WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The United States plans to send astronauts into orbit for three months at a time to see how long man can tolerate weightlessness in space.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said the trips are to be made in modified Gemini and Apollo spacecraft.

The primary purpose of Project Gemini, to start early next year, is to enable astronauts to rendezvous in orbit. Project Apollo spacecraft are to land men on the moon.

NASA said that if a man succeeds in tolerating weightlessness for three months he probably would be capable of a 12-month trip to a planet and back.

A spokesman said a return mission to Mars might be feasible in 1973 or 1975.

Local Reservists Now Attending ROA Conference

They are Dr. Harold S. Tate (Lt. Col. USAR), educational adviser at The Infantry School, and George T. Brown (Lt. Col. USAR) of Columbus, vice president of Chapter 38.

The Mid - Winter Conference is one of two annual events conducted by the organization. A convention is held each summer, according to Maj. Marion E. Mills of Albert Lea, Minn., president of Chapter 38.

Accuracy On Tax Returns Is Essential

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Accuracy and completeness in filling out federal income tax returns are more important this year than ever, according to Vaughn W. Evans, director of Internal Revenue.

He said the Internal Revenue's conversion to an electronic computer-maintained account system precludes manual correction of deficiences in returns which may have been acceptable in the past.

All applicable items on the return must be filled in and in the proper sequence. This means totals from attached forward to the face of the return.

If schedules in the return are not sufficient for the needs schedules must follow the official format; contain all the required information and be attached in the same sequence as on the tax return.

Returns or schedules reproduced by copying machines and other devices should meet the standard of paper quality and legibility of the official forms.

Director Evans said computer processing returns is on an assembly line basis with data first placed on punch cards and then on magnetic tape. Anticipated benefits and economies for Internal Revenue and the public cannot be realized if any extensive editing or other manipulation has to be done.

Flight Status Reviews Set During April

The annual Department of the Army Flight Status Review Boards will convene beginning in the last week of April to screen the personnel and flying records of all Army aviators on active duty.

These review boards are an integral part of the Army's Flight Status Selection System which is designed to insure that only qualified officers are retained on flying status.

Throughout the years, Flight Status Review Board action has been directed toward improving the overall quality of aviation officer personnel by the suspension of those aviators who do not measure up to acceptable standards.

This does not mean that aviators are judged solely on flying skills. The review boards work on the basis of "future potential" whereby an Army aviator is considered both on the basis of his flying skill and his potential as an Army officer for future leadership or key staff jobs.

The findings and recommendations of the Flight Status Review Board are based on an objective evaluation of the individual aviator's flight record files and other official personnel records available within Department of the Army. Individual aviators do not appear before the board although they are encouraged to submit any official information for the board's consideration which they feel may not already be a part of their records.

Army aviators recommended for suspension from flying status by Flight Status Review Board action will be notified by Department of the Army through appropriate command channels. Suspension will normally be effective 90 days following date of notification.

The boards may further recommend that certain aviators be carried in a conditional retention status for one year. Final action in the case of aviators conditionally retained would be taken by a subsequent board.

Major commands and career branches authorized aviators will be requested to nominate aviators whose future aviation potential is considered marginal.

Previous Flight Status Review Boards have been convened at the Department of the Army in Fiscal Years 1957, 1959, 1960, 1961 and 1962.

Post Group Will Assist NATO Test

Five Fort Benning personnel will help test the Infantry's infrared weapon sight at North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) field trials in Denmark March 18 to 20.

The group will be headed by Maj. George M. Johnson of Woods, Mich., test officer for the Small Arms Division of The Infantry Board.

1st Sgt. Delbert L. Wilson, a He will be accompanied by small arms instructor with The Infantry School's Weapons Department; Sgt. Norman Purinton, Sgt. David Buckingham and PFC Thaddeus Knapik, all Board's Small Arms Division.

Purpose of the trials is to compare the capabilities of various infrared weapon sights of participating NATO countries. In addition, testing will be conducted to determine the capability of each country to use the weapon sight of another country on its rifles.

17 Civilians Recognized For Efforts

Seventeen Infantry Center civilian employees have been recognized for attaining outstanding job ratings, for maintaining sustained superior performance or for submitting money-saving suggestions. Receiving outstanding job ratings were John D. Holland, Mrs. Ruth E. Brown, Mrs. Doris B. Greer, all employees of The Infantry Center Adjutant General Section.

Mrs. Annette H. Phelps, G-1 Section; Eugene Graham, Finance and Accounting Office, and Hugh E. Cook, both of the Special Services Section.

Employees receiving checks for $150 for sustained superior performance, in addition to the certificate for outstanding job ratings, were Mrs. Virginia F. Davis and Mrs. Eleanor M. Major, both of the Adjutant General Section, and Otto W. Chitwood, Finance and Accounting Office.

Mrs. Leola B. Lawrence, an employee of the Adjutant General Section, received $100 for sustained superior performance.

They are David H. Buckner, $50, Wesley F. Nail, $50, Henry E. Zeranski, $15, Edgar N. Byrd Jr., $15.

Also receiving $50 for an adopted suggestion was Thomas W. O'Byrne, Adjutant General Section.

Carl Flicker, Special Services Section, received a letter of appreciation. David H. Freeman of The Infantry School Field Printing Plant, received a $100 Incentive Award for a suggestion which is expected to save $950 annually.

Air Travel Plans Told

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department told commercial airlines they can expect up to $205.1 million from it for international passenger and cargo contracts in fiscal year '64.

At the same time it put more emphasis on jet-powered planes but told airlines that civilian requirements, not military business, should govern their decisions along those lines.

The $205.1 figure compares with an estimate of $214.9 for the same purposes in the current fiscal year. The commercial airlines are used to supplement the airlift capabilities of the Military Air Transport Service.

For 1964 and beyond, military policy requires that all commercial carrier airlift used under contract be jet or turboprop airplanes. An exception is made where the carriers operate in areas where such planes may not be economically or operationally feasible.

The Pentagon is encouraging transition to turbine powered planes by the commercial lines not only to speed up transportation of military passengers and cargoes but also to accelerate modernization of commercial airlines whose equipment might be needed by the military in a future emergency.

The commercial lines were cautioned, however, that military requirements alone would not be sufficient to justify procurement of more turbine-powered planes.

Arnold Palmer afforded an insight to his winning ways on the golf course when he recommended to others that they "hit hard" when putting.

Palmer contends it is better to aim for the cup, hit the ball hard and take the chance of going by the hole, rather than stroking too lightly, stopping short of the hole, and never knowing whether the ball might have gone in or not!

Arnie, the second highest money winner on the tour this season, made the putting suggestion along with others on a series of golf instructions aired by Armed Forces Radio Service in cooperation with Sports Champions, Inc.

Pace Award Is Approved For Officers

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—An annual Pace Award, honoring Frank Pace Jr., Secretary of the Army from 1950 through 1953, has been established to be given to a military officer and a civilian for outstanding contributions while serving in a staff support capacity.

TOP SOLDIER . . . Sp4 Michael McReynolds, Company C, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, was recently chosen Soldier - of-the-Month for TICTC. He is a clerk and processes suggestions for the Incentive Awards Section.

Approved by Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance, the Pace Award consists of a cash award and memento and will be presented annually to an officer in the grade of lieutenant colonel or below and a civilian employee of grade GS-12 or under.

The award is supported by a trust fund set up by a group of private citizens who were members of the Army secretariat during Mr. Pace's term as Secretary.

The Army said recommendations for the award will be submitted to the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel no later than Feb. 15 each year. Selections will be made on a basis of the individual's own efforts rather than on the performance of a staff section he might head.

A new wide tread, track vehicle that is equally at home in snow over the frozen tundras of arctic regions, through swamps or in lakes, recently has been added to Infantry vehicle instruction here.

The M-116, known as "Husky," is an amphibious cargo carrier that can haul a 3,000 pound load, transport 13 passengers, in addition to the driver, or double as an ambulance.

The Vehicle capabilities Committee of The Infantry School Ground Mobility Department is giving students in all leadership courses an orientation and demonstration of the vehicle.

The orientation is part of the committee's instruction on capabilities and limitations of Infantry vehicles, and is given to orientation, career, associate career and refresher classes.

The new vehicle has a fuel capacity of 55 gallons, and maximum speeds of 37 miles per hour on land and four miles per hour in water. Its range is approximately 600 miles.

The Husky has a metal shroud on each side designed with slits to permit free passage of water, increasing its speed when used amphibiously. The slits also permit sand or dirt to drop through the track, making the tread self-cleaning when operating on land.

A winterizing kit provides fibre glass windows and two heaters. The heaters can be operated separately as needed, one for the driver's compartment and one for the cargo compartment when used to transport passengers.

Special Controls

Driver controls and steering equipment are designed to make it possible for a driver wearing arctic clothing to enter the access hatch, handle the knobs while wearing winter mittens and manipulate pedals in winter footgear.

The versatile M-116 has an adjustable floor in the cargo compartment. To carry cargo, the floor is used in a level position. With the floor in this position, the compartment can accommodate four litter patients.

When used to carry troops, the floor drops in the center for foot room and there are seats along each side. The compartment will seat 13 men in normal gear or 10 wearing winter gear.

New Radio Gives Hike In Range

The Army has recently announced that it has completed development and testing of an ultra-rugged, lightweight jeep radio which is a considerable improvement in long range combat communications between U.S ground forces.

Designated the AN-GRC-106, the 100-pound transistorized set is half the size of the old unit and is the first Army jeep radio to provide dependable 50-mile voice communication over severe terrain obstructions.

The set is composed of two units, one on top of the other, and operates on any one of 28,000 high frequency channels.

The set features a simple system of digital tuning in which a channel is selected by setting a series of knobs to prescribed numbers. Advanced circuitry including "single sideband" transmission, accounts for the improved range of the unit.

The AN-GRC-106 was completed in two years under a high priority test and development program undertaken by the U.S. Army Electronics Research and Development Laboratory, Fort Monmouth, N.J., and its contractor; General Dynamics Electronics, Rochester, N.Y.

Legal Assistance Officer Can Aid Money Problems

You might as well call a spade a spade and face facts when you are in a financial jam and more money is needed to pay off debts.

Legal advisers say it's at this point you better take a careful look at what's been going on and where you are headed, financially.

If you fail to take a reading at this point, they say chances are you'll become a statistic in your particular service and sink into a morass of legal entanglements.

Generally, your commanding officer's first knowledge of your problem reaches him by mail and goes something like this:

". . . we realize you are not a collection agency, but since this indebtedness reflects discredit upon the service, we . . ."

If the evidence indicates you have been lax in handling your financial affairs, your chances of promotion may be diminished and it may even be retrieved on your efficiency report.

Another thought to keep in mind is that Article 134, Uniform Code of Military Justice, makes punishable the military offense of wrongful and dishonorable failure to pay a debt (or debts).

If the facts in your case disclose a possible violation of Article 134, or any other provision of the code, you are subject to investigation, administrative action, and punitive action to include, where appropriate, trial by court-martial.

The minute you find outgo totaling more than income, get advice from your legal assistance officer or your civilian attorney. The services have trained lawyers at all levels and their job is to help you.

"It can be tough," an officer said, "if the serviceman has tied himself into financial knots with over-extended credit, unwise contracts and loans from illegal, unlicensed loan companies."

(This is the second in a series of 10 articles prepared by the Legal Assistance Division Office of the Judge Advocate General.)

Vets Sought For Civilian Jobs Here

The jobs — 85 in total — are restricted to veterans with no specific length of experience required.

Veterans will be used in the new test division's messes to release military personnel for more essential duties.

Although there is no particular experience requirement, applicants will be ranked according to proportionate experience in such work as preparing vegetables or other raw foods, cooking, assisting with cooking or baking, waiting on tables, bus boy duties, washing or cleaning kitchen utensils, or performing other related duties in mess halls or kitchens.

Manuals, Training Programs; Subject Schedules, and Training Tests. It also coordinates the Infantry portion of the Army MOS Evaluation Program and reviews official training literature from other service schools and agencies.

The primary work of the section is not providing the basic concepts included in this literature, but coordinating and editing material prepared by The Infantry School's Instruction Departments. The Section is responsible for 56 different manuals ranging from the Combat Training of the Individual Soldier and Patrolling to the Infantry, Airborne, and Mechanized Division Brigades.

MAILING BRANCH

One of EPO's most important missions, that of providing Infantrymen throughout the world with current Infantry School publications, is executed by Sgt. James Lyon's Mailing Branch.

Last month Sgt. Lyon, Sgt. Milton May, and PFC Donald Vargas mailed an entire ton of literature.

The section also provides answers to questions from all corners — from Infantry division staffs to curious little boys — by coordinating the answers for specific questions with the school's Instruction Departments and then sending replies.

By coordinating, editing, and creating the many items necessary to convey current Infantry concepts, the Editorial and Pictorial Office is able to accomplish its many diverse missions — and to provide "Service to the School" and to our Infantrymen throughout the world.

Preventive Maintenance Can Save You From Many Auto Worries

There you are driving merrily down the road when—spat, spat! Old Betsy comes to an unexpected halt.

What to do? First, get her off the road if at all possible. Second, don't panic. If you lose your head you may overlook something easily remedied. Even 36-year highway veterans run out of gas through oversight or a defective gauge.

Many drivers assume the worst thinking their stalled car is seriously and expensively disabled. Chances are the ailment is minor. A great many unplanned stops can be attributed to a loose or wet wire and if these do not stop your car, they can cause failure of such accessories as headlights making further travel unsafe.

A road kit of small spare parts like a fan belt bulbs and fuses will help get you rolling again with the least mess or fuss.

Preventative medicine, however, can often avoid exasperating, expensive breakdowns.

What are the most frequent causes? According to findings, in addition to defective wiring, they are usually the result of neglected in the following areas:

Neglect of the cooling system—It's easily maintained yet motorists often ignore it completely. What to do? A simple process: have the system drained and flushed in Spring and Fall.

Topping off the radiator with liquids is not enough, however. Let the service man, who does this daily, check your water hoses, their clamps, water pump efficiency, radiator cap and potential leaks in the radiator.

If your car as a heater utilizing the circulating engine coolant on the hot side of its cycle (and most do), this is another inspection item.

Failure to change oil and oil filter — Most motorists have been told the importance of clean oil and oil changes, but it is so easy to forget the date and mileage of the last change, even with the little sticker pasted to the driver's door-frame.

What numbers are written on yours? Next time you tune up, know the summer and winter "weight" numbers of your oil, as well. And installing a new filter doesn't take much more time than putting air in the tires.

Failure to maintain tires. They should be studied with an eye for unevenly worn treads or bad scuffing. Your mechanic can read these symptoms as evidence of unbalanced wheels or misaligned "front end." These can result in costly replacement of tires or mechanical parts.

While your man is under there, he can check on various rods and fittings in the steering linkage. Failure of the steering system at almost any speed above zero can be disastrous.

Failure to maintain the braking system — Assuming your wheels turn efficiently, they need powerful braking. Your mechanic knows the trouble spots. If brake cylinders or lines are leaking fluid, braking power is dripping away.

Broken cords fail in an instant if all the fluid spurted from a rupture. Removal of wheels will show if brake linings are worn or brake shoes are dragging or misaligned.

Next time you are parked or stopped for a signal, press down steadily on the brake pedal, and don't let up. Does it go within two inches of the floor, or slowly give way under your pressure? If so, get it to your service man immediately, but drive slowly.

Refugee's Tipoff Caught Castro

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A Cuban refugee's tip last September was one of the key clues leading to the United States' discovery of Soviet offensive missiles in Cuba, according to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The refugee gave U. S. authorities the first description of equipment that could be equated with a medium - range ballistic missile.

"The third and final stage in our detection of strategic missiles resulted from careful evaluation of this refugee's report together with other intelligence," Mr. McNamara said.

VA Reminds NSLI Benefits Are Tax Free

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — National Service Life Insurance dividends received this year or previous years are not taxable income, nor are the proceeds from such policies paid to beneficiaries, the Veterans Administration explained.

However, the VA warned that interest earned by dividends, if left on deposit, is not a benefit and must be declared as income.

The VA also listed a number of its benefits which are not subject to income tax. Among them are education and training allowances for Korean Conflict veterans still in school or training establishments and subsistence payments made to disabled veterans undergoing vocational rehabilitation training.

Disaamy compensaon and pension payments are not taxable, nor are grants to seriously disabled veterans for WWI emergency officers' retirement pay, and all benefits to families of deceased veterans.

Lunar Craft Developed For Testing

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AFPS) — American astronauts will train for a landing on the moon in a kind of "flying bedstead."

Officially known as a "flying simulator," the yet-to-be-built aircraft will give the appearance of a flying bedstead.

According to astronaut M. Scott Carpenter and Dr. Robert B. Voas of the Manned Spacecraft Center at Houston, the weird flyable device is designed to give spacemen the feel of a lunar landing while flying over an American desert.

No Cutback Is Expected In Europe

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Word from the Defense Department indicates there will be no cutback of Army combat troops in Europe this year.

Questioned about a reported cutback, DOD said that only about 15,000 support troops connected with the 40,000-man Berlin crisis buildup in 1961 have been returned. These were personnel associated with logistical support functions for which they are no longer needed.

No combat units have been returned and there are no plans to return any. Nor are there plans for returning additional personnel of any kind during the remainder of this fiscal year. Plans for the Fiscal Year of 1964 have not been completed but DOD does not anticipate other than minor personnel adjustments during that period.

Century-Old Cash Cache Uncovered by Bulldozer

FT. LEONARD WOOD, Mo. (AFPS) — Scraps Missouri's topsoil with a bulldozer and it comes up money.

At least it did for James W. Mace when he was bulldozing soil to be used in Fort Wood's new Capehart housing area. The machine slashed into an object buried in its path and before Mace knew it a dirt bank three-feet high and 50-feet long was sprayed with half-dollars.

They came from one of two boxes of U.S. coins minted between 1858 and 1861, the second of which contained quarters, and half-dimes. With a face value of more than $10 to $20, the coins were estimated by a Springfield, Mo., numismatist to be worth from $2.50 to $30 each.

Efforts to explain the "buried treasure" led local authorities to records of the Pulaski County Missouri Historical Society which revealed that at the outbreak of the Civil War, a fort was established at Waynesville by Maj. Gen. John C. Fremont who commanded the Western Department of the Union Army.

Legend has it that the troops were forgotten by the War Department. Without pay or supplies, they took to living off the countryside and as bushwackers looted and killed without mercy.

Near the site where the coins were found stood the house of a prosperous farmer named Tilley. Like other men of property in that turbulent era, he had the reputation of burying his cash and he was a marked man for the Union deserters.

Historical Society records say that one night in 1862 a band of bushwackers attacked the Tilley farm and demanded his money. When he refused to reveal its hiding place they shot him; he was found lynched the next day. But his money wasn't found; even Mrs. Tilley couldn't locate it.

Mace's discovery caused Fort Wood MP's and engineers to screen the area with mine detectors, probes and picks, but either the two boxes constituted the unfortunate Tilley's cash hoard or he had scattered his wealth. The searchers found nothing but rubble from his farm.

Greasy Pole Test Won By Rhodes

By 3rd Brigade PIO

A greasy pole climbing contest took place recently behind Service Club Two, Sp5 Terry L. Rhodes, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 23d Infantry was the "slicker" who won the prize.

Pvt. Harold Loshaw and Pvt. Roger Severson, both of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 23d. Infantry, were the two runners-up. A sign on top the slippery shaft was the certificate for "best of show."

A prize worth ten dollars went with the honors. Rhodes asked that the prize be split three ways. "Those two worked just as hard as I did," he commented.

According to Sgt. Jesse Green, noncommissioned officer in charge of Service Club Two, the contest is held on the last Saturday of each month.

"We will have to put up a new pole," he said. "The old one broke on that last try."

Service Club Two entertainment includes bingo, amateur hours, United Service Organization tours and sports movies.

VOL. 21, NO. 26 | FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 1963 | FORT BENNING, GA. | 32 Pages — 5c

TIC Shooters Plan to Seek Army Honors

The fundamental measure of a good soldier takes on a new look in the marksmanship realm here March 18-21 when some 100 smallbore marksmen from three major Infantry Center commands initiate the Army - wide company level smallbore rifle and pistol competition.

The .22 caliber matches, inaugurated to promote interest and to raise standards of marksmanship proficiency, will be held at the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit smallbore rifle range beginning at 8 a.m.

Company level teams from The Infantry Center Troop Command, the 151st Engineer Group and the 197th Infantry Brigade will fire during the four days.

One Team

Each company will field one rifle and one pistol team. The winning Infantry Center individual and team targets will be marked by the match director, Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, who also will be responsible for conducting the shoot.

Winning scores then will be forwarded to Third Army Headquarters in the form of a match bulletin where they will compete against all other Third Army post level winners.

The U. S. Continental Army Command (CONARC) then receives the Army area win-

FIRST FIRING OF GIANT HOWITZER
Artillerymen Turn Backs to Devastating Blast

Brigadesmen First in Third Army To Fire New Eight-Inch Howitzer

What is believed to be the first firing in the Third U.S. Army area of the new M-110 eight-inch howitzer was made here recently by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

The weapon, the latest thing in self-propelled artillery, fired repeated rounds of ammunition at targets some two and one-quarter miles away.

Shooting an average one and one-half rounds of ammunition per minute, the booming gun was right on target, spattering pieces of a scrap iron tank far and wide.

With an effective radius of about 260 feet, the 58,000-pound artillery giant has a fragment effect of up to 1,535 feet.

Air-transportable, the huge gun moves on a new chassis at a 35-mile-per-hour clip and is manned by a 13-man crew, each with a particular job.

Upon the command of "Prepare to fire," the crew begins the speedy process of readying the weapon for action.

An azimuth, or direction setting, is made and the degree of the gun's 16-foot barrel is set. Then the ammunition is loaded automatically in the weapon and locked in place for firing.

The projectile is capable of traveling over 11 miles.

Also capable of carrying nuclear warheads, the blast from the weapon leaves little or no recoil as compared to the M-55 howitzer which shifted to the rear when fired.

NEW INSIGNE . . . This is the new patch authorized for wear by members of the 197th Infantry Brigade. The border is blue while the upright cartridge is red. The area surrounding the cartridge is white. Blue in the insigne represents Infantry, while white suggests the brigade's unsoiled history. The red cartridge denotes powerful shock action, and the serrated edge of the white band represents close combat.

Col. Marlin To Succeed Col. McKee

Col. Raymond B. Marlin has been named to succeed Col. William A. McKee as chief of staff of The Infantry Center.

Col. McKee is scheduled to depart this month for the U.S. European Command in France.

In his new position it will be Col. Marlin's responsibility to coordinate all The Infantry Center's staff tasks, including personnel actions, intelligence operations, training, supply and logistical operations.

Since September, 1961, he has directed The Infantry School's Weapons Department.

Was In Europe

Before assuming this position, the new chief of staff served as deputy comptroller of Headquarters, U. S. Army, Europe, in Heidelberg, Germany, for a year.

In July, 1957, he was assigned here as commander of the 1st Battle Group, 30th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division. Col. Marlin moved with the unit to Schweinfurt, Germany, under Operation Gyroscope, the following March.

He became deputy brigade commander of the 3rd Division in January, 1959.

The colonel was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in West Point, N. Y., in 1939, and was commissioned a second lieutenant.

In September, 1943, he became commander of a battalion in the 23rd Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division in Europe, a position he held until he was wounded in September, 1944.

Decorations

For his actions during World War II, Col. Marlin received the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and Purple Heart.

He was assigned to the Operations Division of the War Department General Staff in Poisoning Prevention Week Observance Planned Here

Post personnel will participate in observance of National Prevention of Accidental Poisoning of Children Week March 17 through 23.

Activities scheduled include the showing of films for adults, poster making in the Children's Schools and illustrated talks for students.

At 1 p.m. March 21 and 22 in Theater No. 1, the film "One Day's Poison" will be shown, followed by a question and answer period conducted by doctors from Martin Army Hospital.

Decrease Seen

Officials report there has been a marked decrease in the number of cases of accidental poisoning among children during recent months.

A breakdown reveals that more than half of the cases were children finding and taking aspirin. Most of the cases were children between 2 and 3 years old. There were more boys than girls in the group.

Accidental poisoning of children goes on throughout the year, but is primarily a seasonal thing, Maj. Anna A. Turek, chief Army health nurse, said.

During the flu and cold season, young children find aspirin on the bedside table, in cabinets easily accessible to their exploration, and in the case of "baby aspirin," perhaps even in the nursery, she added.

Many parents do not think of the familiar aspirin tablet as a potential child killer the major said.

In the spring, aspirin and cold remedies give way to fertilizers, detergents and insecticides as prime killers of children, the officer stated.

One source of accidental poisoning in children, cosmetics, is not seasonal, Maj. Turek said. There is always within reach of small children, a temptingly beautiful but dangerous array of lotions, creams, and lipsticks, she added.

It is not enough to put items that could harm children in a closed cabinet or on a high shelf, the nurse added.

Parents must not underestimate the physical agility nor the natural inquisitiveness of young children, Maj. Turek said.

"Wherever I go," she said, "I plead with people to keep all potential child killers in a locked cabinet. I especially like to talk to home builders.

President Kennedy Urges Fund Drive Participation

Major unit commanders are working hard to obtain maximum volunteer participation in the 1963 National Health Agency and Federal Joint Crusade Campaign, according to Col. Michael Pavlo, project officer.

President John F. Kennedy has urged federal personnel "to make a substantial contribution to the National Health Agencies Campaign."

The president pointed out that "no family in our nation is immune to the tragedy of disease or disability" and contributions provide the National Health Agencies "with the means to continue the fight for better health for all."

The fund drive, which will continue until the end of March, will now concentrate on the March 31 payday weekend to conclude its campaign.

All military personnel and federal civilian employees are asked to contribute if they did not do so during February.

Matches

ners' scores and the Army smallbore company level champions will be determined.

Besides continental U.S. participation, the Army Air Defense Command, major overseas commands, the Army Reserves and the Army National Guard are invited to participate.

Breaking away from the standard procedure of the higher command taking the better shooters from the subordinate teams to represent the higher command, this new match will see the original company level teams stay as a unit throughout the program.

The announcement of the Army team and individual winners, and the presentation of the Continental Army commanders' rotating trophies will be made at the Army Rifle and Pistol Championships here in June.

Col. Marlin

Washington from January, 1945 to October, 1946, and then moved to Hawaii where he was deputy chief of staff of U. S. Army, Pacific for 32 months.

In March, 1953, he returned to Washington and served in the Office of the Comptroller until July, 1955, when he entered the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

After graduating in 1956, Col. Marlin served in the Office of the Vice Chief of Staff for a year before coming to Fort Benning and the 3rd Infantry Division.

The colonel is married to the former Miss Frances Hoppough of Rochester, N. Y. They have three daughters, Linda, 21, Karen, 16, and Cristen, 8.

Smithsonian Now Shows Spacecraft

The capsule was presented to the Smithsonian on Feb. 20, the first anniversary of Col. John H. Glenn's historic flight.

The mementos will be permanently displayed in the Air and Space Building of the National Air Museum.

Philip S. Hopkins, director of the National Air Museum, said the Museum staff was deeply grateful for the opportunity to preserve and display the historic spacecraft as a perpetual reminder of the great and continuing achievements of American science and engineering.

Army Has New Unit In Panama

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army has sent a company of Special Forces paratroopers from Fort Bragg, N.C., to the Panama Canal Zone to form the nucleus of a new counter-insurgency fighting unit.

The mission of the paratroopers is to form marauding forces of resistance behind enemy lines, with the support of the population, whenever a Latin American government is under attack and requests assistance from the United States.

Although the unit could be transported to Latin American countries from the United States almost as quickly, the Army believes it important for the troopers to become oriented to the language and customs of the region in which they will operate.

Shotgun Team Takes Florida Skeet Matches

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—Shotgun experts from the Marksmanship Training Unit won all of the team events at the Royal Palm Open Skeet Shoot here last weekend.

They took the five-man team event with a combined total of 495 birds out of a possible 500. Maj. Henry Parr and SFC Kenneth Gilbert captured the two-man .410 gauge team match. Gilbert teamed up with M-Sgt. Henry Shaw to grab the two-man .28 gauge event.

Sgt. Gilbert was the .28 gauge champion and Maj. Parr came in second in this event.

11th Gets Another New Unit

Troop B (Air), Third Squadron, 17th Cavalry, arrived here Monday, marking the last stage of its transfer from the Army Aviation Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., to the new 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

With an authorized of 33 officers and 115 enlisted men, the unit came on the reservation via the pontoon bridge across the Chattahoochee River, and was met by members of an advanced party which arrived last week.

Most of the men made the trip by privately owned vehicles, and were escorted to their billets where they began unpacking.

The unit will be headquartered in Bldg. 1320.

4 Turkish Officers Visit Here

Argentina's Army Chief Tours Post

Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, under command of Capt. William E. Trent of Austin Tex., will fire the salute, while The Infantry Center Band, under the baton of CWO (Chief Warrant Officer) Clyde W. White of Richmond, Va., renders four ruffles and flourishes.

Brig. Gen. Nicolas Candido Hure, chief of a special study group on reorganization of the Argentine Army; Lt. Col. Luis Pedro Garcia, assistant operations officer in the G-3 Division, and Maj. Alfredo Oscar Saint Jean, aide to Gen. Ongania, are accompanying the general.

Gen. Ongania visited The Infantry Center's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, also commandant of The Infantry School, following the honors.

After a series of briefings and orientations on the history, mission and organization of The Infantry Center and School, he saw U. S. Army officer candidates negotiate a leader's reaction course.

Gen. Ongania was guest of honor at an official reception and dinner Thursday at the Main Officers' Open Mess Supper Club.

This morning he will go to Wilson Field to watch Infantry School parachute training.

After a mid-morning visit to the 2nd Infantry Division in the Sand Hill area, the Argentina general will return to the Main Officers' Open Mess for an official luncheon.

Before receiving departure honors at Lawson Field this afternoon, Gen. Ongania will see machinegun marksmanship training at Wagner Range and attend a Trainfire briefing.

Government of Law For Free Americans

By a narrow margin, the Supreme Court has upheld one of the long standing principles of American Constitutional law.

The Court ruled that a man who leaves the country in wartime to avoid military service can not be deprived of his citizenship without due process of law.

In actuality the decision protects the Constitutional right that a man is innocent until proven guilty. Under the Federal law the Court nullified, a person leaving the country would be deprived of citizenship if he left to avoid military service.

As the Court said, one who leaves the country to avoid serving in time of war commits a terrible crime. But even a greater crime is committed by taking away human rights without the process of law, one of the firm bastions of all civil liberty.

If this country is to survive in an era when threats come rapidly from within and without, we must never knuckle under to expediency in the operation of our legal system.

The United States of America has survived for 187 years. It has survived because we have been a country of laws as well as men. It will continue to survive as long as we hold these laws sacred and protect the rights of man. (AFPS)

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.) has introduced a comprehensive bill that would give the cold war veteran virtually all the benefits their predecessors in the last two "hot" wars have enjoyed.

The bill would empower the President to designate a "period of hostilities" for determining benefits for men actually serving hazardous duty in cold war trouble spots.

A Committee hearing is currently under way dealing with the proposed military compensation bill. This bill is expected to provide a 14.4 per cent average increase in pay to active duty military personnel.

Due to come before the Congress in the near future is a bill to extend the Selective Service Law scheduled to expire July 1, 1963. There is also a special draft law concerning doctors and dentists in the Congressional hamper.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara spent 65 hours and 55 minutes on Capitol Hill during the four-week period of Jan. 30 through Feb. 22. Most of the time the DOD secretary was explaining to the lawmakers the reasons for DOD actions and the needs of DOD in the future.

Chiefs of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard all appeared on the Hill early in the 88th Meeting of Congress as the solons queried them concerning individual service budgets.

A bill which calls for the government to pay the total cost of moving a mobile home for servicemen has been introduced in Congress by Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski (R-Wis.).

The bill would result in the government paying the entire tab for trailers no more than 60 feet in length. Currently mobile home moves have a limitation of 36 cents per mile and the owner must pay any additional costs. Military people say it sometimes costs as much as 25 cents a mile over the allowance to make a move.

Army materiel testing is the subject of Army Regulation 70-10. The publication sets forth the objectives, definitions, responsibilities, and general policy guidance for testing in general. It specifically sets forth the above for testing conducted during development and early production of materiel. The objectives of Army materiel testing are to insure that new materiel for Army use meets an approved Qualitative Materiel Requirement (QMR) or Small Development Requirement (SDR) and to determine what changes are required to make new materiel suitable and safe for Army use.

Courses of instruction in the principles and procedures for the administration of nonjudicial punishment are contained in Department of the Army Circular 350-12. The courses embody the changes to the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the Manual for Courts-Martial effected by Public Law 87-648, an Executive Order, and AR 22-15 (to be published).

The criterion to be used in determining eligibility for voting awards to be issued by the Secretary of the Army and major commanders for the 1962 general election year is contained in Department of the Army Circular 608-6.

Quotas for enlisted specialist training are set forth under AR 350-22, Education and Training, and establish allocation and administrative procedures for the distribution of enlisted personnel into school-type training. These regulations are applied in conjunction with AR 616-5.

A Cheap Practice

Too often people regard swearing as being confined to blasphemy — "using improperly a Divine name or attribute."

But there is broader meaning of swearing which includes "affirming or threatening with an appeal to anything held sacred." In effect then, swearing and profanity are related words with a broader connotation of putting words to a sinful and improper use so that sacred thing are treated with levity or irreverence.

More often than not, Christian people are the habitual users of expressions which the dictionary terms minced oaths." Some examples of these words most often heard are 'Gee', 'Golly' and 'Gosh.' Webster's New International Dictionary gives us the following means for these minced oaths. 'Gee' is another word for the name of Jesus. 'Golly' is a euphemism for God. 'Gosh' is a substitute word for God.

Jesus was very poignant in His comdemnation of swearing and profanity. In Matthew 5:34 and 5:37, "Swear not at all . . . let your communication be, Yea, Yea; Nay, Nay, for evil."

The story is told of a famous preacher who once asked a commercial traveler if he was getting paid for the swearing he did? "No," was the answer, "I do it for nothing."

"Nothing," cried the famous preacher. "You work cheap! You throw aside your character as a gentleman, inflict pain on your friends, and break the commandment, and endanger your own soul — and all for nothing? You certainly work cheap. Too cheap."

Yes, swearing is a cheap practice. Something we ought to give up for Lent and to stop completely.

Army Moves to Bolster Its Reserve Components

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Secretary of the Army has announced the reorganization of Army staff functions designed to strengthen the Reserve Components program.

Under the program, overall general staff responsibility for the development of the Reserve Forces of the Army will be centralized under the chief, Office of Reserve Components. Previous responsibility for specific elements of the program was dispersed throughout the Army staff.

The chief, Office of Reserve Components (CORC), has been authorized to exercise staff supervision of all plans, policies, and programs affecting the Reserve Components within the Army staff. CORC continues to exercise general staff supervision over the Army's Reserve Component activities of the chief, National Guard Bureau, and the chief, Army Reserve Affairs.

As a result of the expanded responsibilities, the position of the chief, Office of Reserve Components, will be filled by a lieutenant general. The upgrading of this position and the greater centralization of staff responsibility for the program will permit authoritative coordination and management of Army staff activities in support of the Reserve Component program.

The reorganization will not affect the statutory authority of the chief, National Guard Bureau, to advise the Chief of Staff directly on matters pertaining to the Army National Guard, or his statutory function as the channel of communications between the Department of the Army and the states.

Responsibility for the ROTC program will be transferred from the Office, Chief of Army Reserve and ROTC Affairs, to the Office of Reserve Components, in recognition of the importance and Army-wide scope of the ROTC as a primary source of commissioned officers. The Office, Chief of Army Reserve and ROTC Affairs will be redesignated the Office, Chief of Army Reserve Affairs.

197th Brigade Recalls Historic Day

Tomorrow marks an historic point in the history of the Army's "Follow Me" brigade, the only unit of its type now organized under the ROAD concept.

March 9 has been selected as Organization Day to honor the crossing of the Ludendorff Bridge Remagen, Germany, by the 99th Reconnaissance troop (Mechanized), the 197th Infantry Brigade's famed parent unit, on March 12, 1945.

The history of the 197th dates back to June 24, 1921, when Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, was constituted in the organized Reserves as an element of the 99th Division, later the 99th Infantry Division.

Ordered into active military service in August, 1942, it was reorganized Nov. 15, 1942, at Camp Van Dorn, Miss., as the 99th Cavalry Recon Troop, and in August, 1943, became the 99th Recon Troop (Mech) of the 99th Division. The 99th Division was inactivated Nov. 29, 1945, at Camp Myles Standish, Mass., and stayed in the Army Reserves until Aug. 1, 1962, when it was then allotted to the Regular Army.

The 99th Recon Troop (less the 3rd Platoon) was redesignated as Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, and the 3rd platoon, 99th Troop, was redesignated Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company, 198th Infantry Brigade, with separate lineage.

During World War II, the 99th Recon Troop participated with the 99th Division in The Battle of the Bulge and the defense of Elsenborn, Belgium. It was the first Infantry division to arrive at and cross the Rhine . . . crossing the Ludendorff Bridge.

It then spearheaded through the Ruhr pocket and made the final thrust into the satellite countries, stopping on VE Day at the Inn River in Austria.

Campaigns

The brigade is credited with participating in the following campaigns during World War II: Ardennes - Alsace, Rhineland and Central Europe. Its decorations include the Belgium Fouragere. The unit was cited in the Order of the Day of the Belgian Army three times for actions at the Siegfied Line, Elsenborn Crest and the Ardennes.

The 197th Infantry Brigade was activated here on Sept. 24, 1962. The brigade's primary mission is to support the program of instruction of The Infantry School and Center.

Brigade support activities include providing artillery demonstrations of conventional and atomic weapons; furnishing troops and equipment to perform both as friendly and "aggressors" in troops in Ranger training at Dahlonega, Ga., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; providing the Infantry Center Honor Guard Company and Honor Battery furnishing scout dog demonstrations, engineers for demolitions and river crossing techniques, and also providing armor and mechanized Infantry demonstrations.

Some of the demonstrations performed by brigade personnel include: "Infantry Company, Reinforced in the Attack," "Rifle Company in a Helicopterborne Attack," "Armored Infantry Platoon in the Attack," "Escape and Evasion," and many others. Due to the mission and close association with The Infantry School, Department of the Army authorized the brigade motto, the "Follow Me" Brigade.

5-Mile Run Will Start Celebration

The 197th Infantry Brigade's Organization Day activities will begin at 8:45 a.m. Saturday with a five-mile cross-country run with contestants from each of the brigade's subordinate units participating.

An Organization Parade will follow on the Brigade Parade Field. Unit colors, guidons and streamers will be officially presented to the various commands of the brigade. Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will be reviewing officer.

At 11:15 a.m., a demonstration by the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon will be held in Bolling Bowl, followed by a barbeque lunch at noon.

Afternoon and evening events will include a jeep rodeo, a team physical proficiency test, a tug of war between company commanders and first sergeants, a pistol match between commanders and sergeants major, platoon close-order drill competition, dedication of a "Roll of Champions" showcase and an awards ceremony.

A military ball will be held in the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess for officers and their ladies, while an organization day ball is set at Service Club One for the enlisted men and their ladies. Non-commissioned officers of the brigade are planning a party at Victory Lodge for next week.

The brigade headquarters are located between Dixie and Indianhead Roads, across from Sightseeing Field.

69th Armor's Firepower Welcomed During Combat

The combined firepower of the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade, is enough to make the proverbial walls of Jericho come tumbling down.

Included in this mighty force are the guns of five M-60 tanks, which for all practical purposes could do the job alone and destroy all within.

These five monstrous tanks are capable of defeating any known armor vehicle in the world, according to officials at the Brigade.

The battalion also has five modified M-48 target tanks and two two M-67 flame throwing tanks for supporting The Infantry School and providing practical employment of demonstrations.

ROAD Units

Since its activation last fall under the Reorganization Objective Army Division (ROAD) concept which saw the 1st Infantry Brigade become the 197th Infantry Brigade, the primary mission of the battalion has been to support The Infantry School and its wide array of Infantry and support units.

In enjoying many years of outstanding service, the 69th Armor has participated in campaigns throughout World War II and the Korean Conflict.

During World War II the battalion participated in five of the eight European campaigns.

Initially activated at Fort Knox, Ky., in 1940, and known as the 69th Armored Regiment, the 4th Battalion was broken up in 1943, reorganized and redesignated into five companies to be known as the 69th Tank Battalion.

Amphibian Tractor

In 1945, the battalion was again reorganized and redesignated into the 69th Amphibian Tractor Battalion before taking its present form, the 69th Medium Tank Battalion, in 1950.

In 7 Years, Post's MTU Gains World-Wide Respect

By SSgt Lee LaCombe

Even the most precocious seven-year-old seldom casts an influence over more than his immediate family and circle of friends, but the Army Marksmanship Training Unit, which passed its seventh birthdate last Friday, has gained world-wide recognition and respect for its shooting proficiency and knowledge of marksmanship.

Organized on March 1, 1956, as the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit by Continental Army Command Headquarters, the unit, in its short lifespan, has sent its men forth against the best rifle, pistol, and shotgun shooters in the world. And they have brought back a roomful of awards to testify to Army proficiency.

Under its present commander, Col. Robin G. Montgomery, members of the unit have broadened their skills into the field of international competition, and, although a relatively new adjunct to the unit mission, outstanding results are already apparent.

World Championship

At the World Championships in Cairo last fall Sgt. Gary Anderson, an alumnus of the organization, set a new world record of 1157 points out of a possible 1200 with the free rifle enroute to capturing three gold medals.

In the 1961 Pan - American Games in Chicago, the unit's shooters completely dominated competition and won all gold medals in the shooting events.

On the national scene, SFC William Blankenship has ably filled the shoes of the Army's redoubtable Sgt. Maj. Huelet (Joe) Benner, having won the National Rifle Association's annual pistol competition at Camp Perry, Ohio, three times in succession.

Army shooters have won the National Trophy Rifle Team Match and Infantry Trophy Team Match every year since 1958, and the Gold Cup, emblematic of supremacy in the National Pistol Trophy Team event, each year since 1958 except '59.

The current national records in all three National Trophy events are held by Army shooters who have trained with or under the supervision of MTU. The Trophy Matches were established by an Act of Congress in 1903 to promote interest in competitive marksmanship.

Mission Accomplished?

Has MTU, during its seven years, successfully accomplished its objective of promoting and improving marksmanship within the Army?

The answer is a resounding yes, echoed by the applause of hundreds of spectators at the awards ceremony following the National Championships last year as soldier after soldier stepped forward to claim his reward.

From a numerical standpoint, definitely. Thousands rather than hundreds of soldiers compete annually in the competitive marksmanship programs throughout the Army from company level activity through the All-Army and annual National Championships.

Despite the increase in number of participants scores have not suffered. To the contrary it takes a better score now to place in the top 50 of a match than it did to win seven years ago.

These results have not taken place overnight, but have come about through careful planning and selection of the best qualified personnel to serve within the unit.

Each man assigned is not only a topflight shooter, but is also a capable instructor and dedicated to enhancing the Army's marksmanship program by providing technical and non-technical assistance to rifle and pistol shooters whenever possible. He must also be able to elicit the support of commanders throughout the Army.

To help improve scores, the unit has delved into an extensive program of research and development of weapons and ammunition.

Skilled Gunsmiths

Its ordnance shop is staffed with highly skilled gunsmiths whose sole effort is to provide the competitive shooter with the finest weapons armorers can devise.

During its formative years, the unit, which was redesignated as the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit (USAMTU) on Jan. 1, 1962, was placed under operational supervision of the commanding general, The Infantry Center.

During this period, it became the first unit at Fort Benning to receive a unit commendation from the commanding general. One was received in 1957 and another in 1958.

"The United States Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit distinguished itself by the selection of the United States Army Rifle and Pistol Teams for the National Matches," the commendations read. They add that the unit's members won 18 first place awards in 1957 and 13 in 1958.

At the 1962 National Matches, Army shooters captured 40 first place individual and team awards in the pistol, smallbore rifle, and high power rifle championships.

For a seven-year old, the unit has certainly come a long way.

Jan Rose's Woman's Club Diary

Just in time for the Spring season which comes early here in the South, the Woman's Club is beginning a series of new classes designed to help you put your best foot forward.

Intermediate and advanced sewing start this week, taught by Mrs. Westall, MU 7-0701. If you would like to tackle a suit or coat, tailoring will be again taught by Adolph Ensley, from one of Columbus' leading men's stores. Mrs. Nettles, 545-4146, chairman, will supply you with details and starting date.

Hatmaking, so popular in the Fall, will feature Spring and Summer chapeaux, taught by Mrs. Robert Brumbach, MU 9-9828.

If you enjoy "doing something with your hands" while watching TV, why not try knitting? Sweater weather will soon be here, and you'll be surprised how quick and easy it is to turn out lovely hand-knits, both for yourself and especially as juvenile gifts. Call Mrs. Ferguson, MU 7-1321, for the beginners' knitting, which teaches all the basics.

If you have orders now, as many of us do, and are lucky enough to be going to Europe, we have a course in conversational German to help you over the language barrier. Mrs. Devlin, MU 9-2713, teaches this informal course.

WIVES MEET

NCO wives of the Marksmanship Training Unit will hold their monthly coffee March 14 at Crain Hall at 10 p.m.

Hostesses for the event will be Mrs. Margaret Held and Mrs. Helen Turner.

In early March, those harbingers of spring, the daffodils, erupt into a sea of yellow in the Meadowlark Flower area at Callaway Gardens.

Planted in graceful drifts on the American Holly Trail, the daffodils are of 80 varieties, with a wide range of both form and color. There are the large trumpet types, large and small cup varieties, doubles, Poetaz, Poeticus, Jonquilla, Triandus, Cyclamineus and the quaint botannical species.

Colors vary from bright white, yellow, orange, orange-scarlet and delicate pinks and of course the golden yellows, which are the perennial favorite.

Gardens Horticulture Director Fred Galle advises visitors to bring notebooks and cameras, with plenty of color film, to record this dramatic display of the Heralds of Spring."

Also blooming in early March are flowering quince and certain other Spring bulbs. In late March, the native Azaleas and wildflowers come into prominence, followed in early April by the dogwoods and ornamental azaleas.

Mountain laurel, the oakleaf hydrangea, hybrid rhododendrons and late flowering ornamental azaleas blossom forth in late April and early May.

Almost any Sunday afternoon can become a real treat for the entire family with a visit to Callaway Gardens for the spring flowering season.

And at 3 until 5 p.m. on Sunday, a concert of organ music is played at the Ida Cason Callaway Memorial Chapel, deep in the heart of the gardens. This is an experience which will last long in the memory of all who visit Callaway Gardens.

50-Milers! Don't Walk, Swim It!

The American Red Cross has come up with an answer for the individual who would like to compete in the current 50-mile hiking craze but is averse to long-distance walking.

Richard Brown, national director of ARC Water Safety, emphasized that he's all in favor of people's sudden enthusiasm for reaching physical fitness in 50-mile stints. "But, if you don't like to walk," he advised, "go by water, and do it in easy quarter-mile stages."

Since it was initiated over a year ago, thousands of swimmers have followed the ARC's advice. Hundreds of others now are well into their second 50 miles.

"They are finding it a lot of fun, much less grueling than walking, and they don't develop blisters," Brown said.

Income Tax Complex? Not When Basic Components Are Studied

By Capt. Lawrence D. Sledge

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles on federal income tax prepared dy Capt. Sledge of The Infantry Center Judge Advocate Section.)

It is again the time of year to turn our attention to a topic which, to many of us, appears to be unfathomably complex.

Income tax is a subject which makes even the strongest uncertain. This fear is as often offset when the individual learns that he will get some return on the money he remitted throughout the year in withholding.

But as many times the individual is irritated when he discovered that the amount withheld was not adequate and he must pay in an additional amount at the end of the tax year.

It is necessary for every taxpayer to learn something about our tax structure so that he can intelligently deal with the problems that result from filing a tax return. Our income tax structure is so complicated that most taxpayers feel that they cannot cope with it, so they retain the services of an expert for a fee and have the return completed. This accounts for the many tax experts who make a substantial living through this medium in every area of the country.

Really Simple

The tax structure may appear inexplicable to us, but it is really quite simple when broken down into its component parts. The apparition of making error in preparation of the return is the real villian, and not the complexity of the tax law. Basically the government must have money to operate, and this money must come from those who enjoy the government's facilities.

Originally each individual was taxed according to the same flat rate, and later this was changed to a tax according to amount of income under the theory that those who have more must pay more. The basic tax philosophy is accompanied by a multitude of tax "loop holes" or exclusions, exemptions, and deductions.

An exclusion is an item of income which is not taxed. Exemptions are generally the dependents claimed who can qualify (for each of which you can reduce your taxable income by $600). Deductions are usually in the form of business or qualifying personal expenses.

Use Deductions

These deductions and exclusion concessions Congress has granted to the taxpayer to more evenly equate the taxpayer's burden. Therefore, after deductions and exemptions are subtracted, the taxable income of an individual who has burdensome expense and many dependents will have a lower taxable income than one in the same bracket who has no expenses.

This somewhat balances the relative burden. Although you feel you bear the brunt of the tax burden, you need only calculate what percentage your actual tax was of your gross income, after accurately computing your tax, and you will see that you have paid considerably less than you anticipated.

Thus, since all of these deductions and exemptions are available, it is incumbent on you to take full advantage of them by using them. Many times you do not know of them. At such time, it would prove beneficial to visit your tax advisor and seek advice. Many times it would prove advantageous to hire the service of a professional to have your returns prepared. As will be seen in following articles, figuring your tax is not difficult and it is actually so simple that you can do it yourself with few problems.

Surgeon Says

Colds Are Irritating, But Really Harmless

By Capt. John A. Kelly
General Outpatient Clinic

The common cold is an acute bothersome inflamation caused by a virus which is quite common at this time of year.

The symptoms are well-known - starting with a dry, scratchy feeling in the throat. The patient then gets progressively worse with watery nose, sore throat, etc.

Is it contagious? Yes, very much so. Is it possible to prevent infection? Yes, it is possible but not practical; the condition is so common and so many people are susceptible and the effects so short-lived, that methods other than that of ordinary hygene and care are not necessary. Certainly avoid sneezing directly into someone's face and avoid crowded public places when having a cold.

Incubation Period

How long is the incubation period? About 24 to 48 hours. How long does it last? About three to six days, but it can stretch into longer periods in some instances.

Why do people get stuffy ears and sore throats? These are particular areas of the body where inflammation is most felt. In a particular person it may affect the ears, causing otitis; the voice box, causing laryngitis; the windpipe, causing that scratchy tracheitis. Children in particular are susceptible to these side effects. Many people show a mild fever with a cold. Sometimes fever may rise to 102 degrees. Again, children are more liable to fever.

What treatment is there? There is no method of killing the virus, such as with shots of penicillin, but the symptoms can be treated to make the patient more comfortable. Drying agents for runny noses, aspirin for aches and pains or fever, fluids rather than food because they are better tolerated.

If, despite these measures, fever continues to rise and-or the nasal discharges or sputum becomes thick and yellow in color and-or persistent pains set in the head or chest, then obviously it has passed the stage of a "simple" cold and medical advice should be sought.

The doctor asks some questions designed to get some estimate of the extent and severity of the illness, perhaps takes a quick look at the throat or ears, if indicated, prescribes the above-mentioned medications and adds penicillin or other antibiotics only if there is an additional bacterial infection.

CALL IS SOUNDED FOR OCS APPLICANTS

The Army has issued a call for more applications for its officer candidate program from among its top grade enlisted personnel and warrant officers.

In an effort to meet the ever-increasing need for officers, major unit commanders throughout the Army are urging qualified men to apply for officer candidate school (OCS). A maximum number of applicants is needed so school officials may be highly selective in choosing new students.

The Infantry School recently explained facilities of its officer candidate course to accommodate more than twice as many candidates.

In fiscal year 1962, the school graduated 462 new officers. In fiscal year 1963, the school has increased its number of classes from four to 10 per year and expects to graduate more than 1,000 men.

Warrant officers or enlisted men who are high school graduates or who have completed equivalent courses and who are between the ages of 19 and 27 years, may apply for selection for Infantry OCS.

Completion of high school trigonometry or its equivalent is required for application to Artillery OCS at Fort Sill, Okla.

Any qualified enlisted man or warrant officer may apply except those in replacement pools or those on overseas orders. These may apply as soon as they reach permanent duty stations.

Graduates of the 22-week Infantry or artillery courses are commissioned as second lieutenants in the U. S. Army Reserve. Active duty time required after completion of the course varies.

An inductee who completes the course may request a two-year tour, or he may complete his original obligation or six months, which ever is greater. Regular Army enlistees and warrant officers may choose between two-year and six-month tours.

Sergeants Aid in Uncovering Archeological Treasure

By Bill Gardner

Two members of the Infantry Museum staff are lending valuable assistance to an archeologist from the Smithsonian Institute during excavation of an Indian site that was probably occupied before the time of Christ.

MSgt David W. Chase and SFC James Pritchard are cleaning and cataloging the artifacts for Harold Huscher, who is excavating the site with funds from a National Science Grant.

With the aid of five laborers from the Columbus area, Huscher has uncovered what may prove to be the oldest evidence of a dwelling found to date in the Southeast.

Deptford Period

All the material from the site is of the Deptford Period, a term used to classify a culture that existed in this area around 2,000 years ago. The distinctive artifacts of these early ceramicists are pieces of pottery containing a stamped design arranged in small connected checks.

Located just outside the post and situated on a bank less than 20 yards from the Chattahoochee River, the site is considered particularly important because of its relative purity.

Isolated from other occupation zones by a layer of sterile soil almost two feet thick, the site represents a rare find of pure Deptford occupation.

Generally, Deptford sites and occupation from later periods are found in a mixed state lending confusion to interpretation. In many cases along the Chattahoochee, this mixture is due to periodic flooding of the river.

Charcoal has been recovered and is being carefully stored for later dating. Huscher hopes to be able to pinpoint within a plus or minus factor of 200 or 300 years when the site was occupied.

Floor Darker

The floor of the dwelling is readily observable because it is much darker than the surrounding sand. Similarly the posts, whose rotting wood stained the soil hundreds of years ago, left dark round spots in the soil.

The original discovery of the site happened by chance. It lies beyond the depth which would be excavated normally. However, a drainage cut, which runs out from a housing project known as Broadmoor, sliced through the outer edges of the midden (a refuse heap marking the site of a primitive habitation). Sometime later Paul Liles of Columbus found fragments of pottery in the soil.

When Sgt. Chase was notified, he went out to the area and by looking at the sides of the cut found from where the Deptford material was coming.

Instantly realizing the value of the site, he contacted Huscher, who came down to investigate it.

Since the area soon will be covered by the rising waters of the dammed river, he applied for an emergency grant.

Nineteen members of the Security Platoon of the 2nd Military Police Company are set to leave this morning for Fort Gordon, Ga., to attend a four-week basic course at the Military Police School.

The group will fly by Caribou aircraft from Lawson Field at 8:30 a.m. accompanied by Lt. Ralph B. Dunn, security platoon leader. Lt. Dunn will travel with the men to Fort Gordon, check on the arrangements there and then return to Fort Benning.

Elite 2nd Gains Greater Armor

By Bob deCamara
By 72nd Armor PIO

Reorganization of the elite 2nd Infantry Division has left the division minus the 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 69th Armor and plus the 1st Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor. Officially speaking, this latest change means the 69th Armor has been reorganized and redesignated the 72nd Armor.

One of the most potent, armored fighting units to ever grace the battle-ready "Second to None" Division, the 72nd Armor has a history of combat and peacetime service with the division. Reorganized, the armor unit is even more lethal than as previously constituted.

Three Companies

Although the 72nd Armor boasts only three line companies to the 69th Armor's five, these three companies have been beefed-up and modernized. Nuclear - capable rockets are only one form of strengthening the 72nd has absorbed.

Each line company, (Companies A, B and C), has been given a radar crew under the face-lifting. These ground-surveillance squads complement the Battalion Ground Surveillance Section with its treasured radar equipment.

With radar detecting and lining up targets, armormen can get the firepower job done with an assortment of tank weapons, mortars, conventionally - armed missiles or tactical, nuclear missiles. Bolstering tank fire techniques perfected by the 69th Armor in innumerable days training at Fort Benning and Fort Stewart, Ga., a Battalion Mortar and "Davy Crockett" Missile platoon has been added to Headquarters Company.

For reconnaissance, an Armored Cavalry Platoon replaces the old scout section. To keep the tanks fueled up and on the move, six 1200-gallon gasoline tankers now belong to the transportation section of the Battalion Support Platoon. The Medical Platoon is now assigned a doctor.

A crowning touch for the mo-

Deadly Realism in 38th Exercises

BAUMHOLDER, Germany—Troops of the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry recently completed a week of live-fire, mechanized attack exercises. Overhead artillery and mortar fire added to the realism of the problem.

Each rifle company of the "Rock of the Marne" battle group took part in the field exercises on Baumholder Post ranges to receive training in the use of live ammunition in the attack, in marksmanship and in tactical employment of armored personnel carriers.

Formations, fire and maneuver, and the actual conduct of the attack, including the assault, reorganization and consolidation on the objective and firing of final protective lines against a simulated counter-attack, were stressed.

Placing Targets

Targets were placed on the objective area and were scored after the assault to indicate the effectiveness of the rifleman's firing.

The full day - and - night training consisted of moving into assembly areas and the completion of administrative details in the morning while the company commander and platoon leaders received the operation order and made reconnaissance.

After a "dry - fire" rehearsal, test firing of M-60 machine-guns and 3.5 - inch rocket launchers, registering of 81 milimeter mortars and a safety briefing, the units went into the exercise.

At the completion of the daylight live - fire problem rifle platoons conducted independent night exercises. The platoons were notified to move to specific locations and accomplish combat missions with a minimum of preparation.

Laying or breaching of mine fields, setting up roadblocks and combat outpost lines, conducting reconnaissance and combat patrols and setting up rear area security were some of the missions assigned.

A miniature review on the 2nd Division parade field recently honored a chief warrant officer, a sergeant major and 11 other enlisted men on their retirement from active Army duty.

All the retirees have served more than 20 years active duty in the United States Army. The retiring chief warrant officer was Paul R. Roberts of the 2nd Administration Company. Sgt. Maj. Wilson R. bility of the 72nd Tank Battalion is the addition of two tank-mounted assault bridges. Known as the A. V. L. B. Section for Armor Vehicle Launch Bridge, this section's two tanks can rumble up to a riverbank and, in a matter of minutes, mechanically extend bridges across the river to keep the troops moving ahead on the advance.

The tank battalion's staff sections stay about the same in the reorganization.

72nd Tank Battalion history goes back to January 14, 1943 when the original units that were later to become the 72nd Tank Battalion were constituted as part of the 5th Armored Regiment in the Army of the United States.

Six months later at Camp Chaffee, Ark., the nation's growing armored forces received a new member, the 16th armored Division, activated July 15, 1943. On September 3, 1943, the 1st Battalion, 16th Armored Division was relieved from assignment to the 16th Armored Division and was reorganized and redesignated as the 717th Tank Battalion.

It was again redesignated as the 717th Heavy Tank Battalion on March 3, 1948. Reorganization again on October 16, 1948 changed the battalion to the 72nd Heavy Tank Battalion, Regular Army, and it was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division.

This organization deleted Company D which was redesingated as Company D, 2nd Engineer Combat Battalion. Further reorganization and redesignation on June 6, 1950, brought the present designation as the 72nd Tank Battalion, a vital part of the 2nd Infantry Division.

The addition again of Company D on October 10, 1950 completed reorganization and brought the battalion to its present structure with the addition of changes made recently in the present division reorganization.

Serving in World War II as the 717th Tank Battalion, operating under the Ninth U. S. Army, the 72nd armor won streamers for service during the Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns. The battalion participated in actions in France and Germany from September 5, 1944 to May 5, 1945.

In Korea as an "Indianhead" Division unit, the 72nd Armor fought the length of the land for three years, winter and summer, from the initial United Nations Defensive to the Korean Summer-Fall Campaign (1953).

During this time, the 72nd Armor fought in 10 major campaigns, adding these battle streamers to its already decorated colors.

ROAD Subject of Parade At 2nd Division Artillery

The 2nd Division Artillery held a review recently on Knight Field in observance of its organization under the Reorganization Objective, Army Divisions (ROAD) concept.

Units participating in the ceremony were: Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, commanded by Capt. Robert E. Camp; 1st Battalion, 12th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Terence W. Huck; 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. John M. Evans; 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert; 6th Battalion, 37th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. John E. Connolly; and 5th Battalion, 39th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Francis A. Chance Jr.

Distinguished guests included Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general, 2nd Infantry Division; Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander; Rear Adm. Anton B. Anderson, USN (ret); Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., chief of staff, and members of the General and Special Staff of the 2nd Division.

In his address to the Division Artillery troops, Col. Jones pointed out that the reorganization established the most powerful artillery force ever made organic to an infantry division and with its flexibility and mobility was in a most unique position to support the maneuver elements of the division.

He told the former members of the inactivated 27th Artillery that their esprit de corps and expertise, now spread throughout the Division Artillery, would continue to play an important role in the overall combat effectiveness of the Division Artillery.

The 1st Howitzer Battalion, 27th Artillery was first assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery on May 2, 1960. The unit remained at zero strength until August 1, 1961, at which time it became active under the command of Lt. Col. James D. Clark. Lt. Col. Edwin M. Reid became its commander on December 20, 1962, and remained in command until inactivation on February 20, 1963.

The reorganization activities for the day were concluded with a reception at the Salerno Mess. During the reception, Gen. Harding, a former Division Artillery commander, was presented a plaque to commemorate his tour of duty with the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery. Gen. Harding served as Division Artillery commander from July 11, 1961 to Oct. 16, 1961, and again from March 19, 1962 to Nov., 1962.

ROAD Brings This Battalion Mechanized Mission

By Bob Kilman
3rd Brigade PIO

Mechanization in modern arms best describes the 2nd Infantry Division's 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry (M) since its reorganization February 1.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson, the four-company battalion was tailored from elements of a seven-company battle group.

Attached to Brigade

Under the ROAD concept, the four company mechanized infantry battalion is attached to a brigade headquarters. In this case, 3rd Brigade, commanded by Col. Lucien F. Keller, encompasses three battalions. Each battalion has three rifle companies and a headquarters company.

Capt. Frank C. Widrig commands Headquarters Company, assisted by 1st Sgt Charles L. Coxon. The mission of Headquarters Company is to provide radar, reconnaissance, antitank, mortar and nuclear support to the battalion as well as administrative, supply, maintenance, communications, and medical facilities. Headquarters Company also has the capability of participating in joint foot-mobile operations. Battalion Headquarters support best summarizes the function of Headquarters Company.

To close with the enemy by means of fire and maneuver, in order to destroy or capture him or to repel his assault by fire; close combat and counter attack. . .these familiar phrases define the mission of the rifle companies. On the ground, they take the form of Company A commanded by Capt. Robert G. Matheson, with 1st Sgt. John Matthews; Company B commanded by Capt. Bruce W. Pound with 1st Sgt. Elmo Smallwood; and Company C commanded by Capt. Kenneth L. Willoughby, with 1st Sgt. Harry L. McBee.

Each of these companies share an identical list of arms. The individual soldier, the rifleman, is the keystone to the employment of these arms. His armament includes the M14 rifle, the M60 machine gun, the M79 grenade launcher and 3.5 rocket launcher. The weapons platoon within the company gives the soldier support with 81 millimeter mortar and antitank weapons.

Personnel of the 2nd Battalion are entering an intensified four-month training phase.

ROAD and Rotaplan

This training phase is assigned to support the new ROAD configuration and ROTAPLAN, jointly. Facing overseas movement this summer, the 2nd Battalion finds itself adjusting to both programs. Major Joseph K. Westbury, 2nd Battalion S-3 officer, explained the training program.

He related that the battalion commander directed that the enlisted key leader role be emphasized. "The squad leader is one of the most important non-commissioned officers. Most of the implementing orders and actions for the squad members pass through the squad leader. His leadership ability must be outstanding," said the major.

Maj. Lloyd R. Cain, battalion executive officer, explained some of the steps being taken to provide for the best possible sergeants. "A promotion board has been set up," he related; "the way to promotions will be controlled on the basis of ability." The executive officer felt this was one of the best ways to search out quality enlisted men. He stressed the need for superior sergeants in the new mobile mechanized battalion.

Such an emphasis on quality is parallel with the 9th Infantry's history. Born during the stress with France in 1798, the 9th Infantry has one of the oldest, most honored records in the United States Army. After three periods of inactive duty, the regiment was activated in 1855. It has served in an active status to this date.

Serving in Indian Wars

During the Indian Wars the 9th's service covered the western states and helped open the Alaskan Territory in 1876. The Spanish American War, the Philippine Insurrection and the Boxer Rebellion became names on its battle streamers. During the Chinese "Boxer Rebellion," the 9th Infantry's motto, "Keep up the fire" was given as an order by Col. Emerson H. Liscum. Col. Liscum was killed in action on July 13, 1900 at Tientsin, China.

During World War I, the 9th Infantry was attached to the 2nd Division. It served with the "Indianhead Division" through two world wars and the Korean Conflict. Added to the "Fighting 9th's" battle records were the names of Normandy, the Rhineland, the Ardennes, and, in Korea, Hongchon. The 9th Infantry was the first 2nd Division unit to land in Korea and the last to leave Hongchon.

When control of the 2nd Infantry Division passed to the Department of Army on November 8, 1957, the "Fighting 9th" left the division but rejoined the "Indianheads" less than a year later on June 14, 1958. The 2nd Infantry Division was reactivated at that time, with station at Fort Benning.

Scheduled Next Week

The next installment in this series of articles pertaining to reorganization of the 2nd Division will appear in the March 15 issue of THE BAYONET. This article will be devoted jointly to the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry; and 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry. Both units are scheduled to rotate to Germany in April; the 9th for three months and the 23rd for six months under the Army's Rotaplan.

Squad Leadeers Credited With Army Test Success

By 87th Infantry PIO

The members of Company B, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry recently held a successful battery of squad Army Training Tests for which they have been diligently preparing since March 1.

The new organization of the infantry squad provides a highly mobile, well - controlled force of ten men. According to Lt. George W. MAes Jr., commanding officer, members of his company have shown great interest in the new concept, which offers a positive challenge in the form of added fire power organic to the squad.

The rifle squads have been working hard to become accustomed to new weapons and tactics. For instance, the M-79 grenade launcher provides the rifle squad with its own small artillery.

The squads have been practicing using the new system in defensive, offensive and patrolling actions. Most of the training was given by the squad leaders themselves, since it is felt that by using the squad leaders to instruct their own men not only do the men learn more about their places in squad tactics, but also the individual squad leaders can better evaluate the state of training of his squad. Every squad leader in Company B felt that his squad was best, and worked hard to get everyone into shape for the tests.

Leaving in April

New 23rd Battalion Trains for Europe

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion 23rd Infantry is now a member of The Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Infantry Division.

Designated the 1st Battalion, it was reassigned from Alaska minus men and equipment as part of the division's current Reorganization Objective, Army Division (ROAD) changeover.

With the preparation for the Rotaplan tour to Germany in April, the unit is initiating training exercises, spending three days of every week in the field and countless hours of administrative work by the staff sections.

The line companies move out to the field early every Monday morning to indulge in three vigorous days of combat training.

The first week consisted of platoon and company training to include platoon raids, dismounted attacks and defense maneuvers.

The effectiveness of this training is only indicated by the simulated combat conditions in the maneuver area.

Following the first week's training the qualified men were given instruction in the operation of the highly mobile Army armored personnel carrier, an intricate part of all Infantry training exercises. The three-day exercises are scheduled for every week until the departure for Baumholder, Germany.

The 1st Battalion, under ROAD, consists of Headquarters, A, B, C. and D Companies and the battalion headquarters.

Show to Feature Shades of Spring

A fashion show and luncheon will be held Tuesday by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The fashion show will feature 15 models chosen from the club membership to display the latest spring fashions.

Arrangements have been made for them to receive special training from Mrs. Charles S. Austin, a former model and all the ladies will receive a new spring hairstyle created especially for them by the Main Post and Custer Terrace beauty salons, according to Program Chairman Mrs. Bryan Evans Jr.

Mrs. John F. Staples, formerly of Division Trains, the hostess unit, has announced that the theme of the afternoon will be "Shades of Spring".

Using the spring colors as a guide, Mrs. Walter Hibbard Jr. and Mrs. Philip Taft with their table decorations committee, have created miniature models on small poster boards dressed them in fabric samples, using the popular spring shades and styles. These life-like drawings were done by Mrs. John F. Staples and Mrs. Frank D. Green Jr. and will be centerpieces for the tables.

The fashion show backdrop will be made of a mamouth copy of a painter's color palette. The palette colors will be fashioned of various fabrics illustrating the new spring colors. Mrs. Daniel H. Pride of the Ordnance Battalion was the creator of this setting.

Head table decorations, under the supervision of Mrs. Jack C. Wallace, of the 2nd Medical Battalion, will include a large centerpiece of assorted spring flowers. Minature painter palettes with chiffon material showing the seasons color shades will be used as secondary centerpieces for this table. Place cards will be made in the form of accessories, such as hats, shoes, and handbags.

Ex-Nurse Mrs. Grisard's Favorite Tour-Taiwan

BY JAMIE ROEDER

Scalpel, contusion, forceps, intravenous, lesion, and suture might well be to most people words heard on some of the popular medical dramas on television. To Emilie Rosenberger Grisard, however, the above words probably were among the first read and studied when she entered Winchester Memorial Hospital in Winchester, Va. to begin nurse's training.

Wife of Lt. Col. Grisard who commands the 122nd Signal Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division, Mrs. Grisard is the mother of four boys. John who is fifteen attends Baker High School where he is a sophomore, Richard, age thirteen, is in the eighth grade at Faith School and his younger brother James, age eleven, also attends Faith School where he is in the sixth grade. Little Tommy, who is four years old, is a member of the Pre-Kindergarten set. The Grisard family joined the 2nd Infantry Division in July of 1962.

Emilie Rosenberger claims Winchester, Va. as her hometown. She graduated from Handley High School in this city and then studied nursing at Winchester Memorial Hospital.

MRS. GRISARD

Upon completion of her education, Miss Rosenberger traded her "Miss" not for a "Mrs.", but instead chose "2nd Lieutenant". The lieutenant joined the Army nurses in July of 1942. Her assignment took her to the 3rd Field Hospital unit at Camp Young, Calif., located near the city of Indio. As events progressed, Lt. Rosenberger found that Army Nurses also trained and went through the Infiltration Course. Desert maneuvers followed.

Australia Tour

Completing stateside training Nurse Emilie was reassigned to Australia. It was on the ship to Brisbane that she met Lt. Gus Grisard. They left from Camp Stoneman Port of Embarkation and upon arrival in Australia, Lt. Grisard was assigned to New Guinea with the 99th Signal Battalion while Lt. Rosenberger remained with the 3rd Field Hospital to be located at Melbourne.

Later her unit was also assigned to New Guinea where the lieutenants again met. This incident was repeated sometime later in the Philippines.

During the retaking of Corregidor Emilie was seriously injured in a jeep accident on Luzon in March of 1945. She was then sent back to the hospital on Leyte. Recovery was aided by the fact that Capt. Grisard was near and able to visit her. In June of 1945 our nurse was sent home to the United States for recuperation.

Capt. Grisard returned home in November of the same year. Plans were immediately formulated for their marriage which took place in Winchester, Va. on 7 February 1946, just three days after Lt. Rosenberger was released from the Army Nurse Corps.

For her overseas duty she was awarded service ribbons as follows: American Campaign Medal, Asiatic Pacific Campaign Medal, Philippine Liberation, World War II Victory Medal, and Battles and Campaigns New Guinea-Southern Philippines-Luzon.

Washington Tour

The Grisards travelled to Washington, D.C. after their marriage where Capt. Grisard was next assigned. Their eldest son, John, was born there. Two years later son Richard was born at Fort Belvoir, Va. Reassignment to Hawaii came next and it was there that the Grisards' son, Jim, was born. It was back to Washington again in 1952.

Five years later in 1957 the Grisard family was sent to Taiwan where Lt. Col. Grisard was to become the Signal Advisor to the Chinese 2nd Field Army. Mrs. Grisard lists this tour as her favorite. Among the many interesting people they met while there were the Chang Kai-Sheks.

On various occasions the Grisards received many lovely momentos from their Chinese friends. For her birthday one year she was presented with a lovely white satin stole heavily embroidered with a dragon design. This was made by the wife of a Chinese officer. On the reverse side of the stole she placed Mrs. Grisard's name in both English and Chinese.

Other remembrances include a shell lamp hand-carved with the dragon design which was presented to them by a general of the Chinese Nationalist Army. The Signal officers also gave them a large Oriental scroll upon their departure for home in 1959.

The Grisards have had several of their friends from Taiwan visit them since they returned to the United States. She also said that each Christmas sees them supplied with tea from Taiwan. Their youngest son, Tommy, was born on Taiwan.

Orders bringing this family home to the United States came in 1959 and they again returned to Washington for three years. 1962 brought Col. and Mrs. Grisard and their family to Fort Benning for their first stateside military post living.

Mrs. Grisard is a member of the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club, the Fort Benning Women's Club, serves as a school nurse at Fort Benning, and is actively engaged with the Pre - Kindergarten School. Besides her activities, she enjoys cooking and reading as hobbies.

Ladies of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry recently held a coffee at the home of Mrs. John A. Cooper to welcome the wives of newly assigned officers.

Mrs. Lucien F. Keller, guest for the affair, poured at a table which featured a centerpiece of sweetheart roses. Mrs. Keller was assisted by Mrs. Cleo C. Parker Jr.

Mrs. John H. Cochran Jr., wife of the new battalion commander, presided over a brief discussion period.

New arrivals welcomed were Mrs. Albert Coast, Mrs. John H. Cochran Jr., Mrs. Robert C. Kendrick, Mrs. Luther B. Kennedy, Mrs. Horen A. Walker, and Mrs. William A. Witt Jr.

Hostess for the coffee were Mrs. John A. Cooper, Mrs. Reginald H. Corliss, Mrs. Frank R. Curran Jr., Mrs. Frank B. Harbor, and Mrs. Louis C. Menetrey.

Mrs. Poole Entertains

Bataan Death March Survivor Fought as Guerrilla

Every soldier has his war stories but those of SFC Gerado San Luis, now serving with Company C, 1st Infantry, are unique.

Born in the Philippines and into an Army family, Sgt. San Luis joined the service in February 1941. Ten months later Pearl Harbor was bombed and the U.S. entered the war.

Immediately Sgt. San Luis and the 24th Field Artillery of the Phillippine Scouts were moved from Fort Stotsenberg to Dayamban, Pangasian. Here they spent Christmas, a sad one Sgt. San Luis recalls, as the entire town had been evacuated and they were the only ones there.

The day after Christmas the enemy attacked. The Philippine Scouts were completely outnumbered but they managed to hold off the enemy until the morning of December 28 when they pulled back to San Miguel, Tarlac and celebrated there an anxious New Years.

On January 2 the sergeant's battery commander was hit and had to be evacuated to a hospital. Four days later the hospital was evacuated to Balaan and Sgt. San Luis accompanied his commander there.

Reporting back to his unit he was assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Battery. The fighting was hard the sergeant recalls "and the rations were limited to two meals a day and it was later cut to one". Hard-pressed and weary from continually repelling the charges of the numerically superior enemy, Sgt. San Luis and his outfit were finally captured and three days later began the murderous Bataan Death March.

"For seven days and six nights we marched," the sergeant says, "and the only food we got was what we could get from the people lined up along the road watching us go by. After the fifth day the guards let us rest for about 25 minutes. Some guys, sick and wounded, just couldn't take it and fell out. About 100 began the march and only 36 finished so almost two thirds died along the way."

When the survivors got to the railroad junction they were loaded into cars and packed so tight that "you couldn't sit down". They were then taken to Camp O'Donnell which the enemy was using as a Prisoner of War camp. This was a familiar and ironic sight to Sgt. San Luis as Camp O'Donnell was his old basic training area.

He spent 114 days in the camp which was soon overflowing with allied prisoners. To rectify this impossible situation some Philippino prisoners were released under the condition that they report to the chief of police of their town every Saturday morning. Sgt. San Luis was one of these.

He returned to his town but pleaded too ill to report on the day ordered. A much needed rest followed and then he slipped out of town and with several of his buddies joined a guerrilla unit.

He fought with the guerrillas until the end of the war and in October 1945 he was able to report to military control and see his name taken off the missing-in-action list.

Since then Sgt. Luis has had many assignments in many areas ranging from Manila to Japan, but "compared to the old days," says the sergeant, "things today are pretty dull."

ROAD Brings Changes To 2nd Division Artillery

By 38th Artillery PIO

The reorganization of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery has left changes in the makeup of the individual artillery units. For example, a service battery has been added to each artillery battalion.

This mission of the service battery is exactly that which the name implies, to provide support and services for the Headquarters Battery and firing batteries of the artillery battalion. The service battery consists of the battalion ammunition, supply and maintenance sections.

In addition to the new service battery, another firing battery has been added to each battalion which makes the battalion much larger and greatly increases its potential firepower.

Since the inactivation of the 2nd Division's 27th Artillery Battalion, the 38th Artillery Battalion's service battery has moved into the area formerly housing Battery A of the 27th Artillery. The officers and enlisted men of the new battery are busy fixing up and improving their area.

Commander of the 38th Artillery's service battery is Lt. Charles E. Bennett, formerly executive officer of Headquarters Battery, 27th Artillery. Service battery first sergeant is MSgt. Richard E. Smart who previously served as chief of firing battery, Battery A, 38th Artillery Battalion.

Sgt. Clash served in Thule, Greenland, before his assignment to the 15th Artillery in April 1959. He served as chief of firing battery for Battery B of the 15th until July 1962, when he took over as first sergeant of Headquarters Battery of the 15th.

Schooled at Sill, Pvts. Serve 38th

By 38th Artillery PIO

Four artillerymen schooled at Fort Sill, Okla., have arrived to put their training to practical use with Battery A, 38th Artillery.

New arrivals include Pvt. Lawrence Davenport, a native of Brookfield, Mo., working in the fire direction center; Pvt. Jimmie Kinnel, from St. Louis, Mo., and Pvt. Dale Coorough of Downey, Calif., both assigned to Howitzer sections as cannoneers; and Pvt. Arthur Ouelette, a native of Tilton, N. H., working as a driver and radio-telephone operator.

Erratum

For those who had the foresight to save the chart printed in the March 1 issue of THE BAYONET concerning ROAD division structure, there is an important change. The 1st Battalion, 38th Artillery should read the 1st Battalion of the 12th Artillery. THE BAYONET regrets this inconvenience.

'Always First' Athlete Excels in All Sports

By 1st Infantry PIO

Recently assigned to Company D, 1st Infantry was Sp4 Vernon R. Coleman, a man with a sparkling career in the world of sports.

Coleman's sports career began in junior high school in San Francisco, Calif., where he led the Marina Junior High School basketball team to the City Championship and averaged 15 points per game to help his team compile a 19-3 record for the season.

Sophomore

In 1957, Coleman, as a junior at George Washington High, upped his percentage to 18 points per game and again led his team to victory in the annual Christmas Tournament. As a senior he helped put his team in the runner-up spot for the City Championship.

Entering City College of San Francisco in 1958, the young Pacific Coast athlete majored in Social Welfare studies and added to his sports record, participating in basketball, football, baseball and track.

League Title

During the two seasons he played basketball for City College, he averaged 17 points a game and twice helped his college win the Big Eight Junior College Conference title. In these same years, he participated in track and ran the 100 and 220-yard sprints and competed in the broad jump. Again his college won the Big Eight Conference title in track for the two years he participated in this sport.

In August 1960, Coleman entered the Army at Fort Ord, Calif., where he took basic and advanced infantry training, after which he was assigned to the 2nd Armor Rifle Battalion, 48th Infantry in Germany.

Serving with this outfit, he played division level football at the offensive end position throughout Europe. He also played basketball for the 48th Infantry and averaged 26 points a game.

In 1961 he played baseball in the outfield for the 3rd Armor Division team and batted a .300 average for the season.

Not only has he an outstanding career in basketball, football, baseball and track but also in competitive shooting with the automatic rifle, firing on the 3rd Armor Division Marksmanship Detachment team. His best score is 291 points out of a possible 300.

Standing 6-feet tall and weighing 174 pounds, Coleman has lived all his life in San Francisco and is one of twelve children, having five brothers and six sisters.

Greasy Pole Test Won By Rhodes

By 3rd Brigade PIO

A greasy pole climbing contest took place recently behind Service Club Two. Sp5 Terry L. Rhodes, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry was the "slicker" who won the prizes.

Pvt. Harold Loshaw and Pvt. Roger Severson, both of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, were the two runners-up. A sign on top the slippery shaft was the certificate for "best of show."

A prize worth ten dollars went with the honors. Rhodes asked that the prize be split three ways. "Those two worked just as hard as I did," he commented.

According to Sgt. Jessie Green, noncommissioned officer in charge of Service Club Two, the contest is held on the last Saturday of each month.

Division Soccer Fans Form Team

By Bill Keane

Imagine for one minute 100,000 people standing on the concrete seats of a stadium in Italy or Germany or South America; 100,000 people, their hands in the air, their mouths spitting words in a foreign tongue, their feet stamping wildly on the cement; feel the tension grow to an irresistible pace, the hearts beating faster; watch 22 men, two opposing teams and a ball, a green rectangle of grass and two goals. This is soccer!

Jaws hang, eyes fix with awe on one little dot of a man with a leather ball at his feet, running the lonely distance between himself and the goal. There is a sudden silence and then a roar, a fiery breath of voices from the crowd fills the air with a bursting sound. Goal! This is soccer.

This urge to play soccer has been heeded by a group of soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, all of whom are from Europe or South America. The team's name, New York "Inter" (International), expresses the varied nationalities of its members, the majority of whom now call New York their home.

The team, at this stage, is not ready for competition. In time its members will become acquainted with each other's style of playing, and the team will be ready. The guiding principle of the New York "Inter" is to provide enjoyment for its members and for the people who, they hope, will eventually be watching the games. When rotated to Germany with the 23rd Infantry, the men of the New York "Inter" will challenge teams in organized competition through Army channels. The equipment necessary for the functioning of the team will be bought with funds raised by its members.

The present membership consists of Tano Cipolla, Tomo Zuvic, Anthony Marucci, Basyli Waniuk and Waldemar Rosin of Company A, 23rd Infantry; Dieter Koepke, Hans Wolf, Erich Kohler and Mario Gattorna of Company C, 22rd Infantry; Herman Montesinos of the 2nd Engineers; and Dino Miccoli of Company B, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

IT'S A BIRD, IT'S A . . . It's the 38th Infantry's Russell Anderson, driving for a two-point lay up despite blocking efforts by Thomas Coleman of 8th Division Trains. The 2nd Division's men in Germany, due back at Fort Benning in mid-April, went on to down Trains by a 74-73 score.

Post All-Stars Stop Women Professionals

The ladies of the Hazel Walker's famed Arkansas Traveler Basketball Team marched on to Fort Benning last Sunday to meet the post All-Stars with hopes of adding another victory to their list. But they were surprised by the Fort Benning men, 68-58.

Playing before a near capacity crowd of almost 3,000 at the Briant Wells Field House, the gals from the razorback country delighted the fans with their superb ball handling and fancy plays.

Against the Fort Benning "All Stars", Miss Walker's gals managed to keep the men basketball stars off balance enough to knot the score at 29-29 as the first half drew to a close. Big Harold Deane led the Benning cagers with 16 points, but right on his tracks was Frances 'Goose' Garroutte of the Travelers with 16 points.

The All-Stars controlled the second half tip-off and managed to pull ahead by 15 points, but Gina Wood put the girls back into the game with three straight buckets. Two minutes later the Travelers regained the lead, 53-52.

Fort Benning's defense went to work, limited the girls to just two points in three minutes of play while Deane turned loose for 10 points and giving the All-Stars a nine-point lead.

Toby Rayborn allied for two consecutive baskets, but the fast-breaking All-Stars had too much of a commanding lead and as the buzzer sounded the Benning cagers had a 68-58 victory.

Deane was the top scorer for the All-Stars with 30 points. Teammate George Bell also hit in double figures, ending his afternoon play with 22.

More than 150 of the United States' top Track and Field athletes invaded Madison Square Gardens last Saturday to compete in the National AAU Games.

Competing in this classic of indoor events were some of the East coast's most powerful track teams with Manhattan, Villanova leading the list of eleven colleges and nine athletic clubs entered.

The newest addition to this list of entries was the U. S. Army team, composed of 15 former college and university track stars selected by the Department of the Army for national competition. On this 15-member squad were three representatives from Fort Benning. They were 2nd Lt. Lee Martin, former Morgan State College 880 yard runner; Sp4 Godfrey Moore from Winston-Salem University, competing in the broadjump; and PFC Leo Zani, three-miler from the University of Kentucky.

Under the coaching of Maj. Jessie Liscomb, the Army team started its training in mid-January at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. After two weeks of rigid training, Coach Liscomb's "harriers" entered their first meet in Philadelphia, which was followed by the Millrose Games in New York. The following week, the team competed in the Baltimore Relays. Then it returned to New York for the Athletic Club Games.

In the New York AC Games, the fast - improving Army team brought on the excitement of the crowd. In the pole vault, Army man Henry Wadsworth, former National AAU champ and winner in the Baltimore Game, missed in his attempt to clear 16 feet and had to settle for second place. In the 600 yard event, Army runners finished one-two as national champ Jack Yeaman set a new meet record and Ollan Cassell grabbed second place.

Army's Roy Hicks finished second in the 60-yard high hurdles. Ronald Zinn captured first place in the one mile walk for the Army, while in the shot put, former Auburn University athlete, Dick Crain of Army finished second to world record holder Gary Gubner of NYU.

Fort Benning's Godfrey Moore placed third in the running broadjump behind Igor Ter - Ovanesyan of Russia, and national champion Ralph Boston of Tennessee. Bob Poynter picked up third place for the Army in the 60-yard dash while the Army one - mile relay team was busy grabbing top honors in that event.

As the meet drew to a close, the Army team finished in fourth place in the total point column in what was perhaps the busiest meet of the New York season.

YAC Teams Undefeated

After five weeks of hardwood action in the five Youth Activities Club basketball leagues, only Team No. 2 in the Main Post Biddy League, Team No. 3 in the Custer Terrace Biddy League and Team No. 3 in the Off-Post Custer Terrace Doughboy League remain undefeated.

Team No. 2, led by Bill McClean, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Neal A. McClean, knocked off Team No. 3, 12-6, to grab the top spot in the Main Post Biddy League, with a 5-0 record.

In the Custer Terrace Biddy League played at Wilbur School, Team No. 3 owns a 4-0 mark, downing Team No. 2. Mike Guthrie, son of SFC and Mrs. Harris H. Guthrie, bagged 7 points.

Led by Michael Roy Moor, son of Sgt. Maj. and Mrs. Roy E. Moor, No. 3 recently defeated Team No. 2, 58-29, at Loyd School. Michael scored 15 points.

Competition To Be Keen At Olympics

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Head coach at the University of California believes that neither the United States nor Russia will run away with the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

The coach, Brutus Hamilton, says that other countries have not exactly been standing still.

The track and field mentor noted the progress of New Zealand, Germany, Australia, Japan, Luxemburg, France and England.

