Six national records were re-written by members of the Marksmanship Training Unit (MTU) during the Monthly Open Handgun Tournament held here last weekend.

With more than 125 pistoleers competing, both military and civilian, Fort Benning marksmanship unit members swept 24 of 25 matches to run away from their most worthy opponents.

SFC Leland A. Wessel started the tilts off by posting a 200-9X score out of a possible 200-20X in the .22 caliber 50-yard slow fire match to win first place and better the national mark by one point.

After the first record-smasher, things cooled off with the center fire and .45 caliber matches yielding only nine of ten first place titles o the MTU gunners.

The .45 caliber service ammunition matches, which are distinguished from the previous .45 caliber matches by load alone and therefore receive the name hardball matches, saw MTU members come into their own as they posted all six wins with five being new national records.

SSgt. Herschel L. Anderson took the aggregate of the hardball matches with an 877-33X out of a possible 900-30X score to better the old record of 859-30X which was set by E. R. Weaver of Los Angeles.

Other hardball records went to MSgt. George R. Snavely in the 50-yard slow fire match for a 194-7X score out of the possible 200-20X score, bettering the old record by seven points and three X's, SFC Floyd D. Thomson with a 199-7X score took the 25-yard timed fire competition adding two points to the old record.

SFC Ralph O. Thompson, who previously brought down the three-gun aggregate crown, a combination of the .22 caliber, center fire and a .45 caliber wadcutter matches, with a very fine 2652-138X score out of a possible 2700-270X, took the fifth national record for the unit in the 25-yard rapid fire match with a 199-8X score out of the possible 200-20X exceeding the old record by one point.

The MTU Red team made up of MSgts. Frederick S. Schaser, Samuel W. Hunter and Snavely, and SSgt. Janusz R. Sicinski, firing over the National Match Course with their hardball ammunition blasted a combined score of 1153-46X out of the possible 1200-120X to better the old record by one point.

The only mar on the unit's almost clean slate was the win by Maj. Clyde R. Metts, captain of the Third Army Marksmanship Training Unit team, in the .45 caliber wadcutter, 50-yard slow fire match as he swept by all other competition with a 194-9X score out of a possible 200-20X.

Other notable scores were seen in the .22 caliber aggregate match which went to Sgt. Thompson for an 891-46X score out of a possible 900-90X, in the center fire aggregate match which was blasted down by Sgt. Anderson with an 890-38X score and the .45 caliber wadcutter aggregate match which went to SFC Thompson again for his 884-47X score.

'1st' TRAILS WEST

During the period of westward expansion in the United States, the Second Division's 1st Infantry blazed two trails that carried the life blood to the West . . . the Oregon and the Santa Fe. The northern trail was opened by the famous Lewis and Clark Expedition, led by Captain Meriwether Lewis and the 1st Lt. Zebulon Pike of the "Always First," in addition to discovering the peak that bears his name, opened the Santa Fe Trail to the nation.

10th Artillerymen Get Huge New 175mm Gun

The 2nd Battalion (Composite) of the 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, has added the Army's new 175mm gun to its arsenal.

The new gun will be used with the battalion's other weapons in support of Infantry School problems and demonstrations.

The gun is a full tracked, highly mobile and maneuverable self-propelled weapon capable of being air-transported. It is constructed primarily of an aluminum alloy with the exception of the hull which is composed of tensile and armored steel welded together.

With its 35-foot, 11-inch tube, the gun has long-range capabilities. It can command high speed operation on first rate roads and can easily maneuver in muddy or swampy terrain, snow and sand. It can forge small streams with no difficulty.

A crew of six is required to man the 175mm gun. It consists of a crew chief, a driver, two gunners and two loaders. Under ideal conditions this crew can emplace the gun and be ready to fire in one to two minutes.

The weapon is powered by an eight-cylinder, "V" - type diesel engine with a drive-type transmission, steering and braking assembly. It has four forward and two reverse speed ranges.

The electrical system consists of four 12-volt storage batteries, 300 amphere generator, voltage regulator relays and circuit breakers.

The various components of the gun are operated by a hydraulic system provided by an electric motor-driven hydraulic pump and engine. This power is directed to the various elements such as spade cylinders, turret traversing system, cannon elevating system and loader and rammer mechanism through a series of lines and valves.

The weapon is capable of speeds up to 35 miles per hour, and has a firing range of approximately 20.38 miles. For normal firing problems the weight of the complete gun is approximately 62,000 pounds. But for an air mobility operation the gun can be reduced in weight to 57,600 pounds.

Being made of a lighter material in most parts, it is versatile and much more maneuverable than its predecessor, the 200mm gun, which was found to be too cumbersome and slow for the restricted terrain and road features of the more remote areas of the world.

Screaming Jets Welcome Ranger Students to Eglin Training School

EGLIN AFB, Fla. — Two hours of planned hell.

This is the introduction given to each class of student Rangers on their arrival at Eglin Air Force Base Field 7 for the final three weeks of the Ranger training course.

Before their arrival here, these students have completed three weeks of preparatory training at Fort Benning, and three weeks of mountain training in the Blue Ridge range of North Georgia.

Last phase of training starts at Fort Benning at 2 a.m. 300 miles later, at the Eglin staging area, the student leaders are briefed and the final run begins to the Ranger camp.

Within minutes the rumbling truck convoy is shocked into an abrupt stop by the silent dive and screaming afterblast of a USAF F-100 fighter-bomber on a simulated strafing run. Startled students leap from their convoy, running for cover in the pine woods near the trail, firing at the F-100 as they go.

When they have recovered and boarded their trucks once again, their journey continues, only to be stopped again and again as the persistent F-100 screams just over the treetops.

Finally the fighter-bomber heads off into the distance and the students emerge from the woods.

"I guess it's all over," is the hopeful consensus as everyone boards the trucks slowly for the final ride to camp.

Then ... as the convoy begins to roll ... the jet roars in for a final "attack". Some students dive for the woods and the convoy bounces off. For those not lucky enough to catch the final truck, a long, hot walk is in store.

The convoy rounds a curve which crosses a deep sea of sand and slides to a sudden stop at a knot of tree trunks, stumps and logs blocking the trail.

The hot, dusty men divide into two groups, one to clear the trail, the other to man a defense perimeter. Suddenly the quiet, green forest erupts into the ripping jar of machine guns and the battle yells of aggressor - guerrilla raiders.

Rapidly, the roadblock is cleared and the aggressors are driven off. After a quick search for casualties, the convoy speeds off. By now, the embattled students expect anything. They get exploding mine fields, a burning armored car where a medic is trying to save a "wounded" man, and a battle line of aggressor troops backed by armored bunkers.

Arriving at Ranger headquarters, the trainees are received cordially by their instructors and allowed to tour the camp ... on the double.

For three weeks at Field 7, the Ranger students, who are primarily young officers and NCO's, undergo intensive training in survival, small boat operations, and amphibious and airborne raiding tactics.

They make landings on Florida beaches, break their way through swamps, wiregrass savannahs and the sub-tropical streams of Northwest Florida's Yellow River delta and make a waterborne assault on a well-defended bunker on the coast of Santa Rosa Island.

Those exercises are scheduled at all hours of the day and night, and the students are not briefed except for information about their objectives. Patrols may last for a number of days and cover 30 or more miles distance. While in the field, their diet may include rattlesnakes, palmetto hearts, alligator or anything else that they can catch without giving their positions away.

Instructors, aggressor troops, landing craft and other support for this phase of Ranger training is provided by the Army's 1st Ranger Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Robert W. Hakala.

His cadre includes about 60 Rangers — Eglin's permanent jungle dwellers. They are trained to be the toughest jungle fighters in the Army, and they mean some of this training to rub off on each class of student Rangers.

The two-hour "welcome ride" to camp is, they feel, an appropriate beginning.

Reserve OCS Grad Hunts 'Mad Bombers'

By PFC William Smyser

When the 51st (Officer Candidate) Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, took training in demolitions recently, Candidate Terence McTigue took a "busman's holiday."

As a detective assigned to the Bureau of Technical Services and the world famous Bomb Squad of the New York City Police Department, OC McTigue, now a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve, is no stranger to bombs or any other type of demolition device.

Lt. McTigue was here to attend the Reserve Component Officer Candidate Course offered by The Infantry School, and has returned to civilian life and his job with the Bomb Squad since graduating last week.

In the course of a normal day, the New York City Bomb Squad receives many phone calls, which tell of bombs hidden in public places and private residences. In a city the size of New York, an almost daily occurrence is the locating of both foreign and domestic explosive devices that must be removed and destroyed.

When asked if he remembers any particular case during his career, Lt. McTigue recalled that New York City's "Sunday Bomber" was perhaps the most interesting.

The "bomber" set explosive charges in various sections of the city on Sundays and holidays. It required constant work and a 24-hour-a-day investigation to apprehend the man.

Lt. McTigue said of his experiences, "I find my occupation to be one of the most interesting and rewarding jobs in public service. Not only do we work with a wide cross section of American life, but we also perform a necessary service in safeguarding the 8 million residents of America's largest city."

U. S. Rocket Probers Have Label Problems

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Housewives confused by the loss of "small, medium and large" designations for soap or cereal packages — in favor of such superlatives as "large, giant or economy" sizes — have the sympathetic understanding of space scientists.

The growth of their industry has brought about the same type of problem in the designation of rockets and missiles.

Time was, back in the 1940's, when a 25-foot high rocket such as the Aerobee was called "large." When the 67-foot-high Minuteman and the 103-foot Titan II came along, they were larger than the large and were called "very large." Now they're working on the Saturn V, which will tower 275 feet high, and they're describing it as "huge" or "giant."

Where do we go from there? Aerojet - General Corporation's proposed "Sea Dragon" will be a 500 footer, floated to sea for launching. This size gets into the "monster" or "colossus" category.

But despite the superlatives —space scientists solve their problem just the way the housewife does—by looking at the pounds and ounces in the fine print specifications.

That "large" Aerobee, for example, weighs only three-quarters of a ton and gives 2,600 pounds of thrust. The very large Titan II weighs 150 tons and generates 530,000 pounds of thrust.

And the monster Sea Dragon: Weight, 20,000 tons, thrust, 80 million pounds. Which, admittedly, is pretty big fine print!

Ranger Tabs Are Presented

Nine weeks of intensive training were climaxed April 25 at Theater No. 1 as Ranger tabs were presented to 107 servicemen of Ranger class No. 8.

Guest speaker was Col. Samuel W. Koster, director, Command and Staff Department, The Infantry School.

Honor graduates were Capt. Ian H. Maclean of Australia, and Sgt. Kelly Y. Waggoner.

Waggoner, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Troop, 7th Cavalry, 2nd Infantry Division, was presented a plaque from the Association of the U.S. Army as top enlisted graduate, and a year's subscription to Infantry Magazine.

Capt. Maclean, a member of the Australian Army, will spend the next four months here in on-the-job training, then two months at Fort Campbell, Ky., with the 101st Airborne Division, four months at Fort Bragg, N.C., in Special Forces training, followed by two months in England with the British commandos before returning home.

In the class there were 62 U.S. Army officers, 36 enlisted men and nine Allied officers.

Viet Nam Vets Now Wearing Medics Badge

Members of the Army Medical Service who have served in combat operations in the Republic of Viet Nam are now eligible to receive the Medical Badge.

Medics applying for the badge must have served with a Vietnamese unit of regimental size or smaller and must have been personally under fire while the unit was involved in actual ground combat against Viet Cong guerrillas.

Other stipulations are that recipients must have been assigned directly to a Vietnamese unit or must have been a member of a U.S. Army unit or detachment, including Special Forces teams, which served with a Vietnamese unit.

Personnel who served under these conditions between March 1, 1961 and Feb. 1, 1963, may apply to the Adjutant General, Department of the Army, for the Medical Badge.

Applicants should relate their duty assignment, circumstances and dates of service, location of action when applicant was under fire, and name of commanding officer.

Holders of the Combat Infantryman Badge for Vietnamese service are not eligible for this award.

Extendees Can't Draw Travel Pay

WASHINGTON (AFPS)— A new ruling by the Comptroller General prohibits payment of travel allowance and accrued leave to individuals who have entered into an extension period.

For example, if an enlisted man has a June 1 separation date he must reenlist on that date to receive travel allowance and accrued leave payments. Once he enters on an extension he cannot receive these payments until he reenlists following the termination of his extension.

In a followup message the Comptroller General told commanders, "to advise all personnel who have executed but not yet entered an extension to cancel the extension and reenlist on their original dates of separation, unless they desire to serve the full extension. . . and to take all possible precautions to prevent entering into an extension period."

Draft Call Drops To 4,000 in June

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The June draft quota for the Army has been set at 4,000 men, the lowest since last February.

Pentagon officials estimate this quota, together with volunteers who have had no prior military service, will meet a requirement of 17,000 in June.

CONARC Conducting Campaign To Increase Army Nurse Ranks

"Uncle Sam Wants you—for the U. S. Army Nurse Corps."

This adaptation of a famous recruiting slogan expressed the purpose of "Operation Nightingale," an aggressive campaign to recruit Army nurses planned at Headquarters, U.S. Continental Army Command.

The campaign, which opened May 1, is under the direct supervision of Maj. Constance L. Ferebee, chief, Army Nurse Corps Procurement Section of the Personnel office at Headquarters CONARC. She is the first representative of the Army Nurse Corps to hold this position since the mission of ANC recruiting was transferred from the Office of the Surgeon General to CONARC last year.

As director of all Army nurse recruiting in the continental U. S., Maj. Ferebee is the person most intimately concerned with Operation Nightingale at the grass roots level.

And if enthusiasm for a cause is any indication, Operation Nightingale will be highly successful.

"The Army Nurse Corps offers the finest opportunities for growth and development anywhere in the field of nursing," Maj. Ferebee declares with conviction. A career Army nurse since 1951, petite, vivacious Maj. Ferebee holds BS and MS degrees and has served at posts from Hawaii to Texas.

"Facilities are among the best, and opportunities for graduate training and specialization are outstanding. The pay is excellent, too, though this isn't the main attraction. The privilege of serving is the main attraction," she commented.

Why does the Army need more nurses?

While Army strength has increased in recent years, the ratio of Army nurses has failed to keep pace. This is due partly to retirements of hundreds of World War II nurses, and to other factors such as losses due to nurses getting married and competition from the other services.

"There are only about 3,000 Army nurses today, augmented by 1,400 civilian nurses (who cannot be sent overseas), to provide nursing care for all members of the U. S. Army and their families. Since Army strength is over 959,000 active-duty soldiers, that's spreading the care rather thinly," according to Maj. Ferebee. "The shortage was pointed out forcibly during the Cuban crisis, when Army hospitals were severely crippled by the loss of nurses to field units."

Maj. Ferebee is planning strategy for Operation Nightingale with all the intensity of a commander plotting a field campaign. A map of the 48 contiguous states is mounted on the wall of her office at Fort Monroe.

Pins on the map indicate the locations of 23 Army nurses who are assigned to nurse recruiting duty as "counselors" throughout the continental United States. Obviously each counselor has a lot of territory to cover.

"We're going to do a lot of things — everything possible— to acquaint potential Army nurses, both female and male, with the opportunities open to them," Maj. Ferebee asserts. "First our recruiting activities will be stepped up, at all levels, accompanied by publicity directed at newspapers, magazines, radio and TV outlets.

"As many civilian nurses as possible will be invited to Army installations to see the Army's fine medical facilities; to see how Army nurses live and work; to see what an Army post is like; to illustrate that 'for the Army Nurse, the world is wide."

Maj. Ferebee adds, with infectious enthusiams, "These 'open houses' at Army hospitals will afford a good opportunity to point out to eligibles the fact that not only is the Army Nurse Corps the oldest of women's military services, it is an all - commissioned corps, and being a member of it marks one as a registered professional nurse practitioner qualified in all the special fields of nursing."

197th Brigade Getting Benefit of Prize-Winning Cook

By PFC Dave Robde

A 197th Infantry Brigade mess steward, SFC Samuel H. Hayes, is credited with improvements that enabled his former mess hall to compete against 2,460 others to win the title of the best battle-ready mess hall in the Army.

The sergeant, who works in food services at the brigade's Headquarters Company, was presented the award in 1961 at the Armed Forces Food Service Awards Convention in Detroit.

Improvements such as redecoration of the dining area, individual place settings at the tables, new equipment in the kitchen, a juice dispenser and a multi-choice menu enabled Company B, 1st Battle Group, 32nd Infantry mess hall at Fort Richardson, Alaska, to win its impressive title.

"The improvements which won the award could not have been possible without the help and cooperation of my commanding officer and mess officer who gave me full cooperation and support of my ideas for improving the food and mess hall in general," Sgt. Hayes said.

Biggest Problem

The sergeant, who has fed as many as 1,500 men per meal for 13 months, said, "The biggest problem in feeding many men is preparing the food in such a way that it will satisfy each individual soldier."

He added that he has always "strived to provide the finest meals to his unit personnel."

He has cooked under a variety of conditions.

"Perhaps the roughest," he said, "was during a problem in Alaska where we were in the field for quite a few days and the temperature never reached above 40 degrees below zero."

Another incident Sgt. Hayes recalled during World War II.

"We were on the beaches of Salerno, Italy, and at this particular time I was preparing the evening meal for the men who were due to return shortly when my field stoves quit working. I had to dig holes in the beach and cook the entire meal over the fires I made in time to feed the men," he said.

"The problems in field messes are getting the proper food to the troops, making sure it is kept hot and that conditions come as near as possible to those in a garrison mess hall," according to the sergeant.

Sgt. Hayes has a long history of cooking schools and practical application of his knowledge of the stove.

The sergeant, who was a cook before entering the Army, has attended food service schools overseas and in this country.

Special Schools

He attended Army food service schools in Talladega, Ala., Fort Belvoir, Va., Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Sgt. Hayes attended the National Cook and Bake School in Chicago, and received training in food service at the Officers' Mess at the National War College at Fort McNair, Washington, D.C.

His overseas schooling includes a course at the Field Mess Cook and Bake School in Naples, Italy, and recently special diets at the 121st Evacuation Hospital in Seoul, Korea.

In his capacity as mess steward, the sergeant has served such dignitaries as Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, and cooked for King Hussein of Jordan, the Crown Prince of Greece and German Defense Minister Franz Josef Strauss.

He also has cooked for such high ranking military men as Gen. Herbert B. Powell, retired commanding general of the U.S. Continental Army Command; Gen. George H. Decker, retired chief of staff, and many more dignitaries from all over the world.

But the sergeant preferred to talk about cooking.

"My favorite recipe is Boston baked beans," he said. "I enjoy preparing them and I can add my own personal touch which makes them appeal to the troops."

"I have found that one of the best ways to coordinate work in the mess halls is to have daily meetings with kitchen personnel to make sure there are no problems and everything is running smoothly," Sgt. Hayes explained.

Music Week Committee Is Appointed

A six-man committee has been named here to plan the post's observance of "National Music Week," May 5-12.

Named to the committee were CWO Clyde W. White, Infantry Center Band director; WO Darrel G. Blumm, 2nd Infantry Division Band Director, and Roy Lothner, entertainment director at The Infantry Center.

Also appointed were Maj. Roger L. Miller, Infantry Center Special Services officer; 1st Lt. Terry Sands, assistant public information officer at The Infantry Center, and 1st Lt. Benjamin Shaffer, assistant chief of special projects, G-3.

The purpose of the committee is to develop a program that emphasizes the pleasures and values to be derived from participation in music activities.

It also is meant to stimulate maximum use of music groups and facilities, to provide incentives to entertainment directors and officers for the development of a more inclusive music program and to assure the essential support of the Army music program.

President Kennedy in proclaiming National Music Week said, "One of the best voices of America is it's musical voice — it is a voice of creativity, hope and optimism which strikes a responsive cord in people the world over."

Anti-Polio Program Scheduled

Military dependents here may receive Sabin oral polio immunization between Tuesday and May 24.

Personnel whose last names begin with the letters A through G are requested to report to the Dependent Immunization Clinic, Bldg. 323, Tuesday or Thursday between 8 and 10 a.m. or 1 and 3 p.m., and those attending off-post schools May 11 between 8 and 11 a.m.

The H through O group will follow the same schedule May 14, 16 and 18 and the P through Z group on May 21, 23 and 25.

No routine immunizations will be given at the clinic on these days.

Individuals desiring other immunizations between Monday and May 25 are requested to report to the clinic Mondays or Wednesdays between 8 and 10 a.m. or 1 and 4:30 p.m. or Fridays between 8 and 10 a.m. or 1 and 3 p.m.

The dependent oral polio immunization program on the post began with administration of the first dose in January. The second was early in March. Complete immunization requires three doses.

Personnel who are beginning the Sabin immunization may take the first dose now and receive the remaining doses during regular clinic hours.

Concert Set On Sunday

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will present its annual spring concert at 3:30 p.m. on Sunday at Jordan High School Auditorium in Columbus.

"The response to last year's spring concert exceeded all expectations," said Dr. Haywood Turner, orchestra guild president, "and proved that music lovers of this area are highly receptive to a program of 'serious' compositions."

He added that this year's spring concert will be given variety and unusual interest by the presentation of two outstanding local soloists: Mrs. George Montgomery, who, with the orchestra will perform the first movement of the Schumann "A Minor Piano Concerto," and Eric Andrew Barr, who will be soloist in the "Concerto in D Minor for Oboe and Strings," by Vivaldi.

Eric is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Barr, the former being the conductor of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra.

ICDA Is Shaping Tomorrow's Infantryman Today

By PFC Frank Gibson

The Army has an array of skills within its ranks which runs the gamut from marksmanship to penmanship, from demolition know-how to construction ability and from historical analyzers to prognosticators.

At Fort Benning there is a team of highly skilled soldiers and civilians working at a deliberate but fast-moving pace to envision accurately the Infantry's role in future conflicts.

Under command of Col. Kenneth E. Eckland, the Infantry Combat Developments Agency (ICDA) was organized July 1, 1962, "to develop current and future concepts on how the Infantry should be organized and equipped and how it should fight."

Time Areas

The agency handles its job by dividing the mission into time areas. Short-range is from the present to three years in the future. Mid-range is four to seven years from now. Eight to 11 years is long-range, and 12 years and beyond is designated as the very-long-range time frame.

The agency does not delve more than 20 years into the future, according to Col. Eckland.

The local agency, directly subordinate to the Army Combat Developments Command's Combined Arms Group at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., which is commanded by Maj. Gen. Harry J. Lemley Jr., is organized into three principal divisions.

The Combat Materiel Division, under the direction of Col. Patrick B. Watson, has the responsibility of establishing Infantry requirements for new weapons, vehicles, radios and surveillance devices, and all items of individual clothing or equipment which a combat Infantryman will wear or carry into battle.

Col. Thomas P. Iuliucci heads the Doctrine and Organization Division. This division's job is to develop Infantry doctrinal field manuals and to establish tables of organization and equipment for the current and short-range time frame.

The Plans Division, whose work frequently takes on a "definite Buck Rogers appearance," according to the commander, strives to ascertain how the Infantry will be organized, equipped and how it will fight in the mid-range, long-range and very-long-range time frames.

The Plans Division chief is Col. William T. Gordon.

Col. Gordon's group recently completed a study on a visualization of Infantry combat operations in the 1980's. Although the results are shrouded in secrecy, Col. Eckland pointed out that "by 1980 we hope to have improved lighter weight equipment which will be simpler to operate, simpler to maintain and less bulky."

A combat veteran, Col. Eckland seemed to reminisce a bit about the tremendous "pack-horse" - type load of current and past Infantrymen when he emphasized that "in 1980, we want equipment an individual can carry himself or equipment which can be transplanted in Army aircraft, either fixed-wing or rotary, with improved design and capability."

The colonel pointed out that the agency's planners must consider that future wars may or may not be nuclear wars.

"We must have the right answers in either case," he said.

CBR Possibilities

"Another uncertainty is whether chemical or biological agents will be used," he added. "We are not forgetting these possibilities."

Still another problem facing Army planners that Col. Eckland mentioned is the likelihood that the U. S. may be opposing a sophisticated enemy like the Soviet Union in Western Europe or an unsophisticated enemy like the Viet Cong guerrillas in Southeast Asia. Each would require vastly different Infantry organizations, tactics and equipment.

The Army has established a personnel requirement of 82 men and women to accomplish ICDA's complex mission. When fully staffed, the agency will have 48 officers, 12 enlisted men and 22 civilians.

Today it operates with 28 officers, 10 enlisted men and 13 civilians.

ICDA's parent unit, the Combat Developments Command, is commanded by Lt. Gen. John P. Daley, and has its headquarters at Fort Belvoir, Va. Its over-all authorized strength is 6,400 men, but through its recommendations and studies it directly affects almost everyone in the Army.

The Fort Benning agency's scope is not quite so large. But it is a big cog in a bigger wheel, doing one of the biggest jobs in the U.S. Army today.

Sergeant Major Is Navy Veteran Of World War II

A World War II Navy veteran, Sgt. Maj. James A. Smith, has been assigned as sergeant major of the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division (Test.).

He entered the Navy in October, 1943, and received his Training at San Diego, Calif. During World War II he served in the Pacific on the Destroyer USS Hughes, and participated in three naval campaigns.

In October, 1947, he was discharged from the Navy. After remaining in civilian life until June, 1948, he enlisted in the Army. During the Korean Conflict he served with the 23rd Signal Construction Company, Eighth U. S. Army.

Sgt. Smith was placed on civilian component duty at Brookhaven, Miss., in 1953, as a unit adviser with the Army Reserve. In 1961 he was sent to Korea for the second time and served with the 1st Cavalry Division.

He came to his new assignment from Fort Jackson, S.C.,

CONGRATULATED BY SPEAKER
Lt. Frederick (R), Gen. Reynolds

Lt. Jonathan E. Frederick Orient Course Honor Grad

Second Lt. Jonathan E. Frederick graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class No. 14, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade with top honors, receiving of 93.4 percent in the subjects covered in the course.

Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., assistant commandant of The Infantry School, was the speaker at the ceremonies. He presented the honor graduate with his certificate and an engraved desk set and pen.

Addressing the graduating body, Gen. Reynolds said that an officer cannot take his job with complacency. He must always build his knowledge to prepare for any emergency that may arise during his career.

The men an officer commands will not be particularly interested in what component of the Army the officer is in. They will, however look to the officer for their training, management and administration, the general stated.

As as leader, the officer must know three things, Gen. Reynolds concluded. They are, know your job, set the example, and take care of your men, he said.

During the ceremonies Gen. Reynolds presented 2nd Lt. Raymond L. Trudeau, the Military Stakes winner, a desk set for making a score of 988 points out of a possible 1000. The Military Stakes competition is a field test covering most of the subjects taught during the course of instruction.

Second Lt. Gary Welch received a plaque during the graduation exercises, for his score of 482 out of 500 points in the Physical Combat Proficiency Test.

Post Tag Crackdown Under Way

Post Military Police have cracked down on privately owned vehicles operating without proper post tags and insurance stickers. MPs were instructed to issue citations to all violators starting Wednesday.

Regulations require that every vehicle, whether owned by military, retired, commercial or civilian personnel, display an insurance sticker adjacent to the post tag indicating the month and year of expiration of their insurance. The insurance sticker also indicates the date the car must be reinspected.

The stickers are to be placed on the vehicle bumpers on the driver's side, front and rear, next to the post tag. Stickers displayed on windshields are invalid and will not be honored by the MPs.

For 1964, stickers are black with yellow numbers representing the month of expiration. The 1963 stickers are green with yellow numbers. The 1962 stickers are red and will not be honored.

Infantry School students and other TDY personnel are issued temporary post tags which do not show the insurance expiration date, but evidence of insurance must be presented before the tags may be obtained. They are valid for only six

High Mass To Be Said For OC's

A special High Mass will be offered for all Fort Benning officer candidates at 8 a.m. Sunday in the Student Brigade Chapel.

The altar will be in the center of the chapel to facilitate full participation by the congregation. Known as the "Versus Populum," the altar arrangement is in keeping with the spirit of the Ecumenical Council, according to Chaplain (Capt.) James A. Peterman, brigade Catholic chaplain who will conduct the Mass.

There will be a dedication and blessing of a new Blessed Sacrament Chapel to be located permanently within the Student Brigade Chapel. The dedication will precede the Mass.

Music will be furnished by a 28-voice officer candidate Catholic choir.

There will be a Communion Breakfast at the Main Officers' Open Mess following the Mass. Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, will be guest speaker at the breakfast.

Your Dental Health

What Should You Do After Toothache Hits?

By Capt. Robert Cross

Once a toothache truly hits, it is past the time when you can really place the blame.

Sure, you know you should have been to the dentist, and you should have taken care of your teeth. But you didn't, and now here is this mean, old bug-a-boo — a good old-fashioned toothache.

What can you do for yourself? Whiskey is a time-honored remedy. But, save your money unless you are looking for an excuse to take a drink.

Try this instead. Take two aspirins or APCs with a drink of water. Mix a teaspoon of salt in a glass of warm water, and use this to thoroughly rinse and cleanse the aching tooth.

Lie or sit down and place heat on the area. If heat makes the pain increase, then use an ice pack. Either heat or cold should make the pain decrease.

Remember that the aspirin or APC does not act immediately, normally 20 to 30 minutes must pass before the onset of pain relief. But often the rinsing will clean out the debris and stop the pain quicker.

Report to your dentist or dental clinic as quickly as possible, as this pain may be only an indication of coming trouble. Give your dentist a chance to remedy the situation.

If the tooth is indicated for extraction, complications will be decreased if the tooth is extracted before deep-seated infection occurs.

What about antibiotics? Use of antibiotics in this case is similar to their use for colds. They shouldn't be used for simple toothache, but only in cases where the infection has spread into the bone. Your dentist will determine the need for antibiotics in your case, and will also choose the one to best destroy the type of infection. Antibiotics will be helpful in stopping certain kinds of pain by removing the cause.

Finally, when you visit your dentist, make appointments to prevent any further trouble of this type. Prevention is possible.

MILLIONAIRES

The U. S. now has more people whose incomes exceed $1,000 a year than at any time since the 1929 stock market crash. So revealed the Internal Revenue Service early in March. Its 1960 statistics, the latest compiled, show that 306 Americans had an adjusted gross income of more than a million dollars compared with 513 in 1929 (and a mere 20 in 1932). The bulk of the wealth is in New York City which had 87 millionaires in one year. Philadelphia had 59, Chicago 38, and San Francisco and Boston 25 each.

Col. Albert Ends Tour In Ethiopia

Lt. Col. George E. Albert has returned to his assignment at the Command and Staff Department of The Infantry School after leading a six-month course of instruction for the Imperial Ethiopian Army.

The team was a Mobile Training Team of the Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

The course, similar to the associate course at the Command and General Staff College, included selected subjects from The Infantry School. It was conducted at Haile Selassie I Military Training Center, Guenet, Ethiopia.

A secondary mission of the team was to assist in establishing a permanent Command and General Staff College for the Ethiopian Army. This included training of several Ethiopian Army officers as instructors.

During closing exercises of the course, the team was personally thanked by His Imperial Majesty Haile Selassie I, emperior of Ethiopia.

Benning Actors Will Participate In School Play

Two veteran performers from the Fort Benning Little Theater are participating in the Columbus College production of "The Rose Tattoo" by Tennessee Williams.

The college theater will present the play May 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

Second Lt. Steve Kreisberg of the 11th Air Assault Division's Surgeon General's Office has a part. He is a veteran on the Fort Benning Little Theater production, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," and the Columbus Little Theater production, "Dial M for Murder."

Assistant director will be Guy Bongiovanni, who appeared in Little Theater productions of "Browning Version" and "Damn Yankees." Guy's father is MSgt. (Ret.) Guy J. Bongiovanni.

Reserve Role Is Vital General Tells Grads

Reserve and National Guard Infantry leaders play a major role in thwarting the dangers of communism, Brig. Gen. Francis S. Greenlief, assistant chief of the National Guard Bureau, told 143 Infantry School officer candidate graduates of Reserve Component Class NO. 2 here last week.

"The task of past Infantry leaders was to fight a war; your task is to prevent a war," Gen. Greenlief stated.

He pointed out that Infantry leadership demands a deep dedication to service and a willingness to make sacrifices.

Fifty states now operate their own officer candidate training schools, he emphasized, and aside from normal duties it will be up to the graduates of these schools to recruit other outstanding young men for the fight against communism.

"The readiness of the Reserve components was shown during the Berlin mobilization," he said. "But as long as men remain the key means of battle they will need able and well qualified leaders, for courage without knowledge may lead to a foolhardy adventure."

Gen. Greenlief told the graduates that military readiness demands much personnel training to produce prepared Reserve components.

He stressed the importants of training by advising the graduates to take full advantage of resident and non-resident instructions offered by the Army.

Honor graduate of the class was SFC John B. Alexander of Miami, Fla. He received the Association of the U. S. Army trophy and a replica of Infantryman statue.

MSgt. William G. Martin, Boise, Idaho, received the Outstanding Leadership Award.

The students will be eligible for commissions as second lieutenants upon their return to their local National Guard of Reserve units.

HONORED TWICE . . . PFC Michael Tocco, a clerk in the casual section of The Infantry Center Troop Command, has been chosen "Soldier of the Month" for April. This is the second time PFC Tocco has been selected. He is assigned to Headquarters Company, TICIC. (Photo by SSgt Betty Farmer)

PC Hospital Sounds Call For Nurses

Phenix City's Cobb Memorial Hospital now has openings on its staff for registered nurses, according to Cliff Hamer, hospital administrator.

Though primarily on the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift, openings will also be available on other shifts, Hamer noted.

Interested parties can contact Hamer at CY 8-7811.

10TH ARTILLERYMEN LOAD HOWITZER
TIS Students Will Observe Its Destructive Force

Artillerymen Prove Their Worth For Students of Infantry School

It has been said that artillery is the Infantryman's best friend. Members of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, do their best to prove this through demonstrations for students at The Infantry School.

Concord Observation Post is the scene of one of these demonstrations. Activities there show the importance of artillery, and allow student officers to see what artillery is available, through dwelling on the fundamentals of the various elements of an artillery battalion.

Taken into consideration is the importance of the meteorological section, which makes a complete and digested report of the weather conditions that prevail at the time. Further, it brings into focus the nerve center of the artillery battalion, the fire direction center.

In this phase of operations, target information from the forward observer is converted to concise firing data. The fire direction center is under control of a fire direction officer, assisted by an operations sergeant, computer, chart operators and radio-telephone personnel.

The howitzer sections are in communication with the fire direction center through the firing battery headquarters. After the data is relayed from the center to the firing battery headquarters, located in the rear area of the guns, the information is placed on the guns and the sections are made ready to bring fire on areas called from the instructor on Concord Observation Post.

As the day passes and the instructor brings the demonstration phase of the problem to a close, the students are given practical experience. During this course of instruction the students are allowed to try their hand at observing and adjusting artillery fire.

After the practical portion of the problem is complete, the students drawn from the many posts, colleges and universities across the nation leave the stand, and preparation starts again for the next time on Concord Observation Post.

Telephone Calls in Europe Give Unusual Connections

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Armed Forces personnel stationed overseas may be missing out on a very useful and inexpensive source of information, service and even entertainment. Many foreign telephone companies offer a number of free services which provide value and enjoyment to many servicemen.

Everyone has dialed that little number early in the morning to find out the time and local weather conditions. In London, there is a number not only for the local forecast but one for Essex, Sussex, Kent and all the rest.

In West Berlin, Vienna, Tokyo and all parts of Switzerland you can dial a recorded program of the latest news. The Swiss even have a choice of news in German, French or Italian.

The serviceman's wife in many Swiss and West German cities, Vienna and Paris may dial the recipe of the day and if things don't go well, there is another number for what to do about being poisoned.

In Switzerland dialing the number 11 will give you train schedules, addresses of doctors and drugstores, historic dates and spelling of place names for crossword puzzle fans.

Obviously the serviceman overseas has use of a great variety of unique and useful telephone services not offered here at home.

Searchlight Tattoo, Demonstrations To Highlight Armed Forces Week

Armed Forces Week Participation Urged

Armed Forces Day will be observed on the eighteenth of May by millions of American servicemen and women throughout the free world who stand ready to provide for the safety of their nation.

During the entire third week of May, I join with the members of this garrison, both military and civilian, to focus public attention on Fort Benning and the United States Army. As our country's oldest Armed Service, the Army and the U. S. Infantryman should be particularly proud to do everything possible to commemorate Armed Forces Week.

Fort Benning personnel, weapons and equipment will be on public display in nearby communities of Columbus and Phenix City during this period. I consider this an excellent opportunity to show the people in this area what the Army is doing to maintain our liberty. I urge all Fort Benning personnel to participate to the fullest extent possible in making Armed Forces Day 1963 a success.

C. W. G. RICH
Major General, USA
Commanding

Armed Forces Week will be observed May 12-18, giving Fort Benning personnel the opportunity to demonstrate for the civilian community their role in maintaining "Power for Peace."

Following this slogan, men and equipment from The Infantry Center, the 2nd Infantry Division and the 11th Air Assault Division will participate in a variety of activities in the Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City area.

One of the most crowd gathering events of the week, the annual massing of the colors and Searchlight Tattoo, will be held at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at Municipal Auditorium in Columbus.

The ceremonies will be presented Monday by The Infantry Center and Infantry School.

Speaker will be Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of the school. He will lead the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag following the rededication of the colors.

The Tuesday ceremonies will be conducted by the 2nd Infantry Division and 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant commander of the 2nd Division, is scheduled to speak. Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th, will lead the pledge to the flag.

Highlights of the evening will be the Auburn University (Ala.) ROTC Drill Team, the parade of colors, a salute to the United Nations and the introduction of U. N. representatives, general remarks and introductions by Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Philip E. Gallagher and John Nilan, commander of the Military Order of World Wars which sponsors the annual Armed Forces Week activities.

Also on the program are the salute to the Armed Forces, the 2nd Division Chorus, Infantry School Rangers in action and a retreat ceremony.

Robert Barr is in charge of the music.

In addition to an expected 1,200 U. S. military spectators, the ceremonies will be attended by Allied officers from 34 nations attending The Infantry School.

Shoppers in Columbus and Phenix City will get an up-to-date look at the Army during the week as store windows and parkways display the latest in Army equipment and techniques.

More than 40 merchants in the area have made way for exhibits ranging from weapons to activities of The Infantry Center Chaplains Section.

Units slated to have window displays include the Weapons, Ranger, Mobility, Communications, Airborne - Air Mobility and Nonresident Instruction Departments of The Infantry School and Student Brigade.

The Infantry Center Troop Command, Lawson Army Aviation Command, 197th Infantry Brigade, Third Army Training Aids Subcenter, Martin Army Hospital, Advanced Marksmanship Unit, The Infantry Center Chemical and Quartermaster Sections and 2nd Infantry Division.

Also exhibiting in store windows will be local U. S. Air

Col. Koch (L), Gen. Reynolds (Third From Left) Troop Line During Farewell Review; Gen. Norton and Gen. Rich (R) During Welcome Review

11 Guns Welcome Gen. John Norton

An 11-gun salute was fired on Chapel Field at 4 p.m. Wednesday to welcome Brig. Gen. John Norton, new assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Succeeding Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., who departed the post Monday, Gen. Norton was honored with a review, followed by a reception at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

An honor guard for the review was formed by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Jimmy Smith.

The salute was fired by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, also of the 197th, commanded by Capt. William E. Trent. Music was furnished by The Infantry Center Band, under direction of CWO Clyde W. White.

Gen. Norton has served at Headquarters, Continental Army Command, since August, 1960, as chief of the Aviation Division, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Unit Training and Readiness.

A review was staged May 1 at the Fort Monroe, Va., Continental Park as a farewell to Gen. Norton.

He is a 1936 graduate of Maury High School in Norfolk and a 1941 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

During World War II, Gen. Norton served with the 82nd Airborne Division, making four combat jumps in Sicily, Italy, Normandy and Holland.

MARCHING UNITS, HELICOPTERS, EQUIPMENT PASS IN REVIEW ON 11TH'S ORGANIZATION DAY

By Maj. Ben Nichols

"Today will be remembered throughout the years by you as the entry into the greatest episode of your lives."

These were the words of Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Joseph M. Swing, World War II commander of the 11th Airborne Division, as he reviewed the troops of the newly activated 11th Air Assault Division on their Organization Day May 2 at Lawson Army Airfield.

"Ours is a proud heritage. We have the history and traditions of an illustrious fighting unit on which to model ourselves," added Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, present division commanding general, as he shared reviewing honors with Gen. Swing.

A unique and colorful treat was afforded the more than 1,000 spectators when the two reviewing officers "trooped the line" in a UH-1, IROQUOIS, helicopter.

Awards were presented to 31 division officers and men by Gen. Swing. The awards ranged from a Bronze Star Medal for Spt James N. Stuteville, 188th Transport Helicopter Co., for heroic action in Viet Nam, and a Soldier's Medal to Capt. George B. Calhoun, 11th Air Assault Aviation Group, for

The salute came during a review on Chapel Field for the general who is scheduled to retire soon.

At his side during the rendering of the National Anthem, the gun salute and passing in review by The Infantry Center honor guard was Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commandant of the school and commanding general of The Infantry Center.

Soviets Place Firm Clamp on Expression

The dictators of Communist Russia seem once again to be turning to the "hard line," flexing their muscles and consequently placing a firm hammerlock on any freedom of expression.

Many of the works of Soviet artists; writers and musicians are now being labeled as "rotten sentimental complacency." A case in point is the noted poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko who has been prevented from making a scheduled visit to the United States.

The Soviets have said that Mr. Yevtushenko is ill but certainly no one will think about bacteria, viruses or the like in connection with the "illness."

Since Mr. Khrushchev attacked Mr. Yevtushenko in a speech last March 8, the poet seems to be all but a prisoner in his own country. He apparently has been denied the right to make a statement in his own defense and may even be accused of treason for all the Free World knows.

The enforced clampdown on men of literature and the arts has once again shown the democracies a vivid picture of the complete and repressive domination of the Communist Party in the Soviet Union today.

Many other top Soviet writers have been conspicuously absent from comment also. We are jolted into the realization, once again, that, even a decade after Stalin, the courage to speak out in Russia today is unthinkable.

Unfortunately the arts in the Soviet Union merely remain as another propaganda device to be manipulated at will by the Kremlin.

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. David E. Rebbin

Many members of the Army and their dependents have a misconception concerning the extent to which military lawyers can assist them with their legal problems. The Army Legal Assistance Program is primarily advisory in nature.

In general, servicemen and their dependents are advised as to their legal rights and causes of action. In addition, simple legal papers are prepared. This includes simple wills, powers of attorney and bills of sale.

The more complicated cases, involving trusts or civil litigation, are essentially legal matters. These cases must be handled by private attorneys.

While a lawyer with the Judge Advocate General Corps is a member of the bar of at least one of the 50 States, he is transferred from post to post as are other servicemen. Therefore, chances are that he is not a member of the bar of the State in which he is stationed.

Even if he were, the Judge Advocate General has stated that lawyers in the Army will not engage in the civilian practice of law. This means that no legal assistance officer may appear in any civilian court. This is the reason that we cannot represent your traffic court or divorce cases. However, we can — and do — advise you as to your rights in these cases.

If you are about to enter into a contract and you do not understand all the provisions, we will try to interpret it for you. We will be glad to look at any legal document for you before you sign it and attempt to advise you as to your legal rights and responsibilities if you sign.

We will be glad to advise you on any legal matter. But if legal action is to be taken, the matter must be handled by a civilian attorney.

The Columbus Bar Association sends an attorney to Fort Benning every Wednesday afternoon to advise military personnel on the Georgia Law. There is no charge for this service, and appointments may be obtained through the Main Post Legal Assistance Office, 545-4893, or through the Second Division Legal Assistance office, 544-7542 and 544-7406.

If you must retain an attorney from another city or another state, we have a national directory of attorneys listed by state and city that can be used by anyone who does not have other means to contact a distant attorney.

Remember, if you have a legal problem, the best thing to do is to discuss it with your legal assistance officer before taking any steps that might result in legal trouble. We are always ready to advise you and to help you in any way we can.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Duty, Honor, Courage

BY CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.) THOMAS F. DALEY

As Armed Forces Day approaches, perhaps it would be well to consider the attributes that should be found in the lives of those serving their country, namely, duty, honor and courage.

Regardless of what position you may have in the service, you have to realize that you are part of a team, that you have a job to do, and that you are going to do that job to the best of your ability.

You are not going to shirk your job, you are not going to take the easy way out, because in the line of duty, there is no easy out. You are going to do your duty, because it is the proper thing to do.

You are not going to do the job, just to win the applause of your fellow man, because sometimes such applause is not forthcoming. You do the task at hand, because it is your duty.

A mother standing over the bedside of a sick child, doesnt count the cost. She doesn't mind the sleepless nights nor the long days. Her only hope and prayer is for the complete recovery of her little one. The doctors and nurses in our hospitals demonstrate the devotion to duty that should be found in every walk of life.

In all things, have honor. Be a man of honor, a man of sincerity, a man who is dependable in everything that you do. A man who is honorable is a man who can be trusted. His word is his bond. He is not a creature of expediency. He is not "a reed shaken by the wind." He is a man of conviction, a man of truth. He doesn't say one thing and mean something else. With honor goes courage.

Maybe some people think of courage as something entirely physical, something heroic, but not entirely.

There is also something known as moral courage. A courage that is able to take defeat in a graceful manner; a courage to remain steadfast when disappointments, sorrow, heartaches, and the like seem to crowd into one's life. It takes courage to do the right thing when opposition is strong from all quarters. It takes courage to stand alone when you are right, when perhaps it would be easier and more pleasant to follow the crowd.

All the great personages of history have possessed the qualities of duty, honor and courage that are so necessary today. If we ourselves do not have these qualities in our own lives, how can we pass them on to others?

Cultivate the attributes of duty, honor and courage and be a credit to your God, to your country and to yourself.

Capitol Notes

The Department of Defense and Bureau of the Budget have offered no objections to the bill introduced by Sen. Frank Moss (D., Utah), to erect a flagpole over the 54 Navy men entombed within the hulk of the half-sunken USS Utah at Pearl Harbor.

The bill (S 703), is co-sponsored by 37 other senators. It was introduced as a result of a campaign by the Navy Times and Parade Magazine to honor the 54 crewmen, one of whom is a Medal of Honor winner.

Senator Moss has asked the Senate Armed Services Committee to hold hearings on the bill as soon as possible.

Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon made a fight before the Senate Appropriations Committee to get back all operating and shipbuilding funds cut from the pending Coast Guard appropriation by the House of Representatives. He sacrificed three shore-side construction projects in hopes of getting the full $36 million asked by the Coast Guard for the ship program.

There is a strong chance that the fate of the Military Pay Bill will be decided during the month of May. It is expected that a floor fight will develop as a bi-partisan group attempts to restore pay recomputation. Recomputation and the date the new pay will be authorized are expected to be the two most widely discussed parts of the Bill on the Senate floor. Senate floor.

The term "unauthorized dependent" used in official documents for years to identify dependents present in overseas areas without authorization by commanders is apparently going out of style.

A Defense directive on overseas duty tours has substituted "command sponsored" for authorized" and "individual sponsored" for the old "unauthorized" dependent status.

WAC Company Planning Corps Birthday Celebration

Members of the Women's Army Corps Company will observe the 21st anniversary of their branch of the Army, May 14, with an open house, picnic and dance.

Ceremonies will begin with an open house and coffee at the WAC Company barracks (Bldg. No. 243) from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Among the guests who have accepted invitations to the anniversary party is Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

The afternoon will be highlighted by a picnic lunch and supper at Kings Pond from 12:30 to 7:30 p.m. Later in the evening a dance will be held for WACs and their guests at King's Pond Lodge.

Although women have served with the Army since the final stages of the Civil War, it wasn't until May 14, 1942, that the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC) gained recognition as an auxiliary in the Army.

In July, 1943, Congress passed the necessary legislation granting WAAC Army status. The same bill changed the WAAC wording to read Women's Army Corps, dropping the word Auxiliary. Thus, the Women's Army Corps gained official recognition.

The first WACs encountered many problems never before considered by the Army. More was learned in the first hour while WACs were being fitted for uniforms than had been discovered in six months of research.

The heavy cotton khaki skirts were cut as if to fit men's hips. When they walked or marched, the skirts climbed well above the knee and a desperate grip on the skirt was substituted for the required arm swing.

The first caps, uncharitably were not only unbecoming to many women but also cut the forehead and were easily warped, crushed, or soiled.

Yet, as the women learned about the Army, the Army also began to learn the many minor yet important items about the administration of women that could only be learned by experience.

The Women's Army Corps has served in every major theater of war since the early years of World War II.

World War II proved women's versatility and adaptability in a great variety of occupational areas and won them military status as an integral part of the defense team.

It is great compliment to the Southwest Pacific WACs that the WAC mission in the Southwest Pacific was successfully performed. Gen. Douglas MacArthur called WACs his "best soldiers," and praised their spirit of eagerness to carry on where they were most needed.

At the end of World War II WACs received many awards and decorations, including three Presidential Citations, 200 Bronze Stars, and other decorations including several Legions of Merit which proved their courage.

Military leaders such as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, General Bruce C. Clarke, and Gen. George H. Decker have highly praised the WACs enthusiasm and courage since their early beginnings. Today the women's components are an accepted part of the Armed Forces of the United States.

WACs are found in many phases of Army life. Technical and administrative services to which women have been assigned include Signal, Engineers, Surgeon General, Adjutant General, Finance and Quartermaster Corps.

PREPARED TO FIGHT

Dedicated to the prevention of war, but prepared to fight if war should come, the U.S. Army, together with its sister services, stands guard on the frontiers of freedom throughout the world.

JAG Corps Opens Door To Women

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Qualified women attorneys are being offered a career as Army lawyers under a program announced recently by the Department of the Army.

Appointments will be in the grade authorized for male applicants assigned to the Army's Judge Advocate General Corps (JAGC), but not above the grade of lieutenant colonel.

Applicants between ages 20-32, who qualify, will be commissioned in the Women's Army Corps (WAC) and concurrently detailed to the JAGC for their entire career.

Previously, some members of the WAC had served in legal positions for regular three-year tours, but not as career lawyers. Under provisions of this program, women attorneys, although commissioned as WAC's, will serve in legal positions.

Women law students may apply during the senior year of law school. Their appointments will be effective after graduation and admission to the bar of the highest court of a State or Federal Court.

Those women accepted for the program must agree to serve three years on active duty. Following a brief orientation at the Women's Army Corps School at Fort McClellan, Ala., the newly-commissioned officers will attend a special course at the Judge Advocate General's School at Charlottesville, Va.

AR 140-100, currently being revised by Department of the Army, will contain further details concerning the program.

Your Dental Health

Early Care Prevents Malforming of Teeth

"As the twig is bent, so grows the tree" summarizes orthodontics, or tooth straightening.

Today, let's talk about preventive orthodontics, and consider some means of reducing the need of having teeth straightened.

First, and one of the most needless causes of crooked teeth is premature loss of the baby teeth. This is why dentists try to convince parents to have their children's teeth maintained with fillings.

The loss of a baby molar will nearly always lead to a closing of the space formerly occupied by that tooth; by the drifting of the teeth behind the gap to fill the empty space.

Prevention of this condition is prevention of loss by filling of the tooth. In case of loss, your dentist should be consulted to see if a space maintainer should be placed.

Secondly, there are certain habits which if continued will cause teeth to be moved abnormally and cause malocclusion.

Thumb or finger-sucking habits will cause teeth to be forced out of proper position if continued for long periods. Occasionally, the habit is continued long enough to cause an anterior open-bite, so that when the back teeth are closed together the front teeth will not touch.

This habit should normally be discontinued by age 3½. If not, a marked deformation of the occlusion may result.

A tongue thrusting habit also can cause extensive movement of teeth. This is something which many parents fail to see, as often even the child doesn't know he is doing it. The continuation of the habit will cause "bucking" of the upper front teeth, and in some cases "bucking" of both upper and lower front teeth.

Prolonged retention of deciduous teeth, particularly in the lower front area is a common occurrence, as the permanent teeth come in behind the deciduous teeth and fail to push the deciduous teeth out.

Once the permanent tooth has entered the mouth, the baby tooth should be extracted immediately. If this is accomplished soon enough, the permanent tooth will usually be brought into position by the normal action of the tongue and lip muscles.

In spite of all preventive measures instituted there are some children destined to wear orthodontic braces because of growth factors beyond the control of the dentist.

The old rule of thumb that says wait until all the permanent teeth are in the mouth is not always the proper rule. A lot of fullblown malocclusions can be prevented and intercepted if the dentist in conjunction with the orthodontist are consulted when the child is at an early age.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, USAIC, Fort Benning, or telephone 545-7741.

Gov't Project Sends 'Spys' To Visit Posts

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Two teams from a government office called Project Cloud Gap will visit one or more Army bases somewhere in the United States in a test of wits in September.

The objective of the test is to try, without access to the inner secrets of the base, to find out the number of tanks and certain other vehicles based there.

The number of vehicles will be known to Dr. Lessing A. Kahn, who heads Cloud Gap but will not be known to the inspectors.

The teams are forerunners of international inspection units that someday might police disarmament agreements among nations.

This kind of test will be the first field trials held by any country involving actual inspections under simulated conditions.

Project Cloud Gap was set up a year ago by the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and the Defense Department to conduct field trials on disarmament inspection.

Future tests will branch out into other military fields — air defense, support units, naval units and nuclear missiles.

Surgeon Says

Fear Is Disturbing But Necessary

By 1st Lt.
Bruce W. Rottschafer

Fear is one of the most disturbing, yet necessary, emotions that people experience.

Fear grips all of us at times: fear of illness, of accident, of poverty, of death and sometimes even fears that have no real basis. Many fears are normal and necessary, for without them, we would face certain injury or find ourselves in many uneasy situations.

Yet, many of our fears are exaggerated, and they can even effect us to where we find it increasingly difficult to carry on our ordinary daily activities. Such unrealistic fears are called phobias.

There is a common misconception that if you simply express your fears, they will disappear. Often it is better to keep our fears to ourselves, for they can become contagious and needlessly spill over into the lives of others.

Often one's actions communicate fears to others. If parents gather their children together and take them to the basement each time a thunderstorm appears, they are communicating fear to their children.

We should be silent about our fears if they tend to make others uselessly share them.

Many people are able to handle their fears by avoiding the feared situation and thus remain relatively free from anxiety. However, there are also times when this is not enough, and it becomes necessary to talk about our fears and anxieties with others.

This is especially true when fear and tensions are undermining our health, either physically or mentally. Telling one's fears to a sympathetic listener can ease the pressure and can give much relief to the mind and emotions.

How then can you tell whether disclosing your fears will be helpful or harmful? This depends on the type of problem, how seriously it is affecting your life and the person with whom you are talking. If a husband talks about his fears to his wife who is easily upset, he is not going to get much help. It is, therefore, necessary to talk it over with a person who may be helpful.

If you have concern about your health, discuss it with a physician. Often emotional problems can be discussed with a trusted friend or chaplain. It may even be necessary to discuss your feelings with someone from the Medical Hygiene Consultation Service, who is professionally trained to help you with problems of this nature.

TIC Band Personnel On Job Day and Night

Around the clock commitments are not out of the ordinary for the versatile Infantry Center Band.

Fifty-three enlisted men and two warrant officers perform at command functions from sunrise to sunset, on weekends, holidays and throughout the week.

The Infantry Center Band, a combination of two bands, the 283rd with a total of 25 bandsmen and the 493rd with 28, has its headquarters in the Third Quartel.

CWO Clyde W. White heads the 283rd while the 493rd is under the direction of WO Ralph J. Fera.

The band is presently in the midst of National Music Week, proclaimed by President Kennedy for May 5-12.

Mr. White has been working on a six-man committee recently appointed on the post to develop a program that emphasizes the pleasures and values to be derived from participation in music activities.

This week the band has been committed for 13 playing engagements, a number slightly less than the average for this time of the year, according to officials at band headquarters.

Tuesday the band was at Lawson Army Airfield for the arrival of both the NATO group here for an orientation of the Infantry Center and Infantry School and Brig. Gen. John Norton, who is succeeding Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., as assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

The band makes an early morning appearance every Monday at 6:30 a.m., when it plays a march and Reveille for The Infantry Center Troop Command personnel.

SFC Harold R. Wilson, a firer from Fort Campbell, Ky., ran a close third with an 876-29X score.

Comprising the aggregate match were the .22 caliber slow fire, timed fire, rapid fire and National Match courses. The first three matches yielded possible scores of 200 points each with the National Match course offering 300 possible points.

Winners in the aggregate make-up matches were SFC Wilson in the slow fire match with a 191-4X score; Maj. Army Re-Ups Get Tougher

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army commanders are being urged by the Department of the Army to be selective in their reenlistment program with a view towards eliminating those who are incapable of satisfactory performance of duty or who have established patterns of misconduct.

The Army Personnel Letter, published by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, points out that reenlistment of such persons often results in the expense of courts-martial and board action and the early discharge of offenders.

It says that judicious applications of regulations such as AR 635-208 (unfitness) and AR 635-209 (unsuitability), or by barring further service through the use of paragraph 8c, AR 635-200 can prevent such problems.

The latter regulation provides the unit commander with the means to prevent further reenlistment of an individual without resorting to boards or courts-martial by placing into his personnel record a statement, endorsed by higher authority, that the man is not considered eligible for reenlistment. Unless this statement is withdrawn prior to the end of the soldier's enlistment, he is banned from future service in any of the Armed Services.

Gift Limit Being Cut On Imports

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Customs Bureau has decided to delay action on its proposal to reduce duty-free gift limitations from $10 to $1, for at least six months.

Since the announcement last January, the bureau says there have been fewer violations of the customs regulations governing free import of gift packages.

An even closer watch is to be kept for the next six months. Then the Customs Bureau will decide whether to continue the free import privilege which brought about the move to reduce it to $1 limitation proposed earlier or to propose some other modification.

Major abuses of the privilege which brought about the January proposal were: marking packages that were not bona fide gifts as gifts; declaring gifts to be within the $10 limitation with the knowledge that they exceeded that value; splitting more valuable gifts, such as sets of dinnerware, into smaller packages and mailing them separately as gifts within limitation, and including prohibited items in gift packages.

'Quake' Lab Established In Capital

WASHINGTON (AFPS)— A science laboratory that may one day enable man to predict the time and place of earthquakes was dedicated here recently.

The new Seismological Data and Analysis Center of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, will record information from a global network of 125 recording stations in more than 60 countries.

The center will receive, film, record, catalogue, retrieve and disseminate copies of seismograms as a help to scientists all over the world in geological research.

Thus, since nearly a million earthquakes occur every year, this center will provide every seismologist with a complete library of accurate, uniform data on all seismic events occurring throughout the world.

This is the first time in history that there exists a fast and precise means for the worldwide interchange of seismograms.

Unique Diet Is Featured In Training

Members of the 11th Air Assault Division ('Test), which has been formed to test a new concept of air mobility, are undergoing many strange and different types of training.

One of the most unique is that currently being given for Company B, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry.

A recent day's training commenced with a 10-mile tactical road march from the Harmony Church area where the troops live to the Infantry Center Ranger Survival Course, located in the vicinity of Goodhope Cemetery.

Under supervision of SFC Alex J. Vanriette, a full blooded Choctaw Indian, the construction of traps, snares, and the preparation of fire-pits was demonstrated. A wide variety of traps and snares were discussed to include those for small game, birds and fish. In addition to building different types of firepits, the method of preparing charcoal was shown.

The highlight of the day's training was dinnertime when a goat, some rabbits, and several chickens were killed, dressed, cooked and served by SFC Vanriette and SFC Jackie B. Powers. The meal was enhanced by the preparation of sassafras tea, wild onions, wild pork (similar to lettuce) and wild pepper plants.

Nutrition-wise, the meal left little to be desired, even though it may not have been a gourmet's idea of an ideal bill of fare for a gourmet.

After a tactical road march back to the company area, Cpt. Everett M. Yon Jr., the company commander, commented that, in view of the long-range missions which the air assault concept employs, training of this type would prove invaluable.

William L. Rieger Honored by 806th

Sp4 William L. Rieger has been named "Soldier-of-the-Month" at the 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction). He is operations clerk for Company D.

Sp4 Rieger has been assigned to D Company since he completed basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., in December, 1961.

He and his wife, Sue, live at 1314 Benning Road, Columbus.

John Shelton Air Transport Unit's Top EM

John M. Shelton, a veteran of World War II with the combat engineers in Europe, has been assigned as sergeant major of the 10th Air Transport Brigade, 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

Sgt. Shelton entered the Army in July, 1943, and received his training at Camp Beale, Calif. During World War II he served with the 28th Combat Engineer Group as a squad leader. He participated in three major campaigns, Ardennes, Southern France and the Rhineland.

He returned to the U.S. in January, 1946. After a brief leave at home he again was assigned to Germany, this time in Munich with the 487th Engineer Construction Battalion. In December, 1948, he went to Triest, then controlled by the U.S. and Britain, to be in charge of the Army Postal Unit there.

After his tour in Trieste he went to the Atlanta General Depot, Ga. He was first sergeant of the 4th Army Postal Unit. In January, 1953, he made another trip to Germany. This time he went to Berlin.

In April 1956 he was assigned to Simmons Army Airfield at Fort Bragg. He was assistant operations sergeant at the airfield. He went back to Europe in 1958 and was assigned to the 7th Aviation Battalion, stationed in Stuttgart, Germany.

He returned to the states in March, 1962, and was assigned to Fort Carson, Colo., as sergeant major. He came to his new assignment from Fort Carson.

Bullet Destroys Itself After Striking Plastic

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Three inches of a light plastic armor material shattered a bullet from a Russian 14.5 mm. gun, fired point blank 30 feet away, in a recent test of American armor.

A witness, describing the test, said there was a shower of splinters from the plastic target, but no penetration by the bullet traveling at 2,000 miles per hour.

Instead of stopping projectiles by sheer strength and thickness like steel and other metals, the plastic is said to use the bullet's own force to destroy itself. When the bullet smashes into the new nonmetallic armor, the lay-up of the composite materials forces it to make a sharp-angled turn in a distance of about one-half inch and the bullet is shattered by its own energy.

The goal of the plastic development program is a new, lightweight armor that can be used by tanks, personnel carriers, small boats, planes and helicopters for protection against small arms fire and armor piercing bullets.

Although the material is still in early development stages, tests have shown that in many designs it is as much as 40 per cent lighter than many metallic armors with equal protective qualities.

Living War Vets And Career Men Ranks Diminish

NEW YORK (AFPS)— John S. Gleason Jr., Administrator of Veterans Affairs, reports that there are 22,225,000 living veterans of all United States wars or of the career military service in the nation.

This compares with 22,755,000, the all-time high in the veteran population, in March, 1958.

As 1962 ended, there were 4,550,000 Korean Conflict vets, 15,110,000 WWII vets, 2,400,000 WWI vets, 24,000 Spanish-American vets and 24 vets of the various Indian wars, as well as about 140,000 career vets carried on VA compensation rolls.

There were 4,429,000 veterans in the nation on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, Pearl Harbor Day.

UNITED STATES ARMY READY FORCE

Fort Benning, Ga. FRIDAY, MAY 10, 1963

38th Ceremony Today

'The Rock' Reorganizes

By 38th Infantry PIO

Ceremonies at Wetherby Field today will officially deactivate the 2nd Division's 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry and redesignate the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry and the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry.

The 38th, commanded by Col. Maurice C. Holden and recently returned from Europe under Rotaplan, is the last of the division's infantry battle groups to reorginze under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Prepare in Europe

Personnel of the battle group began preparations for the split into two battalions while in Germany. In addition to troops from the 38th, one complete company from the new deactivated 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry has joined the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry to complete the reorganization.

Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, former executive officer of the 38th, has been named to command the 1st Battalion of the 38th and Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier, former division chief of staff assistant, will assume command of the 38th's 2d Battalion. Col. Holden, completing his third tour with the 2nd Infantry Division, has received an assignment to The Infantry Center.

The two new Rock of the Marne battalions will be assigned to the 3rd Brigade and located in the Sand Hill area formerly occupied by the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander, is scheduled to address troops at the ceremonies.

The 38th Infantry was originally activated as part of the 3rd Infantry Division in 1917 and Battalions of the 38th distinguished themselves on World War I, World War II and Korean battlefields. A heroic stand at the Marne River in World War gained the unit its motto, "The Rock of the Marne."

The 38th Infantry first joined the 2nd Division in 1939 and fought through Europe during World War II and in the Ko-

Mess Hall a Tourist Attraction?

Got some leisure time? Some people recommend going to the library or to the museum, but members of Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade are inviting the public to see what they call "the finest mess hall in the 2nd Division."

Opening their doors Saturday, SSgt. Paul E. Pope, mess sergeant, and his staff, showed off for the first time the talent they combined with that of the 2nd Engineer Battalion in reconditioning a previously abandoned building.

Located on Sand Hill, Headquarters Company mess hall personnel are the first 2nd Division soldiers to declare their work a "tourist attraction."

For Armed Forces Week

Five Areas Sent Special Displays

By Bob de Camara

Five combat units of the 2nd Infantry Division will send men to various locations in the Southeastern United States to take part in Armed Forces Week displays and ceremonies.

A "Drone" ground-to-air missile and missile crew will be dispatched by the 2nd Aviation Battalion to Fort Gordon, Ga., for exhibit. The display will be "static;" the missile will not be fired. The missile crew will depart Fort Benning May 17 and return May 19.

105 Howitzer

Four division artillerymen towing a 105-millimeter howitzer and equipped with the M-14 rifle and M-17 protective mask, the Army's latest, will be guests of the community of Orangeburg's Army Reserve Center along with men from other military reservations scattered throughout the South, the artillerymen will be quartered by invitation in the homes of the civilian residents.

At shopping centers and schools in the Atlanta area from May 13 to 19, three jeep-mounted 106-millimeter recoilless rifles will be shown by an infantry team of one officer and six enlisted men. The group from the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry will be temporarily stationed at Fort McPherson and will split up to make separate trips through the area with their recoilless rifles.

An entire rifle company of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, Company B, will take part in mock warfare May 18 at Fort Stewart, Ga. On May 19, the day after demonstrating a rifle company in the attack, Company B will be taken to a nearby airfield and, at the appropriate time in the ceremonies, hurriedly flown back to Fort Stewart and debarked before the spectators to illustrate modern Army airlift capabilities.

Training Tests

Prior to Company B's participation in the Armed Forces Week demonstrations, the unit will be at Fort Stewart maneuvering in annual Army Training Tests with the division's 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor. After May 19 the men will remain at Stewart in support of the "Second to None's" 7th Cavalry which will engage in the annual testing.

The fifth and final unit to send its men and fighting gear off Fort Benning for Armed Forces Week activities is the 1st Battalion 72nd Armor. At Dobbins Air Force Base, Marietta, Ga., from May 16 to 19, a division tank crew will run through gun drill and provide demonstrations and explanations for curious visitors on the M-48 tank they are taking along with them to Dobbins. A division tank crew, made up of five men and usually led by a staff sergeant, can put the tank ready and in action by the use of silent hand signals and will show this for the crowds.

Boy Scouts Join Field Soldiers

By 9th Infantry PIO

An armored personnel carrier last week rolled to a dusty stop in the midst of a 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry encampment, the humming of the engine halted, the tail gate lowered, and out poured a group of curious and wide-eyed boy scouts having a field day as guests of active duty soldiers.

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry in field training last week, invited members of Fort Benning's Boy Scout Troop 39 to spend the day observing and participating in their training.

Battalion Welcome

Members of the scout troops under the guidance of Sp5 Daniel Pate, scoutmaster and a cadreman at Fort Benning's Airborne School, were welcomed by Lt. Col. Jack Samson, battalion commander, and Maj. Lloyd Cain, executive officer.

The young men were given an escorted tour of the battalion command post and bivouac area, inspecting weapons and vehicles. Stopping first to

Airborne Vs. Infantry; the Swift Strike III Lineup

By Peter Talisticheff

Airborne soldiers will be pitted against infantrymen in Swift Strike III, according to Department of Defense sources who this week further outlined details of the 75,000-man exercise scheduled July 21 through August 16.

Unlike the similar exercise Swift Strike II held last year, two Airborne divisions will oppose soldiers of Fort Benning's 2nd Infantry Division and the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) from Fort Carson, Colo. Last year, each force included one Airborne division, giving each an opportunity to stage and oppose Airborne operations.

Speaking in general about the upcoming mammoth maneuvers, the Defense Department announced that over 75,000 members of the U.S. Strike Command, from bases and stations throughout the nation, will move to North and South Carolina this summer.

Swift Strike III, directed by Gen. Paul D. Adams, commander-in-chief of Strike, will be a two-sided field training maneuver with opposing Red and Blue joint task forces maneuvering against each other.

The Red joint task force principal forces will be the 2nd Infantry Division and the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized). Blue force organization will include the 101st Airborne Division from Fort Campbell, Ky., and the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N. C.

Red forces will be under III Corps Headquarters from Fort Hood, Tex., while the Blue force will be under the control of Headquarters, XVIII Airborne Corps from Fort Bragg.

The preliminary air phase of the exercise will range over a 7,500-square mile area bounded by Charlotte, N. C.; Augusta, Ga. and Greenville, S. C. A smaller area where the air-ground teams will maneuver extends southwest and north of U. S. Highway I from the vicinity of Fayetteville, N. C.

Headquarters, U. S. Strike Command will take to the field during the maneuvers and will direct the exercise from a field headquarters in Spartanburg, S.C. Gen. Adams will exercise direct control of the maneuvering joint task forces.

Participating forces of the continental Army Command (CONARC) and Tactical Air Command (TAC) are based in states from the east coast to the west coast. In preparation for the exercise, the participating forces will be alerted and strategically concentrated in the maneuver area from employment by the joint task force commanders. Each joint task force commander will be assisted by a deputy, a senior officer from a service other than his own, and by a thoroughly integrated joint staff representing the services contributing forces to the exercise.

Commanding Forces

Lt. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson, U. S. Army, will exercise unified command of the joint task force Red; while Lt. Gen. Bruce K. Holloway, USAF, will command joint task force Blue. Maj. Gen. William P. Yarborough, U.S. Army, will exercise unified command over the joint unconventional warfare forces.

An air war beginning July 21 between balanced Red and Blue Air Forces will be the opening phase of Swift Strike III. Joint task force Blue will use units of TAC's 9th Air Force and the XVIII Airborne Army Corps, while the joint task force Red will employ 12th Air Force and the III Army Corps.

The air force will have a strong force of tactical fighters as well as reconnaissance and troop carrier units, all supported by Air Force weather, communications and administrative support elements.

On August 3 Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard Forces will reinforce the regular units and air operations will continue until the close of the exercise.

A joint unconventional warfare task force will be organized as a major command under Headquarters, U. S. Strike Command to control participating special warfare forces. These forces will be provided from the U.S. Army Special Warfare Center, Fort Bragg, N.C., and the USAF Special Warfare Center, Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

U.S. Army National Guard Special Forces operation detachments and USAF Air National Guard forces will be participating in the joint unconventional warfare operations.

The 7,500-square mile maneuver area, according to Gen. Adams, "is almost entirely comprised of privately owned property. Without the public spiritedness and wholehearted support of the citizens and property owners within the maneuver area, adequate training of our major combatant Army and Tactical Air Force forces would be impossible because the largest military reservations are no longer large enough to train properly large forces for modern military operations."

The U.S. Strike Command, a unified command operating directly under the joint chiefs of staff with headquarters at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., is a mobile, flexible and highly trained force comprised of the combat-ready units of the Continental Army Command and Tactical Air Command stationed in the continental U. S.

The Korea Bowl and the Liscum Bowl belonging to units of the 2nd Infantry Division and together valued at a conservative $175,000 will be on display in Columbus Store windows beginning Monday in connection with Armed Forces Week.

The Liscum Bowl, the older and costlier of the two, will be set surrounded by armed guards in the window of Woodward's at 1139 Broadway. Hand-pounded of silver by Chinese craftsmen in 1900 and a 9th Infantry memento of the Boxer Rebellion.

The Korea Bowl is a much newer souvenir. All told, there will be 14 window displays by 12 Second Division units. Company A of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, has won the battalion display competition and will show the complete uniform and equipment of a modern Army combat soldier in the window of Maxwell Brothers at 1249 Broadway.

NATO Sends Tour Group To See 2nd

By Bob deCamara

Dozens of officers representing the military might of North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) nations Wednesday were treated to a display of modern fighting gear by the 2nd Infantry Division's 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry.

The 36 visiting officers from the armies, navies and air forces of countries such as The Netherlands, Greece, Belgium and Britain, and the U. S. were met at Essebagger Field by Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, Bn. commander of the 87th.

Official Welcome

They were officially welcomed to the "Second to None" by the division's assistant commander, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley. The general was introduced by commander of the division's 2nd Brigade, Col. Dwight B. Dickson.

Other countries represented in the entourage are France, Italy, Portugal, Turkey, Germany and Canada. Senior ranking officer in the group was Brig. Gen. Andre Giroult of the French Army. U. S. Army tour host for the allied officers was Brig. Gen. Ephriam F. Graham. Col. William F. Kernan, U. S. Army, was tour director.

U. S. Officers in the visiting group included an Air Force colonel and lieutenant colonel, and Army colonel and a Marine Corps colonel.

Following the welcoming talk by Gen. Corley, a mechanized company of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, displayed their equipment on Essebagger Field. The NATO officer then informally inspected the equipment outfitting the company, one of the most modern in the entire American Army.

87th Infantry Soldier Digs Gold; Prefers Uranium

87TH INFANTRY PROSPECTOR
PFC William Dilts

By Gordon Fitch

"There's gold in them thar hills," says the ancient prospector, throwing a staggering load of pots and picks aboard his amiable but noncommittal mule. And they wind their way off into the forbidding mountains.

The picture is out of date now, but the sentiments haven't changed any, for in about a year's time William A. Dilts, now a heavy weapons infantryman in Company A, 1st Battalion, 7th Infantry, will be back again in Colorado, looking for the glittering stuff.

But today's stuff glitters in a scintillation counter, for it's uranium that Bill Dilts will be hunting out, and his mule is a 1942 surplus jeep. However, he admits that he wouldn't have any objection to finding a gold strike either.

Called By West

Bill is originally from Pennsylvania, and became interested in minerology there, but the geologically younger hills of the West enticed him away from his home state. In Colorado he got a job with the Climax Mining Company, which runs the largest underground mine in the world, and produces more tin than any other concern in the United States — five pounds a day. At Climax Bill ran a tremendous generator which supplied the mine with electricity, and worked as a "hang-up man" — a demolition expert whose dangerous duty it is to climb up blocked chutes and "bomb" oversize boulders out of the way.

At the same time Bill worked other local areas, especially around Leadville, hunting for anything, but especially panning for gold and prospecting for uranium with instruments. To date he has found only some copper, too far back in the hills for profitable mining. He has plans, though.

One of them involves Superstition Mountain, near where he was working before he entered the Army. There are legends about the mountain; some say that no white man has ever gone up Superstition mountain and come back to tell about it; others tell of fabulous wealth, forgotten mines, Indian treasures, Mexican gold. Bill plans to go up the mountain and see how much truth there is in either legend. While he discounts some of the more Fantastic theories, he believes they may contain the seed of truth, and trusts to his own ability with weapons to defend him from whatever mysterious threat lies in the slopes of the big mountain.

As a soldier, PFC Dilts has held most of the positions in the mortar section at one time or another; right now he is assigned to an armored personnel carrier while helping train new computers for the section. Besides being a driver and a computer, he has also been a squad leader and one of the fastest gunners the section has seen since it was organized in 1961.

Bill collects coins and is interested in treasure - hunting, although these occupations take second place to prospecting and mining.

Support Strikes Field Training

By Support Command PIO

The 2nd Division's Support Command carried operations to the field recently for a two-day training exercise in preparation for upcoming exercise Swift Strike III.

Leaving with the command was the 2nd Division's band, a unit attached to Support Command as a security Platoon. These men set up command post tents for the operations center.

Simulated guerrilla attacks came during the night and at one time the unit was called upon to resupply a nuclear impact area.

Among messages received during the command post exercise were casualty reports, reports of lost equipment, enemy advancement and preplanned enemy locations.

Traffic Quiz

Seat Belts Standard On How Many Cars?

Engineering and automotive science are slowly but surely reducing the mechanical hazards of safe driving. Wiser city planning will in time reduce many others. But each of us has the solemn duty to eliminate the careless and intemperate habits which, harnessed to a six or eight cylinder car, can become a veritable atomic engine of destruction.

Only the one in the driver's seat can be master of himself. This is one in a series of quizzes designed to test the motorist's general knowledge.

QUESTIONS

1. Today, a decade after seat belts first came on the market as an auto safety accessory the percentage of the nation's passenger cars that are equipped with them is only:

a. 26 per cent
b. 17 per cent
c. 11 per cent
d. 03 per cent

2. The driver of a vehicle within an intersection intending to make a left turn will yield the right of way to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is:

a. within fifty feet of the intersection.
b. within one hundred feet of the intersection
c. within or so close to the intersection that it constitutes an immediate hazard.

3. Experiments such as those conducted by Col. John P. Stapp, chief of the Air Force Aero Medical Field Laboratory, have demonstrated that the body, for brief periods, can withstand peak loads of more than how many G's (for gravitational force)?

a. 10 G's
b. 20 G's
c. 30 G's
d. 40 G's

4. By restraining the user from the effects of crash forces which hurl him toward the many hard surfaces, knobs, and controls inside the usual car or might even catapult him out of the car, a seat belt can reduce the chances of serious-to-fatal injury in crashes, according to the best estimates available, by about:

a. 10 per cent
b. 15 per cent
c. 25 per cent
d. 35 per cent.

5. When two vehicles enter an intersection from different highways at the same time:

a. the driver of the vehicle on the left will yield the right of way to the vehicle on the right.
b. the driver of the vehicle on the right will yield the right of way to the vehicle on the left.
c. The larger of two vehicles will have the right of way.

6. In 1907, Fred Marriott, driving a Stanley Steamer at Daytona Beach would have set a new American record if he had not cracked up before finishing the mile as his speed had reached:

a. 168 mph
b. 180 mph
c. 147 mph
d. 156 mph

By 2nd Aviation PIO

The 1st Sergeant of the 2nd Aviation Battalion's largest company recently reenlisted for six more years at his present position.

1st Sgt. Glenn E. Owens reupped for the third time and will continue on as 1st Sergeant of Company A at the 2nd Aviation Battalion. Sgt. Owens was assigned to the 2nd Aviation Company on November, 21, 1962 and was the unit's 1st Sergeant until Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) transformed the 2nd Aviation Company to the 2nd Aviation Battalion.

Sgt. Owens enlisted in the Army on January 7, 1941 and took basic training at Camp Shelby, Miss. with Company B, 151st Infantry Regiment, 38th Division. After basic his regiment was attached to The Infantry School at Fort Benning, and a short time later he was transferred with his unit to Camp Livingston, La.

In recent years Sgt. Owens has been 1st sergeant of the following units: Company A, 40th Armored Cavalry Reconaissance Bn. (Austria); Company C, 131st Tank Bn, Fort Knox, Ky.; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 14th Armored Cavalry Regiment (German) and now he's at the "first shirt" position for the "Indianhead" aviators Company A.

The sergeant and his family live in Columbus, Ga.

CHARGE AT MARNE

rean Conflict with the "Indianhead" Division. In 1957, control of the 2nd Division was transferred to Department of the Army and the colors of the 38th were cased. When the division was reorganized at Fort Benning in 1958, no battle group received the designation as part of the 38th Infantry. However, the colors of the 38th returned to the 2nd Division in February of 1962 when the 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry was redesignated the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry and the designated 11th Infantry went to a unit of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Carson, Colorado.

As an element of the STRAC, "Indianhead" Division, the battle group participated in extensive training including amphibious training at Little Creek, Va. and Exercise Swift Strike II in the Carolinas. The highlight of the unit's training came in October of 1962 when it rotated to Europe as the Army's first ROTAPLAN unit for six months temporary duty.

The Rock of the Marne Battle Group was attached to the 8th Infantry Division and stationed at Baumholder, Germany for its overseas training which ended in April.

Bloodgiving Record Set

By Bob deCamara

The Fort Benning bloodgiving record established by members of the 2nd Infantry Division in April has been rewarded by a letter of appreciation from the field director of the Red Cross at Fort Benning.

Soldiers of the "Second to None" Division in April eclipsed the previous record set also by the division in February 1962. A total of 789 pints of blood were donated, 289 pints over the desired goal.

The previous Fort Benning record of 780 pints held by division infantrymen was shattered during the two-day bloodmobile visit to Sand Hill.

The letter from Harry L. McCullohs Jr., field director, and Cletes V. Clemons, Red Cross assistant field director, was addressed to the division commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and told the general of the "sincere appreciation and gratitude for the fine participation and support rendered by the members of your command."

The donations are an all-time high for any unit at Fort Benning "topped only by a special project collection."

References in the field director's letter to the project officer, Lt. James B. Laughnane III of the 2nd Medical Battalion's Company C prompted a similar letter of appreciation from Gen. Billingslea to the lieutenant.

The letter from the two-star general to Lt. Laughnane in part stated that "your conscientious attention to details in scheduling of donors, arrangement of work details and provision of equipment contributed notably to the efficiency and success of the operation."

All division units took part in the record-breaking blood donations.

COOK of the WEEK

"Pie is as American as the Fourth of July". It is interesting to note that pies during the early American days were contrived out of the simplest things at hand and ofttimes this was pumpkin. Today, there are pies for every taste and for every occasion. This week's Cook of the Week, Mrs. Howard W. Flora, wife of SFC Howard W. Flora, Headquarters Company, 2nd Engineer Battalion, shares with readers her recipe for Orange Pie with meringue topping.

ORANGE PIE

1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup hot water
1 cup orange juice
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
3 tablespoon butter
Meringue Topping
3 egg whites
6 tablespoon sugar

Stir Constantly

Combine sugar and cornstarch; add water and orange juice. Cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens.

Beat a small amount of hot mixture into egg yolks. Add to hot mixture and cook 1 minute. Remove from heat and blend in butter. Cool. Pour into crumb crust.

Meringue Topping: Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Add sugar gradually and continue to beat. Spread maringue over filling, sealing to crust. Bake in 350 degrees oven for 12 minutes.

As hospitality chairman, Mrs. Cliff takes reservation plans and arranges all luncheons.

As custodian of the club, Mrs. Cliff is concerned with general maintenance. She supervises the cleaning, the firing of the furnace and the cleaning of the grounds.

Room Mother

With a seven-year-old daughter, Theresia Joan, in school, P-TA claims a part in the busy life of Mrs. Cliff, as she serves as a room mother. This interest in organizations and civic welfare extends to the community where she is Captain of her area for the March of Dimes and the Cancer drive.

Mrs. Cliff states that Fort Bliss, Texas, was her favorite overseas assignment. Small posts mean warm and congenial people in an informal and friendly atmosphere to many people, Mrs. Cliff being one of them.

As her favorite overseas assignment, she easily chose Munich, Germany. "Being in the heart of Bavaria is in itself an unforgettable experience," states Mrs. Cliff. While in Munich, she and her family often traveled to Garmisch to enjoy the wonderful German food. The Cliffs were also stationed in Hielbronn, where Mrs. Cliff was in charge of the post nursery. It was from the Hielbronn NCO Wives Club that she was chosen as a delegate to attend the American Association of Women Activities in Germany. American women came from all over Germany to attend this conference.

Leisure hours find Mrs. Cliff participating in bowling leagues, swimming and working in her garden.

She, and husband, 1st Sgt. Wayne D. Cliff, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, and daughter, Thersia Joan, reside in Columbus.

Signs of the ROAD; A Series

Division Medics 100 Per Cent Mobile

By George Aubin

"We have what we think is the finest medical battalion in the United States Army. Morale is high and espirit de corps is evident everywhere."

These were the words of Capt. Dan S. Murrell, executive officer, speaking about his unit, the 2nd Medical Battalion. The battalion, which traces its origin back to 1894 and has the only medical platoon in the Army to win a battle streamer, was recently streamlined under the Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Jack D. Wallace, the 2nd Medical Battalion underwent two major changes during the current reorganization, both structural.

The battalion's basic structure is comprised of a Headquarters and Support Company, three medical companies and has an authorized strength of 40 officers and 349 enlisted men. It is capable of receiving, sorting and providing temporary medical and surgical care for personnel of the division.

It can evacuate casualties from unit medical installations, give ambulance support to organic or attached units of the division that are without ambulances and provide emergency dental service and limited psychiatric treatment. In addition, it provides medical supply and second echelon medical equipment maintenance for units of the division.

Now, with the basic structure outlined, changes follow. The first concerns the battalion's Headquarters and Support Company. Previously, the old Headquarters and Headquarters Company had provided the "housekeeping" for the battalion and had been composed of the battalion headquarters and a headquarters company. Under ROAD, the new Headquarters and Support Company is made up of a battalion headquarters and a support company, which is nothing more than a fourth medical company. With this new structure,

The second major change under the ROAD concept concerns the foundation of the medical battalion, the medical company. The 2nd Medical Battalion has three medical companies, each assigned to one of the division's three brigades. Each company, in turn, is made up of a company headquarters, an ambulance platoon and a clearing platoon. Under the old system, the battalion had an ambulance company and a clearing company, each working independently of the other. That is, the ambulances were sent out with no specific clearing station to bring their casualties to. Under ROAD, each ambulance platoon has a clearance platoon to which it is attached and to which it brings its casualties.

"With the addition of the changes brought about by ROAD, the battalion has improved flexibility and mobility to the extent that we can tailor the structure of the battalion for either conventional or nuclear warfare and we are 100 per cent mobile," commented Capt. Murrell.

In peacetime, it provides the division with many facilities. Its doctors are assigned to Martin Army Hospital. It provides dentists and personnel for the dental clinic and maintains a five-man neuropsychiatric team. In addition, each medical company in the battalion maintains a dispensary.

To see how the battalion functions during time of war, perhaps it would be best to place ourselves in the position of a front-line casualty. When a man is hit on the battlefield, he is picked up by aide men and litterbearers and taken back to a company collecting point where he is treated for superficial wounds. If his wounds are serious enough, he is moved back to a battalion aide station where he is seen for the first time by a doctor. The battlion aide station has the equipment necessary to perform minor surgery. If further aide is needed, in support of brigade, the medical company evacuates the casualty back to the division clearing area. Here at the division area, air evacuation procedures are started. From division, the casualty is evacuated back to Corps or Army field hospitals. At each station, the amount and intensity of treatment increases. "Treat the patient as far forward as you can so that you have a minimum of loss of personnel for duty," said Capt. Murrell.

Coming

Next week the 2nd Division's 2nd administration company will be featured on this special Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) page of The Bayonet. This Company recently reorganized under the ROAD concept, handles the division's personnel records. It is the largest company in the division.

Artist Gillespie Is Busy at Benning

By 1st Brigade PIO

Among the versatile individuals found in the Headquarters Company of the 1st Brigade, one diverse soldier named PFC Robert Gillespie was recently discovered by the other men of his unit to be quite the accomplished artist.

VALUABLE ARTIST
PFC R. Gillespie

To begin at the beginning, PFC Gillespie was born in Birmingham, Ala. in 1938. He attended Holman Grammar School there, and later was graduated from Woodlawn High School, where he became highly interested in the field of art. Having compiled an excellent grade in art at Woodlawn, he enrolled at the Atlanta Art College where he majored in a course of Arts and Advertising for three years. Still interested in gaining more knowledge in this field he continued work at Georgia Tech.

After graduation, PFC Gillespie went to work as a promotion and advertising manager for a building firm in Tampa, Fla. Shortly thereafter he received his draft call.

In 1961, he took basic training with Company L, 398th Regiment of the 100th Division. After basic he was assigned to Company D, 3rd Training Regiment, 3rd Battalion, for advanced Individual Training with the automatic rifle.

PFC Gillespie was then sent to Fort Benning, June 1962, where he was assigned to Company D, 1st Infantry as an automatic rifleman.

At Company D, PFC Gillespie got his first chance to display his talent when the company commander (then Capt. Robert Sanabria) decided to redecorate the day room. This bold experiment was then carried out by Gillespie aided by PFC Fred Friar. Both men were given the opportunity to express their talents. The result was a bit baffling to one not cued on non-objective art, but nevertheless it created a cheerful and relaxing atmosphere which was appreciated by all.

PFC Gillespie is an artist of some standing in his native Atlanta. Despite his young age, Gillespie works are collected throughout the country. He also has done art work for several well known advertising and greeting card firms.

Last December, PFC Gillespie was assigned to the S-3 Section of the then inactivated 1st Infantry as an assistant operations specialists. After the reactivation of the 1st Infantry, Pfc Gillespie remained at the same job. Here he has done work for Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Brigade commander, plus various assignments throughout the entire brigade as an artist.

When not on duty, PFC Gillespie has done painting for the scenery and props used in the Columbus Little Theater production of "Guys and Dolls".

A "jack-of-all - trades" in the field of art, PFC Gillespie specialized in portraits and he is a member of the Artist Association Incorporated, Art Gallery, in Atlanta, of which he is a part owner.

With the reforming building up of the 1st Brigade, PFC Gillespie will put his artistic mind to work again renovating the dayroom of Headquarters Company plus the many other jobs which call for the work of an artist who knows his business and what it takes to satisfy the public eye.

Robert is not the only member of the Gillespie household who has the artistic touch. His wife, Sara, also paints during her spare time.

When asked what his plans for the future would be, PFC Gillespie replied, "I hope to return to school and possibly teach art and sciences in college or to teach private art lessons." PFC Gillespie, PFC Gillespie and his wife, Sara, live in Columbus.

U.S. Team Defeated In Soccer

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The U. S. soccer team, competing in the Conseil Internationale du Sports Militaire Tournament in April, threw a scare into the highly rated United Arab Republic team even though it lost to the UAR by a score of 3-2.

Playing in Stuttgart, Germany, the U. S. team dominated the play throughout the first-half and was leading 2-1 at half-time. This marked the first time that an American team scored more than one point in a CISM soccer match.

The underdog U. S. team produced two outstanding players, goalie Gerald Calder, 4th Infantry Division, and Fred Muehlbauer of Seventh Army. Calder received high praise from soccer experts for his brilliant saves and Muehlbauer scored three of the four points made by the U.S. in four games played in Stuttgart.

More than 12,000 spectators watched the CISM games. The U. S. lost two games to Greece 3-1 and 1-0, and two to the UAR, 3-1 and 3-2.

Bowling Team Places 2nd In Third Army Tourney

Fort Benning's bowling team made a desperate bid to overcome the "Screaming Eagles" from Fort Campbell in the Third U. S. Army Bowling Tournament at Fort Rucker last week, but fell shy by 9 pins and had to settle for the runner-up spot.

Col. Melvin McDuff, deputy commander of Fort Rucker, got things under way with a strike as the three-day tournament commenced with 12 teams competing.

Fort Benning jumped off to a poor start in the first three-game series, failing to fifth place, 201 pins behind the pace-setting Fort McPherson team. The following day, Fort Campbell took the lead while the Doughboys drew into fourth place 205 pins off the pace.

The final three-game series saw the Benning club turn red hot as Mike Christie and Gene Rogers turned in two 660-game series to pull Benning into second place. For a while it looked as if the Doughboys would overtake the Kentucky club, but Elliot Taft saved the tournament for Fort Campbell, turning in a final series of 604.

Mike Christie of Infantry Center Troop Command took the "All-Events" title with a 15-game average of 17.8 Mike was tops in team scoring and high man in the tournament's individual three-game series. Bill Story and Dick Abraham of Benning placed fifth in the doubles event with a combined score of 1079.

Connie Jo Pavey Wins 11 Ribbons On Her Palomino

Horse show fans in the Chattahoochee Valley area are becoming accustomed to seeing a young Fort Benning girl atop a palomino horse named "Golden Aristocrat" winning ribbons and trophies.

At the second annual Pine Mountain, Ga., horse show held May 5, Connie Jo Pavey, 12-year old daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Robert E. Pavey of The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department took first place in the palomino class and first place in the parade horse class.

So far this season, Connie Jo and her horse have taken home 11 ribbons and two trophies, and have completed in only five shows.

Connie Jo has only been riding in open horse show competition for two years. This is the three-year-old Golden Aristocrat's first season of showing.

Her success is further attested to by the fact that she competes against top adult riders from Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Competing in horse shows in the Pavey family isn't restricted to Connie Jo. She has a younger sister, Karen Lynn, age 10, who rides and shows her registered palomino, "King Shalimar." Despite her youth and even though this is her first year of competition, Karen Lynn has managed to bring home a number of ribbons.

Navy Hunts Sea Bottom In New Sub

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AFPS)— A unique vessel is being constructed here that will enable the Navy to search the ocean bottom at all but the deepest depths.

If the vessel —the Aluminaut—were in commission today, it would be capable of seeking out and finding the wreckage of the atomic submarine Thresher even at the hull-crushing mile and a half depth where it apparently lies.

The Aluminaut, due to be launched in May, 1964, is the world's first all - aluminum-hulled submarine.

She is being built to withstand a pressure of 60,000 pounds per square inch and to operate at 15,000-foot depths. Her vertical propeller would permit her to hover at any depth.

The vessel will have a range of about 80 miles, a cruising speed of nearly four knots and a submergible time of 72 hours.

