Company A (Forward Support) of the 711th Maintenance Battalion, commanded by Capt. Hanzel C. Graham, was airlifted recently to a local training area as a part of its first field exercise since joining the 11th Air Assault Division last February.

Purpose of the move was to test the capabilities of the company in support of the forward elements of an air assault brigade. The ability to place its heavy repair and maintenance equipment close behind the fighting units of the division, to effect on-the-spot repairs, and then move rapidly to another area along with the fast-moving, air mobile unit it supports is a large order for the company.

A lot of imagination has gone into the planning. Members of the company have had to do to lighten equipment for easy air transportability. For example they are using corrugated cardboard boxes normally used in the huge metal containers to carry their personal gear. Each insert carries eight or 10 50-pound duffle bags.

Also scaled down for airlifting was a metal container with most of the equipment normally carried on the shop set, Contact Maintenance Set 3, better known as the Davey truck.

Under testing, too, during the field exercise was the new highly compact container, called the S-141, Evaluation Mobile Container (MDCON). The MOCON carries spare parts and supplies for second and third echelon maintenance for the support of the air assault brigade and its accompanying units.

The company, by the use of lightweight containers, the scaling down of equipment, and the careful tailoring of tools and tool sets to the job at hand, has succeeded in reducing the weight that must be air transported without reducing the quality of the work to be performed.

The 34 helicopter loads originally necessary to transport the company have been reduced to 22 and it is expected that even this figure can be reduced in the future as new ideas are put into practice.

On hand to observe the air movement were Col. Robert C. Shaw, commander of the 11th Air Assault Support Command, and Lt. Col. Robert D. Worthen, commander of the 711th Maintenance Battalion.

Maj. Viestenz Takes TSB Post

Maj. Ralph J. Viestenz recently assumed the duties of executive officer of the 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade. His last assignment was with the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Viet Nam.

Maj. Viestenz entered the Army in March 1945, as an enlisted man, and served with the 909th Infantry, 78th Infantry Division, in the European theater during World War II. In July, 1950, he went to Korea with the 2nd Infantry Division, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Mixed Crews Not New Says London Times

LONDON, England (AFPS)—Recent talks completed here between the United States and British representatives concerned the study of the use of crews of mixed nationalities in the nuclear defense forces. No pronouncements were forthcoming from the meeting itself but a Briton's letter to the London Times showed that historically perhaps mixed crews could accomplish their mission.

The letter writer stated that Lord Nelson's flagship at the Battle of Trafalgar had an international crew, including 22 Americans and a Russian.

Not wanting to enter into any controversy, the writer noted that "Nelson did all right."

He said in the letter that the 633 naval officers and men aboard the HMS Victory, Nelson's vessel, included 411 Englishmen, 64 Scots, 63 Irishmen, 18 Welshmen, three Shetlanders, two Channel Islanders, one Manxman, 22 Americans, seven Dutchmen, six Swedes, three Frenchmen, two Danes, three Norwegians, one Russian, three Germans, two Swiss, two Portuguese, four Italians, two Indians, one African, nine West Indians, and four Maltese.

"And didn't they fight!" he wrote.

Representatives Of USAR School Arrive on Post

An advance party of 50 officers and 20 enlisted men of the 3385th Army Reserve School, Birmingham, Ala., arrived at The Infantry Center last Sunday.

The main body of the school is expected Sunday.

The school's mission is to conduct first and second year Command and General Staff instruction for approximately 400 students from various Army areas. This instruction parallels that offered at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans. and affords Reserve officers an opportunity for instruction which might otherwise be unavailable.

The 3385th USAR School is commanded by Col. Henry D. Southerland Jr. and the advance party is commanded by Col. Emory S. Hunt.

The organization will begin classes June 30 and will depart Fort Benning July 13.

Skyborne Meat Market Famous With Vietnamese

REPUBLIC OF VIET NAM (AFPS) — Somewhere near the edge of the jungle a group of Vietnamese soldiers longingly watch for their skyborne meat market.

Fighting this fierce little war often isolates hard fighting units of troops. The swamps, the jungle and the lack of roads and bridges make air re-supply the only method of getting ammunition, clothing and food to the troops.

Most colorful and dramatic is the regular delivery by aerial transports of fresh meat on the hoof—ready for slaughter and the dinner table — a necessary operation since refrigeration is rare here.

Live pigs are packaged in individual wicker baskets. Small groups of chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys are delivered this way also. Aircrews attach several loaded baskets to each parachute.

A specially designed harness is used to drop the cow, calf, or heifer. A trained crew pinpoints beef deliveries from a 200 to 500 foot altitude.

Occasionally the Viet Cong who also cherish the delicacy of fresh meat, wait in the nearby bush hopeful of snatching any goodies from the sky that overshoot the limited drop zone. Occasionally unhappy Viet Cong riflemen take pot shots at the flying butcher shop. So far no super-market of the airways has been shot down.

From any point of view, working the airborne market is not the most desirable aircrew duty in Viet Nam. But then, calming the nervous barnyard crowd inflight and tolerating their cacophony are just some of the many strange problems confronting airmen in this equally strange war.

SJA Chief Is Honored By U. of K.

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Maj. Gen. Charles L. Decker, Judge Advocate General of the Army, has been honored for the third consecutive year for outstanding contribution to the law.

Gen. Decker was one of eight persons to receive the Citation for Distinguished Service at commencement exercises of the University of Kansas. The award was made jointly by the university and the alumni association.

In 1961, the general was named Outstanding Alumnus of the Year by the Georgetown University Law Center, Washington, D. C., and in 1962, he was awarded the annual citation to a nongraduate for outstanding contribution to law by the University of Missouri Law School, Columbia, Mo.

Gen. Decker will go on leave for two weeks in July as a member of a team of ten jurists headed by Associate Justice Brennan of the United States Supreme Court, which will conduct a comparative study of criminal trial procedures with a team of ten English jurists headed by Lord Chief Justice Parker.

School To Instruct SS Officers

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The first training course in ten years for Army Special Services officers was scheduled to begin today with subsequent courses beginning Dec. 6, 1963, and May 15, 1964. The courses will be conducted at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. in the Adjutant General's School.

A growing shortage of trained special services officers resulted in the decision to reestablish this training which was discontinued in 1953.

Officers below the grade of colonel whose actual or anticipated assignments are to special services are eligible for these classes which are open to both member of the active Army and Reserve component. Obligated service to the Army for graduates is one year.

The curriculum will include organization and administration all command levels; funding; the Army Command Management System and Budget, and the entire Special Services scope of operations including libraries, crafts, entertainment, sports and service club management.

Quotas for attendance at the courses have been offered to major Army Commands within CONUS, but requests for additional quotas may be made in accordance with Annex Q, U. S. Continental Army Command, Training Directive of Sept. 30, 1961.

Three Engineers Finish CBR School

Sgt. Richard M. Marquis, Sp4 George J. Guglielmo and Sp4 Francis J. Keller recently completed a two-week course of instruction at the Chemical, Biological and Radiological (CBR) Warfare Center here.

The students will instruct the personnel of their units and advise unit commanders on defense and offensive aspects of CBR Warfare.

WAC Shooter Continues Setting Precedent for 3rd Successive Year

By Sp4 Ron Claxton

With her precedent setting entrance in the 1961 All-Army matches, the pinnacle of Army shooting, WAC Sp5 Barbara Hile of the Sixth Army Rifle Team, has continued to set precedent in the two succeeding years here.

