July.

Smaller quotas, all of which are competitive, are provided by law for enlisted men of the Army and Air Force (Regular and Reserve components), sons of deceased veterans whose death resulted from war service disabilities during World War I or II or between June 27, 1950, and Jan. 31, 1955, for sons of enlisted men or officers who are now, or who were at time of death, members of the Regular Army or the Regular components of the Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard, and for honor graduates of military or honor naval schools.

Col. Koob stated that, although the standards for admission are necessarily high, any healthy, intelligent young American graduating from high school with good grades should be able to qualify for admission.

The examinations consist of the College Board Tests in mathematics, English composition and scholastic aptitude, a series of physical aptitude examinations to measure coordination and development, and a thorough medical examination.

College credits are sufficient in some cases to exempt candidates from certain portions of the academic examination, but all candidates must take the scholastic aptitude, physical aptitude and medical examinations.

All young men interested in a military career with preparation at West Point are urged by Col. Koob to address a letter or postcard to the Adjutant General, ATTN: AGPB-M, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C., or to the Director of Admission and Registrar, U S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., requesting a copy of the West Point Catalogue.

The publication furnishes detailed information on all sources of appointment, the academic and physical requirement for admission, and outline of the course of studies, and general information and history of the U.S. Military Academy.

11th Air Assault Division's Insigne Becomes Official

An organizational insigne for Fort Benning's newest unit, the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), now being assembled for testing here, has been approved by the Department of the Army.

The patch is not new, being an almost exact duplicate of the insigne seen on the colors of the inactivated 11th Airborne Division which fought in the South Pacific during World War II.

Monday marked the 20th anniversary of the 11th Airborne's activation. Members of the 11th Air Assault Division observed their parent unit's birthday by making preparations for their assigned mission: to develop further the Army's air mobile concept for ground combat.

The patch being worn by the history-making division members is a shield of royal blue. A red circle is centered on the shield and contains the number 11 in white. The circle is bordered in white with white wings rising from it. The words "Air Assault" are in red capital letters at the top of the patch.

Nicknamed Angels

The 11th Airborne, nicknamed "The Angels," was activated at Camp Mackall, N. C., Feb. 25, 1943, under the command of Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Swing.

May 1944, saw the division sail from San Francisco for New Guinea. On Nov. 11, 1944, the division landed at Leyte Beach, Philippine Islands, 40 miles south of Tacloban.

In three months of bitter fighting, the division cleared the treacherous mountain pass over 5,700 enemy troops.

On January 26, 1945, the 11th landed on Luzon, P. I., and started a drive toward Manila. In five days the division fought its way from Nasgubu Beach to Manila, a distance of 69 miles, capturing Fort McKinley, Clark Field and Nichols Field. For this achievement, the division was cited by Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, then commanding general of the Eighth Army, and almost every unit within the division was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation.

Behind Manila, the paratroopers swung south. In a lightning air, the division made a daring raid on Los Banos Internment Camp behind the Japanese lines and successfully rescued 2,147 internees. This accomplished, they cleared the Japanese from Southern Luzon, eliminating enemy strongholds in Ternate, Mt. Macolod and Mt. Malepunyo.

Near the close of the Luzon campaign, one reinforced battalion, designated "Task Force Gypsy," was attached to the Sixth Army to jump at Aparri in northern Luzon to seal off the Cagayan Valley and prevent the annihilation of enemy forces remaining there.

During the action of Luzon, the division participated in combat parachute jumps at Tayguytay Ridge, Los Banos and Aparri. It was at Aparri that the 11th Airborne successfully completed the only combat glider landing made in the Pacific Theater.

The division landed in Japan on Aug. 30, 1945, and occupied an area in and around Yokohama. They remained 1945, when they moved to northern Japan to control almost half of the island of Honshu and all the island of Hokkaido.

The division returned to the U. S. in 1949, Fort Campbell, Ky. In 1950, the 87th Regimental Combat Team went to Korea where it continued the traditions, high achievements and valiant service of the 11th Airborne.

The division went to Europe in January, 1956, and was inactivated in 1958.

The air mobile concept to be tested by the 11th Air Assault Division calls for the use of simple, rugged helicopters capable of operating with minimum base facilities.

First a General, Now He's Doctor

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Although he was not a licensed physician, there is evidence that George Washington practiced medicine.

According to the book "Doctors Philatelic," by Oscar Gottfried, the first President performed many medical acts.

As the master of a large somewhat isolated plantation, Washington was like a captain on a ship who must administer to his people.

He once administered an infusion of scarlet pimpernel to prevent hydrophobia, according to Gottfried.

Two Teams Are Feted By Artillery

Members of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, honored their pistol and basketball teams with awards at a banquet recently.

The individual awards, presented by Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, battalion commander, were for sportsmanship shown in recent brigade and post athletic events in which they capably represented the battalion.

The pistol team took top honors in the annual brigade matches and the basketball team ended the post major unit basketball season in a three-way tie for third place.

Accompanying Col. McClain as special guests at the affair, held in Headquarters Battery mess, were Maj. James W. Cannon, battalion executive officer, and Maj. Herbert E. Knight, battalion S-3. Hosting the affair were Capt. Allison H. Patrick Jr., Headquarters Battery commander, and Sgt. John E. Price, mess steward.

MAH 'SWEETHEART . . . Named "Sweetheart of Martin Army Hospital" recently was Mrs. Gary W. Howerton, wife of PFC Howerton, a member of Company D, 87th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division. Mrs. Howerton was the winner of a Valentine sweetheart contest conducted at the hospital by the American Red Cross in which patients submitted pictures of wives, daughters or sweethearts. Patients on the wards were judges.