Her great advantage over bathyscaphs, such as the Trieste, is that she is maneuverable, and is a true submarine rather than an advanced diving bell.

Duty, Honor, Country March Is Premiered

"Duty, Honor, Country" — the motto of the West Point cadet and theme of General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's speech to the Cadet Corps last May, has inspired a musical composition that pays tribute to the general and the code of conduct to which he so strongly subscribes and recommends.

The Army Band and Chorus presented the premiere performance of Duty, Honor, Country at a tribute to Gen. MacArthur by the Chamber of Commerce at its recent National Convention. A narration that included excerpts from the general's speech of May 12 was performed by singing star Dennis Morgan.

An additional honor was paid to the leader of the Pacific Forces of WWII when retired Adm. Arleigh Burke accepted for Gen. MacArthur a bronze plaque noting his services to the country. The plaque will be presented to the U. S. Military Academy at a later date.

In a short acceptance speech, Admiral Burke spoke of his high esteem and respect for General MacArthur as a military leader, referring to him as one of this country's greatest soldiers and emphasized that in addition to his military accomplishments, Douglas MacArthur ranks among the truly "Great Americans" for his many other contributions to his country and fellow man.

The admiral also noted Gen. MacArthur's leadership and statesmanship that resulted in the recovery of a defeated nation, Japan, and the reestablishment of good relations between that country and the United States.

Two Oklahoma men, Ralph Blane and Morris Billington, and a Hollywood composer, Leo Arnaud, collaborated in the writing and orchestration of Duty, Honor, Country which has been recorded for future world-wide presentation over Armed Forces Radio Service.

Army Checks Flying Studio For Psy-War

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has begun a 60 day test of an air-transportable broadcasting system which will give psychological warfare units a highly mobile radio studio and transmitter combination comparable to many large commercial radio stations.

The entire system can be transported by helicopters and cargo planes to any zone of operations. Special packing, plus streamlined loading and unloading procedures are expected to assure fast delivery and assembly when the station must be in operation within a few hours after reaching its destination.

A central radio studio and two 50,000 watt transmitters make up this "flying radio city" which includes a receiver monitoring facility and keying link facilities. The various items of equipment such as generators, large fuel tanks, teletypewriter equipment, transmitters and studio facilities are designed to fit into standard Army communication shelters fitting the bed of a 2½ ton truck. The shelters serve both as airlift containers and operating shelters.

Tankers Score Well in Annual Firing Exercise

The 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, again registered a near perfect record at Fort Stewart, Ga., during the second half of its annual battalion service firing.

This time elements of the battalion which did not participate in December's service firing exercise tracked off to Fort Stewart for the two-week training period.

The top crew turned in a score of 1900 points, just 100 points under the maximum. The members of the first-place crew were Lt. Cletis Richardson, tank commander and 3rd Platoon leader of Company A, and tank gunner Sgt. Thomas F. Ungles.

For the individual service firing course the battalion now has a total of 230 persons qualified.

The battalion maintained its perfect safety record at Fort Stewart while undergoing the service firing exercise.

The 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade recently held a banquet honoring five of its members who "brought home" 18 individual and team awards during The Infantry Center Rifle and Pistol Matches.

Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 10th Artillery commander, presented the five with individual awards for achievement and sportsmanship.

Winners were SSgt. Roger Fletcher and Sgt. Carl White Jr. of Battery B, PFC Lonny Mitchell and Sp4 Willie Tripp of Battery A and 1st Lt. Charles F. Harper, officer-in-charge of battalion team members.

Korea Vets' Insurance To Change

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Korean Conflict veterans holding "RS" insurance policies have until September 13 to take advantage of a special insurance dividend to be paid to those who convert their RS policies bearing a "W" prefix.

About 165,000 veterans are eligible for this dividend which applies only to those whose policy numbers are preceded by the "RS."

Two actions are open to the veteran who wishes to qualify for the dividend: He can exchange his "RS" insurance for a "W" term policy at about only one-third of what he is now paying in premiums. Although this type of term insurance is not renewable after the insured reaches age 50, it can be converted to a low-cost permanent insurance at any time while it is in force. The second plan is to convert the RS policy to a permanent plan insurance policy immediately.

If the "RS" policyholder takes either of these actions on or before the September 13 deadline, he will receive his special dividend. These dividends have been averaging approximately $100 depending upon the age of the insured and how long he has held his policy.

'Flying' Boat To Be Tested

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Navy is preparing to test its first large water-skimming vessel—a six-man boat that flies—using the "captured air bubble" principle.

Called the SKMR-1, the 52-foot vehicle design is expected to lead eventually to a hydro-skimmer ship as long as a destroyer but with twice the beam, capable of twice a destroyer's range at maximum speed.

Progress has been reported on a design for a 100-ton ship that will cruise along—one foot above the water—at up to 120 miles mph, with 159 passengers or 40 tons of cargo.

These developments were reported at a joint meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers and the American Society of Naval Engineers.

Capt. R. E. Stark of the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and Lt. J. R. Gauthey, Hydroskimmer project officer, said that after testing on Lake Erie, the air-cushioned SKMR-1 will be taken to Chesapeake Bay to demonstrate its possible military applications.

The SKMR-1 is expected to ride an air cushion provided by four fans pumping downward into four compartments or main flotation boxes.

Forward propulsion will be provided by two large propellers mounted in ducts on top of the rear part of the vessel.

In order to save weight, the basic structural material is aluminum, the superstructure is of fiberglass, and the deck is an aluminum-faced sandwich with a balsa core.

Full Scale Disaster Rehearsal Is Staged at Hospital

A full scale "disaster" rehearsal was staged recently at Martin Army Hospital.

The two-hour problem was made realistic by using "moulages" to simulate injuries, as cherwise hale and hearty members of the 428th Medical Battalion were rushed to the hospital by ambulance to represent casualties in a mock tornado.

The "patients" were received in the clinic waiting room where five teams were stationed to analyze casualties administer any necessary life-saving emergency treatment and route them to the appropriate ward.

The mock tornado was planned to test the hospital's ability to respond to such an emergency as fire, manmade or natural disaster or an enemy attack.

The situation called for weather alerts.

The first mock alert, a "Blue Warning," was received by Col. William A. Todd Jr., commander of the hospital, at 1:30 p.m.

The warning alerted the hospital to the possibility of tornado activity in the Fort Benning area.

The second mock alert was a "Black Warning" at 8 a.m. the next day. The warning told of a simulated tornado 20 miles southeast of the post at an altitude of 6,000 feet.

"While this tornado is not moving in the direction of Fort Benning, atmospheric conditions are still very favorable for tornado activity," the warning read.

At 8:35 a.m., the expected report came. For the sake of the rehearsal, it was assumed that a tornado had struck the troop housing area at 8:30 p.m., causing "many casualties" and considerable damage to facilities by wind and torrential rain."

The report esitmated 100 casualties "of varying degrees of severity." "The first casualties are expected to arrive at Martin Army Hospital at 0900 hours," the report concluded.

The volunteer "casualties" from the 428th, wearing "makeup" to indicate the nature of the assumed injury, were transported to the hospital in ambulances of the 698th Ambulance Company.

Military police from The Infantry Center Provost Marshal Section were on duty to direct traffic in the unloading area of the hospital.

As each "casualty" entered the waiting room, a sorting team took over. If the injury indicated the necessity for life-saving measures, treatment was given by the team. Otherwise, the "patient" was sent to the appropriate ward for treatment.

In the wards, doctors diagnosed the simulated injuries, tagged the "patients" to indicate the nature of the case, and prescribed appropriate treatment.

The rehearsal familiarized members of the hospital staff with emergency operation plans and individual responsibilities under the plan.

Project officer for the rehearsal was Lt. Col. F. D. Godwin, hospital plans officer.

386 Receive Silver Wings Of Airborne

Parachutist Badges were awarded to 386 servicemen May 3 at the graduation of The Infantry School's 35th basic airborne class of the 1963 fiscal year.

Honor graduate of the four-week course was 2nd Lt. Richard F. Rockwell.

Lt. Rockwell was presented the badge by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr. Gen. Reynolds, who was the guest speaker, was making one of his last official appearances as assistant commandant of The Infantry School. He left the post Tuesday.

In addition to Lt. Rockwell, the class included 46 Army officers and 322 enlisted men, two Air Force officers and nine enlisted men, four Marine Corps enlisted men, and an officer and enlisted man from Colombia.

Four of the Army graduates were the sons of former military parachutists.

NEW EXEC

First Lt. Thomas H. White has assumed the duties of Executive Officer of Headquarters and Service Company, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. He has just returned from Europe, where he served with the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry.

Post Employes Should Carry Medical Data

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Civilian employees should carry emergency medical data on their persons at work and during all hours away from the job, according to the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Health and Medical).

As a minimum, it is recommended that employees carry an identification tag or card showing their name, address, next of kin or person to be notified in an emergency, blood type and list of medicines to which they are allergic.

Such information will help insure that proper treatment, in the absence of an adequate medical history, is given by those administering first aid. This is especially important where the victim of an accident may have lost consciousness.

M79 Grenade Launcher Tactics Covered in INFANTRY Magazine

The tactical employment of one of the Army's newest weapon, the M79 grenade launcher, is outlined in the May-June issue of INFANTRY Magazine.

The M79 article, written by Lt. Col. William Guina, complements the article on the characteristics and capabilities of the weapon which appeared in the March-April issue of the magazine.

The difficulties encountered by the 2nd Infantry Division in changing from ROCID to the ROAD concept are detailed in an article by Lt. Col. (Ret.) Frank Rathbun. Col. Rathbun interviewed the 2nd's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and a number of unit commanders to get an accurate picture of some of the pitfalls presented by the organizational change.

Smooth-working communications in the new ROAD division are the subject of a provocative discussion by the signal officer of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized), Lt. Col. Charles Bachtel, organizer of the 5th's signal battalion, draws on years of communications experience to detail the set-up of ROAD communications.

"Parachuting From Army Aircraft," by Capt. Fred Berry of the Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department, covers the methods soldiers must use in jumping from all varieties of Army aircraft, fixed wing and rotary wing alike. Charts and diagrams covering jump data for these aircraft illustrate the article.

Upcoming in INFANTRY's July-August issue will be a revised and expanded pocket-sized "Infantry Leader's Handbook" containing a wealth of practical information and tips for all small unit leaders.

One handbook is free to subscribers. Handbooks will be available for 25 cents (plus postage) to non-subscribers about July 15.

Local Scout Leader Gets 25-Year Award

A Fort Benning soldier has been honored by the National Council of Boy Scouts of America for 25 years of service.

Sp5 James O. Stroud, Boy Scout coordinator of the Youth Activities Club (YAC), received a 25-year Veterans Award for his service as a Boy Scout and as an adult Scout leader.

Joseph A. Brunton Jr., chief Scout executive, said in a letter, ". . .I have a deep personal feeling of kinship with the increasing number of devoted men who have courageously and consistently been a part of building our movement. All of us have many memories of highlighted experiences back over these years, which in a sense serve as milestones.

"The fact that you are now a 25-year veteran in the Boy Scout movement is in itself a significant milestone.

"Doubtless, you have a deep feeling of satisfaction because you have seen boys grow into young men, their lives strengthened and enriched by Scouting experiences which you helped make possible. I know you will do all in your power to maintain Scouting as a strong and important influence in our beloved country."

Stroud became active in Scouting in his hometown of Althus, Okla., with Troop 177 in 1937. Since 1946, he has served as an adult leader. He is a Life Scout and a brotherhood member of the Order of the Arrow. Stroud holds the Arrowhead and Scouter Awards and Scouter Key.

He has served as neighborhood, area, assistant district and district commissioner in the Georgia - Alabama council. Presently, he is commissioner for the South Columbus area.

While stationed at Okinawa, Stroud was a scoutmaster for the American Scouts and helped organize an Okinawan Boy Scout troop. In Germany, he served as commissioner for the Trans-Atlantic Council in the VII Army Corps area.

Stroud is proud of his Scouting experience and of the Boy Scout program.

He said, "I've had ample opportunity to realize the importance of Scouting in molding the nation's youth into well adjusted citizens, mentally and physically."

He pointed out that Scouting serves as one of the most binding community projects and curtails juvenile delinquency.

Sp5 and Mrs. Stroud have a 17-year-old son, Ronnie, a student at Columbus High School and an active Scout.

The Stroud family resides at 4334 Evans St., Columbus. They are members of the Antioch Baptist Church where Stroud is a Sunday School teacher, training leader for the intermediate pupils, and church choir director.

SFC David Dunsmoor wrapped up the 16-yard event Saturday with a 98 total. First handicap went to Sp4 John Brizendine with a 98.

Sgt. Dunsmoor was the handicap champion on Thursday's 16-yard shoot with a 93.

Last week the trap team is competing in the Louisiana State Trap Shoot at Barksdale AFB, La.

JUNGLE FIGHTERS

In World War II, the 1st Infantry was selected for the rugged jungle fighting in the Pacific. On June 6, 1944, when national attention was focused on the Normandy landings, an equally important beachhead was established in the jungles of New Guinea by elements of the Second Division's 1st Infantry. Actually, the 1st Infantry became a part of the Second Division in 1958.

Artillery Set for TV Appearance

Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion (Composite) 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, and Capt. William Trent, commander of Battery A, will appear on the "What Makes Our Country Great" segement of the WRBL-TV Rozell Show Monday.

Col. McClain will act as moderator while Capt. Trent will narrate a film showing the functions of the salute section of Battery A.

11th's Organization Day

talion; and Troop B, 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry.

The next marching unit was an attached unit, the 10th Air Transport Brigade, commanded by Col. Delbert L. Bristol. The unit was led by Lt. Col. Harvey D. Hawley, commanding officer of the 37th Air Transport Battalion. Brigade units were: the 187th Airplane Company; the 188th Helicopter Company; the 478th Flying Crane Company; and Company A, 170th Transportation Battalion.

Looking not at all like his contergener of yesterday, the modern Army mule, a mechanized light weapons carrier, brought up the rear of the ground units.

Leading a fly-by of division aircraft was Col. George P. Seneff, Aviation Group commander. The fly-by consisted of 7 OH-13 Sioux helicopters, 12 UH-1 Iroquois helicopters, 6 CH-34 Choctaw helicopters, 3 CH-37 Mojave helicopters, 3 OV-2 Caribou aircraft and 3 OV-1 Mohawk aircraft.

The Mohawks gave the crowd a thrill when they came in at full throttle trailing colored smoke and swooped up directly in front of the reviewing stand, peeling off to the left and the right.

A typical division mission of seizing, securing, and holding an airfield deep within enemy territory was enacted in the afternoon before an audience of more than 1,500 persons.

The first action occurred when a Mohawk sneaked over to reconnoiter the area and pick out a likely looking site for a field. After making the selection, a Caribou was next on the scene and dropped a Pathfinder team whose dangerous job includes marking the field, clearing it where needed to give the planes adequate landing and take - off space, and securing it against the enemy.

Two armed Sioux helicopters came streaking to the aid of the Pathfinders. Looking like a couple of dragon flies darting in and out, down and up, the two choppers covered for one another as they raked the woodline with murderous fire.

The spectators were then treated to the sight of a Mohawk and a Caribou coming in on the field and making a minimum distance landing and take-off. The fast Mohawk by using reverse pitch propellers can land in less than 800 feet and the Caribou with its slower speed can land in less than 700 feet.

Next to arrive on the scene was a Choctaw carrying a 500-gallon gasoline container in an external sling. It refueled the two Sioux and soon had them back in the fray, protecting the Pathfinders.

The hard-pressed Pathfinders were soon reinforced by troops brought in by three Iroquois. One of them landed its load of troops on a mockup of a building in a simulated rooftop attack.

More troops arrived shortly in a Mojave. This helicopter carried a full platoon of troops. Another Mojave zipped in on the heels of the first and delivered a jeep with mounted machine gun which sped immediately into the battle.

Troops were landed in an "inaccessible" area of the dense woods by means of rappelling. Four men of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, made the perilous slide down their ropes from a helicopter hovering 110 feet above the ground.

Climaxing the demonstration was a jump from 7,000 feet by eight sky divers of The Infantry Center's Airborne Air Mobility Department. With their colorful chutes and trailing smoke, they were an awe-inspiring sight. The first man down landed directly in front of the reviewing stand.

Persons who attended the day's events have no doubt that the division intends to fulfill the prophesy made by Gen. Kinnard when he said, "We propose to make our future a bright one and to make a significant contribution to the modern Army."

Armed Forces Will Take Salute During Parade in Columbus Today

Downtown Columbus will be the scene of a massive Armed Forces Day Parade at 4 p.m. today, featuring Medal of Honor recipients, elements of post units, local dignitaries, service related organizations, bands and ROTC units.

Sponsored by the Military Order of World Wars, the parade will carry out the theme, "Power for Peace."

The parade will form on Fourth Avenue between Ninth and 13th Streets; move west on 13th Street to Broadway; proceed south on the west side of Broadway and return to Fourth Avenue by way of Ninth Street for marching elements and Fifth Street for mounted elements.

At the reviewing stand at Broadway and 12th Street, The Infantry Center Band will play a 30-minute concert from 3:30-4 p.m. The band will also appear in the parade.

Two narrators will be stationed at the reviewing stand to describe the parade and identify participants as they pass the reviewing stand. Sp4 Lance Moran, a member of The Infantry Center Information Office staff, will narrate the Fort Benning portion of the parade, while Peter Cole, news director of WTVM-TV will describe the parade's civilian elements.

In addition to the descriptions provided by the narrators, all weapons and military vehicles will be identified by large placards for the benefit of civilian viewers.

Three Medal of Honor recipients will receive a place of prominence in the parade, preceded only by the parade marshall.

The Medal of Honor recipients include Lt. Col. Robert R. Nett, former chairman of The Infantry School Ranger Department Platoon Tactics Committee, who is now assigned to Viet Nam; Maj. Edward R. Schowalter Jr., an instructor on the Leadership Committee of the school's Company Operations Department, and Maj. (Ret.) Charles L. McGaha of Columbus.

Leading the parade will be Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Philip E. Gallagher, parade marshall and outgoing commander of the Military Order of World Wars.

Commander of troops will be Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding of the 2nd Infantry Division.

At the reviewing stand, Lt. Col. (Ret.) John Nilan, new commander of the Military Order of World Wars, will be master of ceremonies. He will present Steve Knight, mayor of Columbus, who will welcome the visitors.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will reply to Mayor Knight's welcome address.

Chairman of the parade committee is Col. (Ret.) Nelson L. Fooks of Columbus.

Project officers include Maj. George R. Henderson for The Infantry Center; Maj. Robert E. Pardee for the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), and Capt. R. T. Conkel for the 2nd Infantry Division.

Infantry Center units participating in the parade, in addition to the band, will include an honor guard, formed by Company C, 1st Battalion 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade; 29th Infantry Drill Team; 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon and the WAC Detachment.

The 11th Air Assault Division will furnish a company-size unit.

Second Infantry Division participants will include, in addition to the commander of troops and his staff, the 2nd Division Band; the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry; 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry; 2nd Division Artillery (Composite); and elements of the Support and Transportation Battalion; 2nd Medical Battalion; 702nd

Airborne Vet Makes 1,253 Jumps, Earns Gold Wings

An Infantry Officer Candidate School student has become the fourth man in the history of sport parachuting to be awarded the Gold Expert Parachutist Badge of the Parachute Club of America.

SSgt. Danny Byard, a 27-year-old member of 53rd Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, was presented the award by Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., former assistant commandant of The Infantry School, also a military parachutist.

In order to qualify for the honor, Sgt. Byard made 1,000 free-fall jumps. A 1953 graduate of The Infantry School's airborne course, he has made 253 more free-fall since reaching the 1,000 mark in May, 1962.

His free-fall total is in addition to his 82 static - line military jumps.

The lion's share of the free falls was made while Sgt. Byard was a member of a six-man Army team exploring the possibilities and advantages of free-fall techniques for guerilla warfare activities, and later as a member of the U. S. Parachute Team competing in world events.

He joined the Army in January, 1953, taking his basic training at Fort Bliss, Tex., and Fort Rucker, Ala. From the Alabama post he came here for the basic airborne course. After receiving the Parachutist Badge, the officer candidate was assigned to The Infantry School's Airborne Air Mobility Department as a parachute rigger.

To prepare him for this job, he attended the parachute packing and aerial delivery course at Fort Lee, Va.

In October, 1954, Byard was assigned to a small Special Forces detachment in Korea. He stayed there for 16 months and was then assigned to Fort Bragg, N. C., as a member of the 77th Special Forces Group.

It was while at this assignment that Byard volunteered for the Army free-fall test team.

The Army hoped the free-fall technique, which provides for accuracy through body control while executing high altitude, low opening drops, would insure secrecy for personnel dropping behind enemy lines.

Bayard answered the call and was one of six chosen. The candidates underwent six weeks of intensive training and tests in free falling. At the end of the trials, the Army was convinced of the value of the project, and in March, 1958, the concept was officially approved for use by the Army.

The HALO (High Altitude Low Opening) School at Fort Bragg's Special Warfare Center now teaches this type of jumping to counter - guerrilla forces.

In 1958 Byard, along with other members of the Army team was sent to the tryouts for the U. S. Parachute Team to compete in the Fourth World Championship Parachute Meet, and earned a berth on the team. The U. S. finished eighth that year.

The following year, Bayard was on the five - man U. S. team which finished second at the Adriatic Cup World Championship in Yugoslavia.

In May, 1960, Byard and his teammates broke the high - altitude free - fall record and completed the world's first successful six - man baton pass. This feat began at an altitude of 30,000 feet.

Missing the 1960 World Championship Meet in Bulgaria because of a leg injury, Byard returned to the team in 1961 in time to help capture first place for the U. S. in the Armed Forces Week Opens With 'Tattoo'

Over 2,000 spectators from the Fort Benning-Columbus-Phenix City area witnessed the fifth annual Massing of the Colors and Searchlight Tattoo which opened "Armed Forces Week" Monday night at Municipal Auditorium in Columbus.

The Jordan "Red Jacket" Band, under the direction of Robert M. Barr, heralded the evening's performance with the Reveille formation and the raising of the National colors, followed by a medley of marching tunes.

An inspiring "Salute to the United Nations", with the massing of the colors of over 34 Allied officer students attending The Infantry School and representing the United Nations, preceeded remarks by Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Philip E. Gallagher, past commander of the Military Order of World Wars.

Gen. Gallagher introduced the assembled United Nations guests to the audience and then presented the guest speaker, Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Gen. Norton requested the audience to rededicate themselves to the colors and to remember the great American heritage which has been passed down over the years.

He reminded the audience that communism is "an implacable adversary which recognizes no god but the god of force, and honors no flag except the flag of despotism.

"All that stands between this adversary and his ugly design for world conquest is the determination of the American people and our Allies," he continued.

"Our nation must remain free and strong regardless of personal sacrifice," he said, emphasizing the Army's role in maintaining the Armed Forces Week slogan "Power Peace."

The Pledge to the Flag, Gen. Norton said, "is a solemn and inspirational act of dedication," which "takes on a special significance in this colorful, impressive performance."

HOUSE OKS MILITARY PAY RAISE BILL

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Senate Armed Services Committee, headed by Senator Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), is now evaluating the Military Pay Bill passed by the House May 8.

Effective date of the pay reise is still likely to be October 1st.

The pay raise would effect 1.8 million servicemen. Not included in the pay raise are those servicemen with less than two years service.

If passed as is by the Senate the pay increases would average 12.6 per cent and would be weighted most heavily for those in the middle grades of both enlisted men and officers.

The reasons for heavy increases in these grades is for retention of skilled personnel.

Major provisions of the House - passed bill would increase the pay of officers and enlisted men a total of $947 million annually, and add $80 million a year to living allowances. Also proposed is an allowance for service personnel who are separated from their families for a long period and who are not housed at government expense.

Also added to the bill was an amendment to provide "hazardous duty" pay to military personnel subject to enemy fire in peacetime. This would cover servicemen in "limited" wars such as in South Viet Nam. This amendment would be made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1961.

The House bill also proposed that military personnel who retired before June 1, 1958, be allowed to recompute their pensions in line with present pay rates under the -958 Pay Act.

BATTALION S-3

Newly assigned as the S-3 officer of 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) is Capt. Lathe B. Row. Captain Row, formerly an instructor with The Infantry School Engineer Committee, succeeds Capt. Pleasant H. West, who was transferred to the 11th Air Assault Division.

'Blue Day' Scheduled Saturday

One hundred thirty-four Infantry officer candidates will acquire senior status in "Blue Day" ceremonies Saturday at 10 a.m. on Gordon Field.

Reviewing officer for the ceremony will be Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

The senior candidates, members of 50th Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, will occupy all other positions in the review, including that of battalion commander. Marching troops will be junior candidates from the 53rd company.

A feature of the review will be a saber drill.

Officer candidate school companies are the only units in the active Army that formalize ceremonies with sabers, keeping alive an old Army tradition, officials said.

During the ceremony a general order will be read, proclaiming 50th Company members as "senior candidates."

DOD Plan Would Increase Pro Pay

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Top Defense officials have agreed on basic revisions to the proficiency pay system, expected to be phased in during Fiscal Year 1964.

Key changes in the new plan are:

Higher rates of pay for designated shortage or "hard to keep" specialties ranging from $50-$100, as compared to the present rates of $30 and $60.

In the designated specialties all career men will be eligible for proficiency pay without taking a pro-pay specialty examination.

Men in other than shortage specialties will be eligible to compete for "superior performance" pay of $25 monthly.

Details of the new pro-pay plan including shortage specialties, rates of pay and specific eligibility criteria are now being developed within the military department.

The new system provides two kinds of pro-pay. One is for men in skills "designated to receive specialty pay." Men in these skills will draw extra pay of $50, $75 or $100 monthly. These payments will be made to qualified career men working in designated skills.

The other kind of pro-pay will be for men designated as superior performers. They will get $25 per month for a 12 month period. Under the new plan, each service may have its own system of awarding the $25 monthly superior performance award.

If the program revisions are on schedule, the first phase of the new pro-pay plan could become effective July 1 according to William Gorham, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) for special studies and requirements.

Mr. Gorham further stated that about 365,000 men are currently receiving proficiency pay. Not all of these men will be eligible under the revised criteria.

Under the new system, ranking of skills which will determine eligibility and the rate of specialty pay will be based on length and cost of training, the reenlistment rate in the skill and other personnel and cost factors.

DOD officials believe that the new system will be considerably more effective as an inducement for men to reenlist in the high cost hard to keep skills.

Army's Top Commanders Issue Messages on Armed Forces Day

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are special messages distributed by Army's top commanders, including President John F. Kenaedy, on the occasion of Armed Forces Day, which will be observed tomorrow.)

President Kennedy

"It is most fitting that we set aside this day — Armed Forces Day — to honor the men and women who serve our country in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

"Today, our servicemen and women are serving throughout the world as guardians of the peace — many of them away from their homes, their friends and their families. They are visible evidence of our determination to meet any threat to the peace with measured strength and high resolve. They are also evidence of a harsh but inescapable truth — that the survival of freedom requires great cost and commitment, and great personal sacrifice.

"It has been said by some that today's struggle for freedom — in South Viet Nam, Berlin, South Korea and other areas — is a "forgotten war." But to those who now serve, and to all of the American people, this battle is neither forgotten nor finished. Indeed, we are very much aware of our commitment, of its gravity, and of the need for continued sacrifice and dedication.

"As we observe Armed Forces Day, I invite all Americans to view and learn more of our Armed Forces and their preparedness to meet the challenges which lie ahead. And as commander-in-chief, I urge all of my countrymen to join me in paying honor to all our servicemen and women on Armed Forces Day, 1963."

JOHN F. KENNEDY
President of the United States

Mr. McNamara

"On Armed Forces Day the Department of Defense will make its annual report to the people on the status of America's "power for peace." We are able to make that report with satisfaction. Though the task can never be said to have been completed, much has been done. Our aim has been simple. It is to develop the force necessary to protect the security of the Nation and to maintain and operate it at the lowest possible cost. We have strengthened both our nuclear and our non-nuclear forces, increasing our military flexibility and adding to the choices open to us in response to any threat, by any hostile force, in any part of the world.

"In compliance with the proclamation of the President, I designate Armed Forces Day as an occasion for all elements of the Department of Defense to conduct and participate in appropriate ceremonies, demonstrations, and displays. I hope that Americans and all those who stand with us in our devotion to freedom will witness and take pride in our strength."

ROBERT S. McNAMARA
Secretary of Defense

Gen. Taylor

"Armed Forces Day this year will be celebrated with a renewed realization of the importance of the contribution of our Armed Services to the security of our country. The Cuban crisis last fall provided impressive evidence of the readiness of our forces to respond rapidly when our national interests are threatened. During this annual observance, our citizens and friends at home and abroad are cordially invited to see at firsthand the evidence of our military strength. Through their exhibitions and displays at posts and bases, our Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines demonstrate how they maintain international security through their ability to apply the amount and kind of force appropriate to the threat.

"We in the Armed Services of our country extend a gracious welcome to all visitors to our installations. Proudly our combined military forces stand ready with the primary purpose of assuring the protection of freedom and human dignity throughout the Free World."

GEN. MAXWELL D. TAYLOR
USA
Chairman
Joint Chiefs of Staff

Mr. Vance

"The United States soldier, the key to our landpower, stands guard over freedom's frontiers around the world. On Armed Forces Day, 1963, we invite our fellow citizens to visit Army activities and observe the immediate readiness of the Army to provide for the safety of the nation whenever and wherever required."

CYRUS R. VANCE
Secretary of the Army

Gen. Wheeler

"The United States Army is the Army of the American people; their strength is our strength; their purpose is our purpose. On Armed Forces Day, 1963, we invite you, our fellow Americans, to visit your Army at its posts, camps and stations. We believe that you will attain from this visit a new confidence in your Nation's strength and purpose; we know that the Army will gain inspiration from your interest."

GEN. EARLE G. WHEELER, USA
Chief of Staff

Gen. Waters

"Each year on Armed Forces Day the men and women of our military services rededicate themselves to the preservation of freedom and continued peace.

"This special day is a fitting occasion on which to demonstrate the adequacy of our equipment, the worth of our training, and our immediate combat readiness. It is a time when the American people are afforded an opportunity to see first hand how their Army accomplishes its vital mission and contributes to the Nation's defense.

"Thus, it is a particular pleasure for me to recognize and pay a grateful tribute to the essential role that every member of this command — military and civilian — plays in our overall national defense establishment."

Armed Forces Day... Time for Reappraisal

With Armed Forces Day — the third Saturday in May — tomorrow, it is fitting that we, the people to whom it is dedicated, take a reappraising look at ourselves to make sure we deserve the honor.

The conclusion should be decidedly in the affirmative. We who wear our country's uniform aren't in the habit of strutting and bragging about ourselves. Most of us go about our jobs quietly and conscientiously, endeavoring to live up to the respect and trust that the American public has in us.

This holds true for the American servicemen in the Republic of Viet Nam serving as advisors. As you read this, one of your fellow servicemen will more than likely be accompanying a patrol trying to rout a group of the Communist Viet Cong. He may not return — yet he carries out his mission to the best of his ability. Is there any question that he rates a salute?

When news of the Cuban crisis broke last fall, the nation experienced mass shock. How could anything like this happen so close to the United States? What could we do?

The answers to these questions are now history. In fact, U.S. forces had been deployed before the news broke. The Armed Forces were ready with their Power for Peace. The show of military force by the United States has been accredited with curtailing Soviet nuclear aggression in the Western Hemisphere. The missile bases in Cuba were removed — thanks to a great U.S. military team.

The men that perished on the ill-fated submarine USS Thresher were a part of this team. They made the supreme sacrifice testing a nuclear submarine to be used in the defense team of the Free World. Their loss was mourned by servicemen throughout the world but their courage and devotion to duty is typical of the U.S. Armed Forces — the best in the world.

Wear your uniform proudly, serviceman. May 18 is your day. (AFPS)

Armed Forces Day Prayer

Almighty God, who hast committed unto Thy people the safeguarding of values and the perpetuation of peace and good will, we pause before Thee in gratitude on this Armed Forces Day, 1963. In full recognition of our responsibilities, we rededicate ourselves as the custodians of this Nation's defenses.

We are cognizant that our task is insurmountable, if we walk alone. In our own strength we can neither prevent a war nor win the peace. But in Thy strength we can experience "Forces in Depth;" we can stand as a bulwark of peace and security; we can be the embodiment of Duty, Honor, Country. We pray, therefore, that Thou will endow us with the ability to take a hard look at our future. Grant us the willingness to be one team; to accept one mission; and to accomplish one objective. With this dedication, we shall fulfill our role as an "Essential Force for Freedom" in both peace and war.

As a Nation, we have accepted the challenge of progress and recognized that it has no visible boundaries. Through the unfolding of heretofore hidden mysteries, man has plummeted into outerspace and returned to give his testimony. In Thine own Divine wisdom Thou has shared with man the ability to build an atomic submarine and penetrate the depths of the great waters. The ancient poet said that these things are "too wonderful for me," yet Thou has revealed them to this generation.

Grant, O God, that this insight, this power and this rededication may enable us to traverse all "walls;" to experience genuine brotherhood; and to live in peace in one world. Amen.

Promotion Will Mean Two-Year Obligation

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Two years in grade will be required before voluntary retirement for persons promoted to the top three enlisted grades, top two warrant officer ranks and officer grades O-5 and O-6 on or after July 1, 1963.

A few exceptions to the rule are included in a new Defense Department Directive which imposes the new time in grade restrictions.

The Directive, Number 1332.-20, excepts those who would be eligible to retire in a grade higher than that in which they are serving. This would include enlisted men entitled to retire as officers and some warrant and commissioned officers.

Other exceptions to the directive would be individual cases where earlier retirement would be in the best interest of the Armed Forces or where a substantial hardship would result. In the case of some officers, where it is considered necessary in the interest of effective management of the officer force, they may retire after serving at least one year in their retirement grade. Except for those retiring in higher grades, each individual action will require specific authorization by the Secretary of the Department concerned.

The directive said that most military personnel who retire voluntarily for non-disability reasons, have served for a reasonable period of time in the grade on which retired pay is based. However, it noted, with an increasing number of promotions going to persons with over 20 years of service the probability increases that recently promoted personnel will request retirement.

"Since promotions are made to fill active duty grade requirements, permission to retire shortly after promotion is not warranted," it stated, "Approval of such requests on other than a hardship basis could imperil the entire spectrum of promotion, pay and retirement."

Tours, Beauty Pageant Will Highlight 'Festival Days'

In all the 125 years of its history, Columbus has very likely never seen a 10 days such as the city is planning for in June.

Festival Days, June 21-30, will include everything from Yuchi Indian ceremonies not performed east of the Mississippi in over a century to the Miss Georgia Beauty Pageant; from a day at Fort Benning, to tours of ante - bellum homes, and from a visit to Franklin D. Roosevelt's Little White House to an outdoor pops concert.

Festival Days will tie the past, present and future of Columbus and its area together in 10 days in which the city will open its historic homes, its industries and other points of interest to visitors. The events are part of the overall "Stay and See Georgia" program sponsored by the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce.

Columbus has been a crossroads of history since long before its founding as a city. The area was a center of Indian civilization before the white man ever saw it. Spaniards maintained a fort and mission there before they were driven from Florida.

Gen. James Edward Oglethorpe, founder of the colony of Georgia, came here to Columbus to treat with the Indians in 1739. The town was created by an act of the legislature and came into being in 1828, and when war broke out in 1861, turned its burgeoning mills over to war production.

Columbus was so important an arsenal for the Confederacy that the last land battle of the War Between the States was fought over its possession. Union troops burned $43 million worth of cotton in its warehouses and on its wharves.

The town has come a long way since that time, but it still retains one of the finest collections of eclectic ante-bellum architecture remaining in in a state famed for its white columns.

Wealthy Columbus planters merchants, lawyers and doctors, in the years from the town's founding until the war broke out in 1861, built handsome homes not only in the classic Greek style so long associated with the pre - war South, but elaborate Italian villas, Gulf Coast houses with lavish use of ornate grillwork, Second Empire mansions with mansard roofs, Georgian houses with classic porticos, and most exotic, octagon houses in the style of Palladio.

Many of these houses will be open during Festival Days on tours to be conducted by the Junior League of Columbus.

The Yuchi Indians, who left their ancestral homeland in 1836, are returning to present their annual Friendship Dance, an ancient ritual performed by them in celebration of the ripening of the corn. This will take place on land in nearby Alabama purchased for the Yuchi tribe by friends in this area.

The industrial tour will include the cotton mills which have grown with Columbus, as well as newer industries.

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will present an outdoor pops concert in one of the city's public parks, and the Columbus Little Theater will entertain visitors with "The Fantasticks," a delightful musical play which has enjoyed great off - Broadway success. This will be given in the auditorium of the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts.

Warm Springs, Ga., where Franklin Delano Roosevelt convalesced from polio and which was the site of his beloved "Little White House," is a short motor trip from Columbus. The Little White House, where he died in 1945, is now an FDR shrine and museum.

Near Warm Springs are the famed Ida Cason Callaway Gardens, with hundreds of acres of plantings of native shrubs, wildflower trails, lakes for swimming, fishing, boating and water skiing, as well as an 18-hole golf course.

One of the major attractions of Festival Days will be the annual Miss Georgia Pageant, held each year in Columbus to pick the state's representative in the Miss America contest. The Miss Georgia Pageant is sponsored by the Columbus Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Nylon Rope Is Chopper-Ground Link at 11th Division

ROPE IS HIS PARACHUTE

CHECKING EQUIPMENT
Sgt. Thomas E. Tokash (R), Adjusts Rappelling Harness. Sp4 Harry Tomsick Assists

By Sgt. Warner Johnson

Have you ever seen a man without a parachute jump from a helicopter hovering 120 feet above the ground? It is happening daily to troops of the newly activated 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

The first unit of the division to start training in this relatively new way of debarking helicopters in Company C, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry. The method is called "rappelling" and makes use of a nylon rope, less than one-half inch in diameter, to support men and equipment on the journey to the ground.

According to Capt. Harry N. Ball, Company C commanding officer, there are three ways to get out of a helicopter. First is to walk off once it has landed. Obviously, to do this the helicopter must be provided with a suitable landing site and clear approaches to it.

The second way is to jump out using a parachute. This is fast since no time is consumed in landing, but the chutes can be spotted miles away and the landing site quickly located.

The rappelling method affords both speed and deception where even helicopters can't land. This versatility epitomizes the activities of the air assault division in its development and testing of the Army's new air-mobile concept.

As the pioneer unit in learning these techniques, the men of Charlie Company have learned to use new equipment such as nylon ropes, sling ropes, snap links and heavy leather gloves.

They have also learned an entirely new vocabulary containing such terms as bight, loop, half-hitch, running end, standing end, lay of the rope, crow hop, grinding hand and breaking hand.

The nylon rope used in rappelling comes in coils of 120 feet. It is a mere seven-sixteenths of an inch in diameter with breaking strength of 3,600 pounds when new. Its great elasticity is valuable as a safety factor.

The snap links are the "lifeline" between the rappelling rope and the sling rope. Connected to the sling rope the rappelling rope passes through the links to the anchor point. Snap links have a breaking strength of 2,000 pounds.

The heat generated by friction will cause the nylon rope to burn if improperly tied. The square knot, round turn with two half-hitches, the bowline and bowline on a bight are the knots most frequently used in rappelling. The bowline knot is the most important. It is used as an anchor knot where constant tension is not maintained.

There are two types of harnesses used in rappelling. The chest method uses two sling ropes. A series of turns is made around the man's chest with one rope and the other rope passes through his legs connecting to the first rope to form a seat.

The Swiss seat method uses only one rope around the man's waist using an overhand knot. The rope is passed between the legs and back around the waist forming a square knot, thus forming a seat. A snap link is then used to connect the harness to the rappelling rope.

Upon completion of training in handling the equipment, the men started training on the 35-foot tower at Kelly Hill. Here they learn to back off and walk down the side of a cliff or a building.

The men later progressed to the 60-foot Ranger tower near Victory Lodge in further preparation for the pay-off jump, a 110-foot descent from a hovering turbine-powered Iroquois helicopter. Officers and key NCOs also travelled to Fort Campbell, Ky., to compare their methods with those of the Recondo School, which teaches a combination of Ranger and airborne training.

Participating in this special instruction were Maj. Abraham N. Sternfeld, S-3 of the 187th Infantry; Capt. Ball, 1st Lt. Donald F. Warren, 2nd Lt. Robert S. Solomon, Sgt. Raymond B. Carswell, Sgt. Luther Gilreath, Sgt. Warner J. Johnson and Sp4 Class Vernon L. Wyatt.

Members of the Recondo School put on a demonstration of four men rappelling from the Iroquois helicopter at the same time. An equipment drop was made to demonstrate the method of unloading ammunition and supplies from a hovering helicopter. This was done by using the same rappelling ropes.

The training phase concluded with each man completing four successful descents from a helicopter. Following this the company has put on a series of demonstrations which include making a mock roof-top attack of a building for the recent visit of Assistant Secretaries of the Army Paul R. Ignatius and Dr. Finn J. Larsen.

Even now the men of Charlie Company are sliding down thin nylon ropes from high over the red earth of Fort Benning as they assist in training other units of the division in the art of rappelling.

Maj. Sternfeld has put into words their ultimate goal. "We are looking forward to making the first mass rappelling exercise in the history of the Army."

National Income Increases in '62

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The U.S. Commerce Department has reported that the average income of the 58 and one-half million families an individuals in the United States totaled $7,140 during 1962.

According to the report about 30 per cent of the group earned incomes between $6,000 and $10,000; 50 per cent brought home pay checks totaling less than $6,000 and 20 per cent had incomes over $10,000.

The total family personal income was $419 billion last year—23 billion more than in 1961.

Clerk-Soldiers Show Training

By George Aubin

The largest company in the 2nd Infantry Division and, quite possibly, the largest company at Fort Benning, took to the field recently to undergo its first annual Army Training Test since its reorganization under the Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Swap Typewriters

The 2nd Administration Company, commanded by Lt. John M. Nickerson, swapped its typewriters and adding machines for M-14 rifles and M-60 machine guns, and headed for a remote area of the Fort Benning reservation. Long renowned as the "Pencil pushers" and strongly suspected of spending most of their time on chairs with coffee cup in hand, the clerks and typists were out to prove they were just as "combat ready" as the rest of the division.

A 2nd Division Special

Rising early last Saturday morning, the men hurriedly ate and drew weapons and gathered in the company assembly area in full battle dress. They were quickly dispatched to trucks supplied by the division's Supply and Transport Battalion and soon found themselves rolling along the reservation's back roads. As in any exercise, rumors were circulated freely and terms such as "ambush" and "gas" were bounced back and forth among the men. A sharp lookout was kept, but the trip proved uneventful and the vehicles reached the dismount point unmolested.

At the dismount point, the various sections were hurriedly dispatched to their assigned areas and soon the ringing of mallets filled the air. Shortly thereafter, tents dotted the landscape where nothing but underbrush had been before.

Now the company got down to the serious business of carrying on their normal activities. The Personnel Services-Division screened and processed personnel records, the Finance section checked pay vouchers, the Replacement section processed replacements, the Adjutant General's section carried out the division's administrative requirements, and the Information section ground out newspaper copy, propaganda and radio bulletins.

Back to Duty

At noon, the sections took time to eat and then went back to their duties. The afternoon's activities were pretty much like the morning's with the sections hard at work. During the course of the afternoon, several small guerrilla attacks were beaten back and one guerrilla was captured and interrogated.

As the day wore on, the pace never let up and as dusk set in, the sections were still at work. With darkness, the frequency of the guerrilla attacks increased.

Outposts ringing the perimeter were manned and the men settled down for the night. No one was to get any sleep, however, as the blackness was shattered by sporadic gunfire. Soon, the company was under full attack by guerrilla forces. The battle continued on through most of the night, finally ending with the rising of the sun and the capture of the guerrilla leader.

At 9 p.m. the exercise was officially ended by the umpires and everyone prepared to head back to garrison. Tents were taken down, supplies loaded and the area cleaned up.

A critique of the exercise was held by Col. Arlin J. Kehe, Support Command commander, and Lt. Col. Richard E. Guthrie, division adjutant general and exercise commander, at which time the mistakes and strengths of the exercise were pointed out.

After the critique, the company returned to the Sand Hill area.

Reorganization

The 2nd Administration Company reorganized early last March along with several other division units. Perhaps the biggest change to take place in the company was the addition of the Adjutant General's Personnel Services-Division. Under the previous system, each of the division's seven major units had their own personnel section to handle the paperwork on the military career and background of the troops in their unit. Under ROAD, the responsibility for maintaining the personnel records was taken from the major units and given to the 2nd Administration Company. seven composite teams, much as they were before, except that now they are under the control of one man, the division adjutant general.

Two other additions to the company were the division's Chaplain section and the Information section.

The Chaplain's section handles the spiritual and moral needs of the division while the Information section handles troop and public information.

Besides the three new sections, the 2nd Admministration Company is made up of a headquarters company, the Inspector General section, the division Finance section, the Staff Judge Advocate section and the Adjutant General section. In keeping with the division's change to mechanization, the Finance and Adjutant General sections are switching over to the use of IBM machines to process personnel and finance records.

The Carbon Monoxide Hazard

Are You Driving Yourself to Death?

Driving an automobile is in itself a great responsibility. However, an awareness of a driver's responsibility for his automobile must be coupled with a knowledge of the potential hazards involved. The problem of carbon monoxide poisoning is one that affects more people than are aware of it.

Take the case of the head-on collision involving two cars, killing six people and seriously injuring one.

Witnesses See

Witnesses standing at the side of the road saw the south-bound vehicle swerving on the roadway as it approached them, as if the driver were falling asleep. They watched the vehicle closely, sensing the oncoming disaster. But they were unable to do anything about it.

As the vehicle approached, it swung across the double white line dividing the highway, and slammed into a north-bound vehicle. In the north-bound vehicle, a man, his wife, and two of his three children were killed. The other child was in serious condition. Both occupants of the other vehcile were killed.

Moments later the police were on the scene and began their investigation, hearing the accounts of witnesses. The officers noticed that the occupants of the south-bound vehicle had pale skin color, yet their lips were unusually red. This indicated carbon monoxide poisoning to them. They then made a careful inspection of the vehicle.

They found a faulty exhaust system; the exhaust pipes from the manifold were rotting and the mufflers were in very bad condition. Medical examinations confirmed that death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide is formed by the incomplete combustion of carbonaceous materials. It is also produced by burning carbon-containing fuel in a deficiency of air or oxygen. Common producers are automobile engines, stoves, furnaces, mine explosions, and burning electrical insulation.

Carbon monoxide poisoning results from breathing atmospheres containing the gas. Because of its ability to combine with the hemoglobin of the blood, forming carbonyl hemoglobin, phosgene blocks off the supply of oxygen to the body and produces asphyxiation. One volume of carbon monoxide in 800 volumes of air kills within 30 minutes. Very small quantities of carbon monoxide are, however, capable of producing fatal results if breathed for a long enough time. The gas is colorless, tasteless, odorless, which makes detection very difficult.

A 30-horsepower engine is estimated as being capable of emitting a cubic foot (28 litres) of carbon monoxide per minute. This is sufficient to render the atmosphere of a single car garage deadly within five minutes if the engine is run while the garage doors are closed.

Death from carbon monoxide does not occur only in the winter, but the serious effects from it are greatly reduced in summer driving. During warm weather, vehicles are usually driven with one or more windows open, allowing proper ventilation throughout the car thus minimizing the danger.

Symptoms

1. Skin pink or pale
2. Lips red
3. Headache
4. Weakness
5. Nausea
6. Fainting
7. Paralysis of nervous system.
8. Slowing of pulse and respiration

Treatment

1. Remove victim to fresh air.
2. Apply artificial respiration.
3. Administration of pure oxygen
4. Stimulation of circulation.
5. Complete relaxation.

Things to Do

1. Have your vehicle checked for carbon monoxide leaks, paying particular attention to the exhaust system.
2. Whenever operating your vehicle be sure to have proper ventilation.
3. Know the symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning.
4. Know the different steps in the treatment of carbon monoxide poisoning and how to apply them.

It must be remembered that the speed with which you handle the situation is of the utmost importance. Carbon monoxide poisoning may cause death or permanent mental deterioration unless treatment is prompt and efficacious.

Gen. Billingslea Speaks Of Armed Forces Day

The Armed Forces of America today are keeping faith with the men who went before them, through great conflict, to preserve the heritage of a nation. And that heritage is liberty and freedom, freedom of families, freedom of homes, liberty to pursue individual convictions. No higher tribute could be paid to the brave of past wars than the willingness of today's soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen to endure similar sacrifices for the same freedom.

On Armed Forces Day it is proper for us not only to honor past achievements but to set our sights on the goals that lie ahead. As a member of the Strategic Army Corps, the 2nd Infantry Division carries a heavy responsibility, sharing in the defense of the United States. In the past the "Indianhead" Division has more than lived up to its commitments. Today it continues those fine traditions of service to the Army and the people of the United States, and I am confident in the future that we will continue to keep our division "Second to None."

'Scholar' Gen. S. Harding Leaving; Parade Saturday

Artillery battalions of the 2nd Division Artillery will mass on Wetherby Field tomorrow to honor a departing former commander, Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant division commander.

Gen. Harding is scheduled to leave for a new assignment in Okinawa next week. His new job will set him up as commanding general of the 30th Artillery Brigade.

More Ceremonies

More ceremonies for the one-star general Monday will be held on the headquarters parade field where the entire division will officially say goodbye and cannons will boom an 11-gun salute.

While at Fort Benning with the "Second to None," Gen. Harding commanded division artillery from July to October 1961, was the DivArty executive officer from October 1961 til March 1962 and then commanded the artillerymen once again until October when he reached general rank and became assistant division commander.

Gen. Harding was born "down east" in Durham, New Hampshire and took a Bachelor of Science degree in mathematics (something valuable for an artillery officer) at the University of New Hampshire. The scholarly general, in addition, boasts a Master of Education degree from the same university and graduate credits from Boston College, Boston University, George Washington University and the University of Pittsburgh.

Teaching in November 1940, Gen. Harding was called to active duty as a first lieutenant of coast artillery. The general's military career has been studded with assignments as an artillery commander, but his academic achievements also received note when the Army in July 1945 appointed him executive academic director of Shrivenham American University in England.

In Security Affairs

Four years of service in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs ended when Gen. Harding received orders for the 2nd Division and command of division artillery.

Monday's farewell review will be followed with a social hour at the Indianhead Lodge for more informal goodbyes by officers and their wives.

At Division Artillery's ceremonies tomorrow, a photograph album packed with pictorial memories of the "Indianhead" Division will be offered to Gen. Harding. The departing general will review his old command with Col. Ralph K. Jones, presently commanding the artillerymen. Lt. Col. Floyd L. Johnson, executive officer of artillery, will be commander of troops for the review.

Refreshments will be served on the field after the review.

Final Reorganization Is Completed As 38th Divides Into Battalions

One of the final moves to reorganize the 2nd Infantry Division took place Friday making this old-line division the first such unit to become what the Army calls really modern.

The Division's 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, recently returned from Europe duty under the Rotaplan unit rotation system, cast off the battle group designation and separated into two battalions. This was accomplished as part of the 2nd's transformation under the Army's Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept of modernization.

Two New Units

The two units created after the inactivation of the old battle group are the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 38th Infantry.

Ceremonies at Wetherby Field on Fort Benning's Sand Hill, saw the unit parade for the last time as a battle group under the command of Col. Maurice C. Holden. Then the old 38th Infantry battle group colors were cased and the units paraded in battalion formation.

Commanding the two new units are two lieutenant colonels. Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, former executive officer of the 38th took command of the 1st Battalion. Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier, former division chief of staff assistant, assumed command of the 2nd Battalion, 38th.

Col. Holden departed the battle group awaiting assignment to The Infantry Center.

The two new battalions are presently assigned to the 3rd Brigade and located in the Sand Hill area. Previously, before moving to Europe for Rotaplan training, this unit was stationed on Fort Benning's Kelley Hill.

Addressing the troops for the reorganization review Friday was Brig. Gen. Stanley L. Harding, assistant division commander.

Unit History

The 38th Infantry was originally organized as part of the 3rd Infantry Division in 1917 and battalions of the 38th distinguished themselves on World War I, World War II and Korea battle fields. An heroic stand at the Marne River in World War I gained the unit its motto, "The Rock of the Marne."

The 38th Infantry first joined the 2nd Division in 1939 and fought through Europe during World War II and in the Korean Conflict with the "Indianhead" 2nd Infantry Division. In 1957, control of the 2nd Division was transferred to Department of Army and the colors of the 38th were cased. When the division was reorganized at Fort Benning in 1958, no battle group was designated as part of the 38th Infantry. However, the colors of the 38th returned to the 2nd Division in February 1962 when the 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry, was redesignated the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry and the 11th went to a unit of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Carson, Colo.

The Rock of the Marne was attached to the 8th Infantry Division and stationed at Baumholder, Germany, for its overseas training which ended in April.

Officer lineup for the two newly formed battalions of the 38th Infantry follows:

1st Battalion, 38th

Commander, Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, former executive officer; executive officer, Capt. Bynum P. Westall, former S-2 officer; S-1 officer, Capt. James W. Grey, former commander of Company E; S-2 officer, Lt. Philip G. Stanage, former radar section leader for Combat Support Company; S-3 officer, Capt. Ralph P. Kennedy Jr., former commander of Company A; S-4 officer, Lt. Armanh E. Malo, former executive officer for Company D; Headquarters Company commander, Capt. James R. Hoover; Company A commander, Lt. Harold W. Darden Jr.; Company B commander, Lt. Phil C. Anderson; Company C commander, Capt. Benjamin P. Owen. Battalion sergeant major is Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway.

2nd Battalion, 38th

Commander, Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier; executive officer, Capt. Bobby G. Evans; S-1 (Adjutant), Lt. Donald B. Read; S-3, Capt. Ronald W. Crooks; S-4, Capt. Frederick A. Rall; battalion sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Ismael Rangel. Company A commander, Lt. John Hitti; Company B commander, Capt. Cecil J. Ramsey, Company C commander, Lt. Roderick C. Martin; Headquarters Company Commander, Capt. Jean A. Sauvageot.

'Snowman' Stages Marne Field Review to Honor Awardees

A miniature review staged by the 2nd Infantry Division last week on the headquarters parade field honored the "Second to None's" award winners.

Brig. Gen. S. L. Harding, assistant commander of the "Indianhead" Division, reviewed the troops assembled for the occasion and presented awards for the monthly enlistment and reenlistment high unit. Best mess halls in the Sand Hill and Kelley Hill areas were also honored.

Division colors were carried at the ceremonies by a color guard supplied by the 2nd Military Police Company. An honor guard wearing crisp khaki uniforms and carrying M-14 rifles was made up of men from the division's 2nd Brigade.

The general public was welcomed to the ceremonies which saw the enlistment and reenlistment plaque accepted for the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry by 1st Sgt. George Hamill. Also in attendance were the commanders, sergeants major and first sergeants of the division's combat forces, including battalions, squadron and separate companies.

Sparked by the drum and bugle music of the "Indianhead" band, the participating troops moved smartly about the field, lined with flags of the 50 states in the United States, and put on a full-fledged, though miniature, review for the spectators and assembled guests.

Sgt. Edgar Jones of Headquarters Company, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion received the best mess award for Sand Hill, and Sgt. Charles Monaghan of Battery A, 15th Artillery accepted honors for the Kelley Hill area.

Snakeman Now With Battery C

By 38th Artillery PIO

A herpetologist is a person who studies snakes and reptiles in general.

Such a man was found recently working for Battery C, 38th Artillery. PFC Bruce Roberts, helping identify snakes recently in the 38th's Army Training Test, has been making a study of snakes since his early days of high school. Before joining the Army, he worked in the Reptile Section of New York City's Bronx Zoo. There he held positions of feeder, handler and laboratory technician.

After his military service plans to go into herpetology as a profession. For the time being, however, he contents himself with finding and handling snakes 38th Artillery soldiers encounter during field training.

Artillery Bn. Wire Sergeant Takes 6

By 17th Artillery PIO

A veteran of 16 years active Army duty has reenlisted at the 2nd Division's 17th Artillery, signing for six more years.

The battalion's wire sergeant, SSgt. James E. Jacobs, was administered the reenlistment oath by Headquarters Battery commander, Capt. James S. Compton.

1st in Arty; 15th Sent For Testing

By 15th Artillery PIO

Spirits were flying high recently in Battery C, 15th Artillery, first 2nd Division Artillery unit to go through Army Training testing since the reorganization of division units.

According to Capt. Aquila E. Stipe, Battery C commander, the battery received a rating of superior on its Army Training Test which followed six weeks of intensive field training at Fort Benning.

In addition to qualifying "Combat Ready" in professional competence, the battery was deemed satisfactory in areas of maintenance, physical fitness, guerrilla warfare and chemical - biological-radiological proficiency.

Battery C is the first 2nd Division Artillery unit chosen this year for the annual testing. Tests of other units will follow.

Officers are Elected At Wives' Club Luncheon

The Supper Club of the MOOM was decorated to look like a spring garden for the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club luncheon held here Tuesday.

Wives of the 2nd Engineer Battalion and the 122nd Signal Battalion co-hostessed the event.

NEW PRESIDENT
Mrs. Edgar Poole

The Decorations Committee, headed by Mrs. Kenneth J. Haveman and Mrs. Frank E. Zipperer, placed wicker May baskets on each table and filled them with tissue carnations in pastel colors. Behind the head table they placed a flowered trellis.

The Sherry Table Committee was chaired by Mrs. Joseph H. Ezell. Mrs. William C. Carter Jr. and Mrs. Gus H. Grisard, wives of the commanding officers of the 2nd Engineer Battalion and the 122nd Signal Battalion, respectively, were the over-all chairmen for the affair.

The feature of the day was an original skit, "Big Indianhead Pow-Wow" written and directed by Mrs. John T. Corley. The husbands of the Thirty-two lady cast were invited to attend the luncheon and see their wives perform. The musical comedy provided very special entertainment for the Wives Club's last luncheon of the year.

After lunch the club's officers for the year were announced. Mrs. Edgar R. Poole was elected as president. Also elected were Mrs. Philip Taft; first vice president; Mrs. William Conger, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Thomson, secretary; and Mrs. Fred Smith, treasurer.

9th Wives Meet; Birth Announced

The officers' wives of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry held their monthly coffee in the C-section of the Supper Club of the Main Officers Open Mess last week.

Mrs. Lloyd Cain and Mrs. William Boyd were hostesses. They had May baskets as nametags for each guest and an arrangement of roses on the table.

The honored guest at the event was Mrs. Lucien Keller. Mrs. Keller and Mrs. Jack Samson were asked to pour.

The group welcomed Mrs. Charles Runkle, Mrs. Jerald Hicks, Mrs. William Spencer, and Mrs. David Compton.

Announcement was made of the birth of a daughter, Tracy Lynn, May 3 at Martin Army Hospital to Lt. and Mrs. Charles Hines. Lt. Hines is the assistant S-3 of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

2nd Aviation Ladies Hold May Coffee In Normandy Room

The ladies of the 2nd Aviation Battalion held their monthly coffee in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess recently.

Hostesses for the morning coffee were Mrs. Ernest Estes and Mrs. William E. Ledgerwood. Mr. E. T. Hamilton poured.

COOK of the WEEK

Everyone at one time or another has made a batch of candy. This is fun to make. Candymaking is undoubtedly one of the most interesting forms of cooking because of its wide scope of variations.

Today candy is a pure delight and when consumed properly is a valuable food. "Divinity" is a favorite of Mrs. Clyde E. Hardin, wife of Sgt. C. E. Hardin, formerly of the 2nd Division and presently assigned in Korea with Troop A, 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, 7th Cavalry. Our Cook of the Week, a member of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, submits her recipe for "Divinity."

How to Make It

Combine corn syrup, water, sugar, salt; bring to boil, stirring. Cook without stirring until small amount of mixture forms a hard ball when dropped in very cold water (250 degrees on candy thermometer.) Remove from heat. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; slowly pour syrup into egg whites, beating constantly until mixture forms peaks and loses its gloss. Stir in vanilla. Drop by tablespoons onto wax paper. Top each mound with walnut half. Makes about 24.

DIVINITY

½ cup light corn syrup
½ cup water
2 cups sugar
¼ tsp salt
2 egg whites
1 tsp. vanilla

when I realized the wonderful value... and the low, low price... and the great big full 32-ounce bottle... and how little it takes to do a big sink of dishes... and the gentleness to hands... and the way it cuts grease and leaves my dishes so sparkling clean... and how nice the green bottle matches my eyes!

MRS. CORLEY'S GRAND FINALE . . . Marching enthusiastically to music played by Mrs. Walter Hibbard, the entire cast of "Indianhead Pow Wow" presented their work Tuesday at the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club May luncheon. The skit, a series of cleverly composed spoofs of division wives activities, was written and choreographed by Mrs. John T. Corley, wife of the assistant division commander. Mrs. Corley also wrote lyrics to songs for the show. She went on to join the ladies on the stage. Stars of the show were approximately 30 wives of 2nd Division officers. In addition to the enthusiastic spirit displayed by the entire cast, memorable performances were given by Mrs. Corley, presiding over two board meetings; Mrs. Lucien F. Keller, gaily exchanging rumors with her "teenage pals" in the telephone sequence; Mrs. John Cochran, trying desperately to help an expectant mother calling the Rota Wives Service Center for help; and the Indian Chorus Line, gaily insisting that they "are Indians too-oo-oo."

23rd Wives Hold Coffee

The first monthly coffee of the enlisted wives of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry was held recently at the Rota Wives Service Center.

The guests were greeted by Mrs. Jessie C. Easterwood, Mrs. Fletcher P. McNight and Mrs. Charles W. Bernatovich, hostesses for the event.

The table was graced with an imported hand-embroidered beige linen cloth with a centerpiece of fresh spring flowers. Mrs. John H. Cochran Jr., was presented with a carnation corsage.

Following a brief business session in which plans for future events were discussed, refreshments of coffee, donuts and cookies were served. The refreshments were furnished by Mrs. John Southern, Mrs. Warren Crissman and Mrs. Russell Aulboch.

Mrs. Komaniecki Hosts 9th Ladies

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry ladies recently held their monthly coffee in Mrs. Raymond Komaniecki's trailer home.

Mrs. Komaniecki served homemade sweets at the coffee attended by battalion ladies.

Distaff Profile

Mrs. Ackermann Realises Dreams

BY JANIE LOWDEN

MRS. ACKERMANN

Mrs. Henry Frank Ackermann is a lady with a wide and interesting background and a person who has been through experiences both harrowing and exciting. Her life in Custer Terrace now is a relatively calm one compared to the one of her past.

She was born Valia Pohorily in 1938 in a suburb of Kiev, Russia. Working in the Russian government, her father, Alexander Pohorily, was required to do a lot of traveling, therefore making it necessary for the family to move from place to place — much as Army life guarantees transfers for its families.

Thus, in 1940, Valia and her parents moved to the city of Tarnopol. Their stay there was a rather short one as the area of Tarnopol was just beginning to feel the effects of the war.

Little did the Pohorilys realize in 1941 when they were leaving Tarnopol to return to Kiev that they were actually beginning a journey across the entirety of Europe — a journey which would finally end in Passaic, N. J.

In order to return to Kiev, they had to cross the Dnieper River. Valia was only about four years old then, so her memories are rather dim, but she can remember her mother telling her later that the river was red with blood and that the telltale signs of war were everywhere.

After crossing the Dnieper, they were taken by the Germans and lived under German control for about a year and a half. Valia's mother and father were young and healthy and the Germans needed them, as well as other young Russian families, to work for the cause of Germany.

Go to Germany

So, in 1943, the Pohorilys were ordered to leave Russia and go to Germany. They were among thousands of other Russian refugees who were traveling across Europe.

When they reached Germany, Valia's mother and father were assigned to work at a railroad station. Working long hours at this job, the Pohorilys were separated from their daughter for the better part of the time.

She was about six years old at the time and old enough to remember spending quite a few frightened moments huddled alone in one of the corners of the dormitory-like building in which they lived, while bombs shattered outside. Now, Valia feels that she probably would have been separated from her parents forever if the following incident had not occurred.

She contracted a rather serious contagious disease and was put into a German hospital. Being young and afraid and ill, the one thing she wanted more than anything else was her mother. Due to the sincere interests of an understanding German doctor, her mother was allowed to come to the hospital and care for her.

Alexander Pohorily had long since realized that he did not want to return to Russia, and by now he had begun to cherish a dream of taking his family to America. Because he had worked for the Russian government and knew much about it, and because his brother had married a Russian girl of noble blood, Pohorily lived in constant fear of having to return to his native land. Knowing the Russians were searching for him, it seemed to him that there was but one solution, and that was to escape to an American sector.

Fled to Safety

With this idea in mind he contacted some American soldiers who helped the Pohorilys in a flight to American-controlled Hanover. Valia has a rather vivid and interesting memory of that trip to Hanover. Concealed in the back of a truck the Pohorilys were being sped to safety. But, everything had happened so fast that Valia's only response was to scream at the top of her lungs. Nothing could calm her but the thoughtfulness of an American soldier. From somewhere he produced a yellow baby duckling which soon stopped her tears.

So, the Pohorilys and their newly acquired pet went to Hanover to live. The duck remained Valia's constant companion and it shared the one room apartment with the rest of the family. Her father secured a job at the American Air Base and Valia, who was about seven by now, went to school in Hanover.

It was in Hanover that she saw and tasted white bread for the first time. The Americans with whom Mr. Pohorily worked often encouraged him to bring young Valia to work with him. They gave her candy and chewing gum which meant little to her compared to the slices of white bread. Soon these Americans realized that for Valia, white bread was the nicest kind of treat they could offer. Valia remembers them telling her, "you remind me of a little girl back home."

Thoughts of America were still with Mr. Pohorily and even yet he hoped to be able to go there. He felt the changes would be better for them if

Brigade Moves Out On First Exercise

By 1st Brigade PIO

With the breaking of dawn the men of the 1st Brigade attired in full combat gear moved swiftly to the awaiting trucks. Then the command move out.

This drama staged recently at the 1st Brigade, commanded by Col. Edgar R. Poole, saw the men of the 1st Brigade take to the field for their first field training exercise since the forming of the Brigade.

The objectives on this exercise were to establish and operate the brigade command post in the field, to develop and improve brigade field standard operating procedures and to establish and operate internal communications nets.

The exercise started when the staff officers along with the Headquarters commanding officer, Capt. Joseph A. Canty, and the Scout Section reported to Lt. Col. Ted E. Gordinier, brigade executive officer, for the purposes of determining the locations of all the elements involved. Immediately following this, Headquarters and Headquarters Company assembled at a designated area to establish and operate a command post on open field after which they were displaced to another designated area where they were to establish and operate their command post in tactical posture. Immediately following this part of the exercise the command staff was briefed on the overall operation of the exercise.

The responsibilities for the planning, conducting and critiquing of the exercise was left to the S-3 section, the transportation of the troops was left to the S-4 section and the feeding of the noon meal to Headquarters Company.

According to Col. Edgar R. Poole, the results of the exercise proved very favorable and the work put into it by everyone was very commendable.

Ackermann

they were in France, so move to France they did. By now her father's health was failing and the family journeyed through the better part of France hunting for a healthy climate. Finally, they settled down and Valia's two brothers, Larry and Daniel, were born.

At this time, life began to assume some semblance of order for the Pohorilys and for the next few years their existence was a rather calm one. Valia went to High School in Ardennes, France and business school in Paris. By now she could speak Russian, German, and French fluently. (Today she has replaced the German with English.)

Travel had become so much a part of her blood by this time that Valia wasn't content merely to reside in one place. She was in her teens when she spent summers on her own in Belgium, Luxembourg, and London.

While living in France, seventeen year-old Valia first heard about God from an American missionary. Even though it was the first time the Pohorilys were able to learn about God, her father later commented that they surely knew about his existence before they knew his name.

"The Promised Land"

The Russians were still hunting for Pohorily because of his family background and close government ties. Thus, when he attempted to come to the States, he encountered more than the usual red tape to receive permission. But finally they arrived at what her father called the "Promised Land" in 1957. Valia recalls that even though her father died two short years after their arrival here, he felt he had fulfilled his dream.

They had settled in Passaic, N. J. and it was here that Valia met Henry Frank Ackermann, who later became her husband. They were married in 1960 when he had but one year and a half of seminary to complete. After graduation, he attended chaplains' school and then he and Valia came to Ft. Benning, where he is now a chaplain at Kelley Hill.

After such an exciting and uncertain youth Valia enjoys being "just a housewife" and caring for their seven-month old son, Mark Henry. When she has some spare time she likes to sew and has quite a few fine looking creations to prove her talent.

Valia is looking forward to the time when the Army will send them on a European assignment. She still likes to travel and feels that the Army might make their tour of Europe more a "pleasure trip" than her first one was.

Artillery Names Officer Changes

Battery B commander for the 38th Artillery, Lt. Orlan H. Briant, has been assigned to 38th Artillery Headquarters for duty as assistant S-3 officer.

The Tampa, Fla., native has been with Battery B for 13 months, serving consecutively as assistant executive officer, executive officer and battery commander.

The former high school teacher, his wife and daughter, reside in Columbus.

Succeeding as commander of Battery B is Capt. David Mead. The San Diego, Calif., native came to the 2nd Division from previous duty in Viet Nam. He and his wife reside at Fort Benning.

Aviation Promotes Sergeant to WO

SSgt. Wendell English was recently promoted to the rank of Warrant Officer in the office of Lt. Col. John Stephens, 2nd Aviation Battalion commanding officer. The warrant officer bars were pinned on English by his wife, Elizabeth, who considered the presentation as her gift to him on his 31st birthday.

WO English is now stationed at Fort Eustis, Va. at the Flight Transportation Maintenance School as an instructor, having departed from Fort Benning with his wife and five children last week.

Guidelines for Summer Safety

Hot Weather, Pleasure, Leisure, and Some Hazards

The soldier who is in a hurry to shed his winter pallor for a "good healthy tan" should take time to consider that a slow tan is far less painful than a quick sunburn. Impatience can be costly in terms of physical comfort. For the normal skin, it takes from three days to a week to acquire a tan without burning under the direct rays of the sun.

The skin should be exposed to the sun only 10 to 15 minutes the first day. Fifteen minutes per day can be added each day thereafter until the skin is fully conditioned to the sun's rays.

When going out for fun in the sun, sunbathing, fishing, swimming, or any other sport which takes the individual out of the shade, a good vegetable base oil should be applied to all exposed parts of the body so that the skin may be kept moist and free from cracks and burns.

It is well to go out with a friend. Your friend can tell you when the primary signs of impending sunburn are in effect. When the "tattletale pink" skin shade appears, it is time to head for the shade — true shade. Cloudy or overcast days provide a false shade that can be very deceptive, and one can be burned severely by cloud-filtered sun rays.

Beat the Heat

Some individuals are more sensitive to heat than others. This is understandable, since, in a like manner, there are different reactions to certain diseases, foods, climates and so forth. Overexposure to the sun can result in a wide variety of reactions.

The soldier who wants to keep alive and well to enjoy his leisure time should plan his more strenuous physical activities for the cool of the day. The noon and early afternoon hours should be spent quietly in the shade if possible.

Normally, excessive heat will force the body temperature up, or cause dehydration by the loss of salt and water through perspiration if this is not replaced.

Heat cramps are a danger signal. Caused by excessive loss of salt through perspiration, such cramps affect the abdomen and legs, and may be extremely painful. In mild cases, the symptoms may come on gradually. In more severe attacks, the onset of cramps may be abrupt. Usually the body temperature remains normal.

Any person so affected should be placed in a location where air circulates freely, and should be kept lying down with the head low. No pillow or pads should be placed under the head. The patient should be given salt water to drink, one-half teaspoon of table salt or two 10-grain salt tablets per canteen of water. Rub the patient's arms and legs and body briskly to increase circulation.

Preventive Measures

A good way to prevent heat cramps is to take a 10-grain salt tablet with every meal. Persons with high blood pressure, heart, or kidney trouble should consult a doctor before taking salt.

Heat exhaustion, sometimes referred to as "heat prostration," is caused by circulatory collapse. The victim usually becomes extremely pale, perspires heavily, has rapid and shallow breathing, a weak and rapid pulse, and experiences feelings of nausea, dizziness, general weakness and headache. The skin becomes cool and clammy to the touch and the body temperature has a tendency to drop.

The treatment for heat exhaustion is much the same as for heat cramps. Blankets should be applied over and beneath the patient. If he is conscious, he should be given warm liquids to drink, including warm salt water.

Heatstroke or sunstroke is caused by a failure of the heat regulating mechanism of the body, and can occur with or without direct exposure to the sun. The victim experiences dry and hot skin, flushed face, loss of consciousness, very high temperature and rapid pulse, and absence of perspiration.

The heatstroke victim should be moved to a location where cool air can be circulated freely. The head should be elevated, the clothing removed, and cold water sprinkled on the victim gradually. Normally, extremely high body temperatures can be reduced by using the cold water. However, if the temperature fails to fall, or if the high temperature returns, icebags or cold, wet cloths should be applied to the head. After reducing the body temperature, get the victim to a medical facility as quickly as possible.

Against Heatstroke

To prevent heatstroke, a diet of light foods is recommended. Such a diet should consist of lean meats, green and leafy vegetables, fruits and milk. Alcoholic beverages should be avoided. Drinking salt water or taking salt tablets will add to one's immunity to heatstroke.

Just as dangerous as heat stress during the summer months is the danger of summer lightning storms.

Lightning strikes somewhere on this earth 6,000 times per minute. Every time it does, the awesomely powerful interchange of electric current takes place between earth and sky. Each bolt of lightning contains up to several million volts and as much as 340,000 amperes.

Summer storms come up quickly, and if you are caught in one, the best thing to do is lie down immediately, in a ditch or a depression if possible. By lying prone you may cease to be the "highest object in the area," the point where positive electric ground charges congregate in order to be as close as possible for an expansive meeting with their negative opposites contained in storm clouds.

In summary, by using simple common sense you stand a very good chance of having a pleasant, safe summer.

Moderate use of the summer sun, for gaining a sun tan or just everyday work, will decrease the chance of suffering painful heat effects. Moderation in everything you do during the hot summer months will help in keeping you safe and healthy.

Although summer means an increase in thunderstorms activity, there is no reason to hide indoors. By remembering the rules of summer safety, you have little to fear from lightning storms.

By thinking, you will remain safe all summer long, and alive to enjoy the other seasons of the year too.

Assigned to G-4

New Sgt. Maj. White's assignment is chief supply sergeant in the office of the division's assistant chief of staff, G-4.

Sgt. Maj. White came into the Army in September 1939 and, after completing basic training, was assigned to Fort Benning's 21st Engineer Regiment.

After the bombing of Pearl Harbor he was assigned to Langley Field, Va., and later transferred to Mitchell Field, N.Y.

In February 1942, he was reassigned to Jackson Army Air Base as 1st sergeant of Company C, 815th Aviation Engineer Battalion. Departing for England in June 1942, the unit stayed there until October. The sergeant major then participated with his unit in the North African Campaign.

Continuing throughout World War II to build and maintain air fields with the aviation engineer unit, Sgt. Maj. White spent until June 1944 in Italy following the Sicilian Invasion.

To the Pacific

After returning to the U. S. and a short assignment with the 1924th Engineer Battalion at Geiger Field, Spokane, Wash., he sailed for Guam and action in the World War II Pacific Theater of Operations.

In late 1945 he returned to the U. S. where he was discharged. His civilian career lasted as long as it took him to sign his reenlistment papers.

Following assignments included duty at Fort Lewis, Wash.; Camp Cook, Calif.; and Fort Worden, Wash.

He joined the 2nd Infantry Division in August 1959, serving since June 1962 as acting sergeant major of the division's G-4 section.

Sgt. Maj. White and his wife, Thelma, reside in Columbus.

'Second' Pioneers Jet Age Mobility Under Rotaplan

By BOB de CAMARA

The 2nd Infantry Division is a stateside infantry division. It belongs to the Strategic Army Corps, a stateside command designed to react with battle-ready infantrymen at a moments notice to conflict anywhere on the face of the Earth. Such conflict could take members of the "Indianhead" Division to Europe. They've been there before in World Wars I and II.

But the division has another tie to the Europe-based family of American troops. Since last September when the advance party of a 2nd Division battle group, the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, touched down at Rhein Main Airfield in Frankfurt, Germany and changed places with an advance party of an 8th Infantry Division battle group, the 2nd Division has provided by far the bulk of the troops for the Army's newest unit rotation system known as Rotaplan.

Strategic Readiness

Rotaplan is based on old principles of strategic warfare readiness but employs new ideas and means. Unlike the Gyroscope system which picked up entire divisions and relocated them continents apart, the Rotaplan system seeks the speedy airlift of smaller elements such as the battle group. Now with the "Second to None" reorganized, battalions are the primary export.

Rotaplan is in keeping with the Army's increased concern over comparatively small-scale conventional war. This too is reflected in the Army reorganization of divisions which reduces the size of organic combat forces. The "pentomic-type" battle group, ideally suited for widespread dispersal over the atomic battleground, has given way under Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) to the increased mobility and flexibility of the battalion. Mobility and flexibility are the key words. ROAD provides for mobility and flexibility. Rotaplan exploits mobility and flexibility.

Under Rotaplan, the Army constantly reshuffles battalion-size units, shipping them off to Europe for temporary training duty and replacing them after short tours of six months with other units from the United States.

In Germany

At Baumholder, Germany late last July, men of the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry learned that they were to be transferred back to the states as the first foreign-based unit to take part in the Rotaplan system. In mid-September the "Blue Spaders," commanded by Col. Arlin J. Kehe, exchanged advance parties with the 2nd Division's 38th Infantry, commanded by Col. Maurice C. Holden.

The members of the 26th Infantry advance party came to Benning to learn what would be expected of their unit as an integral part of the 2nd Division, the type of training the men would be faced with, the equipment they would use.

In Europe, on instant alert scant miles in this mechanized age from the Iron Curtain, the "Blue Spaders" had the latest the Army had to offer. Completely "tracked," the 26th possessed a full complement of M-14 rifles, M-151 quarter-ton vehicles, M-60 machineguns, M-17 protective masks and M-113 armored personnel carriers. Its track vehicles stood permanently ready to move the line infantrymen swiftly and surely to the front. Support units had their trucks.

Trains For Move

In the U. S., the "Rock of the Marne" 38th Infantry, the "Blue Spaders" counterpart in Rotaplan, had been training for the changeover in all the new areas and with all the new equipment that they could expect as members of America's front-line of defense in Western Europe. Training in Europe for the 38th proved to be as valuable as the commanding officers had expected.

And Rotaplan proved what the Department of Army had always known, that the Army was indeed mobile. If nothing else, although Rotaplan is a lot else, it serves as a clearcut example of how American forces can respond without delay to any call.

In mid-October 1962, the main bodies of the battle groups shuttled back and forth in a matter of jet-powered hours, as easily as the Army ships individual replacements. Air caravans of Military Air Transport planes accomplished the transfer of both units in much less time than a week, demonstrating that should the need ever shift from strategic to tactical, MATS can move the men in double-time.

2nd Reorganizes

Since the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry's arrival at Fort Benning under Rotaplan, the 2nd Infantry Division has undergone structural reorganization, the first stateside division to do so. As a consequence, the 26th Infantry is no longer attached to the division.

In February of this year, the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry was inactivated at division ceremonies. Personnel of the 26th were scattered to other units of the reorganizing 2nd Division, and many of the men went into the 187th Air Assault Battalion of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) being tested at Fort Benning.

According to the original concept of Rotaplan, Europe-based units rotating to the United States were to remain in the U. S. from 18 to 30 months and then ship back overseas again.

New Units Take Part

With the 26th disbanded, the next units to take part in Rotaplan as the 38th's tour in Europe drew to a close were two battalions of the 2nd Division. Six months after the initial voyage of the 38th advance party to Germany in September 1962, the 38th dispatched an advance party to Fort Benning to smooth the way for their return.

Exchanging places with the "Marnemen" were advance parties of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. The main bodies of those two battalions are now in Europe, since mid-April, taking part in all the rugged, realistic maneuvers with the "Pathfinders" of the 8th Division.

As soon as the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry have completed their tours of duty in Germany, they will be replaced by other 2nd Division units. The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry will spend three months overseas and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry double that time.

Transfer Perfected

In this way, the Rotaplan system is kept continually functioning. Methods of transfer are developed to a honed edge of flawless reflex conditioning. And out of the bargain, troops of the stateside 2nd Division receive training of a type unavailable in the continental U. S.

Although the "Indianhead" Division proved last year that its soldiers are prepared for any national emergency, opportunities such as the Cuba crisis alert and Operation "Rapid Roads" which took the men to Oxford, Miss., do not, happily, occur frequently.

In Europe, units of the 8th Infantry Division, the division to which 2nd Division units are attached for overseas tours, are constantly faced with a threat from the East that lends a sense of urgency to their daily routine. Russian and East German troops massed across the border in East Germany bring the picture home sharply to each man that his job in Europe is a real one and an immediate one.

Swift Strike III

Stateside maneuvers such as Swift Strike III coming up again this year in the Carolinas provide enormous backdrops for displays of battle skills by the highly-trained soldiers of the Strategic Army Corps. As last year, tens of thousands of soldiers on the blue side will line up in the southeastern United States to challenge the tens of thousands of theoretical "aggressors" on the red side. But across the border in Georgia, enemy divisions won't be waiting for the stragglers.

Besides providing a high degree of mobility and flexibility of Army units and valuable European training for otherwise stateside units, Rotaplan has another purpose which is not always readily apparent. This is economy. The trooper involved in Rotaplan understands this. He can't take his dependents with him to Europe. The tours under Rotaplan are consciously kept short in order to minimize this drawback.

For the treasury of the United States it is not a drawback but soothing relief. It is hoped that this plan, without reducing the combat capabilities of troops in Europe, will cut the flow of U. S. gold by $1,000 to $3,000 per soldier.

Travel Costs Cut

Travel costs are also reduced since dependents are not authorized to relocate at government expense. However, dependents occupying government quarters at the time their sponsors receive orders for temporary duty overseas are permitted to continue occupancy with, of course, requisite privileges such as medical care continuing.

An outcropping of the Rotaplan system has been the establishment of a Rota-Family Service Center at Fort Benning to aid dependents of Rotaplan soldiers while the men train in Germany. Originally an Air Force idea, the Army snapped it up for the 2nd Division's 38th Infantry when it became apparent something like this would be necessary.

A building on the reservation has been turned over to the wives of men involved in Rotaplan, and, during their absence, the Rota Center is kept staffed on a steady basis to handle incoming distress calls of any type. So far, wives at the Rota Center have successfully handled incidents ranging from the wife who bought a "lemon" of a second-hand car (the women persuaded the dealer to take it back) to the sometimes late allotment check.

"I believe this is the first center of its kind in the Army and so this ceremony is unique and unprecedented," spoke Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division. The ceremony was the turnover of the center's keys to wives of the men of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry by Mrs. Maurice C. Holden, wife of the former commander of the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry.

Meanwhile at Fort Benning, training goes on for other units expected to move out this summer for Germany. All 2nd Division Rotaplan units, newly-mechanized, are testing their new strength before the trip. July in Germany will see another battalion of the 2nd Infantry Division from home join forces in Germany with the 8th Infantry Division, the men of the "Golden Arrow."

Waters of Sand Hill Pool Await You

Besides peaches and beautiful girls, the state of Georgia is noted for one other accomplishment that is never lacking at Fort Benning in the summertime. Good ol' Georgia manages to generate more heat per square inch than the atlas rocket at blast-off.

Fortunately for the 2nd Division trooper, a crystal blue, sweet water swimming pool is located on Sand Hill opposite Service Club Two. And tomorrow the pool opens. Use it.

Open six days a week from 1 to 8 p.m., Monday is the only day it is closed.

'Manchus' Finish Practice, List Starters for Softball

By 9th Infantry PIO

The "Manchus" of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry have completed pre-tournament softball practice. The team topped off their practice sessions with two non-league games against the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

Each team received a victory in the two-game encounter. Both teams are in the same league (Apache) and will meet each other again in the 2nd Division softball tournament.

N. D. Edmunds, team manager, states that he is very well pleased with the way the team looks. And he expects the team to make a very good showing in tournament play.

"The 'Manchus' are well-equipped with speed and depth. The bench is strong, and we have a lot of spirit on the team," added the coach, Robert Yarbrough. He continued, "The outlook is good for a championship bid, and we are hopeful of having a winner."

Yarbrough has listed his probable starters for the "Manchu" opener as follows: Phil Cotton, first base; Warren Reeves, second base; Otis Boone, third base; Joe O'Laughlin, shortstop. In left field will be the "fleet" Lathern Woods; Maurice Holbrook will control center field, and Ray Haney will be seen in right. Catching will be Otis Porter and, on the mound, Frank Boshers.

Other members of the team are Santos Rodriguez, Cecil Hay, Beverly Adams, Dan Hill, John Geer and Charles Duckett.

Softball Put Off One Week Here

The opening week's game in the division softball tournament have been cancelled, a special services spokesman said.

Softball was scheduled to start here last Monday evening at the Sand Hill and Kelley Hill diamonds. Originally the softball season had been set from May 13 to July 6. Games postponed this week will be made up later, and, as of this time, the second week of ballgames will be run off.

Made up of three leagues, the Apache, Commanche and Cherokee leagues, the tournament would have opened Monday with the 2nd Administration Company team meeting the ballplayers from the 2nd Aviation Battalion on Sand Hill at 6:30; the 122nd Signal Battalion against the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry on Kelley Hill at 6:30; and, the same evening at 8 p.m. on Sand Hill, the 702nd Maintenance Battalion versus the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Regular division play will consist of a single round robin tourney within each league. The winners of the individual leagues will meet in a double elimination play-off for the division softball championship.

Monday's games, May 20, will now be the first meeting date for any "Second to None" softball squad in the division tournament. On Sand Hill at 6:30, the 15th Artillery is set to go against the 37th Artillery. Following that game at 8 o'clock, 2nd Supply and Transport will meet the 2nd Aviation Battalion.

On Kelley Hill that same evening at 6:30, 122nd Signal Battalion will play the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Tuesday's games are: on Sand Hill, 6:30, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry against the 12th Artillery; Sand Hill, 8 o'clock, the 702nd Maintenance Battalion versus the 17th Artillery; Kelley Hill, 6:30, no game.

Set for Thursday will be: Sand Hill, 6:30, the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry versus the 2nd Engineer Battalion; Sand Hill, 8 o'clock, the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry versus the 2nd Administration Company; Kelley Hill, 6:30, the 2nd Medical Battalion against the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Two of the softball leagues will have seven teams; one will have six teams. The Apache League's seven teams are made up of softball squads from the 2nd Administration Company; the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; the 15th Artillery Battalion; the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry; the 2nd Aviation Battalion; the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry; and the 37th Artillery Battalion.

TSB Wallops 428 Medics 24-1 in Season Opener

By Dave Braun

The Student Brigade took a little batting practice last Monday night at Fort Benning's Gowdy Field, crushing the 428th Medical Battalion 24-1, in the opening game of the 1963 Major Unit Baseball League.

By the time the final out was made the Brigademen had racked up a total of 15 hits, including three doubles, one triple, and two home runs.

Hard - throwing righthander Charlie Spell went all the way for The Student Brigade, registering 14 strikeouts while issuing two passes.

Spell gave his mates a little scare at the start of the game when his first pitch plunked the Medic leadoff man in the head.

The booming bats of shortstop Jesse Joyce, a .384 hitter last season, catcher Bascombe Pidgett and first sacker Herbert Lauve enabled the Brigade to grab a 10-1 lead by the end of the fourth inning.

Lauve Homers

Lauve drove a 350-foot homer over the rightfield fence in the first inning and Joyce connected for a round-tripper in the bottom of the fourth with one aboard.

The Medics got the first tally of the contest when shortstop Art Case stole second after being hit in the head by Spell. Case came home promptly on John Krause's half-line single into rightcenter.

Glory for the Medics was shortlived, however, as the Brigade came right back in the bottom half of the first with four runs.

A walk, an error and a sacrifice fly produced the first run. Then following a strikeout and another sacrifice fly, Lauve smacked his two-run homer over the fence onto Wold Ave.

Spell settled down in the second and third innings, striking out the side.

In the Brigade's half of the second, Medic righthander James Bradley gave up but one hit, but trouble erupted in the third when Pedro Berrids singled to left, driving in one run. After another walk, Lauve drove a fly to right, driving in another run.

Spell recorded two more strikeouts in the fourth inning and the Brigademen had another field day in their half of the inning.

With southpaw Joe O'Malley on the mound for the 428th, Jesus Herrans got things going with a ground ball error after which Ralph Marti singled to scooting Herrans to third. Berrids then scored Herans on an error by the third-baseman and Joyce belted the next pitch over the rightfield fence for a home run.

A two-base error, coupled with a ground out and a sacrifice fly produced the final run of the inning.

Spell gave up a hit in the fifth inning, but escaped with little trouble as he struck out two men.

Three Run Triple

In the bottom half of the fifth Spell walked and was thrown out at third on a single by Herrans. Marti then singled to center, driving in Herrans. After Joyce walked, Berrids flew out and Pidgett walked, loading the bases. Lauve then unloaded a three-run triple down the right field line.

The Medics were unable to score in their half of the sixth inning, but the Brigademen went to town again scoring 10 runs on six hits to make the score 24-1.

Spell gave up a scratch single in the seventh to end the game.

COL. W. J. HIGGINS TOSSES 1ST BALL
Ceremonies Were Held At 1st Game

25-Game Winner Charlie Spell Again Heads TSB Mound Staff

An old nemisis has returned to plague hitters in the Major Unit Baseball League.

Charlie Spell, of Crowley, La., will again shoulder the bulk of the pitching load for the powerful Student Brigade nine as they defend their 1962 league title.

Spell is a product of the Los Angeles Dodger farm chain, having started his professional career here in Columbus, in 1960, he compiled a 12 and 6 won-lost record, and helped the Atlanta Crackers cop the Southern Association pennant.

In his last season before coming into the Army, Charlie led the now defunct American Association in strikeouts with 164 while working for the Omaha Dodgers.

Since coming to Fort Benning, Spell has compiled an impressive record.

In the regular season of 1962 he hurled a total of 25 victories against only one defeat as The Student Brigade barreled through opposition to win the league title. Included in his 25 victories were two no-hitters.

In the Third Army tournament at Redstone Arsenal, he completely stymied opposing hitters, picking up four victories, including another no-hitter, against no losses, Fort Benning to the Third Army championship.

Monday night at Gowdy Field, Spell took up where he left off in 1962 by striking out 14 and allowing only three hits as The Student Brigade blasted the 428th Medical Battalion 24 to 1 in the season opener.

When asked to compare local baseball with the caliber of ball he has seen in the minor leagues, he commented, "I was surprised last year. You can't let up on these guys or they'll hit you pretty hard."

Spell had nothing but praise for his teammates. "Some of these guys could be playing pro ball." He particularly had praise for shortstop Jesse Joyce.

About his manager, Bob Kinnard, he commented, "He's a real good man and has a good knowledge of baseball."

Charlie ends his duty with the Army in July.

"I'm not sure," he states, "where I'm going when I get out, but it will probably be to Spokane of the Pacific Coast League."

Spell admitted that it will be rough breaking into the Dodger pitching staff. "They have a strong pitching staff new," he commented, "and they have three young guys, Pete Richert, Phil Ortega and Ron Moeller, coming up who can really throw hard."

Scouting reports indicate Charlie Spell has an excellent chance for a career in the major leagues. Anyone who has seen him pitch can only agree.

Spell is a specialist four, working as a finance clerk at the 15th Finance and Disbursing Office.

FDR Park Is Now Open For Summer

The Georgia Department of State Parks has announced that Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park at Pine Mountain has been re-opened.

Roosevelt Inn, the park's quality restaurant, serves meals daily except Mondays and can be reserved for parties, luncheons and dinners.

Park officials state that the cottages have been completely reconditioned and reservations are now being accepted by the park superintendent.

Located 12 miles from the late President's Little White House at Warm Springs, Franklin D. Roosevelt State Park is situated on part of the land that was ceded to the United States by the Indian Springs Treaty of 1825. King's Gap, a famous Indian trail used by early settlers, is located almost in the center of the park.

Martindale Defeats Hooper; Wins Post's Golf Title 2nd Time

By Pete Shough

Last year's post golf champion, 1st Lt. William Martindale, pulled a repeat peprformance last Sunday when he won the Spring Handicap Golf Tournament's championship flight with a sound defeat of the lower bracket champion Capt. Clarence M. Hooper, 8-7, in a 36-hole playoff at the local Country Club.

Martindale, who also holds the record on the post Country Club's Lake Side, was forced to come from behind after Hooper grabbed an early lead by winning the second hole with a birdie. The Texas golf star wasted little time in evening the match as he capitalized on a Hooper bogie on the fourth hole to even the match.

Martindale moved into the lead on the sixth hole with a birdie but Capt. Hooper was recovered on the seventh hole with a birdie to tie the match for the second time.

First Birdie

On the par 5, eighth hole Martindale's victory began to take shape when he scored his first birdie of the front nine and followed up with a par on the ninth hole to Hooper's bogie, making the post golf champ two-up after the first nine.