Admitting that the United States and Russia have, at present, the best men in such events as the shot-put, high jump and broad jump, Coach Hamilton explained that the "extremely rapid improvement in the sprints and distances."

Mr. Hamilton agrees with President Kennedy that the physical fitness of American youth can be improved. The Pacific Coast coach believes each person should be more conscientious about his own physical appearance.

YAC SWIMMER . . . Nancy Woodall, Youth Activities Club swimming team, climbs out of the pool after winning the 100-meter free-style for girls 13 and 14 years old. Nancy, the daughter of Sgt. Maj. (Ret.) and Mrs. Virgil P. Woodall swam the distance in 1:19.3 during a recent meet in which YAC defeated the Columbus YMCA and YWCA at Fort Benning's Briant Wells Field House.

WACs in Action Twice

Fort Benning's league leading WAC basketball team, possessors of a 7-1 mark, takes on two opponents this weekend at Briant Wells Field House.

On Saturday Fort Bragg, N. C., will be at the post for a contest at 7 p.m. and on Sunday Fort Rucker, Ala., will meet the Fort Benning sextette at 2 p.m.

Trick Golfer Set to Appear At Local CC

Paul Hahn, considered by many to be the greatest trick shot artist in the game of golf, is scheduled to give a one-hour performance at the post Country Club March 22 at 5 p.m.

The Hahn show, which is open to the public, will offer a wide variety of trick shots with ever type of golf club imaginable. His golf bag, known as "The Bag of Tricks", contains over 90 pounds of clubs, trick gadgets and stunt items. Some of his clubs have rubber shafts made of garden hose, some are swivel jointed and others weigh 10 pounds and have shafts six feet long.

Wide Variety Of Tricks

Hahn's doubleaction series of shots is one of his most famous. Twelve balls are teed up in line and with a club in each hand, then, swinging alternately forehand and backhand, he hits 12 straight one-handed shots.

Hahn will hit off tees a yard high on one shot, kneel to hit the ball on another, balancing on one foot to hit a third, and stand with one foot on a folding chair for another. All three balls will travel at least 240 yards down the fairway.

Career Began at 10

The wizard of trick golf began his career at the age of 10 and turned professional at 18 when he accepted a job to teach golf. After four years of sea duty in World War II, Hahn returned to golf as pro Hawaii.

In 1947 Paul entered the P.G.A tournament circuit, but in '48 found the going too rough, so he finished the season at the Glen Oak Country Club in Chicago. It was here he first began to perfect the talent that was to lead to his present career.

Hahn has been seen in many network TV programs, including The Ed Sullivan Show, The Arthur Godfrey Show, "I've Got a Secret", Truth or Consequences and "Who Do You Trust?".

Jewish Personnel Set For Purim Festival

Jewish personnel here will celebrate the Festival of Purim which begins at sundown Saturday and continues until sundown Monday.

The "Megillah" (Scroll of Esther) will be read at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Main Post Jewish Center, Bldg. 1071. A gala Purim Festival for adults will follow the reading.

Purim services will be conducted Sunday at 8:30 a.m. at the Center.

The Jewish observance of Purim is based on the Biblical Book of Esther. The narrative is a story of one man's defiance of a dictator.

Approximately 2,400 years ago in Persia, Haman, prime minister to King Ahasuerus, commanded that all the people in the land should bow to him.

One man alone, a Jew named Mordecai, refused to bow to Haman, saying, "I bend the knee before God alone, the only living One in Heaven above."

When Haman was told what Mordecai said, he vowed to kill not only Mordecai, but every Jew in Persia. The prime minister succeeded in tricking King Ahasuerus into approving the plan.

The Queen of Persia was Esther, a Jewish orphan who had been reared by her cousin, Mordecai.

Hearing the true story from Queen Esther, the king permitted the Jews to arm and defend themselves. Ahasuerus had Haman executed on a gallows the prime minister had prepared for Mordecai.

Each year, on Purim Eve, the Book of Esther, called the Megillah in Hebrew, is read in synagogues and chapels throughout the world. The season is celebrated with prayers of thanksgiving for the triumph of faith over hatred.

Disabled Veterans Offered Exemption

Certain severely disabled war veterans are entitled to a $10,000 homestead exemption from all ad valorem state, county, municipal, and school taxes, according to Georgia Veterans Service Director Pete Wheeler.

In order to qualify for the tax exemption veterans must have incurred wartime in-service disability of "paraplegia or permanent paralysis of both legs and lower parts of the body resulting from traumatic injury to the spinal cord or brain, or by total blindness, or by the amputation of both legs or both arms."

Maps Steps To 1st Star

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — It is a long way to go from private to general, but it can be done, as Maj. Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, explains.

The general lays down a clear set of guidelines for that part of the journey which takes a man from enlisted status to West Point cadet in an article in the March issue of Army Information Digest titled, "The Path to the Point."

Viet Nam Soldiers Swap Livestock for 'K' Rations

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AFPS)—The squeal of pigs and the cluck of chickens will no longer be heard around the Vietnamese army. The soldiers are getting field rations—a Vietnamese version of the WWII K rations.

Up to now, the Vietnamese fighting man in the war against Red guerrillas would carry a rifle in one hand and two chickens or a pig in the other.

At mealtime the soldiers would halt for two hours while the livestock was slaughtered and cooked with rice.

Often the smoke from the cooking fires drew a Communist attack; other times the long meal break meant the loss of valuable pursuit time.

A Joint U. S. - Vietnamese study group has come up with prepared rations that a soldier carries without trouble and that give him 3,400 calories in three meals.

The rations consist of a can of fish cooked with tomato sauce, a can of pork cooked in meat sauce and a small packet containing sugar, pepper, salt, ginger jam, toothpicks, a can opener, and three packages of biscuits.

In April the biscuits will be replaced by three plastic containers half filled with dehydrated cooked rice which can be eaten in 20 minutes after water is added.

A soldier can eat the rice while walking. He will fill the plastic container with water, then place it inside his shirt so that his body heat will warm it.

Vietnamese officers have tried the rations, but whether the soldiers, used to fresh chicken and pork, will like them remains to be seen.

Your Dental Health

Variety of Stains Mar Your 'Pearly Whites'

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

Not long ago a mother asked me about stain on her young two - year - old's teeth, and in one of the local papers one of the letters to the editor mentioned a similar problem. So let's take a look at stains on teeth this week.

Most of the color which you see on a child's teeth which is not the pearly white we expect is due to local causes. Many of you might be surprised at the amount of color and the variety of color we see. Some of it, of course, is very temporary but quite startling.

Almost every child is captivated at some time in his life by the wierd and exotic colors he sees on his teeth and in his mouth after eating blueberry pie, drinking some raspberry flavored drinks or chewing a brilliant green chlorophyll mint. Rarely, our more adventurous children get hold of a bottle of food coloring and their oral cavity and teeth can have a startling, even hideous, appearance.

Finally, in recent weeks, almost every parent on post has been exposed to the red-toothed rascal, the child who has received one of the dental kits with the disclosing wafers.

Wafers Tell Tale

These wafers help to show the accumulations on the teeth and may help us to understand other colorations. If a child has a coating on the teeth which is not completely removed each time he brushes, this can be the beginning of colored stain or as we usually call it, pigmentation. This coating serves as a dwelling place for many bacteria. Some of these are chromogenic or color-producing. These bugs produce colors usually in the orange or green range.

Prevention is simple, brush the teeth immediately after each meal or snack. However, if the stains are old, it sometimes requires a dentist or dental hygienist to remove them.

Occasionally children, and even adults have teeth discolored by medicines, particularly those containing iron. In fact, they almost look like rusty teeth. This too can be prevented by thorough rinsing or brushing immediately after taking the medicine.

These discolorations do not occur when the medicine is taken in tablet or pill form, but sometimes your physician would rather you take it as a liquid.

Finally, there are the discolorations which are due to substances deposited in the teeth during development or as a result of some abnormal condition. These may be difficult or impossible to prevent, often because the defect is not noted until too late.

Prevention

Again, to prevent discoloration of the teeth, keep them clean by brushing after each meal or snack. The parents should clean the baby's teeth until he's about 3, and then should help him by close supervision and guidance for the next few years. A cotton swab is useful on the very small child and then about the time he starts eating a regular diet, a soft small brush can be used.

If you are in doubt about the cause of the discoloration, take the child to the family dentist.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741

Passengers Fly Safely With MATS

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Military Air Transport Service (MATS), in 969,000 flying hours last year, recorded only three accidents among its more than 500 aircraft, resulting in a new low rate of .47 accidents per 10,000 flying hours. The 1961 rate was .51.

In addition to the global airlift force, MATS, under command of Lt. Gen. Joe W. Kelly, operates another 500 specialized aircraft such as helicopters, search planes and data gathering aircraft.

BLUING FUNCTION

Bluing is a "cosmetic" which makes yellowed clothes look white. It does not clean the clothes. This can be done only with plenty of soap or detergent suds.

Exercise Begun by Special Warfare Students

Headquarters of the Army's Special Warfare Center at Fort Bragg, N. C., Monday opened Exercise Water Moccasin III, at Fort Stewart, Ga., and in a 2,500 - square mile area surrounding the post.

Purpose of the exercise is to provide practical training following six weeks of classroom instruction.

Exercise Water Moccasin IV will be conducted from June 5 to 30 with similar exercises planned for subsequent graduating classes of the Special Warfare School.

Allied Officers

Water Moccasin III will train U. S. officers, along with 124 officers from 17 Allied nations in the type of guerrilla-counter-guerrilla warfare being waged presently in Viet Nam. Approximately 600 men, including 40 students and 200 members of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N. C., will participate in the special warfare training.

Countries represented and the number of students from each country include Canada, 2; Republic of China, 19; France, 1; Great Britain, 1; Guatamala, 2; Indonesia, 6; Iran, 6; Italy, 1; Japan, 1 Republic of Korea, 9; Liberia, 4; Pakistan, 3; Philippines, 3; Spain, 3; Thailand, 24; Turkey, 8, and the Republic of Viet Nam, 40.

The exercise began with the establishment of a simulated guerrilla band on the Fort Stewart reservation. This force is composed of students and U.S. soldiers from the XVIII Airborne Corps.

Student officers supported by elements of the 7th Special Forces group will be infilterated by air and sea into the exercise area to establish contact with the simulated guerilla forces.

A counterinsurgency force consisting of student officers and a rifle company of the 82nd Airborne Division then will be brought in from Fort Bragg to seek out and "destroy" the guerrilla forces. The closely supervised troops will operate in small bands, practicing the raids and ambushes that characterize unconventional combat.

Civilian Participation

All activities involving the local civilian populace during the conduct of the small-scale operation are fully coordinated in advance with the local civil authorities before any exercise.

Token participation by local citizens and communications media in the area is arranged on a voluntary basis.

During previous exercises of the same type, particularly in the neighborhood of Pembroke, Ga., civilians have voluntarily supported and participated in the counter - guerrilla games, and have contributed materially to the realism of the training.

During their two weeks in the field, the student officers will practice the techniques they have learned in the psychological operations, counter-insurgency and unconventional warfare courses at the Special Warfare School.

The U. S. officers in the courses are prepared for special forces and psychological operations and assignments, often as advisors to nations threatened by Communist insurgency.

Fleet-Winged Bald Eagle Still Hunted by Historian

When it isn't ducking the shot of hunters, the bald eagle can generally be found sitting atop any flag pole in the United States.

Naturalists say there are fewer than a thousand pairs of the once abundant species left in the country. However, the eagle's problems do not end with the threat of extinction.

Historians have attacked the bird's status as the proud and soaring symbol of the Republic from the day of its Congressional designation in 1782 on the Great Seal.

On the Great Seal the bird is depicted holding in its beak a ribbon bearing the Latin words E Pluribus Unum. The arrows in its left claw represent the power of Congress to make war and the olive branch in its right claw stands for the hope of peace.

The serenity of the bald eagle's flight together with the bird's strength offers a close analogy to American philosophy and belief.

Benjamin Franklin, a member of the committee assigned to choose the Seal of the United States and a true turkey man himself, showed his preference by stating that the turkey was a more respectable bird and a true native of North America.

Other historically-minded individuals dissatisfied with eagles have unsuccessfully suggested replacing the eagle and the Great Seal with an Indian, the head of the Statue of Liberty, or a miniature replica of the original Bill of Rights.

Future Para-Medics Receive Jump Wings

Another example of inter-service cooperation was seen here Feb. 28 as 14 members of the U. S. Air Force's Rescue School at Orlando Air Force Base, Fla., completed the Army's basic airborne course.

The future air rescue technicians, or "para - medics," were among 508 servicemen who received Parachutist Badges at the completion of the Infantry School course.

For the airmen, this marks the first leg of a four-part course that will include medical training at Gunter AFB, Ala., survival training at Stead, AFB, Nev., and underwater training (Scuba diving) at the U. S. Naval Station, Key West, Fla.

The mission of para-medics is primarily concerned with evacuation of plane crews which have crashed in hard to reach spots and normal routes of travel aren't available. They also will be qualified to give on the spot medical aid.

Another part of their job concerns the recovery of packages of scientific data ejected from orbiting satellites. They only enter into this role if Air Force planes fail to catch the falling package. If this happens they parachute into the water and quickly inflate floats which keep the object from sinking.

A similar work is done with the manned satellite program.

Aircraft Trainees' Pay Hiked

Enlisted personnel below the grade of E-5 who enroll in the Army's primary fixed wing pilot course will automatically be promoted to E-5 for pay purposes, according to a Department of the Army change in regulations.

Formerly only those enlisted men enrolled in the officer candidate schools or in the primary rotary wing course received the promotion.

Completion of the 42-week course leads to a commission as a warrant officer and rating as an Army aviator.

Any enlisted man on active duty in the continental United States and having a high school education or the equivalency and who has completed basic combat training is eligible to enroll.

Copters At South Pole Army First

The Army flight team completed a topographic survey project in conjunction with the U. S. Navy's Air Development Squadron Six for the U. S. Geological Survey, and flew the remaining distance to the pole from Mount Weaver, 165 miles to the North.

The Army aircraft were transported to the Antarctic in early October, 1962, by the Air Force C-124 aircraft, and are presently serving with the Navy's Air Development Squadron Six.

The Navy's Antarctic squadron has been operating on the white continent for the past eight years. It provided aerial support for the scientific endeavors of the United States in that area during the International Geophysical Year of 1957-58.

Civilian Employe Gets $300 for Suggestion

A check for $300 to Rudolph L. Cook of Phenix City for a suggestion which is expected to save $29,338 annually, was the highest monetary award given at recent Incentive Award presentations here.

Cook, a petroleum inspector in The Infantry Center's Supply Control and Storage Section, suggested the installation of an underground storage tank and two dispensers. The savings are due to the lower purchase price of solvent in bulk.

Monetary awards totaling $360 went to 15 civilian workers for proposals they made under the Army's suggestion program.

Five other civilians received awards of $25 for their suggestions. They were Charles W. Parks, Martin G. Frost, Mrs. Margaret T. Turner, Leroy Garner and Edmund H. Keierleber.

Awards of $15 went to eight civilians employed by The Infantry Center. They were William R. Langford, Joseph C. Morrow, Charles L. Lloyd, Michael G. Skoglund, James H. Warnack, Johnnie L. Clifton, George Rutledge and Mrs. Erika M. Certain.

Letters of appreciation were presented to six civilians for job improvement proposals. They were Harry C. Wood, Betty J. Hall, Mrs. Florence N. Pearce, Owen W. Brown, John W. Evans and Edward L. Murphy.

Clarence T. Hinton was given an outstanding job rating and a sustained superior performance award of $150.

Mrs. Marian B. Burns also received a sustained superior performance award of $150.

Six employees received outstanding job ratings and sustained superior performance awards of $100. They were Walter W. Rinehart, Johnny B. Goodwin, Mrs. Betty B. Hollis, James L. Adams, Nathan J. Jones and Cecil C. Scarborough.

Two civilian workers received sustained superior performance awards of $100. They were Johnnie B. Chester and Robert K. McLaughlin.

Servicemen In Viet Nam Hit 12,000

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — There are now 12,000 U.S. military personnel in the Republic of Viet Nam, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Earle G. Wheeler said in Saigon early in February.

Most of these, the general said, were working in aviation or as advisors to Vietnamese forces.

General Wheeler, who spent a week there inspecting war zones, said he thinks the support and understanding by the American people of the U.S. action in Viet Nam is spotty.

New School Is Proposed

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy has asked Congress for action to create a new academy to train civilians who serve the nation overseas.

The President noted that nearly one million Americans are serving the nation abroad and that their operations involve nearly every government department and agency.

The new establishment would be named the National Academy of Foreign Affairs and be located in or near the District of Columbia.

State Department officials have said that the department still would obtain recruits for the diplomatic corps from graduates of private institutions and these then would go through training courses at the new academy with persons already in foreign service.

Degrees would not be granted from the academy and there would be no set time length for the training program.

Capt. Joyner New Adjutant For Hospital

Capt. Joyner entered the service in August, 1948, and completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C. He was commissioned as a first lieutenant in the U. S. Army Reserve in April, 1953.

He came here June, 1962, and served until recently as administrative officer of the hospital's Outpatient Service.

Capt. and Mrs. Joyner have two daughters, Taryn Angela, 7, and Tanya Romina, 5, and a son, Martin Theron, 2.

Cake sales, car washes, socials, dances, initiation, Christmas carroling, and Panama City — so goes the year when you are a member of the Sigma Delta Beta Sorority of Fort Benning.

The SDB's have been a part of the post under its present name and constitution since 1953.

Two weeks ago the club's newest members went through their last night of initiation, on a Friday night. On the following Sunday they were inducted in a ceremony at the Main Post Chapel. After the induction, the new members entertained the old members with a dinner at the home of Lt. Col. and Mrs. W. D. Monagle on Miller Loop. This Sunday the new members and their mothers will be honored guests at a tea at the home of Col. and Mrs. K. E. Eckland on Baltzell Ave. Mrs. James Duke and Mrs. Joseph DeMarco will be hostesses for the affair which will be attended by all sorority members and their mothers.

The new members, Johnette Brickhouse, Nancy Clodfelder, Kay Eckland, Susan Holbrook, Sue McMonagle, Maureen Lauderdale, and Marty Smith bring the sorority membership up to 35. At the present time 19 of the girls are from Columbus High and eight are from each Baker and Pacelli.

Making money is the primary objective of the sorority for the next two months. At Easter, the club will give baskets of food to needy families, as they did at Christmas and Thanksgiving.

Then, the following week-end, the girls and a number of chaperones will journey to Panama City, Fla., to enjoy the sun, surf and sand.

The newly elected officers of the sorority find that they are taking office at a time when esprit de corps is at its peak in the organization, for all the girls are working hard to make this month's money making projects successful.

Sandy Duke, will serve as president of the group until next September. Her vice - president will be Priscilla Moore. Kathy Ann and Nevile Brickhouse will fill the slots of recording and corresponding secretaries respectively. The important job of treasurer will soon be in the hands of Terri Setaro. Linda Taft will be the new property mistress, and Lloyd Heekin will be Sigma Delta Beta's chaplain until next fall.

The Sigma Delta Beta Sorority plays an important role in life at Fort Benning. The members of the club choose with care the girls they want to be their "sisters", and work hard to fulfill the purpose of the sorority — to form an active, social, and charitable group from the girls of the post.

West German Missile Unit Has Sergeant

FORT SILL, Okla. (ANF)— West Germany's 2 Sergeant missile battalion, Artillerie Battalion 150, has left Fort Sill, Okla., for White Sands Missile Range, N. M., where they will become the first non-U.S. Army unit to fire the sergeant since it was declared operational last August.

The battalion, commanded by Maj. Albrecht Kuehne, has been at Fort Sill since early October receiving instruction and training on the Sergeant. An ordnance detachment, attached to the battalion, joined them at Fort Sill in December after completing Sergeant training at the U. S. Army Guided Missile School, Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala.

During their four months at Fort Sill, the battalion has received both individual and unit training on the Sergeant from the 1st FA Missile Brigade and the Guided Missile Department of the Artillery and Missile School at Fort Sill.

The German officers of the battalion attended the Sergeant Officers Course at the school from October to December. Twenty-five German noncommissioned officers took the Sergeant Missile Battery Course. Instruction was prepared by the Guided Missile Department and translated for the students by members of the German Liaison Office at Fort Sill.

UNKNOWN SOLDIER

The Tomb of The Unknown Soldier is situated on the east front of the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater facing Washington across the Potomac.

Adm. Byrd's Polar Ship Will Become Museum

PHILADELPHIA (AFPS) — "The stoutest ship ever built," they called her when she was launched in 1874 at Greenock, Scotland. And well she needed her oaken planks sheathed with Australian ironbark and the steel plate that covered her bow.

She was the 198-foot Bear, a three-master powered by both steam and sail and destined for a stormy and heroic history in polar waters. Most famous as Bear of Oakland, the ship that took Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd and his second expedition to the Antarctic in 1933, she is coming out of retirement for a third time to be converted to a floating museum and restaurant.

The 89-year-old bark is now at Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, being fitted for her voyage by tow to take up her new duty in the Delaware. It will be a placid "twilight tour" for a ship that was a legend in her youth.

The Bear, sailing out of St. John's, Newfoundland, made yearly trips to the North Atlantic sealing grounds before the United States bought her in 1883 as a rescue vessel for the Greely Expedition, stranded and starving on icebound Ellesmere Island.

The gallant ship battled grinding ice floes and giant seas but she got through in time to save the seven survivors of the 25-man party. In the years that followed she was Revenue Marine Bering Sea patrol, delivering mail, supplies, missionaries, and once mowing an entire Eskimo village.

The Bear's captain performed native marriages. Her doctor served remote areas. Her crew mapped coasts and protected game, timber and the seal herd. On one occasion, with Alaska's wild caribou badly depleted, the ship ferried reindeer from Siberia to establish the first herd in North America.

After 40 years of polar hazards, the Bear was decommissioned and became an Oakland Calif., maritime museum. The Byrd Expedition brought her back to active duty and again she proved her mettle. "'I know she was never in worse ice,'" the admiral wrote later. "'It couldn't have been worse.'"

The sturdy old ship was retired again but WWII brought her back for Atlantic patrol duty which included towing a captured German supply ship into Boston.

TO ATTEND MEET

Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, director of instruction of the Fort Benning Children's Schools, will attend the 18th annual meeting of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development Sunday to Thursday in St. Louis, Mo. He will serve as chairman of the "Job-Alike Discussion Group."

Senior NCOs Assigned To Air Assault Division

As the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) grows in number, the possibilities of former members of its historic parent unit joining the Army's youngest division become greater.

This happened recently when three senior non-commissioned officers were named to fill key slots in the division.

The NCOs and their assignments are Sgt. Maj. James A. Smith, sergeant major of the 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery; MSgt. (E-8) Joe Haluski, sergeant major of the 1st Air Assault Brigade, and MSgt. Heber W. Clegg, first sergeant of the 711th Maintenance Company, 11th Air Assault Division Support Command.

Sgt. Clegg was assigned to the 11th Airborne Division, hard fighting predecessor of the air assault unit, shortly after entering the Army in October, 1946. He was trained at Fort Knox, Ky., and then transferred here for airborne training. Then it was off to Japan and the 11th.

He participated in the Korean Conflict with 232nd Signal Construction Company. After his tour in Korea he went to Red River Arsenal, Tex., Sgt. Clegg served as an instructor in the Automotive Department of The Infantry School from 1952 until 1954.

Korea Again

His third trip to Korea came in August, 1961. After his tour he again was assigned to the Third Army Missile Command as sergeant major. He came to the 11th Division from Fort Bragg.

Sgt. Haluski enlisted in the Army in September, 1935. He was sent to Fort Davis, Panama Canal Zone. During World War II he served with the 1st Infantry Division in Africa, Sicily and Germany as first sergeant.

He returned from Europe in July, 1945, and was discharged from the Army. In June 1948 he reenlisted and served with the Weapons Department of The Infantry School. During the Korean Conflict he served with the 45th Infantry Division. In 1952 he returned to the Weapons Department.

After his European tour he joined the 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, here. He came to his new assignment from the 2nd Infantry Division.

Sgt. and Mrs. Haluski have two children, Joseph, 16, and Sophie Ann, 15.

Gen. Sutherland Briefed by ICDA

While here, Gen. Sutherland briefed Infantry School officials on the mission, organization and activities of CDEC. He was then briefed by Lt. Col. P. E. Nottage of ICDA on plans for organization and testing of the air assault division concept, and by Maj. A. E. Carpenter on visualization of Infantry-type combat operations in the 1970-80 time frame.

Remodeled Dayroom Opened by Headquarters Company of 197th Brigade

A symbolic ribbon - cutting Monday officially reopened the dayroom of Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 197th Infantry Brigade which recently underwent an extensive remodeling program.

Col. Richard W. Keyes, brigade commander, who officially reopened the newly remodeled dayroom, commented that the remodeling was "certainly extensive and imaginative.

Low silhouette coffee tables stained to match the oak panelling accent the reading room with a modern appearance.

The center of activity for the new day room is a coffee room complete with swinging doors, a coffee bar and red checkered table cloths. The coffee room also doubles as a card room in the evening and therefore is decorated on the playing card theme.

Included in the remodeling is a large three-dimensional, ceiling-high, wall-to - wall, troop information board — and education board and a Chaplain's Room replacing the conventional "Chaplains Corner."

The new religious room has three altars, representing three faiths, Catholic, Jewish and Protestant. Each altar has a kneeler with rail and all the necessary implements associated with the faith. The altars are of mahogany stain, topped with a white cloth and a red drape background.

Right to Independence Rests on Dedication

It takes only ten minutes to read the Declaration of Independence. But some of us have never bothered — either from lack of interest or simple indolence. This is pitiful, for it is the cornerstone of our free way of life, a written bulwark against imperialistic dictators.

Too many Americans think it guarantees them life, liberty, and happiness. Not at all — only the pursuit of happiness.

Every serviceman should know that no one but a selfish child claims the right to happiness. That life, that liberty, that happiness must be deserved — must be earned.

How do we earn them, how are they deserved? Certainly not by "existing" lazily in our hard won freedom. We must contribute and in doing so give more to the world than we take from it.

The worker must produce enough to pay not only for his wage but for the machine that enab leshim to have a job. The businessman must see that his workers get a fair wage and his stockholders a good return on their investments.

The politician works for the good of his country and places that goal above all others. And the serviceman — he above all others must be willing to pledge the ultimate sacrifice — his life, to defend it.

This is the real way to happiness. If we strive for shortcuts, take the easy way out or let greed take the place of honor, we are most certainly doomed.

Lt. Gen. Robert W. Colglazier Jr., Army logistics chief, told the Senate Armed Services Commitee that the new Mauler was "a completely self-contained self-propelled, air defense guided missile system" that could be launched from a tracked vehicle, a ship, a truck bed or "unprepared positions on the ground."

He said it can protect forward troop areas by hunting out and destroying "very low-flying high-speed tactical attack aircraft, and the various forms of battlefield ballistic missiles."

The House Subcommittee which has been considering the Defense Department's recommended Military Compensation Bill has come up with ideas of its own which could change the DOD bill in many respects.

Among the changes are a possible earlier effective date for the proposed pay raise. The subcommittee chairman, Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-S.C.), said the pay bill should be effective the first month following its enactment. He would allow anyone retiring during 1963 to compute his retired pay under the new bill instead of the 1958 pay scale.

Other changes would retain overseas and sea pay instead of the "isolated duty" pay recommended by Defense; establish a statutory $1.25 per day commuted rations rate; provide per diem of at least $1.000 per day for men on TDY for a month or more; increase proficiency pay rates; retain the present reenlistment bonuses, and give another longevity increase to E-4's.

Also recommended was a family separation pay for both officers and enlisted men.

Congressman Rivers said he favored the Defense plan to readjust retirement pay for those who retired before 1958 to the present rate, with a 5 per cent increase this year and automatic increases in the future whenever the cost of living goes up three per cent.

Use Caution in Selecting Company to Adjust Debts

A widely circulated U. S. magazine recently published an article under the heading: "Warning: The Debt Adjusters Are Back."

To hundreds and more likely thousands of servicemen this would hardly be news.

They could tell you firsthand of their experience with some debt adjusters who call themselves debt poolers, debt liquidators, proraters, debt managers or credit counsellors.

There are a number of legitimate, reputable debt adjusting agencies, one legal expert said, which render a very worthwhile service to clients at legal interest rates.

He cautioned, however, that before you turn your finances over to any company you should subject it to careful scrutiny for honesty and fair play.

Generally, debt adjusters operate in this manner:

To begin, we'll assume you have piled debts end-on-end and can't meet credit obligations.

In desperation you seek out a debt adjuster. You've seen his advertisement which reads: "Not a finance company. No interest. No co-signers. No security needed. We handle your debts for you. Inquiries from military personnel invited."

Your debt liquidator is agreeable. He will lump your bills into one tidy knot and take debt.

"Just sign this agreement and make a $25 deposit to cover our costs of opening books on you and contacting your creditors," he counsels you, and then adds: "This deposit is forfeit only in case you default on your agreement with us."

Once signed and sealed, your man attempts to work out a plan with your creditors whereby the adjuster pays them off on a regular basis.

Anyway, you've signed up, and the routine starts. All goes well for a few months and then up pops an emergency. You can't pay your adjuster.

Once the payment is missed your creditors hop on your adjuster. He simply says: "No payment to me—no payment to you."

Right here the bubble breaks. You've lost all of the fees and interest to the adjuster and still owe your debts.

The debt adjusters usually take their fee "off the top" of what ever you give them before they pay off your creditors. One now-defunct company collected $214 from a client but paid out only $38 to a single creditor.

The Better Business Bureau advises heavily involved debtors to avoid any step that will pile debt on top of debt.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Building Your Character

BY CHAPLAIN (Lt. Col.) EDWARD A. CURRAN
Deputy Post Chaplain

Good character rests on firm, deep convictions regarding moral and spiritual values. Convinced of the truth of these values, the man of good character voluntarily and consistently thinks, decides, and acts in accordance with these values in any given situation.

The man of good character is intensely aware of his personal, private, individual responsibility for his own actions and the consequences thereof. The decisions of the morally responsible man are deliberate free choices. He uses his freedom to act as man ought. He takes into account the fact that his decisions involve his fellowman.

His decisive actions are in accordance with the Divine, Moral and Natural Law which is above and beyond himself. He freely chooses what is morally right, avoids what is morally wrong.

The man of good character realizes and accepts the obligations imposed on him by his God-given freedom. If I have the right to be a man, then I have the obligation to act as a man ought. This realization and acceptance of moral obligation we call "Sense of responsibility." Without it, a man is not a man, but a liability.

Personal sense of responsibility is the source of highly desirable qualities. Loyalty, honesty, courage, dependability, self-reliance, consistency, fairness, obedience, willingness to sacrifice even to the point of death are but some of the manly virtues stemming from responsible character. Character is the measure of a man.

Obviously the nation, the family, the military can be no stronger than the character of each citizen. Hence a two-fold responsibility for character training and development devolves upon each of us. Every man constantly must strive to perfect himself through a personal program of self-discipline. In addition, those in leadership position, be they parents, clergy, educators, civil officials, or military, must initiate and maintain character programs to aid and encourage the development of those subject to their leadership. Hanging in the balance is liability or dependability.

NG, Reserve Enlistments Considered for Changes

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department has proposed to Congress changes be made in laws governing National Guard and Reserve enlistments to allow new enlistees to take sufficient initial active duty for training to be qualified in badly - needed "hard skill" MOS's.

All new enlistments would involve a standardized six-year obligation under the proposed plan. Present enlistments will remain effective under existing legislation.

Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance explained that enlistees under the new program, would be available for a quick call to active duty during a full or partial mobilization. In return, many would spend less time than the present six months on active duty training and some would volunteer to take longer specialized training which would qualify them for promotion and better civilian jobs.

The proposed program would establish one standard military obligation of six years in the Ready Reserve for all those enlisted between ages 17, and 26, with a flexible term of active duty depending on the length of the training course needed. At least four months of active duty for basic military training would be served in all cases.

Under present laws, a program featuring a six-month active duty period with a total service obligation of eight years has been restricted to Reservists enlisting between ages 17 and 18½. Those enlisted between 18½ and 26 serve a six-year period in the Ready Reserve.

Secretary Vance pointed out that the new program would be more equitable to present Guardsmen and Reservists with "hard skills" who have served two or three years of active duty as a result of periods of international tension, such as the Berlin crisis.

With newly-trained men in these vital specialties, those previously called to active duty who reverted to a no-drill status upon release would not likely have to serve again in any partial call-up of the Guard or Reserve forces.

Should You Try for Appointment To the U.S. Military Academy?

By Maj. Gen.
W. C. Westmoreland

"Should I compete for a West Point nomination?"

The interested young soldier must answer for himself. If he is interested in becoming a professional officer of the Regular Army through the challenge and opportunity offered by West Point, he will want to consider competing for nomination.

The academy is not an end in itself—it is a means toward a career in the profession of arms. As stated in Army Regulations, its purpose is "to instruct and train the Corps of Cadets so that each graduate will have those qualities and attributes essential for progressive and continued development throughout a lifetime career as an officer of the Regular Army."

Famed Motto

From its beginning in 1802, the Military Academy has produced men ready and able to serve their country and protect the Nation's security. The motto of the academy — Duty, Honor, Country — has been, and will continue to be, a soldierly creed for the American man-at-arms.

West Point offers a tough, fully accredited four - year course of instruction leading to a bachelor of science degree and a regular commission as a second lieutenant in the U. S. Army. Because of its high academic standards and exacting physical education programs, West Point is selective in its admissions process.

Although there is no exact way of measuring a young man's potential as a cadet, experience indicates that cadets who are the most successful have certain qualities: scholarship — a high academic standing in high school and excellent scores on standardized tests of scholastic aptitude and achievement; good moral character; physical fitness; motivation for a military career, and leadership potential, as measured by past activities and present ability to get along with his associates.

	Number	Pct.
Valedictorian or Salutian	87	10.8
President of student body or senior class	116	14.5
Editor of school pub.	134	16.6
Athletic team captain	220	28.9
All-state or all-conference athletic award winner	170	21.2
Athletic team member	124	15.5
Boys' State delegate	161	20.1
12th president	299	37.1
Eagle Scout	101	12.6

Such outstanding young men are sought by all educational institutions as well as by business and industry. It is in the national interest that the Military Academy continue to get its share of these exceptional young men and provide to them the rare opportunity offered by its comprehensive program emphasizing overall excellence.

Experience shows that the enlisted ranks of the U.S. Army and other Armed Services are good sources for this kind of man. The outstanding records of Gen. Paul D. Harkins, Gen. Bruce C. Clarke and Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin are evidence of this. All entered West Point from the enlisted ranks.

Among recent graduates who entered West Point on a Regular Army (competitive) appointment was Harold M. Hannon Jr., cadet first captain, and brigade commander, James R. Ellis, had one and one-half years of enlisted service before entering the Military Academy. Both Hannon and Ellis attended the U. S. Military Academy Preparatory School before entering West Point.

The pace of instruction at West Point is rapid and courses are rigorous. About 30 of every 100 entering cadets leave before graduation. Approximately 15 per cent of these losses are due to academic failure; the remainder leave through resignation, dismissal or for other reasons.

In the accomplishment of its mission, the Military Academy concentrates on the mental, moral, physical, and military development of the individual cadet.

Balanced Education

The academic program offers balanced education in arts and sciences, based on an undergraduate curriculum weighted approximately 60 per cent in the mathematics-science - engineering field, and 40 per cent in the social-sciences - humanities area.

The Honor Code at West Point, one of the most cherished possessions of the Corps of Cadets, is implemented by the cadets and serves as the keystone in developing integrity and a sense of honor.

The academy's physical education program is designed to develop strong, agile soldiers who can cope with the rigors of an active career. It includes a strenuous well-rounded course in body building and competitive sports. Group, team and individual sports, such as gymnastics, boxing, wrestling swimming, soccer, football, track, basketball and lacrosse are part of the program. Tennis, golf, squash and handball are taught in order that the cadet can continue in sports throughout an active career as an officer.

The military training received at West Point provides the cadet with a solid professional foundation on which he can build at a technical proficiency post-graduate civilian and service schools. Discipline is a marked part of cadet life. The academy, however, is more interested in the development of self - discipline than in mass discipline.

The young man who asks the question, "Should I compete for a West Point nomination?" will find a number of reasons for seeking admission to West Point in order to follow a military career. He will:

—Receive a broad and outstanding education.

—Establish and continue associations with men of high principle, men dedicated to the ideals for which this Nation stands.

—Serve his country and play a role in its history.

—Receive the satisfaction of being entrusted with ever-increasing responsibilities in an honorable and respected profession at a relatively youthful age.

—Be given the opportunity for advanced study. Some 60 per cent or more of graduates will continue their studies toward a master's or doctor's degree in some 30 major fields of study at leading universities.

—Travel as a representative of his country and observe at first hand the problems, cultures and peoples throughout the world.

Within Himself

The man who asks the question will find the answer within himself. If he has the interest and personal desire to compete—to be challenged —he should seek the candidacy.

Detailed information covering application procedures for military personnel seeking nomination to the U. S. Military Academy are contained in AR 350-55, with changes. Additionally, West Point encourages anyone interested to write directly for informational materials to Admissions Division, U.S. Point, N. Y.

West Point seeks young men from the Regular and Reserve ranks who are ready, willing and able to respond to the challenge it offers to build fitness for leadership — fitness, in all areas of human development, to lead the American soldier. The young man who seeks admission to the Military Academy should be aware of the opportunity and the challenge of the West Point program. He should anticipate the demands and satisfactions of an Army career.

MAJ. GEN. WESTMORELAND

Col. Wolman Is Assigned Embassy Duty

Lt. Col. Gus A. Wolman Jr., commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command (TICTC), has been designated for attache duty at the American Embassy in Hong Kong.

He is scheduled to depart the post in April, for Washington, D.C., where he will attend the Defense Intelligence School. This course will be followed by 12 months of training in the Chinese-Cantonese language at the Army Language School in Monterey, Calif.

Record Set By Army's Jump Team

Nine members of the Army team, nicknamed the "Golden Knights," jumped from a twin engine Caribou aircraft at an altitude of 6,561 ft. Opening their 'chutes at heights ranging from 1,800 feet to 3,400 feet, the jumpers landed an average of three meters from the center of the five inch target. The new mark cut in half the Soviet record set last May.

In 1962, 19 records fell to the team from a total of 160 possible standards. Accuracy of landing, highest altitude and longest free fall are some of the categories covered in the world marks. In December the team took seven more records in less than two weeks.

There is nothing magic about one of the Fort Benning-Columbus clubs, but it can make butterflies and clammy hands disappear.

That is if the butterflies are stomach ones and the damp, cool hands come while waiting to make that speech.

Timing, program planning, club procedures, parliamentary law and proper handling of speech situations are but a few of the measures used by this modern woman's society to enable the speaker to overcome her fears, gain confidence and conquer undesirable speaking habits and mannerisms.

"At an average Toastmistress meeting, usually held every first and third Monday of the month at the Ralston Motor Hotel in Columbus, there may be several speakers talking on a subject of their choice for several minutes each," Mrs. James P. Leighton, an active member of the club, explained.

"Later a member-evaluator points out the qualities of each speaker and suggests possible improvement," Mrs. Leighton continued. "Occasionally professional evaluators are used, but members are encouraged to develop skill in critical listening and evaluating."

Often short impromptu talks are also given on a subject assigned by a member "topicmistress," she said.

A final evaluation of the program and business session then completes the meeting.

Local P-TA's and various women's organization in Columbus and Phenix City, Ala., have asked Toastmistress to speak and present skits. Presently members are speaking in behalf of the Columbus Civil Defense. The Red Cross and the Columbus Mental Health Department or other groups members have supported.

This relatively new club, which is one of many the world over, is inviting new membership and all ladies of the Fort Benning - Columbus - Phenix City area are invited to attend.

It is headed by four Columbus ladies. Mrs. Genie Miller is president; Mrs. F. J. Friou is vice president; Mrs. Carolyn H. Holt, recording secretary, and Mrs. Myrl A. Simpson, treasurer.

On the immediate scene, a speech contest is scheduled for March 18 at the Ralston. Judges will be George Gingell, director of news and public affairs at WRBL-TV; Charles Ables, president of the Toastmasters; Mrs. Glenn Hatfield, a member of the English Department of Columbus College, and William F. Freeman from the Coordinator of Instruction Office at The Infantry School.

The winner will go to a council contest to be held in Montgomery, Ala., April 27, and from there, if still in the winners's bracket, she will go to the Southeastern Regional in New Orleans June 1-2.

The International Toastmistress Convention in San Francisco will cap the program, when the organization's finest speaker will be crowned.

Anyone interested in joining the club may telephone Mrs. Anthony Nezior at MU 7-1841, Mrs. Leighton at MU 7-2450 or Mrs. William Gray at LI 4-2909, for further information.

Gen. Rich Welcomes 250 ROTC Students

Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, welcomed 250 Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) cadets from four southern universities here March 8 as the second annual ROTC orientation began.

The two-star general told the prospective officers that the demonstration they would witness are some of the most realistic the Army has to offer, and expressed his hope that they would take back to their universities a better understanding of the Army.

After the general's remarks, the cadets — 90 from Auburn (Ala.) University, 40 from the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa, 50 from Florida State University and 70 from Florida A&M, both at Tallahassee — inspected a typical small unit's billets, dayroom, mess hall and supply room.

Observe Mortars

Before lunch, part of the group witnessed a firing demonstration of 81-mm mortars, while the remainder toured The Infantry Museum.

During the afternoon, the cadets toured The Infantry School's airborne training area, and saw a demonstration of the use of the Army's combined arms in a typical offensive maneuver.

The tour, under the direction of The Infantry Center's Reserve Components Section, was designed to give third year ROTC students an introduction to life in the Army.

Company, 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, went to the school for four weeks.

Sgt. Grady Clardy and Sgt. Richard Kemp taught the student cooks how to make salads, to make pastries, and to cook different meats and vegetables.

Pvt. Harper was the outstanding cook in the class.

Matthew R. Carlisle, has been appointed a member of the Employee Advisory Committee on Group Life Insurance for the U. S. Civil Service Commission in Washington, D. C.

An employee of The Infantry Center Engineer Section, Carlisle will serve on the committee for three years.

Ted Martin To Direct Production

The director of the Special Services Little Theater Groupe's upcoming production of "Send Me No Flowers," PFC Ted Martin, is a veteran of 25 plays, including such noted ones as "South Pacific," "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Oklahoma."

The play is scheduled for April 3-6 at 8 p.m. in the Playhouse.

Ted has attended Gannon College in Pennsylvania as well as drama schools in New York and California.

While in California, he appeared in a local television production of Charles Dicken's famous story, "A Christmas Carol."

Since being assigned to Fort Benning, he has appeared in the post's production of "Look Homeward Angel" and the Columbus (Ga.) Little Theater's production, "Dial M For Murder."

His present endeavor, "Send Me No Flowers," is about a hypochondriac who consistently is involved in one ludicrous experience after another.

Child-Proof Cabinet Lock Is Part Of Poisoning Prevention Drive

The locks, designed for safe storage of household items that constitute a threat to the life and well-being of young children, are being introduced at the Third U. S. Army area as part of the observance of National Poison Prevention Week, March 17 to 23.

In keeping with the spirit of President John F. Kennedy's proclamation which set aside the week as a time when attention will be focused on the proper storage, handling, and disposal of potentially toxic substances, Col. Angvald Vickoren, Third Army surgeon, has recommended that the lock be sold at military installations in the area.

Post Exchange officials have placed an order for the locks and will put them on sale at all PX's.

Locks Cabinet

Designed to lock an ordinary double-door cabinet, the device consists of a web belt that slips through the handle of each of two adjacent cabinet doors, then fastens securely.

In his proclamation, the President said approximately half a million children are accidentally poisoned each year by common household products and medicines.

Post officials said there has been a marked decrease in the number of accidental poisonings in recent months on the post.

In addition to making available the double-door cabinet locks to assist in safe storage of potentially dangerous items used in the home, officials urge personnel to exercise extreme care in the use and disposal of medicines and cleaning agents.

Candy-like tablets should be considered extremely dangerous, officials said. Baby aspirin is acetylsalicylic acid, a drug every one buys but few consider dangerous and children love to eat it.

Aspirin causes about one-fourth of the child poisoning fatalities in the nation each year. Many studies show that candy aspirin is responsible for 60 per cent of all aspirin poisonings.

A child should never be told that medicine is candy, officials said. Furthermore, aspirin should be kept under lock like any other deadly drug. If there is a child under five in the home.

Other Factors

Other factors parents should remember are never to give or take medicine in the dark; always shake a liquid medicine before measuring a dose; when measuring dosage, give it full attention, and give drugs to infants and young children only as directed by a physician.

Old medications should be discarded, but care must be taken to avoid creating a hazard in the method of disposal. Liquid medicines should be poured out and tablets or capsules should be flushed down the drain. Even the empty bottles should be rinsed out before they are placed in the trash can, officials said.

LEADING THE CHARGE FOR GALLANTRY
Spirit of Medal of Honor

Commemorating A Centennial

Heroes Are In Spotlight

By BERNARD J. MODDER

American Armed Forces this month mark the climax of a year-long campaign commemorating the 100th anniversary of the Medal of Honor. A very special ceremony Saturday at Fort Benning's Kelley Hill will stamp the memory of this medal and the gallantry of its recipients upon the very buildings of this post.

Col. Edgar R. Poole, commander of the division's 1st Infantry Saturday morning will assemble his battle group to dedicate 1st Infantry buildings at Kelley Hill.

Named for Heroes

The names chosen for these buildings may not sound familiar to most soldiers, but to men of the 1st, they will long be remembered as heroes who have been awarded the Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in combat while serving with the "Always First" Infantry.

Five buildings will be named after Medal of Honor holders or recipients of the Distinguished Service Cross. A heretofore nameless street will Become Luzon Drive, remembering the Luzon Campaign for which the battle group was awarded a campaign streamer with Arrowhead. The building housing the 2nd Infantry Division Noncommissioned Officer Open Mess after Sherrow's ceremony will be known as Apache Hall, celebrating the Indian War for which the 1st also received a campaign streamer.

The new names of the Kelley Hill buildings which up to this moment have been kept secret are to be Wood Hall, Long Barracks, Parsiola Barracks, Maus Hall and Rees Barracks.

Wood Hall housing battle group headquarters is named in honor of Lt. H. Clay Wood, 1st Infantry, who received the Medal of Honor for distinguished gallantry at Wilson's Creek, Mo., on August 10, 1861, during the Civil War.

The building presently occupied by Combat Support Company and Company E is to be Long Barracks in honor of Sgt. Charles R. Long, 38th Infantry, who received the Medal of Honor on February 12, 1951 for his courageous duty at Hoengsong, Korea.

The home of Companies A and B will be designated Parsiola Barracks in memory of Lt. (then PFC) Carl. H. Parsiola, 1st Infantry, who received the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action at Maffin Bay on June 24, 1944.

Intelligence CPX At Bragg to Use 'Second to None'

Officers and men from nine 2nd Division units will be at Fort Bragg, N. C., next week, either participating directly or serving as support elements in the XVIII Airborne Corps' OPERATION SPHINX III intelligence command post exercise.

The exercise is scheduled from March 19 to 22.

Division coordinating unit for the operation will be the division G-2 section, all members of which but one are traveling to Fort Bragg. The division's contingent will be headed by Lt. Col. Richards O. Stewart, division intelligence officer.

Perform Typical Missions

Purpose of the exercise at the division level is "to provide an opportunity for certain Strategic Army Corps' (STRAC) technical intelligence units to perform typical missions in the field."

Other division units or sections sending officers and men to Fort Braggg are the G-3 section, the 122nd Signal Battalion, the 25th Chemical Detachment, 2nd Military Intelligence Detachment, 2nd Division Headquarters and Headquarters Company, the 2nd Engineer Battalion, Division, Artillery and the 303rd Army Security Agency Battalion which will attach one officer and five enlisted men to the 313th ASA Battalion at Fort Bragg for temporary duty. All in all, 64 members of the "Second" to

The "mighty mite" unit of the 2nd Division is going to be at Fort Bragg, N. C., next week, backing up the division's G-2 section at the OPERATION SPHINX III intelligence exercise.

Without much fuss, the one officer and four-man 26th Chemical Detachment will load their equipment in a three-quarter ton truck and jog to Bragg as the smallest support element in the field.

These modern warfare experts, small in number, do a man-size job on exercises, analyzing simulated nuclear bursts and determining yield and identifying and combatting any chemical agents introduced by an "enemy." Officially, they handle the Chemical, Biological and Nuclear element.

Entertainment Contest, Art Show Set in March

By 3rd Brigade PIO

A calendar of activities ranging from the Enlisted Men's Advisory Counsel to the 1963 All-Army Entertainment contest are scheduled at Sand Hill's Service Club Two this month.

The enlisted men's council (EMAC) was reinstated recently for its first session since November 1962. Composed of enlisted personnel from all major units, its function is to advise and initiate action on club activities.

This month's activities include a St. Patrick's Day dance, the Big Indianhead Olympics, Art Exhibit and Contest, and the 1963 All-Army Entertainment Contest. On St. Patrick's Day, USO hostesses and Benning's WAC Company will be among the featured guests at a dance and floor show featuring local talent.

The Olympics, a project of the Big Indianhead Ladies, feature a variety of sports events March 24. An Art Exhibit and

Jan. Soldier At Review For Awards

By 3rd Brigade PIO

The 2nd Infantry Division's January Soldier-of-the - Month this week stood at a review at division headquarters to receive his awards. He is a squad leader in the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Sgt. Marion D. Masterson, of Company A, received a Certificate of Achievement, a wristwatch and a $25 check with the award. Given at the division parade field, the presentation was made as 2nd Division unit commanders attended the ceremony.

Sgt. Masterson was formerly a member of the redesignated 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry. His duty then, as now, is as squad leader of the 106 millimeter recoilless rifle squad of the weapons platoon.

In the soldier-of-the - month competition men are drawn from all the major unit commands of the 2nd Division.

ROAD Progress

Huge New Company: Wow of a Challenge

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

The great god ROAD has passed over the 2nd Administration Company and created, for better or worse, a mammoth company and potentially the greatest challenge in the 2nd Division.

In reorganizing under the Reorganization Objective Army Division (ROAD) concept, this unit earns the title "largest" company ever formed in the "Indianhead" division, boasting an authorized strength of 390 individuals. The figure breaks down to 36 officers, six warrant officers and 348 enlisted men.

Has New Affeect

ROAD has passed over most of the division, reorganizing infantry, artillery, armor and supporting elements, but the modernization of the administration company affects the division in a new way.

Previously a soldier's personal records, the paperwork describing his military career and background, have followed him with his unit's personnel section. This is no longer the case. Under the present system, all personnel sections are lumped together as part of the Adjutant General's Personnel Services - Division and contained within the 2nd Administration Company.

Each division unit falls into one of seven categories such as Division Arfillery, Separate Battalions, or a Brigade. A composite team of clerks maintain records of men assigned in each major unit category.

The structure of the 2nd Administration Company has been enlarged by the addition of two new sections, formerly a part of the division's Headquarters Company. These two, the Chaplain's Section and the Information Section, bring the Administration Company sections to a total of six. Above the company headquarters personnel, other members belong to either the Inspector General's section, the Staff Judge Advocate, Finance, or the Adjutant General's section. A total of 78 per cent of the company belong to the last named section.

The command challenge of this largest company in the division arises from the term "operational control." The company commander exercises no operational control over the company's six sections. Rather, the division chief of staff and the

Farewell Set For Rotaplan Advance Units

Farewell ceremonies are scheduled this morning at Lawson Field for the departure of the Germany - bound advance party of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Under Rotaplan, these two advance parties will pave the way for their battalion's temporary overseas duty in Baumholder, Germany — filling the gap left by the "Indianhead's" 38th Infantry returning in April.

Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander, Col. Lucien F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander, and the two battalion commanders, Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul of the 9th and Lt. Col. John H. Cochran of the 23rd, are expected to be on hand to give the departing troops short farewell talks and to wish them luck on their flight.

Almost 100 men make up the advance party which is scheduled to depart on two C1-35 aircraft, one leaving at 9:30 a.m., and the other an hour later.

The main body of 9th Infantry and 23rd Infantry troops are scheduled to leave Fort Benning April 15, the date set for the simultaneous return of the 38th, first American Army unit transferred in the Rotaplan Rotation system.

About 1,200 troops of the 38th are expected to return.

The 9th Infantry's 1st Battalion will serve three months of duty in Germany. First Battalion of the 23rd Infantry faces double that time overseas duty. Under the terms of Rotaplan, families and dependents of the Europe-bound battalions will remain in the United States.

Advance Party

The 9th Infantry's advance party is made up of nine officers and 40 enlisted men commanded by Maj. Charles W. Teer, executive officer. Lt. Col. Paul, commander of the 9th's 1st Battalion, will leave with the main party in April.

Likewise, Lt. Col. Cochran, commander of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, will leave with the main group of his battalion, and Maj. Robert C. Kendrick, battalion executive officer, commands the advance party of 10 officers, 36 enlisted men and one warrant officer.

The total number of 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry troops to leave in April totals 835 which breaks down into 29 officers, two warrant officers and 804 enlisted men. The 23rd is sending approximately the same number.

policy. First, short-term overseas duty affords the Army and Air Force good opportunity to flex their mobility muscles. Rapid transport of thousands of troops is peacetime practice for the eventuality that Strategic Army Corps divisions, such as the "Second-to - None," will some day have to be ferried continental distances into battle.

In Europe, facing the hostile Iron Curtain, Army units receive realistic, advanced training not always available in the United States. Overseas duty usually consists of a continuing series of rigorous, combat-simulated field exercises.

A second consideration of Rotaplan is the decreased drain of U. S. gold reserves. Changing overseas units constantly with military dependents remaining in the states is fiscally as well as tactically strengthening.

Presently in Europe summing up at first hand the results of a winter's European training on the division's 38th Infantry "Marnemen" are Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander; Lt. Col. Richard A. Perkins, 3rd Brigade executive officer; and Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown.

None" Division will be participating under the command of Col. Stewart.

SPHINX III pits two troops of mythical nations in a three-day mock battle. Soldiers and allied forces of friendly "Amilka" will begin the exercise holding a defense perimeter against aggressive, attacking "Rugan" forces.

Intelligence units and supporting units of the XVIII Airborne Corps' two infantry and two airborne divisions will stage the hypothetical operation. With the battle "raging" in and about Fort Bragg, the intelligence units, representing their parent divisions, will carry on operations in simulated conventional and unconventional warfare.

Contest are scheduled March 27-30. A special feature on children's art is included.

The month of February has been named Art month with the theme "Art is Everywhere." Awards will be given in both child and adult divisions.

On March 31 the Sand Hill phase of the All Army Entertainment Contest will begin. A special note is included here because of the 2nd Infantry Division's record in the 1961 competition. All Fort Benning awards were won by Sand Hill contestants.

Supply, Transport Form a Battalion

A new battalion has been formed in the 2nd Infantry division by the combination of the 2nd Quartermaster Company and the 13th Transportation Battalion.

Named the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, this unit results from the division's current reorganization under the Reorganization Objective Army Division (ROAD) concept. Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., transportation battalion commander, has been named to head the new unit.

The 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion traces its history through several organizational changes to the 2nd Supply Train, organized at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., October 1, 1917. As a unit of the 2nd Division, American Expeditionary Force, the 2nd Supply Train participated in the Lorraine, Ile de France, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne Campaigns in World War I.

Returning to Fort Sam Houston in 1919, the supply train was redesignated the 2nd Division Train; in 1936 again redesignated the 2nd Quartermaster Regiment. Reorganized as the 2nd Quartermaster Battalion in 1939, it became the 2nd Quartermaster Company on October 21, 1942.

Again with the 2nd Division in World War II, the company fought across France, Belgium, Germany and Czechoslovakia. The company received battle participation credit for the Normandy, Northern France, Ardennes, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns, and was twice cited in division orders for the Meritorious Service Award. It was also awarded the Belgian Fourragere.

Many chapters were added to the unit's history during the Korean Conflict, fighting in several campaigns. Its awards include the Distinguished Unit Citation for action at Hongchon, and the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation, for action at the Nakdong River, and twice for service to Korea.

The company retired to Fort Lewis, Wash., after Korea and joined the 2nd Infantry Division in 1958.

Two companies of the 13th transportation battalion remain active, supporting Rotaplan training. The 13th will be deactivated March 25.

'Fallout in Their Wheaties:' An S-2 Breakfast Menu

By 1st Infantry PIO

Nothing is sacred. To earn their title "Always First," "Combat - Ready" and STRAC, 1st Infantry soldiers have learned to be alert 24 hours a day seven days a week. But there was a limit to everything, they thought. Now it was breakfast.

A recent breakfast went nuclear on soldiers of the 1st Infantry as commanders announce an atom blast only minutes after the start of a "typical" morning. Complete reports on their survival have not as yet been released.

Three minutes after this latest "alert" was called 22 teams representing the battle group were at their predesignated areas, each man completely equipped, receiving final orders.

The test was given by the battle group S-2 section to determine the efficiency of CBN teams in the event they have to face nuclear war.

The test consists of an alert where the teams fall out completely equipped to a designated area, after which they are given an order directing them to different locations on post where they conduct a ground radiological survey to determine the extent of radiation in that area. The teams then go to these areas where they conduct a survey using a receiver which picks up the radio frequency sent out by a radiation simulator. This device rays of an atomic blast and the receiver gives the same effect as the actual equipment used when making a survey of a true atomic blast.

Each team then reports the pre - designated increase in "rads" to battle group headquarters where they are carefully plotted on the radiological map by the S-2 section.

2nd's New Equipment To Be Issued Soon

All units of the 2nd Infantry Division are scheduled to receive the new M-14 rifle in the near future, and ROTAPLAN advance parties from the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry have been issued the latest protective mask, the M-17.

Presently in Fort Benning storerooms, the rifles will be distributed to all "Second to None" units as soon as a basic load of ammunition is available, possibly next week.

On Wednesday morning, the advance parties of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry went through gas training chambers with the black M-17 protective mask. These two battalion advance parties will leave today for Europe under ROTAPLAN to pave the way for the main body of troops from those battalions to be shipped the middle of next month.

Before departing the U. S., all members of those ROTAplan units will be issued the M-17 mask, an item in everyday use among American troops in Europe.

Division ROTAPLAN units have already been issued the new rifle, also standard equipment for overseas troops.

A modern version of the long-established M-1 rifle, the M-14 can be switched to automatic fire. A logistical improvement is the caliber of ammunition, called NATO-caliber as it fires a round of identical size to field arms in use by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries and is interchangeable with those weapons.

Sewing Class

A Stitch in Winter Sets Fun in Spring

As Spring fast approaches ten members of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead will welcome it with special pleasure as they model the dresses and other garments they made over the last six weeks in the Indianhead Ladies Advanced Sewing Class.

Mrs. Westall has a wide varied background in sewing. She has spent three years in the Philippines and two years in Europe studying the different techniques and talking with teachers of different nationalities. Since coming to Fort Benning she has taught classes in several areas.

Mrs. Westall places uppermost in her instruction the necessity of making custom finished garments. In this advanced class she put special emphasis on selection of pattern style to match the figure, selection of appropriate fabrics, fitting the pattern to the figure and proper measuring.

The ladies who attended the class will get a chance to model their own handicraft at the April Luncheon of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead.

THE 7TH'S LAST MOMENTS . . . Deactivated early during the 2nd Division's current reorganization, the 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry colors saw their last moments with the division at headquarters when Maj. Gen. Huge New Company

G-1 officer share this responsibility. The chief of staff controls the Information Section, the Staff Judge Advocate's Section, and the Inspector General's Section. The G-1 controls the Adjutant General's Section, the Chaplain's Section and Finance.

Little Real Control

Of the 390 persons in the company, the commander maintains operational control over only 19, those of the company headquarters itself. His responsibility over the others rests merely in "housekeeping," logistics and training.

This divided chain of command can succeed only through coordination and cooperation between the company and the various higher ranking officers in control of sections.

According to the company commander, Lt. John M. Nickerson, this situation of split control is not unique in the administration company. Most unit headquarters companys and most notably the division's Headquarters and Headquarters Company house the same phenomenon. But the size of the company makes it stand out here.

"We often have formations," says Lt. Nickerson, "If for no other purpose than to get a good look at ourselves. Compared to most division units we do nothing dashing, exciting or unusual. Our rather routine activity rarely puts us in the spotlight. But we often mass together in our company area, take a good look at ourselves, see who is new or who has left, then go back to work in our different offices. Not working together, we tend to forget how diverse our talents are.

"Split control here poses only a threat. It has never been a real problem. I suspect the reason is the Army could never find an officer talented enough to head all six sections, knowing fields like information, finance, and adjutant general. Our solution is simple. Instead of thinking of ourselves as working for many different officers, we think of ourselves as working for one man, the commanding general," Lt. Nickerson concluded.

1ST BATTALION, 9TH INFANTRY—KEY OFFICERS, COMMANDERS AND NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICERS PREPARE FOR ROTAPLAN

Signs of the ROAD; A Series

These Battalions Have an Exciting Mission: Rotaplan

Two of the division's newly reorganized Infantry battalions carry one of the most exciting missions in the Army today. They are supporting the Army's latest unit rotation system, Rotaplan.

These battalions are afforded a unique opportunity under this system to glean training in the United States and Europe.

New Mechanized

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 22rd Infantry have become mechanized to function with existing Europe - stationed units they will be joining this Spring.

This 22rd Infantry battalion has been a part of the 2nd Division since January of this year when it was transferred from Fort Richardson, Alaska, minus men and equipment. Upon its arrival here men and equipment were assigned under the current Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept. This unit had its beginning in 1812, taking part in 14 battles in New York State and Canada. It has fought in violent guerrilla warfare and disease-infected jungles of Luzon and Leyte.

During World War II one of its greatest feats was helping to stem Marshal Von Rundstedt's winter offensive in the Battle of the Bulge. In Korea the men of the 23rd Infantry delivered an important breakthrough on the Pusan perimeter. They left a lasting impression in the minds of Chinese Communist forces in the Battle of Chipyong-Ni, where they fought one of the greatest defensive battles of military history.

The current training phase is designed to prepare the unit for development to Europe. They have completed Army Training Tests (ATT) using equipment new to the division which is a must for Europe-stationed combat units.

The staff section of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry is headed by the commanding officer, Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., (pictured below). Other staff officers include Maj. Robert C. Kendrick, executive officer; Capt. John A. Cooper, S-1 officer; Capt. Luther V. Kennedy, S-2; Maj. Loren R. Walker, S-3; and Capt. Cleo C. Parker Jr., S-4. Sgt. Maj. Jesse C. Easterwood is the unit's top non-commissioned officer.

In top positions with the companies are: Headquarters company, Capt. Francis R. Menetrey, commander, and 1st Sgt. Fletcher P. McKnight; Company B, Capt. Frank B. Harbor, commander, and 1st Sgt. Charles W. Bernatowitz; Company C, Capt. Reginald H. Corliss, commander, and 1st Sgt. Warren A. Crisman.

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Donald T. Pasl (Pictured (above) is going to Europe with the 22rd. However, the 9th will remain only six months whereas the 22rd is set to spend a total of six there.

This 9th infantry battalion was born in 1798 and has participated in every major conflict U. S. forces have been involved in since the War of 1812.

The fighting 9th has 44 campaign streamers attached to the battalion colors.

In World War II the 9th added more battle honors to its record including the right to wear the Belgian Fourragere. This honor was bestowed for distinguished service during the Battle of the Bulge.

It was in 1900 during the boxer Rebellion that "Keep Up The Fire" became the motto of the 9th. Col. Emerson H. Liscum was killed while leading an assault on Tientsin, and these were his dying words.

Serving their commander are the following staff officers: Maj. Charles W. Peer, executive officer; Capt. Raymond P. Komaniecki, S-1; Capt. Harold P. Austin, S-2; Maj. Roy J. Herte Jr., S-3; and Lt. Thomas L. Bucks, Assistant S-4. The battalion's top noncommissioned officer is Sgt. Maj. James L. Runyon.

Coming

Next week THE BAYONET will feature the 702nd Maintenance Battalion. Prior to reorganization this unit was known as the 702nd Ordnance Battalion. Soldiers of the division rely upon maintenance battalion talents to keep the 2nd's heaviest equipment and machinery on battle-ready status.

1ST BATTALION, 23RD INFANTRY—COMMANDER, STAFF, COMPANY COMMANDERS AND TOP BATTALION SERGEANTS, SET FOR EUROPE

72nd Armor Tanks Leaving for ATT at Fort Stewart

The purpose of the ATT is to evaluate the ability of the tank companies and the entire battalion to perform their assigned mission under simulated combat conditions.

The 72nd Armor will spend the first two weeks after their arrival in training and preparation for the test which will be conducted in two sections. The first part of the test will be taken by the individual companies, the second part will be by the entire battalion.

Company Test

The individual company test will begin testing on March 25 and will continue for the next 36 hours. The test will consist of day and night tactical marches, occupation of assembly areas, attack, defense and delay phases of combat, passage of lines, and chemical, biological, and nuclear situations.

The companies will be rated "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory". Companies failing to obtain a "satisfactory" rating will be retested at a later date.

The test for the entire battalion will be conducted April 8, 9, 10. It will be administered by 2nd Brigade Headquarters and will consist of four parts — advance guard, defense, road march, and maneuver.

The objectives of the ATT are to evaluate the individual and unit combat readiness, to determine the status and adequacy of training standards judged by the tested proficiency, to provide realistic combat training, to insure uniformity in training, to stimulate and sustain interest in training, and to provide a basis for test and evaluation of operational readiness training.

Support Elements

The 72nd Armor will be supported at Fort Stewart by elements from division infantry and artillery. Company A of the 1st Battalion, 67th Infantry, is there today under the command of Lt. William F. Leary. Their mission is to supply infantry support during the training phase and to provide one platoon as an aggressor element during the actual testing period.

The artillery support will be supplied by Battery A, 17 Artillery commanded by Lt. Robert A. Morrison Jr., and a liaison group commanded by Lt. Hoyt Abney from the 15th Artillery which will act as artillery liaison and forward observers.

The battalion is scheduled to complete their testing and return to Fort Benning by April 17, 18.

MMAG FACT

The Army furnishes about 63 per cent of the military personnel for the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Groups and Military Missions.

100% 'Give' Goal Set in Crusade

The National Heath Agencies and Federal Services Joint Crusade is currently in progress at the 2nd Infantry Division. Members of the "Indianhead" Division have been donating funds to this drive since February 15 and have until the last day of this month to bring the division "give" total to the 100 per cent mark.

The National Health Agencies are comprised of six nationally famous disease-fighting institutions. They are the American Cancer Society, Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, National Association for Mental Health, National Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Society for Cripple Children and Adults and National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Crusade for Freedom, CARE and the American - Korean Foundation are the Federal Services joining in the joint crusade with the National Health Agencies.

In Sealed Envelopes

Contributors in this sealed-envelope campaign may designate on cards provided particular agencies they wish their contributions to go to.

There are two envelopes. One for the National Health Agencies, and one for Federal Services. Individual contributors enclose their donations in the envelopes which are then not opened or totalled until they reach campaign headquarters in Atlanta. In this way, the amount of individual contributions are kept secret, each amount being added to the individual's unit total. All units in the "Second to None" Division are participating in this health crusade.

Agencies in this drive were not included in the other big, joint drive of the year, the Community Activities Association Fund Drive held in the Fall.

So far, the National Health Agencies and Federal Services Joint Crusade has been publicized in the division daily bulletins and in letters sent to the separate units. A fund coordinator has been selected for each unit, but as of now, contributions are not as heavy as expected. Maj. Frank Y. Bowland, project officer for the drive and assistant personnel chief of the 2nd Division, explains this as the joint crusade "comes on the heels of March of Dimes and Indianhead Association drives."

Now that those two are concluded, the major is confident the tempo of this campaign will be stepped up. And he says, "Our goal is 100 per cent giving."

March 31 is the last day of the joint crusade.

NEW MILITARY AWARD

Says He: Bad, Bad Sports Bring Blood, Blood, Blood!

Punches, Elbows, Decapitation, Are All Part of the Friendly Fun

By Carl Halstead

Down through all ages and evolutions of man has come the embattled warrior known as the "athlete." He is usually built like Samson. All female members of the human race quiver at the very sight of him. He is a hero to most and to the few, a bum! But no matter what anyone says, he is a warrior. After all, today's sports are the closest thing to actual combat you can find.

A Fine State?

I was born in the fine state of Indiana where basketball is a byword and every youngster by the age of 10 can hit the hoop at twenty feet nine out of ten times. When there is a game on Friday nights the entire town closes up. Jayne Mansfield could ride through the streets like 'Lady Godiva' and would be seen by no one, save for a few stray dogs.

This is because the complete population is enclosed in an arena watching ten men (or should I say boys) running up and down a marked court and throwing a round ball all over the place, trying desperately to either trip or gouge out the eyes of their opponents.

If one of the players is outstanding and is hurting the chances of the opposite team, that team will huddle and pick out one of its reserve members to go in and try, in any way possible, to place this super-star on a stretcher.

Basketball is a friendly competitive sport!

More Friendly

In the pro-ranks it becomes something else. Here there are no boys. Here there is no such thing as a friendly encounter. These guys play for keeps. They greet each other, smile and even shake hands.

But after the referee tosses the ball into the air and the game is on, the weak had better close their eyes. This turns out to be even better than going to a 'judo' match. The players really throw the ball around, also punches, elbows and knees. I have seen more brawls at basketball games than at boxing matches.

There is really no need to go into detail about either boxing or hockey. Victory in these sports is the quick, but efficient, decapitation of the opponent.

In football is found all kinds of mayhem. The idea of this sport, and I use the term loosely, is to travel one hundred yards with a strangely egg-shaped ball, preserving one's own life while trying to see that the opposite players are maimed in any way possible.

I shudder at the thought of having a football tossed to me while seven or eight 280-pound guards come rushing towards me with only one thought in mind—that of seeing me not only dislodged from the ball but also from my good health.

In baseball, things are somewhat better. The pitcher throws a small, hard ball at least sixty miles an hour, trying to get it by you without your driving it down his throat. If that doesn't work, he then innocently sees if he can bounce the white sphere off your noggin.

Spikes Too!

If you are standing on one of the bases, the approaching runner directs the force of his whole (small) mind on getting to the bag before the ball and seeing how far into your shins he can drive his spikes.

This also is a friendly sport!

In horse-racing there is nothing that pleases a jockey better than seeing his nearest competitor sail through the fence. Automobile racing and wrestling are timed – suicide. Track meets are no more than people bent on obtaining rapid hernias.

And to top everything, they now even have a sport called 'sky diving.' This latest indication of mankind becoming mentally unbalanced is a sport where men and women, supposedly of sound mind, jump out of an airplane and see how far they can fall through space before trying to open their chutes. (You notice I say trying.) And all the time they are falling gracefully through space, they even have the gall to smile and wave their arms at airborne photographers.

Yea Golf

Golf and tennis are fairly safe sports. In tennis the most that can happen to you is to drop dead from sun-stroke or from a heart attack due to over-exertion.

In golf you have two options: that of having a brain concussion from being hit by another ball or, secondly, of being struck by lightening during a thunder-storm.

All in all, sports are rather dangerous and I am a professed coward. I have at one time or another attempted most of these "games" and many others not mentioned here. I am constantly amazed that I am still in one piece.

Today I will actively participate in only two, which I consider safe, sports. One is pinochle and the other, Chinese checkers. This way I feel only two possible fates await me. They are: getting my neck broken from cheating at cards or choke to death on a marble.

WAC Team Scores 9th Win of '63

The Fort Benning WAC Basketball team finished their regular season's play last weekend with victories over the Fort Bragg and Fort Rucker girls basketball teams.

The cagerettes, enjoying one of their most successful seasons, compiled nine victories against one setback for the year. Their lone defeat came at the hands of Fort Jackson 40-34. Coach Martin's girls will now head for the Third Army Basketball Tournament, Fort Gordon, Ga., this Tuesday.

In Saturday's game with Fort Bragg, the cagerettes found themselves on the short end of a 20-18 half-time score but managed to limit the visitors to the whole second half while the Benning girls hit for eighteen consecutive points. Earlene Surles led the cagerettes in scoring netting 30 of her team's 41 points. Final score, Fort Benning 41, Fort Bragg 24.

Sunday's game saw the red-hot cagerettes hitting 60 per cent of their first half shots as they rolled up a 23-10 half-time lead. Fort Rucker tried to keep pace with the fast-breaking WACs and managed to narrow the gap in the last period to 10 points, but Myrtle Crowe's three straight buckets put the game on ice for the Benning girls, as they won their ninth of the season 45-20. Once again Miss Surles led the scoring attack contributing 25 points.

Ban Return-Bout Clauses in Title Fight Contracts

NEW YORK (AFPS)— The newly formed World Council of Professional Boxing has ruled to bar return bout contracts for championsiip fights.

The major point in the rule is designed to eliminate what are often called "shotgun contracts," under which a champion agrees to a title fight but requires the contender to give him a return fight if he loses.

The World Council of Professional Boxing is made up of the World Boxing Association, the European Boxing Federation, the British Boxing Board of Control, the Latin-American Union and the Oriental Boxing Fedeation.

Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring Magazine, said the new ruling is the most constructive piece of boxing legislation in many years.

St. Patrick's Day Tournament Set At Country Club

The Fort Benning Women's Golf Club will sponsor a St. Patrick's Day Shamrock Circus Golf Tournament on Sunday with tee-off times between noon and 1:30 p.m.

The nine-hole tourney will feature sixsomes instead of the usual foursomes. Handicaps will be given to those who do not already have an established handicap.

Entrants are asked to make a start time at the pro shop before noon on Sunday so pairings may be made before tee-time.

EARLENE SURLES (R) SCORES
Collye Gray (L) Awaits Rebound

TRICK SHOT WIZARD . . . Paul Hahn, considered by many to be the greatest trick shot artist in the game of golf today, is scheduled to give a performance at the Post Country Club Friday, March 22 at 5 p.m. Hahn's show will consist of a one-hour display of golf shots using every type of club imaginable, including drivers weighing 10 pounds, clubs with swivel shafts and irons with six foot shafts. The show will be free and is open to the public.

Military Police Assn. to Sponsor 'Beat Arnold Palmer' Golf Meet

Beat Arnold Palmer is the challenge flung to military and world as the Military Police Association, Inc., clears the fairways for its 1963 International Golf Day Tourney.

The goal for duffer and pro alike is to top leading money-winner Palmer's score in the 1963 Masters Tournament opening round on April 4 at Augusta.

Entry tickets, costing $1, are available locally at the Main Post and 2nd Infantry Division Provost Marshal Offices or from MPs located at the post Country Club or Sand Hill golf courses. Individuals may enter the tourney as often as they wish but must pay the entry fee before each round they wish to place in competition. The round can be played anytime but scorer cards must be turned in to 2nd Lt. John M. Turner Jr. of the Main Post Provost Marshall's office before April 4.

Ashtrays enscribed with "I Beat Arnold Palmer" will be awarded as prizes to golfers whose scores beat Palmer's opening round employing the local or Callaway Handicap System.

A quarter of each dollar collected defrays IGD expenses, and the rest is donated to local charities, which received almost $14,000 last year with 18,500 challengers teed off against Gary Player, and some 6,000 tied or bettered his opening round score of 67 in the 1962 Master Tournament.

Women golfers may add seven strokes to their handicap before subtracting from their gross score, unless they use the Callaway System.

Provost Marshals expect 1963 IGD to be a record breaker. Participation has increased tenfold since IGD's lead-off in 1957, spurred in three objectives: to improve civilian-military relations everywhere; to give all golfers a chance to beat the defending champion of the famed Masters Tournament; and to assist local charities.

Bell Leads All-Stars To Victory

The Fort Benning "All-Star" basketball team playing before a partisan crowd of over 1,000 fans at the Briant Wells Field House hung a lopsided 100-55 defeat on the Fort Rucker 'Rockets.'

Sparked by Hubert Barksdale and Harole Deane, the Benning stars went from a 10-6 deficit to a 49-25 half time lead. Deane, an ex-Virginia star, led the charge hitting six of 10 shots for a 12-point half-time performance while Barksdale netted 11 points.

In the second-half, the Benning defense limited Fort Rucker to just six points in the first five minutes of play while the All-Stars hit the nets for 22 out of 36 attempts in rolling up an 89-39 lead. All of Coach Robert Kinard's 11 players got into the action as he cleared the bench with four minutes of play remaining.

George Bell was the high man in scoring for the All-Stars with 10 baskets for 20 points. Harold Deane and Jack Barclay each hit for 17 points.

Basketball Tournament Site Named

Fort Gordon has been selected as the host for the annual Third Army Basketball Tournament to be held March 18-23.

It will be a double elimination tournament for both men's and women's teams from the Third Army area, with the first game to be played Monday, March 18th, at 10 a.m. at the Post Sports Arena.

This year there will be six games daily — four mens' and two womens' — beginning at 10 a.m. and all to be played at the Sports Arena.

Participating teams in the tournament will be: Fort Campbell, Ky.; Fort Bragg, N. C.; Fort McPherson, Ga.; Redstone Arsenal, Ala.; Fort Stewart, Ga.; Fort McClellan, Ala.; Fort Rucker, Ala.; Fort Jackson, S. C.; Fort Benning, Ga.; Headquarters, XII U. S. Army Corps, Atlanta.

Fort Gordon teams brought home championships in 1954 and '55 and four straight seasons from 1958 through '61. Fort McClellan is this year's defending champion.

A banquet in honor of the participants will be held on March 17 at 7 p.m.

Shough's Sports Scope

By Pete Shough

Cincinnati's record of 23 wins against one defeat is apparently the best the country has to offer in college basketball because the outstanding Bearcat team was voted number one by both the Associated and United Press in their final polls of the year.

The Bearcats are favored to win the NCAA crown for the third straight year but it should be a difficult title for the hustling Ohio Valley Conference champs to gain. The 'Cats had trouble more than once throughout the season several times they could manage only a one-point victory over mediocre teams. Of course, these slim victories were blamed on the occasional, "bad night" but in winning an NCAA championship, an occasional "bad night" is unheard of.

Probably the strongest team the Bearcats will have to face is second-rated Duke. Duke hasn't lost a game since the opening weeks of the season and is certainly anxious to prove to Cincinnati that second place isn't good enough.

The NCAA Tournament representative of the Big Ten, Illinois, should prove to be a thorn in someone's foot. Although the Illini don't boast of the finest record in the tournament, they are there and want to prove that the Big Ten deserves a championship trophy.

Illinois was named tournament representative only last Saturday night when the Illini stopped Iowa and Ohio State lost in an overtime to Indiana. Ohio State and Illinois tied for conference honors but Illinois got the tournament bid since Ohio had represented the Big Ten the three previous years.

Loyola of Chicago is a dark horse in the tourney. The Ramblers have tired toward the end of the long season after maintaining an unbeatable pace of 22 straight victories.

One surprise team that may make a name for itself in the tournament is Bowling Green of Ohio. The Falcons were picked high in preseason polls and only recently have shown that they are a championship team. Their star player, Nate Thurmand has made several All-American teams and could lead Mid-American Conference champs a long way in the tourney.

JOIN NEW DIVISION . . . Lt. Col. Harvey D. Hawley (second from right), commander of the 37th Air Transport Battalion, a newly activated unit which has been assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), digs in, as he and members of his staff prepare to set up the battalion sign in front of their new headquarters here. The unit will use both fixed-wing and rotary-wing aircraft of the transport class. Left to right are Sgt. Maj. Patrick E. Pettingill, Maj. John D. Boswell, Capt. Nicholas Leone, Capt. William L. Patrick, Capt. William C. Freeman, Capt. Charles A. Beitz Jr., Col. Hawley, and Maj. Phillips Melzer.

38 Graduate As Airborne Jumpmasters

A special jumpmaster course conducted by The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department for post personnel was graduated recently as 38 officers and enlisted men completed the one-week course.

Jumpmasters are responsible for the safety and proper delivery of airborne personnel and equipment aboard an aircraft and for implementing instructions received from the pilot.

There is one aboard each aircraft during airborne operations. The number of personnel he is responsible for may range from one to 112, depending upon the size of the aircraft.

Each jumpmaster must be familiar with the proper rigging of the individual paratrooper's equipment as well as insuring that static lines and other features in the aircraft are ready for use.

Lt. Col. Merchant To Address AFMA

Fort Benning's deputy dental surgeon, Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant, will be guest speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Armed Forces Management Association at noon Tuesday at the Black Angus Ranch Restaurant.

He will speak on "Denistry Management."

Reservations for the luncheon should be made by telephoning Mrs. Ethel D. Monchief at 545-55967 or 545-3853 before noon Monday.

Course Completed By Artillerymen

They were 2nd Lt. Preston E. Simmons and SSgt. Elbert E. Taylor.

Sgt. Taylor, who recently completed a tour in Hawaii, finished the course second in his class.

Lt. Simmons entered the Army at Fort Sill, Okla., in April, 1962, and was assigned here after completing the Field Artillery Officers Orientation Course there. He is a graduate of North Carolina State College.

Battery Again Wins Best Mess Honors

SFC Elwood T. Gibson, mess steward of Battery B, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, was recently presented the battalion's Best Mess plaque for the month of February.

It was the second consecutive awarding of the plaque to the unit.

Polio Vaccine Schedule

The P through Z group may get the dose Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of next week.

Dependents whose last names begin with A through G were immunized March 5, 7 and 9.

The vaccine is available Saturday to accommodate dependents who attend off-post schools.

AT THE Movies

IT HAPPENED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR is a musical in color starring Elvis Presley and Joan O'Brien. Take Elvis Presley, and nine new songs . . . stir in some moonlight and pretty girls. . . spice it with two-fisted action and hilarious comedy. . . mix in the glamor and excitement of the carnival gaiety of a World's Fair. . . and you have the recipe for great entertainment.

☆ ☆ ☆

OKLAHOMA is a classical Rodgers and Hammerstein musical that stars Gordon Macrae, Shirley Jones and Gloria Grahame. The corn in Oklahoma is only as "high as an elephant's eye" but the entertainment is as large as the state itself.

☆ ☆ ☆

ONLY TWO CAN PLAY is a mature comedy starring Peter Sellers and Mai Zetterling. Unhappily aware that he is settling into a frustrating routine, a mild - mannered husband dreams of exciting adventures while clinging to the family from which he thinks he wants to escape. His daydreaming never goes beyond a roving eye, until a beautiful blonde temptress enters his life.

Barbecue, Competition Organization Day Highlights

March 9 saw approximately 3,400 military and civilian personnel attend the first Organization Day ceremonies conducted by the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The day's festivities "kicked off" with a competitive cross-country run, followed by an Organization Day Parade of which Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich was the reviewing officer.

The activities continued throughout the remainder of the day with a Champions Board dedication, scout dog demonstration, barbecue luncheon, contests of individual and group skills, kiddie rides and two gala military balls.

In the first competitive event, the five-mile cross-country run, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry team took top honors.

Sp4 Henry Moraga from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, won the individual first place award in 28:11.

PFC Charles F. Taylor of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, placed second and PFC Franklin Noble, B Battery, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, placed third.

The most colorful and unique part of the activities was the Organization Day Parade with the retirement of the "old" 1st Infantry Brigade colors and the presentation of the 197th Infantry Brigade colors, and Gen. Rich officially charging Col. Richard W. Keyes, the brigade commander, with command responsibility of the brigade.

Sp4 Gary E. Oversmith, B Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, was given the distinct honor of being selected as the first 197th Brigade Soldier of the Year on its first organization day. The commanding general presented Sp4 Oversmith with a trophy, certificate and an Association of the U. S. Army plaque.

Troops and motorized elements in the parade represented the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 29th Infantry; 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery; 4th Battalion, 69th Armor; 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade; the 72nd Engineer Company; the 183rd Chemical Platoon, and the 26th Infantry Platoon (Scout Dog).

Taking top honors in the platoon drill competition was The Infantry Center Honor Guard; Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Jimmy W. Smith.

Teams and men from all units competed for top honors in a physical combat proficiency test. Again the winning team was the 29th Infantry with an aggregate score of 3,223 points.

Individual winners were Sp4 Robert Turner, Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry, who took first place with 492 points; SSgt. Dan M. McLain, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, second place, 487 points, and Pvt. Elwood J. Dibble Jr., Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry, third place, 486 points.

An old-fashioned tug-of - war resulted in a thorough dousing for the company commanders of the brigade when their first sergeants "pulled" them into a four-foot pit filled with water. The strength trial "by water" drew a rousing applause from the spectators.

Another highlight of the day was a demonstration by the Brigade's 26th Infantry Platoon. Members of the unit put the scout dogs through demonstrations of climbing ladders, jumping through rings of fire and viciously attacking an "enemy" wearing padded clothing.

At the presentation of awards ceremonies, Col. Keyes presented the winners of the day's events their hard earned trophies.

Appropriately climaxing this glamorous and fun-filled day were two military balls. Service Club No. 1 was the scene of the Enlisted Ball and the Main Officers' Open Mess was the site of the officers' dance.

Surgeon Says

Oral Surgery Among Specialties at MAH

By Lt. Col. L. H. Guernsey
Chief
Oral Surgery & Dental Service

Oral surgery is another of the many surgical specialties available at Martin Army Hospital. It is just exactly what it sounds like—surgery of the mouth and associated structures.

Oral surgery has been a specialty of dentistry for well over 100 years and is practiced by a dentist who has had several years of special 'advanced' training after his regular dental education. After completion of this special training and five years limited to oral surgery practice, the dentist may take a specialty board examination which is given at the national level. If he passes, he is "board certified" in oral surgery and is spoken of as an oral surgeon.

This certification is similar to that of the physician who becomes certified in one of the specialties of medicine following advanced study and training and board examination.

Because of this extra training, the oral surgeon serves the general dentist as a consultant and surgeon of the oral cavity. He is likewise called upon by medical specialists to assist or advise in the diagnosis and treatment of oral and general diseases with oral symptoms.

In the Army, the oral surgeon practices at the hospital where he can treat patients either in the hospital dental clinic or in the operating room when necessary or better for the patient. As such, he frequently will admit his patients to the hospital before administering treatment.

The hospital dental clinic has an oral surgery section which consists of two completely equipped operating rooms with a connecting central sterilization area. It is in this clinic that the oral surgeon does many of the operations referred to him by the general dentist such as multiple extraction of teeth; the complex removal of impacted wisdom teeth which are deeply imbedded in the jaws; the surgical preparation of the mouth for artificial dentures by removing bony spurs and bumps which interfere with the seating of the dentures; plastic operations for the respositioning of tissues abnormally placed or closure of mouth to sinus openings; and the removal of the many dentally caused cysts and tumors of the jaw bones.

In the clinic he also sees the diagnostic problems referred by his medical and dental colleagues. These may vary from doing a biopsy to determine if an oral ulcer is cancer of the mouth to the injection of a contrast dye into the salivary gland ducts to detect infection or a tumor.

Frequently referred for treatment are the severe infections about the mouth and face which arise from the teeth and jaws. A particular type called Ludwig's angina can be so severe as to be life-threatening.

In the operating room the oral surgeon operates on patients using the same aseptic techniques as the general surgeon. Here he treats injuries to the face, mouth and jaws from the more simple cuts and lacerations to severe injuries and fractures of the facial and jaw bones.