Starting her Army shooting career with the Sixth Army team, Sp5 Hile went through the cycle of marksmanship matches, starting from the unit-level tilts and progressing through battalion to post level and finally being selected for her Army area team.

Coming to the Army championships here in 1961, the woman sharpshooter was classified as a new shooter and competed against more than 200 new male shooters.

She returned in 1962 with a lot of eyes on her, after her win in the National Matches in 1961 at Camp Perry, Ohio, distinguishing her as the women's champion in the service rifle division.

The eyes really got a workout during the 1962 All-Army competition. She blazed a devastating 977-76V score out of a possible 1,000-200V in the grand aggregate match, seven points below the grand aggregate winner.

Sp5 Hile was selected to represent the Army in the Nationals where she won her second woman's championship.

This year she came to the All-Army matches at Fort Benning bringing with her a national record in the individual off-hand championship.

SP5 HILE

During the matches she exceeded the All-Army record in the off-hand championship by one tie-breaking V, but lost out to Sgt. Willie D. Jordan, a member of the Marksmanship Training Unit (MTU).

Jordan set the new match record with a 199-11V score out of a possible 200-40V and went on to become the individual grand aggregate winner.

Sgt. John P. Kingeter, firing for the Third Army MTU, also was ahead of her with a 199-4V score. The old record was 198-14V set in 1957.

Sp5 Hile was against selected for the All-Army team and is at Fort Niagara, N. Y., vying for the team to represent the Army against all other services in the interservice match to be held at Quantico, V-.

If she doesn't make the interservice squad, Camp Perry is still her next stop, and she will go to the Nationals as a member of the All-Army team firing in the National Trophy Group matches.

She will defend her women's championship she has held for the past two years.

Sp5 Hile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh Hile of Lapeer, Mich., was assigned to the WAC Detachment, Fort Mason, Calif., when she started her Army shooting career in 1961. She since has been picked up by the Sixth Army Advanced Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Ord, Calif.

Barbara credits her father for her interest in shooting. She fired in the Junior National Rifle Association competition before entering the service.

She experienced no trouble with the heavier service weapons nor were her scores affected by the ear splitting crash of competitive firing.

"Many of our Wac's and nurses like to shoot," Sp5 Hile said, "But few have the drive to continue up through the competitive ranks."

She said she realized she was shooting against the world's finest marksmen in the Army's 1963 championships, but was determined to prove to herself and to womankind that marksmanship competition with heavy weapons isn't a man's game alone.

The National Distinguished Marksman's Badge, America's highest marksmanship qualification award, is one of the woman shooter's highest objectives. She has 20 points toward the coveted award, needing only 10 more which she can pick up easily at Quantico or Camp Perry.

MTU Handgunners Set Three Records

An unprecedented deadlock in the individual grand aggregate, three new national records and a near-sweep of all matches by the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit highlighted the monthly pistol matches held this past weekend by the Post Rifle and Pistol Club.

SFC William Blankenship, last month's winner, and SSgt Hershel Anderson completed the regular 270-shot course of fire over a three-day period with identical scores of 2,656-144x. The crown went to Blankenship on the basis of a better score in all rapid fire events in which he dropped three points while Anderson lost 10. This is a tie-breaking procedure established by the National Rifle Association, which sanctions the matches.

Three new marks were set in the Service Pistol matches Monday.

All three from the MTU bettered the old marks by a single point. This gives MTU possession of all five records in the service pistol category. SSgt Hershel Anderson holds the aggregate mark with an 877-33x.

In the team events Army's Blue entry grabbed two matches, taking the .22 caliber with a four-man score of 1,180-62x and the .45 caliber wadcutter event with a 1,173-58x.

Firing members of the Army Blue squad were Sgts. Wessel, Anderson, Blankenship and R. O. Thompson.

Individual match winners were:

CONARC's Million Dollar Data Processing System Is Approved

FORT MONROE, Va. — CONARC, which has long expressed a need for a better, more rapid means of collecting, processing and storing information, is going to get it.

Plans for increased use of electronic data processing computers are underway at this headquarters and a virtual revolution in CONARC's entire system of passing and receiving data of all kinds will take place during the coming months and years.

The new setup is called the Command and Control Information System (CCIS). Total cost of implementing the system, which is expected to take over three years to complete, will run into the millions. When completed, it will be the largest data processing system in use by any command in the armed forces.

Col. J. M. Parker of CONARC's Data Systems Division of the Comptroller's office summed up the situation which ultimately brought about CONARC's need for electronic computers:

"The number of installations submitting reports to CONARC, and the quantity and scope of information contained in those reports would stagger the imagod of handling it," he said.

In simple and non-technical language, the objective of the system is to provide commanders immediately with a package containing up-to-date information that formerly took days or weeks to receive in the form of reports. It will be stored either on punch cards, discs or magnetic tape reels until requested. High speed printers will print the information contained in the data bank at fantastic speeds.

Every single function, large and small, will eventually be affected, and will store or retrieve information in the central data bank. The system will handle information pertaining to intelligence, unit readiness, equipment location, training, supply, funding and hundreds of other interrelated activities of the Continental Armies.

CONARC's Comptroller, Brig. Gen. J. M. Illig, has overall responsibility for implementing, developing and controlling the system.

A pair of committees have been formed to determine the priorities for the system, and scientific and technical assistance is being supplied by civilian research firms with both military and corporate experience in the field. A Steering Committee, made up of CONARC's deputy chiefs of staff, will guide the project to its final completion. The Working Committee, made up of staff officers from the various divisions, will tackle grass-roots problems and make recommendations to the Steering Committee.

Some needs are immediate and have been assigned corresponding priorities. For example, all CONARC functions are agreed that ARSTRIKE, the Army portion of the Strike Command, will get top priority and information requirements of agencies supporting USSTRICOM are already being phased in.

Other tactical and strategic needs will also have high priorities, with administrative and routine missions included as the system is capable of handling them.

An example of the magnitude of the system was forcefully given by Dr. Richard Powers, director of the Technical Research and Advisory Group which is providing technical and scientific assistance to the project.

"Preliminary findings on the needs of CONARC suggest that the system is going to be at least 50 percent larger than anything any other command has yet undertaken. It is going to be the most complicated and extensive system of any of the military commands," said Dr. Powers.

Dr. Powers told an early gathering of the Working Committee that the end product of the system would represent a compromise between scientific and military efforts.

The military contribution will primarily be deciding what information is to be incorporated into the system. Scientists and technicians, supplied by civilian research firms under contract to the Army, will devise the best means of obtaining the end product requested by CONARC, within the capabilities of the automatic system.

NEW COMMANDER

First. Lt. Micheal J. Langrehr has assumed command of Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade. Lt. Langrehr succeeds Capt. Allison H. Patrick Jr. who has taken command of B. attery.

Copters Used To Roundup Loose Moose

Old time followers of the Roller Derby perhaps will recall when Armories throughout the Roller Derby big leagues echoed to the cry. This identified the move of a big rawboned skater for the Jersey Jets as he attempted to steal a lap from the other skaters.

"The moose is not to be left loose."

For it is now roundup time in Alaska; a strange sort of roundup handled in a unique manner. The mooseboys (cowboys in Texas) ride helicopters instead of cow ponies. The critters are moose, not dogies, and the branding iron leaves no scar but merely a little metal marker telling the age, weight and home life conditions of the marked moose.

This is all part of a vast program to find out what makes a moose come running to the mating call and most of all, to find out from here he came at the sound of the weind "moose notes."