Hooper tried to recover lost ground when he won the 11th and 12th holes but Martindale's par on the par 3, 14th hole stopped the drive and gave him a one-hole advantage.

Holes 15, 16 and 17 were halved but a Martindale birdie on 18 pushed the 1962 champion into a two hole lead at the end of the first round of the 36-hole playoff.

Second Round

The lunch break between the two 18-hole rounds apparently cooled off Capt. Hooper as he lost the first five holes of the second round to Martindale, giving the long-hitting lieutenant a seven-hole advantage. Hooper was never able to regain the golfing form displayed in the opening round and in his earlier upset victory over Lt. Col. George Hardgrove to win the lower bracket title.

The match ended on the 17th hole with Martindale eight holes up.

Other flight winners in the 1963 Spring Handicap Golf Tournament include:

First Flight: Capt. Robert Turgeon.

Second Flight: Col. W. T. Gordon.

Third Flight: Col. C. A. Busch.

Fourth Flight: Col. William Birdsong.

Fifth Flight: Capt. C. H. Ogden.

Sixth Flight: Capt. Nicholas Leone.

An awards ceremony was held at the Country Club last Wednesday night, with Howard Holbrook, post golf pro, presenting awards to the various flight winners.

Marine Lieutenant Sets Eastern Record For Outdoor Mile in 7th Quantico Relays

Quantico, Va. (AFPS) — The first sub-four-minute mile ever unfurled outdoors in the East was achieved by Cary Weisiger, a U. S. Marine lieutenant, at the 7th Annual Quantico Marine Corps Schools Relays.

The race was run over the running track dedicated to a tough old Marine General named Smedley Butler, a two-time Medal of Honor winner.

Weisiger was set up by the cooperative pace of a former Marine Dave Mellady, representing the Chicago Track Club, who pulled him to a half mile in 1:58.3 after a 56.6 quarter, Weisiger took it from there all alone in a magnificent solo effort that carried him through the tape in 3 minutes 59.2 seconds.

The Marine runner wearing the spangles of Camp Pendleton had run a smashing 4:01.9 mile the day before to come from 80 yards back on the final leg of the club and service distance medley relay to win for the Pacific Coast Leathernecks.

Some 4,000 howling fans encouraged the 155 pound miler as he was clocked in 57.8, 60.5, 59.7 and 61.2 quarter mile laps. Weisiger broke the meet record of 4:04.6, set by Penn Stater Ed Moran in 1960.

All - Marine Championships combined with the best weather of the year to provide ideal competition. Leading Eastern College relay teams and several prominent Olympic possibilities including Gary Gubner, a sixty plus shot-putter.

Relay records for the Quantico cinder path were cracked by John Bethea, Morgan State, 440 hurdles (51.7); Villanova, Distance Medley Relay Div. I (9:51.0); LaSalle, Distance Medley Relay Div. II (10:07.3); North Carolina College, Sprint Medley Relay Div. II (3:24.2); Georgetown, Collegiate Two-Mile Relay Div. I (7:29.4); and North Carolina College, One-Mile Relay Div. II (3:14.5).

In addition to Weisiger's wins, servicemen took two other gold medals. Dick Emberger of Camp Pendleton jumped six feet seven inches to win the high jump and John Moon, Ft. Lee won the 100 yard dash in (09.4) equalling the Quantico Relay Record.

Gen. Watson Praises Marksmen For Performance During Matches

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

Winners and losers both received praise and congratulations from Lt. Gen. Albert Watson, Third Army commanding general, during the closing ceremonies for the Third Army Rifle and Pistol Championship Matches held here May 3-11.

The Third Army commander, who flew to The Infantry Center from Fort McPherson, Ga., especially for the closing ceremonies, lauded the more than 750 marksmen for their accomplishments in the 43 individual and team events fired.

The automatic rifle grand aggregate winners, from the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N. C., PFC Joseph S. Riggins and PFC Walter A. Arnold, who teamed up to fire out a new match mark by 38 points with a 1,591 points out of a possible 1,800, received Gen. Watson's heartiest congratulations.

"Shooting is more than a sport, it has a deadly indication," he said. "Your achievements in these matches and all others are indicative of the Army's combat readiness."

MSgt. Walter E. Schneider of the Third Army Advanced Marksmanship Training Unit, winner of the individual pistol grand aggregate, and Sgt. William R. Stallings of the 82nd Airborne Division, the grand aggregate winner in the rifle phase, also were congratulated by their commander for topping the field in marksmanship, the Army's basic skill.

"Shooting is a matter of skill," the general said. "Our scores in these matches are definitely weighed by other countries, especially those behind the Iron Curtain, as to the mark of our soldiering ability."

"What we are doing is deadly serious," he commented.

Turning from the winners circle to the losers, the general praised the men who finished out of the running for their hand in pushing the top shooters to heights unattainable without competition.

Match Headquarters, commanded by Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, was also praised, for without the headquarters the matches would not have been possible.

Other winners receiving recognition were, in the pistol competition, SFC Dewey M. Watts of Fort Gordon, Ga., in the .22 caliber aggregate match, for his score of 878-22X out of a possible 900-90X; the Tennessee National Guard's Capt. Edward B. Hall in the center fire aggregate with a score of 867-29X, and the grand aggregate winner again in the .45 caliber aggregate for his score of 863-31X.

The automatic rifle competitions which made up the grand aggregate match all produced record-breaking scores.

The 500-yard shoot saw the aggregate winners fire out a 44-point record breaker of 513 out of the possible 600 points.

The mid-range match saw The Infantry Center's team of Sp4 Rondall E. Proffit and Sp4 Leo W. Farrell blast a score of 547 from their 400-yard position to take the match laurel and set a new horizon for next year's shooters by six points.

Another 82nd Airborne Division team, Sp4 Donnie J. Broome and PFC Harry L. Porter, took the last match of the AR phase, the 300-yard tilt, with a 574 score to break the old record by 13 points.

The first rifle aggregate, the rapid fire match, went to SFC James L. Tuck of the Third Army Marksmanship Unit who fired out a 400-33V score out of a possible 400-80V, good enough for a record by one point and nine V's.

Last year's grand aggregate winner, Sgt. Arpail J. Gapol of The Third Army Marksmanship Unit, took the slow fire aggregate match with a 487-48V score out of a possible 500-100V.

In team firing those of significance were in the pistol category, with the 82nd Airborne Division's Red team firing a 1,118 point score out of a possible 1,200 over the .45 caliber National Match Course, beating the old record by one point.

The center fire match over the National Match Course went to the 101st Airborne Division Black team for another record-breaking score of 1,148-42X to better the old record by one point.

The X employed in pistol scoring and the V in rifle scoring are the inner circles of the bulls-eyes used to break ties.

After his address, Gen. Watson presented the awards and congratulated the winners personally.

'Rakkassans' Depart For Training, Tests

Troops of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, loaded into a flight of 10 CV-2 Caribou's, the Army's largest transport aircraft, and left here Saturday for Fort Stewart, Ga., where they will train for and undergo Army Training Tests for platoon-sized units.

The company is one of three rifle companies now serving with the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), currently engaged in testing a new air-mobile concept.

The company's parent unit is the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, which is attached to the 1st Air Assault Brigade, one of the major command and control headquarters of the division.

The company is commanded by Capt. Harry N. Ball. The troops call themselves the "Rakkassans," a name which the battalion was endowed with while fighting in Korea.

Among those observing the take-off were Col. Elvy B. Roberts, division chief of staff, and Lt. Col. Harvey D. Hawley, commanding officer of the 97th Air Transport Brigade.

After loading the troops and equipment, the aircraft executed a precision turn in unison, taxied into the center of the parking area, executed another turn in unison, and filed out onto the runway where they grouped for take-off.

Minutes later they were airborne and, after a rendezvous north of the airfield, they formed, turned, and flew back over the field in a tightly controlled formation.

In addition to Company C's troops, elements of the following units were taken along in support roles: Combat Support Company, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry; 11th AAD Support Command; Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion; Company A, 511th Signal Battalion; Headquarters Company, 1st Air Assault Brigade; and 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery.

Upon arrival at Fort Stewart the aircraft, which are from the 187th Transport Airplane Company, will load and bring back members of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, and attached units which have been training there for the past week.

Trap Shoot Honors Won By MTUers

Special to The Bayonet

SHREVEPORT, La. — Shotgunners from the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit collected the bulk of awards at the Louisiana State Trap Shoot here last week.

The six men who represented the Army at these matches walked off with eight first-place awards.

"All Around" champion was 1st Lt. William Brauer, who broke 389 out of a possible 400 targets. He also won the "High Overall" with a 583 aggregate total in Class AA. Lt. Brauer got another first in the 16-yard Class AA with 200 straight birds and grabbed three second place spots.

"High Overall" Class A went to Lt. William Maris with a 581 score and SFC Kenneth Gilbert took the Class B crown with a 581.

Lt. Morris won the Class A doubles with a 96 total and was second in one other event.

Sgt. Gilbert was Class A champion in the 16 yard event with 198 birds and also captured the Handicap event with a 98 as well as the Class B title in the 16 yard match on opening day of the three-day event.

Also competing in the matches were Sp4 Charles T. Fisher, Sp4 John Brizendine and PFC Hugh Brown.

Brown was the runnerup in Class A in the 16 yard match.

MTU Men Commended For Work

Riflemen from the Marksmanship Training Unit were commended this week by Maj. General T. F. Bogart, commanding general of the U.S. Army Caribbean, for outstanding assistance in the Fourth Annual Pan-American Matches in March.

The general stated, "The members of USAMTU this year operated an introductory coaching clinic and furnished coaches to improve the techniques of the competing teams. The diligent effort and professional competence of these men were of inestimable assistance."

In his letter of commendation to Col. Robin G Montgomery, commanding officer of MTU, Gen. Bogart added that the establishment of the Pan-American Matches has materially raised the marksmanship standards of that portion of the world, and has also fostered a growing feeling of cooperation among the Americas by means of such an international gathering.

Members of the MTU rifle team have assisted in the conducting of the Pan-American Matches for the last four years. Teams representing all Latin American countries participated in the Matches.

Surgeon Says

Sun Can Be Dangerous, So Protect Yourself

By Maj. George B. Skipworth

"Nature is a wonderful healer" but a lousy beautician." — Dr. John Rich.

The cult of sun worshippers will soon unveil themselves as another summer season begins. A few facts about the sun's dangers and the many products on the market for control of sunburn are in order.

In the natural tanning process, invisible ultraviolet (UVL) rays penetrate the outer layers of skin and darken the pigmentation already present. With continued exposure, the burning rays penetrate deeper into the layers which manufacture granules of melanin (the dark pigment which gives a tan its natural color).

The color granules gradually migrate or float upward to the surface of the skin and become visible as a tan. The surface layers become thickened, and this, rather than the tan itself, gives the greatest protection against sunburn.

It is not the sun's heat but only a small portion of the shorter ultraviolet wave lengths (2900 to 3200A) that actually cause sunburn.

Tan slowly and sensibly by gradually increasing exposure — start with 10 minutes the first day and increase exposure by 10 minutes each successive day — or by confining sunbathing to early or late in the day.

Suntan lotions and creams are helpful, but do not in any way increase the speed of your skin's natural tanning mechanism. Use only lotions known to contain a sunscreen agent. Sunscreens are chemicals which selectively absorb the shorter sunburn ultraviolet rays, allowing the longer UVL rays to penetrate, else one would never tan.

Among the most effective sunscreens are paraminobenzoic acid and its derivatives, the salicylates, and a digalloyl trioleate compound. Therefore, read the label! Apply the lotion at least every two hours, after each swim, and whenever the protecting film may have rubbed off. Give sensative areas such as the neck, shoulders and nose a double dose.

The so-called "suntan pills" contain a photosensitizing chemical known as psoralens. Their use has been publicized as increasing the tolerance to sunlight in individuals (such as blonds and redheads) who "burn and peel" and never develop an acquired "immunity" to sun exposure.

Psoralens are not recommended as a "suntan pill" or a cosmetic. They are potent drugs, restricted to prescription sale and should never be used except as directed and under the strict supervision of a physician.

Recently "suntans in a bottle" were placed on the market and consists of a sugar chemical called dihydroxyacetone (DHA). This product only produces an artificial, and sometimes unnatural, coloration in the outer layer of the skin which gradually wears off in 5 to 15 days as the result of normal shedding.

Remember! Although the DHA product, seems harmless to the skin, it provides no protection from sunburn. Therefore, always check the label to see if a sunscreen agent has been shedded.

The sun is a valuable aid in the control of psoriasis and acne. The expensive "cures" for psoriasis advertised by certain drugs and chiropractic manipulation are unfortunate. Conversely, the sun may precipitate a number of diseases familiar to your physician.

Persons past the mid thirties should think twice before subjecting their skin to repeated sunning. There is increasing evidence that sunlight is an important factor in the development of certain cancers and premature aging of the skin. An unscented emollient cream applied after bathing prevents excessive drying effects of the sun. The highly touted "wrinkle creams" however, are useless except to add further wrinkles to your pocketbook.

Lt. Donnoe Honor Grad Of IOOC 15

First Lt. John F. Donnoe graduated Infantry Officer Orientation Course, Class No. 15, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, with top honors, receiving an average of 92.9 per cent.

Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School was the speaker for the ceremonies. He presented the honor graduate with his certificate and an engraved desk set and pen.

In his address before the graduating body, Gen. Norton stated that part of our citizenry must practice the art of war to keep our country free. The lessons learned in this course will provide a good base to build on, he added.

"You must know your men and take care of them," Gen. Norton continued. There are many people in the world who are waiting for the "Follow Me," of a leader, he noted.

Gen. Norton concluded by saying the man in uniform represents not so much the present, but the future of the Nation.

During the ceremonies, Gen. Norton presented 2nd Lt. Jack L. Tureck, the Military Stakes Competition winner, a desk set for making a score of 908 points out of a possible 1000. The Military Stakes Competition is a field exercise covering most of the subjects taught during the course.

Second Lt. William T. Poulos also received a plaque during the graduation exercises for his high score of 483 points out of a possible 500 in the Physical Combat Proficiency Test.

Freedom Bond Drive Runs Through July 4

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—All Service personnel will have the opportunity to help their country materially, and at the same time help themselves, by the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds during the 1963 Freedom Bond Drive which opened May 1 and will continue through July 4.

"The Freedom Bond Drive," President Kennedy stated, "serves to identify Savings Bonds most firmly in the public mind as a way to participate in our nation's efforts and ventures into space. It enables thousands to respond as individual citizens to the world-wide challenge to freedom. . ."

While the Government gets most of the money it needs from tax revenues it needs the money borrowed by the selling of bonds to meet operational deficits. As far as possible, the Government prefers to borrow from individual citizens because this reduces the spread of inflation. Thus the Government withdraws part of the Bond buyers income from circulation making prices less likely to rise, which they would do if all income was immediately spent.

There are two types of savings bonds: Series E and Series H, both created for individual savers not for banking institutions.

The "E" type bonds are bought through payroll deductions and military pay allotments as well as for outright cash. They are purchased at 75 percent of face value and accrue interest until they mature. You can get these bonds in seven denominations ranging from the $25 bond costing $18.75 to the 10,000 bond costing $7,500. They can all be converted to cash easily and quickly at any bank.

The "H" type bonds have been available since 1952 and can be bought at par—their face value — $500, $1,000, and $10,000 denominations. They are known as current income bonds, because they pay interest by Government check every six months. A Series H bond bought now and held for 10 years to maturity pays an average yield of 3% per cent interest.

Both types of bonds are being featured during the current 1963 Freedom Bond Drive.

FAST PITCHER

Don Rudolph of the Washington Senators believes in getting a ball game completed in a hurry. After a one-hour-32 minute game against the Angels last season, Rudolph said that many pitchers take too much time because they are not prepared. "I know just what I'm going to pitch to every hitter in the whole game before I ever go out to the mound," Rudolph says.

Complete New Span

With the last nail being driven on a bridge over Ochillee Creek on Thursday, April 18, Company B of the 806th Engineer Battalion added another job to it's list of projects completed in support of The Infantry School and Fort Benning.

The bridge, a 92-foot, 6-bay, timber trestle structure, crosses Ochillee Creek at LaFayette Trail and forms a link in the post's network of emergency roads.

The various phases of construction, placement of abutments, driving of piling, and assembly of the substructure and superstructure, were supervised by SFC Sidney J. Hendrix and SSgt. Charles E. Hardin, the NCOs in charge.

The materials acquisition crew under supervision of Sp4 Winston B. Howell kept lumber flowing from the storage point in the battalion area to the bridge site, where it was transformed into a finished product by construction crews under supervision of SSgt. Louis C. Lake Jr. and Sp4 Ronald B. Guthrie. The finished structure provides a 14-foot roadway.

Boy Scouts to Camp Here

Between 250 and 300 Boy Scouts from the Upatoi District of the Georgia-Alabama Council of the Boy Scouts of America will be on hand here for a camporee today through Sunday.

The camporee, which will be held at The Infantry Center Recreation Area, officially begins at 5 p.m. today with check-in and ends at noon Sunday.

Following check-in, supper will be cooked in the open. After the meal, the Scouts and their leaders will gather around the campfire and camporee officials will orient them on Saturday's events.

The events for Saturday begin with a 6:30 a.m. reveille. From then on it's a full day. A series of demonstrations are scheduled. These include first aid, signal, physical fitness, archery and axemanship.

The afternoon will be highlighted with knot tying, map making, and relay contests. The winners will receive awards.

The final campfire at 8 p.m. Saturday night will see each troop presenting a song, skit or stunt.

Following worship services Sunday, the Scouts will begin checking out.

During the camporee two inspections are scheduled. The first of these begins when the youths check in. Packs, personal equipment and patrol equipment will be checked against a tally sheet and scored accordingly.

The second inspection will be held during Saturday night's supper and will include patrol organization and administration, commissary and food, and general health, safety and sanitation.

10th Artillery Battery Sets Inspection High

Battery C of the 10th Artillery's 2nd Battalion (Composite) received the highest rating ever given a unit here on Command Material Readiness Inspection May 3.

They achieved a raw score of 94 percent for material readiness and 97 per cent for organizational maintenance operations.

The battery commander, 1st Lt. Lanny K. Walker, was notified late May 2 the inspection would take place at 8 a.m. the next morning. There was very little time for special preparation.

The inspection was carried out by Team No. 1 of the three Third Army Command Material Readiness teams. By 11 a.m. the inspection was completed and the results were in.

Officials explained that even though three hours seems a short period for a thorough readiness inspection, the experienced Third Army team could do a complete job within that period.

The team is divided into subteams representing each of the technical services. Each inspector has at least a year of inspection experience, and each is an expert in his field.

Commented the vehicle inspector, "The senior wheeled vehicles and trailors of the battery are the best I've ever seen or inspected."

Lt. Col. C. A. Busch was the inspection team chief.

Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, 10th Artillery commander, praised the battery for its outstanding showing and congratulated Lt. Walker for achieving the high standards of maintenance.

The 10th Artillery, a unit of the 197th Infantry Brigade, supplies all of the artillery support for problems and demonstrations at The Infantry School.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Crowd Can Be Wrong

BY CHAPLAIN (CAPT.) DUIE R. JERNIGAN

Contrary to the views of many, the "crowd" can be wrong. Numbers have a strange way of influencing us. Unless we do some individual thinking on certain matters, we soon fall into the grave error of assuming that because the group endorses it, it must be alright.

In 1842 Adam Thompson of Cincinnati filled the first bathtub in the United States. Newspapers said this new-fangled idea would ruin democratic simplicity in the Republic. Doctors predicted rheumatism and inflammation of the lungs. Philadelphia put a ban on the bathtub exercise from Nov. 1 to March 1. Boston in 1845 made it unlawful except on the advice of a doctor. Hartford and Providence set up extra heavy water rates. Virginia voted a tax of $30 on every bathtub brought into the state.

When Westinghouse proposed to stop a locomotive with "air," the crowd booed and said he was wasting his time. But we know better today and highly respect the invention of "airbrakes."

You see, just because the crowd thinks so, that doesn't make it right. Take the man Noah. Consider all the years he worked the shipyards. Remember what the crowd thought of him (Genesis 6 and 7)? Look at the great military leader of Bible times named Gideon. When he and his 300 guerrillas with their "secret weapons" put the Midianites to flight, the crowd had already gone home (Judges 7). When the lad David — ridiculed by his brothers — went out to meet that heavyweight, he was the underdog and the short end on the odds. (1 Samuel 17)

The validity of God's moral laws is not dependent on what the crowds think of them. And, to stand up for what we know to be right isn't always the easiest thing, nor does it always carry with it the approval of the crowd.

To stand alone is no disgrace. To have the temporary disapproval of the crowd is not the worst thing that can happen to a man. The truth of the matter is that right living, nobel and upright character will always come out ahead. Know what you believe! Be able to defend what you believe and have the courage to "stick with your guns"

Big Four Meet at La Ferte de Gaucher, France. Competing were teams from the U. S., France, Bulgaria and Russia.

During January and February, 1962, Byard was on the U. S. team that broke 20 world records, actively participating in 15.

Later that year, Byard withdrew from the team and applied for Officer Candidate School (OCS). While he was waiting acceptance, he was assigned to The Infantry School as an instructor in airborne techniques with the Tower and Jump Training Sub - Committees of the Airborne - Air Mobility Department.

Before entering OCS in April, Byard was an active member of the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club, serving as its training officer and later as a member of the board of directors.

A YEARS REST

The 12th Artillery was deactivated in 1957 and reactivated in 1958 at Fort Benning, Georgia. The Battalion was reorganized in May of 1960 and assumed its present operational mission in the 2nd Division.

Attack Course Is Being Built By Engineers

Utilizing the basic hand tools of the soldier-Engineer, the men of Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion (construction), have swung into another difficult project, the construction of a squad and platoon attack course, to be located in an area at tie southeastern edge of Fort Benning, off Christopher Road.

The course, designed for Reserve and ROTC training purposes, is scheduled for completion on June 1. It will be one of a very few such courses now in existence.

It was requested that, in order to maintain as natural a setting as possible, no heavy machinery be used in the first phase of the work, clearing of dense undergrowth found throughout the area.

Armed with axes, brush hooks and machetes, 2nd Lt. Douglas K. Heere's earthmovers, supplemented by members of the construction platoon, set about the task of hacking out an area of approximately three acres.

The engineers converted the maze of underbrush into an acceptable site for a live fire range.

The next step in the construction plans call for the erection of three control bunkers, a portable control tower, 45 silhouette targets, control mechanisms, 37 demolition pits, telephone lines and signs. This segment of the project will be undertaken by the 1st and 2nd Construction Platoons, under the direction of 2nd Lt. Jerold D. Smart.

"KEEP UP THE FIRE"

On July 13, 1900, the 9th Infantry, 2nd Division, made the famous assault on Tientsin and it was there that Col. Ernest H. Liscum was killed leading the Regiment. While dying, he gave to the motto . . . "Keep Up the Fire."

MARSHALL AWARD WINNERS HONORED
Gen. Howze, Capt. Loberg, Capt. Scott
During Career Class Graduation Ceremony

Capts. Scott, Loberg Win Annual Marshall Awards

Capt. Charles W. Scott and Capt. John C. Loberg received the annual Marshall Award for excellence in writing during graduation exercises Tuesday for 400 members of two Infantry officer career classes.

Presented by Lt. Gen. Hamilton H. Howze, commanding general of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N.C., the awards were established by The Infantry School in 1960 to honor the memory of the late Gen. George C. Marshall.

Competition for the award is conducted each year in a writing contest open to members of the career classes.

Capts. Scott and Loberg received plaques with five-star clusters representing Gen. Marshall's rank and had their names inscribed on a permanent plaque at The Infantry School.

Infantry Magazine gave each winner a $100 Savings Bond and will publish the prize winning articles.

Capt. Scott's "The Mustard Jar" will appear in the July issue and Capt. Loberg's article, "About Two and a Half Football Fields," will be used in September.

Gen. Howze presented certificates and desk pen sets to the honor and distinguished graduates of the two classes.

From career class No. 1 they were Capt. Robert A. Ross, honor graduate, and Capt. Robert C. Lewis, distinguished graduate.

The honor graduate of career class No. 2 was Capt. Charles D. Bussey, while the distinguished graduate was Capt. Eldon D. Carr.

In his address, Gen. Howze discussed "where the Army stands today as it affects you."

He presented a picture of the Army as a career for a young man. The general said the physical aspects of the Army will continue to improve. He credited an increase in the size of the Army to good chances of promotion.

"A young officer must choose his associates carefully," Gen. Howze said.

"If you work too long hours, it is partly your own fault," he continued. "You should use your non-commissioned officers properly. Your own life and that of your unit will begin to improve when you start taking advantage of the abilities of these men."

After the address, Gen. Howze presented diplomas to 23 Allied students representing 20 countries.

Maj. Gen. C.W.G. Rich, commandant, and Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, presented diplomas to the 377 U. S. students.

Copter Pilot Gets Ticket, Claims 1st

CWO Jay L. Dugger of the 11th General Support Company, 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group, distinguished himself May 15 by becoming the first known Army helicopter pilot to receive a ticket for illegally parking his UH-1B "Iroquois" helicopter in the center of Georgia State Highway 144 West.

CWO Dugger, with eight other people aboard the aircraft, experienced a material failure while on a night tactical support mission at Fort Stewart, Ga. He immediately executed a precautionary landing, and State Highway 144 proved to be the only available place.

The Fort Stewart provost marshal, Maj. Eugene Carson, decided, after due consideration, to ticket the hapless helicopter pilot.

Without further ado he whipped out his book and wrote out a citation for illegal parking and obstructing traffic.

CWO Dugger's chagrin changed to a relieved laugh when Maj. Carson finally admitted it was all a joke.

COL. MARLIN

COL. BIRDSONG

2 Colonels Nominated To Receive Promotion

Col. Raymond B. Marlin, Infantry Center chief of staff, and Col. William H. Birdsong, director of the Company Operations Department of The Infantry School, have been nominated for promotion to brigadier general.

Col. Marlin arrived here in September, 1961, as director of the school's Weapons Department. In March of this year he was named chief of staff for The Infantry Center.

Col. Birdsong was commissioned at Mississippi State University upon graduating in 1939.

Upon arriving at the post in 1959 he became director of the Command and Staff Department.

He was later assigned as director of instruction for The Infantry School. Next he assumed command of the 1st Infantry Brigade, now the 197th under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept.

Memorial Rites Set for Thursday

Post personnel will observe Memorial Day Thursday with services at the Post Cemetery at 11 a.m. and a flag raising ceremony in front of The Infantry School at 11:45 a.m.

Post personnel will also assist with a ceremony at 2:30 p.m. at the Prisoner of War Monument at Cusseta and Fort Benning Road in Columbus. The ceremony at the monument will be sponsored by the Columbus Veterans Council.

May 30 will be a legal holiday for all post personnel, except those required for essential duties and those participating in the ceremonies.

President John F. Kennedy has issued a White House "Prayer For Peace" urging all Americans to "pause and realize that our nation has survived recurring crises which have tried the souls of men."

The message continued, "We are accustomed to join together on Memorial Day each year in grateful tribute to our forebears and to our fellow citizens who have given their lives on the field of battle. . .We should keep faith with our heroic dead by humbly and devoutly supplicating almighty God for guidance in our efforts to achieve a peaceful world."

At the Post Cemetery, every grave will be decorated with a small flag before the ceremony.

The program will include a 15-minute band concert beginning at 10:45 a.m. Prayers will be said by members of The Infantry Center Chaplains Section.

A general officer will lay a wreath on a grave. He will be assisted by Pamela Sue Fisk, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Eugene N. Fisk. She is a member of Girl Scout Troop 161. Also assisting will be Robert Cole, son of MSgt. and Mrs. Harold Cole, a member of Boy Scout Troop 39. A three-volley rifle salute will be fired in honor of the dead.

The flag in front of The Infantry School will be flown at half staff from reveille until noon, in tribute to all who have died in the service of their country.

At 11:45 a.m., there will be a 15-minute band concert at the flagstaff. A 21-gun salute at noon will be the signal for the flag to be raised to full staff.

The honor guard at the cemetery will be Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Byron Charles McCluney.

Salutes will be fired at the cemetery by a rifle squad from the 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command, under the command of Sgt. Oliver J. Boutte Jr., and at the flagstaff by Battery A, 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, 1st Infantry Brigade.

Music will be provided by The Infantry Center Band, directed by CWO Clyde W. White.

Academy Cadets Due Here in June

Live fire demonstrations, airborne and leadership training, and briefings on trends in today's Infantry are in store for the 550 members of the U. S. Military Academy, Class of 1964, when they visit here June 5-10.

The annual summer training visit is designed to give the cadets further training in Infantry tactics and techniques, and to introduce them to new developments and future trends within the Infantry.

The future officers are scheduled to arrive at Lawson Army Airfield between 6:10 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. in eight planes.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, a 1935 graduate of the Military Academy, will officially open the visit with a welcoming address at 7:10 a.m. June 6.

Following the general's remarks, a 35-minute talk on the Infantry today, will be presented.

At 8 a.m., the cadets will be split into three groups, and each group will participate in different phases of training.

Group I will adjourn to Eubanks Field, where instructors in The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department will introduce them to parachute training.

Included in this session will be parachute landing falls, swing landing training, mock door and 34-foot tower jumps.

Gen. Mobutu Is Scheduled To Visit Post

Maj. Gen. Joseph Mobutu, commander-in-chief of the Army of the Republic of the Congo, will visit here Tuesday and Wednesday.

Both ceremonies will be highlighted by a 19-gun salute provided by The Infantry Center salute battery, Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, is scheduled to serve as commander of troops.

The honor guard will be provided by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry.

and "buddy seat" rides from the 250-foot tower. These rides simulate an actual parachute jump.

Group II moves to Dixie Village where ten problem situations designed to test their ability to solve and lead a group through solving of the situation will be offered by members of the Leadership Committee of the Company Operations Department.

Group III will spend the morning with the Company Operations Department participating in a training as a mechanized rifle platoon in attack. Conducted under simulated combat conditions, the cadets will act as a rifle platoon and, loaded into armored personnel carriers, will storm a hill.

Tanks will support the attack.

During the afternoon of June 6 and the morning of June 7, the three groups will rotate until each has participated in the training exercises.

At 8:40 p.m. on June 6, the entire group will travel to Ruth Range where the Company Operations Department will present the problem, "The Rifle Company Task Force in Defense."

This problem features the firing of almost all of the Infantry's arsenal. The "Mad Minute," during which these weapons are fired simultaneously, is also a highlight of this Company Operations Department demonstration.

After a morning of rotational training on June 7, the cadets will form one group and spend an hour being briefed on special warfare. Later they will witness a three-hour problem showing an Infantry tank task force in attack.

At 7:30 p.m., a reception and dance will be held in the Main Officers' Open Mess, with Gen. Rich receiving the cadets and their dates.

The training period will close the morning of June 8, with a demonstration of Infantry weapons, and final remarks by Gen. Rich.

The remainder of the weekend will be free time for the cadets. Infantry Center officials are planning visits to points of interest in the surrounding area.

The cadets are slated to begin departing at 7:30 a.m. June 10.

YMCA Ball To Fete GSO Girl-of-Year

A "Coronation Ball" will be held at Armed Services YMCA in Columbus on Saturday, June 8, to honor the 1963 GSO Girl-of-the-Year.

Miss Sharon McKinney, daughter of Mrs. Beatrice Shipman of Phenix City, will be crowned as she receives the highest honor for members of the Girls Service Organization, the official junior hostess group of the Y.

The honoree was elected to receive the award by her fellow members in GSO. She earned the highest number of service points in volunteer service last year, and has also been elected as president of GSO for 1963-1964.

Announcement of the honor was made by William C. Buck, chairman of the committee of management of Armed Services YMCA, at the annual GSO meeting and banquet on May 16th. The meeting is held during Armed Forces Week each year, and the first public announcement is made when the honorees ride in the Armed Forces Day Parade.

Miss Glenda Moats and Miss Carol Stamps, runners-up, accompanied Miss McKinney, as did the GSO vice president, Miss Dorothy Voland.

Miss Moats and Miss Stamps will, together with Miss Loretta Parker, form the honor court at the Coronation Ball. Miss Parker, retiring 1962 Girl-of-the-Year, will crown her successor.

The dance will be held in the patio starting at 8:30 p.m. It will be formal, evening dresses for young ladies and uniform or coat and tie for men. The Five Shadows Orchestra will furnish music for dancing, and the coronation ceremonies will take place at 9:30 p.m.

All military personnel are cordially invited to attend.

PRECISION IS WATCHWORD FOR GUN SALUTES
Troops Stand At Rigid Attention During Salutes

42 Sailors Now Wear Jump Wings

Thirteen Navy officers and 29 enlisted men from the Underwater Demolition Team (UDT) Training School at the U.S. Naval Amphibious Base in Little Creek, Va., were among the 425 servicemen completing the basic airborne course here recently.

The "Frogmen" are enrolled in the Navy's four-part six-month UDT course, of which parachute training here is the second phase. The others consist of the first 16 weeks at Little Creek, Camp Pickett, Va., and Roosevelt Roads Naval Station, Puerto Rico, five weeks of scuba training at the U.S. Naval Station, Key West, Fla., which follows the Fort Benning phase, and then back to Little Creek for the remainder.

Two classes a year come to the parachute school. The next one is due in October.

Honor graduate of the class was Army PFC Paul K. Arita.

In addition to the Navy representatives and PFC Arita, the class included 42 Army officers and 345 enlisted men, 16 Air Force officers and two enlisted men, three Marine Corps enlisted men, and an Allied officer from Norway, Capt. Egil Magnussen.

Five of the newly qualified paratroopers are sons of former airborne servicemen.

SAGGY DRAPERIES?

Tumble draperies for a few minutes in the dryer to dust and freshen them. Remove from dryer and hang immediately and most fabrics will not require pressing.

Honors Ceremonies Commonplace at TIC

The sound of 105 mm howitzers exploding dummy rounds into the still air of Chapel Field is familiar to personnel of The Infantry Center.

Cannon honors for visiting dignataries are not unusual, but many are not familiar with the unit whose precision makes the stirring ceremonies possible.

Battery A of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, has the responsibility. Hours of practice and more hours of "spit and polish" are necessary, but according to 10th Artillery commander, Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, the performance of honors ceremonies is the mission of which the battery is most proud.

The honors platoon has 34 members. Thirty of them are cannoneers, divided into five-man teams manning the six guns. The senior officer initiates all firing commands, and the junior officer relays the orders to each gun in succession. The battery's senior non-commissioned officer counts the rounds and notifies the commander when the proper number has been fired. The guidon bearer is the 34th member.

Dignitaries eligible for gun salutes include the President of the United States, heads of state of Allied countries general officers, high-ranking civilian officials and Allied general officers.

Recent examples of this were 17-gun salutes rendered for Gen. Herbert B. Powell, former commanding general of the Continental Army Command, at a review here before his recent retirement, and for Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., commander of U.S. Army Europe and former post commander here.

ARTILLERY SOM . . . Sp4 Cyris J. Dube, Battery D, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, has been named the artillery unit's Soldier of the Month, Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, battalion commander, presented Sp4 Duhe with a three-day pass in recognition of his accomplishment.

Storm Test Under Way

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army, Navy and Air Force are participating in the third U.S. Weather Bureau National Severe Storms Project.

This year, project scientists are concentrating on the study of individual clouds and what goes on inside them.

The main tests are being conducted in Oklahoma and about 16,000 families within an 80-mile radius of Norman, Okla., have been provided with check-off forms to serve as a cooperative hail-reporting network.

Five specially equipped Air Force and Navy aircraft are participating in this year's project since planes of the U. S. Weather Bureau's Research Flight Facility are in India participating in the Indian Ocean Expedition.

The project has the active cooperation of the Aeronautical Systems Division, the Geophysics Research Directorate, the Tactical Air Command, the Air Weather Service, the Air Defense Command and several universities and research organizations.

USSR Is Maintaining Shoddy Record in UN

At the International conference in San Francisco in 1945 when the United Nations was conceived, the Soviet government, together with 49 other nations, pledged its efforts toward the settlement of international conflicts by the use of peaceful means.

Since then the Soviet Union has maintained a shoddy record in the United Nations consisting of obstructionism and unsuccessful efforts on the part of Soviet delegates to obtain approval of resolutions attacking free nations. In the Security Council, Soviet representatives have cast more than 80 vetoes.

Following Soviet occupation of North Korea in mid-1945, Kremlin authorities recruited trained and armed North Korean forces which were used in the aggression against the Republic of Korea five years later.

When the United Nations declared North Korea an aggressor the Soviet representative supported both the aggression and the later intervention of Red China.

Unlike the United States, the Soviet Union does not respect the United Nations and tries not to let its policies be affected by it. If the "opinion of mankind," as reflected in a UN resolution goes against them, the Reds—in effect—tell mankind to go fly a kite.

Next year Ivan will probably be replaced with an Igor, and Igor later with a Valery. Whoever sits in the Soviet chair will undoubtedly speak the same tired words of his predecessor, invoke the same vetoes.

It may be true that the Reds can fool all of the nations some of the time — they might even fool some of the nation all the time, but all the propaganda in the world can't fool all of the nations all of the time.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Privilege, Responsibility

BY CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.)
THOMAS F. DES CHAMPS

All of us have seen at least one person who has a withered limb. All of us have seen a plant or tree which is struggling just to live. Most often we do not know the exact reason for these things, but we can see that real fulfillment is not being realized. If we do not use a hand or an arm it soon becomes weak and useless. If we strip a tree of its branches, refuse to allow it water, and let the elements abuse it, the tree soon dies.

It is seldom that a person goes for day after day without food if it is available to him. We would agree a man is foolish indeed, if he would starve in front of a well-filled table. Yet as we see each new day, we also see people who are spiritually starving while being offered spiritual food.

The Lord our God offers to all of his people grace, but how many consistently respond to this in faith? Why do we deny ourselves of spiritual exercise and allow decay to set in? Why do we not feed, water, and protect this spiritual self which is ours.

The privileges which are ours, freely given unto us by Almighty God, are not without related responsibilities. These privileges were hard won by others who have come before us and freely given to us. The basis of responsibility for continuing privilege is ours — both yours and mine.

If we do less than to fulfill our full responsibility, then we have no right to expect our continuing privileges. The responsibility rests only with us. God's offer is still open to us — what answer do you give?

MEMORIAL DAY May 30

The House voted 277-to-53 to let school teachers in the District of Columbia use physical punishment to discipline unruly pupils. The bill was sent on to the Senate. Representative Basil Whitener (D-N.C.) introduced the legislation in the House. The only voice against the measure was the protest of Rep. William Fitts Ryan (D-N. Y.) who said "no amount of beating" was going to solve disciplinary problems in the capitol's schools.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (D-Va.) made an appeal for legislation to overcome what he termed the deplorable lack of uniformity in use of daylight saving time. He said he has revised a bill he introduced earlier in the session to make it clear that its intent is to extend daylight saving time "to all persons and operations throughout the United States during the three summer months."

The Senate has confirmed the nominations of a five-member delegation to represent the United States at the forthcoming special session if the United Nations General Assembly. The delegation is headed by Adlai Stevenson. It also includes his two deputies Francis Plimpton and Charles Yost, as well as Jonathan B. Bingham of New York and former Rep. Sidney R. Yates (D-Ill).

The Senate has approved without objection a compromise bill authorizing expenditure of $15.3 billion by the military services for new weapons and for research and development. The measure agreed on by a Senate-House conference committee, reconciles differences in separate bills previously passed by each branch.

Memorial Day Messages Of President, Gen. Rich

"Whereas Memorial Day provides a fitting occasion for the American people to pause and realize that our nation has survived recurring crises which have tried the souls of men; and

Whereas we recognize that the maintenance of our freedom has required constant vigilance, unified strength, and the willingness of our people to make all necessary sacrifices; and

Whereas we are accustomed to join together on Memorial Day each year in grateful tribute to our forebears and to our fellow citizens who have given their lives on the field of battle; and

Whereas in memory of their sacrifices in this noble cause we should keep faith with our heroic dead by humbly and devoutly supplicating Almighty God for guidance in our efforts to achieve a peaceful world; and

Whereas to this end the Congress, in a joint resolution approved May 11, 1950, requested the President to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe each Memorial Day as a day of prayer for permanent peace:

"Now, therefore, I, John F. Kennedy, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim Memorial Day, Thursday, May 30, 1963, as a day of prayer for lasting peace, and I urge all citizens on that day to invoke God's blessing on those who have died in defense of our country and to pray for a world of freedom with peace and justice. I designate the hour beginning in each locality at eleven o'clock in the morning of that day as the time to unite in such prayer.

"I also urge the press, radio, television, and all other media of information to cooperate in this observance.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

In observing Memorial Day, each of us should give serious thought to the brave sacrifices made by our honored dead in defense of this great Nation.

As comrades-in-arms we have the patriotic and sacred duty to keep faith with them by strengthening the defense of our Country and maintaining the freedoms for which they died.

May this Memorial Day, through their sacrifices and our rededication of purpose, contribute to lasting peace, a stronger and happier America, and a world of freedom with peace and justice.

Time Too Valuable To Be Wasted Away

Ever wonder where all the time goes? It is such a busy world we live in today that often we simply cannot find the time or energy to do work properly.

The fact of the matter, however, is that we waste enough time each day to get all our work done and still have enough left over to relax.

Granted, one cannot work continuously throughout the day without a break or letup at some time. But is it necessary to have the day broken up into tiny bits of work and disproportionate bits of rest?

A job to perform is your main object of the day. Constant concentration and a mind oriented to the task at hand can keep you going on the right track.

Sure, Mr. Serviceman, you need that coffee break and even that idle chatter around the water fountain, but these things should come second and not first in your work day. You will find that a little extra effort will pay off in a job well done and in the time allotted.

Never let time be your enemy. Make friends with it fast.

School in Columbus Is Dedicated to Late Gen. Eddy

Civilian and military leaders gathered in Columbus Sunday to dedicate a junior high school in honor of the late Lt. Gen. Manton Sprague Eddy, a combat leader in both world wars who became a leader in the civilian community upon his retirement.

Unveiling a pastel portrait of the general, who died April 10, 1962, was 10-year-old Susannah Meade Hardaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Hardaway III, and a great-niece of Gen. Eddy.

In accepting the portrait, which will hang in the school, John R. Kinnett Sr., first vice president of the Muscogee County Board of Education, said:

"This building, which is being dedicated to Gen. Eddy today, serves a section of our school district which is populated heavily by military families. We have realized for a number of years the importance of the military as a vital part of the economic, social and spiritual life of our community."

Speaking before an audience in the Manton Sprague Eddy Junior High School gymnasium, Kinnett added, "As we accept this portrait and dedicate this building, we do so realizing that we honor ourselves as much as we honor Gen. Eddy, because he was a great leader, not only of the U. S. Armed Forces, but he was a leader in civilian life of this community during his short span of retirement."

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben E. Jenkins made the dedication address.

"Naming this school for a colleague of our calling has a special significance for us of the Army, especially Infantrymen, and we are grateful to the Board of Education," Gen. Jenkins stated. "And naming this particular one for him is especially appropriate when we consider its proximity to our great Infantry Center and the vast number of Army children in its student body."

Gen. Jenkins traced Gen. Eddy's rise as a military leader from his commissioning in 1916. During World War I, Gen. Eddy saw much combat, attaining the position of a battalion commander by the time of the Armistice.

In March, 1942, he became assistant commander of the 9th Division, and later became its commander. He commanded the division through North Africa, Sicily and in Normandy, until Third Army entered the line, Gen. Jenkins noted.

"Generals Eisenhower, Bradley and Patton then selected him to command the XII Corps as it entered the line on Third Army's right. He commanded this corps for the next nine months, from Normandy through Southeast Germany," Gen. Jenkins continued.

"In 1950, he returned to Europe to reactivate and command Seventh Army because of the growing Communist threat," Gen. Jenkins added. "The speed, vigor and skill with which he did this reassured Western Europe and unified it and is largely responsible for the strong NATO we have today.

"In 1952 he was made commander-in-chief of all Army forces in Europe where he remained until retirement in early 1953 for physical disability, after having been retained on the active list almost a year beyond normal retirement age.

"Following retirement, he made his home in Columbus where he had many friends. He soon became a highly successful business executive and entered a field of civic activity with an energy, a modesty and a success that soon marked him as one of our most valuable citizens."

After giving a detailed account of Gen. Eddy's successes as commander of the XII Corps during World War II, Gen. Jenkins paused to offer an analysis.

"We know why this remarkable man was so respected and beloved in our community," he commented, "but do we really know why he was so successful and so respected and beloved as a leader in battle?

"This we do know, he had mastered the arts required of combat leadership in World War I, had practiced them every day of his life thereafter, and when the necessity arose for him to again display those vital qualities in battle, he was ready.

"He was a master of the art of dealing effectively with all subordinates in his command. He was a master of the art of employing efficiently every piece of equipment in his command, regardless of variety, numbers and complexity.

"He was a master of the art of moulding different personalities and call this complex equipment into an instrument of armed conflict, capable of performing any combat task assigned him.

"And lastly, but of first importance, he was possessed of the personal habits and traits of character required to sell him promptly to his subordinates and his superiors as a leader. He had the complete trust and confidence of all of them.

"Great leaders like Gen. Eddy do not die," he concluded. "Their earthly bodies may be removed from our midst, but their soul and indomitable spirit remain with us to be revered and honored forever — yes, by generations unborn, as will be the case of Gen. Eddy as new generations read the plaque affixed to this institution honoring him."

Serving as master of ceremonies during the dedication was William Henry Shaw, superintendent of education for the Muscogee County School District. Dr. Sidney Austin Gates of the First Presbyterian Church of Columbus gave the invocation and benediction.

Musical selections were presented by the Eddy Junior High School Band and Choral Club.

Manton Sprague Eddy Junior High School was contracted April 11, 1960, and occupied March 20, 1961. The Board of Education, by formal resolution, named the school for the general May 14, 1962.

Maintenance Battalion Receives Its Colors

The 711th Maintenance Battalion colors were presented to Lt. Col. Robet D. Worthen, battalion commander, by Col. Robert C. Shaw, commanding officer of the 11th Air Assault Division Support Command, in ceremonies held May 18 in the Harmony Church area.

Troops from Headquarters and Main Support Cimpany and Company A, Forward Support, along with their respective commander, participate in the presentation.

Col. Shaw, in an address to the men, stated, "I am proud to make this presentation. We are obligated to serve and carry on the fine traditions of the past for the troops who went before us."

Later Col. Shaw and Col Worthen, together with Lt. Col. Thomas W. Buchanan, 11th Support Command executive officer, Capt. George D. Humphreys, commander, Headquarters and Main Support, 1st Lt. Louie F. Counts, commander of Company A, and the 711th Sgt. Maj. Bobbie R. McGuire, participated in a cake cutting ceremony.

After cutting the cake with a Japanese sword, Col. Shaw presented the first slice to Col. Worthen. The Japanese sword was symbolic of World War II memories for the 711th, which served in the Pacific Theater and was engaged in three major campaigns.

The 711th was activated Feb. 25, 1943, as the 711th Airborne Ordnance Battalion at Camp Mackall, N.C., a part of the 11th Airborne Division. On July 1, 1958, the unit was deactivated while serving in Germany.

When the 11th Air Assault Division was formally activated Feb. 15, 1963, the 711th became a part of the new air-mobile concept, ready to carry on its fine traditions of the past.

Ladieswear Displayed At Poolside

The pool area of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the scene of a humorous spring fashion show and brunch for the wives of the Weapons Department.

Wives of the Anti-tank Missile Committee hostessed the event.

The decorations committee, headed by Mrs. Harold Lusby, placed Barbie dolls, courtesy of a local department store, on each table to carry out the theme of Spring Fashions.

Behind the tables were screens decorated with drawings of fashions by Mrs. Richard Schonberger.

The surprise of the day was the fashion show, which featured original fashions created by the hostesses.

Each portrayed one of the various events an officers wife should attend, and the attire that should be worn.

All the ladies of the Anti-tank Missile Committee participated in the events by making their fashions and by modeling.

The skit was narrated by Mrs. Earl Hale and written by Mrs. Darrell Best.

Mrs. George Prestridge was chairman for the affair.

Honored guest was Mrs. Raymond Marlin.

By talking to alumnae of various sororities, they found out the responsibilities, privileges and rewards membership in sororities in different sections of the country carry.

AFMA Is Addressed By U.S. Tax Official

Sixty - five members and guests of Chapter 13 of the Armed Forces Management Association recently heard an address by W. J. Bookholt, regional commissioner, Internal Revenue Service, Atlanta, at a luncheon meeting in Salerno Mess.

Bookholt discussed the realignment of the Internal Revenue Service to make it possible to utilize automatic equipment.

"The size of the workload made it necessary to mechanize the handling of income tax returns," he said.

"The regional office in Atlanta has become a pilot installation where we are learning to use automatic data processing techniques," Bookholt added.

"Our job now requires 1,700 employees as compared with 385 a few months ago," he said. "We find that the new personnel are easily trained and adapted to new concepts of transcribing tax returns and recording the information on punch cards and tapes."

Bookholt said the Atlanta office designed and built new quarters to house a computer, sometimes referred to as a "mechanical monster that knows all and sees all."

"It is true that we have made some errors in the process of going mechanical, such as crediting you twice with your withholding and then sending you a check for supposed overpayment, but the computer will find us out and we will get it right in the long run," Bookholt stated.

"Even the error made by a taxpayer who reversed the figures on his W2 Form, causing us to send him a check equal to his annual income, has been corrected," he continued.

"The rate of error is less than one-half of one per cent. In fact, when we in the Revenue Service make an error, it becomes a public relations problem — so much so that we can't afford a mistake," Bookholt said.

Surgeon Says

Summer Sun Can Bring Dangerous Effects

By Capt. Leonard F. Greenberg

As hot weather approaches, we must be alert to the heat. This can be quite a problem in the Fort Benning area.

Heat cramps are painful cramps of the voluntary muscles that may occur following exposure to heat. They result primarily from excessive loss of salt from the body. The muscles of the extremities and of the abdominal wall are usually involved and the body temperature is normal. Heat cramps are promptly relieved by replacing the salt loss from the body.

This is best accomplished by drinking water containing one-quarter teaspoonful of table salt, or two salt tablets to each quart of water.

Heat exhaustion occurs as the result of excessive loss of water and salt from the body. It is characterized by profuse perspiration, paleness of the skin, confusion, dizziness, weakness and vomiting.

Occasionally, cramps of the extremities or abdominal muscles occur. Consciousness is rarely lost. The body temperature is usually slightly elevated. The skin is usually cool. There is profuse perspiration, and the pulse is rapid (140-200 per minute.

A person suffering from heat exhaustion should be moved to a cool place where he may rest. Elevation of the feet, and moving or massaging the extremities are helpful. The deficit of water and salt should be made up by the administration of large quantities of salt solution as described above.

Heat stroke is a very serious condition with a high mortality rate. It is characterized by extremely high body temperature between 106-110 degrees, usually with coma.

The development of heat stroke represents a breakdown of the body's heat regulating mechanism, and is particularly prone to occur in individuals who are not acclimatized to heat. Physical exertion, alcoholism, and diarrhea are factors in the development of heat strokes.

After the disturbance of the heat-regulating mechanism occurs, the individual may absorb heat from the ground or the surrounding air. In the great majority of cases, there is absence of sweating. Headache, dizziness, mental confusion, weakness and nausea are symptoms which may occur prior to the onset of heat stroke.

Usually, however, the onset of heat stroke occurs with dramatic suddenness with collapse and loss of consciousness. Deep coma is usually present and convulsing may occur.

In the early stage, the patient's skin is usually hot, red and dry. There is absence of sweating. Death may occur rapidly. One attack of heat stroke predisposes to a second attack and care should be taken by the individual upon recovery to avoid a second exposure to extreme heat.

The lowering of the patient's body temperature as rapidly as possible is the most important objective in the treatment of heat stroke. If there is any source of cool water nearby, the patient should be immersed in water. Otherwise water should be sprinkled over the patient and its evaporation hastened by fanning.

In addition to these cooling measures, the patient's extremities and trunk should be rubbed briskly to increase circulation to the skin. The patient should be transported to the hospital immediately. During transportation, the passage of air currents through an opened door of the vehicle will aid cooling.

People who are not accustomed to the extreme heat in this area should use caution by not exerting themselves in the heat. It takes one to two weeks to become fully acclimatized to the heat.

During that period exposure to the direct rays of the sun and exertion during the hottest parts of the day should be kept at a minimum, although this amount may be increased each day.

Unless a person is sweating continuously and repeatedly, it is not necessary to take salt tablets. Extra salt in the cooking will suffice.

You should be aware of these dangers of heat, and take steps to prevent yourself from becoming a heat casualty. Knowledge of the first aid treatment of a heat injury can prevent further damage, and may even prevent death.

Space Research May Put Grease Jobs Out of Style

LOS ANGELES (AFPS) — Space Vehicle research may result in automobiles that never need greasing, a Navy lubricant specialist says.

A 500 per cent increase in the life of bearing assemblies was reported to the American Chemical Society by M. J. Devine, head of the experimental lubricants branch of the Aeronautical Materials Laboratory at the Naval Air Engineering Center in Philadelphia.

The new lubricating system, designed to keep machinery working without care in space utilizes a combination of molybdenum surfaces and lubricants made of metallic sulfides.

Civil Defense Support Role Is Army Job

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Army again is assigned the primary responsibility of coordinating the military support role of the Armed Services in a civil defense emergency under a Directive signed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The new Directive (3025.10) revises and brings up to date the ground rules for military participation in civil defense emergency operations in time of national peril and takes account of the transfer of civil defense responsibility to the Department of Defense from an independent agency.

The revised instructions also reflect an increasing recognition of the close interrelationships between Civil Defense and the military and the necessity for cooperation in mobilizing the Nation's entire resources, should a nuclear attack occur upon the Continental United States.

Within the Department of Defense, the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (Civil Defense) will be the main coordinating agency for the policy and program aspects of military participation in civil defense preparedness activities and emergency operations.

Assistance to civil defense authorities might take the form of fire protection, handling of casualties, radiological monitoring, debris clearance and restoration of utilities, and similar operational functions of a temporary emergency nature.

Armed Forces Week Saw 2nd Infantry Division Participation in Reviews, Ceremonies and Special Displays

Combat Strength Unveiled for Columbus Citizens

Columbus' downtown streets echoed with the rumblings of heavy vehicles, the tramping of marching feet and the sounds of shouted commands last week as the 2nd Infantry Division paraded its military might before the onlooking civilian populace in celebration of Armed Forces Day.

The crowds overflowing the downtown sidewalks respectfully stepped back as heavy tanks, personnel carriers and towed howitzers, representing the might and mobility of the combat-ready 2nd Division, rumbled by.

Leading the parade was Maj. Gen. (ret.) Philip B. Gallagher, parade marshal and former commander of the Military Order of World Wars.

Giving the invocation was Lt. Col. James H. Fiser, 2nd Divison chaplain, and among those on the reviewing stand, as the commander of the troops, was Col. Dwight B. Dickson, 2nd Brigade commander.

Second Division units participating in the parade, in addition to the commander of troops and his staff, were the 2nd Division Band; the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry; the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry; 2nd Division Artillery (Composite); and elements of the Support and Transportation Battalion; 2nd Medical Battalion; 702nd Maintenance Battalion; 2nd Administration Company; 122nd Signal Battalion; 2nd Engineer Battalion and Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

In addition, Division Artillery and 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor provided the mounted elements.

Liscum Bowl; Craftsmanship Extraordinary

By Peter Tatistcheff

The story of the 9th Infantry Liscum bowl is the tale of an important moment in the turn of the century in China. The workmanship that went into creating this priceless memento has been a legend. Finally united with the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, the bowl and its 52 companion cups recently successfully weathered a trip from Alaska, where they had been held by the 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry.

A 2nd Division Special

The intricate workmanship of Japanese craftsmen is beyond value. Originally, the raw silver from which it was made was priced at $65,000. Seven month's work went into it. The latest estimated value was placed at $125,000.

This is the official history of the Liscum Bowl:

The battle of Tientsin, China, took place on the 12th day of July, 1900. Except for a battalion of marines, the 9th Infantry was the only American military force engaged in that battle. Col. Emerson H. Liscum, the regimental commander, was killed early in the action while in the act of passing the national colors to some men of Company H. The original color bearer had been wounded.

Discover Mint

On July 15, while a detachment of the regiment was patrolling the southeastern section of Tientsin, it discovered the smoldering ruins of a mint in which was stored about $676,000 in silver bars. The mint had been set on fire by shells from the British and Japanese artillery during the battle.

Realizing the political importance that might be attached to this discovery, aside from the intrinsic value of the silver, a strong guard from the regiment was at once put over the mint and the facts were reported to Col. Meade, USMC, at that time senior American officer in China. Col. Meade ordered the commanding officer of the 9th Infantry, Lt. Col. C. A. Coolidge, to transfer the silver from the mint to the compound, or walled enclosure, in which the battalion of marines were quartered.

The Army escort wagons of the 9th Infantry were used for this purpose. Among the last of the silver to be taken from the mint were two molten masses resembling ore. This ore formation was caused by the melting of the silver bars after the building in which they were stored had caught fire. Both of these pieces were formally presented to the 9th Infantry, through its representative on the spot, Capt. Frank De W. Ramsey, by Prince Chang, who officially represented Li Hung Chang. Prince Chang realized that without prompt action by the 9th Infantry in guarding and transporting the silver to a place of safety, it would have been looted and lost. It was for these reasons that he presented the 9th with the two pieces of ore as a token of his appreciation for what the regiment had done.

In the Spring of 1901, while the regiment was quartered in that part of the Chinese city of Peking known as the Temple of Agriculture, Capt. Ramsey called an informal meeting of a few officers of the regiment to decide what should be done with the silver ore. After a brief discussion it was decided to have the ore smelted and to have the pure silver turned into a bowl that would be symbolic of China. The action of this committee was later approved by Col. C. F. Robe, regimental commander. While the cups, some fifty in number were fabricated by a chinese silversmith in Peking, work on the bowl did not begin until several months later.

Bowl Begun

It was not until the regiment had left China and returned to Manila that definite steps were taken toward the making of the bowl. Capt. Ramsey learned from some Navy officers in Manila that such a bowl as desired could bo made by Arthur, Bond and Company, silversmiths of Yokahama. The instructions that accompanied it were that a punch bowl of large dimensions was wanted, it must have a ladle and a tray.

The bowl was not completed until November 2, 1902; about seven months had been required to make it.

In April, 1903, while the regiment was stationed at Madison Barracks, N.Y., the bowl was received. It had been shipped from Yokahama to New York via the Suez Canal in a U. S. cruiser.

Each of the 52 cups contains the names of several officers. The origin of the custom sprang from a desire to perpetuate the memory of commissioned personnel of the regiment, beginning with the names of all officers who were on its rolls on the date of the battle of Tientsin. More explicitly, a particular cup contains only the names of the colonels of the regiment beginning with Liscum. Another contains only the names of the lieutenant colonels; there are three cups, one for each of the three majors, containing the names of their respective successors. There is even a cup for each second lieutenant. When a new officer joins the regiment, his name is engraved on the cup which contained the name of the officer whom he succeeded.

The Liscum Bowl weighs 90 pounds and has a capacity of 20 gallons.

Reenlistment Counselors Revamp Administrative Structure in Division

People keeping tabs on reenlistment figures in the 2nd Infantry Division will watch Re-Up events here with a keen interest in coming months.

Following a series of meetings called by the office of the 2nd Division adjutant General and by reenlistment officer Capt. Frank J. Nugent Jr., the entire reenlistment structure in the division has undergone a change.

Called Back

Individual major command reenlistment personnel have been called back to the central office and will now work geographic areas on Sand Hill and Kelley Hill from a central office located near the 2nd Division Sand Hill Post Office. The new procedure is designed to make full use of the reenlistment noncommissioned officer's time, allowing for added flexibility.

Under the old system employed until this week throughout the division, reenlistment noncommissioned officers were assigned on orders to separate major commands in the 2nd Division. Covering the entire division with reenlistment facilities, eight men worked directly with major commands such as Division Artilley, Support command and infantry brigades. Each man maintained his own office in his command.

Under the new system, these noncommissioned officers have been released by division units and brought back to the central division reenlistment office. Capt. Nugent has assigned six different geographic areas which will be visited by his representatives.

When the new system is operational, there will be two reenlistment areas on Kelley Hill and four on Sand Hill. SFC Virgil M. McNeill and Sgt. Louis Prolago will be on call for all units in the Kelley Hill area. Artillery units and the 2nd Medical Battalion will be serviced by MSgt. George E. Delong Jr. Next is MSgt. George Moore, handling reenlisting enlisted men in the 2nd Engineer Battalion, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor; Headquarters and Company A, 702nd Maintenance Battalion; and Headquarters Compay, 1st Brigade.

MSgt. Furman M. Reynolds Jr., has been selected area counselor for the 2nd Aviation Battalion, 2nd Division Headquarters Company, 2nd Military Police Company, 2nd Administration Company, Support Command Headquarters Company, the 2nd Supply and Transport Company, and 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Area counselor for the 3rd Brigade Headquarters Company, 7th Cavalry, and the 38th Infantry, is SFC Robert L. Gray.

Working from a central office, these area counselors will have essentially the same basic procedure in keeping enlisted men abreast of Army reenlistment policy changes. They will work with enlisted records held in the 2nd Administration Company's Composite personnel team offices.

Enlisted men in the 2nd Division will have the opportunity to call their reenlistment counselor directly through the main reenlistment office.

Six Shooters Are Chosen To Join 3rd Army Team

By TOM Higgins

Six men of the 2nd Infantry Division Marksmanship detachment were recently selected to be assigned to the Third U.S. Army Advanced Marksmenship Training Unit (TAATMU). They have already departed for Fort McPherson, Ga. for training and retention for the Third Army's team will compete nationally in the U.S. Army team on the basis of past firing performances, especially at the recent Third Army matches later this year.

The six shooters were chosen for the Third Army team on the basis of past firing performances, especially at the recent Third Army Rifle and Pistol Championship Matches. L. T. Ray, Carney, detachment commander, said that no sooner had the team returned to its quarters than the "sensational six" from the detachment had packed their bags and were on their way headed north toward Atlanta.

SFC Burl Branham, SFC Marcus Hayes, SFC Albert Chapman, Sgt. Barnabas Czikora, Sgt. D. L. Crowell, and SSgt. Carl Hawks are currently on temporary duty from the "Second to None" in hopes of placing in this year's U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Championship Match to be held at Fort Benning from June 4-14. From there they are eligible to join the U.S. Army's Eastern Region teams which compete at Camp Perry in August. The 2nd Division's "sensational six" were picked for the Third Army team after displaying commendable firing abilities at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Shreveport, Louisiana, but most decisively at the Third Army Matches held at Fort Benning recently where Sgt. Czikora fired a maximum score of 100 points with a 11 V's in the 200-yard Rapid Fire Match at McAndrew Range.

Sgt. D. L. Crowell placed in seven rifle matches. He came out as Third Master in the 200-yard Slow Fire with a score of 95 points and 6 V's. In the 300-yard Rapid Fire he placed Fifth Master with a score of 99 points and 5 V's. He also placed as Fifth Master in the National Match Course with a score of 246 points and 24 V's. In the Rapid Fire Aggregate, Crowell fired 188 points and 12 V's [illegible] Master. With a total of 477 points and 66 V's, he came out Third Master in the Grand Aggregate (rifle). In the Off-hand Aggregate he placed Second Master with a score of 191 points and 9 V's. In the slow Fire Aggregate Sgt. Crowell with a total of 486 points and 43 V's. Sgt. Crowell was a firing member on the Second Division's Chiefs which fired their way to second place on the Short Range team match. Sgt. Joseph Parciasepe was team coach.

Besides Sgt. Crowell other members of the rifle team were Sgt. Burl Branham, Sgt. Barnabas Czikora, SSgt. Robert Little, SFC Albert Chapman, and Sp5 Jabie L. Price. The Chiefs total score in taking second place was 877 points with 46 V's. The team was presented with a trophy depicting a firer.

Other individual firing scores from the "Indianhead" marksmanship unit who placed in the matches were SFC Burl Branham, 245 points and 23 V's in the Leg Match (rifle). Branham also placed Sixth Master in the Rapid Fire Aggregate with a score of 394 points and 21 V's. Sgt. Czikora placed Fourth Master in the Slow Fire Aggregate with 482 points and 37 V's, and he was Open Winner in the Off Hand points with 8 V's.

Electric Automobiles Came in What Year?

The motor car can be an instrument of good or evil, life or death.

The commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," applies as much to the man or woman driving a car as it does on every other occasion throughout the day or night. It applies perhaps in greater degree because so many people drive cars and because the average person overlooks the fact that an automobile can be a deadly weapon.

The first step in controlling this potential weapon is to take an active interest in its construction and upkeep. Statistics show that professional drivers, people for whom a vehicle is instrumental in their livelihood, know more about cars and are involved in considerably fewer traffic accidents.

TO PERFORM AT BENNING BALLET
(L-R) Madeleine Clark, Evelyn Williams

Benning Ballet School To Present Dance Concert

The Fort Benning Ballet School will present its annual dance concert June 2 at 8 p.m. in the Fort Benning Playhouse on Main Post. Admission is free.

The school, founded in 1956 by Miss Rossie Gilmore, director, is sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. Mrs. George Arnold and Mrs. James Peabody are chairmen of the project.

Appearing on the program will be the Ballet Guild of Columbus in an original ballet "A Legend for Moderns," which was given at the spring concert of the Guild in April. Music for the "Legend" was composed by Mrs. Edward W. Swift Jr. of Columbus and arranged by Mr. George Johnson. Guests of the Ballet Guild who will perform are Mr. Lynn Curtis of Auburn and Opelika, and Miss Pinky Landrum of Auburn.

Mr. Curtis who takes the lead of Garret in the Guild ballet is a professional dancer who has appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show and other professional stages. He is now teaching ballet and jazz in Auburn and Opelika and is director of the Auburn Civic Ballet. Miss Landrum was a finalist in the Miss Alabama Contest and is principal ballerina in the Auburn Civic Ballet.

Taking the lead of Tamara, an ethereal type of girl who is the dream of every young man, is Vicki Morales, Fort Benning Ballet School's own talented young dancer. In addition to her many appearances on stage and television, Vicki became a student teacher at the Fort Benning Ballet School this past season. At Baker High School where she is a student, she has had leads in "Bye, Bye Bye Birdie" and "Where's Charlie."

The first ballet on the program "Tortoise and the Hare" has been written by an outstanding author of children's books, Mrs. Richard Delaune, wife of Lt. Col. Delaune of Fort Benning. This is Mrs. Delaune's first original ballet, but her books, Giraffes Can Be Trouble, Jeff Davis, Boy of the Confederacy, and Jeb Stuart, and most recently in the Childhood of Famous Americans series, "Babe Didrikson," are well known.

Mrs. Raymond King has designed the costumes and scenery for all the ballets. Mrs. W. W. Hoyle made the costumes.

The second ballet on the program, "Slumber Party," is a ballet about a group of teenagers who cannot get to sleep. They each tell in dance what they would like to be when they grow up. Vicki Morales takes the lead.

In charge of music for the program will be Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson. Mr. Johnson is concertmaster for the Columbus Symphony Orchestra. The Johnsons perform locally as a duo and are well known through the area for their "Super Club" presentations.

Members of the 2nd Infantry Division Band under the direction of Mr. Darrell G. Blumm will be featured.

Leading students who will be featured in the "Tortoise and the Hare" are Madeleine Clark as the Hare, Bini Harris as Tortoise, and Janice Johnson, as Hare's friend. Linden Delaune, daughter of the authoress, will be the bunny having the birthday party.

COOK of the WEEK

Our recipe this week, from the land of the Dutch, is taken from the Ladies of the Big Indianhead Cookbook, "What's Cooking at Fort Benning," and is by Mrs. Joe M. Foy.

HETE BLIKSEN

Buy six center-cut T-bone pork chops, one inch thick; trim off excess fat. Melt one piece of fat in large skillet.

Sprinkle chops with salt and pepper. Brown well on both sides in skillet, then add ¼ cup water, cover, simmer until well done (about one hour), turning often.

Meanwhile, pare two pounds each of potatoes and apples; cut into one inch cubes. In large kettle, heat 2½ cups of canned condensed beef broth, undiluted.

Add potatoes, apples, two large chopped onions, one teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Simmer, covered, one-half hour, stirring often.

While potato mixture simmers, place 12 fresh pork sausages and ¼ cup cold water in large skillet, simmer, covered, for five minutes. Drain off water, then let sausages cook well until browned.

Heap potato mixture in center of large heated platter; arrange meat on platter around potato mixture, then garnish with fresh dill.

Lead Character for Little Theatre Show

Enchanted World of 'Fantasticks' Bursts From Spell Cast by 2nd Division Soldier

By Peter Tatistcheff

A fresh new talent will be unveiled to theater audiences in the Columbus-Fort Benning area in June when the Columbus Little Theatre presents its production of the musical play "The Fantasticks," a work which since first readings has stirred more controversy than any play ever attempted by this theatre group. Cast in the starring role is a New Englander, a soldier who just last month joined the 2nd Infantry Division after a year's duty in Korea.

The new little theatre production scheduled to be presented in the Bradley Museum in Columbus beginning June 10 has been in rehearsal one week, directed by Charles Jones, director of the community's latest hit show, "Guys and Dolls."

Heading the cast list is 2nd Administration Company's Sp4 George Angermann, playing the "Narrator-Bandit." No characters were ever more unearthly than the eight depicted in "The Fantasticks,". Not since Broadway audiences were electrified by the sight of the goddess June flying from the balcony and landing on stage to fight it out with Jupiter in Cole Porter's legendary musical "Out of this World," not since this extravaganza have audiences been faced with such bold figures of the imagination.

And this production will be given in the Bradley Museum's recently completed octagonal grand auditorium in the three-quarter round, the modern concept of "intimate theater."

Of the show's eight roles, the character of "Narrator - Bandit" played by Angermann serves as the audience's link between their own world and the at times satirical, at times whimsical, and blatantly otherworldly enchantment of "The Fantasticks." He challenges the imagination of the audience to picture "a time in September when life was slow and oh so mellow." As if from his finger tips, he materializes a young girl, a young boy, two fathers and "a wall." he speaks directly to the audience, hypnotizing the play into action, then steps back to give the characters room to tell their own story. Throughout the play he reappears to manipulate the action and tell the audience what to expect.

At one crucial moment he leaps into the play itself as a bandit to stage the play's notorious abduction scene. In the second act he bursts the enchanted world of the play's central lovers, expresses each character individually to the fever and horror of the "real world" and allows the characters to be "burned a bit by the sun."

A Furious Pace

Since his arrival at Fort Benning and the 2nd Infantry Division, Sp4 Angerman has thrown himself into a furious pace he began as a child in his native Layton, New Jersey. Graduating in 1961 from private school in New Hampton, New Hampshire, he selected active Army duty as the next in a long series of adventures that, at one time or another, have brought him temporary summer experiences as a salesman, manager of riding stables, chef, gas station attendant, laborer and caddy.

Earning letters in both football and baseball while in high school, the bandit of "The Fantastick" finds horses and skiing his two favorite sports. Less than a month ago, he arrived from duty with the 32nd Infantry near Toke-Ri, Korea, approximately 15 miles from the 38th parallel. Training furiously, he also managed to spend time singing as president of the 7th Infantry Division "Bayonet Chorale." Of duty in Korea, he says "I 'm ashamed to say I never even managed to see one North Koreasi."

His singing group toured military installations in Korea and Japan, recalling high school days when he toured with another singing group, the New England Double Quartette.

Angermann joined the 2nd Division's 2nd Administration Company in mid-May. He serves as morning report clerk for the company's 2nd Replacement detachment. Since his arrival, beside training with the "Second to None" division, he has joined the choir of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church in Columbus and worked as a stagehand with the Columbus production of "Guys and Dolls."

Germany-Based Unit Accents Maintenance

By 23rd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — Due to changes brought about by Reorganization Objectives, Army-Division (ROAD), the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry is currently rejuvenating its maintenance program.

As part of the accelerated Readiness Maintenance Program being emphasized by the 8th Infantry Division, the 23rd's motor pool section is making the transition from the old standard infantry unit to the new ROAD mechanized unit. Key personnel heading the operation are Lt. William H. McCondel, motor officer, and CWO Robert L. Pender. Assisting the 23rd motor pool is a 35-man detachment from the 2nd Brigade, headed by SFC Carlton Outlaw, motor sergeant.

The big difference between the mechanized unit and the standard infantry unit is that now armored personnel carriers are used to transport men and supplies. This entails quite a bit more maintenance.

The motor pool also conducts maintenance classes twice a week for the officers and men of the battalion. At the conclusion of the classes, each individual is expected to be able to perform first echelon maintenance on the M151 one-quarter ton vehicle. The aim of the classroom program is to better acquaint the commanders and men with all maintenance problems and the correct procedures for correcting them.

Lt. McCondel recently said of the aim of the motor pool, "Our product is maintenance. We have sales representatives throughout the battalion. Service is what we sell and what we sell is serviced."

The division softball tournament got underway on Sand Hill at 6:30 in the evening with the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry meeting and beating the 17th Artillery Battalion, 5-2; and at Kelley Hill at 6:30 where the 15th Artillery edged the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry by a 5-4 score.

The first night of tournament games also saw the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry defeat the 38th Artillery, 8-5, on Sand Hill at 8 o'clock. The Sand Hill games were umpired by Capt. William Cosgrove and Lt. Virgil Peterson, the Kelley Hill game by SFC William Morrow and SSgt. Luis Avillant.

Another victory was earned by the 15th Artillery in a contest Monday evening on Sand Hill. The 15th dumped fellow artillerymen of the 37th by a 4-1 score. Louis Gray, noncommissioned officer in charge of special services, umpired the artillerymen on Sand Hill. The Kelley Hill game was judged by SSgt. Floyd Washington of division special services and Sgt. Avillant.

The next evening, Tuesday, the 12th Artillery Battalion hung a loss on the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry record, downing that squad 12-4 on Sand Hill. The 12th Artillery team is a composite of that battalion and Division Artillery Headquarters.

The 8 o'clock Sand Hill game was a victory for the 702nd Maintenance Battalion over the 17th Artillery, 11-8. Both Tuesday games were umpired by Lt. Peterson and SSgt. Washington.

This is the softball schedule for the week of May 26-June 1. Ain't What Is Used to Be; It's Better

Engineers Work 'Miracle'

It might be somewhere in Miami Beach for all the changes made in the Sand Hill swimming pool by the 2nd Division's own engineers.

The list of improvements is a long one. One happy note for division troopers who despaired last year of seeing the fairer sex at the pool: the women's section in the pool building has been thoroughly renovated and now boasts individual stalls for clothes changing and partitioned showers. The men's section has not been neglected either. Sheet metal backing has been put in the shower area and new shower heads have been installed.

Overall, the pool building is newly-painted outside in white with blue trim. The inside is white with a neat desert sand trim. Facilities for holding clothes and valuables have been modernized.

On the pool itself, a new concrete foundation has been poured along the sides and the diving boards sunk securely into the new base. The pool received fresh coats of blue paint.

And something brand new this year, a concession stand is at poolside to refresh swimmers with frosty cokes and chilly beer, a variety of sandwiches, potato chips and crackers, chewing gum and cigarettes, sunglasses and suntan lotion. The concession is stocked and operated by the 2nd Division "Indianhead" Association and proceeds from the stand are put back into the association.

Sgt. Ennis T. Odom of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion who serves as noncommissioned officer in charge of the pool during the outdoor swimming season has a staff of six lifeguards.

The lifeguards are division soldiers chosen by the 2nd's special services office and submitted to Main Post for final approval and training. Red Cross Lifesaving instruction for three weeks at the Briant Wells pool prepares the men for their temporary duty at the Sand Hill pool. From April 18 to October 15 when the pool closes, the lifeguards are assigned to Sgt. Odom.

The six this year are: Sp4 William G. Abretske, 122nd Signal Battalion; PFC Donald Fitzpatrick, 122nd Signal Battalion; PFC Glenn C. Gilbertson, 38th Artillery; PFC Kell T. Jensen, 87th Infantry; PFC Jerome Williams, 87th Infantry; and Pvt. Rudolph Hidderman, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

More safety features of the Sand Hill pool consist of an intricate filtering system, using sand pockets of varying grain size through which the water is continually run. As the water is carried out the top drain, it gushes, freshly - filtered, through inlets at the pool's depth. This filter system is checked every two hours by a lifeguard.

To this water is also added modern chemicals, alum, soda ash and chlorine, to maintain purity. 2nd Division medics stop by almost daily and fill test tube with pool water for laboratory testing.

Further safety requires that swimmers not run around the pool. Diving is restricted to the deep end, and no more than one person is allowed on a diving board at a time. The boards are aluminum with so much "whip" that lifeguards will not allow "double-springing," taking more than one bop on the board before diving.

TICTC Drops 11-10 Slugfest to Student Brigade Nine

6 Pitchers Bombed for 26 Hits Including 9 Extra Base Blows

The Infantry Center Troop Command battered three TSB hurlers, including ace righthander Charlie Spell, for 10 runs and 14 hits Tuesday night, but fell before TSB's smooth working attack 11 to 10 in a wild contest before the largest crowd of the season at Gowdy Field.

The closest game in the young season was wild and wooly from the first inning. Nine errors, five wild pitches and three passed balls marred the action. TSB shortstop Jesse Joyce wore the goat's horns defensively, commiting three of his team's six errors.

TSB started with a bang in the first inning when Jesus Herran lined a hot smash off the glove of shortstop Paul Durak. TICTC's starting pitcher Sammy Soto then walked Joyce, and Pedro Berrios followed with a run-scoring single. Then after Lee Parker had replaced Soto on the mound, Joyce and Berrios pulled a double steal with Joyce stealing home, and when Parker's pitch to the plate got by the catcher, Berrios scored the third run of the inning.

In the second, TSB pulled away to a 7-0 lead when Armstrong's grounder was booted by third baseman Joe Barke. After two wild pitches, starting pitcher Gary Motson bloopped a single into right field tallying Armstrong.

After Herran had singled, Joyce slammed a triple off the center-field fence scoring two runs and Berrios drove in the seventh with a single to left.

Come Back

TICTC struck back in the third, scoring five. "Iggie" Iglesias beat out an infield hit and came home on Wooten's double.

Pedro Berrios led the TSB attack with three hits in five turns at bat, including a home-run and three runs-batted - in however, Porter Wooten of CTC swung the heaviest stick for the night with four hits in six trips to the plate, including a double and a triple.

Paul Durak and Don Miller had four hits and five RBI's between them, Durak smacking a single and a triple, and Miller chipped in with a single and a double.

Jack Barclay picked up the win in relief and Lee Parker took the loss.

Major Unit League Baseball Play Enters Third Week of Schedule

With the first two weeks of action in the 1963 Fort Benning Major Unit Baseball League safely tucked away in the record books, six more contests are on tap next week for the four post squads.

On Monday, Wednesday and Saturday the 197th Infantry Brigade will take on the league-leading Student Brigade nine. On Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, The Infantry Center Troop Command will meet the 428th Medics.

All weekday games are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Gowdy Field with the Saturday contests set for 2 p.m. at Gowdy Field and the 197th Infantry Brigade Field.

Student Brigade firstbaseman Ralph Maru is the league's leading hitter to date sporting hefty .773 average, including six doubles and one home run.

Jesse Joyce holds down second place in the batting race, clobbering enemy pitchers at a .500 clip.

The smooth-fielding Student Brigade shortstop, Fort Benning's top hitter last year with a .384 average, has connected for one homer, one triple and a double in 12 trips to the plate.

James Hill, playing for Center Troop Command, Pedro Berrios, speedy Student Brigade rightfielder, and George Rogers, 107th outfielder, are all tied for third place in the batting race at .444.

Charley Spell The Student Brigade's mound ace, leads the hurlers in the statistics department with a 2-0 record.

The hard-throwing righthander, formerly a member of the Atlanta Crackers minor league baseball club, has struck out 27 batters in 14 innings while allowing an earned run average of .006.

Four pitchers follow Spell in the statistics department with 1-0 marks. They are CTC's Ted Arganas, possessor of a 1.00 earned run average, The Student Brigade's Gary Mosston, with a 1.29 earned run averate and 15 strikeouts, J. R. Miller, with a 1.00 earned run mark and 13 strikeouts for the 197th, and Jerry Rider, also of the 197th, with a 2.00 earned run mark.

The Student Brigade has scored 58 runs, the 197th 15, Center Troop Command 14, and the 428th Medical Battalion 3.

(Editor's Note: This week's Sports Scope is being written by PFC Ted Williamson, a member of Company C, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command. Ted is an avid baseball fan and follower of the Cincinnati Reds.)

By PFC Ted Williamson

The recent rash of established players such as Vernon Law, Frank Lary, and Gene Freese being sent to the minors brings to mind an incident that happened a couple of years ago which had some interesting results.

The Phillies, even though in desperate need of pitching, sent Curt Simmons, the former whiz kid, to Williamsport of the Eastern League to test a sore arm. After spending part of season at Williamsport, Simmons was recalled and traded to St. Louis.

Now a member of the Cardinal's starting rotation, Simmons has been a big asset to the Redbirds for the last two years. It looks as though the Phillies gave up on Simmons twice, and were wrong both times.

The Minnesota Twins, wallowing in the second division of the American League, bolstered their squad last week in obtaining outfielder Wally Post from the Cincinnati Reds. Post clouted 17 homeruns and drove in 62 runs in 1962 while serving as a part-time player for the Reds.

The change by the Kansas City A's to the green and gold uniforms is the first major change in uniform style since the Reds came out with the vest-type uniform.

Gen. Watson Praises Courage of West Berliners

Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, commanding general of Third U.S. Army, in an address to members of the Columbus-Fort Benning Military Order of World Wars May 17 praised the courage and qualities of the people of West Berlin and said a solution to their problem is justly deserved.

Gen. Watson, who commanded the U.S. Army troops in Berlin from May, 1961, to January, 1963, was guest speaker at the annual Installation of officers and ladies night banquet of the Columbus-Fort Benning chapter at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The Western press, Gen. Watson said, exaggerated the "alleged tension" in Berlin shortly after the wall was constructed by the Communists in East Berlin.

"I hope you will not continue to believe, if you have believed it already, the newspapers' exaggerated stories of the tension alleged to have been there," he said.

"It is a very inspiring thing for people who have known freedom all their lives and who take it for granted, to watch these people who will make any and all sacrifices to achieve freedom," he said.

Gen. Watson commended American troops abroad but particularly singled out those combat-ready soldiers who were in his command during his Berlin tour of duty.

"You can feel reassured that the troops overseas, particularly those in Berlin and in other parts of Germany, are ready and prepared," he added.

The Third Army commander showed color slides of Berlin, pointing out well-known locations such as the Brandenburg Gate, sections of the "Wall," and "Checkpoint Charlie" and the "death strip," a large, cleared section of land leading up to the "Wall," complete with Communist watchtowers, flood lights, barbed-wire fences and tank obstacles.

Gen. Watson was introduced by (Col.) William A. Lyman, persident of the National Bank of Fort Benning and high school mate of the speaker.

At the business meeting of the local chapter, which preceded the address, Major Gen. (Ret.) Philip E. Gallagher presided for the last time as commander of the chapter. He was succeeded by Columbus attorney (Lt. Col.) John Nilan.

(Col.) Louis Kunze, serving as installing officer, installed the following, in addition to Nilan, as new officers for the coming club year:

Brig. Gen. (Ret.) W. G. Skelton, first vice commander; (Lt. Col.) Guy E. Snavely, Jr., second vice commander; (Col.) Aaron Cohn, adjutant; Col. (Ret.) W. V. Rattan, assistant adjutant; Lyman, treasurer; Col. (Ret.) Nelson I. Fooks, judge advocate, and (Lt. Col.) James Fisher, chaplain.

Gen. Gallagher, who stated that it was "an honor and privilege" to have served as commander, said he had "done my best, in my own unique way," and wished continued success to Nilan.

Special guests at the head table included Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School; Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of the school; Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben Jenkins, and Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Bible School Registration Set May 28-29

Registration for Vacation Bible School at Fort Benning will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 28 and 29 at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2606.

The annual Bible School will be staged from 8:30 to 11 a.m. each day except Saturday and Sunday June 10 through 19.

There will be classes for children from three years old through the eighth grade.

The Vacation Bible School is sponsored by The Infantry Center Chaplains Section.

NASA Claims Tuesday Space Shots Aid Budget

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Why has the National Aeronautics and Space Administration selected Tuesday as the traditional day for Mercury manned space flights?

Has it been a sentimental choice? Not at all, NASA officials say. The decisions to choose Tuesday has been a cold, hard one — financially.

Weekend launches of U. S. astronauts would likely attract a greater audience than the mid-week jaunts around the globe. However, they would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars more if they came on Saturday and Sunday.

More than 25,000 military and civilian personnel are involved in the launching of an astronaut whether he goes three, six or 22 orbits.

There are 21 tracking stations around the world, manned by about 500 technicians as well, as five tracking ships.

Also scattered across the world are hundreds of other technicians who play a vital part in the program.

Before the six-orbit flight of Walter Schirra, there was some discussion among NASA officials of a Sunday "space show" so more Americans could watch on television, but the idea was junked when NASA bookkeepers totaled the extra cost.

New Mine Detectors Are Tested

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Mine detectors could go airborne if a new idea, conceived by Army engineers, proves feasible. Detectors could be mounted on Ground Effects Machines which would skim over the ground being searched without danger of exploding undetected mines.

This would add to the Army's mobility by speeding up the detection of enemy mines.

While the Ground Effects Machine, or floating platform is not new, the mounting of mine detectors on such a device is a new use for this machine. The Ground Effects Machine is supported by the downward thrust of air generated by a large fan.

The air-cushion detector carrier will be eight feet in diameter and will be supported about six inches above the ground. It will be attached to the front end of a truck or other vehicle by means of a 20 foot hinged boom to allow free movement.

Capable of operating on or off roadways, the carrier, detector and boom will weigh less than 300 pounds and will be powered by a 72 horse-power engine.

NEW S-1 . . . Capt. Jerry W. Hendry has assumed duties of S-1, The Student Brigade, succeeding Maj. Edward C. Radcliff, who has become executive officer, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. Capt. Hendry was commander of detachment 24, 2nd Student Brigade, before taking his present position.

GI Jargon Takes On A Vietnamese Twist

U. S. FORCES, Viet Nam (AFPS) — Every war has its own GI slang, and the one in Vietnam is no exception.

The GI jargon glossary has now developed a definite Vietnamese style.

"Click" is used in place of kilometers in referring to distance or speed. Therefore, a certain town is "40 clicks from the road at a speed of 80 "clicks," which is 50 MPH.

"Kamikaza Cabs," is a term palagarized from the Japanese suicide pilots of WWII. Americans have dubbed the thousands of little blue and white, French-made taxis that zip around Saigon with this name. The wild maneuvers of these cabs are enough to send a sensible traffic engineer to a nut factory. However, though some miracle they seldom appear to have accidents. And, because of their extremely economical fares they are greatly used by Americans, which led to a-second name; "blue and white staff cars."

"Grand Prix-in-the - round," refers to the many avenues and boulevards in Saigon which sport traffic circles with a round island in the middle. All manner of traffic — cars, bicycles, pedicabs, motor scooters, even pony carts — whirl around these circles at a dizzying courter - clockwise pace. To Americans it looks much like a frantic, midgetsized Indianopolis "500," hence the name, "Grand Prix - in-the-round."

The Vietnamese language has an expression, "so dach" which literally means, "number one," the superlative for everything good. It means "tops," "super" or even "keen." But they don't have an opposite superlative in the language for things that are the very worst.

The GIs have generously filled this gap with "number ten." For instance, a "number ten steak" would indeed be very rough and tough. The expression never fails to draw an engaging smile from a Vietnamese.

Maj. Radcliff Gets New Post at TSB

Maj. Edward C. Radcliff has assumed duties of battalion executive officer, 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

He succeeds Maj. Edgar W. Duskin, who became battalion S-3, 4th Student Battalion. Maj. Radcliff was Student Brigade S-1 before taking his present duties.

Your Dental Health

All Must Aid in Fight To End Oral Disease

By Capt. Robert Cross

What is preventive dentistry? To many people this means water flouridation, to others it means topical applications of flouride, x-rays, cleaning of teeth and a recall system to return the patient at a proper interval.

Now, let's define true preventive dentistry: measures taken by the dentist and the patient to preserve and maintain tissues of the mouth in a healing condition.

This goal cannot be accomplished by emergency care or one visit treatment. This program takes years to accomplish, and you are the vital cog.

Dentistry has many new things to offer, but we still cannot guarantee a clean mouth free from decay without your help. There are many people, more than one third of U. S. population, who never go to a dentist. Even if a 100 per cent decrease in oral problems, the end of all decay and pyorrhea, were offered, many people would fail to take advantage of this advance. Today, we can guarantee a 50 per cent reduction, and yet our message isn't getting across.

The mouth belongs in the area of primary concern to an individual, the face. No one reading this, I am sure, enjoys having their mouth repaired. Yet, most all of us refuse to keep our teeth as free from trouble as we can.

The average use of a toothbrush nationwide is 0.8 times daily, when we know we should brush 4 times daily or five times as often as the average usage.

Tonight, take your children with you when you brush your teeth. Stand and brush them for three minutes, then rinse thoroughly until your cheeks are tired. The child will do the same, as they learn almost entirely from our habits. Set the example, not a lick and a promise, but a thorough cleansing, and the decrease in decay will amaze you.

The next time you go to the dentist, ask him about the proper care of your mouth. It may surprise you to find he is a veritable storehouse of knowledge about teeth and health.

Follow his advice, your dental future will be brighter, and your smile will be brighter too.

Erosion Problem Is Solved

After 6,818 man-hours and almost 11 months of work, Company D of the 806th Engineer Battalion (construction) has completed a complex erosion control project at Harmony Church.

Torrents of water flowing through the Ammunition Storage Area had moved the soil around at will for some time. Officials explained that the fence surrounding the area was almost buried in some areas, while in other areas, large volumes of soil had washed from under it. It was described as a serious problem needing immediate corrective action.

In June, 1962, the company started the project. It called for the relocation of 530 feet of fence, the construction of 19 culverts, all but one of which consisted of a 12-to 42-inch corregated pipe with concrete heads and wing walls, moving of more than 12,000 cubic yards of dirt, digging of several thousand yards of ditches and the construction of a firebreak around the 2.9 miles of fence that is to be used as a dry weather road.

First Lt. Edward K. Kobayashi was project officer, and SFC Robert B. MacDonald was the NCO in charge.

Company D Commander is 1st Lt. James H. Mashey Jr.

Youth Sunday Services Set

A Youth Sunday observance at 10:30 a.m. May 26 at Fort Benning's St. Michael's Episcopal Mission will feature a God and Country Scout Award, sermonettes and special music by young members of the congregation.

Ushers for the service, conducted under the leadership of Chaplain (Capt.) James M. Reaves, will be Ray B. Lynch and Robert Mays.

Before Signing, Read Fine Print Thoroughly

It's important to read the small print on any contract you are to sign.

You should know what interest is charged for the purchase, what the exact finance charges are or how much interest you pay. Legal assistance officers make this point: "Remember your signature, like your reputation, is too valuable to be treated casually.

"It also should be remembered," they say, "that a signature, like a fingerprint is unique; the folly of its imprint may result in events of tragic consequence."

Here are a few examples of the terms sometimes included in contracts that, if not discovered by you, can spell trouble:

A pickup payment — which is really a down payment required before you can pick up your car from a lot after you have paid the advertised "only one dollar down." This payment may be financed through a separate small loan company (perhaps owned by the dealer) at a rate of two to three percent a month.

A balloon payment — which is an extra large payment at the end of a contract, sometimes amounting to several hundred dollars. Legal officers say it is often the cause of repossessions.

Agreements to pay additional sums beyond those itemized in the contract, probably for life and collision insurance, service charges, carrying costs, penalties or clerical fees.

The monthly payment—which is set low enough and extended for a long enough period so you may afford the entire package. This single figure lends a deceptive air of simplicity to the deal.

Split-level payments — which set the monthly payment at one level for the first six months and then lower or raise it for the balance of the contract.

The Colorado Bar Association recently pointed out that virtually every transaction you make, whether it be purchase, sale, mortgage or other, is subject to the regulations and interpretations of the law.

It also notes that the path of the inexperienced through the maze of legal technicalities and entanglements is full of obstacles.

"Traveling through this maze," the association said, "without the benefit of experienced legal advice, can and very often does, result in expensive litigation and unnecessary and unforseen consequences."

In other words, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and it is wise to consult your legal assistance officer or your civilian attorney when in doubt.

Here, briefly, are six things you can do before you sign any document.

Know what you are signing and what the document contains.

Read everything in the document.

Check and verify the document.

Ask questions.

Retain a copy of the document.

Above all, don't sign blank contracts.

(This is the sixth in a series of 10 (ANF) articles prepared by the Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Judge Advocate General.)

Dance Band Praised By VA Chief

The Infantry Center Band has been praised for its performance April 16 at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Tuskegee, Ala.

The commendation came in a letter from the hospital director, Dr. J. W. Giles, to The Infantry Center Information Officer.

Dr. Giles wrote: "On April 16, 1963, The Infantry Center Band provided the music for the patients' dance held at this hospital which is conducted as a phase of the resocialization program for our patients.