The mouth is the site of many malformations and malpositions when one considers just the abnormalities possible in 32 teeth. Poor position of the teeth with its resultant malrelationship of the bite is a common defect which is treated by the orthodontist.

Scout Leaders' Training Course Scheduled Here

Pvt. James Byers Completes Course

Pvt. James R. Byers, Company D, 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction), recently completed a two-week course of instruction at the Chemical, Biological, Radiological (CBR) School here.

U. S. Income Tax Laws Provide Deductions for Nearly Everyone

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles on federal income tax prepared by Capt. Sledge of The Infantry Center Judge Advocate Section.)

Last week we discussed in general terms the broad tax picture with emphasis on the point that each taxpayer should take advantage of every legal deduction and exemption possible.

Within that mountain of tax law and deductions, there are inevitably some provisions which would apply to your particular case. For example, did you know that you can deduct car expense in the amount of three to four cents per mile for using your car to visit your doctor? If your total medical expenses amounted to over three per cent of your total income, you could deduct the surplus.

This traveling expense to and from the doctor applies even if you have moved out of town and you must travel back for treatment from the same doctor if he recommends such action. Therefore, it is wise for the taxpayer to dig into this mountain to see if there is something applicable to his particular case.

Other Solutions

Regardless of how deep or how diligently some taxpayers dig, there is just no gold for them in that mountain of loopholes. There are other solutions for these people which will be covered later in this series.

The legal officer daily sees individuals who have filed their returns hurriedly and carelessly, which invariably results in either overpayment of taxes or failure to take full advantage of legal deductions. For this reason it is necessary for all taxpayers to know more about their taxes.

The military man makes a definite sum of money per month, according to his grade, dependents and marital status. Based on this, the government withholds a percentage of his monthly income. Idealistically, the tax withheld should equal the tax due. Most frequently, there is too much tax withheld, but some cases do not withhold enough. The return must be filed to determine if the taxpayer has overpaid or underpaid.

If the military man has no other source of income than his salary, then he has a difficult time discovering many deductions which will benefit him, for the primary benefits of deductions are for those in business or those self-employed, but it is worthwhile to investigate what is available.

If you have even the normal amount of expenses for the year, you possibly could accrue enough deductions to save a few. Next week we will discuss who must file a return.

University Extension Enrollment Date Set

Military personnel who have previously attended the University of Georgia's extension on the Columbus College campus may enroll for upper division (third and fourth year) evening courses on March 25.

Registration will be held in the conference room of the Administration Building between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Courses will be held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings with two periods scheduled for each class night, allowing students to earn 10 hours credit per quarter.

Students may also register for courses at the university and Columbus College simultaneously. The classes meet the same hours. Classes will begin March 26 and end June 6.

All fees are payable upon registration. Registration fee is $1 per quarter and tuition fee is $7 per quarter hour, or $35 for a five-hour course. All courses are scheduled for five quarter hours.

Students should obtain counseling concerning their military programs and secure partial payment permits for tuition from the advisors at the Educational Development Section or the 2nd Infantry Division Educational Development Section, Bldg. 9010, Kelley Hill.

The Armed Forces will pay three-fourths of the tuition fee for military personnel.

First period; 6:15 to 8:25 p.m. classes in anthropology, business administration, economics and psychology.

Second period: 8:35 p.m. to 10:45 p.m., courses in business administration, psychology and sociology.

KMAG Past Is Outlined

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—"Military Advisors in Korea: KMAG in Peace and War," is the title of a new Army historical volume which became available on the last day of February.

Written by Maj. Robert K. Taylor, the book traces the history of KMAG from its establishment in 1948 through the Korean Conflict and into the years following the "cease fire" in 1953.

Maj. Taylor recounts the difficulties facing the original advisors, few of whom spoke Korean, who were working in a country economically disrupted and technologically deprived. To further complicate matters, guerrilla bands were disrupting communications and terrorizing outlying villages.

He tells how frustrations alternated with successes as the American group attempted to forge a military instrument from the eager and willing, but raw, recruits they were training.

Two short years after the establishment of KMAG, the North Koreans crossed the 38th Parallel and time ran out for the advisors. The book tells of the hectic first days of the conflict and the harrowing retreat to the Pusan Perimeter. It describes the frantic efforts of KMAG to pick up the shattered pieces of the ROK Army and rebuild a military organization on a firmer foundation.

On sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., the 218-page volume, containing maps, photographs, charts, tables and an index, retails for $1.50.

Peacetime Civil Honor Established

NEW YORK (AFPS) — President Kennedy has officially ordered the setting up of an annual presidential medal for outstanding citizen service to the country and world peace.

Noting that the nation is making increasing demands on its citizens, Mr. Kennedy stated, "It is clearly appropriate to provide ways to recognize and reward the work of persons, within and without the government, who contribute significantly to the quality of American life."

The medal, as the highest civil honor conferred by a President in peacetime, will be awarded for meritorious contributions to the security or national interest of the United States, to world peace, or cultural or other significant public or private endeavors.

The Army Institute of Heraldry will design the medal and set forth plans for its issuance with accompanying ribbons and appurtenances.

A Medal of Freedom was established by presidential order in 1945 "for meritorious act or service which has aided the United States in the prosecution of a war against an enemy."

It was broadened in 1952 to be awarded for performance of a meritorious act or service in the interest of the security of the United States.

Cuban Officers Here for Training

Members of the 2506th Cuban Brigade, now on post to receive officer training, were welcomed here Tuesday by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Making up the group are 112 men, including five Navy, 13 Marine and 16 Air Force officers.

Sixty-one members of the brigade arrived here last weekend, with the remainder arriving on Monday. The Cubans have been assigned to Detachment 21, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

They will undergo a 15-week program that will include training in weapons, platoon tactics, leadership, methods of instruction and organization.

Upon completing the course, those officers who desire to continue and are qualified may receive specialized training in selected subjects.

After the specialized training, selected individuals will be offered the opportunity to remain on active military duty with regular units of the Armed Forces.

A program permitting voluntary induction of qualified Cubans was started in August, 1961, by the Department of Defense. This marks the first time the offer has been opened to officers.

The Defense Department hopes the program will assist Cuban refugees in this country to maintain themselves and to usefully employ and further develop their skills and abilities through service in the Armed Forces.

Fund Drive Goal Is Still Far Off; Final Push Is Urged by Officials

With the 1963 National Health Agency and Federal Service Joint Crusade nearing a climax, a final push toward 100 per cent participation has been urged by Lt. Col. Michael Pavlo, project officer.

At present, approximately 36 per cent have donated to the combined fund drive, which began Feb. 15.

"The 197th Infantry Brigade is the one bright spot among the post's major units," Col. Pavlo said. "Thus far they have recorded 85 per cent participation."

Several Infantry Center sections have contributed 100 per cent.

The National Health Agencies are comprised of six disease-fighting institutions. They are the American Cancer Society, Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, National Association for Mental Health, Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, and the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Crusade for Freedom, CARE, and the American-Korean Foundation are the Federal Services included in the joint crusade.

Contributions to CARE bring personal aid to recipients in distant lands. Radio Free Europe contributions bring hours of news, information and entertainment to 80 million Communist - dominated people in Eastern Europe.

The American - Korea Foundation provides nursing scholarships, medical supplies, general support for hospitals, and medical teams to the Korean people.

The first day of firing will see matches in the slow and rapid fire categories from the three match positions of prone, sitting and standing.

March 28 will be devoted to team matches, including the six-man National Match course tilt and the Infantry Trophy Team Match.

The 10-man rifle team match over the National Match course and, the Long Range (1,000 yards) Team Match will cap the competition.

Champion Parachutist Is Now OC

In the ranks of the soon to be graduated 52nd (OC) Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, stands an unassuming young man with some 522 parachute jumps to his credit.

OC Helms was instrumental in the formation of the 82nd Airborne Parachute Club at Fort Bragg, N. C., in 1958. This was the first free-fall team to be recognized by the Army. Its seven members traveled all over the U. S. demonstrating their prowess.

When he went to Germany in 1960, Helms became a member of the Eighth Army Parachute Club. In 1961, he was a member of the team which took first place in an international meet against jumpers from France, Germany, Austria, England and Italy.

In July, 1962 OC Helms traveled to Kansas City for the National Championship meet. During this competition he won first place in the 5,000-foot delayed jump for style, free-fall and accuracy on the target. He holds more pride in this trophy than any of the other 15 that adorn his mantle.

OC Helms joined the Army from Kinnapolis, N. C., and spent much of service time with the 82nd Airborne Division, at Fort Bragg. Before coming to OCS, he was an instructor at the 82nd Airborne Jump School at Fort Bragg.

210 Former Cadets Celebrate Academy's 161st Birthday Here

At the annual Founder's Day dinner were two former commandants of cadets and the new commandant.

They are Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, and Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Philip E. Gallagher of Columbus, Ga.

Gen. Rich was commandant from 1959 to 1961, and Gen. Gallagher served in that capacity from 1941 to 1943.

Among those reminiscing through the program were Brig. Gen. (Ret.) James B. Crawford of Auburn, Ala., USMA Class of 1911, and 2nd Lt. Richard D. Chegar, class of 1962. As the oldest and youngest graduates attending, each spoke of his experiences at the academy.

Gen. Davison, who became commandant of cadets March 9 after an assignment in Germany, stressed that his responsibility is not only to the Corps of Cadets, but also to the graduates and to the entire Army.

"We must strive to safeguard the sacred traditions of "Duty, Honor and Country" that have been exemplified by Academy graduates," he said.

The general discussed the academic and athletic programs at West Point and showed graphic slides of building projects planned for the immediate future.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was Maj. Gen. Charles Billingsley, commanding general of the 2nd Division.

Slam the Study Door At Your Own Peril!

An eight-year-old "presidential hopeful" recently wrote a letter to President Kennedy asking the Chief Executive what he should do to become President. He was told to "study hard."

Good advice! And, were we asked what a serviceman should do to become successful in his chosen military field, we wouldn't delete a word of the President's answer. The question is certainly different, but the reply is assuredly the same — study hard.

Study and knowledge—two golden keys. They not only open the door to self-improvement but help us prove our mettle as well. Once that "door" is flung open magnificent vistas spread before our personal horizon, offering us a better life, security, personal satisfaction and most important — a feeling of worth to ourselves and mankind.

The serviceman is lucky. He has an unlimited amount of educational wealth at his fingertips. It may be USAFI with its hundreds of correspondence courses. Or perhaps one of the many service schools; or simply the base Information and Education office. And don't forget the well-stocked service library — a credit to any organization.

Whether we're thinking about furthering our military career or eyeing a good paying job on retirement, the result of a successful, rewarding life depends on our educational development.

We're reminded of a young man, 16 years old, who wrote a Virginia newspaper to complain that he could not find a decent-paying job. Unknowingly this young fellow had already written an end to his chances for a really good profession. That's when he quit school and started working full time. Today he is seven years older, a husband and father of two children and a veteran of numerous low-paying jobs.

He did not get the door ajar and unfortunately there simply isn't much demand — in or out of service — for the untrained. (AFPS)

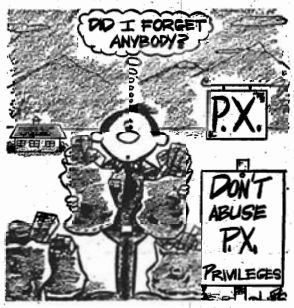
Capitol Notes

The House wasted little time in passing a bill extending the draft law until July 1, 1967. Presented early in March, the bill was carried by a vote of 387 to 3 and was passed on to the Senate for its action. Amendments that would have reduced the maximum draft age from 26 to 22 years and extended the draft for only two years were defeated. The Defense Department said the expected draft call during the extension beginning July 1, 1963, will amount to about 90,000 men per year.

Selective Service has been asked to provide 10,000 men for induction into the Army during May. The Army's requirement for nonprior servicemen during May is 16,500, a figure representing what the Army will need to cover losses and maintain its approved active duty strength.

If passed, HR 3722, would extend wartime rates of compensation to veterans and their dependents for service - connected disabilities incurred during periods when individuals may be inducted for military service outside the continental limits of the United States. The bill has been referred to the House Committee on veteran's affairs.

No less than four different bills were introduced to the 88th Congress to establish a Senate Veterans Affairs Committee. About 200 bills are before the Congress concerning veteran's affairs.



CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Your High Ideals

By Chaplain (CApt.) James F. Bray

The Danish theologian and philosopher Kierkegaard tells the following parable.

A wild duck was flying northward across Europe with his flock. He happened to come down in a barnyard in Denmark where there were tame ducks. He ate and enjoyed some of their corn, and stayed — first for a week, then for a month, and finally all summer. But one autumn day when his wild mates were winging their way southward they passed over the barnyard, and he heard their cries. It stirred him with a strange thrill of joy and delight; and, flapping his wings, he rose in the air to join his old comrades in their flight south.

But, alas, he found that his good fare had made him so soft and heavy that he could rise no higher than the eaves of the barn. So he sank back again to the barnyard, and said to himself, "Oh, well, my life is safe here and the fare is good." Every spring, and again every autumn, when the wild ducks flew over his barnyard and he heard their honking cry, his eye gleamed for a moment and he began to lift his wings and would fain have joined his mates. But at length the day came when the wild ducks flew over him and uttered their cry and he paid not the slightest attention to them.

What a parable this is of how the soul can forget its high ideals and standards and be content with the lower things of life. We can become content to live on this low moral plane, by living with them and practicing them daily, that our conscience becomes dull and we become content to live on this low miral plane. Let us look often at the high ideals given by Christ, and be content with nothing less for our lives.

ROAD Is Significant Step in Modernization

A significant step in the Army's continuing modernization program is the reorganization of its combat divisions, referred to as ROAD. Successfully tested during the past year, this reorganization is now underway Army-wide. Planned for completion by the end of Fiscal Year 1964, the Army divisions will be of four types—Infantry, armored, airborne and mechanized.

The new organizational concept is aimed at attaining a better combat capability in each type of division for both general and limited war. Nuclear and non-nuclear firepower is increased, as is ground and air mobility. Each division will consist of a division headquarters, three brigade headquarters, and artillery and other support elements. To this division base can be added varying numbers of Infantry, tank, airborne and mechanized combat battalions. Thus, divisions can be tailored specifically to accomplish the mission in the area to which assigned, or to accomplish a mission where they might most logically be assigned.

Their mobility will be matched to their environment. In Europe, the divisions will be either armored or mechanized, tailored for employment over the plains and rolling hills of that continent. The divisions in the Far East area will have more Infantry and less armor—better suited for the mountains of Korea, for example. Those in the Strategic Army Corps in the Continental United States will have more airborne Infantry or will have a combination of battalions adaptable to a variety of assignments.

The tailoring of Army divisions to fit any eventuality as concerns the combat environment will insure their flexibility and responsiveness when the need arises. Supporting the new fighting strength envisioned by this reorganization will be other build-in gains, such as a greatly improved command arrangement and a simplified single support command operating on a functional instead of a technical service basis.

Certainly, the reorganization permits the Army to make far better use of its existing resources — another progressive step in keeping pace with the varying military needs of its global commitments.

Army Trains Them...Air Force Steps in and They're Airborne

JUMPMASTER, PILOT
Sgt. Elmer Barry And
Lt. David R. Lee

LESSON IN WELDING
MSgt. Varnon With
Pupil, Pvt. Allan Hayes

The Army trains them, and the Air Force drops them. That's the way it goes here each week as over 500 newly qualified paratroopers are graduated from the Infantry School's basic airborne course.

The Air Force work in this example of interservice cooperation is done mostly by the 776th Troop Carrier Squadron from Pope Air Force Base, N. C.

Once a week, generally on Sundays, four C-119's or C-123's from Pope arrive at Lawson Army Airfield, complete with four navigators, 10 pilots, four flight engineers and five maintenance men.

Billeted Here

Since they will remain until Thursday or Friday—depending upon when the class graduates, which in turn depends upon weather conditions and other factors—Infantry Center officials provide the Air Force personnel with food, billets and transportation.

On Monday morning, the group is assembled at headquarters of the Jump Sub-Committee, part of the Basic Airborne Committee of The Infantry School's Airborne-Mobility Department, which is directed by Col. Michael Paulick.

Here a three - part briefing takes place. The first is a briefing on weather conditions given by the Lawson Field weather officer. This is followed by a briefing on local flying procedures by the Operations Section at Lawson.

Capt. Witek briefs the group on the location of the drop zone, how to fly to it, including the altitude and speed; 1,250 feet at 115 knots. He explains where the first man should drop, and the dates and times of each jump.

Meet Jumpmaster

During this initial meeting, the plane crew is introduced to the Airborne-Air Mobility Department instructor, who is to serve as jumpmaster for the week.

The jumpmaster is responsible for the safety and proper delivery of the airborne students and implementing messages received from the pilot.

After the initial briefing a daily orientation is given to the mission commander, who relays any changes to his crew.

Since each plane only carries approximately 36 students and each student must make five jumps before graduating, an average week will see the pilots flying their craft to the drop zone at least 20 times.

After the final jump, or the next day, the planes leave Lawson and return to their North Carolina base.

On Sunday the process starts agains with a new crew.

TIS Department Ensures That Infantry Rolls Along

Whether it be a spark ignition, diesel or multifuel engine or a World War II truck, students at The Infantry School learn to operate it, diagnose any difficulties and put it in smooth running condition.

Approximately 7,500 men per year train here for the specific task of keeping the Army mobile.

At the same time, they acquire skills that give them personal satisfaction, make it possible for them to care for their privately owned vehicles, and in many cases, provide them with a trade to follow when they return to civilian life.

TIS Mission

The training of these men who keep Infantry vehicles rolling is a task assigned to The Infantry School's Ground Mobility Department.

Ground Mobility offers an 11-week mechanics' course for privates and privates first class. The course, which can be requested at the time of enlistment, qualifies a student as a specialist in the automotive field. It entitles him to Military Occupation Specialty (MOS) 631.1, qualified mechanic.

The department gives an 11-week course for motor transportation officers, open to commissioned officers and warrant officers in the automotive field.

The department also presents instruction to Infantry officer candidates and officers taking The Infantry School's orientation and career courses.

It consists of from five to 26 hours of instruction on all vehicles available to an Infantry commander. He learns what he can expect the vehicles to do and what they cannot do under various terrain conditions.

Students in the mechanics' course, working in small groups, study in an engine laboratory. It contains 60 engines, mounted on metal frames with plenty of room to walk around and see each engine from all sides.

One of the newest engines is the multifuel engine that operates on gasoline, kerosene, diesel fuel, solvent or any combination of these agents.

"It will even run on perfume," according to MSgt. Lewis Stebbins, senior instructor of advanced engines.

The multifuel engine is a compression ignition engine and is used in the M-35 A-1 2½-ton truck.

A student mechanic studies the new diesel engine that is used in the M-60 tank. He is also instructed in the more familiar spark ignition engine.

Approximately 80 per cent of the 400-hour mechanics course is spent in actual disasembly of engines, diagnosing trouble, repairing engines and learning to prevent breakdown by proper preventive maintenance.

Getting a stranded vehicle out of a ditch or a mud hole, utilizing its own power and ingenious field expedients, is taught by the Recovery Section of the Vehicle Capabilities Committee. The senior instructor in the section is MSgt. Houston Price.

Train As An Army Pilot

A career in Army aviation beckons qualified men who may now enlist in the Regular Army for the specific purpose of entering the warrant officer flight training program.

Under the new Army program, men between the ages of 18 and 30, who are citizens of the United States, and who meet the mental and physical requirements, may be selected for either fixed or rotary wing aircraft training.

The applicant must be willing to enlist in the Regular Army for two years.

He must also agree to accept appointment as a warrant officer, USAR, for an indefinite term and serve as a warrant officer on active duty for at least three years

Command and Staff Dept. Wives Welcome Spring With Luncheon

The ladies of the Command and Staff Department received a breath-taking dose of Spring at their luncheon recently at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The atmosphere of the new Fountain Room was enhanced by an abundance of pink carnations and pale pink and green balloons. Some 200 helium-filled balloons floated gracefully about, creating an air of lightness and pastel beauty. Suspended on long ribbons of matching pastel pink and green, the balloons seemed to spring from the walls, the chairs and the cascading fountain. Reflected in the large wall mirror of the Fountain Room, the unusual effect was doubled.

Each table was decorated with a large centerpiece of artificial pink carnations and green leaves, with more carnations and ivy strewn the length of the table. At each individual place there was a small vial of cologne and a powder puff.

Like the surroundings, the program was dedicated to femininity and beauty. Mrs. Mary Roberts and Mrs. Opal McLendon demonstrated the proper use of cosmetics, using Mrs. Frank Schofield as their model. Gifts of cosmetics were awarded as doorprizes.

The first, a complete beauty treatment kit, was won by Mrs. H. C. Harrison. The second, a gold bottle of spray cologne, was won by Mrs. John Barner.

Throughout the luncheon, piano music was played by Mrs. George Marko of the Defense Committee.

Mrs. Samuel Koster spoke a fond farewell to Mrs. Sydney Sacerdote and presented her with a dozen long-stemmed roses. Farewell was also said to the ladies of the Company Tactics Committee, who will no longer be a part of the Command and Staff Department.

LUNCHEON HELD IN BALLOON-FILLED FOUNTAIN ROOM
Chatting By The Fountain Are (L to R) Mrs. Short, Mrs. Gates, Mrs. Dent, Mrs. Sacerdote and Mrs. Koster

Among the new ladies welcomed to the department were Mrs. Allan Butler, Mrs. Rollo R. Larson, Mrs. George Geczy Jr. and Mrs. Paul E. Johnson. First vice president: Mrs. George Grabiak and Mrs. James O. Jones.

I hope you will plan to attend and cast a vote for the gal of your choice. It will be their job to keep the Woman's Club with it's more than 1000 members and 20 activities going next year.

The program for the luncheon promises to be really spectacular — its an original musical revue written and directed by Mrs. John Corley, and has a cast of 40.

Make your reservations now by calling Mrs. C. E. Male 545-0300.

The ladies at the Lending Closet still need donations if we are to continue to meet the requests of the many families arriving on post daily. If you have pots and pans, dishes, portable baby furniture, or kitchen utensils you can donate, please call Mrs. Garman Aure, 545-7130, and she will arrange to have it picked up. When doing your "spring housecleaning", remember the Lending Closet.

'Rakkasans' Has Two Meanings... One Is 'Courage'

The 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, proud of its heritage as well as its nickname, "Rakkasans," was activated here Feb. 15 when the 11th Air Assault Division became the Army's test division for innovation and changes in ground-force tactics.

The air assault battalion, only one of its kind in the U.S. Army, traces its lineage 20 years to the activation of the 17th Glider Infantry Regiment, a segment of the 11th Airborne Division, at Camp MacKall, N. C. Feb. 25, 1943.

Following a year of testing new equipment and concepts, and having proved the tactical worth of airborne operations, the 187th departed for the war in the Pacific in late spring, 1944.

Enters Combat

After staging in New Guinea, the 187th Infantry was committed to combat in the Battle of Leyte Island in November. It was here that the first combat assault from the air was conducted by the 187th Glider Infantry. Elements of Company B parachuted from L-4 artillery liaison planes to secure the Manarawat position.

Not until January, 1945, did the 187th acquire some well earned rest. However, after seven days, it was alerted for the Luzon operation. Tagaytay Ridge, the Genko Line, Nichols Field, Fort McKinley, Cavite and Manila soon became familiar to the unit.

In August the 187th was notified it would participate in the spearhead landing of the Allied Occupation Forces in the Japanese homeland. By September the regiment was settled in Sendai, Japan, to move five months later to Japanese Army barracks outside Sopporo on the island of Hokkaido, where it remained until January, 1949.

It was in Japan that the 187th acquired its nickname, "Rakkasans," a Japanese word meaning "falling down umbrella," or parachute.

In January, 1949, the 187th was relieved of occupation duty and returned to the U.S. at Camp Campbell, Ky. During the same year, the 187th Glider Infantry Regiment was officially redesignated the 187th Airborne Infantry Regiment.

Twenty months after departing Japan, the 187th found itself again in the Far East, this time as an Airborne Regimental Combat Team (ARCT) in Korea. The 3rd Battalion went into action at Kimpo Airfield Sept. 24, 1950, followed by the remainder of the regiment.

Jump in Korea

Its mission was the clearing of Kimpo Peninsula. By Oct. 2 the mission was accomplished and the Rakkasans prepared for the first combat jump of the Korean conflict at Sukchon-Sunchon.

During the first year of the Korean conflict, the Rakkasans made two vertical assaults, one at Sukchon-Sunchon in October, 1950, and the othr at Munsan-ni in March, 1951.

After a difficult operation and heavy losses at Inje in March, the 17th went to Japan for a year, returning to Korea to quell the prisoner riots on Koji-do in 1952. When the war ended, the ARCT returned to Japan for two years and finally departed for Fort Bragg, N. C., in 1955.

In 1956 the Rakkasans moved a second time to Fort Campbell, where they formed the nucleus of the newly activated 101st Airborne Division, the first division organized under the Pentomic structure.

On activation of the 101st Airborne Division, the 187th ARTC was redesignated 2nd Airborne Battle Group, 187th Infantry. Maneuvering in the Americas, the 2nd Battle Group has retained Fort Campbell as its home.

The 187th ARCT is parent unit to the 1st Battle Group, 187th Infantry. In 1958, during the crisis in the Middle East, the battle group was deployed to Lebanon. Upon easing of tensions, it was recalled to Fort Bragg, where it has remained as part of the 2nd Airborne Division.

The 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, Air Assault, direct descendant of units that made history in World War II and Korea, is prepared to make history itself. Men of the unit are ready to go, to live the motto born of the Korean conflict, "All the Way!"

Road Equipment Operators Earn Diplomas Here

Men from the 577th Engineer Battalion and the 806th Engineer Battalion recently were graduated from the operators' class for the Huber-Ware Model 40 road grader.

Presenting "diplomas" to the new grader operators was Maj. John E. Kelly, executive officer of the 151st Engineer Group (Combat), assisted by Harold E. Canevit, group sergeant major.

The eight-day course, instructed by L. I. Van Dover, engineer maintenance technician from the Engineer Regional Maintenance Office here, covered 24 hours of instruction on operator forms, operator maintenance, trouble shooting and safety. The remainder of the course was devoted to practical exercise.

Graduates from the 577th included Sp5 George Standsberry, Sp4 Larry A. Grinde and Sp4 Robert L. Key, all of Company B; Sp5 Anthony Lawrence, Company C; Sp5 Gentle Green and Sp5 Scott Walker, both of Company D.

Graduates from the 806th were Sp5 Leeodeas Fauld, Pvt. Ward A. Hungerford and Pvt. Gary E. Johns, all of Company B, and PFC Eliza N. Fowler, Pvt. Henry N. Thorne and Pvt. Phillip Badillo, Company D.

KEEPING FIT

Dr. John H. Finley (1863-1940), onetime editor of the "New York Times," used to take an annual 36-mile hike around Manhattan Island. He also walked 72 miles across New Hampshire to attend the inauguration of a new president at Darthmouth University.

Rakkasans Hold Their 1st Review

The 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry (Rakkasans) of the 11th Air Assault Division, recently held their first review since activation here as part of the Army's history - making air mobility test.

Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the division; Col. George S. Beatty Jr., commander of the division's 1st Brigade, and Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, Rakkansas commander, were reviewing officers.

Col. Hennessey reviewed the 187th's history in a brief address.

Following his remarks, Gen. Kinnard and Col. Beatty were presented regimental crests and extended honorary membership in the 3rd Battalion.

Maj. Rutland D. Beard Jr., battalion executive officer, served as commander of troops and led the unit as it passed in review.

Engineer Is Grad Of CBR Training

Sp5 Joseph W. Parker, Company A, 806th Engineer Battalion (Const), recently completed a two-week course of instruction at the Chemical, Biological, Radiological (CBR) Warfare Center here.

This course, given continously throughout the year, scrutinizes unconventional weapons and their characteristics. The purpose of such specialized instruction is to train individuals from different units as thoroughly as possible in every aspect of CBR warfare which will apply to units at company level.

Signal Writes Poem To End Confusions

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

The 2nd Division's 122nd Signal Battalion, dressed in poet's garb, this week expressed its reorganization under the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept in a three stanza poem addressed to fellow division members.

Signal's switch to the ROAD concept was so subtle, some feared it went unnoticed. It was a carefully organized affair; a completely successful night displacement. Many people didn't realize until days afterward that the signal battalion hadn't simply disappeared into thin air.

For those who still wonder what happened to this vital battalion, the truth is that one night they gathered their gear at Fort Benning's Sand Hill (their home since 1958) and relocated at Kelley Hill, three miles away.

Their poem, composed by Lt. Walter Johnson, should speak for itself. But for those who are not used to these tactics, a detailed criticism follows.

SIGNAL'S SILENT REPORT

Gone is the fly-swatter skyline;
They left like a shot in the dark.
A silent report—We heard no retort;
Their bite must be worse than their bark.

The signal battalion medallion
Disappeared like the dew in the morn.
Over new fallen snow — their tracks wouldn't show
Which way in the dark they were borne.

If you see an orange bandanna
Flying high from a lone weeping-will,
Control your vendetta — its just an antenna.
Same GIs, same old guys, new hill.

EXPLANATION

Fly-swatter — the double grilled signal radio antenna, once seen on Sand Hill sticking above the pines as testiment that the battalion is on the job. This does not imply that these antennae are wielded against bugs, though they are versatile.

Left like a shot etc. — They did.

A Silent report — a dig at the pages of THE BAYONET that neglected to report on their move to Kelley Hill.

Orange bandanna — signal's official colored scarf worn on special occasions. The original version read "orange bannana' but it's hoped this was a misprint.

Weeping-will — A poetic contraction of the Weeping Willow, a local source of camouflage.

Just an antenna — The poem comes full circle in the best traditions of modern poetry.

Anticipating the acclaim their poem would have if published, the battalion also included some hypothetical reviews. "Sand Hill's loss is Kelly Hill's gain," says Wall Street Chronicle. "Capitalistic War-Mongering Tactics," says Investia.

CHECKING CONDITIONS IN EUROPE WHERE 38TH INFANTRY HAS BEEN TRAINING
(L-R) Gen. Corley, Sgt. Maj. Brown and 38th's Sgt. Maj. John Conway

How's STRAC Doing Over There?

Trio Returns With Rotaplan Report

By Peter Tatistcheff

Three envoys from the stateside 2nd Division to the 38th Infantry in Germany have completed their inspection tour in Europe and return with word of morale and training conditions.

The three-man liaison group consisting of Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander; Lt. Col. Richard A. Perkins, executive officer of the 3rd Brigade; and Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, division sergeant major, arrived home Monday after a week's observation.

According to Sgt. Maj. Brown, "The men can't wait to come home. For many members of the 38th Infantry this six-month European tour of duty was a once in a lifetime experience, but they are all eager to return and join their families at Fort Benning."

Gen. Corley reports that the 38th "Measures up in every respect in comparison to units that have been stationed in Europe for a long time. As a matter of fact, they take pride in being different from any other unit over there. The Rotaplan mission makes them different and they are proud of it.

"There is no doubt in my mind," the general stressed, "that they are combat ready. The day after we arrived, the battle group moved out to the field on a readiness alert. I was impressed with their capabilities."

General Corley went on to point out that Baumholder Post, where the 38th is stationed, is an isolated area at least 50 miles from 8th Division Headquarters. Set in a mountainous region, the post was particularly chosen by the German Army as suited to training of American units.

"I toured many areas and watched many Europe-stationed units train while on this visit. In my opinion the 38th fits in very well there. I was particularly happy to speak with members of the 38th including many sergeants. I remember a SFC Gallaway of Company A, 38th Infantry, who explained maintenance problems and procedure during a field problem. I also spoke with a Sgt. Smothers of Company B, during their readiness test."

The general noted that temperatures in Germany are still in the freezing zone compared to weather at Fort Benning. When they first arrived the thermometer was sitting at nine degrees. The highest it ever got was 43.

"It takes a lot of prior planning to transport war-machines like our infantry battalions from one continent to another," said Lt. Col. Perkins.

"The 38th Infantry has given us some pointers on what they learned on their Rotaplan tour. We have learned many things on our visit with the 38th that should make it easier for the 9th and 23rd Infantries when they go to Europe in April. The only thing that will be going over in April will be soldiers with their individual weapons. All equipment for the battalions will be signed for by the advance party that has already arrived in Germany."

Headed by Gen. Corley, the group arrived by air at Frankfurt, Germany on March 5, where they were met by Col. Maurice C. Holden, 38th Infantry commander, and Brig. Gen. Clarence E. Beck, assistant commander of the 8th Infantry Division, the unit with whom the "Rock of the Marne" outfit is presently ending its six-month temporary tour.

Upon arrival at Baumholder, Gen. Corley reviewed the 38th Infantry Honor Guard and met the unit's officers and first sergeants. After a short briefing by Col. Holden, a tour of the post followed.

The next morning the visiting "Indianhead" threesome awoke early to observe the battle group move out to its dispersal area during a USAREUR-call-

Seventy 38th Infantry Soldiers Welcomed Back From Europe

An advance party of 15 officers and 55 enlisted men of the 2nd Infantry Division's 38th Infantry Monday returned to the United States and Fort Benning after six months winter training in the snow-covered forests of Germany.

The 70-man advance party is the lead contingent for the remainder of the battle group, some 1,500 strong, which will return to Benning in mid-April.

Led by Executive

Returning after temporary duty in Europe under the Army's Rotaplan rotation system which last week dispatched advance parties of other 2nd Division units to Germany, the Benning-bound party was led by Lt. Col. Sidney J. Roche, executive officer of the 38th.

On hand to greet the "Marnemen" at Lawson Army Airfield were families and friends that saw them depart.

"Second to None" commander, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander, officially welcomed the returning men with Col. Lucien F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander. A division welcoming party of officer representatives from the 3rd Brigade's 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry were also present to greet the Europe-trained members of the division.

The two planes were the same two C-118s that last week ferried 98 soldiers to Germany as advance parties of the 9th and 23rd Infantries.

Following a brief welcoming ceremony, the "Marnemen" were reunited with wives and children and left immediately for short vacations. Arrangements were made to relieve the men of their gear.

During the 38th's absence, the 2nd Infantry Division has reorganized and discarded the battle group - type division structure. The returning battle group will arrive in April to the United States reorganized but not officially so. With preparations all made in Europe, the 38th Infantry is ready to slip into the new structure.

Six months ago, the 38th Infantry was the first unit in the United States Army to take part in the new rotation system called Rotaplan.

Now two more units, this time battalions, have begun replacing the 38th Infantry in Germany. Advance parties of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry have already left for their overseas station to pave the way for the rest of the two battalions which will leave in April.

During his time there, Lt. Col. Perkins conferred with staff members and commanders of the 38th Infantry to obtain information relative to the scheduled departure of the two battalions of the "Indianhead" division's 3rd Brigade in April. Items discussed at the conference included reorganization plans for the 38th Infantry, problems encountered during the unit's Rotaplan tour and problem areas that might be expected by incoming Rotaplan battalions.

After arriving in Heidelberg, Gen. Corley met with Central Army Group officials on March 10, and later conferred with Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., commander - in - chief, USAREUR.

Division Is Accenting Maintenance

By Support Command PIO

The big push for equipment maintenance in the 2nd Division is emphasized in a course now being presented for selected officers.

The brainchild of Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander, and Col. Arlin J. Kehe, commander of the division's Support Command, the new Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course is intended to prepare certain officers from all "Indianhead" division companies to perform inspections on items of equipment. The course is designed to economize in keeping division equipment in top condition.

The course began March 5 and will continue until May 14. Gen. Harding, introduces each daily course of instruction which lasts eight hours.

Supervising the course is the assistant chief of staff, G4, Lt. Col. Edwin T. O'Donnell. Each unit receiving instruction furnishes its own training facilities and equipment.

The course consists of lectures and practical demonstrations. The officer in charge of the Preventive Maintenance Indicator Team will visit each organization the day prior to each scheduled class to determine what equipment will be needed for the demonstrations.

Chaplain Sets N.Y. Church Keynote Talk

By Bob deCamara

"We are living in a world of fantastic miracles. The challenge of today is in equally great spiritual advances."

This will be the theme of an address by the chaplain of the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning, Ga., at the New Rochelle, N.Y., annual Methodist Church ceremony, to be held Sunday at the 1st Methodist Church of New Rochelle.

While at School

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser first became known to church members in New Rochelle, while at the Army's Chaplain School on St. David's Island in the Long Island Sound off New Rochelle.

The chaplain's keynote talk, "Greatness of the Challenge of Today's World," will be delivered to the fathers and sons of the 1st Methodist Church, St. John's Methodist Church and St. Luke's Methodist Church.

A veteran of 18 years Army service, Chap. Fiser lived through campaigns of the Korean Conflict with the combat-toughened soldiers of the 7th Infantry "Bayonet" Division. Entering the Army during the last stages of World War II in 1945, the chaplain spent his first four years service on board ship as an Army transport chaplain.

Before coming to the Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Infantry Division, Chap. Fiser was stationed in Germany as chaplain of the 9th Infantry Division Artillery.

A graduate of Lambuth College in Jackson, Tenn., he has also taken graduate courses at Emory University's Chandler School of Religion in Atlanta, Ga., and at Iliff School of Religion on the campus of Denver University in Denver, Colo.

Flight Takes 100 To Europe Duty

Almost 100 soldiers of the 2nd Division Friday took to the air aboard Air Force planes from Benning's Lawson Army Airfield for a flight across the Atlantic ocean to Baumholder Post, Germany.

These infantrymen make up the advance party of the 1st Battalions, 9th and 23rd Infantries, going to Europe for temporary duty under the Army's rotation system, Rotaplan.

The main group made up of some 17,000 men from the two battalions will follow the advance party to Europe April 15.

Friday's departure was highlighted by colorful ceremonies at the airfield and included short talks by Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, the 2nd Division's assistant commander; Col. Lucien F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander; and the two battalion commanders, Lt. Col. John H. Cochran, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Wives and children of the soldiers gathered at the airfield to say final goodbyes along with general staff officers of the "Second to None."

Under Rotaplan, wives are not permitted to accompany their Army husbands to Germany. They will remain at Fort Benning for their soldiers to return.

The 9th Infantry will be back in three months and the 23rd will return in six months.

AUTOMATION TO REVOLUTIONIZE DIVISION PAYROLL

By Bob deCamara

The 2nd Infantry Division Finance Section will shortly have IBM machines to speed through a monthly divison payroll averaging $1,800,000.

In late April or early May, Finance will receive through the Adjutant Genereral's section a set of machines to handle money disbursement from one end of the process to the other.

Designed to push back the cut-off date for the monthly payroll and reduce the number of people in Support Command's Personnel section required to process the initial division pay procedure, the eight various machines have been successfully tested for one year at the 101st Airborne Division.

Machines Identified

In the approximate order of their use, the planned machines will be a key punch, key verifier, interpreter, sorter, collator, summary punch and the two multi-purpose calculators, the 407 and the more-sophisticated 609.

"Second to None" soldiers, as a result of the mechanization, can expect to see a new pink slip with their monthly pay. The new voucher will read horizontally rather than vertically as at present. In addition, income and tax to date will be shown on the voucher as well as monthly income and tax. This means that everyone will have a running account on their monthly slip of how much tax they've paid so far and how how much money they've made so far.

Automated pay will be phased-in at the division over a three month period. The phasing - in will proceed from one unit to the next.

Newcomers to the division will receive their first pay processed in the present manual method. Their second pay will be figured on the IBM machines.

Every division member will have maintained by Finance a personal "deck of cards." These nine cards will show all particulars pertaining to that individual. As any change is made in his pay, the change will be forwarded to Finance by Personnel and the new conditions will be entered on his pay cards by machine.

Presently, unit personnel sections bear a large share of the monthly pay burden along with Finance. Personnel men are now required to type up each voucher, making all pertinent entries manually, before submitting it to Finance for verification and computation.

Under the new system, after the first voucher is submitted, individual changes will be forwarded instead of making up a new voucher for every division soldier at the end of the month. Monthly vouchers will be filled out by machine.

Although the proposed automation will reduce the number of people at the personnel end necessary for paying, Army studies at Fort Campbell, Ky., home of the 101st, show that a slight increase in the size of the Finance section may be necessary.

Increase in Personnel

Presently Finance is authorized three officers and 32 enlisted men. With the division reorganized, Finance will be authorized the same number of men and one additional officer. Studies at the 101st have brought a recommendation to increase the number of enlisted personnel to 37, an increase of five.

This Army-wide mechanized pay project, presently in operation at the 101st and, more recently, at the 82nd Airborne Division and 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized), will necessitate schooling for "Indianhead" finance personnel.

Either this month or early in April, Finance will begin sending men to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., for a two - week course in IBM pay machines. If possible, the entire Finance section will receive this training at Fort Harrison. According to Maj. Rex T. Dittamore, division finance officer, the men are "enthusiastic" about the coming revolution in division pay procedures.

The major has reassuring words for the doubters in the "Second to None." Even with an automated pay system, Finance will "maintain manual capability." In other words, there is no need to worry about a machine breaking down. Should they all break, a possibility almost too remote to consider, Division Finance will see to it that all members of the division are paid on time — by hand.

Finance personnel will also have "to maintain manual dollar control." This simply means that men will check the machines, and the other way around. Every step of the machine processing will be supervised by experienced finance men — a regulation enforced by the U. S. General Accounting office.

Signs of the ROAD; A Series

702nd Now Mends All

By Colin Higgins

The long shadow of ROAD has passed over the 702nd Ordnance Battalion and left in its place a new, reorganized, highly complex battalion, complete with a new name—the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

The switch in names is indicative of the switch in missions of the old battalion and the new. Previously the 702nd Ordnance was responsible for all the major division maintenance on vehicles and weapons. Now the 702nd Maintenance Battalion handels the entire major maintenance on all equipment in the division ranging from a camera to an armored personnel carrier, from a typewriter to a helicopter, from a pup tent to a Honest John rocket.

There are several exceptions like medical and cryptographic equipment that the new battalion does not service, but by and large a division customer will now be able to bring all his equipment to one place for repair and to shop at the one place for repair parts. Radios will no longer be brought to Signal for repair, nor gas masks to Chemical; all go to the new maintenance battalion.

Functional Consolidation

This is what is known as "functional consolidation". Like a military Sears Roebuck the battalion is ready to fix all of its customer's equipment and to do it in the speediest and most efficient manner. In a sentence, it keeps the equipment of the combat-ready 2nd Divison, combat-ready.

COMMANDER
Lt. Col. Taft

To carry out the enlarged responsibilities many changes have taken place at the 702nd. The number of its personnel has already almost doubled as the major maintenance personnel from chemical, engineer, signal, and quartermaster battalions are transferred and assigned; it is authorized 100 per cent mobility; and its former two companies have been expanded to five. Previously there was a Headquarters and Main Support Company and a Forward Support Company. Now there is a Headquarters and Main Support Company, three Forward Support Companies and one Aircraft Maintenance Company.

The Headquarters and Main Support Company, Company A, is the largest company with almost three times as many personnel as the others. This backbone of the maintenance battalion when in the field is attached to 2nd Division Headquarters whereas the other companies are attached to subordinate units. It has the largest shop area and operates the direct exchange where a customer can have an unserviceable piece of equipment immediately replaced with a minimum of fuss and paper work. The company is commanded by Lt. Michael Petryszak. The first sergeant is 1st Sgt. Patrick H. Elsberry Jr., and the repair control supervisor is SFC Kenneth A. Hall.

The three Forward Support Companies are attached to the three division brigades. Company C is attached to the 2nd Brigade, Company D to the 3rd Brigade, and Company B (consisting now only of its commander, Lt. Frederick T. Mullens) will be attached to the 1st Brigade when it is formed in April.

On Sight Repair

These companies are directly attached to the brigade headquarters and travel and camp with them in the field. They can be broken down into various contact teams to go with a battalion or company and fix their equipment "on sight." "Bring the maintenance to the equipment, not the equipment to the maintenance" is one of the first principles of these companies.

A 2nd Division Special

Company C, at Kelley Hill, is commanded by Capt. Johnny L. Pace and its first sergeant is 1st Sgt. Kenneth B. Findley. Company D, on Sand Hill, the support to Rotaplan units, is commanded by Lt. William M. Sanders Jr., and its first sergeant is MSgt. George W. Lloyd.

The Aircraft Maintenance company, Company E, is attached to the 2nd Aviation Battalion at Lawson Army Airfield. The company is commanded by Lt. Ralph L. Dase and the first sergeant is SFC Elpert P. Fare.

The 702nd continues to be commanded by Lt. Col. Phillip H. Taft under the ROAD Concept. The battalion executive officer is Maj. Herbert L. Bergen, the material officer is Maj. Benard S. Drebber, the adjutant (S-1) is Lt. Richard B. Hai, the S-4 is Lt. Walter M. Boyless and the sergeant major is MSgt. Donald C. Wright.

Proud Heritage

In spite of the reorganization the 702nd continues to keep its motto, "Mend the Broken Sword," and its proud history and combat heritage.

The 702nd has participated in both World War II and the Korean War. It was awarded two meritorious unit commendations in the European Theater and for action in the Ardennes and on the Elsenborn Crest it was twice cited in the Order of the Day of the Belgian Army. In Korea the 702nd won another two meritorious commendations, together with two Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citations.

The 702nd was first activated as Machine Shop Truck Unit No. 343, at Camp Meigs, Washington, D. C. in February 1918. Two years later it was assigned to the 2nd Division and, except for a six month inactivation early in 1958, it has continually been an active element vital to the upkeep of the "Second to None's" combat equipment.

Coming

Next week THE BAYONET will feature the newly reorganized 2nd Aviation Battalion on this weekly ROAD page. Increasing in strength from a company into a battalion, this unit is now able to support the 2nd Division with greatly increased air support maneuverability.

Buildings Dedicated to Gallant Men

By George Ashis

With the haunting strains of taps drifting slowly over Kelley Hill, the 1st Infantry last week dedicated buildings to the memory of five recipients of the Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross.

Col. Edgar R. Poole, commander of the 1st Infantry, assembled his battle group at their Unit Training Area One for the ceremony. Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general, Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander, and other officers of the division were on hand, in addition to numerous friends and relatives of the 1st.

Following the invocation by Chaplain (Maj.) Hugh C. McKeown, battle group chaplain, Col. Poole addressed those present. He welcomed Gen. Billingslea, guests and the officers and men of the 1st and then proceeded to explain the purpose of the dedications, giving a short account of the deeds of each of the men being honored. "Members of the "Always First" will always remember the gallantry of their former comrades-in-arms. It gives me great pleasure to be here today honoring such brave and gallant men," said Col. Poole.

With the conclusion of Col. Poole's remarks, the official dedication of the buildings took place. While Maj. William W. Woodside, Adjutant, read the general order naming the buildings, assigned personnel unveiled the name plaques located over the entryways. The new names of the buildings are Wood Hall, Long Barracks, Parsiola Barracks, Maus Hall and Rees Barracks. In addition to the five barracks, "No Name" street was designated as Luzon Drive and the building housing the 2nd Infantry Division Noncommissioned Officer Open Mess was named Apache Hall. With the unveiling of the last plaque, Gen. Billingslea stepped forward to say that the 1st Infantry certainly could be proud of the fine record of bravery and gallantry-in-action that its members had acquired in the past. "Their are undoubtably many of you present here with fine combat records who have performed deeds just as heroic as those which we are honoring today, but, due to various circumstances, have gone unnoticed. Today, in honoring your former soldiers, we also honor you who have served unheralded with distinction and honor," said Gen. Billingslea.

As the general finished his remarks, a special firing squad Burchfield fired their salute with the soft and lonely sounds of taps immediately following. As the notes drifted away, those present rendered a final salute to the memory of their former gallant comrades.

Friendly Guerrillas Aid Planned Breakout by 'Prisoners-of-War'

By 1st Infantry PIO

Upon their arrival at the enemy compound, officers and enlisted men had been separated.

They were under the watchful eyes of guards in the towers surrounding the enclosed area. Under these conditions, they still managed to pass the word among the group of the planned escape set in five minutes. The escape would be fronted by friendly guerrillas, who would detract the guards with a steady flow of small arms fire, at which time the group would rush the main gate.

Under Their Noses

Waiting for what seemed like an eternity, the guerrillas suddenly opened fire causing the guards to turn their attention to them, at the same time ignoring the prisoners. Swarming the gate, the group made their way through the exit away from the compound. Pushing through the thick brush they began their long, tedious task of avoiding enemy patrols in a desperate attempt to return to friendly forces.

A page from the history of the Korean Conflict? No! This action was recently staged by 1st Infantry companies undergoing Escape and Evasion training.

Employing both day and night training techniques, the 1st Infantry met the training requirements with enthusiasm and interest.

Required to infiltrate aggressor forces for approximately 4,500 meters, the men used every evasive means during the daylight training phase. Then, simulating an escape from hostile forces of mock "aggressor" enemy, the troops maneuevered their way to freedom.

After an administrative break of two hours preparation for the night training problems, airborne infantry units prepared for action.

During the dark hours of the night, three-man groups were dropped at various intervals in an effort to infiltrate 4,500 meters of "aggressor" infested terrain to achieve the ultimate goal of "Escape and Evasion." Some of the men were captured and underwent extensive interrogation.

The 1st Infantry was commended on its discipline and participaton in the training exercises. The aggressor chief praised the group saying they "induced a great deal of realism into the problem."

TAC Liaison, Col. McCellan Comes to 2nd

By Bob deCamara

The commander of the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing visited the 2nd Division Monday from MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., for informal liaison with this Strategic Army Corps unit.

Air Force Col. Harold L. McCellan was on an orientation tour with the mission of getting ideas for possible future liaison between Tactical Air Command units and Strategic Army Corp infantry units. Under Strike Command's plan for coordination of Air Force and Army elements, commanders of fighter wings will tour various STRAC divisions to gain a better understanding of the division's needs and potentialities.

As commander of the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing of the 9th Tactical Air Force, Col. McCellan commands three squadrons of F-84 aircraft. There are 18 planes in a squadron.

The other two fighter wings assigned to the 2nd Division are the 15th Tactical Fighter Wing from MacDill Air Force Base and the 31st from Homestead Air Force Base, Fla.

Monday It's Volleyball

Company Level Matches To Finish Sports Drought

A five-day company level volleyball tournament scheduled from Monday to Saturday puts the 2nd Division back on its sports feet again after a month and a half layoff.

The lay-off was due to division reorganization which completely rearranged competing teams. Now with reorganization well under way and the large share of major units reestablished, volleyball brings units together again in sports competition.

To be played in the Kelley Hill Field House and at Harmony Church, the double-elimination tournament matches 14 teams in a volleyball pennant race, the winner to meet the Main Post champion for the Fort Benning title.

Winner of the five-game play-off between the "Second to None" and the Infantry Center will represent Fort Benning at the Third Army Tournament from April 16-19 at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Squads for the "Indianhead" games starting Monday will be limited to eight players in uniform and one manager. Rules will be governed by the 1963 official volleyball guide of the United States Volleyball Association.

The five king-size division units, the 1st Infantry, 2nd Brigade, 3rd Brigade, Division Artillery and Support Command, are eligible to enter two teams in the tournament. Separate Battalions may enter only one team apiece. The 2nd Military Police Company will be substituting in the tournament for the 72nd Armor which is training away from Fort Benning.

1962 "Doughboy" Football Player

New Chief In Charge Of Sports

A former right - handed pitcher for the Trinity University baseball team and officer whose sports interest ranges from bowling to basketball, playing or officiating, officially took over Monday as 2nd Division Special Services officer with promises of an "increase in sports activities in the division."

The 1961 graduate of Trinity University in San Antonio, Tex., Lt. Virgil C. Peterson, has been with the "Second to None" since June 26 of last year. Until Monday, Lt. Peterson had served as division postal officer.

From the opening match, the lieutenant has been active in the Division Trains bowling league, leading the post office team. During and after his years at Trinity, Lt. Peterson officiated sports in the Sunday School Athletic Association, the largest church sports association in the U.S.

Entering the Army in March 1962, the lieutenant first attended the Adjutant General Officers Orientation Course at Fort Ben Harrison before coming to the "Indianhead" Division.

The lieutenant's hobbies: sports.

UCLA Track Scholarship Won by 'Always First'er'

By 1st Infantry P10

Recently assigned to Company E, 1st Infantry was Spc Fred L. Meyer whose career in track has won him a scholarship to the University of California, Los Angeles.

He began in 1955 as a freshman at Snyder High School in Jersey City, N. J., where he won three gold medals for the half mile and a silver medal for second place in the mile relays.

In 1956, Meyer added to his laurels by winning the Jersey City Mayor's Trophy which is awarded annually to the outstanding runner in the Amateur Athletic Association track meet at Lincoln Park, N. J. During this same year he ran the half mile twice and placed first on both occasions, adding two more trophies to his collection.

He injured an ankle in a 1957 automobile accident which limited his participation in track meets that year. He did run the half mile in two meets and won second and third place medals.

In his last year at Snyder High School, Meyer won seven medals, four first place medals and three second place medals. His four first place medals were won in the half mile and in the mile relay. He considers these his two best distances. The second place medals were won in the low hurdle event and the half mile.

Besides track he participated in four years of baseball and played shortstop. In this sport, he led his freshman team to the City Championship with a 21-1 won-lost record. That year he batted a .420 average. In 1958, he again led his team to the City Championship with an unblemished 21-0 record and batted in the .400's again.

A jack of all sports, Meyer played two years of football and took his team to the championship in 1955 with a 11-0 season record. During that year, he quarterbacked and, in 1958 when his team took third place honors, played halfback.

A native of Jersey City, N.J., he entered the Army in July 1961 and took basic training at Fort Dix, N. J. Upon completion of his training there, he went to Fort Carson, Colo., for advanced infantry training.

1st Inf. Football Star Glitters Pure Sterling

By 1st Infantry P10

Today's sports spotlight shines on Jefferson Sterling, Headquarters Company, 1st Infantry, a member of Fort Benning's 1962 National Inter-Service football champions, the "Doughboys."

Sterling has been playing football since his high school days at Snyder High School in Jersey City, N.J., where he played fullback for three years and led his team to the runner-up spot in the city championship.

Completing high school, he went to Drake College in Jersey City and majored in accounting. He stayed at Drake for a year and then left to play semi-professional football with the Jersey City "Vikings," 1954 North Jersey champions.

After a successful year with the "Vikings," he entered the Army and went to Fort Dix, N.J., for basic training. Sterling was then assigned to the 25th Division's 14th Regiment in Hawaii and played football with his battle group team, the "Golden Dragons."

While there he recalls that his team was runner-up to the 35th Regiment team, nicknamed the "Catics." The "Catics" were made up of Hawaiians who had grown up together, entered the service together and now played football together. They had so much experience together that the team was run like a well-oiled clock, clicking with undefeatable precision against opposing teams.

One of the biggest moments in his football career came in 1957 when he won the 14th Regiment's Most Valuable Player award.

In 1960 Sterling went to Korea and was assigned to the 7th Division's 31st Infantry, playing football for that unit. During this year he helped his team place second in the league.

According to Sterling, a meeting between the 7th Division team and its arch rival, the 1st Cavalry, was equivalent to the annual Army-Navy game as a hard-fought contest. "No matter what the season records of the clubs showed, when they met it was anybody's game," says Sterling.

It wasn't until this past year Sterling found another winning football team. Last year, with Sterling playing fullback and defensive guard, the "Doughboys" rolled mightily against all rivals, ending the season as inter-service national champs with a 10-0 record.

Shough's Sports Scope

By PETE SHOUGH

Last Monday I had a chance to see a young and upcoming professional golfer by the name of Bob Bruno, who is entering his third year of the Professional Golfers' Association tour, demonstrate his talents at the post Country Club.

Bob, the club pro, Howard Holbrook and Maj. Milton Lewis, took advantage of the hot, sunny spring day to make some of the local club's toughest holes look easy.

Although I only had time to watch the threesome play four holes, I did see a little of everything golf has to offer.

On the Pine Side's number four hole, 186-yard par three, where I found the threesome, Bruno charged the hole with a five iron and placed the ball squarely on the green about 15 feet from the pin. He two-putted for his par. Howard Holbrook, also hitting a five-iron, came up short and dropped his ball in the sand that borders the left hand side of the green. Playing out of the sand to within 12 feet of the pin, Holbrook's third shot just rimmed the cup, giving him a four. Maj. Lewis stayed right in the game with a hustling par three.

On the fifth hole, a long par four, Bruno let the shaft out as he split the fairway with a drive somewhere in the vicinity of 300 yards. He then hit a towering seven-iron within six feet of the pin, making a birdie in easy reach.

Holbrook, who was playing for the first time in two weeks, ran into trouble as he pulled his second shot into an impossible lie in the left rough, but he recovered beautifully to grab his par. Again Lewis put the pressure on the two pros with his par.

While we were waiting at the next tee, I had a chance to talk to Bob, who is on a two-week vacation from the PGA tour. We discussed his recent tour experiences, and he told me he was especially upset with his showing so far this year, but felt his game would improve as the weather warmed up. He blamed his poor play on his putting, and it was easy to see that he had diagnosed his problem well. Several times Bob, who is member of the U. S. Rubber Company's Golf Advisory Team, left himself longer putts than seemed necessary.

When I ask him how many balls he was allotted by the U. S Rubber Company, he answered, "Three dozen a week. More if I need them." This, in my opinion is just what one needs to play a good game.

Much to my surprise, I found that Bob was once stationed here as an enlisted man. He spent 15 months working as golf pro at the Sand Hill Course.

After his disappointing display in the St. Petersburg Open, Bob next heads to Wilmington, N. C. and the Azalea Open to try to get back on the winning side of the ledger.

By the way, Bob finished up the day with a 69, including five birdies and two bogies.

PUTTING OUT . . . Bob Bruno, a member of the Professional Golfers' Association tour, watches Howard Holbrook, post Country Club pro, as he putts out on the ninth green at the local club. Bruno, a former enlisted man here, took a two-week vacation from the tour after playing in the St. Petersburg Open. His next stop will be the Azalea Open in Wilmington, N.C. In his first round here, Bob carded a 69.

Two Eagles Recorded

First Lt. James E. Remmert and 2nd Lt. Bill Martindale, both scored two under par three's on the 508-yard eighth hole on the Pine Side of the course.

Playing in a foursome Lt. Remmert also went on to eagle the 18th hole, a 452-yard par five.

On the eighth hole both players hit their drives some 250 yards down the center of the fairway from where they both reached the green on the second shot with a two iron.

Roll-Off Set To Select Post Team

A bowling roll - off will be conducted at the Main Post Bowling Alley April 8-12, in order to select the six top men bowlers and four top women bowlers to represent the post in the Third Army Bowling Tournament at Fort Rucker, April 30 to May 4.

In the men's division, military personnel that have played in the Fort Benning City Assn. or the Columbus City Assn., with a verified league average of 175 and above for 50 or more games as of March 15, 1963, are eligile to participate in the roll-off.

Roll-off play will be scheduled between the hours of 1 to 5 p.m. daily.

WASHINGTON (AFPS).— In the Interservice Boxing Championships at Fort Myer, Va., the Army led the field by winning four individual champion ships and 24 team points.

Second in the team standings with 16 points and three championships was the Air Force, followed by the Marine Corps with two championships and 12 points and the Navy with one champion and eight points.

Volleyball Tourney Set at Field House

The 1963 company-level volleyball tournament will take place at Briant Wells Field House April 2-4 with eight teams representing the post's major units.

The tourney will determine which team will represent Fort Benning at the Third Army Volleyball tournament at Fort McClellan, Ala., on April 16.

All-Stars Notch Win at Tourney

Fort Benning's talent-laden basketball team wasted little time in getting off to a good start in the first round of the 1963 Third Army Basketball Tournament at Fort Gordon, Ga., Monday night, crushing Fort McPherson, Ga., 89-45.

Bell was expected to be one of the big guns in the tournament, having led The Infantry Center in scoring during the past season with a 28-point per game average while playing for the 428th Medical Battalion.

Barksdale, one of two members on the squad from the 2nd Infantry Division, was a torrid scorer during the 1962-1963 season, while Barclay was a forward on the Student Brigade team which finished second in The Infantry Center final standings.

Rounding out the scoring were Carvey Jones and Melvin Johnson with six; Walter Clark with five; Hudson Ray with four, and Herbert Chavis with two.

Coach SFC Bob Kinard will set his cagers loose on Fort Gordon Wednesday at 10 p.m. in their second game of the tournament which is scheduled to end tomorrow night.

Fort Benning's high flying WAC basketball team played its first round game in the Third Army WAC Basketball Tournament Tuesday against Fort McPherson at 8 p.m.

Know Your Senior NCOs

M-Sgt (E-8) Edward Mish is operations sergeant for the 4th Student Battalion The Student Brigade. As such, he is in charge of receiving processing housing, feeding and equipping the many airborne students who come here for training.

In addition, he has to supervise the co-ordinating of their classes with the various departments of the school, movements from class to class, and their out processing at the end of the course. He must make sure airborne units all over the world receive the men they need.

Sgt. Mish joined the Army in 1942 and took his basic training at Camp Toccoa, Ga., with the 511th Parachute Infantry Regiment. After airborne training the 511th moved to Camp Mackall, N.C., to help form the 11th Airborne Division. The 11th was then sent to the Far East Command in New Guinea to prepare for the invasion of the Philippines.

Combat Jump

Sgt. Mish made the first of his five combat jumps in February, 1945, over Tagaytay Ridge in the Philippines. His second jump was with the group that liberated some 3,500 prisoners from the Los Banos Prison Camp in the Philippines.

For his third jump, Sgt. Mish was sent to Appari on the northern tip of Luzon. This jump broke the Japanese resistance in the Philippines and ended the campaign.

When the Korean Conflict broke out, Sgt. Mish added two more combat stars to his parachutist wings, with jumps at Sukchon and Munson-Ni, Korea.

In 1951, he returned to the U. S. and went to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C. After serving a year with the 82nd, Mish went to the 10th Special Forces Group, and later to the 77th Special Forces group, both at Fort Bragg.

He returned to his old unit, the 11th Airborne Division, in 1954, and went to Germany with that unit a year later.

'Mr. Airborne'

While in Germany he helped set up the 11th's Airborne School, and became its sergeant major. The school was initiated to train parachutists for the newly constituted German Army. For this he received German Parachute Wings in 1957. During this tour he became known as "Mister Airborne."

Returning to the U. S. in 1959, he went to Fort Bragg, where he assumed the duties of post chief ranger for 22 months. Next he went to the 82nd Airborne Division.

In February, 1962, Sgt. Mish came here to take up his present assignment.

Sgt. Mish holds the Combat Infantryman Badge with Star, The Presidential Unit Citation with three Oak Leaf Clusters, The Korean Presidential Citation, the Bronze Star with a "V" device and an oak Leaf Cluster, Good Conduct Medal, the Senior Parachutist Badge with five battle stars and the German Parachutists Badge.

He now lives on post with his wife, Elizabeth, and two children, Johnny, 18, and June, 15.

A tennis clinic for Army officers and their wives will be held each Wednesday throughout the remainder of March and April at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The officers clinic is scheduled between 5 and 7 p.m., while the wives will receive tennis lessons between 10 a.m. and noon.

Instruction will be provided by Victor Ponce, tennis pro at the Main Officers' Open Mess and a member of the National Lawn Tennis Association (NLTA).

AF Week Meet Set For Today

Initial plans for the local Armed Forces Week observance will be discussed at noon today when military and civilian chairmen gather for a dutch luncheon at the Martinique in Columbus.

Brig. Gen. (Ret.) W. G. Skelton is over-all chairman for Armed Forces Week activities.

Traditionally, Armed Forces Week is observed annually the third week of May. The observance is based on the fact that in a free society, public support is considered the foundation on which the national "Power for Peace" must rest.

Programs in past years have included a giant parade on Friday preceding Armed Forces Day, which this year falls on May 17, static displays of Armed Forces weapons and equipment, and the colorful "Searchlight Tattoo" and Massing of the Colors ceremonies.

4 Scholarships Are Available

Four $300 scholarships will be awarded to outstanding military dependents in the 1963 graduating classes of high schools of the Columbus - Phenix City area, the Woman's Club of Fort Benning has announced.

An annual project of the club, the awards go each year to dependents of military personnel on active duty May 31.

Students eligible for the scholarships are requested to make application by April 10, using forms available offices of school principa

Simulator Sounds Off, But Does No Damage

A lot of noise without the use of high explosives is the purpose of the 17A1, artillery mine and demolition simulator device being tested by The Infantry Board.

For use in adding to the realism in training exercises, the simulator is being put through its paces by the Mortar and Surveillance Section of The Infantry Board.

Basically it is a combustion chamber used to explode a mixture of propane and oxygen. According to board officials, it can be fired 35 times on one loading, saving training time. Further, the 17A1 eliminates the need for demolition personnel, and is so simple the average soldier can operate it with little training.

The device will be tested for realism, safety, ease and rapidity of operation, durability are reliability. In addition, the sounds will be compared to the actual sound produced by artillery, mortars, mines and demolition charges.

Testing is being conducted in conjunction with The Infantry School, Artillery and Missile School at Fort Sill, Okla., and Armor School at Fort Knox, Ky.

Icebergs and Cavities Really Quite Similar

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

Believe it or not, there is a similarity between icebergs and cavities in the teeth.

This may sound far fetched, but let's explain a little.

A cavity is very much like an iceberg in that only a portion shows on the surface. The tooth may show only a slight cavity to the inspecting eye, but the inside may be nearly hollow.

Almost all of us have had the experience of having a tooth drilled for a filling. It seems that the dentist will never stop working. He grinds and grinds, changing a small hole into a large one. Particularly in the past, when slow speed was prevalent, it seemed he would never finish; but there was and is, "method to his madness."

The reasons for his perseverance are numerous. First, and most important, the entire decayed area must be removed. If any decay is left, nothing has been accomplished.

Next, all unsupported enamel must be removed. This is necessary because of the undermining effect of decay, the larger area being below the enamel, in the dentine. The cavity must be further prepared to keep the filling in place and prevent its loosening. Finally, the preparation must be carried into an area where you, the patient, can keep the edges of the filling clean to prevent any future decay.

The feeling today is that most cavities can be prevented by proper mouth care, and the future looks even brighter. Until the day when decay is a memory, give us a helping hand by: (1) taking extra care of your mouth; (2) get regular check-ups and x-rays to find new cavities before they become icebergs; (3) get fillings when needed in early decay, not when the tooth hurts.

Too many people are afraid of "kicking a sleeping dog." They know they have cavities, but rationalize that since they don't hurt, just leave them alone. A tooth cannot heal itself, cavities always get larger, never smaller.

Remember the sinking of the Titanic. An iceberg sank this unsinkable ship. Similarly, decay, resembling an iceberg, can sink your teeth.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

Surgeon Says

Early Detection of TB Prime Concern Today

By Capt. Joseph J. Wisleckl

In the past few years, there have been rapid advances in the treatment of tuberculosis. Not so many years ago, the treatment for tuberculosis frequently meant prolonged periods of rest in sanitoriums—some of which went on for years.

Currently, however, medical science has developed new and effective medicines to be given for the treatment of this disease. These medicines reduce the period of hospitalization from a matter of years to a matter of months.

And of more importance, there is a very good chance of actually curing the patient of tuberculosis so that there is no danger of relapse.

So, the treatment of tuberculosis in this day and age is no great problem. A great deal of emphasis now is placed on getting patients under treatment as soon as possible.

It would be good to diagnose the disease before it has advanced too far. It would be good to be able to locate the patient with a tuberculous infection before it has advanced to the point of fever and coughing of blood. The tuberculosis germ is a slow, growing germ and the infection in the body may be prevalent for quite awhile before it causes symptoms and makes the person feel sick.

One of the ways to find early cases of tuberculosis is by taking chest X-rays of large numbers of people. One method utilizes mobile X-ray units dispatched into communities by tuberculosis associations or public health departments to take chest X-rays of the community population.

Another method of detecting early cases of tuberculosis is by means of the tuberculin skin test. The material used for this skin test is a sterile purified protein derived from a culture of tuberculosis germ. If a person has been exposed to tuberculosis, his skin round the area tested will react in a certain fashion.

Now, there mere fact that a person's skin test is positive does not mean that he has tuberculosis. Many adults in the course of their lives and various duties, have been exposed to tuberculosis, and as a result, have a positive skin test, yet they are perfectly healthy.

Many people have tiny scars or spots on the lung apparent on a chest X-ray, which are the result of a mild infection many years ago, but they are in excellent health.

Many schools and health clinics will do routine tuberculin skin tests on children rather than doing frequent routine chest X-rays. While many adults have traveled widely and have been exposed to tuberculosis, this is not the case with the child. His contacts have usually been limited to his family, playmates, and school.

If a child is found to have a positive skin test — this, by itself, is not enough to say that the child has tuberculosis. It is enough, however, to investigate the child's contacts at home and school to determine, if possible, if there is a case of active disease nearby to whom the child was exposed.

To say whether or not the child, himself, is sick and whether or not the child needs treatment depends on numerous other factors. The doctor must evaluate each individual based on these other factors which include the health of the child; the age of the child; whether the child is known to have recently become skin test positive; and what the chest X-ray looks like.

Continued cooperation between all groups concerned—general public, patients and their families, doctors, health nurses, public and private health agencies, schools, and industry — will result in the continued decline and eventual conquest of tuberculosis.

Preventive Dentistry Program Is Outlined

Preventive dentistry is like preventive maintenance practiced in other areas of the Army, 45 members of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Armed Forces Management Association were told at a luncheon meeting Tuesday.

Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant, deputy post dental surgeon, discussed "Management of Dentistry in the Army."

Col. Merchant said there are 700 million unfilled cavities in the nation with 9 per cent of the population affected by dental decay. The number of cavities is increasing at the rate of 1,400,000 per year, he added.

"If all the dentists in the United States lined up along the Eastern coastline and started filling cavities as they moved westward, determined to leave no cavities behind, by the time they reached Harrisburg, Pa., they would have to turn around and start over," he said.

"In the Army there are 2,000 dentists, whereas 6,000 are needed," Col. Merchant said. "If the Army met its need, it would deplete the dental service available to the civilian population."

During World War II, a million cases of trench mouth caused a loss of three million man-hours, the colonel pointed out, adding that dental casualty also was a major problem during the Korean conflict.

"As an ordnance officer thinks of keeping his weapons firing, so the Army dentist thinks of preventive dentistry," Col. Merchant said:

ENGINEER RE-UP PLAQUE . . . SSgt. Raymond W. Strickland (L), Re-Up NCO of Company A, 577th Engineer Battalion, 151st Engineer Group, is congratulated by Col. Mahlon E. Gates (R), group commander, as 1st Lt. Luther E. Oswalt, commander of the company, accepts the group's Re-Up Plaque for the month. The plaque is awarded permanently each year to the company winning the most number of times during the year.

Test Range Renovated

The Infantry Board has renovated Kunzig Range, the principal testing site for Infantry anti-tank rifles, missiles, rockets and grenades.

Under the supervision of SFC Guy Edwards, platoon sergeant of the Rocket and Recoilless Weapons Test Platoon, the range has been lengthened and widened to accommodate testing of the rapidly improving family of Infantry heavy, medium and light anti-tank weapons.

Included in the improvements is the installation of a temporary moving target complex. At a later date this will be replaced with permanent facilities.

Also, demolition pits have been completed along each side of the range. A series of sites have been established for rifle and machine gun fire to accompany test firing of the anti-tank weapons.

Registration Set For YAC Baseball

Registration for the three baseball leagues of the Fort Benning Youth Activities Club is scheduled for April 1 through 15 at each of the post schools.

Boys will register for either the Biddy League, ages 8 to 10, Doughboy League, ages 11 and 12, or the Intermediate League, ages 13, 14 and 15.

The regular season will get under way about the middle of April.

PM Promises Crackdown on Unregistered Vehicles

A crackdown is in the mill for post motorists whose privately owned vehicles aren't properly registered, according to Lt. Col. Joseph A. Mitchell Jr., provost marshal traffic regulations and safety officer.

"There are over 27,000 cars registered at Fort Benning," Col. Mitchell said, "and our files indicate a considerable number of these are driving around without up-to-date post stickers."

"Further," he added, "some drivers have expired state licenses and auto tags."

Ignorance of Law

Most of this is due to ignorance of state law concerning renewal of tags and licenses and post regulations concerning vehicle registration, Col. Mitchell stated.

"We are giving everybody until April 30 to bring their registration up to date," he said. "If it is accomplished by that date no penalty will be assessed."

"This is not to say drivers should wait until then before taking care of this, because military policemen will continue to stop drivers every day who do not display the proper registration," Col. Mitchell added.

List Compiled

A list of the tag expiration dates for each state has been compiled by provost marshal officials, and anyone who is not familiar with his particular state can obtain this information by stopping by Building No. 215, or telephoning 545-3811.

Similar information is available concerning drivers licenses.

Col. Mitchell pointed out that not all states require servicemen to renew drivers licenses.

Among these are California, Colorado, Delaware, Hawaii, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, Vermont and West Vir-

Engineers Retire 151st Hdqs. Flag

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 151st Engineer Group (Combat), was inactivated and its flag retired at ceremonies Monday afternoon at French Field.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding General of The Infantry Center, and Col. Mahlon E. Gates, commander of the 151st, expressed their thanks for "the fine work of the 151st Group."

More than 2,000 men and 36 pieces of engineering equipment paraded in the review.

Participating in the parade were members of the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction), 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) and the 806th Engineer Battalion.

The history of the 151st dates back to January, 1942, when its parent unit, the 82nd Engineer Combat Regiment, was constituted and allotted to the Regular Army at Camp Swift, Tex.

The following month the 82nd was redesignated Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1115th Engineer Combat Group.

After leaving Camp Swift,

Signalmen Return From S. Viet Nam

After six months in South Viet Nam, working under the most arduous conditions, the 72nd Signal Detachment has returned here for deactivation.

The detachment was activated here under the command of Capt. Robert M. Wiggins in 1962. In September, 1962, it was ordered to Viet Nam on a temporary change of station with the mission of providing a country-wide system of radio communications. The men also trained technicians in operation and repair of the net work.

During their six months in the war-torn Asian nation, the unit installed more than 2,500 radios which provided a means of reporting intelligence operations and activities of the Viet Cong — the communist guerrillas.

Working with members of the U. S. Overseas Mission, three-man teams were sent out from the 72nd's headquarters at Tan Son Nhut Air Base, just outside the capital city of Saigon, to pave the way for the installing teams.

The teams, which always included an interpreter, were forced to climb mountains in the northern regions. Rice paddies of the southern part of the republic were waded through or crossed by small boat.

Almost every type of transportation — from donkeys to sampans — was used to transport radio equipment and supplies.

According to Capt. Wiggins and Sgt. Daniel Cruse Jr., acting first sergeant, the job was a tough one.

"Our men have been involved in many sporadic actions in accomplishing their mission," Capt. Wiggins noted. "But the rewarding experience of seeing the look of confidence appear on the faces of the villagers has made it worthwhile."

Brig. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of the U. S. Army Support Group in Viet Nam, cited the 73 men of the 72nd for having shown "an extremely high degree of profes-

TIS Marks 56th Year

Today marks the 56th anniversary of The Infantry School, with Fort Benning in its 44th year as its home, capital city of the "Queen of Battles."

On page 5 of today's Bayonet, PFC Frank Gibson traces the history of the famed training center for Infantrymen, and explains the mission of the school's departments.

"Many of these men have been subjected to Viet Cong fire, and I'm certain that there have been many acts of personal bravery and loyalty which have gone unsung," the general continued.

"They have lived, travelled and worked under the most primitive conditions without the slightest complaint," Gen. Stilwell observed. "In every respect they have proven themselves true soldiers."

The 72nd will be deactivated this month and the men sent back to their parent units.

Engineers

where the group was activated and trained, the 111Sth arrived in England where it received extensive orientation and preparation for participation in the Normandy campaign.

The 1115th landed on Omaha Beach in June, 1944, and after a successful campaign across France and Germany it completed its combat tour in May, 1945, at Goslar, Germany.

River Crossings

The group particularly distinguished itself in river crossing operations at St. Lo, Vire, the Seine the Maas and Roer and also received campaign streamers for its operations in Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland and Central Europe.

The Headquarters and Service Company, 1115th Engineer Combat Group, was returned to the United States after the war and inactivated in November, 1945, at Camp Kilmer, N. J. It was redesignated Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 151st Engineers and alloted to the Regular Army in June, 1954. The unit was assigned to Fort Benning in January, 1955.

Units initially comprising the Group at Fort Benning were the 78th Engineer Battalion (Combat), which gyroscoped to Germany in February, 1957, the 577th Engineers Battalion (Construction), and the 568th Engineer Company (Float Bridge).

The 78th Engineer Battalion was replaced in February by the 46Sth Engineer Battalion (Combat), which joined the 151st from Germany in the gyroscope exchange. These units were joined by the 600th Engineer Company (Field Maintenance) and the 57th Engineer Company in the late spring of 1959.

STRAC Unit

Headquarters and Headquarters Company was reorganized and designated a STRAC (Strategic Army Corps) Unit in November, 1961.

Aside from its normal mission of training and maintaining operational readiness for a combat role, the 151st has provided considerable troop and equipment training support for The Infantry School.

Each summer, the 151st has supported Reserve engineer units and helped equip and train over 2,500 officers and enlisted men.

Vehicles

Initial registration of vehicles driven on the post should be accomplished within three working days after arrival.

As stated in The Infantry Center pamphlet concerning vehicle registration, all military personnel and their dependents, active or retired, civilian employees, concessionaires and their employees, representatives of commercial firms authorized to conduct business on the reservation, and military dependents of sponsors stationed elsewhere who regularly operate cars on or about the post must register the vehicles with the provost marshal's Vehicle Registration Section in Bldg. 215.

Forms Issued

Registration may be accomplished by obtaining proper forms from the Registration Branch, having the car inspected to insure it meets required mechanical safety standards, presenting proper proof of ownership or authorization to drive the auto under question, and having it adequately insured.

The minimum amount of insurance considered adequate is $10,000-$20,000 public liability, and $5,000 property damage. Proof of coverage must be presented at the time of registration and must be for at least six months.

"All changes concerning a registered vehicle must be reported within 48 hours," he said.

Such changes include insurance renewal, changes in color, motor number, state tag or license number, and sale of vehicle.

"Reporting insurance renewal is the change most people forget," Col. Mitchell said, "and it is the easiest one for MP's to spot."

Two Stickers

Two stickers are issued when the renewed insurance policy is presented to officials at the Registration Branch and the vehicle passes a safety inspection.

The stickers, which are to be conspicuously displayed on the left side of the front and rear bumpers, have a number corresponding to the month renewal comes due again. In addition, each sticker has a color pertaining to the year.

The provost marshal or his representative may suspend, revoke or refuse registration privileges when the car fails to meet mechanical safety standards, or upon expiration or required liability coverage.

RUNNING DEFICIT

The U. S. has been running a deficit in its balance of payments (that is, payments exceed receipts) every year since 1951, except 1957. The deficit last year was $2.2 billion.

'63 Joint Fund Drive Entering Final Days

The 1963 National Health Agency and Federal Service Joint Crusade is picking up momentum here, now standing at 70 per cent participation, according to Lt. Col. Michael Parvio, project officer.

Heading into the final days of the drive with the coming payday weekend marking its conclusion, campaign reports show an increase of 34 per cent over last week's total.

"We are still hopeful of reaching the 100 per cent participation mark," commented Col. Parvio.

The 197th Infantry Brigade is still on top with 91 per cent participation," he noted.

Other units over the 50 per cent point are Leeman Army Aviation Command, 75; The Student Brigade, 69; and Medical Battalion, 68; The Infantry Center Troop Command, 60, and Martin Army

HAPPY WALKERS

The period of the Crusades was a happy time for walkers, though some authorities maintain that the Crusades were the result not of religious fervor but of a virus.

Capt. Fender Honor Grad Of Career Course Class

Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commandant of The Infantry School, congratulated the class on its completion of the course, and introduced the speaker for the exercises, Brig. Gen. Patrick F. Cassidy, assistant division commander, 101st Airborne Division. Gen. Cassidy also presented the honor graduate with his certificate and a desk set.

In his address to the graduating body, Gen. Cassidy said that the ultimate assignment for an Army officer is the command of a combat-ready unit. The officer must be willing to work long hard hours, and do many jobs, but in the end it is a gratifying assignment, he said.

Preparing a unit for combat is a great challenge, Gen. Cassidy noted. Officers must strive to obtain superior results from average individuals. In order to bring his unit up to a high standard of efficiency, an officer must inspire his men and

"The commander has the time to bring all his men to a peak of proficiency in everything," he added. He must therefore plan a program which will hit all areas equally and build a strong foundation of fundamentals.

In conclusion Gen. Cassidy stated that the foundation of the Army is the individual soldier and he is the one the officer must work with to make the Army strong.

Viet Nam Vets Receive Praise

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following message, dated March 19, was transmitted to Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School. Since this transmission, the 72nd Signal Detachment has returned here.)

"The 72nd Signal Detachment, commanded by Capt. Robert M. Wiggins and on temporary change of station from Fort Benning, departs the Republic of Viet Nam today by air on its return to your station.

"This small detachment has, since its arrival herein October, 1962, performed outstandingly in issuing and installing radio equipment to selected villages and hamlets throughout South Viet Nam.

"The 72nd Signal Detachment has drawn high praise from all agencies with whom it has been connected, and all military commands with which it has served. As individuals, the soldiers of this unit have continuously shown an extremely high degree of professional ability, aggressiveness, and initiative in their accomplishment of a difficult mission under the most ardous conditions.

"Many of these men have been subjected to Viet Cong fire and I'm certain that there have been many acts of personal bravery and loyalty which have gone unsung. They have lived, travelled, and worked under the most primitive conditions, without the slightest complaint. In every respect, they have proven themselves true soldiers.

"I have found a great deal of pride and pleasure in having this detachment assigned to this command, and believe that you and The Infantry Center can feel justly proud of this fine unit and its outstanding accomplishments.

Maj. Torres Commander Of TSB Unit

Maj. Angel L. Torres recently assumed the duties of provisional commander of Detachment 21, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

In 1953, he was transferred to the 3rd Infantry Division in Korea, where he became a company commander and battalion S-4. From there Maj. Torres was sent to the Antilles Command.

He attended the Associate Infantry Officer Career Course here in 19556. Returning to the 82nd, Maj. Toorres became a company commander and battalion executive officer.

Maj. Torres then became the Infantry instructor at the Army Carribbean Command School in the Panama Canal Zone.

Maj. Torres holds the Silver Star, Bronze Star with "V" device, the Combat Infantryman Badge, Senior Parachutist Badge and the Korean Service medal with three battle stars.

CHURCHILL PROBLEM

According to a statement made recently by Mass. Rep. Silvio O. Conte about granting Sir Winston Churchill honorary U. S. Citizenship: "Congress cannot make Churchill great; history has already done that."

World's Top Infantry Leaders Receive Their Training Here at TIS

By PFC Frank Gibson

Like most things conceived and built by man, The Infantry School had meager beginnings.

But, today — 56 years after its formation on April 1, 1907 — the school is composed of a myriad of training facilities, designed to produce the most effective Infantryman in the world.

First called the School of Musketry and located at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., the school was moved to Fort Sill, Okla., six years later and was renamed The Infantry School of Arms. In 1918, the name was changed again, and Fort Benning became "The Home of the Infantry."

Dec. 2, 1918, the school's first class arrived to "master those weapons which a soldier himself carries on foot," as stated by Maj. J. M. Moore, an early Infantry School official. This class, all U. S. Military Academy graduates, lived in hastily constructed "tent cities" and plodded through red, Georgia mud to and from training areas.

All Changed

Today's Infantry School is different.

The new mission, "To prepare Infantry officers and selected enlisted personnel to perform those duties required of them in both peace and war with special emphasis on command and leadership," is more complex, more demanding and more comprehensive.

The facilities have been developed to meet the challenge. More than 10,000 acres of varied terrain, including woods, fields, hills and rivers, now accommodate countless rifle and tank ranges, airstrips, amphibious training areas and simulated battle zones.

A new $10 million academic building is under construction to alleviate the over-crowded classrooms of The Infantry School. "The Big House" was built in 1935 by the Public Works Authority at a cost of $6,352,000.

The school's academic staff is organized in eight instructional departments, each with a specific area of responsibility within the school's general mission.

They are Airborne - Air Mobility, Communications, Command and Staff, Ground Mobility, Department of Nonresident Instruction (DNRI), Ranger, Special Subjects and Weapons.

Airborne Training

About 500 newly qualified parachutists are produced each week by the Airborne-Air Mobility Department. Almost 4,000 men per month were graduated from the basic jump course during World War II.

Students in almost every Infantry School course come to the Communications Department for training in the latest modes of battlefield communications, recognized to be one of the most important factors for successful tactics. The department also offers specialized courses for communications officers and supervisors and for heavy mortar officers.

The Command and Staff Department is one of the busiest of the school. Its mission includes preparation and presentation of instruction in organization, command and staff functions and tactics, incuding tactical employment of nuclear weapons, Army aviation, joint airborne and airmobile operations, amphibious operations and command of units.

In keeping with modern Infantry needs, the department is also charged with teaching students the art of cold war operations.

Vehicle Instruction

Tactical use of everything from jeeps to tanks and tracks are the instructional responsibility of the Ground Mobility Department, which offers special courses in Infantry Motor Transportation and Infantry Automotive Supervision.

Almost 344,000 students attend The Infantry School by correspondence, DNRI sends out more than 175,000 pieces of mail a month to its students located all over the U. S., Europe and Puerto Rico. The students are Reserve and National Guard officers, and ROTC cadets. The department offers practically every Infantry School course.

The Ranger Department's job is to train highly-skilled professional Infantrymen. The nine-week Ranger course is the Army's toughest, emotionally, physically and psychologically. Ranger course graduates mingle in units throughout the world, lending their ability and leadership to the unit's training.

Nuclear weapons, map-reading, counterinsurgency and first aid are among the special subjects needed by Infantrymen to be fully effective. The Infantry School has a special department to provide this training.

The ever-changing array of weapons in the Infantry arsenal makes constant training and re-training necessary for its leaders. This is the responsibility of the Weapons Department.

A 35-week career course for officers who have had experience in troop assignments is offered to teach them the duties and responsibilities of the commander and staff at battle group and battalion level. These officers are exposed to training from almost every department in almost every facet of Infantry operations. An associate course of 19-weeks is offered for officers of the Reserve Components.

Orient Course

An orientation course for newly commissioned officers other than graduates of the officer candidate course provides basic training in small unit tactics, leadership and weapons, preparing the officers to take command of Infantry platoons. The course is nine weeks long.

The officer candidate course gives selected enlisted men the opportunity to become commissioned officers. They too are trained in every facet of Infantry operations, but emphasis is placed on the small unit. The Infantry School doubled its capacity for this class in 1963. Officials estimate that more than 1,000 new officers will be graduated annually.

NCO Wives' Distaff Doings

By Marie Fowler

We have often heard it said, "Don't let a house go to your head." But in this case it paid off for Mrs. Herbert Lauve who won a prize for the most original "crazy hat" at the NCO Wives' luncheon recently.

Mrs. Iridion Szebunczak, wearing a creation of cabbage leaves and vegetables was voted the "funniest," and Mrs. Henry Ulrey was awarded a prize for the "prettiest" for her flower garden chapeau.

Hostesses for the buffet luncheon, held in Crain Hall, were Mrs. Joseph Martinez, Mrs. Laurie Rentrop and Mrs. Gardell Kaney. A gift certificate was the attendance prize, won by Mrs. Glen K. Fowler.