Careful Driving Is the Key to a Safe, Happy Vacation

When you and your family take to the road, be a fair weather friend to all concerned by taking these long-distance driving tips, as compiled by traffic safety researchers for your safety.

Wherever you head on your vacation, watch your speedometer; most highway drivers think they're going slower than they really are! Psychologists say that if you're traveling along at 60 m.p.h., you tend to become conditioned to that speed.

In fact some people become so accustomed to high-speed driving that such speeds seem perfectly safe to them. Few motorists stop to realize that a car traveling 60 m.p.h. covers 88 feet in one second! If it strikes anything, it hits with the same force as it would in falling from the top of a ten-story building! So keep tabs on your speedometer — it's easy to go faster than you think.

Pay attention to your driving. Most drivers probably think they rate 100 per cent on this score, but National Safety Council statistics show that hundreds of highway accidents each year are caused by motorists' inattention.

At 70 m.p.h. your car covers approximately 103 feet every second. Ten seconds of inattention at that speed and you have covered a 1-5 mile stretch of highway without seeing what you're doing! It takes about ten seconds to light a cigarette . . .the most abrupt nap is half a minute. . .a trouble-some wasp or fly can cost you as much as a full minute. If out anything occurs during those periods, your vacation may be over before it's hardly begun.

Seat belts not only reduce your chances of accidental injury, but give you a smoother ride by protecting you against jolts. They can be fastened and released in a matter of seconds, and could mean the difference between life and death in an accident. Cornell University researchers, studying accident reports, found that the risk of death is about five times greater for those without seat belts!

Know what to do in case of a blowout. "Hang onto the wheel and keep your head!" is the first advice of expert drivers. If it's a front tire, the car will swerve toward the side of the blow out. If it's a rear tire, the back end will start to sway from side to side. Concentrate on keeping the car going straight. Don't take your foot off the accelerator. On the contrary, increase your speed slightly. This will pull you out of the swerve. When you're sure that you have the car under control, apply brakes gently.

To stop flats before they start, check often for tire cuts and bruises. Though nylon tire cord isn't damaged by water penetrating into cuts and bruises, other fibers are easily affected if the rubber coating is cut. So check for cuts every time you check tire pressure.

National Safety Council studies show that the faster you drive at night, the less far ahead you can see; actual tests proved that a driver doing 20 m.p.h. can see and identify objects 80 feet farther away than a driver going 60 m.p.h.

Space Race Puts National Character At Stake According to NASA Chief

NEWARK, Del. (AFPS) — The United States and the Soviet Union are in a space contest, where national character and strength are at stake.

The space challenge was so described in a speech by the head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, James E. Webb.

"For the first time in the history of mankind, the opportunity to leave the earth and explore the solar system is at hand. Only two nations, the United States and Soviet Union, have the resources with which to exploit this opportunity.

"Were we, as the symbol of democratic government, to surrender this opportunity to the leading advocate of the communist ideology, we could no longer stand large in our own image or in the image that other nations have of us and of the free society we represent.

"Like it or not, the hard facts of international life leave no doubt that we are in a contest with the Soviet Union."

"Like it or not, it is a fact of international life that space achievement is and will be a symbol of national character and strength.

"As one wise man put it," Mr. Webb said, "Prestige is the faculty enabling the great power to avoid final, miserable choices between surrender and war. . .the ingredient of authority in international affairs."

Mr. Webb continued, "The United States must, therefore demonstrate that we have the capability and determination to carry out those things which we have declared seriously that we intend to do."

In closing, Mr. Webb told the graduates that a "little more than ten years hence your generation will have stood on the moon, looking back at the earth while confidently preparing to voyage to nearby planets in the solar system."

Last Voyage

On his last voyage to the new world in 1502, Columbus discovered the area now encompassed by the Republic of Panama. It has important fisheries and forest reserves.

Hawk Missile Functions Will Be Increased

WASHINGTON (ANF) — A development project that will extend the capability of the Army's HAWK missile system to engage tactical ballistic missiles, has been announced by the Army.

The new equipment to be developed and modified in conjunction with the HAWK system, will extend the missile's capability to the interception of ballistic missiles that might be encountered by a field army. The system in its present configuration has already demonstrated the ability to engage Honest John type rockets.

The HAWK air defense system is presently operational with the Army and Marine Corps, and with several foreign countries. HAWK systems are being produced by five NATO countries for their own deployment.

The HAWK was originally developed as a low altitude air defense weapon, and is especially effective in the low altitude range which was once considered a radar "blind spot." The 17-foot missile operates on the "homing guidance principle which homes — or locks on — radar reflections from a target.

The HAWK system, including the launcher, tracked transporter-loader, acquisition and tracking radars, and the battery control central is air transportable.

The development of this project will be performed at the Raytheon plant at Bedford and Andover, Massachusetts.

Maj. M. Douglas Hodges Named 11th Division SJA

An expert in the Russian language who served in Potsdam, Germany, with the Russian forces, Maj. M. Douglas Hodges, has been assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division as staff judge advocate (SJA).

Maj. Hodges began his military law career in August, 1950 with the Military Justice Division at the Pentagon in Washington D.C. In May, 1951, he was sent to Headquarters, U. S. Army Europe, Heidelberg, Germany, where he worked in the Staff Judge Advocate Division. In May, 1954, he returned to the Pentagon for assignment in the Staff Judge Advocate Appellate Division.

In July, 1956, he attended the Army language school at Monterey, Calif. There he completed a special 52-week Russian language course. After graduation he was sent to Columbia University in New York City.

He returned to Germany in August, 1958, and was assigned to Oberammergau with the staff judge advocate.

In July, 1960, he received a special assignment with the commander-in-chief, U.S. Military Liaison Mission. He worked with the Russian forces headquarters at Potsdam, Germany.

In August, 1962, he attended the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. There he completed a special nine-month judge advocate career course. The Russian expert was assigned to the 11th from the university.

Maj. Hodges has a bachelor of arts degree and a bachelor of law degree from the University of Kentucky at Lexington, and a master of law degree from Georgetown University in Washington D. C.

Maj. and Mrs. Hodges have three children, Cheryll 12, Debbrah 9, and Gregory 8.

DOD's Herzfield Appointed ARPA Deputy Director

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Dr. C. M. Herzfeld has been appointed deputy director of the Advanced Research Project Agency in the Department of Defense. (DOD).

Doctor Herzfeld has been with ARPA since 1961 as director for ballistic missile defense, a position he will retain in addition to his new post.

In 1962, Doctor Herzfeld was awarded the Arthur S. Flemming award as one of the outstanding young scientists in government.

Helicopter Flight Training School Being Held Here

The 11th Air Assault Division is conducting a rotary wing instrument light training school under the direction of the 11th Aviation Group.

Initially the program, designed to increase the versatility of the unit's aviators by qualifying them to fly under instrument as well as visual conditions, will have eight students and three instructor pilots.

Maj. Albert A. Johnson, Group S-3 (plans and operations officer), in outlining the program pointed out that, although instrument training is usually conducted at Fort Rucker, Ala.

America's FIGHTING HEROES

The Story of 2nd Lt. Lloyd H. Hughes (Air Mission)

ON 1 AUGUST 1943, LT. HUGHES SERVED IN THE CAPACITY OF PILOT OF A HEAVY BOMBARDMENT AIRCRAFT PARTICIPATING IN A LONG AND HAZARDOUS MINIMUM-ALTITUDE ATTACK AGAINST THE AXIS OIL REFINERIES OF PLOESTI, RUMANIA, LAUNCHED FROM THE NORTHERN SHORES OF AFRICA...