"The music was well received by our patients. The excellent quality and professional manner of presentation assisted greatly in promoting the rehabilitation objectives of the activity.

"On behalf of the patients and personnel of this hospital I wish to express our sincere appreciation to you and all persons responsible for making possible the music by The Infantry Center Dance Band for our patients' dance."

The Dance Band consisted of six men. Sgt. Wilson McClain was in charge.

First Term Re-Up Rate High at 11th

"I have been in units where reenlistment rates stayed at or near 100 per cent, but, in my 11 years as a recruiter and career counselor, I have never seen a group of young, first-term soldiers who were eager and willing to stay with the unit in which they are currently serving."

These were the words of MSgt. Tommy H. Reavis, career counselor for the 11th Air Assault Division, as he discussed the division's reenlistment program which for the past two months has attained 100 per cent reenlistment of first-term eligibles.

Sgt. Reavis said that first-termers usually are anxious to use their option of selecting their next assignment to ask for particular location or for overseas duty. The fact that they wish to stay with their unit is indicative of the fine esprit de corps which exists within the division.

According to the Personnel Branch of The Infantry Center Adjutant General's Office, April is normally a low retention month. The 11th's accomplishment helped the reenlistment rate here to far surpass that which was expected.

To achieve this rate Sgt. Reavis' office processed four eligibles in March and six in April.

$11,000 to Be Annual Income in Year 2000

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Can you imagine the United States in the year 2000 — a country with more private autos than adult human beings, and where the middle-income family has $11,000 a year to spend?

A massive study of national needs and resources by Resources for the Future, Inc. (RFF) gives this view of the United States in the year 2000.

The most serious shortage forseeable, according to the report, is land. Elbow room for a population of 331 million will be needed.

Although there will be more motor vehicles than there are drivers of age 20 and up, many of the cars are likely to be midgets.

In short, the report shows that neither a long view of the past, current trends, nor our most careful estimates of future possibilities suggest any general running out of resources in this country during the remainder of the century—or for a considerate time thereafter.

The survey was the first comprehensive report of future resources supply and demand since 1952 when the Paley report was compiled at the request of President Harry S. Truman.

The RFF is a private research organization working with Ford Foundation funds.

11TH'S SOM . . . A former instructor at the Army Signal School, Fort Gordon, Ga., PFC Veril A. Vogel has been selected Soldier of the Month for the 11th Air Assault Division (Test). He is the first enlisted man so honored since the activation of the 11th. PFC Vogel is a member of the 711th Maintenance Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Support Command (Test).

Paul Dietzel To Use 2 Units in '63

WEST POINT, N. Y. — After reviewing spring football practice at West Point, it can be said "It's off with the new, and on with the old!"

Coach Paul Dietzel's famed three-platoon style of football, new to the Academy last year, will be replaced this year with two cadet units, each trained in both offensive and defensive football.

Dietzel, during the spring drills, concentrated on picking 22 members of the Army squad best qualified to play both ways. The first 11 will be composed largely of members of last year's Chinese Bandit outfit.

Like a good baseball team, the Cadet football squad should be strong "down the middle" if Dick Nowak, Tom Cunningham (a converted fullback) and Lee Grasfeder play up to potential in the center of the line, and Ken Waldrop at left half, John Johnson at wingback, Ray Paske at fullback, and Carl Stichweh at quarterback move the ball with consistency.

Army plays Air Force on Nov. 30 with Minnesota, Penn State and Pittsburgh highlighting the 10 game schedule.

Wednesday is the day 550 cadets from the U. S. Military Academy, Class of 1964, arrive here to begin their annual summer training at The Infantry School.

The cadets are scheduled to arrive at Lawson Army Airfield between 6:10 and 7:30 p.m.

Training, which is designed to further instruct the West Pointers in Infantry weapons and tactics, mechanized Infantry tactics, and guerrilla warfare activities and techniques, will begin June 6 and continue through noon June 8.

Brig. Gen. Michael S. Davison, commandant of cadets at the academy, will observe the future officers during the June 7 training. He is scheduled to

GEN. WHEELER TOURS INFANTRY CENTER

The roar of a 19-gun salute welcomed the Army chief of staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, to the post Monday, during colorful honors ceremonies at Chapel Field.

Rendering the honors were the honor guard company, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, and cannoneers of Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery. Music was supplied by the Infantry Center Band.

Gen. Wheeler came here from Milledgeville, Ga., where he made the commencement address at Georgia Military College.

He was greeted at Lawson Army Air Field by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, shortly before honors ceremonies were due to begin.

Monday afternoon the general received an orientation on the history and organization of The Infantry Center and the organization and mission of The Infantry School.

Following his orientation the four-star general witnessed a joint weapons demonstration by The Infantry Board and The Infantry School at Hook Range.

Gen. Wheeler's Tuesday morning agenda included a vis-

Infantry School's Ranger Department.

A native of Albany, New York, Gen. Kelleher enlisted in the Army in December, 1932, and served as an enlisted man until July, 1933, when he received a second lieutenant's commission in the Army Reserve.

From 1938 until wounded in August, 1943, he served with the 26th Infantry, 1st Infantry Division, as a platoon leader, and later as a company commander and battalion executive officer. He assumed command of the 1st Battalion of the 26th shortly after the invasion of North Africa.

From 1944 to 1945 he served in Europe as battalion commander and regimental commander in the 104th (Timberwolf) Infantry Division and remained with the unit until its deactivation.

In December, 1945, Gen. Kelleher was once again assigned to the 1st Division and was with it in Germany until July, 1949, when he returned to the United States to attend the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va.

Upon graduation he was assigned to the G-3 Section, First Army, at Governor's Island, N. Y. The general received orders for Korea soon after the outbreak of hostilities and commanded the 35th Infantry, 25th Infantry Division, until July, 1951.

At this time he returned to the U.S. and attended the National War College. Upon graduating he was sent here as Ranger Department director.

In June, 1955, Gen. Kelleher was assigned to the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Japan, assuming the position of chief of the group's Army Section in February, 1956.

From June to December, 1957, he was assistant commander of the 101st Airborne Division in Fort Campbell, Ky.; from January, 1958, until June, 1959, he was deputy commanding general of Fort Leonar Wood, Mo., and from July, 1959, until April, 1962, he was with Headquarters Allied Forces Southern Europe as readiness officer.

Cadets

arrive at 3 p.m. June 6.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commandant of The Infantry School and commanding general of The Infantry Center, will open the visit with a welcoming address at 7 a.m. June 6 in Theater No. 1 and close it with farewell remarks at Hook Range at noon June 8.

The cadets will participate in airborne training, negotiate a leader's reaction course, and engage in simulated combat as members of a mechanized rifle platoon in an attack.

They also will observe demonstrations of a rifle company task force in defense, an Infantry-tank task force in attack, and Infantry weapons.

Briefings will be presented on the Infantry of today and future and special warfare.

Matches

explained.

Commenting on the objectives of the week-long competition, Col. Burroughs said they were far from the matter of finding out who could out-shoot whom.

"Competitive-type activities have been found by CONARC to be the best vehicles for approach to its annual marksmanship training objectives," the match director said.

"Trophies won add to individual morale and spur competition," Col. Burroughs added, "but they are secondary to the main reasons for CONARC's conduct of the huge annual program."

He said championships were actuall final tests of individual progress in shooting skill, advancement in arms and munitions, training and coaching techniques, and a score of other phases of combat proficiency.

The USAMTU (U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit), which will compete for honors in the individual matches only, brings both last-year champions, rifle and pistol, to the tilts this year.

MSgt. James B. Manning carries the individual grand aggregate rifle crown to the matches and will find more than 400 riflemen tightly massed waiting for the opening gun.

Among them are riflemen of the Army Pacific's "Blue" Team which holds the all-time Army record for the Army Rifle Team Championship.

The Sixth U. S. Army team, another annually powerful squad, brings its "Blue" Team back this year, last year's Infantry Trophy team match champions.

Besides them are the Third Army Infantry Trophy squad, confident that the Sixth Army's all-time 1,169 won't stand up.

Besides looking for top honors in the Infantry Trophy Match, Third Army will defend its titles of long range and short range champions won last year.

The long-range champion was a record score.

The Women's Army Corps will be represented again this year, when Spt Barbara Hile returns to give her male opponents another taste of woman's ability.

Spt Hile will fire under the colors of the Sixth Army team and hopes to be picked up by the USAMTU team for which she fired last year in the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

SFC William B. Blankenship has won the Army handgun championship for the past three years. Also for three years he has won the U. S. individual pistol crown.

FIVE DIVISIONS

At the end of World War II, the U. S. Army had five airborne divisions, designed to effect "vertical envelopment" on enemy positions.

Wheeler

it to the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), where he was briefed on the status and future projects of the Division.

He also observed Mohawk and Caribou-type aircraft demonstrations, squad organization and composition, equipment displays, and the men of the division using the new rappelling technique for rapid mobility from helicopter to the ground.

A visit to the new Academic Building, now under construction, and an orientation by the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency rounded out the morning's activities.

The afternoon was highlighted by a helicopter tour of the installation and a visit to the 2nd Infantry Division.

Gen. Wheeler departed the post following farewell ceremonies at Lawson Army Air Field Tuesday afternoon.

Cooper's Space Flight Reaffirms U.S. Unity

America is still inhabitated by Americans—this statement may sound foolish to you or maybe the product of an overproductive "patriotic pen," but it is as true today in the Space Age as it was when Nathan Hale gave his life for his country.

During the past few years, we have been confronted with cries that the American spirit is falling apart that we are "going to the dogs." Our Cold War enemy never misses a chance to publicize the racial problems we are experiencing in parts of our great nation. Unfortunately, this problem, and others, do exist; however, we can overcome them.

The launching of Astronaut L. Gordon Cooper into space came at a time when our spirit of unity appeared to be on the decline. Yet as the countdown reached its final seconds and the flames came roaring from beneath the rocket, Americans of all races, religions and creeds could be seen with a hope in their hearts and a prayer on their lips. It was a touching sight. No one was ashamed of that lump in his throat or of the fact that he was silently asking Someone greater to let this American return safely to earth after completing his mission.

We were united, we were experiencing humility. Here was another earthling headed into the unknown, depending on scientific achievement and placing his fate in the hands of God.

Of course this space flight hasn't solved the internal problems of our Nation, but it has given us new hope. We have been reassured that we still have unity in spite of our problems.

The statement United We Stand, Divided We Fall was made long before the present generation was confronted with its problems, but it is still true and will be true for generations yet to come. (AFPS)

Over-Extended Credit Can Lead to Bankruptcy

There are some very distasteful and complicated problems that can easily develop from over-extended credit.

Perhaps the most disastrous is bankruptcy. A personal bankruptcy is an indication in most instances that you have mismanaged your personal financial affairs to such an extent that you must have Federal Court action for the benefit of unsecured creditors.

In appropriate situations, military personnel like other American citizens, are entitled to take advantage of bankruptcy proceedings to shed themselves of debts and obligations.

Bankruptcy is not recommended. It is a costly, detrimental and degrading proceeding.

But what leads to bankruptcy in the first place.

A report by the Consumer Bankruptcy Committee of the American Bar Association takes note of the following reasons:

Careless and irresponsible credit practices.

The increase in personal loans.

A philosophy of sheer extravagance.

If you fit any of the above categories you'd better adopt —and quickly—what legal advisors call a solvency code.

Curb impulse buying.

Shop around for the best buy before making a necessary purchase.

Keep financial cushion to take care of emergencies.

If it's too late to do any of these things, contact your Legal Assistance Officer.

Above all, remember this: Don't rush into bankruptcy. When those bills start to pile up seek the less expensive and much more satisfactory means of settling your debts in an honorable way.

(This is the eighth in a series of 10 ANF articles prepared by the Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Judge Advocate General.)

'Keep ID Card,' Civilians Urged

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Defense Department is recommending that civilian employees carry emergency medical data on their person at all times.

Management officials are being urged to advise employees of the desirability, from a personal and medical standpoint, of carrying an identification tag or card giving their name, address, next of kin, blood type, and a list of medicines to which they are allergic.

Capitol Notes

Sen. Ralph Yarbrough (D.,Tex.), chairman of the Senate veterans affairs subcommittee, has announced completion of hearings on cold war GI Bill legislation. Subcommittee approval was expected shortly. The bill would approve educational aid to all veterans who have entered the military since Jan. 31, 1955—cutoff date for Korea Bill entitlement.

The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively approved the administration plan to provide tax relief for actors, athletes and others whose incomes fluctuate sharply. The gist of the plan is to allow these professional people to average their income over a five-year period. The tax on one-fifth would be computed as a tentative assessment. The tax on the one-fifth would then be multiplied by five to determine the total tax for the year.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) is hopeful the Senate Armed Services Committee can initiate hearings before the end of May. The Senator, who also heads the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, is in the midst of hearings on the Pentagon budget for fiscal '64. How soon he can shift to pay hearings in the Armed Services Committee depends upon how soon the preliminary budget testimony is completed. On retirement recomputation Sen. Russell said "I think it is in the bill for sure this time."

Evacuation allowances given to men who had to send their families home from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, last fall are not taxable by the federal government if spent for the purpose for which given.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

What Is America?

BY CHAPLAIN (COL.) SILAS E. DECKER

Recently we observed Memorial Day in our chapels, the post cemetery and at the post flag pole.

This important national day gave rise to serious thought. Why have men and women died for America? What is America? Is it entirely bounded only by seas and friendly nations who are our close neighbors? Is it the ground from which we obtain materials for daily existence the air we breathe, the skies which cover us, cities, towns and countryside? Can we say America is composed of our institutions of worship, education, healing and government.

Certainly America is all this and much more, for other nations also enjoy similar physical resources and institutions of religion, education, welfare and government.

America is a belief akin to a deep religious faith. The belief is liberty, for the exercise of liberty promotes morality in government and economics. Liberty provides room for citizens to stand upright as children of a Creator who has endowed them with certain human rights, to live life, enjoy blessings of freedom and pursue happiness. America is liberty in a way of life peculiar to our country.

Units on Early Call

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army, changing a longstanding policy has identified four National Guard infantry divisions and two Guard armored divisions in the East and South for an early call-up in the event of an emergency.

The six divisions are the 42d Infantry of New York, the 26th Infantry of Massachusetts, the 28th Infantry of Pennsylvania, the 30th Armored of Tennessee and the 50th Armored of New Jersey.

Instructors at Mobility Department Assure That Infantry Keeps Rolling

Today's mobile Army requires thousands of skilled mechanics yearly to "keep it rolling along." The increased mechanization of Infantry units, particularly, has created a steadily mounting requirement for automotive technicians.

In order for the Infantry commander to fully exploit his ground mobility advantage, he must have mechanics with the "know how" to keep his vehicles in almost constant operation, even under the most adverse conditions.

The Mobility Department of The Infantry School provides the Infantry commander with a large share of these mechanics each year through its Infantry Mechanics Course. And, the department is expanding to meet the Infantry's growing needs.

In the coming fiscal year, for instance, there are 2,100 students scheduled to attend the Infantry Mechanics Course, an increase of 900 students over the current year.

The Mobility Department, under the direction of Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds, places emphasis on "learning by doing." Throughout the Infantry Mechanics Course, instruction is presented in small groups wherever possible. This provides the student with a first-hand working knowledge of how to repair and service automotive equipment.

After completion of the 11-week course, the student mechanic has the equivalent training of the journeyman mechanic in civilian life.

Each class is composed of men from the Regular Army, Army Reserve and National Guard. The ages and experience vary from men just out of basic training to men with many years of experience.

To get the various student mechanics started on the ground floor, the Command Supervision Committee, headed by Maj. Henry E. Vincent, a veteran of 15 years service, first teaches the Army system of maintenance. Driver or crew maintenance and inspection techniques are covered in detail.

The student then learns to care for and use automotive tools and equipment — items that he will continue to use during future instruction and after returning to his unit. He also is taught how to maintain accurate records of the maintenance services he performs as a mechanic.

Disassembles Engine

Next, the student mechanic moves to the Engine Committee where he is required to completely disassemble an internal combustion engine. As the engine is reassembled, the student learns the fundamentals of engine operation, including the nomenclature and functions of the component parts, such as the carburetor, fuel pump, fuel and oil filters.

The Electrical Section, led by MSgt. Charles W. Yoder, senior instructor, next provides the student with a knowledge of basic electricity and the electrical systems of Army vehicles. This instruction includes operating complex special test equipment used to test and adjust electrical components of automotive equipment.

During classes conducted by the Advanced Engine Section, the student mechanic performs engine trouble "diagnosis" and receives highly technical instruction on some of the Army's newest engines.

This includes presentations on the fuel injection equipment and turbo-chargers that are components of the new multifuel engine. The multifuel engine, officially known as the LDS 427-2, can use a variety of fuels, such as diesel, kerosene, low and regular grades of gasoline, or any mixture of these fuels without adjustment.

The last phase of instruction in the Engine Committee includes 89 hours of instruction on tank engines.

Capt. Jack A. Craig's Wheeled Vehicle Committee, then takes charge of the future mechanics and teaches them about the power trains of wheeled vehicles. This includes instruction on such topics as hydramatic and synchromesh transmissions, the transfer case, differentials and the clutch.

The fundamentals of welding, both acetylene - oxygen and arc welding are taught in the Running Gear Laboratory. In addition, technical instruction on suspension, steering, and brake systems is provided under the supervision of MSgt. Dallas T. Varnon, senior instructor in charge of the Running Gear Section.

Unique Training

At this point the student has completed his detailed mechanical training. A unique phase of training is now introduced. Fledgling mechanics are required to perform maintenance on tactical military vehicles that are normally used in daily operation at Fort Benning. This maintenance is performed under the strict supervision of mechanic - instructors and it must pass rigorous inspections.

MSgt. Harley E. Ferrier, a veteran of 20 year's experience in the maintenance field, is the senior instructor of the Preventive Maintenance Section. He insures that the students are qualified to perform scheduled and unscheduled maintenance on wheeled vehicles prior to their leaving his section.

As the student must become familiar with all vehicles organic to and available in Infantry units, the capabilities and limitations of these vehicles are demonstrated by the Vehicle Capabilities Committee, headed by Capt. John W. Swaren Jr.

A total of 31 hours is spent with this committee, during which time the student receives instruction in personnel carrier driving, rail loading, and recovery of both wheeled and tracked vehicles.

Then MSgt. Houston H. Price, senior instructor in the Recovery Section, makes sure that each student mechanic is capable of using the most modern recovery techniques during the 18 hours of instruction presented on vehicle recovery.

To round out his education, the student mechanic spends 47 hours with the Tracked Vehicle Committee performing maintenance on armored personnel carriers, armored reconnaissance vehicles and tanks. While in this committee, he must perform a semiannual maintenance service under the supervision of a fully qualified mechanic.

MSgt. Charlie J. Watson, senior instructor in the Tracked Preventive Maintenance Section and a veteran of more than 20 years of automotive maintenance experience, ends the Infantry Mechanics Course with a period concerning future developments and trends in Infantry vehicles.

Thus, after 11 weeks of thorough training in this very complex field, a highly skilled automotive mechanic emerges. Thanks to the Mobility Department, the Infantry Mechanics Course graduate returns to his unit fully capable of "keeping 'em rolling."

Post Thrift Shop Sells Everything From Birdcages to Dress Forms

By Marge Leason

The Thrift Shop, located in Building 1304 on Ingersoll Road and sponsored by the Woman's Club, is becoming a big business.

Currently operating under an expanded program, the Thrift Shop will remain open on Thursdays from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., in addition to its regular Tuesday hours of 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. This new schedule, effective Saturday will enable more people to become acquainted with the store and give customers extra off-duty hours in which to "browse." Although open later, items to be consigned will not be accepted after 1:30 p.m.

Hire New Manager

It takes many hours for the ladies to consign, mark, tag and sell the wide variety of merchandise at the Thrift Shop. Although all shop workers are volunteers, its increasing business has become too large an operation for one person to handle.

"In order to serve more people effectively," says Mrs. James Stacy, Woman's Club Thrift Shop chairman, "we have hired a full-time manager and bookkeeper."

After several applications were submitted, Mrs. Joe T. Ely was selected by a Woman's Club board to become its first manager. Mrs. Erma Whitt was chosen as bookkeeper.

Thrift Shop work is nothing new to Mrs. Mary Ely. Having volunteered at various thrift shops across the country, Mary says she "really loves" this new job. Even though the hours resemble those of a banker, there is much more work after hours than meets the eye.

Mother of three children, Mary Ely still manages to teach two-year-olds at the post nursery Sunday School and is neighborhood chairman of the post Girl Scouts.

Need a Birdcage?

Any bona-fide owner of an Army identification card can consign goods to the Thrift Shop. The shop takes 10 per cent of the selling price for the Woman's Club Welfare Fund. The rest of the money goes back to the article's original owner.

Anyone may purchase items, civilian or military.

The Thrift Shop is housed in two barracks - type buildings. One section features clothing and shoes — babys' mens', women's and childrens' — while the other building has everything not found next door.

Typical items now for sale include various models of refrigerators, antique chairs, hula-hoops, birdcages, a dress form, car racks, patterns, baby carriages, all types of uniforms, military hats and boots, shoes and clothing to fit everyone from a month-old baby to great-grandpa.

Unknown to most people, the Thrift Shop has a pick-up and delivery service (on post only) every Thursday morning for large items, such as furniture.

The new Thrift Shop manager and her staff welcome all suggestions concerning the store's operation. They welcome even more, any woman wishing to become a "volunteer!"

MOOM Site Of Infantry Wives Meet

The Infantry Board wives met at the Main Officers' Open Mess recently for their monthly luncheon.

The luncheon was planned by Mrs. Bruce Merritt with the assistance of Mrs. Warren Walters and Mrs. Woodward Meyers.

Farewells were said to Mrs. William Summers, Mrs. Bruce Merritt, Mrs. Arthur House and her mother, Mrs. Anna Jarvi, who will soon depart post.

Former members of the board who attended the luncheon were Mrs. Marshall Mott, Mrs. Thomas Whalen, Mrs. Robert Wisor and Mrs. Woodward Meyers.

The slate of officers for the coming year are Mrs. John Cougill, chairman; Mrs. Monore King, treasurer; Mrs. Joe Martinez, publicity; Mrs. David Price, hospitality on post; and Mrs. John Hutton, hospitality off post.

Local Acolytes Schedule Trip

The acolytes of Saint Michael's Episcopal Mission are planning to attend the annual Acolyte Festival held by the Diocese of Georgia at Albany tomorrow.

Sponsoring the event is the Venerable Alferd Mead, archdeacon of the Diocese of Georgia.

The outing will include an award service, tour of the area, picnic and afternoon swim. Chaplain (Capt.) James M. Reaves and his two assistants, Sp4 Michael Wilcox and Pvt. David M. Lite, will attend the event as adult supervisors of the local group.

THIS AD CONTAINS BUT A SMALL PORTION OF MANY MORE FURNITURE SAVINGS

And now seniors are out of school!

Pacellians have already graduated. Columbus and Baker will hold their graduation exercises next week.

This last week of school was certainly a busy one. Truly, I know because for two nights I tried to get in touch with about 30 Benning seniors from the different high schools in order to ask them some questions to be answered in this column.

When I finally got in contact with the 11 students below, I asked them if they had any advice, picked up on the long uphill road to graduation, that they would like to pass on to underclassmen; or any comment they would care to make about their respective schools.

Here are some of the bits of precious advice the graduates offered. Underclassmen, Take heed.

Jim Stacy: "Work hard as you can in your classes. Act both your age and your I.Q."

Shirley Borrom: "Your high school years are the best years of your life. Make the best of them by studying hard and by participating in extra-curricular activities. Above all, be proud of your school!"

Wilma Burgos: "Good luck to the class of 1964! Study hard."

Georganna Dillon: "Try to make friends, in your school, but don't try too hard. The old 'quality, not quantity adage' was never more true than in choosing friends."

Most of the people I talked to agree with Yvonne Thibadeaux when she said, "I'm glad it's over." Others look back on the years of attending high school as the most wonderful of their lives. Read on. . .

Nancy Williams: "Perhaps even more than anything I will remember my friends, the clubs I've been a member of, and the summers and the cadets."

Susie Wells: "I've really enjoyed the friends I've made in the year that I have been here. The friends I've made out of school are no less dear to me than the boys and girls with whom I've shared teachers and homework problems."

It could have been that I called Sam Gibson as he was studying for his final physiology test, but his only comment was: "Late to bed, early to rise, Makes a boy haggard, worried and wise.'

When I asked Alan Hintt how he felt, now that he was out of school, his answer was, "I feel sort of emptiness, especially on the morning after the Junior-Senior Prom. I think the high point of my high school career was when I wore a Bermuda tux to that dance."

And although I agree with Elsa Esteves when she says, "Freshmen, I advise you not to take the advice of the upper classmen who tell you how hard geometry and government are. They're just trying to scare you." I think that Jack Wallace should have the last word, as he pays a tribute to his school and offers this bit of advice.

"When you're an Army dependent you have to adjust to a lot of situations, a lot of different people, and quite a few different schools, but I can truthfully say that this school had some of the easiest people to get to know and to adjust to. A school is not just the teachers, the courses, or the students, but what you make of it. If you can truthfully say you have done a good job, it is only partly because of the teachers and students—it is mainly because of YOU."

Mrs. Coveny Hosts Coffee at Home

The wives of officers in the Office of Advanced Studies held their regular monthly coffee May 21 in the home of Mrs. Robert F. Coveny, 308-A Lumpkin Road.

Plans were made for a cook-out May 25 at the home of Col. and Mrs. James T. Carter.

Present at the coffee were Mrs. Vern L. Joseph, Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Donald E. Gelke, Mrs. Dean G. Potter, Mrs. Joseph R. Trdla, Mrs. Robert M. Ruggles and Mrs. Coveny.

Clean House Before You Make That PCS

Last year 350,000 Army families shipped 207,000 tons of household goods at a cost of $75 million.

If each one of these families had shipped one hundred pounds less, the Army's total bill could have been reduced by more than $6 million.

DA budget officers have outlined a voluntary two-step cost reduction program for those who recognize the need and are willing to do something about it:

Go to your basement, attic, or storage room and find out how many things you are saving that you have not used in several years.

Bundle these up and call the Salvation Army, Good Will, or some other charitable organization. They will be happy to come and pick them up.

Before you give them away, remember that the fair market value of the donated items can be deducted as a charitable contribution on your income tax return.

Here is the way that this program could work to the mutual benefit of all concerned.

Assume that you have found 100 pounds of excess clothing, books, or furniture that you no longer need but which has some usefulness left.

Further, imagine that the fair market value of these goods as donated to charity is $30. (This is conservative, a pair of useable shoes is certainly worth $1, a cotton shirt 50 cents and a table or chair as much as $5. (Then if you were in the 20 per cent income tax bracket and itemized your deductions, your total tax could be reduced by $6.

In this way everyone can win. The government will save much more on household goods shipping expenses than it will lose on income tax revenue which, ironically enough, is used to pay for the shipment of household goods.

The donated goods will be used for a good cause and your family and the Army (because you're a part of it) will help build up a feeling of good will.

Finally, you will have $6 more in your pocket on April 15 and, as an added fringe benefit, a neater basement.

The Thrift Shop, Bldg 1303, 545-4890, will accept items for sale on a consignment basis.

Special Services, Doughboy Stadium, 545-7414, will be glad to receive books and records.

Items to be donated to charities may be disposed of as follows: Salvation Army, 1714 2nd Avenue, FA 7-0275, will pick them up; Good Will Community Center, 1330 11th Avenue, FA 2-7047 will appreciate donations of clothing, furniture, etc.

30 Attend Orientation Coffee Here

Thirty wives of students Infantry Officers Basic Course 18 met in the dayroom of Detachment 22, 2nd Student Battalion recently for an orientation coffee.

Maj. P. L. Mason, battalion commander, welcomed the ladies, and described Fort Benning and The Student Brigade. Chaplain (Capt.) John S. Stannard, assistant TSB chaplain, invited the ladies to attend services on post. 2nd Lt. Hugh F. Gouldthorpe, detachment commander, discussed the course and the importance of the wives' role. 10th Artillery to Observe Birthday

A full day of events and festivities is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. Saturday on Peden Field to mark the 48th anniversary of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery.

A five-mile race will kickoff the day as six men from each of the seven batteries in the battalion vie for honors.

The remainder of the morning will be devoted to such events as a display of the organization's major weapons, a Combat Physical Proficiency Test, an exhibition by the 38th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, a pie eating contest, drill team competition and an outstanding soldier contest.

At noon lunch will be served picnic style by the battalion mess halls. The highlight of the afternoon will be the presentation of awards followed by a softball game between the battalion officers and enlisted men.

On June 1, 1917, the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, was organized from elements of the 6th Horsedrawn Artillery Regiment at Fort Douglas, Ariz. Forty-six years have passed and the 10th's missions have become a part of history. Today the 10th, commanded by Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, finds itself confronted with the mission of furnishing artillery support to the U. S. Army Infantry School.

In November, 1917, the newly formed battalion was assigned to Camp Green, N.C., and attached to the 3rd Infantry Division. Throughout World Wars I and II and the Korean conflict the 10th Artillery remained an organic part of the 3rd Division.

In May, 1918, the 10th Field Artillery entered World War I with the mission of rendering direct support to the 38th Infantry Regiment in the Chateau Thierry sector of northern France.

It was during the nights of July 14 and 15 that the unit faced its first actual combat in helping repulse the infamous "German Peace Offensive." It was during this action, "The Second Battle of the Marne," that the 3rd Division acquired its title; "The Rock of the Marne," and the 10th Artillery became known as "The Rock's Support."

During those first two nights of combat Lt. Gen. (Ret.) George P. Hayes, then 1st Lt. Hayes, became the first man of the unit to receive the nation's highest award, the Medal of Honor. In this action Lt. Hayes established liaison between his unit and two French batteries and was largely responsible for the fire from these units, according to reports. While under severe enemy fire, seven horses were shot from under him and although seriously wounded he managed to complete his mission, they continued.

In August, 1919, the 10th returned to the United States to garrison duty at Fort Lewis, Wash. During this period (to 1922) the coat of arms of the 10th was created.

With the coming of World War II the newly reorganized 10th Field Artillery Battalion again joined the 3rd Infantry Division to provide artillery support for all of the division's 10 campaigns.

The battalion participated in four major assault landings and supported five strategic river crossings. After 532 days of intensive fighting, the 10th had earned 10 battle stars, along with the French Croix de Guerre with Palm and Fourragere in the colors of the French Croix de Guerre.

It was on the night of Feb. 3, 1945, that Cpl. Forrest E. Peden gave the supreme sacrifice and became the second member of the battalion to receive the Medal of Honor.

Cpl. Peden was a forward observer with an Infantry unit when it was outnumbered four to one in an enemy ambush. After courageously rendering aid to two wounded soldiers, Peden ran 800 yards through intensive enemy fire, secured reinforcements and led them into attack, the citation accompanying the medal read. During the ensuing battle in which the enemy was driven off, Cpl. Peden received multiple wounds and was killed.

In August, 1946, the 10th returned to the United States after occupation duty in Friedberg and Feldberg, Germany.

With the birth of a new decade came the birth of Communist aggression in Korea, and for the third time, in August, 1950, the 10th joined the 3rd Division during its five campaigns. One two-week period saw the 10th Artillery pour more than 250,000 rounds on the Communist forces.

Following hostilities and after receiving eight new combat awards, the 10th returned to the United States and was assigned here.

Since the Korean conflict the battalion has been reorganized three times and at the present time is designated the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Loss of War Cited as Possibility By Soviet Military Publication

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Soviet Union has admitted for the first time the possibility of defeat in war, a U. S. Air Force analyst concludes on the basis of an analysis of Soviet military writings.

He stated that the Russian high command apparently is divided over strategy in this age of missiles and hydrogen warheads.

Lt. Col. Murray Green, Air Force Associate Chief of Research and analysis, reached these conclusions in a report of the first comprehensive disclosure of military doctrine to appear in the Soviet Union since 1926.

The report is an analysis of a book, Military Strategy, published in Moscow last September under the editorship of Soviet Marshall Sokolovsky.

"The book has done more than any other," Green writes, "to encourage realism in the Soviet Union about nuclear war. It concedes the possibility of civilian casualties "in the tens of million. . ," he says adding:

"Battlefield casualties are discussed in these terms: It is possible that entire sub-divisions, and even (army) groups will be destroyed. However this should not have any bearing on the speed of operations. . ."

Col. Green also notes that "for the first time, the Sokolovsky study openly discusses the theoretical possibility of defeat. The Soviet Union is now strong enough militarily to discuss chances of defeat dispassionately."

The Air Force analyst calls attention to the line: "The laws of strategy are objective and apply impartially to both sides." Green then writes: "There is no more frank or significant statement in the study than this one, for it reflects the Soviet Union's return to fallibility.

"War is the universal test of the material and spiritual resources of either side and victory will not necessarily go to the 'just' socialist bloc but to the side endowed with greatest resources.

"Upon this basis, Military Strategy has opened the whole issue of ultimate victory to bilateral discussion," Col. Green concludes.

Muscogee County has the fourth largest population among Georgia's 159 counties. The 1960 census reports that 158,623 men, women and children reside in the county. Fulton county reported the largest population with more than a half-million persons living within its limits.

Ready 2nd Division Flexes For Visiting Gen. Wheeler

BY BOB de CAMARA

The United States Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, flew into the 2nd Infantry Division garrison area by helicopter Tuesday afternoon for a conference with the division's senior officers and displays of combat readiness by "Second to None" units.

The four-star general was accompanied on the brief helicopter ride from Fort Benning's Main Officers Open Mess where he had been guest of honor at a luncheon by the 2nd Division's commander, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley.

The two generals were greeted as they alighted on Marne Field by Col. Louis A. Kunzig, Jr., division chief of staff. Gen. Wheeler, escorted by Gen. Corley and Col. Kunzig, then entered nearby division headquarters where the Army Chief of Staff was briefed on the latest in the ROTAPLAN unit rotation system and other matters.

Assembled at the headquarters conference room were the senior representatives of the division general staff sections and commanders of major division units.

Following the talks which highlighted the "Indianhead" Division's large-scale participation in ROTAPLAN under which division troops are now in Germany for temporary duty, Gen. Wheeler moved out by motorcade for Wetherby Field and a special training display by soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry commanded by Lt. Col. Edward Carroll.

Annual Memorial Planned at Capital

Div. Monument Services Include Marines, Allies

By Bob de Camara

Washington, D.C. has been named the site for the annual memorial service of the 2nd Infantry Division June 9.

A "Second to None" color guard, the division sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown and an unannounced field grade officer will be on hand to observe the solemn remembrances at the division's memorial monument on Constitution Avenue in the nation's capital.

Last summer the monument was greatly enlarged with the addition of World War II and Korea wings. Previously it had paid sole tribute to the 2nd Division dead of World War I.

June 9, chosen this year as the date for the ceremonies, is the anniversary of the battle of Belleau Wood, a World War I engagement for which the 2nd Division is remembered, and is the Sunday closest to June 6 — D-Day for the invasion of Normandy in which the division also took prominent part.

Customarily, the Marine Band and a squad of Marine troops are expected for the occasion. In Bourmont, France on October 26, 1917 with bitter months of trench warfare still lying ahead, the 2nd Infantry Division was formed of Army and Marine units. The current president of the "Indianhead" Association is a Marine veteran of World War I. It was also in that war that the "Second to None" adopted the now famous "Indianhead" shoulder patch and earned it to glory in World War II and through almost the entirety of the Korean Conflict.

The embassies of France, the Netherlands and Thailand have been invited to participate in this year's memorial services as in past years. Those countries had troops attached to the American 2nd Division as part of the United Nations front in Korea.

The combat history of the 2nd Infantry Division is a long one and the division flag for ceremonious occasions is heavy with battle streamers. In World War I, the division won more decorations than any other American division.

Participating in every major engagement involving American troops, it captured one-fourth of the prisoners taken by the American Expeditionary Forces and suffered one-tenth of the American casualties. Its first major campaign was Chateau-Thierry, then Belleau Wood, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Blanc Mont, Argone Forest and Meuse-Argone.

The 2nd Infantry Division landed on the beach in Normandy at St. Laurent-Sur-Mer under enemy fire on June 7, 1944. Handicapped by a shortage of ammunition and transportation, "Indianhead" soldiers attacked across the Aure River, liberating Trevieres, and swept through the 3rd Parachute Division of the Wehrmacht on June 11, beginning the Battle of the Hedgerows.

The fight for Hill 192, an enemy strongpoint on the road to St. Lo, was the next action and the 2nd Engineer Battalion fought alongside the line battalions as combat infantrymen.

Continuing the drive through Normandy the 2nd captured

Lt. Col. Walter Hibbard Jr., commanding officer of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, Monday leaves for a new assignment in Hawaii.

Col. Hibbard's new command will be with the Transport Service Division, Headquarters U.S. Army Pacific, at Fort Shafter located right outside of Honolulu.

Col. Hibbard came to the 2nd Infantry Division in January 1962 as commanding officer of the 13th Transportation Battalion. Upon the combined activation of the 2nd Supply and Transportation Battalion, under ROAD in March 1963, he became commanding officer of the new unit.

Training Tempo Spurred by 9th

By 9th Infantry PIO

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, is bustling with activity as this unit known as the "Manchu Dragons" increases training tempo in preparation for overseas embarkation under the Army's Rotaplan unit rotation system.

Scheduled to depart for Germany in mid-July, these officers and enlisted men are commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson. Once in Europe they will remain there for six months, relieving their sister unit, the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. The 2nd Battalion will be the fourth Rotaplan unit chosen for rotation to Germany from the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning.

Rigid Time Table

The battalion is presently faced with a rigid training timetable, which must be met before departure in July.

Presentation of German classes is one step taken to meet pre-departure requirements. A 25-hour block of instruction, the German classes are given by German-speaking men from the battalion's subordinate units. The classes are supplemented with recordings, literature and other training aids provided by the battalion.

In addition, the "Manchus" are undergoing special classes on various readiness system which test the reaction time of deployment when an "alert" is called.

A Preparation for overseas Replacement (POR) check has been administered to the battalion, and others will be given before the "Manchus" depart.

Slated soon is an overseas orientation, via Army regulation, which includes briefings on the customs and courtesies of the foreign country in which the personnel will be stationed.

Further ahead on the battalion training calendar is Rotaplan Readiness Training consisting of a battalion Army

Historic Gift From France Given a Home at Benning

FRANCE'S GIFT FOLLOWING 38TH INFANTRY WORLD WAR I ACTION
The Enormous Rock and It's Wooden Display Board Find a Home Here

By 38th Infantry PIO

After a 13-year stay at Fort Lewis, Washington, the 2,380-pound Rock of the Marne has found a new resting place here at Fort Benning.

Taken by the French government from the banks of the Marne River near the scene of the World War I battle which gained for the 38th Infantry its motto, "Rock of the Marne," the rock was originally presented by the French ambassador to the 38th Infantry at Fort Lewis in 1950 in recognition of the Regiment's heroic stand against German forces at the Marne.

During the fierce fighting there, the 38th repulsed nine shock German regiments in nine days of continuous fighting.

The 2,380-pound rock arrived at Fort Benning at nearly the same time the two new 38th Infantry Battalions were being redesignated at Wetherby Field ceremonies May 10. Accompanying the Rock was a large wooden display board constructed of timbers on which is inscribed an explanation of the 38th's crest and a replica of the crest itself.

Both will be erected near 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Headquarters. Preparations for the movement of the Rock of the Marne and the display board from Fort Lewis to Fort Benning began when the 38th Infantry was reactivated as a 2nd Infantry Division unit here in 1962.

Kelley Hill Library Had Modest Opening

The Kelley Hill Library is the newest library in the 2nd Division area and had a modest beginning when it was first organized in its present location October 25, 1958 with one professional librarian and one library assistant.

When the library was organized, the furniture consisted of a collection of borrowed, used and salvaged items from various sources. There was only an overhead light in the library and it was considered inadequate for good reading purposes.

But, with support and cooperation from the Special Services officer, the library gradually has been modernized and equipped with fluorescent lighting, drapes, carpeting, table lamps and new library furniture.

The library study area has been furnished with comfortable study tables, desks, chairs and lounge furniture in attractive pastel colors, with deep cushions conveniently arranged for comfort and decor. A separate music room is equipped with a new stereophonic record player, classical music recordings, comfortable chairs, writing tables, floor lamps, carpeting and drapes.

The music room is tastefully decorated with bouquets of flowers and an oil painting to add to the atmosphere.

In addition, the library has an office, storage room and a special workroom where damaged and processed.

The first books transferred to the Kelley Hill Library were those from the Reserve Officers' Training Corps Library. Periodicals, newspapers, a phonograph record player and records were transferred from Branch Library Five in the Harmony Church area. The collection numbered 5,171 catalogued circulating volumes, 59 periodicals, six newspapers, 145 musical recordings and two sets of foreign language recordings. The collection contained only four contemporary military volumes.

The card catalogue is arranged by author, title and subject. The books on the shelf are arranged according to the Dewey Decimal System in numerical and alphabetical order. The books are checked out for a two-week period and are subject to renewal on request. Patrons are given assistance when annalitical subjects are in question for reference and for writing term papers.

The library program at Kelley Hill is geared to general library service. Its collection now numbers almost 8,000 catalogued volumes, more than 400 reference volumes, a set of Great Books of the Western World, a complete set of contemporary military books, 64 current popular periodicals, seven sets of foreign language recordings and a collection of military school periodicals. The library is also stocked with United States and Armed Forces Institute books and renders service in their circulation in connection with the 2nd Division Education Officer.

During the first month of the library's operation, there were only 69 registered borrowers. Some 332 volumes were circulated and 1,197 people visited the library. Over a period of three years, these figures increased considerably in collection, circulation and attendance. For the month of March 1961, there were 818 registered borrowers, 1,506 volumes were circulated and 6,228 people visited the library.

The library's collection consists of non-fiction and fiction books. In the non-fiction area, there are books on general information, religion, philosophy, mathematics, useful arts, recreation, fine arts, classical literature, histories and biographies. In the fiction field, the books are divided into novels, science, mysteries and western categories.

The stacks are open and easily accessible to patrons. The library is operated by one professional librarian and two assistants.

Displays Interest Friends, Families Seeing Open 9th

By 9th Infantry PIO

Open House was declared Sunday at the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry as friends and relatives of 9th Infantry officers and men took a first-hand look at the operations and equipment of this Strategic Army Corps unit which, under Rotaplan, will ship to Germany in July.

An estimated 400 visitors attended, all personal guests of Lt. Col. Jack Samson, battalion commander, his officers and men.

Visitors were shown through displays of battalion armored personnel carriers; saw the unit's famed Liscum Bowl, given to the 9th Infantry in appreciation of its role in the Chinese Boxer Rebellion. Other displays included M-14 rifles, .45 caliber pistols, 3.5-inch rocket launchers, 106 milimeter recoilless rifles, 81 milimeter and 4.2-inch mortars and field-type first aid equipment.

The armored personnel carriers stole most of the spectators' interest, monitoring United Press International news bulletins and AM and FM radio music.

The Open House began Sunday at 1 p.m. and was climaxed at 8 p.m. with each subordinate company alternately staging its own display.

Recorded music was broadcast through the battalion area throughout the day.

Tincherbray and Brest, 300 miles from Tincherbray, a formidable obstacle of reinforced steel and concrete pillboxes and emplacements whose soldiers Hitler had issued orders to stop the Americans for 90 days.

Brest was liberated after 39 days of house-to-house, bloody close-in fighting.

Along the Siegfried Line in October, "Second to None" soldiers denied a German offensive important road nets leading to Liege and Antwerp. On the offensive themselves in February 1945, the 2nd took the key German towns of Helenthal and Gemund. By war's end, the battered boots of the "Second to None" had slogged, fighting, through France, Germany and halted in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia.

The 2nd Division landed in Pusan, Korea during the first week of August 1950 and four years later was ready for redeployment to the United States, a combat-weary veteran of every major campaign involving American troops since its arrival.

The general and his party then returned to the waiting helicopter, Gen. Wheeler on the way stopping to talk with enlisted men who had taken part in the special display.

The next stop was Lawson Army Airfield where the Army Chief of Staff witnessed lightning loading of troop transport planes by members of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry. The 2nd Division, newly-reorganized under the ROAD (Reorganization Objectives, Army Division) concept, stresses quick airlift mobility. The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry is commanded by Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier.

Gen. Wheeler was attended on his trip from the Pentagon which included a stopover at the Georgia Military College in Milledgeville Monday by Col. Marvin J. Berenzweig and Maj. Louie W. Odom. At the college the Chief of Staff addressed the 1963 graduating audience on the need for followers as well as leaders in the modern Army.

Gen. Wheeler arrived at Fort Benning Monday afternoon and departed Tuesday afternoon.

Air Novices Hit Chopper Maneuvers

By 9th Infantry PIO

MANNHEIM, Germany . . . Novice 9th Infantry airmen recently proved themselves to be as adept at maneuvering in and out of aircraft as they are with armored personnel carriers.

Giving their carriers rest recently, men of the 2nd Division's Europe-stationed 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, held their first helicopter training exercise to test speed and efficiency.

Eighth Infantry "Pathfinder" Division helicopters were brought to the Mannheim area and landed near 9th Infantry billets. The men, dressed in full combat gear, practiced running in and out, entering and evacuating the aircraft, testing their speed.

The H-34 helicopters for this exercise were supplied by the 8th Division's aviation center.

For IBM Course

Finance 'Computors' Going to Harrison

Four members of the 2nd Division's Finance Section have been selected to attend school at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., in connection with the mechanization of the division's payroll.

The two-week course, titled Mechanization of Military Pay Procedures for the Division, has become necessary for selected finance personnel dealing with newly acquired International Business Machines (IBM) designed to speed the process of paying division soldiers each month.

Scheduled to depart for Fort Benjamin Harrison next Friday are four members of the 2nd Administration Company, the unit to which finance is assigned. Heading the enlisted men is Sgt. James B. Sutfin, assistant chief of the military pay section. The three men accompanying the sergeant, before mechanization held the finance title of disbursing specialist. Now under mechanization they will be known as "computors." These are PFC Bruce P. Wood, PFC Michael J. McCarthy and PFC Ronald G. Abadie.

The four members of finance will begin work with the military pay course on June 10. They expect to remain at Fort Benjamin Harrison for a total of 16 days, during which time they will learn the intricacies of handling military pay records automatically with IBM machines.

In sending these four men for special schooling in Indiana, the 2nd Division's finance section is continuing a build up of a special group to handle four mammoth vans equipped with computors which have taken permanent places near the division adjutant general's office on Sand Hill.

These IBM machines have been given to the 2nd Division to speed through a monthly payroll averaging close to $2,000,000.

Designed to push back the cut-off date for the monthly payroll and reduce the number of people in Support Command's personnel section required to process the initial division pay procedure, the eight various machines have been successfully tested for one year at the Army's 101st Airborne Division.

In the approximate order of their use, the machines presently in the division include a key punch, key verifier, interpreter, sorter, collator, summary punch and two multi-purpose calculators, the "407" and the "609."

Men sent to Fort Benjamin Harrison for schooling in conjunction with these new machines will be working with a new pay slip. The new voucher is read horizontally rather than vertically as at present. In addition, income and tax to date is shown on this new voucher as well as monthly income and tax, giving everyone a running account on their money slip of how much tax they have paid to date and how much money they have made.

Phase-In

Automated pay in the 2nd Infantry Division is presently being phased in and is expected to take a total of three months, going from unit to unit within the division.

Newcomers to the division receive their first pay processed in the present manual method. Their second pay will be figured on the IBM machines.

Specially schooled personnel will help maintain separate "decks of cards" for each division member. The nine cards will show all particulars pertaining to that individual. As any change is made in his pay, the change will be forwarded to the Finance section from the Personnel section and the new conditions will be entered on his pay cards by machine.

Although automation in the 2nd Division will reduce the number of people at the personnel end necessary for paying, Army studies at Fort Campbell, Ky., home of the 101st, show that a slight increase in the size of the Finance section may be necessary.

The total Finance section is composed of three officers and 32 enlisted men. Under reorganization, the section has gained an officer. Studies at the 101st have brought a recommendation to increase the number of enlisted personnel to 37, an increase of five.

This Army-wide mechanization-of-pay project, presently in operation at the 101st, and, more recently, at the 82nd Airborne Division and 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized), has necessitated schooling for finance personnel.

According to Maj. Rex T. Dittamore, division finance officer, personnel in his office will also maintain manual dollar control despite the mechanization. This simply means that men will check the machines, which will in turn check them. Every step of the machine processing will be supervised by experienced finance men — a regulation enforced by the U. S. General Accounting office.

Rotaplan

Training Test (ATT), Command Maintenance Readiness Inspection (CMRI) slated for the last week in June, and an Annual General Inspection (AGI) during the third week of June.

During this pre-departure period, a break-down of the working week shows the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, training in the field for four days and in garrison for three.

While in the field, training consists of platoon and company-size drills, platoon ATT's, battalion field training exercises (FTX), which are all in preparation for the required battalion ATT on June 10-15.

Tracing its combat history from the Indian Wars to Korea, the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, follows the motto "Keep up the Fire." Now under the Rotaplan concept, the "Manchus" will stretch their "fire" over two continents.

While in Germany, the battalion's training will be directed by U. S. Army Europe (USAREUR) emphasizing field exercises. Although this program is similar to the training the "Manchus" have experienced at Fort Benning, it will be unique in respect to the foreign environment and sense of urgency of being near the Communist border.

Brigade Sgt. Maj. Bedford Recalls Benning Back When

By 1st Infantry PIO

A sergeant major, who entered the Army here at Fort Benning over 28 years ago, was recently assigned to the 2nd Division's 1st Brigade.

Sgt. Maj. C. R. Bedford remembers that back in 1935 when he first entered the Army, there were no barracks on either Sand or Kelley Hills, but instead a vast woodland. In addition, the Main Post area was only half its present size.

When asked to compare today's Army training with that of yesteryear, Sgt. Maj. Bedford remarked, "I remember when we used to use stove pipes to simulate a mortar and a piece of wood for a machine gun. The training was pretty much the same in theory as today's, but the soldier's equipment and weapons were not always available so objects such as stove pipes and sticks did the trick."

After being promoted to Master Sergeant in 1940, Sgt. Maj. Bedford was assigned to the 2nd Armored Division as the 1st sergeant of the Supply Battalion. It was with this unit that, as Sgt. Maj. Bedford puts it, "everything started to pop." The company was composed of new recruits fresh from their homes in California and were scheduled to go to Fort Bragg, N. C. for maneuvers. Training was cut short as the company was informed that they were to leave immediately for Africa.

They soon found themselves engaged in the invasion and battle for North Africa. Sgt. Maj. Bedford and his company fought their way through Normandy, the Rhineland and Northern France. As they started the final push into the German homeland itself, they ran into the last major attempt by the Germans to drive the Allies to the sea. What followed was the furious and bloody battle of the Ardennes forest. After fighting through most of the winter, the Allies finally broke through the German resistance and pushed on to Berlin.

Sgt. Maj. Bedford and his company stayed in Berlin for eight weeks as members of the occupation force. "In 1945, we returned to the states where most of us were discharged at Fort Jackson, S. C.," said Sgt. Maj. Bedford. Deciding that the military was the way of life for him, Sgt. Maj. Bedford reenlisted for four more years and rejoined his old outfit at Fort Hood, Texas. He stayed there for six months until he was assigned to the Texas Military District (a civilian component), where he was chief clerk.

After spending four and a half years with this group, he rejoined the 2nd Armored Battalion in 1951.

In 1952, Sgt. Maj. Bedford returned to Europe where he was assigned to the USAREUR Quartermaster School in Lengries, Germany. After completing three years duty there, he was transferred back to Fort Benning where he was assigned to The Infantry School as a physical training committeeman.

He remained here until February 1961 when he was once again sent overseas, this time to Korea. In Korea, he was assigned to the 34th Infantry, 7th Division.

In June, 1962, he returned to Fort Benning where he was assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 29th Infantry. In October of that year, he was reassigned to Company A, The Student Brigade.

Last March, Sgt. Maj. Bedford was assigned to the recently redesignated 1st Brigade (at that time, the 1st Infantry).

Among his honors, Sgt. Maj. Bedford has been awarded the National Defense Medal, the Army Commendation Medal and the Good Conduct Medal with three oak leaf clusters.

Sgt. Maj. Bedford has only two more years to go before he reaches the 30th year in the service of his country. At this time, he plans to retire and devote himself to his family. He and his wife, Lillian, and their five children, Barbara Anne, Georgia Lee, Robert, Gloria and Phyllis, reside in Atlanta, Ga.

Substantial Advances Outlined

What's Planned for 'Indianhead' Soldier in 1970?

Now that the "Second to None" has had a taste of 1970 with the division reorganization, what else in in store for the division, and the soldier, of tomorrow.

Most of the changes that will be made, both basic and sophisticated, will be along the lines of the changes that have already taken place here.

ROAD (Reorganization Objectives, Army Division) provides for increased mobility and flexibility. In the past year, division units, especially those tabbed for the Rotaplan rotation system, have been issued equipment that outmodes previous models as a means of increased firepower or personal protection.

The Key Words

Second Division, 1970, looks forward toward an expansion of these same goals. Mobility and flexibility will be the key words. But mobility and flexibility are only of service if the soldiers moved rapidly and in precise proportion to a trouble spot are equipped to meet the challenge. Therefore, additional firepower, lighter weapons, better protection for the average soldier, more integrated support, advanced medical facilities — these are basically what the Army research and development team is working on now.

Today's "Indianhead" soldier boasts a weapon superior to the World War II and Korea standard rifle. The M-14 successfully incorporates the attributes of the M-1 rifle, the automatic rifle, the carbine rifle and the machinegun, a four-in-one weapon.

In addition to the M-14 which, according to Lt. Gen. Dwight E. Beach, Chief of Army Research and Development, will probably be the principal weapon of the "Indianhead" infantryman in 1970, lighter, special purpose weapons of unique design will reach selected individuals. The air cavalry troop of the divisions 7th Cavalry would likely be one of the units to receive a rifle of this type, something similar to the AR-15 satisfactorily tested in Vietnam for airborne, air assault and commando troops.

Today's "Indianhead" soldier boasts the M-60 machinegun. By 1970 this light, rapid-fire hotspot jewel will not have been phased out. But, another rapid-fire weapons system will have been added to bolster the M-60 and replace the current .50 caliber machine gun. The Army is even now after a vehicle-mounted, rapid-fire weapon for deploy against enemy personnel and light armor. Like the present .50 caliber machinegun, it will be capable of being fired from a ground mount.

Today's "Indianhead" soldier boasts the M-17 protective mask and, when necessary, an armored protective vest. In 1970 Army scientists predict antidotes for any known chemical or biological warfare agent (along with a sizable arsenal of the U. S.'s own agents), and standard issue will be a new, lighter weight combat vest with much increased protection.

Outwardly, the Army uniform will likely remain very much the same. In construction, however, basic differences involving breakthroughs in clothing research will make themselves known everyday and, especially, in emergencies.

A soldier in a gas attack of the future may find the protection he seeks built into his uniform! The introduction of protective measures against certain chemical - biological agents is now being incorporated into that uniform. Don't throw away your poncho, but a water repellant substance known as Quarpel is also planned for the field uniform. On the whole, the addition or subtraction of components to the uniform will insure its usefulness in any climate.

Combat Boots

Your combat boots will look the same in 1970, but a new sole will do away with costly resoling in the field. The sole will last as long as the upper part of the boot and will, in fact, be molded to it.

For tactical warfare, the first-generation family of missiles, the Redstone, Corporal and Honest John, will give way to the Pershing, Sergeant and Lance. A man-portable missile, the Redeye, weighing only 28 pounds, will provide forward area protection against low-level aircraft.

Plans for other field weapons, when not radical in design such as the tank of the future, will provide for lighter weight, longer range and added firepower. As for the new main battle tank (72nd Armor take note), it will be recognizable as a combat vehicle or tank but will be lighter, more mobile and will carry an increased punch given by a revolutionary, never-miss missile system.

All of these new weapons and clothing advances are made possible by remarkable technological breakthroughs being exploited at full pace by the Army's Research and Development team, a greatly expanded research effort. Progress is astonishing. Even today, authorities cannot categorically state just what the future holds because of the possibility of advances as startling as those already made. In modern technology, even the experts are not sure what lies around the corner.

2nd Receives G-2 Major Of Vietnam

Completing a year's duty in Vietnam, Maj. Raymond W. King has joined the 2nd Infantry Division as assistant G-2 (Intelligence) officer.

Well into his nineteenth year of active Army service, the new 2nd Division officer served in Vietnam as a military sector advisor to one of the country's many province chiefs.

Darlac Province

Stationed in the highland area of South Vietnam in Darlac Province, Maj. King worked with members of the South Vietnam Army at the "grass roots" level of the fierce struggle now going on in that Southeast Asia country.

Combat duty in this officer's experience include participation in the invasion of Southern France in World War II. In 1951 he served with the 3rd Infantry Division in Korea as platoon leader, company commander and was decorated with two Silver Stars for bravery. He also received a Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for valor.

Commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant of Infantry in 1948, Maj. King volunteered for parachute training and after receiving his wings was assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division. In 1950 he left the 82nd for Korea and duty with the 3rd Infantry Division.

In 1952 he returned to the U. S., joined the 11th Airborne Division and remained with that unit until it was deactivated in Germany in 1957 and became the 24th Infantry Division.

Returning to the U. S. again, Maj. King attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., taking the associate course. Upon graduation he was assigned to Fort Benning, from where he departed for South Vietnam.

The major, his wife, Nancy Carroll, and their children, Thomas Scott, 8, and Randall William, 6, reside at 2118 Minaco Drive, Columbus.

It's That Time of Year

Prepare for Summer Lightning

The forecast read: "... late afternoon thunderstorms."

To a man safe at home, such a warning might be accepted with a shrug of the shoulders. But, to the Soldier faced with an afternoon exercise in the woods of Fort Benning, the word "thundershowers" could have special meaning. Add the fact that lightning often strikes taller objects to the fact that Fort Benning's spacious acres of woodlands contain copious quantities of pines with well-grounded tap roots. . . and the "special meaning" is underscored.

A 2nd Infantry Division Circular Number 385-7, spells out the ever-present dangers of lightening, that unpredictable phenomenon of the southern weather patterns.

Tips

The circular enumerates safety precautions that will apply to personnel, both in military duties or off-duty pursuits, and spells out tips to use during thunderstorms. These are as follows:

Avoid flat open fields or bare hilltops during a thunderstorm. If unavoidably caught in such a situation, lie flat upon the ground, thus reducing the "get height" and chances of being hit.

Buildings will afford some protection, particularly if grounded or if outer wall and roof surfaces are wet. Personnel in buildings should avoid standing under high chimneys near outer wall or water pipes, wiring, etc.

Communication systems should be grounded properly and, unless tactical situation prohibits, lead - in wires to switchboards and telephones should be disconnected.

Conversations over telephones should be held to a minimum during severe electrical disturbances.

Personnel in the field should refrain from lying beneath vehicles. Due to the insulating effect of vehicle tires, the bodies of such men become the path of electrical charge from truck to ground.

Positive Action

Other points of the circular reaffirm the positive action utilized in previous lightning tragedies. These consisted of immediate first aid and artificial respiration being applied to all victims of lightning. The circular notes that many victims may be temporarily stunned and paralyzed so that "prompt artificial respiration and treatment for shock may restore their breathing and thus save their lives."

Avoid single, isolated trees or poles in large open spaces, or, if in the woods, avoid the highest trees.

Avoid large masses of isolated metal in open fields, such as a mounted gun, field piece, vehicle, wire, etc. (Exception: persons inside closed vehicles with steel tops have usually escaped injury when such vehicles were struck by lightening, due to the shielding effect of the steel body.)

If in a group unavoidably caught in a flat, open space or bare hill top, do not huddle together, but scatter to reduce the attraction of a mass of bodies and reduce the odds of being hurt or killed if a bolt of lightning strikes.

Although lightning can be capricious, the Soldier who knows its general tendencies and the tips of safety contained in the division circular will be prepared for the many thunderstorms that erupt in the Fort Benning area.

Set Engineer Corps 188th Anniversary

By 2nd Engr. PIO

On June 16 members of the 2nd Engineer Battalion will join with engineer units throughout the world in observing the 188th anniversary of the Corps of Engineers.

On June 16, 1775, the Continental Congress passed a resolution providing for one Chief Engineer of the Grand Army with two assistants, and thus the anniversary day of the Corps of Engineers was originated.

Since 1824 the Corps of Engineers has had responsibility for civil works construction required for navigation and flood control measures needed for our expanding country. The organization of the Corps of Engineers for river and harbor construction also undertakes contract construction for the Army and Air Force, assists in civil emergencies such as flood and hurricanes, wartime expansion of armed forces facilities and gives peacetime training.

Elements of the Corps of Engineers include the combat engineers, engineer special brigades and the aviation engineers.

Lieutenant General Walter K. Wilson Jr. is the present Chief of the Corps of Engineers.

The 2nd Engineer Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division, presently commanded by Lt. Col. James T. Carter, was first organized on August 3, 1861, from one existing company and three new companies of Engineer soldiers. It was designated the "Battalion of Engineers, Army of the United States".

During the civil War from 1861 to 1865, this Engineer Battalion fought with the Army of the Potomic. Again in 1898 the battalion went to war in the Spanish-American War.

Years of peacetime service were interrupted in 1916 when members of Pancho Villa's Mexican revolutionaries attacked Columbus, New Mexico. The 2nd Engineers participated in the expedition to defeat the invader.

The next year the United States entered World War I, and from September 1917 to August 1919 the 2nd Engineers served in France.

During World War II the 2nd Engineers participated in the Normandy invasion in 1944 as well as the Battle of the Bulge and at Leipzig.

In 1950 the 2nd Engineers were swept into the Korean Conflict. Then followed one of the most heroic and tragic action in the unit's history. During a delaying action fight 229 officers and men were killed or captured. The unit later regained its strength and participated in other battles.

The 2nd Engineers, upon being relieved in Korea, moved to Alaska. The battalion was redesignated the 2nd Engineer Battalion (Combat) on March 1, 1954.

On June 14, 1958, the 2nd Engineers were reborn at Fort Benning, Georgia, with the reactivation of the 2nd Infantry Division.

The 2nd Engineer Battalion currently has the responsibility of providing general engineer work and tactical support for the 2nd Division. The engineer combat battalion is one of the most versatile of the engineer units in infantry combat.

In furnishing engineer work or tactical support for the Division it can provide engineer staff planning and supervision, including that required for attached and supporting engineer troops. The capabilities of the battalion covers construction, repair, improvement, maintenance of roads, trails, fords, bridges and culverts; demolition and munitions; transporting of infantry elements across rivers with assault equipment; and removal and construction of obstacles, including mine fields.

Col. Hibbard Reassigned

ROTC program he had participated in while at college.

He served in North Africa, Sicily and Italy during World War II and won the Bronze Star with cluster during these campaigns. He earned another Bronze Star Medal Cluster with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

Col. Hibbard also holds the Army Commendation Medal Badge with star.

He graduated from the Armed Forces Staff College and Command and General Staff College. He also completed the Traffic Engineer Course at Yale University in 1954.

Col. Hibbard is married and has three children, Annette, 15, Walter, 7, and Mary Ann, 6. They will accompany him to his new assignment.

Commenting on his tour with the 2nd Infantry Division, he remarked.

"A most fruitful period for me. The various activities and training carried out by the 'Indian Head Division' are unmatched. I consider my assignment with the 2nd Infantry Division the highlight of my career."

Col. Hibbard and his family will depart for his hometown, Havertown, Pa., on June 3. He will spend a few days there on leave before reporting for assignment to Hawaii on July 13.

Monkey, Tiger, Lion Invade 702nd Coffee

Stuffed animals provided the theme for the monthly coffee of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion officer's wives in the Anzio Room of the MOOM.

A llama, monkey, tiger, lion, ram and porcupine were arranged on the serving table sniffing trays of sweet rolls, leaning on the coffee urn, admiring the guests as they approached the table, and taking shelter in the leaves of philodendron plants, also on the serving table.

Nametags with hand-drawn representations of the animals were given to each of the guests as they arrived by Mrs. Walter M. Boyles and Mrs. Richard B. Hai, hostesses.

Seated at the silver coffee service was Mrs. Daniel H. Pride, who is leaving next month to accompany her husband on a new assignment to the Panama Canal Zone.

During the business meeting farewell was also bid to Mrs. William M. Sanders and Mrs. William H. Webb Jr., whose husbands are returning to civilian life this week.

Mrs. Philip H. Taft, wife of the commanding officer of the Battalion, extended welcomes to Mesdames Daryl Brost, Wallace Bruce, and Richard Oswald.

The wives congratulated Mrs. Taft on her recent election to the position of 1st Vice President of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club.

Jo Carol Steps Up to Bigtime

By Peter Tsitsichoff

There are many things that Jo Carol likes. But most of all she loves being that fantastic age—sixteen. And what time of year? Why Spring of course. What month? May, naturally. What day? Friday. Last Friday to be exact, the night of the Baker High School Junior-Senior Prom.

Jo Carol Newman, daughter of the 2nd Infantry Division's 2nd Brigade sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Gilbert Newman, has had a pretty busy life but Friday was really hectic. Being a junior at school, this was her first night out in the grand manner.

Rising early, she began her carefully planned day very methodically. But by the time this Spring afternoon set in, there was hardly any time to prepare.

The evening set in faster than usual that night. But her yellow gown, simple and full-length, was ready; her mother was there to help. After all, her hair had to be just right.

And then a quick rush to the mirror to check her lipstick, a dash to the living room to slip on her long white gloves, a race to the front door, and then the sudden change.

Her escort for the evening, George Miller, arrived and naturally Jo Carol met him at the door as if she had everything under control. Oh, she had been ready for hours.)

That was how the big evening began, as it began for so many other girls all over the country for whom this Spring was the most glorious time in life — prom-time.

The daughter of one of the Army's top noncommissioned officers, Jo Carol has attended schools in Germany (Schwegweinsuit), Fort Benning, (Faith), and Columbus. An avid basketball fan, she is active in the Tri-Hi-Y and serves as treasurer for the Baker High Future Business Leaders of America. Her favorite subject in school is English.

French-Born, She Loves All Army Women's Clubs

By Virginia Freeman

France has more than 60 cities with a population of over 50,000 inhabitants. Many of the cities are old, with a rich historical background, and with buildings and customs left from the past. A direct contrast to the old cities are the small picturesque villages which dot the French countryside. It was in one of these tiny hamlets that Mrs. William C. McKinney was born.

The village of Montmorency, located near Paris, was where Mrs. McKinney spent her youth, attending school and nourishing the ambition of one day being employed in an interesting and exciting job. After attending and graduating from business school, she set about making application for what perhaps would have been the exciting job of her dreams in the offices of a well-known shipping line.

Rather than materializing, however, Mrs. McKinney's dream took a far more blissful turn, for she married and shortly thereafter came to the United States to live.

ANIMAL-LOVER
Mrs. McKinney

Mrs. McKinney is no stranger to Fort Benning, having been stationed here before with her husband.

"I just enjoy women's clubs," says Mrs. McKinney who is Program Chairman for The Ladies of The Big Indianhead and, as such, coordinates luncheon programs, the playing of bingo and the planning of social affairs, such as, teas and fashion shows. Along with her club work, she takes the same enthusiasm into her volunteer work as a newly capped staff aide at Martin Army Hospital.

Leisure time activities are varied and filed Mrs. McKinney either knitting, sewing or painting.

Loves the Sea

"St. Nazaire, a small resort city in France, was our favorite overseas tour", points out Mrs McKinney. It was here that she fell in love with the sea.

The desire to live near a body of water is still very strong for her and her family. They look forward to one day living permanently on the coastline of California.

"Having to be inland was not such a disappointment when the family lived in Louisville, Ky., while Sgt. McKinney was on civilian component duty," says Mrs. McKinney. "This was our favorite stateside post."

Mrs. McKinney is quite fond of small animals and at one time the McKinney household could number at least five small animals, at present there are two cats and one hamster.

Sgt. McKinney, a member of Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 22rd Infantry, and Mrs. McKinney and their three sons make their home on Arrowhead Road, Fort Benning.

COOK of the WEEK

"Roman Emperors", we read, "dined on dressed lettuce and ordered on plates of gold, radishes so thin that the gold gleamed through." When Catherine of Aragon went to England as the bride of Henry the Eighth, it was necessary for the royal household to send abroad to get greens to please her accustomed taste. In time, the French and Spaniards introduced salads to America. Today, salads claim a prominent place on menus throughout the country as they have become increasingly popular over the years. Together with popularity, salads could rank first also in variety. Mrs. Richard O. Funk, this week's "Cook of the Week," shares with us an interestingly different kind of fruit salad for those hot summer days.

Coca-Cola Salad

1 can crushed pineapple
1 can black cherries
2 packages cherry jello
2 bottles Coca-Cola
1 package marshmallows
1 large package cream cheese
Nuts

Melt cream cheese and marshmallows together over a low heat. Heat pineapple and cherry juice, then add jello and stir until dissolved.

Add Coca-Cola, then mix in marshmallow mixture; add fruit and nuts. Chill.

(Note:) Red cherries may be used in place of black cherries).

Wives Club Will Meet June 11

The 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club will meet for a coffee rather than a luncheon for the next three months.

June's Coffee will be held at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club at 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday the 11th.

Hostessing the affair will be the wives of the 7th Cavalry and 2nd Aviation Battalion.

Memberships will be accepted for the coming year at this coffee. Dues are $1.00 per year.

Reservations will be taken for the coffee by the alphabetically designated reservation chairmen who have taken the luncheon reservations for the club this spring. Chairmen should be called by the Thursday preceding the coffee, June 6, for this coming coffee.

Mrs. Hannon Pours at 38th Arty. Coffee

Mrs. Francis A. Chance Jr. hostessed the monthly coffee of the 5th Howitzer Battalion, 38th Artillery held recently in her home.

A pink gladioli and white chrysanthemum arrangement in a silver bowl decorated the refreshment table at which Mrs. Harry T. Hannon poured. After the coffee Mrs. Chance presented the centerpiece to Mrs. Hannon, who is leaving for Hawaii.

Mesdames Victor Lozada, Alan Bennett, and Richard Sheridan were welcomed.

Mrs. Rena Mason, mother of Mrs. Benson F. Landrum, was visiting from Oklahoma and attended the coffee as her daughter's guest.

Rota Center Holds Picnic

The ladies and children of Company A, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry enjoyed a picnic recently at Flat Rock Park.

Guests for the outing were Mrs. Eldridge Childress and her mother, Mrs. C. N. Compton, Sgt. and Mrs. John Southern and Mrs. James Greeson.

After the picnic, the group gathered on the lawn of Mrs. Robert Gaddis.

Artillery Wives Welcome Two

The 2nd Division Artillery Headquarters ladies held their monthly coffee in the Normandy Room of the MOOM recently.

Mmes. John R. Grimes, Robert E. Camp and Edward J. Gardzina, hostesses, asked Mrs. Ralph K. Jones, wife of the Division Artillery commanding officer, to pour the refreshments.

New ladies to join the group at this coffee were Mrs. James J. Brenner and Mrs. Gordon H. Blitch.

Looking for Fort Slocum?

Panicked Students Search the Briny Deep

By Carl Halstead

Davids Island is situated in the middle of Long Island Sound, just off the shores of New Rochelle, N.Y.

What is Davids Island, you ask? A prison, a leper colony — just what?

To the aspiring young military journalist it is better known as Fort Slocum — the home of the Army Information School.

Here is where the future information officers and specialists of the Army, Air Force, and members of the Canadian military, get their training.

For Girls and Boys

For eight weeks students, both male and female, study toward information specialties. The course is difficult and requires long hours of study, but the knowledge obtained while at the school and the rewarding experience that follows while on the job make the strenuous curriculum worthwhile.

Upon arrival at Fort Slocum the new student is confronted by a problem. There is a large sign which welcomes him to Fort Slocum, but in front of, to each side, and directly below this large black and white lettered sign is nothing but water. Instead of seeing the rolling green lawns and smooth concrete roads of most military posts, there is the green, deep ocean.

A number of us were confronted by this problem upon our arrival for school. We looked at the welcoming sign, the water, the yachts, motorboats and fishermen; no Fort Slocum. Actually, it was a little unnerving.

As one of the new students, a Canadian Army sergeant, put it.

"Glory be! These Americans — they have really outdone themselves this time. Just imagine, going to school in aqua-lungs!"

Our quandary was due to ignorance. We had all failed to locate Fort Slocum on a map before our arrival. The post was situated upon an island one-half mile out.

Travel to and from the post is by a large vehicle and passenger carrying ferry boat. This boat made the trip back and forth every twenty minutes and is quite a scenic trip.

The post itself is like a small college campus. Some of the finest instructors, professors and equipment make up the Army Information School.

There are five departments in the school.

Policy and Plans teaches the history, principles and policies of the Army's information program. Study and discussion are for the most part on actual cases. Emphasis is put on community relations, enemy propaganda and troop information to the man in the field.

Oral Communications trains students in proper speaking techniques. Stress is put on speech writing and delivery, and proper information instruction for the troops.

Applied Journalism trains the students for correct newspaper writing and make-up. Grammar, style and practice at writing news articles, feature stories, sports, is taught here. This particular part of the course is most stressed in hours taught and importance.

Radio-Television gives the student a basic look at how to function with radio and television work. Writing newscasts for programs and then actually directing, announcing and handling the shows themselves affords the student an enormous experience.

Military, U. S. and World Affairs provides the student with material for his information program. Essentials of United States history, nations of the world, strategic areas of the world and an analysis of communism and Russian history make up the course.

It is easy to see that quite often the student finds the days long and the studies hard. Often they take their books out along the shore during the warm evenings. Here, the soft ocean breeze, the sound of a ship's horn on a foggy evening, the easy roll of the tide passing back and forth over the cooling beach sand and the flickering lights of the New York-Manhattan area brings a sort of peaceful tranquility after a studious day.

Ever since the Army established a hospital on the island in 1861 the post has been a military installation.

During World War I Fort Slocum was a large recruit installation. Then during World War II the Transportation Corps had its officer training school on the island. It was while stationed at Fort Slocum during this time that Private Willie Duckworth wrote the words and music for the hit song, "Sound Off."

In 1946 the post was turned over to the Army Air Corps and later the First U.S. Air Force. The Army reactivated the post in 1950 and turned it into the Army Information School.

1st Brigade Scouts Honor Rugged Heritage

American history may be sighted along a multiplicity of viewpoints. Some choose to look at it as a long adventure story, a romance. And full of adventure it is, from Coronado traversing the Great Plains and John Smith penetrating the Chickahominy swamps to the 20th Century scientist triumphing, lab-bound, over infantile paralysis.

Leafing back through the years of discovery to the seed implanted by Columbus and his galleons, so many major factors present themselves as contributors to the transformation of American society that it is again difficult to isolate the single most important one. An immediate thought is the pioneer scout who set out on foot with nothing but crude weapons and courage to blaze a trail for others to follow.

The Scout Section of the 1st Brigade falls into this same category with the exception that it now has modern weapons and speedy means of travel.

It is comprised of twelve men led by SSgt. Clifford Smith, section leader. The rest of the section is broken down into three teams, the first team led by Sgt. Roy Sosebee and staffed by PFC Hura Hill, driver, and PFC John Conner, observer.

The second team is led by Sgt. Cleotis Horrison and includes PFC Harold Smith, observer, and Spd Hurtis McMillian, driver. Spd Andy Kovacs captains the third team with observer, PFC Armond Joubet, and PFC Ray Clark, driver.

Capabilities of the scout section include limited reconnaissance and patrolling missions which employ vehicles organic to the section or aircraft assigned to the aviation platoon.

The scouts also man a brigade observation post and provide security for the brigade command post or other brigade installations. They can operate as motor messengers or serve as liaison personnel with adjacent or attached units.

The Scout Section is controlled by the headquarters commandant for all activities but reconnaissance and patrolling, these two being supervised by the S-2 (intelligence) section.

A Scout Section 1963 compared with its predecessors is a contrast of night and day. Today's scouts utilize four quarter-ton vehicles, four M-60 machine guns, two 3.5 rocket launchers, four .45 caliber pistols and eight M-14 rifles. How outmoded now are the flintlock rifles the oldtimers shouldered for hard-walked miles?

Training plays an important role for the Scout Section, and the Scout Section plays an important role for the brigade and division. The men are eager, capable and confident.

In the 18th Century Crevecoeur noted that a new man was rising from American soil, a versatile figure, energetic, ruggedly independent, an optimistic idealist. Benjamin Franklin was that truly American figure and so were Lewis and Clark, Daniel Boone and Sam Houston. Today's scouts pride themselves as images from the same mold.

BRIGADE'S SCOUTS MOVE OUT ON TACTICAL MISSION

Enlisted Men Here

By 38th Artillery PIO

Two enlisted men recently joined Battery B, 38th Artillery, one from the division's recently inactivated 12th Artillery, the other from Korea.

Spd Jackie Martin reported for duty from previous duty with the 1st Battalion, 12th Artillery. The native Georgian will train as a driver for the battery's howitzer prime movers.

PFC Kares Nunnery, reporting from duty in Korea, will perform duty as an assistant gunner. He is a native of Chicago, Ill.

ARMY CAMELS

In 1855 the U. S. Army bought 33 camels from Egypt for use in the hot, arid Southwest. A $30,000 investment, the camels soon proved to be unsatisfactory for "modern" Army operations.

LT. STONE, SPECIAL VISITOR

They Had a Visitor

'Give Yourself Up'--Trigon Rose

"Hello there GI, are you tired, hungry and homesick? Do you feel badly? Does all seem in vain, with no point in going on? You're right! C'mon, give yourself up. You haven't got a chance for victory. Let us feed you and give you a warm, comfortable place to sleep. C'mon GI, the Trigon Party, wants to help you. Turn in your weapons for peace and freedom." Those were the words of Trigon Rose, in a mock demonstration of psychological warfare, to the troops of the 2nd battalion, 9th Infantry.

The battalion was recently subjected to "psy-war" training during intensified field maneuvers. Performing similar to the style of Axis Sally, of World War II was Lt. Francis Stone of The Infantry Center's WAC Detachment. Lt. Stone portrayed the part of Trigon Rose, propagandist of the Circle Trigon Party. The Circle Trigon Party is a simulated aggressor force. This is how she operated:

All was quiet at last for the "Manchu" men. That day had been a hectic one. There had been various assaults by the aggressor force on their position. They had defended Hill 402 well. Now night had cast a shadow over the tired and weary troops. However, anticipating another counter-attack, the men maintained a constant vigilance over the entire area. Very little sleep would be had tonight.

It was just past mid-night when the enchanting voice of Trigon Rose, echoed through the stillness. She infiltrated the entire area, in her vehicle, rigged with loud speakers. Rose, was accompanied by three Trigon soldiers. Suddenly, the night belonged to Trigon Rose.

She appeared here and there, trying to entice the "Manchu" men, to lay down their weapons, we'll give you rest and relaxation," asserted the intruder.

Lt. Col. Jack Samson, battalion commander, ordered the immediate capture of Trigon Rose. A squad was soon in pursuit. Trigon Rose, was soon to be silenced. The last chorus of Rose's song was muttered shortly thereafter and then the gate of the battalion prisoner-of-war cage closed on another prisoner.

Lt. Stone, in her role as Trigon Rose, did a commendable job, but to no avail.

This psychological warfare is an integral part of the intensified training the battalion is currently undergoing. The training is designed to subject the troops to fear, doubt and uncertainty which frequently occurs during combat.

"GARRY" ALWAYS LIVED

It is sometimes forgotten that not all the 7th Cavalry, now an element of the 2nd Infantry Division, was destroyed at the Little Big Horn.

Washington Native Reenlists for Six

By 17th Artillery PIO

A veteran of eight years service has reenlisted for an additional six in the 2nd Division's 17th Artillery.

Sgt. Carl M. Olsen, a native of Prosser, Wash., serves as cook for the 17th Artillery Headquarters Company.

The sergeant, reenlisting for his own vacancy, has served with the Army in both Korea and Germany. Administering the reenlistment oath to Sgt. Olsen was Capt. James S. Compton, headquarters company commander.

Chap. D. Compton Qualifies Airborne

Lt. David O. Compton, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry chaplain, recently graduated from The Infantry Center's Airborne School.

Graduating from a class of 333, Chap. Compton said he underwent the training solely to become a qualified "jump chaplain," although he'll remain at his present assignment.

The chaplain was assigned to the 9th in April.

Capt. Cosgrove Named Div. AG

The former chief of the 2nd Division's personnel services division has recently assumed the duties of the division adjutant general.

Capt. William C. Cosgrove took over the position of adjutant general this week from Lt. Col. Richard E. Guthrie, who retired from active service.

Capt. Cosgrove first came to the 2nd Division in October 1959. At that time, he was assigned to the 23rd Infantry as executive officer of Company E. In May of 1960, he was reassigned to the 7th Cavalry as assistant S-3. He was later made commander of Troop C, 7th Cavalry.

In June 1961, he was assigned to the Adjutant General's personnel divison and attended the Adjutant General's school at Fort Benjamin Harrison. He graduated first in his class from the Adjutant General's familiarization course.

At the conclusion of the course, he was reassigned to Fort Benning for duties in Personnel Management. On May 23, 1962, Capt. Cosgrove was assigned to the Administrative Services Division of the 2nd Division's Adjutant General's office.

TRAINING'S NEW MAJOR . . . Promoted recently by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general, is Maj. Ishmael Pack, (R) division assistant G-3 (training) officer. The new major began service in the 2nd Division as aide de camp to former division commander, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase.

R.O.T.C. Now Prepares Quality Officers in Quantity

The Reserve Officers Training Corps prepares a man for the Army as a whole," says an officer who should know, Lt. Col. Virgil Peterson, 2nd Division special services officer. "I would encourage all college students to go into R.O.T.C."

A 1951 R.O.T.C. graduate of Trinity University in San Antonio, Tex., Lt. Peterson is well acquainted with the merits of that longstanding Army program. The lieutenant stresses, of course, that R.O.T.C. is not an end-all of Army training.

While the four years of courses and summer camp instill the fundamentals, the officer orientation courses offered in various Army branches after entrance upon active duty are a necessity to give the new officer knowledgeable familiarity with his specific field of duty.

Today the Army depends to a large extent on the program for its officers. The United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., with its limited enrollment cannot hope to fill the need. Neither can Officer Candidate School even after its sizable expansion here at Fort Benning. Therefore, R.O.T.C. goes a long way towards giving the Army the 10 per cent of the service's overall strength which serves as an officer class.

In operation since before World War II, the reserve officers training program is constantly undergoing changes, some great, others relatively insignificant. During Lt. Peterson's college years, students of the program included three classes and a half day for drill weekly in their normal curricula for the first two years of the four-year schedule.

For the last two years, two classes a week plus the half day of drill were devoted to Army subjects. This is the advanced R.O.T.C. program for those students seriously-enough interested to pursue the program to commission.

Following the junior year, a summer camp is conducted similar to basic infantry training. As the students have already briefly engaged in class in tactical theory, it is possible during the nine or ten days of the six-week camp given to bivouac to run tactical exercise. These include harrassment, ambush, attack and other like problems.

The courses and the summer camp can be more freely scheduled in R.O.T.C., depending on the individual and the school's committments. Days of classes and drills days vary from one school to the next, and it is possible to take summer camp other than between the junior and senior year. Lt. Peterson attended summer camp after graduating in May 1951 from Trinity.

Today at college campuses the number of classes in the first two years of the program have been cut from three to one, making the program even more attractive. At land grant colleges and universities where R.O.T.C. is compulsory, for the first two years this change, it is hoped, will curb the number of dropouts.

Between the sophomore and junior years when students must make the choice of continuing into advanced status or letting it go and when the instructors (Army officers and noncommissioned officers) recruit decide on who they will allow to continue, this is a critical period.

The Army has, however, made the rewards large. Upon completion of the four years of courses and the summer camp and at ceremonies during graduation week, successful graduates are commissioned second lieutenants in the Reserve Army and, sometimes, in the Regular Army. So far, R.O.T.C. has had gratifying results, supplying the Army with large numbers of qualified officers.

As Lt. Peterson states, though, it is not the end of preparation for active Army duty. When a newly - commissioned officer goes "active," he first completes a course in the branch to which he is assigned. Should he be assigned to the Adjutant General Corps as Lt. Peterson was, he would be sent for eight weeks of training at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. Infantry officers receive additional schooling at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, in the Infantry Officer Orientation Course.

"R. O. T. C. instructs basic Army fundamentals and gives the students a hard - core of military discipline. The Army method is learned generally. It is a fine background but only a background. The new officer must be prepared for a series of important new lessons at the orientation course and, most important, on the job. He can never stop learning."

Chosen By '2nd's' Soldiers

WAC Beauty Queen Crowned at Club Two

"Indianhead" Division soldiers have chosen a WAC private first class in the beauty contest sponsored by Service Club Two as "Queen of the WAC's."

PFC Sandy Mayberry of the WAC Detachment, United States Army Infantry Center was crowned by the division's special services officer recently at the service club. She was chosen over other contestants by division troopers who viewed the pictures on display in Service Clubs Two and Four and cast their ballots for their choices.

The beauty contest took place as part of the WAC Detachment's birthday celebrations. The detachment celebrated at the service club with a special "Spend the Day with the 2nd Infantry Division" program.

The young ladies were brought up to Sand Hill from main post early Sunday morning. Following coffee call at Service Club Two, soldiers escorted girls to chapels in the Sand Hill area. Leaving the chapels, lunch was served at Headquarters and Headquarters Company for the WAC's.

Scheduled activities began at the service club with an introduction at 1 o'clock of the WAC commander and staff. In the absence of detachment commander Capt. Frances Powell, the detachment executive officer, Lt. Helen Stone, took charge. Next in the festivities came a presentation of the "WAC of the Month." She was PFC Patricia Tenticuff.

The WAC contestants in the beauty contest also picked their own favorite to be crowned "Miss Congeniality." Sp5 Georgina Ortiz, who had written a humorous skit to be used the same afternoon and was a beauty contestant, captured that title.

The birthday cake marking the 21st anniversary of the detachment was then cut by the WAC Queen, PFC Sandy Mayberry. "Real Life in the WAC Area" by Sp5 Oritz was next presented by the girls. The skit good-naturedly spoofed troop information classes and commanders' conferences. It also took off on G.I. parties and was acted in by Sp5 Ortiz, PFC Betty Jones, Pvt. Arlene Orell, Pvt. Rusty Roberts, Pvt. Linda Moore, PFC Patsy Adams and Sp4 Stormy Steele.

Lt. Virgil Peterson, the division special services officer, crowned the queen, PFC Mayberry, after the skit. She was attended by the two runners-up, Sp5 Tommy Devan and Pvt. Elizabeth Elms. Red roses were given the queen and her court by Lt. Peterson who also gave yellow roses to the "WAC of the Month" and "Miss Congeniality."

The day was highlighted by a tea dance featuring music by The Rhythm Aces. For the "Spend the Day" activities at the service club, the club was decorated in the WAC colors of gold and green.

At the end of the dance the girls were escorted back to their unit on main post.

With a Proud History, 12th Artillery Marks Birthday

By 12th Arty PIO

The 2nd Infantry Division's 12th Artillery Friday celebrated its 46th anniversary.

Organized at St. Asaphs, Virginia, from the 2nd Battalion, 3rd Field Artillery, the newly created unit was named Battery A, 12th Artillery, an element of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Horse-Drawn

The 12th Artillery during its first years was armed only with a few horse-drawn three-inch guns. Out of this unit came the present day 1st Rocket Howitzer Battalion, 12th Artillery, armed with eight-inch Howitzers and "Honest John" rockets.

The 12th Artillery has a history, dating back to the early days of 1918. On January 10, 1918 the unit sailed on the S.S. Olympia for duty with the American Expeditionary Force, arriving in Liverpool, England on January 18th. Shortly after, it arrived at Le-Valdoca, France for training. It trained in France until March 18, 1918 when it took to the field in combat.

The standards of the 12th Artillery carry battle streamers for action at Aisne, St. Mihiel, Loraine Aisne-Marne, Meuse - Argonne and Ile - de - France. Here was the beginning of a proud history.

The unit was awarded the Fourragere in the colors of the French Croix de Guerre by the French Minister of War. The insignia includes a single fleur-de-lys in silver, taken from the arms of the city of Soissons where the 12th's most distinguished service won it the award of the Croix-de-Guerre with palm from the French Government; the golden crown on the fleur-de-lys, which is taken from the city of Verdun; a green Aztec war banner on the canton and a field of artillery scarlet.

Following eight months in the United States Army of Occupation in the Coblenz area, the Unit shipped with the 2nd Division to Brest and embarked for the United States in late July 1919. For the next 23 years the 12th was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where the unit engaged in rigorous field training and defense preparations until the outbreak of World War II.

During World War II in Europe, the 12th Artillery was to earn five battle streamers for action in Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and Central Europe.

During the early morning hours of June 6, 1944, the troops of the 12th Artillery with the Allied invasion force made an assault upon the beaches of Normandy and established a firm beachhead. During the 11 months of combat, the battalion had the distinction of being among the first medium artillery units to establish a foothold on the Normandy beaches. Fighting courageously, the 12th fought from the Normandy beaches, across northern France, the Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace and on into Central Europe.

Throughout the conflict that followed, the 12th Artillery poured over 80,000 rounds into the enemy lines, contributing greatly to breaking the fighting spirit of the well disciplined German Soldier.

For gallant action shown in the battles of Ardennes and Eisenborn Crest, the battalion was twice cited by the Belgian Army for its performance and coverage in the face of powerful German forces.

The unit also gained great recognition for the high standard of maintenance performed on its heavy weapons throughout the period of combat. Nine of the 12 guns initially landed on the Normandy Beaches were still operational at the end of hostilities.

The battalion also abounded in numerous individual awards for gallantry in action and meritorious service performed.

Awards amounting in all to 207 were given to officers and men of the "fighting 12th" Four Silver Stars were awarded as were 36 Bronze Stars for gallantry in action, 78 Bronze Stars for meritorious service, ten Air Medals and 79 Purple Hearts.

On July 12, 1945, the 12th Artillery left from LeHavre, France to return to the United States, where they were stationed at Camp Swift, Texas. Less than a year later, the 12th moved to California and then on to Ft. Lewis, Washington which remained its home until the outbreak of hostilities in Korea.

From autumn 1946 until it was alerted for Korea, the battalion took part in a series of large-scale maneuvers which prepared it for any further aggression against the freedom loving people of the world.

The year 1950 was to see the 12th Artillery again distinguish itself, this time in a new part of the world —Korea. This marked the third time in its history that the 12th had been called upon to help in defense of free countries. It was to prove to be the greatest test for the battalion.

During the Korean Conflict, Battery A won its second Distinguished Unit Citation for heroism with the 23rd Regimental Combat Team in May 1951. When the combat team, operating as a rear guard, was cut off and surrounded, the cannoneers refused to give ground and stuck with the guns, firing direct fire at the hordes of Chinese Communist forces with their deadly accurate fire until they were in the gun positions. The Artillerymen of Battery A continued to fight brawling with carbines and axes until the Chinese were driven back leaving behind an untold number of casualties. The Battery suffered 90 per cent casualties in this heroic action against overwhelming odds.

After Korea, the 12th returned to Fort Lewis, Washington. In 1956 its home became Fort Benning.

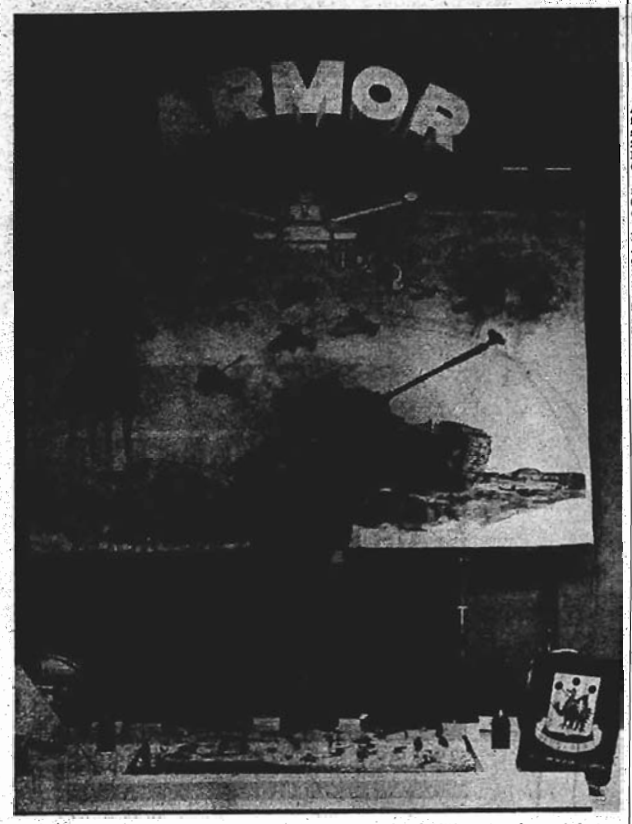
Gaining the new stripes were SFC Harold W. Bean, Headquarters Company, battalion mess steward; and SFC George W. Lawless, a platoon sergeant in Company B.