Bridge was played in our club house previous to the luncheon. Winners were Mrs. William Cash, Mrs. Glen Fowler and Mrs. Paul Smith.

Plans are under way for a golf clinic beginning in April. Interested parties are asked to call Mrs. Jay Denany at 544-2720.

The monthly business meeting will be held in our club house Bldg. 1127 next Wednesday at 1 p.m. Prospective members are welcome and may call our president Mrs. Robert E. Lamb, at MU 9-1865 for information.

Woman's Club Diary

Tailoring classes will be offered again this spring if enough women are interested. Mrs. William Nettles, chairman, will be happy to tell you the details and cost of the course. Call her at 545-4166. The course is an excellent one, taught by Adolph Ensley, a tailor at one of the local men's stores.

Parlez-vous Francias? If not, and your orders read Europe, we have the answer. Beginning Conversational French classes will be offered this Spring. Mrs. Douglas Babcock, a native of France, will conduct these informal classes for the Woman's Club. Call her at MU 9-7417.

Charm and modeling classes will be offered beginning on April 16. Please call Marilyn Gray, 544-2909, for details. If you feel the need for some "revamping" after the interminable winter, the charm class is an excellent way to put your best foot forward this spring.

The busy, busy winter is over and we realize again the beauty of Fort Benning in the Spring. Truly the drive to the post past Outpost 1 is one of the loveliest in the world.

And we are happy — only nine more weeks of school, and then graduation for some of us and the welcome respite of summer for all. The days of picnics and swimming are very near.

The air is full of plans — plans for next week-end, for Panama City at Easter, for the Junior-Seniors and Graduation dances, for summer jobs at home and in far-away places, for movels and reunions, for the Cadet Hops. (In connection with the cadets visits, some girls have already staked out their plots at the pool!)

And with these plans, we welcome Spring and look forward to another Summer at Fort Benning.

Thousands Set Sights Under Match Hdqs. Supervision

By Spt Ron Clarkin

Administration, range control and statistics are the ingredients of a smooth running Army marksmanship program here where some 10,000 match programs will be set up, a complex of 12 rifle and pistol ranges will be utilized and more than a million bull's-eyes will be scored this year.

Match Headquarters, operating with some 95 officers and enlisted men, is under the direction of Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs. The headquarters will conduct and administer 10 major marksmanship tilts which will see thousands of military and civilian shooters participating.

Col. Burroughs, who is the wearer of two hats since he has the added responsibility of directing the Range Control Section of The Infantry Center, has as his assistant match director, Maj. Harold F. Smith Jr.

Under the direction of the two directors, Match Headquarters is broken down into three sections to facilitate the speedy and efficient handling of each shooter.

Liaison Group

The Administrative Section which is headed by 1st Lt. William E. Ruff, functions as a liaison organ between shooters and the headquarters as far as mail, correspondence and official match score bulletings go.

Programs for the matches are prepared for approval and all protocol operations are arranged by this section which employs one officer and nine enlisted men.

Arrangements for awards are made also by this administrative group from the time of trophy arrival inventory to the actual awards presentations.

Ranges, which must be operated and supervised under National Rifle Association rules and regulations, vary from smallbore indoor to international - type bigbore to skeet and trap ranges.

Composed of six officers and 17 enlisted men this section has three branches under the range officer which are the Pistol Range, Rifle Range and Safety and Communications Branches.

Besides conducting all range operations, this section must obtain personnel from the different units at The Infantry Center for support of the ranges.

Instruction

Instruction of these personnel is conducted by this section which includes the "how-to-do" and when of pulling, pasting and marking targets.

By far, Capt. Thomas D. Owen Jr. shoulders one of the greatest headaches. He is statistical officer and commands six officers and 30 enlisted men.

"We will receive some 30 different score cards for complete tabulation of competitors and scores in each major match," Capt. Owen said.

These are individual stubs or score cards, be added, pointing out that the entry of some 300 competitors in the 1963 championships would call for the writing of the name of entrants about 3,000 times. In addition, there would be the writing of the individual's unit, his target number, his relay number and his final score.

All but the actual score is entered before the matches begin. Each of the nearly 250 cards required for each entry in the matches must be exactly correct before a shot is fired, the officer said.

"Our real trouble starts, however, when competition opens," Capt. Owen said.

Use Caution

He added that each shot fired must be carefully recorded and totaled, checked and rechecked, graded according to the classification of the firer, listed on a preliminary bulletin, posted on a master score sheet, and finally, printed in the official match bulletin.

"Under normal conditions the section can get out a preliminary bulletin about one hour after the last shot of a match is fired," he said.

Under abnormal conditions, Capt. Owen explained, his section really has to work when a number of firers receive "all hits", the official permission to re-fire matches of some 600 only experienced through no fault of the firers. In this case the required number of score cards has to be provided immediately.

In spite of the hectic nature of the statistical requirements in operation preceding huge competitive programs, Capt. Owen quoted error rates of less than one per cent.

System for Awarding NDM Badge Revised

A new system for awarding the National Distinguished Marksmanship Badge, the highest individual qualification symbol in competitive marksmanship, has been put into effect by each of the Armed Services.

Previously, the award — presented by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice — went to individuals who, on three occasions, fired in the top 10 per cent of eligible competitors participating in prescribed matches.

The course of fire required for credit qualification is traditionally known as the excellence-in-competition or "leg" match because three credits or legs had to be won before the Distinguished Badge could be earned.

"Through the revision the award of the Distinguished Badge will be made when an individual has earned a minimum of 30 credit points for excellence-in-competition," Maj. Harold F. Smith, assistant match director at The Infantry Center, explained.

"Credit points," he continued, "will be awarded to the highest scoring 10 per cent of all non-distinguished participants competing the match."

Ten credit points will be awarded to the top one-sixth of the qualifying leg-match firers, eight points will go to the firers in the next one-third of the 10 per cent group, with six points going to the remaining shooters authorized credit points, the major said.

Each individual shall be authorized to compete for credit points in not more than four recognized matches with the service rifle and service pistol each calendar year.

Major shoots in which active Army personnel will be able to compete for credit points in the Individual Excellence-in-Competition (Leg) Match will be the major area command, U.S. Army and interservice championships and the National Trophy Individual Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

The four competitions are the only recognized ones, except the National Rifle Association Regional Championship Matches which are authorized only when circumstances preclude participation in a major command championship.

Army Generator Shatters Record For Endurance

WASHINGTON (AFPS)

A new record for continous operation of a military power plant has been set by the Army's PM-2A nuclear plant at Camp Century, Greenland, 900 miles from the North Pole.

The plant was shut down recently for scheduled maintenance after 2,504 continuous hours of operation. The previous record, also set by the PM-2A, was 1,038 hours.

First of the Army's prefabricated nuclear power plants, the PM-2A was designed for use at Camp Century because of its high reliability and economy of operation. It requires refueling only once every two years and provides power that would use up 400,000 gallons of diesel fuel each year with a conventional plant.

New Front Line Engine Is Inaudible

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (AFPS) — A "silent" engine inaudible to the human ear at a distance of 100 feet has been developed by the Army engineers here.

Suitable for front-line operations when opposing troops are invisible to each other, the engine requires only a source of hydrocarbon fuel to provide useful power.

It is designed to drive high-speed alternators in extreme forward areas where conventional power generators are unusable because they are noisy and would give away positions to a listening enemy.

The 110-pound engine, which can be broken down into two easily transportable parts, is expected to be ready for distribution to troops this year.

It can operate for an hour on a gallon of gasoline. The operational model will be chemically fueled and hermetically sealed.

Components of the engine include a mercury pro-heater, a mercury pump, air - cooled condensers and necessary controls.

Special Forces Training Is Set For Sgt. Daniels

Sgt. Sherman Daniels from Hdqs. and Hdqs. Company 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, recently received word that he has been accepted for training in Special Forces at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Sgt. Daniels entered the Army Air Corps in 1943 and served 13 months in Italy. Since that time he has been stationed in Japan and Germany and has served three tours in Korea.

He saw combat while serving with the second ranger company on his first trip to Korea, and is one of the few men to wear the 2nd Ranger patch.

Among his decorations are the Combat Infantryman Badge, Parachutist and Glider badge with bronze star, Purple Heart, and the Good Conduct Medal with three Clasps.

Fort Union Major Block In Confederate Advance

Fort Union, the largest U.S. military post guarding the 19th Century Southwest, lies 26 miles north of Las Vegas, N. M.

In 1862 the fort was a major obstacle in a Confederate drive to wrest control of the rich Colorado silver mines from the Union.

In its heyday as an outfitting post and watering hole on the Santa Fe Trail, Fort Union housed a population of about 2,000 civilians and military personnel.

The Fort Union National Monument includes the sites of both an older, smaller fort and the massive later fort which was added from 1863 to 1866. The two areas cover 270 acres. Congress established the fort as anational monument in 1956.

Old Fort Union served as a base of operations for both military and civilian ventures for 40 years between 1851 and 1891.

WALKING PURCHASE

In pioneer days, many purchases of land were arranged in terms of distances that could be covered on foot. William Penn made a famous "walking purchase" in 1686 from the Delaware Indians by taking as much land as a day and a half of leisurely strolling permitted. In 1737 successors set three trained walkers off on a secretly blazed trail covering 60 miles. The Delawares were furious.

TEAM CANVASSES 'SECOND' FOR HELICOPTER PILOTS

An aviation recruiting team made up of 2nd Division reenlistment personnel and a lieutenant from the 2nd Aviation Battalion has begun touring the division to drum up enthusiasm in the Army's expanded aviation program.

The team will scour the division, unit by unit, presenting a 30-minute program on the opportunities of the modified warrant officer flight training course.

Due to the reorganization of Army units, such as the reorganization which is presently being carried out at the "Second to None" Division, and the activation of new units, a need has been created for an increased number of Army aviators.

The prime example of new unit activation which necessitates a substantial increase of Army pilots is Fort Benning's test air assault division.

The division recruiting team's short talk will stress the increased need for rotary-wing (helicopter) pilots and pilots of light fixed-wing aircraft of the Piper Cub variety used primarily for reconnaissance.

The talks will also emphasize the amount and type of training necessary, the eligibility requirements for flight training and the benefits of the warrant officer training course.

During training, men will be advanced to the pay grade of E-5 (sergeant.) If their present pay grade is higher, they will continue to receive their current monthly pay. This is similar to the Officers Candidate School pay system.

Upon graduation from Fort Rucker, Ala., after the 9-months course, the enlisted men will be commissioned warrant officers and will receive the pay and all the benefits and privileges of a warrant officer. Three years active Army duty is required upon graduation.

The aviation talk is broken up into four sections. SFC Joseph A. Dailey, division reenlistment office, will introduce the topic and the main speaker, Lt. Frank J. Otte, a recent graduate of the officer flight training course. MSgt. George R. Moore of the division reenlistement office will follow Lt. Otte with a review of eligibility requirements, method of application and selection procedures. There will then be a 15-minute question-and-answer period.

At the conclusion of the question period, intersted personnel will be asked to sign up for an initial records check to see if they are eligible to start processing for application to the warrant officer flight training course.

At the end of the first aviation talk which was given to the division's 7th Cavalry, 46 of the 58 eligible soldiers in attendance signed up for the records check.

Eligibility requirements are, besides a thorough physical examination, that the appli-

ROAD Brings More Armor

By Peter Tatistcheff

Modernization of the 2nd Infantry Division has brought a new rugged Army lieutenant Colonel and his armor battalion into the division, further spreading out this command that already has soldiers at Fort Benning and in Germany.

At Fort Stewart

Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander, Monday flew to Fort Stewart, Ga., the Army's Anti-Aircraft and Tank Training Center, to officiate in the assignment of another unit to the division —the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor.

This new unit of the "Indianhead" division will remain at Fort Stewart to support annual Army Training Tests for tank battalions in the Third U. S. Army area and USAR Training.

Commander of the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, is Lt. Col. Robert D. Danforth. Prior to its assigament to the 2nd, this battalion was known as the 4th Battalion, 13th Armor.

Gen. Harding reviewed the Fort Stewart parade that included the 580 men of this battalion and men of the division's 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, currently at Fort Stewart for Army Training Tests.

The 580-man armor battalion officially join the combat-trained 2nd Infantry Division but will not be moving to Fort Benning. The division now has soldiers stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., Fort Stewart, Ga., and Baumholder, Germany.

Many units of the division travel to Fort Stewart annually to take tank training and fire their long-range weapons on the installation's specially equipped ranges. In the future these division soldiers will be aided by men of this new division unit.

ROAD 'Helipads'

The 2nd Division Engineers have built 27 "heli-pads," folding, steel helicopter landing strips, for the division's growing aviation wing.

Gen. Corley Impressed; Commends Platoon Sgt.

A platoon sergeant assigned to the Armored Cavalry Platoon, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry this week received a letter of Commendation from Brig. Gen. J. T. Corley, assistant division commander.

PSgt. Roscoe Huff was commended for his exemplory leadership during the recent Army Training Test of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. Gen. Corley stated in his letter that he was most favorably impressed by the operation of Sgt. Huff's platoon and his own personal leadership. Gen. Corley also remarked that his overall conduct of the exercise could not have been better.

In concluding his letter Gen. Corley commented, "Your platoon not only did a very fine job during the Army Training Test but has been favorably commented on to me during the training period proceeding the Army Training Test."

SALUTING DRIVER OF 'PERFECT VEHICLE' Gen. Harding (R) With PFC Sprinkle

Search Through 2nd Finds Perfect Truck

By George Aubin

A driver from the 1st Infantr, who was selected earlier as the 1st's "Best Driver-of-the-Month", has been personally commended by the 2nd Division's assistant division commander for having a "perfect" vehicle.

PFC Harold G. Sprinkle, Company E, 1st Infantry was congratulated by Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander, after members of the Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course had given his vehicle a thorough going over and could find nothing wrong with it.

The story of PFC Sprinkle's achievement began two weeks ago when he was selected from a group of eight candidates as the 1st's "Best-Driver-of-the-Month". Shortly thereafter, it was disclosed that the "Indianhead" division was going to establish a preventive maintenance indicator course for officers and key noncommissioned officers of the division. Since models were needed for the various stations of the course, Capt. Cecil Ramsey, commander of Company E, suggested that PFC Sprinkle's vehicle be used for the wheeled vehicle station. Suggestion approved, PFC Sprinkle and his vehicle were sent to the course area on the first day the PMIC began.

Gen. Harding, the creator of the PMIC, went to the wheeled vehicle area where he checked the vehicle himself and then congratulated PFC Sprinkle for the fine job he had done. Gen. Harding said that in all his years spent in the Army, this was the first time that he had heard of a "perfect" vehicle.

cant be not less than five feet four inches tall or taller than six feet, four inches, must weigh less than 200 pounds, must be a U. S. citizen, a high school graduate or have passed the General Educational Development equivalency test, have a 115-point GT score, have a 20-20 vision without glasses, not be color blind, have no court martial or civil offense record other than for minor, non-recurrent offenses, and be not less than 18 years of age or more than 30. (A waiver may be granted for maximum age based on individual merit and previous flying experience.)

The applicant must then pass a helicopter orientation test at Lawson Army Airfield at Fort Benning and go before a board of five officers for final judgment.

If accepted, a nine - month flight training course must be successfully completed for graduation as a qualified Army aviator and warrant officer.

The first four weeks of training are primarily physical conditioning. The next four months are spent at Camp Wolters, Tex., in flight training. There, students will complete 110 flight hours, 55 solo and 55 dual. Training in the OH-23-D "Raven" light observation helicopter is followed at Fort Rucker with four-months training in cargo and utility aircraft.

At Fort Rucker, student pilots will log 90 hours in either the "Shawnee," "Chickasaw" or "Choctaw" helicopter. Completion of this wins the student his "wings" and his commission.

In addition to flight training, at Fort Rucker and Camp Wolters the men are instructed in maintenance, navigation, radios, principles of flight and weather. Tactical formation flight is also taught at Fort Rucker.

All training takes place in a disciplined atmosphere with time strictly rationed.

Discipline is maintained similar to the discipline required of students at O.C.S., due to the commission award at the end of flight training. "The primary purpose is, however, flight training," says Lt. Otis, aviation representative on the recruiting team.

"Army personnel within 120 days of their separation from active duty and with less than four years service for pay purposes have the option of reenlisting for the warrant officer flight training program and may thus secure the course and a reenlistment bonus.

For those students who fail to complete flight training, they will continue in enlisted status, and will be subject to reassignment in accordance with the needs of the Army."

A field training exercise for the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, this operation called upon the cavalry to screen and later pass through enemy lines with the 23rd.

Following their participation, the troop was given a letter of appreciation by Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, commanding officer of the 7th, for their outstanding performance.

Division G-2 Coordinates Sphinx III

Operation Sphinx III, an intelligence command post exercise, ended last week after successfully accomplishing its training goals. The G-2 CPX occurred at Fort Bragg, N.C. under favorable weather conditions from March 19 to 22.

The purpose of the exercise, "to provide an opportunity for certain Strategic Army Corps technical intelligence units to perform typical missions in the field," was considered to be satisfactorily achieved at its conclusion last Friday.

The officers and men of the nine "Indianhead" units which participated were either concerned directly with the intelligence operations or gave support for field training exercises.

Under the supervision of the XVIII Airborne Corps, the 2nd Division's G-2 Section acted as coordinating element for the participating units of the CPX. Headed by Lt. Col. Richards O. Stewart, division intelligence officer, the G-2 unit was developing critical intelligence from information gathered by either reconnaissance methods or by means of interrogating "mock" prisoners-of-war during the hypothetical operations.

During the field training exercises that occurred in relation to the battle, several "Rugan" soldiers were captured for techniques, intelligence section secured the necessary facts and used them as a basis for formulating operational intelligence.

Officials Scouting 2nd With Suggestion Contest

Crisp, green dollars are the reward for money-saving suggestions turned in to the 2nd Division's general staff personnel section by the "Second to None" enlisted man. For the officer, honorary awards will be granted.

The monthly military suggestions contest is scheduled through August of this year.

Suggestions submitted during each month by military personnel will be reviewed at the division's G-1 section, to which they must be submitted, and then turned over to headquarters of The Infantry Center at Fort Benning for final evaluation.

In addition to cash prizes, enlisted men are also eligible for honorary awards. Type of award will be determined by the tangible savings or intangible benefits resulting from the suggestion or a combination of the two.

A prize of $15 will be paid on the first $500 in tangible savings. Thereafter, $5 will be paid for each additional savings of $250 or fraction of that amount. Intangible benefits will be rewarded with $15 to $25 for minor benefits with limited application. Also $30 to $75 will be the prize for suggestions with major or extraordinary benefits with broad application.

In cases where an adopted suggestion results in both tangible savings and intangible benefits, awards will be made on a projection of the combined savings and benefits.

For those months that no suggestion is considered worthy of an award, the Incentive Awards Committee may declare "no contest."

'Bravo the Best' Tangles With Rope

By 1st Infantry PIO

Long known as a leader in the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, "Bravo the Best" Company (Company B) has recently added still another achievement to its long list of training accomplishments.

Early in February, Bravo began to incorporate rope training into it's normal training schedule. With the acquisition of heavy rope, each platoon started training in the building of two - span rope bridges. The goal was to be able to span up to 100 feet rapidly and tactically. Working close on knots and the basic mechanics of the span, the platoons rapidly progressed to the successive stages of securing the near bank, crossing the initial span, crossing with all equipment, and breaking down the bridge without losing tactical integrity.

Using dry ravines because of the extremely cold weather early in February, each platoon rapidly gained the capability of building, crossing, and tearing down a 50-foot two-span bridge in under 20 minutes. The timing starts when the point man arrives at the near bank, and stops when the platoon moves out from the far bank after securing the crossing.

Competition between platoons has been spirited and all are striving for a 15-minute crossing. Bravo Company is continuing it's rope training and soon expect to begin "repelling" if they can find a suitable cliff at Fort Benning.

Sand Hill Garden Getting Its Roof

A fiberglass roof of multi-colored squares will be added over the patio of the Sand Hill beer garden as a first step in improving facilities in that area.

Although other projects are still in the planning stage, the new roof will be going up in the immediate future. It will be paid for out of post exchange funds and will be constructed by either post engineers or a private contractor.

Civilian concession owners and operators in the Sand Hill area have gone ahead, with military guidance, and begun planning new structures or renovation of existing facilities.

Concessions on Sand Hill such as the snack bar and barber shop are owned and operated by civilians at fixed-price levels. The land on which concession buildings stand is either free-leased or leased for a token fee to the concession operators who are responsible for construction and upkeep. Buildings put up by civilian concessionaires automatically become Army property.

Signs of the ROAD; A Series

Facts From A Fantasy

By Peter Tatistcheff

Army Aviation is a hot ticket, but a ticket to where? That's still a good question.

Aviation theorists see a great future in stepped up aviator support for ground troops. Some believe they can put into practice huge Army-units hustled back and forth in fleets of aircraft. There are those who envisage taking all trucks and "wheels" away from the Army and substituting light aircraft. That's one side of the coin. Now look at the other.

One Fort Benning pilot, an officer to whom aviation is both the basis for launching a career, and part of a youthful legend - in the-making, this man confided recently that he didn't see such a "fantastic" future for Army Aviation. Troops are still going to take hills the same way they've been taking them for centuries. And as for taking wheels away from the Army, ever try picking up your laundry in a helicopter?"

Fantasy to Fact

Some elements of the Army's growing understanding of the role of aviation are not in the realm of fantasy however. One of the best examples of fantasy turned into fact is seen in what Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) has done to the 2nd Infantry Division's former 2nd Aviation Company. For want of an official term, call this fact "Heliation."

Only four years ago the 2nd Aviation Company (under ROAD it has become a battalion) pioneered a new concept, a provisional aerial reconnaissance and security troop, testing armed helicopters in a reconnaissance role, supporting an infantry division.

Results of this experiment forecast the 1961 formation of another provisional unit, the 2nd Air Cavalry Troop. In that year the 2nd Aviation Company formed this armed helicopter unit and took it through 30 days of intensified combat training. The troop was disbanded in September 1961 following testing but left an unqualified success, a Strategic Army Corps (STRAC) combat unit.

Under ROAD the 2nd Infantry Division will get its Air Cavalry Troop and a lot more. Prior to ROAD the division's aviation company had approximately 60 aircraft, including many fixed-wing planes. When all changes are made in the structure of the division's air support, they will have a total of 115 aircraft.

Above the main aviation battalion there will be an aviation platoon for each of the "Indianhead" division's three infantry brigades, an aviation section for division artillery, an air cavalry troop, and an aircraft maintenance company (presently Company E, 702nd Maintenance Battalion.)

A close look at equipment allowances reveals that fixed-wing aircraft will be a rarity. All of the emphasis will be on the helicopter. Comparing figures, while the aviation company was assigned four HU-1B "Iroquois" choppers, commonly called "Heweys," the division will have all of 49. Where they once had only 17 spidery H-13 "Sioux" reconnaissance helicopters, now they will boast 48.

Less Fixed Wing

In contrast their fixed-wing craft will include only two L-20 "Beavers," and four AO-1 "Mohawks," utility aircraft and medium observation aircraft respectively.

This spells "Heliation," an eye - catching fact of the Army's move toward understanding what aviation means to modern war tactics.

Speaking of his newly-formed battalion, Lt. Col. John M. Stephens Jr., 2nd Aviation Battalion commander says, "Our battalion provides an infantry division with organic air support for observation, reconnaissance, and limited logistical and personnel transportation in tactical situations. With the increase in helicopters, we can carry supplies and personnel to support the division.

"If you were to pool all of the division's aircraft, you could lift a company of soldiers into the air, cross any field barrier, and deposit them ready to go."

Maj. Everett T. Hamilton, battalion executive officer, stressed another improvement when he said, "We will be more mobile as ROAD reduces requirements for prepared landing fields on air strips. Helicopters can land anywhere. Actually they don't even have to land. They can hover in the air and let supplies or soldiers down by ropes."

These are the words of members of one of the U. S. Army's oldest and most tradition - bound old - line divisions. This is not a fantasy, this is fact in the "Second to None" division.

Battalion Structure

The battalion's structure resembles that of many other units with some differences. The battalion sergeant major, MSgt. Mikio Tomita, heads the unit's enlisted men. Four enlisted men are presently holding duties of the battalion's staff officers. In S-1 (Personnel) is SSgt. William M. McConnell; S-2 (Intelligence) is SFC James T. Hendrick; S-3 (Training and Operations) is SFC William R. Fagan; and S - 4 (Logistics) is SFC Roy R. Denmark.

The battalion consists of three companies; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, commanded by Lt. Charles F. Ircink and 1st sergeant, SFC Carl L. White; Company A (largest company, holding the mission of general support) headed by Maj. Paul B. Robison and 1st Sgt. Glenn E. Owens; and Company B (the airmobile company) headed by Lt. Niel W. Johnson and 1st sergeant, SFC Anthony Moniz.

Maj. Robison, in telling of what he calls "the finest unit I have been in," underlined the added airlift and surveillance capability the battalion has under ROAD. "We've got more punch and the men know it. It shows in their spirit. We have an enviable record. And, by the way, we still have the 2nd Division's 1963 Soldier - of-the-Year SSgt. James R. Turner. That's the kind of personnel we have to keep our aircraft on the move."

Coming

Next week THE BAYONET will return to the infantry to spotlight the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, on this special Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) page. This battalion, one of two made from the former 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry, houses over 900 foot soldiers for the 2nd Infantry Division.

Commendation Medal Given 9th Infantry Sergeant

The medal was presented to Sgt. Griffis distinguished himself while serving with the 1st Battle Group, 32nd Infantry in Korea during the period January 11, 1962 to September 22, 1962.

During this period Sgt. Griffis brought the battle group's Combat Support Company from a barely satisfactory level of administrative efficiency to one of superiority, as shown by the annual inspector general's inspection. In addition to this Sgt. Griffis' efficiency was a key factor in the superior rating that his unit received during a number of command maintenance inspections conducted within the battle group.

Sgt. Griffis arrived at the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry from Korea in November 1962 and upon the reorganization of the 2nd Division was assigned to his present unit.

He enlisted in the Army December 28, 1948, at Waycross, Ga., his home town, and after only two years and two months of Army service was promoted to the rank of master sergeant. One month later he became a first sergeant.

Sgt. Griffis went to Korea in July 1950 with the 32nd Infantry Regiment and participated in the Summe and Fall campaign of 1950. Early in the campaign he earned the Bronze Star with the "V" device and later was awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received during an assault near the Naktong River.

This is Sgt. Griffis' second tour with the 2nd Division. He became first sergeant of Company E, 1st Infantry in July 1960 and in July 1961 was transferred with the same unit when it was sent to Korea under the overseas Replacement Psogram.

His first assignment as a top sergeant was with the 515th Field Artillery Battalion, 101st Airborne Division. He held this post from April 1951 until December 1951, at which time he was transferred to the 506th Airborne Infantry at Camp Breckenridge, Ky.

Later he served as top sergeant of Company B, 39th Infantry Regiment, 9th Division at Nuremberg, Germany.

He was with Company C, 15th Infantry at Ft. Benning from January 1956 until July 1957, when he became first sergeant of the 51st Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, Fort Benning. He held this post for three years.

Sgt. Griffis attended leadership school at Camp Breckenridge, in 1951 and graduated from the Senior Non-Commissional Officer Academy at Fort Benning in 1959.

Besides the Army Commendation Medal, Bronze Star, and Purple Heart, First Sergeant Griffis holds the Combat Infantryman's Badge and a number of certificates of achievement.

Brigade's Sergeant Major Back With 23rd Infantry

By 23rd Infantry PIO

One of the 2nd Division's top noncommissioned officers has been reassigned from the 2nd Division Brigade to the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Guerrillas No Problem For 1st's Company B

By 1st Infantry PIO

Counter-guerrilla course results for Company B, 1st Infantry, have been rated "superior."

Under the command of Capt. Clifton D. Lollar Jr., Company B recently moved into the "guerrilla-infested" portion of the Fort Benning reservation, the area where the 2nd Division is conducting its famed Counter - Guerrilla Reaction Course. Their mission was to clear their assigned area in two days.

Radios were redistributed throughout the company, giving each platoon an added communication capability with jury-rigged jungle antennas for increased range.

The platoons moved out separately into their assigned subsectors under a pre-planned time schedule. This allowed them to screen likely guerrilla "safe areas" on their way to their separate base camps.

The careful planning paid off as by night fall they had rounded up 24 of the 66 existing guerrillas, had discovered 3 main guerrilla camp and were in possession of a good portion of the rations and sleeping gear hidden in "caches."

PRESIDENT HERE
Mr. Terwilliger

Association's President Is Visiting '2nd'

The president of the 2nd "Indianhead" Division Association will visit the division today for briefings on division reorganization.

Mr. Percy Terwilliger, a "Second to None" combat veteran of World War I, and Mrs. Terwilliger will spend two days with the association's active members, leaving Sunday for their Kansas home.

This evening, Mr. Terwilliger will be guest of honor at a social hour at Sand Hill's Indianhead Lodge.

On Saturday morning, the association president will receive a briefing from the division's assistant chief of staff for training and operations on the division's new structure and capabilities. The 2nd is the first Strategic Army Corps division chosen for combat streamlining.

Following an office call Saturday morning on the division commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, Mr. Terwilliger will lunch with the commanding general and staff officers.

Saturday evening, escorted by the 2nd's ranking enlisted man, Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, Mr. Terwilliger will be guest of honor at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club on Sand Hill. On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Terwilliger will leave the division.

The "Indian Head" Association embraces all members of the division, past and present. Division Headquarters is known as the Warrior Branch of the association while the unit chapters all have separate Indian names in recognition of the Indianhead patch worn by "Second to None" members since World War I.

Organized in 1917 in Bourmont, France, the 2nd Division was formed by Marine and Army units. Mr. Terwilliger, a Marine, fought with the division in World War I when it participated in every major engagement involving American troops and won more decorations than any other American division.

Detachment Picks Best Div. Shooters

The Marksmanship Detachment, a new unit in the 2nd Division, recently supervised a smallbore competition program among "Indianhead" companies.

The detachment, composed of highly proficient shooters, acted as referee for the event which ended last week. The unit, commanded by Lt. Ray Carney, selected the top 15 teams from both the rifle and pistol matches to participate in the final stages of the 2nd Division's representation in the Third U.S. Army's smallbore program. Each pistol team consists of four firers, while the rifle team has six firers.

The team winning first place in the pistol matches with a total score of 998 points was Combat Support Company of the 1st Infantry. From this company, SSgt. Jesse Yeara, with a score total of 273 points, was high individual scorer for the pistol competition. This total is the sum of the slow, time and rapid fire scores.

Winning first place in the rifle competition was Company B of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry with a total score of 1,235 points. Sp4 Charles Pickle of Company B's team was high individual scorer of the rifle match with a total score of 239 points.

Top Riflemen Schedule Appearance in Tennessee

Division marksmen are off and running. According to commander, Lt. Ray Carney, "We are determined to win this match and show everyone we're the best there is."

The 2nd Infantry Division's Marksmanship Detachment recently completed its organization and has begun practice for up-coming competition in Oakridge, Tenn.

The last of the detachment's newly selected firers underwent their coaching only days before the unit claimed itself fully staffed as an element of the 2nd Division Support Command.

Lt. Ray Carney, detachment commander, supervises unit training. The detachment's firers were chosen to be members of this elite group from past merits of outstanding sharpshooting.

The unit will make its first public appearance April 6 as a shooting competition representative. The men will journey to Oak Ridge, Tenn., for civilian competitive matches. The group will use .30 caliber M-1 Match Grade rifles at this tournament sponsored by the Oak Ridge Sportsmen's Association.

The Oak Ridge Earlybird High Power Rifle Tournament will run April 6 and 7, and will be officiated according to National Rifle Association regulations.

Brigade Presents A Certificate

Col. Dwight B. Dickson, commanding officer of the 2nd Division's 2nd Brigade, recently presented Capt. Norman M. Vaughn with a certificate of achievement from the commanding general of the 3rd Infantry Division, for outstanding performance of duty while serving with the 15th Infantry in Bamberg, Germany.

Capt. Vaughn was assigned to the 15th Infantry from February 1960 to January 1963.

Present at the ceremony were Lt. Col. William D. Preston, 2nd Brigade executive officer; Capt. Everett H. Johnson, 2nd Brigade assistant adjutant; Sgt. Maj. Gilbert Newman, 2nd Brigade Sergeant Major and the 2nd Brigade S-3 staff section.

Her Hobby Is Children Her Horror Is Moving

BY LUCILLE BEARD

A love of home and a devoted interest in her children are the hallmarks of Mrs. Dwight Bennett Dickson, wife of the commander of the 2nd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division.

Having arrived at Fort Benning in January of this year, Mrs. Dickson has busied herself creating an atmosphere of stability in her new home. Readily admitting that her children are her hobby, Mrs. Dickson declares that the hardest part of army life is having to live in so many houses. Since her marriage in 1946, her longest stay in one house has been 2½ years; nonetheless, she loves army life and has been happy as an army wife.

Southern Belle

Born in Honey Grove, Tex., but reared in Humphrey, Ark., Myra Nell Green attended high school and the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, where she became a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority and majored in home economics.

When she was sixteen years old, she met a young man whose cousin was married to her aunt. Because Myra Green was living with her aunt while attending high school, and because the two cousins were close friends, Myra saw a great deal of Dwight Dickson, who attended the University of Arkansas and later was commissioned and sent to war. In 1946, when the war was over, Miss Green became Mrs. Dickson, wife of Major Dickson, and army life began for her.

Happily, the newlywed Dicksons' first joint assignment was at the University of Arkansas, home to both of them. While living in Fayetteville, the Dicksons welcomed their first son, Bennett. Concurrently, Mrs. Dickson found her hobby, children, and her horror, moving. Because housing was scarce and inadequate, the Dicksons lived in three houses during their tour in Fayetteville.

Following the ROTC tour, Maj. Dickson attended the Advanced Infantry and Airborne Training Courses at Fort Benning. Here, Susan was born in 1950.

Subsequently, the Dicksons were assigned to Fort Campbell, Ky., for one year with the 11th Airborne Inf. Regt. of the 11th Airborne Division. Becky was born at Fort Leavenworth, Ka., when Lt. Col. Dickson was a student at the Command and General Staff College.

Tour In Germany

Orders followed for Heidelberg, Germany, and after a wait of eight months, Mrs. Dickson and the children followed. Berry, the Dicksons' fourth child, was born in Heidelberg but was soon transplanted to Schweinfurt, where Lt. Col. Dickson commanded the 3rd Bn., 18th Inf. Reg., 1st Division. Mrs. Dickson traveled very little while in Germany because she feared leaving the children, too young to tour Europe, so near the Russian border.

Lt. Col. Dickson's battalion was the first battalion to gyroscope from Germany to Fort Riley, Ka., where the Dicksons remained until being sent to the Armed Forces Staff College in 1957.

Upon receiving orders for Hawaii, the family decided to camp from Norfolk to California before embarking. They traveled from Norfolk to Florida, then west to California, stopping in Arkansas en route. This camping trip remains a highlight in the memory of the Dickson children. A travel weary but happy family arrived in Hawaii, only to encounter again a lack of housing and a wait of a year and a half for a home at Schofield Barracks.

Washington Beckons

After a memorable tour in Hawaii, the Dicksons returned to Washington, D. C., where Lt. Col. Dickson attended the Industrial War College. Because Mrs. Dickson and the children were happily settled in Washington, they remained there when Colonel Dickson left for a hardship tour in Korea, prior to his assignment at Fort Benning. An interesting footnote is that while in Korea, Col. Dickson served for six months with his twin brother, Lt. Col. Lon Russell Dickson, artillery.

Although this is not Myra Dickson's first tour at Benning, it well could be her happiest. She has those things she treasures most, a contented family in a spacious home.

Anzio Room Hosts Feb. Luncheon

The Anzio Room of The Main Officers' Open Mess was the scene recently for the monthly coffee of the ladies of the 72nd Armor Battalion.

Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Francis T. Corcoran, Mrs. Julian C. Simerly and Mrs. Russell H. Piatt.

An artificial arrangement of pink roses graced the table from which Mrs. Dave Termin, wife of the battalion commander, poured. This centerpiece was later won as a door prize by Mrs. William F. Moore.

Farewells were bade Mrs. Carole Elkins Lt. Beavers, John D. Henry, William F. Moore, Frederick T. Mullens and Douglas W. Smith.

New arrival, Mrs. Robert J. Griffon was welcomed to the group.

PARIS FASHIONS

Paris spring collections are showing high waist lines and cord type tie belts as fashion favorites this season. Dressey tops over pencil line skirts give a tunic effect to the spring suit collections.

Awards Ceremony Wraps Up Rotaplan Tour

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — During an Awards and Recognition ceremony held recently, Company E, 38th Infantry, was presented "The Rock of the Marne Award" as the outstanding leadership company in the battle group. This ceremony marked the beginning of wrapup activities for the 38th which is scheduled to return to the U. S. in April.

The unit, commanded by Capt. James W. Grey, won the award based on 11 leadership indicators.

A number of other awards were given and personnel recognized during the Gymnasium One ceremony, witnessed by Brig. Gen. John K. McCormick, 8th Division Artillery commanding general, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Infantry Division commander, and other distinguished 8th Division, 2nd Division and Seventh U. S. Army guests.

The 38th Infantry is a Rotaplan Battle Group, permanently assigned to the 2nd Division and on temporary duty with the "Pathfinder" 8th Division. Gen. Corley is making an inspection visit of the unit.

In a surprise announcement at the ceremony, 1st Sgt. Paul M. Korniski of Company C received his promotion to that rank. SFC Dolph C. Brown of Company A was awarded the Gold Distinguished Rifleman's Badge (new, in 1963 marksmanship competition at Fort Benning and SFC Marcus A. Hayes of the same unit was awarded the Marksmanship Badge for excellence in competition during the game time. Both are members of the 8th Division Marksmanship Detachment.

Sgt. Merle C. Stroh of Company E was recognized as honor graduate of the December 8th Division Noncommissioned Officer Academy Class and Sp5 Ronald G. Cook of Combat Support Company was recognized as leadership award winner of the February Academy class.

Rock of the Marne Certificates also were presented by Col. Maurice C. Holden, commander of the 38th, to Sgt. Foy D. Smith of Company E, and Sp4 James E. McQuinn and Sp4 David P. Moore, both of Company A, chosen as Soldiers-of-the-Month since the battle group has been in the 2d Division serving its six-month temporary duty tour under Rotaplan.

The 38th Infantry Commander presented Gen. McCormick, senior 8th Infantry Division representative at the ceremony, a "Rock of the Marne" plaque for the division trophy room as a remembrance of the 38th Infantry's tour of duty with the Pathfinders.

Also on the program was the presentation of "This is the 38th," a dramatic reading which portrayed with words and with demonstrations the accomplishments of the battle group since it received its designation as the 38th Infantry in February 1962. The presentation was written by Lt. Johnny M. Moose.

Members of the 38th's basketball team and 373 two-year enlistees scheduled to leave the Army in April also were recognized. The two-year men have served all their Army duty with the 38th Infantry, from basic training on, and were recognized for their contribution to the success of the battle group.

Soldiers Sent Out to Trap Student NCOs

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — Company C of the 38th Infantry turned "aggressor" recently in conducting operations in support of an 8th Infantry Division NCO Academy escape and evasion exercise.

On Sunday, the company set up a unit-base camp in a training area in preparation for the problem which began with Academy students conducting night reconnaissance patrols.

In the evening, after the conclusion of the patrolling part of the problem, the 61 students were told they had been cut off from friendly lines and had to infiltrate back through aggressor lines in pairs, to arrive back at their objective in two days' time. They were able to maneuver in an area about 12,000 meters long by 5,000 meters wide.

Company C and the scout section from the 38th's Recon Platoon initially set up in a defensive position and conducted mop-up patrols and motorized patrols to guard against the student's infiltration and to capture as many as possible.

Some 20 of the 61 participants evaded the C Company "Raiders" net while less fortunate evaders, after capture, were processed at a collection point and sent to a prisoner-of-war compound near Ramstein Air Force Base for interrogation by Army and Air Force military intelligence specialists.

Promotion Given 38th's Asst. Adjutant in Germany

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — Lt. Donald B. Read, 38th Infantry assistant adjutant, was recently promoted to First Lieutenant in ceremonies at the Battle Group Officers' Mess in Baumholder.

From June 1956 until October 1958 he was assigned to V Corps, Europe, where he served in the AG Officers' Section and Corps Unit Administration Center.

In December 1958 he assumed the duties of personnel sergeant with the 372nd Signal Battalion at the Tobyhanna Signal Depot in Tobyhanna, Pa., where he was stationed until July, 1959.

Lt. Read was then assigned to Virginia Polytechnic Institute to instruct personnel management with the Reserve Officer Training Corps Instructor Group.

In August 1961 he received a direct commission and was assigned to the 38th where he served as a platoon leader in Company D before becoming assistant adjutant.

Golf Course to Add Nine Holes in Future

By George Ashe

There is a flurry of activity at the Sand Hill Golf Course these days as the old nine-hole course gets a face-lifting and plans go ahead on the proposed nine-hole addition and new clubhouse.

Under the direction of MSgt. William K. Edens, course superintendent, the old nine-hole course has undergone extensive rejuvenation. Stumps and brush have been cleared away, areas have been reseeded, the yardage on various holes has been changed and new cups, pins, flags, and ball washers have been added. Grass is starting to cover the fairways and, according to Sgt. Edens, the greens are in excellent shape.

The biggest news at the golf course is the proposed new nine holes and clubhouse. At the present time, the new nine holes are being surveyed with construction scheduled to begin this summer. According to special service officials, it will be at least a year before the new nine holes are playable.

The new nine holes were designed by Mr. Lester Lawrance, who is the superintendent of the Fort Benning Country Club.

After the surveying is completed, the timber will be removed. Next, the greens will be started, the fairways cleared and the remaining stumps removed. Finally, the tees will be built, a drainage system will be installed and an irrigation system built. Incidentally, the irrigation system will include a lake, dam and pumping station to be built on Tiger Creek.

Going right along with the construction of the new nine holes is the addition of a driving range. The range is presently being constructed and could possibly be ready for use by late summer of this year. Its purpose will be to teach new people how to play golf.

Construction on the new clubhouse has already begun. The site of the clubhouse was formerly an old Army office building directly adjacent to the course. When fully constructed, the clubhouse will include a kitchen, a bar, ladies' and men's dressing rooms, a lounge with large picture windows overlooking the putting green and a pro shop which will stock golf merchandise. The walls of the clubhouse will be covered by birch veneer paneling and the building will have an acoustical tile ceiling.

Located right beside the clubhouse will be a cement and brick wall patio. The patio will be equipped with table and chairs.

1st's Bravo Organizes Keg Team

By 1st Infantry PIO

In accordance with its policy or working hard and playing just as hard, "Bravo" Company of the 1st Infantry is in the process of organizing the "Bravo Braves" bowling team.

One of the men on the team is Sp5 Frank Worrell of Paulsboro, N.J. A veteran of some nineteen years service, Worrell will be putting his experience as a bowler to good use for the "Braves."

While stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., in 1957, Worrell competed in a doubles tournament in which the jackpot was $3,000, in order to place in the money, the two-man combination had to bowl a six-game series over 1200. Worrell says he does not remember what his exact score was, but the team score was good enough to bring home the first prize of $3,000.

With such bowlers as Worrell and Capt. Clifton D. Lollar, who has a league average over 195, the "Bravo Braves" will be hard to beat.

Peterson Tops Singles Event in State Bowling

The 2nd Division Special Services officer has grabbed the lead in the singles event of the Men's 14th annual Georgia State Bowling Tournament held this year in Columbus.

Virgil Peterson has finished bowling with two weekends left in the tournament. Now the division sports officer must sit out the possibility of someone topping his total score and displacing him from the number one spot.

Sunday at Victory Lanes, the lieutenant, who took over his new job in the division about a week and a half ago, rolled 205, 207 and 215 games to move into the lead.

1st's Delta Wins Battle Group V-Ball

By 1st Infantry PIO

Delta won the first game, and Combat Support bounced right back to take the second game, putting everything up in the air. It was decided that a third game would be played that same morning, with all out effort, Delta's exhausted players took the match.

Members of Delta's team included Donald B. Smith Jr., the company commander; Gerald Grochowski; Isaac W. Davis; Arthur Mulkey; George Smith; Ralph Barnard; Rosy Sosebee; Vernon Coleman. Of this group, Davis and Barnard were on the previous championship team.

Both Delta Company and Combat Support Company will send their teams into the Division Volleyball Tournament.

Cordiero Has Sports Savvy

'Conqueror' Coaches YAC Cagers

By 87th Infantry PIO

"I have always been active in sports, and I would like to see the younger generation get the opportunity to learn all there is about sports at an early age. The important part is to learn team work and sportsmanship." The man who said that is definitely an advocate of the traditional place athletics has for youth.

Sp4 Robert Cordiero, grenadier at Company A, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, is the coach of a small-fry team whose winning scores so far are not so small fry: 60-8, 54-0, 42-3, 39-3, 37-3.

A 1954 graduate of Bristol Senior High School, Bristol, R. I., where he played varsity basketball and baseball for three years, Cordiero was chosen for the Rhode Island All-State baseball team.

Assigned with the 2nd Division, he has volunteered as coach for the Fort Benning Youth Activities Council and has been given a roster of players eight to 11 years old, mostly children of officers and non-commissioned officers living on the reservation.

The Wilbur School gymnasium is the scene of their practice sessions and weekly games. Cordiero's main job is to teach the boys as much as he knows about the game, and his sessions with the team are used mainly to instruct and develop teamwork and spirit.

YACS SCRAMBLE FOR FREE BALL
Referee Calls For a Deciding Jump Play

Cordiero remarks that "the important things are shooting and passing the ball, since there's really nothing that you can show them about plays, and so forth, at that age. The thing is to get the ball." The boys play with an eight-pound basketball and eight-foot baskets.

Cordiero's two brothers, Richard and Ray, are professional baseball players. One is a pitcher for the Milwaukee "Braves" and the other pitches for the Houston "Colts."

Married, Cordiero plans to help out in the little league this summer

Bell and Johnson Spark Post to Victory in Finals

BY LEO A. ZANI

Fort Benning won its first Third Army Basketball Championship since 1957 with an unbelievable come-from-behind victory over Fort Bragg 79-71, in the final round of the tournament.

With 10 minutes left in the game, the Doughboys found themselves 16 points behind, 52-42; but rallied behind George Bell and Melvin Johnson to overtake the Bragg-men in the last five minutes of playing time.

Fort Benning moved into the finals undefeated in three games, while Fort Bragg, 3-1 in tournament play, defeated Fort Gordon in the semi-finals to set the stage for the championship.

Grab Early Lead

Playing before a capacity crowd at the Sports Arena, the Bragg-men rapidly took control as they opened up a 16-8 lead midway in the first period. Fort Benning narrowed the gap to five points; but Fort Bragg, regained a 10-point advantage at the half, 31-21.

As the second half started, Fort Bragg, still working with their fast-break offense, took a commanding 16 point lead, 55-42, with 10 minutes remaining. Fort Benning asked for a time out to regroup their defenses and then came on with one of the most incredible comebacks in all Third Army basketball history.

George Bell, 5'8" play-maker of the Doughboys, led the charge, hitting for four straight baskets as Benning started to narrow the gap. A Fort Bragg time out led to two quick lay-up shots by Melvin Johnson and the Benning lads were back into the ball game, trailing by four points, 62-58.

Tie Score

The Benning cagers kept up the pressure as Hudson Ray and Harold Deane started clearing the backboards, and with less than five minutes the score was knotted at 66-all.

Bell put the Doughboys in the lead for the first time in the game with a jumping screen shot making the score 70-68. The last two minutes of the game saw the forces of Coach Bob Kinard gradually pull away as the capacity crowd reared its approval. Final score: Fort Benning 79, Fort Bragg 71.

George Bell led the Benning team in scoring with 31 points, with teammate Melvin Johnson netting 18. Harold Deane grabbed 18 rebounds and hit for 12 points.

Defeat Fort Bragg

Fort Benning moved into the finals by defeating Fort Bragg in the quarterfinals by a score of 78-76. Both teams were undefeated in two games, the Benning victory forced the Bragg-men to play Gordon and Fort Jackson before qualifying against Fort Benning in the finals.

In the first meeting between these two clubs, Harold Deane provided the margin of victory for the Doughboys as he heaved a 40-foot shot through the nets with three seconds of play remaining.

The Benning cagers held a 48-43 halftime lead as both teams employed a fast-break type offense. In the second half, Fort Benning saw their five point lead dwindle as Bob Curry of Fort Bragg hit on a jump-shot tying the score at 54-all, with eight minutes left in the game.

Both teams went into a full court press as the score changed hands ten times before Benning's George Bell hit for a three point play to put Fort Benning out front 69-66.

The Bragg-men fought desperately and vaulted into the lead 72-70. Two minutes later the score was tied again at 76-76, setting the stage for Deane's last second field goal. Leading the Benning team in scoring was George Bell who dropped in 23 points.

Fort Benning nipped Fort Gordon 66-60 in their second game of the tournament and in the opening round of play, the Doughboys hung a lopside 89-45 defeat on the Colonels from Fort McPherson.

Shough's Sports Scope

By PETE SHOUGH

Last Saturday night at a late hour I got my first look at the 1962-63 editions of the Cincinnati Bearcats and Loyola Ramblers when they played the final game of the NCAA Tournament, as I am sure many another area basketball fans did.

I am also sure many of you will agree that those of us who could fight off late hour drowsiness saw one of the finest come-from-behind upsets ever recorded in a NCAA championship game. In fact, the only other recent NCAA championship meet that ended in a five-minute overtime was Cincinnati's defeat of Ohio State two years ago.

Cincinnati's biggest error of the game was in the second half when the Bearcats attempted to play control basketball after gaining a 15-point lead. The 'Cats were obviously under orders from the bench to stop shooting and play strictly control ball. With some nine minutes left, Coach Ed Junker thought his team could control the ball, give up the minimum amount of points and come home with the victory. But it was also obvious that Junker had underestimated the scoring threat Loyola could develop in a short period of time.

Another thing that surprised me was the fact that Junker did not change his tactics after the lead was cut to a mere five points, and then, all of a sudden, three points. The 'Cats tried desperately to hold on to the lead, and almost did. But a last-minute shot by All-American Jerry Harkness tied the score and forced the game into overtime.

In my opinion, the crucial play of the overtime was the jump ball between the two teams' smallest men, which Loyola grabbed to take control of the ball. As millions of TV fans witnessed, Loyola chose to beat Cincy at its own game, control ball. The Ramblers hung on to the ball with the score tied at 58-58 and played for the last shot.

Everyone knows the story from here on out. The lest shot was missed, but Vic Rouse got the tip-in to stop Cincinnati, the nation's top rated team for the entire 1962-63 season.

To me, the victory brings thoughts of Cincinnati's victories over the Ohio State Buckeyes the past two years, when the exact same story was told. The Bucks had been rated tops for the entire season, only to lose in their final game. The Bearcats now know how it feels.

Detroit Tiger Farm Teams Best in 1962

LAKELAND, Fla. — Know what Major League team's farm clubs had the best record in 1962? General Manager Jim Campbell of the Detroit Tigers was more than happy to relate that the Tigers were the biggest winners in the Minors last year.

Elevated to G-M this year after serving as farm director last season, Campbell was very pleased with the composite record of the Tigers' farm teams which showed the six teams finished a total of 95 games over the .500 mark.

"And do you know," said Jim, "the nearest team to us in the Minors was Chicago, and they finished 39 games behind us!"

Some checking revealed that the Yankees finished dead last, even behind the Mets, in the Minor League composite standings.

Campbell was quick to add, "This doesn't mean too much unless we can get a winner with the 'big' club at Detroit.

"Two of our six teams won pennants," added the Detroit front-office boss, "and two others finished second in their respective leagues. We think some of the boys on these teams can make the Tigers this year."

And then with a smile, bordering on the serious, the Detroit chief said, "Let's not be naive, it only really counts when you win in the Major Leagues!"

Infantry Center Matches Get Under Way Monday

Competitive shooting teams of The Infantry Center are taking advantage of every minute of good weather in preparation for the 1963 Rifle and Pistol Championships which begins Monday.

All major commands of The Infantry Center are practicing for the matches, the first major event of an annual program of marksmanship competition to be fired at Fort Benning.

Pistolmen, this year, will be greeted by an additional four matches to the program, the first three of which are named the Boatright I, II and III, in honor of the late Col. Burton C. Boatright, former match director at The Infantry Center.

The Boatright matches are .22 caliber trials in the slow fire, timed fire and rapid fire categories. The fourth match is an aggregate of the new shoots.

The 197th Infantry Brigade, with eight of the 1962 squad returning, promises to be a stronger contender in this year's tilts. Last year's shoot saw the brigade team sweep 21 of 25 first place positions in individual and team categories setting 155 new records.

This year the brigade team is expected to at least fire on a par if not better the previous year's score, MSgt. Hollis W. Noland, the brigade's coordinator for the marksmanship program, said.

Sgt. Noland cited his rifle team as one of the strongest in years with six of the eight returnees being riflemen.

The 1962 winning Infantry Trophy team from the brigade fired a score of 1,101 which bettered the old record by 67 points and if the practice firings prove a harbinger of things to come the Brigade team will be right up there again, he continued.

"We expect plenty of competition from riflemen from the other commands," Sgt. Noland added.

The competition is expected to come from The Infantry Center Troop Command, Student Brigade, 151st Engineer Group, 428th Medical Battalion and the Lawson Army Aviation Command teams.

Twelve rifle and 13 pistol matches will be fired in the championships. They will open the firing with the first of four automatic rifle matches.

Unlike the other teams which may draw upon shooters of the several units of their organizations, two-man automatic rifle (AR) teams must come from individual units which have the AR as part of their normal arms allowance.

Men of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, are the defending champions. Handgunners of the 197th Infantry Brigade will attempt to ward off all designs for the pistol team trophy which they won in 1962.

The competition will be conducted by U. S. Army Match Headquarters, under the direction of Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, match director.

Your Dental Health
Tartar Under Gums Causes Tooth Loss

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Prevenative Dentistry Officer

Could you stand having sand packed under your eyelid? Few could, and most would seek immediate attention.

Every day, dentists see many with a similar condition . . . calculus (tartar) under the gums. This is equivalent to the sand under the eyelid, and just as surely will cause loss of the tooth, and should receive immediate attention.

Tartar is a hard, crust-like substance, composed of minerals, bacteria, and other materials normally found in the mouth. Unfortunately, our gums are not equipped with sufficient nerve fibers to detect the presence of calculus.

The only warning is a sight bleeding of the gums when they are brushed. The 'pink toothbrush' should be like a caution light of a traffic signal. No warning is given to those who don't brush at all.

The condition at this stage is called gingivitis, and it can go in two directions. The first, and most common is toward pyorrhea, or periodontitis. This is a progressive condition, as the deposit becomes heavier, and the gums pull away from the irritation. Not only the gums pull back, but also the bone shrinks away.

This condition takes years to develop, and prevention of its final results, loss of teeth, is possible only by help of a dentist. But it can be stopped.

The other path of gingivitis is early treatment, by a dentist, which leads to an early cure. Insurance against having the disease again is available, and cheap. Brush your teeth, and do it well, calculus will never have a chance to form if you brush your teeth often enough, and do it correctly.

Many people who neglect pyorrhea are in for a bigger surprise when they finally decide to have their teeth out, and dentures fitted. Many times, the pyorrhea has destroyed so much bone that dentures are impossible to fit properly.

So, keep your teeth clean. This will prevent decay, and in later years will pay added dividends — absence of pyorrhea.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

Construction Begins On Addition to Bank

Construction has begun on an addition to the National Bank of Fort Benning.

The expansion will be in the form of a "patio" bank and is not only an enlargement of the physical plant, but an addition to the service offered to the bank's customers. Operation of this service is expected by June.

Announcement was made recently in a joint statement by Brig. Gen. (Ret.) M. B. Bell and William A. Lyman, chairman of the board and president, respectively of the bank.

The "patio" bank will feature four walk-up teller windows placed in a patio setting as an extension of the north wall of the bank. In front of the teller windows will be a covered area with an outside tile floor.

Location of this "patio" area will be near the bank parking lot, making it convenient for the customer to transact his business speedily. Addition of these teller windows will increase the bank's capacity to serve its customers and reduce the waiting period on crowded days.

The bank was established in July, 1957. In 1959 an addition of 550 per cent in floor space was made. The present construction has been made necessary due to the tremendous growth of the bank in its relatively short peirod of operation.

tions located all over the globe. The school's assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., feels that one of the greatest benefits students get from their studies at the school come from their close association with their comrades from other nations.

Brig. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, Jr., former assistant commandant of the school, summed the function of the school by pointing out that "136 years ago, the Army established a School of Infantry because there was a need for well - trained and well-led Infantrymen.

"The gigantic training program conducted by The Infantry School today is designed because that same need still exists.

"Now, just as then, our nation's outposts are in danger. Its frontiers are threatened. There is a need — an urgent need — for well-trained and well-led Infantrymen. The Infantry School's duty is to satisfy that need, to do everything in its power to develop and train the Infantryman, and, at the same time, to place into his hands the best and most modern tools and techniques of the trade," Gen. Surles concluded.

Community Seder To Open Passover Here

A community Seder at 7 p.m. April 8 at Leyte Mess will initiate Passover observances here.

The eight-day Jewish Passover which begins at sundown April 8 and will continue until sundown April 16, commemorates the successful struggle of the Israelites against slavery in Egypt more than 3,000 years ago.

Other events scheduled during the Passover include services at 9 a.m. at the Jewish Religious Center, Bldg. 1071, April 9, 15 and 16; 8 p.m. April 12, and 9:30 a.m. April 16.

The Seder is sponsored by the National Jewish Welfare Board, the Columbus Armed Forces Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board and the Baltimore Serve-A Committee, a division of the Welfare Board, under the auspices of The Infantry Center chaplain.

It is traditional for Jewish personnel to spend Passover with their families and to worship together in groups wherever possible.

It is also customary for devout Jewish families to invite to their homes members of the Jewish faith who cannot return to their own homes for the Passover.

Arrangements are being made in Columbus and Atlanta to provide this home hospitality for the post's single Jewish personnel. For further information, interested personnel are requested to contact the office of the Jewish chaplain, telephone 545-55722.

Four New Department Heads Are Announced Here

Four major staff changes were announced here this week.

Col. Howard N. St. Clair is the new director of the Communications Department; Col. Robert A. Goeschner, new director of the Weapons Department; Lt. Col. Joseph T. Ely, Infantry Center signal officer, and Lt. Col. Vern L. Jones, new chief of The Infantry School's Editorial Pictorial Office.

Col. Guenther succeeds Col. Raymond B. Marlin of Penfield, N. J., who recently became Infantry Center chief of staff.

A combat hardened veteran with more than 20 years Army service, Col. Guenther joined the Weapons Department in January, 1960, as chairman of the Small Arms Committee. He also served as executive officer and deputy director before assuming his present position.

After being graduated from Central High School in Syracuse, N. Y., in 1936, the colonel attended Syracuse University.

He entered the Army early in 1942, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in June after completing the Infantry officer candidate course at Fort Benning.

From May, 1943, to October, 1944, the young officer fought with the 2nd Battalion, 180th Infantry, 45th Infantry Division, serving first as a platoon leader and later as company commander and battalion S-3.

Col. Guenther participated in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns, including landings at Gela, Sicily and Anzio, Italy.

For his actions during this period, he was awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart and Combat Infantryman Badge. He is also officer of the Reception Center at Camp Crowder, Mo., on a holder of an Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

In 1952, the colonel became training chief with the Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) on Taiwan. In 1954, he returned to the U. S. and became G-3 of the 8th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo. In 1956, he became commander of the 8th Division's 1st Battalion, 12th Infantry, and accompanied the unit to Europe later that year.

From 1957 until he came to Fort Benning in 1960, Col. Guenther served in Headquarters, VII Corps in Mobringen, Germany, first as G-3 executive officer and later as acting G-3.

His military education includes the officer candidate, officer career and field officer refresher courses here in 1942, 1949 and 1952, nuclear weapons orientation course at Fort Bliss, Tex., in 1955, and the associate course at The Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. Ely succeeds Col. Braxton E. Small of Stockton, Calif., who retired.

Col. Ely is a veteran of more than 17 years of Army service. He began his Army career in September, 1940, at Fort Worth, Tex., as a private and was promoted successively through each enlisted rank to staff sergeant.

The colonel has attended the high speed radio operations course, teletype operations and repair course, Officers Candidate School, where he gained his commission as a second lieutenant, and the carrier equipment course, all at Fort Monmouth, N. J.

The new signal officer was then assigned as a company officer at the Signal Corps Training Center, Fort Monmouth, being there in 1948.

In January, 1949, the colonel became training officer (S-3) in the 40th Signal Construction Battalion, U. S. Seventh Army, at Kaiserlsch, Germany.

He returned to the U. S. in June, 1950, and was chief of the School Operations Division at the Southeastern Signal School at Fort Gordon, Ga., until April, 1951.

In May, 1951, he was named signal adviser to the Turkish Signal School at Ankara, where he remained until June, 1960.

Col. Ely came to Fort Benning in August, 1960, and served as signal officer of the 1st Infantry Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, until September, 1961. He was assistant division signal officer until April, 1962.

His last assignment was as deputy signal officer of The Infantry Center.

Col. Ely was educated at the Anson (Tex.) High School, Abilene Christian College and the University of Georgia at Athens.

He is a member of the American Business Club, Military Order of World Wars, Association of the United States Army, Army Forces Management Association, Masonic Lodge, Sojourners, Heroes of '76, Boy Scouts, PTA and the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association.

Col. Joseph succeeds Col. Howard B. St. Clair, who will serve as director of the Communications Department, a position until recently held by Col. Robert E. Strange.

Col. Goeschner trains the chief of the Army's activated U.S. Army Air-Mobility Evaluation Group here.

Col. Joseph received his civilian education at Ripon, (Wis.) College where he was graduated with a B.A. degree in 1940.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army Reserves upon graduating.

Col. Joseph entered active service in December, 1940, as a member of the 33rd Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He served with the regiment in the European Theater during World War II.

From 1951 to 1952, he served in Turkey as adviser to the Turkish Army. In July, 1953, he went to Washington, D.C., to become a member of the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations, a position he held until 1957.

Col Joseph was named Army military assistance training officer in the J-3 (Plans and Operations Division), Headquarters, Commander-in-Chief, Pacific, in July, 1957. He served in this position until 1960 when he came here.

He has served overseas five years and 11 months.

He completed the 2nd Phase of the Student Brigade of the Infantry School until named chief of the Editorial and Pictorial Office.

Col St Clair is a 1939 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., and has attended the Command and General Staff College, the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and The Infantry School.

Household Medicines, Chemicals Are Potential Killers--Guard Them!

By Capt. Glen C. Griffin
MAB Pediatrician

The tragedy and frequency of household poisonings is seldom considered. Yet, the more frequent than polio, meningitis and most other serious diseases, is the case of the child who swallows a toxic amount of a common household chemical or medicine.

Modern science and industry are constantly adding to the abundance of chemical aids to "better living." Consideration of the number of these chemicals now in our homes should cause reflection on the potential sudden and terrible danger that lies in almost every bottle, can or box.

Inquisitive little fingers open and inquisitive lips and tongues taste and consume that which may or may not be cautiously marked "Poison - Not for Internal Consumption."

Such items as insecticides that with "one squirt kills an army of flying invaders" can often kill an innocent infant explorer with a similar single squirt. Home permanent solutions (or their neutralizing solution) may do wonders for a head of hair, but the same solutions can kill by rapidly breaking down red blood cells or by blocking kidney action.

Hydrocarbons can run our lawn-mower engines, spot clean our clothes or light our charcoal fires — but they can also kill by causing sudden respiratory depression or by a slower process of chemical pneumonia. Other dangerous chemicals common in the home are furniture polish, waxes, solvents, detergents, paints, varnishes, alcohol, turpentine, anti-freeze, fingernail polish, polish remover and many others.

Every chemical used in home or industry can be considered a poison and a killer in the hands and on the lips of a little child.

A wise professor of medicine stated that every medicine that is strong enough to be effective is strong enough to be lethal if enough is consumed.

This is especially true of the most widely used medicine in the world, which is also the one responsible for the most deaths due to poisoning in childhood—ASPIRIN and other related salicylates. One of these is oil of wintergreen or methylsalicylate, an internally lethal and much too common ingredient in liniments and rubbing compounds.

Aspirin poisoning can occur by a well-meaning individual giving an overdose or by a child "consuming" a box or bottle of the drug. Flavored aspirin may be a convenience on occasions, but its appeal to little children makes it a real menace. "Baby-aspirin" are not kept in this writer's home due to the dangers of its consumption as candy.

Your pediatrician may advise the use of one of the newer aspirin equivalents or substitutes that is safer and less likely to cause serious illness if accidentally ingested in overdose. Both over-dosage and accidental ingestion must be guarded against by special care in every home, by every parent and adult.

Aspirin should be considered an effective but dangerous indiscriminately. The dosage of aspirin and other salicylates must be properly regulated. Unless directed otherwise by a physician:

a. Aspirin should not be given to any form to a child under one year of age.

b. Aspirin should not be given children unless the fever is greater than 102 degrees. Such low grade fever is actually beneficial in the body's defense in fighting infection.

c. When aspirin is given to children it should never be in excess of one grain per year of age, at one time, with a maximum of five grains. This dose should never be repeated in less than four hours and only then when absolutely necessary. Most regular "adult" aspirin tablets contain five grains and most "baby" aspirins contain one and one-fourth grains. Read the label and check.

If a child accidentally takes aspirin (or most any other household poisons excepting caustics or hydrocarbons), it is important to induce vomiting at once. This can be done by holding the child over the toilet and tickling the back of his throat with one's finger. A glass or two of warm soapy water may speed up the process of vomiting. Of course, a doctor should be contacted early in every case of poisoning.

It is generally wisest to take a poisoned child to the hospital emergency room immediately after these quick first-aid steps have been taken. The right steps at this time may save his life. However, adequate precautionary measures to avoid accidental poisonings is a more sure way to save the life of your little ones.

The alarming situation of household poisonings increases yearly as new chemical products are made available. Yet the old standby items such as aspirin cause the most frequent difficulty. Often the least concern is given to the most commonly used medications.

Since they are so commonplace, their potential danger is seldom considered. Even iron tablets in over-dose can cause death. Other dangerous drugs that inhabit many medicine cabinets and night-table drawers include barbiturates, cough syrups, "reducing" pills, antibiotics, thyroid tablets, tranquilizers, iron pills, heart medicines, asthma pills, anti-nauseants, vitamins, as well as countless others.

Under - the - sink cabinets, broom closets, and utility room floors are poor "homes" for cleaning solutions, insecticides, and other dangerous chemicals.

Special precautions should be taken in an attempt to avoid such serious cases of household poisonings. Special efforts should be made to move all household chemicals, (cleaning agents, waxes, polishes, charcoal lighter fluid, gas, kerosene, insecticides, etc.), to securely latched or locked top-shelf locations.

TIC Woodland Management Section Is Caretaker of 182,000 Acres

By Pvt. Dave Rohde

"Caretaker of 182,000 acres." That is the description given to the Woodland Management Section of The Infantry Center.

Established in 1960 through a recommendation made at a conference, the section has made great improvements in the forests, fields and waters of the military reservation.

The Fort Benning Fish and Game Association sponsored the conference which was attended by conservation experts from Federal, state and post agencies.

One of the prominent recommendations made at the meeting, which was held to analyze the available wildlife activities, view the terrain and to propose improvements in the conservation program, was the suggestion that a permanent wildlife director be employed.

Previously personnel assigned to fish and game activities were under the control of the Provost Marshal Section.

When Roy T. Johnson, the wildlife director, was employed, a section consisting of seven men was organized. It was put under the staff supervision of the G-1 (Personnel) Section.

Many Accomplishments

Among the many accomplishments of the Woodland Management Section is the clearing and plowing of 650 acres.

This acreage includes 250 acres in permanent wildlife openings, 110 acres in firebreaks, 655 acres in planted strips, and 225 acres in dove, turkey and deer pastures.

Also about 60 miles of strips 50 feet wide have been cleared with brush choppers to improve wildlife areas.

Permanent wildlife openings are man-made fields in a otherwise wooded area for the feeding of game animals. The grasses planted in the openings are the type craved by the game animals. Sixty-four of the openings have been cleared, plowed, fertilized and planted by the Woodland Management Section.

Firebreaks

More than 50 miles of the firebreaks that line the woodlands of the reservation have been plowed and planted with grasses. The planting of the breaks not only provides food for the game animals, but also prevents erosion of the soil.

Special openings, designated as dove, turkey or deer pastures, have been created by the planting of grasses or other vegetation used for food.

Waters of the Fort Benning reservation probably show the largest improvement. This can be verified by fisherman and picknickers alike.

Within the 182,000 acres under the control of the Woodland Management Section are 15 man-made lakes totaling 800 acres. Also, the Chattahoochee River provides 10 miles of shoreline for the section to care for and the Upatoi Creek provides 12 more miles.

First Step in Rehabilitation

The ponds were the first step in the rehabilitation of the Fort Benning water conservation program. The shorelines of the ponds in many cases had grown up so much that fishing was practically impossible. Eleven of these ponds were trimmed to make them readily available to fishermen.

In addition to making the water more accessible, the Woodland Management Section has drained, cleaned out and restocked many of the reservation ponds. Two of the ponds have been completely renovated, six have been fertilized and all have been treated for weeds.

The Fort Benning Management Section, through the cooperation of fish hatcheries, has stocked 82,900 fish in the waters of the reservation during 1962. This includes 400 large and 7,500 small bass, 37,600 bream and shellcrackers, and 2,500 large and 500 fingerling trout.

The trout, which were all stocked in Rose Pond, were the highlight of the year for the young fishermen of Fort Benning. Soon after the stocking, the pond was opened for two days for children under 16.

Private Organization

The Fort Benning Fish and Game Association, a private organization closely coordinated with the Management Section, supplies boats and other equipment for Scouting activities and any other post youth activity.

The youth of Fort Benning also have an opportunity to increase their knowledge of the outdoors through instruction offered by the post forester, Norman F. Force. Classes are available in woodmanship, camping and conservation.

The Woodland Management Section has provided not only for the anglers and hunters of Fort Benning, but also for the picknickers. King's Pond has become extremely popular among the outdoor families of the reservation. During 1962, the section leveled off the area used by picknickers and set up picnic tables and barbecue pits.

Through cooperation with state and Federal agencies such as the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, the Georgia Game and Fish Commission, and Alabama director of conservation, the Woodland Management Section has made all of the improvements on its 182,000-acre estate.

State and Federal agencies provided biologists to make regularly scheduled visits to aid in the carrying out of good management principles. The biologists are always on call for special visits when problems arise.

During 1962, the Woodland Management Section has made many improvements and through continuing support of the conservation-minded residents of Fort Benning, the improvements will increase.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Put in a Good Word

By Chaplain (Capt.) John D. Logan

"I do not pray for these only, but also for those who are to believe in me through their word." (St. John 17:20)

We are rapidly coming to the close of the time of Lent in which we have walked once again the way of sorrows with our Lord. Let us halt in our journey towards the Cross for a moment and think for a minute about Christ's Intercessory Prayer.

You have heard the expression, "Put in a good word for." Perhaps you have used this expression yourself. And by this you hope that your friend will speak a "good word" on your behalf so that the way will be paved toward a special favor or perhaps a better job or even a promotion. All through life we find how helpful it is to have others speaking a good word for us. In the 17th chapter of St. John's Gospel, Christ speaks a "good word" for us.

Jesus on His way to the Garden of Gethsemane, where he was betrayed, paused to pray. His prayer spoke a "good word" not only for His disciples, but also for you and me—"for them also that believe on me through their word." That word is the good news of the Gospel which the disciples have handed down to us. It is the same Word which you and I are called upon to pass on to those around us, "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and be saved."

As Our Lord Jesus prayed for us and spoke a "good word" for us with the Heavenly Father, let us speak a "good word" for someone in our prayers today.

GEN. RICH PINS MEDAL ON LT. MAGIE
He Distinguished Himself In Viet Nam

2 Viet Nam Vets Here Presented Heroism Awards

Two of the Army's highest medals for heroism — the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Soldier's Medal — have been presented to officers here for acts performed in South Viet Nam. Capt. Gene A. Mitchell received the Soldier's Medal while 1st Lt. Robert G. Magie was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Lt. Magie, assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Lawson Army Aviation Command, distinguished himself by heroic action while serving as co-pilot aboard a Shawnee helicopter in the vicinity of Tan Hiep on Oct. 5, 1962.

His aircraft was taking part in a troop landing operation when it was caught in a crossfire of automatic weapons manned by insurgent Viet Cong.

Although the helicopter's hydraulic boost and the plexiglass bubble on Lt. Magie's side were shattered by gunfire, he assisted in a successful forced landing.

Lt. Magie then aided in the evacuation of wounded to a rescue aircraft, stopping on occasion to direct effective counter-fire against the communist guerrillas.

The medal was presented to Lt. Magie by Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, presented the Soldier's Medal to Capt. Mitchell before 197 other Infantry officers, classmates of the recipient in the school's recent 19-week associate career course.

Capt. Mitchell was cited for his action June 25, 1962, while serving as a Ranger adviser to the 31st Division Tactical Zone for the Army of South Viet Nam. The Vietnamese were learning to swim in rapidly flowing water when the

Personal Condition Is Important to Army

Being physically fit is a way of life to the combat soldier, but all too often many Army individuals not closely associated with field operations, such as staff officers, technicians and specialists, as well as those who perform duties in an administrative capacity, too soon begin to notice a snugness in their uniforms. The WACs, we hasten to add, are not exempt from this problem.

Top military efficiency and preparedness depends upon the physical condition of all the men — and women — in Army Green.

Being free from disease and disorders and "feeling all right" does not particularly constitute physical fitness. Physical fitness includes being in sound health, but also very vitally includes a large measure of strength, endurance, agility and coordination to meet the most rigorous demands of routine and emergency situations. And this can only be achieved through a systematic exercise program conducted over a period of time at ever-increasing degrees of vigorousness.

New pamphlets entitled "Physical Fitness Program for Specialists and Staff Personnel (DA Pam 21-1)" and "Physical Fitness Program for Female Staff Personnel and TD Organizations (DA Pam 21-2)" outline just such programs for all personnel, including those over 40 years of age.

It stands to reason that physical fitness can only serve to increase mental alertness and efficiency since the ability of the mind to function properly is directly related to the degree of physical fatigue present in the body itself. It is imperative, then, that prime fitness be maintained by every person concerned with the national defense.

Despite scientific advancements in armaments and equipment, man remains the Ultimate Weapon of National Security, upon which the survival of the nation and the free world depend. Army personnel, who do not heed the challenge to keep themselves in a condition as close to physical perfection as the limitations of their bodies will allow, hurt not only themselves but the defense structure of the United States as well.

The largest military buying bill in history — 15.8 billion — was passed by the House. It authorizes purchase of 43 new, naval vessels, conversion to modernize 35 others, and purchase of 3,000 aircraft and about 60,000 missiles.

The Pentagon has asked Congress to approve legislation to revamp promotion laws in all Services. The bill would increase greatly the number of star-rank billets in the Navy and Marine Corps and boost the number of colonels and lieutenant colonels in the Air Force.

The legislation calls for each Service to have a single promotion list.

The Defense Department has proposed construction of 6,891 family housing units in the U.S. and its possessions and 2,260 at overseas bases. These units, costing more than $161 million, are a part of the better-than $1.8 billion military construction authorization bill submitted to Congress in March.

Also included in the bill is a proposal that would build trailer facilities amounting to 383 spaces for the Army, 172 for the Navy and 984 for the Air Force.

Follow These Guides When Credit Shopping

There's a safe and practical way to buy a car — pay cash! Sounds good, doesn't it? But, you say, "I haven't got that kind of cash."

Alright, there's still a safe and practical way you can buy a home, car, furniture or anything else on credit as long as you are careful not to go beyond your ability to pay.

When you decide to use credit, the Better Business Bureau offers this advice: "Be sure you are dealing with a reliable company."

If not sure, consult someone in whom you have confidence —your banker, insurance agent or a finance company of repute in your community.

Here are a few things to beware of: fast talkers with flowery promises, contracts, insurance, finance charges, interest rates, misleading advertising and misrepresented merchandise to name a few.

Most salesmen are ethical. But there are some who will jump at the chance to take advantage of inexperience. No matter how friendly a salesman may seem, be skeptical until you are satisfied of his integrity.

And remember this: no matter what a salesman tells you, it is the written terms of the contract which determine the rights of the parties.

You must be sure all matters on which you rely are in writing and that the contract is filled out completely before you sign. Above all, read and understand your contract. If you do not understand certain portions of it, ask questions until you get a satisfactory answer.

Here are some protective steps advised by the Better Business Bureau. Follow them and chances are you will get a square deal.

First, be sure you are dealing with a reliable company.

Second, never sign blank contracts.

Third, require the dealer to give you a complete listing of every single item that is included in the contract you sign, describing how much and what kind of insurance (fire, theft, comprehensive, collision, life, health and accident or other) and your classification on collision, other charges and the finance charge.

Fourth, get a copy of all papers you sign and be sure they are like the originals.

Fifth, be sure you receive copies of all insurance policies even though they may be mailed to you later.

(This is the fourth in a series of 10 articles prepared by the Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Judge Advocate General.)

Not One Red Ruble To Save Human Life

Karl Marx hated democracy. But at least he knew what he was fighting. "Democracy," he wrote, "is based on the principle of the sovereign worth of the human being." In other words, democracy is based on the concept of the "dignity of man."

Now Marx thought that was a stupid mistake. To him, there was no basic difference between a man, an animal or a machine. "Man," said Marx, "gets all his rights from the state."

But we Americans don't think that way. We consider man the most valuable creature on earth. We spend thousands of dollars to save one man; the Communists expend thousands of men to save a few rubles.

We believe in human rights; that a man has certain rights from the moment he's born. We believe in respecting those rights, and we believe they cannot be taken away from him.

In recent weeks the clampdown on individual freedom of expression has again hit the Soviet people. Modern artists have been lampooned for daring to express, in their works, what they felt. The Communist party has called many of the new vigorous young writers and artists defectors from the Communists cause.

Their work has been labeled as "rotten sentimental complacency" and new exhibitions have been abruptly cancelled "for the good of the party and Communism."

In practice it boils down to this: in a democracy the State is the tool of the people; under Communism the people are the tools of the State. (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

The Joys of Easter

By Chaplain (Maj.) Hugh C. McKown

Some years ago in Moscow, one Easter Day, a large crowd was summoned to listen to a speech by the Red commissar of education. The purpose of his remarks was to demonstrate logically that religion, especially Christianity, was the opiate of the people.

Argument piled upon argument as he attacked Christianity as something out of date in this new era of scientific knowledge and Communistic social achievement. Then in a gesture magnanimous for a Communist official, he challenged anyone present to answer his arguments. However, he limited the refutation to five minutes, though he had consumed more than an hour in his harangue against Christianity. Was there anyone in the crowd willing to speak for Christianity?

A young man stood up. Plainly dressed, almost shy in appearance, he walked calmly to the speaker's platform. Advised again that he must limit his remarks to five minutes, the young man nodded.

Then, turning to the crowd and in a strong, joyful voice, he almost shouted the words, "My brothers and sisters — Christ is risen."

Like an echo, came the response from a manly voice in the crowd. "Christ is risen, indeed."

Another voice and still another and another took up the cry, until like bells carilloning riotiously from a chapel tower, a mighty roar from the people repeatedly chanted the eternal words: "Christ is risen indeed."

That ended the meeting. All the flowery eloquence of the lecturer's arguments collapsed before the great fact — Christ is risen.

Easter is a feast of victory, the victory of Christ over sin and death. Not to understand and accept this truth is to miss the reason for our Easter joy.

If Easter means no more than a new fashion outfit, colored eggs, bunny rabbits, an annual visit to a place of worship, then this glorious feastday is empty show.

But if Easter is observed for what it is, a day of inspiration, the cornerstone of our Christian faith; if Easter is a day of triumph, a promise of our own resurrection, a pledge of the best hopes of all men, the words, "Christ is risen" will echo in our hearts and the hearts of millions of Americans.

As that young man in Moscow shouted out, Christ is risen" to the crowd in Moscow, so our faith shouts and sings the words to us on this Easter Sunday morning. And as the people answered "Christ is risen, indeed," so all practicing Christians can truly cry back our belief, "Christ is risen, today, indeed."

ALLIED STUDENTS ATTENDING TIS WELCOMED INTO LOCAL COMMUNITY

Their People-to-People Program Is Southern Style

The South has been traditionally famous for its hospitality, and certainly the City of Columbus has set the example — for its citizens are responsible for one of the finest people-to-people programs found anywhere in the United States.

Each year, approximately 300 - 400 Allied students come here for military training. For most of them, Columbus will be the "typical American City" they heard so much about and, undoubtedly, the subject of many conversations and stories when they return to their home countries.

Thanks to the outstanding efforts of a group of prominent Columbus citizens, like Jim Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. John Amos, Mrs. Olive Sheffield and T. G. Reeves, the stories told will be those of friendships made and will be based on a firm understanding of the American way of life.

Entertains Koreans

Usually, when we think of a program of activities, especially in a people-to-people program, we naturally think of an organization or group, complete with a chairman, committees, and numerous members. But not so with an elderly Columbus lady, affectionately known as the "Kimchi Mother," who started her own people-to-people program way back in 1951.

The wife of a former University of Georgia professor, Mrs. Olive Sheffield, has been entertaining Korean officers from The Infantry School for over a decade. It all began one Sunday when she met four Korean officers at a local church service and invited them to her home to try some of her southern fried chicken.

Gradually, the number of Korean guests increased and Mrs. Sheffield's menu became more diverse. Soon she became adept in preparing sukiyaki and kimchi. Her kindness did not go unobserved, for she is the only foreign woman to receive Korea's top military award, the Wharing Military Medal with Silver Star.

Korean officers come and go at Fort Benning, but in leaving, each takes with him a better understanding of America and its people, thanks to a church service and a kind lady who thought "it would be nice to have a few Korean officers over for Sunday dinner."

Latin Group

Once a month in downtown Columbus, a group of people meet to talk, eat and sing. Unusual? No! But the talk is in Spanish, the food may be arroz con pollo (chicken and rice) and the music may be Cielito Lindo, accompanied by the strains of a Spanish guitar.

This is the monthly meeting of the Latin American Studies Group. This group, consisting of Spanish-speaking citizens of Columbus and anyone interested in Latin American art and culture, has taken the Spanish-speaking Allied students at The Infantry School under its wing.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos, organizers of the LASG, regularly contact the Allied Student Training Section for information on new arrivals from South America. Many South American Allied students are accompanied by their wives and families, and the LASG sees what could be a difficult transition into a foreign civilian community.

There are usual problems of schooling for children, difficulty with the English language, establishing a household — but they are easily overcome with the assistance of the members of the LASG. Certainly, the world must seem smaller and friendlier for the South American Allied student and his family, thanks to this good neighbor policy of the Latin American Studies Group of Columbus.

International Gathering

A United Nations meeting in Columbus? Well no, not quiet. But the Ralston Hotel did take on an international air Feb. 22. One-hundred and thirty Allied students from 27 nations assembled at the Ralston Hotel on George Washington's birthday to participate in the annual Allied Officer Night.

The man behind this project was Hoover, chairman of the International Contacts Committee, Columbus Rotary Club. Hoover, a seasoned 'round - the - world traveler in his own right, thought that others, like himself, are curious to see how people live in different countries.

He provided the idea of having the Rotary Club sponsor an Allied Officer Night. Its purpose was to invite all the Allied students at Fort Benning into private homes so that they could better understand Americans and their way of life.

Allied students were organized into groups of two's and three's and were met at the Ralston by their sponsors. The sponsors then took the Allied students to their homes to have dinner and to "meet the family." Some of the Allied students brought their wives and children along.

Early Caller

An an indication of the success of this program, one Allied student called Hoover at 3 a.m. to thank him for arranging such a pleasant evening. Indeed, as one American lady noted: "Not only is the program important, but I and my family thoroughly enjoyed it."

Summertime is for swimming and picnics and baseball games. All these things are truly representative of the U.S. and its people. So, the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, in conjunction with the city's Merchants' Association, annually host all Allied students in residence at Fort Benning at an Allied Officer Barbecue — affair is held each summer at a farm located on the outskirts of Columbus.

Instrumental in planning this barbecue is T. G. Reeves of United Oil Corporation. Reeves is a man who likes people and certainly qualifies as an ambassador of good will among the many Allied students he has known over the years.

Although the primary purpose of Allied students being here is to receive the finest military training in the world, thanks to the civic-minded citizens of Columbus, they get to meet some of the finest people of the South and participate in a people-to-people program, Southern style.

Engineer Wives Hold Final Meet

The scene of the final luncheon of the 151st Engineer Group Officers' Wives' Club was set in a green and white theme with floating candles in a green-hued crystal bowl and in individual green-hued glasses on the tables.

Ivy and chrysanthemums completed the table decorations and also were massed on the mantle.

The ladies were greeted by the honored guests, Mrs. Charles W. G. Rich, wife of the commanding general, and Mrs. Mahlon E. Gates, wife of the 151st Engineer Group commander. Other honored guests were Mrs. S. C. Gates, mother of the commander, Mrs. Riel S. Crandall, wife of the post engineer, and Mrs. A. L. Parsons Jr.

The luncheon was a farewell gathering, as the 151st Engineer Group was recently inactivated. Mrs. W. K. Jordan, wife of the commander of the 577th Engineer Battalion, presented Mrs. Gates with a gift cooler as a remembrance from the officers' wives.

In saying goodbye to the ladies of the Group, Mrs. Gates thanked them for their enthusiastic response to group activities and stressed the importance of the role played by an Army wife.

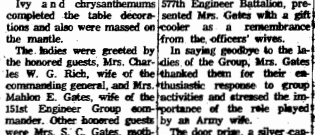
Mrs. Felix B. Moss, wife of the commander of the 806th Engineer Battalion, was hostess for the luncheon, which was sponsored by the wives of the 806th. On her committee were Mrs. Dudley Griffith, Mrs. Donald M. Ratliff, and Mrs. Peter Maloney, decorations; Mrs. Kenneth Dimond, refreshments; Mrs. Roy Sheffield, name tags; Mrs. Richard Hudson, reservations; and Mrs. George Longaecker, invitations.



Continuing last week's column, two other Fort Benning girls won recognition in the Miss Junior Achievement contest. Connie Swearingen, a Columbus High junior, won the evening gown competition and was named fourth runner-up. The girls in the contest voted Marty Smith the title of "Miss Congeniality." Marty is a senior at CHS.

Do you remember way back to the last day of school before Christmas holidays, when all the Baker seniors observed "dress-up" day by wearing coats and ties and heels and gloves (different combinations for boys and girls)? Well, Monday they got their reward in the form of a "kiddie day." On this day, they dressed as they did in their grammar school days and attended classes between marble and tricycle races. All the "kids" had a lot of fun.

In the list printed in this column of the new inductees into the Baker Honor Society, the name of Linda Seawell was inadvertently omitted.

Jerry Vassar a student at William and Mary, is home for Spring holidays, visiting her parents, Maj. and Mrs. E. V. Vassar. Jerry, was a member of the first graduating class of Pacelli High School, missed by only one day Pacelli's first "V-Day" football game. This game, which pitted the seniors and the alumni against the under-classmen was played at Memorial Stadium last Saturday. (The seniors and their "older" team-mates won!)