FLYING IN THE LAST FORMATION TO ATTACK THE TARGET, HE ARRIVED IN THE TARGET AREA AFTER PREVIOUS FLIGHTS HAD THOROUGHLY ALERTED THE ENEMY DEFENSES...

HOLD ONTO YOUR TEETH! THE MOTORS HAVE BEEN STOPPED BY ENEMY FIRE. WE'RE GOING IN!

APPROACHING THE TARGET THROUGH INTENSE AND ACCURATE ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE AND DENSE BALLOON BARRAGES AT DANGEROUSLY LOW ALTITUDE, HIS PLANE RECEIVED SEVERAL DIRECT HITS FROM BOTH LARGE AND SMALL CALIBER ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS...

THE PLANE WAS INFLICTED AT A TIME PRIOR TO REACHING THE TARGET, WHEN LT. HUGHES COULD HAVE MADE A FORCED LANDING IN ONE OF THE GRAIN FIELDS READILY AVAILABLE AT THAT TIME...

THE TARGET AREA WAS BLAZING WITH BURNING OIL TANKS AND DAMAGED REFINERY INSTALLATIONS FROM WHICH FLAMES LEAPED HIGH ABOVE THE BOMBING LEVEL OF THE FORMATION...

WITH FULL KNOWLEDGE OF THE CONSEQUENCES OF ENTERING THIS BLAZING INFERNO WHEN HIS AIRPLANE WAS LEAKING GASOLINE, LT. HUGHES, MOTIVATED ONLY BY HIS HIGH CONCEPTION OF DUTY, WHICH CALLED FOR THE DESTRUCTION OF HIS TARGET AT ANY COST, DID NOT ELECT TO MAKE A FORCED LANDING...

WE'RE GOING IN TO DROP OUR EGGS!

ONLY THEN DID LT. HUGHES ATTEMPT A FORCED LANDING, BUT BECAUSE OF THE ADVANCED DYING CONDITION OF HIS AIRCRAFT AND [illegible]

BY LT. HUGHES' HEROIC DECISION TO COMPLETE HIS MISSION, REGARDLESS OF THE CONSEQUENCES, AND IN UTTER DISREGARD OF HIS OWN LIFE, AND BY HIS GALLANT AND VALOROUS EXECUTION OF THIS DECISION, HE HAS RENDERED A SERVICE TO OUR COUNTRY IN THE DEFEAT OF OUR ENEMIES. FOR HIS CONSPICUOUS GALLANTRY IN ACTION AT THE RISK OF HIS LIFE, LT. LLOYD E. HUGHES WAS POSTHUMOUSLY AWARDED THE MEDAL OF HONOR.

Newest Clinical Test Confirms

Colgate a Leader in Reducing New Cavities!

Read what happened when Colgate with Gardol was clinically tested against the most widely accepted fluoride dentifrice

COLGATE'S ROLE IN NEW TEST FOR CAVITY REDUCTION

In October, 1960, a group of independent dental investigators set out to determine the value of Colgate's Gardol formula in reducing new cavities in the 7 to 17 year age group—the age when teeth are most vulnerable to decay. To make the test the most critical possible, the researchers chose to measure Colgate with its ingredient, Sodium N-Lauroyl Sarcosinate (Gardol), against the leading stannous fluoride toothpaste, which had previously shown effectiveness in cavity reduction. Hundreds of dental patients in the most cavity-prone age group were selected from the student body of a large school in the Southeastern United States. These students were then divided into groups and instructed to use exactly the same dentist-recommended brushing method. For the next two years, one group was to brush only with Colgate's exclusive Gardol formula. Another group only with the leading stannous fluoride toothpaste.

COLGATE'S CLINICAL ACHIEVEMENT IN CAVITY REDUCTION

At the end of two years—over half a million brushings later—supervising dentists carefully checked results, group-for-group, Colgate's Gardol formula against the stannous fluoride formula. So there would be no chance of human error, these dental records were then analyzed and compared by the most advanced electronic computing machines. Statistically, it was discovered that in this test* Colgate with Gardol had achieved the same low incidence of new cavities as the stannous fluoride formula. When you consider that the study was conducted among the most cavity-prone of all age groups, results achieved by the group brushing with Colgate are even more significant. This study—one of many planned to acquaint you and your dentist with the Colgate-Palmolive Company's continuing interest in dental hygiene—shows what today's Colgate Dental Cream can do in reducing tooth decay. Its results are wonderful assurance that even the youngest family member can brush with Colgate . . . in the complete program of oral hygiene dentists recommend.

YOUR DENTIST'S ROLE IN CAVITY REDUCTION

In announcing the results of this study, the makers of Colgate Dental Cream emphasize their agreement with leading dental authorities that no toothpaste—fluoride or non-fluoride—can substitute for care and treatment of teeth by your family dentist. Seeing your dentist regularly is the most important part of any dental-health program. Important, too, is his advice on diet, as well as how to brush, when to brush, and how often to brush.

Now you can be a "one-toothpaste family" again with best-tasting Colgate...confident Colgate's Gardol formula is clinically tested!

Colgate

Colgate helps stop mouth odor instantly for most people—has the between-teeth cleaning action of penetrating Gardol foam and the most mouth-refreshing toothpaste taste in the whole world!

Flag Day — June 14

"I still get a hard-to-define feeling inside when the flag goes by — and I know you do, too," Astronaut John H. Glenn, Jr. told a joint session of Congress after orbiting the earth three times last year.

It was on June 14, 1777, when the colonies were drawn together in the Revolutionary War, that the Continental Congress adopted the resolution giving birth to the Stars and Stripes: "That while the flag of the United States shall be of 13 stripes of alternate red and white, with a union of 13 stars of white in a blue field, representing the new constellation."

On the same day, two years earlier — June 14, 1775 — the Second Continental Congress authorized 10 companies of Infantry to serve not under state authority, but under the Congress of the yet-to-be created nation. That was the beginning of the Army.

When the Star Spangled Banner was first flown by the Continental Army, its commander, George Washington, is said to have described its symbolism as: "We take the stars from heaven, the red from the mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her, and the white stripes shall go down to posterity representing liberty."

The newly created Army — inspired by Washington's leadership — was the major source of strength which enabled this great nation to emerge victoriously from the War of Independence.

Indeed, the U.S. Army, born to fan and protect the flame of independence, baptized in its red blood of devotion to America, has demonstrated to every generation that it has but one purpose — to defend the Constitution against all enemies.

Although the constellation has grown from 13 colonies to 50 states, the flag still stands for a nation dedicated to the principles of liberty and unity. It is still the supreme symbol of American patriotism.

The significance of Flag Day to all Americans was expressed by President Woodrow Wilson in 1917, just two months after the declaration of war against Germany. He said in part:

"We meet to celebrate Flag Day because this flag which we honor and under which we serve is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation. It has no other character than that which we give it from generation to generation. The choice is ours. It floats in majestic silence above the hosts that execute those choices whether in peace or war. And yet, though silent, it speaks to us — speaks to us of the past, of the men and women who went before us — and the records they wrote upon it . . ."

On its birthday, the Army looks with justifiable pride upon the bright record of distinguished service to the Nation and to our Flag.