Fourteen men from the battalion received promotions to grade E-5. Promoted to the rank of sergeant were Harry D. Cook and James M. Avery, Headquarters Company; Frederick E. Hensler, Donald R. Hymes, R. C. Perry Jr., and Jimmy E. Kelly from Company A; Lucius Stalworth, Company B; and McCoy Bradley, Mitchell E. Johnson, Jessie V. Malone, Edward S. Sedillo, and Michael E. Weatherboltz from Company C.

FAST COPIES . . . MSgt. Edward Phillips, acting G-3 sergeant major, uses new copyflex machine to make fast copies of maps for exercising division units.



ARMOR EXHIBIT IN COLUMBUS . . . One of many 2nd Infantry Division units to display their equipment and explain their organization to citizens of Columbus during Armed Forces Week, the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor presented a mammoth exhibit in a store front window on Broadway. The battalion also contributed vehicles, men and tanks to the annual Armed Forces Day Parade.

By Tom Higgins

Two key members of the 2nd Division's 2nd Military Police Company will leave the division provost marshal; and ments.

Departing the "Second to None" division are Maj. Walter P. Kawalek, assistant division provost marshall; and CWO Marvin T. Farmer, the 2nd's criminal investigator.

Mr. Farmer, now in his 17th year with the military police, entered the Army in 1946, assigned to Fort McPherson and work with the Third U. S. Army Criminal Investigation Detachment (CID).

In June 1949 he began working at the Atlanta General Depot with CID there. During the Korean Conflict he continued in CID operations returning to Fort McPherson CID in January 1953.

He was then sent for special training to the 10th Division, Fort Riley. He also attended Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) courses and training at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Driver With Seat Belt in His Car Considered 'Oddity'

The speeds we cruise at today on some of our highways would have been the top speed a car was able to attain just a few years ago.

And today's roads and highways are being built to accomodate the demands of a motoring public for commuting, making business appointments, shopping, transporting the children to school and for general driving pleasure.

These factors combined with many others, emphasize the need for greater safety in today's automobiles.

Such a safety device that could save your life is a safety belt.

Because approximately 1,200,000 Americans are injured annually in auto mishaps (and of these 38,000 die), numerous safety - minded organizations are campaigning for seat belts in every car.

Caused by Ignorance

"Public inertia and ignorance" of the value of seat belts are leading to needless highway injury death," says Dr. Robert G. Frazier, secretary of the American Academy of Pediatrics. Analyzing several studies involving 10,000 or more injury-producing accidents, Dr. Frazier points out that the use of seat belts reduce the number of major-to-fatal injuries by 35 per cent.

Also, Dr. Frazier learned, certain widespread popular beliefs are not supported by fact.

To wit:

It is not true that few serious accidents take place at low speeds, or that most such accidents occur far from home. To the contrary, Dr. Frazier finds that 47 per cent of all traffic deaths occur at speeds of less than 40 miles-per-hour and 66 per cent take place within 25 miles of the driver's home.

Public indifference, he says, seems to be the major factor in the unsuccessfulness of the seat belt campaign.

The attitude displayed is "one just can't be bothered with strapping oneself securely into the seat before operating his motor vehicle." The fact that this minor task may save one's life seems to have little significance.

It must be remembered, he points out, that while the driver may cause accidents, the possibility of injury or death is largely influenced by the interior design of the automobiles.

Occupants being tossed about inside a car will come in contact with at least one of a vast assortment of objects capable of inflicting death or serious injury. They may also be hurled out the door or through the windshield onto the road or pavement.

However, today — some five years after the initiation of the safety campaign — the man with seat belts is considered something of an oddity.

It is established that seat belts are used by fewer than one per cent of American drivers. Public interest in this safety device never really took a strong foothold, and has since deteriorated to virtual indifference.

Unbelieving Public

The motoring public has not chosen to believe that it is not always the "other guy" who is seriously injured or killed in auto mishaps.

In an auto crash, it is the magnitude of the deceleration that determines your chances for survival. The forces developed during deceleration are measured in Gs (for gravitational force), and it is the Gs alone that determine how great a restraining force will be needed to keep you in your seat.

For instance, you are cruising at 40 m.p.h. and plow into a fence, bringing your car to a halt in 60 feet. This deceleration develops one G, or a force exactly equal to your own weight. You will be thrown out of your seat unless you brace in time to exert an equal counter force.

At one G you may succeed unaided, but higher deceleration rates are common, even in minor collisions.

Experiments such as those conducted by Col. John P. Stapp, former chief of the Air Force Medical Field Laboratory, have demonstrated that the body can withstand peak loads of more than 30 Gs for brief periods.

These experiments were used to set up federal specifications which must be met by all passenger car seat belts purchased by the government.

In collisions much above 20 Gs, the value of a seat belt may became somewhat academic, since the car itself very likely will collapse about the occupant. And even a seat belt which doesn't meet the rigor. our federal specifications will provide a greater measure of safety than no belt at all.

Here are some misconceptions that the public has about seat belts:

Q. Isn't it safer to be thrown, out of an accident?

A. No. Statistics show that you are five times more likely to be killed if thrown from your car.

Q. Can a seat belt trap me and cause my death?

A. In some types of accident you may be trapped. However, such a case, it would have occurred whether or not you had been wearing a seat belt. It is only a matter of two or three seconds at the most to be free of the seat belt. And it is unlikely that entrapment would ever occur from the belt itself.

Q. Can the seat belt break in an accident?

A. Generally, when high speeds are involved. However, this happens seldom, and when it does, the belt has already served its purpose; it has already withstood the force of the impact.

Front Seater?

Q. What advantage do seat belts have for people sitting in the front seat?

A. If the impact is great enough, the passenger's head may strike the windshield, dash panel or the steel "header rail." However, the seat belt will have greatly reduced the force with which he will hit these objects, lessening the damage done. It will prevent from 1.2.3.n being thrown through the windshield or the door, diminishing the chances of critical injury or death.

The driver of the vehicle using seat belts will have the same advantages as the passenger. In addition, if the car is being bounced around, the driver will be held in a better driving position than had he not been using a belt. This will enable him to maintain better control of his vehicle.

True, auto belts will not stop the accidents caused by negligent and careless driving. But, it will help in the campaign against the needless injuries and deaths that could have been prevented.

Germany 9th Spends Time On the Rhine

By 9th Infantry PIO

MANNHEIM, Germany . . . Men of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, having just recently arrived in Europe on a three-month tour under the Army's Rotaplan unit rotation system, have completed a week-long training exercise in river crossing.

Commanded by Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, the 9th Infantry spent a week learning the proper procedures for crossing, making the crossing during the daytime and finishing with a night river crossing.

Leading the way were Headquarters Company and Company A, traveling in convoy by Armored personnel carriers to the crossing area on the Rhine River. Companys B and C made their crossings two days later.

Prior to going on the actual crossing the men received training on the preparation of the carrier before entering and after leaving water. This included securing of equipment. Other classes included abandon carrier drill

2nd Aviation Drops Three Games

Admin Wins Big in Softball

Highlights of the division softball tournament this week and last were the 15-5 victory by the division clerks and typists — the 2nd Administration Company — over the hapless 2nd Aviation Company and the aviation company's two other losses which boosted standings of both teams in league play.

A "Rock of the Marne" team from the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry on Thursday night, May 30, on Sand Hill whitewashed a scrawn squad from the 2nd Engineer Battalion. The game was at 6:30 and the "Marnemen" claimed the victory with a nine run edge, 10-1.

That same night in the 8 o'clock game on Sand Hill (both games were umpired by MSgt. Lewis Gray and SSgt. Floyd Washington) 2nd Admin Company swept to its impressive triumph over the flyboys. It was Admin's second win of the fresh season.

Friday on Sand Hill saw another lopsided score as the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion went successfully against the 2nd Aviation Battalion and wound up with a grinning 14 score. The game, played at 6:30, was judged by Lt. Peterson, division special services officer, and MSgt. Gray, noncommissioned officer in charge of special services.

Aviation's third misfortune was Monday night in a game played at 6:30 on Sand Hill. Experience did show in this game as the aviation team narrowed the loss, 5-1, to a 37th Artillery team. Capt. William Cosgrove, division adjutant general, and Lt. Peterson watched over play.

Tuesday night's only game, the 122nd Signal Battalion and the 12th Artillery, was rained out at Sand Hill.

Nine games are scheduled for this week. On Monday at Sand Hill, 6:30, the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry versus 2nd Medical Battalion; Sand Hill, 8 o'clock, the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry will meet the 7th Cavalry.

Tuesday: Sand Hill, 6:30, 2nd Engineer Battalion and the 702nd Maintenance Battalion; 8 o'clock, 38th Artillery and the 12th Artillery; Kelley Hill, 6:30, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion and the 15th Artillery.

The two games set for Thursday night at Sand Hill are, in the early match, the 1st Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor against the 7th Cavalry and, following that, the 2nd Aviation Battalion and the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

On Kelley Hill Thursday the single game at 6:30 will match the 122nd Signal Battalion against the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry.

Local Soccer Squad Downed by 23rd Inf.

By 23rd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry's soccer team rolled to its first victory of the season recently over a local German team.

The "We Servers" edged the German officer candidates, 5-4, in the contest.

The Germans scored in the the first ten minutes of play with a brilliant display of passing. The Americans evened the score a few moments later. The 23rd overwhelmed the Germans with three quick scores and led 4-1 at the half.

Tomo Zavic of Company A, in thirty seconds of the second half, pushed one across for the Americans. With the score 5-1 at this point the 23rd Infantry relaxed. The Germans put forth a great effort and slid three scores into the net but ran out of time.

Zavic was the leading scorer for the 23rd Infantry with three goals while Waniuk and Cipolla had one apiece.

This was the first contest for the 23rd Infantry since the team's organization. Tentative plans call for numerous games in the future.

First Bn., 38th Scores League Win

By 38th Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry scored its second straight win of the 2nd Division softball season May 23, downing the 2nd Engineers 10-1. Telford Ross turned in an outstanding pitching job for the winners chalking up 13 strikeouts as for his second win of the season.

Leftfielder Ronnie Hopkins started things off with a bang for the 38th in the bottom of the first inning when he drove a home run over the rightfield fence with two men on. From then on, the "Marnemen" knocked out 10 well-spaced hits.

Engineer pitcher Bob Caldwell was charged with the loss.

Hopkins is currently leading the undefeated 38th with nine hits, including two homeruns, in as many trips to the plate. He has seven runs batted in. Second baseman Jim Ayers is tops in the homerun department with three.

Sports Plans Firmed By 23rd in Germany

By 23rd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, under the command of Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., has recently organized its sports program for the ensuing months of its temporarry duty overseas.

Lt. Louis H. Buhrmaster, battalion athletics and recreation (A&R) officer, and Sgt. David L. Kaeb, battalion A & R noncommissioned officer, recently set up the activities for the program.

The proposed softball schedule will begin with games to be played Tuesday and Thursday nights. The battalion champ will be eligible to compete in the regional finals.

Tennis and volleyball are the other sports slated for the program. The unit has one professional boxer, Amos Crumbley, who is presently on temporary duty representing the 23rd Infantry. Boxing is a brigade sport and will have a strong contingent from the 23rd.

On the golf scene, Sid Green, former University of Washington star, will bolster the unit's hopes in that direction. Barry Willis and Nathan Mooney of Company A and Larry Thomas of Company B will represent the 23rd in track. Thomas was a top amateur in the mile and 880-yard run in Alabama.

The battalion soccer team has already begun its schedule with a win over a local German squad recently.

Softball Rules for Those who Know Everything About the Big Game

By BOB de CAMARA

Is an "appeal play" a hit Broadway show? Does a "foul tip" mean somebody got bad advice at the racetrack? Would a "legal touch" mean that you can borrow money from someone without paying it back and not get in trouble? Or have you maybe suspected that these are baseball and softball terms? (By the way, this story REALLY gets funny along about the last paragraph.)

With softball season here for the 2nd Division and the division's softball tournament underway, many terms and ambiguous rules remain to be cleared up. No doubt the average softball player has a good enough understanding of the rules to get out on the diamond and get through a seven-inning game. But often, the better acquaintanceship a player (or spectator) has with the refinements of the game, the greater his enjoyment and less the chance of meeting up with one of those embarrassing situations when everybody in the game is not quite sure of the technicality but is pretending otherwise in his loudest voice.

An "appeal play", according to the Official Rules of Softball, is a play upon which an umpire cannot make a decision until requested by a player. The appeal must be made before the next ball is delivered to the batter.

Maybe you already know what a "foul tip" is. That's an easy one. But how high can a "foul tip" be? As high as the umpire's face mask? As high as the screen behind home plate? The rules say, "A foul tip is a foul ball which goes directly from the bat, not higher than the batter's head, to the catcher's hands."

A "legal touch" occurs when a runner or batter-baserunner who is not touching a base is touched by the ball while it is securely held in the fielder's hand. The ball is not considered as having been securely held if it is juggled or dropped by the fielder after having touched the runner unless the runner deliberately knocks the ball from the hand of the fielder. It is sufficient for the runner to be touched with the hand or glove in which the ball is held.

Did that last paragraph mention a batter-baserunner? A batter-baserunner is a player who has finished his turn at bat but has not yet been put out or touched first base.

A "blocked ball" is a batted or thrown ball that is touched, stopped, or handled by a person not engaged in the game, or which touches any object which is not part of the official equipment or playing area.

Is there any difference between a coach and a coacher? Well, a little difference as the rules book points out. A "coacher" is a member of the team at bat who takes his place within the coacher's lines on the field to direct the players of his team in running the bases.

You know, softball games have offensive and defensive teams the same as a football match although the teams aren't often thought of in this way. A defensive team is the team in the field. An offensive team is the team at bat.

How closely does a "force-out" compare with a "rub-out" such as can be witnessed weekly on the Untouchables?" Not very closely which is why more people play softball than gangbusters. A "force-out" is an out which can be made only when a baserunner loses the right to the base occupied because of the batter becoming a baserunner.

Contrary to popular notion, an "illegally caught ball" is not a raid by law enforcement officers on a party. An "illegally caught ball" occurs when a fielder catches a batted or thrown ball with his cap, glove, or any part of his uniform while it is detached from its proper place. This is the opposite of a "legally caught ball" which the rules book feels called upon to explain (and which will be amplified here) as what happens when a fielder catches a batted or thrown ball provided it is not caught in the fielder's hat, cap, protectors, pocket, or other part of his uniform.

A batted or thrown ball which strikes an object such as a fence, backstop, post, stand, tree, automobile, or other objects within 25 feet of the baselines is an "obstructed ball." How many people can distinguish that from the "blocked ball" which was defined earlier in this article? Raise your hands. My hand remains unraised. How many people care?

It has been severally advanced by softball buffs that an "infield fly" is nothing more than a fly ball which is infield. This definition is rarely challenged. The rules book calls it a "fair hit ball other than a line drive or bunted fly ball that is caught or in the opinion of the umpire could be easily handled by an infielder," thereby clearing up the argument considerably.

An "overthrow" is a play in which a ball is thrown from one fielder to another to retire a runner who has not reached or is off base and which goes into foul territory on a play at first, third or home base.

"Turn at bat," a phrase with oceans of rhythm, is faintly suggestive of a south-of-the-border step like the Mexican Hat Dance. In no ways could it be mistaken for any dance as American as the "roach," the "popeye" or the "pony." And yet the rules committee has put out official disclaimers identifying a "turn at bat" as something that begins when a player first enters the batter's box and continues until he is put out or becomes a baserunner. This definition has effectually squelched the shoo-off athlete who, even at sock hops, keeps trying to dance the "turn at bat."

THE STRIKE ZONE HAS BEEN CHANGED! In baseball the strike zone has been changed but it remains the same for softball. The strike zone is "that space" over home plate "which is between the batter's arm pits and the top of his knees when the batter assumes his natural batting stance." Shying from the "arm pits" part, the people who sit in court on baseball have changed that indelicate portion to read "the top of the shoulders."

Finally, "play", as in playboy, playgirl and plaything, is the term used by the plate umpire to indicate that play shall begin or be resumed. What kind of play, umpire? You still haven't answered that.

Troops Use New Radar

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — "Ground surveillence radar is one of the best things that has happened to the front-line infantryman as far as detecting the enemy at times when it is impossible to calculate their position by other means."

This statement by Sp6 Clyde D. Thompson, radar section sergeant for Company A, 23rd Infantry, followed the recent acquisition of two relatively new radar sets for use by this Germany - stationed 2nd Division unit.

The radar section of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry recently set up two radar sets; the AN-PPS-33 and the AN-PPS-4, the latter having a minimum ground range of 80 meters and a maximum of 8,000 meters. This particular set is designed for audio detection only while the other, with a minimum range of 90 meters and a maximum of 8,000, is used in a audio and visual capacity.

The set is capable of detecting the number of personnel and the different types of vehicles and the range of each from friendly lines. The PPS-4 has a two-man team while the less expensive PPS-33 has a three-man team.

Though the PPS-33 is larger and has a better range, it costs $2,000 less to produce because it can be mass produced.

The PPS-33 can have its antenna as far as 100 feet away and still bring adequate reception.

The radar sets are designed for use on foggy or cloudy nights when visibility is particularly poor. They are used on the offensive, defensive and in retrograde movements.

TSB Gains 9-8 Win Over 197th Brigade

The Student Brigade scored an unearned run in the bottom of the tenth inning to win a 9 to 8 come-from-behind victory over the 197th Infantry Brigade Monday night in the first game of a crucial three game series.

Ralph Maru opened the tenth with his third hit of the night, a single to left. After Jesse Joyce popped a bunt fly to the pitcher J. R. Miller, Maru scooted around to third when Miller threw wild trying to double him off first. Miller walked Pedro Berrios and struck out Herbert Laure, but Roger Kendrick's easy ground-er skipped between the legs of shortstop Ron Blevins, and Maru romped home with the winning run.

TSB opened the game with three runs in the first, but the 197th came back with three in the second and shelled starter Charlie Spell from the mound in the third with five runs. TSB manager Bob Kinard then called on Jesse Joyce to relieve Spell, and the hard-hitting shortstop turned pitcher beld the Brigade nine to three hits while his teammates fought back to force the game into extra innings.

Jesus Herrans, Ralph Maru and Pedro Berrois each had three hits to lead the TSB assault, and George Rogers and Miller had two hits apiece for the losers. Miller was the losing pitcher, giving up 15 hits, although he struck out 16 and walked only four. Joyce's fine relief performance earned him his first victory of the season.

TSB's win moved them back into first place in the Major Unit League with a 6 and 1 record, and the 197th dropped back into second with five victories and two losses.

Post Tennis Tournament Slated to Begin June 18

With high hopes that a cooperative weatherman smiles on the Main Officers' Open Mess courts, the 1963 Fort Benning Invitational Tennis Tournament will swing into action June 18.

A number of players are already preparing for the four-day event, which will establish who will represent the post at the Third U.S. Army tournament at Fort Bragg, N.C., in July.

Tennis pro Victor Ponce, a member of the National Lawn Tennis Association, estimates about 30 netters will compete in the round-robin tourney.

If the two top post players win a berth on the six-man All-Army team, they will go to Pitsdimmons General Hospital in Denver, Colo., for the Inter-service matches.

The Army team copped the Interservice title last year, downing the Navy and Air Force on the local courts.

Several Fort Benning personnel have been playing well this season and probably will be seeded in the top positions in the men's tourney, Ponce reported.

Art Foust, defending post runner-up, is likely to get the No. 1 spot.

Foust possesses a good backhand which he generally hits with great severity, and the former Rice University net star also has a deadly drop shot.

The No. 2 position appears to be going to Emilio Posado. Posado, seldom caught flat-footed, has a fine first serve and often unleashes shoe-top volleys and strong overheads.

Several players will be fighting it out for the remaining top positions.

Donald Abbott, a former varsity netter at his hometown college, Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, has a moderate serve and overhead.

He has good footwork and poise, with the foundation of his game resting on his forehand.

Also among the contenders is Dave Braun. Braun, who roamed the courts for the University of Kentucky two years ago, relies much on his flat serve and steady volley.

Hitting deep forehand and backhand shots, his running seems unhurried, but when he arrives his feet are in position for the shot.

Elliot Young is an up-and-coming netter who held the No. 1 spot at Boston University while in college. A steady baseliner, Young likes to mix his shots, seldom taking the offensive.

Another top player lies in the likes of Dick Arnold. Arnold hits a deeper and heavier backhand than forehand and makes use of the flat, twist and slice serves.

Reviewing Fundamentals Can End High Handicap Golfers' Troubles

Whether you're a long-time player or just getting into the swing of golf, your game will benefit if you run down this quick review of fundamentals, follow the rules of golfing etiquette, and master some tricks recommended by experts.

World championship winner Bob Toski gives this review of golfing fundamentals:

Before you tee off, size up the situation. Decide the best approach to the hole. Check the terrain ahead of you, the wind and the hazards in the fairway, if any. Don't fear the hazards. Play your shot to the best of your ability to the safest place you can find. That takes study before the shot is made.

Always check, before swinging, to see if the members of your party are out of swinging distance. The ordinary swing of a golf club could be a killing blow. Rules of etiquette are also rules of safety.

For the Ladies

Sam Sharrow, P.G.A. golf pro since 1925 and "tipster" to two-time South African golf champ Mrs. Isabelle Blumberg, says: "I have the hardest time getting women golfers to keep their heads in a steady position throughout the swing."

The key move is dropping your chin, relaxing your neck, and letting your chin fall until you practically form a double chin. Keep your eye on the back of the ball. Stay with this position until it becomes second nature, and you'll learn how vast the difference is.

Bud Gaskill writes, "The wages of win is practice. To develop a better swing, set up a big piece of canvas, paint a bull's eye on it, and practice hitting balls at it." If you find this a bit cumbersome, a portable golf practice net will keep you in the swing during home practice sessions.

Hit Through

Gene Littler, Palm Springs pro, advises that most average golfers would find themselves playing better golf shots consistently if they concentrated more on hitting through the ball.

Make sure your club continues through the ball low along the ground on the line to the target. Hit-through correctly on line for two feet or so past the point where you make contact with the ball.

Biggest Mistake

Leo Diegel, considered one of the greatest iron players of all time, says the one mistake most often made by golfers is incorrect position at the top of the backswing.

If you start the swing with a correct take-away, you will automatically fall into a correct position at the top of the backswing. Be sure both hands work together to take the club back right on the line of flight.

Don't let your left shoulder follow your hands back. Your arms should be just a little short of extended, and semi-relaxed. Go slow on the backswing — otherwise you'll destroy all rhythm and timing.

Roughing It

Ted Kroll, Sarasota pro says, "When executing an iron-shot from the rough, keep the left hand more firmly on the club so it won't turn when it contacts the heavy grass."

Make your backswing more upright — it helps to employ a slightly open stance. Use one less club than the shot would call for from a similar spot on the fairway.

Military Athletes Score Well at Pan-Am Games

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The fourth Pan American Games held in Sao Paulo, Brazil found U. S. military athletes winning more than a quarter of the gold, silver and bronze medals won by U. S. competitors.

When the final tally was completed, service athletes had won, as individuals or team members, 30 of the 109 U. S. gold medals; 16 of the 55 silver medals; and, 10 of the 89 bronze medals.

Army Sgt. Gary L. Anderson paced the all military shooting team of the United States, personally winning five gold medals of the 13 won by the team.

All but one of the military members of the U. S. track and field forces won medals. Outstanding performances were turned in by Army Lt. Ollan C. Cassell and Marine PFC David S. Davis. Cassell ran on the winning 400 and 1600 meter relay teams and lost by an eyelash in the 200 meters. PFC Davis won the shotput with a heave of 60 feet 9 inches and placed second in the discus.

The winning U. S. basketball team included five members from the Armed Forces team which earned a place in the Games by winning the trials from a strong College All-Star contingent.

Army PFC Lee Carr was crowned heavyweight champion of the Pan-American Games and AIC Fred Lewis took top honors in the light-weight division. Four other military fighters won bronze medals in the ten event fisticuff program.

Two U. S. Air Force men won half of the four gold medals awarded in judo. AIC Toshiyuki Seino won as a light-weight and SSgt. George Harris won the heavyweight event.

Other gold medals were picked up in wrestling, gymnastics, diving, swimming, fencing, track and field equestrian, and the modern pentathlon.

Seventy of the 82-man military contingent who went to Brazil were actual contestants. The balance were team captains, administrative personnel, and liaison officers. Thus 70 of the 360 U. S. participants, approximately 19½ percent were military athletes. A break down shows military athletes accounted for 27.5 percent of all the gold medals won; 29 per cent of the silver; and 25.6 percent of the bronze awards.

Military athletes won a grand total of 56 medals in this competition.

Safe Equipping, Operation Make Boating a Pleasure

Being wet behind the ears can be a dangerous condition for a boater, but veteran sailors as well as unseasoned salts are often guilty of safety violations.

"As we see it," says Admiral Edwin J. Roland, commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard, "education in the safe equipping and operation of boats is a fundamental necessity in keeping the casualty rate to a minimum.

"Too many of our people today are probably shoving off for a spin in their power boats with only the sketchiest of information concerning the proper operation of a motorboat, the rules of the road, overloading, lights, safety equipment and effects of weather."

Here are ten tips on boating safety to help keep you from getting in over your head:

(1.) Over-loading your boat is dangerous for more than one reason. In addition to reducing the operating efficiency and maneuverability of the boat, it's almost a sure bet that, in the event of an emergency, there will not be enough life-saving equipment aboard for all passengers. Check before you start out the law says that you must carry at least one Coast Guard Approved life-saving device for each person onboard your motorboat.

(2) Be sure any safety equipment you use on board is clearly labeled "Coast Guard Approved." Be careful to make sure that the complete product rather than part of it is approved.

(3) If you have children onboard, always have them wear buoyant vests. Check for fit and performance in the water on each child. Have "all hands" wear buoyant vests whenever there arises the slightest doubt of safety.

(4) According to the Coast Guard, falls are the greatest cause of injury both afloat and ashore. Eliminate tripping hazards where possible, make conspicuous those which must remain, have adequate grab-rails, and require proper footwear to be used onboard.

(5) To reduce the danger of fire or explosion, the Coast Guard recommends extreme care with paints and varnish removers, the storing of waste and rags in metal containers or metal-lined lockers, and caution during fueling and starting up. If you're cooking onboard, use alcohol or kerosene in a pressure stove. Never use a gasoline stove . . . and never use gasoline as a stove primer.

(6) Pouring gas from an auxiliary can into an empty outboard motor tank may lead to hazardous spills. Few boaters realize that gasoline fumes are heavier than air and thus sink to the bottom of the boat where they lurk as a potential fire hazard.

The safe way to fill your tank is to use a refueling tank with a special adapter to eliminate pouring and splashing.

(7) Know the meanings of the buoys. Never moor to one — it's a Federal offense!

(8) Watch your wake; it may capsize smaller craft or damage boats or property along the shore. Remember, you are responsible.

(9) Know the various distress signals. A recognized distress signal used on small boats is to slowly and repeatedly raise and lower the arms outstretched to each side.

(10) Remember that as of April 1, all numbered motorboats had to be in strict compliance with the vessel identification requirements of the law. Paint your numbers to the bow so as to be clearly visible and legible.

Use a plain block design not less than three inches high, in a solid color which contrasts with the background. There must be spaces or hyphens between letters and numerals.

By following these safe boating suggestions you'll not only get more fun out of your nautical adventures, you'll also — like the Boat Boy — be "adaptable" . . . in preventing onboard accidents and meeting minor emergencies.

It's up to you to keep from getting wet — even behind the ears!

Happy Malady Hits Cadets At U. S. Military Academy

New York (AFPS) — The Cadets of West Point, although only once exposed, have caught New York's newest contagious disease. A disease hatched in the Polo Grounds which has thrived for almost a year and a half on errors of commission and omission, on bits of hits, and snatches of grandeur. Recognized by slogans such as "Let's Go, Mets," "We Want Casey," and "The Dook is Back," the disease includes in its grasp even the most blase New York sports writer.

Tradition at the Military Academy is hard come by and when a change occurs it is news. For the first time, according to the New York City press, the Met baseball scores are given nightly at the Cadet mess.

An Army officer stationed at the Point said, "Virtually to a man the Cadet Corps is rooting for the Mets. In fact, each night at mess, the result of the Mets game is announced. This never has been done before, for any team. It's the darndest thing. You oughta hear the cheers when they win."

The Mets, recently journeyed up the Hudson for their annual exhibition game with the Army team. Traditionally a hostile reception awaits any opponent of the Cadets. Not so the Mets. They were greeted with cheers. They listened as the Corps sang the new Mets victory song. They were beseeched for autographs and then the city slickers, the Mets, beat West Point 3 to 0 in the baseball game.

Little League Baseball Is Social Education for Boys

By Pvt. Oliver S. Lackley, Jr.

The Little Leaguers are off and running again.

The new season requires the tireless efforts of men such as Sp4 Lewis Mellon of Service Battery, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Sp4 Mellon's spare time is filled as coach for the Cusseta "Red Birds." He also umpires for the Babe Ruth League on Sundays.

He boasts that the "Red Birds" placed second in their League last year and predicts they will bring home all the marbles this season.

But Sp4 Mellon's interest lies not in seeing his baseball team win a pennant. He strongly believes that there is nothing quite like good tough competition to teach boys; that the Little League program is one of the finest character-builders the community could offer.

Boys find that they must depend upon one another — that one can't do it all. They learn the true value of competition. They learn how to win gracefully. . .how to lose gracefully.

He points out that they will learn in life that there are judges (umpires) to determine who is right and wrong and that authority prevails.

They learn the basic lesson of getting along with others and to accept the fact that they have shortcomings. He also feels that the Little League offers the opportunity for shy boys to develop confidence and for the "braggart" type to learn the lesson of letting actions speak.

Sp4 Mellon states that patience is a must for a Little League coach. He should have a good knowledge of baseball, but he should also possess the quality of recognizing potential and getting the most out of these youngsters.

One of the biggest problems he finds is gaining enough support from the parents. Equipment is needed as well as transportation and the boosting of the boys morale at the ball park. The parents are, of course the primary factor here.

Initiative to keep the leagues thriving is sometimes left in the hands of these youngsters. But with the valuable aid of unselfish and foreseeing men such as Sp4 Mellon, the leagues are doing well and will continue to pay off in large dividends for the players and for society. Most certainly his own two sons (ages 3 and 5) will gain priceless knowledge from Little League baseball.

Early Test Proves Slit Wing Able

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Air Force has successfully tested its revolutionary air-inhalation system "slit wing" airplane with hope of increasing range or cargo loads up to 50 percent.

The system, looked on as one of the most promising innovations since the jet engine, achieved its first measurable success in a flight made by the twin-jet research plane at Edwards AFB, Calif.

The system inhales air through hundreds of almost invisible slits cut lengthwise into both top and bottom surfaces of the wings and running all the way from fuselage to wing tips.

It is hoped that the slit-wing craft can be tailored for platforms to launch missiles, anti-submarine work, fleet defense, round-trip nonrefueled flights to remote areas lacking fueling facilities, aerial refueling and command and control of scattered forces.

Another expectation of the new system is that it will enable planes to stay in the air for three to four days without refueling.

The tested plane is one of two such craft ordered by the Air Force.

Alpha-Gators Harass Rangers During Florida Training Phase

By PFC Carl B. Rooney

Little is known to the average trooper about the Alpha-Gators of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry 197th Infantry Brigade, but their job is well known among Ranger students.

Actually the Alpha-Gators are composed of the men from Company A of the battalion, and, under the command of Capt. Carl G. Winkler, act as aggressor forces at the Ranger Amphibious and Jungle Training camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

From the first day of Ranger training, the Alpha-Gators harass and detour the Ranger students from reaching their objectives. Since the time factor is an important function in Ranger training problems, road blocks and patrols are used by the aggressor forces.

All Ranger problems last about two days. Thus, much of the aggressors' part in the problems is performed at night.

Authenticity is a must. Many of the men wear old civilian clothing, have unshaven faces and proudly display their Alpha-Gator patches.

Santa Rosa

One of the most interesting and colorful problems the Alpha-gator aggressors participate in is held on Santa Rosa Island in the Gulf of Mexico. The aggressor forces start around noon from the Eglin Ranger Camp and head for the island about 20 miles away. Each of the four objectives peel off as the aggressor convoy travels down the sand-swept road which leads through the center of the island.

The communications objective is set up in a small wooded area surrounded by sand and sea. The headquarters complex is situated on a hill overlooking the Gulf. In the distance can be seen the buildings of Fort Walton Beach.

Next the supply point is centrally located on the road which leads through the center of the island, providing an easily accessible objective for the rest of the aggressor objectives.

The POW compound is located on a small sand hill only a few hundred feet from the shoreline of the Gulf.

Problem Starts

The men are eager for the problem to start as they change into their aggressor uniforms. Machine guns, rockets and simulated fire are directed toward the objectives.

Communication equipment is tested to make sure it is in satisfactory working condition. The actual problem takes place at midnight, but the aggressor equipment is continually being tested until the start of the problem.

The Alpha-Gator aggressor general is stationed at the headquarters complex, and it is part of the students' mission to invade this point and capture the general. Concentrated fire power is set up toward the students. Once the general has been captured, he is taken back to the students' boats where he will be released at the end of the problem.

Night Comes

As darkness approaches, the Alpha-Gator aggressors man their positions, knowing that at any moment they will be attacked by the skillful Ranger students.

The peaceful sound of the waves upon the shores is suddenly broken by machine gun fire. The black sky is lit up with bursts of rocket fire power and is reflected upon the ocean in an impressive manner. It gives the Alpha-Gator forces an eerie feeling since they are likely to come into contact at any moment with the Ranger students.

Since the students are timed in their raid on the island, they waste little time in overcoming the aggressor objectives. Lt. William Rice, the aggressor general, is captured and taken to waiting Ranger boats where he is questioned and released.

Peace Restored

Fire is halted as the students leave the aggressor objectives and board their boats. As the students pass though aggressor lines, "dead" Alpha-Gators are slumped over their weapons. As is always the case, the Rangers are victorious.

The Alpha-Gators prepare to leave Santa Rosa Island, the evacuated objectives and the tense quiet again surrounds the lapping of the surf against the shore can be heard in the quiet morning hours.

FORT BENNING SCOUTS WILL FOLLOW PHILMONT TRAIL AUGUST 5 THROUGH 27.
Northern Route Will Be Followed to New Mexico; Boys Will Take Southern Route Home

Philmont Expedition Set for Explorers, Boy Scouts

A wonderful opportunity is available to post Boys Scouts this summer, a visit to the Old West and many of America's most historic and famous sites.

The Philmont Trail expedition will depart Columbus Aug. 5 and return Aug. 27 after three weeks covering thousands of miles out to New Mexico through Greenville, Miss., Amarillo, Tex., and back by way of Los Alamos and Lake Charles, La.

Highlight of the trip is the two-week stay at Philmont Ranch near Cimarron, N. M., an outdoor camping empire sprawling over 127,000 acres of cold streams, evergreen forests and mountains that poke holes 11,000 feet into the clouds.

The cost of the entire trip, including all room and board as well as bus transportation, is $150 per boy, according to Lt. Col. William S. Brophy, post coordinator for the trip.

"All the boy needs to bring is a little pocket money," Col. Brophy says. "I have all the information necessary for the parents who may be interested in sending their boy or boys on this wonderful trip and all they need to do is contact me."

Col. Brophy is executive officer of the Marksmanship Training Unit.

He pointed out that the Philmont Trail Expedition is sponsored by the Georgia-Alabama Council of the Boys Scouts of America, and that there will be three adult leaders accompanying the group.

"Even our bus driver is a scout leader," he added, "and he will act as a counsellor."

The trip is open to all members of the Boy Scouts or Explorer Scouts who are age 14 or older.

The Philmont Expedition is 12 days of "Gosh, it's great" he-man outdooring come to life in the best tradition of the Old West.

From the moment the boys pass through the gate at camping headquarters, after three days and two nights travelling through scenic Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas and Texas, things begin to happen.

Following a medical inspection the boys draw tents and trail gear, and then head for their camp site, the jump-off spot for 12 days of adventure.

The boys will get to know Philmont's famous long-eared bellhops — burros to easterners — and will see more than 200 varieties of American birdlife, and animals. Buffalo, beaver and gophers abound, and in the more distant hills are the black bear and sinewy mountain lion.

Climbing an 11,700-foot mountain, catching trout in a sparkling mountain stream, excavating an old Indian dwelling, panning for gold like the old prospectors, riding a real western cow pony and taking part in a real western campfire project are only a few of the activities that will dwindle the 12 days at Philmont into a wide screen of continuous motion.

The boys will leave Philmont on Aug. 20 and travel through New Mexico, visiting Los Alamos, and dropping down to the Mexican border where they will get a chance to practice some of their Spanish in old Mexico. They will stay at two Air Force bases in Texas, and then go on to Lake Charles, La., one of the most beautiful spots in the United States.

But it still isn't over, their last day and evening takes them to New Orleans.

And finally, on Aug. 27, they will be home to tell all their friends who didn't make it this year, what they missed.

YAC to Co-Sponsor Two Boys on Two-Week Trek

The post Youth Activities Committee has agreed to help sponsor two deserving boys on the Philmont Expedition, Lt. Col. William S. Brophy, coordinator for the trip told the Bayonet this week.

"This was accomplished through the efforts of Lt. Col. Hollis C. Lewis, scout coordinator for Fort Benning," Col. Brophy added.

YAC will put up $150 for two boys, which will pay one-half of the cost for each. Applicants should submit their names in writing to Sp5 James O. Stroud, Boy Scout coordinator for YAC, as soon as possible.

"I would like an opportunity to meet with all parents who might be interested in sending their son or sons on the Philmont Expedition," Colonel Brophy said.

The Philmont Expedition is a three-week trip for members of the Boy Scouts of America or Explorer Scouts to the historic ranch near Cimarron, N. M.

"Any parent wanting more information about the trip can contact me any time," Col. Brophy said, but added that he would be at the YAC Office Bldg. 1054 in the Old Hospital area, Wednesday, June 5, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. to discuss the trip with anyone interested.

He pointed out that the $150 flat fee will cover the cost of transportation, meals, overnight stays on the trip and the 12 days at Philmont Ranch, which has been host to thousands of scout groups.

"There is a recommended list of gear that each boy should bring, as well as other information that I am sure parents will want to know about," Col. Brophy said.

The Georgia-Alabama Council of the Boy Scouts of America, which is sponsoring this trip, has reserved only one set of dates at Philmont this year and reservations with the Ranch must be made early. It is expedient that those from Fort Benning wishing to make the trip get in touch with Col. Brophy as soon as possible.

"There are about 20 boys from the area already signed up," Col. Brophy mentioned, "and we have room for 35 or more, but to complete all arrangements for the various overnight stops the boys will be making, it is necessary that we get the exact number as soon as practicable."

Could Fort Benning Be Harboring Tennessee's Stanley Kowalski?

By Peter Tolischeff

In the fall-winter Broadway season of 1947-1948 a play called "Streetcar Named Desire" drew attention once again to what theater watchers were convinced really existed — genuine American drama.

Tennessee Williams' work, a story of shattered dreams, of the ugly clash between inhuman strength and human frailty, convinced many that it was depicting a totally American phenomenon. Some critics, bestowing a Pulitzer Prize and Drama Critics Award on the popular play, even dared think it was a classic.

Since becoming a film, and with the passage of 16 years, the work still is called great American theater.

One reason could be a very unusual phenomenon that began in 1947 and has since found an uncanny place in the American public's mind. This is the bizarre stirring, throughout America, of a cult, the cult of Stanley Kowalski, the play's leading male role.

The Fort Benning Little Theater will present this play beginning June 26 in the Fort Benning Playhouse. For the thousands of frustrated Stanley Kowalskis that lurk the American scene, one more member of this cult will get his chance.

Whether or not Sp4 William Chase knows he is Stanley is immaterial. There will be hundreds of people in the audience every night who for the major part of their adulthood have clutched the deep conviction that they and no one else are Stanley, or could be if only they had been given the chance.

What is Stanley? For director, PFC Ted Martin, he is a collection of adjectives: crude, sensual, Polish, animal, strong, attractive, powerful, insensitive, real, cunning, virile, bulldozer, opium, Boraxo, Turkish cigarettes, salami; the list is endless.

What is Sp4 William Chase, the man chosen to speak those lines that so many have secretly committed to memory? First there are some startling facts. He is Polish, admittedly second generation. He is a native of Boron, Calif., producer of 90 per cent of the world's supply of Borax. He is big. He is blonde, blue-eyed. From there, it is a matter of personal taste whether or not he really fits the role.

The former high school football player is in the Army. (Stanley, the play insists, was once an Army man.) A member of Fort Benning's Student Brigade, he works as a clerk for The Infantry School's Weapons Department.

Other clues to his character are worth mention. He has been, at one time or another, a drummer; voted "Best Dressed"; ran track; traveled a great deal when his father, presently a general practitioner, served as a doctor for the California State Prison System.

The 20-year-old Fort Benning soldier admits he has a tough assignment to look forward to in playing the crucial character Stanley. He is playing his first stage role and hopes that by production time he will, by association with the rest of a "hardened" cast, be a little more than just "real."

Playing opposite him are such familiar Fort Benning names as Betty Britto, in the role of Blanche, last seen as Mrs. Gant in "Look Homeward Angel" given earlier this year by the Little Theater; Nelcine Reddington playing Stanley's wife, Stella, and Carolyne Creatore, who appeared before Columbus-Fort Benning audiences in starring roles with "Two for the Seesaw" and "The Rose Tattoo." She will play the role of Eunice.

But for Chase, the assignment of Stanley is mammoth not only because of these actors on stage with him, not because of the unique reputation the play has earned, but because, as he steps downstage on June 26, through the glare of stage light, there seated in the audience just might be two hundred blonde, blue-eyed, tee-shirted Polish Stanley Kowalskis, nervously itching to shout that famous line: "Stel-l-l-a-a-a!"

BAYONET EDITORS CHANGE . . . Sp4 Jim Grohl (L), editor of The Bayonet for the past 14 months, briefs Sp4 Pete Shough (R), incoming editor, on the weekly publication's policy as PFC Frank Gibson observes. Sp4 Grohl will soon depart for assignment with Seventh U. S. Army Headquarters in Germany. Sp4 Shough, who for more than a year has served as sports and society editor of The Bayonet, will move into the editor's chair. Assuming Sp4 Shough's former duties will be PFC Gibson. Infantry Board Tests Ballistic 'Slide Rule'

The Infantry Board recently finished testing two new ballistic range arms which are expected to save time and make fire direction more efficient for the 81-mm and 4.2-inch mortars.

Basically the arms are clear plastic rules with cursors similar to the slide rules used by engineers, but without the center "slip - stick." They have range, elevation, time of flight and charge scales necessary in directing the fire of mortars.

Officials at the board's Mortar and Surveillance Division feel that with the new arms, fire direction center operations can be accelerated by as much as 15 per cent.

HONOR GRAD

PFC Lambert G. Bradley, Company A, 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), recently received a letter of commendation from the commanding officer of Company C, 1st Battalion, 4th Training Regiment Specialist, Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, recognizing him as honor student in the quarry machine operations course. He entered the Army Aug. 31, 1962.

The arms hold the distinction of being the smallest items ever tested by the division. They only weigh .05 of a pound.

The size didn't affect the thoroughness with which the items were tested since they were put through their paces under simulated combat conditions.

Designed for use with the M-16 plotting board, one arm has scales for use with the 4.2-inch mortar, while the other is designed for the 81-mm mortar.

In the past, mortar fire direction centers used 81-mm paper firing tables which, when wet, became soggy and difficult to use, and the M-57 graphical firing tables (GFT) which were used in directing 4.2-inch mortar fire.

Using this method, fire direction center operators, on obtaining range readings, had to refer to the paper firing tables or the GFT for elevation, time of flight and the charge necessary for hitting the target.

With the new range arms this information can be obtained at a glance by the fire center operators.

Post-Level Competition Opens in All-Army Art Contest

Competition in the 1963 Fort Benning All-Army Art Contest is underway with all military personnel on active duty eligible to submit entries up to July 1.

The contest, sponsored locally by The Infantry Center Special Services Section, will be conducted at installation, Army area and all-Army levels.

While there will be no designation as to subject matter or style, participants are urged to draw and paint from their daily surroundings and personal experiences.

The contest will consist of the following categories: oil paintings, water colors (including transparent and opaque media), drawings (including pencils, brush or pen and ink, crayon, chalk and scratchboard), prints (etchings, lithographs, linoleum cuts, woodblocks, silk screen, and other print processes) and mixed media.

Entries will be judged from the original work of the participants. Pre-drawn projects and copies of photographs, postcards or other pictorial media are not eligible.

Individuals who are American nationals and are subjects of portraits must designate in writing on the entry form the authority for submission of the entry and its use in publicity by the Army.

No participant may withdraw an entry during the contest or exhibition.

Entries prepared as illustrations, training aids or any specific graphic assignment in connection with official duties are not eligible.

Entries deemed unworthy of consideration or unsuitable for exhibition will be withdrawn or returned to the owners.

Winning entries on the Department of the Army level will become the property of the Army. All others will be returned to their owners.

In the event of permanent change of station or discharge from the service, contestants whose entries have been submitted in higher level competition must advise, in writing, the Special Services officer of the original station of entry of his new address.

To assist in identification, all entries should bear titles.

Entries which do not conform to size, proper identification and rules for submission will be disqualified.

Judging of entries will be based upon the professional standards established in the field of arts and crafts. Basic standards for determining winners will be originality and ingenuity, design or composition, craftmanship and plastic quality, appeal to the observer, apparent meaningfulness for the participant and technical skill.

One copy of the entry form for the 1963 All-Army Art Contest (DA Form 2285-R) must be submitted with each entry. Applications must be typed or printed legibly.

Entries should be submitted to the post crafts director, Hugh E. Cook, in Bldg. 394 not later than 5 p.m., July 1.

Forms and instruction sheets may be obtained at any of the Special Services facilities, craft shops, Service Clubs and libraries on Main Post, Sand Hill, Kelley Hill and Harmony Church areas.

Entries must be identified with the name, grade, service number, military address, name of area commanders, title and category of entry, printed on a 3x5 card and glued firmly to the upper right corner of the reverse side.

A maximum of 30 entries from the Third U. S. Army area will be forwarded to the Fourth U. S. Army, San Antonio, Tex., for entry in the Department of the Army finals to be held Oct. 1.

Caribbean Shooters Strong in Early Tilts

The Army Caribbean Command team at Fort Benning practicing for the All-Army Rifle and Pistol Championships June 5-15 has shown considerable strength during practice matches.

The teams split-up with the rifle team going to Oak Ridge, Tenn., for the Great Smoky Mountain Area High Power Rifle Tournament May 18-19, and the Fiesta of Five Flags Pistol Championship in Pensacola, Fla., drew the pistoleers May 18-20.

At the Great Smoky tournament, 117 individuals and 24 teams turned out for the tilts, including representatives from the Army Alaskan command team, also at Fort Benning for practice, Fort Gordon, Ga., Eustis, Va., Fort Lee, Va., and Red Stone Arsenal, Ala.

The Caribbean shooters completely dominated the individual events by taking the first three positions in the grand aggregate match, the consummating match of the individual shoots.

Sgt. Wesley Smith took the first place ranking with 492 points out of a possible 500.

After an end of match check the rifle team had brought down eleven first, three second and two third places to show an easy superiority.

At Pensacola, the handgunners went into action with PFC Donnie J. Hanberry taking the individual pistol grand aggregate with a 2,453-45X score out of a possible 2,700-270X.

In rolling up his aggregate win Hanberry took with him a win in the .22 caliber slow fire match with a 179-4X score out of a possible 200-20X, the .45 caliber timed fire match with a 190-8X score, and first honors in the .45 caliber aggregate match with an 813-13X score out of a possible 900-90X. Hanberry was firing in the sharpshooter class.

In the expert class, SFC Aaron Bennett took the .22 caliber aggregate title with an 849-16X score out of a possible 900-90X.

SFC Buford Smith took three first place laurels in the masters class. In the center fire timed fire course he fired a 197-11X out of the possible 200-20X, the rapid fire match with the same gun he posted a 196-9X score, and the .45 caliber National Match Course event saw Smith blast a 288-7X score out of a possible 900-30X.

On their return to The Infantry Center from their two vantage points, their team captain, 1st Lt. James W. McNeely of Norwich, Conn., said, "Our teams will take the 'Tons' share of first place honors in the All-Army team matches.

Missile-Age Cowboys Are Still Needed

FORT BLISS, Tex. — While cowboys, like the whooping crane, seem to be disappearing from the American scene, the world's foremost missile center still has good use for them.

The Air Defense Center here has over 1,000,000 acres of Texas range reserved for missile service-practice - firing. Since the vast acreage is in the heart of grazing land, the area must be patroled to exclude livestock. This job has been delegated to John (Pete) Adkins, the range inspector-fireman and chief of the Wildlife Division at Fort Bliss. He and his three range inspector-cowboys ride the area daily to insure the protection of neighboring sheep and cattle.

The only resemblance these men have to "regular" cowboys is their dress. Most of their duties are quite different from the "western movie-type" cowboys.

The men accompany the fish and game warden in surveys of wildlife in the area, originate game protection projects, control predatory animals and report violators.

Your Dental Health

Brushing Is First Step To Good Dental Health

By Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant
Deputy Dental Surgeon

What is the one most important factor in dental health?

Is it reduction of sweets; fluorides in the water; a fluoride toothpaste; visits to a dentist; toothbrushing? every one of these is important and if you were to ask your dentist, he would recommend each one but for the prevention of all types of dental disease the toothbrush leads all the rest.

Toothbrushes come in many sizes and shapes. The first toothbrush was probably a twig or small branch of soft wood with one end cut in many places to form a splintery type brush. I rather imagine that it was somewhat uncomfortable to use.

Since that day long in the past, brushes have been modernized until today electric brushes are on the market. Electric power may not always be available so in the field most of us must use the hand-operated, muscle - powered toothbrush.

Your dentist may at one time have recommended a certain brush for some of you and probably gave you some instructions. Others have not had this instruction and when they go to the exchange or the drug store to buy a brush they are faced with a problem.

There are hard brushes and soft brushes, large ones and small ones, multi - bristles ones and one with few bristles, straight brushes and angled brushes, wide and narrow and on and on.

At the risk of criticism by some of my colleagus, I'm going to recommend a brush that has many bristles—a soft multi-tufted brush of synthetic fiber, usually nylon, with all bristles of the same height.

At the risk of further criticism, I'm going to recommend that you scrub your teeth with it. Brush down on the uppers, up on the lowers, back and forth on the biting surfaces and any other direction that suits your fancy. Scrub your gums and the necks of the teeth and all the rest of the surfaces of the teeth. Scrub to your hearts delight but use short strokes about a quarter of an inch long. Scrub until your mouth feels clean.

I feel the benefits of this type care far outweigh any harm that might be done. One word of warning: don't use this method with a medium or hard brush or you may cause a lot of problems for yourself.

If you have questions about your dental and oral health which you would like answered in this column, address them to Preventive Dentistry Officer, Dental Section, The Infantry Center, Fort Benning, Georgia or telephone 545-7741.

Army Cited For Copter Concepts

WASHINGTON (ANF) —The Army Tactical Mobility Requirements Review Board, popularly known as the Howze Board, is the recipient of the American Helicopter Society's coveted William J. Kossler Award.

Lt. Gen. Hamilton H. Howze, commanding general, XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N. C., who headed the board, accepted the award from the society's president, Edwin J. Ducayne, at a ceremony in Washington.

The citation reads: "For the development and demonstration of the concept that the helicopter can be a more practical, efficient, and economical means of transportation than conventional systems. U.S. forces have demonstrated the helicopter's unique ability to operate in the ordinary home environment of people either in metropolitan areas or remote villages, making it possible to support defensive operations and humanitarian assistance with great discrimination and timeliness."

Paul W. Johnson Is Named Honor Cadet at Miss.

Lt. Col. Paul E. Johnson, chairman of the Company Tactics Committee of The Infantry School's Company Operations Department, has been notified that his son was named outstanding freshman ROTC cadet at the University of Mississippi for the current school year.

Paul W. Johnson received the Chicago Tribune award for freshman cadets. The Tribune awards are given to students of each year group on the basis of military achievement, character and scholastic ability.

The outstanding cadet is also a member of Phi Eta Sigma, a national freshman honorary fraternity, and the Beta Theta Phi social fraternity. He was listed on the university's freshman scholastic honor roll.

Texan Pulls Giant Tooth From Titan

TUCSON, ARIZ (AFPS)—Dr. Robert Ratcliffe, a Tucson dentist, recently performed one of the most unusual extractions in the history of his profession.

The patient was a 103-foot-tall, Air Force Titan II intercontinental ballistic missile, being prepared for operational duty at Davis-Monthan AFB, the nation's first Titan base.

The extraction involved an item as touchy as an impacted wisdom tooth — a tiny drift pin which had broken off in a hard-to-reach hole in the removable skirt of a Titan rocket engine.

Several machine shops tried to remove it but couldn't handle such an intricate job.

The only other step was to call in a real extraction expert—a dentist.

After breaking several bits in his portable electric drill, Dr. Ratcliffe reached into the cavity and without even a local anesthetic, pulled out the disabled pin.

Surgeon Says

Hookworm Easily Spread in Warm Climates

The mild winters usually enjoyed in the Southeastern states also have some disadvantages.

In the case of the dog, the most severe disadvantage is that the temperature does not drop low enough for any period of time to destroy the eggs and larvae of the many parasites to which the dog is susceptible.

By far, the most prevalent and most damaging intestinal parasite seen in this area is the Ancylostoma Caninum, or so called 'hookworm'. The parasite is called hookworm due to the anatomical design of its anterior portion.

The eggs of the hookworm are deposited on the soil in the feces of dogs. These eggs hatch in a few hours into the larval stage. Once the eggs have hatched into the larval stage, they then infect the animal when eaten or by penetrating the skin. The larva follow a definite course of migration through the body and in about two weeks develop into mature worms in the intestinal tract.

Prenatal Infection

One other method of infection is the prenatal infection of young pups. In these cases, the pregnant dog is infected or becomes infected during the latter stages of pregnancy and the larva in their migration through her body cross the fetal membranes and infect the pups.

Prenatal infection explains why many pups that have not been on the ground or seemingly unexposed to hookworms die at 10 to 12 days of age from heavy hookworm infection. This type of infection is controlled by worming the dog before breeding and when possible, arranging to have her whelp in fall or early winter.

The hookworm does its harm to the dog by literally attaching itself to the intestinal wall and sucking blood from the dog.

Loss of Blood

Most of the symptoms resulting from hookworms are due to the loss of blood caused by the worm. The symptoms most often seen are a profuse diarrhea that is very dark in color. The darkness is due to the presence of blood in the feces.

As the diarrhea becomes worse and the blood loss continues, the dog becomes anemic which in most cases of hookworm infection is so severe that it is easily detected by examination of the gums of the dog. In the cases when anemia is severe, the gums become very pale rather than the normal pink color.

Once hookworms establish an active infection in a dog, immediate treatment is necessary. The mortality rate in young pups is much higher than in older dogs. As dogs become older they develop a type of immunity to hookworms.

Upon the appearance of symptoms of hookworms, diagnosis is made on the basis of these symptoms and by finding hookworm egg on microcopic examination of a fecal sample.

Treatment for severe hookworm infection is difficult and often unsuccesful however, prevention is generally accomplished by a conscientious program of testing for worms and worming, if necessary.

There are several types of intestinal parasites found in the dog, each one requiring a definite drug for removal and for this reason a microscopic examination of a fecal sample is advisable before worming to determine which parasite is present. All dogs in this area should be checked in the early part and latter part of the summer months and at any time when symptoms are seen. Young pups should be checked every 10 days beginning at four weeks of age until they are 10 to 12 weeks of age.

Various methods are available for chemically treating the soil to destroy the larvae. Due to the fact that the larvae are so widespread, these methods are generally unsuccessful.

Many compounds are available commercially for worming dogs. These should be used with extreme caution as most drugs used to remove worms from dogs are also poisonous to the dog if given incorrectly or in excess dosage.

Hookworms will become increasingly prevalent as the summer months approach, but do not present a problem to the concerned pet owner who is following a definite program of microscopic fecal examination and specific deworming as needed and recommended by their veterinarian.

Clothes Set For Testing

The Infantry Board recently received the hot weather components of the Army's new Integrated Field Clothing System, which it is slated to test in the Panama Canal Zone during June and July.

The newly developed clothing system is designed to provide protection against the weather in all climates and regions of the world in which the Army may be expected to operate.

If tests on the key approach to multipurpose clothing prove successful, the system could become standard equipment for the individual soldier of the future, Infantry Board officials state.

Gen. Howze Named To Top Korean Post

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy has announced a chain of high command shifts which will result in Lt. Gen. Hamilton H. Howze returning to Korea. Gen. Howze will assume command of the United Nations Forces in Korea as well as the command of the Eighth U. S. Army.

Previously Gen. Howze served as chief of the U. S. Army Advisory Group to the Korean Government. He held this spot from 1959 through 1961.

His most recent assignment was the command of the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N. C. Along with the announcement of Gen. Howze's new assignment came word of his nomination for promotion to four-star rank.

In Korea, Gen. Howze will succeed Gen. Guy S. Meloy, who is approaching retirement.

Gen. Howze is a true son of West Point, having been born there while his father - Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze, was commandant of cadets, in 1908.

Radio Beams Are Relayed From Copter

A Fort Benning soldier, PFC Van C. Finch, has joined the ranks of those who "built a better mousetrap" by using a helicopter to attain a company radio network range of 30 miles.

PFC Finch is communications chief for Company C, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division.

The entire concept of the 11th is to test the latest techniques of air mobility for Infantrymen on the battlefield, which requires a corresponding ultra-modern communications facility.

In the atmosphere of testing, evaluating, experimenting and devising new and sound ways of "getting the job done," Finch worked out his helicopter relay plan in time for it to be tested in recent maneuvers at Fort Stewart, Ga.

CH-34 Choctaw and HU-1B Iroquois helicopters acted as relay stations in the sky, keeping ground forces constantly informed of the whereabouts of "aggressor" forces.

Using the Army's new AN-PRC - 25, radio, Finch has many times extended its range to 22 miles by means of the RC-292 antenna. The usual range of the field radio is five miles with a three-foot AT-892 antenna. A 10-foot AT-271-A antenna can be carried by the radio operator to extend the range to 10 miles whenever the situation requires it.

Bringing the helicopter into the picture to relay messages, Finch achieved his maximum range of 30 miles for the company communications network.

Not only did the helicopters act as a communications relay station, but by participating so closely in the company communications net, they were easily contacted by troops who wanted to be airlifted to other areas.

Leaders Are Followers First, Gen. Wheeler Reminds Graduates

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., — Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, the U. S. Army's chief of staff, Monday urged 82 Georgia Military College graduates to develop themselves as followers in preparation for their roles as tomorrow's leaders.

The four-star general, who Sunday trooped the line of the college's five cadet companies in their 84th graduation parade, made his address during commencement exercises in Old Capitol Auditorium, on the site of Georgia's governmental headquarters from 1807 to 1868.

"If the great dynamism of the Free World is to prevail over the forces that seek to destroy human dignity, liberty and peace, then our leaders cannot do the job alone," Gen. Wheeler stated. "They need continuing assistance and support. They need good followers."

Stressing the importance of keeping informed and assessing the gathered information, Gen. Wheeler added, "The worst fault a follower can have, it appears to me, is not to care what is happening in the world around him."

"At the same time," he continued, "keeping informed and taking a viewpoint is not enough. These viewpoints must be stated, the followers must make them heard."

Having noted the U. S. President's obligation to follow the will of the people, the general said, "In the world of freedom and peace that we want, no leader is ever a law unto himself. This is why I think followership is so important."

"As you leave here, I suggest that you study and develop your own abilities as followers, keeping in mind the need for character, for keeping yourselves informed, for taking a viewpoint and for expressing your views," he said.

"In the final analysis, and this is my key point," he emphasized, "followership requires the same qualities and skills as does leadership. Becoming a good follower means you will be a good leader. It is as simple as that."

Aside from Gen. Wheeler, general officers attending the 84th annual commencement exercises were Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of Fort Benning; Maj. Gen. Eugene A. Salet, commanding general, Fort Gordon, Ga., and Maj. Gen. Eathan A. Chapman, commanding general of the XII Army Corps, Atlanta, Ga.

11th's 'Instant Helipad' Concept Aids Mobility

Operation "Instant Helipad" is another fresh, new concept originating from the members of the 11th Air Assault Division.

The idea for "Instant Helipad" has come from the men of Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, and its goal is to clear an otherwise inaccessible area in a matter of minutes so as to allow delivery and pick-up of troops, equipment and supplies directly on the ground.

According to 2nd Lt. Stuart J. Barmen, the company project officer, Operation "Instant Helipad" will completely eliminate some of the instances where troops are forced to exit from hovering helicopters by means of rappelling ropes because of the nature of the terrain onto which they must descend.

The ability to clear an area in 10 minutes or less and allow the helicopters to land with their troop loads could very well save precious time, particularly when large sized units are involved. It will also decrease the vulnerability of hovering aircraft to enemy observation and the hazard of enemy fire on troops rappelling into the area.

The method to be used in clearing a landing area consists of rigging pre-set demolition charges on trees and other obstacles and connecting them to a ring of explosive detonating cord around the entire area and blowing everything simultaneously. Final clearance of the area would be made by using additional demolitions and chain saws to reduce the debris to a suitable size for manhandling off the site.

Typical terrain for "Instant Helipad" use would be dense forest with trees ranging in height from 20 to 100 feet and no cleared areas. The concept is for delivery of an engineer squad by a single helicopter. The squad would rappel into the area carrying their pre-set demolitions and chain saws. The whole operation in a typical site should take only ten minutes.

Company A's commanding officer, Captain Leon A. Zolnowski, estimates that development of Operation "Instant Helipad" should allow for field testing sometime in July.

All-Army Firers Arrive on Post

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

The Army Rifle and Pistol Championships being held at the post were officially opened during ceremonies at McAndrew Range Wednesday.

Lt. Gen. Albert Watson, II, commanding general of the Third Army, on behalf of Gen. John K. Waters, commanding general of CONARC (U.S. Continental Army Command), was guest speaker at the ceremonies and addressed more than 900 marksmen representing every major Army command in the world.

Today will be the first day of record fire, with riflemen the only ones vying.

The 200-yard slow fire tilt will kick off the rifle portion of the competition with more than 450 competing for top honors.

Included in the 450 is MSgt. James B. Manning of the USAMTU (U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit), here who carried the individual grand aggregate crown to the matches.

Also on hand, trying to beat the men, will be WAC Sp4 Barbara Hile from the Sixth Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit. Sp4 Hile proved her worth last year during the 1962 matches when she was thought proficient enough to be picked up

Accidents Don't Always Happen to the Other Guy

Why do people drown? There are many answers, and we know most of them.

help. They drown because they panic when trouble comes, causing rescue to be difficult or even impossible.

We all know why swimmers drown.

Why do people drown when fishing or boating? That's another easy question. They drown because they overload their boats. They drown because they don't have life preservers with them. They drown because they take their boats into rough or untested waters. They drown because they don't know how to apply common sense in the use of boats.

We all know why people drown while fishing or pleasure riding in a boat.

If we all know the answers, how is it then that seven Fort Benning personnel have lost their lives by drowning in recent months?

They drowned because they believed it happened only to the "other fellow." Sure, they knew the rules of good boating. Never overload. Al-

Doctor Lauds Medic Exhibit For AF Day

The 428th Medical Battalion has received a letter of appreciation from a doctor for an exhibit he and his family saw in downtown Columbus during Armed Forces Week.

Dr. James Cayelli expressed his thanks for the "patience, sincerity and extreme kindness" of the men on duty at the display.

Members of the 428th set up a display between 10th and 11th Streets on the safety zone of Broadway. Illustrating phases of their work, the display included training aids, films, samples of equipment and moulages (artificial wounds) used in training hospital and first aid personnel.

Dr. Cayelli said in his letter, "Traveling with my family through Columbus on Armed Forces Day, I considered myself very fortunate indeed to observe the many interesting exhibits displayed by your unit. I feel that as a result of this effort, a better military and civilian relationship will exist."

The doctor, who did not give his address, expressed his special appreciation for the explanations of the displays given by Sp5 George A. Smith and Pvt. Charles A. Yount, two of 18 men who were at the exhibit during the week.

Smith is a ward specialist, while Yount is a medical specialist.

The exhibit was established by two units of the 428th, the 50th Medical Clearing Company, commanded by Capt. Robert E. Murray and the 95th Evacuation Hospital, commanded by Capt. Charles H. Ogden.

Lt. Col. Raymond J. Caldbeck is commander of the 428th Medical Battalion.

Gen. Harris Returns Famous Urn 'Home'

The "Troopers Tub," a silver urn that belonged to the 11th Airborne Division until its deactivation after World War II, came home to stay last Tuesday when it was pesented to the new 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

The cup, which bears the names of nine generals who commanded the 11th Airborne Division, has been in the custody of its last commander, now Lt. Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general of the Seventh Army in Germany.

In his presentation speech Gen. Harris said the cup had been placed in his care with instructions that it be returned to the "Angel Division" whenever the 11th Airborne Division was reactivated.

Gen. Harris spoke with pride of the new 11th Air Assault Division patch.

"I am aware of your mission and I feel that your work will have a great impact on the Army as a whole," he said.

"This cup was the most valued possession of the 11th Airborne," he continued. "It is not a thing of art but it has an intrinsic value that cannot be described with words. I have kept it until the "Angel Division" once more spread its wings."

Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, who accepted the cup, said, "This is still another tie with which we proudly bind ourselves to the 11th Airborne Division. Gen. Harris, by accepting the 'Troopers Tub' we complete the 'passing of the baton' and we shall hold that baton high."

The presentation ceremony took place in the presence of the staff of the 11th Air Assault Division assembled at the officers' mess.

Gen. Harris came to the post last Monday. He was welcomed in an honors ceremony this morning on Chapel Field.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, was local commander at the review.

Gen. Harris, who himself has served here in the dual role of post commander and school commandant, was briefed on the new academic building and toured the construction site where the Army's largest educational institution soon will set up operations.

Gen. Harris departed the post last Tuesday.

WAC SHOOTER . . . The Women's Army Corps will be represented in the All-Army Rifle and Pistol Championships June 5-15 when Sp4 Barbara Hile, firing for the Sixth Army, will display her prowess with the M-1 rifle. Firing against more than 450 riflemen, the "riflewoman," who did well enough last year to be selected for the team to represent the Army in National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, is considered by many to be a real threat in the annual tilts.

Blankenship Wins Honors At Shakedown

National pistol champion SFC William Blankenship of the Marksmanship Training Unit staged a slashing comeback in the Southern Shakedown Pistol shoot here this weekend to capture the individual championship with an aggregate score of 2654 points out of a possible 2700.

Anchored by Blankenship the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit swept to victory in all four of the team events in the four day tournament.

SSgt. Hershel Anderson, also of the MTU, led the field of nearly 300 pistol shooters through the first two days of competition capturing the .22 caliber aggregate with an 887 out of 900 score and the center fire matches with a four-event total of 885.

Trailing by six points as the .45 caliber matches commenced Blankenship pounded out a four match total of 88 out of 900 to win the event and edge Anderson in the grand aggregate by two points.

This was only the second three-gun match for Blankenship, who was a member of the U. S. Pan American shooting team at Sao Paulo, Brazil, during the past two months, but proved he is ready to defend his nation crown, which he won for the third consecutive time last year at Camp Perry, Ohio.

In team events the Army's Blue Team captured three of the four fired matches and the MTU Red squad won the other match.

The Blue quartet, composed of SSgt. Hershel Anderson, SSgt Leland Wessel, SFC R. O. Thompson and Blankenship, racked up wins in the .22 caliber, Center Fire and .45 caliber matches.

They took the .22 title with a score of 1174 out of a possible 1200 points; posted a winning 1175 point effort in the center fire, and came in with a 1172 in the .45 caliber match.

The Red team took the "hard ball" .45 caliber match with a score of 1146 points. Firing members were MSgt. Schaser, SFC Sam Hunter, Sgt. Thompson and Sgt. Blankenship.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Locomotion

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) A. B. Landsberg

Once upon a time there was a bird, — and there was a human being, — and there was a snake.

The bird was an eagle and a sparrow, a hawk and a robin, a vulture and a hummingbird. The bird was all birds. The bird was a wing. And the human being, — the human being was male and female, child and adult, imbecile and genius. The human being was all human beings. The human being was a foot. And the snake, — the snake was a boa and a rattler, an anaconda and a python, poisonous and innocuous. The snake was all snakes. The snake was a belly.

One day, thirst overtook all three of them, — the bird, the human being, and the snake. But they were not worried because the inscrutable Father of them all who lived beyond the horizon had prepared for them the crystal lake and the crystal lake was only a million million miles away. They all started on the journey, the wing, and the foot and belly separate in travel, — yet united in purpose, for only the lake could slake the thirst.

The wing flew, — the foot tread, — and the belly crawled but the Odyssey was long, and the way tortuous, and doubts arose. The foot could not keep up with the wing nor could the belly pace the foot.

So question took on flesh and walked and crawled. Will there be enough water? For the bird is fast, and man is slow.

Will there be sufficient water? For man is fast, and the snake is slow.

And then arose a tiredness, a fatigue whose genesis lay not in muscle but in psyche.

Will there be for me? Will there be for me? Then each searched his bowels, and there was strength.

And each completed the journey. The bird and the man and the snake, all reached the lake of crystal, and each drank of its waters. The wing savoured the clear and the cool. The foot drank of the foggy and the tepid. The belly swallowed the muddy and the hot. But they all lived! Unequal in trivia, — peers in humanity. MORAL: Let us fly, let us walk, let us crawl, — but for God's sake, let us not stand still.

John McCloy Wins 1963 Thayer Award

WEST POINT (AFPS)—John J. McCloy, chairman of the General Advisory Committee on Disarmament, said that the nation's military leaders would have to face complex problems that had been "introduced to the science of conflict and destruction."

Mr. McCloy expressed this view as he accepted the sixth annual Sylvanus Thayer Award. This is presented by the Association of graduates of the U.S. Military Academy to those whose service and accomplishments exemplify the ideal of the academy's motto, "Duty, Honor, Country."

Addressing himself to the corps of cadets in the spacious Washington Hall, the cadet dining room, Mr. McCloy discussed the problems of nuclear armament and disarmament.

"The chief problem, which confronts the country and the world," he asserted, "is how destruction can be averted without loss of self-respect or impairment of the country's vital interests."

The award presentation was made by Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Leslie R. Groves, president of the Association of Graduates. Before warding the medal, Gen. Groves read a citation that listed Mr. McCloy's contributions as a soldier, lawyer, president of the World Bank, U.S. High Commissioner for Germany and disarmament negotiator.

Previous winners of the award named for Sylvanus Thayer, fifth superintendent of the academy, include: Dr. Erneat O. Lawrence, the nuclear physicist; John Foster Dulles; Henry Cabot Lodge, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower and General of the Army Douglas MacArthur.

Preceding the presentation, Mr. McCloy reviewed a parade of the corps. An estimated crowd of 25,000 persons watched as the 2,200 corpsmen passed before the 1963 Thayer Award winner.

Without Pride, Man Is Likened to Worm

"Pride goeth before a fall."

However a man without pride will never attain high enough place in the scheme of things to need worry lest he fall. The prideless worm most certainly has no place to fall . . and to bounce never.

Military men and women without pride in their country, their service and themselves are likened to the worm and seldom crawl to the upper strata in their chosen way of life.

There once was a moving picture called "Pride of the Yankees." It was the film version of Lou Gehrig's life. A master example of a proud individual becoming part of a proud team.

A proud soldier in a proud unit is a good soldier.

A proud airman on a proud plane is a good airman.

A proud Marine in a proud company is a good Marine.

All four prideful servicemen could be riding for a fall. But the misfortune to fall depends on the individual. For it is conceit, arrogance . . puffed up pride. . .and over indulgence in pride that leads to a "humpty-dumpty." Pride like everything else will blow up if mistreated.

But have no fear when you feel pride in your flag, in yourself and your nation . . . and of your contribution to liberty and freedom . . . but beware of the belittlement of others, the flash of fool's gold, for in truth you will fall. . .Being honest in pride is the sign of a MAN. (AFPS)

Debt Liquidation Plan Is Step to Solvency

No one is born with the ability to manage money well. It takes skill to make an income, no matter what size, cover expenses you now have plus those projected into the future.

For the sake of argument we'll assume you have made the mistake of becoming overobligated.

First, be frank with your creditors. You'll find that nine times out of ten they'll be understanding and give you a chance to prove your solvency.

Establish what legal assistance officers call a debt liquidation schedule.

Under this plan a monthly schedule of payments within your means is established. The cooperation of your creditors is requested so you can make payments within the framework of a workable budget.

A thing to remember, however, is that once such an arrangement is agreed upon, your failure to comply is a positive indication of irresponsibility and a lack of good faith on your part.

Another step would be a visit with your legal assistance officer for advice on a safe, practical solution to your problem.

Beyond doubt, he will show you how to set up a balance sheet showing income and outgo.

He may even help you find ways to reduce fixed obligations by turning back merchandise you don't need. This is provided, of course, your creditor will accept them.

Your legal adviser may also suggest you secure a bonafide, low interest loan from a bank, reputable loan company, credit union or by borrowing on your life insurance policy.

In every instance, he will warn you against borrowing from illegal unlicensed loan companies, sometimes called loan sharks.

And he will be the first one to tell you that it's the very high interest and dangerous default provisions in most loan shark agreements that are poison

The 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 558th Infantry will celebrate its 46th birthday tomorrow with Organization Day ceremonies at Todd Field in the Harmony Church area.

Activities, which will be open to military personnel and their dependents, will include military and athletic competition, jeep rides and equipment displays.

The 58th Infantry Regiment was originated May 15, 1917 and organized June 5, 1917 at Gettysburg National Park. The regiment joined the 4th Infantry Division enroute to France in 1918 where the unit remained throughout World War I.

Expeditionary Forces

Upon arrival in France, the 58th was assigned to the 8th Brigade, 4th Infantry Division, as part of American Expeditionary Forces, under the command of Gen. John J. Pershing.

During World War I, the unit suffered nearly 50 per cent casualties. Gen. Pershing cited the 58th in his memoirs when he wrote, "The fortitude and courage of the 4th Division, of which the 58th Infantry was a key unit, in those operations were truly inspiring."

Easter Germany

Nine days after the armistice, the regiment marched into Germany to begin a tour of duty with the Army of occupation and closed its tour of duty by being inactivated with the 4th Division June 21, 1922.

During World War II, the regiment was divided into three separate battalions which served in Europe and the Aleutian Islands, earning battle credits for the unit.

Company B, 58th Armored Infantry Battalion was reorganized and redesignated as Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Armor Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry on July 1, 1957 and assigned with the 2nd Armored Division in Germany.

The 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 58th Infantry was activated May 16, 1960 here as a unit of the 1st Infantry Brigade. It was redesignated 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry on Sept. 24, 1962.

Presently the mission of the battalion, which is commanded by Lt. Col. John L. Kennedy Jr., is the troop support of the Infantry School and Infantry Center. The 58th's major responsibility is the presentation of demonstrations for students at the Infantry School, covering almost every combat situation on the battlefield.

Commercial Tractor Set For Army

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new tractor developed through industry cooperation at no research and development cost to the government is expected to prove one of the military's most versatile and productive items of construction equipment.

One hundred of the medium size, heavy duty tractors are now entering the Army supply system. The remaining 300, required under a current contract, are in production.

The four-wheel drive, rubber tired tractor was developed commercially, based on Army Engineer specifications.

The tractor is powered by a 6-cylinder engine. It can ford three feet of water and is equipped with a dozer and winch, can pull a scraper or trailer, or be fitted for snowplow or compactor wheels.

Powerful enough to handle tough dozing assignments, it also can maintain convoy road speeds.

Weighing approximately 52,000 pounds, the new tractor has a 140-inch wheelbase. It is 124-inches wide and 136-inches high. Despite its size, it can be maneuvered easily, and transported by air.

Commo Equipment Goes Airborne

Members of Company A, 511th Signal Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division, have responded with two innovations in communication equipment as a result of a plea by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, to improve air mobility.

The first idea was developed by the men of the Wire Section, Command Signal Center Platoon, under the supervision of Sgt. Maximin Gomes.

The signalmen have mounted a field switchboard on an airborne skid so that it can be air-lifted, internally or externally, by all utility and cargo helicopters assigned to the division as well as by the CV-2 Caribou, the Army's largest fixed-wing aircraft.

The skid, as it is called by its builders, operates the wire portion of a typical main command post. It replaces, with increased capabilities, the standard unit which is now mounted on a three-quarter ton truck. The unit weighs approximately one-eighth as much as the standard unit and costs about a quarter as much.

Credit for the second idea goes to SFC William C. Price, Communications Center chief, Command Signal Center Platoon, and the men of his section.

They devised a communications center terminal which is mounted on a quarter-ton jeep trailer. Like the skid, this unit can be air-lifted by all division utility and cargo aircraft. It can also be pulled behind a regulation jeep and can be man - handled into position when necessary.

CAMPERS HIKE ON ONE OF PHILMONTS MOUNTAIN TRAILS
Post Scouts And Explorers Will Visit the Ranch in August.

Well-Marked Trails Help Campers Find Adventure

Post Boy Scouts and Explorers are in for adventure like many of them have never experienced when they travel to the Philmont Ranch in New Mexico for a two week encampment in August, according to trip coordinator, Lt. Col. William S. Brophy.

From the base camp established by the boys at the ranch, there are literally hundreds of trails that they can take to visit the woods, mountains and streams in the area, either on foot or by horseback.

There are many unusual sights along these trails. En-route to the new Dean Trail Camp there is a well-preserved dinosaur track.

The trail moves from Dean Camp to Ponil. Along the high route Old Baldy can be seen in the distance with its magnificent crest of snow, and many miles away the Spanish Peaks in Colorado probe skywards.

Located along the Pueblano Trail are the ruins of a former Pueblo village.

In the immediate area is a running deer rifle range. A number of beaver dams can be found in this area.

At Old Camp there is a windmill and cooking shelters. An alert Explorer will find many signs of Indian dwellings, particularly in the caves in Old Camp area. An old Army bucket inscribed 1845 and old Army ammunition have been located in this area.

On top of the Clear Creek Mountain trail-blazers might see a Pika, the rabbit with rat ears, or a Rocky Mountain Jay, a very tame bird that will eat crumbs from the hands as well as Foxtail pine trees, with short, sharp needles.

One of the Cyphers Mines tunnels has been shored up and can be visited while at Clear Creek Camp.

Over many of the well-marked trails that criss-cross Philmont, the scouts will get a chance to see miners' diggings, old cabins once-occupied by out-post riders from the cow ranches, panoramas that make distant objects seem remarkably close and clear.

They will get all the climbing they want, lots of opportunity to sleep under the greatest blanket of all — the sky — and a chance to observe sights they may never see again.

Thai Leper Colony Gets GI Support

KHON KAEN, THAILAND (AFPS) — A leper colony of upwards to 100,000 diseased people has been financially helped by an American military unit stationed in Hawaii.

The 1st Battle Group of the 14th Infantry, "The Golden Dragons," noted that Hawaiian based 17th and 35th Infantry units had set up world renowned charities.

The 35th aided a hospital in Osaka, Japan, and the 27th, the first U. S. combat outfit to serve in Thailand, had adopted a Korean girl and brought her to Hawaii.

The 14th was not to be outdone. Led by Sgt. Phillip Harrington and SFC C. Francis Young, the Golden Dragons located the leper colony here operated by the American Leprosy Mission of New York and the Christian Missionary Alliance of Thailand.

Since adopting the leper colony as their very own charity, the 14th Infantry has helped buy a new generator and contributed handsomely to a much needed clinic.

Aircraft Armament Course Set

The Continental Army Command has established a new course titled Aircraft Armament Repairman.

Designated 9-B-F 43, the course is the first to provide aircraft armament training in the Army since the Army Air Forces became a separate service in 1947.

The initial class began schooling last month at CONARC's Ordnance Center and School at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. Forty-nine students are presently in attendance.

So new is the course that an MOS number has not been finally approved for it. The MOS number is now being staffed at Army headquarters.

Presently scheduled for 10 weeks, the aircraft armament repairman course will be lengthened to 15 weeks when additional training equipment becomes available, according to Headquarters CONARC school officials.

Active duty personnel only are being accepted for schooling in the course, which covers all of the aircraft armament systems that will be mounted on US Army aircraft, both fixed and rotary wing.

The Ordnance School at Aberdeen is one of 27 Army schools operated by CONARC as part of the Command's mission to train the ground soldier in the continental U.S.

'Floating' Pavilion to House U.S. World Fair Display

Massive steel girders being riveted into place at Flushing Meadows, N. Y., form the giant skeleton of the United States Pavilion, which will represent this nation at the 1964-65 New York World's Fair.

The new pavilion prohises a fresh architectural approach in government exhibition buildings in its unique exterior and interior design and in the imaginative exhibits it will house.

Experts who chose the building's design from 28 preliminary drawings predict that the pavilion, the largest our government has ever erected at a fair, will be a striking representation of the U. S. theme for the fair, "Challenge to Greatness," and an outstanding example of future trends in architecture.

Appears to "Float"

Norman K. Winston, U. S. commissioner to the World's Fair, said the building, larger than a city block, will seem at first glance to "float" in space above the ground.

Actually, the commissioner revealed, it will be supported by four massive steel columns utilizing the same architectural principle employed in cantilevered bridges. The pavilion's exterior walls will be high as an eight-story building and will be made up almost entirely of thousands of varicolored glass-like plastic panels which will reflect sunlight during the day and which will glow with an interior light at night.

The spacious entrance to the pavilion, Winston reported, will give visitors a feeling of tranquility as they approach. Sweeping pyramids of steps and escalators, flanked at their base with pools and fountains, will carry you away from the hurly-burly of the fairgrounds to a restful garden court-planted with trees and shrubs and accented with sculpture.

The garden court, a place of beauty and repose, will be the point of central access to major pavilion areas.

Commisssioner Winston said that as you enter the building the first view will be a panoramic representation of America today and the challenges which lie ahead for the nation.

Most of the whole first level of the pavilion will be devoted to this three-part exhibition depicting the origins of freedom; the land and our life upon it; and a portrayal of the "new America" — a free nation still striving for perfection.

The lower pavilion level also will house an auditorium for meetings, recitals and lectures.

Once on the upper level, visitors will embark on a 15-minute "total experience" ride, which Winston called "a virtually unprecedented theatrical experience, the heart of the whole federal exhibit."

Individual automatic cars will carry each viewer through a series of film images, and visial and sound effects which dramatize the essential spirit of the United States. This exhibit area, entitled "Horizons," will unfold the tremendous potential of a truly free life in a democracy dedicated to the welfare of all mankind.

Commissioner Winston said a special area offering further information about subjects treated within the exhibition hall will complete the tour. Here, a computer facility will reveal supplementary information in response to individual questions by visitors.

More than 200 authorities on the major phases of American life helped develop the government exhibit for the World's Fair.

Winston, chosen by President Kennedy to head the U. S. Commission to the fair, is an inveterate "fair-goer." He participated in negotiations with the Kremlin for the first American National Exhibition in the Soviet Union. He also served as New York's high commissioner to many trade fairs abroad.

An industrialist before his appointment as U. S. commissioner, he is responsible for building some 20,000 homes and apartment buildings throughout the world.

Winston is prominent in cultural and civic affairs in New York and is an enthusiastic collector of art works. His collection includes major works by Renoir, Matisse, Degas, Modigliani, Picasso and Goya.

Army Chemist Finds Method To Cast Gems

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—An Army chemist is making artificial rubies and sapphires, said to be identical with the same precious gems found in nature.

Dr. Charles Nixon of the Electromagnetic Laboratory at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., is using a plasma furnace which produces temperatures up to about 28,000 degrees in a few moments. To grow his precious stones, Nixon lights this furnace and pours aluminum oxide mixed with chrome oxide down a tube into the flame. The powder upon contact with the flame first vaporizes and then falls.

When the vapor leaves the flame it condenses, like rain and then falls into an asbestos cup below the flame. The falling liquid forms an upside-down icicle, similar to the formation of a stalagmite when lime in cave water hits the ground.

These are the rubies. They grow at the rate of about an inch an hour, Dr. Nixon says. The amount of chrome oxide in the original mixture determines their redness. A crop of several rubies and sapphires already has been grown. Nixon also has produced zircons and titanium crystals. The experimental precious stones are about half the size of a man's thumb but the next crop will be larger, according to Nixon.

Air Strike Unit At Ranger Camp

BY PETER TATISTCHEFF

Top priority has been given this week to the 2nd Infantry Division's newest and most modern unit, the 7th Cavalry's Aero Rifle Platoon, which is taking special training at the Dahlonega, Ga., Ranger Camp.

Members of the platoon, recently organized as the first element of "Garry Owen's" Air Cavalry Troop, are in Dahlonega taking what amounts to a revised Ranger course accenting mountain warfare.

Home Tuesday

They are scheduled to return to Fort Benning Tuesday.

The Aero Rifle Platoon, made up of 36 enlisted men and one officer, are adding a new dimension to the capabilities of both the 7th Cavalry and the 2nd Infantry Division. Designed to move and strike from the air using helicopters, this platoon, when joined by the rest of the presently unformed Air Cavalry Troop, will embody the latest development in Army tactics.

Present Ranger training for this platoon accents rappelling, using ropes to make descents they will eventually have to make from helicopters.

Leading the cavalry contingent in Dahlonega is Capt. Horace L. Griffith, cavalry S-3 liaison officer, who will take command of the Air Cavalry Troop when it becomes a reality.

Leading the Aero Rifle Platoon is Lt. Thomas Kaplan, assisted by platoon sergeant, Sgt. Earle Evans.

In total the 7th Cavalry has sent 106 members to the Ranger Camp, including all normal support personnel. Key figures in the support element are three Ranger-trained noncommissioned officers who assist in this training. They are SFC Sisto M. Cjcuzza, of Troop A; Sgt. Joseph A. Brady Jr., Troop C; and Sgt. William G. Ridgeway, Troop C.

Troop A of the "Garry Owen" is providing 36 enlisted men and one officer for an opposing force to be used on the special exercise that ends training this week in Dahlonega.

Other support elements provided by 7th Cavalry for training in the hills of north Georgia include 17 assistant instructors and five assistant principal instructors.

An honor guard will be made up of four men from Headquarters Company. They are: Sgt. Louis W. House, Sgt. Patrick Sewell, PFC Bobby Mills and PFC John M. Chepeleff.

Customarily, the Marine Band and a squad of Marine troops are expected for the occasion. Members of allied armed forces will also attend the ceremonies.

Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., departing chief of staff, will also attend services en route to his new assignment at Harvard University.

The memorial service is sponsored annually by the 2nd (Indian Head) Division Association.

Col. Arlin Kehe

Colonel Kehe Next Duties: Washington

By Carl Halstead

Col. Arlin J. Kehe, Support Command commander, leaves Saturday for a new assignment in Washington, D. C. at the office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Col. Kehe assumed command of the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry at Baumholder, Germany in January 1962, which deployed to Fort Benning in October 1962 under Rotaplan, to become a part of the 2nd Division.

In February 1963, Col. Kehe became the first commander of the newly organized Support Command.

College in Iowa

Col. Kehe graduated from Denver, Iowa, High School in 1933 and received a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Iowa in 1940. He obtained a reserve commission in the Army through the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program.

Relief Society Donation Deadlines Are Announced

A fund which last year loaned 2nd Infantry Division soldiers 138,145 interest-free dollars is up for replenishment at Fort Benning.

July 9 is the deadline for postwide giving to the Army Emergency Relliet and the Army Relief Society, two separate funds.

The former organization with national headquarters in Washington, D. C. makes loans and grants available to servicemen or retired soldiers with immediate and pressing financial problems. The Army Relief Society is set up for the widows of active duty or retired soldiers. Both funds exist strictly for the military man.

The Army Emergency Relief office at Fort Benning is authorized to make loans up to $250 without consulting national headquarters. Worldwide fund drives are conducted and money pooled for disbursement by the central organization. Money is then loaned or given at various posts as needed, not according to the size of post donations. This accounts for the fact that in 1962 Fort Benning soldiers withdrew from the fund a considerable amount of money over that originally donated.

Division project officer for the 1963 Joint Army Emergency Relief and Army relief Society Fund Campaign is Capt. D. E. Depew of the "Second to None's" general staff personnel section. Capt. Depew is also the division safety officer.

Each battalion commander will in turn appoint a project officer for his command. And company commanders will follow this procedure to the next lower level, appointing company fund leaders.

Deadline for donations is July 9 or, in the case of a unit temporarily away from Fort Benning, upon return of the unit. Money will be turned over to Capt. Depew at G-1.

Chaplain's Assistant Bags Aggressor

'I Command You, Give Me My Weapon Back'

By George Aubin

Moving slowly through the underbrush wearing full battle dress, the figure resembled a creation of Dr. Frankenstein stalking its next victim in the gathering dusk.

Closer observation revealed that the figure was Sp4 Peter S. Sutton, Chaplain's Assistant for the division Chaplain section, on a one-man reconnaissance patrol during the 2nd Administration Company's recent Army Training Test. Sutton moved slowly in the growing darkness, searching for "guerrillas" when he spotted what appeared to be a body lying on the ground in front of him.

'You Got Me'

Cautiously approaching the shadowy figure, he poked it several times with his rifle. Nothing happened. Curious, he jabbed it again and this time the shadow snarled, "alright, you've got me." He raised up on one knee and said, "here's my weapon." Sutton was taking the ammunition clip and the shell from the chamber when the figure said, "I want my weapon back after you've unloaded the clip." "I'm sorry but I was told not to give the weapon back to the prisoner," said Sutton. "Young soldier, I commanded you to give me my weapon back," rasped the voice. "Sir, I'm sorry but I can't return your weapon," said Sutton.

With that, the figure leaped forward and knocked Sutton over backwards. They grappled and rolled in the dirt for several minutes before Sutton called for help.

Sp4 William Dickey rushed to his aid and simulated knocking out the "aggressor." "I surrender," muttered the figure.

Specialist Sutton and Dickey then marched their reluctant prisoner to the prisoner-of-war camp where he was interrogated.

Shortly thereafter, a red-faced and chagrined Commander of "aggressor guerrillas" forces, was released and returned to his lines.

Specific Terms Defined

Special Warfare Has a Language

Discoveries in nuclear science have brought about a new kind of warfare that could lead to mass destruction.

But nuclear science is also responsible for a less technical type of warfare. . . a warfare calling for less scientists.

This warfare pits man against man in active and passive resistance to the other's ideology, both attempting to avoid the use of nuclear weapons.

Any sort of small, isolated fights may possibly develop. And the political picture must be clear to military planners.

To assist in understanding the Army's reference to special situations and commitments, the following list of terms and their definitions has been compiled by the Department of the Army.

Each soldier is expected to be familiar with the terms, DA has pointed out, and more complete information on all aspects of each term will be made available to all units.

COLD WAR — The use of political, economic, technological, sociological and military measures, short of overt armed conflict involving regular military forces, to achieve national objectives.

WARS OF SUBVERSION OR COVERT AGGRESSION — Terms used to define the Communist-inspired actions designed to subvert free governments through development of indigenous resistance movements, including the eventual organization of guerrilla forces, and the support of these movements from external sources. The aggression is characterized by a rising scale of violence passing from persuasion to coercion, reprisals, terrorism, and guerrilla warfare aimed at gaining control of a country.

WARS OF LIBERATION—A communist propaganda term toward covert aggression.

SPECIAL WARFARE — This includes the interrelated fields of guerrilla warfare, evasion and escape, and resistance. Such operations are conducted in enemy-held or controlled territory and are planned and executed to take advantage of or stimulate resistance movements or insurgency against hostile governments or forces. In peacetime, the U. S. conducts training to develop its capability for such wartime operations.

RESISTANCE MOVEMENT —An organized effort by some portion of the civil population of a country to resist the legally established government or occupying power. Initially, such resistance may consist of subversive political activities, and the other actions, designed to agitate and propagandize the populace to distrust and lose confidence in the legally established government or occupying power. If not suppressed, such resistance can result in insurgency by irregular forces.

INSURGENCY—A condition of subversive political activity, civil rebellion, revolt, or insurrection against a duly constituted government or occupying power wherein irregular forces are formed and engage in actions, which may include guerrilla warfare, designed to weaken and overthrow that government or occupying power.

GUERRILLA WARFARE — The conduct of combat operations in enemy or enemy-held territory on a military or paramilitary basis by units organized from predominantly indigenous personnel. The aim is to weaken the established government of the target country by reducing the combat effectiveness of the military forces, the economic means and the over-all morale and will to resist.

IRREGULAR FORCES —Broadly speaking, all types of insurgents to include partisans, subversionists, terrorists, revolutionaries and guerrillas.

PARAMILITARY FORCES —Those existing alongside the armed forces and professedly nonmilitary, but formed on an underlying military pattern as a potential auxiliary or diversionary military organization.

EVASION AND ESCAPE — Those operations whereby friendly military personnel and other selected individuals are enabled to emerge from enemy-held or unfriendly areas to areas under friendly control.