Members of Sigma Delta Beta Sorority entertained at a family dinner last Wednesday evening. Mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, enjoyed the good food, and later, the entertainment, provided extemporaneously by the members. The dinner was held in the adult building of the Christian Education Center.

Yesterday eight girls, two from each high school grade, met to nominate new officers for JADA. The girls, chosen as evenly as possible from the three high schools, have also shown a deep interest in the club during this year. The committee, composed of Shirley Borrom, Earle Wilder, Sara Walters, Karen Price, Kathy O'Donnell, Sue Ingle, Maureen Halpin and Sue McMonagle, will submit their nominations to the Junior Army Daughters at their annual Mother-Daughter luncheon tomorrow. The election will be held in May.

OC Wives' Luncheon Held Here

Honored guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Royal Reynolds Jr., Mrs. Otto R. Koch, Mrs. George P. McLendon, Mrs. Edward M. Vaughn Jr., Mrs. Lee Revill, Mrs. Dratie A. Miller, Mrs. Herman E. Edwards, Mrs. Willie O. Carr, Mrs. Ray L. Sandlin, Mrs. Kenneth Pakula and Mrs. Kenneth Geisler. Mrs. Stephen Young and Mrs. Thomas H. Duval represented the 50th Officer Candidate Company.

Mrs. Martin E. Andree, chairman of the Officer Candidate Wives' Club, welcomed the women.

Highlighting the event was a make-up demonstration by Mrs. Revill. Mrs. Revill also gave a lecture on skin care and general appearance.

Japanese dolls, cherry blossoms, lanterns and oreens decorated with butterflies carried out the oriental theme. The menu was also on the oriental theme.

P-TA Will Host State Members

The Fort Benning P-TA will entertain at a tea from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. April 16 at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess, honoring officials and delegates of the Georgia Parent-Teacher Association scheduled to meet in Columbus April 16, 17 and 18.

Approximately 650 guests will be met at the Traffic Circle and escorted to the mess by a scenic route through the post.

Among the dignitaries attending the tea will be Mrs. Clifford Jenkins of Long Island, N.Y., national P-TA president; Mrs. Cicero Johnston of Atlanta, state P-TA president, and military and civilian officials of the post and surrounding community.

Chairman of the tea is Mrs. Jean P. Doerr, while Mrs. John Fitzpatrick will be in charge of decorations.

Schriver Home Site Of Coffee

The cadre officer wives of 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, enjoyed their monthly coffee recently, at the home of Mrs. Robert F. Schriver with Mrs. William S. Spies as co-hostess.

Mrs. John H. Ramsburg poured coffee and tea at a table laid with a handsome lace cloth and a yellow and white floral centerpiece. A corsage was presented to Mrs. Ramsburg by the hostess in honor of her birthday.

A cordial welcome was extended to Mrs. David B. Harvey, Mrs. Richard H. Earle and Mrs. William D. White Jr., newcomers to the battalion.

A farewell was expressed to Mrs. Jan F. Sveen who will accompany her husband who is leaving the service and returning to their home in Norway to live. She was presented a silver tray.

Wives of Officers at TIS Also Learn Lessons Here

By Ida C. Evans

Fort Benning is not forgetting the woman behind the man behind the gun.

Wives of student officers at The Infantry School are given every opportunity to develop their potential of being a successful Army wife.

As in any other career, the Army wife has moments that measure her stamina. But she also has a maturity that comes from sharing the responsibilities in her husband's life.

To help the young women at Fort Benning meet these responsibilities, they receive briefings on post activities and on the courses their husbands are attending. They learn the do's and don'ts of protocol and how easy and fulfilling it is to be a part of the military community.

"Being an Army officer's wife is like accepting a position with definite responsibilities and tasks," according to Mrs. Otto R. Koch Jr. "We learn to do our jobs by study, practice and working together."

The wife of the colonel who commands The Student Brigade, Mrs. Koch is one of a group of devoted women on the post who take an interest in the activities of the officers' wives who accompany their husbands to The Infantry School.

"This is our job," Mrs. Koch said. "We have a definite responsibility to the wives of the student officers under the command of our husbands. These women soon will have similar responsibilities. We want to help them prepare for their respective jobs."

Mrs. Royal Reynolds Jr., wife of Brig. Gen. Reynolds, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, is an enthusiastic supporter of the constructive program of activities for student wives, Mrs. Koch said. Mrs. Ben Harrell, wife of Maj. Gen. Harrell, former commandant of The Infantry School, was also very active in the program of activities for the wives, Mrs. Koch added.

To Army wives, a coffee is more than a social hour, Mrs. Koch said. It is a business meeting of an organized group of women brought together by the fact that their husbands belong to the same unit or, as at The Student Brigade, are members of the same class at The Infantry School.

As soon as a new class is enrolled, the wives are invited to a coffee in the day room of the detachment to which their husbands belong.

They become a closely knit group, sharing problems, finding companionship, but most of all learning and practicing together the routines of the social activities of officers' wives.

Mrs. G. P. McLendon, wife of Lt. Col. McLendon, commander of the Student Brigade's 5th Battalion, and wives of the staff and tactical officers of the battalion, guide the OCS wives in planning events.

Mrs. Vern L. Joseph, wife of Col. Joseph who formerly commanded the brigade's 2nd Student Battalion, was also a friend, confidant and guide to the wives of student officers all the way from newly commissioned second lieutenants to lieutenant colonels. Their husbands are attending Infantry officers orientation, career, associate career, transportation, communications, nuclear weapon employment or refresher courses.

Known to the girls as "Sis," Mrs. Joseph made it a point to be in all their plans and activities.

First, there is a briefing on facilities of the post. This is given at an orientation coffee for wives soon after their arrival at The Infantry School.

The wives are briefed on the nature of the course their husbands are taking, how rugged and how demanding it is intellectually, to insure its utmost cooperation on the part of a student's family. The wives are counseled to make home life as conducive to study as possible.

Self-development and self-reliance also are taught in this unofficial Infantry School course. Student wives are encouraged to take part in the Woman's Club of Fort Benning with its many classes such as sewing, knitting, bridge, ceramics and ski trekking or to serve as volunteer Red Cross workers at Martin Army Hospital.

The wives are encouraged to plan group events to keep them busy while their husbands are in school. Some of the programs include bowling tournaments, casserole suppers with the children invited, and trips to points of interest in the surrounding community.

So, for some student wives at Fort Benning, their stay on post is a period of training for a new role in life, while for others it becomes a refresher course, but for all, it is a time for making friends and being useful to themselves and each other.

Five Officers Assume Key Posts in Air Assault Division

Five key staff positions in the 11th Air Assault Division have been filled by veterans of World War II and Korea.

Named G-1 of the division was Lt. Col. Robert A. McDade; adjutant general, Lt. Col. Malcolm R. Baer; signal officer, Lt. Col. Tom M. Nicholson; G-2, Maj. Frederic Ackerson, and G-2 air officer, Maj. Norman L. Williamson.

Col. McDade entered the Army in September, 1942, and served with the 147th Infantry in the Pacific Theater during World War II. He was with the 9th Infantry Regiment during the Korean conflict.

He is a graduate of the Command and Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

His decorations and awards include the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal and the Combat Infantryman Badge with Star.

Col. Baer entered the Army in September, 1941, as an enlisted man. He was graduated from Officer's Candidate School at Fort Benning in 1943. During World War II he served in Europe with the 29th Infantry Division.

In January, 1946, he was discharged from the Army and went to study law at the University of Maryland. After graduating he practiced law in his hometown of Baltimore. During the Korean Conflict he was recalled to active duty. He served in the G-1 personnel section of the 1st Cavalry Division.

He was a member of the faculty at the Adjutant General School, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., from 1956 until 1960. In 1959 he was assigned to Ethiopia with the U. S. Military Advisory Group.

Col. Baer returned to the AG school in January 1962 and served as an instructor. Col. and Mrs. Baer have three children, Susan 16, Malcolm, 13, and Mary Lou, 10.

Col. Nicholson entered the Army in May, 1942. He was commissioned in the Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, N.J., in November of the same year. In 1945 he served at Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, Europe (SHAPE).

He was commander of the 52nd Signal Battalion in Korea in 1949. After his Korean tour he was appointed signal officer for the U. S. Military Academy. Later he served with the Defense Communications Agency in Washington, D. C.

The Air Assault signal officer was with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., before assuming his new post.

Col. Nicholson is a graduate of the Advance Officer Signal School at Fort Monmouth, Airborne School at Fort Benning, and the Command and General Staff college at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. and Mrs. Nicholson have three children, Tom, 15, Libby Jo, 12, and Jan Marie, 9.

Maj. Ackerson attended Officer Candidate School here in 1946. During the Korean conflict he served with the 25th Infantry Division, participating in three campaigns.

His second tour here came in 1952 when he attended the officer refresher course. In 1954 he attended the officer advanced infantry course for his third tour.

Maj. Ackerson speaks French fluently and is a graduate of the Army Language School. In addition he was graduated from the French Ecole D'Etat in Paris. Later he served with the French commander in chief in Germany.

He is a graduate of the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va. The 11th Divison G-2 came to his new assignment from Norfolk.

His decorations and awards include the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart.

Maj. and and Mrs. Ackerson have two children, Douglas, 4, and Norman, 1.

Named Uniform

Maj. Williamson is credited with naming the Army's green uniform. In 1956, he entered a Department of the Army contest to name the garment, which, at that time, was known only by a Quartermaster Corps number.

The contest required that the contestants submit a name for the uniform and a reason for that name. The major submitted his name of "Army Green" and his reason.

His entry competed against 1,696 throughout the Army, and because of his reason for the name, won first prize over 33 suggestions of "Army Green."

Maj. Williamson, who at that time was assistant professor of military science at Shreveport High School in Louisiana, was presented the first prize check of $300 Nov. 14, 1956, at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., by the then commanding general of the Fourth U.S. Army, Lt. Gen. John H. Collier.

Maj. Williamson was placed on active duty in January, 1946. He was graduated from the Officer Candidate School here in June of that year. During World War II he served in Europe with the 63rd Infantry Division.

He was in Austria from 1948 to 1952. Later he was assigned as headquarters commandant of the 24th Infantry Division in Korea.

Maj. Williamson was a member of the staff of the Seventh U. S. Army Non-Commissioned Officer Academy in Germany from 1959 to 1962. After his European tour he came here and was assistant G-2 of the 2nd Infantry Division.

His decorations and awards include the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart and Combat Infantryman Badge.

Maj. and Mrs. Williamson have two children, Norman, 11, and Cathy Lou, 6.

Be Prepared to Prove Deductions If Your Tax Return Is Challenged

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles on federal income tax prepared by Capt. Sledge of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section.)

By Capt. Lawrence D. Sledge

A universal question which concerns all taxpayers is, "how much proof must I have and what kind of records must I keep in order to prove my deductions."

The law requires that the taxpayer, particularly the businessman, to maintain such records and books as will enable him to prepare a complete and accurate income tax return.

There is no particular form which must be followed, but, since the burden to prove the validity of these figures on the tax return rests exclusively upon you, the taxpayer, you should keep a systematic set of records.

This does not mean that you must keep every grocery receipt or every gasoline purchase receipt, but you should be able to prove within a degree of accuracy that these figures that you quote are reasonable correct.

Checks, contracts, and receipts are valid proof. You should keep these records for at least three years, and keep some of them longer, depending on the amount and importance. They should not be submitted with your return; you should keep them on hand as proof in the event you should need them.

Electronic Check

Today, with the electronic checking devices, there is a higher degree of possibility that your return may be audited, so be prepared to prove each and every deduction you have taken.

In some of the cases, the IRS will accept a reasonable approximation to the expense item you have deducted because it is realized that the taxpayer cannot possibly maintain every record. For this reason, the Internal Revenue Service has devised certain percentage figures for deductions.

For example, a reasonable amount of miles will be permitted on your automobile for the deduction of the state gasoline tax of 6.5 cents per gallon. Also, the Internal Revenue Service permits usage of a sales tax table which is calibrated according to income and the number of members of the family.

Be certain when stating your deductions, because in the future, there is the ever-increasing possiblity of your return being checked. In the future, as in the past, some returns will be arbitrarily chosen for audit, while some will be completely checked where there appears to be an abnormal or unusual amount of deductions. For example, contributions.

Since your Social Security number will be your identification number, and IBM cards will be used, the Internal Revenue Service will know your reported gross income before the return is submitted. Your bank, and any other business from which you receive dividends or interest is now required to report such income by means of your Social Security number.

So, from now on, be sure to report all income items. An audit could result from the machine finding a discrepancy in income figures.

Lt. Pexton Is IOOC Honor Grad

Second Lt. Robert M. Pexton graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class No. 12, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently with top honors. Lt. Pexton received an average of 96.4 per cent in the subjects covered in the course.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School was speaker for the graduation ceremonies. He also presented the honor graduate with his certificate and a desk set.

Gen. Reynolds also presented 2nd Lt. William A. Landers with an award for being high scorer in the Military Stakes competition is a field test of most of the subjects covered in the course of instruction.

MacDill Jets Strike Over 87th in Field

AF Air Support Becomes Reality

By Bob deCamara

Swept-wing, supersonic tactical fighter aircraft zoomed low over 2nd Infantry Division infantrymen Tuesday during training exercises at Fort Benning.

The four F-84-F jet fighters were flying "simulated close air strikes" in support of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry company training.

The plans were from the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla. Weekly, from now until the end of June, four F-84-F aircraft will be available to augment the "Second to None" training schedule.

In Tuesday's exercises, the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry's Company B and Company C broke the ice for the 2nd Division when those "leg" units received air support for the first time from the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing.

On the ground, the division's

(See JETS, Page 12)

THEY WILL STAY AT FORT STEWART . . . 2nd Infantry Division soldiers have a new Armor unit, the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, activated and assigned to the 2nd Division last week. This new unit will remain at Fort Stewart. Their commander, Lt. Col. Robert D. Danforth, (L) is welcomed into the division by Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander, accompanied by Fort Stewart post commander, Col. Arthur W. Tyson. While at Fort Stewart, the assistant division commander joined Maj. Dave Termin, commander of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, while that unit conducted Army Training Tests. Briefing the two officers is MSgt. Dwight W. James.

Last Step in Reorganization

Officials Are Lining Up 1st Brigade

By Bob deCamara

Dates of the final steps in the reorganization of the 2nd Infantry Division have been tentatively set, new unit commanding officers chosen and the division looks forward to complete reorganization by June 1.

The first old-line Army division to undergo extensive structure changes under the Army's revolutionary Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept, the "Second to None" Division is setting a swift and effective standard of reorganization to be followed later by Airborne and other infantry divisions.

Only one more brigade and three more battalions remain to be activated to bring the "Indianhead" Division to full fighting power. The 1st Brigade, composed of headquarters and headquarters company, will develop piecemeal and be completed by May 10, according to plans made up by the staff training and operations section.

The three battalions will be the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry; the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry; and the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry. The bulk of officers and men to fill these three battalions will be drawn from the division's 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry and 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry.

The 1st Brigade will then take its place beside the 2nd and 3rd Brigades, replacing the former five battle groups. Inactivation of the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry is scheduled for May 10.

Under ROAD, the pentomic division structure of battle groups is giving way to the more flexible, highly-mobile battalion system. With battalions, Army divisions will be better "tailored" to respond to the battlefield challenges of strategic nuclear conflict down to the present-day threat of guerrilla warfare anywhere in the world.

April 16 on Sand Hill is the date set for the activation of the 1st Brigade's Headquarters and Headquarters Company, the date on which history and tradition will be born for this new combat force.

Of the three new battalions, the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, was assigned to the 2nd Division at the start of the reorganization. It will shortly be stocked with men and equipment to make it fully operational.

Another battalion, the 2nd battalion, 38th Infantry, has been recommended for assignment to the division as of April 1.

On May 10, the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry will be designated the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry. The return of the 38th Infantry in mid-April after six months temporary duty in Germany under the ROTAPLAN rotation system and its redesignation as a battalion will mark the final step in the forming of the new units.

The commander of the 1st Brigade has been named. He is Col. Edgar R. Poole, presently commanding the 1st Infantry battle group. Executive officer will be Lt. Col. Ted E. Gordinier, executive officer of the 1st Infantry.

Lt. Col. William E. Conger, 1st Infantry deputy commanding officer, has been selected commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry. Commander of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry will be Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, S-1 officer of the 2nd's 38th Infantry. Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier, 2nd Division Headquarters, will command the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry.

Ft. Stewart Maneuvers Continuing

By 87th Infantry PIO

FORT STEWART, Ga. — Company A of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, is finishing its second week of training here. The four platoons are split and distributed among units of the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, presently maneuvering in the swamps and lowlands of Fort Stewart.

Three platoons are attached to individual armor companies as infantry support. The weapons platoon has retained its independence, and is scheduled to participate with the Headquarters platoon in a series of exercises under pressure of armor attack.

In the coming week more advanced tactical play is expected, including forms of unconventional warfare.

Candy Bar Wrapper Pays Pvt. $4,700

By Colin Higgins

Forty - seven hundred dollars from a candy-bar wrapper! This is the story of "unlucky" Pvt. William F. Harper, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

It began last October when Pvt. Harper was merely Bill Harper living with his family in Detroit. One day while reading a "Life" magazine he came across a "Pay Day" candy bar advertisement telling of the nation-wide sweepstakes the "Pay Day" Candy Company was running to publicize its chocolate delicacy. There was no complications to the contest. No jingles to write or puzzles to solve. Just name and address and a "Pay Day" candy bar wrapper. The first prize was a Buick "Riviera".

Pvt. Harper thought for a moment then dismissed any idea of entering the contest, "Heck," he mused, turning the page, "I never win anything anyway."

It was just about then that his younger brother entered the room, unwrapped a candy bar and unconcernedly began to chew. Pvt. Harper looked up. There on the table was, yes, a "Pay Day" candy bar wrapper!

Fate seemed to be beckoning, so with a bemused shrug and a "why not, I've got nothing to lose," Pvt. Harper took the wrapper, filled out the entry form and mailed both off to the "Pay Day" Company.

Several weeks later Pvt. Harper was going through

Gasoline Pours From Collapsible Tanks

CENTRIFUGAL PUMP UNLOADS NEW COLLAPSIBLE TANK
Supply and Transport Battalion Handles Unloading

By Support Command PIO

Supply Platoon, Company A, Supply and Transport Battalion took to the field last week with two 10,000 gallon collapsible tanks to test its effectiveness in its first field operation under the ROAD concept.

Using the two tanks, the Supply Platoon issued the 2nd Division's gasoline rations to the troops in the field during a three day period. The tanks were transported to the field by Company B, the main truck company for the division.

The tanks are a part of a group of six which make up what is known as the fuel system supply point. They are made of a two-ply impregnated nylon fabric. When inflated, the tanks measure 40 feet long, 11 feet wide and four feet high and are rectangular in shape. With the use of two centrifugal pumps, they are capable of unloading or loading up to 630 gallons per minute. The tanks, when folded, consume about the same amount of storage space as a command post tent.

While in the field, the men of the supply unit received additional training, but of a different nature. They were attacked by "mock" guerilla fighters selected from the unit. This training is in keeping with the current emphasis on counter-guerrilla warfare.

7th Cavalry Selects Top Cavalryman

By 7th Cavalry PIO

Appearance, military knowledge and bearing were key factors in the selection this week of PFC Jay C. Edwards as 7th Cavalry Soldier-of-the-Month for March.

PFC Edwards is a tank loader with Troop C, having joined the unit in mid-February, 1962. Before joining the 2nd Division's 7th Cavalry, he was selected honor trainee of his basic combat training unit at Fort Knox, Ky.

The Richmond, Ind. native is currently participating in counter - insurgency training, part of the 2nd Infantry Division's special warfare training program.

permanently assigned forward air controllers, Air Force Capt. Arthur W. Webb and Air Force Capt. John J. Keller, moved with the infantry units and directed simulated air strikes from the ground by radio. Both Air Force captains are veterans of numerous tactical aircraft missions.

Informal liaison was recently established with the 2nd Division by Air Force Col. H. M. McClelland, commander of the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing, during a visit to Fort Benning. Although the 12th would not necessarily be assigned to the "Indianhead" Division during actual conflict, due to its nearness the 12th has been selected to assist this Strategic Army Corps division in training.

basic Infantry Training at Fort Knox, Ky., and then later through Advanced Infantry Training at Fort Polk, La. During this time Pvt. Harper admits he never once thought about the competition. In fact, it was completely forgotten.

In March Pvt. Harper joined the 2nd Division, assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry. He is now training as a driver for the 106 recoilless rifle.

Last week Pvt. Harper received an excited telephone call from his sister in Detroit. He was stunned at the news. The "Pay Day" Candy Company had held the drawing. He had won the Buick "Riviera".

After the initial shock had worn off Pvt. Harper decided that he would take cash instead of the car. This amounted after taxes to $4,700.

The money, he says will remain in the bank until he can decide what to do with it. "I still can't believe it," he says. "In these kind of things I'm usually so unlucky."

NCOs Command Aviation Review

The first review held by the newly-activated 2nd Division at Lawson Army Air Field was, in many ways unique.

Not only was it the first review held by the battalion since its activation in February but it was entirely managed by the battalion noncommissioned officers. The battalion sergeant major, MSgt. Mikio Tomita, was the reviewing officer and 1st Sgt. Glen E. Owens, Company A first sergeant, was the commander of troops.

Due to the shortage of aviation officers in the battalion, many of the sergeants are not only doing their own jobs but all duties usually performed by officers. For example, four noncommissioned officers are now holding the positions of the battalion staff sections.

"It's remarkable," said Lt. Col. John M. Stephens Jr., battalion commander, observing the review from the visitor's gallery. "Every man out there is holding down two jobs — some of them more than two — yet they are still putting out an excellent job in supplying the division with aircraft."

As the colors passed the reviewing stand and the troops marched smartly by, Col. Stephens remarked, "I'd stack them up against any infantry outfit."

38th Artillery PIO

Due to the recent reorganization of the 2nd Infantry Division, five enlisted members of Battery B, 38th Artillery will have the opportunity of being appointed the rank of corporal from specialist four.

Because of the new Table of Organization and Equipment which is in effect, the assistant gunners of B Battery's 155mm Self-Propelled howitzer will receive the noncommissioned officer rank.

Said one of the men upon interview, "This reorganization is having a more immediate effect than I had imagined".

College Champ Assigned to 1st

By 1st Infantry PIO

A college sports champ has joined Company D, 1st Infantry.

Lt. Gerald A. Grochowski, a recent graduate of the University of Wisconsin, held most of the basketball scoring records in his university.

In the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Regional Tournament he held the basketball scoring record of 72 points for two games and won an honorable mention in the All-America standings during his senior year.

The new member of Company D excelled in sports while at high school, being named All-Conference football and baseball player and All-State football player.

Asked whether he planned a career in professional sports the lieutenant says, "Emphatically no." Although he has received his share of offers, he feels that professional sports saps the athlete of his enthusiasm to play for the sake of the sport.

Maintenance Memo

Twice Weekly Course Accenting Maintenance

By Support Command PIO

A Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course has been established in the 2nd Infantry Division. "The responsibility goes right up the line of green tabs", stated Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander during his opening day address to the class.

Stressing the importance of active, aggressive and vigilant supervision at all echelons, the course is designed to present maintenance indicators that will enable the commanders to inspect and evaluate the condition of material assigned to his command.

Organized under the direction of Col. Arlin J. Kehe, commanding officer, 2nd Infantry Support Command, a course of eight hours instruction is presented to battalion commanders, staff, company commanders, platoon leaders and selected noncommissioned officers. The class will be given twice weekly until every commander in the division has attended.

In order to insure that commanders are aware of the indicators that are evidence of unsatisfactory maintenance, improper operation or abuse of all type equipment in their organization, Capt. Daniel H. Pride, officer in charge of instruction, has drawn upon all technical maintenance sections for equipment and instructors.

The class is conducted on the county fair system and consists of eight stations. At each station items of equipment found in the units are displayed and used as training aids. They range from a soup ladle to a five ton truck. Under the guidance of a qualified expert the students rotate through the stations looking for potential trouble areas.

The goal of the division is to insure that the highest degree of material readiness is maintained at all times. By following the guidelines and procedures as set forth in the course, the division's equipment, will be ready and "Second to None."

They've Logged Millions Of Miles

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — After they've returned to Fort Benning in April, in a little over a year's time the men of the 1st Battle Group, 68th Infantry collectively will have logged approximately 20 million miles.

The 38th started the pile-up of statistics in late February of 1962 by taking a motor convoy some 150 miles to Fort McClellan, Ala., and the 2nd Infantry Division Brigade Field Training exercise. About a month later, the battle group was airlifted 240 miles to and from Fort Stewart, Ga., for division-wide exercise "Seneca Spear."

In late May 1962 it was another airlift, some 240 miles, to Eglin Air Force Base in Florida for the Strike Command-directed Exercise Clear Lake, and in July the Battle Group traveled by bus, motor convoy and train to and from the Little Creek, Va., Naval Amphibious Base, a 720-mile jaunt each way.

In August it was another 316-mile bus and military vehicle convoy movement, this time to the South Carolina maneuver area for Exercise Swift Strike II. And finally, in October of 1962, Marnemen troops left Fort Benning for the approximately 5,000-mile transatlantic crossing to Europe under Rotaplan.

Coming

Next week THE BAYONET will feature the newly reorganized units of 3rd Division Artillery on its special Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) page. These battalions, headed by a division artillery headquarters and commanded by a full colonel, provide the 2nd Division with the most powerful firepower available to the modern combat Army division.

Signs of the ROAD; A Series

Tracks Revise Their Tactics

By Peter Tatistcheff

Knowing what to do under specific conditions is just half of the soldier's job. Doing it fast, is the key to effective combat tactics.

Foot soldiers of the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry, have a problem and only six months to solve it. Under the division's modernization with the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept, these soldiers have to completely revamp their tactics and get used to new timing.

Mechanization

The reason for this change is mechanization. Where in the past they did all of their moving by foot, these "straight legs" will begin training with armored personnel carriers. This means a big adjustment.

As Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, commander, puts it, "Our soldiers are used to thinking at about two and a half miles per hour. Now with the personnel carriers, we've got to think at 20 miles per hour."

Before reorganization the entire 87th Infantry battle group was authorized only three personnel carriers. Last week the 1st Battalion was issued 66. Combined with five mortar APCs, five VTRs and two M-60 tanks, the battalion's tracks become their greatest concern.

This dependence on tracks means two things. First, their new faster moving operations are going to call for quicker decisions. Orders are going to come by radio, orally, and they will probably be fragmentary. Subordinate commanders moving in vehicles with their mechanized infantrymen will not be called to command posts in the rear. There will be less time for conference-type decision making. For Lt. Col. Crosby this means an adjustment in orders, allowing as much freedom of action as possible to take advantage of quick changing battle situations.

The second factor is the responsibility it puts upon the troops for maintenance on newly assigned "Tracks." Administrative support for a mechanized battalion is crucial. Armored vehicles require a constant and adequate supply of fuel and lubricants to say nothing of extensive maintenance.

A dismounted unit does not have as large a logistical force. For the commander of the mechanized unit this calls for added security for his resupply system.

Capt. Roy S. Dunaway, battalion executive officer, emphasizes the changes that have been brought about in command and structure of the battalion. "The two most important differences with ROAD in this battalion are that we have lower ranking officers in command and staff positions and that we now have a headquarters company with an added tactical mission.

"In the former 87th Infantry battle group, we were assigned a full colonel as commander, two lieutenant colonels and four majors. Now we are commanded by a lieutenant colonel and his staff consists of two majors and three captains.

"Our headquarters company, commanded by Capt. Robert T. Smith Jr., with 1st Sgt. Eugene P. Gibbons, has a whale of a mission. Besides providing command and staff administration, they now give us ground radar surveillance, 4.2 inch mortar nuclear reconnaissance, anti-tank support, communications, forward air control, supply, maintenance and medical support. That's quite a handful for a company that previously had no tactical mission at all."

This battalion has a specific goal in mind for mechanized training. It will be the first 2nd Infantry Division battalion to undergo a full six - month training program for Rotaplan before temporary assignment to Germany. During this period beginning with a two-week special course in familiarization with the armored personnel carrier, officers and men alike will be learning their new mechanized tactics, learning how to load and unload, sit and dismount from these infantry fortresses.

The APC is not a tank or a fighting vehicle. This is one of the most important lessons in upcoming training. The mobility, speed and shock value of moving to an objective under the protection of armor will decrease the time element for these combat trained infantrymen.

According to Capt. Dunaway, ROAD reorganization strikes deep into the structure of their war machine.

"For example," he stated, "the structure of our simplest rifle squad has changed. What was an eleven - man team has become a ten-man squad. Each platoon leader now has a radio operator. We have just finished drawing our new M-14 rifles and M - 60 machine guns. With these new weapons and personnel carriers, our troops have their hands full if they expect to be going to Europe in six months."

This battalion's three rifle companies are billeted on Fort Benning's Kelley Hill. Company A is commanded by Lt. William F. Terry III, with 1st Sgt. George E. Wells. Next is Company B, commanded by Lt. George W. Miles, with 1st Sgt. Warren G. Metz. Company C is commanded by Lt. Dahl Marshall, with 1st Sgt. William T. Trump.

Capt. Dunaway stressed, in discussing changes, that the reorganization of this battalion begins a new chapter for what is the Army's youngest fighting regiment. It was formed the day after "Pearl Harbor," on December 8, 1941. At that time it was called "87th Infantry, Mountain, 1st Battalion, Reinforced."

"We are building a grand trophy room," the captain stated, "in our headquarters to give the men something to be proud of and something they can see. The 1st Battalion is a unique unit and we are about to embark on a new road. We think this trophy room will be an excellent reminder of the tradition we are a part of."

At Service Club Two

Art Show Is 'Terrific'

"An exceptional show" was the unanimous opinion of the judges after viewing the 2nd Division Art Contest held recently at Service Club Two.

The contest which is held quarterly and is open to all members of the military and their dependents was combined with a special children's category in celebration of March being Children's Art Month.

"The response was terrific" says Service Club Director, Miss Madeline Parks, an opinion which is seconded by one of the three judges, Mr. Manford D. Metcalf, the illustration supervisor at the Infantry center's Editorial and Pictorial Section. Mr. Metcalf, who has judged previous 2nd division competitions said there was a marked improvement in both quality and quantity of entries.

In the adult division there were over 100 entries in the 11 different categories ranging from charcoal and pastels to water colors and oils.

The children's division had over 160 entries in seven categories, the majority being in crayons but with good showings in both tempera and water colors. The children ranged from 3rd to 8th grade and came from Faith, Loyd or Wilbur Schools.

The three judges were Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Antoni Mani, Director of the Columbus School of Art and Mr. Hugh Cook, Crafts Supervisor at the Infantry Center Special Service Office. The judging took two and a half hours and all pronounced the showing "exceptional." Mr. Mani said the caliber of work was extremely high and far above the local area. Mr. Cook said it was better than the Third Army Competition.

Lt. Col. Richard E. Guthrie, the 2nd Division Adjutant General, presented the winners with first, second and third place ribbons Saturday afternoon at the service club.

By TOM HIGGINS

A musician with more than fifteen years as an educator and one of the country's more noted cornetists spoke recently to the members of the 2nd Infantry Division's Band.

Mr. Byron L. Autrey, constantly in demand as a cornet clinician, expressed his theories to the group Tuesday, after accepting the invitation from Mr. Blumm, division band commander and Sgt. Stan Owens, an instrumentalist.

Also present at the brief discussion was Mr. Robert Barr, introduced to the group as the conductor of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra by Mr. Autrey.

Mr. Autrey spoke on the topic of implementing breath control in the methods of articulation and intonation. He demonstrated to the "Indianhead" bandsmen basic respiratary and facial techniques in achieving various tonal effects. After the discussion, Mr. Autrey was swarmed by the bandsmen with questions concerning his theories illustrated during the discussion. cussion.

Mr. Autrey is a graduate of Central Missouri State College. He recently completed the requirements for a Master of Arts degree from West Texas State College. He is currently working toward the completion of his doctorate at The University of Michigan. Before joining the teaching staff at Michigan State University at East Lansing, he directed bands for seven years in elementary and secondary schools.

The native of Mexia, Tex. is constantly sought after as an instructor and especially as a clinician, is a valuable source of information and an aid to the music educator.

Due to his tight schedule, Mr. Autrey was sorry that he could not spend a longer time with the group. He feels that music is a universal language and has no age barrier in its expression. He said that he appreciated the band's interest and enthusiasm about the discussion.

87th Squad Sews Up Volleyball

1st Battalion's 'Bravo' Thrashes 1st's Support

By 87th Infantry PIO

The 2nd Division volleyball championship Saturday at the Kelley Hill Field House fell to a determined assault by a squad from Company B, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry.

Company B is now awaiting the Fort Benning post championship play-off beginning April 9 at the Bryant Wells Field House in which they will be matched against the Main Post volleyball champion. Winner of that battle will go to the Third Army Tournament.

After being dropped into the losers' bracket by the 1st Infantry's Combat Support Company in a hard-fought contest earlier in the tournament, the Company B "Conquerors" surged back to gain entrance to the finals.

The same "Always First" team which had tripped up "Bravo" before was the team run over by "Bravo" in the best-out-of-five-game series for the division volleyball crown.

After losing the first match 7-15, the "Conquerors" gathered themselves together and captured the next three in a row, 17-15, 16-14 and 15-8.

Following the game, the team and individual trophies were presented to the "Conquerors" by Lt. Col. Richard E. Guthrie, 2nd Division adjutant general.

Other victims of Company B during the tournament were representatives of the 17th Artillery, 3rd Brigade, Division Artillery and, their own counterpart, the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

"Bravo" men responsible for bringing in this championship were Harold Taylor, Andrew Hamm, Loucious Willis, Frank Schuette, Johnny Crittle, David Willing, Waclaw Szarek and manager Richard Scott.

It is difficult to point out individual standouts. This is a team characterized by teamwork.

Winner of the five - game play-off between the "Second to None's" Company B, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry and The Infantry Center champions will represent Fort Benning at the Third Army Tournament from April 16-19 at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Cage Season Winds Up As 'Marnemen' Triumph

By 38th Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany —The 2nd Division's 38th Infantry on duty in Europe wound up its 24-game basketball season with the 8th Infantry Division, sweeping a twin-bill from Division Artillery, 91-86 and 88-77.

Down by 10 or more points in the first half of each game, the ROTAPLAN buttfit pulled away in the second half of each encounter behind the shooting and floor play of guard Robert Marshall.

In the first gaune, the 38th's Marshall and DivArty's Dixon both tallied 28 points to lead in the scoring while Russell Anderson had 19 points and Joe Clune 16 for the 38th. In Sunday afternoon game, Dixon led scoring with 26, while Marshall had 25, Clune 21 and Anderson 20 for the "Marnemen."

The main body of the 38th Infantry is scheduled to return to Fort Benning and resume its active schedule in 2nd Division sports in mid-April.

Golf Proves an Expensive Game

By Bill Kease

Before you stands an elevated piece of ground perhaps four feet above the normal ground level. As you look farther on you see a long strip of grass bounded on both sides by trees, water, animals, sheds or whatever.

Just over a hill a flat surface appears, no bigger than a giant throwrug, with a flag sticking out of the middle. On this particular flag, waving in the breeze, there appears a number. It could be any number from one to eighteen. This is a golf hole.

There are 18 of these "conquerors of men" on a regulation - size course. The 19th hole, a somewhat controversial one, is located at the bar in the clubhouse. This is where the game is really played.

"I should have done this on number three" or "I should have had a par if the wind wasn't blowing" are some of the comments heard from the would-be Arnold Palmers. A good game of golf is "talked" on the 19th hole.

Now that we have the landscape with the finely-manicured greens and soft, plush fairways, we must speak of the implements; the clubs; the woods and the irons.

The "powerhouse" is the driver or number one wood. You'll usually find a large "1" stamped on the bottom of the club. This is used as the first club on each hole to obtain maximum distance. With a solid swing you attempt to send the ball floating down the fairway in good position for the next shot to the green.

A variety of other woods are available to the golfer. The higher the number on the club, the less distance the ball will travel and the more loft it will have.

The second tpe of club is the iron. In essence, the irons use the same principal. While the woods are used for distance, the iron's main purpose is accuracy. Many pros would much rather have accurate irons than hit the ball a "mile" with a wood.

These steel clubs range from number two to number nine. The more proficient golfers might have a pitching or sand wedge to improve their game. These, however, are not necessary for the beginner.

$ Money $

There is money involved in golf. A set of the best woods will run upwards to $100. Irons, possibly $150 or higher; a $50 golf bag would be sufficient. And, of course, you must buy the balls. Golf shoes, the best, are about $36. Now you're set.

But let's go back a moment. All the equipment I've just mentioned is in the high-price range. A novice can get by on considerably less. With a head for bargaining and little professional help, he might get by on $100, more or less.

If you really are interested, contact the pro shop at your local country club, and you will be given all the information you desire. Thousands of people enter these shops every day with the widest variety of queries.

Looking back at golf's history, Bobby Jones was the "father" of golf. Arnold Palmer, with his famous last-minute comebacks, is the current leading money winner. Sam Snead and Ben Hogan were the most popular.

There is more money involved in golf than the money a golfer spends to outfit himself. But this money is to be won. An amateur cannot receive cash prizes or he will lose his amateur standing. There is, however, a variety of golf equipment and other prizes available.

Professionals

The pros play for the big money. The grandest tournament of them all is the Masters played in Augusta, Ga., in April with prize money totalling about $112,000 to be divided among the top pros in the tournament. First-place money in this tourney is $25,000. And that's for four day's work.

Arnold Palmer picked up $75,5000 last year on the pro circuit. With all the extras, such as television appearances, magazine articles and royalties on golf equipment endorsed by the champ or bearing his name, he made close to $500,000.

Golf has boomed in the last few years. When Gen. Eisenhower became president of the United States in 1952, he set an example for sports enthusiasts everywhere. People began to flock to the golf course, golf becoming almost as popular as touch football is today.

Gradually, people hitting the links kept coming back for more afternoons of golf, because they learned to love the game. Now in every country of the world on every day of the week, men and women of all ages masterfully shoulder their golf bags, throw them in the back seat of cars or push them in front of them to the nearest course to spend their leisure time in America's all-round most popular participation sport.

Fencing Meet Set at BWFH By Local Club

The Fort Benning Fencing Club will sponsor an open Invitational Foil Meet Saturday from 11 a.m. until 8 p.m. at Briant Wells Field House.

Military and civilian fencing teams from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North Carolina, and South Carolina are expected to compete in the triple category event.

Preliminaries are scheduled for the morning while the final matches are set for the late afternoon.

Competition in torso fencing will get the meet underway. In order to score a point in this particular type of event the fencer must merely touch his or her opponent with the tip of the sword in designated targets.

Epee (French for sword) fencing will mark the second phase of the meet. Dueling in this event is aimed at the entire body of the fencer, the arms being the most vulnerable point of attack.

The final event will be in Sabre fencing in which points are totaled up for striking targets from the waist up. Fencers in this event will use the stab, the cut and the slash.

Trophies will be awarded to fencers finishing first through fourth place in each event.

All contestants will wear the fencing costume and provide their own sword, a light weight bending steel with a blunt tip.

3 Post All-Stars Named To All-Tournament Team

Three Fort Benning men were named to the Third Army Basketball All-Star team last weekend by a group of coaches and sportswriters.

The team, consisting of 10 players, was chosen for their all-around playing ability in the Third Army Basketball Tournament held at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Picked from the championship Fort Benning team was PFC George Bell, former Jackson State boogster, who finished fourth in the tournament scoring with 88 points. Against Fort Bragg in the final game, Bell hit for 21 points with 21 points coming in the second-half as the Benning cagers came-from-behind with a 79 - 71 victory. Bell's four-game average was 22 points per game.

Also chosen on the Third Army Team was 2nd Lt. Harold Deane. The former Virginia State star placed second in the tournament's rebounding department and ninth in scoring with 58 points. Deane hauled down 18 rebounds against Fort Bragg in their first meeting and won the game with a long 40-foot shot with three seconds of play remaining, to give Fort Benning a 78-76 win. Deane averaged 14 points and 15 rebounds per game.

Rounding out the trio was Sp4 Hudson Ray from Pontiac, Mich. Ray closed out his tournament play with a four-game scoring average of 10 points while in the rebounding department the lanky six-foot 6-inch forward averaged 12 rebounds per - game.

Though's Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

The big three in professional golf are at it again, fighting it out for the most-sought-after golf title on the tour—the U. S. Masters title.

Even though this is a new year and tournament, the story is the same as in past years. The biggest name in golf today—Arnold Palmer—is favored by almost everybody and Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus are Arnie's most serious threats.

Palmer, who is trying for his four victory in the Masters, is holding on to his position as top money winner on the tour so far this year, but a poor showing in the Masters could change the standings in a hurry.

Palmer has said several times that he thinks old age may be catching up with him and claims his driving is off pace. He can't keep up with too many of the younger pros who concentrate on the long ball, he says.

This immediately brings Jack Nicklaus into mind. Nicklaus is probably the finest wood and long-iron hitter in the game today. It seems his trade mark is his uncanny ability to putt for an eagle on almost every par five hole he plays.

Jack is also a terrific player under pressure as he demonstrated in last year's World Series of Golf. The long-hitting Ohioan stopped Player and Palmer coldly to take top prize of $50,000. I am looking for a repeat performance this weekend at Augusta.

As far as Gary Player is concerned, it is going to be tough for the South African to make the grade. He will obviously be among the top ten, but he is not the man to win.

The man dressed in black has fallen to number three among the big three and will probably finish about that position in the Masters'.

Palmer favors the aging Dow Finsterwald and steady Gene Littler to high in the money winners this year, along with Phil Rogers and Bobby Nichols. But the way it looks from here, it's going to be another Palmer-Nicklaus duel and Jack will win at the final tally Sunday.

Realism Is Keyword in Instruction In Company-Level Tactics at TIS

By Bill Gardner

Field work and live fire exercises are two means by which The Infantry School's Company Tactics Committee attains realism as it instructs about 8,000 students here annually in the fundamentals of company-level tactics.

A branch of the Command and Staff Department, the committee is composed of 14 officers, most of whom have had experience as company commanders, and 22 enlisted men.

The instructors pool their experiences and the experiences of others in teaching the combat employment of the Infantry's basic tactical element, the rifle company.

The committee chief is Col. William R. Lynch, a veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict, and holder of the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with V Device and three Oak Leaf Clusters, Purple Heart and Croix de Guerre with Silver Star.

Lt. Col. Paul E. Johnson, who recently returned from Viet Nam, is the deputy.

Variety of Students

In addition, special classes are taught in which the students are instructed in the tactical employment of such specialized weapons as the ENTAC wire - guided missile, heavy mortars and the Davy Crockett nuclear weapons system.

Primarily though, the committee is concerned with instructing future company commanders in the tactical employment of Infantry and mechanized Infantry rifle companies in offensive, defensive and retrograde operations.

As Col. Lynch stated, "To command at the company level requires a working knowledge of Infantry weapons, communications, personnel and administration, supply, transportation, small unit tactics, tactical organization and methods of coordination of supporting arms and units."

"The combination of all these facets of military activity formulate the realm of the company commander, whose responsibility is to mold them into an effective fighting force," he said.

To gain realism, 90 per cent of the instruction is held in the field and each student participates in the problem as either a company commander, platoon leader or a member of a rifle platoon.

ON COMPANY TACTICS PROBLEM
Capt. J. M. Davis, Capt. W. A. Dahl

To further add to the realistic nature of the training, three of the problems are live fire.

Typical Problem

A typical problem begins with the principal instructor welcoming the students. He then says, "As we develop the situation described, consider yourself not as a student but as a company commander. Picture yourself faced with his many problems as he makes his plans."

"After we finalize this plan and prepare the company for combat, you will participate in a live fire attack supported by a vast amount of artillery and mortar fire where you will be able to realize the inherent confusion in such an operation, the need for a streamlined organization at the company level and the tremendous problems of control that face the company commander," he states.

Equipment, such as weapons and Infantry radios, is issued. Then under the supervision of instructors and with a barrage of overhead fire, the students attack, or in other cases, defend a hill.

Before the attack, the student must formulate a scheme of maneuver and a fire support plan. While in the defense, the student must concern himself with the consolidation of key terrain, blocking of avenues of approach, and the placement of organic and attached weapons.

After the exercise is over, a critique is held during which members of the committee comment on what the students did. Each student is urged to make his own comments.

Good Comments

Instructors have found that a number of students, particularly in the officer career courses which are composed primarily of captains, often have worthwhile comments to make based on individual combat and field experience.

A breakdown of instruction given to the career courses, which is the largest single block of instruction the committee gives, is a typical example of how the time is spent.

Four hours are devoted to support units of the battalion; seven hours to a rifle company task foce in defense; four hours to a mechanized Infantry rifle company in retrograde operations; six hours to a rifle company task force in attack; eight hours to a rifle company in night attack; eight hours to an air-mobile rifle company in counter-guerrilla operations; six hours to foot mobile and mechanized rifle company task force operations, and a one-hour demonstration of an Infantry-tank task force in attack.

New Cable Device Aids Jet Braking

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AFPS) — Twelve simulated tank landing arrests marked the successful completion of the crucial phase of a continuing two month series of functional and reliability tests of a device that is expected to enhance Air Force tactical mobility.

The device is a steel cable stretched across the runway designed to grab a hook fastened under the tail of Air Force jetfighters. Five minutes apart, four jets speed down the runway at 118 to 184 miles an hour and slammed against the cable 12 times.

The purpose of the device is to stop the planes safely and smoothly 700 to 950 feet from where contact with the cable was made. The cable which can stand 100,000-pound pull would need from 4,000 to 8,000 feet of runway to come to a halt.

Tests of the device, known as the BAK-13 portable aircraft arresting barrier, began last February 5 under the Air Force Systems Command, Andrews AFB, Md.

Normally the same aircraft handled its chore perfectly.

Longhand Order Calls Typewriter To Military Duty

NEW YORK (AFPS)—In a period when the typewriter has become standard military equipment, a directive recently unearthed in the Army's Office of the Quartermaster General reminds us what an innovation it was.

Dated Sept. 9, 1876, signed by the "chief clerk," and addressed to the "principle clerks" in the then Quartermaster General's Office, the circular states:

"The Quartermaster General desires that use be made of the type writer. The principal clerk of each branch of this office will therefore please designate some one person under his direction to take charge of a typewriter, and by practice become familiar with and proficient in its use, in order that all letters, not mere forms, and products of each branch, may be printed by it."

The directive was written by hand in pen and ink.

10,000 Cars Pour On, Off Benning Daily

Over 10,000 cars pour in and out of Fort Benning each day during the peak rush hours of 7 to 8 a.m. and 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., according to results of a recent traffic survey conducted by The Infantry Center Provost Marshal Section.

The figures show Lumpkin Road received the lion's share of traffic with 2,304 vehicles entering the post and 2,901 leaving.

Figures for the same hours on Benning Boulevard reveal comparable amounts. Incoming traffic during the morning hours totaled 1,968 while outbound traffic in the afternoon registered 2,932.

Other roads getting heavy usage include 10th Division and Sigerfoos. On Sigerfoos, incoming morning-hour traffic mounted to 1,164, while the 10th Division Road accounted for 863 during the same period.

From 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. outgoing traffic almost doubled on the 10th Division Road with 1,589 vehicles turning the counter. Sigerfoos which is closed to outbound traffic receives none at this time.

Organization Formed to Aid '64 Olympics

Dave Dichter, a 31-year-old ex-Marine, has founded a private organization of sports enthusiasts called Sports International, Inc. to help foreign athletes prepare for the 1964 Olympics.

"What we're trying to do," says Dichter, "is help these people see that there is no inborn western superiority in sports, but that American success in the Olympics is simply the result of hard work. That's the secret of success!"

About three dozen athletes have signed up for the do-it-yourself project with 20 United States colleges, universities and a high school "adopting" the athletes for three months of training. The schools will pay room and board with some of the visitors guests in coaches' homes or in campus fraternities.

Dichter, a Peace Corps consultant for Pakistan, views the project as a sparetime hobby but acknowledges it is taking more and more of his time.

While on U. S. campuses, the visitors will join college teams as unofficial members to experience competitive team work. They would take part in intramural play, time trials and other training contests.

At the end of the three-month visit, the athletes will reconvene to take part in a clinic for mass instruction in U. S. track and field techniques.

Dichter reported that Chile, Bolivia, Jamaica, Iran, Greece, Algeria and Indonesia are some of the countries sending an average of two athletes each. Their U. S. hosts will range from big campuses, such as Cornell University and the University of Oregon, to Minnesota's Bemidji State College and Tranquility Union High School of Fresno County, California.

"We're not trying to outdo the People to People Sports Committee," said Dichter, "but it's the 'doing' that's important. And there is a big job that can be done through sports."

GREATEST WALK

One of the greatest walks in history was that of three English sailors who, in 1568, made their way from Tampico, on the Gulf of Mexico, to St. John, New Brunswick. They had been stranded when Sir John Hawkins' Mexican expedition of the previous year was routed by the Spanish in the harbor of Vera Cruz; rather than risk capture by the Spanish, they decided to make their way north through the unmapped wilderness. Nobody knows the route they followed, but the journey took them a full year.

Surgeon Says

Swimming Presents Eye, Ear Problems

By Capt. S. R. LeMay Jr.

With the onset of swimming season, many people take on an aquatic habitat to be ended only by the close of the same season.

During those few months, many people find themselves beset with problems attributable directly to swimming and ask themselves if these maladys can be prevented.

Cleanliness of the swimming pool is one of the most important factors. The rules of the swimming pool also have a lot to do with controlling the problem. But this is not enough to prevent many diseases.

Unfortunately, we humans are not equipped with muscles and flaps which close off our nostrils, eyes and ears, as many aquatic animals do. Therefore, we must seek other means to protect these organs.

Common sense protects many of us when we refuse to swim when already harboring some disease such as colds, eye irritation or each aché. People with perforations of the eardrums or sinus infections are asking for trouble if they get water in the affected area. Therefore, we recommend that such people stay out of swimming pools.

Protection for the nose involves proper breathing which any swimming instructor can demonstrate. This basically involves breathing in thru the mouth and out thru the nose. Don't dive into the water feet first without protecting the nose, because this can drive infection into the nose and sinuses which may be mild to very serious.

The ears are especially prone to a condition commonly called "swimmer's ear." This is basically an infection of the ear canal which can be extremely painful. This can usually be prevented by drying the ears after swimming.

However, should itching or soreness of the ears appear, contact with water in the ears for the duration of the symptoms is not recommended.

Little Theater Lifts Curtain Again Tonight

A hilarious scene in which a cemetery plot salesman winds up making a big sale to a hypochondriac can be seen in the Fort Benning Little Theater Group's production of "Send Me No Flowers."

The show opened Wednesday and will run tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Playhouse, Building 2519.

Many more entertaining scenes arise in the three-act comedy written by Norman Barasch and Carroll Moore and originally titled "After I'm Gone."

From the time the curtain rises things begin to happen to PFC Hal Shaner, whose hypochondria threatens to be more fatal to his marriage than to himself.

When he overhears a doctor diagnose his case as fatal, he immediately tries to persuade his wife, played by Sue Ward, to marry her ex-boyfriend, a wealthy Texas oil man, portrayed by PFC Colin Higgins.

Other persons around which the play revolves are 2nd Lt. Steve Kreisberg, who plays the cemetery salesman; 2nd Lt. Jim Marmon, as the next-door neighbor; Pvt. Charles Picciuti, as the delivery boy; Barbara Peterson as Miss Mason; Peggy Culpepper as "Baby"; Mary Kate Scruggs as Miss Green, and Carolyn Hitt as Miss Jones.

Directed by PFC Ted Martin, the play is the third production by the theater group this season.

Whether Need Is National, Local, Red Cross on Job

Exercise Cloverleaf in Florida, Swift Strike in South Carolina, and the prisoner exchange in Havana, Cuba — in each place members of the American Red Cross at Fort Benning have been on the job.

Frederick C. Conte Jr., senior assistant field director, and Harold Greer, assistant field director, were on hand providing services for 7,000 Army and Air Force personnel at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

At Swift Strike II last year in Southern Carolina, Theodore Alvarez, Harold Greer and Jack Curtis represented the local unit.

George Seamond was sent to Havana to supervise unloading of medical supplies sent in exchange for Cuban prisoners.

These are but a few of the many cases the post's Red Cross office under the guidance of Field Director Harry L. McCulloh Jr. has played a vital role.

In the flooded counties of West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, the post Red Cross workers office has sent George Seamond to help in the feeding and clothing of the homeless.

The post director's office, along with Martin Army Hospital field director's office and the two Red Cross chapters in the civilian community, offers services to the Armed Forces, and civilians in disaster areas. It also provides schooling in such areas as first aid and water safety, along with conducting blood collection programs.

The program of services offered by the Red Cross here is based upon authentic needs not already met by agencies of, or available to the post. The general policy of the Department of the Army is to facilitate the accomplishment of this mission.

During 1962, the four area offices served over 21,000 cases, of which 2,000 received $142,000 in financial assistance.

At the Fort Benning office alone, the Red Cross collected more than 5,500 pints of blood during 1962 for military personnel in hospitals and also for possible civil defense needs.

In addition to services rendered to patients in military medical facilities.

In the recreation program, some 28,000 hours were put in by volunteers last year who helped with parties, entertainment, hobbies and individualized recreation projects for bed patients at Martin Army Hospital.

Mrs. Mildred Erdman heads the hospital office with 11 assistants aiding her. The field director's office on Main Post is comprised of 12 assistant field directors, seven of whom are retired military personnel.

Aiding in the local community is Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, who is a member of the board of directors of the Muscogee County chapter.

Across the land, volunteers give freely of their time and skill in many fields.

President Kennedy summed up the Red Cross role when he said:

"For 100 years, the Red Cross has been a symbol of hope and of help to those in need. Wherever war or disease or disaster have struck, the Red Cross has been there to ease the burden of human suffering.

"Its staff and volunteers have built a tradition of mercy, comfort and kindness.

". . .as the Red Cross begins its second century of service, each of us has the opportunity and the obligation to become a part of this humanitarian tradition. When we help the Red Cross, we help our neighbors and ourselves as well."

Record Set By Reactor

A new record for continuous operation of land-based military power has been set by the Army's PM-2A nuclear power plant at Camp Century, Greenland, 900 miles from the North Pole.

The PM-2A, which was shut down recently, for scheduled maintenance, had been operating without interruption of service since Oct. 30, 1962, a record of 2504 hours of continuous power production. The previous record of 1038 hours had also been set by the PM-2A.

The first of the Army's prefabricated nuclear power plants, PM-2A was installed at Camp Century in the fall of 1960.

The PM-2A was designed and built under the supervision of the Army Nuclear Power Program, a joint Army-AEC project. It is operated by the U.S. Army Polar Research and Development Command.

Officers' Christian Union Conference Is Under Way

The Rev. C. M. Tokatlioglou of Ankara, Turkey, is guest speaker at a conference being sponsored by the Officers' Christian Union.

Sunday, April 7, the Rev. Tokatlioglou will address the Adult Bible Class of the Protestant Sunday School from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in Bldg. 2085.

From 3 to 5 p.m. April 7, there will be an Open House at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Albert H. Krapf, 116-A Butts St.

Free nursery service will be available at Bldg. 2605 during each meeting of the conference.

The Rev. Tokatlioglou was born of Greek parents in Ankara. He was educated at Antioch College in Greece. Following World War I, he traveled and studied in England.

In Arabia and East and West Africa, he worked as a missionary for 10 years among both civilized and primitive peoples, employing his linguistic ability in six languages.

Since 1956, he has lived in the U. S., working with international students at various universities under the auspices of Assistance, Inc., a service organization devoted, in part, to missionary activity among international visitors and students in the United States.

The Officers' Christian Union is composed of officers from all branches of the Armed Forces.

Does Special Cleaning Damage Your Teeth?

By Lt. Col. H. W. Merchant
Preventive Dentistry Officer

Does cleaning damage the teeth?

This question is often asked by patients, therefore it deserves an answer. Let's examine the instruments used in doing the cleaning, and the surface, or tooth, being cleaned.

The instruments can be divided into two types; hand and rotary instruments. The hand instruments are used to remove the tartar, or calculus, from the teeth in large chunks. This tartar varies from slightly solid to the toughness of bone.

The hand instrument is used first to remove gross deposits, then to smooth the tooth surface. In this respect it resembles shaving; the removal of necessary material, and leaving a smooth surface.

The last hand instruments used are usually small files, to relieve the tooth surface of any defects, or roughness.

The rotary instrument is the dental handpiece with a rubber cup and pumice. The purpose here is to further smooth and polish the tooth surface, and to remove any stains present. It cannot touch the heavy deposits, however, so thorough scaling with hand instruments is necessary.

FIRST CHANCE

The 2nd Infantry Division's first major campaign occured when it was rushed to Chateau-Thierry to aid in halting and counterattacking a full scale German drive on Paris.

Now let's talk about the surface on which we have been working. The tartar, or calculus, is a solid substance varying in hardness, dependent upon the length of time it has been present.

The amount of tartar depends upon: (1) self-cleansing of the mouth; and (2) length of time since the previous cleaning.

That tartar below the gumline is most dangerous. It is always a dentist's job to remove the tartar; you cannot do it yourself, but you can prevent its formation by proper brushing.

The tooth is harder than bone; therefore it can withstand the cleaning. A tooth is never damaged by tartar, but gums and bone receive the punishment. This damage continues until all the bone holding the tooth is gone, and the tooth, still "perfect," falls out; or an abscess forms in the bone, causing loss of the tooth.

Cleaning doesn't really affect the teeth at all. It is much like polishing gold, or a similar hard material; and the more highly polished it is, the less chance there is of tarnish, or tartar formation.

Gen. Salet Addresses Class of New 2nd Lieutenants

There are four basic questions which alert young people want answered before choosing a vocation or profession, Maj. Gen. Eugene A. Salet, commanding general of the Army Training Center at Fort Gordon said here March 29.

Speaking to 166 graduates of The Infantry School's officer candidate class No. 2 at 10 a.m. ceremonies at The Infantryman Statue, the two-star general outlined the questions and provided the answers as applied to a possible Army career.

"Is it a career field I would be proud to be in?," was the general's first question.

He contended that pride comes from satisfaction in one's achievements and from the degree of self-respect a man gains from doing his job.

Great Organization

"Another source of pride," the speaker continued, "comes from being a part of a great organization."

"Considering the magnificent and superb achievements of the U.S. Army during its nearly 200 years of service to the nation, it is understandable that we find a deep feeling of satisfaction and pride in those who serve in its ranks," he said.

Gen. Salet reminded the new second lieutenants of the Army's achievements at Chippewa, Omaha Beach and Pork Chop Hill and named illustrious Americans who have worn the Army uniform, including Washington, Lee, MacArthur, Marshall and Eisenhower.

"These great battles and outstanding leaders help make the Army a proud organization," he said.

Gen. Salet's second question was "Does it offer the type work that I'm qualified to do and interested in doing?"

"The Army has more than 385 military occupational specialties today," he stated.

"If a man simply names a line of work he is interested in doing," he said, "chances are that job is being performed in the Army."

Specialized Fields

The speaker explained that in today's modern, complex Army, hundreds of specialized fields are open to qualified men.

"If a U. S. Army officer doesn't get a particular job or a particular promotion he wants because of his educational level, it's because he hasn't taken advantage of the opportunities for self-improvement supplied by the Army," he added.

The general mentioned the correspondence program at the University of Maryland which is available to Army personnel.

He emphasized that officers should study continuously, constantly seek self-improvement to open horizons for themselves.

The third question, "Will it afford me and my family security and a reasonably comfortable standard of living?" was answered in the affirmative.

However, the general emphasized that the Army is not looking for young men who would choose a career simply from a standpoint of comfort and financial security.

"The Army wants men who are ambitious," he said. "We want men who are looking for horizons, men who are oriented to a life of service to their country."

"Is there opportunity for growth, development and achievement?" was the general's final question.

In providing this answer, the general again said that the key was in an officer's desire to improve himself.

"The Army provides 290 educational centers," he said. "In each there is the opportunity for growth, development and achievement."

Honor Grad

Following the address, Gen. Salet awarded the first diploma to the class honor graduate, 2nd Lt. Wilford R. Kirby.

Lt. Kirby received a Certificate of Achievement signed by The Infantry School's assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., an Association of the U. S. Army plaque, a silver bowl presented by the 2nd Student Battalion and a personalized copy of "The Officer's Guide."

Kirby served in the Army as an enlisted man for eight years, reaching the rank of staff sergeant.

Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commandant of The Infantry School, introduced the speaker.

Marksmen Will Fire New M-14

The annual competitive marksmanship program here will welcome a new weapon in 1964 as the official match rifle.

The new M-14 rifle, which is being phased into Army units throughout the world as a basic weapon, will take its place as the official match weapon, replacing the M-1 Garand rifle.

The competitive marksmanship program, which has been found by the Continental Army Command (CONARC) to be the best vehicle for approach to its annual marksmanship training objectives, will not only mean a basic grounding in the new rifle for the participating shooters but also for thousands of others.

The men who take part in the Fort Benning hosted competitive matches have been sifted out through eliminations which start from unit level matches and snowball through battalion or battle group up through post and division level matches to Army area shoots and are culminated at the All-Army competitions.

Through competition, the new weapon will be advanced in the realms of individual progress in shooting skill, in arms and munitions, training and coaching techniques, and a score of other phases of combat proficiency.

Pamphlet Explains Class Q's

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has issued a new pamphlet which explains the Class Q allotment system applicable to pay grades E-4, with less than four years service, through grade E-1.

Numbered 21-47, the pamphlet, dated March 1963, lists who may or may not receive a Class Q allotment, how applications are to be made and by whom, the rates paid according to grade and number of dependents, the proof of dependency required to establish an allotment and many other pertinent facts regarding the Class Q system.

The pamphlet also offers advice on notifying the finance center promptly when the allottee's address changes, what action to take, when a check is lost or stolen, how to get help in completing forms, and lists the addresses of the agencies administering allotments for the various Armed Services and the Coast Guard.

3,000 Expected at Sunrise Service

Hymns, the New Testament record of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ and prayers of dedication will welcome the dawn of Easter Sunday as more than 3,000 post personnel gather at 6:30 a.m. for a Union Sunrise Service at Doughboy Stadium.

The Infantry Center Band, under the direction of CWO Clyde W. White, will play Easter hymns for 15 minutes before the service. "Church Call" will be sounded by the trumpet section of the band.

A combined chapel choir will respond with a call to worship. The choir, directed by James E. Mahaffey, will be comprised of members of the choruses of The Infantry Center, 197th Infantry Brigade, Kelley Hill and Harmony Church No. 1 Chapels. Sgt. Norman Geist will play the organ.

The opening hymn, to be sung by the congregation, will be "Christ the Lord is Risen Today" by Wesley. The band will accompany the hymn.

The responsive reading will be conducted by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Roy D. Hidy, 197th Infantry Brigade chaplain. The reading will close with the singing of the Gloria Patria by the choir.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes, Student Brigade chaplain, will read the Scripture found in Luke 24:1-12.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Roy M. Rowland, 11th Air Assault Division chaplain, will offer the pastoral prayer. The offertory prayer will be said by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James B. Blunk, Martin Army Hospital chaplain.

Following the Easter message, the choir will render the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "The Messiah."

The choir will sing "The Sevenfold Amen" by Stainer, followed by a postlude played by the band.

Cross bearer for the service will be Gordon Hagewood, son of Capt. and Mrs. Eugene Hagewood.

Fifty ushers from The Infantry Center Chapel, under the direction of Col. J. G. Cornett, will serve during the sunrise service.

The Easter sermon will be preached by a man who has served his country as an Army chaplain for 25 years.

Chaplain Decker began preaching while still in high school. He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Regular Army May 14, 1936.

During World War II, he was chaplain of the 12th Armored Division and deputy chaplain for Headquarters, European Command.

Between World War II and the Korean conflict, he served for a year as Third U.S. Army Chaplain at Fort McPherson, Ga.

From Fort McPherson, Chaplain Decker went to Korea, where he was chaplain of I Corps from 1952 to 1954. There were 115 chaplains of

Winners of Essay Contest Named

John Richardson, son of Maj. and Mrs. Thomas O. Richardson, placed first in the finals of an Americanism essay contest at Faith School April 5, winning a $25 bond and $10.

Other finalists in the contest, sponsored by the Fort Benning Chapter of National Sojourners, included Bill Cosby, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. George D. Crosby, second, who received a $25 bond and $5; Cindy Shaw, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Robert C. Shaw, third place, $25 bond; Betty Johnson, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Albert A. Johnson, fourth place, $10, and William Nichols, son of Maj. and Mrs. William L. Nichols' fifth place, $5.

Richardson built his essay around the "Tear in my eye when I see my flag."

He said, "The tear might well be a symbol of a great God-loving country. From the rebellion of our early patriots, who, thought they had no army, were armed with the great weapon of a desire for freedom down through the years, our flag has known many hours of glory. Only once has the flag been pulled down in defeat. On Corregidor, as our soldiers witnessed that tragic event, each man, through his tears, vowed to raise that flag again.

"It was raised again in the Philippines — never to fall again," John continued. "My flag will never fly below any other flag but the flag of my God. Can you blame me for shedding a tear — a tear of joy, when I see my flag?"

Crosby asked the audience to try to imagine what John Glenn felt when he looked at the flag painted on his capsule just before his orbital space flight.

"As for me," Bill said, "the flag makes me unafraid — know my rights and privileges are safeguarded. When I hear the National Anthem and watch the flag flying just before the television station goes off the air late at night, I feel the flag is lighting for me a certain path that God wants me to take. Next time you see the flag, remember all it stands for and have faith."

Cindy Shaw said that living in a foreign country makes an individual realize what the flag really means.

"In Germany a few years ago, I watched parades with flags of many countries," he said. "I watched our flag with a feeling of loyalty, pride and great comfort."

Betty Johnson spoke of a flag, floating in majestic silence, yet speaking to its people of glorious events of the past.

"The only way I can tell you how I feel about the flag is to pretend to be one and speak to you as a flag, thus, 'They carry me in battle — for I give them courage'," she said.

William Nichols said, "When I see my flag I feel lucky — lucky to be alive and free in this great land. There is strife in may lands and some strife even here, but in our country each individual can make his life what he chooses, within the laws of the nation."

Following the contest, the five speakers and their parents were guests of the Sojourners at a dinner at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Fund Drive Totals Still On Upswing

The 1963 National Health Agency and Federal Service Joint Crusade Drive here has topped last year's goal and is still climbing.

Lt. Col. Michael Pavlo, project officer, reports that "although some units are still in the process of turning in tabulations, we have already reached last year's goal of approximately 60 per cent participation. When the final figures are computed we expect a post participation of over 70 per cent."

Col. Pavlo commended the 197th Infantry Brigade and Lawson Army Aviation Command for reaching 100 per cent participation.

The Infantry Center Troop Command, with a unit participation of 89 per cent, and the 428th Medical Battalion, with 80 per cent participation, were also commended.

"Although final figures are not in from the 11th Air Assault Division and 2nd Infantry Division we anticipate their high participation in the drive," said Col. Pavlo.

"All in all, this year's drive has been very successful," concluded the colonel.

Sp4 Gean Named Driver of Month

Post Will Host ROTC Cadets This Summer

Approximately 1,950 ROTC cadets representing six states in the Third Army area and Puerto Rico will begin six weeks summer training June 16.

The cadets will come from some 22 colleges and universities. Most of them are between their junior and senior years and expect to receive their commissions upon graduating from their respective schools.

Camp commander will be Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commandant of The Infantry School and commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Deputy camp commander will be Col. Samuel J. Rasor, professor of military science at the University of Alabama. Assistant deputy camp commander will be Col. Samuel McDowell, professor of military science at Clemson (S.C.) University.

Purpose of the encampment is to put into practice the theories learned at the institutions. The bulk of the cadre will be provided by ROTC cadre officers and non-commissioned officers from the colleges. They will receive cadre support from The Infantry School. The 2nd Infantry Division will furnish aggressors for field problems.

The cadets will be divided into two battalions with five companies each. The company commanders will be commissioned ROTC officers from the colleges and universities.

In addition, each company will have a cadet company commander. This position, plus the other junior-grade positions, will be rotated daily to give all the students some command experience.

The course will contain extensive training in all basic Infantry weapons, chemical, biological and radiological warfare, first aid, maps, aerial photography and terrain appreciation, and tactics.

It will be climaxed by a field problem test which must be successfully completed before the cadet is eligible for a commission. The cadets will spend five nights in the field. The course requires a 45-hour work week.

Fort Benning is one of two posts in the Third Army area which offers a summer ROTC program. The other is Fort Bragg, N.C. The encampment here teaches general military subjects.

Sergeants Set Meet Monday

The Association of Regular Army Sergeants, Barracks 113, will hold its monthly meeting at 5:30 p.m. Monday at Crain Hall NCO Open Mess.

There will be an election to fill vacant offices which are now temporarily held. All members are encouraged to attend and to invite anyone interested in the association.

Maintenance Section Is Created Under G-4

The former Ordnance Section has been designated the Maintenance Section and represents the consolidation of field maintenance repair activities of the engineer, ordnance, quartermaster, signal and transportation technical services.

The consolidation follows, by approximately one year, a similar consolidation of the supply activities of the technical services. This union is part of the recent reorganization of the Department of the Army.

Col. James W. Cochran Jr., formerly the ordnance officer of The Infantry Center, heads the newly established Maintenance Section.

Col. Cochran stated that the maintenance consolidation program consists of three phases.

Lists Phases

Phase I was largely accomplished by the establishment of the new section and the appointment of Col. Cochran as chief.

Phase II consists of consolidation of similar activities and functions within existing facilities. The Maintenance Section is in the process of accomplishing Phase II.

"The third phase," according to Col. Cochran, "will be the establishment of a central maintenance complex incorporating all field maintenance repair activities in one area. Field maintenance support ranging from such equipment as tanks, aircraft, shelter halves and radios could be obtained in this one area."

Local implementation of Phase II has already accomplished consolidation of some activities formerly operated by two or more of the technical services.

Such activities as canvas, fuel and electrical repair, battery servicing and small power equipment repair have been affected by Phase II.

Army's Chief of Chaplains Sends Easter Greetings

Historic records have identified many burial places more pretentious than the garden tomb in which our Lord was laid to rest on that first black Friday. The Pyramids of Egypt and the Taj Mahal of India, with all their resplendent beauty are, nevertheless, reminders that those who were buried therein were obedient to death.

The tomb in Joseph's garden, surpassed in outward splendor by many, is more glorious than all. With its message "He is risen," it is the witness that Christ conquered death. It is for us the garden of victory.

This open tomb is a constant reminder that Our Lord, graciously accepted what finite man thought was the worst the world had to offer, and has set at naught the power of sin and death. The evil forces, seeking to enslave the bodies and destroy the souls of men today, will ultimately give way to the triumphant Christ. St. Paul catches the full sweep of the victorious Christ over the tragedy of death when he says, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

May God grant each of you a victorious Easter.

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles E. Brown Jr.
Chief of Chaplains, United States Army

Post Chaplain Sends Message for Easter

Everywhere the disciples of Jesus Christ travelled they preached the Resurrection from the dead, for the fact of Christ's Resurrection has brought the young Church into existence. In the retelling of that gospel message wherever Christians go lies the hope of the whole world. The Resurrection was not a dogma or a theory. It was a historical fact, for more than 500 people saw Jesus after His Resurrection. Since this gospel is the hope of the world, it is your hope, also. In the Spirit of Easter, God's blessings are my hope for each and every one of you.

There is too much talk in the Senate, or at least Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) is of that opinion. The Minnesota Senator has come up with a proposal for an eardrum-saving change in the rules. It is a short cut on the kind of speeches that are made with only a few other senators on hand. Instead of delivering the speech, a Senator would merely motion to a page boy to take the text to the clerk for insertion in the Congressional Record.

A program to create a Youth Conservation Corps similar to the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930's has been set for Senate floor action. The program would enroll up to 15,000 during the first of its proposed five years of existence.

The Senate also is considering another Youth Program to establish work for youths in their home communities. It is expected nearly 60,000 will participate during the first year. The program could expand or relax according to Congressional action.

In the House, Customs Commissioner Philip Nichols Jr. told a House Appropriations subcommittee that his agency wanted $5P,500 in its new budget to hire nine interpreter-hostesses to help incoming travelers get through the ordeal of customs. Nichols said foreign travelers who cannot speak English, handicapped persons, women with children and others often need help atthe customs barrier.

The Pentagon backed legislation providing increased protection to military families against eviction from rented facilities in cases of a court order.

DOD backing came on legislation to amend the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act. It would raise the monthly amount a service family can pay for rent without fear of eviction from $80 to $125.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D-Tex.), who noted that the eviction clause in the act had not been changed since 1940.

Jonas Salk's Vaccine Is Aid to All Mankind

A grateful country and indeed all the world noted the anniversary of one of the most important days in medicine's long crusade against disease. Ten years ago: March, 1953, Dr. Jonas E. Salk of the University of Pittsburgh announced to the National Foundation for Infantile Parelysis in New York that he had developed a new vaccine capable of immunizing people against poliomyelitis.

To a country of people who qualied each summer as the polio season (remember it?) approached, who bad grown used but not accustomed to the sight of children crippled by polio and heartsick at accumulations of 30,000 to 40,000 cases of polio each year, and who had devoted years, endless energy and money in millions seeking a defense against the disease, the announcement brought a great feeling of relief, hope, and triumph. Now 10 years later, despite the stubborn skepticism of many and the initial difficulties in distribution, figures on immunology show that there was indeed reason for rejoicing.

Poliomyelitis — infantile paralysis — is a relative rarity today. The year before the development of the Salk vaccine was announced 57,740 cases were recorded.

The Salk vaccine, now time tested, is yet another victory for mankind over disease. (AFPS)

Don't Be Haphazard In Personal Affairs

There hasn't been a blaze in East Junket Falls for nigh onto 35 years—not since Caleb Thatcher's corn crib caught fire—and the volunteer firemen kind of let things slip.

They forgot where they put their hoses, their axes and their fire engine. The town hall is blazing away to cinders—and they aren't prepared for the emergency.

How about you? How tidy are your affairs?

If you should die tomorrow (and who can assure you that you won't?) do your dependents know where all your records are located?

Where's your birth certificate? Your insurance policy? Your tax receipts? Your marriage license? Your employment records?

Oh, they're around some place? You can't tell anybody where these vital records are when you're six feet under the turf.

Death, accident and illness can strike swiftly—without warning. Why not spend the next week arranging your personal affairs? Make out a will. Put it along with your other personal records in a safe place. And tell your dependents where they can be found.

The Boy Scouts are right, brother. Be Prepared! (AFPS)

Chaplain's Corner

Paschal Time

By Chaplain (Capt.) James A. Peterman

At the Seder meal celebrated last Monday by Jewish personnel here as it was throughout our country and the rest of the world by Jews and their friends, attention was focused upon the mighty hand of God who delivered the Israelites from slavery in the land of Egypt. Freedom is the keynote to the Passover meal which is the Last Supper that Christ ate with his chosen twelve in the Upper Room.

On Easter Sunday Christians throughout the world rejoice in the great victory of Jesus Christ's Resurrection which guarantees his follower's a release from the bondage of sin and death. Freedom from the devil, sin, and death — a new life — are the keynotes of Easter Joy.

Freedom given us by the hand of God is a common bond relating the religious celebrations of Jews and Christians during the Pashal season. The relationship between the Seder Meal and the Eucharist however goes much deeper, Christian theologians recognize a direct relationship in the Old Testament events to the Passion, Death, and Resurrection of Christ. Therefore, it could be most helpful not only to a better community spirit of fellowship to appreciate the Seder meal by an exchange of views with our Jewish friends in the community, hut also could deepen the understanding of our own faith — particulary in regards to the Holy Eucharist.

Blood was the price of freedom in both instances. The Exodus from Egypt came about by the smearing of the blood of a lamb upon the door posts of the homes of the Israelites. Redemption of mankind resulted from the Crucifixion where the blood of the Lamb of God flowed from the wood of the cross.

Lift up your hearts then, O free and ransomed. Be filled with joy in great appreciation of all the blessings of freedom given us by the Mighty Hand of God.

DUSA Nursery Offers Services to Red Cross

The Fort Benning Chapter of the Society of the Daughters of the U.S. Army (DUSA) plays a "behind-the-scenes" role in assisting the American Red Cross to secure and retain volunteers for duty at Martin Army Hospital and various clinics on post.

Many ladies wish to volunteer their services to the Red Cross but their budget would not allow an additional expense of baby-sitting for the hours the mother would be away from the home.

In 1962 Tot Town Nursery and DUSA absorbed over $1000 in fees for free child care extended to children of Red Cross volunteers. With a registration of more than 1900 children in the first three months of 1963, over $500 has been absorbed in fees.

Early in 1963 DUSA initiated a new service for Tot Town Nursery which has already been used and proven. The nursery remains on a 24-hour stand-by for emergency child care in coordination with Martin Army Hospital in event one or more parent should be hospitalized and there is no immediate family to care for the children of the hospitalized parents. Assistance is asked for through official channels of the hospital, the staff duty officer of The Infantry Center and then to DUSA.

When the need for the child care is seen, the child or children are taken to the nursery and kept there until a relative or a friend can take them.

Both Tot Town Nursery and the Commissary Nursery, non-profit post services, are subsidized by DUSA and receive money from no other organization. The minimum fee charged by the nurseries for children other than children of Red Cross volunteers is supplemented by the donation of $3,000 yearly from the proceeds of DUSA's 49'er Party. Proceeds from this party are DUSA's only source of income.

Besides the free baby care at Tot Town Nursery for children of Red Cross volunteers, DUSA makes contributions to Youth Activities, the Pediatric Ward and Clinic of Martin Army Hospital, various schools on post, the Hunt Club and other worthy organizations.

Brigade Chapel Offerings Earmarked for Orphanage

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Roy D. Hidy
197th Brigade Chaplain

The question has been asked: "Where is the money going that we contribute to the church?"

Worshippers at the 197th Brigade Chapel and Harmony Church Chapel One can rest assured their contributions this Easter Sunday will be going to a worthy cause. The Easter offering will help a group of Korean orphans grow to become strong and independent adults.

The war was raging in Korea for a year and many Koreans died. A large number of children lost their parents. They needed homes, food, clothes and money for schooling.

It is a terrible feeling to need help and not to receive it. Many children never received the much needed help. Some of them were helped by those who understood the importance of the help they are able to give.

NEW WO . . . Charles A. Montane took a big step in rank recently when promoted from sergeant to warrant officer. Pinning the new bars on WO Montane's collar were Lt. Col. John H. Linden, commander of 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery, 11th Air Assault Division, and Sgt. Maj. James A. Smith.

Perhaps the most wonderful assistance given to the orphans came from So Lim Kwak, a Korean, who understood the needs of the children.

So Lim Kwak, only 19 years old at the time, in 1951, founded a home for 28 homeless children, under the supervision of a U.S. Army chaplain.

The orphanage, called the Garden of Children Orphanage, at Pyong Taek, has received help from American servicemen since its founding and continues to receive it.

The main financial backers of the orphanage are U. S. servicemen. Servicemen built the houses for the homeless children. Food, clothes are bought from the money received through contribution.

Through the wonderful help of servicemen the number of orphans which the home could take care of now is 75. Over 50 of these children are in school.

The Korean school term begins in April, and everyone pays tuition. The tuition for the orphanage for 1963 would be $600, money which must come from contributions.

The Easter offerings received in the 197th Brigade and Harmony Church Chapels will go the orphanage to help pay the cost of tuition, so the children will receive an education, be able to get a better job, have a safer future which will help them to forget the sufferings and sadness which are the lot of orphans.

This is where the money will be sent, all of it, that we are going to receive in the two chapels Easter Sunday.

It is a noble cause, one which helps children to grow to be dependable, valuable adults, and also which helps to remove partially the chips and sorrows they have experienced.

Ohio Boy Scouts to Try Infantry Life During One-Week Visit Here

Activities ranging from camping Army style to witnessing airborne training are in store for 165 Explorer Scouts from Cleveland, Ohio, who will arrive here Sunday at 11 p.m. for a week-long encampment.

The youths, between the ages of 16 and 18, will be on post for a look at Army life. They were selected for the encampment on the basis of their outstanding achievements in schools and Scouting.

The program will get underway bright and early Monday with a 5:45 a.m. reveille. After 30 minutes of exercises, the group will march to Eubanks Field where they will be officially welcomed by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Following Gen. Reynolds' remarks, at 8:05 a.m. the Scouts will witness a demonstration of airborne training staged by instructors in The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department.

At 9:15 a.m. they will move to Wagner Range for demonstrations and familiarization firing of the M-60 machine-gun. After this, at 11 a.m. members of the school's Weapons Department will put on a demonstration of the ENTAC missile.

After lunch, the Scouts will explore a new field when they return to Eubanks Field and participate in some of the actual training given to basic airborne trainees.

Included in this part of the program, which will be conducted by members of the Airborne Department's Tower Sub-Committee, are parachute landing falls, swing landing training, aircraft exiting techniques from mock doors, jumps from the 34-foot tower, and "buddy seat" rides from the 250-foot tower.

The first thing on the itinerary Tuesday is an all-day orientation on marksmanship by the Marksmanship Training Unit. Beginning at 8:30 a.m., the boys, under the supervision of some of the Army's top shooters, will fire .22 and .45 caliber pistols, M-1 rifles and trap guns. The top shot with each weapon will be presented an award.

On Wednesday at 8:05 a.m., the Explorers will tour Lawson Army Aviation Command. The tour will include briefings by LAAC Operations, Detachment 10 of the Air Force's 16th Weather Squadron, and a display of Army aircraft.

At 9:30 a.m., the Scouts will be airlifted to Dekkar Strip and move out to Fryar Field where they will observe students making one of their five qualifying parachute jumps. Later they will watch the pros in a sky-diving exhibition.

At 10:45 a.m., Army pilots will put on a field performance of Caribou and Mohwak aircraft.

Returning to the Main Post, the youngsters will be briefed on the Infantry Officer Candidate program.

Wednesday will be rounded out with a full afternoon program beginning at 1 p.m. with an orientation by the Infantry Center Chaplain Section.

At 2 p.m., The Infantry School's Ground Mobility Department will put on a static display of many of the Army's tracked and wheeled vehicles.

The Company Tactics Committee of The Infantry School's Command and Staff Department will present a live-fire demonstration of an Infantry-tank task force in the attack at 4 p.m.

At 5:40 p.m., the Scouts will bivouac at The Infantry Center Rest Camp. A program, which will include opening ceremony rituals, a country and western vocal group, a movie and a talk on the Indian history of the area, will be presented by The Infantry Center's Special Services Section.

After breaking camp at 8:05 a.m. Thursday morning, the Scouts will move to Goodhope Cemetery where members of the Ranger Department will demonstrate survival techniques.

At 10:15 a.m. at George Watson Field, the Rangers will again swing into action demonstrating hand-to-hand combat and physical fitness techniques.

The 586th Engineer Company will take over that afternoon beginning at 1:15 p.m., with displays and demonstrations of Army engineer equipment.

Orientations and demonstrations by the Judo and Scuba Clubs are also scheduled.

On Friday at 8 a.m., the youths will tour The Infantry School's Communications Department. At 10 a.m., the 428th Medical Battalion will brief them on the operations of a field hospital.

The Command and Staff Department's Engineer Committee will present a two-hour demonstration of river crossing techniques at Victory Pond beginning at 1:15 p.m.

Chapel Field will be the scene of a retreat review and awards ceremony at 5:15 p.m.

Their final night will be highlighted by a dance at the Gold Bar Lounge. The ball, which will be hosted by the Junior Army Daughters of America, will begin at 7:30.

The final day of their visit will begin with a display of Infantry, armor, and artillery vehicular weapons system at the 197th Infantry Brigade.

At 9:15 a.m. the group will go to Bolling Bowl where they will witness a demonstration by the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon.

The close of their visit will take place at the Infantryman Statue beginning at 10:30 a.m. with a talk by Maj. Edward R. Showalter, a member of the Special Subjects Department's Leadership Committee, and holder of the Medal of Honor.

Following the remarks by the Korean conflict hero, the Special Services Section will stage the epic, "I Am the Infantry."

Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will close out the encampment with a farewell address.

Airmen Top MTU Firers At Lackland

LACKLAND AFB, Tex. — The U. S. Air Force Rifle and Pistol Team has served notice on the other three services that they are going to be tough to whip at the National Championships in August at Camp Perry, Ohio.

In the Inter-Service Pistol Matches, held here last week the men in blue clobbered the opposition in the individual matches and captured the team grand aggregate.

In the fired team events, shooters from the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit managed to salvage the Center Fire and .22 caliber team titles but dropped the .22 caliber match to the red-hot Air Force.

It took a fine 298 out of a possible 300-point effort by the Army's SFC William Blankenship, firing in the anchor position, for the soldiers to win the Center Fire match by a single point over the Air Force, 1167 to 1166. The Army's winning score in the .45 caliber match was 1168.

USAF shot an 1183 in the .22 caliber to win by 20 points over second place Army and had an aggregate total of 2509 compared to runnerup Army's 2498.

Capt. Thomas D. Smith made a runaway of the individual championship as he posted a grand aggregate of 2683 out of a possible 2700 points. He also took the individual aggregate in the Center Fire and 455 caliber matches, while his Air Force teammate, Capt. Franklin Green, completed the sweep by winning the .22 caliber aggregate.

SSgt. Awvin Merx, USAF, placed second the aggregate with 2646 effort and Sgt. Blankenship was third with a 2645.

SSgt. Hershel Anderson of MTU grabbed fourth spot with 2637 and TSgt. William H. Mellon, USAF, was fifth with 2635, as Air Force took three of the top five spots.

Army shooters from major commands and post teams fared somewhat better in the lower echelon of competition, taking three titles in the former category and two in the latter.

Callaway Gardens Beach Opens Tomorrow

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — For thousands of Fort Benning soldiers, Saturday is the day to either renew a friendship or to establish one with a visit to a nearby resort which has been called "Georgia's Garden of Eden."

Just 30 miles north of Columbus on U.S. Highway 27 at Pine Mountain, the resort, Callaway Gardens, has a reputation for clean, wholesome family recreation.

And on Saturday, the most famous facility of the gardens, Robin Lake Beach, opens for another season of fun in the sun. Although the gardens are open year-round, the beach and its sparkling, spring-fed swimming lake hold a special attraction for soldiers, their dates, friends and families.

Giant Beach

The beach is the largest man-made beach in the world. Two beautiful pavilions of concrete design and unusual architecture, are Callaway Gardens landmarks — one is a dining pavilion and the other is for spectators for the water ski shows and tournaments held at Robin Lake each summer.

There are three bathhouses, several concession stands and two huge parking lots so that parking is never a problem. Picnic facilities abound in the shade of the tall pines which encircle most of the lake.

At the lake, in addition to swimming and sunbathing, visitors may enjoy boating in canoes or foot-powered pedal boats, water skiing, speed boat rides and other water-connected pleasure. For the children, there is a miniature train and miniature Mississippi River steamboat and, more often than not, there are as many adults aboard as there are children.