Fourth of July Message

On this Fourth of July 1963, I extend to all members of this command and their families my best wishes for a pleasant and safe holiday.

Traditionally, this national holiday commemorating the beginning of American independence has been observed as a period of family fun and relaxation. In keeping with this tradition, every effort has been made for Fort Benning personnel to enjoy the holiday and they are encouraged to do so by participating in the Youth Activities Carnival.

At the same time, I ask each of you to join me in rededicating ourselves to those principles which make American independence possible. As members of the Army, we should be particularly proud to recall our part in the national effort to keep America free.

I urge each of you to reflect on the significance of this national holiday.

C. W. G. RICH
Major General, USA
Commanding

Col. Koster New TIC Chief of Staff

Col. Samuel W. Koster has been named to succeed Col. Raymond B. Marlin as chief of staff of The Infantry Center.

Col. Marlin, who has been chief of staff since March, has been nominated for promotion to brigadier general and assigned to the Office of the Chief, Research and Development, Department of the Army.

He arrived here in September, 1961, as director of The Infantry School's Weapons Department.

In brief ceremonies Monday in the office of Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, Col. Marlin was presented a Certificate of Achievement and an Infantry Center plaque for meritorious service in his successive assignments as Weapons Department director and chief of staff.

The certificate commended Col. Marlin for "outstanding initiative, professional competence and exceptional leadership qualities," as well as his "intelligent and diligent approach to duties."

Through his activities on the board of directors of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, Citizens-Military Council and the Association of the United States Army, Col. Marlin was credited with greatly enhancing friendly relations with the local community and made a major contribution to the command."

Col. Koster, who has served as director of The Infantry School's Command and Staff Department since November, 1961, is a 1942 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy.

During World War II he commanded the 2nd Battalion, 413th Regiment of the 104th Infantry Division in the European Theater.

Among his decorations are the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and Purple Heart.

He was stationed in Japan, at General Headquarters, Far Eastern Command, from October, 1946, to July, 1949, and in Korea in 1950-1951.

Col. Koster came to Fort Benning in July, 1960, and commanded the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, and the 1st Infantry Brigade before moving to the Command and Staff Department.

Col. and Mrs. Koster, who reside at 311 Lumpkin Rd., have five children.

'Flying Crane' Helicopter Arrives Here for Testing

The biggest bird of them all arrived here last week to take its place among the varied and versatile aircraft of the 11th Air Assault Division.

The huge helicopter, appropriately called the "Flying Crane," landed at nearby Lawson Army Airfield where it was turned over to the 478th Flying Crane Company, commanded by Capt. T. J. Clark Jr.

The Flying Crane, officially designated as the CH-54A, does not yet belong to the Army, but is here for field testing under government contract. One of the principal purposes of this testing will be to evaluate its performance and application under the new air mobility concept being developed by the air assault division.

This new helicopter is a product of the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corporation and is the newest and largest operational one in the United States. It can transport 68 combat-equipped troops, carry cargo loads up to 10 tons, and has versatile detachable pods that can be used as self contained units for medical facilities, communications centers, or command posts.

A service crew and pilot accompanied the big ship from the factory and will remain to operate and maintain it during its stay here. However, 478th Company maintenance and flight personnel will be paired off with them to observe and learn about the operation of the huge craft.

An initial display and demonstration was conducted at Lawson Army Airfield when the Flying Crane arrived. Observing the event were several important visitors from the Department of Defense to include Dr. Jacob A. Stockfisch, director for Special Studies in the deputy assistant secretary of Defense Systems Analysis Office, and members of his party.

Also observing the display and acting as presenting officer was Col. Delbert L. Bristol, commanding officer of the 10th Air Transport Brigade. The 478th Flying Crane Company is one of several specialized companies assigned to the 10th Brigade.

Paratrooper Concept Born 23 Years Ago

Twenty-three years ago — July 1, 1940 — a small number of Army men banded together at Fort Benning, under the direction of The Infantry Board, to thoroughly test a new device, a device which conceivably could lead to a new concept in warfare.

The device to be tested was the parachute. The concept was the paratrooper. The 48 men of the "Parachute Test Platoon" were to extensively examine the feasibility of the use of parachutes in military operations.

The results of those tests in 1940 and the tactical importance of the paratrooper as a powerful and more flexible force are history.

Now, more than two decades later, the platoon will hold a reunion at Fort Benning. Twenty-two of the platoon's 48 original members, and their wives, already have indicated they will attend a reunion of the early paratroopers at the Gold Bar, a branch of the Main Officers' Open Mess, at 7 p.m. Saturday.

A special guest at the gathering will be Brig. Gen. William T. Ryder, who commanded the Parachute Test Platoon as a young second lieutenant, and who also was the first American serviceman to make a parachute jump in connection with a military operation.

Gen. Ryder now is director of special weapons, Office of Research and Development,

Col. Short Named TSB Commander

Change of command ceremonies for The Student Brigade will be held on Eubanks Field at the Infantryman Statue at 10 a.m. today.

Col. Otto R. Koch Jr., will turn over command of The Student Brigade to Col. Walter D. Short, who has just been assigned from the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department of The Infantry School.

Col. Koch, who has been Brigade commander since January, 1961, has been assigned duties in Turkey as deputy chief of the U.S. Army element there.

Before taking command of The Student Brigade, Col. Koch was director of The Infantry School's Department of Non-Resident Instruction. He was assigned to the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Iran before coming to Fort Benning.

Col. Koch received his commission in 1934, and entered active service a year later.

During World War II, he served in Europe and the Middle Eastern Theater of operations with the 60th Infantry, 9th Infantry Division, and in the G-3 Section, Headquarters V Corps.

Col. Koch served as a member of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in France from 1951 to 1953, and as a battalion commander in the 12th Regiment, 4th Infantry Division, until 1954.

From 1955 to 1958, he was assigned to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations in Washington, D.C., as chief of the Western Hemisphere Division.

Col. Koch has attended The Infantry School, the Army War College and the Air Command and Staff College.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, the Army Commendation Ribbon with Medal Pendant, and the Combat Infantry Badge.

Department of the Army.

The orders for the formation of the platoon were cut on July 1, 1940, and two years later a Hollywood company, RKO Studios, made a film at Fort Benning entitled, "Parachute Battalion." The film, through the courtesy of RKO, will be shown Saturday night at the reunion.

Two Columbus men are credited with initiating plans for the reunion are Capt. (ret.) Lemuel T. Pitts and Capt. (ret.) Leon C. Rutland. Both were in the original platoon and Pitts, a sergeant with the 29th Infantry when he was transferred to the parachute group, was assigned to temporary duty with the movie making company for "Parachute Battalion."

The reunion group will assemble at 5 p.m. Saturday at the Charles S. Harrison Post 135, American Legion, home on Victory Drive for a short business session before coming to Fort Benning for dinner.

facilities being utilized by the cadets. They will watch the cadets train on the pistol range and will see a Field Problem Test.

They are slated to join the trainees from their respective institutions for supper that night and conduct informal discussions on the merits of the program.

A formal luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess at noon, July 12, will conclude the visit.

New Pro Pay Plan Delayed

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —The scheduled July 1 implementation of the first phase of the revised Department of Defense proficiency pay system has been delayed.

"A definite program should be ready in a few weeks," according to William Gorham, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower Special Studies and Requirements.

The reason for delay, Mr. Gorham says, is the necessity of further discussion on the program revision.

Dependent Appointed To USMA

Norman B. Mekkelson, a 1963 graduate of Baker High, recently received an appointment to the United States Military Academy.