COUNTERINSURGENCY — All military, political, economic, psychological and sociological activities directed toward preventing and suppressing resistance groups whose actions range in degree of violence and scope from subversive political activity to violent actions by large guerrilla elements to overthrow a duly established government. The basic military problem is to maintain or restore internal security so that other elements of the counter-insurgency program can operate. Comprehensive national counterinsurgency plans are required to integrate and coordinate the use of all military and nonmilitary means, including available outside assistance to suppress and eliminate all forms of insurgency.

COUNTERGUERRILLA OPERATIONS — Those active and passive measures taken by the armed forces and nonmilitary agencies of an established government and its allies against guerrilla forces.

COUNTERGUERRILLA OPERATIONS — Those active and passive measures taken by the armed forces and nonmilitary agencies of an established government and its allies against guerrilla forces.

ARMY COUNTERINSURGENCY FORCES — These comprise special forces, civil affairs, psychological warfare, engineer, medical, light aviation, signal and other elements as required. They are capable of operating in disturbed areas, if invited by a host government, to provide training and operational advice and assistance to indigenous military forces engaged in maintaining or restoring internal security.

SPECIAL FORCES GROUP —Specially trained and organized to train and assist indigenous leaders and forces in measures, tactics and techniques required to prevent or eliminate hostile resistance and guerrilla groups. Other Army elements extend and complement the activities of special forces groups. Assistance and training provided to indigenous forces may include operational advice. The wartime mission of special forces groups is to organize, supply, train and direct predominantly indigenous forces in the conduct of guerrilla warfare in enemy-held or controlled territory to support the over-all military effort.

CIVIC ACTION —Any action performed by military forces of a country, utilizing military manpower and skills, agencies, authorities or groups, that is designed to improve the economic or social betterment of that country. Civic action programs can enhance the stature of indigenous military forces and improve their relationship with the population. Thus, such programs can be a major contributing factor to the elimination of insurgency.

PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE — Includes those activities and operations planned and conducted to influence the opinions, emotions, attitudes and behavior of the enemy, the indigenous population and neutral or friendly foreign groups in such a way as to support the accomplishment of national aims and objectives.

After the war he served in Guam and then with the G-3 of the Japan Logistical Command. He returned from this overseas assignment to three years duty with the Reserve Officer Training Corps of the University of Houston.

He then attended the Command and General Staff College in 1953, the Quartermaster Advanced Class in 1954, the Army Logistics Management College in 1959, and other specialized training schools.

Deese, assistant division chaplain, in a Letter of Appreciation stated that "Sp4 Fulton's leadership abilities and soldierly qualities were truly outstanding and were duly recognized. His Christian character and desire to help others make him a distinct asset and credit not only to the Chaplain section, but to the Army as a whole."

Duty With Second

Born in St. Louis, Mo., Sp4 Fulton has served with 2nd Division units since Advanced Infantry Training in January 1962. Following duty with the 69th Armor, he was reassigned eight months later to Headquarters Company, 38th Infantry as a chaplain's assistant.

The specialist plans to enter college after his Army tour, where he will work toward a degree in political science. An avid chess and tennis player, he lists music as a special hobby.

Drivers Cautioned On M-151

By 702nd Maintenance PIO

A note to 2nd Division 'Jeep' drivers: The new M-151 three-quarter - ton vehicle is considered to be accident prone due to the power-weight ratio combined with the more sensitive steering system.

The basic design of this vehicle has made it a quick-moving, combat ready vehicle with a short turning radius. With this increased responsiveness, particular care must be taken regarding sensible speed control during vehicle operation.

A constant effort must be exercised to control speed and proper gear selection in accordance with terrain, road hazards and climatic conditions as outlined in Technical Manual 21-305.

Division to Present New Safety Program Awards

In keeping with the 2nd Infantry Division's current emphasis on safety, a safety awards program to recognize outstanding contributions made by units and individuals of the division has been established.

Under the new program, the assistant chief of staff, G-1 has the responsibility for determining the eligibility and presenting two Division Safety Awards to major subordinate units.

The first award to be presented will be the 2nd Infantry Division Quarterly Safety Performance Plaque. As is implied by the name, the plaque is presented quarterly on a rotational basis. There are two awards of the plaque; one to battalion size units and one to separate company size units.

The second award to be presented at division level is the 2nd Infantry Division Annual Safety Performance Plaque. This award is presented on a permanent basis each calendar year, and like the Quarterly Plaque, is made in two categories; one for battalion size units and one for separate company sized units.

In addition to division safety awards, the program encourages major unit commanders to establish safety awards programs for units and individuals under their command.

Individuals at this level may receive an award by one of three ways: (1) a unit commander or supervisor of an organizational section who has been in command or supervisor for at least six consecutive months during which period the units or activity has had consistently low rates in military personnel injuries and Army motor vehicle accidents. (2) Army motor vehicle drivers who possess a valid US Government Motor Vehicle Operator's Identification Card and, for the period for which the award is presented, must not have been involved in an they were either partially or wholly responsible for, must not have been convicted of a moving traffic violation during a period of 12 consecutive months or at least 8,000 miles of driving and will have performed satisfactorily in all respects as a driver. (3) Operators of Army materials and mechanical equipment who are properly licensed and have completed at least 12 consecutive months or 500 consecutive hours of operation without causing or contributing to an accident, has not received a written reprimand as a result of an unsafe operation and has performed satisfactorily in all respects as an equipment operator.

Units at the major unit level may receive the Certificate of Merit for Safety. This is authorized for units and activities which have, in the opinion of the awarding authority, attained or maintained: A position of excellence in the completeness of accidents reporting and records, in the quality of accident prevention effort, and in corrective actions taken in all applicable accident categories; Improvement in reducing injuries and accidents in such categories as military personnel, Army motor vehicles and Army aircraft; Consistently superior rates in all of the aforementioned categories.

In addition to the above, a Motor Vehicle Drivers Badge is authorized for drivers who have qualified for it under the provisions of AR 600-70.

All awards for major units will be presented to the commander concerned in a ceremony arranged by division headquarters. Awards for all other units and individuals will be forwarded to the major unit commander concerned for presentation in a manner prescribed by him.

Devoted Family Keynotes Life of Mrs. J. Stoecker

MRS. STOECKER

BY CAROL SUE HAI

If you ask her children what comes to their minds first about their mother, Sally will say, "the quiet, un-assuming manner in which Mother does things," and Jay will say, "her sense of humor." Jay goes on to add, "her stability," while Sally interjects, "she always has to learn the latest dance step!" Both young people will cite their mother's extraordinary sewing talent, artistic ability, creativeness in ceramics, and proficiency in golf. Then they will tell you that 'Mother has a habit of conversing with the dog, Max, and is perturbed that it is a one-sided conversation. She asks Max why he doesn't answer."

The versatile, attractive, fun mother Sally and Jay are describing is Mrs. John V. Stoecker (Mary) wife of the commanding officer of the Supply and Transport Battalion.

Originally from Jefferson City, Mo., Mary Hodson's family moved away at the same time that John Stoecker's family moved there. Mary went on to graduate from the University of Missouri and took a job after college in St. Louis.

John graduated from Washington University in St. Louis and their paths crossed because of mutual friends in Jefferson City. They started dating and the dating culminated in their marriage on Christmas Day 1941 at Fort Lee, Va. where candidate Stoecker was in Officers' Candidate School. The December that marks a wedding for the Stoeckers also marks the bombing of Pearl Harbor and the entry into World War II for the U.S.

"Vaudevillians"

When Lt. Stoecker graduated, he and his bride of a few months were sent to Fort Warren in Cheyenne, Wyo. After a very short stay, Lt. Stoecker's Quartermaster Company was assigned to the "Army War Show". For six months they traveled through the Eastern and Mid-Western states performing in Municipal Auditoriums of major cities.

The show was composed of units from all over the country: cavalry, airplanes, and an engineer unit that under mock gun fire, built a pontoon bridge. The Emcee for the show was a sergeant by the name of Bert Parks. Stoecker's Quartermaster Company was behind the scenes providing the necessary support. Mrs. Stoecker and two other young wives traveled together by car behind the show and enjoyed the lives of "vaudevillians" as she puts it.

After the "War Show" the Stoeckers were stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash. where Sally joined the family in February of 1944.

Capt. Stoecker was sent overseas to Europe and Mrs. Stoecker returned with Sally to Mo. The captain returned to civilian life after the war and took a position with the Missouri Research Department in Jefferson City. Jay was born there in February 1947.

When their father returned to Army duty, the family accompanied him to Guam. In 1950 when the Korean Conflict broke out the Stoeckers were transferred to Yokahama, Japan, the 8th Army Headquarters.

R. O. T. C. duty at the University of Houston was their next adventure. After three years there, a short course at Fort Lee followed and then on to Heidelberg, Germany. It was in Heidelberg that Mrs. Stoecker did the exquisite pastel portraits of Sally and Jay that hang in the front entrance hall of their home here at 113 Rainbow Avenue. A still life pastel hanging in the den was also done at this time.

Maxel Von Steuben

Upon meeting their aforementioned dog, Max, formally known as Maxel Von Steuben, a chocolate-brown, pure-bred Dachshund, one would assume he became part of the family while they were in Germany. However, it was not until the Stoeckers settled in Arlington, Va. that they acquired their then seven week-old pet. Max, now five and one-half years old, missed out on the family's tour to his fatherland.

An assignment to the Office of the Quartermaster General brought them to Arlington. When the Lt. Col. was sent on a hardship tour to Viet Nam in the fall of 1960 the family remained in Arlington, where Sally graduated from Washington and Lee High School last June.

Attending classes in ceramics, given by the Arlington Recreation Department, sparked an interest that almost developed into a business for our subject. Mrs. Stoecker made such beautiful ceramic tiles that friends persuaded her to make more, which they bought to give as gifts. One very clever design that was popular on these gift tiles pictures a coffee cup and saucer and reads, "It's time for coffee at the (appropriate name) Stoeckers' e.g." The border is delicately rendered in cassia flowers and leaves. Some of the tiles were sold through a local gift shop.

Upon his return to the States, the Col. reported directly to the 2nd Division, where he became Division Quartermaster. His family arrived here in July of last summer.

In September Jay began his sophomore year at Columbus High School and Sally was off to her freshman year at the University of Georgia in Athens, where she pledged Kappa Alpha Theta, her mother's sorority.

Under ROAD the Quartermaster Company became part of the Supply and Transport Battalion, of which Col. Stoecker is now commanding officer.

Mrs. Stoecker has been active in the Altar Guild of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, a member of the Pan-Hellenic Association, and is alternate President of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club for the coming year. Whenever the opportunity presents itself she gets out for a game of golf. Sally's wardrobe includes a number of things her mother has made for her, and occasionally, Sally says, "Mother makes something for herself."

One thing Sally's mother has definitely made for herself — a highly-esteemed and beloved place in her family's life!

Reservation Change

Reservations for 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club coffees this summer should not be made by members calling their designated reservation chairmen as was the case this Spring. Instead, members will be contacted by the reservation chairman from their unit.

In case a member wishes to cancel her reservation, she must do so by noon of the Monday preceding the coffee by calling either Mrs. William Conger (545-4297), or Mrs. John E. McIntire (545-1919).

Varied Activites Keep Wives Busy

Wives of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry have been keeping themselves busy with various activities to pass the time while their husbands are in Germany.

A group of bowlers enjoyed a morning of bowling at Victroy Lanes recently. Some of the members decided that they would take lesson.

The Rota Center was the site of canasta and pinochle games. The ladies meet once a week in the morning, take their lunches and stay on into the afternoon. Hostesses for the card party were Mrs. Herman Goldman and Mrs. John Motenbocker.

Carl Halstead's: After Hours

The Blinding Life of Television...Exposed!

By Carl Halstead

If there ever was a man who is slowly ruining his eyesight, it's me!

At the age of 40 I will undoubtedly be blind as the proverbial bat, led by a seeing - eye - dog like 'Lassie,' whistling 'Bonanza' and answering only to the name of Paladin.

I will be an Einstein on divorce courts and probably will immediately challenge anyone to a duel that has one bad word to say about 'Beverly Hillbillies.'

I will die swearing horses can talk, know there are 21 great tobaccos in a package of cigarets and that it takes at least four years to drive one heard of cattle to market.

This my friends, is television. A magnificent multitude of multiplicity that is slowly replacing movies, dancing, poker games, bowling and even wives. We are slipping into the hypnotic trance each night as we sit and feast our hungry eyes on this monster.

Probably of all the commercials on TV, one product that is seldom mentioned will be the most sought after in later years. That, of course, is glasses. (For the eyes, that is)

Mr. and Mrs. America, awake! This is your life.

On Monday you learn the art of riding across the 'Dakotas' getting in and out of good old western trouble; straddle a bucking bronc with 'Stoney Burke' and then try to snarl indifferently during a skull operation like 'Ben Casey.'

On Tuesday you get a taste of 'Combat' from an easy chair. Then your eyes are treated to beautiful Hawaii followed by Eliot Ness and his tommy gunners.

On Wednesday, 'Wagon Train' is still driving west toward California; 'Going My Way' comes your way; a couple of idiotic skydivers jump out of an airplane and shake hands like they never met each other before: all this prior to opening their chutes, and finally, Adam Flint and other New York TV cops chase helpless people all over the 'Naked City.'

On Thursday you can watch 'Perry Mason' tear em' up in court and later on see a poor father try to handle his three sons.

Friday brings you back onto a horse as you follow herds of cattle up and down hills for an hour of 'Rawhide' thrills. After that you can relax in a speeding Corvette and ride across the country with two guys with no visible means of support.

On Saturday you can spend the afternoon watching some sporting activity. That evening the 'Defenders' defend and Chester and Doc argue while Matt chases some killer, leaving Kitty to fret and tend bar. Then comes Sunday.

Here you can enjoy another afternoon of sports or 'Meet the Presses.' You can watch a cartoon about spaceship life in the future; someone talk to a horse; a variety show or else some famous movie of yesteryear. Then if you still have the power of endurance you can stay up late and watch another move.

The week is over. There may be specials now and then, but the routine will be the same. You think you will 'kick' the habit, but you find out it isn't as easy as you thought. No matter how hard you try, you wind up back in front of that glaring bundle of eye-strain. You will half-cringe when the villain sneaks up on your hero with a knife and daydream that you are top star, no matter if he is a cowboy, detective, crooner, wagonmaster, lawyer, dog, horse, ocean or what-have-you.

You growl at commercials and go into mild tantrums at station interferences. And, just think; some time in the future we may be using an entire wall in our homes as large TV screens. But come what may, this is the wonderful world of electronics and there is nothing we can do about it.

In the dictionary, television is defined as: "Vision at a distance." Yet when you examine the meaning of vision you find this description: "That which is seen other than by ordinary sight, an imaginary, supernatural, or prophetic sight held in sleep or ecstasy; direct awareness of the supernatural, usually in visible form." (At least, his is one version)

That's it for now. Got to hurry! Don't want to miss The Big Picture.

Two Win Maintenance Awards at Supply, Trans.

Proper maintenance of vehicles leads Company B of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion to strive for perfection by initiating a winning duo for the month of May.

Each month a spot check inspection team (Roadside), organized by division G-4 and the 702nd Maintenance Battalion, pick five vehicles at random for inspection. The team then goes over the vehicles thoroughly checking each maintenance - listed item for each vehicle. The one with the lowest score in deficiencies and the best percentile rating becomes the winner.

The inspection system has developed a contest among the many drivers assigned to the company and thus leads them to put forth that little 'extra' toward taking top honors. In so doing, the maintenance of the vehicles has soared toward peak efficiency.

In chosing last month's winners the inspecting team ran into difficulties. Two vehicles came through with the exact rating. A judgement between the two was impossible as both were point for point alike. A tie was declared leaving two winners.

Vehicle number B-18, a 2½-ton truck from the 1st platoon, assigned to driver PFC William Wolfe, and B-103, a 1200-gallon tanker, 2½-ton truck, assigned to Spt Earlie L. Lewis of the 4th platoon, won the inspection honors for May.

9th Inf. Bn. Aims at ATT

By 9th Infantry PIO

The 2nd Division's 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry went to the field Monday in preparation for a week of Army Training Tests designed to gauge their readiness for Rotaplan rotation to Europe in July.

Departing their garrison area at dawn, the "Manchu" soldiers, set up their command post approximately ten miles from their Sand Hill barracks, near Fort Benning's Goodblood Range.

During the week special emphasis was placed on company defense and attack exercises, delay and passage of lines, battalion defense tactics, and mass "casualty" evacuations.

The unit commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson recently stepped up their training program to weekly four-day field exercises in preparation for their move to Europe.

Headquarters' Jones To Train at Gordon

By George Ashin

A former military policeman who served on honor guards honoring such famous dignitaries as Great Britain's Queen Elizabeth, Egypt's ex-King Farouk and General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, will be leaving shortly for the Criminal Investigation Division Course at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Sgt. William T. Jones first came to the 2nd Infantry Division in August 1959 and was assigned to the division's 2nd Military Police Detachment (now the 2nd Military Police Company). In October of that year, he was temporarily for the position of being former division commanding general Brig. Gen. William M. Hargwick's chauffeur. He received the job and drove for Gen. Hardick, his successor, Maj. Gen. Charles H. Chase and the present division commanding general, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea.

Sgt. Jones entered the Army in October 1956 in his hometown of Jacksonville, Fla. From Jacksonville, he was sent to Fort Rucker, Ala., where he received his basic infantry and military police training. Upon completion of basic training, Sgt. Jones was sent to Camp Atterbury, Ind., for advanced military police training.

His first duty assignment found him heading for the 175th Military Police Battalion, Seventh U. S. Army, in Europe. From Europe, he returned to the U. S. where he was assigned to the Military Police Detachment, Governor's Island, N. Y. It was while there in 1957 that Sgt. Jones was reviewed by Queen Elizabeth, ex-King Farouk and Gen. MacArthur. In addition to serving as honor guards for visiting dignitaries, Sgt. Jones was regularly assigned as the detachment's operations sergeant and also worked with the Provost Marshal investigation section.

In June 1958, he again went overseas, this time to Korea. Serving as Military Police Supervisor for Company C, 728th Military Battalion, he remained here until his assignment to the 2nd Division.

Be Safety Conscious; Avoid Injuries

Sports Safety Rules Easy to Learn

Sports for the serviceman present a dilemma for commanding officers.

In the first instance, sports are desirable. The conditioning from practice and actual play, the similarity between sports and combat functions and the recreational benefits are all desirables. On the other hand, and especially in priority fighting divisions, the loss of manpower due to sports injuries is something which must continually be guarded against.

If sports are to be promoted but injuries kept at an unavoidable minimum, the keynote of any program, and this is straight from the horses mouth the horse in this case being TM 21-22S, "The Army Sports Program," the keynote of any program must be "safety in athletics."

Precautions

The division sports officer (special services officer) has a list from A to N in the training manual of safety precautions. As the officer with foremost responsibility for promoting safety in sports, he must insure that "practice fields are in proper condition" and that "playing surfaces are level, smooth and free from all extraneous objects." There must be sufficient space around fields and courts; floors should be resilient and smooth.

INDIANHEAD SPORT NEWS

Further, projections from walls must be held to a minimum or screened, and showers and locker rooms disciplined to caution horseplay which could otherwise result in injury.

Swimming pools must be properly marked, lighted and supervised; maintenance should be daily and an inspection routine developed. Personal equipment is necessary for all sports participants. Competent officiating in compliance with standard rules is basic. Overcrowding of the schedule can be avoided by systematic scheduling.

Sound procedures for the selection and conditioning of players must accompany a safety conscious attitude on the part of coaches.

Beyond this, the Army prescribes other fundamental policies for insuring the utmost safety precautions. Hand in hand with the sports officer should work the medical officer and safety officer.

It is the medical officer's task to see to it that competing personnel are physically fit. Participants should be examined before the season and during the season. On-the-spot medical attention at all practices and games can be assured by assigning medical personnel to attendance. Soldiers unfit for rough, body contact sport should not be allowed to participate.

Duties Overlap

The safety officer's duties in part overlap those of the sports officer. The safety officer should check that portable bleachers are erected properly and are in usable condition. Indoor facilities should not be overcrowded and, again, projections from walls must be effectively screened, this along with proper ventilation and lighting. Bleacher capacity must not be overtaxed.

In general, athletes as well as those officers in charge of the sports program and safety of participants must work together to present ideal playing conditions.

While it is imperative for all participants to be in good physical condition, the amount and type of physical conditioning is determined by the sport. It would be unrealistic to expect a tennis player to achieve the level of conditioning of a football player—but desirable. It is not required for tennis or is it a result of participation in that sport.

Top physical conditioning is required for football, basketball, baseball, track, soccer and other field sports where vigorous running and rough contact is encountered. A system of progressive training activity instituted wisely by the coach will put the players in sound condition.

Good protective equipment is a necessity, of course, to all who indulge in potentially hazardous sports. This equipment should be distributed at all echelons of a command, not restricted to the higher levels such as the post or division team. Susceptibility of injury is not regulated by level of play. It is essential that participants be supplied with good, well-fitting, clean equipment.

Writer Chronicles Years as 'Fast Eddie'

By Carl Halstead

The skill and precision of pocket billiards has long been one of man's favorite sports.

"Pool," as it is more commonly called, is an ageless game. There are no physical limitations to this game.

There have been professionals with missing limbs, wearing glasses, and of various heights and weights. Some have been— college graduate and others with only 4th or 5th grade educations. But all have had the mysterious talent of mastering one of the most exacting sports of all times.

Pool requires rapid mathematical estimates and steady nerves. Judgment and movement must be monumentally accurate. Men like Willie Masconi and Irving Crane possess such talent.

At night a man can enter most any dayroom on Post and see the local "Fast Eddies" in action. The game has a sort of magnetic force to it that causes each beginner to strive for perfection.

Seeing a "pro" play is one of the most exciting shows anywhere. Watching the uncanny skill and, at times, the unbelievable shots that the professional masters leave a person who knows anything about the game, breathless.

All in all the game is educational. It helps to develop wiht inthe players a sense of judgement, good memory, quick decisions and a competitive spirit of fair play and desire to learn. There is no such thing as "luck" in tournament pool.

I first started playing pocket billiards around twenty years ago.

In my home town, in those days, there were few recreational activities — no drive-in movies, few dances and even less things to do with spare time.

By the time I was 18 years old I found myself one of the best shots in town. This, of course, led to many challenges which only helped me to become even better. Competition is a great teacher.

Once or twice a year a "traveller," better known today as a hustler, would come to town for an exhibition. Though I could in no way compare to them, I found myself having to compete as the town's representative.

During my early years I won many local contests and one college championship. Yet, I never became what I would consider really good. It is bad policy for a young man to feel himself unbeatable. All it takes is one good view of a real "shark" and suddenly he ego dwindles.

After entering the Army I continued to play for a few years winning local command championships. Then quite suddenly, and unexplainably, I tired of the game and quit.

I didn't so much as pick up my stick for better than ten years. I forgot the game completely.

Then one day in 1960 I began to play again. I found I could still remember all I had ever known and my eye seemed good, but I found my judgement and positioning, or "shape pool" as it is called, was way off. I began playing as much as ten hours a day for almost a year trying to get back into shape. In 1961 it paid off as I won the 14-1 championship at Fort Leavenworth. I spent the next year in teaching the game to interested soldiers who had developed a skill of making shots, but who needed to learn the transition into handling the cue-ball for position.

For the past year I haven't played more than five or six games. My stick lies in its case in the trunk of my car and gathers dust. I no longer feel the drive and desire to play that had dominated me for so many years. But, I shall never be sorry I spent so much time with this sport, because it has been an educational experience and helped build and form my love for sports of all kinds.

I have run as high as 73 balls and around 60 many times. This is a far cry from the record 526 of Willie Masconi, the world's greatest pocket billiard champion, yet average for a good amateur.

I feel that if any young man wants to become skilled at the game, short of trying for professionalism, he should be able to do an inning, 125 points, with no less than five shots. After all, a "pro" can do it with one.

Arty. Shells Rivals In Division Softball

Division Artillery teams bombed opposing pitchers earlier this week as the division softball tournament swung into high gear.

The 17th Artillery steamrolled over the 2nd Engineer Battalion Monday night to the tune of 10-0. The 2nd Battalion, 22rd Infantry eked out a 4-3 win over the 72nd Armor team. A game between the 12th Artillery and the 122nd Signal Battalion was cancelled.

Tuesday night, the 15th Artillery rocketed to a 12-3 victory over the Supply and Transport Battalion at Kelley Hill, while the 12th Artillery downed the 38th Artillery 8-1 in the second game of a doubleheader at Sand Hill. In the first game of that doubleheader, the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry defeated the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry 6-3.

There were no games scheduled Wednesday night. Last night, the 1st Medium Tank Battalion, 72nd Armor was scheduled to take on the 7th Cavalry in the first game of a doubleheader at Sand Hill. In the second game, the 2nd Aviation Battalion was pitted against the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry. At Kelley Hill, it was the 122nd Signal Battalion versus the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry.

There are three games on tap for Monday. The 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry and the 7th Cavalry battle at Sand Hill with the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry meeting the 702nd Maintenance Battalion in the second game. At Kelley Hill, the 17th Artillery faces the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Horses Remain Popular Despite 'Age of the Auto'

Since Henry Ford and mass production of automobiles came to America around the turn of the century, "Old Dobbin" has had a respite from her traditional mission of supplying the bulk of transportation for travellers.

But she is still in demand. In the great West horses are used where vehicles are impractical. They still carry cowboys who roam the ranges. They still pull the plows in isolated areas, and they still haul "Grub stakes" or supplies for adventurers.

In the East, riding stables and Hunt Clubs are abounding, changing the horses' mission from work to play or showmanship. At Fort Benning a special club is sponsored for the youngsters.

The Junior Hunt Club, composed of horsemen from 9 to 18 years old, was organized and sponsored as a subsidiary of the Fort Benning Hunt Club in the early summer of 1962. Numbering some 60 members, their activities include beginners riding instruction, overnight ride-outs, social activities for the group and competing in show events in Georgia and Alabama.

The display of ribbons and trophies and the types of shows entered, attests to the achievements of this group after a year or less of horsemanship training.

Junior horsemen of this group have competed in English and Western riding events at Midland Fox Hound Stables, Midland, Ga.; Shamrock Stables, Columbus; Claymore Plantation Stables, Phenix City; Quota Club, Columbus; Future Farmers of America, Ecclectic, Ala.; and local events sponsored by The Hunt Club.

The sponsoring element of this activity is the Junior Hunt Club and the Horsemanship Committee of The Hunt Club. Lt. Col. L. H. Guernsey is president of the Board of Governors and Chaplain (Capt.) J. M. Reaves is chairman of the committee. Members of the committee are Mrs. P. L. Franklin, Mrs Guernsey, Mrs. W. R. Lynch, Mrs M. Watkins, Mrs. P. Kutchinski and Mrs. R. L. Gabardy.

TIC Sergeant Hit Line Double In First Major League 'At Bat'

By PFC Dave Braus

Twenty-four years ago, Jack Bolling arrived at Philadelphia's Northeast Airport from Atlanta, and a few hours later made a story - book major league baseball debut by cracking a game-winning double in the ninth inning.

The two-bagger, a line-drive shot, enabled the Phillies to nail the second place St. Louis Cardinals for the third consecutive time and brought the young Bolling acclaim as one of a bevy of blossoming newcomers crashing the lineups all over the National League.

Now assigned to Company C, 1st Battalion, of The Infantry Center Troop Command, SFC Bolling handles the daily duties of Manpower Sergeant in the Personnel Section at The Infantry Center.

Bolling was born in Mobile, Ala., on Feb. 20, 1917, and was graduated from Spring Hill High School in 1935. At the age of 15 he starred for an American Legion baseball team that reached the National semi-finals.

He attended a business school in his hometown for six months, but his education was interrupted when the DeLand, Fla., Class D farm club of the Cincinnati Reds plucked out the blond lefthander as a starting outfielder.

Batting from the port side, the speedy Bolling drubbed opposing pitchers at a .325 average his first season, good enough for a second place finish in the Florida State League final statistics.

Off he went to Macon Ga. of the Sally League in 1937 where as a leadoff man he gave opposing pitchers fits, topping the league in batting with a hefty .343 average and adding to his laurels the title of having hit the most triples.

"I played under Milton Stock at Macon," Bolling recalls. "Milton was a third baseman for the prewar Phils and later with the Cards of the early 30's."

Stock, like Bolling, is from Mobile and got his first look at Bolling when he was attending Spring Hill High School.

In 1938 Jack became the property of the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association. There he played under Manager Paul Richards, later a Chicago White Sox mentor.

Bolling promptly resounded by the move to the Georgia capital by batting .319 as the Cracker firstbaseman and leading them to the Southern Association pennant.

When the Phillies bought Bolling in the summer of 1939 and installed him as their starting firstbaseman, the ballclub began having visions of another pennant winning team like the one of 1915.

During his first 25 games of major league baseball, he hit .312, batting safely in 19 of the contests, and getting enough recognition to be nominated as rookie-of-the-year had he came to the team at the start of the season and not at the halfway mark.

Called the "rabbit" by his fellow players because of his speed on the basepaths and his quickness around the first base bag with the glove, Bolling was sold to the Cardinals in 1941.

Not long after he came to the Redbird organization, he was shipped down to the Columbus, Ohio, ballclub and eventually made his way to Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League.

Back in the Southern Association with New Orleans in 1942 and 1943, he finally got the call from the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1944.

Leo "the Lip" Droucher was managing the Flatbush crew at the time and it didn't take Bolling long to show the colorful manager what he could do with the bat.

His 1944 batting average was around .320, high enough to place him on top of the list in the National League, but his 320 times at bat fell short of the required total of 400 needed to become eligible for the crown.

Bolling recalls some formidable hitters around the league that year. "Fellows like Carl Medwick, Mel Ott, Ernie Lombardi, Paul Waner, Pepper Martin, Bobby Bragan and Eddie Stanky were enough to scare any pitcher," he said.

Bolling was drafted in to the U. S. Army in December of 1944, and after receiving his early training in a Mechanized Cavalry Division at Fort Riley, Kan., he was sent to Manila in the South Pacific where he remained until his discharge in 1946.

Returning to Mobile following his Army tour, he resumed his baseball career as a part-time player and businessman, finally retiring completely from baseball in 1947 to devote his full time to business.

Called back into the Army during the Korean conflict in 1951, he was sent to the Panama Canal in 1952 where he remained until 1955.

SFC JACK BOLLING
As a Brooklyn Dodger Slugger

Bolling made his first appearance at Fort Benning in 1955, leaving the post the next year for an assignment at Gordon Military College in Bainesville, Ga. After three years at the military school, he was again assigned to Korea before returning to Fort Benning in 1960.

Looking back on his baseball career Bolling remembers one of his biggest thrills.

"I belted a line drive against the rightfield screen at Brooklyn's Ebbetts Field one night off Bucky Waltes," he said. "It was the winning hit and I felt pretty good about it since Walters was a byword with major league pitchers when he hurled for Cincinnati.

Bolling is now married to the former Margaret C. Combel of Mobile and they have four children; Jacquelyn, 23, John, Jr., George 18, and Gregory, 7.

Although Bolling says that his baseball participation consists of watching the game-of-the-week on television each weekend, he has two nephews who are very much a part of major league baseball today.

Frank Bolling is one of the National League's best secondsackers for the Milwaukee Braves. For the past two seasons he has been named to the N. L. All-Star team.

Milt Bolling, a former Detroit Tiger, is now serving as a junior executive for the Boston Red Sox organization in the American League.

With his young son, Gregory, now only seven already showing signs of promise, there may be another Bolling on the diamond soon.

Check Your NSLI Policy Waiver Status

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Married servicemen, whose National Service Life Insurance premiums are still under an in-service waiver, would do well to check what effect these waivers have on survivors benefits, the Veterans Administration warned recently.

Although in-service waivers of premiums have not been granted since Jan. 1, 1947, there are still many servicemen whose waivers are continuing and these men may be losing protection for their dependents by not cancelling the waivers.

The Veterans Survivors Act which cut out new waivers in 1957, established a system of compensation for death due to service called dependency and indemnity compensation. These are much more generous than those death compensation rates previously in effect. However, survivors of a serviceman whose insurance is under an in-service waiver of premiums.

For the most part, servicemen with families can provide better protection for those families the DIC rates are not paid to lies by cancelling their waiver and resuming payment of the premiums. However, those witness dependents, generally, would not gain by such action.

The VA advises each serviceman to consult with his personnel or finance officer before deciding to continue or discontinue such waivers.

Dental Test Is Studied

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army Dental Corps will begin a pilot study this summer at five Army Training Centers in the United States to test the effectiveness of a new method of screening Army recruits for possible cancer of the mouth.

Known as exfoliative cytology, the new method requires small samplings of surface cells from questionable areas in the mouths of recruits at their first Army dental examination.

The samples obtained will be sent to the Army Institute of Dental Research in Washington, where they will be examined by experts in the field of oral cancer.

This is the first study of this type and is part of a campaign of preventive dentistry launched by Maj. Gen. Joseph L. Bernier, chief of the Army Dental Corps, as a means of improving the dental health of Army personnel and their families.

The training centers participating in this study are Fort Polk, La.; Fort Ord, Calif.; Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Jackson, S. C., and Fort Dix, N.J.

Housewife's Idea Fills GI Bellies

YAKIMA PROVING CENTER, Wash. (AFPS)— The largest joint Army-Air Force maneuver ever held west of the Rockies, Exercise Coulee Crest set off one of the largest baking sprees ever held anywhere.

Operation Sugar Cookie started when Mrs. Geneva Newell of Pasco, Wash., witnessed a convoy of 5th Infantry Division troops passing from Pasco to Fort Carson, Colo. Mrs. Newell was determined "... to do something for those kids."

Her determination resulted in women in the towns and communities of the tri-cities area (Pasco, Kennewick and Richland, Wash.) pouring their hearts into making Operation Sugar Cookie a success.

Even men, boys and girls pitched in to help the mothers bake 2,150 cakes and 4,487 dozen cookies.

On Saturday, May 11th, the "goodies" were airlifted from the Pasco Airport to Ellensburg, the headquarters for Joint Task Force Blue.

Mother's Day 1963 was much happier for those participating in the operation since they knew that 40,000 men away from home were enjoying the fruits of their baking.

Your Dental Health

Facts Not Fallacies End Your Dental Problems

By Capt. Robert A. Cress

One of the great scholars of the first century, AD, wrote that eating a mouse twice a month prevented decay.

Other easily recognized fallacies are; Kissing a donkey stops toothache; dental disease is caused by worms in the teeth, and if a child is born with teeth, he is a supernatural being and should be either destroyed or honored as a god.

There are many modern fallacies which some people believe which are also untrue, several of which are potentially dangerous.

Fallacy: Placing an aspirin in the cavity will stop a toothache.

Fact: Aspirin should be swallowed, as placing it in the cavity is like placing the aspirin for a headache on your head. Actually, putting the aspirin in a tooth is dangerous as the aspirin is an acid and often causes severe burns of the tissue near the tooth.

Fallacy: Each child means a loss of a tooth from the mother.

Fact: False, again. If normal intervals of visits to the dentist are followed, decay rate will seldom vary during pregnancy.

Fallacy: No dental work should be attempted during pregnancy.

Fact: This idea may result in the loss of a tooth per child; as decay progresses during pregnancy as well as at other times, and the delay of treatment can be dangerous.

Fallacy: Dentures are the end of dental spending; therefore, by getting them you end your dental troubles.

Fact: Few people are completely happy with dentures. Many are sorry they ever made the choice. If you have a choice between dentures and your own teeth, remember this: eight or nine of your own teeth equal the eating efficiency of complete dentures. Dentures will not last a lifetime, and after getting your dentures it is too late to decide you would prefer your own teeth.

Flex-Wing Glider Aids Cargo Drop

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army has successfully tested a new concept in aerial mobility which will deliver large quantities of supplies into areas of limited space.

By using a precision drop glider, priority cargo such as ammunition, food and medicine can be delivered by an aircraft without actually flying over a drop zone.

Using the flexible wing concept, the glider is folded into a compact package similar to a parachute pack and attached to a cargo container. As the container is ejected, a static line attached to the aircraft begins a sequence of operations to deploy the glider, which carries a cargo container to earth.

WAGON WHEELS

The wagon which stands in front of Support Command Headquarters, 2nd Division, is a United States Army wagon (4-wheeled, cargo, Studebaker Model 1917, serial number US 233), and is a constant reminder of the superior support rendered by Support Command (previously Division Trains) units in the past. It will remain as a symbol of the unity, ability, and determination to remain "Second to None."

806th Aids Air Assault

The 11th Air Assault Division is providing most of the workload for Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion.

Second Lt. Douglas K. Heere and his earthmoving platoon are mainly concerned with the task of building a heliport in the old hospital area. After clearing the trees away, the bulldozers moved into the next time-consuming aspect of the job, laying the pierced steel planking for the helicopter pads. The planking used on the project was removed from Robins Air Force Base earlier this year.

Assisting on the job are Company D of the same battalion and a squad from the 127th Engineer Battalion, a member of the 11th Division.

Thirty-six pads will be laid in all, along with a motor pool, including grease and wash racks.

Meanwhile, the construction platoons of Company B are busy rehabilitating several buildings in the 4500 block which are to be used by Quartermaster personnel attached to the 11th.

INSTRUCTION IN RAPPELLING . . . Sp4 Jimmie G. Parker (L) listens to 1st Lt. Roy E. Ussery, who is instructing students in the art of rappelling. Sp4 William S. DeCory (C) awaits his turn to rappel from the 35-foot tower which is the training setting used to train members of the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, in the techniques of rappelling. Sp4 DeCory is from Company A, Sp4 Parker from Company C, and Lt. Ussery, who is in charge of the school, from Company C. (Photo by Sgt. Johnson)

RELAXED GATOR . . . Capt. Harry N. Ball, commanding officer of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division, demonstrates the proper technique in handling an eight-foot alligator. Capt. Ball an expert snake and reptile handler, caught the gator while his company was training at Fort Stewart. He used it as a training aid in teaching ranger techniques to his men. Latest word is that the men have adopted "Big Chief" as company mascot.

Army Sets Peace-Time Savings Bond Record

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of the Army has announced that the Army-wide participation in the U.S. Savings Bond Program reached a new peace-time high as of March 31, 1963.

Army military personnel participation stands at 61 percent, and Army civilian personnel at 57 per cent.

On Jan. 31, 1963, the Seventh Army in Europe achieved 80.1 percent participation in the Savings Bond Program. This is the highest participation rate achieved by an Army command of this size.

In recognition of this outstanding accomplishment, the Treasury Department made an exception to established policy and awarded a special Minuteman Flag to the Seventh Army. The Honorable Cyrus R. Vance, Secretary of the Army, presented the Minuteman Flag to Lt. Gen. Hugh P. Harris, Seventh Army commander, during his recent visit to that command.

The 1st Armored Division "(Old Ironsides"), Fort Hood, Tex., achieved 93.4 percent participation in the Savings Bond Program to April 30, 1963, thereby qualifying for the Treasury Department's Minuteman Flag, the highest award presented for participation in this program. Gen. Earl E. Wheeler, chief of staff, United States Army, presented the Minuteman Flag to Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Haines, commander, 1st Armored Division, on May 4, 1963.

Three Army commands in the United States achieved outstanding increases in participation during the quarter ending Mar. 31, 1964. The Army Air Defense Command participation increased from 60 percent to 74 percent; the Fourth Army participation increased from 46 percent to 52 percent; and the Fifth Army participation increased form 46 per cent to 52 percent.

Beauty Contest to Highlight 'Festival Days'

"Festival Days," scheduled in Columbus June 21-30, has been described as "10 days the likes of which this town has never seen."

Activities planned include everything from Yuchi Indian ceremonies to a modern-day pops concert under the stars. The program has been designed to entertain residents as well as visitors and to inform everyone taking part of the tradition and heritage that belongs to the Chattahoochee Valley area.

Perhaps the most crowd-pleasing event will be the annual Miss Georgia Pageant slated for the City Auditorium June 26-29.

The local Junior Chamber of Commerce are sponsors of the pageant, and have been for the past 18 years.

"We've grown from a one-night stand to a four-day production," said C. James Robinson, Jaycee president. "And win or lose, our contestants tell us that it is a memorable and delightful time for them, their family and their friends. Why, they establish friendships here that last a lifetime."

Out of the local pageant has come one Miss America and a runner-up for the coveted title of queen of beauty. Neva Jane Langley was Miss America for 1958, and Judy Sheffield was runner-up in 1958 to Marilyn Van Derbur of Colorado.

"Each year, our contestants are more and more beautiful," said Robinson. "As they've grown more lovely, they've also grown in number. There were 11 contestants in the first pageant and 45 in the last."

The pageant will run four nights in the 5,000 seat auditorium, that has recently been air-conditioned. The beauty contestants make their formal bow to the public on opening night. The following days and nights are filled with activity similar to what the winner must go through later in Atlantic City at the Miss America Pageant.

Bathing Beauties

The girls present their beauty in bathing suits and formal evening gowns, then display their talents. The judges look for beauty, charm, poise, personality and graceful carriage. Then they observe the talent, ranging from opera to pop, from song to dance, from archery to acrobatics.

The winners are awarded scholarships by the Georgia Pepsi-Cola Bottler Scholarship Foundation.

On hand this year for the parade of beauty will be Carl Sanders, governor of Georgia, and state Jaycee President Jim Shelnutt.

Designed to tie the past, present and future of Columbus and its area into a package of pleasure, Festival Days events are part of the overall "Stay and See Georgia" program sponsored by the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce.

NG and Reserve Units to Train 1st Time Under ROAD Concept

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Continental Army Command has long had the awesome responsibility for training soldiers to be ready for any kind of war — be it an all-out conflict with thermo-nuclear firepower or a brush fire war in Korea, Viet Nam, Laos or elsewhere.

CONARC begins summer field training of the Army's National Guard and Reserve forces confident it can do either, or both, better than ever before.

This weekend, motorists throughout the United States will begin encountering convoys headed with troops. And for the subsequent three and a half months ANACDUTRA (Annual Active Duty Training) is going to involve some 550,000 citizen soldiers, plus another 64,000 individual reinforcements for high priority units.

All Reserve component divisions will train for the first time under the Army's new ROAD concept, since a reorganization of the combat divisions which began last December was accepted as complete on May first. It took five months and finished slightly ahead of schedule.

The reorganization of the Army and its Reserve components produced four types of divisions — infantry, armor, airborne, and a new one, mechanized.

What makes ROAD better?

Best answer lies in three words — mobility, flexibility and specialization. ROAD divisions are not stationary by nature, not rigidly fixed in structure, and are not limited to a single type of war.

Their mobility will match the environment. Divisions sent to highly developed Europe will be heavily armored and mechanized. Those going to the Far East, where the Army's ability to move, shoot and communicate is frequently frustrated by lack of sophisticated communications and transportations systems, will feature more infantry, less armor.

Divisions will have better internal flexibility, enabling faster, smoother transition to specific situations. The command and control structure has been modified and is more efficient.

Better Balance

And a very important result is ROAD's attainment of a better balance between nuclear and non-nuclear firepower. A direct result of bitter lessons learned in Korea, Vietnam, Laos and Cuba was the forceful bringing home to the American public the fact that not all wars, now or future, will necessarily be nuclear; not all will be large-scale.

The enemy, if convinced he can't take an objective all at once, will try to take it a piece at the time. Under its new organization, the Army is better equipped to counteract this piecemeal advance of the enemy.

Fortunately for the average Guardsman and Reservist, the reorganization was such that he will experience little or no difficulty when he arrives for his summer encampment. He may not even notice the change. For instance, if he was a rifleman in an infantry company before and is still a rifleman, his basic job will be the same.

Some will experience complete changes, may even learn brand new specialties, as the Army's increased mechanization takes effect and newer, better weapons are added to the arsenal.

GIFT FROM TAIWAN . . . Lt. Col. Wang Yi-Yung (R) of Taiwan, an Allied student from the Republic of China who graduated May 21 from an Infantry officer career course here, translates the inscription on a personal banner which he presents to Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commandant of The Infantry School. It reads, "To the U.S. Army Infantry School at Fort Benning: I have received profitable training and had an enjoyable stay here. Presented by Lt. Col. Wang Yi-Yung, Army of the Republic of China." The symbol at the top of the banner is that of the Chinese Army, representing the blue sky, the sun, agriculture and crossed rifles. The banner, made in Taiwan, is deep red velvet with gold band and fringe. Col. Wang has departed the post for his homeland.

Project Trim To Cut Defense Budget

FORT MONROE, Va. — The Army calls it "Cost Reduction Program." CONARC tagged it with the code name "Project Trim," but whatever it's called the meaning is clear —economize.

"With a record defense budget in the wake of pay raises for both military and civilian work forces, it was inevitable that we would be saddled with economy movements and other controls over our spending," Maj. Gen. Richard D. Meyer told a gathering of commandants of the Army Schools System at Fort Monroe recently. Gen. Meyer is deputy chief of staff for Logistics at Continental Army Command Headquarters.

He emphasized the Army's need for a general belt-tightening program extending from CONARC Headquarters right down to the smallest installation within the command, and he named specific areas in which commanders could begin.

Gen. Meyer suggested that military vehicles supporting installations be reduced; that seldom - used engineer repair and utility equipment be turned in and that installation commanders take a close look at the advisability of establishing and developing equipment pools to reduce overhead costs.

Going further, he told them to rent, rather than own, seldom-used equipment; to report as excess aircraft flown less than the programmed hours, and that commanders question subordinate requirements for equipment deadlined for more than six months (out of commission for repairs or spare parts). As one CONARC supply officer aptly stated the latter: "It means either fix it and use it or give it back so somebody else can."

Meyer pointed out that significant amounts can often be saved through consolidation and pooling resources. This procedure frequently eliminates excess facilities and duplication of effort.

He reduced the overall concept of "Project Trim" into three simple guide line rules: (1) Buy only what's needed (2) Buy at the lowest sound price (3) Reduce operating costs.

"Since the really large expenditures for equipment and supplies are usually made at levels higher than CONARC," said Meyer, "it is the area of reducing operating costs that we have the greatest opportunity to contribute."

To illustrate the savings potential available within the Continental Army Command, General Meyer disclosed that operation and maintenance expenditures use up approximately half of the 1.1 billion dollars in CONARC's budget, and that 56,000 of the 83,000 civilian employees (67 per cent) work in this field.

He added that "economy moves involve continuing pressure from Congress, Department of Defense and the Department of the Army to impose more and more control over what we do with our Army resources.

"And as deputy chief of staff for Logistics I am very much concerned with these controls, since the bulk of money (involved) falls into the logistics area."

Underground Radio Waves Under Study

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Scientists are studying a communication system that would link underground command posts and missile sites by means of radio waves traveling through the rocks of the earth's crust.

When perfected the system would be harder to jam than ordinary radio communication via the atmosphere and would be almost impossible to tap by hostile kibitzers.

The system would maintain tamper-proof contact not only among buried missile bases but also, in times of national emergency, between military and governmental control centers dug deep under mountains or installed in natural caverns.

In the case of underground radio communication, the transmitting antennas are buried in rock a mile or more down. With an electrically conductive overburden, a fairly thin skin of soil and gravel covers the crystal rock.

Radio signals from the buried antenna would travel along the insulating rock without escaping into the air.

How well the system would work depends upon the geology of the regions involved but in a suitably insulating rock, communication could be maintained half way around the world.

Dear Daves-Hutton Co.:

What is the difference between an authorized Dodge dealer and an automobile used car lot or discount house that claims to sell you new Dodges at cut rate prices?

Signed
BEWILDERED

Answer

Dear Bewildered:

If you are bewildered now, you will be even more so trying to figure out a so-called discount "deal". There are lots of gimmicks those operators use — and they all add up to your paying lots more in the long run. Because, you see, that dealer had to buy that new Dodge from a direct Factory Authorized Dodge Dealer who also made a profit on it. So, usually, if you buy a new car from a "Discounter" or used car lot, you are paying not one, but two profits. AND MAYBE NO WARRANTY!

Army's WW II History Is Told in New Volume

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The latest Pacific volume in the Army's massive history of World War II was released recently on the anniversary of the spectacular Tokyo raid that struck at the heart of the Japanese homeland twenty - one years ago.

The new book, "Strategy and Command: The First Two Years," was written by Dr. Louis Morton, former staff member of the office of the chief of Military History and now Professor of History at Dartmouth College. Doctor Morton is also author of an earlier book in the same series, "The Fall of the Philippines."

Unlike other volumes in the Pacific sub-series which have concentrated on battle operations, the Army's latest publication dwells on the complex endeavors that precede and determine the shape of battle. Its readers become privy to the crucial backstage maneuvering, both Allied and Japanese, and to the discussions and debates on planning and strategy that culminated in the electrifying events of two decades ago.

A feature of unusual interest to the lay reader as well as the military specialist and the scholar is the book's reproduction of a wealth of documents basic to the conduct of the war. The reader will also find 19 maps, more than 90 photographs, some 30 charts and tables and an index in the 761 pages of the new publication, which is for sale at $10.25 by the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

Third Army CG Given Honorary Degree Recently

CHESTER, Pa. — Lt. Gen. Albert Watson 2nd, commanding general of the Third Army, received an honorary degree from Pennsylvania Military College here during the college's 142 commencement last Sunday.

Gen. Watson, who was in command of U.S. forces in West Berlin during the crucial period of the construction of the Berlin Wall, received an honorary doctor of laws degree.

MTU Firers Dominate Rifle, Pistol Matches

By Spt Ron Claxton

Members of the Marksmanship Training Unit, besides having won 14 of 20 individual competitions already fired, have broken six records during the Army Rifle and Pistol championships being held here through Saturday.

Rifle record firing, which started last Friday, was kicked off in the slow fire category with the more than 450 shooters firing from the 200-yard line. Sgt. Willie D. Jordan of the MTU, team got the ball rolling when he posted a perfect 100 score with eight of his 20 shots landing in the V ring, the inner circle of the bulls-eye used to break ties.

Sgt. Benjamin W. Smith, firing for U. S. Army, Europe, took the runner-up title with a 100-5V score followed by Sgt. Arpail J. Gapol of the Third Army team with a 100-4V score.

The 200-yard rapid fire match proved not a good one for the MTU as Sgt. Deiter F. W. Newmann, firing for the U. S. Army, Pacific, posted a 100-14V score to take first honors.

The second position went to SFC James L. Tuck Third Army, for a 100-13V followed by SSgt. Walter R. Moody of the U. S. Army European team, with a 100-13V score.

The next shoot was the 300-yard fire event, which went to Capt. Frank T. Lohmann, MTU, who posted a 100-11V score for first honors.

His runner-up was Sp5 Marvin E. Arren firing with the U. S. Army, Europe team, with a 100-10V score followed very closely by Sgt. Neumann with the same score but losing out in tie-breaking procedures.

The last match of the day, the combined rapid fire tilt, saw the Sixth Army's MSgt. Ronald M. Barenaba, win with a 100-12V ahead of his runner-up SSgt. Norman L. Skarpness.

YAC Carnival to Provide Safe, Enjoyable July 4th

A lot of work and coordination among project officers and units concerned are going into the rides, concessions, fireworks and competitive events of the 1963 Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival.

Many opportunities, such as cable rides from junior jump towers, buddy seat rides from the 250-foot training towers, rides on ponies and a merry-go-round will be offered to the public when the festivities begin at 11 a.m. on July 4.

The carnival has a two-fold purpose in that it provides a large amount of the support of YAC's activities for the coming year and it gives military personnel a chance to participate in events on the post rather than battling the busy holiday traffic.

"The awards given to the outstanding soldiers in both military and non-military competition and the spirited commander's trophy presented to the outstanding unit are a point of distinction in the year," remarked Col. Adrian L. Hoebeke, commanding officer of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Col. Hoebeke, committee chairman, also added that YAC expressed full confidence in a fine turnout for the event as have been in the past six years.

The day of activities will officially begin at 6 a.m. when a host of military runners will compete in a cross-country run.

At 11 a.m. the fair grounds will open. In addition to many rides, carnival booths, such as fish ponds, dart throwing and nail driving, will be available.

Throughout the remainder of the day, various competitive events will take place. For the general public there will be golf chipping, softball throws, archery and football throws.

Food concession stands, offering cold drinks to the hot and thirsty and hamburgers and hot dogs to the hungry, will be scattered throughout the area. Vendors roving over the area will offer ice cream.

The competition among the major units on the post to decide the outstanding unit and individual soldier will also be going on all day, picking up from the early morning cross-country run to such tests as physical fitness, platoon drills, jeep driving and M-1 rifle and .45 caliber pistol shooting.

The day will be climaxed by the presentation of the awards on Gordon Field where also will be held a fireworks show.

The work required to present this carnival required a united effort on the part of the YAC officials, the various project officers and the personnel of many of the post's major commands.

Included on the carnival committee are Maj. Kenneth P. Achey, project officer, and Co. Curtis L. Hankins, the president of YAC.

Col. Hankins is the commanding officer of Lawson Army Aviation Command while Maj. Achey is assigned to The Infantry Center Troop Command headquarters.

U. S. Army, Pacific, by one point.

The Third Army's SSgt. Richard D. Rebidue took the third place position with a 100-10V score.

Rifle competition, like Friday, on Saturday was the only type competition fired. The MTU took the first two positions in the two matches fired.

Capt. Phillip F. Cannella grabbed the first place win in the combined slow fire match with a 150-14V score out of a possible 150-30V.

Following him was another MTU shooter, Calt. Lohmann, with a 150-13V score trailed by WO Chester A. Long, U. S. Army, Pacific, with a 149-13V score.

SSgt Leslie E. Wright of the MTU team copped the 600-yard slow fire title with a perfect 200 score and 28 of 40 V's.

Sgt. Noah I. Bailey, USA-MTU, took the second place position with a 199-27V followed by U. S. Army, Pacific, shooter, SSgt. William Carrion with a 199-26V.

Sunday was devoted solely to rest with the ranges closed.

Monday started things off again with SFC Euligio Dabin, wearing the colors of the U.S. Army, Pacific team, rallying a 249 score out of a possible 250, marking 24 of a possible 50 V's, for first place honors.

SFC Vernon D. Read, MTU, was second with a 248-22V score followed by Sgt. Jordan of MTU with a 248-19V.

The first record of the program fell during the off-hand aggregate championship as Sgt. Jordan of the MTU rolled up a 199-11V score out of a possible 200-40V to tack one point to the old record and distinguish himself as the Army's best standing position firer.

Sgt. John P. Kingeter of the Third Army team, whose score of 198-8V also exceeded the old record, had to take back seat by virtue of the V count.

The sugar and spice among the snakes and snails, WAC Sp5 Barbara Hile, Sixth Army, wrote herself a third place position with a 198-15V score.

The next match, the rapid fire championship, saw MTU firer, SSgt. Donald C. Tabor write the second record of the championships with a 400-36V score out of a possible 400-80V score. His score exceeded the old record by three tie-breaking V's.

MTU firer, MSgt Maxie W. Fields was second best with a 400-35V followed by U. S. Army, Europe's 1st Lt. Herbert N. Clark with a 400-26V.

The last match of the day saw a new shooter to all-Army competition, Sgt. William R. Stallings of the Third Army team take the first place honors with 396-57V score out of a possible 400-80V.

Third Army also took the place position as SFC Frank E. Jarecke shot a 396-49VV score. The show position went to SFC Robert G. Lancaster, MTU, for a 396-46V.

Pistol competition opened Monday with the .22 caliber trials taking up the whole day.

SSgt. James H. McNally, MTU, rolled up an 895 point score in the aggregate match distinguishing himself as the best Army .22 caliber pistol shooter in the world. His score was out of a possible 900 and tied the old record set in 1961 by SFC William B. Blankenship, MTU, but the old record held by virtue of the V count.

Among the four make - up matches of the aggregate one Match Course competition saw the third record in the competition go to Blankenship for a perfect 300 score with 19 X's, bettering the old record by one point and eight X's.

On Tuesday, the United States' pistol champion for the past three years, SFC Blankenship, rewrote the pistol record books three times in winning the center fire pistol crown.

Blankenship, a member of the Fort Benning based MTU, besides being the United States' champion, has also been the Army's most proficient handgunner for the past three years.

These three records brought his total of new marks for this all-Army program to four for ten matches fired.

Starting things off Tuesday, Blankenship blazed a 197-9X score out of a possible 200-20X score in the slow fire match, to take first place and add one point and four X's to the old record set by MSgt. Richard M. Stineman, USAMTU, in 1961.

The next match, the National Match Course, the story was the same, Blankenship tallied a 296-14X score out of a possible 300-30X to win his second match in a row and better Sgt. James L. Bratcher's record of 296-12X set in 1961.

The final posting to the record books came when the aggregate match a composite of the previous matches, was totaled. Blankenship had rolled up an 892-46X score out of a possible 900-90X, jacking up the old record up by five points and 10 X's.

With two of the three aggregates which make up the three gun grand aggregate behind him, Blankenship has only to fire an 880 score in the .45 caliber matches to break his own record set in 1960, of 2,650.

Matches unscored at press time are the two individual grand aggregate matches and the team matches.

Saturday will bring the closing and awards ceremony and Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, deputy commanding general CONARC (U. S. Continental Army Command), Fort Monroe, Va., as guest speaker to the more than 900 shooters and guests expected.

The ceremonies will be held at Theater 1 at 10 a.m.

CMRI

take place at 1 p.m. the same day.

The inspection was carried out by team number one of the Third Army Command Maintenance Readiness teams. By 3:15 the inspection was completed and the results were in.

Headquarters Battery has a total of 15 vehicles assigned and out of those 15 there was only two deficiencies. Out of 35 mounted radios, only one deficiency appeared.

Lt. Col. C. A. Busch was the inspection team chief.

Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, the commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, praised the men of Headquarters Battery for a superb job and congratulated Capt. Patrick for achieving the high standard of maintenance.

The 10th Artillery is a subordinate unit of the 197th Infantry Brigade and supplies all of the artillery fire support for The Infantry School.

CG's Infantry Birthday Message

I wish to extend best wishes and congratulations to all Infantrymen on their 188th Anniversary.

In fulfilling the fundamental mission of the Infantry to close with and destroy the enemy, the Infantryman has enabled us during two World Wars and Korea to protect our national heritage and insure peace in the world. Technical aspects of war will change, but the importance of the Infantryman who ultimately assures victory in combat will remain constant.

You can be extremely proud of your past accomplishments and I am sure you will exhibit the same outstanding characteristics in the future.

Flag Day Is Traced to 1889

Annual observance of June 14 as Flag Day was started in New York City. Back in 1889, George Boch, principal of a free school for children of immigrant families on the East Side, thought of the anniversary of the Congress' adoption of the Stars and Stripes as appropriate occasion for staging inspiring and instructive patriotic exercises.

The exercises, which were given conspicuous attention in the favorable comment and the State Department of Education suggested observance of the day in all public schools.

Subsequently the State Legislature directed that "It shall be the duty of the State Superintendent of Public Schools to make special provision for observance in the public schools of Lincoln's Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day and Flag Day."

The Society of Colonial Dame of Pennsylvania induced the mayor of Philadelphia to order the flag displayed on all public buildings in the city on June 14. The organization proceeded to campaign for flag displays on all public buildings, and also business buildings, throughout the State.

Meanwhile, National Flag Day Association was formed in New York to advance the observance of June 14 nationally. The governor ordered the Flag flown June 14 on public buildings throughout New York State beginning in 1897.

Mrs. Larua Caddell Prisk Blue, longtime president of the NFDA, was hailed as "Mother of Flag Day" after Woodrow Wilson proclaimed national observance of June 14, beginning in 1916.

President Wilson observed, "This flag which we honor is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation. It has no other character than that which we give it from generation to generation. The choice is ours.

"The flag floats in majestic silence above the hosts that execute those choices whether in peace or in war. And yet, though silent, it speaks to us of the past, of the men and women who went before us and the records they wrote upon it . . . of a plan of life worked out by a great people. It's forever a bit of our own native land."

Lt. Ham Named IOBC Honor Grad Recently

Second Lt. Ford E. Ham Jr. graduated Infantry Officer Basic Course, Class No. 16, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade with top honors. Lt. Ham received an average of 93.1 percentile in the subjects covered in the course.

Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School was the speaker for the graduation ceremonies. He presented the honor graduate with his graduation certificate and an engraved desk set and pen.

Addressing the graduating body, Gen. Norton stated that the school is here to give out the knowledge in a way that students can absorb it. But, he added, it is the student who must maintain the proper attitude in order to receive the most benefit from the course.

Gen. Norton concluded by saying that an officer must set his goals and set them high, then try to attain them.

During the ceremonies, Gen. Norton presented 2nd Lt. James E. Ferrell, The Military Stakes Competition winner, a desk set and pen for making the high score of 893 points out of a possible 1000. The Military Stakes Competition is a field exercise covering most of the subjects taught during the course.

First Lt. Gerald A. Host also received a plaque during the graduation exercises for his high score of 477 points out of a possible 500 in the Physical Combat Proficiency Test.

Gen. Welling Is Guest Speaker At Engineer Birthday Ceremony

The Corps of Engineer personnel at Fort Benning joined their counterparts the world over on Thursday in celebrating their 188th birthday.

Last evening there was a dinner for the Engineer officers at the Main Officers' Open Mess, consisting of a receiving line, dinner, and dancing beginning at 7 p.m. celebrating the event.

On hand to address the officers at the banquet was Maj Gen. Alvin C. Welling, division engineer, South Atlantic Division, Corps of Engineers, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

Gen. Welling, a native of Kenbucky, and a 1933 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, arrived at Lawson Army Airfield on Thursday at 10:30 a.m.

One of Gen. Welling's important assignments has been that of the Engineer Commissioner in the Government of the District of Columbia. He is also a recipent of the Distinguished Service Medal, Legon of Merit (with two oak leaf clusters) and numerous other theater medals received during his service career.

During his brief visit, the general will visit the construction projects being executed by Engineer troops, post engineer personnel, and contract.

Also included in Gen. Welling's itinerary are the viewing of the heliports and air strip being constructed for the 11th Air Assault Division, the renovation of mobilization barracks to house this division, and the new Academic Bdlg.

Many engineer personnel throughout the post will be celebrating the Corps 188th birthday.

The 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) provides support for The Infantry Center. In a theater of operations, the 577th would have the mission to construct and rehabilitate road, airfields, pipeline systems, structures and utilities, and in support of airborne and beach operations. It also assists in recovery operations and the defense of all construction sites.

Currently the battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. William K. Jordan, is in the process of rehabilitating some 75 existing buildings in the Harmony Church area for use by the 11th Air Assault Division in addition to the addition of an additional nine holes to the Sand Hill Golf Course.

The 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) has the primary mission of supporting The Infantry School in Engineer river crossing operations.

Commanded by Capt. Clarence R. Little, the 586th has also maintained the M-4 Bridge at Bradley's Landing, from Alabama to Georgia, since 1952.

Capt. James H. Davis commands the 72nd Engineer Company which has its present mission the furnishing of troop support in Engineer problems consisting of organization of engineer units, field fortifications, pioneering, and demoltions.

In addition the 72nd supports certain Infantry problems by furnishing special demolitions such as the atomic explosive simulator.

The primary mission of the 806th Engineer Battalion is constructing facilities as required by The Infantry Center and Infantry School and furnishing domestic emergency teams.

Commanded by Lt. Felix R. Moss, the 806th aided in the construction of ranger camp facilities at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida and is also constructing two heliports for the 11th Air Assault Division in the Harmony Church area, near Jamestown Road and near the old hospital area.

Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion aids in increasing the combat effectiveness of the 11th Air Assault Division by overcoming obstacles and impeding enemy ground progress through construction and demolitions.

In conjunction with its purpose, the company has begun several projects among which is the survey and design of airstrips and helipads for the Division.

The mission of the 2nd Engineer Battalion of the 2nd Infantry Division is to increase the combat effectiveness of the Division by means of general engineer work.

The Battalion, under the command of Lt. Col. William C. Carter Jr., played a large role in Swift Strike II where they participated as aggressors and helped to bridge the Lynches and Pee Dee Rivers.

The battalion was also alerted and ready to move out during the Cuban crisis.

Gen. Water's Army Day Message

With a deep sense of pride and responsibility, the members of the United States Continental Army Command mark the 188th anniversary of the United States Army, 14 June 1963. Today we salute the men and women of our Army who, throughout our history, have dedicated themselves to the defense of freedom.

Time and technology have changed weapons and tactics since 1775. Unchanged is the resolute determination of the Army to do its job despite all odds and hazards. On this occasion we of USCONARC each pledge anew our strength and skills to fulfill our many missions, and to guarantee above all else that this nation will ever remain a land of freedom.

Capitol Notes

Senator Hiram L. Fong (R-Hawaii) has declared he will seek remedies for some of the "serious shortcomings" of the House-passed military pay bill currently under Senate consideration. At the top of the Hawaiian Senator's list is the "adoption of the principle of comparability." An Air Force colonel, the 55-year-old Senator was one of the planners of the Civil Service pay legislation enacted last year. He says the comparability principle OK'd for Federal employees, "should be extended to military personnel as well." Members of the Armed Forces Senator Fong says, should receive "fair and decent pay on a par with civilian Government workers and employees in private industry."

The House has passed and sent to the Senate a Navy "forgiveness" bill, HR 5042. The measure affects officers who were appointed to the Naval Academy while serving as enlisted Reservists, whose enlistment contracts were not terminated, and who subsequently and erroneously received basic pay computed on the basis of their enlisted service. The legislation "forgives" the erroneous payments. Those who already have made refunds will have their money returned when the Senate completes action and the measure is signed by the President.

'62 Conservation Award Presented to Fort Knox

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The first annual Secretary of Defense Conservation Award has been presented to Fort Knox, Ky. The award was presented by Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) Norman S. Paul in behalf of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Accepting the award was Maj. Gen. Joseph E. Bastion Jr., Fort Knox commander, who said that it was the cooperation of State officials and Fort Knox personnel that made the program a success.

The Conservation Award was established in 1962 to stimulate and give incentive for improvement of Department of Defense fish, wildlife and conservation activities. More than 100 installations competed for the award.

In presenting the award Secretary Paul said, "This marks a significant milestone within defense because it shows we recognize ourselves as a part of the total U.S. community and look beyond the relatively narrow borders of the Defense establishment into other fields such as conservation of the natural resources."

McChord AFB, Wash., and Fort Huachuaca, Ariz., received special recognition for outstanding achievements. Three other finalists in the competition were Quantico Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.; NAS, Lakehurst, N.J.; and the Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The award consists of two trophies, one of which will remain in the office of the Secretary of Defense while the other becomes the permanent possession of Fort Knox. Plaques and citations will be mailed to the two runnerup installations.

Sleepy Citizens Have No Place in World

There is an old saying, "To be awake is to be alive."

Today in the United States the tired, sleepy citizen takes a big risk. The world in which we live is moving. Its citizens are moving too.

The man or woman who looks back may risk the fate of "Lot's wife"—the danger of being frozen or locked in place. If you're not alert ing world will pass you by.

So, it behooves us to battle any form of stagnation. The man who carefully plans and picks his path and follows the road toward a definite goal, no matter how it winds or turns, is awake. And once awake he is better able to cope with life and its complexities.

"Wake up, America," is a common plea from the political rostrum of all parties. It is the call of the church and the appeal of the educator.

Nowhere is the need for alertness more pronounced than in the preparation, blast-off and orbital-tours of our astronauts. Here attention at all times—to the most minute details—insures success in a mission that may ultimately result in man's victory over space.

In the military, awareness of being and constant alertness, is a means of insuring rewarding individual and group life. For the sentry, the navigator or the IBM operator who misses the message from lack of awakeness, may deliver his country, our country, into the hands of the enemy.

Our slogan should be not only "Wake up, America," but "Stay Awake, Americans."

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Conquering Strength

By Chaplain (Capt.) Frank E. Deese

In our present world we hear a great deal about being strong in order to survive. This is applied to the nation and to individuals.

The individual is told that he must have a strong body to live a long and useful life. He is told also that he must have inner resources of strength that he might endure the tension of modern living.

The Bible is filled with ideas that speak to man along this line. One of the best known of these passages is the verse in Isaiah 40:31 which says, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." Immediately I wish to say that in waiting upon the Lord there is no suggestion of idle waste of time.

The way of deliverance has always been by the way of action; and the prophet here does not teach that strength shall be renewed, or tasks shall be performed by idleness, but by active service for God.

As we actively trust in God we may have our power to resist and conquer built up, and we will be able to stand where others have fallen. The one whom we serve is able and willing to give us the necessary power to come through well.

We all become concerned at times about our choice of the low road rather than the high and we long for strength to overcome. The answer is found in the promise growing out of this assurance which God gives us. Here is more than a glimmer of light, it is a bedrock promise of being able to live above the low ideals of life.

We can learn to "Mount up with wings as eagles." When we live away from the highest, low and unworthy ideals may claim our attention. But with trust properly placed we can soar above them as the eagle is able to rise beyond the clouds.

One man is the prey of things low and bestial, while the other has power sufficient to prevent him from being in bondage to low standards. Here is the real test of faith and here its worth to us will be revealed. In continual trust in Him and waiting upon Him we find the strength for triumphant living.

Scientist's Investigation Probes Smell Theories

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Servicemen are taught how to identify various gas smells at some time during their military career.

Those fascinated by the sense of smell (and who isn't?) should be interested by scientific efforts to explain how it works.

It works chemically, of course, and three theories are current as to the "how" of it.

One is the vibrational. It holds that the molecules of odoriferous substances vibrate themselves through the air and into nostrils.

A second is the radiation theory which visualizes the nostril-exciting molecules radiating outward from the roses or the broiling steak like the spokes of a wheel.

The third one is the stereochemical. This deals with the arrangements of atoms and molecules in space. The smell theory derived from it holds is the shape and size of a molecule which determines whether odors will be smellable or not smellable.

In the third case, it is assumed that in the lining of the nose are "receptor sites" which are of specific sizes and shapes. If the vagrant molecules from some adjacent volatile substance — say, the perfume a girl puts behind her ears — is going to be smelled, they have to fit into one or more of these receptor sites.

From these and much similar evidence Dr. J. E. Amoore of the University of California, has derived the theory that for the human sense of smell there are only seven primary smells.

They are etheral, camphoraceous, musky, floral, peppermint, pungent and putrid. All other smells, according to Doctor Amoore, are combinations of two or more of these.

With this scientific approach, maybe you will never smell the a smell that you smelt before.

Mrs. Beatty Lists Writing As Her Favorite Pastime

By Lucille Beard

Writer of poetry, parodies and skits, Helen-Ann (Jake) Beatty has clung to her fondness for literature since college days.

Although she has a healthy accumulation of rejection slips, Mrs. Beatty, wife of Col. George S. Beatty Jr., commander of the First Brigade, 11th Air Assault Division (Test), continues to compose poetry as she washes dishes or wakens at night with an idea that fascinates her.

A member of Chi Omega sorority and active in student activities, Helen - Ann Jacobs, having attended Edgewood Park Junior College, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., was a student at the University of North Carolina when she met George Beatty, law student.

MRS. BEATTY

Having been graduated from Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C., Mr. Beatty, son of an army colonel, had already been commissioned in the Army Reserve.

On December 7, 1941, 2nd Lt. Beatty was aboard ship in San Francisco Bay, prepared to sail for the Philippines. With the events of Pearl Harbor and the consequent changing of plans, Lt. Beatty disembarked and wired his bride, who had returned to her home in New York, to join him in San Francisco.

Mrs. Beatty travelled by train as far as Kansas City, where the message that her husband had sailed for the Pacific reached her. Three and a half years later, Maj. Beatty returned, having served with the 24th Division, XXIV Corps and Headquarters, U. S. Army Forces, Pacific Ocean Areas, throughout the war.

Upon his return to the States, Maj. Beatty came to Fort Benning as, first, an instructor on the Map Reading Committee, and then as deputy chief of staff for The Infantry School. Here for three and a half years, the Beattys lived on Stewart Avenue, where they welcomed their first daughter, Anne.

The Beattys were transferred to Fort Bragg, N. C., and later to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to attend the Command and General Staff College. It was here that Helen, the younger of the Beatty girls, was born.

Fort Campbell was home for the Beatty family from 1950 to 1952, while Lt. Col. Beatty served as deputy chief of staff and later as G-1 of the 11th Airborne Division. In 1952, Lt. Col. Beatty joined the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team in Japan.

While in Japan, Mrs. Beatty was elected president of the Women's Club. This was only one of the many tasks she has assumed in her active career.

In August, 1954, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Beatty and the girls returned to the U. S. for duty at the Pentagon. Mrs. Beatty, living in Arlington, Va., worked with the Armed Forces Hostess Association and was captivated by the city of Washington. Lt. Col. Beatty served with G-3, and then had the Europe - Middle East - Africa Desk in the Office of International Affairs under the Secretary of the Army.

Favorite tour for Mrs. Beatty was at Newport, R. I., where the colonel attended the Navy War College in 1958 and 1959. The beauty of New England, the house facing the ocean, and the excitement of seeing the Americas' Cup Races combined to make Newport unforgettable.

In 1959 Lt. Col. Beatty attended Flight School at Fort Rucker, and the Beattys returned to the South.

Mrs. Beatty headed the hospitality committee of the Woman's Club, was the assistant manager of the Thrift Shop, and served as vice president of the P-TA. She has worked for four years with Girl Scouts and has been a room mother many times.

"Jake" Beatty's bobby, she admits, is her husband. Feeling a deep sense of duty toward her husband and his career, it is her conviction that a wife should work in any possible way to adjust to Army life, to make her husband's worry-load lighter, to enter wholeheartedly into the life of a post community.

Surely she has accomplished all these things.

Woman's Club Starts Teen Sewing Class

The Teenage Beginners' Sewing Class was started in full swing Thursday by the Woman's Club.

The Intermediate Class is scheduled to begin Tuesday with each group meeting once a week for six weeks.

A "Sewing Circle" is set up to guide girls into the fundamentals of sewing with measuring, cutting, fitting and other intricate ways of putting a fashion garment together. Understanding and identifying fabrics is also taught.

Using the students' desired pattern, Mrs. Elizabeth Westall the instructor, demonstrates and works with the students to enable them to understand and follow correctly the details of constructing their projects to completion.

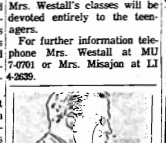
The inborn ambition of most women to sew and complete a costume is witnessed by thousands of commercial patterns and bolts of fabrics sold by dry good stores all over the country. Without the knowledge of costume construction however, a haphazardly done garment is produced, and the ambition is thwarted.

Accurate drafting of patterns and skillful application in following out every detail of constructing a garment results in succelly completed products.

Instructions given by Mrs. Westall both to the adult and teenager classes will help them in the fundamentals of sewing, provide ways to develop skills quickly.

Tentative schedules for adult beginners, intermediate and advanced sewing will be announced sometime early in September.

For further information telephone Mrs. Westall at MU 7-0701 or Mrs. Misajon at LI 4-2639.



During the summer months Mrs. Westall's classes will be devoted entirely to the teenagers.

Post Little Theater Daring Draws Best Benning-Columbus Talents

By Peter Tatischeff

The mortal remains of Blanche Dubois are being escorted off stage nightly at the Fort Benning Little Theater playhouse as Tennessee Williams' prize-winning play "A Street Car Named Desire" goes into its fourth week of rehearsal.

With the drama scheduled for opening June 26, the theater group's talent for the unusual, unexpected, and daring has attracted more professional and amateur help from the combined Columbus-Fort Benning area than has worked on a Benning show in at least three years.

Much of the increased interest is due to this being the only area drama group above high school caliber with a theater to call its own. The talents and popular eccentricities of director, PFC Ted Martin, have also added significantly to the playhouse's ever increasing popularity.

The bulk of current interest is attributed to the personal popularity of playwrite Williams and "Streetcar," a torrid account of the last conscious days in the life of the fragile and tragic character Blanche Dubois.

The Fort Benning production of "Streetcar" should be an artistic event for Columbus and Fort Benning with special attention being focused on the set designs of Louis Cheney, a local artist whose one-man shows, and privately owned abstracts have stirred applause, bewilderment and anger here in the best traditions of modern painting.

According to reports, however, when "Streetcar" opens, the stage will belong to Betty Britto, wife of a former Army lieutenant colonel, who has played on local stages intermittantly since 1958, throwing herself boldly into contrasting roles with repeated critical acting under control, combining the amateur's privilege of "dabbling" with the professional's habit of total submersion into the character of the moment. She firmly believes each role at the moment of creation is the most important theater experience in her life and this has gone for every part she ever did, whether it be in "Time of Your Life," "All My Sons," "Gallant City," Rainmaker," "Look Homeward Angel," or "A Streetcar Named Desire."

"Betty," says director Martin, "represents the best of both Columbus and Fort Benning. She is one of the most dependably talented and versatile actresses here. Her characterization of Blanche is different, exciting, and uncanny. She is a key figure in what I consider a perfect combination in our cast and production staff of talent from a variety of environments including Fort Benning, Columbus high College, and Columbus Little Theater.

TRAGIC STAR
Betty Britto

She will be seen as Blanche. A native of Connecticut, Mrs. Britto feels toward acting the way she feels toward her hobby, ceramics. Seated in her living room in a setting which admits a happy compromise between Army years and luxury, she recently confessed ceramics just might be taking over her house. She did think, however, that she had this hobby under control. She has her success.

Cub Scout Roundtable Held Here

A new idea went into effect recently with the first of three Summer Cub Scout Roundtables at The Infantry Center Recreation Center, and two more set for July 11 and Aug. 8.

Myrl Simpson, assistant district commissioner for the Cub Scouts, announced that the plan gives Cub leaders a chance to keep in touch with the program as it comes from Scout officials and also gives the entire family an opportunity to enjoy an evening outdoors.

For the opening Roundtable held June 6, Cub Pack No. 39, sponsored by the post Youth Activities Club, presented the program. The theme was "When Dad was A Boy."

Neighborhood commissioner Ralph Stieglitz was in charge of the opening ceremony, and Neil Dailey, Upatoi District Scout executive, provided the organized recreation.

Imagination Cuts Weight In Air Assault Division

By Sgt. Lester Gibbs

In the Army's new 11th Air Assault Division new concepts of air-mobility are being devised and tested. The modern need for quick action and reaction in combat has necessitated this new concept.

One of the greatest problems has been the maintenance of the transport vehicles and of the equipment used by the division's soldiers after they have been moved by air to desolate areas.

The 711th Maintenance Battalion, one of the division's major units, is engaged in a continuous program to scale down the heavy, bulky maintenance tools and equipment so as to attain for themselves an air transportability equal to that of the units they must support.

The mission of the 711th appeared impossible at first, but they have met with considerable success. The battalion commander is Lt. Col. Robert D. Worthen.

For anyone who has seen the massive units and many tools and tool sets which are required for normal maintenance work, the problem becomes readily apparent. But, imagination and the refusal to accept the "normal" way of doing things has inspired the battalion personnel to reduce the weight of their repair equipment to acceptable air-transportable loads.

Davey Truck

For instance, the Shop Set, Contact Maintenance Set 3, better known as the Davey Truck, has undergone changes which will make it lighter. This unit is basically a three-fourth ton truck and is used for repair and maintenance of all equipment organic to an air assault brigade, except for signal equipment and aircraft. It carries such items as an electric welder, air compressor, hydraulic tire changer, flood lights, electric drill and grinder, and torque and socket wrenches. These tools have been matched to the type of equipment found in air assault units and those not essential have been eliminated.

In some cases it was discovered that certain tools which are not part of the set were required. These have been added. The result is a gross weight reduction of 520 pounds. From an original weight of 7,830 pounds, it is hoped that the contact truck can be eventually reduced to about 6,000 pounds.

The final test, of course, is whether or not the truck can be moved by helicopter, or otherwise air-lifted, to perform its maintenance mission anywhere in the brigade area of operation.

All equipment is carried in compact compartments so that the Davey Truck can be operational within minutes after it hits the ground. Bad weather does not hinder this crew. They have rigged a canopy that can be raised over the equipment being worked on.

Van-Type Unit

Another van-type unit which is being modified for air-lifting is the MSM 16 for signal equipment maintenance. It is capable of supplying an air assault brigade and its supporting elements with complete signal repair facilities. Drawer type shelves specially designed to carry all necessary spare parts help to make this a unit which can be ready to operate in a minimum period of time after its arrival in an area.

A new, highly-compact type of container, called the S-141, Evaluation Mobile Container (MOCON), is also under test. Carrying spare parts and supplies for 2nd and 3rd echelon maintenance in support of a brigade and its accompanying units, the MOCON weighs approximately 5,000 pounds loaded, and is air transportable. In actual use it is expected to go forward with the brigade base of operations. It stocks repair parts for all brigade ordnance, engineer and signal equipment.

Plans in the future, according to Col. Worthen, will be directed towards a continuous effort to lighten present loads and to increase air mobility so as to provide maximum support on the immediate site for disabled equipment.

Cyrus Vance

In a recent address, Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance said, "The Army is . . . applying its brainpower to the unique requirements of today. There is now no army in the world with so much recent field experience . . . This experience is being tapped at every level, for every idea which will lead to a stronger force in the future."

This, too, is the thinking of the men of the 711th Maintenance Battalion. They intend to use the experience available to them, but tempered with imagination and ingenuity to avoid becoming stereotyped.

He joined the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Camp Toccoa, Ga., in March, 1943. In October 1944, he went to Europe with that unit and fought in Italy. On August 15, 1944, he parachuted into Southern France with the 517th.

After the war, he joined the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment at Fort Bragg, N.C., and stayed with that unit until Sept., 1946.

From September 1946, until June 1951, he was the assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Cardinal Farley Military Academy in Rhinecliff-on-Hudson, N.Y. He also coached football and baseball at the Academy.

Col. Lissner then attended the Infantry Officer Advanced Course here and graduated in May, 1951. His next assignment was with the 505th Parachute Infantry at Fort Bragg as Battalion S-3.

Quartermaster Corps Mark Birthday Today

Approximately 750 members of the Quartermaster Section of The Infantry Center will observe the 188th anniversary of the Quartermaster Corps today.

Over 400 military and civilian guests are expected to attend Quartermaster Day ceremonies beginning at 3:30 p.m. in the Parachute Maintenance Bldg. (Bldg. 2594).

The Quartermaster Section is under the direction of Col. Edward M. Foxworth.

The corps began June 16, 1775, when, during the Revolutionary War, the Second Continental Congress passed a resolution providing: "That there be one Quartermaster General for the Grand Army and one deputy under him for the Separate Army. . ."

Col. Thomas Mifflin was appointed as the first quartermaster general Aug. 14, 1775. Mifflin's duties were relatively few, compared with the duties of today's quartermaster. He was responsible for collecting intelligence information, planning marches, and distributing march order. He also laid out camps and assigned quarters. He was literally a "quartermaster."

In the Civil War period, an Army of more than one million had to be fed, clothed and transported. The Quartermaster Corps met this problem and handled it successfully.

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant wrote: "There never was a corps better organized than was the Quartermaster's corps with the Army of the Potomac in 1864!"

During the Spanish - American War, the Quartermaster Corps developed the khaki uniform, marking the first use by the Army of a camouflage color for combat use.

In World War I, an Army of four million men was raised and half that number sent to Europe. More than 48 per cent of supplies sent to Europe were quartermaster items.

Supply figures were far greater in World War II. More than 55 million tons of food were supplied, 28 million pairs of combat boots, 95 million pairs of shoes, 360 million pairs of socks and 178 million pairs of trousers.

The Korean conflict brought about an expanded air - supply operation. The Quartermaster Corps delivered thousands of tons of food and clothing and other supplies to forward areas in Korea by air while conducting normal quartermaster ground supply operations.

Today the Quartermaster Corps is guided by the traditions of service to the troops which have been developed during the past 188 years.

Wheeler Letter Expresses Appreciation

By 38th Infantry PIO

When Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway, 1st battalion, 38th Infantry, spotted a letter from the Department of Army in his "in" box this week, he thought it was just another one of the many official letters that cross his desk each day at Battalion Headquarters.

However, upon opening the envelope, he discovered that the letter was far from the ordinary correspondence he reads each day. It was a personal note from Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff. It read:

"Dear Sergeant Major Conway;

I should like to express my sincere appreciation for the lifetime membership certificate in the 38th Infantry, presented me during by recent visit to Fort Benning.

Everything I saw while there makes me indeed proud to be included in the ranks of this outstanding unit.

With thanks and best wishes to the men of the 38th."

Col. Coffin will join Gen. Corley as an assistant division commander. He takes over the position left vacant when Brig. Gen. Stanley Harding left for Okinawa in May.

Col. Griffin graduated from Stanford University in 1939, and was commissioned in the Army in March, 1939. He was promoted to the rank of Colonel in July 1955, and has recently been nominated for promotion to brigadier general.

Coffin was chief of atomic and missile divisions, Office of Chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army, from 1955 to 1958. From 1958 to 1959 he was a student at the National War College. From 1959 to 1960 he was G-3, Southern European Task Force and then commander of the 1st Missile Command from 1960 to 1961. Before coming to the 2nd Infantry Division he was assistant deputy chief of staff, Operations, for U. S. Army Europe.

Col. Coffin served in Europe during World War II. He also saw foreign duty in Korea and then in Europe again in 1959. He holds the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with Two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Army Commendation Medal and the French Croix de Guerre.

12th Arty Sets Record On Last ATT

By 12th Artillery PIO

The 2nd Division's 12th Artillery last week celebrated its birthday by recording the highest grade ever scored on an artillery battalion Army Training (ATT) by a field artillery battalion in the Division. The battalion is under the command of Lt. Col. Terence W. Huck.

This test marked the first time the 12th had taken an ATT as an "Honest John Battalion" since division reorganization, but for many members it was the second battalion test within the fiscal year 1963.

The final score of this test is expected to fall between 95 and 97 per cent.

The last ATT was taken in December 1962 when the 12th Artillery functioned as a rocket-howitzer battalion. The score in this test was 94.7 per cent. This was also a high for 2nd Division Artillery units.

Three special Honest John Rocket warheads were flown down from Lexington, Ky.

WITH NEW AND FORMER CHIEFS . . . Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, (L) 2nd Division commander, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, (R) assistant division commander, pose with former division chief of staff, Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., (second from left) who departed for new assignment Saturday. With the group is Col. DEATH COMES FOR A SOLDIER

Editor's note: this is the first in a series of articles about military deaths at Fort Benning. Don't let your name appear here.

At approximately 5 p.m., June 2, a soldier drowned in Oliver Lake by Goat Rock Dam near Columbus while on a swimming party with four friends.

PFC Soldier attempted to swim the width of the Chattahoochee River and entered the river alone. He had reached the middle of the river when he decided to turn back. He went down once, but recovered quickly and resumed his swim to shore. When he got approximately ten yards from shore, he was hidden from his companions view by a sand bar and went under. A passing boat saw him go down and shouted to his companions. By the time they got to him, he had drowned.

The probable causes of the accident were that PFC Soldier exercised poor judgment in swimming a great distance from shore by himself and that he was probably excessively fatigued due to his long swim.

Adherence to common sense water safety procedures would have prevented this needless loss of life.

With the coming of summer and the annual trek to the water, members of the division are urged to learn and practice the following water safety rules:

a. Never swim alone; always use the buddy system.

b. Always swim at approved beaches where life guards are provided.

c. Learn to swim well.

d. Know your limitations as a swimmer.

e. Do not wade, play or dive into strange waters. There may be unseen hazards or deep holes.

f. Be aware of danger in water with tides, currents and heavy surf.

g. Stay out of water during threatening thunder storms.

h. Supervise small children when they are playing around water.

i. When boating, be sure there is a life preserver for each person in the boat.

Continue to develop your swimming skill and knowledge of water safety by enrollment in swimming and life saving classes.

Policemen Wear Distinctive Crest

Members of the 2nd Military Police Company are now wearing a new unit crest.

Upon reorganization in February, 1963, from a detachment to a company, the 2nd Military Police Company became eligible for its unit crest, that has been in retirement.

The distinctive badge was originally approved for the Military Police Company, Special Troops, 2nd Division, on February 15, 1939. It was inactivated June 20, 1957 in Alaska and concurrently relieved from assignment to the 2nd Infantry Division. It was activated once more on July 25, 1962 at Fort Bragg, N. C., with the 2nd Military Police Company (Airborne Corps), and then to the 2nd Military Police Company, 2nd Infantry Division, on February 20, 1963.

The crest has a blue enamelled border around a white oval with six fleur-de-lis in gold over the blue border. The blue is the infantry color, and the six fleur-de-lis are representative of the six World War I battle honors of the organization.

Campaign credits for the 2nd Military Police Company number 21; from Lorraine to Meuse-Argonne during World War I; Normandy through Central Europe in World War II, and the United Nations Defensive through Korea, Summer-1953.

The company guidon carries the streamers of Distinguished Unit Citation, Meritorious Unit Commendation, French Croix de Guerre with Palm, World War I, Aisne-Marne; French Croix de Guerre with Palm, World War I, Meuse-Argonne; the Belgian Fourragere; and French Croix de Guerre (World War I) Fourragere.

The company was also cited in the Order of the Day of the Belgian Army for action in the Ardennes and on the Eisenborn Crest. In addition to these many awards, the company is also authorized streamers for two Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citations.

There are 21 silver bands near the top of the guidon staff to indicate the 21 major campaigns credited to the company. Each band has engraved upon it the specific campaign of designation.

The 2nd Military Police Company is commanded by Capt. Vincent A. Apruzzese and is one of only three companies in the Army that is authorized its own crest.

Lawyers Hear Navy Captain Note Scope of Military, Civilian Law

The Columbus Lawyers Club held their meeting last week at the Main Post Supper Club, hosted by officers of the 2nd Division Staff Judge Advocate section, and heard guest speaker Capt. Emory Smith (USN) talk on the challenges facing both military and civilian lawyers.

Capt. Smith, a noted authority on international law, discussed the importance of relationships between military and civilian lawyers and stressed that maximum effort should be used to maintain good ones.

Speaking to the military and civilian lawyers, he stated: "It is a pleasure to see the fine cooperation that exists between the attorneys of this post and those in Columbus."

During his speech, Capt. Smith said that international law came into real prominence for the military with the advent of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). This brought a broader scope to military law. It took it away from just the United States and expanded it until now it encompasses the world.

He emphasized the importance of handling the problems of the men and women in the service. He said it was the duty of the military lawyer to try to aid in solving the soldier's problems; no matter how small they might be.

"Even though," he said, "they seem small and unimportant to us, they are vital and of the utmost concern to the soldier who brings them to us. We fail in our job if we do not give him the advice and help he seeks."

Capt. Smith is a native of Denton, Texas and took his Bachelor of Arts Degree from North Texas, University. He received his Master of Arts Degree from the University of Texas; his Bachelor of Laws Degree from Southern Methodist University, and his Doctor of Juridical Science from George Washington University.

He was commissioned a lieutenant (j. g.) in the Navy in 1942. Following the war he served as a War Crimes prosecutor for the U.S., during the trials of Japanese war criminals in Manila, Tokyo and Yokohama. During this period he was assigned to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's legal section.

In 1947 he transferred to the Regular Navy and subsequently was assigned to the International Law Branch of the Navy Judge Advocate. In 1951 he became chief of the international law division. During the 1948 to 1952 period he participated as a State-Navy representative in the negotiations for U.S. military bases under NATO, serving in both Paris and Lisbon. He is presently assigned as District Legal Officer on the staff of the commandant, Potomac River Naval Command, in Washington, D.C.

Capt. Smith is the author of numerous law review articles and has lectured at various universities. He is a member of the Bars of Texas, Oklahoma, the U. S. Court of Military Appeals and the Supreme Court of the United States.

Lt. Col. Daniel A. Lennon, Jr., 2nd Infantry Division staff judge advocate, introduced the speaker.

After dinner the civilian club elected new officers and the newly appointed president expressed his gratitude to the military lawyers for their cooperation and excellent relations with the Columbus lawyers.

They Serenade, Provide Music for Original Ballet

By George Aubin

The 2nd Infantry Division Band traveled up and down the musical scale last month as it went from light and snappy marches for festive holidays to classical and modern music for an original ballet.

On Armed Forces Day, the band occupied bleachers directly facing the review stand on Broadway and serenaded the residents of Columbus with their blaring trumpets and trombones while their rolling drums pounded out a steady beat to aid the marching troops in discerning their left foot from their right.

Last week they unlimbered their instruments to salute recipients of awards at the 2nd Engineer Battalion, then played as ten members on the division retired at Division Headquarters Parade Field. When the 7th Cavalry returned recently from their Annual Army Training at Fort Stewart, the band was waiting to greet them.

Under the direction of SFC Edward W. Karnotski, the band traveled to the Veteran's Hospital in Tuskegee, Ala. for the annual Memorial Day ceremonies. Patients were treated to a medley of songs which included "Col. Bogey's March", "National Emblem", "Men of Ohio", "American Soldier", "Bombasto", "Invercargel", and "Around the World in 80 Days." The ceremony concluded with the band playing the "Star Spangled Banner" and "Taps."

Patients at Martin Army Hospital were recently given a concert by a combo from the band. Providing the music were Sgt. Seymour Goldstein, PFC Bernado Fiumara, PFC Gerard J. Nambro, PFC Larry A. Intorella and Pvt. Pasquale De Bellis.

Under the auspises of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, the Fort Benning Ballet School put on a dance concert last Sunday with members of the band providing the music. Those members of the band which took part were PFC Fiumara on the bass, PFC Intorella on the piano, Pvt. De Bellis on the trumpet, SFC Elmer A. Warma on the drums, Sgt. John C. Owen on the trumpet and PFC Joseph D'alessandro, on the clarinet.