Saturday Dances

On May 18, regular Saturday night dances will begin at the Beach Dining Pavilion. And on nearly every Sunday afternoon in the next two months, band concerts will be played at the pavilion.

In mid-June, daily water ski shows will begin and the famed Florida State University Student Circus sets up shop for a summer-long run. These talented collegians present nine shows each week in their aerial and acrobatic circus.

In addition to the beach facilities and attractions, visitors to the gardens may play golf on an 18-hole course and delight in the horticultural aspects of Callaway Gardens which are at their peak at this time of the year.

1,350 MDs Face July, Aug. Draft

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department has announced that 1,350 physicians will be drafted into the Army, Navy, and Air Force in July and August.

It will be the first draft call for physicians since the fall and winter of 1961-62 when 850 medics were called up under Selective Service because of the Berlin crisis.

The Pentagon said the move was necessary because not enough medical-school graduates have volunteered for active duty immediately after their internship.

The majority of the physicians being called will serve as general-duty medical officers.

The Army will draw 800, the Navy 250, and the Air Force 300.

Look Who's Got The Easter Spirit

The 2nd Infantry Division's Security Platoon boasts "the most highly trained and proficient soldiers in the division." But even they are not immune to the spirit of Easter. PFC Charles J. Burkett Jr., (L), seems lost in the beauty of it all, but luckily his friend PFC Bobby E. Mills has the presence of mind to remind division soldiers that they still have a job to do. 38th Starts Jet Trip Home From Germany on Tuesday

By BOB DE CAMARA

"Marnemen" of the 2nd Infantry Division's 38th Infantry will begin arriving by jet aircraft at Turner Air Force Base in Albany, Ga., on Tuesday from Germany. Altogether the arrival of the entire 38th Infantry battle group from Germany is expected to take from Tuesday to Saturday.

The "Indianhead" infantrymen, homeward bound after six months of temporary duty overseas, will motor by chartered commercial bus to Fort Benning and are expected to arrive sometime after 2:30 in the afternoon.

Meet at Benning

Families and friends of members of the returning Rotaplan unit will not be able to meet the planes as they touch down at Turner. The arrival and departure airfield area at Turner is restricted, and dependents are encouraged to remain at Fort Benning for the arrival of the busses.

The seven C-135 jet aircraft transporting the main body of the 38th from Baumholder Post, Germany, to the United States are the same seven planes to be used for flying other division Rotaplan units overseas beginning Monday.

The 2nd's 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry is set for three months duty under the rotation system, and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry faces a six months training period at Baumholder.

Last month, an advance party of the 38th arrived back at Benning, commanded by the battle group executive officer, Lt. Col. Sidney J. Roche, to begin smoothing the way for the turnover in personnel and equipment.

The two battalions designated under Rotaplan for shipment overseas Monday have also dispatched advance parties to Germany.

Col. Holden

The main body of the 38th coming in next week will be commanded by Col. Maurice C. Holden, commander of the 2nd's 38th Infantry.

Since the rotation system's inauguration in October of last year, the "Indianhead" Division has been contributing the bulk of the troops for the Rotaplan concept of worldwide mobility and economy.

Many purposed, Rotaplan not only gives stateside troops an opportunity for available overseas training but gives a practical testing of airlift capabilities and reduces the outflow of U. S. gold reserves. Families of Rotaplan participants are not authorized travel overseas due to the relatively short period of foreign duty involved.

The 38th's "Marnemen" were the pioneers of the rotation system last October. The 38th will return to Fort Benning reorganized but not officially so. During the 38th's absence, the 2nd Division, under ROAD (Reorganization Objectives, Army Division), has scrapped the "pentomic" battle group structure for the highly-mobile, "tailored" battalion structure. In the words of a 2nd Division officer, the 38th will return in a "reorganized posture."

First in ROAD

As the first old-line division to undergo this long-planned change, the "Second to None" is setting the pace for other stateside divisions, including airborne and infantry, which will follow later.

In Germany, members of the "Indianhead" Division can expect training of a type unavailable in the United States, training of a type participated the 38th. The presence of Communists forces poised behind the Iron Curtain lends added realism to all maneuvers.

Units of the 7th U. S. Army also possess a mechanized mobility only beginning to be realized, through ROAD, in the continental United States. Built up over the years as a potent force for negotiating the European flatlands, Europe - based American troops maneuver with a speed and precision mobility that adds up to valuable experience for any unit able to participate.

In the words of the assistant commander of the 2nd Division, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, a much-decorated veteran of European campaigns, "I consider it an important experience to have the opportunity to train there."

Artillery Sgt. Top Graduate Ranger Class

A 2nd Division Artillery sergeant has been named honor graduate from Fort Benning's Ranger School Class Seven.

Commended by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, Sgt. Gary D. Helgeson was picked from members of his class as top in command performance and leadership. He is a chief computer in the fire direction center for Battery C, 38th Artillery.

A native of Miami, Fla., Sgt. Helgeson entered the Army in January 1961. Before entering the Army he attended the University of Wisconsin, majoring in geology.

The 24-year-old sergeant was cited for "outstanding performance indicating sound command and leadership principles, and a high spirit of enthusiasm in application of normal infantry tactics and techniques to small unit operations under simulated combat conditions."

The citation stressed the realistic, rough and to a degree, hazardous conditions of the Ranger instruction.

Round Trip Over After 15 Years

By 87th Infantry PIO

A 15-year round trip has just been completed by a member of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

First Sgt. Loransia D. Bowen, new first sergeant at Headquarters and Headquarters Company, returns to Fort Benning after 15 years service. It was here that this native of Glennville, Ga., enlisted into the Army in January 1948.

Since that time he has traveled with the Army through duty in Japan, Korea and the Canal Zone.

After completing basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C., Sgt. Bowen was assigned duty in the Far East. He went to Korea in 1956.

In 1960 the sergeant served with the 29th Infantry at Fort Clayton, Canal Zone. During that assignment he studied jungle warfare at Fort Sherman, Canal Zone, where he received the Jungle Expert Certificate.

Bloodmobile To Visit 2nd

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile will visit the 2nd Infantry Division April 18 and 19.

Second Division units will donate blood voluntarily on those dates between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. The bloodmobile will be located at Service Club Two on Sand Hill.

The division's 2nd Medical Battalion is in charge of overall supervision of the blood-giving plan. Coffee and cookies for donors will be supplied by the Red Cross officer at The Infantry Center.

Five major units are scheduled to give blood on the first day. They are the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry; the 7th Cavalry, Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade; Division Artillery and Division Support Command.

On April 19, six units are scheduled: the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry; 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry; 1st Infantry; 2nd Engineer Battalion; 122nd Signal Battalion; and Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade.

In addition, division Headquarters and Headquarters Company, the 2nd Military Police Company and the 2nd Aviation Battalion may donate with any of the scheduled units. Attached units may also donate with any scheduled units.

Throughout 2nd Division

Easter Season Services Continue Through Sunday

Holy Week services, both Catholic and Protestant, will continue to be held throughout the division today and tomorrow, climaxing Easter morning when representatives from all division units will take part in the Easter Sunrise Service at Doughboy Stadium.

Today at 1 p.m. for Protestants the Seven Last Words of the Cross will be observed at Sand Hill Chapel Four, and at the Kelley Hill Chapel special Good Friday services will be held beginning at 2 p.m.

For Good Friday

For Catholics today the Good Friday Liturgy will be observed at the Kelley Hill Chapel at 1 p.m. and at 3 p.m. at Sand Hill Chapel Two. Stations of the Cross will be held at Sand Hill Chapel Two beginning at 8 p.m.

Tomorrow night Catholics will have a chance to attend Holy Saturday Ceremonies beginning at 11 p.m. at Sand Hill Chapel Two followed by midnight mass. The other masses for Easter Sunday will follow the regular Sunday schedule.

The Eastern Sunrise Service will begin at 6:30 a.m. and all division members and their families are cordially invited to attend. Other Protestant services will follow the regular Sunday schedule in all division chapels.

During the past week Protestants have been attending special Holy Week services at Sand Hill Chapel Four. The service was a four-night symposium taking in sequence the events of Christ's last week. Monday celebrated the "Day of Authority" when Christ drove the money changers out of the temple; Tuesday celebrated the "Day of Arguments" when Christ debated with the scribes and Pharisees; Wednesday celebrated the "Day of Meditation" when Christ went to the house of Lazarus to rest; Thursday celebrated the "Day of Fellowship" when the Last Supper was recommemorated. This last service was also given at the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Throughout Lent Protestant and Catholic services have been held in the division with special masses and Stations of the Cross for Catholics, and the Wednesday night Ten Commandments sermons for Protestants.

BATTALION'S BEST . . . Picked April Soldier-of-the-Month for the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, is Sgt. Fred L. Baker, a member of Company B.

Easter Season Is Springtime of Religion

By Chap. (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser
2nd Division Chaplain

Easter is the "springtime" of religion. All winter the brown grass has looked so desolate, denuded trees with barren limbs have stood out bleak and forlorn.

And then as nature awakens the flowers begin to bloom, dogwood blossoms cover the country side, birds resume their early morning songs and the trees turn green as new life begins to unfold upon their branches.

So it with his spiritual life. His Lord was arrested and tried; convicted and crucified; then buried in a tomb. With his burial went the hopes of a Messiah, all the dreams of the "Kingdom of God" on earth. Now was gone man's hope of eternal life and all he had left to face was the barren hillsides and the poverty of his existence.

But that was not to be the end.

The word begins to spread early in the morning of that third day — the tomb was open and empty — the Lord had been seen by many and others — He had risen as He had said He would. There was hope and there was life because God in his infinite wisdom had proved He was victorious over death. Man need no longer dream of immortality — here was immortality in truth. The "Springtime" had come and now there was new life and new hope and new light. This was the Easter of many Easters and man continues to live in the assurance that because "I live, ye shall live also."

Questionnaire Out Pushing Library Week

National Library Week will be observed by the 2nd Infantry Division with appropriate programs and ceremonies. Planning is underway now to underline the national emphasis on Library Week, April 21 to 27, at the division's libraries on Sand Hill and Kelley Hill.

Questionnaires are being distributed to all division units in order "to obtain a frank opinion on our activities" that the libraries "will be in the position to fit our policies to the demands of the military community."

Personal Fulfillment

The official theme of National Library Week for the Armed Forces, as outlined by Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, U.S. Army chief of staff, will be the "American concept that libraries are an important source for the personal fulfillment, self - education and intellectual development of each individual within the military service."

All Army libraries come under the Army's special services branch.

All Below Sergeant Tested by Company Before Revamping

By 1st Infantry PIO

Individual proficiency testing was held by 1st Infantry's Company C last week for all men below the grade of sergeant. This informal testing was planned and conducted entirely by the company.

Consisting of six stations, men were tested on artillery fire weapons proficiency, map and compass reading, Code of Conduct and general orders, hand and arm signals and Chemical - Radiological - Nuclear warfare.

Confirmation of these basic skills by Company C, together with record fire of their new M-14 rifles, is part of the final training before upcoming reorganization into battalion structure under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Sponsors Contest

87th Is Naming Its Newspaper

By 87th Infantry PIO

A no-expense paid vacation in sunny Georgia has been offered as top prize for members of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry. Why the prize? For naming their battle group newspaper, recently published as "Question Mark, Volume I, Number I."

Officials of the 87th boast that the rules for their contest are simple. "Simply enter your suggestion on the form provided along with your name, rank, service number and unit. Then tear off the top of a two-and-one-half ton truck and send it along."

"Question Mark" editor, PFC Kenneth D. Goodman, emphasizes that only members of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry may enter proposed titles. "Conqueror," the name of the 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry newspaper, is spoken for by members of the 1st Battalion, 87th.

"The name submitted should reflect unit pride and Esprit de Corps although humorous names are not eliminated solely on that basis."

23rd Battalion Chaplain Drawn From 2nd's Ranks

Capt. Lee A. Smith arrived at the unit from the 87th Infantry on Kelley Hill. Capt. Smith is 33 years old and hails from Fayetteville, N. C. In 1952 he graduated from Campbell Junior College and went to Wake Forrest College receiving his Bachelor of Science degree in 1954. Upon graduation he attended the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary and graduated with a Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1957. During this time he attended Broughton Mental Hospital in Morganton, N. C. to take clinical training.

The captain has pastored in Fayetteville and Cherryville, N. C. prior to entering the service in February 1961.

Big Indianhead Ladies Compile New Cookbook

What's cooking at Fort Benning?

It's the Ladies of the Big Indianhead's new cookbook, recently received from the presses and soon available to all in the Columbus - Fort Benning area.

Mrs. Charles Billingslea, wife of the 2nd Division commander, initiated the sale by buying three books from Mrs. Clyde Hardin, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the committee in charge of the project.

The project began several months ago and was immediately and enthusiastically endorsed by the "Big Indianhead" membership. Approval was received from post authorities to solicitate advertisement from local merchants, a publishing house was contacted, and recipe blanks were made up and sent out for the ladies to submit their favorite receipes.

All money collected from the sale of the cookbook will be given to the Retarded Children's Classes of the Fort Benning Children's Schools.

Inclosed in the attractively bound book is a history of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead compiled by Mrs. Joe M. Foy, a list of active and associate members, executive officers and committee chairman, and the club's honorary members.

Ladies of Engineer Bn. Hold Monthly Coffee

The 2nd Engineer Battalion held their monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. Joseph J. Ezell. She and Mrs. Daniel A. Gale were co-hostesses.

The president, Mrs. William H. Casey, conducted a meeting, during which plans for hostessing May's 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club were discussed.

It was announced that Mrs. Arthur G. Howard Jr. will hostess this month's bridge party.

A guest, Mrs. J. T. Searey was introduced to the group by her daughter, Mrs. Kenneth E. Roberts.

Farewells were extended by Mrs. Carter and trays presented to Mesdames James M. Garvin Jr., Arthur G. Howard Jr., and Kenneth E. Roberts.

Distaff Profile

Indianhead's President Active Worker in Division

By VIRGINIA FREEMAN

Learning the American way of life through participation in organized groups at Fort Benning best describes the interest and enthusiasm that Mrs. James A. Scott has for her role as Army wife in her newly adopted country.

Mrs. Scott, wife of acting Sgt. Maj. James A. Scott, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, is president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead.

From Wurzburg

Born in Wurzburg, Germany, a city noted especially for its castles and bridges, Mrs. Scott and her family soon moved to Munich. Here she began her schooling which took her through grammar school, "Oberschule" and secretarial school.

Upon graduation from secretarial school, Mrs. Scott was employed as executive secretary of a large real estate firm in Munich.

In 1959, she became the bride of MSgt. James A. Scott, then an instructor at an engineering school in Murnau.

An interesting sidelight to the marriage is that two separate ceremonies were performed. The civil ceremony was performed in Munich, with a church ceremony taking place later in Murnau.

GERMAN-BORN
Mrs. Scott

Before embarking for America, the Scotts travelled to Switzerland, Italy and Austria.

Mrs. Scott, who comes from a musical family, was unable to realize what seemed to have been an almost inborn desire — the desire to become a ballerina. However, she greatly appreciates the performing arts and is proud to point out that her brother did become a concert singer.

Mrs. Scott is thoroughly enjoying her first tour of duty here in Columbus. Her days are filled with versatile activities. Besides being president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, she is serving her fourth consecutive term as secretary-treasurer of the Indianhead's Bowling League. She will begin working shortly as a volunteer staff aid at Martin Army Hospital.

For more relaxing enjoyment she is a member of the social club composed of German ladies. At their meetings, they enjoy German pastry and perhaps reminisce a little.

Wives' Club Give Gifts For Babies

A donation was made by the 2nd Division Officers Wives Club toward the purchase of materials needed for making layettes to be given to needy mothers at Martin Army Hospital.

Women of the 2nd Division will sew the nightgowns, sacques, and receiving blankets. The remainder of money will be used for purchase of diapers and undershirts.

When the layettes are completed they are gift-wrapped and handed over to the obstetrical staff of Martin Army Hospital, who give them to new mothers at their own discretion. There is no follow-up to the gift, and the mothers are not questioned before receiving the present.

New Group Has Coffee

The first meeting of the Supply and Transport Battalion was a coffee held in the home of Mrs. Walter Hibbard.

The combined group was formerly two separate units in Division Trains: the 13th Transportation Battalion and the 2nd Quartermaster Co.

Mrs. John V. Stoecker served as hostess with Mrs. Hibbard. Highlighting the table for the event was a silver bowl filled with dogwood. The ladies spent some time planning for their future meetings.

Tummies Down

To reduce waist and stomach, a good exercise is to lie on your back, and place your hands on your hips. Raise your legs straight up in the air. Keeping knees straight, swing both legs together first to the left, then to the right like a pendulum. Do as many of these as possible every day for quick results.

DivArty Ladies Have Luncheon

The Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the setting for the recent luncheon of the Ladies of Division Artillery.

Hostesses for the affair were members of the 15th Artillery, headed by Mrs. John M. Evans.

The theme of the day was "Your Easter Bonnet", and the decorations committee was directed by Mrs. William Lundberg. The fresh spring colors of yellow and green offset the Easter hats.

The head table had an arrangements of yellow gladiolas and greenery based in a straw hat as its centerpiece.

Mrs. Ralph K. Jones welcomed new members and said farewell to Mrs. Donald Gray, who is leaving in May.

702nd Ladies Serve Brunch

At a recent brunch at the home of Mrs. Vester Shuman the wives of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion welcomed Mrs. Walter M. Boyles and Mrs. Bernard S. Drebber. Mrs. William M. Sanders acted as co-hostess, and Mrs. Philip Taft, wife of the commanding officer of the battalion, served the guests.

At their monthly coffee in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess, Mrs. Fred T. Mullins was introduced to the ladies of the Ordnance. A spring basket filled with daffodils and dogwood decorated the serving table at which Mrs. Daniel Pride poured.

Mrs. John P. Crawford and Mrs. Charles W. Johnson acted as hostesses.

COOK of the WEEK

For the festive Easter Sunday dinner, this week's "Cook of the Week", Mrs. Warren G. Freeman, First Vice President of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, has submitted two of her special treats, herb bread and angel pie. She suggests serving these with a menu of minted fruit juice, baked ham with current jelley, glazed sweet potatoes, buttered asperagus and molded garden salad.

HERB BREAD

Measure into a mixing bowl, ¼ cup of warm water (not hot). Add, stirring to dissolve, one package of active dry yeast. Stir in. . .

¾ cup lukewarm milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon sage
2 teaspoon caraway seeds
2 tablespoon soft shortening
Half of 3 to 3¾ cup sifted flour

Stir with spoon until smooth. Add enough remaining flour to handle easily. Mix with lard.

Turn onto lightly floured board, knead, let rise and shape as for white bread. Let rise in pan until almost double (about one hour). Bake until dark brown.

ANGEL PIE

In preparing the angel pie, follow a basic meringue tarte. Beat together until frothy, 3 egg whites and ¾ teaspoon of cream of tartar. Gradually beat in, a little at a time, cup sugar. Beat until very stiff and glossy. Tint, if desired, with food coloring. Bake and cool. Temperature — 275 degrees (very slow oven) Time — 60 minutes. Turn off oven and leave in until cool.

Follow recipe above for Angel Pie, except use 4 eggs (whites). Spread with lemon filling. Top with cup whipping cream, stiffly whipped. Chill about 12 hours before serving.

Finger Protector

If you have a cut or bruise on your finger, tape a roller-type curler over the bandage while doing housework. This will protect the finger from painful knocks and will keep the bandage clean.

Defrosting Hint

When defrosting the refrigerator — use a frying pan with hot water so you can heat the pan on the stove and put it back in freezer compartment when water has cooled.

Shooters Victorious in Tennessee

By Tom Higgins

The 2nd Division's Marksmanship Detachment fired their way to a team victory at the Oak Ridge Early Bird Rifle Tournament recently. The tournament was highlighted when the "Indianhead" marksmen took first place in the Master Team competition and were presented with a bronze and hardwood trophy for this achievement.

"I'm very pleased," says Lt. Ray Carney, marksmanship detachment commander. "The competition was very keen, especially with the limited amount of practice we've had."

The 2nd Division Marksmanship Detachment was formed only a month ago; composed of the division's most skilled marksmen.

Other Competitors

The team beat out such rivaling competitors as the 82nd Airborne Corps, the XVIII Airborne Corps, Redstone Arsenal, XII Corps, Fort Gordon, Fort Rucker, Clarkesville Naval Depot, Vanderbilt High Power (civilian), and Tennessee National Guard.

The twelve marksmen representing the 2nd Divison at the Oak Ridge Tournament were selected for their proficiency which they demonstrated during the practice session held in the past week on the post ranges.

The team included Lt. Ray Carney, Maj. Bernard S. Dreber, ordnance officer, 702nd maintenance Battalion, attached to the team only for competitive matches; SFC Albert Chapman, SFC Richard Tompkins, SFC Burl Branhan. SFC William Thornton, SSgt. Robert Little, Sgt. Barnabas Csikora, Sgt. D. L. Crowell, Sp5 Jodie Price, Spt Gary Peacock, and PFC Charles Pickel. All of these men also participated in the individual matches as representatives of the division.

Match One — 200 Yard Slow Fire — 3rd place, unclassified, Pickel, firing 95 (3V); 3rd place, Master, Branhan, firing 97 (2V). Match two — 200 Yard Rapid Fire — 6th place, Master, Czikora firing 100 (7V). Match Three — 500 Yard Rapid Fire — Open winner, Crowell firing 100 (11V). Match Four — 600 Yard Slow Fire — 3rd place, Master, Crowell 99 (15V); 4th place, Master Tompkins, firing 99 (11V); 6th place, Master, Czikora 97 (14V). Match Five — 600 Yard Slow Fire — 5th place, Master, Crowell, firing 97 (12V); 6th place, Master, Branhan, firing 97 (11V). Match Six Master Team Competition National Match Course — 1st Master Team, firing 960 (65V), firing member Crowell; firing member Price; firing member Czikora; firing member Branhan; Coach Little; Team Captain Carney. Match Seven Grand Aggregate Total Score 500 Point Possible — 3rd place, Crowell, firing 467 (47V); 55th Place; Branhan, firing 457 (37V).

A "V" is similar to firing a "Center Bull" on a target. It is used as a tie breaker when two or more riflemen fire the same percentage score.

Rocky Has Come Home

ROCKY MARNE
With Lt. Malo

By 87th Infantry PIO

PFC Rocky Marne has come home to the 38th to live as donkey's life among fellow "Rocks" of that Marne unit.

While the 38th Infantry traveled to Europe under the Army's Rotaplan unit rotation system, Rocky Marne, the unit mascot, was placed on temporary duty orders to the 26th Infantry and made an honorary "Blue Spader."

The 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, inherited him after the division began its reorganization.

The latest transfer of authority was accomplished by 1st Sgt. Frank Trujillo of the 87th's Company A, bringing Rocky back to Lt. Armand E. Malo, of Headquarters company, 38th Infantry. Lt. Malo is a member of the advance party of the 38th, arriving back recently from Germany.

In returning the unit's mascot, 1st Sgt. Trujillo reported that he was accepted as one of the men and had accompanied the unit on field maneuvers often leading the way on road marches.

Safety Program Sparked By Captain From Okinawa

By Bob deCamara

An airborne infantry officer graduate of the U. S. Military Academy has arrived at the 2nd Infantry Division from Okinawa to take over as division safety officer.

Capt. David E. Depew, West Point class of 1958 and a graduate of Fort Benning's Airborne and Ranger courses, has been assigned to the general staff personnel section and will handle an expanded division safety program.

New Council

Under the new program, a division safety council will be called to session no less than four times a year by the 2nd's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea. At these meetings, detailed reports by general and special staff officers and the division safety officer will be reviewed.

Capt. Depew's report will indicate "deviations from target rate objectives, so as to permit an appraisal of the safety program effectiveness."

Graduating from West Point, the captain received training at the U. S. Army Artillery and Missile School, Fort Sill, Okla. Following Airborne and Ranger training, Capt. Depew received an initial assignment as mortar platoon leader with the 82nd Airborne Divison's 503rd Airborne Infantry as a mortar platoon leader. In July 1961, he requested and received transfer from the Army's artillery branch to the infantry, becoming a rifle platoon leader. Two months ago, Capt. Depew left Okinawa for the 2nd Infantry Division.

A varsity lacross player at West Point, the captain is married and has an 18-month-old daughter. Capt. Depew, his wife, Mary Jean, and their daughter, Ann, will live on the Fort Benning reservation.

NCOs Visit; Teach Radar Operations

By Bob deCamara

Radar section chiefs and senior operators of the 2nd Infantry Division recently went through a condensed course in ground surveillance radar taught by three visiting noncommissioned officers from Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Fort Huachuca is the home of the Army's Combat Surveillance and Target Acquisition Training Command. "Refinements" in the operation of new short and medium range radar equipment made up the teaching mission of Hiuachuca's three representatives, SFC James R. Curreo, SFC Lavor D. Bennett and SSgt. Francis H. J. MacDonnell.

Instruct Chiefs

Reorganization of the 2nd Division has necessitated placing some inexperienced personnel in radar sections. Object of the four-day course, which normally takes three weeks, is to instruct crew chiefs to take over the training of their radar unit members.

Practical instruction was given out-of-doors on Kelley Hill in the techniques of operation of short range "Silent Sentry" ground radar set and medium range radar set. These two sets are standard equipment for maneuver elements of the "Second to None" Division.

Air Force Fighters to Support 72nd

By Bob deCamara

Four supersonic Air Force fighter planes will provide tactical air support Wednesday at Fort Stewart, Ga., for attacking tank columns of the 2nd Division's 1st Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor. The 72nd Armor has been at Fort Stewart for the past month for Army Training Tests.

First Unit

Last week the division's 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry became the first division unit to receive tactical air support from the planes of the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing based at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla.

The fighter aircraft's "column cover" during the tank battalion's test attack phase will mark the end of the tankmen's month-long stay at Fort Stewart for training and testing and will be the second meeting for weekly training of the men of the Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Division and the planes of the Tactical Command's 12th Tactical Fighter Wing.

Next week at Fort Benning, the "Second to None's" 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry becomes the third "Indianhead" unit to train in conjunction with the swept-wing jets of the 12th.

Controlling the aircraft from a tank by radio will be one of the division's two permanent forward controllers, Air Force Capt. Arthur W. Webb.

Varying from the previous week when the aircraft simulated attacks on designated targets, this week's aircraft will fly protection for the "attacking" tank column and make simulated runs on targets as they become available.

Last week the jets began their mission taking off from MacDill and flying to the Bahamas area in the Atlantic Ocean for refueling before they flew north to Benning and twenty minutes of simulated combat in training with the 2nd's 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

Georgia's number three ranking singles event bowler is the 2nd Infantry Division special services officer as a result of a state tournament concluded Sunday at Victory Lanes in Columbus.

Virgil Peterson led the singles event in the 14th Annual Georgia State Men's Bowling Tournament for three weeks before dropping to the three spot in the final hours of the matches.

Peterson bowled a 699 series, eight points below Byron Dantzler of Dalton who swept into the state championship striking out in his last three frames.

A graduate of Trinity University in San Antonio, Tex., and a competitor in San Antonio bowling leagues, Peterson, the division sports chief, was ousted from first place in the Georgia tournament in the last afternoon of the month-long weekends contest.

Before entering the service, Peterson officiated sports in the Sunday School Athletic Association, the largest church sports organization in the United States.

Since being assigned to Benning, he has been active with the Division Trains bowling league, rolling for the league-leading post office team.

Gene Rogers was the big man as he pulled up from 10th place to the top spot with a 12-game pinfall of 2336 and a 194 average. Gene pulled ahead of Mike Christie whose 12-game pinfall totaled 2296. A surprising third was Ed Lee with a 2285. Bill Storey remained in fourth place with a 2249. In fifth place was 2231 was Dick Abraham.

The high series for the day went to Gene Rogers who bowled a torrid 643. High game was also grabbed by Gene with a 256. John Mason's effort gave him a high game of 252.

TIC Major Unit-Level Baseball Program Is Set

The 1963 Infantry Center baseball program here will consist of a major unit-level league and exhibition games that may be scheduled during the season.

League play will be from May 15 through Aug. 10. At the completion of the season, an all-star team will be selected from participants in the league to represent the post in the Third Army Baseball championship Tournament here Aug. 26 through 30.

Maj. Roger L. Miller, Infantry Center Special Services officer, is responsible for the conduct of the baseball program.

Season Divided

The major unit baseball league will be divided into halves of play. The winner of each half will play a best two out of three game series for the championship.

If the same team is the winner of both halves, this team will be declared the league champion.

The second place team will be determined on the basis of the highest total games won in both halves.

If two or more teams are tied in total games won, a single elimination play-off will be conducted.

The following major unit teams will comprise the 1963 Infantry Center League: Center Troop Command, Student Brigade, 197th Infantry Brigade, 428th Medical Battalion and Martin Army Hospital.

Each unit will be limited to 20 playing members, a coach, manager and trainer.

A meeting of team coaches and major unit athletic and recreation officers of teams represented in the league will be held at 1:30 p.m. May 1 at Briant Wells Field House to discuss the administrative details.

Professional baseball playing rules will govern competition.

Appropriate teams and individual awards will be presented to the winners and runners-up.

ISOMETRIC EXERCISES

Minnesota '9' May Be Team To Stop N.Y.

In 1962, the Minnesota Twins finished second to the Yankees, winding up five games back of the perennial pennant winners.

The Twins, to a man, think they can go "all the way" in 1963. A little examination at their Orlando, Fla., spring training base shows the American League representative in the upper Midwest may just have the ingredients to overtake the Bronx Bombers.

Check these:

Slick-fielding first baseman Vic Power is unquestionably the best fielder in either league at first base. And what is even more surprising, Power has a lifetime batting average which is fourth best currently in the American League, behind only Mickey Mantle, Al Kaline and Nellie Fox. Vic batted .290 last season and was not charged with a single error!

Camilo Pascual, now living in Miami, has been the American League strikeout king for the past two years and won 20 games for the first time last year. This, in spite of being on the bench for 34 games because of a sore arm.

Five times last year, Pascual struck out 10 or more batters in a game. What's more, Camilo can hit. He led pitchers in both leagues in hits (26), total bases (36) and had 19 runs batted in!

Only Babe Ruth has hit home runs with greater consistency than the Twins' Harmon Killebrew. Harmon, who has hit more home runs in the last four years than any other current major leaguer, averages a homer every 13.1 times to the plate. Ruth homered every 11.8 times.

With that quick look at fielding, pitching and hitting, one need look only one bat-length further to take into consideration Earl Battey, the best catcher in baseball; all-star third baseman Rich Rollins; Zoilo Versalles and Bernie Allen at short and second; and Manager Sam Mele, who just missed "Manager of the Year" honors last season, to figure that owner Cal Griffith may have to get a taller flag pole at Metropolitan Stadium.

Student Brigade's 41st Company Crowned Post Volleyball Champs

By Leo Zani

The 41st Company of The Student Brigade won the post Company - Level Volleyball Tournament Tuesday night at Briant Wells Field House, sweeping to an easy three-game victory over the 2nd Infantry Division's Company B, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry.

The representatives from Main Post gave the 2nd Infantry Division "Conquerors" no rest as they won 15-9, 15-0, and 15-7. The Student Brigade team will now represent Fort Benning in the Third Army Volleyball Tournament which will be held at Fort McClellan, April 16 through 19.

In the first game, the 41st men took a commanding 10-2 lead, but the "Conquerors" fought back and narrowed the gap to 10-6. Two minutes later the hard-slamming 41st put the game on ice with a 15-9 victory.

The second game was a complete rout for the 41st as they won easily 15-0.

In the third and final game, the 2nd Infantry Division jumped off to their first lead of the night, 2-0, only to have Coach Gale Sult's men come roaring from behind for another easy victory and the post championship. Final score was 15-7.

The 41st men won the Main Post Title last week with four straight victories. In the final game the champions downed the 69th Armor in two games, 15-9, and 15-5.

Members of the winning 41st Company were Jim Taylor, Manuel Lopez, Carl Bryan, Mike Ward, John Ford, Bob Hull, Julian Guzman and team captain Gale Sult.

On the 2nd Division runner-up team were Dave Willing, Harold Taylor, Loucious Wills, John Critle, Frank Schuette, Andrew Hamm, Waclaw Szarek and the coach, Dick Scott.

Mets Stop Infantrymen

The New York Mets' Raleigh, N. C., farm team took on the 197th Infantry Brigade last Tuesday at Golden Park in Columbus in the first of six proposed exhibition baseball games.

Jimmy Rider started the pitching chores for the 197th and went four innings, allowing five hits and giving three runs, two of which were unearned.

In the first inning, Raleigh's first batter, Bernie Smith, hit Rider's second pitch high on the scoreboard for a home run. Rider then settled down until the fourth inning when he walked Raleigh's Fred Thomason to load the bases. The next batter hit a smashing drive to the shortstop who bobbled the ball, letting two unearned runs cross the plate.

The 197th's only scoring opportunity came in the second inning when Rogers singled to center and Belvins singled to right, putting men on first and third. But the next three batters went down in order leaving the men stranded.

Raleigh loaded the bases in the sixth inning with none out and pushed across three more runs on two wild pitches and a single. However, the Infantrymen got out of the jam with a double play.

REPORT CARD
by Mary Beth Williams

Spring was the theme of the fashion show presented at the JADA Mother-Daughter luncheon last Saturday, and though it was raining outside, the clothes — shorts, bathing suits, dresses, evening gowns — reminded everyone of the season.

Anita Braun was chairman of the show. She was helped by Sara Walters. Georganna Dillon, Beverly Harrison, Martha Harris, Cheryl Ely, Karen Price, Cathy Ewart, Priscilla Moore, Susie Wells, Katie Hennessey, Kathy O'Donnell, Pat Paulick and Jean Dixon were models. Sharon Estes was pianist.

Checking with the church youth groups of the post, I found that all of them are planning some sort of special Easter activity. The "Follow Me" club is showing an Easter film Sunday evening in the regular meeting. Last week the group attended Palm Sunday services at The Student Brigade Chapel. The offering from this service was donated to the "Follow Me" club to aid the club's Korean orphan, Lee Yun Sik.

Sunday morning the children who attend Sunday school at Saint Michael's Mission will enjoy an Easter egg hunt. These eggs were dyed and hidden by the Episcopal Youth of the Chapels.

The Fort Benning Catholic Youth Organization will hold a dance Monday night for all the Columbus CYO's. This party will be held at Brat Brracks.

Next weekend Fort Benning will be visited by over one-hundred Eagle Scouts from Cleveland, Ohio. On Friday night, April 19, the Scouts will be honored with a dance here. Any girl between the ages of 16 and 18, who is a dependent of military personnel may attend this dance by calling Mrs. J. T. Ely at 5455-4896.

At Nancy Williams' slumber party Saturday night there were two important announcements made: Nancy has been accepted at the University of Florida and at SFU; and Earle Wilder has decided to go to Columbia College in South Carolina next fall.

Barbecued turkey, the sound track from "West Side Story," and playing jacks were the things that will long be remembered by the seven CHS senior girls who were there.

YAC Offers 17 Different Sports To Benning's Dependent Children

By PFC Dave Braun

There never seems to be a dull moment for the more than 2,000 boys and girls who take part each year in the wide assortment of sports and activities offered here by the Youth Activities Club (YAC).

Aided by many volunteer coaches and instructors who give freely of their own time, the boys and girls have an opportunity to participate in as many as 17 sports and almost twice as many other activities.

YAC has come a long way since it achieved its present name in 1954. An outgrowth of the Dad's Club formed in 1950, the club had but 50 active members when it began.

Today the active membership has risen to 946 (heads of households), in addition to over 900 honorary members.

Offers Variety of Sports

In the world of sports the club offers almost every facet the year around.

Designed for boys and girls living both on and off-post, competition is held in baseball, football, basketball, swimming, golf, tennis, track, bowling, softball, judo, boxing, fencing and others.

Such activities as the Junior National Rifle Association (NRA), water ballet and Scouting also are available.

In each sport, with the exception of bowling which is set up primarily for ages 10 to 16, boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 18 can participate. Junior NRA is planned for boys and girls between the ages of .12 and 17.

Three Leagues

Each major sport is organized in three leagues; the Biddy League for ages 8 - 10, the Doughboy League for ages 11 - 12, and the Intermediate League for ages 13 - 15.

Trophies are awarded to the winners of each league at the conclusion of the regular season.

The club can outfit 45 boys baseball teams and 25 girls softball squads, in addition to outfitting 40 boys basketball and 18 girls basketball teams.

During the baseball season six games are played daily six days of the week on the post's six baseball fields. Two volunteer officials are present for each contest.

Scout Troops

YAC's scouting activities include 20 Girl Scout troops and 12 Boy Scouts troops. Meeting places for the Scouts are scattered throughout the post.

Members of the club do their swimming at Carey Pool, near the Officer Candidate School.

Basketball games are played at Faith, Loyd and Wilbur School. There are 28 playgrounds on the post and three football fields.

A snack bar is also open for the teen-age club on Fridays and Saturdays from 8 to 11 p.m. at Brat Barracks. There is also dancing.

Max Spurlin serves as athletic director of the club, while 1st Lt. Edward N. Smith is custodian. The club also has a full-time secretary, Mrs. Jacquelin Baum, and a Scout coordinator, Sp5 James O. Stroud.

Stroud is a 25-year veteran of Boy Scout work.

Maj. (Ret.) John V. Szymansky, former custodian of the club, is the supply and membership administrator. Jo Andrews is bookkeeper.

Boys and girls register for membership in YAC through their various schools.

Operated by a board of governors, headed by president Col. Clinton E. Male, coordinator of instruction at The Infantry School, YAC's annual election of officers is being held and a new president will be installed April 16.

Bill Russell Wins Fourth NBA Trophy

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Bill Russell, great center of the Boston Celtics, has received the National Basketball Association President's Cup for the fourth time in the last eight years. The cup is annually awarded to the outstanding player in the professional league.

In the 1963 poll conducted by the Newspaper Enterprise Assn., Elgin Baylor, Los Angeles, finished second; Oscar Robertson, Cincinnati, was third; and Bob Pettit, St. Louis, a two-time cup winner, was fourth.

The President's Cup was instituted in 1956 in honor of Maurice Podoloff, the founding President of the NBA. The trophy carries a special significance this year as Podoloff has announced his intention to retire after the 1963 playoffs.

HOMECOMING

An impressive ceremony on October 10, 1954 marked the homecoming to Fort Lewis, Wash. of the famed "Indianhead" warriors from the Korean Conflict.

By Pete Shough

With the 1963 Masters Tournament now a thing of the past, the top professional golfers wasted no time entering the Ryder Cup Pro-Am Tournament at East Lake Country Club in Atlanta last Monday.

Over 7,000 Atlanta golfing enthusiasts saw South African pro Gary Player recover from his mediocre showing at the Masters to set a course record of 66 and win first-place prize money of $750. Player's team also tied for second place in the team standings to give the little South African an additional $450.

Jack Nicklaus, the newly crowned Masters champ, surprised everyone by touring the recently remodeled golf course with a two-under-par 70. The seventh place finish by the chubby Ohio pro give him another $300 to add to the $20,000 he won at the Masters.

Dave Ragan, Jay Hebert and Stan Leonard all tied for second-place honors with 68 strokes.

Ragan probably played the most outstanding individual shot of the day when he played a low slicing chip shot on the final hole of the course. The shot had to played low to clear some overhanging branches and also slice to reach the green. The ball finished three feet from the cup.

Golf's biggest money winner over the past few years, Arnold Palmer, appears to be entering a slump as the 1962 Masters champion scored an explosive 77. Arnie says his driving has been off pace since he broke his favorite driver during the winter tour.

The professional tour begins its swing north with the coming of warm weather and the famed "Big Three" are scheduled to meet in some of the country's top tournaments in the summer circuit. The biggest meet of the summer tour is obviously the U. S. Open in which Nicklaus will be out to retain his 1962 title.

It's too early to make any predictions, but the winner should come from one of the top ten finishers in the Masters and again I look for Jack Nicklaus to lead the way. One thing is for sure, this summer should provide the finest golf the tour has ever offered.

Monthly Clinic at Post's Hospital Specializes in Cancer Detection

By Capt. W. H. Brakefield
Martin Army Hospital

The early detection of cancer, especially if it is discovered in the pre-lamignant, or non-invasive stage, is our most potent weapon against this dreaded killer.

Many tumors give no warning until it is too late. However, the great majority of lesions found in the female have warning signs and symptoms. Awareness of these has led many people to their physicians.

The Cancer Detection Clinic at Martin Army Hospital is designed to provide a mass screening for cancer for the adult female population, military and dependent, in the Fort Benning area. Those who have specific complaints obviously not related to cancer should consult the general medical or specialty clinics concerned.

The large number of patients attending the Cancer Detection Clinic makes it impossible for each patient to relate her life history to the physician. The "history" for this clinic is supplied by the patient as she answers specific questions which are designed to seek out possible sources of trouble.

She is asked her age, obstetrical and surgical history, and personal symptoms related to breasts, genital system, gastro-intestinal system, urinary tract system, respiratory systems and skin lesions. Any positive response to these questions are evaluated and-or x-ray studies are ordered, or the patient is referred to the proper clinic for evaluation.

Each patient is given a physical examination, to include examination of any suspicious skin lesions, thyroid gland, breasts, abdomen, complete pelvic and rectal examination, to include a Papanicolaou "Pap smear"). Any positive or suspicious finding is noted, and the patient is referred to the proper clinic.

Skin lesions are evaluated by the dermatologist; thyroid and breast masses by the surgeon, and possible tumors of the female genital system by the gynecologist. Patients with a positive "Pap Smear" are re-called to the Gynecology Clinic for further evaluation.

The Cancer Detection Clinic is held one afternoon each month, in the Ob-Gyn Clinic of Martin Army Hospital by staff obstetrician - gynecologists.

Due to the large number of people requiring this service, the number of appointments are made on a "first-come" basis. The overflow is deferred to the next month's clinic.

Appointments should be made by calling the clinic at least 30 days before the date desired. The telephone number is 544-3393.

Loss of Filling Often Sign of More Decay

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

"Doctor, my teeth just won't hold fillings. Therefore, I want them all pulled, and false teeth put in."

This is heard often by the busy dental practitioner.

Some people do lose fillings more often than others. Let's look at some of the reasons. The main cause of shortened life of a restoration is lack of care — neglect of the patient in keeping the area where tooth meets filling clean. This leads to recurrent decay.

Another cause of loss is abnormal biting conditions — uneven force or odd angles of bite.

A filling should be compared to a piston on a car. The forces placed on each are tremendous, but either one will do well if all maintenance principles are followed. Use either one improperly, and troubles are sure to appear.

The filling materials in most common use are amalgam, or silver, and porcelain. Amalgam is extremely weak for the first hour after being placed, and gradually acquires strength until at the end of 24 hours, it is near its maximum.

One of the finest characteristics of amalgam, although much disliked by someone who fails to understand, is the fact it will break. Why? Simply because this usually indicates a lack of support, and often a lack of support shows new decay around the filling.

When the amalgam filling breaks, the dentist will first look for new decay. It usually is found. No one should expect any filling to last a lifetime. If it does, you're a lucky young corpse.

A filling (again amalgam) can last a lifetime, if it is small enough, kept good and clean, and is not forced to receive great stresses. If you have all your own teeth, the filling will last longer than one which does all the chewing for the side of the mouth.

Porcelain is almost entirely for appearance or esthetics. It is quite brittle, and is seldom used in an area where much force is applied. Average life of porcelain is 3 to 4 years. But again, with good mouth care, greater service can be expected.

When you spend money on dental care, buy an insurance policy also - an extra toothbrush.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

Library Week Plans Made

A 10-man committee met recently to form plans for Fort Benning's participation in National Library Week, April 21-27.

The committee discussed methods of publicizing the observance and designated various responsibilities to those connected with making the week a success.

Other committee members are Maj. M. H. Ferrell, Information Office, Maj. R. L. Miller, Special Services officer; Capt. G. E. Sykes, 11th Air Assault Division, 1st Lt. J. L. Dentzer, Infantry Center Troop Command; Lt. Richard Wamsgams and Lt. J. B. Sloan, 197th Infantry Brigade; Lt. B. C. Peterson, 2nd Infantry Division; SFC E. R. Lord, Martin Army Hospital, and Carl Ficker, librarian.

There are seven libraries under Special Services at the Infantry Center, and an Infantry School library. Throughout the week these libraries will have displays pointing out to the public the value of reading.

16 Airlines Cut Fares For Troops

WASHINGTON (APPS) — "Furlough rate" plane tickets went on sale late in March when 16 major airlines were authorized to offer half-price tickets to servicemen and women.

Military personnel on leave or delay in route may purchase the tickets by showing a copy of their orders or leave papers to the ticket agent. Travel on these tickets must be made in uniform, the same as on reduced bus or train tickets.

While the new fare is based on jet coach fares, the tickets will be honored on piston aircraft, in coach and economy coach sections of jet aircraft, and in ons - class service planes.

No reservations will be made for the reduced rate tickets. Service people traveling on such tickets will be assigned unfilled seats in regular flights. However, airline people say this will cause little delay in most instances, except during times of abnormal travel loads.

A major feature of the fare is that, as in the case of "delays en route," the tickets can be purchased for a one-way trip at the same reduced rate.

Sr. Officer Course Set at Fort Bliss

FORT BLISS, Tex. (ANF)— The senior officer who wants a concise, accurate appraisal of the varied facets of modern warfare, and who can only spare a few days away from his normal duties, may well have the solution to his problem in the F-1 Course at the U. S. Army Air Defense School, Fort Bliss, Tex.

The four and one-half day course is designed to present a condensed and concentrated course on the facets of modern warfare to officers in the grade of lieutenant colonel or above from all the military services.

Students receive an initial look at the Communist threat — primarily the Sino-Soviet bloc's equipment and capabilities. This presentation sets the stage for presentations on what the nations of the Free world have to oppose this menace, the current capabilities of the U. S. Armed Forces and the strategic aspects of the defense of the continental United States.

Attention is also focused on new combat weapons, current developments in electronic warfare, the cold war counterinsurgency program, and the new concepts and problems compatible with the nuclear and space age.

Quotas are assigned to each Army area by U. S. Continental Army Command. Interested officers may obtain additional information from their G-3 section.

Saturn Major Asset In U.S. Race to Moon

CAPE CANAVERAL (AFPS) —The United States' Saturn booster may soon overtake the Russian lead in rocket power in a move which could have a significant bearing on the race to the Moon.

Although Saturn is still in the experimental stage, it may score a great propellant breakthrough within six months and at the same time toss a 33,000-pound satellite into orbit — more than doubling the weight of the largest Russian satellite sent up to date.

Late in March the Saturn was tested on a 121-second flight, 21 seconds with one of its eight engines cut off. This indicated that the huge powerplant could continue to function should one motor fail in flight.

D. Brainerd Holmes, head of the manned spaceflight program, termed the flight another significant steps toward getting a man to the Moon this decade.

Under present plans, an advanced Saturn will blast American astronauts to the Moon in 1968 in Project Apollo.

Leadership Is Topic Of General's Address

Every military leader must develop his leadership ability within the framework of his own personality, 450 Infantry School students were told April 3.

Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Edmund Bower Sebree, military adviser to the Army Leadership Human Research Unit at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., addressed the combined Infantry officer career classes at Theater No. 1.

Speaking on Leadership, Gen. Sebree said, "No one knows exactly what leadership is — even the people who write about it."

"My dictionary doesn't even list 'leadership'," he continued.

The speaker said many qualities of good leadership have been named and much advice has been given as to how to develop leadership ability.

"Some young officers have been advised to pick out a good leader and emulate him, but this cannot be done," he added. 'Every man must develop within the framework of his own personality."

Gen. Sebree said, "Take the two military men Patton and Patch—with personalities that were entirely different, yet each was a great leader in his own way."

"Leadership requires professional knowledge, setting and demanding high standards of conduct and consideration for others," he continued.

A leader is in a large way responsible for the success or failure of the men who serve under him, the general said.

"Every commander, when faced with the responsibility of preparing an efficiency report for an officer, should ask himself the question, 'Is there any reason why I can't rate this man as a superior officer?' rather than "Is there any reason why I should rate him superior?' "

A young officer who works under a commander of prestige and ability has a better chance of success than one who works under a commander who feels insecure, he said.

"The successful commander is not reluctant to give a good efficiency report," the speaker stated.

Gen. Sebree was introduced by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

The four-star general, who was commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School from May 1, 1958, to April 18, 1960, is scheduled to address the combined Infantry officer career classes of The Infantry School at 10 a.m. April 26 in Theater No. 1.

He will be briefed April 27 on activities of the Infantry Combat Development Agency, an Infantry School department, the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) and the construction of the new academic building.

428th Medics to Observe Organization Day

Ceremonies at the First Quartel will mark the 20th anniversary of the 428th Medical Battalion, a unit of the Strategic Army Corps (STRAC), Tuesday.

A highlight of the ceremonies will be the naming of the battalion's "Soldier of the Year," who will be chosen from representatives from each of the battalion's companies.

Following the ceremonies, open to the public, visitors will tour the battalion area where static displays of the medical unit's equipment will be erected. Visitors will also be invited to inspect the battalion's offices and billets.

Battalion personnel will observe Tuesday afternoon as a training holiday.

Ambulance Battalion

On April 23, 1943, the battalion's predecessor, the 428th Medical Ambulance Battalion, was organized at Camp Atterbury, Ind. In September of that year the unit was designated a medical battalion.

During the succeeding two years, the 428th participated in the European Theater of Operations and was awarded streamers for campaigns in Normandy, Northern France, Ardennes - Alsace and Central Europe. The unit was inactivated Sept. 18, 1945, in France.

In late 1958, the 428th Medical Battalion (Separate) was re-activated to replace the 54th Medical Group here.

Since the reorganization in March, 1961, the composition of the battalion has changed numerous times.

At the outbreak of the Berlin Crisis in 1961, one unit of the battalion, the 2nd platoon of the 45th Helicopter Ambulance Company, was deployed to Europe. Three National Guard and two Reserve units were called to active duty, leaving the battalion strength at nine units.

In August, 1962, five units were inactivated in conjunction with an Army-wide demobilization of Reserve units.

During the Cuban crisis last October, the 54th Medical Detachment (Helicopter Ambulance) was activated and attached to the 428th, bringing the battalion to its present strength of five units. The 54th is now on temporary duty at Hunter - Liggett Reservation, Calif., in support of a department of Army experiment, "Battalion Operations in a Toxic Environment."

Other units of the battalion now include Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment; 50th Medical Company (Clearing); 690th Medical Company (Ambulance) and the 95th Evacuation Hospital.

The 95th Evacuation Hospital, re-activated in March following the de-activation of the 3rd Field Hospital, is the largest change in the battalion composition. When the new unit reaches full strength it will have hospital facilities for 400 patients with an emergency expansion capacity of 200 additional beds.

All units of the battalion are members of the Strategic Army Corps. The battalion, headed by Lt. Col. R. J. Caldbeck, commander, with Maj. Charles G. Braden, executive officer, has an administrative headquarters with the responsibility of providing command control, planning and logistic services for attached units.

In addition to its STRAC mission the battalion has the responsibility of supporting The Infantry School and Infantry Center. Wherever classes of The Infantry School are assembled for field training, representatives of the 428th are usually standing by to provide emergency treatment and evacuation.

Duties vary from operating aid stations to support of airborne drop zones. Medical personnel of the battalion also support Ranger training in Florida and Northern Georgia.

The battalion numbers among its personnel specially trained technicians. These specialists include clinical, laboratory, pharmacy, X-ray and operating room technicians who continue to maintain their proficiency at Martin Army Hospital.

Last August, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, the 50th Medical Company and the 690th Medical Company participated in Swift Strike II, the largest peace time maneuver ever held on American soil. The 54th Detachment will join these same units this year for Swift Strike III.

The battalion has been put to the test during the past year and has proved during training and in time of international strife that its personnel are capable of performing their mission in a superior manner.

Ohio Explorer Scouts Will Depart Saturday

Saturday marks the end of a one-week encampment here by a group of 165 Explorer Scouts from Cleveland, Ohio, who have been offered a first-hand look at the Infantry.

At 8 a.m. today the youths will tour The Infantry School's Communications Department. Members of the 428th Medical Battalion will brief the group on operations of a field hospital at 10 a.m.

The Command and Staff Department's Engineer Committee will present a two-hour demonstration of river crossing techniques at Victory Pond beginning at 1:15 p.m.

Chapel Field will be the scene of a retreat review and awards ceremony at 5:15 p.m.

Tonight will be highlighted by a dance at the Gold Bar Lounge. The ball, which will be hosted by the Junior Army Daughters of America, will begin at 7:30.

The final day of their visit will begin with a display of Infantry, armor, and artillery vehicular weapons system at the 197th Infantry Brigade.

At 9:15 a.m. the group will go to Bolling Bowl where they will witness a demonstration by the 36th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon.

The close of their visit will take place at the Infantryman Statue beginning at 10:30 a.m. with a talk by Maj. Edward R. Showalter, a member of the Special Subjects Department's Leadership Committee, and holder of the Medal of Honor.

Following the remarks by the Korean conflict hero, the Special Services Section will stage the epic, "I Am the Infantry."

Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will close out the encampment with a farewell address.

3 Viet Nam Veterans Receive Air Medals From Gen. Reynolds

Three members of The Student Brigade, Capt. Harold S. Hanson, Capt. Jack W. Serig and OC Thomas A. Derosier, were recently presented Air Medals for meritorious achievement while serving in Viet Nam.

The ceremonies for Capt. Hanson and Capt. Serig took place before the Associate Infantry Officer Career Course Class No. 3, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, of which both officers are members.

Members of 50th (OC) Company, 5th Student Battalion, TSB, observed the presentation to OC Derosier. The awards were presented by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Capt. Hanson was cited for action of July 24, 1962, while serving as an Army aviator in Viet Nam.

Capt. Hanson volunteered to pilot an Army U-1A "Otter" aircraft to re-supply the town of Qui Nhon, which had an emergency shortage of food due to "extreme weather conditions," a typhoon.

Although his aircraft was buffeted by strong winds throughout the entire trip, and he was faced with winds varying 180 degrees and gusting to 25 knots, Capt. Hanson successfully completed his mission by making a night landing at Qui Nhon.

Capt. Serig distinguished himself between Feb. 24, and May 2, 1962, when he participated in at least 25 combat operational or aerial reconnaissance missions in the combat zone or over hostile territory as part of the crew of an Army aircraft.

At various times during these missions, Capt. Serig's aircraft was subject to small arms and automatic weapons fire.

OC Derosier distinguished himself during the period Oct. 17 to Nov. 12, 1962, as part of the crew of an Army aircraft in at least 25 combat or reconnaissance missions over hostile territory.

On numerous occasions while participating in these missions OC Derosier's aircraft was fired upon by small arms and automatic weapons.

SOLDIER OF THE YEAR . . . Sp5 Jerry L. Peppers (L) is congratulated by Lt. Col. John L. Kennedy, commander of the 1st Battalion, (Mechanized), 58th Infantry, as he receives a trophy for being named the 58th's "Soldier of the Year." After entering the Army in January, 1961, Sp5 Peppers received basic and advanced training with the 2nd Infantry Division here. He then was assigned to the 1st Battle Group, 7th Cavalry, in Korea. He returned here for assignment with the 58th in October, 1962. During the annual 81mm mortar gunner's examination, Sp5 Peppers attained the highest possible score, a perfect 200.

Lightning Kills...Take Precautions When Outdoors

By Bill Gardner

From now until July, thunderstorms will occur here with greater frequency, and with the rain and black clouds will come one of nature's most dangerous weapons, lightning.

Referred to by safety officials as "nature's artillery," lightning, these same officials predict, will kill about 600 people in the U.S. this year, including those who die in fires kindled by lightning.

In addition it is estimated about 1,500 others will be injured and property damage will approach $120 million.

A recent study by weather officials of thunderstorms in the Fort Benning area over a 12-year span shows the average number that can be expected during the peak months. The averages are for April, 4; May, 8; June, 10; July, 16; August, 10, and September, 4.

July which is the worst month for storms has had as many as 21, while August has produced 22.

Since lightning seeks the path of least resistance, which is normally the shortest distance between the cloud and ground, it usually hits the tallest object around. In one year 48 bolts were recorded striking the Empire State Building in New York City. It survived because it is adequately grounded and the charges were dissipated with a minimum of disturbance.

The number of fatalities and injuries and property damage suffered from lightning is on the increase and for this reason safety officials throughout the country are stepping up the campaign to warn people of its dangers and what to do when a storm occurs or lightning strikes someone nearby.

The Infantry Center Safety Section, composed of Norman M. Evans, Andrew J. Baldwin and Charlie U. Daniel Jr., is part of this campaign.

Through their range and terrain safety regulations, which all commanders must read, and various posters and information sheets which are being posted on all company bulletin boards, the section is attempting to get information about lightning safety across to the thousands of servicemen at the post.

The places that are dangerous are most often areas where people are likely to be, especially during the summertime when outdoor recreation and thunderstorms are at their peaks.

For instance the National Safety Council lists golf courses, boats, swimming areas, especially beaches, as dangerous places. This is because they are all open and exposed and a person is likely to be the highest object around.

They say the first thing to do if caught in one of these locations is to seek out a building protected with lightning rods and grounds or a steel frame building, or if in a car stay in it with the windows closed.

If no shelter is available, they advise moving to low areas such as ditches, caves or ravines, or if nothing else, lying flat on the ground.

Seeking shelter under an isolated tree is the worst possible thing to do, because although it keeps you from getting wet, it is an excellent conductor.

It is safe to head for an area where a number of trees are growing, as long as shelter isn't sought under the tallest tree.

Lightning doesn't always kill, although a direct hit nearly always does, and mouth to mouth resuscitation has saved quite a number of people.

The ones who are not killed outright are only temporarily stunned and paralyzed with consequent stopping of vital functions as breathing. The mouth to mouth method of inducing breathing has proved to be one of the best and quickest methods of saving people.

We Are Charged With Preserving Heritage

The heritage of America, the rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, did not spring full-blown on that April day in 1775. Rather, since the dawn of history there has existed in the minds of men the longing and the hope for independence and individual freedom.

Many times in the past the spark of freedom has burst into victorious flame; and, tragically, many times it has been crushed under the iron heel of oppression. But the spark that grew into the flame of America has never been extinguished.

Today, the iron heel that would rush the flame called America causes us to think more deeply about our heritage. The fundamental freedoms that are the foundation of our society have not come easily. They were fought for and forcibly earned for us by countless thousands of Americans who gave the last full measure of devotion that those freedoms might live. From the town green of Lexington to the steamy jungles of Viet Nam, they have passed on a priceless heritage and a heavy responsibility.

We have the responsibility of keeping that flame alive, and of passing it on, in turn, to the generations that follow us.

This can be done only if eternal vigilance is maintained by each American, both in and out of uniform. We Americans shall continue to enjoy this heritage, and this heritage shall be passed on intact, only so long as we assume our obligations to support and defend these rights and freedoms.

As President Kennedy said in his Inaugural Address:

"In the long history of the world, only a few generations have been granted the role of defending freedom in its hour of maximum danger. I do not shrink from this responsibility, I welcome it. I do not believe that any of us would exchange places with any other generation. The energy, the faith, the devotion which we bring to this endeavor will light our country and all who serve it — and the glow from that fire can truly light the world." (ANF)

Information, Please...

Listing of surplus and shortage enlisted MOS for use in specific personnel actions is the subject of Department of the Army Circular 611-18. In addition to listing the MOS to be evaluated and evaluation materials, the Circular also discusses eligibility requirements, requisition of test materials, special instructions, and forwarding of test materials.

Personnel procurement. Army Medical Service officer procurement — AR 601-132 outlines responsibilities within the continental U.S. for the procurement of Army Medical Service officers for the active Army. Authorized Army Medical Service officer appointment and procurement programs are described in Army Regulations and Circulars of the 135-, 140-, and 601- series.

The Army contemporary military reading program has been established to assist Army personnel by calling attention to, and making available, books of professional value and interest.

The program is set forth in AR 28-86. The regulations emphasize that the selection of a book for inclusion in the program does not imply an official indorsement by the Department of the Army of the view contained therein. The purpose of the Army-wide program is to stimulate constructive thinking concerning problems of prevailing and future military importance.

Encourage Army personnel to engage in a systematic program of voluntary reading to improve their professional competence; deepen comprehension and understanding of the significant role of the Army in world affairs; furnish guidance in the selection of reading materials through publication of an annual list of books written by outstanding authorities on military and allied subjects; and make copies of these books readily available for loan to military personnel.

"ROAD BLOCK"

Capitol Notes

The House Armed Services Committee has approved a $1.1 billion pay increase for 1.8 million servicemen. Exempted would be 832,000 draftees and enlistees serving out a two-year military obligation.

The pay bill was $325 million below the $1.5 billion recommended earlier by a subcommittee. Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), who revamped the bill, said he expected a House vote on the measure "about the first week in May."

The committee, however, rejected a proposal by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara that foreign duty pay should be replaced by a hardship pay, which would have reduced the number of servicemen receiving such money. It retained the present system of overseas and sea duty pay but knocked out Hawaii as a qualifying duty station.

The group also made a major change in the plan to increase benefits for 411,000 retired military personnel. It allowed them only a 5 per cent "cost-of-living" increase. Also rejected was the Defense Department proposal to permit those who left the service before June 1, 1958, to recompute their retired pay on present pay scales.

Approved by the commmittee were an Oct. 1 effectiveness date for the pay raise, a boost in pay to 900,000 members of reserve units now in a drill pay status, and an automatic increase in retirement pay whenever the cost of living increase amounts to three per cent or more.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

I Wish I Had Known

By Chaplain (Capt.) Lee A. Smith

Asked to address a group of teenagers, a distinguished gentleman decided to tell them his thoughts on life, dwelling on those things that young people would yet have to experience.

What he told the youths follows, as given in Andrus Driftings magazine:

"Having passed the first two-score and 10 years of my life, and realizing that the more sand that has escaped from the hour glass of life the clearer we should see through it, I find myself more prone to meditate and philosophize.

"My life has been rich. But there have been regrets, regrets which you too will experience in time. These regrets can largely be grouped as things I wish I had known before I was 21."

I wish I had known what I was going to do for a living, what my life work would likely be.

I wish I had known that my health after 30 was largely dependent on what I had put into my stomach before I was 21.

I wish I had known how to take care of my money.

"I wish I had known that a man's habits are hard to change after 21.

"I wish I had known that the harvest depends so much upon the seeds sown.

"I wish I had known you cannot get something for nothing.

"I wish I had known the world would give me just about what I deserve.

"I wish I had known the folly of not taking the advice of the older, wiser people.

"I wish I had known that Dad wasn't such an old fogey after all.

"I wish I had known that everything Mother wanted me to do was right.

"I wish I had known what it meant to Mother and Father to raise a son.

"I wish I had known more of the helpful and inspiring parts of the Bible.

"I wish I had known the tremendous value of the opportunity and the joy of serving a fellow man.

"I wish I had known that there is no better exercise for the heart than reaching down and helping people up.

"I wish I had known that the "sweat of my brow" would earn my bread.

"I wish I had known that thorough education brings the best of everything else.

"I wish I had known that honesty is the only policy, not only in dealing with my neighbors but also in dealing with myself and God.

"I wish I had known the value of truthfulness in everything.

"And today I wish I knew the formula for impressing you and other young people that life is a mirror which will reflect back to what you think into it."

Libraries Offer Bridge to the World

Japan, Korea Tours Made By Librarian

Through her employment by Department of the Army in Special Services, Mrs. Patricia Reeves, chief librarian at the Main Post Library, has been able to travel and see part of the world.

She was employed with DA shortly after receiving her BS and MS degrees from Rosary College, River Forest, Ill.

"I was then sent to Korea as a librarian for the 37th Infantry Division," she recalls, "and was later transferred to the 1st Artillery Corps in San Barbara."

"I was able to travel in Korea," she said, "and was impressed with the Korean people and their way of life. I was also able to travel to Japan, where I spent many wonderful hours meeting the Japanese people and learning how they live."

Mrs. Reeves came here in 1960, and originally worked as a librarian at Sand Hill.

"There is a lot of work involved in managing a library, she relates. "For example, before a single book can be placed on a shelf it must go through 15 different steps."

"We have a very good selection of juvenile and adult books, plus 28 sets of language records that can be checked out and 64 musical records that can be played in the library," she commented.

"We will try to help everyone as much as possible when they come to the library," Mrs. Reeves, said. "All we ask is that they conduct themselves as ladies and gentlemen."

Gen. Rich Urges Use of Libraries

The week of 21-27 April 1963 is proclaimed National Library Week to call attention to one of the great freedoms traditional with our American heritage and identified in the National Library Week slogan, "READ: the fifth freedom — enjoy it."

In a world where millions of people are forced to live under Communism, we who live in freedom should appreciate more fully the privilege of reading which is every man's right.

The books, magazines, and newspapers in our Special Services libraries are a reservoir of knowledge, original thinking, alert reporting, and effective writing. All personnel at Fort Benning are urged to use these library facilities and take advantage of our great fifth freedom — the right to be informed.

LIBRARY PROVIDES PLEASANT ATMOSPHERE FOR READERS
2nd Lt. C. A. Smith (L), PFC F. K. White Enjoy Books

"Reading is a Bridge to the World," is the slogan for National Library Week which will be observed in libraries here as well as throughout the U.S. April 21-27.

Many items other than books are available to post personnel and their dependents in the post's seven Special Services - sponsored libraries and The Infantry School library.

Libraries on the Main Post, at the 197th Infantry Brigade, Martin Army Hospital, Sand Hill, Kelly Hill, 58th Infantry and Harmony Church are putting up displays stressing the value of reading.

Newspapers from many states are also available at each library, as are major periodicals. Catalogues from leading colleges are stocked for personnel interested in higher education for themselves or dependents.

Each library on post is also equipped with stereo phonographs and hundreds of classical records. Special evenings are reserved for music appreciation.

Foreign language records with manuals covering European and Asiatic languages are available for the more ambitious person. These can be checked out or heard in the libraries.

Librarians also see to it that patients at Martin Army Hospital are brought books and magazines.

The libraries also will be distributing questionaires analyzing the value of the libraries and of the Special Services Section, Ficker said.

National Library Week also will be observed in each of the five elementary schools here. The schools are Loyd, Wilbur, Patch, Edward A. White and Faith.

The five libraries circulate more than 1,900 books per week. There are over 10,000 books catalogued and shelved at the libraries.

VALENCIANA DANCERS . . . Patty Kimbrough (L), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Kimbrough of Columbus, and Vivienne Johnson, daughter of Lt. Col. Floyd L. Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith Will Be Featured in Mag.

By Ida C. Evans

Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith, wife of SFC Smith, has been chosen to be featured as "Lady-of-the-Month" in the May issue of the magazine, "U. S. Lady."

The U.S. Lady names a Lady-of-the-Month for each edition from thousands of service wives of all branches and ranks.

Nominated by interested individuals, nominees are considered on the basis of qualities of selfless devotion to family, community, branch of service and country, and personal achievements.

Mrs. Smith was chosen for her work with various Army wives clubs, a home for the aged in Bamberg, Germany, and, at Fort Benning, her volunteer service as a Gray Lady at Martin Army Hospital and with the American Red Cross Blood Mobile.

She is president of the Sword and Pen, the Fort Benning Chapter of the Armed Forces Writers' Club, a past president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, and a member of the Non-Commissioned Officers (NCO) Wives Club.

Sgt. and Mrs. Smith are the only Fort Benning members of the Chattahoochee Valley Natural History Club.

Talking about the Natural History Club, Mrs. Smith said, "We've always been interested in birds so we decided to be bird watchers. We don't know much about it because we are strictly amateurs, but the members are so good to us. They share their knowledge with us."

The interior of Mrs. Smith's living room is a testimony to the fact that she is never idle. Hand crocheted white doilies with starched pink fluted borders adorn the lamp tables. A hassock by her favorite chair contains the gray, moss green and rose yarn that she is using to crochet her third "Charleston Garden" afghan.

These things are her "pick-up work." Sewing and hat-making are two of her serious home projects.

Mrs. Smith buys and uses patterns, it is true, but her finished costume can be called an original. She plans a dress and then selects bits of various patterns to carry out her unique design.

As though an afterthought, she tops off the outfit with a scrap of fabric, skillfully draped over a becoming hat frame. ests coincide with those of her husband. Together they landscaped and planted the lawn at the quarters. They share their interest in wild birds. Even in Mrs. Smith's most prolific outlet, writing, Sgt. Smith has a part. He is her photographer.

Mrs. Smith has had articles and stories published in national magazines yet she can still understand the problems of a beginner, as evidenced by her untiring efforts to help members of the Writers' Club and other aspiring authors.

As an Army wife, Mrs. Smith has traveled extensively, but she was an ardent tourist long before she married.

Many of her published articles and three manuscripts still undergoing critical revisions are based upon her travels.

One of the manuscripts that claims a large portion of Mrs. Smith's time, a book on Panama, is probably her favorite.

"Perhaps that's because I met my husband there," she confided.

Mrs. Rich Is Guest At Meet

On April 10, 1963, Custer Terrace was the scene of a luncheon held by 46 wives of student officers, Career Class 3, Detachment 2, 2nd Student Battalion.

The theme of beauty care was carried out with the decorations. The centerpieces were arrangements of dogwood and azalea branches with colorful metal rollers. Powder puffs with clip hair ribbons attached were used as favors. Place cards for the guests were made of brush rollers with the name tag on a pick.

Pair Finds UFO Is Not Space Craft

Hauling water between the same two points all day long can become a dull, tedious task for a truck driver, but it recently became quite another thing to a couple of young privates of Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion.

PFC Maynard A. Paulson and his assistant driver, PFC Ward A. Hungerford had just returned to the Ground Mobility Department's demonstration area with another load of water for the mud tanks. These tanks are used to demonstrate the ability of tracked vehicles to navigate in wet, muddy obstacles.

As they began dumping their haul, Hungerford glanced skyward. His eye was caught by the sight of a miniature parachute floating toward the very mud tank at which the young engineers were working. Gently the chute deposited its cargo in the water.

At first the two were hesitant to retrieve the object. It was a rectangular box, with what appeared to be a nose cone at one end.

"We thought it was some kind of explosive or space craft," Hungerford explained after the discovery, "so we weren't too anxious to touch it. The parachute came pretty close to the bank, so we pulled it in."

The pair was relieved to discover that the box was neither a bomb nor space ship, but a weather instrument, according to the notice printed on the side of the container.

The maze of batteries, wires and gears was called a radiosonde. The instrument had been launched from Montgomery, Ala., early that morning and had attained a height of 17 miles by means of a helium-filled balloon. At that point the balloon burst and the parachute took over.

While being tracked by a special radio receiver, the Radiosonde relayed information concerning temperature, pressure, and moisture of the air at various heights.

Dantzler (fourth from right), a member of Company C, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, accepts a check for $442.25 to assist him and his family in recovering from the loss suffered when their home and its contents were destroyed by fire recently. The money was raised through contributions from members of each of the battalion's companies. Competition Planned For 'Ham' Radiomen

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The services have invited amateur radio operators to participate in the Armed Forces Day Communications Tests to be held Saturday, May 18, 1963.

The program has been expanded to include a West Coast station for each service in addition to the stations used here in past years. This will allow amateurs in western states to compete for awards they have been unable to receive in previous years.

Three elements make up the program. The first is a military - to - amateur transmitting and receiving test for licensed amateur radio operators. This is a crossband operations test, and contacts will consist of a brief exchange of locations and signal reports. No traffic handling will be permitted.

A CW receiving contest, the second phase, will be held for any person capable of copying International Morse Code at 25 words per minute. The test will consist of a special Armed Forces Day message from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The third phase is a radioteletypewriter (RATT) receiving contest for any licensed amateur, individual or station that possesses the required equipment.

Information on entries and transmission times may be obtained from the Armed Forces Day Contest, Room 5B960, the Pentagon, Washington, D.C.

A Bowl Cast From Sweat of Combat

STANDING GUARD OVER THE 23RD INFANTRY KOREAN BOWL (L-R) PFC C. Wilber, Gen. Billingslea, Col. R. O'Neill

By 23rd Infantry PIO

The 23rd Infantry's $25,000 Korean Bowl recently arrived at Fort Benning by air mail from Fort Richardson, Alaska.

The 440-pound silver bowl with a tray and 19 inscribed cups was escorted to the 1st Battalion's Headquarters with an armed guard.

The bowl, made in 1952 by Japanese silversmiths from the silver of 5,610 Combat Infantryman's Badges, was presented to Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Infantry Division commanding general, by Col. Richard J. O'Neill, commander of the 4th Battle Group, 23rd Infantry, Fort Richardson, Alaska. Gen. Billingslea in turn presented it to Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry at a reception at 3rd Brigade Headquarters.

The cups are enscribed with the names of Medal of Honor winners of the 23rd Infantry during the Korean Conflict.

A First and a Last

Review Honors Third Brigade Units

By Colin Higgins

The inaugural review by the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade Saturday morning on Wetherby Field was also the last review at Fort Benning for some time to come for two of the parading battalions.

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 22rd Infantry left Monday for tours of duty in Europe under the Army's unit rotation system, Rotaplan. The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry will remain in Europe for three months and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry will stay for six months. Both, although still assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division, will be attached to the 8th Infantry "Pathfinder" Division in Germany.

The third battalion participating in the review, the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, continues to be stationed at Fort Benning.

The review, as well as being a farewell ceremony for the two departed units, was also the first review and parade held by the 3rd Brigade since it became reorganized under the Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Col. Lucien F. Keller, commander of the 3rd Brigade, began the ceremony by trooping the line. He was accompanied by Charles Billingslea Jr., "Tuck", the five and a half year old son of the commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Awards Presented

Col. Keller then presented awards to ten members of his command. Four received Army Commendation Medals: CWO Raymond C. Barr, MSgt. John S. Deba, Sgt. John W. McMurdy and PFC Harold L. Hauer; five received Certificates of Achievement: Maj. Charles M. Bolen, Maj. Edwin K. Crowley, Maj. Roy J. Herte, Capt. Cleo C. Parker and Lt. William H. McCondel; the 3rd Brigade Soldier of the Month Award was presented to Sgt. Hugh V. Chapman.

Col. Keller then addressed the troops, commending them on the fine job they had done in forming the 3rd Brigade. Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea,

Chemical Joins 6,000-Man Va. Joint Exercise

The 26th Chemical Detachment, headed by Lt. Guy M. Lovelace, will travel to Fort Lee, Va., where, for approximately 23 days, it will engage in the joint armed forces exercise known as LOGEX (logistical exercise). Lt. Gen. John S. Six-Month Separation Finally Past

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Two-year-old Kathy Burns probably hasn't learned how to weep tears of joy. But tears or no tears tomorrow she will be one of the happiest little ladies at Fort Benning. Daddy's coming home.

Capt. Thornton Burns along with hundreds of other soldier fathers and husbands in the 2nd Infantry Division's 38th Infantry will finally be reunited with his family at Fort Benning after six months of separation.

Joyous Reunion

Joyous reunion was the order of the day at Fort Benning's Sand Hill this week as planeload after planeload of Europe - trained combat-ready infantry soldiers and officers completed their final 5,000 mile trip across the Atlantic on the Army's unit rotation system, Rotaplan.

Plane trips for these men began at Rhein Main Air Force Base in Germany early this week. They were flown to Turner Air Force Base in Albany, Ga., and completed the trip to Fort Benning by bus. Final elements arrive tomorrow.

First to arrive was the command group of 19 officers and noncommissioned officers, including 38th commander, Col. Maurice C. Holden. They arrived by helicopter at Sand Hill's Wetherby Field at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

They were met by an official division welcoming party and by the wives and families they have not seen for half a year.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander greeted and addressed the command group. He was introduced by Col. Lucien F. Keller, commander of the 2nd's 3rd Brigade, who was in charge of the ceremonies.

Speaks German

Col. Holden spoke briefly to the assembled families and friends, saying that the 38th was "very pleased to be back after a most successful mission." The colonel spoke in German.

Throughout this week some 1,500 men of the 38th have followed the command group's lead, returning to Fort Benning in the same combat gear they departed in six months ago.

According to Col. Holden, the men have successfully completed a difficult mission in what proved to be this century's worst European winter.

They have been training alongside Europe - stationed armed forces, participating in exercises and combat problems with Seventh U. S. Army units and combined North Atlantic SUPERMAN? . . . Generals craned their necks and privates sank deeper into their foxholes at 87th Infantry training held recently at Fort Benning. They had visitors: Air support from MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., in the form of giant jets, flying low and bombing ahead of attacking 2nd Division troops. This sight is scheduled to occur more often in the 2nd Division as joint Army and Air Force training exercises become a regular occurrence.

'King' Artillery, Superior Support

By Bob Garner

When President John F. Kennedy announced in May 1961 that he was "directing the Secretary of Defense to undertake a complete reorganization and modernization of the Army's divisional structure," the husband of the "Queen of Battles" — the "King" artillery — could not yet be totally aware of the significance these words would have on this deadly supporting arm of combat.

In the beginning of 1962, President Kennedy delivered his second State of the Union message to Congress, and his words shed still more light on the role to be played by the modern artillery in a world in which combat forces face an extreme variety of situations and environments to which they may be asked to fight.

At this time the President said: "We intend to have at all times the capacity to resist non-nuclear or limited attacks — as a complement to our nuclear capacity, not a substitute. We have rejected any all - or - nothing posture which would leave no choice but inglorious retreat or unlimited retaliation."

The meaning was clear: the posture of American military power was to be altered in such a way that there would be a more even balance of non-nuclear and nuclear firepower.

Emphasis was being placed on conventional arms — and low yield tactical nuclear arms — increasing our capability for limited war (the most likely form of conflict, according to Department of the Army officials).

Nuclear weapons were to be improved — in both the infantry and artillery — but the improvements were to be complemented by increased conventional forces, affording us a choice other than "inglorious retreat or unlimited retaliation."

Division Artillery, commanded by Col. Ralph K. Jones, the "King" affected by the President's words, and the primary source of fire support organic to the 2nd Division, is designed to facilitate direct support of the brigades, while insuring flexible general support of the division.

Three 105 milimeter howitzer battalions — the 15th, 17th, and 38th — are provided so that one may be available for direct support of, or attachment to, each infantry brigade.

The normal support requirement of the 2nd Division calls for the 38th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Francis A. Chance Jr., to support the 1st Brigade (still to be formed), the 15th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. John M. Evans, to support the 2nd Brigade, and the 17th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert, to support the 3rd Brigade.

General Support

In addition to these direct support battalions, the 12th Artillery, with its two batteries of Honest John Rockets, and the 37th Artillery, with its three batteries of 155 millimeter howitzers and its one 8-inch howitzer battery, provide general support for the division with both nuclear and non-nuclear fire. Commanding the 12th and 37th Artillery Battalions respectively are Lt. Col. Terence W. Huck, and Lt. Col. John E. Connelly

The new Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) organization of division artillery, which results in a 45 per cent increase in 105 millimeter howitzers and an overall increase in conventional artillery of 17 per cent, has 12th Artillery, formerly consisting of one Honest John battery and one 8-inch battery of Honest Johns, resulting in a total of four of these rocket launchers. The 8-inch howitzer battery of the 12th Artillery became Battery D of the 37th under ROAD, giving the latter battalion — the largest in the division— both a nuclear and conventional capability.

With this increased firepower, improved mobility, increased organizational flexibility, and improved command and control facilities, the 2nd Division is designed to be a superior combat force capable of being tailored to meet changing requirements and threats, and the Division Artillery is designed to be a superior supporting force.

Coming

Next week THE BAYONET will feature the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, in this special Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) series. The "Gary Owen" 7th Cavalry since the days of the 2nd Division's organization at Fort Benning, has provided the division with its invaluable ground reconnaissance talents, coupled with tank and infantry skill.

ROTA FAMILY SERVICE CENTER CHANGES HANDS
(L-R) Mrs. Cochran, Mrs. Paul, Mrs. Corley, Mrs. Holden

'ROTA' Gets New Leaders As 9th, 23rd Take Over

By COLIN HIGGINS

The 2nd Infantry Division's Rota Family Service Center changed hands recently in a ceremony that Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general, called unique in Army history.

Mrs. Maurice C. Holden, wife of the commander of the 38th Infantry and coordinator of the center, handed the keys of the building over to Mrs. John T. Corley, wife of the assistant division commander.

The 38th Infantry returned this week from Germany where they had spent a six-month tour as the first unit to participate in the Army's new rotation system, Rotaplan. They were replaced by the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Mrs. Corley thanked Mrs. Holden for all the time and effort she and the other 38th ladies had put into the center and then passed over the keys to the new coordinators, Mrs. Donald T. Paul and Mrs. John Cochran, wives of the commanders of the two Germany-bound units.

The Rota Center, which was organized last October by the ladies of the 38th Infantry, has been "outstandingly successful" said Gen. Billingslea in a short address to the assembled ladies. "The six-month Germany rotation plan is a new concept with many problems," said the general, "but the problem of dependents being left behind has been energetically met by the 'Rota Wives' Center. It has been a marvelous morale booster and Mrs. Holden and her associates deserve the highest praise for a job well done."

"I believe this is the first center of its kind in the Army and so this ceremony is unique and unprecedented," he said.

The general concluded by pledging the full support of the division behind the center. "Your husbands while in Germany can feel confident," he said, "that their wives and families will be cared and looked after while they are away."

Col. Lucien F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander, also spoke to the ladies and pledged his support.

The ceremony concluded with a short prayer by the division chaplain, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser, after which refreshments were served.

COOK of the WEEK

This week's "Cook of the Week" is Mrs. Kenneth Hangartner, wife of MSgt. Kenneth Hangartner. She is the chairman of the hospital committee of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead and is a volunteer Gray Lady. She has submitted as one of her favorite recipes, Mom's Kolache Dough.

MOM'S KOLACHE DOUGH

1 cup milk, scalded
1-3 cup sugar
1-3 cup butter or margarine
1 envelope dry yeast, dissolved in ¼-cup lukewarm water
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mace
3 cups flour
2 eggs

Here's How

Combine milk, butter, sugar, salt, lemon rind, mace and mix. Cool to lukewarm, then add yeast, then eggs and flour. Beat well; cover and let rise 2 hours. Beat and let rise 45 minutes.

Roll out on floured cloth, cut with 2-inch round cutter. Place on greased baking sheets, cover, and let rise 15 minutes. Place 1 teaspoon of jelly or preserves in center of each round, then bake in 350 degree oven 15 to 20 minutes.

2nd's Glorious 'Always First' Fades Away

By Bob deCamara

An old-line Army unit which traces its traditions through 172 years of combat and peacetime service became inactive Tuesday morning at Fort Benning's Essebagger Field.

For most 38th Infantry soldiers the next few days will be spent seeing their families as officers and men take long anticipated leave time. When they return they face another difficult task: reorganization from the battle group structure into the battalion system of the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept. As they take on this new assignment they join with the rest of the modernized 2nd Infantry Division which has been reorganizing since the first days of 1963.

The Strategic Army Corps' reorganizing 2nd Infantry Division lost the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, as one of the final changes in division reorganization. Personnel of the 1st Infantry, along with the battle group's fighting gear, were transferred to new units officially activated during the morning's ceremonies.

Under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept, the "Second to None" Division is trading in five battle groups for a number of smaller, more flexible battalions. The 1st Infantry is the second to the last division battle group to be inactivated. Division reorganization will be complete upon the return and subsequent reorganization of the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, which began arriving home this week from six months temporary duty in Germany under the Rotaplan unit rotation system.

Three new units were formed from the 1st Infantry. In the midst of the Essebagger Field ceremony men of the 1st switched from familiar battle group formation to line up as Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade; 2nd Battalion, 22rd Infantry; and Company B of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry. The parade and the changeover concluded with new units passing in review.

Col. Edgar R. Poole, commander of the 1st Infantry at Fort Benning, has been named to head the new brigade. The deputy commander of the 1st Infantry, Lt. Col. Ted E. Gordinier, became executive officer of the 1st Brigade. He acted as commander of troops in the review.

Lt. Col. William E. Conger now commands the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry. Formerly he served as executive officer of the "Always First." Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade commander is Capt. Joseph Canty and Company B, 38th Infantry is to be commanded by Capt. Cecil Ramsey.

Reviewing officer for the ceremonies was Col. Poole. Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the division, was present along with assistant division commanders, Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley.

Subdivided Force

The ROAD concept under which all the changes are taking places at the "Indianhead" Division envisions a large combat force (a division) subdivided into a number of smaller units (battalions) which can be attached to various brigade headquarters according to the number of battalions necessary to get the job at hand done. In other words, commanders of reorganized divisions will be better able to choose the exact amount of force for specific battle field missions.

Guerrilla and counter-guerrilla operations all over the world in recent years have shown that a division equipped for tactical, nuclear warfare is not always structured in the best way to meet the threat of small-size guerrilla forces. The ROAD concept provides for all types of conflict from the nuclear battle field all the way down the scale to a small anti-guerrilla action.

Long planned, the 2nd Infantry Division is the first old-line division to undergo ROAD. Expected to be complete by June, the "Second to None" will show the way to stateside sister divisions such as airborne units also belonging to the always ready, quick - reacting Strategic Army Corps.

The 1st Infantry's 2nd Battle Group which Tuesday terminated it active Army duty began its history on March 3, 1791 as the 2nd Regiment of Infantry. Since then, it has passed through a series of transformations until, as a "pentomic-type" battle group, it was inactivated Tuesday.

Combined Arms Undergo Testing at Armor Center

By 72nd Armor PIO

Another annual trip to Fort Stewart, Ga., is over for 2nd Division tankers taking Army training tests with the help of supporting infantrymen, engineers and artillerymen.

The 1st Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor, returned Friday after four weeks at this tank training center. In command of the tank battalion was Maj. Dave Termin Jr. Directing the Army training test that concluded operations at Fort Stewart was the 2nd Brigade, commanded by Col. Dwight R. Dickson.

Newly reorganized under the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept, the 72nd took a new structure to Fort Stewart. They were accompanied by several attached units including Company A, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry; two armored bridges and an engineer platoon from the 2nd Engineer Battalion; Battery C, 17th Artillery, and liaison and forward observers of the 15th Artillery.

Rigorous Three Days

Tankers underwent rigorous three days of intensive and swift-moving battle, testing the unit's abilities and effectiveness in a combat situation.

Tests were highlighted by visits of Maj. Gen. Charles Billingsley, division commander; and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander.

Initial training commenced with companies under control of their individual commanders. The first four days consisted of all phases of operations with emphasis placed on control and night movement.

In Mock War

Tank and infantry teams supported by artillery and engineers moved against each other for four days in offensive and defensive mock war that covered the entire western portion of the Fort Stewart reservation. Movement around the clock was not uncommon.

Tank, infantry and support units learned to work together to get their jobs done as a team, utilizing advantages of each branch at each was called for. One of the objectives of Fort Stewart training was to develop a combined arms team.

Exercises conducted prior to the battalion's Army Training Tests included such subjects as Chemical - biological - radiological problems, mine warfare, patrols and night operations.

The soldiers were from 7th Cavalry's Troop A, taking an escape and evasion course designed to give them an idea of what compound life is like and how to successfully evade capture after escape.

Dogs used in the course were provided by Fort Benning's 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, lending a new source of realism to the rugged course.

Joe Mechanic Knows His Stuff

By 702nd Maintenance PIO

I'll bet there are times when you doubt whether your Motor Pool mechanic really knows his stuff about vehicles.