The Adjutant General Department of the Army wired the Columbus youth that he was to report to the academy at West Point, N. Y., on July 1. According to the Army's official notification he was selected under the qualified alternate quota.

Norman is the son of Sgt. Maj. and Mrs. Norman B. Mekkelson Sr., 104-A Baker St. Sgt. Maj. Mekkelson is the sergeant major of the 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Col. Williams Named 197th Commander

A change of command ceremony will be conducted on the 197th Infantry Brigade Parade Field at 10 a.m., July 13, 1963. The public is cordially invited to attend this ceremony and to remain for refreshments and "Open House" activities in Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Colonel Richard W. Keyes will be succeeded by Colonel Robert M. Williams, formerly chief of the Army Element, MAAG Spain.

Colonel Keys had held the following assignments since coming to Fort Benning on 11 September 1960: Director, Command and Staff Department until 31 May 1962; Deputy Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School, and 197th Infantry Brigade Commander since 1 June 1962. Colonel Keyes will depart Fort Benning on or about 15 July for his new assignment in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations in Strategic Plans and Policy, The Pentagon, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Williams entered the service from Texas, as a second lieutenant in June 1939. Among his decorations are the Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star w-Oak Leaf Cluster. He is a graduate of the following military and civilian schools: Army War College, Armed Forces Staff College, Spanish Military School,, Command and General Staff College, Command Class Number 1, 1946, and Texas A & M.

Troops participating in the ceremony will be organized into five battalions, consisting of the 197th Infantry Brigade Troops; 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry; 1st Battalion (Mechanized), 58th Infantry; 4th Battalion, 58th Armor and 2d Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery.

The Reviewing Officer for this ceremony will be Brigadier General John Norton, Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Fruits of Diligence

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Irving C. Njus

In this age or any age, the man who approaches his tasks and responsibilities in a diligent manner is a great asset to his nation, his community, his employer, his family, and his church.

Such man not only finds satisfaction in carrying out the responsibilities entrusted to him, but also rejoices in seeing the fruits of his labor and love.

Three areas in which a man may need a daily reminder to diligence are in his job, his home, his religious faith.

When a man accepts a job, it is normally understood that he will give of his best in that job. He is expected to work hard and faithfully. To veer from such a promise to one's self and employer is not difficult nor uncommon.

However, in so doing the man can usually expect to reap only boredom in the job and even contempt for this employer and fellow workers. On the other hand, the fruit of diligent labor is satisfaction in knowing that the job has been done to the best of the man's ability, and on this basis, advancement becomes a due reward.

Secondly, the care and responsibility for a family requires real diligence. A parent may, for certain selfish reasons, shelve some or much of the responsibility on the other parent or relative or a third party and never know the real joys the Lord intended for a man and wife in rearing a family.

Surely, rearing a family is not a simple task, but if done with diligence, perserverence and patience, the fruits will be seen in a family oneness, a strong sense of confidence among the family members, and later the fulfillment of the Proverb, "Train a child in the way he should go and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Thirdly are the results which come from a man's diligent exercise of his faith. The Lord does not imply that half-hearted religion is pleasing or acceptable to him. He is emphatic that faith involves the total man and his total life, thoughts, words and deeds.

As a sinner, man is not perfect but restores himself through the forgiveness of Christ. In this sinner-saviour relationship, the man of God grows in his faith as he diligently exercises in worship and daily living.

To be diligent in faith then is to know and show the presence and love of God in Christ and that this promises are extended to all who would receive.

If you do not have a legally-prepared will at the time of your death, your property may—or may not—go to the person to whom you intended. You may be certain of having your property go to the person you desire only by having a legally sufficient will drawn by your legal assistance officer or your lawyer.

Budget Your Salary To Meet Your Needs

If your finances seem all fouled up, ask yourself this simple question, "What caused me to get into this mess in the first place?"

If your answer is—"Because there never is enough money at the right time"—you probably need to establish a realistic budget.

As a serviceman, you are on a fixed salary. You know how much it is and when you will get it. You also know there are certain obligations or payments that roll around regularly that must be paid.

The Legal Assistance Division in the Army's Judge Advocate General's Office points out that millions of Americans regulate their income and outgo with a budget.

The pitfall and attendant money troubles come, officials say, when installment buying is over-extended, and when there is no provision for the future through savings, or failure to allow for unexpected expenses.

A budget and record of actual spending should be kept to enable you to know what and how much you can buy.

Buy only what you can really afford. When tempted by the old slogan "buy now, pay later," carefully consider "later," for there may be more important needs for your money at the time.

Read any contract you sign.

Deal with businesses that have a good reputation in the community.

Try to save now for future needs and desired products.

If you can do this you can buy for cash, with no interest to worry about. By careful planning your future purchases will cost you far less than if you had to buy on time.

Declaration of 1776 Still Has Rough Road

These days we have so many reports of present problems and crises that we have very little time to think about the ones in our past. A look backward, though, will show us that the road our forefathers traveled was, more often than not, strewn with obstacles very similar to those we face today.

May, 1776, was one of the most hectic times of our history. The newly formed Continental Congress was striving to find a solution to our problems with King George's England and there were times when the whole situation looked hopeless; times when the pessimists muttered that we were all doomed.

Yet, in spite of this outlook and prophecy of many, our leaders stuck to their task and produced a resolution that, in July 1776, would become the immortal Declaration of Independence. This document, the signing of which we commemorate each July 4, has remained the foundation stone of our way of life for 187 years.

Where would our country be today if these men hadn't faced the challenge? Where will the America of the future be if our leaders, today, don't meet the challenge facing them and find solutions with the power and impact of the Declaration of Independence?

Luckily, this question has already been answered. We have chosen our own leaders and they are capable of meeting our problems and finding the right solution just as the men of the Continental Congress did. Our nation has survived by faith in democracy and the men who guard it. (AFPS)

The four-member professional staff of the House Armed Services Committee soon will be boosted to five. A new counsel is being added to handle research and development activities. He is expected to work with a recently created subcommittee headed by Representative Mel Price (D-Ill.). Next year the committee begins supervising the total $7-billion military Research and Development, Technology and Engineering effort, including space activities.

The USS Thresher disaster brought the Navy a request from Congress to compile a chart of all ship and submarine losses which have occurred, except in wartime, "throughout the history of the country." The resulting study lists 45 vessels; 20 in the period from 1854 through 1899, and 25 since 1900. Only four counting the Thresher, have been lost since WWII.

Two Senate leaders joined in a bipartisan demand for strong action to fight trade barriers against American farm products in the European Common Market. Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Senator Everett M. Dirksen (R.-Ill.) drafted a resolution calling on the United States officials negotiating with the Common Market to procure assurances that "access to export markets for our agricultural products will be maintained." Humphrey, in a statement, said current disputes over agricultural exports "will in part determine the whole future relationship of the United States and the European Common Market." The Common Market's policies already have forced sharp declines in the area's imports of American poultry and wheat flour.

GUEST SPEAKER IS WELCOMED TO PODIUM BY AUSA LEADERS
Gen. Rich (L), Mr. Carl Patrick (R) Welcome Dr. Stockfisch

Guest Speaker at AUSA Defends Control Concept

Dr. Jacob A. Stockfisch, a systems analysis specialist with the Department of Defense, recently at Fort Benning alternately defended the new control concept in military affairs and asked for cooperation from military leaders.