DEPARTING GIFT . . . Sgt. Maj. Stephen J. Regan, (R), presents a plaque to Col. Arlin J. Kehe upon his departure as commander of the 2nd Division's Support Command. Col. Kehe this week departed for his new assignment in Washington, D.C.

Mock Crash Stage Is Set For Safety

By 23rd Infantry PIO

A striking reminder of the results of driver carelessness has been set up in the Company B area of the 2nd Division's 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

A simulated accident vehicle with its three victims, numerous empty liquor bottles and beer cans sets the stage in a roped off display as a grim reminder for the off-duty soldier against mixing alcohol and gasoline —with blood.

The driver safety campaign is under the direction of Capt. Clifton D. Lollar, commander of Company B.

Sgt. Long Wins 'Manchu' Award

By 9th Infantry PIO

A fire team leader, Sgt. James E. Long, of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, has been named "Manchu" Soldier-of-the-Month.

A 25-year-old St. Cloud, Fla., native, the sergeant was selected by a board of first sergeants and the battalion sergeant major, on the basis of general knowledge of military subjects, current events, and unit and division history.

A sustained soldierly appearance was another factor considered in the selection.

Sgt. Long completed basic training at Fort Benning and has remained with the 2nd Infantry Division throughout his military career. Prior to his assignment to the "Second of the Ninth," he was a member of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

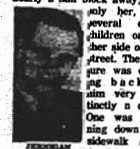
Carelessness Sows The Seeds of Death

By Chap. (Capt.) Dale R. Jernigan

"Am I really guilty of murder?" These were the exact words of a near panic-stricken sergeant as he stood over the lifeless form of a golden haired, three-year-old girl. "Sgt. Norman" took another look at the whole horrible sight. Tangled between the cold steel bumper and the huge body of his two-and-a-half-ton truck was Terri's red and white tricycle. Half under and half out lay little Terri. A thousand thoughts raced through Sgt. Norman's mind.

Only two minutes before Terri was alive. And the sad thing was that he had seen her very plainly when he was nearly a half block away; not only her, but several other children on either side of the street. The picture was coming back to him very distinctly now. One was running down the sidewalk after a little black pup. Another was sitting in a sand box with a friend building some sort of a sand castle. And there was another little girl as he recalled who had on a pair of her mommy's high heels and an old red hat. She was pushing a baby buggy down the walk.



And then there was Terri. She was making a complete circle with her tricycle around the driveway and was approaching an incline that connected into the busy street just as he was driving past. And then it all happened. Terri's tricycle started down the incline. He remembered seeing her try to stop by dragging her feet. But the incline was too steep. He also remembered trying to brake his truck in time, but it was too late.

The thing that was already haunting him now was why had he not slowed down as he approached the housing area. Above all, why in the name of heaven hadn't he given full attention to his driving instead of trying to tune in that new transistor radio he had just purchased? Because of his carelessness, the stinging question kept racing through his mind, "Am I really guilty of murder?"

Sgt. Norman had a right to ask himself this question. Certainly he could have asked why Terri's parents were not more careful and why they allowed her to play so close to the street. Nevertheless, he was now sure that carelessness was definitely one form of murder. And aside from the legal aspect, more staggering was the moral responsibility involved.

A man's life is perhaps his most precious possession. It is a sacred commodity. It is indeed a gift from God. However, it is a gift with some "strings" attached. I mean by this that with the gift comes some very definite responsibilities. Not least among these is a man's moral obligation to observe the everyday common rules of safety. In doing so he becomes a good steward of that with which he has been entrusted — his own life.

But a man's responsibility doesn't stop with just looking out for his own neck. It reaches beyond himself and takes into consideration his neighbors, his friends and associates — in short, his fellow man.

The nature of this responsibility is spelled out quite clearly in the Ten Commandments. To ignore the common rules of safety and through carelessness cause a man's life to be taken is a deliberate violation of the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

Once when English novelist G. K. Chesterton was asked if the Ten Commandments were not walls that confine or hamper a man's life and activity, he answered that walls they certainly were, but the "walls of a playground," not to keep the children in but to keep harm out. They then are not meant to keep us from enjoying life but to give us freedom under this law to enjoy life without harming ourselves and others. Just as surely as my life is sacred, so is my neighbors'. And just as surely as God gave me life, He also gave it to every other person. Because the fellow next to me is a creature of God, I therefore have no license to hurt, harm or destroy his body, even through carelessness!

This then calls for sincere respect for other people. There is no doubt about it! The more respect a driver has for people, both those in his car and on the street, the more carefully he will drive and the more attention he will give to the common rules of safety. Given one, the other is a natural result.

Apparently the driver of the car that recently killed four noncommissioned officers was greatly lacking this respect. The men were late as they drove to work. The driver threw all caution to the wind. Trying to negotiate a curve at 73 MPH. became an impossible task. The recklessness of this one man snuffed out four lives.

Make no mistake about it! Carelessness is a serious killer! It is a form of murder.

Genuine respect for other people goes beyond the negative command of "Thou shalt not kill." It accentuates the positive and even leads to plain, down-to-earth courtesy. And nothing is more contagious than courtesy. This sort of action is approaching what we know as the Golden Rule. Whatever your religion, the idea is the same. Confucius said it this way. "What you do not want done to yourself, do not do to others, what you do not like when done to yourself, do not do that to others." Jewish Rabbi's expressed the same thought when they said, "What you do not like, do not to your neighbor." Even the Greeks had a word for it, for in their writings is found the expression, "Do not to others that at which you would be angry if you suffered from others." But it was not until Jesus of Nazareth put it positively, "All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do you also to them," that it took on a much wider significance and richer meaning.

COOK of the WEEK

We can never really quite exhaust the many wonderful ways breads can be made and thoroughly enjoyed. Nothing possibly enhances the "Coffee Bread" more than a cinnamon roll straight from the oven. This week our "Cook of the Week" has made our long time friend the cinnamon roll much more delectable by making it with chocolate. Mrs. Samuel Clash, wife of First Sergeant Samuel Clash of Headquarters Battery, 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery, shares with us her recipe for chocolate cinnamon buns.

CHOCOLATE CINNAMON BUNS

¾ cup warm water

¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1-3 cup cocoa
2¼ cups sifted flour
1 tablespoon soft butter
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
3 tablespoons sugar
Nuts or raisins

Here's How

Dissolve yeast in warm water; add shortening, salt, sugar, egg, cocoa, 1 cup flour. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed, stir and blend remaining flour.

Cover with cloth and let rise until double in bulk. Knead down; turn soft dough out on floured board. Spread with 1 tablespoon soft butter, then sprinkle with cinnamon sugar-raisin mixture.

Roll up and cut into 10 to 12 pieces. Place in greased pan and let rise until double in size. Bake in 375 degree oven 25 or 30 minutes.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

Dimpled Darling Dolls Drive Dangerously

I want it firmly understood that I am all for the ladies; though I shall never understand them, nor cease to be continuously amazed by their strange ways. An example of this is the infamous women driver. True, science and women have advanced and today there are relatively few of the wild female drivers that used to be such a good source of material for the comedians of yesteryear. However, I know as a fact that a few do exist.

Not too long ago I was driving down the main street in Indianapolis, Indiana on my way to a movie. In front of me was a blond driving a blue convertible with the top down. She was more or less creeping along and so I stepped on it and swung out to pass. Just as I did she raised her arm and pointed straight up in the air. I quickly noticed that she didn't have her turn signals on, so I figured that there was something important in the direction she was pointing. I leaned forward and gazed curiously up through the top of my windshield. It was at that precise moment that she abruptly turned left.

It was a real close call. In addition to almost wrecking my car I just barely missed obtaining an instant ulcer.

A Delicate Creature

Now the female gender of human life is most usually a frail and delicate creature who is more unpredictable and less understandable than Einstein's theory of relativity written in Egyptian. But when you put one of these wild women drivers behind the wheel of an automobile, I completely panic.

For instance — when she gets into a car she aims it, and she doesn't start the car, she fires it! And, when she goes on a daily shopping trip —look out! Because this trip usually goes something like this. . . .

She gets into the automobile and gets it all fired up. Then she throws it into reverse to back out of the driveway (a simple procedure, usually). Without fail she goes forward and takes a hunk out of the garage door. After elaborating for a moment about the 'men' who design automobiles, she finally gets her weapon out onto the street—narrowly missing the paperboy. Then, the fun really begins.

She adjusts the rear-view mirror, so she can powder her nose, hikes up her skirt for better leg movement, in case she should have to step on the brakes for something or the other (a ridiculous idea), gets that sinister gleam in her eyes and charges down the street.

Our motoring menace is well on her way. She has covered two city blocks and put on a fresh supply of lipstick, plucked a few eyelashes and caused at least four pedestrians heart failure. She has also had to adjust the rear-view mirror again as it had slipped out of position. All she could see was atilly cars behind her. How in the world could she tell if her mascara was on right, with no mirror? If this wasn't enough trouble she suddenly realized that she was late. So, our modern mother of mayhem, contemplated by philosophers as a certain remedy to old age, begins to ease past the speed limit.

Walking on 'Walk'

Now usually, it is perfectly proper and safe for a pedestrian to step off the curb and cross the street when the safety signal-light indicates "WALK." Yet, any intelligent man knows that attempting to cross the street, at anytime, with one of these women drivers approaching, is about as safe as picking a splinter from a tiger's nose with a jagged piece of glass. In other words, a guy can get all torn up that way.

And when this lovely lady of lackadaisicalness attempts a hand or turn signal, all becomes quiet on the western front. Alas! The eighth wonder of the world. All activity stops. Speeding trains cautiously slow down, airplanes in flight hurriedly gain altitude and all humans within sight bow their heads in silent prayer.

Finally she gets herself and her sputtering spitfire to her destination. Then all the traffic cops come out of hiding.

Ah, you say! You're exaggerating! Well, perhaps. But, for the non-believer, who indeed must either be one of these female drivers or a drivers license inspector, I have only one hope. And that is that somedayy you find yourself on a busy street with a couple of these gals in front and behind you.

Company Tests Combat Reaction

By 23rd Infantry PIO

Soldiers of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, recently participated in the informal squad testing of combat reaction capabilities.

The problem included classes and practical work in rapelling, crossing water on a rope and moving through rugged terrain under simulated combat conditions.

Several members of the unit, particularly the second squad of the third platoon, led by Sgt. Lester M. Koon, were complimented on a fine showing in the exercise.

Spader Mementoes Given To 2nd Division Museum

Col. Arlin J. Kehe, departing commander of the Support Command, presented Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea with a scrapbook of 26th Infantry memenoes last week in the commanding general's office. A large-framed painting, impressive in color and symbolic emblems, was also presented on behalf of the 26th Infantry.

The painting is a map of Africa and Central Europe where the "Blue Spaders" were most active during World War II. Three white stars indicate the three major assault landings by the 26th Infantry during the war. They were: Northern Africa-Oran, on November 8, 1942; Sicily-Gela, on July 10, 1943, and Normandy, on June 6, 1944.

In the center of the blue-painted Atlantic Ocean is a large "Blue Spader" crest. Spotted over the three assault areas are miniature paintings of ships, planes, infantry troops and paratroopers. The art work was done by Antonio Mani, of Columbus, and is 30 by 40 inches in size.

The scrapbook contains many pages of history on the famed 26th Infantry and will join the painting in the 2nd Division Museum.

Col. Kehe, who has left for a new assignment in Washington, D. C., commanded the 26th Infantry when it joined the 2nd Division in 1962.

Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, was with the 3rd Battalion of the 26th Infantry during World War II. When remarking about the famous "Blue Spaders" he said,

"No mission too difficult — no sacrifice too great."

Two-Run Triple By Al Settles Wins for ASA

By 303rd ASA PIO

Roy Nichols and Bill Bushfield combined to hurl a four hitter last week as Company B of the 303rd ASA Battalion defeated the 38th Infantry, 3-1, in an exhibition game at Essesbegger Field.

The ASA team received only three hits from Fred Gibson and Telford Ross of the 38th, but combined them all into a game winning two-run fourth inning.

Nichols opened the fourth with a single but was forced at second on the next play. Eddie Valenz then lined a single to left and both runners scored on a booming triple by Al Settles. ASA had scored its first run in the second inning on a walk to Bill Northgraves, two wild pitches and a sacrifice fly by Ernest Fernandez.

Nichols picked up the win, his sixth in succession in league and exhibition play.

FLAG INTO BATTLE

In June, 1777, George Washington carried the flag of the U. S. into battle at Brandywine, and on the second of July it was flown from John Paul Jones' ship, RANGER, at Portsmouth, N. H.

HIT THE DIRT . . . Joe M. Lee (L) of Company A starts a hook slide which carries him safely past Company B 3rd baseman, Glenn D. Hunter, who waits for the ball. The action took place between Companies A and B of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry stationed in Mannheim, Germany.

Falgout, Nichols Pitch No-Hitter

By 303rd ASA PIO

Behind the no-hit pitching of Bob Falgout and Roy Nichols, the Separate Companies softball team defeated the 2nd Engineer Battalion, 6-1, in an exhibition held recently. The Engineers only run came in the first inning on a walk, a stolen base and a throwing error by the catcher.

The Separate Companies team collected only six hits off Caldwell of the Engineers, but put three of them together to produce a four-run 2nd inning. Joe Marcaccio's single, driving home two runs, was the deciding hit of the inning.

The Engineers received six walks and a hit batsman during the game and had many scoring opportunities during the early innings. Flawless handling of eight chances by Eddie Valenz at third and fine running catches of fly balls by Ernie Ferrandez and Grady Ross chocked off several of the Engineers rallies.

38th Wins On Hopkins' Grand-Slam

By 38th Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry dropped the 2d Battalion, 23rd Infantry 7-2 June 4 for their third straight league win.

Winning pitcher Fred Gibson fanned nine men and was backed with nine hits to take the victory. Second baseman Jim Ayers and first baseman Bennie Scott sparked the 38th's infield and left fielder Ronnie Hopkins paced the offense with three hits and three RBI's.

In action Monday night at the Division softball field, the 38th came from behind to nip 702d Maintenance Battalion 14-13 and remain undefeated in league competition.

With both teams connecting, the 702d held a 13-10 lead in the fifth inning when the 38th's left fielder Ronnie Hopkins stepped up to the plate with the bases loaded. The Marnemen's leading slugger clouted one down the left field line into the fence for a grand slam homerun to put the 38th Infantry ahead 14-13. Neither team scored after that.

Alton Calvez accounted for two more of the 38th's runs in the fourth inning with a two run homer. The winning pitcher was Fred Gibson who won his second league win in a row for the Marnemen.

'I Say There Chaps, Anyone for Cricket?'

By Bernie Modder

When the 1st Brigade of the 2nd Infantry Division was created recently under the new Reorganization Objective Army Division (ROAD) concept, no one, at the time, had planned a slot in this unit's structure for a full-sized cricket team. Nonetheless, in keeping with the ROAD concept of "full flexibility to meet changing conditions," PFC Jay R. Sharbutt, of Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade, seized upon the opportunity to close the ever-vital cricket gap. It happened in this manner:

PFC Sharbutt, before entering the Army in 1962, had traveled extensively throughout Europe in behalf of the temperance movement. On the way back to the States, he stopped off in England to visit old friends and acquaintances in Sussex, a small surburb of London. Here he saw his first cricket game; a hotly contested match between two opposing groups of eleven men. They were armed with paddle-shaped bats, wore funny uniforms, shouted no obscenities, and treated the umpires with the utmost deference and respect.

As in American baseball, each team had a pitcher, whom they called a bowler, and a batsman, whose duty it was to whack the ball into orbit or prevent it from knocking over the wicket. The wicket, he later discovered, was a small "fence" behind the batsman.

With Vigor

As PFC Sharbutt watched this match, he became more and more interested in its strange rules and customs. For example, when and if the batsman hit the ball, he would drop his paddle and trot briskly from his wicket to another wicket, which stood some 22 yards directly in front of him. His team members would then cheer him with vigor and the batsman would shake his hands high over his head and have someone go pick up his paddle. Then this process would be repeated. If the batsman hit the ball and if it were caught on the fly, or if his wicket was hit by the ball, he was out and the opposing team would immediately get their licks in. He would also be out if he stepped out of a section in front of his wicket, called the crease. As Sharbutt wryly noted, not many batsman were foolish enough to leave the crease.

Upon returning to America, Shabutt read extensively on the game of cricket and organized the first cricket team ever fielded by the New York Brass Society, of which he is a member. They lost their first game in Central Park to a group of visiting British newsmen, but became more proficient in the finer points of the game as time progressed.

Upon joining the Army, Sharbutt found himself in the 1st Infantry — later the 1st Brigade. His initial attempts to interest his friends in cricket were to no avail, but he persisted and soon arrived at Sand Hill with the nucleus of a fine cricket team. It is now perhaps the most precisioned cricket team in Fort Benning according to Sharbutt and his assistant coach PFC Robert Gillespie.

Says Sharbutt of his team, "We've had a rough time getting started this year, but now we're really in the groove. We've converted Sp4 Ed Komac from a mediocre bowler to a really fine wicketkeeper. PFC Roosevelt Fairley who used to be a so-so right fielder, is tearing them up with his paddle. I believe before long, he'll be one of the finest batsmen in history." PFC Gillespie, the assistant coach agrees. "Thanks to the efforts of PFC Paul (Doc) Young, the 1st Brigade medic, the team's coming along real fine."

Coaches Sharbutt and Gillespie stated that, "the main thing in keeping a team going is having a fine trainer and we feel that ours is extremely capable of doing just that."

Upon closing my interview with Coach Sharbutt, he said that his team has practiced to the point where they believe they are ready to meet any team on the reservation that thinks they have a better cricket team. As PFC Forrest Fernedez, a utility fielder and wicketkeeper would say, "I truly believe this game has a future in America. No, I wouldn't say it's entirely cricket to England, but to us it is."

Spell Strikes Out 10 During TICTC Rout

Charlie Spell won his sixth straight game in the Major Unit Baseball League spinning a neat five hitter and striking out 10, as The Student Brigade walloped The Infantry Center Troop Command by a score of 12-3.

The big right-hander also took over the lead in the league's homerun department by hitting a tremendous two-run homer in the third inning for this third homerun of the season. The win over TICTC gave the Brigademen a solid three game lead in first place.

The Brigademen wasted no time with TICTC's starting pitcher Dick Carton as they shelled him for three runs in the second inning. Pedro Berrios started things off with a leadoff double. Herbert Louve singled to center scoring Berrios and Tom Eggleston doubled home Louve. A wild pitch and a sacrifice fly brought home the third run of the inning.

The Student Brigade continued their hitting assault in the third inning which saw Sammy Soto take over the pitching chores from Carton. The seven run third inning highlighted by Spell's two run blast gave the Brigademen a comfortable 10-0 lead.

TICTC's Donald Miller drove in two runs in the fifth inning with a double after Jamie Vargas reached first base on an error followed by Joe Barke's single.

Ralph Maru of The Student Brigade had three hits in five trips to the plate to remain as the League's top hitter with a .421 batting average. Spell, in making his eighth appearance has now struck out 83 men and has driven in 12 runs in 26 trips to the plate. Winning pitcher was Spell 6-0) while the loser pitcher was Carton (2-3).

UN CHARTER

Representatives of 50 nations met for two months in San Francisco before adopting the United Nations Charter. It was accepted in late June, 1945.

HARD ONES . . . Making the all too familiar 10-7, 7-4-6-10 and 7-6-10 splits is nearly impossible. At best, it's a matter of luck. One word of help can be offered, however. Chances of actually making these splits are better if you come into the pin you desire to slide across, instead of cutting it thinly going away from it. If you are lucky enough to make any one of these splits, consider it an act of fate. If you don't make them, then don't worry; not many others make them either.

WESTERN RIDER . . . Carol Gabardy, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. R. L. Gabardy, displays awards she has won in Western Style horsemanship events. Carol recently joined the post Junior Hunt Club from Fort Huachuca, Ariz. The trophy Carol is holding is the Groty Trophy for individual progress, horsemanship and sportsmanship. She won it in 1962, at Fort Huachuca. The horse is Ballerina.

Maru Leads the League In 3 Hitting Departments

With 13 games completed in the Major Unit Baseball League, three 197th Infantry Brigade sluggers were among the league's seven .300 hitters.

Grabbing top honors was Ralph Maru of The Student Brigade. For the third straight week, the slugging second sacker retained his hold on the league's batting title. With 24 hits in 57 trips to the plate, Maru is hitting a lofty .421. Maru also leads the league in hits with 24, runs scored with 22, doubles, and is second in the RBI department with 18.

Second place goes to Jimmy Hill of The Student Brigade who has connected with 13 hits in 36 times at bat for a respectable .361. Hill has also slammed two homeruns to lead in that department.

Jesse Rigdon, all-around utility man from the 197th Infantry, is third in the league's batting. Jesse is second in hits with 18 out of 51 appearances for a .352 batting average. Teammate Juan Martinez, fleet-footed center-fielder, is holding down the fourth spot with a .338 average.

Other .300 hitters are Pedro Berrios hitting .326, Paul Dutrak of The Infantry Center Troop Command with a .319 average and Jessie Joyce of The Student Brigade with an even .300.

In pitching, Charlie Spell of The Student Brigade is the league's winningest pitcher with a 6-0 record. Appearing in seven games, Spell has pitched 54 inning, striking out 83 batters and posting a 2.20 earned run average. The lowest ERA in the league belongs to Ted Arginanas, fiery fast-baller from TICTC. Ted is curently sporting a 4-1 record and has the low ERA of 1.84. Gerry Rider and J. R. Miller both from the 197th Infantry have identical records of 2-2.

The Student Brigade leads in team batting with an impressive .301 average. The 197th Infantry ranks second with a average of .252 followed by The Infantry Center Troop Command's 13 game team average of .245. The winless 428th Medics find themselves batting a lowly team average of .161.

Brigade Nine Drops Medics By One Run

By PFC Lee Zani

The winless 428th Medics fought a desperate come-from-behind battle against the 197th Infantry Brigade but fell shy by one run from producing their first Major Unit Baseball League victory. The Brigade won 9-8.

Ken Harper started the game for the 197th and went four innings, giving up two runs, three hits and three walks before giving way to Charlie Perry. Perry was credited with the win but needed help from Jerry Rider in the ninth.

O'Malley was the starting pitcher for the Medics and was relieved by Bill Nixon in the sixth, followed by John Krause in the eighth. Krause was the losing pitcher and is now 0-2 for the season.

The Medics drew first blood as Raul Guerrero doubled home Jimmy Madden in the first inning. Guerrero's long fly in the third brought home the second run.

The Infantrymen broke the ice in the fourth scoring one run on Pat Cruso's single to left bringing home Ken Harper. Six more runs came across in the sixth inning on six hits and two walks. Highlights of the inning were a bases loaded single by Jack Bryant, and Charlie Perry's two run single to left field.

Trailing by a score of 9-4, the Medics knocked Perry from the mound as Don Harns singled to right and moved to third on Maurice Weatherton's single to center. Back to back singles by Madden and Krause produced two runs, and then Rider took over the pitching chores and got Guerrero to pop up for the second out. But Bradley walked and back to back singles by Bob Johnson and Harns put the Medics just one run behind. Rider then got Bob Liebsch to strike out to end the game.

The win keeps the Infantry within striking distance of first place with a season's record of 7-6. For the Medics this was their thirteenth straight loss.

The Major Unit Baseball League has five more games remaining in the first half of play.

Scouts to Survey Benning Talent At Army Area Playoffs in August

By PFC Ted Williamson

The Third Army baseball playoffs, to be held here August 26-30, promise to be one of the biggest sporting events of the year at Fort Benning. With teams from all over the area participating, Gowdy Field will be buzzing with a competitive atmosphere.

The play-offs are likely to serve a two-fold purpose. The main objective will be to determine the Third Army champion. However, the play-offs will also serve as a showcase for any hopeful young players who hope to become professionals. Undoubtedly, an abundance of major league talent - scouts will be in attendance for the five-day tournament, and they'll be anxious to sign professional looking young prospect.

Several local stars will surely attract their share of the spotlight if given the chance to play. As to who will be representing Fort Benning in the event, it's too early in the season to determine, but a few players have served notice that they'll be in the running for a chance to show off their wares.

Heading the list of All-Star candidates is shortstop Jesse Joyce of the Student Brigade nine. Jesse's steady work with the bat and around the shortstop position has impressed local fans and players to the point that he is one of the most respected men in the league.

Strong Infield

A couple of Joyce's teammates in the TSB infield have also attracted the attention of local fans and could catch the eye of a talent scout.

Ralph Maru and Jesus Herrans have both turned in some spectacular performances since they began playing for Bob Kinard's nine. Herrans is the leadoff man for TSB and Maru bats second, and together they provide the spark in the powerful Brigade attack.

TSB pitchers will agree that with Herrans at third and Maru at second, they have the tightest defensive infield in the league.

TICTC's ace righthander, Dick Carton, recently exploded into the limelight when he silenced the here-to-fore thundering bats of The Student Brigade while handing them their first loss of the season, 3 to 1. If Carton's performance against TSB is any indication of things to come, he could well be contender for the Benning All-Stars and a chance to gain exposure to attending scouts.

Southpaw Pitcher

The 197th Infantry Brigade's lefthander, J. R. Miller has also impressed opposition so far, particularly the 428th Medical Battalion, against whom he threw a no-hitter. Miller is a hard thrower, and the word is out in the local league that he will be tough to beat.

As the season rolls along, more players will develop into All-Star material.

With the goal of making the play-off squad and gaining a chance to play before big-league scouts, hopeful players will be putting on some good shows at Gowdy Field in the coming weeks. The league race is expected to tighten-up, especially in the second half, and come August 26, Fort Benning should be favorites to successfully defend their 1962 Third Army crown.

'27 New York Yankees Named Baseball's Best

BOSTON (AFPS)—Editors of the Academy of Sports, made up of 100 of the nation's leading sports editors, have selected the 1927 New York Yankees the greatest major league baseball team in history.

The 1927 Yankees swept to the American League pennant with 110 victories and then beat Pittsburgh in four straight games in the World Series.

Headed by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, the Yankees team of that year was named as the top team on 84 percent of the ballots cast.

The 1927 Yankees, whose 110 victories stood as an American League record until the 1954 Indains won 111, had both outstanding hitting and pitching.

That was the year Ruth hit 60 homers and batted .356, overshadowing a fabulous year by Gehrig, who batted .373 with 47 homers and 175 runs batted in.

The 1929-31 Philadelphia Athletics, Connie Mack's team which won three straight pennants and two world championships with a lineup that included Lefty Grove, Mickey Cochrane, Eddie Collins and Jimmy Foxx, was second, mentioned on 76 percent of the ballots.

Third was the 1936-37 Yankees, a team that included Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio. The wartime 1942-44 St. Louis Cardinals was selected for fourth place and the 1906-07 Chicago Cubs won fifth spot.

Your Pregnancy Diet Effects Baby Teeth

Not too many parents understand what actually takes place in the formation of teeth, thus today's article will deal with this subject.

Pregnancy and calcium go together in many people's minds, as the future mother usually takes some form of calcium supplement. Of course, most of the calcium is involved in the formation of the baby's bones, but some is also used in tooth formation. There is a great difference between the finished product, tooth and bone, and not only in appearance.

The calcium laid down to form the tooth is much harder, especially the enamel, and the amount laid down never decreases, as it can in the bone during severe calcium shortages.

The first calcification of the teeth occurs during the fourth month of pregnancy and the teeth which calcify first are the lower, front baby teeth. All the deciduous, or baby, teeth continue calcification, much in the order of their eruption.

Many things influence the calcification of teeth, and all, good or bad, are shown by the teeth. Most infectious diseases, because of associated high fever, leave a line on the tooth. Many systemic diseases also leave their characteristic marks. Again this should be emphasized, once the enamel is laid down, it will not change in the amount of calcium.

How can the teeth be improved? With the deciduous teeth, much uncertainty still exists. However, diet of the mother remains a most important factor.

Permanent teeth are a different matter, as original calcification begins very near to birth. Therefore, much change can be made in their consistency. Again, diet is important, but fluorides should be administered from birth until all calcification is completed; at least until age 12. Consult your pediatrician about fluorides for your new born baby.

Gettysburg To Restage Past Battle

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The 100th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg on July 3 will be the time for reunions among descendants of Civil War veterans.

More than 1000 men will impersonate Union and Confederate soldiers and dramatize the climax of the fiercest battle ever fought on the North American continent.

The ill-starred attack, known as Pickett's charge, prompted Gen. Robert E. Lee to abandon his invasion of the North, and the Union was preserved.

Lt. Gen. Milton G. Baker (ret.), chairman of Pennsylvania's Gettysburg Centennial Commission, said the 100th anniversary dramatization assault on the historic stone wall the afternoon of July 3, 1963, will begin at the precise time of the original charge.

The stone wall, often referred to as the high water mark of the Confederacy, was attacked by Pickett's Virginians following an artillery barrage that opened from all available Southern guns at 1 p.m.

Military Housing Need Urgent, Armed Forces Committee Told

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has told the House Committee on Armed Forces that 12,100 housing units proposed for funding in 1964 are urgently required.

The committee, studying the Fiscal Year 1964 military family housing program, was told by the Secretary that for the military family man, as for any family man, decent housing for his wife and children is a major concern.

"I can assure you that we will not hesitate to reduce or eliminate any project if we discover that the requirement has in any way become questionable," Mr. McNamara emphasized.

The Secretary told the committee:

"While a military man, in keeping with his profession, must be willing to accept personal hardships, I do not think the nation has the right to expect the same from his family. The necessary rigors inherent in the military life are hard enough on a family man without adding the burden of persistent personal hardships for his family.

"There are few indeed in the military service who can expect to complete their careers without long periods of family separation. With so large a portion of our military forces deployed abroad or at sea, family separation for a large number of our people is an inevitable and, indeed, an accepted feature of service life. This is particularly true in the case of Navy personnel assigned to ships; even when the ship is home-ported in the United States, the ship is often at sea and the man must be away from his family a considerable portion of the time.

Secretary McNamara provided the committee with background data stating that the housing problem has increased enormously, especially since the Korean War when the United States for the first time in its history decided to maintain a large military establishment in peacetime.

He went on to say that the problem of family housing has been further complicated by the marked changes in the military personnel structure which have been taking place since World War II.

Prior to WWII, single men constituted 10 to 75 per cent of the peacetime military establishment. Today 50.2 percent of the active duty male personnel are married and these married men constitute the bulk of career personnel. He said, "these are the men who occupy the key positions and who possess the professional, leadership, and technical skills essential to a modern military establishment."

Throughout his testimony Secretary McNamara referred the committee to attachments which accompanied his text that depicted typical cases of inadequate housing of military families.

FLAG'S NICKNAME

The nickname "Old Glory" was first applied to the flag of the U. S. in 1831 by William Driver.

In closing, Secretary McNamara told the committee:

"Your support of the Military Family Housing Program will fill the remaining important gap in our present plan to improve the conditions of employment of our military personnel and will contribute enormously to a more wholesome and better life for their families."

Flaming Bomb Is Oldest Army Branch Emblem

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The flaming bomb insignia of the Army Ordnance Corps is the oldest branch emblem in the Army.

The Ordnance Corps, maintainer of the Army's many arsenals, recently celebrated its 151st birthday.

During the 18th Century, Eli Whitney laid the path to the evolution of this Corps when he proved that it was possible to manufacture a series of parts and inter-changeably assemble them into a highly desired item — the musket.

Following the War of 1812, when the Corps was organized officially, artillery and ordnance branches were combined and used the flaming bomb as their insignia.

Between 1812 and the Civil War the Ordnance Corps was active in providing munitions to Army forces when needed.

The First World War was the first time maintenance of equipment and arms became a prime corps responsibility.

After WWI, the Department of the Army created the Ordnance field service to clarify maintenance responsibilities.

Ordnance Corps troops have fought as combat soldiers when the need arose. Etched in the history of Guadalcanal, Anzio, Normandy, Battle of the Bulge and Pusan Perimeter are tales of the valor and determination of ordnancemen.

Today's corps has jurisdiction for supply and maintenance of a varied list of Army items, including rockets, guided missiles, small arms, automatic weapon and artillery, mortars, and the accessories needed to make the above function.

FIRST FLAG DAY

The first national observance of Flag Day took place in 1877, when the government requested that the flag be displayed on all public buildings on the 14th of June—the 100th anniversary of the flag's adoption.

U.S. Army Celebrates 188th Birthday Today

Fort Benning military personnel and their fellow soldiers stationed throughout the world, will join with the free people of our nation in celebration of the 188th birthday of the United States Army today.

From the bitter cold of Valley Forge to the bloody sands of Omaha Beach through today's war of words and lead live-or-die conflicts, the Army has withstood and overcome whatever obstacles stood in the path of our nation's freedom.

The keynotes of the 188th celebration are the soldier: key to land power, and the Army: essential for freedom.

In the words of President John F. Kennedy, "The primary purpose of our arms is peace, not war, . . to convince all potential aggressors that any attack on the Free World would be futile."

Our national leaders have emphasized the need for armed forces' readiness, with a combat capability ready to meet any foreseeable situation.

From guerrilla warfare and counterinsurgency techniques used in "cold" war operations to the knowhow needed in fighting a nuclear war, soldiers must have the proper training and discipline needed in the event of enemy attack on the Free World.

Preparedness calls for the ability to fight any kind of war, on any terrain, under any condition, anywhere in the world — and on a moments notice.

The Infantry School insignia symbolizes the determination of our country to deter any potential aggressors. The blue Infantry patch with the embossed motto "Follow Me" and the symbol of the ultimate weapon, the bayonet, which in the hands of a trained Infantryman is the determining factor in any battle, epitomizes the spirit and training necessary to win any conflict.

The Infantry School and the Infantry Center are providing the necessary training which will give tomorrow's leaders the confidence and ability to serve as a deterrent or weapon.

Since the formation of The Infantry School in 1918, over 280,000 officers and enlisted men have been graduated from the various courses of instruction offered on post.

The school is responsible for the development, organization, tactics, techniques and training of Infantry, Airborne, Ranger, and officer training here.

The Infantry Center assists The Infantry School by providing demonstrations and aiding in the training of Reserve and ROTC units throughout the year.

Each unit within the Fort Benning reservation is doing its part in creating a strong and united Army, which acts as a peace maker or is ready in the event of an armed conflict.

SOLDIER OF YEAR . . . Sp4 Hugh S. Wells Jr., a member of Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion (Composite) 10th Artillery, was recently selected as the battalion's outstanding Soldier of the Year. Sp4 Wells has been assigned to the 10th since March of this year and is a Meterological Weather Observer.

Military Band Recordings Are Available

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Recordings made by the four military bands—Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps—are now on sale to the public.

This marks the first time such recordings have been commercially available.

President Kennedy received copies of the records and publicly thanked all those responsible for the recordings.

Each service album has a distinctive sound, flavor and personality, and opens with the familiar service "theme song" and closes with the Star-Spangled Banner. In between are nine selections, whose variety shows off the bands' virtuosity.

Records have been commercially recorded in monaural and stereophonic versions by special permission of the Department of Defense, with all profits to be donated to the National Cultural Center.

The National Cultural Center was established by Act of Congress in 1958 as a bureau of the Smithsonian Institution.

The present campaign to raise funds needed to make the Center a reality deserves the generous financial support of every American who wishes his country to be recognized as supporting the arts that make any civilization worthy of being recorded in history as truly great.

New Directive Revises DOD Private Business Policy

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has signed a new directive informing military and civilians to refrain from any private business or professional activity relating to possible conflict between private interests and officials duties.

The standards set forth in the directive (DOD 5500.7) pertains to all Department of Defense personnel regardless of assignment.

Titled "Standards of Conduct," the directive replaces two parallel directives on the same subject, one dealing with advisers and consultants and the other with all employees.

The revised directive states: "... DOD personnel will not engage in any private activity which involves the use of, or the appearance of the use of, inside information gained through a DOD position for private gain for themselves, their families or business associates. DOD personnel must not use their DOD positions in any way to induce, or give the appearance of inducing, another person to provide any financial benefit to themselves, or persons with whom they have family, business or financial ties."

It further points out that "DOD personnel will not accept any favor, gratuity, or entertainment directly or indirectly, from any person, firm, corporation, or other entity which has engaged, is engaged, or is indeavoring to engage in procurement activities or business transactions of any sort with any agency of the DOD, where such might reasonbly be interpreted as affecting the objectivity and impartiality of such personnel in serving the government."

Regarding families, the new directive declares "Favors, gratuities, or entertainment beslowed upon members of the immediate families of DOD personnel are viewed in the same light as those bestowed upon DOD personnel."

In general, DOD personnel may be subject to criminal penalties if they solicit, accept, or agree to accept anything of value in return for being influenced in performing or in refraining from performing an official act.

The revised directive implements the President's memorandum of May 2, 1963. It also reflects interpretations of the law outlined by the Attorney General.

Engineer Society To Hold Meeting

The Society of American Military Engineers of the Fort Benning-Columbus Post will meet at the Custer Terrace Officer's Club at noon on June 19.

Col. Robert C. Williams, president of the Infantry Board, will be the guest speaker. His topic will be "Infantry Board Activities".

Indians' Friendship Dance To Open Festival Days

Members of the Yuchi Indian tribe will hold the spotlight when "Festival Days" open in Columbus June 21.

They will perform their famous Friendship Dance for the first time in 127 years east of the Mississippi River. The ceremonial dance will take place seven miles south of Phenix City on U. S. Highway 431, beginning at sundown of the festival's first two days, June 21 and 22. Indian games and displays open at 2 p.m. on the same dates.

The Friendship Dance is part of the Yuchi ceremonialism which was best known among tribes in the colonial and early Federal periods of our history. At that time, the dance was called the Green Corn Dance. This dance was usually observed by the Cherokee, various Creek Towns, the Chickasaw and other tribes whom the Yuchis permitted to assume this portion of their religious ceremonies.

The Yuchis are returning to a 100-acre tract of their former homeland, a tract recently given to them by local people. The Yuchi dance is traditionally one which expresses joy and exultation and friendship for all people. And—in this spirit — the Yuchis are inviting their friends to view and participate in the dances!

The dances are part of the annual seven - day ceremony of penitence and thanksgiving with which the Yuchi observed the ripening of new corn and the beginning of a new year.

In addition to the dances, the Yuchis will present a demonstration of their famed stickball game — used as a device to avoid war — offer samples of Indian food and will assemble five typical Yuchi camps, complete with families.

Speaking a language completely unrelated to any other known tongue, the Yuchis were once a powerful tribe, numbering close to 40,000. In the 15th Century, they occupied lands along the Georgia and South Carolina coast, in eastern and central Tennessee, and on the middle Chattahoochee, near present-day Columbus.

In 1540, Spanish explorer Hernando DeSota encountered several of the Yuchi towns and described the inhabitants as the most civilized Indians they had met. There is no evidence that the Yuchi ever engaged in offensive war.

The infamous "Trail of Tears" occurred in 1836. It had preceeded a series of uprisings by the Yuchis and many dissatisfied members of Creek tribe, which served as justification on the part of the state of Alabama and the Federal government to remove them to heavily granted lands in Oklahoma. In 1836, some 1,200 surviving members were herded aboard steamers near Fort Mitchell, about 14 miles below Columbus, and transported under extreme hardships to Fort Smith on the Arkansas River.

Rogers (L), re-enlistment officer at The Infantry Center, receives the Third Army Re-enlistment Award recently on behalf of The Center's enlistment personnel. Making the presentation is Col. Milton G. Schroeder, adjutant general of The Infantry Center. The citation, which was signed by the commanding general of Third Army, Lt. Gen. Blankenship, Jordan Crowned Top Army Marksmen for 1963

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

The Army crowned its 1963 individual rifle and pistol champions here Saturday with honors going to two Marksmanship Training Unit members.

SFC William B. Blankenship received the pistol laurels for the fourth year in succession. Firing a 2-657-136X score out of a possible 2,700-270X, Blankenship easily surpassed the old record of 2,650-123X he set in 1961.

Behind the top handgunner was another MTU firer, SSgt Hershel L. Anderson with a 2,638 - 126X score followed by the European Command's Sgt. Emil Heugatter with a 2633-118X.

The rifle crown was copped by Sgt. Willie D. Jordan who stepped ahead of a field of more than 450 of the Army's best riflemen by firing a 989-89V score out of a possible 1,000-200V.

MTU dominated the rifle grand aggregate places with SFC Robert G. Lancaster taking second place with a 989-75V score followed by Capt. Frank T. Lohmann with a 987-85V.

After posting a healthy 589-50X score out of a possible 900-90X in the .22 caliber aggregate, good enough for a fifth place, and a record breaking composite, Blankenship loomed very prominent as the top contender for the grand aggregate honor with just the .45 caliber tilts remaining.

He found it pretty rough going in the service pistol matches, only able to scrape three second place positions out of the four matches which were tallied to make up the aggregate.

But with the results all in that familiar name loomed prominent again, boasting an 876-40X score, ahead of his next contender by four points, Blankenship took his second aggregate match of the program.

Sets Record

In the grand aggregate match it was really no secret who the winner would be. The question was, by how many

Gen. Rich Welcomes 1,900 ROTC Students to Summer Camp Here

Approximately 1,900 ROTC cadets representing 35 colleges and universities were welcomed here last Monday morning by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

The cadets who reported to the post last Saturday for six weeks of Infantry training, are being commanded by Col. Sam J. Rasor, professor of military science at the University of Alabama.

Gen. Rich is camp commander.

Also on hand to greet the cadets were Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center; Col. Samuel T. McDowell, assistant ROTC camp commander and professor of military science at Clemson S. C. College, and Maj. Joseph Hall, chief, Reserve Components Section at The Infantry Center.

Gen. Rich told the cadets that they would see and do things at The Infantry Center as opposed to reading and discussing in college.

He also stated that "training here is reasonably tough and that during the weeks of training each soldier will be put in a position that requires a certain amount of leadership."

He added that "being an Infantry soldier is the greatest job a man can have because as an Infantry soldier one has the great challenge of trying to win a war."

Gen. Rich also reminded the cadets that there also would be time for them to enjoy some of the many fine recreational faoilities offered on the post during their stay.

Following his speech, the presentation of colors to the cadet corps was made by the general.

Cadet John M. Foxworth of The Citadel in Charleston, S. C., son of Col. and Mrs. Edward M. Foxworth of Orangeburg, S. C., and Fort Benning served as brigade commander for the cadets.

The color guard consisted of Cadet Sam J. Rasor Jr., of the University of Alabama, son of Col. and Mrs. Rasor; Cadet John L. Starnes of East Tennessee State College in Johnson City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Starnes of Johnson City; Cadet Robert A. Scott of Georgia Tech, son of Mr. and Mrs. Macon P. Scott of Atlanta, and Cadet William H. Weaver of Clemson College, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace L. Weaver of Pamplico, S. C.

The general's flag orderlies were Cadet Dan H. Honeywell of the University of Florida in Gainesville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen D. Honeywell of Vero Beach, Fla., and Cadet James D. Hunter of Georgia Tech, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Hunter of Arlington, Va.

Full Day of Activities Set for YAC Carnival

As the Fourth of July approaches and thoughts shift to fireworks and the celebrating of America's 188th Birthday, so also approaches the day for the Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival here.

The carnival to be held on Eubanks and Gordon Fields will also give post personnel and people from the surrounding area an opportunity to celebrate the holiday without using traffic-congested highways.

The big event on the post also aids in raising funds for YAC in providing the young people with constructive athletic and social activities.

At 6 a.m. the day of festivities will begin with a cross-country run followed up at 11 a.m. with the opening of the fairgrounds at Eubanks Field.

Carnival booths galore will be spread over Eubanks Field and kids and parents will have a chance to test their skill at such things as dart throwing nail driving, and fish ponds.

Events requiring more athletic ability will also be held. Among these will be archery and softball throws, horseshoe pitching and golf chipping.

Food concession stands, offering cold drinks to the hot and thirsty and hamburgers and hot dogs to the hungry will be scattered throughout the area.

Competition among the major units on the post to decide the outstanding major unit and individual soldier will be going on all day and will include such tests as physical fitness, platoon drills, jeep driving and M-1 rifle and .45 caliber pistol firing.

Cash prizes to the various individual winners will be awarded at night on Gordon Field. At this time the outstanding unit will also be pre-points would the handgunner surpass the old record.

The answer was seven points and 12X's, bettering his own standing record set in 1961.

The four .45 caliber matches comprising the aggregate started with the slow fire event which went to SFC William G. Horton, MTU, with a 192-7X, followed by Blankenship with 192-6X. Sgt. Elgin P. Carter, Fourth Army, with a 191-6X, took third.

The National Match course went to SFC Robert L. Jones of MTU with a 293-12X score. Blankenship followed with 292-15X, and MSgt. Arthur J. Purser, MTU, took third position with a 292-10X.

Lingle Wins

The timed fire match went to SFC John H. Lingle, MTU, for 200-18X, followed by Blankenship with 199-14X score. Third place went to MSgt. Richard Sineman, MTU, for a 199-13X.

The rapid fire match, the last of the make-up matches of the .45 caliber aggregate, saw SFC Alvin J. Moore, Fourth Army, take the first position with a 198-9X score, followed this time by SFC Ralph O. Thompson, MTU, with a 197-11X score.

Sgt. Charles H. Tippeton of the Second Army took third place with 196-10X score.

With the last of the individual matches fired, MTU members retired from the championships, refraining from firing in the coming team matches.

Defending team champions in the short range rifle match, Third Army, topped the field again this year by blasting an 884-43V score out of a possible 900-180V.

The European Command took the next two positions. The Gold team took second with an 882-56V score and the Red team took third with an 882-45V.

The U. S. Army, Pacific, moved in on the Third Army defenders in the long range team match, blasting a 590-85V score out of a possible 600-120V to lead the rest of the major command teams.

Behind the new long range champions came Fourth Army Blue with a 587-63V followed by Second Army Gold, with a 587-57V.

Break Record

The Pacific command came back in the U. S. Army Rifle team championship, breaking its own record.

Blasting out a 1,475 - 138V score out of a possible 1,500-300V, the team tacked seven tie-breaking V's to the record score they shot last year during the All-Army tilts.

Anchoring the winners was 1st Lt. Charles Feuerbacher with a 247-29V score out of a possible 250-50V.

Rounding out the team were SFC Willis Leonard, SSgt. Norman Skarpness, SFC Cecil Stevens, Sgt. James Lassauer and PFC Douglas Mock.

The Third U. S. Army Red team took second place with a 1,472-137V score followed by the Fourth Army Red team with a 1,470-126V.

Third Army closed the rifle competition by winning the Infantry Trophy match with a 1,144 score ahead of their next competitors by 24 points.

Sixth Army Green was second with 1,120 score followed by the European Command's Green team with 1,117 score.

The Infantry Trophy match differs from the conventional matches fired on bull's - eye targets, in that the teams of six riflemen shoot at silhouette targets at ranges of 600, 500, 300 and 20 yards. Scores are tabulated on the hits and distribution of fire by the shooters.

The Fourth Army took the first two pistol team events, the first of which was the Service Pistol Team Championship fired with the .45 caliber pistol over the National Match Course. The Fourth Army firers collaborated for a 1,194-40X score out of a possible 1,200-120X in winning.

The Fourth Army Blue sewed up the second position with a 1,134-23X score followed by the Third Army Red team with a 1,133-42X score. The possible score was 1,200-120X.

In the center team championship, the Fourth Army Red posted a 1,171-48X for the first place position and new All - Army record. Their score bettered the old record by three points and 34 X's.

Second place went to the European Command's Blue team for 1,157-40X followed by another Fourth Army team, the White team, with 1,153-45X.

The closing match of the competition went to the Sixth Army Blue team for a 1,174-52X score, followed closely by Third Army Blue in second position with a 1,173-51X, and the European Blue team in the third place with a 1,173-47X.

YAC

The evening will also be climaxed by a fireworks show on Gordon Field.

A street dance with music provided by the Infantry Center Band will be held from 7 to 8:45 p.m. in the Faith School parking lot.

Bldg. 2732 in the Student Brigade area will also be the scene of a Barbecue throughout the day.

All in all report YAC officials the event is coming along well.

MAJ. KOEHNEN RECEIVES PEN SET
Gen. Jenkins (L) Makes Presentation

Maj. Koehnen Named IOCC Honor Graduate

Maj. Fred J. Koehnen, was graduated from Associate Infantry Officer Career Course, Class No. 3, with top honors.

Maj. Koehnen received an average of 94.7 percentile in the subjects covered in the course.

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben E. Jenkins, the speaker for the graduation exercises, was introduced by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanant of The Infantry School. Gen. Jenkins also presented the honor graduate with his certificate and a desk set and pen.

In his address to the graduating body, Gen. Jenkins stated, "That the task of all officers, no matter what country they come from, or what branch of service they are in is the same, and that is to be a leader."

"The leader is not only the officers who lead their companies or platoons; it is also the non-commissioned officers of the company and the divisional, corps, and army commanders," the general said.

There are three fundamentals that a military leader must master before he becomes an effective leader, Gen. Jenkins noted. The first is, he must know how to deal effectively with every subordinate in his command, to get the most out of them.

Second, he must be able to employ every piece of equipment he has in his command, and three, he must be able to take the two above and mold them into a fighting unit capable of overcoming any obstacles in its path, Gen. Jenkins added.

The leader will also have to sell himself as a leader, not only to his subordinates, but to his superiors and colleagues, as well, the general said.

He must have integrity to the extent that it will not be questioned on anything at any time.

Gen. Jenkins stated that officers generally fall into three categories, those that make things happen, those who wait for things to happen, then react, and those who do not know what is happening, and are afraid to find out. Of the three groups the first two are leaders, he said.

Officers who welcome the chance to match wits with an equally prepared enemy are leaders of the caliber the military wants, he added.

Gen. Jenkins concluded by saying, leaders must always remember that their subordinates are the ones who carry them into triumph, not their superiors.

Among the graduates of the class were 22 officers from 11 other countries.

BOY SCOUT CORTEZ LAWRENCE
To Attend World Scout Jamboree

YAC Sponsored Scout To Attend World Meet

By PFC Tom Luce

Boy Scout Cortez Lawrence son of MSgt. (Ret.) and Mrs. Lester Lawrence will represent local Boy Scouts at the 11th World Jamboree in Athens, Greece, in August.

The 16 - year - old Explorer Scout is co - sponsored by the Youth Activities Club (YAC) and his parents for his European trip which will include short visits in Great Britain, Switzerland and Italy before his arrival at the Jamboree site.

According to Mrs. Lawrence, the husky, Columbus High School junior's "Whoops of joy could be heard for blocks when he found out he had been picked from among three local Scout finalists competing for the trip by the five - member board of YAC officials."

Although Cortez isn't slated to leave here until the middle of July, he has been frantically scurrying among his scouting friends trying to assemble as many scouting emblems and typical American home-made articles (arrowheads, Indian gear and beadwork) as he can for the traditional "swap" activity at the Jamboree.

"The main reason I want to go on this trip is so I can see how other people live and learn their views and impressions of this country," Cortez explained.

He has already read many books on the various countries he will visit, paying particular attention to the customs and culture of the Greeks.

Cortez is also busily learning a few handy Greek phrases, such as Den katalavene." (I don't understand) and "Milate anglika?" (Do you speak English?).

"We hope to leave a good impression of American scouting by demonstrating the skills and explaining the folklore of our heritage," he said.

The Fort Benning Scout will participate in such All-American activities as Indian dances, log rolling, whip-cracking and other contests and events displaying the early pioneer spirit.

"If we can make a favorable impression on all the Scouts at the Jamboree, the trip will be more than worthwhile," he emphasized.

Cortez became interested in the Jamboree from an article in the scouting publication, "Boy's Life," which illustrated and explained the trip.

The Jamboree will take place at the site of the Battle of Marathon, which is about 24 miles northeast of Athens on the Gulf of Marathon.

The site is surrounded by the historic Parthenon, Acropolis, Corinthian columns and many other ancient points of interest in Greece.

Cortez will be among more than 12,000 representing over nine million Scouts and leaders of the world-wide brotherhood.

Wear Your Uniform With Pride, Dignity

Military bearing and appearance are two items continuously expounded upon. Yet, do we take these lectures to heart? Do we attempt to conduct ourselves in a manner creditable to our branch of service, regardless of whether we are in or out of uniform?

Civilians and members of other services see a man in uniform and will often base their opinions of that branch of service solely upon the appearance and behavior of that individual. This may not be justified, but it's usually the case. The same holds true for servicemen when in civilian attire—they are still representatives of the Armed Forces; of their particular branch.

Don't try to escape this responsibility — face up to it with pride. Wear your uniform with dignity; conduct yourself accordingly, in uniform or civvies. Show the public that you are a representative of your service and proud of it.

Some "Sad-Sack" types will fall back in the old excuse that they're in a special category assignment and aren't required to be spit-and-polish. In some cases this may be true, but what happened to their personal pride? Will they always have someone around to tell them to shine their shoes or to straighten their ties?

The answer is NO! You are supposed to be an adult who can take care of yourself. Exercise self-evaluation — would the thousands of men that have been killed in the same uniform that you are wearing be proud to have you as a successor? They gave their lives for what that uniform represents and for this country. Can't you give it a little more time? (AFPS)

Your America
BY CLARK KINNAIRD

The resolution approved July 2, 1776, and the Declaration adopted in Continental Congress two days later, were simply unifications of actions the Colonies had begun to take separately. Prior to these dates, and in accordance with a recommendation made by the Congress on May 15, seven States had set up provisional congresses, legislatures, or assemblies, four had drawn up constitutions, and Massachusetts had instituted a provisional government.

Congress' recommendation had been anticipated in North Carolina. The patriot convention which met at Halifax, in Mecklenburg County, in April 1776, resolved "that the delegates of this Colony in (Continental) Congress be empowered to concur with the delegates from other colonies in declaring independence and forming foreign alliances, reserving to this colony the exclusive right of forming a constitution and laws for this colony."

In Virginia, the same convention of that State's patriots which adopted George Mason's Declaration of Rights and a State Constitution in June 1776, directed its delegates at Philadelphia to advocate independence. Hence the resolution presented by Richard Henry Lee, which brought forth the actions on July 2 and July 4 referred to above.

While we observe July 4 as Independence Day, there actually were 13 — the days on which the people of the individual Colonies ratified the actions of Congress on July 2 and 4. There were, of course, no telegraph lines in those days. Most of the people in the Colonies learned of the actions first through the publications of the Declaration in newspapers in their Colonies. The text had reached the respective legislature and newspapers via broadside circulated from Philadelphia.

Capitol Notes

Congress is taking steps to increase the size of the Corps of Cadets at the United States Military Academy and the Cadet Wing at the U. S. Air Force Academy. Representative F. Edward Hebert (D-La.) has introduced legislation to boost enrollment at both schools. Hearings on the bill (HR6611) were due to get underway before the Hebert House Armed Services Subcommittee by mid-June.

The purpose of the proposal is to provide the Military and Air Force Academies with the same size student body as authorized for the Naval Academy. At present USMA and USAFA each graduate abut 550 cadets annually. Enactment of the new proposal ultimately would enable the two schools to award commissions to about 930 graduates each year.

In rewriting the military pay bill in the House, the Rivers Armed Services Subcommittee, headed by L. Mendel Rivers (D-S.C.), eliminated several sections with a promise to restudy them as separate bills at another date.

The first two of these measures have now been reconsidered, approved by the Subcommitee and reported to the full Committee.

One (HR 4338) authorizes "reimbursement" to a member of the Armed Forces "for travel performed by himself and-or his dependents under orders that direct him to make a change of station and that are subsequently cancelled, revoked, or modified."

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Are You Afraid?

By Chaplain (Capt.) James F. Pulley Jr.

In a world where doubt runs rampant, where disappointments are always present, where nothing exists which does not dissolve some day and where no one can prove anything of what lies beyond the grave, there is likely to be fear.

Fear maneuvers in the human life as the great destroyer and stops to stand as the instigator of many sins. Fear is that great beast of the deep which dwells within our being. No one escapes this disease of the soul for we are stenciled at our mother's breast with the fears of her soul.

Our beliefs, our thoughts, our hopes, our action, yes, even our very lives are sometimes controlled and directed by our fears.

Fear also leads each of its victims in a search for his own security. Some men try to be good men only because of their fear of Divine punishment. Still others are respectable for fear of receiving a failing grade on their Divine report. There is a freakish concern within many brought on by the fear of failure and the fear of dying which far surpasses their concern for our God.

Fear has its roots deeply embedded in the feeling of guilt. The mind which encounters deep feelings of guilt soon operates as does the mind of animals. Also the mind which encounters deep feelings of guilt soon rocks its environment with dogmatic statements concerning his life and his God which are efforts to dispel his fear.

Yes, fear is the rot of life as it leads me from the sunlight of God into the dampness of despair. A child-like trust in God is the only protection. Victory is gained only through the undivided response of a life which worships God and trusts Him. In all of God's creating endeavor, surely He has not created one strong enough to dispell all of his doubts and fears alone.

In these moments as we stand in awe and reverence for all the brave and fearless men who have died for their country, perhaps the thought for our day should become truth as found in many of their lives.

As their deeds speak to us, they clearly reveal that the brave man is not the man who is not afraid, but the man who overcomes his fear with his faith. An un-divided faith is sure to dissolve fear, but also produces a fear of another kind—the fear of failing God. Are you afraid?

Little Theater's 'Streetcar' Opens Wednesday

By Peter Tsitsicheff

The Fort Benning Little Theater Wednesday opens with the last play of its 1962-63 season, bringing to this post one of the most provocative productions ever staged at Fort Benning.

This production of Tennessee Williams' drama "A Streetcar Named Desire" is the result of planning and work of approximately 40 individuals both from Columbus and Fort Benning.

The Fort Benning Little Theater, sponsored by Special Services, is open to all Post-connected people who have an interest in amateur theatricals. Association with the troupe is strictly informal, with no dues or fees assessed.

For over a dozen years, the group has contributed to the after-duty pleasure of many talented people who, in turn have provided some of the most memorable moments in local little-theater productions.

The original drawings that appear for the first time on this page are the work of local artist Louis Cheney, set designer for "Streetcar."

Appearing in this production of "Streetcar" directed by PFC Ted Martin, will be Betty Britto as Blanche Dubois, Ted Martin as Stanley Kowalski, Nelcine Reddington as Stella Kowalski, Dale Carlson as Harold "Mitch" Mitchell, Carolyn Creatore as Eunice Hubbell, Bernard Reynolds as Steve Hubbell, Steve Regan as a young collector, Gary Michael as Pablo Gonzales, Karla Hawks as a nurse, Sam Rawls as a doctor, Carol Klinger as a flower peddler and Sandra Moody as a street woman.

Curtain time for opening night, June 26 and for June 27 and 28 is 8:30 p.m. in Fort Benning's Playhouse, building 2519. Admission is free.

'Hi Mom' Cooperation Is Lauded

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) Norman S. Paul has expressed the gratitude of the U. S. Armed Forces for the "Hi Mom" overseas telephone program conducted by the Communication Workers of America during the 1962 Christmas holiday period.

The Communication Workers, cooperating with the USO, financed over 1,000 calls by overseas servicemen and women to their families in the states. The calls were made from numerous overseas USOs and isolated posts where there are no NSO facilities. The latter were arranged through area commanders.

Calls originated in many continental European stations, the Middle East, Japan, Alaska, Great Britain, Canada, Labrador, Iceland, Greenland, Taiwan, the Canal Zone, Okinawa, the Philippines, and the Virgin Islands and from as far away as Pakistan and Pratoria, South Africa.

Secretary Paul told the union that its "Hi Mom" program "is a tangible demonstration of your organization's interest and concern with the sacrifices of our service personnel stationed overseas."

House Committee Studies Cold War Gold Star Plan

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Gold Star lapel pins for the next of kin of Armed Forces members killed in cold war activities have come a bit closer to realization with a favorable report by a House Subcommittee to the House Armed Services Committee.

A Defense Department proposal would amend present law to authorize the buttons for the next of kin of those who, after June 30, 1958, died or have died as the result of cold war actions or operations.

As the law now stands, it provides the gold stars for deaths in both World Wars and any subsequent war or period of armed hostilities in which the United States may be engaged. The current proposal would eliminate the armed hostilities requirement.

The authorization for the cold war lapel button would be made retroactive to July 1, 1958, the official date of the beginning of the Vietnam operation and the date established for the initial award of the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

The Navy Department is the Defense Department's representative for this legislation and Navy Secretary Fred Korth, in forwarding the proposal to the Speaker of the House, said, "When areas of the world are in fact theaters of armed hostilities and commitments of the United States require the presence of armed forces in various capacities, members killed by hostile acts while meeting these commitments for their country have made the same supreme sacrifice required of so many during war. Cold war casualties resulting from hostile acts are entitled to the same recognition as wartime casualties and their next of kin should be entitled to display the gold star lapel button which signifies the supreme sacrifice made for this nation."

COLD ANSWER . . . If you have had bacon that got moldy or rancid before you've had a chance to use it, here is an answer to your problem; Freeze it! An exceptionally handy way to freeze bacon is to wrap packages of 2 or 3 strips — or in a plastic bag before putting in the freezer. As needed, bacon can be removed in the desired amount and cooked as usual. The rest should stay fresh and tasty.

Coin Need Is Greater Than Ever

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The United States mint turned out 3-5 billion coins last year according to a recent industrial bulletin published by Arthur D. Little Co.

The average American over 14 years old, says the bulletin, must have about eight dollars of change of all sorts all the time. The demand is now so great that new methods of manufacture soon must be introduced.

Pennies are most in demand and making them is a rather profitable business. From one pound of copper, 146 one cent coins can be produced at a manufacturing cost of about 11 cents. Some other common coins, however, must be produced at a loss.

Mrs. Elvy B. Roberts, wife of the chief of staff of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), was the honored guest of the ladies of the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division at a luncheon recently.

At the U-shaped luncheon table, which was decorated with large magnolias, Mrs. John J. Hennessy, wife of Lt. Col. Hennessy, battalion commander, introduced Mrs. Samuel J. Merrill and Mrs. Guy Eberhart, whose husands are members of the 1st Brigade staff. Also introduced to the group was Mrs. Michael W. Maxwell, bride of Lt. Maxwell, battalion S-1.

Kyle, whose family has long been established in Columbus, is active in the Three Arts League and Columbus Little Theater, and has worked intensively with the "Stay and See" program.

Assisting Mrs. Ball as hostess was Mrs. Donald F. Warren.

Son Thanks Korean Who Aided Father

KUNSAN AB, Korea (AFPS) — Thirteen years ago, in July 1950, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, then the commanding general of the 24th Infantry Division, was separated from his command while fighting a personal rear-action with the enemy.

At first the general was reported missing in action. Later official and unofficial circles were rife with rumors as to the general's fate. It was not until Christmas of 1951 that Gen. Dean's name first appeared on a Communist prisoner of war list.

During the period between his separation and capture, Gen. Dean, suffering from fatigue and a broken shoulder, was found asleep deep in the mountains by a Mr. Pak and his daughter. Despite the risk, the Paks harbored Gen. Dean for two days. Shortly after leaving their home, the general was captured by the enemy.

Recently a village official wrote Gen. Dean, now retired and living in California, that the Pak family was living in Mu Ju, a small village about 100 kilometers from Kunsan.

By acoincidence, Air Force Capt. William F. Dean Jr., was stationed at Kunsan AB. A letter from his father told him where the Paks could be found. The son journeyed into the hills and met with Pak and other members of his family.

Later young Dean was shown the spot on the hillside where his father had been discovered sound asleep. Capt. Dean then planted a spruce sapling to mark the place where his father had been befriended in time of need.

Square Plastic Wafers May Someday be Cash

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A revolutionary form of currency, patented by a Washington engineer, would replace bills with square plastic wafers. One advantage claimed for the proposed new legal tender is that it could be easily counted and identified by automatic machines.

Stanley F. Reed, the inventor, conceived the idea while playing routlette in 1955. He noted the ease with which change was made between chips of varying denominations.

The patent calls for the plastic wafers to be very thin. It also says that the same protections against counterfeiting as the present would suffice. The wafers are said to have more or less the same weight as the paper money used today, but have greater durability and ease of mechanical handling.

The suggested denominations are from $1 to $500. The values can be identified by slots, teeth and projections in the four edges.

For protection against counterfeiting, the wafers could be given distinct electrical, magnetic, mechanical or chemical characteristics or be "marked" with radioactive materials.

Samples that were made up were of nylon printed with green and black metallic powder.

Clarification On Extensions Made by DOD

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A clarification has been made regarding a recent announcement on prohibiting accrued leave and travel pay to enlisted personnel if on an extension following a regular tour.

A Comptroller General ruling, which pertains primarily to Army and Air Force, prohibits payment of travel allowance and leave carried forward or accrued during extension to individuals who have entered into an extension period.

The only way accrued leave will be paid is if the indivinal does get elect to have it carried forward, and if the extension is for less than one year. Travel pay will only be given at the time of expiration of a contracted term of enlistment which includes an extension.

The ruling also pertains to the Navy; however, only in rare cases are such extensions necessary.

The Navy Comptroller office said that the Navy is permitted by law to effect reenlistments 90 days earlier than expiration date because of duties performed, such as being at sea.

The Navy is also permitted to pay accrued leave and travel allowance to individuals obtaining their first extension of an enlistment. Neither of these payments are made on subsequent extensions.

'Old Ironsides' to Visit Fair, 'Old Boston' Balks

BOSTON (AFPS) — Old Boston Bay is more disturbed than at any time since the Red Coats were uninvited to a non-televised Tea Party some 190 years ago. Today's rolled waters brush against the hull of what is generally considered the oldest commissioned warship still afloat, the USS Constitution.

"'Old Ironsides," as the frigate is known in legend and history, has been proposed as an early visitor to New York's 1964 World's Fair. The conservative Bostonians see no reason for the old vessel to leave her comfortable berth in Boston Harbor.

The reasons evoked run the gamut of worry for the ship's well being to pride in Boston itself. The city dwellers at the landlocked end of Cape Cod say the ship never served in any capacity with New York troops, sailors or sea-battles. They also say the ship is of great value and could never be replaced if something went wrong and she sank or was wrecked enroute to New York.

Special to The Bayonet

Over 17,000 dead of the 2nd Infantry Division, representing the fallen of three wars, were honored recently in Washington, D.C. Site of the memorial service was the "Flaming Sword" monument of the Indianhead Division on historic Constitution Avenue in Washington.

Guest speaker for the solemn occasion was Gen. (Ret.) Jacob L. Devers of the U. S. Army. The veteran officer and graduate of the U. S. Military Academy served for 40 years on active duty from 1909 to 1949. Devers commanded the Sixth Army Group and headed all the forces which invaded Southern France.

War Veterans

Among the guests attending the memorial service were veterans of the first global conflict, World War II and the Korean Conflict. Representing the active 2nd Infantry Division was a contingent from the unit stationed presently at Fort Benning.

Heading the group from Fort Benning was Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., former chief of staff for the Indianhead Division. Accompanying Col. Kunzig was Maj. Arnold Collins, assistant inspecior general for the division.

Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, the top non-commissioned officer of the 2nd Division also made the trip, escorting a four-man color guard which performed during the afternoon ceremony at the monument.

Mr. Ralph O. Landgren, chairman of the 2nd Division Association's Memorial Committee, served as master of ceremonies at the function. The laying of wreaths at the marble tribute honored the fallen of the three wars as well as members of the armies of France, Netherlands, and Thailand who fell while serving as part of

The division participated in Armed Forces Week with troops parading, and special displays of equipment and weapons.

Bond Established Between U.S. and Vietnam Second Divisions

By Bob deCamara

"East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet", may have been true in Rudyard Kipling's day, but today that saying is as dead as "Fortress America."

From South Vietnam where he is serving as deputy military advisor to a Vietnamese infantry division to the White House recently came one of those men who holds America's loftiest combat decoration, the blue-and-white, star - shaped Medal of Honor.

Lt. Col. Robert R. Nett brought to the White House for delivery to the President a letter of appreciation and a plaque from the commander of the 2nd Infantry Division of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam.

Signed by Col. Lam-Van-Phat, commanding, the letter spoke of "meritorious and outstanding service to the Army of Vietnam in its struggle against communist agression."

No gift ever came as a more sincere courtesy.

Vietnam is a battle-torn Southeast Asian country ripped by more than a decade of savage struggling. Embroiled in a life or death war with the armies of Ho Chi Minh to the North, the blackout of Vietnam would be a pall over the independence of all Southeast Asia. The 2nd Infantry Division, one of nine combat-toughened Vietnamese infantry divisions, is in constant use to repel the communist seige.

In February of this year, Col. Nett departed Fort Benning, Ga., where he had served as chairman of the Ranger Department's Platoon Tactics Committee, and travelled the thousands of miles to that far-flung outpost of world freedom.

It is no coincidence that Col. Nett, after the White House reception and as his leave drew to a close, should stop by Fort Benning on his way back to Vietnam. Fort Benning, besides housing the Army's renowned Infantry School, also is the garrison area of the U. S. Army's 2nd Infantry Division.

When the colonel did leave from San Francisco for his trip back across the Pacific, he carried with him an honorary membership in the U.S.'s 2nd Division to Col. Lam-Van-Phat. The certificate was signed by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general.

The two divisions have much in common besides the name and the shared motto, "Second to None." The Vietnamese division was born and bred in battle. Its "soldiers and leaders are courageous," testifies Col. Nett. "They go into battle without fear or hesitation."

The American division sprang from conflict in World War I and in its first campaign, Chateau - Thierry, etched its name indelibly in the hearts of grateful Americans. Since, it has fought gallantly through two more major wars.

The Vietnamese division is uniquely suited to counter-guerrilla warfare with an unmatched series of regiments, battalions and companies, extreme mobility and split-second flexibility.

In the United States, recently reorganized into a brigade-battalion system (the first old-line division to do so), the 2nd Division is equipped to fight anything from an atomic battlefield war all the way down the scale to counter-insurgency skirmishes — anywhere in the world, if need be. One further bond laconically noted by Col. Nett with a shrug of his shoulders, "A soldier is a soldier."

the 2nd Division in Korea.

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Merwin Silverthorne, U. S. Marine Corps, laid the wreath in tribute to World War I dead. One of the 2nd Division's initial commanders during that war was a Marine, the famous Gen. John A. Lejeune. In that war, the 2nd was made up of both Army and Marine Corps personnel and a squad of active-duty Marines was on hand at the memorial service as part of the honor guard.

Honoring the dead of World War II, Maj. Gen. Ralph Zwicker, U. S. Army, placed the second wreath at the base of the monument. The Indianhead unit suffered over 16,000 casualties in World War II with 4,001 killed in action, died of wounds or missing in action.

A commander of the 2nd during the Korean War set the third wreath at the "Flaming Sword" edifice. Maj. Gen. (Ret.) James C. Fry, U. S. Army, commanded the unit in Korea and during Sunday's memorial program served as general chairman.

Military representatives of the French, Netherlands and Thailand embassies assisting in placing a fourth floral wreath at the monument, depicting tribute to their dead who fell as members of the Indianhead Division in combat. They were Brig. Gen. Jean Compagnon, France; Col. A E. Van Dishoeck, the Netherlands, and Lt. Col. Krisn Choechareren of Thailand.

On hand from St. Louis, Mo., was the national president of the 2nd Division Association, Mr. Percy Terwilliger. Other members of the Association came from around the country for the occasion.

A firing squad from the 3rd Infantry, the "Honor Guard" unit which guards the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, fired the traditional three volleys over the "Flaming Sword" monument at the conclusion of the service.

DEATH COMES TO A SOLDIER

At approximately 4 a.m. last Saturday, Sgt. Careless was killed in a private automobile accident.

Sgt. Careless was traveling west on U. S. Highway 80 at an excessive rate of speed. About nine miles east of Columbus, he failed to negotiate a curve. His car ran off the road, traveled 294 feet, overturned and traveled an additional 168 feet. Sgt. Carless was thrown from the car and sustained fatal injuries.

Probable causes of the accident were: (1) driving at an excessive rate of speed; (2) failure to negotiate a curve due to the high speed; and, (3) probable fatigue due to the late hour.

Statistics prove that the majority of all traffic accidents are caused by violations of basic traffic laws. This tragic loss of life could have been prevented.

COOK of the WEEK

Cookies bring such a big reward in cheer and satisfaction. They make hospitality so easy and are fun to share with friends and neighbors.

Although it is probably no easy matter to keep a well-stocked cookie jar when children are in the home, even the busiest mother likes to make a valiant effort to keep the cookie jar filled for meal time and between meal snacks.

Mrs. Kenneth Staveness submits her recipe for Town Toast Norwegian Cookies.

TOWN TOAST NORWEGIAN COOKIES

1 Cup White Sugar
1 cup Brown Sugar
1 Cup Shortening
1 Tsp. Baking Powder
2 Eggs
3½ cups flour
1 tsp. baking soda
4 Tbsp. Water
1 cup nutmeats
½ Tsp. Salt
1 Tsp. Vanilla

Mix and form into two rolls and refrigerate to chill. Cut in thin slices and bake in hot, 400 degree oven.

Aviation Coffee Held at MOOM

Hostesses for the monthly coffee of the 2nd Aviation Battalion held in the MOOM were Mesdames Everett Hamilton and Neil Johnson.

Mrs. Clifford Burns poured refreshments at a table centered with a summer straw beach hat. The hat was won as a doorprize by Mrs. Charles Gibson.

Other doorprizes were potted plants won by Mesdames Paul Nelson, Everett Hamilton, Charles Anderson, and James Wilkie.

Mesdames Dale Waddell, James Wilkie, Paul Barrington, Paul Nelson, and Francis Walsh were introduced to the group.

The mother of Mrs. Paul Robinson, M.r.s. Frederick Flynn was visiting her daughter and attended the coffee.

Lt. Col. Lanier Hosts Battalion First Meeting

Officers and wives of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, recently met as a group for the first time at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

They were guests of battalion commander, Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier and Mrs. Lanier.

A social hour, held in the Corregidor Room marked the first social event since the recent formation of this battalion. Honored guests included Col. and Mrs. Edgar R. Poole, commander of the 2nd Division's 1st Brigade, and Mrs. Lucien F. Keller, wife of the commanding officer of the division's 3rd Brigade.

Lt. Col. D. Paul Speaks to 9th Infantry Wives

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry held a group coffee recently at the Rota Center. The ladies were honored to have as a guest speaker Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, the battalion commander.

Lt. Col. Paul told the ladies of the trip over to Germany, their trip by convoy from Baumholder to Mannheim, their living facilities and entertainment centers. Lt. Col. Paul then answered several questions.

Arrangements of yellow carnations against a blue table cloth made a cheery atmosphere. Hostesses for the occasion were enlisted wives of Headquarters Company headed by Mrs. Floyd Griffis, Mrs. John Motsenbocker and Mrs. Dalmer Cox.

A short board meeting was held immediately following the coffee. Mrs. Kenneth Schrieber presided over the meeting at which time several activities were voted on. There was a discussion of future activities before the meeting was adjourned.

Support Monthly Bridge Hosted

Wives of Support Command officers met Thursday for their monthly bridge party at the Country Club.

The group plays progressive bridge from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., having lunch at the club, on the third Thursday of each month.

The role of hostess for the event rotates among the wives who play regularly.

Mrs. Frank Greene is in charge of the activity for the Support Command wives.

PRESIDENTS CHANGE . . . Sworn in recently as new president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead is Mrs. Wayne D. Cliff, (L), accepting the president's gavel from past president, Mrs. James A. Scott. The Ladies of the Big Indianhead is an organization for wives of 2nd Division noncommissioned officers.

Mrs. L. Walker Hosts Coffee

The officers' wives of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, though living in a feminine atmosphere, are managing to keep an active social life. This is another facet of their schedule, which includes Rota-center and increased responsibility at home where they are both mother and father.

Many impromptu affairs have taken place: card parties and theatre parties are a few.

Recently Mrs. Loren Waller was hostess for a coffee held in her home. A tape recording was made to send to Baumholder and included messages and general comments from each wife present to her husband.

Rotaplan Battalion Fights It Out in 'Arrowhead' War

By 1-23rd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, in Germany under the Army's unit rotation system, Rotaplan, was called upon recently to participate in a full-scale Field Training Exercise called exercise "Arrowhead."

This first FTX for the Rotaplan battalion began with a 2nd Brigade Readiness Test alert.

Road March

The 8th Infantry Division's 2nd Brigade order came for the unit to move from the Idar-Oberstein area to the Kaiserslautern area on a tactical road march. Units of the battalion rapidly deployed into positions on a defensive line and thrust forward elements to maintain contact with other elements of the division to the front.

Through cross attachment with one of the brigade units with which the 23rd serves, the battalion gained one of the tank companies of the 1st Battalion, 68th Armor. Company B, commanded by Capt. Frank Harbor, had been attached to the 68th Armor.

Under the guidance of company commanders Capt. Louis Menestrey and Capt. Reginald Corliss, Companies A and C of the 23rd formed a strong defensive line in the vicinity of Kreimbach. The attached tank company, Company A, commanded by Lt. Johnnie Smock, was placed in a blocking position to the rear of the defensive line. Fighting from the initial defensive line, and falling back to successive delaying positions, the battalion held the aggressor at bay for two successive days.

Assisted by the 2nd Platoon, Company B, 12th Engineers, the front line units constructed a deep barrier system in front of new defensive positions and prepared for new onslaughts of the aggressor force.

That evening the battalion received orders to conduct a night withdrawal from the defensive positions to a reserve position in the vicinity of the Mosel River. Utilizing deception tactics and radio relay stations within the Brigade, the battalion effectively withdrew the bulk of the troops, leaving personnel in contact with the enemy forces. These forces withdrew approximately two hours after the battalion main forces and performed rear guard action for the night move of approximately 35 miles over unfamiliar terrain to the new assembly area.

During the next 20 hours extensive preparations were made by elements of the battalion for a counterattack on an area of possible enemy penetration.

Aggressor forces continued to advance and suddenly broke through in the vicinity of the area where the counterattack had been planned on the next day.

On Counterattack

Moving rapidly from the reserve position, units of the 23rd assembled in an area near the point of penetration and made preparations for counterattack. Company C made preparation to be helicopter-lifted to the objective area, but ground haze prohibited this phase of the attack. On brigade order, the elements of the battalion moved out to attack the penetration with Company A of the 1st Battalion, 68th Armor and a platoon of Company A, 23rd Infantry, commanded by Lt. Gary L. Taylor, leading the attack. Fighting grew intense around the objective area, forcing the battalion commander, Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., to commit his reserve force.

When this force was held up, the brigade commander committed his reserve, the 1st Battalion, 68th Armor. Company B, 23rd Infantry and Company B, 68th Armor, rapidly attacked through the holding forces to break through the enemy defenses.

Once the enemy forces had been reduced and the position restored, the units of the 23rd Infantry coiled in position and prepared to move to garrison.

In an after action critique of the exercise, the chief evaluator of the 23rd Infantry, Lt. Col. Jack F. Senechal, commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 39th Infantry, 8th Division, stated that the units of the battalion had reacted well during the exercise. Col. John G. Wheelock, the 2nd Brigade commander added his compliments on the action of the officers and men during the five-day exercise.

Just an Exercise

Two Spooks Start a Spy Scare

By 24th Infantry PIO

It was intended to be an innocent training exercise. . .

But, before the day was through, everyone, including the local FBI, became involved.

It all started when two officers of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, donned special "aggressor" uniforms and toured the battalion area in a mysterious black foreign car.

The plan was to test the benefits of recent classroom instruction on sighting and reporting foreign military vehicles. The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry; a Rotaplan unit, was required to have this instruction prior to rotating to Germany in July.

Strictly Hush-Hush

The mission, strictly a hush-hush affair, was known only by the "foreign" officers: Capt. Sidney L. Linver and Capt. Kenneth L. Willoughby, and Lt. Col. Jack Samson, the battalion commander.

The first stop was Company C marshall . . .

Pulling up to the curb, Capt. Linver, wearing the uniform of an aggressor Lt. Col., hailed a soldier peeling potatoes on the porch.

"Where es ze battalion headquarters?" he asked with a thick foreign accent—a long cigar jutted appropriately from the corner of his mouth.

The young soldier responded with only his name, rank, service number and date of birth. After the would-be "spys" drove on, he hurriedly reported the sighting to the battalion S-1.

When the "spys" entered the restricted battalion motor pool they were chased off by a rifle-toting soldier. Later, they barely evaded a "block" thrown by a soldier driving a five-ton truck.

A final tabulation showed that some seven "sightings" were reported to the battalion S-1 officer.

Then things really started . . .

Members of a neighboring battalion also sighted the vehicle inserting imitation foreign license plates, and, not being in the "know," reported the incident to 2nd Division headquarters. They, in turn, notified the Fort Benning post authorities, which in turn, contacted the local FBI officials.

The 2nd Division intelligence officers were discussing the incident when Lt. Col. Samson walked in on them carrying a set of the "foreign" license plates. This immediately kindled explanations which resulted in a series of apologetic telephone calls.

At that point, the "exercise" terminated . . .

National Guardsmen Use Div. Honest John Rockets

By 12th Artillery PIO

Last week members from the North Carolina National Guard received diplomas for having successfully completed an Honest John Nuclear Warhead Assembly course conducted by the 12th Artillery. This course marked the first time that Honest John National Guardsmen have received training on the nuclear warhead at the 2nd Infantry Division.

Seven members of the 5th Battalion (HJ), 113th North Carolina Artillery, received their diplomas from Lt. Col. Terrence W. Huck, commanding officer of the 12th Artillery.

In addition to this special individual training, two National Guard units finished their two weeks of training with the 2nd Division. Training had begun on June 16. Formal classwork-type instruction as well as demonstrations and practical exercises were conducted. The Guardsmen were supervised and trained on each important phase of the training course. They handled individual operations of responsibility and also worked as a team.

They completed their training today and will return to their home stations tomorrow morning.

The 5th Battalion (HJ), 113th North Carolina Artillery and Battery A, 2nd Battalion (HJ), 181st Tennessee Artillery, covered their two week training period by becoming familiar with the new aspects of the Honest John and making full use of practical experience.

Detailed instruction and training made up the course and both National Guard units climaxed their training by actually firing an Honest John rocket. Firing of the rocket came only after intensified training and close supervision of the 12th Artillery, 2nd Infantry Division.

The 181st Artillery was the first unit to fire. They spent an entire week in the area simulating live missions while members of the 12th Artillery observed and conducted critiques. When the time came for the actual firing the Guardsmen showed that their training had paid off. The rocket left the launcher as scheduled and was observed by over 200 spectators.

Last Wednesday the 113th North Carolina Guardsmen fired their Honest John. Once again the firing was a success.

Iran General Officers See 23rd Train

By 1-23rd Infantry Pio

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — Five general officers of the Iranian Army recently visited the 23rd Infantry to observe training phases of an infantry battalion.

The dignataries went by helicopter to Observation Post Three, on the Baumholder Post Ranger Complex, where they were met by Maj. Robert C. Kendrick, 23rd Infantry executive officer.

First on the agenda for the Iranian generals was the 81 milimeter mortar firing by the Weapons Platoon of Company A, under the command of Lt. Frank B. Thayer. After a briefing by Lt. Peter B. Torres, officer-in-charge of the mortar firing, they witnessed a demonstration on the effect of white phosphorous rounds fired in a barrage.

The party then flew to Hill 508 where they were met by Capt. R. C. Corliss, Company C commander. The party was transported to the problem site in M113 Armored Personnel Carriers and witnessed a demonstration of an infantry platoon attack with elements of the company seizing 9 combat outpost position by fire and maneuver. This was part of the Company C Field Training Exercise (FTX).

The visiting Iranian officers were Maj. Gen. Ghalanreza Azhari, deputy commander, Ground Forces IIA; Brig. Gen. Nostratolla Arbabi, chief of staff, 1st Army; Brig. Gen. Fereydoon Taeedi, chief of staff, 2nd Army; Brig. Gen. Hassap-Ali Saeedi, G-3, 1st Army; and Brig. Gen. Iraj Ansari, G-3, 2nd Army.

Brig. Gen. John J. McCormick, assistant 8th Division commander, and Col. John G. Wheelock III, 2nd Brigade commander, accompanied the dignataries throughout the tour.

For Germany Chapel

A Crest in Stained Glass

By 1-9th Infantry PIO

MANNHEIM, Germany—A stained glass window, picturing the 9th Infantry Regimental crest, was donated by the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry recently to the Sullivan Barracks Chapel at Mannheim, Germany.

The glass was presented by the battalion executive officer, Maj. Charles W. Peer, and can be seen at the rear of the chapel along with the crests of the 51st Infantry, 504th Signal Battalion, 531st Ordinance Company and 3rd Medium Tank Battalion, 68th Armor.

During recent years this type of donation has become a tradition among units at the Sullivan Kaserne. The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry has, in addition to upholding tradition, left a lasting memento of the Battalion's three month visit in Germany.

The unit arrived in Germany on April 15, 1963, on Rotaplan, and is scheduled to return to the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning this July.

2ND DIVISION ARTIST THOMAS R. MARIONI AND PAINTING
Will Display His Works June 29 and 30 (Photo by Shaner)

Painter Marioni to Have Showing In Columbus of His Latest Work

By Peter Talleichoff

Sculptor - painter Thomas R. Marioni, presently assigned with the 2nd Infantry Division, will have a showing of paintings and sculpture in his home at 1001 17th Street, Columbus, from noon to 6 p.m., June 29 and 30. The public is invited to attend.

The 26-year-old native of Cincinnati, Ohio, is a graduate of the Cincinnati Art Academy, one of the oldest art schools in the country. He is a resident of San Francisco, Calif., and has had his works accepted by the San Francisco Museum for the Annual Drawing, Watercolor and Print Exhibition of 1959; the Cincinnati Art Museum in the Annual Greater Cincinnati Art Exhibition of 1958, and the Contemporary Art Interior Valley Biennial Exhibition of 1958.

Nonobjective Art

Describing his works, Marioni, whose parents are originally from Tuscany in northern Italy, points out that his paintings are in majority nonobjective, with a few bordering on the semi-abstract. They usually represent mechanical forms or abstractions of persons or landscapes.

He uses pure and mostly primary colors at full strength, painting with signpainting brushes and Casein (a water-base paint that dries flat) on masonite.

His works display a fondness for relationship of colored shapes and spaces to one another and concentrate on the mechanical rather than natural forms.

Some stylized drawings by Marioni will also be on exhibit in the show. These pencil sketches will show forms, both human and animal.

Graduating from the Cincinnati Art Academy in 1959, Marioni moved to San Francisco, working as a commercial designer. While there he sold several pieces of sculpture, drawings and painting.

He joined the Army in 1960, serving with the 4th Armored Division in Germany until his recent assignment to the 2nd Division at Fort Benning. He currently works with the 2nd Division's Commandant's Office.

Next Pre-Strike Exercise Is Set; Starts Tuesday

The 2nd Infantry Division will conduct a division command post exercise (CPX) during the period of June 25 to 27. This CPX Pre-Strike is the second in the Pre-Strike series of exercises in preparation for the forthcoming Swift Strike III combined maneuver.

The Pre-Strike exercises familiarize CPX participants with the Swift Strike area and with anti-airborne operations and measures for counteracting guerrilla movements.

During this Pre-Strike exercise the control headquarters will inject sufficient information and orders to provide a realistic tactical situation which will require reaction by division and subordinate unit staffs.

Throughout the exercise units will develop and execute plans for defending against airborne and guerrilla aggression; which will actually be an important phase of operations during the Swift Strike exercise in August.

Bond Established Between 'Seconds'

Gen. John T. Corley, assistant commander of America's 2nd Infantry Division and a much-decorated combat veteran himself, established the initial liaison between the two "Second to None" divisions. Col. Nett's return to Vietnam will extend this amiable, though serious, relationship.

Listening to Col. Nett describe Vietnam as it is today and his experiences in that country since leave Fort Benning in February, it is not hard to get caught up in visions of marsh beaches and stirdy mountain tribesmen. Telling oriental gongs mingle in a fantasy with the disordant chatter of Czech-made rifles; and scenes of jungle violence.

Five hundred miles north of Saigon in South Vietnam, nudging the fabled South China Sea to the east, is the port city of Dan Nang, headquarters of the Vietnamese 2nd Infantry Division. The infantrymen of that division are responsible for a vital sector of their country's defense which includes coastline terrain and piedmont area; west, towards the Laotian border, mountain ranges and thick jungles.

At night when anyone not bearing a light is suspect for Vietnamese bullets, the soldiers slip away from their camps, charting new paths in search of their sworn enemy, the communist Viet Cong.

Most of the operations are conducted at the lower level. But averaging twice a month, the entire division packs up and moves out on division-size or even corps-size operations. When this happens, Col. Nett is inseparable from his counterpart, Lt. Col. Hue, the assistant 2nd Division commander. This is true of all the American military advisors in Vietnam from the sergeant to the colonel. As the Vietnamese platoon leader crouches waist-deep in water and awaits the Viet Cong supply train for which intelligence has alerted him, alongside, dwarfing the M-14 rifle carried on his back, in his American shadow.

Col. Nett tells of Operation "Lam Som 8," so-called after a princess who long ago led Vietnamese forces against Chinese invaders. "Lam Som 8" was conducted just before Easter this year and involved the "Second to None" Division.

Covies of helicopters whipped far out to the battle area, casting huge shadows on the ground and churning the tall grass into a fury. Avenues of escape into the jungle were hurriedly blocked. Although commanders had begun the operation with specific objectives, tactics were kept fluid to take advantage of windfalls that might accompany the surprise attack.

Encircle Guerrillas

Spilling from the aircraft, the troops moved against encircled guerrilla forces and, when the operation ended, counted 130 or more Viet Cong dead. This figure is deceptive and might be much higher, but for laborers employed by the Viet Cong to haul away their dead and dying.

These operations have several purposes, and one of them, according to Col. Nett, is to promote the strategic hamlet system now being rushed full pace in the republic. The swift descent on the land, "clearing and holding" it from guerrillas, enables the hamlets to be built in safety. When completed, these fortified villages are capable of self-defense, the villagers trained as militiamen.

Dispensaries are opened for treating the sick, schools constructed. Agricultural experts plan a stable economy. In short, coercion by the Viet Cong of the people's most valuable aids such as supplies, intelligence and recruits is rendered extremely difficult. In the 2nd Division area alone, 500 strategic hamlets have been completed, and, countrywide, the program is better than 50 per cent accomplished.

Today when a guerrilla force approaches a village, it is likely to be met with licks of orange flame from the rifles of militia instead of the terrified compliance that formerly was their greeting.

"It doesn't take six months to get your feet on the ground," speaks Col. Nett, ruminating on the year - long tour of duty standard for the American serviceman. "When you're under fire you learn quickly."

Perhaps no one ever learned quicker than a Medal of Honor winner. As Col. Nett stood in the commanding general's office of the U. S. Army 2nd Infantry Division to receive the certificate he would take back to Col. Lam - Van - Phat, the white-starred, blue ribbon on his left breast was partially obscured by the lapel of his khaki summer uniform.

Much more prominent was the Ranger Arc Tab on his left shoulder and, below that, the tab reading "MAAG Viet Nam" with the poppy-shaped patch. On his right shoulder he wore the statue of liberty of the 7th Infantry Division, signifying he had served in combat with that unit.

Still, the reticence of the Medal of Honor peeking shyly from under the lapel made it all the more fascinating. It outshone the whole room. No award was ever more coveted by a soldier.

On the steaming island of Leyte in the Philippines on December 14, 1944, a young lieutenant waited with his company and stared at a three-story concrete building. For two days a reinforced Japanese battalion, dug into entrenchments around the building, had held up an American advance.

The lieutenant surveyed his forces which included his own command, Company E, 305th Infantry, 77th Division, another experienced company of infantry and some armored vehicles. The building had to be stormed to get the troops moving forward again. Although Japanese power was dying in the Pacific, having been crested by American arms, the Japanese on Leyte appeared to remain ignorant of their country's lessening influence. They were determined troops.

Presses Attack

Spearheading the assault with his company, 1st Lt. Nett was seriously wounded but continued to press the attack. Wounded seriously a second time, the lieutenant refused medical aid or to retire to the rear until the objective had been overrun.

After a third wounding and with a successful end to the battle in sight, Lt. Nett, according to the citation for the Medal of Honor, "calmly made all arrangements for the resumption of the advance, turned over his command to another officer, and then walked unaided to the rear for medical treatment."

This is the ambassador, now a lieutenant colonel, who carried the offer of honorary membership from the U. S. Army's 2nd Infantry Division to the commander of its embattled sister division in Vietnam.

An infantry division, like a woman, guards nothing more jealously than its reputation. But, unlike a woman, a division's reputation is not a birthright. It is a shimmering prize on the far side of battle and has been bought and paid for with men's lives. The measure is in deeds to the nation it serves.

An offer to share in traditions can only be given with confidence, confidence that the 2nd Infantry Division of the Republic of Vietnam has proven itself to be truly "Second to None."

Officers Leaving

Officers of 17th Artillery this week bade farewell to Lt. Robert A. Morrison and Lt. Frank S. Snipes, A Battery and B Battery commanders respectively. The two officers will return shortly to civilian life.