He'll send a truck back to the maintenance outfit just to get a transmission installed; or a jeep back to get a new engine. And all the while you're thinking he should be able to install that engine himself.

Well he can!

Your mechanic can install transmissions and engines and do lots of those other jobs he normally sends to higher echelons. What you don't savvy is that your organizational mechanic has just about enough time to do his preventive maintenance work, small repairs and replacements.

Sending assemblies or vehicles to maintenance support is smart business. Joe Mechanic knows that he can keep a lot of vehicles rolling that way.

Now if a real emergency comes up you'll see Joe pitch right in and mix his sweat and ingenuity with any job to keep his vehicles rolling. Remember though, we said a real emergency.

Yes, we have painted Joe Mechanic as a wonderful guy. Too wonderful! Joe's as good as he's painted. Joe is all the mechanics in the Army.

Now your outfit might have a Joe who just doesn't come up to standard. You know — doesn't step on you drivers when you forget to do your Preventive Maintenance services, fails to correct faults you report, sloppy with his inspections, doesn't learn all he can about the vehicles he has to care for, doesn't savvy the new Equipment Record System and brags about doing 3rd Echelon jobs (at the expense of his own 2nd echelon work).

You might try a little psychology on him. The next time your Joe is just resting with nothing in particular to do, sort of stroll by and hand him this issue opened to this article.

He might take the hint.

Chicago's Crumbly

23rd's Boxer Aims for Lightheavy Crown

By 23rd Infantry PIO

"In three years I'm going to be lightheavy champ of the world with no sweat!"

This unusual statement was made by a five-foot eleven-inch, 173-pound boxer from Company B, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry named Amos L. Crumbly.

17 Knockouts

A man you would be advised to meet under friendly circumstances, Sgt. Crumbly has been undefeated in 32 fights and has scored 17 knockouts.

Born in Erie, Pa., in 1939, he early moved to Chicago and started boxing, organized and unorganized, in grade school in the Chicago area. He literally lived in the ring until 1959 when he seriously considered making boxing a career. His training partner, Rudy Ellis, number two ranking middleweight at one time, helped him a lot.

Enrolling in a Chicago trade school, Crumbly went to Wilson Junior College upon graduation. During this time he trained with Pete Rademaker, former Olympic heavyweight champion and ranked professional heavyweight, and Jimmie Boyd, a sparring partner of Floyd Patterson.

Benning Champ

In October 1962 in the Army, Crumbly won a decision over William E. C. Boroughs of the 10th Artillery, Fort Benning, for the Fort Benning championship. Boroughs was the champion at the time. Crumbly was then slated to go to the 3rd Army championships but was unable to be released by the 2nd Division.

Sgt. Larry Jones, training noncommissioned officer in the Special Services office at Fort Benning, says of Crumbly, "With proper training he should move through the higher competition easily. He has the determination and stamina to be a great fighter." A man who is usually listened to, Sgt. Jones was himself the 3rd Army champ from 1947 to 1951 and All-Army champ in 1949 and 1950.

Crumbly attributes his success to Sgt. Jones; Larry Armedee, Joe Louis' ex-trainer; and Johnny Cloulawn, former world featherweight champion.

Sgt. Crumbly has been written up in Ring Magazine as one of the most promising young fighters in years. His awards include a Golden Gloves championship, Young Men's Christian Association (Y. M. C. A.) championships, and four Silver Gloves trophies for his efforts while boxing in the Army.

In his spare time, the infantryman-boxer teaches boxing at the Y.M.C.A. Two nights a week he attends the American University at Fort Benning, working towards a law degree.

Gene Rogers Wins Top Honors Among Post Bowlers

Story and Bevilacqua Place Among Leaders

By Leo Zani

SFC Gene Rogers, a member of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit, took dead aim on the bowling pins and outlasted a starting field of 38 other bowlers to capture first place in the Post Bowling Tournament held last week at the Main Post Bowling Alley.

The sergeant took the lead from Mike Christie in the second day of the five-day tourney by bowling a torrid 643 and 613 series plus a high game of 256.

In the third and fourth days of the roll-off, Gene increased his pinfall total to well over 175 pins over the second-place competitor. Rogers ended his tournament play with a total pinfall of 5855 for a 30-game average of 195.

Story Second

In second place was Bill Story, who closed strong with a final series of 636 and a high game of 246. Story's 30-game pinfall totaled 5714. Third place went to Vince Bevilacqua whose 30-game total pinfall score came to 5664. The former New York State bowler stayed in contention for the top spot but ran into trouble in the last day and slipped down to third.

Dick Abraham, a 2nd Division stylist, grabbed the fourth-place honors with a 5598 total pinfall. Dick moved up from ninth place into contention mid-way in the roll-off with two 600 series but had to settle for a 186 average for the 30 games.

Christie Drops to Fifth

Rounding out the Fort Benning Bowling Team was Dave (Ed) Lee with a pinfall total of 5443. The Special Services sergeant was in second place in the early stages of the tournament, and it looked as if a mild upset was in the making. However, Lee ran into trouble in the fourth day and had to settle for sixth place. Tom Lindig, with a 5439, was named to the team as an alternate.

Miles Drops Out

Jim Miles, the tourney's favorite with a 191 average, was forced to disqualify himself in the second day because of a sore back. Miles has been a standout on recent Fort Benning Teams.

This hand-picked team will now represent the post in the Third U. S. Army Bowling Tournament which will be held at Fort Rucker, Ala., April 30 through May 4. Pre-tournament favorites are Fort Jackson and Fort McClellan, although Fort Benning's team, with a six-man average of 188, stands a good chance of bringing back honors.

Basketball Rule Change Ends Stalling

NEW YORK (AFPS) — A new ruling by the National Basketball Rules Committee may prolong basketball games 12 to 15 minutes next season.

Under the new rule the clock will be stopped on every toot of an official's whistle.

Cliff Fagan, secretary of the rules committee, said the rule is designed to prevent intentional stalling to run out the clock, and also to allow for more substitutions.

Also, the committee passed a rule that makes a defensive player guilty of a personal foul for forcing a player with the ball out of bounds.

Under past rules, the offensive player was merely given the ball to throw in from out of bounds.

Other rules put into effect by the committee are: No official's timeout will be taken for correction or adjustment of a player's wearing apparel. Officials will be required to hand the ball for the throw-in after any violation, not just in the forecourt as under the previous rules.

Technical fouls will be called for having more than five players of one team on the court; when a player who has fouled out or has otherwise been ejected is discovered back in the game and if a player has changed his uniform number during the game.

175 Attend Clinic Held At BWFH

Over 175 future officials were in attendance last Monday as the Softball Clinic got underway with its first class being held at the Briant Wells Field House.

Under the direct supervision of SFC John Russum and assistants SFC Lawrence Jones and SFC Billy Ross, the classes were scheduled to be conducted at the WAC Field with the fundamentals of softball rules, umpiring, and the interpretation of various regulations.

Live exercise such as calling balls and strikes and making decisions on the bases was required from all individuals in order to complete the course.

The Softball Clinic was sponsored by the Athletic Department of the Special Services section, and its main purpose was to qualify those personnel interested in officiating as umpires or officials in major unit or league games.

The Marine Corps' dark brown shoes, worn with service uniforms for more than 70 years, are on their way out and will be replaced by black shoes and other black accessories.

Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

With baseball season only a little less than two weeks old, the standings of the American and National Leagues are already falling in line as expected.

The only exception thus far in the opening weeks is the Minnesota Twins, who are fighting it out with Washington and Cleveland for the cellar in the American League. Both the Senators and Indians are bound for second division standings, but the fine Minnesota club is considered to be the Yankees biggest obstacle on the road to the pennant this year.

The Yankees were quick to grab the top slot recently from Baltimore when they stopped the previously unbeaten Orioles two games out of a three-game series. The Yanks are definitely going to be the team to beat as they have been in past years.

Over in the National League, the poor Mets are playing their usual type of baseball — the losing game. The Mets, after a fine spring showing, are deep in the NL cellar and are even having a tough time buying a run. They seem to be after a record they set last year — suffering the greatest number of defeats ever recorded by a major league club.

The National League champions, the San Francisco Giants already have a foot-hold on the league's top slot with the Pittsburgh Pirates giving them a run for their money.

The only black sheep in the National League is Cincinnati, pushing the Mets for the NL cellar. The Reds will no doubt recover, but presently there is no joy in the Ohio river town.

There must be some baseball luck spilling over from New York in the direction of Philadelphia because the Phillies are high among the competitors. The Phillies were first to score a double killing last Sunday in 1963's opening baseball double-header.

With five months of baseball ahead, anything can happen and I am sure it will. But in the final standings there won't be much change from the first weeks standings — New York and San Francisco will meet for the Series.

Spikers Enter Semi-Finals

Fort Benning's volleyball team remained undefeated Tuesday in the Third Army Volleyball Tournament being held at Fort McClellan, Ala.

The Benning club walloped Fort Gordon in the opening round of the tourney 15-2 and 15-3, behind the spiking of Manuel Lopez and Carl Bryan. Fort Benning gave the Gordon club its worst defeat in tournament play as they took command in the first game 13-0. Gordon rallied for two quick points but the fired-up Doughboys broke their serve and ended the game two minutes later, 15-2.

The second game lasted only five minutes and 43 seconds with Benning again on top, 15-3.

In the second game of the tournament, the Benning team faced Fort Campbell and won in two straight games, 15-8 and 15-6. The "Screaming Eagles" proved to be of some competition to the Doughboys in the first game as they pulled ahead of Fort Benning 7-5. Gale Salt and Jim Taylor led Benning to a come-from-behind victory 15-8.

Complete coverage of the tournament will be carried in next week's Bayonet.

U. S. Sends 372 To Pan-Am Games

NEW YORK (AFPS) — A squad of 372 athletes, the largest contingent ever to represent the U. S. in international competition on foreign soil, will carry the American colors in the Pan-American Games at Sao Paulo, Brazil.

During the Pan-Am competition, scheduled for April 20-May 5, the American team of 279 men and 93 women will participate in 21 sports events.

Pan-Am Fistic Team Using 8 Servicemen

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Five interservice boxing champions have places on the U.S. boxing team as a result of bouts won against National AAU champions in Toledo, Ohio, in mid-March.

Three other servicemen fighting for the AAU team also won places on the Pan-Am squad, which will next see action in the Games to be held in Brazil.

Members of the AAU team, including three Air Force fighters, were: lightweight Manuel Rameriqua, civilian; welterweight Wade Smith, civilian; junior-middleweight Freddy Burrs, AF; middleweight Robert Williams, AF; and light-heavyweight Fred Lewis, AF.

Air Force SSgt. Robert "Pappy" Gault, Bolling AFB, a veteran boxer, coach and trainer, was the National AAU coach. This marked the first time a military enlisted man had been named to coach a National AAU squad.

Unusual Names Will Appear on Playbill in Columbus

By Classm Kyle

Peter Thief Chaser, John Good Spring and John Horse Lover are post personnel participating in the Columbus Little Theater's May 1-4 production of the musical, "Guys and Dolls."

To members of their units here, they are better known as Sp5 Tatistcheff, PFC Bonfanti and 2nd Lt. Philp, respectively. The other names are translations of their Russian, Italian and Scottish last names.

John Bonfanti has the major singing role in "Guys and Dolls," that of Sky Masterson. Currently playing the trumpet and singing with the 283rd Army Band, this is his first CLT production.

Bonfanti has been in two productions here — the musical, "Damn Yankees," and "Look Homeward Angel." He is a graduate of Temple University with a degree in music education, and would like to return to the job he "almost had" of teaching high school instrumental music. He also enjoys flying, swimming and meeting new people.

"I'm the first musician in my family," explained Bonfanti, whose home is in Trenton, N.J.

Russian Nickname

"The highly comic role of Benny Southstreet will be played by Tatistcheff.

"Tatistcheff is a Russian nickname, and it doesn't mean "cop' either," he said.

His father, Alexis, was born in the Russian Embassy in Berlin, and his mother, the Princess Agrippina Troubetzkoy, was born in the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg.

Currently, his father is head of the United Nations language bureau in the Congo, stationed at Leopoldville. His mother works with the Institute of International Education, an agency which arranges exchange student programs between the U.S. and foreign countries.

Tatistcheff was graduated from Yale University in 1960, with a BA in English. "After the Army, I plan to return to New York and make a career of either singing, acting or writing," he added.

"I'll find it difficult to leave Columbus when my tour is up in November. I have made a great many friends here and feel the city has much to offer," stressed Tatischeff, who serves as news editor of the 2nd Infantry Division section of The Bayonet.

The third member of the trio is Lt. John Philp, Company B, first Battalion, 58th Infantry.

"Philp," he explained, "Is actually a rather usual Scottish name. In the town where we lived in Scotland — which was about the size of Phenix City — there were four other Philp families."

Lt. Philp now makes his home at Canton, Ohio, and attended Ohio State University. He plans to return to college after his discharge from the Army, probably on the West Coast and possibly at the University of California at Berkeley.

The second lead of Nathan Detroit belongs to Philp, who is also making his first effort with CLT. No stranger to musicals, he has played in "Damn Yankees" and "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

Horse Lover, Good Spring and Thief Chaser. Names to remember! Talents to view May 1-4 at Columbus High School Auditorium.

Trap, Skeet Club Elects '63 Officers

A new Executive Committee has been announced by the Trap and Skeet Club of Fort Benning following recent elections.

New officers for 1963 include Col. Curtis L. Hankins, president, and Lt. Col. Harvey D. Hawley, commander, 57th Transportation Battalion, 10th Air Transport Brigade, vice president.

Secretarial duties of the club will be handled by Maj. Henry H. Parr of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit. Lt. Col. Edwin P. Gebhardt, Infantry Center Provost Marshal Section, will serve as treasurer.

Lt. William C. Morris, III, was selected as range control officer.

According to Col. Hankins, commander of Lawson Army Aviation Command, the new club has greatly expanded active membership during its first year of operation.

"Membership is open both to military and civilians and offers sportsmen an unusual opportunity to enjoy either trap or skeet shooting at very nominal costs," he said.

Informal practice shooting is conducted each Sunday afternoon at the ranges, adjacent to Hook Range. Qualified shooters are on hand to assist beginners.

Anyone interested in either type of shotgun sport is encouraged to visit the club during the hours of operation, 1-5 p.m. each Sunday.

Engineer Platoon Builds 2 Copter Pads in 36 Hrs.

Seven men of the Earthmoving Platoon of Company D, 864th Engineer Battalion, under the direction of Lt. Peter M. Maloney, recently completed the construction of two 50-foot square helicopter pads for the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) in 36 hours.

The platoon received instructions for the project at 10 a.m. on April 11 and began work at 1 p.m. the same day. The project was completed and ready for use by 5 p.m. the following day.

Construction consisted of preparing the area, installing a canvas dust cover, and laying 5,000 square feet of steel planking.

The new pads will provide helicopter landing facilities immediately adjacent to the Headquarters of the newly formed division.

JUDO HOLD DEMONSTRATED
Lt. Kyle Grabs 1st Lt. J. R. Salyer

Judo, Karate Expert Assigned to New Unit

A holder of the Black Belt in judo and karate, 1st Lt. George W. Kyle has been assigned to Troop B, 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry of the newly activated 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group (Test).

He developed an interest in judo while attending high school in his hometown. After entering the University of Kentucky, Lt. Kyle earned the coveted Black Belt in the first degree in both judo and karate.

Lt. Kyle explains that the most commonly taught form of judo was originated by Professor Jigoro Kano of the higher Normal School in Tokyo, Japan, in the 1880s. Judo taught by Professor Kano shifts the emphasis from combat to sport and character building. In judo, students are taught the various breakfalls, throws and holds.

A judo student may advance five grades, each with a different color belt for the loose-fitting judo coat. When they reach the distinguished black belt or master class the grades are divided into proficiency.

Karate differs from judo in that karate can be a deadly means of dealing with an antagonist when used by an expert. Karate requires strict self discipline in order to maintain a calm attitude when being attacked.

A karate expert must possess emotional control, or his skill will become ineffective through anger. A trained karate man employs his art of self defense by striking his opponent's vulnerable points to maim, paralyze or kill if the situation demands.

One of the requirements to qualify for the Black Belt in both judo and karate is for the student to appear before a board of experts. These experts must hold a higher degree than the student.

Lt. Kyle graduated from Kentucky in 1961. He entered the Army in September of the same year. When he completed the Infantry Officer's Orientation Course here, he volunteered for Airborne Training. He worked with the Airborne Department for a short time after becoming Airborne qualified.

In February, 1961, he was selected to attend Rotary and Fixed Wing School at Fort Rucker, Ala. Then he was assigned to Fort Ord, Calif., coming to his new assignment with the 11th from Fort Ord.

No Money Is Saved By Buying Dentures

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

Do your gums hang low? Teeth wobble to and fro? Do they ache all night? All in a horrid sight.

This could be humorous poetry, but the descriptions given here are common and definitely not funny. Do you fit the description? If so, what is the answer?

Simple enough — get dentures after having all your teeth extracted. I am sure most people will not be in agreement, but this is a common practice.

But is this our answer? Will it save you all the money people say it will? It will not save you a penny! By the time you have paid for your extractions and dentures, you will have paid a few hundred dollars. You will receive, in return, all the chewing capacity of not 28 teeth, but approximately eight or nine teeth.

The expense doesn't end here. These dentures will not last a lifetime, the average life of dentures being only a few years. Over 25 years, your total expense will be $1,000 or more. How many of you have spent this amount on your mouths?

If you had at the proper time you would never need dentures, and you would have much greater chewing capacity than the 25 per cent that false teeth can give.

Don't spend money sporadically on tooth care. This is an expensive way to care for anything. Go twice a year, catch them while they're small.

Don't gamble with your teeth — some gambles do pay off, but the following are sure bets. Each dollar spent on fluoride pays off every time! Fluoride applications and toothbrushing three to four times daily, pay off at high rates, as do x-ray, early fillings, and reducing sugar in the diet.

Fuzzy teeth are your responsibility. The smile of health is the smile of youth. Think young.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, Ga., or telephone 545-7741.

WAC EXEC . . . 1st Lt. Frances Darleene Stone has assumed duties as executive officer of the WAC Company, Infantry Center Troop Command. She holds a bachelor of fine arts degree from the University of Kansas and was commissioned at Lawrence, Kans., Aug. 15, 1961.

E-4s Lose Immunity To Penalty

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army E-4s lost their immunity to three summary court punishments under a regulation change published during the first week in April.

Sentences of confinement, hard labor without confinement and two-grade busts may be imposed now by summary courts on any personnel below the grade of E-5, according to Change 5 to AR 600-20.

Col. Olney Commands AA Brigade

The first Army career Infantry officer to receive Master Aviation Wings, Lt. Col. Gregory L. Olney, has been assigned as commander of the 10th Air Assault Transportation Brigade, 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

Col. Olney entered the Army in 1943 and was commissioned in the Infantry here in 1944. During World War II he served with the 32nd Infantry Division in the Pacific Theater. In 1946 he entered Liaison Pilot School at San Marcos, Tex. He has been in Army aviation ever since.

He spent two years as an instructor here in 1951-1952, teaching battalion and regimental tactics in The Infantry School.

He received his Master Aviator Wings last summer from Lt. Gen. Hamilton H. Howze, commanding general of XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Before assuming his new position, Col. Olney was an instructor at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan. He was author-instructor in the Department of Larger Units at the college.

Lt. Perdue Assumes Company Command

Second Lt. George P. Perdue has assumed command of Company C, 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction), succeeding 1st Lt. Kenneth D. Jobe, who has departed for duty in Korea.

Lt. Perdue joined the battalion in February, 1962, as a Platoon leader. Until assuming command of the company, he was its operations officer.

Medical Aid Under Study

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A joint study group headed by Rear Adm. William N. New has been named by Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) Norman S. Paul to evaluate health and medical benefits for retired military personnel.

Defense Department, Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force personnel have been named to the study group. Invited also are members of the Coast Guard, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey not under DOD control.

The study is being made because of the great importance retired personnel place on selecting permanent retirement homes near military medical facilities.

The study group will examine current health plan trends. It is charged with the responsibility of developing several alternate solutions for Secretary of Defense McNamara's final consideration. The group's report is expected to be ready before the end of 1963.

Col. Agnew Is Assigned To ICDA

Lt. Col. Robert H. Agnew has joined the Plans Division of the Infantry Combat Developments Agency (ICDA).

The colonel recently returned to the U.S. after serving in the Logistics Branch of the U.S. Army's European Headquarters.

Assigned as a project officer at ICDA, Col. Agnew will work to visualize the Army's organization, equipment and method of fighting in the future.

Three times the colonel has been a student at The Infantry School. In 1942, he completed the Officer Candidate School, subsequently attended the basic airborne course and officer advanced course.

He is also a graduate of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Among Col. Agnew's awards and decorations are the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infantryman and Senior Parachutist Badges.

USSR Accepts Proposal For Emergency 'Hot Line'

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Soviet Union has accepted the U.S. proposal for a direct "hot line" communications link between Moscow and Washington to reduce the threat of accidental war.

The acceptance marked the first practical achievement of the year-old Geneva disarmament conference.

President Kennedy and his aides prefer a teletype line in lieu of a telephone fearing that in times of crisis there might be hazardous problems of translation or misinterpretation involved in an oral exchange.

Semyon K. Tsarapkin, Soviet delegate at the conference, also announced Russian agreement to the U.S. suggestion that each of the two governments would be responsible for the installation, maintenance and security of the line on its own territory.

In the past, messages have customarily been sent through embassies in code by commercial cable. This proved too slow during the Cuban crisis.

Washington heard some of Moscow's most urgent messages on Moscow Radio broadcast hours before the messages were delivered to the White House. To speed its replies, Washington sent some messages to the Soviet embassy here which then transmitted them in Russian over an open telephone line, eliminating the need for coding and decoding.

President Kennedy had urged acceptance of this proposal, saying that instantaneous or "relatively instantaneous" communication is very desirable in the nuclear age.

Lt. Harris Is IOOC Honor Grad

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, was speaker for the graduation ceremonies. He presented the honor graduate with his certificate and a desk set.

Addressing the graduating body, Gen. Reynolds said enlisted men are not primarily interested in where an officer acquires his commission. They are more interested in being properly led and administered.

The officer must be prepared to take on added responsibilities when he wears that uniform, Gen. Reynolds added.

"This course," Gen. Reynolds continued, "is just a beginning." It is a foundation on which to prepare for any and all eventualities. This country has had emergencies before and it will have them in the future, he stated.

Gen. Reynolds concluded by saying that the time to prepare for any emergency is now, and both the officer and his men must be prepared for that contingency.

During the ceremonies Gen. Reynolds presented 2nd Lt. David M. Burke, Military Stakes Competition winner, a desk set for making a score of 935 points out of a possible 1,000. The competition is a field exercise covering most of the subjects taught during the course.

Second Lt. David A. Boulon received a plaque for his high score of 469 points out of a possible 500 in the Physical Combat Proficiency Test.

"The courage and efficiency of the Texas Rangers is recalled by Ed Hiler, "The Old Texas Ranger". 83-year-old Ed, still very fast with a gun, likes to talk about the days in the Old West when he knew such famous law men as Bat Masterson, Wyatt Earp and Pat Garrett.

A small 5-foot three, wrinkled-faced man, the Texas Ranger spent many years as a lawman and later went to Hollywood and worked in silent pictures with old cowboy favorites such as Tom Mix, Buck Jones, Ken Maynard and Tim McCoy and starred in his own television show "Tales of the Texas Rangers." He now goes from town to town recalling for young and old the days of the Old West.

700 Marksmen to Seek Titles Here

By SP4 RON CLAXTON

More than 700 marksmen will be here May 3-11 to compete in 43 individual and team events of the Third Army annual rifle and pistol competition.

Leading the way will be the two airborne division teams, the 101st from Fort Campbell, Ky., and the 82nd from Fort Bragg, N. C., which show up annually with members potentially capable of breaking all Third Army records.

Against these powerful teams The Infantry Center is throwing a squad of more than 50 of its finest rifle and pistol shooters.

AR Squad

According to Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, under whose direction the 43 tilts will be conducted, The Infantry Center team will be sparked by a strong automatic rifle squad which, firing during the center matches, shot scores far exceeding those in Third Army record books.

On the rifle scene, 2nd Lt. Joseph M. Mabry, the center's rifle team captain, predicts a good showing by his 18 riflemen who will be anchored by SFC Kenneth H. Strunk, The Infantry Center's top individual rifleman for 1963.

MSgt. Vincent Melillo, the center's pistol coach, spots PFC James E. Hales, The Infantry Center's highest individual pistolman, and SSgt. Hassel M. Upchurch, the .45 caliber champion during the post matches as his stalwart two.

TIC Strength

The .22 caliber tilts are another high point with the post team, the pistol coach added.

"This is where we should be strongest," he said.

Coach Melillo also noted that a large number of pistolmen this year are new to post and Army-area competition.

Other teams entering will represent Fort Gordon and Fort Stewart, Ga., Forts McClellan and Rucker and Redstone Arsenal, Ala., and Fort Jackson, S. C. National Guard and Reserve unit teams also will make a strong appearance.

A colorful opening ceremony will kick-off the matches, featuring Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, as guest speaker.

The public is invited to the ceremonies and also to watch the firing of the Third Army championships.

The opening events are slated to begin at McAndrew Range on Dixie Road at 8:30 a.m. May 3.

Staff College Group Sees Infantry in Action

Nineteen faculty members and 210 students from the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va., arrived here at 6:10 p.m. Wednesday for a tour of The Infantry Center and Infantry School.

The group, which includes representatives from the Army, Navy and Air Force, four Allied countries and four U. S. civilian governmental agencies, is headed by the school's deputy commandant for the Air Force, Brig. Gen. Philip H. Greasley, and Ernest E. Ramasaur of the State Department.

Thursday at Eubanks Field, Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, officially welcomed the group to the post.

A 45-minute demonstration on jump training was presented by the Airborne - Air Mobility Department following the welcome. They also saw a demonstration on the capabilities and limitations of mobility means and were briefed on Ranger training.

The school's Weapons Department demonstrated the firepower of weapons of a battle group Thursday afternoon. This was followed by a "live" fire problem, "An Infantry - Tank Task Force in Attack," presented by the Command and Staff Department.

A social was held in the Supper Club Annex of the Main Officers' Open Mess Thursday night.

Today the group will see demonstrations at Fryar Field. The first, an Army aircraft familiarization, will begin at 9 a.m., followed by a sky-diving exhibition at 9:50 a.m., and a joint airborne troop carrier demonstration at 10 a.m.

They are scheduled to depart the post at 1:15 p.m.

17 Guns Welcome Former Post CG

A 17-gun salute welcomed back a former Fort Benning commander Thursday.

He is Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., commander in chief of U. S. Army, Europe, who served as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School from May 1, 1958, to April 18, 1960.

Gen. Freeman, accompanied by Mrs. Freeman, received the honors at Chapel Field after being met on his arrival at Lawson Army Airfield by Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

An honor guard formed by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, and artillerymen from 10th Artillery, participated in the honors ceremony. Furnishing music was The Infantry Center Band.

Speech Today

Gen. Freeman will address the combined Infantry officer career classes of The Infantry School at 10 a.m. today at Theater One.

At noon there will be an official luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess in honor of Gen. Freeman, Paul R. Ignatius, assistant secretary of the Army for installations, and Dr. Finn J. Larsen, assistant secretary of the Army for research and development.

The two assistant secretaries arrived here Wednesday, and will depart at 4 p.m. today after touring facilities of The Infantry School. They are also scheduled to visit the Infantry Combat Developments Agency and The Infantry Board.

Buffet Dinner

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and Mrs. Reynolds will entertain Gen. and Mrs. Freeman at a buffet dinner tonight.

Saturday, Gen. Freeman will be briefed on The Infantry School, the new academic building now under construction, and the Reorganization Objectives of The Army Division, better known as the ROAD concept.

Gen. Freeman will also be oriented on the Infantry Combat Developments Agency, a unit of the Combat Developments Command.

The four-star general will be rendered ramp honors at his departure from Lawson Field Monday.

Highlights of the day will include a division review on Lawson Field, aircraft displays, sky diving and static-line parachute jumps, and athletic contests.

Unaccompanied Tours Shortened

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Military personnel who are entitled to take their dependents with them on an overseas duty tour may have hopes for a shorter period of separation from their dependents if they choose to leave them at home.

Under the provisions of a new Department of Defense directive (1315.7) the military services are authorized to reduce to not less than 12 months the overseas tour lengths of personnel who have dependents entitled to be present at the overseas station but elect not to be accompanied by their dependents.

The military services are further authorized by the directive to set at their discretion a flexible tour length of 35 to 48 months in those areas where an "accompanied by dependents" tour length of 36 months previously applied.

In the past, individuals ordered to important positions

High-Ranking British General to Tour Post

Fort Banning will welcome the chief of Great Britain's Imperial General Staff with a 17-gun salute at Chapel Field Tuesday at 8:15 a.m.

Gen. Sir Richard Amgatt Hull is scheduled to arrive at Lawson Army Airfield at 8 a.m.

After the official welcome, he will confer with Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

The remainder of the morning will be spent observing airborne training and officer candidate classes.

Gen. Rich will be host at an official luncheon in the four-star general's honor at the Main Officers' Open Mess at noon.

Afterward, he will attend a special weapons demonstration and tour the reservation by helicopter. At 3:50 p.m. he is scheduled to return to Lawson Field for departure honors.

Confederate Memorial Day Observance Set

Fort Benning personnel today will participate in Confederate Memorial Day ceremonies in Columbus.

The Infantry Center Band will open the ceremonies with a half-hour concert at 3:30 p.m. on the Front Lawn of First Baptist Church.

This will be followed by an invocation by Rev. Weyman R. Cleveland, pastor of Saint Luke Methodist Church, a salute by local Girl Scouts in honor of the Confederate Flag, and remarks by Dr. G. Othel Hand, pastor of First Baptist Church.

Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, will present medals given by the United Daughters of the Confederacy. They will be awarded to direct descendents of soldiers of the Confederacy who served in military action.

At 4:30 p.m., The Infantry Center Band will lead a parade to Linwood Cemetery where Col. Keyes will place a wreath on the grave of Brig. Gen. Henry L. Benning.

Others from Fort Benning marching in the parade will be Col. Keyes and The Infantry Center Honor Guard Company, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, under the command of Capt. Jimmy W. Smith.

A volley from a six-man firing squad from the 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command and the playing of taps will conclude the ceremonies.

Your Dental Health

Aches Don't Always Mean Loss of Tooth

Toothache is never a pleasant thing, and anyone who has suffered with one knows that relief is often more than "just a swallow away."

There are several definite types of toothache, differing in origin, and with a varying prognosis, or expected outcome. The purpose of this article will be to outline some of the types of toothache, their causes and treatment.

Sensitivity to cold, of short duration:

Persons affected should see a dentist as soon as possible. This is usually a warning signal, and the tooth can easily be saved. Often this sensitivity follows a deep filling, in which case it is a normal reaction to a metallic filling.

Sensitivity to cold-pain persists or increases with time, usually lasting for a few minutes:

In this case, go immediately to your dentist, as this is an indication of a cavity which is large and needs immediate attention. The outlook for this tooth depends upon your actions. Quick attention usually results in keeping the tooth.

Tooth feels long, pain persists, but is not intense:

The cause here is usually the breakdown of the nerve, an early process of abcess formation. This may be caused by decay or pyorrhea. The outlook here is poor, unless nerve removal is undertaken.

This is the type which hurts everywhere, and unless diagnosis is good, an upper may be considered the villain when a lower is causing the trouble, or vice versa. Pain of this type often goes away completely, causing the patient to neglect receiving attention for days or months. This type indicates an abcess which may open through the tooth and drain, or cause swelling. A "pimple" may form inside the mouth and finally break and the pain is relieved. The outlook here is bleak, unless heroic means are taken to save the tooth.

Pain causes by heat application, which is relieved by cold: This indicates breakdown (gangrene) of the nerve and blood vessels of the pulp. Gas is formed and heat causes expansion. Cold relieves this by decreasing the volume of the gas. This should receive immediate attention. Pain relief is obtained by drilling a small hole into the pulp chamber, allowing the gas to escape.

Three Former DCGs of Post Are Promoted

Brig. Gens. John E. Kelly, Alexander D. Surles Jr., and Louis A. Walsh Jr., former deputy commanding generals here have been promoted to major general with dates of rank Aug. 1, 1958.

Gen. Kelly served as deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center from June, 1961, until his departure last winter for an assignment in India.

Gen. Surles came here in August, 1960, as deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center. From June, 1961, to his departure in April, 1962, he was assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

He left Fort Benning for duties with Headquarters, Allied Forces South Europe, and U.S. Army European Headquarters in Heidelberg, Germany.

Gen. Walsh was assigned to Fort Benning in September, 1959, as deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center. In August, 1960, he was appointed assistant commandant of The Infantry School. He left here in June, 1961, for an assignment with Headquarters, Eighth U.S. Army in Korea.

Tours

could serve the prescribed "accompanied by dependents" tour length, or, if they chose not to take ther dependents wth them, serve the shorter unaccompanied tour.

The new directive authorizes the application of the longer tour length for personnel assigned to positions specifically designated "key billets" by the Secretary of the Military Department concerned provided government quarters are available and concurrent travel is authorized, whether or not dependents actually accompany the individual concerned.

Post Library Supervisor Senses Change in Serviceman's Reading

Mrs. Mary Jane Galer, supervising librarian of five Special Service libraries here, represents the "new look" in libraries.

Contrary to the popular image of librarians who prowl narrow files of musty books with a checkout stamp in one hand and a pair of bifocals in the other, the globe-trotting Mrs. Galer finds the work of an Army librarian to be full of opportunities and demanding of her energy, ideas and sense of humor.

Through her employment by Department of the Army in Special Services, she has served as librarian in such far-away countries as Korea and Japan.

"There has been a drastic change in the type of material read by soldiers since 1948. Soldiers are becoming more and more active in the general pursuit of knowledge through both fiction and non - fiction material," Mrs. Galer observed.

Mrs. Galer came here in 1961 and originally worked as a librarian at Sand Hill.

She now supervises the libraries at the 197th Infantry Brigade, 58th Infantry, Harmony Church Service Club, Kelly Hill, and the nearly completed library on 8th Division Road in Harmony Church.

"Air conditioners, brightly painted bookshelves, and music rooms make libraries more cheerful and comfortable than ever before," added Mrs. Galer.

"The overall effect has greatly helped our libraries in becoming the focal point of a great many worthwhile activities which have assisted the soldier in becoming better educated," she said.

"Enlarged reference files and material, plus the most recent books available are meeting the demands of our soldiers," she continued. "But, we welcome and appreciate any suggestions the men may make as to future additions."

Mrs. Galer summed up work as a librarian by saying, "Library work is a most rewarding experience because you help people to develop themselves more fully through the use of books."

Viet Nam Veteran Is New S-1

Maj. Edward C. Radcliff recently assumed duties of S-1, The Student Brigade, succeeding Lt. Col. Lowell W. Hesser, who has been named TSB's deputy commander.

Before coming here Maj. Radcliff was stationed in Viet Nam.

Maj. Radcliff entered the Army in 1943, and was sent to Europe. He returned to the U. S. in 1946, and came here for Airborne training. Upon completion of training he went to Fort Bragg, N. C., where he became a supply officer in the Division Quartermaster office of the 82nd Airborne Division.

In 1948, he returned here to take the Associate Infantry Officer Basic Course. From here Maj. Radcliff went to Fort Jackson and later to Fort Campbell, Ky.

Going overseas again, he went to the Far East Command and served with the 187th Regimental Combat Team.

Returning to the U. S., Maj. Radcliff came here to take the Infantry Officer Advanced Course. Next he went on ROTC duty at Southern University in Atlanta for three years.

In 1956 he took the management course at Georgia State College. From there he went to Europe where he stayed until 1960. From there he went to Fort Bragg and Viet Nam.

Maj. Radcliff holds the Good Conduct Medal, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Distinguished Unit Citation, Navy Distinguished Unit Citation, and Master Parachutist Badge with two combat stars.

Col. Nettles to Head Post AF Management Assn.

Lt. Col. William R. Nettles Jr. was elected president of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Armed Forces Management Association at a luncheon meeting last Tuesday at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

He is deputy comptroller of The Infantry Center.

Col. Nettles will succeed Col. Dale D. Dixon.

Other officers elected include T. A. Barefoot, Infantry Center civilian personnel officer who will serve as first vice president, and Lt. Col. John W. Williams, deputy G-4 (logistics officer), second vice president.

Mrs. M. T. Lewis, program analyst for the G-1 (Personnel) Section, secretary, and Miss Jean Allen, budget analyst in the Comptroller Section, treasurer, both of Columbus.

Three council members elected include J. D. Reed, district manager of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, Carl McDonald, deputy signal officer of The Infantry Center, and Thomas Bass, chief of operations for The Infantry Center Maintenance Section, all of Columbus.

Following the election, Dewey L. Posey discussed data processing at Fort Benning.

Posey, who is a systems analyst in The Infantry Center Data Processing Section established April 1, explained punch card equipment and electronic computers as applied to data processing at a military installation.

"It is tentatively planned for this installation to receive and be prepared to operate an electronic digital computer by July 1, 1964," Posey said.

"While we at Benning are perfecting a system for personnel accounting, other Class I installations will work on logistics and finance operations," Posey continued. "It is expected that the Department of the Army will allow each installation to install all three applications of digital computing when the systems have proven to be proficient."

One Army Concept... Older Than Nation

One hundred eighty-eight years ago, on April 19, 1775, "the shot heard 'round the world" was fired by a militiaman — one of the Minutemen facing General Gage's professionals at Concord Bridge. Two months later the Minutemen, other volunteers, and the few professional soldiers of the 13 colonies were formed into an Army under the command of General Washington. This was the birth of the U.S. Army and the beginning of the One Army concept.

These Minutemen of 1775 were the forerunners of the dedicated citizens who, on a moment's notice, have dropped the tools of trade and have taken up the tools of war in defense of liberty From the Revolutionary War to the Berlin Crisis of 1961, the citizen-soldier has left office, factory, and farm to answer the call of our country.

It is not feasible for our country to maintain indefinitely a standing Army large enough for a total military effort. We must have a back-up strength of combat ready Reserve Forces for emergency deployment. Any future conflict will not allow us the luxury of time for arming behind the protection of the seas.

The Berlin call-up emphasized the fact that Reserve Forces today must be compatible with the Active Army units which they will be called upon to reinforce. They must be as responsive, as flexible, and as capable as Army units on active duty. Therefore, improvements to meet these requirements must be a continuing process.

The broad program for strengthening the Reserve Components announced last December 4th is well underway, with completion of reorganization anticipated within the near future. The objective of maximum mobilization readiness in the Reserve Forces will continue to receive the emphasis it requires. In this effort, each member of the One Army team will play a vital role in an essential organization which has but one purpose — to be organized, trained and equipped for prompt and sustained land combat.

Reading: Basic Right Too Often Forgotten

This week Fort Benning has joined with the nation in observing National Library Week. Each of the post's libraries is emphasizing the week's slogan, "Read: The Fifth Freedom."

Many things seem to be taken for granted in this day and age. We seldom stop to think that the pleasures we enjoy today have not always been available to the world's citizenry, and still aren't in many parts of the globe.

Hitler burned the books. The Soviets purged a Pulitzer Prize winner. Some of the world"s finest fiction and non-fiction is banned behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains.

But, in the United States, there is no ban placed on any book, unless that book is considered by representatives of the people as being something immoral. Through this freedom to read as one desires, what one desires, we remain a strong nation. Without the wisdom of the classic philosophers, the contemporary novelists or the history tellers, think how little this nation would have grown and prospered.

Books have not been solely responsible for America's greatness, but they have played a major role. Our freedom to read is a basic right which should be exercised more often by more people.

Start this week to exercise your fifth freedom. Read!

Capitol Notes

Senators Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) and Representative Frank Thompson Jr. (D-N.J.) all heartily endorsed the upcoming Armed Forces Chess Tournament. The three lawmakers all inserted remarks favorable to the Chess Program into the Congressional Record.

Coast Guard funds cut. The Congressional economy drive has hit the Coast Guard. In approving the Treasury Appropriations Bill, the House eliminated $3.1 million of the USCG budget and told the Coast Guard to "absorb" the next step in the civilian pay raise ($277,000) as well as $600,000 of the increase in military quarters and per diem payments.

New threat. When questioned about Russian aerial flights over U.S. carriers, Adm. George W. Anderson told Congress he is "not worried" about the flattops but is concerned about free world shipping "which will have an additional threat put on it if the Russians expand their air operation over the ocean." In the event of war, he said, the Russian aircraft are certain to "be manned with air-to-surface missiles which can attack our tankers, our cargo ships, and our amphibious ships and it is going to pose a greater threat to us than we have faced in the past."

Bolte action unlikely: Now it's official. Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) has confirmed reports that Bolte career officer legislation will not get far in Congress this year.

Strong U. S. Depends On Good Leadership

Leadership — what is it? It is the art of convincing others to willingly follow you. This quality is probably the most important of all those necessary in the military.

The organization of the Armed Forces is predicated on the idea that some men will follow others for the purpose of organized action. Those who are followed are leaders. The possession of leadership is as vital to successful military organizations as the weapon the serviceman fires. Without it absolutely nothing can be accomplished.

Regardless of his job, whether it be as platoon leader or fleet admiral, the serviceman must accept the responsibility of developing his qualities of leadership and using them well. Upon this ability can depend the lives of his men and the success of his mission. And upon the success of his mission can depend the freedom of many others.

Totalitarian states have no desire to develop leadership in their military personnel. It wants those who obey from fear and not those who obey from a sense of responsibility. It wants those who lead by fear and not those who lead with a sense of responsibility.

If we are to win this cold war, if we are to see our freedom and the freedom of those who trust us survive, we must develop within ourselves the true quality of leadership, that we may recognize it and follow it willingly and possess it ourselves should the need arise.

Whatever responsibility we may have we must learn from it and prepare ourselves for the greater responsibility to come. Without that strange free spark of leadership, tended and encouraged, no nation can live. (AFPS)

The Happy Life

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James B. Blunk

"Was I ever surprised! I had no idea he was like that!" All of us have had the experience of seeing people in new situations, quite different from those in which we usually know them. In such circumstances we see new facets of their personality, come to new insights of their abilities, and gain new appreciation for them as unique persons. Each new experience we share with another person deepens our understanding.

Through the reading of the Gospels we share in the life of our Lord as He finds Himself in many different situations. Each of these contriubtes both to our understanding of Him and of the abundant life He offers.

We are privileged, in John 2:1-11, to read how our Lord moved into a situation which differed sharply from most of the others in which we find Him. He joined in one of the happy social events of human life as He attended a wedding as a guest. Not only did He live with heroic nobility in danger, He also joined His friends in a party. We treasure this account of Jesus because it helps us to know Him more fully.

The insight that Jesus can share with us in every phase of life is most significant. Not only is He present in the high moments of worship but in the hours of ordinary work; not only in the crises of sorrow, but in the joys of a happy social event. Christ did not hold aloof from human happiness. He was at the wedding feast; He did not fail to fit in, or make others uncomfortable.

Sometimes we followers of Christ have made religion austere, long-faced, gloomy and sad. His religion, to be sure, is a serious and most important matter; nonetheless, it provides the basis for the happy life. The presence of Christ in our midst transforms every situation. If we can but grasp the truth that He can enrich life for us, then we might aptly declare: "Was I ever surprised! I had no idea that He was like that!"

Post, Nation to Observe 'Law Day'

Fort Benning personnel ... observe May 1 as Law Day, U.S.A., in keeping with a proclamation issued by President John F. Kennedy.

In addition to the proclamation, post personnel have received Law Day messages from Lt. Gen. Albert Watson, II, commanding general of Third U.S. Army, Fort McPherson, and Maj. Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Plans for the annual Law Day observance here include displays at strategic locations throughout the post, a television appearance by a member of the Staff Judge Advocate Corps, programs in the Fort Benning Children's Schools and special mention of the day in the pulpits of the post chapels.

Lt. Col. Daniel A. Lennon Jr., staff judge advocate of the 2nd Infantry Division, will be featured on the television program "Fort Benning Reports" at 12:30 p.m. Saturday over Channel 3, WRBL, in Columbus. He will discuss the significance of Law Day and the Staff Judge Advocate Section's part in the nation's law structure.

Teachers in the Children's Schools will provide instruction on Law Day and its significance, using fact sheets furnished by the Staff Judge Advocate Section of The Infantry Center.

School bulletin boards will carry Law Day displays. Art classes and all grades will make posters on the subject.

The Staff Judge Advocate Section plans to provide Law Day place mats for use in school cafeterias.

At Loyd and Faith Schools, the fifth and sixth grades will hear the three top winning speakers in a recent Americanism Essay Contest sponsored on the post by the Fort Benning Chapter of National Sojourners.

Speakers will be John Richardson, son of Maj. and Mrs. Thomas O. Richardson, who won first place; Bill Crosby, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. George D. Crosby, second place, and Cindy Shaw, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Robert C. Shaw, third place.

Members of the Staff Judge Advocate Sections of The Infantry Center and the 2nd Division will attend a Law Day banquet at 8 p.m. May 1 at the Columbus Country Club, sponsored by the Columbus Lawyers Club.

The theme for the 1963 observance of Law Day is "Law — Rule of Right, Not Might."

Designated by a joint resolution of Congress and proclaimed each year by the President of the United States, this is the sixth annual Law Day to be celebrated in the nation.

President Kennedy said in his Law Day Proclamation, "The story of man's advance from savagery to civilization is the story of reason and morality displacing brutal force. While law is reason systematized, it is more than reason alone. . .

"In a time when all men are properly concerned lest nations, forgetting law, reason and moral existence, turn to mutual destruction, we have all the more need to work for a day when law may govern nations as it does men within nations; when systematized reason may bring us a confident future; when the moral development of the human race may assure us a peaceful and law-abiding world..."

Gen. Watson called upon personnel of the Third Army area to "rededicate ourselves to the ideals and laws upon which our country was founded."

Gen. Rich, too, stressed rededication "to the ideas of equality and justice on which our legal institutions are based." His message continued, "By this rededication, we affirm our belief in government by the rule of law rather than by the rule of might."

'Law Day, USA'...What's It Mean?

By 1st Lt. David E. Rebbin

Although officially established as a national observance by a joint resolution of Congress in March, 1961, the first day of May has been designated "Law Day, USA" by Presidential proclamation each year since 1958.

It is defined by Congress as a "special day of celebration by the American people in appreciation of their liberties and the reaffirmation of their loyalty to the United States of America; of their rededication to the ideals of equality and justice under law in their relations with each other as well as with each other as well as with each other nations, and for the cultivation of that respect for law that is so vital to the democratic way of life."

That is the official definition. But what does "Law Day, USA" really mean? There are several phrases that I am sure must be running through the mind of the reader:

"All men are created equal"; "a man is presumed innocent until proven guilty"; "rule of law"; "reasonable doubt"; "due process of law"; "equality of justice."

These are but a few of the phrases that could be listed. What they all mean is that ours is one of the greatest nations ever known because it gives to its citizens the greatest measure of freedom.

I had a law school professor whose favorite saying was, "your rights end where my nose starts." This may sound like a simple statement, but it conveys the whole idea of theory behind law in the U. S.

Our nation is governed by laws rather than by men. There have been many people in the past who have used the law for their own end, and I imagine that there will be many more in the future.

But for the most part, the men obey the laws rather than the laws obeying the men. In our system of government, the freedom and dignity of the individual citizen are assured.

"Law Day, SA" seeks to convey to Americans of all ages the basic values of our system of laws and independent courts and to stress the fact that citizenship entails obligations as well as benefits.

It is a day to remind ourselves that the individual freedom and dignity we enjoy are known in the Communist world where May 1 is celebrated with displays of military might and men are ruled by force and fear; and that while our system is not perfect, we must strive to make it the best system possible.

Your rights may end where my nose begins, but what a wonderful nation we have where our rights extend that far. It is the responsibility of every person not to abuse the rights that he has and to seek to extend these rights so that all may share the same and equal rights that he has and to seek to extend these rights so that all may share the same and equal rights.

If our vision is great enough, and if we work hard enough, perhaps someday we can further improve our system so that what the rule of law has done for our country, it can do for all mankind.

Repossession Doesn't End Obligation to Pay

Repossession is plain, hard, economic calamity.

You may think repossession means only that your creditor takes the merchandise back and that this removes and relieves you of further responsibility and payment. Not so!

Many items of personal property (autos, household furniture, appliances, etc.) are sold under conditional sales contracts with promissory notes attached.

Under this plan, you take possession of the item, but the ownership or title remains with the seller until you finish all payments.

In most jurisdictions the word conditional indicates that the sale is not complete until the debt is paid and that the seller retains the title to the goods as security for the credit he has extended you.

What does this mean? Simply this: If you fail to make a payment when due, the seller (or finance company holding the contract) can take back the item without court action.

Here's the bombshell. In most conditional sales contracts the failure to make a payment when due makes the entire balance payable immediately without notice, and the buyer loses both the goods and what he has paid into it.

When property is repossessed it is often resold. When it is resold whatever the dealer gets is applied against your account — but not until he has deducted interest, costs of the resale and attorney's fees.

True, after all of this juggling you have reduced what you owe, but a sizeable chunk is still due.

You are stuck and here's what has happened. The seller probably got what is called a deficiency judgment against you and under its terms you are obligated and must pay the agreed price of the item in spite of the fact that you no longer own it, or even have it in your possession.

The so-called chattel mortgage is another type of contract to watch.

Unlike the conditional sales contract, if you buy car under the chattel mortgage, you are the owner of the car which is mortgaged to secure the debt.

But — if the note is not paid, the finance company, through legal procedure, repossesses the car and sells it to pay the loan.

If your car does not bring enough to pay your debt, plus the cost of foreclosing, you may be compelled to pay the balance due.

Personal Thoughts For Law Day, USA

Law Day — the first of May — has been named to be the one special day of the year for recognition of the place of law of our society.

It is good to have a day set aside when schools, civic organizations, and professional groups, may engage in special events in commemoration of the Rule of Law in our life. Otherwise, we might neglect any thought of one of our most previous heritages.

But, group activities have little meaning unless they stimulate individuals to give some personal thought to the ideals being commemorated. This is especially true when the subject of the occasion is such an idea as the Rule of Law in our lives.

So a few personal thoughts for Law Day:

What is law? One answer is that law is the sum total of all the rules of life that will be enforced by the authorities who make up our government.

What are some of these rules? Traffic rules; "Thou shalt not kill"; no policeman can search my house without a good reason; and so forth.

What is meant by the Rule of Law? The Rule of Law means that we play the game of life by established rules.

What about the rules made by dictators. Aren't they law, also? Yes, but even when the rules have been made by one man, or a small group of men, and even though these rules may be harsh or unfair to some people, if they are enforced, the people enjoy some measure of protection—more than if the rules are changed at the whim of the people who are supposed to enforce them.

In ancient times a tribal chief or king made up the rules as he went along and changed them whenever he thought best. Then Rome — the first great empire in the western world — established a Rule of Law. In those days the emperor was above the law, but everyone else was subject to it.

The combination of law with the sword to enforce it built the Roman Empire. Even that primitive law was such a blessing that people who lived under the old system began asking for Rome's "protection."

In a long series of struggles in England — during which one king was beheaded and another fled the country —our forefathers established the rule that even the king must obey the law.

Nowadays, in America, and in many countries of the world, the majority of the people share in making the rules by which they live. So that more and more the law protects an individual as well as it restricts him.

While we must stop our car at an intersection when an inhuman machine shows a red light, even though there is no other automobile in sight in any direction, we also enjoy the security of our homes against the prying eyes of an overzealous policeman and we have the right to cross-examine any witness against us whenever we are accused of violating the rules.

But the law is a whole. If we want the law to help us, we must help the law. We must obey the irritating rules as well as those we like. If not, we destroy the whole fabric of the law.

Our Rule of Law is not perfect. It is good and we like what we have, but there is still room for improvement. Many people believe there should be changes or improvements in our basic legal principals. As time passes and circumstances change the law must change to meet the needs of the times. Fortunately, our law allows for change.

Possibly the most previous right protected by law is the right of the people to participate in making laws — the right to vote, hold public office, and so forth. All our laws must be obeyed; especially those laws that control the making of laws.

Thomas Jefferson once said, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Careful and serious thought and eternal vigilance is necessary to preserve and improve our Rule of Law. Indifference will destroy the law and us with it.

Viet Nam Radar Site Also Rescue Center

U. S. FORCES, Viet Nam (AFPS) — Literally translated from Vietnamese, Ban Me Thout means "Village of the Tiger."

Here in the central highlands, in an area infested not only with wild tigers and elephants, but rebel Communist Viet Cong forces as well, a Vietnamese Air Force radar site with U. S. Air Force advisors has accomplished several remarkable rescues and aircraft saves in its first few weeks of operation.

Operating from tent huts several miles from the town of Ban Me Thout, the aircraft control and warning site opened March 1 this year and within three weeks made its first rescue.

A flight of Army H-21 helicopters, departing from the site's 3,000-foot red clay landing strip on a supply mission, were being routinely tracked by radar as they churned southeast. Suddenly, one of the blips disappeared from the scope. This was immediately followed by a "Mayday" distress message saying that one of the choppers had crashed in the jungle.

The Air Base Advisory Team swung into action by contacting the Army Military Assistance and Advisory Group, furnishing a map of the crash area and the information that there were six men aboard the downed helicopter.

Throughout the remainder of the afternoon, while the six slightly injured crash victims were walking to a more suitable area for pickup, the radar men continued vectoring rescue and support aircraft to the scene and, after pickup was made, guided the aircraft back to the strip at Ban Me Thout.

Additionally, since opening, the radar site has recovered an Otter plane which was lost in addition to the rescue operation of another downed helicopter crew.

Summer Camp Plans Made at Conference

Plans for the six-week ROTC summer encampment scheduled to begin here June 15 were made last week at a pre-camp conference.

Col. Samuel J. Rasor, deputy camp commander, professor of military science at the University of Alabama, and six members of his staff discussed housing and transportation plans, troop support requirements and a master training schedule.

Assignments were given to the 130 officers and 179 non-commissioned officers from the various universities who will constitute most of the cadre for the summer camp.

Col. Rasor inspected the barracks and the nearby training areas which will be used by the cadets. He also made a reconnaissance of the firing ranges.

Other members of the summer camp staff attending the meeting were Lt. Col. William H. Naftel, S-1, Jacksonville, Ala., State College; Lt. Col. Robert H. Newberry, S-3, Florida Southern College, Lakeland, and Lt. Col. Oats A. Pynes, Weapons Committee, University of Southern Mississippi, Hattiesburg.

Lt. Col. Joseph A. Lipsky, general subjects, Riverside Military Academy, Gainesville, Ga.; Lt. Col. Columbus E. Gray, Tactical Committee, Marion Ala., Institute, and Lt. Col. John F. Jennings Jr., evaluation officer, University of Florida, Gainesville.

In addition to Col. Rasor and his staff, the meeting was attended by Maj. C. C. Bourquardy from the Third Army ROTC Branch, G-3 Section, and Maj. Joseph Hall of Salem, N. J., chief of the Reserve Components Section at The Infantry Center.

Key cadre officers and NCO's of the summer camp will arrive here June 3. All of the cadre will be at the post by June 10.

FROM OUTER SPACE? Sp4 V. J. Bernola Models New M-17 Protective Mask

Post to Be First With M-17 Masks

By May 1 Fort Benning is expected to be the first Army post in the U. S. to be completely outfitted with the new M-17 protective mask, which protects the wearer from field concentrations of chemical, biological and radiological agents.

Unit commanders and top-non-commissioned officers recently attended an orientation class at The Infantry Center's CBR School, where they were taught the use and functioning of the new mask.

The M-17 mask which replaces the M9A1 previously issued to the units, has many advantages not found in the old type mask, according to officials.

The new mask, which has two internal canasters, is better balanced than the old, which had one protruding canaster that often times interfered with weapon firing, they added.

Other improvements include a voicemitter which eliminates the sound muffling of the old mask, and easier breathing due to the two air inlets as compared to the one inlet found in the old type.

Computer Is Under Study

The brass - brain soldier henceforth may have an important role in military campaigning.

This is indicated by reports of tests just completed at the Army's electronic proving ground at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

"Although there is no indication," says the report, "that machines will replace people who gather combat intelligence, it has been proved that processing of the information can be done better and faster electrically."

More than 30,000 computer program instructions were used to support the tests, participated in by 10 officers and 28 enlisted men.

The report said the tests were designed to evaluate the principles of automated storage and retrieval as applied to the processing of tactical intelligence. Intelligence data processing is part of the command control information system — a complex of tactical automated systems for the field Army.

Design of the new intelligence system is a joint effort of the Army Intelligence Development Agency and the Army electronic proving ground. It was tested in a division command post exercise developed at Fort Holabird, Md., and was intended to test design principles for tactical intelligence processing.

69-Year-Old WAC Likes Helping Others

FORT MONMOUTH, N. J. (ANF) — Unusual is the only word to describe Sp5 Minnie Barber's life in the Women's Army Corps. She is a great-grandmother and may well be the oldest member of the WAC on active duty.

As a 49-year old widow during World War II in Salamonia, Ind., she was confronted with the problem of what to do with her hours of inactivity now that her daughters were married and her son was in the Armed Forces stationed in Italy.

At that time, the need existed for more women volunteers in the Women's Army Corps and, as a result, the age limitation was raised to 50. Minnie Barber availed herself of this opportunity to serve her country and enlisted.

From that time, 20 years ago to the present, Specialist Barber's life has been complete with deeds of kindness and consideration for others. While stationed in Japan from 1948 to 1954, she devoted her off-duty hours to 57 Japanese orphans and taught English to Japanese women in a local school.

When it came time for her to leave Japan, over 100 of her former students came to the embarkation point to bid her farewell.

Later, while serving in Germany, she became the only WAC member of the distinguished German - American Club. Her contribution of time and effort to various causes in Germany was cited in a letter of appreciation from the club.

The willingness to assist others has not only won her many friends, but recognition from a myriad of prominent individuals, organizations, and leading publications, including former President Eisenhower, the American Legion, the Saturday Evening Post, and Look Magazine.

Specialist Barber, who is presently serving at Fort Monmouth, N. J., looks considerably younger than her 69 years. This she attributes to the great satisfaction she derives from helping others. She just doesn't have time to grow old.

New Low-Cost Range Tested For Reserves

The concept of a conduit range has been tested by the Weapons Department of The Infantry School, with an aim of lessening expenses for National Guard and Reserve marksmanship qualification.

The testing has progressed through many phases starting from a concrete tubular type conduit to the final wooden foxhole idea.

A ventilation system was initially thought feasible but upon testing it was found to be of little consequence, Weapons Department officials reported.

The 25-meter range, although not yet approved by Continental Army Command (CONARC), is expected to save the Guard and Reserve units money and traveling time by allowing almost every individual unit to have a qualification range of its own.

The unit now without one must take its marksmen to the nearest qualification range which sometimes can be a long distance.

Present ranges must have an impact area for stray shots immediately behind the target area, usually running more than a mile in depth and almost the same in breadth.

By employing this enclosed firing range, a specified type hill or backstop is the only safety feature necessary to stop a stray bullet, eliminating the costly impact area. The conduit range will let the bullet rise to only a certain height.

The trap door foxholes allow the firer to shoot from all three qualifying positions through the one opening.

NEW PATCH . . . This design for a shoulder patch to be worn by members of MAAG in the Republic of Viet Nam has been approved by the Army. The shield is red, and the Great Wall of China, yellow. The opening in the wall is blocked by a white sword. The patch has a yellow border. MAAG personnel who have served in Viet Nam since July 1, 1958, may wear the patch on the right shoulder after returning to the U.S.

Gen. Greenleaf To Be Speaker At Graduation

The assistant chief of the National Guard Bureau, Brig. Gen. Francis S. Greenleaf, will be principal speaker at graduation ceremonies Saturday for The Infantry School's officer candidate Reserve component class No. 2.

The one-star general will address about 165 graduates at 9 a.m. in Theater No. 1.

Upon successfully completing the nine-week course, the students are eligible for commissions as second lieutenants.

Gen. Greenleaf is scheduled to arrive at 4:50 p.m. today. Before the graduation ceremonies, he will attend a briefing at Wigle Hall on the school's officer candidate program.

Later he will attend an orientation at the Department of Nonresident Instruction, headquarters for Infantry instruction for more than 340,000 members of the Reserve components and ROTC cadets.

Outstanding Suggestions Net Honors

The post honored 10 employes April 17, one of whom received $100 for a printing suggestion that is expected to save the government $42,172 each year.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, presented outstanding job ratings, letters of appreciation and cash awards for work improvement suggestions during a tour of five school facilities.

At the Command and Staff Department, Mrs. Hartwell B. Wash Jr., clerk-stenographer, received an outstanding job rating and $100 for sustained superior performance.

Mrs. John D. Hutton, a student adviser in the Department of Nonresident Instruction, was given $15 for a work improvement suggestion.

At the Visual Aids Section of the Operations Office, letters of appreciation for suggestions were presented to Milton L. Lenoir, a supervisory illustrator, and PFC Donald H. Young, an administrative specialist, while PFC Reginald Harris, supply clerk, received a letter of appreciation and $15.

Mrs. William P. Marwede, military personnel clerk, was presented $15 for a suggestion in ceremonies at The Student Brigade.

Gen. Reynolds made four awards at the Army Field Printing Plant.

Carl W. Gabler, production controller at the plant, received $100 for a proposal that maps previously printed in several sheets be combined as composite maps, saving an estimated $42,172 each year.

Other awards for suggestions were $15 to Frederick E. Montgomery, offset press operator; a letter of appreciation to Mrs. Jerry P. Stanford, composing machine operator, and a letter of appreciation and $15 to SSgt. Robert L. Johnson, chief of the Shipping Section, all of Columbus.

AIRFORCE CROSS

The Air Force has announced the replacement of the Distinguished Service Cross with a new medal named the Air Force Cross. The new medal, second in line of Air Force military decorations, is topped only by the Medal of Honor. It may be awarded under the same criteria presently prescribed for the DSC.

175mm Gun Battalion Organized

The last arm of the Army's artillery was extended as the first 175mm gun battalion was organized at the Army Artillery and Missile Center, Fort Sill, Okla., on March 22.

The 175mm gun is the first all-new cannon-type weapon to be placed in the hands of troops in nearly a decade.

Fort Sill's new unit, the 2nd Gun Battalion, 32nd Artillery, is equipped with 12 of the new weapons and is ready to undergo rigorous unit training.

The new weapon weighs 31 tons and has a tube that is more than 35 feet long. However, in the case of the 175, its immense size does not hamper its mobility.

For Gen. Daniel Retirement

Troops Called to Fort McPherson

By Ken Goodman

Over 300 men of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, have departed Fort Benning via chartered bus for Fort McPherson, near Atlanta, Ga., to participate in a retirement review today in honor of Maj. Gen. Derrill M. Daniel, deputy commander of the Third U. S. Army.

Lead Contingent

The 87th Infantry "Conquerors" lead the contingent from the 2nd Engineer Battalion and from 2nd Division Artillery.

The 2nd Battalion's commander, Lt. Col. William H. Cox and project officer, Capt. Bartow D. Daniel, have been supervising preparations for this review.

Intensive practice in marching techniques has been the order of the day for "Conquerors" during the past week.

Gen. Daniel is bringing to a close a military career that spans 37 years, 23 of them on active duty.

The native of Cooper, S. C., was appointed a reserve officer in 1926 and rose to the rank of captain before being called to active duty at the beginning of World War II.

Assigned to the 1st Infantry Division's 26th Infantry, the general fought his way across North Africa, Sicily and Europe. Along the way he rose from captain to lieutenant colonel in 28 months, earned the Distinguished Service Cross "for extraordinary heroism against an armed enemy on December 20, 1944 near Butgenbach, Belgium," and was awarded the Silver Star on seven different occasions.

He also received several other awards and decorations including the Legion of Merit with "V" Device, the Bronze Star Medal with "V" Device with three oak leaf clusters, the Belgian Croix de Guerre with palm, and the French Fourragere in the colors of the Medaille Militaire.

8th Silver Star

In later years he was to add an eighth award of the Silver Star for action in the Korean Conflict as well as the Army Commendation Medal to his list of honors.

Returning to the U. S. in 1953, Gen. Daniel qualified as a paratrooper and was assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division as assistant division commander. Exactly one year later he was awarded the wings of a Master Parachutist, having made 65 jumps. He later joined the "Century

7th Cavalry Tracks Off For Stewart

BY COLIN HIGGINS

The 7th Cavalry will move out by convoy this morning for a month of training at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, the 7th Cavalry will spend the first weeks at Fort Stewart field training and then will take their annual Army Training Test (ATT), returning to the 2nd Division on May 28. The field training will be carried out by the four troops separately, but the entire squadron will combine to take the ATT.

Supporting Units

The 7th Cavalry will be supported by several attached units from the Division. Giving Infantry Support will be Company B of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Stanley Z. White. The company will leave on May 6 and will spend the first week training in the proper use of the armored personnel carrier, both in the offensive and the defensive. They will then participate in the ATT, as a rifle company attached to the cavalry.

Also attached to the cavalry will be one platoon from Company A, 2nd Engineer Battalion, and a bridge section from Company E. There will be an artillery liaison officer and forward observers from Division Artillery as well as one of the three division Air Force liaison officers.

Capt. Arthur W. Webb, the Air Force liaison officer, will be the forward air controller during the field exercise and during the ATT will be at Control Headquarters, controlling the play of air requests.

Indians Get First Hand Look at 2nd

By Bob deCamara

Distinguished guests from India Friday morning received first hand looks at the 2nd Infantry Division. They viewed latest developments in the division's reorganization under the Army ROAD reorganization concept.

The former commander of United Nations forces in the Congo, Indian Maj. Gen. Prem Chand and Brig. Gen. Stephen Noronha were on a two-day tour of Fort Benning's Infantry Center and the 2nd Division. They were met at division headquarters by the commander of the "Second to None," Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea.

ROAD and Rotaplan

At headquarters, Gen. Chand and Gen. Noronha also received briefings on the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept and Rotaplan. The 2nd is currently undergoing reorganization which when completed will replace the former five "pentomic-type" infantry battle groups with smaller, highly flexible battalions attached to brigade headquarters.

The two visiting officers left Fort Benning Friday afternoon from Lawson Army Air Field.

122nd Signal Battalion Celebrates Organization Day

The "eyes" and "ears" of the 2nd Infantry Division took a short rest last week to celebrate the 42nd year of its organization as a member of the Army.

The 122nd Signal Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Gus H. Grisard, massed on Kelley Hill's Essebagger Field before several hundred guests, friends and relatives for a review and awards ceremony. Guests of honor for the celebration included Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander.

The festivities began early Friday morning with spirited competition between the battalion's three companies for the Organization Day Commander's Trophy. Among the contests engaged in by the three companies were volleyball, basketball, softball, pool, a physical training test and a 45-foot antenna erection. The winner of the athletic contests and the review was Forward Communications Company.

That afternoon, Headquarters Company, commanded by Lt. Richard C. Axtell, Command Operations Company, commanded by Capt. Donald W. Goodman, and Forward Communications Company, commanded by Capt. Charles A. Clemens, lined up on Essebagger Field for the review and awards ceremony. The ceremony started with Col. Grisard trooping the line with the commander of troops, Capt. Anthony Suso, and the battalion sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Nevil Butler.

Following the trooping of the line, seven individual awards and three unit awards were presented. MSgt. Oliver G. Skipper Jr., Sgt. Edward Jones, Sgt. Charles W. Yates and Sgt. William Iiams all received Certificates of Achievement, while Capt. Suso received a letter of commendation. Headquarters Company received a letter of appreciation from the area Tuberculosis Association for meritorious service during the annual TB Fund Drive. Command Operations Company was awarded the Commander's Sport Trophy for the period June 1, 1962 to January 1, 1963 and also the battalion volleyball trophy.

Col. Grisard made a special award to Lt. Eugene Thompson. Lt. Thompson is a Liberian officer who is spending 30 days of on-the-job-training with the 122nd. Col. Grisard made him an honorary member of the 122nd Signal Battalion.

Following the unit's history, which was read by CWO Charles E. Burns, Col. Grisard gave those present a run-down of the 122nd's activities during the past year. Turning to Gen. Billingslea, he said, "this battalion is ready, willing and able to support the division at any time."

With the last of the troops leaving the parade field, signifying the end of the review, everyone was invited to attend the exhibition of signal equipment which had been set up at the end of the field. In addition, refreshments were served and there was even a miniature merry-go-round for the children.

The general, who holds Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy degrees from Cornell University, was also well known in the field of Entomology and was considered an authority on the subject of Biological Control of Insect Pests prior to his entry into active military service.

Assembling at Fort McPherson for the general's retirement review today, elements of the 2nd Infantry Division will join other units of the Third U. S. Army which have also sent contingents for the occasion. Division troops are expected to arrive back at Fort Benning late tonight.

Revolution in Military Medicine

Introducing Habit Forming 'Think Pills'

Company B of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, recently received a quantity of "think pills" from its new commanding officer, Capt. Stanley Z. White.

During the first meeting with his troops, Capt. White placed special emphasis on military courtesy utilization of the chain of command, and immediate response to actions and orders of superiors.

He then explained the quality of performance he expects from each officer and man in the unit. To assist the company in achieving these results, Capt. White introduced his "think pills," which are said to contain a year's supply of military courtesy and discipline, job proficiency and the will to win. Capt. White charged the company with taking full advantage of these newly acquired "abilities" by working toward the development of the unit as the model mechanized rifle company in the Army today.

In conclusion he said "we must pursue the fulfullment of our mission with great vigor and initiative.

"It is imperative that we continue to depend on tried and true methods of demonstrating to other units as well as our own superiors the effect of our 'pill' and the results of our efforts."

Association Reunioning Set for July in Texas

Selected 2nd Infantry division soldiers headed by division sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, will travel to San Antonio, Tex. this summer to attend the 42nd annual reunion of the 2nd "Indian Head" Division Association.

The reunion is scheduled for July 25-27 at the Hotel St. Anthony. San Antonio is the national headquarters of the division which in World War I won more combat decorations than any other American division. For a long time, but not in recent years, San Antonio was the home of the 2nd Division in garrison.

Set Election

An important order of business on the agenda of the reunion this year is the election of officers. A president, six vice-presidents and two members of the executive committee must be chosen.

Presently serving the association as president is Mr. Percy Terwilliger of Leawood, Kan., who recently visited the 2nd Division at Fort Benning to observe first - hand the results of reorganization of division structure.

Tentative scheduling of the reunion program sets the national executive committee meeting for the opening day, and business meetings for the following two days of the get-together.

2ND DIVISION'S 7TH CAVALRY LINES UP MANPOWER BEHIND THEIR COMBINED ARMS AT RECENT REVIEW

Signs of the Road; A Series

Hankerin' for Smell o' Hoss Hide

By Peter Tatistcheff

Famous or infamous, the 2nd Division's 7th Cavalry can claim something few U. S. Army units ever achieve — notoriety.

This unit is forever linked to a moment in American history that every student reads about in school and probably never forgets. That event, "Custer's Last Stand," is as much a part of the American vocabulary as "The Alamo," "D - Day," or "Hiroshima."

Cavalry Tradition

For anyone who has ever been a part of the 7th Cavalry, "Custer's Last Stand" and their famous battle cry, "Garry Owen," make up the focus of their tradition. Many Army units are hard put to make a big thing out of their tradition. But for the 7th, it is natural and expected.

The 2nd Division's cavalry has embarked on an ambitious project which is intended to bring more attention to their past. They are currently collecting mementoes to organize at Fort Benning the historical center for all units of the 7th Cavalry.

Before the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept hit the 2nd Infantry Division, the combat-hardened "Indianhead" Division was assigned the 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, 7th Cavalry. Now under ROAD, it has the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry. Organizationally it has changed very little, gaining only one major element, an air cavalry troop.

Officers of this unit continue with plans to build a unique museum on Fort Benning's Sand Hill. Photographs of all 7th Cavalry commanders are already in place and many unit trophies and objects that recall their famous Indian campaigns hang on the walls or are placed in temporary trophy cases. The project has just begun, but when finished, will be among the most ambitious ever embarked upon by an Army unit.

Proud of Past

The 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, commanded by Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, has many ways of showing how proud they are of their past. A cartoonist once capitalized on the cavalry spirit to pen a portrait of a rugged cavalryman, his musket hanging loosely from a band slung over his shoulder, a saber stuck defiantly in the ground. In his fingers he clutches a great black cigar, almost as black as the spurred boots on his feet. He looks out suspiciously at his audience as he says: "Some folks jist don't understand us yallerlaig cavulrymen! We ain't agin progress. . . But we hankers fer th' smell o' leather an' hoss hide instid o' gas fumes an' paint! Us 7th Regi-mint troopers has short tempers an' long memories!"

A 2nd Division Special

Their executive officer, Maj. William O. Hill, stressed that pride in the 7th Cavalry no longer has much to do with horses but because of their "long memories" occasionally they do dress and "horse-up" a couple of men for special effect in a unit parade. Today their esprit comes from their unique mission. They consider themselves an independent force. As Maj. Hill puts it, "We are the commanding general's troops. We aren't assigned to any one special unit but take our combined arms wherever needed as commanded by the division's commanding general.

The organization of an armored cavalry squadron calls for a Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, an Aviation Company and three armored cavalry troops. In the 2nd Division's 7th Cavalry, these three cavalry troops are Troop A, commanded by Lt. Thornton P. Banks; Troop B, commanded by Capt. George L. Arnold; and and Troop C, commanded by Capt. Lawrence N. Medlin. The aviation element coming to the 7th Cavalry under ROAD will be the famous Air Cavalry Troop, a new unit which has just recently finished successful testing by the Army.

The key to the cavalry's operational advantages lies in "combined arms." Armored cavalry units contain armor - protected machine-guns, mortars and tank - guns.

When the cavalrymen boast of their combined arms they site the ordinary cavalry platoon. This unit has, in miniature, a force equipped with the same weapons and machinery as all the units available to a division commander.

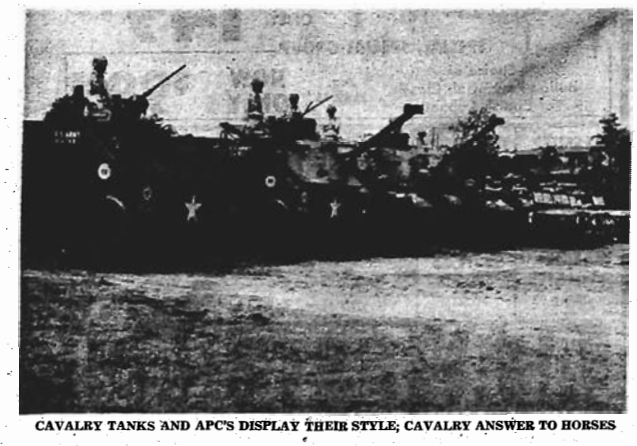
In the cavalry platoon there are four scout jeeps with machineguns and radios (cavalry element), two tanks (armor element), a rifle squad with an armored personnel carrier (mechanized infantry element), and a 42 inch mortar (artillery element). The air element is in the air cavalry troop which uses helicopters to airland and deploy soldiers.

This highly - flexible combination of the various arms available in the modern Army gives the 7th its very unique characteristic. Three of these combined arms platoons can be found in each cavalry troop.

As the Army changes and brings more flexibility to its elements, the cavalry may expand as it has most recently by the addition of an air wing. However, many things remain constant. Among these is the famous "Garry Owen" tradition.

COSTUMED TROOPS In Modern Tank

"Garry Owen" is taken from a lively Irish marching song adopted by General George Armstrong Custer as the regimental song. The 7th Cavalry Regiment of which the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry is a part, was also known and is still known as the "Garry Owen Regiment," its members as "Garry Owens," and the word itself is still being used as the regimental greeting, password and battle cry.



CAVALRY TANKS AND APC'S DISPLAY THEIR STYLE; CAVALRY ANSWER TO HORSES

Coming

Next week The Bayonet will spotlight the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion on this weekly Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) page. This newly organized unit was formed during the reorganization of the 2nd Infantry Division out of the former 2nd Quartermaster Company and the 13th Transportation Battalion.

Wrapping Up Training in U. S. and Europe

'Most Versatile' 38th Looks Back on a Busy Year

The 38th Infantry — the Army's first Rotaplan unit — has returned to the United States and the 2nd Infantry Division after completion of a successful half-year temporary duty period in Europe, claiming the distinction of being the most versatile infantry battle group in the Army.

The 38th arrived back recently by Military Air Transport Service flights from Rhine Main Air Base, Frankfurt, Germany, to Turner Air Force Base, Ga., where waiting buses took the troops back to Fort Benning. The battle group departed the states in mid-October of 1962 for Baumholder, Germany, and six months of service with the 8th Infantry Division.

Much Versatility

With its completion of the Rotaplan tour, giving the unit assets of training as a mechanized unit and in new terrain and climate, it feels that coupled with the highly varied state-side training it accomplished in 1962, no other Army battle group can claim such versatility.

It was back in July of 1962, while the unit was taking amphibious training at the Little Creek, Va., Naval Amphibious Base, that it received word of the planned movement to Europe. After taking part in the gigantic Strike Command-directed Exercise Swift Strike II in the Carolinas in August, the 38th Infantry also participated in three other major overseas move.

Specialized training included M-113 armored personnel carrier and M-151 quarter-ton truck driving training, and weapons instruction with the M-14 rifle, M-60 machinegun, M-79 grenade launcher, and SS-10 missile among others. Other items on the training schedule included German language instruction, personal affairs and overseas orientations and intelligence training for Europe.

On September 17, 1962, the battle group sent an advance party to Europe to sign for property and smooth the way for the main body which began movement on October 15 to Germany. The 38th replaced the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry in the 8th Division.

Even before all of the main body had arrived at the Baumholder station, troops of the 38th were out in the field training with their APC's.

The battle group quickly took part in a Welcome FTX conducted by the 8th Division following on the heels of a 100-plus mile motor march during its first week in Germany.

Baumholder Operations

During the six-month tour, training centered around mechanized cold-weather operations in the rolling, semi-mountainous Baumholder area. Included were company opposing forces-type field exercises, independent exercises, rifle company live-fire exercises, helicopter training, road marches and convoy movements, and weapons training and firing.

Added to the USAREUR training and the State-side training already mentioned, the 38th Infantry also participated in three other major field training exercises besides the amphibious training and Swift Strike II in 1962. These included a 2nd Division Brigade FTX from February 27-March 5, 1962 at Fort McClellan, Ala., in which a battle group task force operation was held involving offensive and defensive phases with emphasis placed on the use of helicopters for logistical and tactical support.

From April 2-20, the 38th operated as the Aggressor force against the rest of the 2nd Division at Exercise Seneca Spear at Fort Stewart, Ga. The battle group was airlifted to and from the maneuver area; ground operations over semi - tropical terrain were stressed.

In late May, the battle group again was airlifted, this time to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., to participate in the Strike Command-directed joint Army-Air Force Exercise Clear Lake. Operations here were in a hot, humid climate and involved a tactical live-fire exercise and use of close tactical air support.

In addition, the battle group provided major troop support for the Joint Civilian Orientation Conference at Fort Benning from April 25-May 9 and furnished the Aggressor element for Exercise Chief Acorn at Fort Benning June 18-23, conducted by the 87th Maneuver Area Command.

The battle group took part in helicopter and air movement, escape and evasion, rail movement and river crossing training all at Fort Benning during 1962 to add to its many other training accomplishments both in the States and in Germany in the past 14 months.

In merely traveling back and forth to the five major 1962 FTX's in the States and to Germany and back under ROTAPLAN, the unit collectively logged some 20 million miles of travel.

Special Activities

A number of special activities highlighted the tour of duty in Europe as well. The 8th Division conducted a courtesy Annual General Inspection-Command Maintenance Inspection and the battle group had its own Command Inspection. The unit furnished support for a number of other activities — both troop and umpire support for field exercises and Army Training Tests both within and outside of the 8th Division; supplied an Honor Guard Platoon for two months duty at the 7th Army NCO Academy at Bad Toelz; sent young soldiers to the 8th Division NCO Academy Classes; provided two members of the "Pathfinder" football team; had some five boxers actively participating in the Baumholder Post boxing team; joined in the 8th Division Basketball League; and in general, joined actively in division and area activities quickly upon arrival in the foreign station.

According to Commander, Col. Maurice C. Holden, the unique aspect of the unit's tour was the way in which it grew so close together. "Since the men traveled without dependents — and also without automobiles and with a minimum of personal gear — they grew more dependent upon one another, and in off-duty hours, instead of going separate ways, joined together at all levels, and became closer-knit through these contacts. And the same seemed to apply during duty hours, too . . . officers and NCO's became more acquainted with their men, their problems, their abilities, and the needs that arose due to their situation.

"Morale remained consistently high despite the fact that the men were spending six months overseas without their families at a post where personnel of other units did have dependents. The closer associations among the men themselves helped out on this point, as did several other aspects such as the opportunity to take tours throughout Europe."

Especially noteworthy were a number of battle group - sponsored tours to the divided city of Berlin, through coordination with the Berlin Brigade, where the men had an opportunity for an educational tour of the city plus the opportunity to enjoy the offerings of the western sector of Germany's former capital.

Other tours arranged through Special Services took 38th Infantry personnel to Heidelberg, Frankfurt, Paris, Amsterdam and the Armed Forces Recreation Centers of Garmisch and Berchtesgaden.

For the families back at Fort Benning, an Army "first" was established, namely a family service center, much like those in effect at Air Force Bases across the world. Chief purpose of the Rotaplan Family Center was self-aid by and for dependents of 38th Infantry personnel.

Committees were formed and wives on duty at a Fort Benning building were prepared to give assistance in emergencies or advise in personal affairs; and in addition the center served a second purpose of a social center.

Mrs. Hai New Chairman Officers' Wives Publicity

By Kay Schreiber

"ITHICA, N. Y., September 16, 1938, to Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Epstein a daughter, Carol Sue."

This birth announcement was the beginning for Mrs. Richard Hai, wife of Lt. Hai of the 72nd Maintenance Battalion, the new 2nd Division Officers' Wife Club Publicity Chairman.

Carol Sue, more often referred to as Sue, was raised in Ithica, N. Y. and graduated from Ithica High in 1956. Cornell University welcomed Miss Epstein the following fall. Majoring in House and Design this brunette found time to participate in such extra-curricular activities as the Womans Student Government Association, Cornell United Religious Work, and acted as a member of the Student Facility Committee of the Home Economics College.

Sue was a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority and in the spring of her junior year was elected to become a member of Omicorn Nu., National Academic Honor Society.

Richard Hai had been making the social side of college life an important part of Sue's life for some time. A Cornell student also, they made definite plans during the senior year and their engagement was announced over the Thanksgiving Holidays. With her wedding planned for the following summer, Sue went on to graduate, receiving a Bachelor of Science Degree in 1960.

A summer job with the firm of Jack Lenor Larsen took Sue to New York's Fifth Avenue where she worked as a showroom consultant. Offered a Graduated Teaching Assistantship she then returned to Cornell and worked a year on a Masters Degree.

June of 1961 saw Sue and Richard married in Ithica and off to a honeymoon in the Virgin Islands. Mr. and Mrs. Hai then returned to Paterson, N.J. to set up housekeeping in the vicinity of the Continental Can Company's offices where Richard was employed as an engineer.

Having been Commissioned in the United States Army Reserve a week before his marriage, Lt. Hai came on active duty in November of 1961. Stationed first at Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland, Lt. Hai attended Ordnance Training School and Technical School. The Hai's reported to the 2nd Infantry Division, 702nd Maintenance Battalion in April.

Sue found herself a geographical widow the following summer as Lt. Hai was sent to Little Neck, Va. for Amphibious Training. During his absence Sue took a job at Girl Scout Camp Concharty on Pine Mountain as a supervisor of waterfront activities.

Last fall she accepted position as sportswear sales manager for a local department store.

Expecting a child in June, Sue resigned from this job in February of this year. April of 1963 finds this very active young lady a member of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club and the new 2nd Division Publicity Chairman.

COOK of the WEEK

"Vegetables have family trees that go back to the dawn of history. Even long before the Christian era, the Greeks and Romans were eating peas and spinach." Today, vegetables play a vital nutrient role in our diet, and when prepared as a special dish, add glamour and color to a lunch or dinner menu. Asparagus Casserole Superb is a favorite vegetable dish of this week's "Cook of the Week", Mrs. Henry Baker, wife of SFC Henry Baker.

ASPARAGUS CASSEROLE SUPERB

3 eggs
2 cans (14½-oz.) green asparagus spears
1 can (8-oz.) water chestnuts
½ cup milk
6 tablespoons flour
¼ cup butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 cup grated, extra sharp cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons diced pimento
⅔ cup (approx.) fresh bread crumbs
Melted Butter

Until Smooth

Hard cook the eggs, then peel and slice. Drain asparagus and water chestnuts. Measure 1½ cup liquid. Shake the milk and flour together until smooth; combine with vegetable liquid, butter, seasonings and cheese.

Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Add pimento. Place asparagus in buttered oblong shallow casserole. Top with thinly sliced water chestnuts, then cover with egg slices. Pour sauce over all, then sprinkle lightly with crumbs.

Bake in moderate, 375 degree oven ½ hour, or until top is lightly browned and sauce is bubbly. Makes 8 or 10 servings.

Rota Wives Hold Business Meeting

Coffee and cookies were served.

Mrs. Arnold Entertains

Officers' wives of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry recently met at the home of Mrs. John M. Arnold for a coffee.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Joseph W. Murray and Mrs. Nielsen Botcher. The affair served as a get acquainted occasion for the ladies of the newly formed group.

Mrs. William H. Cox, wife of the battalion commander, poured at a gaily decorated table, highlighted by a centerpiece of a popcorn Easter bunny and brightly colored Easter eggs.

Mrs. F. H. Chandler was welcomed into the group.

Committee chairman selected for the wives' activities were Mrs. Ronald R. Colman, Mrs. Paul F. Somerville and Mrs. Bartow D. Daniel, Hospitality Committee; Mrs. Bartow D. Daniel, Hostess chairman; Mrs. John H. Bates Jr., Secretary; and Mrs. Robert L. Shaw, Publicity Chairman.

First Ladies Inactivated

The wives of the 1st Infantry met for the last time at the home of Mrs. Edgar Poole recently. The battle group is being inactivated in the ROAD re-organization.

At the informal business meeting plans were discussed for the parade and party, which were held Tuesday. These ceremonies formally marked the inactivation of the group.

A special guest at the meeting was Col. Poole, commander of the 1st Infantry. He gave an informative talk on what ROAD will mean to the officers and wives.

Traffic Quiz

What's Safest Method Of Rounding a Curve?

In the past fifty years, traffic accidents, statistics say, caused more deaths, physical and mental disabilities and human suffering than any of our most dreaded diseases.

And yet the public is not aroused. These shameful facts are ignored or even condoned as part of the necessary price of progress. Hand in hand with the progress that has typified the 20th century goes a responsibility of every individual for keeping control of this inventiveness. Death or disfiguration should never be thought of as a "necessary price." It is the price only of carelessness and an individual's lack of personal knowledge.

The majority of traffic accidents have been traced to carelessness and ignorance. If the driver knows his vehicle, knowing exactly what it can or cannot do, and, if the driver knows his own limitations, then and only then is he really qualified to sit behind the steering wheel.