He addressed more than 380 members of the Columbus (Ga.)-Phenix City (Ala.)-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA).

Dr. Stockfisch, who spoke before the third largest AUSA's semi-annual meeting, is director for special studies in the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) Systems Analysis Office.

Lt. Gen. Hamilton Howze, commanding general of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg, N.C., who attended the meeting, was singled out for his work with the Howze Board concerned with the use of Army Aviation.

"We asked questions," Dr. Stockfisch said, "concerning the use of Army aviation."

"This board gave us answers which came from the depth of inspired imagination. It seems appropriate to call Gen. Howze and other military men on that board the "Whiz Kids'," the University of California alumnus said in reference to the label sometimes given to Defense Department civilians.

One of the major military concepts "since 1937, when the triangular division was conceived," Dr. Stockfisch said, is the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) which was organized at Fort Benning in February and came from recommendations of the Howze Board.

Dr. Stockfisch was introduced by Major Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center. He was accompanied by another defense specialist, Dr. Wilbur B. Payne.

"The most significant innovation of the present administration," Dr. Stockfisch said, "is the civilian community of systems analysts, working directly for the defense secretary.

"The former member of the Federal Reserve Bank system then asked for the "precious element of judement possessed by the minds of military leaders, men experienced in command and in combat," to be properly used.

The doctor of economics said that when problems can be measured, analyzed and solutions proved by empirical means, they do not demand a sense of keen judgment.

"This quality of the military mind is too precious to be wasted on problems which do not call for it. It is when the analysts cannot come up with an answer that the quality of judgment is so important. It is the subtle understanding of effect which calls for this judgment," Stockfisch said.

"Decisions are therefore dependent both on the military leaders and the civilian specialists," the speaker said defining the new Defense Department concept.

The day following his speech, Dr. Stockfisch received a briefing on the history and organization of The Center and The Infantry School.

Following the briefing he went to the 11th Air Assault Division for a training, evaluation and control group briefing and discussion.

The rest of the day was devoted to a demonstration of the helicopter confidence course, a display of the flying crane, a communications display and a seminar and discussion on problems of the 11th.

The U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency conducted an orientation, followed by a briefing at the Infantry Board on the third day of the visit.

Because of the unbearable heat during the afternoons, the Houston Colt .45's have broken baseball tradition by scheduling their Sunday games at night. They recently met the Giants in 75 degree heat after an afternoon which saw the mercury hanging around 100.

Panther Takes 6

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (ANF) — Choosing an Army career is wise and worthwhile decision even when the re-enlistee is a panther.

When he re-uped for six at Fort Lewis, Wash., Black Jack Argo I, the mascot of the 4th Infantry Division's 2d Battle Group, 47th Infantry "Panthers", walked off with an honorary promotion to sergeant, and a "jungle expert badge."

The panther was enlisted in the Army in 1957 and was assigned to the 47th for on-the-job training in Military Occupational Specialty 002 (Mascot). He subsequently qualified as an expert in two weapons, fang and claw. He also speaks three languages: snarls, growls and screams (inhuman).

Service School Selection Changes Listed by DA

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The forthcoming Army School Catalog (DA Pam. 20-21) will include major changes in selecting officers to attend the Command and General Staff College (C&GSC) and senior service schools.

Only reserve officers on extended active duty will be affected by the revisions in C&GSC selecting procedures. Additional time will be given reserve officers in which to attend the associate course, Command and General Staff College, and an opportunity at further rank advancement.

The revisions in senior service college selection affects all Army officers planning to attend one of the U.S. or allies senior colleges, beginning with the selections for the 1964-65 classes.

The career branches will start the selection process by nominating their eligible officers. A new pre-screening board is being established to review the branch selections and reduce the application total as much as possible.

A selection board, meeting about Aug. 1, will review applicants' records and select the final list of principals and alternates to attend senior schools.

C&GSC is located at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. The senior service schools to which the new criteria apply are the Army War College, Carlisle, Pa.; National War College, Fort McNair, D.C.; Industrial War College, Fort McNair, Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Ala.; Naval War College, Newport, R.I.; the Canadian National Defense College; Britian's Imperial Defense College; and France's Ecole Superieure du Guerre.

Packing Tips Will Save Wear, Tear on Clothes

Every summer, thousands of military personnel tear loose from their duties to take their families on well-deserved and often much-needed vacations.

But it's not unusual to hear vacationers remark. "With all the packing, and with the terrible condition your clothes are in after a few days in a suitcase I just don't know if it's worth the bother.

1. Make a list of all the clothing you intend to take on your trip, and paste the list inside your suitcase. Then you can't leave anything behind!

2 Bring the easy - to - wash fabrics on your trip. Having them in your wardrobe means more easy-care, wrinkle - free mileage from your travel clothes.

3. "Old" clothes can look like "new" if they're neatly fitted, freshly accessorized, and have their hemlines adjusted to this season's height.

4. Pack your suitcase in layers, with the heavy items at the bottom.

5. Place shoes in drizzle boots, plastic shirt - bags,, or inside a pair of hubby's old socks.

6. Men can save space by packing socks inside shoes.

7. Don't forget a travel iron and cord.

8. For spillables and breakables such as perfume, creams or lotions, use strong plastic bags; in case of an accident, the bag will save the clothing.

9. In packing skirts and dresses, use the least number of folds, and if possible fold at the waistline.

10. Sweaters take up less space and get less wrinkled if they are rolled instead of folded.

Girl Scouts, Brownies Make Film

Intermediate campers spent last Friday night at Hideaway. They cooked their supper, slept in sleeping bags and prepared breakfast before breaking camp Saturday morning.

A highlight of the week was their participation in a movie Friday afternoon. The film was made by representatives of United Givers of Columbus for use in connection with their next fund drive.

Activities throughout the week centered around nature study and crafts. The Scouts also participated in hikes.

Director of the camp was Mrs. James R. Morrison.

Mrs. Joe T. Ely is Fort Benning neighborhood chairman for Concharty Council to which Girl Scouts on the post belong.

Reception Held Here

Chaplain (Lt Col.) Edward A. Curran was honored at a farewell reception at the Main Officers' Open Mess recently. He soon will retire after more than 20 years in the Army.

Guests were received by Chaplain Curran, his sister, Mrs. Jean Gibson; Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center; Chaplain (Col.) and Mrs. Silas E. Decker and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas Daley.

A certificate making Chaplain Curran an Honorary Doughboy was presented by Gen. Kelleher, John Meads gave him a Spiritual Bouquet from the altar boys of the Catholic chapels. A gift from the lay people was presented by Mrs. Robert A. Montgomery.

The centerpiece on the table was a large cake decorated with the Chaplain Corps motto and a miniature priest. Mrs. Peter E. Kelley cut the cake, and Mrs. F. C. Pasko and Mrs. David P. Heekin served punch.

Chaplain Curran studied for the priesthood at the Holy Ghost Seminary in Pittsburgh and was ordained in 1939. He entered the Army in 1943 and was assigned to the 152nd AAA battalion in Los Angeles. Since that time he has served in New Guinea, the Philippines, Japan, Camp Drake, Fort Bliss and Frankfurt, Germany.

In June, 1960, he arrived at Fort Benning to serve as deputy post chaplain until his retirement this summer.

Charm Classes Are Scheduled To Start in July

Mrs. William Gray, Women's Club chairman of charm and modeling classes, has announced that new classes in teen charm and modeling will begin this month.

The girls receive their instruction from Ann Roberts, well-known model.