FOR THREE MORE . . . Reenlisting recently at the 2nd Division's 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion is Sp5 Salvatore R. Scardino (R) being sworn in by Lt. Col. John V. Stoecker, battalion commander. Sp5 Scardino reenlisted for three years additional duty.

Lt. Col. Dice Is Assigned Div. Surgeon

Lt. Col. Wilbur D. Dice became the new division surgeon Wednesday. He arrived here from Korea.

This is the third time that Col. Dice has been assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division. He served with the 2nd in 1948 and then again during the Korean Conflict in 1950 and 1951. This entitles Col. Dice to wear the 2nd Division "Indianhead" patch on both arms.

Col. Dice graduated from medical school at the University of Iowa. He entered the Army in 1939 and served in World War II as well as the Korean Conflict. He holds the Bronze Star Medal and Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Spell Beats Troop Command for 7th Consecutive Win

Medics Drop 15th Straight Game After Leading 197th Six Innings

By PFC Leo Zani

Right-hander Charlie Spell, who just last week gave up five hits in beating the Infantry Center Troop Command 12-3, turned the trick again last Friday when he went the route giving up five hits and four runs as The Student Brigade clobbered the same team 12-4.

The win gave the Brigademen a three game lead in first place with three games remaining in the first half of play.

In knotching his seventh straight victory, the masterful fire-baller allowed only one extra base hit and sent 14 men down swinging to up his league leading strikeout total to 97.

Ted Argianis (4-1) started the game for TICTC but was shelled in the second as TSB pushed across five runs on Herran's single to center followed by Ralph Maru's single and Jessie Joyce's long two-run double. A walk to Kendricks preceded Herbert Lauve's single to left field; then, a bases loaded walk to Armstrong sent Argianis to the showers. Relief pitcher Lee Parker's second pitch to Ron Kinek went by the third baseman for a two-run single to left. A wild pitch brought home the fifth run.

In going the distance, Spell has now pitched a total of 63 innings giving up eight walks and 17 runs for a ERA of 2.54. The loss was credited to Argianis who is now 4-2 for the season. The loss drops TICTC into a two-way tie for second place.

197th Wins

In the other game played last Friday, the 197th Infantry Brigade found the goings pretty tough but managed to come-from-behind twice to eek out a 9-8 victory over the hapless 428th Medics and climb into a two-way tie for second place.

The Medics jumped on starting pitcher Jerry Rider (2-2) for two runs in the second inning to take a 2-0 lead. In the third inning, two consecutive walks and two passed balls put runners on second and third. Left fielder Paul Gerrere's two-run double was followed by Herb Sutton's long triple.

Ken Harper replaced Rider for the Infantrymen and was greeted by Bob Johnson's double to left field scoring Sutton. Jimmy Madden kept things going for the Medics with another double which prompted Charlie Perry to come in to relieve Harper. Perry ended the scoring by striking out the next three batters, but after three innings of play the Medics were sitting on a 7-1 lead.

Infantry Erupts

Jim Bradley kept the Infantrymen well in hand until the sixth inning when Elroy Zamor singled and Ken Johnson reached first base on a throwing error. Jessie Rigdon singled home a run followed by a two-run single by Jake Bryant.

John Dillion came in to replace Madden on the mound and gave up a walk and two singles before settling down to retire the side.

The Infantrymen tied the score at eight—all in the seventh inning on two walks and Juan Martinez's run-scoring single to center field.

Miller was the winning pitcher, and his record is now 4-2, while John Krause was the losing pitcher in relief. For the Medics, it was their 15 straight loss in the Major Unit Baseball League.

Sports Car Club Holds Competition

Grey Blanton, director in the Columbus-Fort Benning area for the South West Georgia (SOWEGA) Region of Sports Car Club of America, told the Bayonet today that his group is holding a Gymkhana at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Cross Country Plaza shopping center in Columbus.

Blanton explained that automobile enthusiasts may enter their cars regardless of membership in the club. Registration is set for 12:30 p.m., 30 minutes before the competition begins.

"This is not a speed event," Blanton stressed. "It is a test of maneuverability of the cars and of the driver's skill," he continued.

Cars may be entered in four classes. Separate competition will be run for sedans, lady drivers, sports cars with less than 2000 cubic centimeter displacement and sports cars with more than 2,000 cubic centimeters displacement.

Blanton reported that the club expects a minimum of 40 cars to enter. He stressed that persons interested in seeing the competition may do so at no cost.

OLDER THAN NATION

Did you know that the Army is actually older than the United States? It's true. It was on July 4, 1776, that the Continental Congress declared our independence of British rule. But, it was on June 14, 1775, that the Army was founded.

Bowling, Golfing Expert Getting Army Commission

Officer Candidate Hugh T. Morgan will be a second lieutenant next week, but to many of his friends he will still be identified primarily by his expert golf swing and by his skill on the bowling alleys.

Candidate Morgan is scheduled to graduate from The Infantry School's officer candidate course Tuesday.

He began his athletic career while attending high school in Japan, where his father was stationed with the Army and in Auburn, N. Y.

Football and basketball were not Morgan's games, so he started playing golf. Due to his enthusiasm and natural talent for the links, he was soon playing the top amateurs in the area.

The Professional Golfers Association requires a five year apprenticeship plan for young golfers wanting to enter its ranks. Candidate Morgan was well on his way, having served a two-year apprenticeship with top professional, Howard Jones, when he enlisted in the Army.

Even in the Army, golf was high on Morgan's agenda, for he won the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment Golf Championship in Germany the first time he entered the tournament.

As if playing top golf was not enough, he took up bowling.

He has bowled in the 11th championships winning two patches in 1956 and 1957. While bowling in the 2nd Infantry Division Championships in 1957, he attained the high singles average of 242.

Candidate Morgan also earned an ABC triple patch, by bowling three 185 games in succession. While serving in Germany, he won the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment high average trophy, and played on their first-place team.

Bowling and golfing plans for the future are indefinite, but the Army is sure to see more of the future lieutenant both on and off the links or bowling alleys.

1963 Doughboy Schedule Set With Four New Teams Added

The athletic department of Special Services has announced the 1963 Doughboy football schedule.

The 12 game schedule will start Sept. 8 at Doughboy stadium with the Southwest Florida Athletic Association, and end November 30 with the "Screaming Eagles" at Fort Campbell. In between, Benning will play five games at home and five games on the road.

Four new teams dot this schedule with two games slated against Southwest Florida AA, a semi-pro club, which opens the season. The Doughboys will return the series on Oct. 5. Other new opponents are Fort Riley, Kan., Fort Bragg, N. C. and Lackland AFB, Tex.

Maj. Oren E. DeHaven will be at the helm for the Doughboys, replacing Maj. Leaton C. Cofield who has been reassigned to Viet Nam. Cofield led the team through the 1961-62 seasons and under him the Doughboys compiled a 16-4 won-lost record. In 1962, the Doughboys went undefeated and untied in ten games to become the top service team in the country.

Last year's Doughboys ran wild as they scored 261 points in ten games to their opponents 58.

The outlook for the Doughboys this season is bright. Losing only three starters from both the first and second unit, Benning will be counting heavily upon the experience of their returning veterans. Two former Georgia Tech players, quarterback Marvin Tibbetts and end Fred Murphy, head the list of returnees. Former Virginia State playmaker DeWayne Jeter will also be back at quarterback.

Returning at halfback will be Bobby Towns, ex-University of Georgia star, and former Oklahoma University speedster, Brewster Hobby.

Last year's veteran at fullback is 215 pound Wallace Johnson. Johnson hails from Oklahoma University. Also returning will be Raymond Eddy, formally of Northwestern.

Leading the list of returning centers is Elliot Mosley from the University of Alabama, and Luther Cranford of the University of Chattanooga.

Returning from last year's team at guard is Joe Wendryhoski, a 240 pounder from the University of Illinois. Also from Illinois, and making his debut with the Doughboys will be Bob Creviston. Bob stands 6' 4" and weighs 245.

At tackle will be Bill Rice, 220 pound star from the University of Alabama, and veteran Bill Nance, ex-Mississippi State lineman.

The Doughboys are well fortified at the end positions. Along with veteran Fred Murphy from Georgia Tech will be John Trueman, 6' 2" starter from Michigan State. Also back from last year's team will be Dan House, formally of Davidson University. From Oklahoma State is 6' 3" George Walstad who recently joined the club.

The Doughboys will start scrimmage practice early in August for their Sept. 8 opener. Only one open date is on this year's calendar, and that one comes the week before the big test with Fort Campbell.

All games played at home will be under the lights. Game time will be 8 p.m. and the admission is free.

President's 'Strategy of Peace' to Guide U.S., USSR in Cold War

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President John F. Kennedy has proposed a "strategy of peace" to guide the United States and the Soviet Union away from the vicious and dangerous cycle" of the cold war. The proposal was made during his speech at the commencement exercises at American University here.

The address was dedicated to the theme that the time had come for a break in the cold war and that both the United States and the Soviet Union should re-examine their basic attitude toward each other.

As a first step, high-ranking representatives of the United States, Soviet Union and Britain will meet in Moscow in a renewed effort to agree on a treaty banning nuclear weapons tests. Emphasizing that such a declaration is no substitute for a formal, binding treaty, the President expressed his hope that it would help achieve one and promised that the United States "will not be the first to resume" testing in the atmosphere.

Applause broke out from the crowd upon hearing of the Moscow meeting and the pledge that the United States would not be first to break such an agreement.

In dealing with the broader aspects of the cold war, the President stated that the Soviet Union has certain things in common with the United States —both countries would be primary targets in the event of total war. "Almost unique among major world powers, we have never been at war with each other," Mr. Kennedy said.

Describing peace as "a way of solving problems," the President asserted that the people of the United States could help the Soviet leaders adopt "more enlightened attitude" by "re-examining our own attitude — we must conduct our affairs in such a way that it becomes in the Communist interest to agree on a genuine peace."

"The United States, as the world knows, will never start a war," he said. "We do not want war. We do not now expect a war. This generation of Americans has already had enough — more than enough — of war and hate and oppression."

Vets Await Korea Bonus

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The Pennsylvania Korean bonus must be applied for before next Dec. 31 . . . State officials estimate that 57,000 eligibles have not yet applied . . . One reason may be that as of September 1961, eligibility was opened to two groups originally excluded, some of whom may not have gotten the word.

Career servicemen were originally excluded from the state bonus but are now eligible if they can prove legal residence in Pennsylvania on Jan. 1, 1961.

Another group originally excluded were those servicemen who were not awarded the Korean Service Medal. The requirement for the Korean Medal is no longer a prerequisite to the state bonus.

Basic eligibility is legal residence in Pennsylvania on entering the service and at least 60 days active military duty between July 25, 1950 and July 27, 1953.

Sergeant's Final Test Shot Set

WASHINGTON (ANF) —The recent third, and final firing of Army's Sergeant ballistic missile from the Plains of St. Augustine near Datil, New Mexico, to the White Sands Missile Range, was conducted successfully.

The three shot test series in Central New Mexico marked the first time a ballistic missile has been fired from a point outside the White Sands boundaries to an impact point on the range.

The prime objective of the recent firing, like the previous two firings, was to evaluate the Sergeant's flight characteristics on a west to east trajectory.

The Sergeant test series was conducted by the Sergeant engineering test group of White Sands Missile Range's Army Test and Evaluation Directorate.

HOOTENANNY . . . Three line construction companies of the 577th Engineer Battalion have recently received the first of the new model 830-M wheeled tractors. Christened "Hootenanny" by the men of the battalion, the tractor has tires over six feet in diameter. Hinged in the center for easier handling, this powerful machine has a bulldozer blade mounted in front which can be tilted. Its primary function is to tow a scraper which is capable of scooping up 18 cubic yards of earth in one bite.

Applicants Needed For OC Program

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Overall officer requirements to meet authorized strengths in Fiscal Year (FY) 1964, require a substantial increase of graduates from the Officer Candidate School (OCS) Program. Accordingly action has been taken to expand facilities at the Infantry and Artillery Officer Candidate Schools to approximately three times their former capacity.

Revised OCS class schedules provide for a class to start each month at the Infantry and Artillery Schools which began in April 1963. Class capacities are 200 at the Infantry OCS school, and 105 at the Artillery OCS school.

To maintain these classes at the maximum capacity and to meet the FY 1964 production objective, an increase in the number of qualified active Army applicants must be obtained.

As a matter of individual career development, qualified active Army personnel must be afforded every opportunity to enhance their Army careers through the OCS Program.

Commanders at all echelons should take immediate and continuing action to publicize the advantages of OCS training, to seek out qualified applicants, and to insure expeditious processing of applications.

OCS requirements for prospective candidates may be obtained from AR 350-50, paragraphs 5, 6, 29, and 30.

Defense Communication System Directed to Expand, Modernize

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric has directed the Defense Communications Agency to modernize and expand the Defense Communication System.

The modernization will provide automatic switching systems for voice, teletype and data communications among overseas installations and between the United States and these overseas points.

Two specialized networks are planned to provide the flexible, fast communications required to satisfy modern administrative and command and control needs. The two nets are:

AUTOVON (Automatic Voice Network): A world-wide voice communications network with direct distance dialing features similar to commercial service of this type in the U. S.

AUTODIN (Automatic Digital Network): A world-wide network including automatic switches to accept, relay and deliver teletype and data communications between various types and combinations of transmitting and receiving equipment.

The two networks will, in effect, make use of work done domestically by the Army on its SCAN voice net and by the Air Force on its DATACOM net.

Live Fire Squad Attack Course Made Ready for ROTC Training

By PFC Frank Luzzie

With the ever-present completion deadline looming closer, the engineers of Company B, 806th Engineer Battalion (Const.), are hurrying to finish a unique Squad and Platoon Attack Course, to be located in a heavily wooded area at the southeastern tip of the post.

The course, designed for ROTC and Reserve training purposes, will act as a valuable aid in providing these Infantrymen with live fire exercises, resembling actual combat. It will also enable them to gain experience as well-knit combat teams.

Two objectives, one for squad assault and the other for a platoon attack, will form the basic make-up of the course.

First a squad will move out under the cover of machine gun fire. As the infantrymen close in on the objective, the machine gun fire will shift to engage targets which will suddenly appear off to one side of the objective.

Simultaneously, demolitions will be detonated to simulate supporting artillery fire, while a machinegun simulator fires on the advancing squad.

Counterattack

After this objective is secured, the squads will prepare for a counterattack. The counterattack targets will appear and be repulsed.

Three rifle squads will then consolidate and attack the platoon objective in much the same manner. The exercise will end when the platoon gains its new objective and successfully repels another counterattack

'FESTIVAL DAYS' ARE HERE, START TODAY

"'Festival Days" open in Columbus today.

Conceived as part of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce sponsored "Stay and See Georgia" contest, the 10 day celebration helped bring Columbus the "Stay and See" title of Georgia's No. 1 city.

Beginning at 2 p.m. today with Yuchi Indian ceremonies and demonstrations, Festival Days will continue until 5 p.m. June 30 and will include many attractions.

Today and tomorrow from 2 p.m. until midnight the Yuchi Indians will demonstrate Indian handicraft and will exhibit their authentic village of seven miles south of Phenix City. Starting at sundown, the famous Friendship Dance will be performed by tribesmen in the same area. It will be the first time the dance has been seen east of the Mississippi in 127 years.

Sunday the Yuchi Wing of the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts will be dedicated.

At 8:30 p.m. Monday, the Columbus Little Theatre Group will present its rollicking comedy, "The Fantasticks" for "Festival" goers at the Museum of Arts and Crafts.

Tuesday morning at 9 a.m. a "Festival Days" bus will depart the Ralston Hotel on a tour of Columbus factories, plants and mills. At 8 p.m. a free concert is scheduled at Weracoba Park by the Columbus Symphony Orchestra. It has been described by festival officials as "Music Under the Stars" at it's best.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the industrial tour will be repeated, but the evening fare will be new and "beautiful."

Starting Wednesday night at 8 p.m., and continuing nightly through Saturday, will be the annual Miss Georgia Pageant where the Peach State chooses its loveliest to represent the state in the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

June 27 a tour will be conducted of many ante-bellum homes in Columbus, some of which retain the same foundations present during the Civil War.

June 27-30 a sidewalk art exhibit will be shown in front of the Ralston Hotel.

On the 28th the Heritage tour will be repeated, but the day's biggest attraction is expected to be a tour of the Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga., and a trip to Ida Cason Callaway Gardens near Pine Mountain.

On the 29th the festival moves to The Infantry Center where sky diving, a band concert, weapons displays and Infantry demonstrations have been planned.

Another tour of Columbus's ante-bellum homes wraps up the festival June 30.

Look Alikes Act Alike; Are Alike

Presently engaged in a "twin" course of study at 50th Company, 5th Student Battalion. The Student Brigade, are Patrick W. and Robert J. Hughes.

Not only are they look alikes, to the bewilderment of the company officers, but they do everything in exactly the same manner.

The brothers have been together in high school, college and now the Army. They made a joint decision to enlist in March, 1962 and the recruiting officer did not have to suggest the buddy system either.

After completion of basic training at Fort Chaffee, Ark., with the 100th Division, they were assigned together for training as heavy weapons Infantrymen.

Again by joint decision, they applied for OCS, and while awaiting orders, they served as basic training cadre at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Having twins as cadre was once summed up by a recruit who was told, "Here comes Hughes," and he tiredly replied, "Which one, can anyone tell them apart?"

1963 Tennis Tournament Is Underway

A deluge of fast-moving tennis balls replaced Tuesday's deluge of rain on the Main Officers' Open Mess tennis courts Wednesday when the Fort Benning 1963 Tournament got underway after a one-day postponement.

Starting at 4:30 p.m. 16 netters vied for top slots in the round-robin tourney hoping to earn a chance to represent the post in the Third Army Championships in July.

Joe Gibian was scheduled to meet William Bailey in the day's first match, followed by hard-hitting Don Mathews in a match with Charles Lehr.

Other contests scheduled were Marvin Malmberg vs. Henry Lett; Don Abbott vs. Wayne Erb; Gary Carter vs. Dave Braun; Richard Concha vs. David Chandler; Dustin Silver vs. Keith Pittman, and Charles Saint vs. Dieter Staehle.

According to Special Services officials, the eight seeded players would not play opening round matches. These include Art Foust, John Verbek, Richard Habber, Elliot Young, Robert Harris, Joseph Sanders, Carson Hollman and Robert Frey.

Have an Enjoyable 4th; Drive Safely

By Norman Evans
TIC Safety Director

Would you like to get your name in the news?

Whether you would or not, here is how it could occur. With the Fourth of July holiday coming up just forget all this safety information you may have seen or heard.

A holiday is for fun and recreation and what could be more fun than a trip to the beach. Now that you are not going to worry about anything, all you have to do is get in the old trusty vehicle and go. Yes, I know there will be thousands of others who don't have a thought to bother them who will be on the road at the same time.

There will probably be Fort Benning personnel who forget all about the YAC Carnival, the fireworks, the swimming pools, the craft shops, the 23 different ponds and the streams they could fish in at Fort Benning. It is just good to get away, isn't it?

Now about getting your name in the news. We did not exactly mean the social column about who took a trip. No, what we had in mind was more like this.

If you didn't want to be bothered with safety precautions, you would not see or hear information which said: Undercurrents can make swimming risky in the Gulf. Not even the strong swimmers can survive if caught in the strong undercurrent. If caught in the undertow, swim with it and work upward and outward. You can ride the swells to shore.

You probably blanked out this information given on boating which warned you to wear a life preserver and not to overload the boat. If you were not interested in safety, you were probably day dreaming when the orientation was given that included warnings to swim only where there are adequate life guards.

Assuming that you were disinterested all the way through the safety efforts of post personnel prior to the holiday, you would not be reminded that fatigue impairs your driving efficiency.

You may have forgotten that you have to leave yourself an out by planning what you will do before the other fellow gets you in a pinch. You wouldn't worry about speeding either if you were not interested in safety.

So what we meant about getting your name in the paper was that you could do it if you just forget this safety business and go ahead and drown. That is, if you manage to reach the beach before you have an accident.

All Preparations 'Go' For 6th YAC Carnival

The word is "go" on the 1963 Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival with final preparations being made to make the Fourth of July fun day a huge success.

A lot of work and coordination among project officers and units concerned has gone into the many fireworks, rides, concessions and competitive events to be offered to the public on the national holiday.

The carnival will not only aid in raising funds for the many activities sponsored by YAC on the post throughout the year, but it will also give those in the surrounding area an opportunity to have a fun-packed holiday celebration without converging on congested highways.

Featured during the day which will begin at 6 a.m. with a cross-country run, will be rides of all sorts on Eubanks Field, games, concessions, a barbecue, military and spectator competitions and finally a gigantic fireworks show on Gordon Field at night.

The Fort Benning Skydivers Club will also perform during the evening on Glenn Field.

Just before the fireworks show the awarding of the commanding general's trophy to the top unit on the post and the presentation of cash awards to the outstanding individuals in the days competition will be made.

250-Foot Tower

During the day there will be a chance for guests to experience the thrill of taking a buddy-seat ride from the 250-foot Airborne training tower or a cable ride from the junior jump tower at Eubanks Field.

Rides on ponies, fire engines, and jeeps will also be available.

With carnival booths galore spread all over Eubanks Field, kids and parents will have the

Skydivers Will Jump Tomorrow

Skydivers, rangers, and scout dogs always draw a crowd — and all three will be on display when the 197th Infantry Brigade opens its doors Saturday afternoon to the general public.

The 197th is going all out to display itself from 2 to 5 p.m. as part of a Columbus, Ga., Chamber of Commerce promotion to create public interest in Fort Benning and the Valley area.

Besides the skydivers, who are to perform as members of the Fort Benning Skydivers Club, and the Rangers, The Infantry Center band will conduct a concert to open the show and open house program.

All activities are to be conducted in the Brigade area and the route to the parking lots will be clearly marked from Outpost 1 at the entrance to the post.

Air Force Cadets Arrive Saturday

Approximately 550 cadets of the Air Force Academy's Class of 1966 will begin arriving at Lawson Army Airfield at 3:10 p.m. Saturday for a week of training and orientation at The Infantry School.

Ten Air Force C-124 Globemasters will transport the cadets from the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo., and they are slated to land here between 3:10 and 5:30 p.m.

Following dinner that evening, the cadets will be honored at a formal reception and hop at the Main Officers' Open Mess, and Sunday, July 7, those cadets who desire will have an outing at Callaway Gardens, 28 miles north of Columbus.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will officially welcome the cadets at 8 a.m. Monday, July 8, at Theater No. 1.

After a presentation of the "I am the Infantry" tableau, the cadets will be given a briefing on counterguerrilla activities, become familiar with weapons of the Infantry, receive a briefing on the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) and witness a rives crossing techniques problem.

The cadets will be divided into various groups Tuesday, July 9, for familiarization firings of the M-14 standard and modified rifles, M-60 machine gun and the 106-mm recoilless rifle, and airborne instruction in parachute landing falls, swing landing trainer and the 34-foot tower at Eubanks Field.

A wing parade is slated at 10 a.m. Wednesday, July 10, at Gordon Field and after lunch the group will be oriented on Ranger tactics at Victory Pond. They also will observe problems involving an Infantry tank-task force in attack at Buma Hill and a reinforced rifle company in defense at Ruth Range.

Gen. Rich will make closing remarks at the conclusion of the reinforced rifle company problem.

Thursday morning, July 11, will be devoted to packing for the return trip to the Air Force Academy. The cadets will begin departing Fort Benning at 10:30 a.m.

Lt. Col. Gould Named Post Veterinarian

Lt. Col. Clinton Leslie Gould has been assigned here as station veterinarian.

He succeeds Lt. Col. William D. McMonagle, who will leave in July for an assignment at Headquarters, Richmond (Va.) Region, Defense Subsistence Supply Center.

Col. Gould came to the post from Paris, France, where he served from 1960 to 1963 as commander of the 76th Medical Detachment, Veterinary Food Inspection, Seine Area Command.

From 1958 to 1960, he was chief of the Wholesomeness and Acceptance Branch, Food Radiation Preservation Division, Quartermaster Food and Container Institute in Chicago.

The Fort Benning colonel was graduated from Washington State University at Pullman with B.S. and doctor of veterinary medicine degrees. He received a direct Reserve commission upon graduating.

Among his awards and decorations is an Army Commendational Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

opportunity to test their skill at such things as dart throwing, nail driving and fish ponds.

Also scheduled are events requiring more athletic ability. Among these will be softball throws, archery and golf chipping.

The days events on Eubanks Field will begin at 11 a.m.

Food concession stands, offering cold drinks to the hot and dry and hot dogs and hamburgers to the hungry, will also be scattered throughout the entire area.

If those present glance around there is probably little doubt that an ice cream man roving around with a cart can be found.

In the Student Brigade area barbecues will be available for those who are really hungry.

Picking up from the early morning race, competition to decide the outstanding unit and individual soldier among the major units on the post will be going on all day.

Competition in physical fitness tests, platoon drills, jeep driving and M-1 rifle and .45 caliber pistol shooting, etc., will be held to determine the winners of the cash awards and trophy to be presented that night.

All that was done to provide this carnival required a united effort on the part of YAC officials, the various project officers, and the personnel of many of the post's major commands.

Among the units are The Infantry Center Troop Command; 2nd Infantry Division; 577th Engineer Battalion; Lawson Army Aviation Command; 428th Medical Battalion; the Student Brigade; 197th Infantry Brigade; Provost Marshal and Military Police Company; Martin Army Hospital and the G-3 (plans and operations) section of The Infantry Center.

Project Officer

Maj. Kenneth P. Achey, a member of The Infantry Center Troop Command Headquarters, is the project officer for the event. Committee chairman is Col. Adrian L. Hoebeke, commander of TICTC.

Col. Curtis L. Hankins is the president of YAC. Col. Hankins is the commanding officer of Lawson Army Aviation Command.

First Lt. Edward N. Smith is custodian.

2 Colonels Get M. A. Degrees

Col. Robert C. Williams, president of The Infantry Board, and Col. Roy L. Inman, deputy president of the board, recently were awarded master of arts degrees in international affairs by George Washington University, Washington, D.C.

Col. Williams, who entered the Army from Spring Valley, N.Y., is a 1939 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., in 1957.

Col. Inman, who attended the University of Wyoming before entering the Army, is a 1952 graduate of the University of Maryland and the Air War College in 1959.

The colonels began their studies for the degrees in April, 1962, and completed all requirements in March, 1963. All work was done on off-duty time, including travel for classwork and research at the Air University, George Washington University Center, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

CISM Tryouts to Be Held Here July 8-12

By Spt Ron Claxton

Ten berths on the Armed Forces International team which will represent the United States in the Council of International Military Sports (CISM) shooting competition to be held in Lahti, Finland, will be up for grabs here July 8-12.

The team will consist of five riflemen and five pistolmen who will be selected through an all-service competition to be hosted by the Marksmanship Training Unit (MTU).

The MTU, which has been designated the organizing unit for the U.S. representation in the seventh CISM championships in August, is expected to take the lion's share of berths in the tryouts, Col. Robin G. Montgomery, commander of the USAMTU, said.

Last year the MTU filled all 10 spots, and in 1961 all but one were filled by the Fort Benning based unit.

The U.S. team, which will be captained by MTU's Maj. Fremont Burdick, will compete against the Armed Forces teams of the other 26 CISM member nations.

The rifle to be fired in Finland by U.S. representatives will be the M-1 and the .38 caliber pistol will be used by the handgunners.

Weapons used by the other countries are left to the individual nation in the rifle portion and a requirement that from .30 to .38 caliber pistols be used is the only governing factor in the pistol competition.

The U.S. chief of the delegation to the matches, a position held by Col. Montgomery for the past three years, has not been decided.

Courses of fire are along the lines of those fired in the Olympic and Pan American Games.

Rifle courses include standing, kneeling and prone position matches fired from 300 meters in the rapid and slow fire categories.

Pistol competition will be fired over the slow and rapid fire international courses.

Members of last year's team back for hte tryouts this year are Capt. Phillip F. Cannella and Sgt. John Kahelina. Both riflemen are from the MTU.

Pistolmen returning are SFC Bobby D. Harris and SSgt. James H. McNally, also with the MTU.

Capt. Cecil L. Wallis, MTU, is another promising pistolman on the international type targets, officials said.

Get Legal Assistance Before It's Too Late

Legal Assistance Officers point out that members of the Armed Forces and their dependents can avoid financial problems and legal controversies by obtaining advice from an attorney, and then following it.

Lawyers will agree, they say, that it is far easier to advise you how to stay out of trouble than it it to get you out of trouble.

All Legal Assistance Officers in the Armed Forces are graduates of an accredited school and have been admitted to practice before the highest court in at least one of the 50 states.

One of their regular duties is to provide you with legal assistance.

This may include, but is not limited to, verbal legal advice or preparation of legal documents, such as wills, general and special power of attorney, bills of sale and affidavits.

On the other hand, they are limited to a certain degree by regulation.

For instance, they cannot advise you, in their capacity as Legal Assistance Officers, concerning matters which might result in administrative board action or disciplinary action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Their assistance does not include such things as assignments, promotions, demotions or pay problems. They are not permitted to act as a collecting agency for any debt or obligation you may have made. Nor can they assist you in your outside business activities.

But they are ready and willing to advise you against unnecessary involvement in many legal matters that plague individuals and families from time to time.

If you will remember the following points, chances are you will not suffer as the result of inexperience in legal matters.

Ask your Legal Assistance Officer for advice before you act. (For example, before you sign a document by which you incur some financial responsibility ask for a full explanation of its contents.)

Talk to your Legal Assistance Officer or your civilian attorney in person.

Take all pertinent letters and documents with you.

Give your Legal Assistance Officer or civilian attorney your complete confidence. Tell him the facts, those in your favor and those not in your favor.

Representative Alexander Pirnie (R-NY) received the Legion of Merit at Pentagon ceremonies marking his retirement from the Army Reserve. The medal was pinned on the House Armed Forces Committee member, a USAR colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Corps, (JAG) by his son, 2nd Lt. Bruce R. Pirnie, USA. Army Secretary Cyrus Vance, top Army officers and members of the House and Senate were present for the ceremony. Congressman Pirnie received the award for his "outstanding services" to the Army JAG Reserve program over the past 17 years.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) is considering a recommendation made by Senator Clinton Anderson (D-NM) that Maj. Gordon Cooper's space capsule, Faith 7, be sent on a 50-state tour. The Senator, Chairman of the Aeronautical and Space Science Committee, believes such a tour would bring millions of Americans into "closer contact with the man in space effort." He has suggested that one astronaut accompany the capsule at all times, with the assignment rotating.

In answer to military requests to enhance the dignity and prestige of the U.S. Court of Military Appeals, Congress is considering legislation to give the Judges of the Court lifetime tenure. Currently they are appointed for only 15 years. The term of Chief Judge Robert E. Quinn is due to expire in 1965, that of Judge Homer Ferguson in 1971, and that of Judge Paul J. Kilday in 1976. To benefit from the lifetime tenure provision, the three judges would have to be reappointed.

Wit Does Not Justify Filth in Conversation

There is never a time for filth.

This statement is pointedly emphasized by Comedian Joe E. Brown's answer to the question as to his most remembered round of applause.

The veteran entertainer said the incident occurred during one of his trips to the South Pacific during World War II. He said, "I was told that 2,500 troops had to be entertained and they were 50 miles away. We flew over."

This trip took place after Brown had returned from a 3 a.m. bombing run that General MacArthur had allowed him to accompany as an observer.

"After two hours on a make-shift stage deep in the jungle I begged off. I was tired," he said, "I explained that they had seen everything I had perfected in a lifetime. Still they clamored for more. But I just couldn't go on.

"Finally, a guy sitting alone called out: 'Joe, can't you tell us some dirty stories!'"

"A comedian lives on applause and laughter, I want your laughs more than you want me to make you laugh.

The comic said, "When this kid shouted, the whole jungle must have heard it. There was complete silence. When I recovered from the jolt, I spoke directly to him and I said, 'Kid, I want your applause.

"'But if telling a dirty story is the price I have to pay for your laughter, I don't want it. I have never done an act I couldn't do in front of my mother and I never will.'"

This experience of Joe E. Brown's, the old pro, should cause some of the amateur wardroom and barrack comics to take a good look at their material, perhaps reevaluate it and KEEP IT CLEAN. (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

No Conflict

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes

Felipe Alou, a native of the Dominican Republic, has been cited by Ralph Houk, New York Yankee Manager, as one of the best outfielders he has ever seen perform in Yankee Stadium.

Last year he was one of the top hitters in the National League and led the Giants in batting. It was his work in last season's World Series which promoted Houk's comment.

Recently Alou made a special trip to Venezuela, which is known for its baseball fever. It was hardly surprising that the newspapers made a big play over his visit. What astonished fans and reporters alike was that he showed up not only with bat and glove, but with a Bible.

The San Francisco Giant outfielder explained that he was there to take part in a Scripture distribution program of the Pocket Testament League. He said he wanted to point out that there is no basic conflict between playing big-league baseball and living a consistent Christian life.

Felipe relates that on his first day in the majors, "I knew a decision had to be made. I received Jesus Christ into my heart. My whole life has taken on a new and higher purpose. Christ is first in my life."

Now say that first part again, Mr. Alou. Do you mean to say that there is no conflict between being a nationally prominent hero and living a life consistent with the teachings of Jesus? Why, if this be so, there also ought not to be a conflict between being a soldier and living a life consistent with one's religious convictions.

If there be no conflict, why are there not more soldiers in chapel or church for worship services?

Thousands of Students Throughout The World Get Help From DNRI

Located in a rather remote area of Fort Benning's Main Post is an instruction department that boasts the largest student enrollment in our Army and sufficient classroom space to house every Army Infantryman. Yet, this department has no apparent student body and a noticeable lack of classrooms!

"Hold it!" you say, "Just where is this department that makes such a fanstastic claim, and where is this monstrous building that holds all those students?" Fair and valid questions!

The department making this claim is the Department of Non-resident Instruction (DNRI), located behind the Main Post Sunday School in an area customarily called Splinter Village.

Actually, there is no "monstrous building," for the department's classrooms are scattered throughout the free world from Japan to West Germany. However, the "Invisible Instructors" of DNRI manage to provide outstanding support to well over 300,000 students. This is how they do it.

Dean of the DNRI campus is Col. J. L. Gueymard. Under his able direction, a staff of experienced personnel make it possible for our world-wide Infantrymen to obtain a military education without physically attending The Infantry School. To provide this important educational service, DNRI is divided into three committees and an Operations Section.

The Army Extension Course (AEC) Committee, under Lt. Col. John C. Swearingen, takes pride in the fact that it helps forge tomorrow's military leaders. Right in his own home, the individual soldier can prepare himself — through correspondence courses — for promotion in the noncommissioned officer ranks or he can qualify for appointment as a commissioned officer in the grade of second lieutenant. By completing the more advanced courses, the Reserve officer can meet promotional requirements up to and including lieutenant colonel.

The AEC Committee does not expect the student to fend for himself completely; it has established a Student Guidance Section to give individual counseling and advice to its more than 36,000 students. This section, in the capable hands of Capt. Paul R. Morrow, answers approximately 7,500 student letters each month, giving each one individual attention.

SFC Herbert Phinney has the immense responsibility of keeping each AEC student supplied with lessons, reference material, and examinations. To keep pace with the continuous flow of orders, the Supply and Distribution Section maintains several warehouses filled with Infantry School publications, field manuals, and subcourse lessons.

Large Enrollment

If you think that the enrollment figure for the AEC program is big, read on! The Reserve Components Committee, under the supervision of Maj. Chesley O. Nunley, supports four different programs with a combined average of 275,000 students per month!

This committee is responsible for furnishing up-to-date instructional material to hundreds of Reserve Component schools. The ROTC Branch, managed by MSgt. Walter D. Hatfield, ensures that the ROTC units in each of the 50 states, the Canal Zone, and Puerto Rico receive their required material.

MSgt. Russell A. Allen heads the NG-USAR Branch which supports National Guard state Officer Candidate Schools, Army Reserve schools, and the Staff Training Programs of battalions and larger units. These programs qualify Reserve students for promotion and help them earn valuable retirement points.

The entire DNRI operation has such a large volume of mail that the department has been authorized its own post office. Each month, the DNRI post office receives approximately 34,000 pieces of mail and dispatches some 68,000 pieces.

Now let's take a look at those silent teachers who rarely get a second thought from the nonresident student, but without whom DNRI could not exist—the writers! Lt. Col. Charles A. Kilbourne and his Instructional Materials Preparation (IMP) Committee have the primary function of effectively translating resident training problems into clear, precise terms which can be used by students and instructors participating in DNRI's five major programs.

Because of the continual changes in the concepts of modern warfare, the IMP Committee is authorized a staff of 17 writers to keep this instruction material current.

All these actions would be of little consequence without the coordination of the Operations Section. Maj. Buenaventura Esteves, assisted by Capt. Frederic L. Shean, is the chief coordinator for DNRI. This section is responsible for requesting printed material in the form of Infantry School publications, maps, and subcourse lessons from the Third Army Field Printing Plant here. Approximately 40 percent of the workload of the printing plant is devoted to support of DNRI activities.

The Operations Section also has the task of maintaining the Department's budget and keeping the committee supplied with materials. The Budget and Supply Officer, 2nd Lt. Donald B. Handy, has found that his supply room is quite different from most. Supply Sergeant SFC John W. Tillea, instead of handling parts and equipment, maintains mountains of typing and inimeograph paper, piles of pencils, and hundreds of thousands of envelopes and other shipping containers.

Because of the combined efforts of all these "Invisible Instructors," the Infantryman with a sincere desire to learn is never hindered by his location. Through the Department of Nonresident Instruction, The Infantry School stretches its helping hand of knowledge to Infantrymen throughout the world.

Ladies Told To Renew Club Cards

"In order to participate in any of the scheduled Women's Club activities this summer, be sure to renew your club membership," says Mrs. Roy Inman, membership chairman. She reminds the ladies that their '62-'63 card is no longer valid, as it expired May 15.

One of the largest clubs of its kind, the Women's Club of Fort Benning boasts a membership of over 2,000 ladies. For only $2 any officer's wife in the Fort Benning area may become a member. The lady is then entitled to take part in any of the club's 25 activities.

These include learning the art of hatmaking, tailoring, sewing, developing artistic talents, working with ceramics or joining the club bowling team.

Other activities are duplicate and party bridge, modeling and charm courses, a choral group, the "exercises" (or Slim 'n Trim, as they are known), flower arranging, and the Great Books discussion groups for people interested in improving their minds via literary travels.

There are piano lessons, ballet and tap dancing lessons and several unannounced groups which will commence in the Fall.

Spanish Worship Service Set

A Spanish language Protestant Sunday School and worship service are conducted each Sunday in Bldg. 1074 in the old hospital area.

Classes for all ages, from nursery through adult begin at 10 a.m.

Except for a class of junior boys and girls, who prefer to use some English, the classes are taught in Spanish, using Spanish Sunday School literature.

A worship service is conducted at 11 a.m. Spanish Bibles and hymn books are provided.

The Sunday School offering each Sunday is turned over to The Infantry Center Chaplains Section, custodians for the Spanish congregation. The section handles all funds and provides literature and supplies for the group.

The services are conducted by SFC (Ret.) Pablo Navarro, a layman who works with Spanish-speaking personnel.

Sgt. Navarro is affiliated with the Georgia Baptist Convention.

Maj. McKenzie Assigned to MAH

Army Nurse Maj. Isabel C. McKenzie has been assigned here.

She will serve as head nurse of Martin Army Hospital's Neuropsychiatry Ward.

Maj. McKenzie came to the post from Germany where she was assigned to the 97th General Hospital in Frankfurt from May, 1961 to April, 1963. She has served overseas 72 months.

Redmond Home Site Of Coffee

Mrs. R. S. Crandall, wife of Col. Crandall, Infantry Center engineer, was bade farewell at a coffee given by Mrs. J. P. Redmond and Mrs. A. W. David recently in Mrs. Redmond's home.

The table was decorated with a white cut-work tablecloth and a modern flower arrangement displayed in a colorful seashell.

Spring flowers in various shades of orange and yellow were used for decorations in the entrance hall and living room, enhancing the oriental decor of the home.

Army Agency To Centralize

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Supply management will be moved another step forward on July 1 with the centralization of stock control operations within the Defense Supply Agency.

On that date the nine commodity management centers of the agency will establish system-wide stock levels and direct shipment from storage depots to various military installations.

Defense Supply Agency centers provide food; clothing and general supplies; chemicals; textiles, medical, industrial and packaged and bulk petroleum; construction, automotive, and electronics parts and components to the armed forces.

The new system will employ automatic data processing equipment and a high-speed data communications network for transmission of supply transaction information.

The supply centers centrally manage over a million items used by the military.

Winston Bestowed New Title

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AFPS) — This is the year of honorary citizenship for Great Britain's war-time Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill.

In the spring he was named by Congress the first and only honorary citizen of the United States. Now he has been commissioned an Honorary Kentucky Colonel, thereby localizing his American citizenship.

To make sure the cigar-puffing war leader would know that Kentucky produced more than fast horses, beautiful women and fine grass, a 5-gallon barrel of Kentucky Bourbon was sent along with his colonel's commission.

A note accompanying the barrel read "Our hope is that upon this Fourth of July you will find it meet and proper to toast the Spirit of '76 with the spirit of America's finest."

Mars Men Can't See Earth's Life

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Coeds, society girls and just plain sunbathers on earth need have no fear of being observed by the high power telescopes of the citizens of Mars or any other planet.

This was the conclusion reached at an international meeting of space scientists held in Warsaw, Poland.

Carl Z. Sagan of Harvard University Observatory said that of 80,000 photographs of the earth taken from the upper atmosphere by "an American Tiros satellite, only one could be interpreted as showing biological life on earth."

"Lights of a large city such as Los Angeles might be detected, but it would prove nothing. Even the light from atomic explosions would not be conclusive proof."

This discussion took place as the scientists were trying to determine if Earth life was detectable on Mars. It was decided that even using the most advanced equipment known today, an astronomer on Mars would be unable to prove there was life on Earth, sun - bath-

87 Receive Ranger Tabs At Graduation

The Ranger Department of The Infantry School graduated its ninth class of trainees in fiscal year 1963 recently in Theater No. 1 as it presented the coveted Ranger tabs to 87 men.

Completing the nine weeks of intensive training were 53 Army officers and 28 enlisted men and six Allied officers.

Honor graduates were 1st Lt. Donald A. Styles and SSgt. William G. Purdy.

One of the highlights of the graduation ceremony was the presentation of the Association of the Army plaque to Sgt. Purdy and also a year's subscription to Infantry Magazine.

The plaque was presented to Sgt. Purdy by Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School. Gen. Norton was also a guest speaker.

In commenting on the 838-hour course, Gen. Norton said, "The Ranger is by far the toughest, the most meaningful in our course here."

He said, "The Ranger course is the adrenalin for our Armed Forces."

The one-star general added, "Men are not only judged as Rangers, but as their worth as combat leaders."

Gen. Norton said the Rangers are recognized as volunteers of the highest caliber.

The general commended the performance of the Rangers during the course which includes three weeks of physical conditioning, three weeks of mountain patrolling techniques in North Georgia, and three weeks of jungle patrols in the swamps of Florida.

He said, "Men who can complete the Ranger course are men the U. S. Army can rely on."

Sp6 Loses 54 Pounds

FORT LAWTON, Wash. (ANF) — Fifty-four pounds in 110 days, is the most enviable weight-loss accomplishment of 42 year-old Sp6 Earl E. Needs, from Reynoldsburg, Ohio.

How did he do it? By strictly adhering to a 1200 calorie diet and by exercising 30 minutes a day in the Fort Lawton gym.

When he began his diet on March 4, the five foot nine inch soldier weighed 209 pounds, wore a size 46 coat, and had a 40-inch waistline.

Now Sp6 Needs has slimmed down to 155 pounds, exactly what the health charts claim he should weigh, wears a size 40 coat, and boasts a trim 33 inch waist.

To insure his not gaining the weight back again, he has given up eating between meals and starchy foods. Although he no longer diets, Sp 6 Needs still restricts himself to a 2000 calorie-per-day diet.

Officer Candidate Woronchuk Worked in Hitler's Labor Camp

By OC James L. La Prade Jr.

Among the men of 53rd Officer Candidate Company of The Infantry School's Student Brigade is a 25-year-old Ukranian, named Ivan Woronchuk.

Candidate Woronchuk was born in Petrowsk, in the wheat plains of the Ukraine, USSR. His family knew discrimination and political turmoil before he was born.

For the most part, the Ukranians were in favor of the overthrow of the Czarist regime in 1917, but soon became very much opposed to the new Bolshevik regime, because of their fervent desire to make a free, autonomous state of their own.

Being patriotic Ukranians, the Woronchuks experienced many tragic losses, because of their so-called unpatriotic beliefs and ideals. Ivan's maternal grandfather, a prominent landowner in the Ukraine, was shot for his reluctance to relinquish his property to the State.

His paternal grandfather met a slightly lesser fate, when he was exiled to Siberia for ten years, for voicing his unwanted opinion of the Communist rule in 1919. He was never heard from again.

After Hitler's German armies invaded Russia in 1941, the Woronchuks were transported to Germany as forced laborers in German's spreading war industries. Fortunately, the family was not separated, but placed together in a family labor camp for the remainder of the war. Ivan's father died during their imprisonment, but, Ivan, his mother, and sister managed to stay together until the end of the war.

After American forces liberated the labor camp, the family was placed in a displaced persons camp, to be sent back to their homeland. At this time Mrs. Woronchuk met Petro Jaworskyj, another Ukranian, and they were married in 1947.

In September, 1951, the Jaworskyj, family came to the United States, and Fort Wayne, Ind., to make their permanent home.

In 1955, Ivan graduated from high school, and joined the Army a year later. After completing his basic training and advanced individual training, he took airborne training at The Infantry Schoool. He then went into Special Forces. He was sent to the 10th Special Forces Group in Germany until 1959.

His next assignment was with the 77th Special Forces Group at Fort Bragg, N. C. In 1960, he gained his U. S. Citizenship. He next went to Germany to a unit in Berlin. While there he met and married a young school teacher from New Jersey. While in Berlin, he applied for Officer Candidate School, and was accepted early in 1963.

Candidate Woronchuk is one more example of the self-appointed freedom fighters who are bred to spend their lives wielding the sword which defends and upholds the peace of free people of the world. He is one who embodies the spirit which beckons others to "Follow Me," and in turn, will be followed by faithful decendants in the trials to come.

Your Dental Health

First Tooth Appears Between 4-8 Months

Perhaps no subject concerns parents of the normal child as much as does eruption of teeth.

Many visits are made by the parents to the doctor's office because of the irritability of the child, and often the symptoms of disease associated with eruption of cutting of teeth.

Common sense is your best guide to follow in regard to eruption of teeth. We will give here a table for tooth eruption, but if you remember one thing, the surest factor in tooth eruption is the variability of age when a child gets his teeth.

The first tooth to erupt is one of the lower front tooth. Normally, this enters the mouth between four and eight months of age. Often, the child begins drooling a month or two before eruption.

The child will usually have his eight front teeth by the time he is 11 months of age, but this may have taken place by the age of seven months. Between the ages of nine and 15 months, the first deciduous molar usually erupts, and this often causes more pain than the front teeth do, because of greater size.

Between 18 months and 30 months of age, the eruption of the baby teeth is completed. Some children have no difficulty, others have plenty. What can you do for the child who has a lot of difficulty.

First, keep his mouth scrupulously clean. To relieve pain first check with your dentist or physician about giving him a child-size aspirin. Don't place it on the area, but have him swallow it. This aspirin also has ability to reduce the inflamed area, so it's purpose is two-fold. If the child runs a temperature consistently, take him to your dentist or physician.

If you, or one of your family has fever blisters or 'canker sores' and the child also has them, tell your doctor this information. This will aid greatly in the treatment of the child.

Give the child anything cold to eat which he will take.

The six-year molars normally erupt first of the permanent teeth, between five years three months and six years nine months. The eight front teeth erupt by the time the child is eight years and nine months. Don't concern yourself with how soon, but hope it is later so the jaws have more chance to grow and provide enough space for them.

7th Cavalry Celebrates 'Their' Day

One of those military celebrations that the 2nd Infantry Division always looks forward to with an expectation of something out of the ordinary is set for Friday morning on Knight Field.

An Indian afoot leading four "yellowleg cavalrymen on horseback will precede a 7th Cavalry parade of the conventional power of the 20th Century Army.

No Indians?

Earlier only one item held up the final plans. The 7th Cavalry hadn't located an Indian costume.

It wasn't like that on June 25, 1876 when Brevet General George A. Custer at the head of the 7th Cavalry rode out to the Little Bighorn River.

The 7th Cavalry Regiment, of which the 2nd Division's 4th Squadron is a part, was formed on July 28, 1866, and ordinarily the 7th Cavalry would observe its birthday in July.

This year due to one reason or another — notably the huge Swift Strike III maneuver to take place in the Carolinas in late July and early August — this Friday will be the occasion for the cavalrymen's celebrations.

Included in the day's events will be a variety of sporting contests. These will include such everyday games as volleyball and tug o' war and other contests peculiar to the military such as backing a jeep with a trailer for 50 yards in a limited space and changing tires for speed.

The men flew directly from Rhein-Main in Frankfurt, Germany to Turner Air Force Base near Albany, Ga. They arrived at Turner at about five p.m. and Capt. Robert Clarke, 1st Battalion S-3, commander of the advance party, was met

PFC Wasserburger was chosen soldier-of-the-Month after competing with other representatives of units within the battalion. The selection was based on his outstanding knowledge of military subjects, current events, his appearance and bearing.

PFC Wasserburger was inducted into the service October 26, 1963, at Sioux Falls, S.D. Prior to entering the service he worked on his father's ranch near Ardmore, S.D. After completing basic training at Fort Chaffee, Ark., he served as a radio repairman with the 1st Battle Group of the 26th Infantry in Baumholder, Germany.

Advance 'Rotaplan' Group Has Landed in Germany

An advance party of the third wave of 2nd Infantry Division troops to move to Europe for temporary duty since the inauguration last year of the Rotaplan rotation system boarded commercial busses last Sunday on the first leg of their trip.

The advance group is made up of 58 men of the division's 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry; 10 officers, one warrant officer and 47 enlisted men. On July 15 the remainder of the battalion will follow: some 775 strong.

A 2nd Division unit, the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, kicked off the Army's newest rotation system last fall. After six months of duty in Baumholder, Germany, the 38th returned to be replaced by two 2nd Division battalions.

Now the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry prepares for its jet flight overseas to replace a sister battalion, the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, in Mannheim, Germany.

While most Rotaplan units serve a standard six months of duty abroad, the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry is returning to Fort Benning after a shortened tour of only three months.

No More Artillery Mules Remarks Visiting Oldtimer

BY Bob De Camara

An old Army muleskinner visited the 2nd Infantry Division's 15th Artillery this week and spun some tales of World War I mud and glory with the American Expeditionary Forces in Europe.

Reliving the days at Pine Camp, N. Y. (now Camp Drum) with the 4th Field Artillery the parent organization of the 15th, white-haired and lively John K. Reeves talked of four-mile wagon teams and $13 monthly pay.

World War I fever was in the air for America when Reeves joined the Army in 1916.

Assigned Wagoner

He was assigned in New York State as a wagoner with the 4th Artillery's Supply Company. In those days, mules pulled the supply wagons and the artillery.

A picture in faded brown and cream shows strings of mules tethered at the Artillery's Pine Camp bivouac area. Searching his memory only a little, Mr. Reeves pointed to the various mules called them by name and gave out detailed peculiarities of each.

"The mules were issued like rifles. Once you got a mule you kept with him. I thought as much of those mules as the people alongside me."

In 1917 the 4th—now the 15th pulled up stakes and travelled to Tenafly, N. J. and then Hoboken where the unit embarked for overseas on the steamship Adriatic.

"The Leviathan left a day after us and arrived two days earlier. We landed in Liverpool, England on Christmas morning 1916. A couple of days later we crossed the channel to Le Havre and rode forty-and-eights (french trains) to our new camp.

Things changed for the Wagoner in Europe. His pay had jumped to $15 and the to $36. The 15th now had horses to lug the artillery pieces.

"In Europe I was making $36 a month. We got $30 basic pay, $3 for overseas duty and $3 for being a wagoner which was equivalent to a corporal. Only we didn't wear stripes. We had wagon wheels sewed on our sleeves."

In Bourmont, France in October 1917 when the 2nd Infantry Division was formed of U. S. Marine and Army units, Reeves joined the "Second to None" with his unit.

Besides the 15th, the 2nd Division had acquired the 12th and 17th Artilleries.

"Easter Sunday night (in 1918) the 15th went to its first front. We were on the right flank at Verdun, a quiet sector. Over to the left we could see the fire, and every now and then we'd send off a few shells to draw some of it our way." Our first real battle was Chateau-Thierry. We left Verdun on a forced march for Chateau Thierry. That was where the 5th and 6th Marines (part of the 2nd Division) stopped the Germans cold."

War Battles

From there John Reeves remembers battles through France and Germany, all the big ones the 2nd Division took part in as the most decorated American division in World War I.

He landed in an evacuation hospital in Germany with bronchial pneumonia in 1919 and was shipped back to the states before his unit as a casualty. At Camp Dix, N. J. upon arrival from Germany he was discharged from the Army and took up his civilian career as a tile-setter.

But Mr. Reeves still retains a fondness for the Army and the old artillery.

He ate with the men in the battery mess hall, inspected modern field pieces, clucked over the changes and left a 295 millimeter sharpnel shell from the old 4th Artillery for the men of Battery A to inspect.

And, wonder of wonders for an old wagoner, attended an artillery battalion review as a guest of the commanding general of the 2nd Division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea.

John Reeves keeps active in the division at Woodrow Wilson Barracks in Oaklyn, N. J. near his home in Belmar.

Club Four Fetes USO's Director

Service Club Four last week presented a "going away" gift to Miss Beverly Romanchuk, program director for the Columbus USO. Miss Romanchuk leaves shortly for Icmir, Turkey, where she will continue working with the USO.

Miss Romanchuk has been active in helping 2nd Division soldiers enjoy their stay while in the Columbus area. She has worked for the past year for the Columbus USO and also aided post service club personnel whenever she was needed.

Prior to the dance, honoring the occasion, at the Kelley Hill club, Miss Elizabeth Shanks, club director for the Kelley Hill service club, arranged a ceremony for Miss Romanchuk. PFC Bobby Patterson, who works at Club Four, presented Miss Romanchuk with a gift on behalf of the club and its members.

Miss Romanchuk's family is in Ohio and she plans to visit them before leaving for Turkey.

23rd Is Assigned Capt. as Adjutant

New Cottages Are Open For Transient Noncoms

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding officer of the famed 2nd Infantry Division, officially dedicated the opening of the new Noncommissioned Officer transient motel-cottages last week in ceremonies held at the NCO Open Mess.

Six new units, family-type cottages, were made available for incoming NCOs and their families. Each unit can comfortably house a family of nine.

Speaking to an assembled group of sergeants, Gen. Billingslea said,

"The families coming to the division will appreciate the concern you men had for them. When they leave they will be favorably impressed by your work. I congratulate all of you on the fine job you have done."

Sgt. Maj. Edward Leavitt, president of the board of governors of the NCO Club and sergeant major of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, introduced Gen. Billingslea to the club members.

NEWEST 2ND DIVISION SERGEANT MAJOR
Sgt. Maj. Reis, (L) with Gen. Billingslea

9th's Reis Is Promoted To Sgt. Maj.

Sgt. Maj. Michael S. Reis, of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, was presented with his promotion orders to sergeant major by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea last week in the commanding general's office.

Sgt. Reis was one of the ranking master sergeants in the Army, making that rank in June 1958 while also a member of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Prior to becoming sergeant major for the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, in March, he was first sergeant of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade.

He enlisted into the Army in 1942 in Hawaii.

Lt. Col. Jack Samson, commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, was on hand for the presentation and joined Gen. Billingslea in congratulating the 2nd Infantry Division's newest sergeant major.

of Maj. Lloyd R. Cain, battalion executive officer, boarded busses for their ride to Turner Air Force Base.

There they flew by jet to Mannheim, Germany.

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry is commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson, who will accompany the main body of his troops to Germany on July 15.

Rotaplan was devised by Army planners to serve a multiplicity of purposes. First, it is economically sound. Soldiers of Rotaplan units may not be accompanied overseas by dependents. Their tours of duty are purposely kept short in order to minimize this drawback.

More important to the Army tactically and strategically Rotaplan utilizes the increased mobility and flexibility of the newly-organized 2nd Division.

The concept of rapid troop movements of relatively large numbers is a practical example of Army capabilities in times of real need.

Rotaplan also serves as a source of valuable European training for otherwise stateside units.

overall winners will be presented.

To Gary Owen

Known as the "Gary Owen" for the battle song popularized by Gen. Custer, the 7th Cavalry will stand at rigid attention on Knight Field for inspection by its commander, Lt. Col. Quintus Atkinson.

On the field will be the squadron's five troops. Troop is a unit designation that only the cavalry uses.

Since the 2nd Division's reorganization, elements of an air cavalry troops, helicopter-transportable, has been added. The air cavalry troops is the latest in the Army's steps toward lightning mobility.

Following the review and games, a picnic is scheduled for the men and their families. The general public has been welcomed by the 7th Cavalry to the day's ceremonies.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, are expected.

Manchu

by Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, commander. Col. Paul had flown back to Fort Benning from Germany recently on emergency leave and stayed here to await the arrival of his troops.

The advance party spent three months in Mannheim, Germany at Sullivan Barracks.

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry was mechanized before their departure to Germany. They trained in Europe as a mechanized unit under the Rotaplan program and will return to the 2nd Infantry Division next month as a straight infantry unit. This type of mechanization is one of Rotaplan's versatile programs that enable troops to receive various training which makes them mobile and flexible under the Rotaplan system.

Col. Paul arrived in the 9th Infantry area first; by staff car, and a few minutes later two buses carrying the seven officers and 51 enlisted men arrived.

The reunion of the families was brief as the men quickly assembled, and were escorted to eat and turn in equipment. After this they were "on their own."

Two-Day Battle Prepares Brigade for Swift Strike

By 1st Brigade PIO

With the fast approach of joint exercise Swift Strike III, the 2nd Division's 1st Brigade recently took to the field under the command of Col. Edgar R. Poole, for a two-day exercise in preparation for the all-out simulated tactical battle in North and South Carolina.

The Command Post Exercise (CPX) just completed by the 1st Brigade was designed to establish and operate communications nets and minimize processing and transmission of messages, to gain proficiency in displacement and the establishment of the Brigade Command Post, and to exercise the Brigade Headquarters in a tactical role.

The 1st Brigade was supported by elements of the 122nd Signal Battalion who, along with the communications platoon of the Brigade saw that all communications nets and systems within the Brigade Headquarters were established and operational.

The exercise consisted of two movements, one being the initial move to a predesignated area which saw the men establishing a command post and putting it in an operational status, followed by a night movement to a new area with the same objectives being accomplished.

During the daylight hours the brigade was hit by a simulated ground attack.

The exercise was highlighted by a talk from Col. Poole who stated that every man should do his best on these problems to achieve each goal. He stressed offering any ideas which would improve the overall operation of the exercise.

According to Col. Poole the exercise proved very profitable and when Exercise Swift Strike III arrives the 1st Brigade will be ready to meet any problem they might be faced with.

Returning recently from Vietnam, Maj. Serafin is a native of Chicago, Ill.

He began his military career in 1942 as an enlisted man in the U. S. Marine Corps. He fought with the Marines in Okinawa and Iwo Jima campaigns during World War II.

After completing his tour of duty in the Marine Corps, the major entered Syracuse University in 1946 where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in physical education and general history.

Upon returning to the U. S. in August 1955, he served as a company commander in Fort Chaffee, Ark., where he remained until October 1959 before departure for Korea.

Following a Korea assignment as company commander in the 8th Cavalry, Maj. Serafin joined the ROTC staff at the University of Vermont.

An avid sportsman, the major coached the famed Berlin "Bears" football team while stationed in Germany and also coached intramural ROTC football while at the University of Vermont.

Given Bronze Star Medal For Special Vietnam Duty

A Bronze Star Medal was awarded last week to Capt. Robert M. Wiggins, assistant signal officer of the 2nd Infantry Division, for installing a village communication network throughout South Vietnam.

During the period September 6, 1962 to March 19, 1963, Capt. Wiggins successfully planned and directed the installation of over 2,500 village-hamlet radios in the Republic of Vietnam. He established a country-wide supply and maintenance system to support the program and directed the training of Vietnamese technicians to continue the program when he and his unit departed.

He accomplished these tasks although he was the only officer assigned to the 72nd Signal Detachment Provisional and his personnel were spread over a wide area.

On many missions, Capt. Wiggins accompanied his teams under extremely hazardous conditions through areas occupied by Viet Cong guerrillas. On several such occasions he was subjected to hostile fire.

In ceremonies at division headquarters, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, pinned the Bronze Star Medal on Capt. Wiggins.

Prior to going to Southeast Asia on this assignment, Capt. Wiggins was assistant signal officer for the division, assigned to the 122nd Signal Battalion. After his return, he resumed his job with the famed "Second To None."

Both have received the same awards with the exception of the Silver Star awarded to Col. Conger. They both are the recipients of the Bronze Star Medal with "V" Device, the purple Heart, the Army Commendation medal and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Puppet Show Featured Saturday

The summer employment program of Fort Benning's Youth Activities Club (YAC) gets a boost Saturday morning with a parade of 28 puppets.

The sample showing, scheduled for the Brat Barracks at 10 a.m., is the handiwork of 14-year-old Bob Corley, son of the assistant division commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley.

Miss Patsy Show

Bob and his puppets have already appeared on local television. The "Miss Patsy Show" on June 21 was the first network airing for the young entertainer. More TV is planned for the summer months.

Saturday's sampling is for the benefit of parents in a quandry as to entertainment to provide for birthday parties for their children.

The preview showing is advertised in a Youth Activities Club "flyer" to hold adults, as well as the youngsters, spellbound for an entire hour. The flyer says,

"The ideal solution to your entertainment problem for the youngsters is just a phone call away," and the man to call for a booking is Mr. Ted Franklin at 545-1627.

Ten per cent of the proceeds from each show belong to the Youth Activities Club and are used to maintain and buy athletic equipment for the member sons of Fort Benning soldiers.

Features Hansel and Gretel

Saturday's puppet show, featuring Hansel and Gretel with the majority of the voices on tape, is free of charge.

TO SHOW PUPPETS SATURDAY
Youth Activities' Bob Corley

Don Todd, son of Col. William A. Todd Jr., chief of Martin Army Hospital, will assist young Corley with the Saturday show.

Bob became interested in puppetry at six, starting with four puppets and a German - built stage. Today he has 28 puppets from such countries as Denmark, Italy, Germany and the U. S.

His favorites, an alligator, two hedgehogs and Santa Claus, are from Germany. Bob has had unusual opportunity to build his collection travelling with his father on duty in far-off lands.

Puppets, according to Bob Corley, enjoy much more popularity overseas than in the United States.

Puppet shows are a step away from the ordinary employment found by YAC youths during the summer months out of school. In the past, baby sitting and ice cream vending have been the two most frequent occupations.

Saturday morning's Parade of Puppets will try to establish new work vistas for the showmen among Fort Benning's youth.

A Dog '. . . Faithful and True, Even in Death'

"No, you may not have a dog! They're dirty and mess up the house. Besides, you don't need one."

I wonder how many children over the years have heard words such as those?

It was a century ago that a U. S. Senator made a speech; a speech before a court of law concerning a sad-eyed farm dog. Though no one lives today who was present to hear it, each time I recall or read the Senator's words, I wish I had been there.

I recall it when I see where a few of the bad ones have caused harm; yet, I also remember whenever I see a small child and his shaggy, dirty companion playing together — having that undefinable understanding and emotion that exists only between them. But, I remember it most of all when I digress back to the days of my childhood when I, also, had a dog.

It happened in a small country courthouse about a hundred years ago ....

A Hunting Dog

A young farmer was being sued, and returning suit, about his hunting dog, which had been shot. Voluminous evidence had been brought forth to show that the defendant had shot the dog in malice, while the other evidence tried to show that the dog had attacked the defendant. Senator George Graham Vest, U.S. Senator from Missouri, was urged by the young farmer's attorneys to help them. He agreed to sit in on the trial and offer advice, if needed.

After the evidence for both sides had been introduced, Senator Vest was asked by the judge if he would like to say a few words — a tribute to the Senator's presence and participation in such a minor court hearing. The kindly old man had made no plans to speak at the trial and therefore hesitated. Then, when the judge asked again, the Senator arose, scanned the face of each juryman for a moment, and then began what has gone down in history as 'Senator Vest's Tribute To A Dog!'

"'Gentlemen of the jury: The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps, when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its clouds upon our heads.

"The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is a dog. A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, when the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master, as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heaven.

High Privilege

"If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard against danger, to fight his enemies; and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground; no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by the graveside will the noble dog be found — his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in watchfulness; faithful and true even in death."

Senator Vest sat down. He had spoken in a low voice, without any gesture. The young farmer won the case, and it became the first trial, involving a dog, that went to the Supreme Court. In the annals of courtroom dramas, it is considered a classic.

On a headstone tributed to Senator Vest upon his death in 1904, were these simple words: "This is to a man who was a dog's best friend."

Yes, I remember. But I shall remember best of all when the day comes and my sons should ask me: "Daddy, can we have a dog?"

Gift Recorder Given Rota Center

The Rota Wives Family Service Center was the scene recently of a "happy event."

Chap. (Capt.) Frank E. Deese, assistant division chaplain, presented wives of Rotaplan soldiers with a tape recorder designed to aide in maintaining contact between families temporarily separated.

For many weeks the Rota Wives had been raising money toward a tape recorder. Money was still needed when word was received that the quest had ended and the recorder financed through the courtesy of the Warrior Branch of the 2nd Infantry Division Association.

In the name of the Warrior Branch, Chap. Deese presented the tape recorder, bringing out that the original idea and recommendation came from Chap. (Capt.) Lee A. Smith, chaplain of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, now in Baumholder, Germany.

Chap. Smith had written to Chap. (Lt. Col.) James H. Fiser, division chaplain, suggesting that if a way could be found to purchase a tape recorder for the center it would improve morale a great deal in Germany. Chaplains Fiser and Deese immediately met with the Rota Center to coordinate and work began to raise the money.

PRESENTING TAPE RECORDER TO ROTA WIVES CENTER
Chap. Deese with (L-R) Mmes. Paul, Kendrick, Samson

Mrs. Donald T. Paul, wife of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry commanding officer, Mrs. Jack Samson, wife of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry commander and Mrs. Robert C. Kendrick, wife of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry executive officer, accepted the tape recorder for Rota Wives.

Mrs. Paul, accepting for all, thanked Chap. Deese not only for the ladies now using the Rota Center but for all Rota Wives of the future. She brought out that a private room had been prepared where the wives and children of the men in Germany could both make and listen to tapes in complete privacy.

Following the presentation, an informal coffee hour was enjoyed by all attending the event.

GATHERING TO HONOR DEPARTING MRS. JONES

Festivities Are Goodbye For Mrs. Ralph Jones

A farewell tea was held by ladies of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery for Mrs. Ralph K. Jones, wife of the Division Artillery commander, at the Supper Club Lounge Friday.

The festivities started with the presentation of an orchid corsage for Mrs. Jones. A receiving line headed by Mrs. Robert E. Camp, wife of the Division Artillery adjutant, presented the ladies to Mrs. Floyd L. Johnson, hostess and wife of the executive officer. The ladies then continued down the line to bid farewell to Mrs. Jones.

The table arrangement, done by Mrs. Johnson, consisted of an orchid taffeta table cloth with an overlay skirt of cerise netting. The centerpiece was of deep pink roses, pink carnations, and pink asters with bittersweet candles all in a candelabra. Also on the table were finger sandwiches, petit fours, and mixed nuts.

Mrs. Francis P. Sheridan, wife of the Division Artillery S-3 officer, poured the coffee and tea assisted by: Mrs. Joseph Boisvert, Mrs. Francis Chance, Mrs. Terence Huck, Mrs. John Evans, Mrs. Dillard Jones, and Mrs. Joseph Mordente.

Mrs. Edmund Rozecki, Mrs. Marion Carrigan, Mrs. Clifford Phifer and Mrs. Frank Serio poured the lime punch.

To end the afternoon, Mrs. Jones was presented with an engraved silver bowl from the ladies of Division Artillery.

A Beach Party Coffee Changes 702nd's Pace

Wives of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion Thursday attended a coffee disguised as a beach party in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The hostesses, Mesdames Wallace Bruce, Daryl Brost, and Fred Mullens, carried out the beach theme of "Fun in the Sun" with both the decorations and the refreshments. Beach towels, balls, sanglasses and sand pails adorned the serving table, which featured a tiered melon ball platter, finger sandwiches and lemonade.

Mrs. Pete Burke, a newcomer to the battalion, was asked to serve.

Plans were discussed for the forthcoming 2nd Division officers' Wives Club coffee July 9, which the Maintenance wives and the 2nd Medical Battalion wives are hostessing.

Irish Accent Flavors Mrs. Arnold's Goodwill

BY VIRGINIA FREEMAN

A tireless effort exerted to promote interest and goodwill among Ladies of the Big Indianhead gives one a word picture of the incoming 1st vice president of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead.

As the outgoing administration's entertainment chairman, Mrs. Leroy B. Arnold added special enthusiasm to each area of her committee work.

As entertainment chairman, she and her committee conducted a monthly Service Club Bingo for young enlisted personnel at the Sand Hill Service Club, planned the quarterly dinner dances for members and their sponsors; made possible the Christmas parties for members' children and the annual Easter Egg Roll. This year a family-style picnic was an added attraction to members as well as their children.

Born in a small fishing village on the northern coast of Ireland, Mrs. Arnold later moved to Stafford, England. It was here that she married SFC Arnold.

With more than a hint of her Irish accent, Mrs. Arnold tells that it was in 1950 that she first came to the U. S.

The Arnolds were stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky., for only a few months before receiving orders for Korea. Remaining in Clarksville, Tenn., was not disappointing for Mrs. Arnold for the people were "cordial and helpful and truly gave a wonderful first impression of the U.S."

Leisure time activities for Mrs. Arnold include bowling, gardening, boating and fishing.

While the Arnolds were stationed in Munich, Germany, they, like so many Army families, travelled extensively.

Among the countries and places of interest they recall trips taking them to Berchesgarden, Garmish in Germany; Holland, France, Switzerland and Beglium.

Mrs. Arnold has more than a passing interest in America's Parent - Teachers Association (PTA) for she has four sons in school.

The Arnolds anticipate moving and retiring eventually in Florida because they both enjoy fishing. They presently reside at Fort Benning.

SFC Arnold is a member of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

Mrs. Huck Is Honored By Ladies

Ladies of the 12th Artillery officers honored Mrs. Terence Huck at their regular monthly coffee and business meeting.

Mrs. Clifford Phifer and Mrs. Jack Goodwin were co-hostesses at the coffee held in Mrs. Phifer's home, where the tables were centered with arrangements of white mums and red carnations.

The coffee was a farewell for Mrs. Huck, who is accompanying her husband on an assignment to Hawaii. The honoree was presented with a gift from the ladies in appreciation for her guidance and help.

Guests at the coffee were Mesdames Michael Cornwell, Mike Demeter, Raymond Kurtz, all formerly of the 12th Artillery.

New committee chairmen were chosen at the coffee. Mrs. Thomas Ashe is the new Publicity chairman and Mrs. Joseph Pitts is the new Reservations chairman.

Mrs. Ashe is a newcomer to the group. She was recently married to Lt. Thomas Ashe in the 12th.

Mrs. Taft Practices Her Policy Never To Panic

BY CAROL SUE HAI

"At Fort Polk, Louisiana, I learned a lesson that has guided me ever since: never to panic—something always turns up at the last minute."

The advocate of this "don't-push - the - panic - button - theory" is an alert, attractive, active mother of four, Mrs. Philip H. Taft, whose husband is Lt. Col. Taft, commanding officer of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

NEVER PANICS

Although Belmont, Mass. is her home, Mrs. Taft is no newcomer to Georgia. She came to Macon (Camp Wheeler, now defunct) on her honeymoon.

After graduating from Wellesley College in Wellesley, Mass. Mrs. Taft, then Shirley Fielding, joined the Executive Training Squad of Filenes in Boston. Philip Taft, whom she had known since the 8th grade, graduated from Boston University, received a reserve commission, and went on to Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning. Upon his completion of OCS they were married in Belmont in November 1943.

From Camp Wheeler they went to Camp Blanding, Fla., where they lived in converted chicken coops called "one room efficiency apts." in Green Cove Springs, Fla. Since the most important thing was to be together, they not only made the best of the chicken coop situation, but also faced a more serious situation when they moved to Fort Polk and found no housing. After securing a fine room to rent in a private home they had a traumatic experience when it came time to leave. Thinking they were departing post on a given day, they gave up their room and went on post only to find they could not leave until the following day. With no place to sleep that night, Lt. Taft suggested they go to a movie and worry about it later. After the movie they drove to the home where they had had a room and not only found the landlord in, but the room available to them. The memory of this experience has influenced Mrs. Taft in all tight situations ever since.

The Tafts reported to Camp McCain, Miss., (another no longer existing installation) to the 94th Division, which was preparing to go overseas.

In August 1944 Lt. Taft went to France and Germany and Mrs. Taft went home. The Lieutenant was sent h o m e wounded in April 1945 and was hospitalized at Camp Edwards, Mass.

That fall the Tafts moved to New Bedford, Mass. where he became Professor of Military Science and Tactics in the New Bedford High School. Mrs. Taft gave birth to their daughter, Linda, in January 1946.

When school was out in June trouble was found relating to the old wound and Capt. Taft was again hospitalized, this time at Fort Devens, Mass. He was discharged from the Army in 1947.

Philip Jeffrey was born in August 1948 while the Tafts lived in Cambridge, Mass. where Mr. Taft was in Advertising and Sales Promotion with an Electrical Distributing Co. During this time the captain maintained his reserve commission and went to summer camps.

In September 1950 he was called back in and sent to Fort Benning for an indefinite school assignment. When he received orders for the Tactical Department of The Infantry School at the end of the assignment, the family joined him here. They lived in Custer Terrace and "loved it." This post gave her a different idea of the Army than she had had before, Mrs. Taft points out. She played golf and really developed her love of the game at this time. Brownie Scouts had been one of her activities in Cambridge and she continued with a Brownie Troop here.

In April 1953 Capt. Taft left for Korea and the rest of the family returned to Mass., settling in Newton, where Mrs. Taft became affiliated with the League of Women Voters. In July 1954 Capt. Taft returned home as a Major. Through all this time, laughs Mrs. Taft, "we'd never been together for a promotion."

The next assignment was to the U.S. Army Ordnance School at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland. The family bought a new home in Aberdeen Hills and spent a great deal of time working on it. Following through with her interest in the League of Women Voters, Mrs. Taft served on the Board of the Harford County League at the time of the Suez Crisis and the Hungarian Revolution.

Robert, their second son, was born at Aberdeen in October 1955 and Snuzy, a throughbred miniature schnauzer was acquired t h e n. After three years at Aberdeen, Maj. Taft got his Regular Army Commission in Ordnance and they stayed on for an Advanced Ordnance course. The same day in July 1958 that their youngest child, Richard, was born, they received orders for Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the Command and General Staff School for 1958-59.

Mrs. Taft has designated this year as the "most hectic year in the Army! We lived in a little h o u s e and everybody came home for lunch — at a different time.

Expecting orders for Germany, the family practiced their German with Living German records and had their household goods packed f o r storage, as no goods were allowed on tours in Germany. Orders came for France, finding them unprepared in their French grammar, but on their way to the Nancy Ordnance Depot, Nancy, France in the summer of 1959.

Contrasting her roomy home in Aberdeen where the family life was very home-centered and the t i n y quarters at Leavenworth where they got out more and did things away from home, Mrs. Taft feels that "circumstance is so important in life. You think you have complete control o v e r life, but the place you live in can shape the life you lead, and wherever you live, life is so different."

Mrs. Taft sums herself up as a "dilletante, who dabbles in this and that." It is apparent that the things she has "dabbled" in are the richer for her stimulating, enlightened and easy-going, efficient influence.

COOK of the WEEK

By Virginia Freeman

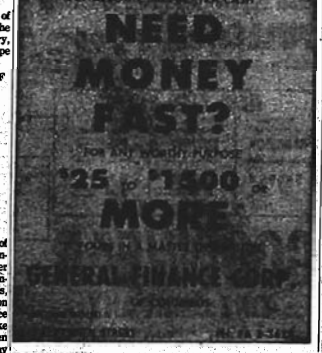
The cranberry has taken on new interest since so many people have discovered it combines beautifully with other meats aside from fowl. What could be more savory than "Cranberry Meat Loaf."

Meat loaf itself is a wonderful standby and dressed up with a zesty cranberry sauce could be the delight of any meal.

Mrs. Eugene Wilson, wife of SSgt. Eugene Wilson of the 2nd Division's 37th Artillery, shares with readers her recipe for "Cranberry Meat Loaf."

CRANBERRY MEAT LOAF
¼ cup brown sugar
½ cup cranberry sauce
1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground smoked ham
½ pound ground fresh prok
¾ cup milk
¾ cup cracker crumbs
2 eggs
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp pepper
2 tbsp diced onions
3 bay leaves

Spread sugar over bottom of greased loaf pan. Mash cranberry sauce and spread over sugar. Combine remaining ingredients, except bay leaves, shape into loaf and place on the cranberry sauce. Place bay leaves on top of loaf. Bake in moderate, 350 degrees oven about one hour. Remove bay leaves before serving. Serves 12.



Mrs. Mulvey Honored By Division

The ladies of 2nd Division Artillery Headquarters welcomed Mrs. Francis P. Mulvey, wife of the new Headquarters Battery commander, at their monthly coffee.

Mrs. William A. Lowe and Mrs. Millard R. Allen were hostesses for the event held in the Normandy Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess.

The serving table was overlaid with a cloth of white linen and centered with an arrangement of white snapdragons and yellow chrysanthemums. A silver service was at one end, from which Mrs. Ralph K. Jones served the coffee and tea.

This was the last coffee for many ladies of DivArty Headquarters. Mrs. Jones will be leaving soon to accompany her husband, on an assignment to Carlisle Barracks, Army War College in Pennsylvania.

Also leaving is Mrs. William T. Altman, whose husband, the present Communications Officer, is leaving for Vietnam. Mrs. Millard Allen is leaving in July for Hawaii.

37th Arty Wives Hosted by Glenns

The 37th Artillery Officers' Wives held their monthly coffee in the home of Mrs. Joel Glenn. Hostesses were M r s. Glenn and Mrs. Charles Wendt, who poured the punch.

Farewells were said to Mesdames John Connolly, Frank Serio, and Joseph Mordente.

Brother Gives Inspiration to Free-Falling Skydiver

By 1st Brigade PIO

To most people skydiving is a relatively new sport, but, to the Tighe brothers Bob and Tim it has become the biggest thing since the discovery of phlogiston, a substance the ancients thought to create fire.

According to Tim, a private first class and member of Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade, he is the junior member of the two with 15 sport parachute jumps as compared to 226 free falls jumps made by his brother Bob with the All American Sport Parachute Club of Detroit, Mich.

Tim began skydiving in April of 1961 at Almont, Mich., with his first static line jump at the altitude of 2500 feet, making a near perfect jump, landing 50 yards from the pre-designated target which his brother Bob spotted and assisted him by acting as his jump master. This was the first of seven static line jumps made by Tim before he started free falling at 3,000 feet with a five second delay.

When asked what made him become interested in the sport of skydiving, he replied "My brother was my main inspiration and I found it to be the most highly competitive sport in the field today. It also requires a high degree of skill and self confidence."

Tim says that his brother Bob has behind him a brilliant career in this sport which started when he was a paratrooper with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., in January 1958. Upon his discharge from the service in February 1959 he still found an ardent desire to jump. With six other paratroopers, he formed the All American Sport Parachute Team of Detroit, Mich. According to Tim they got the name from the 82nd (All Americans at Fort Bragg, N. C.) five of these men were members of the 82nd Airborne except his brother who was the "lone" Screaming Eagle of the 101st Airborne Division.

Tim has never hesitated about skydiving. "I think I have the best teacher in the sport, my brother. He has jump mastered many of the 4000 jumps that the members of the club have made not to mention the many spectacular jumps he himself has made."

When asked about some of these jumps his brother made, Tim replied: "Bob made the first 16 milimeter free fall movies in Michigan using a helmet mounted camera, also during the annual Freedom Festival between Canada and the U. S., Bob made a free fall jump into the Detroit River which is the only boundary line between Canada and the United States as an added attraction to this annual affair. Besides this, he along with three other club members made the first free fall using oxygen from an altitude of 18,500 feet in Michigan.

When asked of Tim what he thought was the greatest maneuver his brother made while skydiving he replied: "It happened when his brother along with Kim Emmons a member of the U. S. Woman's Olympic Parachute Team made a double paton pass high over Romeo, Mich. (A double baton pass according to Tim is when two people pass a baton off to one another twice while free falling, using their arms and legs to guide them towards each other.)

Tim's plans for the future include starting college and working toward a degree in business administration and, of course, to get back with the club and some more skydiving.

In Upatoi

Infantrymen Storm Island

By 2-23rd Infantry PIO

A platoon of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, utilized Fort Benning's Upatoi Creek to add realism to tactical training recently in showing special training to visiting Austrian Military Academy Cadet Frederick Dialer.

Under the leadership of Lt. Fred Hasen, the platoon rappelled down a 40-foot cliff, crossed a two-rope bridge and assaulted an island in the Upatoi. Cadet Dialer, visiting with Virginia Military Institute Cadet Jesse Frosch, watched as the men destroyed the "enemy" on the island and evacuated a casualty up a cliff.

This fast-moving attack and evacuation required only 22 minutes.

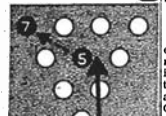
Better Bowling



BIG SLIDE . . . Many splits are the result of thin pocket hits or from a ball that has little on it. The five-seven is a split that results from either but often both. To convert the split, roll the ball from about the center of the alley. The ball should be played so it touches the five-pin thinly on the righthand side. It should slide over to the seven-pin. This is one of the scientific splits — one that can be converted in a scientific way — which amounts to knowing how to do it and having a great deal of luck.

197th Infantry Stops TICTC in 10-0 Rout

First baseman George Rogers hammered across five runs, hitting a two-run homer in the second inning, to lead the 197th Infantry Brigade to a 10-0 rout over The Infantry Center Troop Command in the second game of the second half of the Major Unit League baseball season.

J. R. Miller started the game for the Infantrymen allowing only one runner past second base, as he struck out seven men and scattered five hits. Only once did the lanky fastballer appear in trouble, and this came in the fifth inning. With two outs, singles by TICTC's Paul Dorak and Joe Barke put runners on first and third; however, Miller caught Roger England looking at a third strike to end the threat.

The Infantrymen wasted no time in getting to starting TICTC pitcher Ted Arganis as George Rogers tagged a 2-2 pitch well over the left centerfield fence with Juan Martinez aboard to jump into a two-run lead after two innings of play.

Arganis settled down until the fifth when, after one was out, Bryant, Gregory and Jessie Rigdon walked to load bases. Pat Corso beat out a slow ground ball to third bringing home a run and keeping three Infantrymen on base.

Samuel Soto came in to relieve Arganis and quickly got Martinez on a called third strike. George Rogers followed with a hard hit ball down the first base line, scoring two runs and giving the 197th a 6-0 lead.

In the seventh inning, the Infantrymen picked up four more runs with the big blow coming from the bat of Jake Bryant, whose two-run triple put the game completely out of reach. Final score, 197th-10. TICTC-0.

Medics Lose

In the other game played last weekend, the 428th Medics, winless throughout the first half, put on a brilliant display of fielding and pitching but succumed to The Student Brigade by a 2-0 count.

Jimmy Bradley held the Brigademen hitless for 7 1-3 before yielding the lone two runs of the ball game. This came about on three successive TSB singles followed by two pass balls.

Glenn Ponte went all the way for TSB picking up his first victory. Ponte walked only one man and struck out seven. Both pitchers matched each other in performance as they faced 31 batters and struck out seven.

Rain Delays Tennis Action At Post Tourney

The participants in the post tennis tournament, underway at the Main Officers' Open Mess, have one consolation. It's also raining on everyone else.

At press time Wednesday, the tournament's last two Singles rounds had been rained out for six consecutive days.

Assuming that Mr. Weather is ready to smile on Fort Benning, Special Services officials have set the lineups for the matches.

In the Open Singles Matches, which have drawn the most attention, Art Foust faces Donald Abbott, and Robert Frey meets Dustin Silver. The winners will meet for the championship. Foust and Frey already have teamed to cop the Open Doubles.

The tournament champion will represent Fort Benning in the Third Army tourney at Fort Bragg, N.C. next month.

New Class Troop Ship Joins Fleet

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The USS Vancouver, second of a new class of amphibious troop-cargo ships, was commissioned in early May at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Fully loaded, the 521-foot vessel with a beam of 84 feet, will displace nearly 14,000 tons. Her speed is rated in excess of 20 knots.

Her design permits landing craft to leave through the stern, carrying Marines and their combat equipment onto beaches. Six helicopters can shuttle additional Marines from the flight deck.

The USS Vancouver can carry a crew of 462 officers and men and a landing force of 900 Marines. She will be berthed in San Diego, Calif.

Capt. Thomas C. Harbert, a native of Tennessee and a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, is the commanding officer.

Plastic Aids Little Man

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Everyone loves a parade, except probably those little guys who have to march in one carrying a 38-pound brass sousaphone.

The United States Army Band has put the fun back in parading for its sousaphonists by replacing the bulky brass horns with new, 19-pound plastic instruments.

The band's assistant leader, Capt. Gilbert Mitchell, reports that the new sousaphones are working out well. The sound quality is comparable to that of brass horns.

Capt. Mitchell also feels the plastic sousas, which are considerably cheaper in price than the brass ones, will be more easily repairable because they contain removable parts.

12 Boxing Bouts Set for Tonight By 4th Battalion

Boxing has returned to Fort Benning.

Tonight the 4th Student Battalion will unveil a series of boxing smokers which promise to produce some wild and wooley bouts.

Starting at 7:30 p.m. airborne trainees will participate in 12 separate two-minute bouts. They will be held on the tennis courts behind Headquarters and Supply Company in the battalion area.

Airborne training officials explained that the smokers are designed to raise the morale of the trainees, but they stressed that everyone interested in watching good boxing may attend at no cost.

The smokers will be a regular Friday night attraction.

TSB Is 1st Half Champ In Major Unit League

By PFC Leo Zani

A crucial three-game series this week between The Student Brigade and the 197th Infantry Brigade gave the TSB nine the first half championship of the Major Unit Baseball League, but not before a near perfect game by J. R. Miller of the 197th caused a real scare.

Striking out half of the 30 batters he faced and walking only two, Miller shut out The Student Brigade batters 6-0 in notching his fifth victory against two setbacks.

The only hit came in the eighth when TSB shortstop Jessie Joyce hit a clean double to left field.

In the second game of the series, TSB's Coach Kinard called upon Charlie Spell, who was backed up by a 13 hit attack in going the route for his eighth victory of the season.

The third game went to the Infantrymen by forfeit.

In other games, the Infantry Center Troop Command took over second place as they swept a three-game series from the winless 428th Medics.

The three game sweep gave the TICTC boys a first half record of 12 wins and six losses.

The Medics ended the first half of play deep in the cellar with no wins and 18 losses.

Ralph Maru, slugging second baseman from The Student Brigade, won the first half batting title with a .361 average. Maru had 30 hits in 83 trips to the plate with two home runs.

Maru also led the league in runs scored with 23 and in the RBI department with 26.

Second in the batting race was TICTC's Art Bosworth, who finished with a .326 average. Bosworth had 15 hits in 46 appearances. Joyce was the league's third man in hitting with a .316 batting average.

Spell Wins 8

In pitching, Spell became the League's winningest pitcher with an 8-0 record. Spell pitched 72 innings giving up 17 earned runs for a 2.09 ERA.

Spell' also led the league in strikeouts with 108.

The lowest ERA was credited to J. R. Miller. Pitching 55 innings, Miller was tagged for 10 earned runs for a low ERA of 1.63. Miller ended the first half with a 5-2 record.

Center Troop Command's Ted Argianas finished third in the pitching department with a respectable 5-2 record.

The highest team batting average went to The Student Brigade whose 18 game average was .284. The 197th was second with a team total of .254 followed closely by TICTC with a .239. The lowly Medics hit for an 18 game average of .181.

MEMBERS OF 11TH MEDICAL BN. LOAD HOSPITAL UNITS . . .
One Facet Of The Battalion's Field Exercise Is Equipment Transportation.

Medics Apply Combat Theories

By PFC Reuben Carpenter

The men of Company A, 11th Medical Battalion, moved to the field recently to test the theories and techniques learned in classrooms during the academic phase of its training which started last February.

The company, commanded by Capt. Richard P. Dorr, is the nucleus of what will eventually be a medical battalion whose mission is to provide the medical support for the 11th Assault Division.

The purpose of the field exercise was twofold. First, to permit the various elements of the company to work together as part of a coordinated unit and to test command techniques.

Second, to coordinate the training of personnel with aircraft in accordance with the air mobile concept.

Personnel were trained in air movement of casualties, litter drills and practical application of evaluation capabilities of the UH-1B Iroquois helicopter, the utility aircraft used by the battalion.

The transporting of equipment, to include complete hospital wards, was also practiced during this exercise.

One of the principal results of the exercise was the field testing of unit loading plans.

According to Lt. Col. Joseph C. Stroud Jr., division surgeon, the exercise proved to be beneficial and "the men of the unit did a commendable job."

Engineer Unit Conducts Class On New Tractor

A week long course on the operation and maintenance of the Army's new M-830 Caterpillar wheeled tractor was recently held at the 806th Engineer Battalion.

This new 25-ton tractor, which replaces the LeTourneau-Dozer, has twice the horsepower of its predecessor. It is a rubber tired tractor that hinges in the middle to turn.

Power is supplied through an auotmatic transmission to all four wheels. It has a top speed of 30 miles per hour. Its height is 14 feet as compared with it's predecessors seven foot height. The M-830 tires alone are six feet high.

Certificates for completion of the course were presented at a battalion formation by Lt. Col. Felix R. Moss, battalion commander.

JFK Has at His Disposal Fastest Jet Helicopter

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — John F. Kennedy, as President and Commander-in-Chief, has at his disposal the swiftest, safest, most efficient air travel-el service available.

In any emergency, a word from the President can bring the newest, fastest jet-powered chopper spinning down onto the south lawn and whisk him away from the White House in a matter of minutes.

The latest of the big jet planes assigned to the presidential flying force is designated Air Force I.

The jet is manned by 31 Air Force officers and enlisted men.

Since President Kennedy is a flying President — he seldom travels more than a few miles except by air — an aerial command post always goes along in a separate jet, jammed with intricate eletronic gear and a switchboard.

Mr. Kennedy can keep in touch with the Strategic Air Command by radio, telephone or teletype no matter where he goes.

At sea, the Cruiser USS Northampton is an alternate national command post. It also has elaborate communications plus a helicopter pad.

At times, when the chief executive visits other countries with limited outside communication facilities, the USS Northampton stands by off the coast.

Since Presidents began flying there probably never have been any better equipped or safer planes in the world than those assigned to President Kennedy.

NEW COMMANDER

Firt Lt. Stuart H. Yablon recently assumed the duties of detachment commander of Detachment 22, 2nd Student Battalion. The Student Brigade. He replaces Capt. George C. Davis, who has become Battalion S-3, 2nd Student Battalion.

Weather Bureau Set for Tropical Storm Months

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The hurricane season is officially open. It began June 15 and continues until November 15.

Hurricane flags soon will be flying to signal the approach of Arlene, Beulah, and Cindy. The U. S. Department of Commerce Weather Bureau has prepared with 18 other names for tropical storms. They will be called: Debra, Edith, Flora, Ginny, Helena, Irene, Janice, Kristy, Laura, Margo, Nona, Orchid, Portia, Rachel, Sandra, Terese, Verna and Wallis.

Chances of using all of the names are remote. 1933 was the only year in this century in which as many as 21 tropical storms were reported. Since 1952 there has been an average of 9 tropical cyclones each season.

Leg Shoots For DMB Set Yearly

Four major shooting matches a year are open to active Army personnel and four to Army Reserve and National Guardsmen for credit points toward the National Distinguished Marksmanship Badge (DMB), the highest individual qualification symbol in competitive marksmanship, according to Fort Benning officials.

A fifth event, the National Rifle Association Regional Championship Match, is open to active Army personnel only when circumstances preclude participation in a major command championship.

Other major shoots open to active Army personnel are the U.S. Army Championships, Interservice Championships and the National Trophy Individual Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

The Army's Reserves and National Guardsmen are limited to one Major command championship, one National Rifle Association Championship match or command match of another service, Interservice Championship and the National Trophy Individual Matches.

Major Harold F. Smith of Columbus, Ga., assistant match director at The Infantry Center, said, "Many shooters were under the impression five matches were open for credit points, but the fifth, the NRA Regional Championship match, is only open to active Army personnel when they have a valid reason for not being able to make their major command championship."