If more persons took the trouble to take these precautionary measures, traffic statics would most probably take a much-needed "kick in the pants."

   b. ¼ as many deaths as cancer.

A Ground-Breaking

Korean Amputee Center Begun With Second's Help

HEADQUARTERS I CORPS (Group), Korea — A plan that began more than 10 years ago when I Corps, an element of the United Nations Forces, was fighting the enemy in Korea became a reality recently in Seoul. One of the divisions participating in this corps at this time of crisis was the elite 2nd Infantry Division.

During the Korean Conflict, more than $40,000 was donated by United Nations personnel assigned to I corps, including "Indianhead" soldiers, for a rehabilitation center to aid Korean amputees. The I Corps Amputee Trust Fund received donations from Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps personnel as well as contributions from the 1st Commonwealth Division and the Belgian Battalion then fighting in Korea.

The ground breaking ceremony for the Korean Amputee Rehabilitation Center was held April 4 at the Yonsei Medical Center, Yonsei University, in Seoul. John Steensma, director of Korean amputee rehabilitation; Col. Johnnie C. Brink, assistant chief of staff, G-5, I Corps (Group), and representatives of the Severance Hospital in Seoul, the Korea Church Worlds Service in Seoul and the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States of America participated in the ground ceremony.

The $40,000 contributed by I Corps personnel who were serving in Korea in 1952 is more than half the cost of the new rehabilitation center which will cost approximately $75,000, according to Steensma.

In addition to I Corps non-divisional units and the Commonwealth and Belgian units, contributions were made to Amputee Trust Fund by personnel of the 2nd Infantry Division, the 3rd Infantry Division, 25th Infantry Division, 40th Infantry Division (California National Guard), 45th Infantry Division (Oklahoma National Guard), IX Corps non-divisional units and personnel aboard the hospital ship Repose. Korean civilian and military personnel also contributed to the amputee fund.

When completed, the center will have 28 rooms and will be able to care for 50 to 60 patients at one time.

The center will provide prosthetics for amputees and training in their use in addition to physical therapy.

AT FORT STEWART . . . Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, the commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division (R), is greeted by Lt. Col. Robert D. Danforth, commander of the "Indianhead's" 2nd Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor which is permanently based at Fort Stewart, Ga. The general flew to Stewart recently to observe the last two days of Army Training Tests for the 1st Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor whose home post is at Fort Benning with the rest of the 2nd Division.

Television Ring Victories Claimed by 1st Inf. Boxer

By 1st Infantry PIO

At the early age of 15, PFC Bobby Jo Keck of Company C, 1st Infantry entered the Golden Gloves in the novice class and expertly boxed his way to the finals. In the finals he lost a very close decision to Osborne Henderson from Toledo, O., another Golden Gloves finalist who was a year older than Keck at the time. This, however, was just the start of Keck's brilliant boxing career as he went on to capture a number of titles in the amateur ranks.

BOXER KECK
Midwest Athlete

At Thirteen

His career started at the age of 13 when he was a member of the Monroe Community Center in Monroe, Mich., where he learned the fundamentals of the sport and boxed for the club with other members.

After completing grammar school at Lincoln Elementary School, he entered Monroe High School and joined the St. Joseph's Athletic Club, beginning training for the Golden Gloves.

In 1957, he boxed in the Open Division of the Golden Gloves and made it to the semi-finals before losing a decision to Ben Stewart of Detroit, Mich. Keck recalls that this match was televised from Winsor, Canada where the eliminations were being held.

In this same year he boxed in the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) championships and lost in the finals by another decision to King Farooke of Detroit. During the year 1957, Bobby Jo remembers that he appeared on television five times in Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Canada and Illinois and came out victorious on three of these appearances.

In 1958

In 1958, Bobby Jo began his climb to recognition as he captured the 160-pound class, hammering out a decision over Bill Newsome of Detroit. He accepted an invitation to go to Chicago and try out for the Mid-Western Golden Gloves Championship. There he was defeated in a close decision.

The following year brought more glory his way when he captured the 175-pound class by decisioning Edgar Boyd in a hard-fought match. In 1960 Bobby Jo again added to his laurels by capturing the 165-pound championship in the AAU matches held in Detroit.

It was during this time that he went to Toledo to try out for the Olympic team and a starting spot on this team representing the United States. Bobby Jo scored two scorching knockouts in his first two matches and then lost a decision in the semi-finals to eliminate him from the team.

In 1958 and 1959 while training for the Mid-Western Championships in Chicago, Bobby Jo recalls that Cassius Clay, (now a contender for the World Heavyweight Championship), was then only an amateur training for the Light - heavyweight championship in the Mid-Western Finals which he won in 1960.

After his discharge from the Army, Keck plans to go into his own business as the two year layoff from boxing is too long a time to get back in shape for competition.

'Big Carl' Halkeyer Sparks 'Conqueror' Sports Plans

By 87th Infantry PIO

Four letterman, basketball all-star, baseball whiz. These are but a few of the laurels claimed by a young soldier of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

PFC Carl Halkyer of Headquarters and Headquarters Company who, in addition to his primary duties as a scout-observer in the recon platoon, acts as assistant to the battalion athletics and recreation noncommissioned officer, sets high standards for his contemporaries to follow.

Born in Scranton, Pa. 24 years ago, "Big Carl" Halkyer, 73 inches of muscle, began his sports career early in life. An interest in all sports and an active participation in most enabled him to excel. Attending Scranton Technical High School, Halkyer won, in his junior and senior years, four varsity letters, two each in baseball and basketball.

Bats .510

On the diamond he boasted a batting average of .510 in his junior year but fought a slump throughout his senior year for a mere .475. As catcher he was, of course, the "field general" of the team.

Not satisfied with being the school's baseball hero, Halkyer took to the basketball courts to try his hand. The result was a two year average of 24.4 points per game which established him as the top scorer on the Scranton Tech "5," as well as among the leading scorers in the league. In his senior year he was picked for the first team of the Lackawanna Valley All-Stars, a group chosen from the cream of the crop of the area's ten high schools.

Upon graduation Carl settled down to a business career as a sales representative for Scranton's Crystal Soda Water Company but did not compromise his love of sports. He played semi-pro baseball with the North Scranton Recreation Club team and the Petersburg "Blue Devils," as well as semi-pro basketball in the Scranton Industrial League. These budding careers were temporarily stalled when he was inducted into the Army in October 1961.

Basic Training

Basic training and advanced individual training in Infantry at Fort Dix, N. J., provided little opportunity for active participation in athletics, but the training served to keep him in top shape. He sat mail in March 1962 for Germany, duty with the 26th Infantry in Baumholder, and a new chapter in his sports career.

Shortly after his arrival in Europe, the baseball season began and PFC Halkyer was chosen to become a member of the 8th Infantry Division's "Pathfinder" baseball team. He toured Europe with the team and, although they posted a lackluster fifth place finish in the highly-competitive USAREUR league, he managed to hold a respectable .304 batting average and a reputation as one of the best "chuck" hitters on the team.

ROTAPLAN brought him to the 2nd Infantry Division and reorganization to the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry. Although his current duties prohibit him from extensive participation in sports on a competitive basis, his abilities have proven invaluable in the training of other battalion athletes and in the administration of the sports program.

In addition to his skills in the baseball and basketball fields, "Big Carl" also shoots eighty-ish" golf, is an avid hunter, a fine tennis player and an enthusiastic swimmer.

They're Dashing And Are Keeping Up That Record

By 1st Infantry PIO

They call themselves "Dashing Delta." Rifle platoons of Company D, 1st Infantry, deactivated recently under the division's reorganization, are being kept intact and transferred as security platoons for the 2nd Division's 1st, 2nd and 3rd Brigades. The "Dashing" men of Company D have accumulated a record they hope to maintain as platoons in the future. As a company they won a battle group volleyball trophy, several Best Mess Awards, contributed a Soldier-of - the - Month to the battle group, and achieved 100 percent participation in 2nd Division Association Membership Drive, and two current health fund drives.

Fort Benning Captures Third Army Volleyball Title

Post Representatives Overcome 'Screaming Eagles' for Victory

BY LEO ZANI

Fort Benning's volleyball team brought back another winning Third Army trophy last week as they downed the "Screaming Eagles" from Fort Campbell in the finals of the Third Army Volleyball Tournament before an overflowing crowd of over 2,000 in the post sports arena at Fort McClellen, Ala.

The Benning 'spikers' lived up to the great teams of the past which won the Third Army Title in 1957-58-59-60 and 61, by going through the tournament undefeated in five games. Last year's volleyball ball team finished second.

The tournament got underway with defending champions Fort Gordon and Fort Campbell picked as the tourney's favorites.

In the first round, the Doughboys drew the defending champs, Fort Gordon. Benning won the first two games 15-2 and 15-3, the second game taking less than six minutes to win. Jim Taylor and teamcaptain Gale Sult, whose spiking was too much for the Gordon team to handle, led the team.

Slop Fort Bragg

Benning's second win came at the expense of Fort Bragg. Sparked by the fine play of Manuel Lopex and Bob Hull, the Doughboys rolled to an easy victory in the first game 15-6. Bragg put up a determined fight in the second game but could not contain the hard-slamming Benning sextet and finally bowed 15-8.

Fort Benning's third game Fort McPherson team. The Doughboys left no doubt in anyone's mind that they were the team to be reckoned with as they wiped the "Colonels" off the floor in two straight games, 15-2 and 15-4. Leading the charge with Carl Bryan and Jim Taylor. Benning's fine ballhandling and teamwork made the big difference despite Fort McPherson's valiant effort to make a game of it.

Win Semi-Finals

The semi-finals against Fort McClellen saw Fort Benning roll to an impressive two game victory over the tournament favorites from Alabama. The home crowd was on its feet as McClellen took a 5-4 lead in the first game, but this was short lived as the Doughboys broke their serve and begin pulling away.

Dave Willing, Mike Ward and Gulian Guzman, all playing outstanding ball for Benning, turned the game into a rout as Benning scored 15 consecutive points to win 15-2. The second game was no different from the first with McClellen jumping off to a 3-0 lead only to have the Benning spikers slam their way to victory 15-5, and move into the finals.

The big game saw top-seeded Fort Benning against the "Screaming Eagles" of Fort Campbell. Earlier in the tournament, the Kentucky team suffered a defeat from the hands of Fort McClellen but the Eagles caught fire winning their last 4 games.

Come-From-Behind

Playing before a jammed Sports Arena, the two teams locked themselves in a match that was sparked by defensive plays on the part of both teams. The Doughboys won the opening game in a come-from-behind thriller 15-10.

The second game saw a spiking duel between Maxwell and Gullisaco of Campbell and Jim Taylor and Dave Willing of Fort Benning. With two minutes left to go in the game, the Eagles forged ahead to win 15-13, setting the tournament into its final game.

Campbell, playing their best volleyball of the tournament, took the opening lead 2-0; but Benning broke their serve, and Gale Sult slammed home two straight to knot the score. The Kentucky team took the lead at 9-7 and again at 12-11 only to have a hard fighting Benning team quickly tie it up.

Finally Lopez passed to Carl Bryan who slammed across the lead point for the Doughboys with less than a minute left. Campbell fought right back tying it up at 14-all, but the Benning spikers regained the serve and ended the game with two quick points to win 16-14.

At the completion of the tournament, Col. Edwin M. Cahill, post commander of Fort McClellen, presented the Benning team with the winning trophy and individuals awards.

Chough's Sports Scope

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Today's Sportscope is written by a guest columnist, Pvt. Jeff Kessler, on his favorite subject, thoroughbred racing. Pvt. Kessler a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, was a professional jockey prior to entering the Army. Now a bit heavy for racing, he plans to train race horses when he returns to civilian life.)

By Pvt. Jeff Kessler

Well, it's almost Derby time, and from what's been happening at the East and West Coast race tracks, it should be a very exciting race.

So far the main contender from the East Coast is Never Bend. A good looking colt trained by Woody Stephens, Never Bend has won 8 out of his 12 races, the last one being the Flamingo handicap at Hialeah on March 2.

Until now he hasn't had very much competition, but what he has met he didn't seem to have much trouble with. Trainer Stephens has changed the colt's training schedule for the big race on May 4.

He has him in Columbia, S. C., where he's been training him mainly with long easy gallops on a deep track, which is good for strengthening the legs, and developing better wind.

Candy Spots

Now, on the other hand, about 3,000 miles away, we have a horse called Candy Spots, the California champion, trained by Mesh Tenney, and usually ridden by jockey Willie (The Shoe) Shoemaker.

A big colt, standing over 16 hands tall, Candy Spots has been undefeated in his six starts, three of which were as a two-year-old. So far in its short career, the youngster has built up a tidy bank account totaling $336,812.

His last race was the mile and one-eighth Florida Derby, at Gulfstream Park. It was a pretty even race until the last eight of a mile, when he pulled out to win by four and one-half lengths. The time of the race wasn't exceptionally good, but Shoemaker said he thought the colt was loafing a little.

Neither trainer is sure of which race he'll enter his horse for a prep — the "Stepping Stone" on today or the "Derby Trial" four days before the Derby.

Some of the horses scheduled to run in the Derby are Ahoy, Bonjour, Jet Traffic, Outting Class, No Robbery, City Line, Chateaugay, In the Pocket and Top Gallant.

None of them have proved themselves to be as good as Never Bend or Candy Spots.

Then again, the Derby is a funny race. Horses which have led the way, and earned most of the money as two- and three-year-olds, very often end up getting beaten by some long shot they have beaten many times before.

Tough Track

The Derby is held at Churchill Downs, a track that very few, if any, of the horses have ever run on before. This is one of the reasons why there are so many of these so called "doesn't figure" horses who Churchill Downs is a very tough track for horses to run on, especially three-year - olds going that distance of ground, win this race.

Another main factor is the change of climate. Just about all of the horses that run in the Derby come from Florida or California. So between the change of tracks and climate, it should make for a very interesting race.

The Derby is only one race in the famous "Triple Crown", the other two are the Preakness at Pimlico, Maryland and the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park, L. I.

Something for the record: A funny thing about these races, the Derby especially, is that the horses that do well in them usually fade right out of the picture when they get to be four years old. And the horses that don't do as well, or don't run in these races, usually come on to win most of the big races as four and five-year olds.

Ground Shakes, Dust Flies As 'Garry Owen' Rolls By

By George Ashie

Drivers raced for their vehicles, engines roared and dust swirled as a mounted reconnaissance platoon rolled into place behind the marching troops from the 7th Cavalry last Saturday.

The place was Knight Field and the occasion was a squadron review for the presentation of decorations and awards to members of the "Garry Owen," 1st Squadron, 7th Cavalry and relatives were on hand to witness the presentations as were Maj. Gen. Charles [illegible]ingslea, 2nd Division commander, and Brig. Gen John T. Cosley, assistant division commander.

Awards Presented

Following the trooping of the line by Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, squadron commander, and Maj. William B. Hill, executive officer, the awards were made by Gen. Billingslea. The general presented PSgt. Sherman L. Smith, with the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service as scout platoon sergeant while serving with the 3rd Medium Tank Battalion, 29th Armor, 3rd Infantry Division.

The high platoon award for the annual Army training test, which is based on final scores attained between the nine reconnaissance platoons, was awarded to the 1st Platoon. Troop B. PFC Richard E. Pearce, Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, received the Driver-of-the-Month award. The Best Mess Award went to Troop C.

The last awards were presented to members of the marksmanship team which placed 2nd in the troop level class during the 2nd Infantry Division Marksmanship Elimination. The six high shooters were, in order, Sp5 Jadie L. Price, Cpl. Leonard T. Sablan, Sp4 Albert Butler Jr., PFC William A. Ferring, PFC Helmut W. Pufal, and PFC Michael E. Rhodes. All of the men came from the 7th's Troop B.

With the conclusion of the [illegible] and Division Band leading the way to the strains of "Yellow Ribbons," the troops passed in review. As the last of the foot soldiers passed the end of the parade field, the mounted reconnaissance platoon, commanded by Lt. J. Johnson, crashed up their engines. The roar that followed drowned out the band; and the five jeeps, two tanks and two armored personnel carriers rumbled along behind the rear element of marching troops.

The mounted platoon passed the review stand, leaving a cloud of dust swirling behind it and the review was over.

Post Sergeant Rates Second In NATO Shoot

A Fort Benning soldier has rated second in competition against selected riflemen from six NATO countries at infrared equipment field trials in Jaegerspris, Denmark, and was presented a Danish Gold Marksmanship Badge.

Sgt. David Buckingham, assigned to the Small Arms Division of The Infantry Board, competed against expert shooters from Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, The Netherlands and the United Kingdom to win the badge which is coveted by marksmen in the Danish Army.

The sergeant was a member of a U. S. Army infrared field testing delegation which recently returned to Fort Benning after completing the trials conducted March 18-April 6.

The U. S. equipment tested were the infrared weaponsight for the U.S. 7.62-mm M-14 rifle and the metascope.

Eighty officers, military attaches and civilians from 11 NATO nations observed the trials which were culminated April 2 by a briefing and firing demonstration by the participating nations.

Other members of the test team from Fort Benning included the officer in charge, Maj. George M. Johnson, Sgt. Norman Purinton and PFC Knapik, members of the Small Army Division of the Infantry Board, and 1st Sgt. Delbert Wilson, a small arms instructor in the Weapons Department of The Infantry School.

Elite Force Guards Top U. S. Court

Chief Justice Earl Warren and his eight associates feel their 33-man force matches any service to the public.

Since 1949 when Congress elevated the force to regular police status they have been on regular round-the-clock security duty.

The unit undergoes continual training in police tactics, with special emphasis on the handling of crowds and visitors.

Crowds descend on the Court especially in the tourist season. Visitors from April to September total about 10,000 a day. The record is 17,000.

Popular Demand Brings MP Back

One day recently, PFC Paul Levine, assigned to The Infantry Center Provost Marshal Section, was transferred to a new duty assignment and away from the corner near Patch School where he had directed traffic since the term began in September.

Levine, like any other Army man, accepted the orders and went about his new task without a word.

A few days after Levine's transfer, a letter was received by Lt. Col. Howard B. Wells, Infantry Center provost marshal.

"We have a favor to ask of you," the letter read. "PFC Paul Levine is being transferred to another job in the Military Police Company and we would like to keep him at the Patch School corner because not only is he a good friend of us who live around but also those who just drive by know Paul."

"We know you are a very busy man, but we would appreciate any thing you could possibly do for us," it concluded.

The letter was signed by 28 children ranging from 5½ to 13 years of age and Col. Wells realizing he could only lose in a battle against such a potent force bowed to the request.

Levine is back at the corner.

Zeus Nabs 'Invader' During Test

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Army's Nike Zeus antimissile missile system successfully intercepted a re-entry target vehicle launched by a Titan I intercontinental ballistic missile recently in another of a series of continuing development tests, the Department of Defense has announced.

The Nike Zeus was fired and controlled from the Army test installation, at the Pacific Missile Range Facility, Kwajalein Island in the Southwest Pacific.

Ground tracking equipment indicated that the target vehicle was within the lethal radius of the Zeus operational warhead.

Neither the intercepting missile nor the target vehicle carried a nuclear warhead.

The target vehicle was boosted to ICBM velocity on a 5,000 mile trajectory from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., using a Titan I intercontinental ballistic missile booster fired as a training exercise by a crew of the Strategic Air Command.

The capability of intercepting single target vehicles launched by ICBMs under research and development conditions is a valuable contribution to the understanding of the basic factors involved in problems in this field.

Knowledge gained in the continuing series of Nike Zeus intercept tests from Kwajalein will be of benefit to the Army in the dedvelopment of the Nike X anti-missile missile system.

The Nike X, an advanced version of the Nike Zeus system, will include an advanced radar, the Nike Zeus missile for long range intercept, and the high for short range intercept.

SFC Embry Is Winner In Suggestion Contest

SFC Cecil W. Embry has received an award of $100 in ceremonies here as first prize winner in a Quarterly Military Suggestion Award Contest conducted by Third U. S. Army, Headquarters, Fort McPherson.

The award was presented by Col. D. D. Dixon, G-4 of The Infantry Center.

A parachute maintenance supervisor, Sgt. Embry's suggestion was concerned with wear on risers on mock towers where they strike cables during jump training. He proposed that covers be constructed to protect the risers. The suggestion, first place winner because of its value to the government, is expected to save the Army $4,016 per year.

Col. Dixon presented Infantry Center awards to four other employees.

Henry J. Fluellen, a warehouseman, received $15 for a proposal to increase efficiency and safety in the storage of commissary merchandise.

Mrs. John Wojas, an accounting clerk, and Mrs. James Lott, supervisor of the Commissary Purchasing Division, received letters of appreciation and $15 each for a joint suggestion.

They proposed overprinting certain pertinent information on forms frequently used in their work to reduce the necessity of typing it. The suggestion is expected to save $150 per year.

Mrs. Paul L. Tefft received an outstanding job rating and $100 for sustained superior performance from Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 1962. She is a clerk - typist in the Supply Control and Storage Section.

Oven to Ice New Route Of Pershing

WASHINGTON (ANF) —The Army's Pershing missile is being yanked out of the icebox and shoved into the oven—and there are a lot of miles between the deep freeze and steam bath.

But miles have little meaning to the test team ramrodding the Army's all - weather Pershing ballistic missile system through a series of weather extremes in the arctic and the tropics to test the system's reliability and its ability to withstand intense heat and cold.

Pershing, which is nearing the end of flight testing at Cape Canaveral, came out of the arctic icebox at the end of March after being chilled, jogged, bounced, and generally abused in arctic temperatures ranging from 55 below to 35 degrees above zero.

The successful arctic environmental tests were conducted at three sites at Fort Wainwright near Fairbanks, Alaska, by a joint Army-Industry team under the technical direction of the Army Missile Command, Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

By mid-May, the same system used in the arctic tests will be on its way through the Caribbean waterways to the Panama Canal Zone where it will be subjected to tropical temperatures and humidity tests. These tests will be conducted at Fort Sherman in the Canal Zone.

Beware of Becoming A 'Chain' Mortgagor

By PFC Harry S. Sherwin

Are you presently the owner of a home or other real estate and contemplate selling?

If the answer is yes, then here is something of which you should beware.

If you have purchased your home on a mortgage, as most people, then you have assumed a mortgage. Once you have assumed a mortgage, you are always liable in the event of default. You are not relieved from liability simply because you sell your home. Instead, you only become part of the "chain" of mortgagors.

The only way you are released from this liability is to either pay off the mortgagee or money lender in full or to have the new purchaser refinance the home.

When you refinance, it simply means that the new purchaser goes to the bank and either the bank transfers the mortgage from your name to theirs or the bank will issue them a separate and new mortgage on the property and apply the funds to pay off your mortgage. Either of these will, of course, relieve you of all responsibility under the mortgage.

With this basic background and explanation of the law of mortgages in mind, let us take an example to illustrate exactly what we are saying.

Assume that Jones purchases a home on a 20-year mortgage from the ABC Mortgage Company. He lives in the home for a year, receives PCS orders and puts the home up for sale. Jones sells the home to Doe. However, there is no re-financing and even though Doe has contracted and promised to pay off the mortgage, Jones is still liable in the event that Doe defaults and foreclosure results.

Now, let us continue the chain by having Doe sell to Smith under the same set of facts as Doe's previous purchase. After five years of occupancy, Smith suddenly defaults, and the mortgage company starts foreclosure proceedings.

Immediately, the mortgage company serves Jones and Doe, the previous owners, as well as Smith, the present owner, with foreclosure papers.

The law of mortgages allows a mortgagee (money lender) to sue mortgagors (borrowers) who have assumed a mortgage, both jointly and severally. Also, the mortgagee, upon recovering a deficiency judgment, can elect to enforce the judgment either jointly or severally.

This means they can collect equally from all, or from the party who is most collectible, i.e., most money, assets, property, bonds, etc.

In the event that an individual pays the entire judgment, then he has the right to sue the one who bought from him, since Doe has contracted with Jones to pay for him, and Doe has contracted with Smith to pay Smith's debt. But many times, the person you have the right to sue may not have funds to pay and you will be stuck with the deficiency.

Remember, if you are planning on selling your home and do not want to be part of a chain of mortgagors for foreclosure, get the prospective purchaser to re-finance. This re-financing gives you a complete release from all liability, plus eliminating the possibility of a serious blemish to your credit standing.

AT FORT HOLABIRD

FDA Certifies Bacon Cured By Irradiation

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Irradiated bacon has received an okay from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for unrestricted use in the United States. Its approval climaxes 10 years of Army research in developing this totally new method of preserving foods.

More than a dozen other items are being developed by the Army's Materiel Command and the Surgeon General and probably will be submitted to the FDA during the next two or three years.

FDA clearance of irradiated bacon does not mean it will become a standard Army ration or a commercial food item in the immediate future. It still has to undergo troop tests for acceptibility under arctic, tropical and other extreme conditions peculiar to military usage.

Except for modern canning, irradiation is considered to be the first completely new method of food preservation. Many, such as drying, smoking and freezing, are as old as civilization.

President Honors MOH Holders

A Fort Benning officer who holds the Medal of Honor and another recipient who left the post only two months ago for Viet Nam attended a Medal of Honor Military Reception given by President John F. Kennedy Thursday at the White House.

They are Lt. Col. Robert R. Nett, former chairman of The Infantry School Ranger Department Platoon Tactics Committee who was assigned to Viet Nam in February, and Maj. Edward R. Schowalter Jr., an instructor on the Special Subjects Department Leadership Committee.

Mrs. Nett, who lives in Columbus, and Mrs. Schowalter accompanied their husbands from here to Washington Wednesday. They are expected to return today.

President Kennedy has invited all Medal of Honor recipients to the reception.

Part of the nation's observance of the Medal of Honor Centennial which began, by presidential proclamation, July 12, 1962, the White House event will climax almost a year of tribute to the 2,199 illustrious soldiers who have earned the award through the years.

Maj. Schowalter was awarded the medal for "extraordinary service to the nation" during the Korean conflict.

The place was near Kumkwa and the date was Oct. 14, 1952. He was a first lieutenant commanding Company A, 31st Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division.

His first platoon had been halted by heavy fire within 50 yards of an enemy strong-

More than 1,300 post soldiers, members of The Infantry School's Student Brigade, will honor Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr. at a farewell review at 10 a.m. Saturday on Gordon Field.

Gen. Reynolds, assistant commandant of the school since April, 1962, will soon retire. He will be succeeded by Brig. Gen. John Norton, formerly a member of the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Unit Training and Readiness, Continental Army Command Headquarters, Fort Monroe, Va.

Gen. Norton is a 1941 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. He made combat parachute jumps in Sicily, Italy, Normandy and Holland with the 82nd Airborne Division during World War II.

The new assistant commandant is an Army aviator. He wears a master parachutist badge and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Troops participating in the farewell review for Gen. Reynolds will be organized into five battalions, consisting of basic Infantry officer students, officer candidates, airborne students, cadre men and officers.

NATO Group Due to Arrive Here Tuesday

The second group of North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) staff officers to visit here in recent weeks will tour the post Tuesday and Wednesday.

A similar group, consisting of standing group planners, staff officers of the military representative, officers of the standing group secretariat and officers of the staff of the supreme Atlantic commander, visited The Infantry Center and Infantry School April 23 and 24.

Just before the United States entered World War II, Gen. Reynolds assumed command of the 1st Battalion, 57th Infantry and commanded it during the Japanese attack. He was captured when Bataan fell but later escaped and remained on Luzon until he could rejoin American units upon their return in 1945.

After the war, he became a tactical officer at the U. S. Military Academy. In May, 1948, he was graduated from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and was assigned to the G-2 (Intelligence) Section, Department of the Army.

After completing a course at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., he returned to the G-2 Section and became chief of the Estimates Branch.

Gen. Reynolds was sent to Korea in 1951, where he joined the 7th Division as its chief of staff and later regimental commander of the 17th Infantry.

Upon his return to the U.S. in 1952, he spent several months with the G-2 Section, Second Army at Fort Meade, Md., before going to the National War College. A year later he was assigned to the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs.

In 1955, he became executive officer, and later deputy chief for Plans, Programs and Security, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence, Department of the Army.

Gen. Reynolds was assigned as deputy chief, Military Assistance Advisory Group, Spain in 1958. In 1961, he became assistant commander, 2nd Infantry Division. In 1962 he assumed his present duties.

point. The second platoon moved up in support. The lieutenant, already wounded, was spearheading the assault, according to reports.

Nearing the objective, he suffered a severe wound from a grenade fragment but "refusing medical aid, he led his men into the trenches and began routing the enemy from the bunkers with grenades," the citation accompanying his award reads. "Suddenly from a burst of fire from a hidden cave off the trench, he was again wounded."

The young lieutenant continued to lead the assault until the ground was secured, reports continued.

Born in New Orleans, Dec. 24, 1927, Maj. Schowalter attended elementary and high school in Metairie.

He was graduated from Virginia Military Institute at Lexington June 13, 1951. He was commissioned a second lieutenant and entered active service on that day.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, Maj. Schowalter has been awarded a Purple Heart and Combat Infantryman Badge. He is also a qualified senior parachutist.

Maj. and Mrs. Schowalter have two daughters, Bonney Lynn, 7, and Ruth Ellen, 4, and three sons, Edward R. III, and Steven John, 5-year-old twins, and William Allen, 2.

Col. Nett was awarded the Medal of Honor for action Dec. 14, 1944, near Cogneon, Leyte, Philippine Islands.

An enemy reinforced battalion had held up the American advance for two days from entrenchments around a three-story concrete building, the citation accompanying the medal said.

Col. Nett, then a first lieutenant, spearheaded an assault using Company E, 305th Infantry, 77th Infantry Division, which he commanded, another Infantry company and armored vehicles, the citation added.

Twice be was seriously wounded, but continued to lead the assault, unwilling to retire until the capture of the objective was assured, according to reports.

After incuring a third serious wound in the final assault, he "calmly made all arrangements for the resumption of the advauce, turned over his command to another officer, and then walked unaided to the rear for medical treatment," the citation said.

Col. Nett entered the Army as an enlisted man more than 22 years ago.

He came here the following year to attend Officer Candidate School, graduating as a second lieutenant Dec. 26, 1942.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, Col. Nett's awards and decorations include a Bronze Star Medal with "V" Device and Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, Expert and Combat Infantryman Badges.

Col. Nett is a qualified Ranger and wears a Gliderist Badge.

Col. and Mrs. Nett have two children, Frances Anne, 18, and Robert B. Jr., 9.

Capt. Cecil Wallis of MTU captured the rapid fire pistol match with a 585 out of 600 score, and SFC Laurence Mosely, also of MTU, was second with 577.

The U. S. skeet team had a pair of MTU firers in Lt. Gordon Horner and MSgt. Henry Shaw. They teamed with Ken Sedlecky of the U.S. Navy and David Bywater to take the skeet team even with a 586.

Sedlecky was the individual champion with a 150 straight effort.

Sgt. Anderson won another gold medal in the 300-meter free-rifle with a score of 1146. The Capt. Wright was runner-up with 1136.

The two teamed with Sgt. Krilling and John Bertva to win the gold medal in a team event with a combined total of 4557.

In the center-fire pistol, Capt. T. D. Smith of the U. S. Air Force set a new world record with his winning score of 597. Also shattering the old world mark was SFC William Blankenship of MTU, who placed second with 594.

RANGER COMMITTEEMAN

Second Lt. John S. Burwell has been assigned as an instructor with The Infantry School's Ranger Department. Lt. Burwell, who received his commission after completing Officer Candidate School in February, will be on the department's Platoon Tactics Committee.

Air Assault Division Has Organization Day

Fort Benning's newest major unit, the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), held Organization Day ceremonies at Lawson Army Airfield Thursday.

Although the new division was activated in October, the formal birthday has been designated May 2. The division's mission is to test the Army's new concept in air mobility for ground combat.

Activities started at 10 a.m. with a division review. The review featured presentations of peacetime and combat awards to division personnel and a fly-by of division aircraft.

At 1:30 p.m. Fort Benning Sky Divers Club members demonstrated free-fall parachute jump techniques, and members of the 187th Pathfinder Detachment made static line jumps. All types of aircraft used by the division were on display on the airfield.

Division personnel attended dances last night, bringing the festivities to a close. Officers attended a dance at the Main Officers' Open Mess, and enlisted personnel dances were held at Victory Lodge and Service Clubs No. 1 and 2.

A souvenir booklet containing information and historical data about the 11th Airborne Division, a combat-proven unit from which the test unit bases its traditions and heritage, was distributed to division personnel and guests at the ceremonies. The booklet also explains the new air mobility concept and data concerning the newly-created unit.

At noon they are scheduled to eat lunch with students in the Infantry Officer Candidate School (OCS). Lunch will be followed by a briefing on the OCS program presented by Lt. Col. George P. McClendon, commander of The Infantry School's 5th Student Battalion.

Later that afternoon more briefings will be presented in The Infantry School. These include briefings on the Allied Student Training Section presented by Lt. Col. James S. Douglas, Infantry School secretary, and the Ranger Department by Col. John W. Jackson, department director.

An official reception will be held at 7 p.m. in the Supper Club Annex of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

On Wednesday, the NATO officers will visit the 2nd Infantry Division in the Sand Hill area, and later the same morning will tour The Infantry Board facilities.

The group will depart at 1:15 p.m.

Publicity chairman is John W. Gause, public information officer at The Infantry Center.

The announcer is Weyman Brooks from WTVM.

Matches

A 15-minute concert by The Infantry Center Band will precede Gen. Rich's opening address to the more than 800 shooters and guests expected to turn out for the gala occasion.

Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, under whose direction these 43 individual and team matches will be conducted, will introduce the commanding general.

After the commanding general fires the first shot the marksmen will move to their respective ranges for three days of practice firing before the actual record competition opens on Monday with the automatic rifle championships.

Last year's winner, the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N. C., is loaded for the proverbial "bear" and carries the favorite's odds into the race.

The Infantry Center and the 101st Airborne Division team from Fort Campbell, Ky., along with the other six active Army posts and many National Guard and Reserve units of Third Army, have fielded teams with the capabilities of going past the 82nd's "All-Americans" to a complete rewrite of the Third Army's marksmanship record books.

One of the many highlights of these matches will be the newly revised Excellence - in-Competition or "leg" match in both the rifle and pistol categories.

This is the course of fire required for qualification credits toward the National Distinguished Marksman Badge.

Credit points will be awarded to the highest scoring 10 per cent of all non-distinguished participants completing the matches.

Ten credit points will be awarded to the top one-sixth of the qualifying leg-match firers. Eight points will go to the firers in the next one-third of the 10 per cent group, with six points going to the remaining shooters authorized credit points.

Through the revision the award of the Distinguished Badge will be made when an individual has earned a minimum of 30 credit points.

The six active Army teams are from Forts Gordon and Stewart, Ga., Forts McClellan and Rucker and Redstone Arsenal, Ala., and Fort Jackson, S. C.

Jet-Age Frontiersmen Facing New Dangers

Sudden death lurked behind every bush when this nation of ours was settled. The frontiersman always had one eye on his work—the other peeled for danger. He was ready to spring to the defense of his home in an instant. He had to be.

When this country was wild, the frontiersman faced crafty, unpredictable and deadly enemies. There wasn't much argument about universal military training or a ready reserve. You just had to be ready and able to fight, that's all. Those were the facts of life.

We need the same kind of alertness today. Supersonic long-range aviation and nuclear weapons have shrunk the world. Total destruction can come suddenly, without warning.

Once more danger lurks only a missile-flight away. Our only hope is to keep the frontier spirit alive even if all geographical frontiers have long since vanished.

We've returned to a "frontier" situation in a settled land. It calls for a frontier-type readiness. (AFPS)

Following a visit to the U. S. Naval base at Guantanamo, House Services Committee member Clarence Long (D-Md.) said, "I left Cuba in a Navy plane escorted by jet fighters, feeling certain our base at Guantanamo Bay will be there long after Fidel Castro's Communist regime has fallen and been forgotten." During his Cuban visit, Long shared a watch on Suicide Ridge with Marine Pvt. Thomas Jones Jr., from his Maryland District.

Combat Pay? Representative Charles E. Bennett (D-Fla.), a decorated WWII Infantryman, says Congress should vote approval of $55 per month combat pay or else eliminate $632-million in other special pay. He intends, he says, to make a fight of it on the floor of the House when the proper time comes.

The House passed a bill, sent to the Senate, advocating the economic census scheduled for 1969 be moved up a year to 1968.

The House cleared a bill and sent it to the White House for the President's signature which when signed will establish a charitable and educational foundation to commemorate the late Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The House passed a supplemental fund request asking for additional funds for the Federal share of unemployment compensation payable to ex-servicemen. The Labor Department has warned that funds for this use were running short. No action in the Senate was possible until after the Easter recess.

Only 40 per cent of draft age youths will pull any military service at all by June, 1965, because of the country's soaring population growth. The figure is about 48 per cent at the present time, the Library of Congress told Congress recently. It was estimated that of the 1.1 million males of draft age last June only 530,000 (48 per cent) had seen active military service. The estimate continues, saying that only 45 per cent will see service in June, 1963, then 42 per cent in 1964 and to 40 per cent in mid-1965. The prediction is that the total of 26-year-olds to escape military service will decline even still further in succeeding years.

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. David E. Rebbin

As everyone is well aware of by now, the Class Q Allotment requirements have been changed.

This change has left some service personnel with the erroneous impression that they may now cease to support their wives and children and be protected from any action against them by reason of their military service.

The Army policy concerning support of dependents is contained in paragraph 37, AR 600-20. It should be carefully read and understood. To put it bluntly, NON-SUPPORT OF DEPENDENTS WILL NOT BE TOLERATED.

In nearly all states, it is a crime for a husband to fail to support his wife and children. In those states in which the crime is a felony, the husband may be extradited from another state. The Army will release military personnel to civil authorities upon presentation of the extradition warrant and he will be returned to the state where his dependents reside for trial.

The result may well be a long prison sentence. The soldier is not protected from such action by the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act.

A dependent, or a state welfare agency, may bring an action under the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act in cases in which the soldier is in another state.

This act has been adopted by all 50 states. Under this act, the soldier is released to civil authorities and tried in the state where he is stationed. This can result either in a prison sentence or a judgment for support in a certain amount. Again, the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act does not protect the serviceman.

Soldiers who have received a divorce in which the court order provided that he pay a certain amount for the support of the children of the marriage can be held in contempt of court and imprisoned for noncompliance with the divorce decree.

Even if the decree remains silent as to support, it is generally held that the service man is obligated to support the children.

While it is generally a command function to see that soldiers support their dependents, legal advice may be obtained in unusual cases from the Legal Assistance Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Living Dangerously

BY CHAPLAIN (CAPT.) CALVIN H. GARNER

Often times we go all out for sports, recreation, clubs, meetings of various types, and beat our brains out in general attempting to build morale, and improve the moral stature of the Army.

I think we would see a tremendous improvement if we spent 50 per cent as much time, effort, and labor for the Lord's work. This would reduce the delinquency rate and increase church attendence. Sports, recreation, clubs, and meetings are vital, but they are not substitutes for the spiritual.

The world restlessly yearns to know God. Frustration on every hand demonstrates this vigorously. Thousands of Christians have lost their burning passion to see others converted. It seems that if the entire world goes to Hell, some could care less.

This is proved every Sunday morning when Christians who have forgotten their Lord's command, flock to the beaches, lakes, gardens, putter around the house, and read the comics instead of worshipping God. Many chapel and church pews go begging because of this neglect and unconcern. Many who would like to know Christ as Saviour attend Church only to find a lot of empty seats. They then wonder why God's children are mad at Him, or else why they have suddenly fallen out of love with Him.

We are dropping the ball on the one-yard line by not telling people of the love of God as expressed in Jesus Christ. We are in disobedience to the Supreme Commander when we ignore our obligations to Him. If we have become too busy to attend church, we have indeed become too busy!

At several church seminar meetings across the nation men have recently stated that Christians are failing their major responsibility. We should return to the Central Doctrine. Christians should communicate this doctrine to non-Christians. The Central Doctrine is that Christ died for our sins, that he was buried, and rose again the third day.

The author of "Anatomy of Peace" stated that Christians will lose their licenses if production doesn't increase. What have you done lately for the cause of Christ? Jesus has removed the candlestick of power from places in the past, and will do it again in the future if we neglect to do our duty.

Soul-winning has lost its significance. People think of it as some freak dressed in sackcloths acting in an idiotic way. From this they shrink away. Real soul winning usually comes in unplanned ways. Friends at the office, at work, the repairman, and social gatherings affords opportunity to speak to someone personally and privately about his or her need for the Lord.

We have labored too much on the theme of free salvation. It is free, but it costs and demands our very all.

A non-Christian recently spoke to a Christian saying, "I am looking for something real." This Christian answered, "God is real, why not come to Church with me tomorrow?" The non-Christian said, "If God is real why are all of those people at the church so secretive about it, Why don't they tell us too, We want to know that God is real."

Often people are seeking the Lord Jesus and can't find the way because Christians are not interested in them. Some Christians lives are so inconsistent that it would be incongruous to approach another about spiritual things.

We are all weak. We can do better than we have. Talk to God in prayer about this situation and find out what he would have you do. Then without hesitation, do it!

Christ founded, loved the Church and gave Himself for it. How do you feel about it?

11th Air Assault Division Wives Hear Gen. Kinnard

Over 300 wives of officers of the 11th Air Assault Division met in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess recently to hear Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the newly formed division.

Introduced by Mrs. Elvy B. Roberts, wife of Col. Roberts, 11th Air Assault Division chief of staff, the general explained the theories of the new division. The division commander also discussed the important role the Army wife plays in the career of her husband.

Hostesses for the luncheon were the ladies of Division Headquarters, under the direction of Mrs. Roberts.

Mrs. Tom M. Nicholson, assisted by Mrs. Ellsworth F. Vassar and Mrs. Malcolm R. Baer, was responsible for the decorations. Chairmen for reservations were Mrs. Peter E. Kelley, Mrs. Robert G. Meneffe Jr. and Mrs. Lester A. Turley, with Mrs. Benjamin S. Silver arranging reservations and name tags for the ladies of the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Seating arrangements were under the direction of Mrs. Frederic Ackerson, while Mrs. Norman L. Williamson supervised the menu.

Decorations for the Spring luncheon included a large straw basket overflowing with pastel spring flowers located upon the fountain in the center of the room. A small helicopter, symbolic of the division, rested on ivy strewn on each table and name tags for the guests were shaped as parachutes.

By Lucille Beard

Intelligence, energy and alertness have caused Mrs. Elvy B. Roberts, wife of the first chief of staff of the 11th Air Assault Division, to have an inate understanding and love of Army life. Because of these traits, she has absorbed much in her tours both overseas and in the States.

Drucilla Wilson Roberts met the man she was later to marry when she was a freshman at Eastern State Teachers' College, Richmond, Ky., and he was a senior. Upon graduation from Eastern, the young Mr. Roberts became Cadet Roberts at the U. S. Military Academy, and Miss Wilson continued her studies, majoring in home economics.

The most important guest at 2nd Lt. Roberts' graduation from West Point was the young lady he was to marry in December, 1943, after he had completed Basic Infantry Training and the Airborne Course and was a member of the 501st Regiment of the 101st Airborne Division. Having been married only two weeks, the young couple was separated for two years.

During these lonely years, Mrs. Roberts was nutritional director for the Dairy Council in Louisville, Ky. Although she was a qualified teacher and had taught in the public schools in Kentucky, Mrs. Roberts preferred her work with the Dairy Council to teaching.

First Daughter Born

When Maj. Roberts returned to the states in January, 1946, duty with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., was his first assignment. Here daughter Catharine was born, after her parents had waited a year for on-post housing and had moved into converted barracks.

Fort Benning first welcomed Mrs. Roberts in 1948, when Maj. Roberts was a student of the Advanced Infantry Course. Upon completion of the course, the major served in the Airborne Department for a year, and Sandi, the Roberts' second daughter, joined the family while they were residing on Austin Loop.

After attending the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Maj. Roberts and his family spent three years in Heidelberg, Germany. An astute shopper, Mrs. Roberts purchased a handmade brass clock, skillfully wrought in 1840. It graces her mantel, beneath a lovely old German mirror, which was acquired specifically to be used someday over a fireplace here.

Attends AF Staff College

Having returned to the States to attend the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., Lt. Col. Roberts subsequently was stationed here again, this time to serve on the Airborne Troop Board for a year. The family purchased a home, lived in it for six months, and was transferred to Washington, D.C., for duty at the Pentagon. Settled for three years in North Arlington, Va., Mrs. Roberts took tailoring lessons, taught school occasionally, and, she remembers, spent hours taxiing her daughters! Carlisle, Pa., was home next, while Lt. Col. Roberts attended the Army War College. Later, when Lt. Col. Roberts was ordered to Iran, his family was permitted to go with him, and two of the most unusual years of Mrs. Roberts' life began. Highlight of the tour was the arrival of William, only son and delight of the household.

Distaff Profile

Living conditions in Iran were not always adequate. After two years of treasuring water, Mrs. Roberts, on her return to the U.S., found herself marvelling at the abundance of water. The American Embassy delivered portable water to dependents.

Water for other purposes was stored in tanks under a porch and transferred by electric pump to barrels above the house, from which it flowed through pipes to the interior of the building. When electric power ceased to operate, which was frequently, running water was non-existent.

Col. Roberts, who was assigned to Plans and Program of ARMISH, MAAG, was on the board of the American School, which is open to all children with American passports.

Impressive among the many fine momentos of their stay in Iran is an immense tray, displayed on a wall of the Roberts' home. Hammered from the back of the pewter washed copper tray is the picture story of Omar Khayyam. A 2,000-year-old Iranian pottery pitcher is treasured by the family.

Returns to Home State

In 1961, Col. Roberts was made commander of the 1st Airborne Battle Group, 506th Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky. Close to home and family, Mrs. Roberts enjoyed both the post and living again in her home state.

In February of this year, Col. Roberts was selected to be chief of staff to an important new division, the 11th Air Assault. Mrs. Roberts, golfer, seamstress, and bridge player, was delighted to be assigned again to Fort Benning and is looking forward to an interesting and fruitful tour here. And 11 years after its purchase, the antique German mirror is hanging over the mantel it was intended for.

Practice Before Fellow Students Prepares Future TIS Instructors

Teaching, like any art, comes naturally to a few, can be acquired by many, but may be improved only with practice.

Perhaps you have wondered how The Infantry School has managed to establish and maintain its worldwide reputation for outstanding instruction.

A large part of the answer lies in the fact that every instructor is a graduate of the Instructor Training Course. And, it is here that the practice is applied!

The Instructor Training Section (ITS) is under the supervision of Col. Laurence E. Chloupek, coordinator of instruction. The section itself is headed by Maj. Ardie E. McClure Jr., and on his shoulders falls the task of training newly assigned personnel to become instructors at The Infantry School.

The course is designed to standardize Infantry School instructional methods and techniques, and to insure that only the highest standards are maintained. Attendance does not automatically insure qualifications. This is far from the fact since, even under ideal conditions, a 20 per cent attrition rate exists.

Major Emphasis

During the four-week Instructor Training Course, major emphasis is devoted to principles of speech, instructional methods, presentation techniques, lesson planning, testing, and to an abundance of practical work conducted in small groups.

All formal instruction that the student requires to assist him in completing the course satisfactorily is given during the first week. The second and third weeks of the course are devoted to practical exercises.

To ensure maximum individual attention to each student during these exercises, the class is divided into eight-man work groups under the direct supervision of an ITS instructor.

These group instructors are the very heart of the Instructor Training Course. For this reason, they are handpicked by the Department Directors. The Instructor Training Section is now authorized five officer instructors and five enlisted instructors.

Group work consists of 11 practical exercises, each of which becomes increasingly demanding.

The first exercise consists of a three-minute talk or biographical sketch, and a five-minute talk on a military subject of the student's choice. These early presentations are designed to overcome the fear of the platform and help control initial stage fright.

The student, using the same topic and ideas presented in the five-minute talk, then expands to an eight - minute presentation. This expansion can be accomplished by including a joke, humorous anecdote, personal experience, or combat example — which must be appropriately related to the presentation.

Demonstration

The requirement for the second eight - minute presentation is a demonstration of a process — the construction or function of an object. This exercise emphasizes the demonstration rather than the explanation; the student is required "to do" rather than "to talk." This can often be a crucial point in the student's progress, for the mere fact that a student holds something in his hand seems to unlock his tongue.

The demonstration is then followed by a ten-minute lecture thoroughly prepared and rehearsed by the student. Starting with this presentation, the group instructor checks not only speech techniques, but also the ability of the student to instruct. A lesson plan is submitted at this time and the student is critiqued on its organization and completeness.

The students of the Instructor Training Course next receive a class on persuasive speaking followed by a practical work period in which a five to ten-minute talk is developed to stimulate, convince, or arouse the audience to action. The subject for this presentation is assigned by the group instructor and adequate preparation time is provided.

Later, a three-minute impromptu speech is presented on a subject assigned to the student immediately prior to presentation. This measures the student's ability to maintain poise under difficult conference situations with disbelieving, argumentative, "sharp-shooting" students. A student now must be able to think on his feet, using the techniques of persuasion previously learned.

Longer presentations include a 20-minute conference expanded from a ten-minute lecture, and a 20-minute conference on a new subject which is later expanded to a 35 minute conference by adding teaching points or additional supporting material.

In the fourth week, instruction is devoted to presentation of a 50-minute period of instruction from problems taught at The Infantry School. This acts as a forerunner to future presentations when the student returns to his instruction department.

For the first time, the student is responsible for the entire show! This includes all of the material, visual aids, assistant instructors, and the sound equipment for the classroom.

The student's department director, section chief, and other interested personnel are invited to witness his first full - length Infantry School presentation.

Additional formal classes on programming instruction, and on construction, grading, and scoring of examinations rounds out the new instructor's education. Those who successfully complete the course are graduated as accepted and qualified members of the Infantry School faculty. The significance of this achievement cannot be overstressed, for during a two- to three-year teaching tour, the average Infantry School instructor associated with leader-type courses will teach — and influence — some 20,000 Infantry officers.

Keystone of the Infantry School's philosophy is that training must be "student centered." Graduates of the Instructor Training Course constantly prepare their classes with this view in mind, for it is now their responsibility in both lesson organization and presentation to fulfill student needs — both for present and future, peacetime and combat.

The instructors who have gone before and those now on the platform are a living tribute to their alma mater, The Infantry School's Instructor Training Section.

All-Out Effort Begins For Swift Strike III

By Peter Tatistcheff

Undisguised and furious training for Strike Command's Exercise Swift Strike III started with a bang last week in the 2nd Infantry Division. Approximately 27 of the division's combat - ready units pulled out of garrison recently on what was called Pre-Strike I, the first in a series of command post exercises scheduled in coming months.

This first command post exercise designed for a joint task force similar to that being set up for Swift Strike III, lasted two days. Two other exercises are set in May and June with a full-scale field training xercise coming up in July.

Training Goals

Objectives of the exercise were to establish and operate division communications nets at normal distances and to minimize processing and transmission time of messages.

In conjunction with airborne operations set for Swift Strike III, this exercise also stressed antiairborne operations. Other objectives included defensive measures to counteract guerrilla operations and to familiarize all headquarters personnel with command post displacement procedures.

The planning and coordination of Pre-Strike I was handled by Col. Lucien F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander.

"United States Strike Command (USSTRICOM) joint training exercise SWIFT STRIKE III will be held in the Carolinas between Fayetteville, N. C. and Augusta, Ga., from July 21 to August 16."

The United States Strike Command is a unified command composed of the combat-ready units of the U.S. Army Continental Army Command and the U. S. Air Force Tactical Air Command. It is a flexible, mobile, and highly-trained military force capable of rapid deployments to any place in the world. Field exercises of the scope of the SWIFT STRIKE exercises are essential to maintaining the high state of combat readiness, and rapid reaction capabilities required of the forces assigned to USSTRICOM for the execution of its mission of reinforcing other unified commands, or to conduct military operations in any area of the world as directed by the Joint

Streamlined Second Seen By 2 of DA

By Bob deCamara

Two assistant secretaries of the Army were honored Friday by the Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Infantry Division with a tour of one of the division's streamlined mechanized infantry battalions.

Flown into the division area by helicopter, Mr. Paul R. Ignatius, assistant secretary of the Army for Installations and Logistics, and Dr. Finn J. Larsen, assistant secretary of the Army for Research and Development, were first shown to division headquarters for an office call on the "Second to None's" commander, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and briefings by officers of the general staff.

The assistant secretaries were accompanied to headquarters by the commanding general of The Infantry Center, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, and Brig. Gen. Walter B. Richardson, Army director of Combat Developments.

After introductions by Gen. Billingslea of the division sen-

Division's ATT Testing Dates Are Released

Latest Army training test dates for units of the 2nd Infantry Division were released this week by division headquarters. Tests are scheduled to be completed by June 22.

Some division units have already undergone testing. These include several infantry and artillery units and the 72nd Armor. For all 2nd Division units except the 7th Cavalry, upcoming testing will be conducted at Fort Benning. Division armor units and cavalrymen take their annual training tests at Fort Stewart, the Army's Armor Center.

Next to be tested will be the 2nd Administration Company, set for May 11 and 12.

The 15th Artillery will test May 14 and 15. Fort Stewart Training Tests for the cavalry come next on May 20-22.

The 122nd Signal Battalion will move to the field for testing May 27-29.

Concurrently the 17th Artillery will be tested May 31 and June 1.

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, and the 2nd Engineer battalion take their tests June 10-12.

The last artillery unit to be tested will be the 38th Artillery, scheduled for June 18 and 19.

Eight 2nd Infantry Division units will take their annual

Cavalry Boasts Flying Soldiers

The 2nd Division's 7th Cavalry has taken the first step toward providing the division with its famous air cavalry troop.

Embracing new concepts in cavalry tactics, the air cavalry troops will add an air wing to the combined arms of the 7th. This troop will be capable of air movement in helicopters.

The first element of this new air cavalry troop to be organized is the aero-rifle platoon, added under the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept. This platoon is composed of four rifle squads and a headquarters. The platoon is totally air mobile. It can be transported at any time in five HU-1B helicopters.

Eventually, when the entire air cavalry troop is organized, it will contain a troop headquarters, operations section, a scout platoon, an aero-rifle platoon, aero-weapons section and service platoon.

The troop's mission is designed to extend by air means the reconnaissance and security capabilities of the armored cavalry squadron.

Training of this new platoon began this week at Fort Stewart, Ga. Training consists of long range patrols and jungle-type warfare training. After they return from Stewart, they will participate in a modified three-week mountain warfare training cycle at the Ranger training camp in North Georgia.

Pistol Team Firers Win Holiday in Dixie Matches

The 2nd Infantry Division's shooting sojourners have returned from the Holiday in Dixie Matches in Louisiana with several of the team's members boasting first place wins.

Although the pistol team didn't quite "even up" to the rifle team's recent triumph at Oak Ridge, Tenn., four team members brought back commendable firing records.

Lt. Ray Carney, detachment commander, fired his way to a first place win in the Expert Class, .45 cal. Rapid Fire Match. Then SFC Stephen Wedding had a real "field day."

SFC Wedding took first place in the Marksman Class, .22 cal. Slow Fire Match. Then he went on to outshoot his competitors in the Slow Fire .22 cal., the Slow Fire .45 cal., and the Center Fire to take a first place win for the Slow Fire Aggregate. Not finished yet, Wedding took first place in the .45 cal. Time Fire Match, the .45 cal. Rapid Fire Match, and the .22 cal. Time Fire Match. These were all fired in the Marksman Class.

After a few minutes time out to clean his pistol, SFC Wedding entered the Expert Class Competition. He fired his way to a 2nd place in the .22 cal. Aggregate Match and did likewise in the Center Fire Aggregate.

Also firing in the Expert Class, SSgt. Carl Hawks came out on top in the .22 cal. National Match Course. He then fired his way to a first place victory in the Center Fire National Match Course. For these accomplishments SSgt. Hawks was awarded an appropriate prize.

In the Unclassified Aggregate (any qualified shooter may enter regardless of class) SFC Roscoe Bower out-fired 13 shooters to clinch first place in this event. This was an event in which the only award was one's individual score ratioed to another's.

The Marksmanship Detachment during the past few days has been preparing itself for the "big one". Today the "Indianhead" sharpshooters begin practice firing at Fort Benning for the Third Army Bigbore Competition. The official firing for record starts on Monday with teams representing posts from the entire Third U. S. Army area ready to line up at the post ranges.

This is the match the detachment has been anxiously awaiting. The competition concludes May 11.

Maj. Ensley Rejoins 2nd As Division Commandant

By Bob deCamara

In May 1951 waves of blue-clad Chinese Communist soldiers swept down the "Punchbowl" area in Korea on the counter-offensive with orders to destroy the American 2nd Infantry Division.

The Communists were met by elements of the 2nd Division, including the 38th Infantry Regiment, and for the first time all across that ravaged land, the Chinese tide was slowed. Time magazine reported, the "38th Infantry Regiment, calling itself the 'Rock of the Marne' since the First World War, was now the 'Rock of Korea'."

In the Punchbowl

For action in the "Punchbowl" area, a Distinguished Service Cross, the Army's second highest combat decoration, second only to the Medal of Honor, was awarded to Maj. Sherman W. Ensley serving with the "Rock of the Marne" regiment on the line. Estimates of casualties in the Spring battle listed 900 dead or missing for the "Second to None," 37,750 Chinese Communists dead.

Maj. Ensley is back with the 2nd Division now. This time on garrison duty at Fort Benning as the 2nd Chiefs of Staff. Therefore, our soldiers and airmen must be trained in a realistic manner which can be achieved only where sufficient maneuver space is available.

SWIFT STRIKE III will pit two strong joint task forces of United States Strike Command ground and air elements against each other. Some 80,000 men of several divisions and smaller units of the Army and numerous Air Force tactical air units will battle each other over a large area of the Southeast, commencing with each side launching an extensive air campaign seeking to achieve air superiority in the assumed combat area.

"SWIFT STRIKE III will be the largest joint training exercise United States Strike Command has held to date and we will strive for maximum realism in maneuvering large joint forces," General Adams said. "The area we have chosen is particularly desirable because of the variety of terrain, and well-disposed Army and Air Force bases which contribute substantially to the effectiveness of the exercises, and reduce the costs of conducting them. Therefore, it is essential that we train our forces in the most realistic manner possible," he emphasized.

ior commanders and general staff officers, the briefings got underway in the conference room with the division's reorganization under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept and the division's participation in the Rotaplan unit rotation system as the main topics.

The STRAC 2nd Infantry Division is the first old-line Army division chosen to go ROAD. So far it has traded in four of the old-type, pentomic battle groups in favor of mobile, highly flexible battalions. Reorganization will be complete by June after the division has redesignated the 1st Battle Group, 33th Infantry which recently returned to Fort Benning following six months of temporary duty in Germany under Rotaplan.

Leaving headquarters by sedan, the two assistant secretaries were escorted to the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry area for a close-up view of what an infantry battalion now looks like in operation after mechanization.

Those being tested at this time will be: Headquarters and Headquarters Company and Band, Support Command; 2nd Medical Battalion 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; 702nd Maintenance Battalion; 2nd Military Police Company; 2nd Military Intelligence Detachment; 26th Chemical Detachment; and the 194th Chemical Platoon.

Signs of the ROAD; A Series

Centralization is Back For Supply, Transport

By George Aubin

The keyword for changes affected by the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept on the new 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion is "centralization."

During the period previous and up to World War I, food, fuel, clothing and all other supplies pertinent to the smooth functioning of an infantry division were distributed by a central organization. However, the period following World War I saw emphasis being placed on specialization in technical fields with the result that several units were now performing the tasks previously handled by one agency.

Although this took the burden off the shoulders of one unit and distributed it to others, many problems arose. No longer could items be taken to one central place. Each item now had to be taken to the unit which specialized in its use. As more and more units were brought into use, the more the paper work increased.

Army and government officials recognized that specialization was causing more problems than it was solving. So, the trend has been in the past several years to go from multiple supply back to the World War I system of central logistics.

Under ROAD, the Supply and Transport Battalion is doing just that. Commanded by Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., the "S and T," Battalion as it is called, combines the logistical support roles of the old 2nd Quartermaster Company, the 13th Transportation Battalion and the supply elements of several old support battalions to provide the 2nd Division with Class I, Class II, Class III and Class IV supplies, and in some cases, transportation.

Currently having a strength of 465 men and 250 vehicles, the S and T Battalion is organized into three companies — Headquarters and Headquarters Co., Supply and Service Co., and Motor Transport Co.

Headquarters and Headquarters Co., commanded by Capt. Joseph D. Kelley, provides the battalion with command, administrative and technical supervision. The company is composed of a battalion headquarters, a battalion headquarters section, a company headquarters and the division supply office. The division supply office is further broken down into an engineer section, an ordnance section, a quartermaster section, a signal section and a transportation section. It is here where the administrative work for supplying the division is done. The supply office determines requirements for, obtains, maintains records on, and directs the receipt, temporary storage, issue and distribution of all supplies and equipment for the division. With the conversion to ROAD, the net increase in supply created a great problem in acquisition and requisition, which the supply office had to solve.

Col. Hibbard said of their efforts, "remarkable progress has been made in the integration of supply and support activities formerly performed by six different technical units concurrently while supporting the conversion of battle groups to infantry battalions. At the same time, support was furnished the Rotaplan mechanized battalions and the relocation of their material to the newly designated Rotaplan units."

Rolling Along

While the division supply office obtains the supplies and equipment for the division, it is the job of the Supply and Service Company, commanded by Lt. Thomas Harper, to actually take care of the loading, unloading, storage and distribution of supplies. In addition, it operates mobile filling stations, provides and maintains the division reserve of supplies and equipment, provides supervision for limited packaging and air delivery of supplies by divisional aircraft and furnishes limited shower service to the division while in the field. Included in its make-up is a company headquarters, a main supply platoon, a bath section and three forward supply sections. The three forward supply sections are assigned, one each, to each of the division's three brigades. In time of war, a graves registration platoon is added.

After the supplies have been obtained, unloaded and stored, it becomes the job of the Motor Transport Co., commanded by Capt. Alfred E. Klemm, to provide the transportation for their delivery. The company consists of a company headquarters, a maintenance section, a light truck platoon and a medium truck platoon. To transport the supplies, the company has trucks, 12,000-gallon tankers, 5,000 gallon tankers and 12-ton tractor semi-trailers. In addition, the company has six 10,000 gallon collapsible gas tanks which are used to store diesel and aviation fuel.

The Motor Transport Company is the workhorse of the division and it has been estimated that it will cover over three-quarters of a million miles in the coming year.

Under the ROAD system, the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion should affect the greater utilization of personnel, centralize the acquisition and distribution of supplies, and increase efficiency with the responsibility for the providing and transporting of supplies being placed under the control of one commander.

According to Col. Hibbard, "we look forward to increased capabilities for supporting the division as we obtain our full complement of trained personnel and equipment.

DSC Winner Reunited With His Combat 2nd Division

Division headquarters commandant.

The major entered the Army in January 1943 and served throughout World War II as an enlisted man with various training units in the U.S. In January 1945 he began Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning and graduated in July of that year as a second lieutenant.

Maj. Ensley's first assignment as an officer was at Fort Rucker, Ala., with the training replacements.

Two months later he joined the 96th Regimental Combat Team, better known as "The Bushmasters," in Japan as a platoon leader with a combat engineer battalion.

Transferred to 11th Major Port, Maj. Ensley served as the commanding officer of quartermaster truck company until May 1946 when he was shipped back to the U.S. and discharged from active duty.

Recalled to Duty

Recalled in 1948, the major was assigned on Okinawa to the 44th Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division. He again returned to the U.S. when the 44th was redesignated the 29th and after eight months duty with the 29th.

His last two assignments before Korea were as a [illegible] training officer with the 34th Regiment at Fort Riley, Kansas, and at Fort Jackson, S.C., as commanding officer of a company in the 8th Infantry Division.

Married at Fort Jackson, the major was soon transferred to Korea at the height of the conflict and first took command of the 28th Infantry's Company G, three months later switching to Company H as commanding officer. In December 1951, he took over as commander of the Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

The Distinguished Service Cross winner left Korea in early 1952 and the next three years taught advanced infantry courses at the University of Alabama.

In 1955 he also took the Advanced Infantry Officers course at Fort Benning and left for the Northern Area command in Germany as sub-area chief of logistics.

As a reserve advisor in 1958 with the XII Corps and duty station in Rome, Ga., which he now calls home, Maj. Ensley was presented with an Army Commendation Medal.

In March 1962 he completed a month-long counter - insurgency course at Fort Bragg, N.C., and was shipped to Viet Nam as a military advisor to a chief of province.

Maj. Ensley rejoined the 2nd Division in April this year as headquarters commandant.

Besides his Distinguished Service Cross, he also holds the Silver Star for service in Korea. The major and his wife, Faye, have two sons, Eddy, 9, and Kevin, 3.

When Was the First Memorial Day 500?

It is hard for us to keep in mind that when we slide behind the steering wheel of an automobile we have in our control a lethal weapon.

We have here a wonderful machine made by man with a God-given intelligence, to be an extremely useful and practical thing. The automobile has accomplished great things for us. It has helped tremendously in expanding and developing our nation's commerce. In its manufacture and use, it has provided works, a means of livelihood for many thousands.

It has brought fresh air and sunshine and broadened the horizons of many a family. It has saved the lives of many a carrier on errands of mercy. More Now Acquainted With APC

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Several 2nd Division infantry units have been training to become mechanized, using the armored personnel carrier to carry soldiers into battle.

The 1st Battalion, 22rd Infantry, currently beginning a temporary Rotaplan overseas tour of duty, is training with the "APC" for upcoming Europe exercises. For these men the APC has necessitated a major revision of their tactics. For some it has become a home.

Fuel Consumption

Among the various statistics that make their APC's valuable rolling fortresses there are few drawbacks. One seldom realized fact is that the APC gets only one mile to the gallon of gas.

This is probably the only potential liability the 12-ton troop carrier has; presenting a fuel supply problem.

First brought out during the Korean Conflict, the APC was utilized to secure invaluable territory with maximum speed and efficiency. The M-113, smaller than the dual-engine M-59, holds an 11-man squad with combat gear. Its equipment consists of Pioneer Tools (shovel, pick, crowbar), and three different types of radios.

With the proper instruction an individual can learn to drive this vehicle in one day and learn how to service it in three.

For protection, the APC or "Track" is mounted with a .50 caliber machine gun.

It is amphibious, able to travel up to 15 miles per hour in water. With 16 of these fortresses in each infantry company, they can be utilized by all sections.

Car Commander

In addition to a driver, the APC demands the presence of a "car commander" to act as a rear lookout and ranking individual. A car commander usually holds the rank of sergeant or above.

The driver uses a series of periscopes during movement in the rain or under combat conditions, enabling him to observe without causing unnecessary danger to himself or the men protected inside the vehicle.

The function of the "track" is to bring the men to the assault point with a minimum of casualties. In addition it preserves their energy, giving them maximum protection from the enemy.

NEWLY MECHANIZED SOLDIERS OF THE APC ROAD Provides for Extra Tracks

FIRST BRIGADE CARRIES BELONGINGS FROM KELLEY HILL

Troops Now Working Out of Sand Hill Quarters

1st Brigade Moves Into Sand Hill

By 1st Brigade PIO

With the final piece of baggage aboard the last truck men of the newly-formed 1st Brigade took a final look at their old home on Kelley Hill where they had served with the recently - inactivated 1st Infantry. Then the trucks rolled off to Sand Hill with the men and equipment which, under the division reorganization, form the 1st Brigade.

The 1st Brigade is composed of a Headquarters and Headquarters Company commanded by Col. Edgar R. Poole who formerly commanded the 1st Infantry. The 1st Brigade is made up of personnel from the retired "Always First" battle group.

The brigade's mission is to command and control attached combat and combat support elements in both training and operations. To most of the men, the brigade will be an entirely new operations.

The highlight of the transfer to Sand Hill was the welcoming speech to the members of the 1st Brigade by Col. Poole. "We've said goodbye to the 1st Infantry, a grand old outfit. Let's say hello to the 1st Brigade, our new unit. The 1st Brigade is a challenge and an opportunity. Things will be new. There will be some obstacles. Let's knock them down as we come to them," said the colonel.

Col. Poole next brought up in his talk Swift Strike III, the mammoth joint maneuvers held yearly in the Carolinas. Only two brigades of the division's three will be participating, and the 1st Brigade is to be one of them. "We did a good job last year with the 1st Infantry: Many of you are the same men who helped out. Let's do the same this year in Swift Strike III now that we belong to the 1st Brigade. Let's keep "Always First."

2nd Shows Off For Lt. Col. Dent

A trip to the field training area to watch infantrymen becoming expert with the Davy Crockett, an Army nuclear-capable weapon, and a quick check of the motor pool rounded out the day for the liaison officer.

COOK of the WEEK

"Winter Ham Slice" though sounding out of season is a most interesting and tempting way to enjoy ham and could be served at any time during the year. From the beginning of time meat has been the mainstay of man's diet. Today, more often than not, in meal planning, the meat is usually decided first and then the other foods are chosen that best accompany and complement it. Our "Cook of the Week" is Mrs. LeRoy B. Arnold, wife of SFC LeRoy Arnold, 13th Transportation Battalion.

WINTER HAM SLICE

1½ cup mashed, cooked sweet potatoes
½ cup brown sugar
¼ cup lemon juice
½ cup applesauce
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
2 center-cut ham slices, cut ½-inch thick
¼ cup lemon juice
½ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons pan drippings

Stud Edge

Combine sweet potatoes, brown sugar, lemon juice, applesauce and cinnamon. Spoon on top of one ham slice, place second slice ove rsweet potato mixture. Stud edge of ham slices with cloves, then bake in slow, 325 degree over 1 hour.

Combine lemon juice, brown sugar and drippings, then spoon mixture over ham slice for the last 15 minutes of cooking time. Carve down through both ham slices and filling. Slice as you would a loaf of bread. Serves 4 to 6.

Beauty Contest Here

You Choose 'Queen of WAC's!'

By Bob de Camara

The rustle of skirts is about as frequent a sound in the 2nd Infantry Division garrison area as the voice of the turtle. But May 12 at Service Club Two the turtle will be speaking loud and clear about the difficulties of choosing one young lady over another in the division's first beauty contest in many countless months.

The occasion is the 21st birthday of the Women's Army Corps Company, United States Army Infantry Center. Service Club Two is sponsoring the contest as a part of the "Spend the Day with the 2nd Infantry Division" invitation to the girls to come up from Main Post and celebrate their coming of age with the help of the division's infantrymen.

Along with the selection of a WAC Queen from a field that has been narrowed to 19 contestants, the day will feature lunch at the 2nd's mess halls, WAC ceremonies and a dance.

From May 5 to May 10 displayed in Service Clubs Two and Four will be the pictures of the girls entered in the contest. The "Indianhead" soldiers will make their choice known by balloting "Miss Rheingold" fashion for their favorite. Votes will be tallied the night of May 10 and the choice made known on May 12 before the WAC's and soldiers at the service club. The two runner-ups will serve as attendants at the coronation.

The girls will begin to "Spend the Day with the 2nd Infantry Division" at 9:30 in the morning when their transportation arrives to take them to the Sand Hill area.

In the afternoon, following the introduction of the WAC commander, Capt. Frances L. Powell, and her staff, the queen will be crowned and the "WAC-of- - the - Month" presentation made.

The division commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, or his representative will cut the birthday cake.

Division Softball Set for May 13

Twenty 2dd division softball teams square off for the opening of the 1963 tournament on May 13.

Softball, a major sport in the division sports roster, will match seven teams apiece in two of the three leagues and six teams in the third. Results of league play will count towards the Division Commanding General's Winter - Spring sports trophy.

Each of the three leagues will play a single round-robin schedule. The winners of each league will meet together in a double elimination tournament to decide the division championship. The season is scheduled from May 13 to July 6.

For the past few weeks, many of the units in the 2nd Division have been working out with their possible players, trying to get a squad lined up in time for the May 7 entry deadline.

All members of the "Second to None" Division are eligible to compete in the games with their units. The tournament will be held at the battalion level. Brigade Headquarters, Support Command Headquarters and members of the band may play with any battalion within their command.

Team rosters must be submitted to the division special services office by May 7 and should include the name, grade, service number and unit of each individual player. It is requested that changes to team rosters be phoned into the sports office no later than the day of the scheduled game.

Overall, the tournament will be conducted under the official 1963 softball rules. Minor changes have been made to the procedure. No inning of a first game any evening will start later than 8 o'clock except when the score is tied. If the score is tied, the teams will continue to play until one team is the winner.

In the event that any team is ahead by 10 or more runs at the end of five innings of play, the game will be considered complete and the team that is ahead will be declared the winner.

'Conquerors' Ready For Division Softball Tourney

By 87th Infantry PIO

Drawing upon the diamond talent of the battalion, Manager "Big Carl" Halkyer of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry has gotten together his team in preparation for the 2nd Division softball tourney. The team will represent the battalion in the upcoming two-month-long contest.

Coaches Milt Gordon and Hubert Oliver have aided Manager Halkyer in preparing the team for their opening game against its arch rival, the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry.

The probable starting team reflects some of the top talent available in this sports-minded battalion. Pitcher James Drake will be throwing to catcher John Wells. The infield features Ted Yancy at first base and John Springstead at second; Ken Sheppard holds down the shortstop slot, and Lawrey Jordan guards the "hot corner." The outfield is made up of Dallas Miller in left, Willie Critton in right and Bill Woods at centerfield.

1st Brigade Boxer Found Hobby Interest in Service

"I used to watch boxing on television all the time before I came in the Army, but I never thought I would be that much interested in becoming a boxer until I entered the service and joined the 34th Infantry of the 24th Division in Germany."

Sp4 Fred P. Elmandorf of the newly-formed 1st Brigade, as a member of the student body of Oneonta High School, N. Y., in 1957, belonged to the swimming team which placed in the top spot of the Class B Section of the Otsego League. He also was a member of the high school bowling team and averaged a 178 average over two years to help lead his team to the school bowling title for those consecutive years.

In November 1959 he entered the Army and was sent to Fort Dix, N. J., where he was assigned to H Company of 4th Training Regiment. He was then assigned to F Company of the 1st Training Regiment for Advanced Infantry Training.

In July 1960, Elmandorf went to Germany and joined the 34th Infantry, 24th Division, where he started his boxing career. He recalls that it all began when the company asked for volunteers to try out for the company team which was organizing to compete in the battle group competition.

After training with his company for three weeks, eliminations were held to pick the team to represent them in the battle group. Elmandorf eliminated three other competitors to capture the lightweight starting position. He went on to win the lightweight crown in the battle group by winning five bouts, three by knockout and two by decisoin.

When the division finals rolled around, Elmandorf successfully eliminated his first two foes, one by a decision, the other by a knockout. After this he was paired against Horatio Kisimoto, the Hawaiian lightweight champion, to whom he lost by a knockout.

Sp4 Elmandorf was presented a silver trophy by the division Commander for being the division runner-up in his class.

Elmandorf then came back to the states in 1962 where he joined Company A of the 9th Infantry, 2nd Division.

Support Honors Trophy Winners

By Support Command PIO

The Support Command champions of the past basketball season's division tournament presented the trophy last Saturday morning at Support Command Headquarters to the unit's commander, Col. Arlin J. Kehe.

The trophy was then placed in the trophy case at Support Command Headquarters.

Two weeks ago at division ceremonies on the parade grounds, team coach and player, Dennis Guimares, received the award from the commanding general of the "Second to None," Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, on behalf of the Support Command "cagers."

"Since I was not commander of Division Trains during the basketball season, I consider it only appropriate for the coach, Dennis Guimares, who was instrumental in bringing the team to victory, to accept the trophy from Gen. Billingslea," spoke Col. Kehe at the ceremonies Saturday. (Support Command was formerly known as Division Trains before the reorganization of the 2nd Division.)

The 11-man basketball squad defeated the Division Artillery team, 61 to 52, at Kelley Hill Field House last December to win the Division crown. Team members were outstanding players chosen from the unit teams in the Division Trains league. Ten of the players were Walter Clark, Dennis Guimares, Orlando Pratt, Donald Zelasko, Belvian Carrington, Roscoe Lacy, George Kelly, Gilbert Rose, James Gunn and Douglas Barnes.

The most valuable player was Walter Clark who led the unit team with an average 21.8 points a game.

The "Manchu" team is being managed by Sgt. N. D. Edmunds and coached by SSgt. Robert Yarbrough.

"We are concentrating on a strong defensive team with a lot of good ball handling and positive field decisions," says the coach. Yarbrough adds, "We have a strong and capable pitching staff that is expected to come through real nicely for us. We have some good long ball hitters and the all-round speed of the team is tremendous."

Martindale Stops Joe Hamby, 2-1, to Move Into Finals

36-Hole Final Match Is Scheduled May 13

Second Lt. William Martindale moved one step closer to winning the post Spring Handicap Tournament title as he defeated 1st Lt. Joe Hamby, 2-1, last Sunday at the Country Club.

Martindale, who won the post title last year, was assured a berth in the finals of the championship flight with this victory.

Hamby seemed to be heading for an upset victory over the Texas golf star through the first seven holes of the local country club's Pine Side but on the eighth hole things began to change.

Martindale stopped Hamby's scoring with a birdie on the eighth hole and halved the ninth hole, giving Hamby a one-hole advantage after the first nine.

Scores Eagle

On the back nine holes, Hamby ran into trouble by losing three of the first five holes to Martindale, giving last year's post champion a two-hole lead. Hamby tried desperately to recover on the long par 5, 15th hole by reaching the green with two perfect shots. He one-putted the green, giving him the first eagle scored so far in the tourney.

The two golfers halved the short par 3, 16th hole, with Martindale icing the match with a birdie on the 17th hole.

Hardgrove Wins

In other action in the championship bracket, Lt. Col. George Hardgrove stopped Maj. Robert Hines, 5-3, moving him into the semi-finals. Col. Hardgrove will meet Capt. Clarence M. Hooper who defeated Capt. Dean Potter to determine the lower bracket champion. The winner of this match will meet Lt. Martindale in a 36-hole match on May 13 to determine the post championship. Tee-off times will be at 9 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

Results in the other flights are as follows:

First Flight: Capt. G. P. Dillon defeated Capt. D. D. Gosney; J. J. Sokolowski defeated Brig. Gen. (Ret.) W. G. Skelton; Capt. R. Turgeon defeated F. Y. Bowland; Capt. W. King defeated Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben Jenkins.

Second Flight: W. T. Gordon defeated Lt. Col. L. Celucci; Maj. L. C. Colfield defeated R. Graben; Lt. Col. Howard St Clair defeated Maj. E. K. Crowley; J. Markman defeated C. T. Roush.

Third Flight: Lt. Col. V. W. Hampton defeated C. S. Pressman; Capt. C. W. Chapman defeated Capt. Graham J. Avera; Lt. Col. Charles A. Busch defeated S. B. Dishman.

Fourth Flight: Maj. Jack C. Sherwood defeated Capt. Arthur Dryer; C. H. Bolen defeated Col. William M. Summers; Col. William Birdsong defeated Maj. Jean P. Doerr.

Fifth Flight: Maj. F. L. Franklin defeated Maj. D. M. Jones; Gustus Luckett defeated H. L. Shaddin; Capt. C. W. Ogden defeated Maj. B. Esteves; Lt. M. Aronson defeated Capt. L. C. Suttehan.

Sixth Flight: Col. L. S. Reynolds defeated Lt. Col. J. F. Kearns; J. M. Cassegrand defeated C. L. Blackwell; Maj. C. J. Phifer defeated H. D. Pelzer; N. Leane defeated Capt. R. E. Camp.

Kingsbury Scores Ace At Local CC

Kingsbury, playing with Capt. and Mrs. Robert D. Wood, scored his "ace on the par 3, 150-yard No. 4 hole on the Lake Side of the course.

PFC Kenneth Harper, Battery C, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, was a member of the San Francisco Giant farm system before entering the Army.

Harper has recently returned from a 13-month tour of duty in Korea, where he was with Special Services.

Major Unit Baseball League's Opening Game Is Set for May 13

The opening game of the 1963 Fort Benning Major Unit Baseball League is just around the corner with The Student Brigade and 428th Medical Battalion slated to pry off the lid at Gowdy Field May 13 at 7:30 p.m.

May 14 at 7:30 p.m. the 197th Infantry Brigade and The Infantry Center Troop Command will make their initial appearance of the season at Gowdy Field.

Piloted by Mark Weatherton, the Medics probably will send either John Dillon or Robert Johnson to the hill against The Student Brigade.

A little weak behind the plate, the Medics will field a strong defensive lineup and a better-than-average mound staff, reports Coach Weatherton.

The Student Brigade, coached by Bob Kinnard will rely much on a well-rounded attack in its quest for The Infantry Center championship.

Back from last year's squad are eight players, six starters, one of whom was a big gun for the post team as it swept the Third Army baseball title at Redstone Arsenal, Ala..

Jesse Joyce, leading hitter the past season for the Brigadesmen with a .384 average, socked a home run and batted in the neighborhood of .375 in the Third Army tournament.

Also returning from last year's brigade team are third baseman Jesus Herrans and Charles Spell, a product of the Los Angeles Dodgers farm club organization.

The picture seems to be bright for the 197th Infantry Brigade since Coaches Marvin Tibbetts and James L. Gregory will have a power-laden club.

In two exhibition games played this season, the 197th racked up 29 runs while limiting the opposition to two.

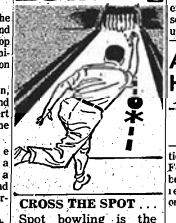
The squad has split in two exhibition contests this season, scoring five runs while giving up 10.

Better Bowling



CROSS THE SPOT . . .

Spot bowling is the more scientific of the two bowling methods. Spot bowlers say that it is easier to hit a target closer than 60 feet away. When spot bowling, pick a spot on the alley anywhere from two feet past the foul line. As you release, reach out for that spot, keeping your eyes on it until the ball has passed over it. If your ball takes the same path down the alley each time, you will find that spot bowling is a good method for getting strikes. However, to find the best method for yourself, try both pin and spot methods before deciding.

After high school, Capt. Brock continued to participate in snowshoe meets throughout the Northeastern United States and Canada.

Shough's Sports Scope

BY PETE SHOUGH

After seeing the results of one of the country's oldest golf tournaments, the Texas Open, the question that immediately pops into my mind is if the master of the professional golf circuit for the past several years, Arnold Palmer, is losing his reign on the tour.

As I am sure all golfing fans know by now, Phil Rodgers grabbed top money with the finest exhibition ever put on at the meet in recent years. Rodgers won the Lone Star State open with a birdie-studded four-round total of 268.

But the thing that startled me as well as other golfing advocates was Palmer's disappointing ninth-place finish behind such relatively unknown golfers as Gene Bone, Jerry Steelsmith and Bob Duden. With rounds of 71, 68, 70 and 67, it is easy to see that Arnie played outstanding golf. But it just wasn't his winning brand.

Palmer's opening day 71 was bettered by at least 40 players in the entire field, which obviously means the course was playing short. Last year's edition of Arnold Palmer would have literally torn this course up, especially since Arnie excels at the long game.

There is no doubt in my mind that Arnold Palmer is the king of the links and probably will remain there for some time to come, but the competition he is facing is steadily improving. Arnie said many times that the younger pros are forcing him to play a longer game and be much more accurate off the tees. He claimed this alone cost him a shot at the money in the Masters.

With the $60,000 Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas, Nev., already under way, another Nicklaus-Player-Palmer duel is forecast. A Nicklaus victory here could push the Ohioan far out in front in money standings and also in prestige, but a Palmer victory would renew the battle for another year.

Gary Player may have what it takes with his steady, accurate game. Player has long been known for his fine iron game and feels the Las Vegas course is made to his order.

At any rate, the three will be fighting it out for the second time in two months, with the climax coming June 20-22 at the U.S. Open. This year's Open winner, if he is one of the big three, has my vote for golfer of the year.

Search Is Continuing For Lost Submarine

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Day in and day out since the disappearance of the USS Thresher a grim little flotilla has been methodically crisscrossing 100 square miles of the dark cold forbidding waters of the Atlantic Ocean.

This small fleet is operating about 220 miles off the coast of Cape Cod checking and rechecking the results of depth soundings taken from the ocean floor 8,400 feet below. It is an all out effort to locate what may be left of the ill-fated nuclear submarine which was last heard from at 9:17 a.m., April 10.

These searchers could find the wreckage at anytime. It might take weeks . . . It could be never.

"We've simply got to find that submarine," said Rear Adm. John S. McCain Jr., a submariner who is now chief of Navy Information "It's our only chance to learn what really happened."

There are two main phases in this search. The Thresher must first be found, then somehow its hulk must be examined. Both elements present unprecedented problems.

Two of the newer Navy ships, packed with fine sensing equipment, are engaged in the search — the USS Requisite, with a deep towed bottom echo sounder, and the USS Prevail, bearing a deep-towed magnetometer. This device, which measures variations in the magnetic lines of the earth, would react uniquely if the Thresher's hulk was contacted.

If the wreckage is located, all hopes will turn to the bathyscaph USS Trieste, a strange, blimp-like vessel that floats downward to the greatest depth of the sea. Like a balloon that soars aloft, the bathyscaph uses the principle of controlled buoyance to achieve a desired level.

The two-man Trieste, built in Europe and bought by the Navy in 1958 for research underwater, after being transported from its home base in San Diego, Calif., through the Panama Canal, will be taken to the scene of disaster when and if the Thresher is located. In the meantime she is to be kept at New London and made ready to make a photographic study of the Thresher's ocean grave.

The search area was mapped out on the basis of scant information provided by the Thresher's last link with the living — the rescue ship USS Skylark which rendezvoused with the sub at 5:45 a.m., April 10.

Although some oil and some small particles believed to be from the Thresher have already been picked up, what the searchers are presently looking for are echoes — the high pitched pings that will tell them that the hulk of the submarine has been found.

It is anticipated that the wreckage of the Thresher will make a little "hill" on the ocean bottom, a bottom that has its own swales and bump like the rolling plains of the West. But since the hulk is steel, it will impart a different tone to echoes, in sharp contrast to the sound returned from contact with sand and mud.

As the search continues and if and when the right ping comes, if there is enough of a pattern to outline the hulk of what might be the Thresher, then underwater cameras, still and TV, will be lowered by cable the long mile and a half. And if the Thresher is truly found, then it will be up to the Trieste.

MAH Nurse Service Now Has New Chief

Lt. Col. Muriel Burchfield has been assigned as chief of the Nursing Service at Martin Army Hospital.

Col. Burchfield succeeds Lt. Col. L. Marguerite Lines, who has been assigned to Triple General Hospital in Honolulu.

Col. Burchfield is a 1939 graduate of Mississippi Baptist Hospital in Jackson, Miss. She was graduated from Ethel, Miss., High School in 1936.

Before entering the service in 1940, Col. Burchfield was night supervisor at Kings Daughters Hospital in Brookhaven, Miss.

The colonel came here from Verdun, France, where she was chief nurse at the 319th Station Hospital from July, 1962, to March 16.

The preceding year, she was medical nurse supervisor at the 2nd General Hospital in Landsthul, Germany.

From 1957 to 1961, she was Nursing Service supervisor at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D. C.

Col. Burchfield served 10 months in Korea in 1954 as chief nurse of the 43rd Mobile Army Surgical Unit before going to Japan for a two-year assignment as surgical nursing supervisor at Tokyo Army Hospital.

She has served overseas more than six years.

In addition to her civilian nursing education, Col. Burchfield attended an Army medical service officers advanced course in 1956 and 1957 at Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.