Designed to meet the special needs of the younger "seventeen" set, the girls are shown methods of good grooming, appearance, making - up and poise. Several girls have just completed this six - week course, and some are planning to take Mrs. Roberts' modeling course for the remainder of the summer.

Last year many of the young ladies modeled for fashion shows, and some have become real models.

32 Attend Follow-Up Coffee

Speeches were made by Mrs. Marilyn Gross, representing the Woman's Club, who described the various activities available to the ladies; Mrs. Anne Saint who represented DUSA; and Mrs. Bunn, who discussed girl scouting.

Mrs. Jan James invited the ladies to come into the Book Store and see the variety of merchandise. Mrs. John Hall, wife of the detachment commander welcomed the ladies.

Miss Joyce Coffelt was the guest. Cadre hostesses were Mrs. P. L. Mason, wife of the battalion commander, Mrs. Gail V. Stasky, Mrs. William E. Killoran, Mrs. Billy R. Prestridge and Mrs. Ralph Thomas.

The 32 ladies attending were served refreshments of coffee, iced tea and cookies. The centerpiece was an arrangement of fruit and flowers in a basket.

10 Wives Attend Coffee in Lounge

Wives of student officers in the Motor Officer Class III met for a coffee recently in the lounge of Detachment 1, 2nd Battalion, The Student Brigade.

Mrs. John Hall welcomed the ladies. Cadre hostesses were Mrs. P. L. Mason, Mrs. William E. Killoran and Mrs. Ralph Thomas.

Refreshments of coffee and cookies were served.

Mrs. Gray Is Installed As 'Toasters' President

At the regular meeting of the Fort Benning-Columbus Toastmistress Club held recently at the Ralston Hotel, Mrs. William Gray became the newly elected president.

The other officers elected are as follows: Mrs. Robert Harmann, vice-president; Mrs. Thomas Beld, recording secretary; Mrs. Samuel Rizzo, treasurer; Miss Mary Blackmon, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Genie Miller, club representative.

Following the lexicology presented by Miss Mae Johnson, Table Topics were conducted by Topicmistress, Mrs. C. B. Ingram. The subject was "Growth Continues" in which seven members and one guest participated.

The program of the evening was evaluated by Mrs. Merle Simpson, in which three speakers were presented by Toastmistress, Mrs. Joseph Trdla.

The speakers were as follows; Mrs. John Burns, "A P. K. Needs Experience," Miss Mary Blackmon "Education Minus the Third Dimension;" and the winning speaker of the evening, Mrs. Thomas Beld, "How Do We Judge." The critics were Mrs. Carolyn Holt, Mrs. Phil Friou, and Mrs. Royce Hunt.

Attending guests were Miss Jane Buck, Mrs. G. Wilson and Miss Ruth Connelly who was also proposed for membership.

Youth, Adult Choirs Sing

Members of Harmony Church Chapel No. 1 celebrated Father's Day with a short program commemorating the fathers in the congregation. Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas L. Strayhand planned the program which was highlighted by verse reading by the childrens choir.

The Father's Day observance was climaxed with one of the outstanding men of the Chapel receiving a Certificate of Appreciation. Lt. Paul G. Van Sickle, who will be leaving for Europe shortly, was presented the certificate by Col. Richard W. Keyes, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, for his unselfish and untiring work toward the betterment of the church.

Chaplain Strayhand has been responsible for the organization of the childrens and the adults choirs. His untiring efforts has more than doubled the weekly Chapel attendance in less than three months. "This Chapel has made tremendous improvements," stated the Chaplain, "and I feel that publicity will encourage the children, their parents and others yet unreached in the church program, to attend and participate in the Chapel services."

Club-Owned Finery Available for Use

Mrs. Walter D. Short, Women's Club Custodian, informed the Bayonet today that all club members planning and hostessing an organizational function, such as a monthly coffee or luncheon, may borrow the club's silver service, punch bowl and five or two-branched candelabra.

She says these items are very lovely and a real help to entertaining graciously. They may be used only for non-personal gatherings, however, according to Mrs. Short.

SGT. STEPHENS

First Sgt. Paul Stephens Jr. of C Battery, 2nd Battalion (Composite) 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade has completed more than 14 years active Army service.

The 33-year-old career soldier enlisted in the Army Dec. 15, 1948 in Fort Wayne, Indiana, near his hometown of Huntington. He has served with C Battery since March.

Sgt. Stephens is a graduate of Clear Creek High School in Huntington. His military education includes attendance at the survey chief course and the survey astrological course at the Army Artillery and Missile School at Fort Sill, Okla., and the Seventh U. S. Army non-commissioned officer school in Munich, Germany.

Eight of Sgt. Stephen's 14 years service have been in overseas assignments. From May, 1949 to May, 1952, he served with the 7th Field Artillery Battalion on the 1st Infantry Division in Germany. He then returned to the United States until February, 1955, when he was assigned to the 31st Field Artillery Battalion of the 7th Infantry Division in Korea. He remained in Korea until June, 1956.

In March, 1958, Sgt. Stephens was ordered to Germany where he served with the 2nd Battalion, 7th Artillery, 24th Infantry Division until his present assignment in March.

His awards and decorations include the Good Conduct Medal with four clasps, the German Occupation Medal and National Defense Service Medal.

Although retirement is at least six years ahead, the young first sergeant already has his plans made. He will retire in Columbus, Ga.

He is married to the former Francis Merie Mitter of Vinnia, W. Va. They have a daughter, Debora Kay, 9, and a son, Richard Alan, 6.

NOTHING STOPS HIM . . . This sergeant doesn't let a cast on his hand nor hospitalization prevent him from keeping an appointment with the re-enlistment officer. SFC Buford Brooks (C), takes the oath at Martin Army Hospital where he "re-upped" for three years to add to his 25 years of active service in the Army. He is non-commissioned officer-in-charge of the Vehicle Registration Branch, Provost Marshal Section, The Infantry Center. First Lt. John M. Turner (L), commander of the Military Police Company, administered the oath. Looking on is SFC Frank W. Braxton, career counselor for The Infantry Center Troop Command.

2,500 Visit Infantry Brigade In Last 'Festival Days' Event

Fort Benning's 197th Infantry Brigade served as host last Saturday to the "Stay and See Columbus Festival Days" with over 2,500 visitors witnessing demonstrations and static displays of Army equipment.

The 197th show was The Infantry Center's contribution to the "Stay and See Columbus" program, a promotional week designed to attract and promote tourism in the local area.

Col. Richard W. Keyes, 197th commander, welcomed the multi-state visitors and the afternoon event. He invited those in attendance to "look over Fort Benning and see how a soldier lives" during the day.

At 1:45 p.m. The Infantry Center Band kicked off activities with a brief concert.

Guests lined the Bolling Bowl as the afternoon's agenda swung into high gear with a precision drill team demonstration by Company C, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

During the hand-to-hand combat demonstration the Rangers showed their skills with no weapons, knife, bayonet and pugil sticks (stout sticks with padded ends which approximate the size and weight of an M-1 rifle).

Quick and powerful German shepherd dogs, under the guidance of their trainers from 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon, staged an exciting and crowd pleasing demonstration of the Army's use of dogs in warfare.

The burly dogs demonstrated silent and oral commands, obedience, attack of the enemy, and a fast paced "run - through" of the obstacle course which included scaling walls, eight-foot leaps from platforms and a series of tunnels and loops.

Also in the demonstration were gun shyness and man shyness tests, the technique of the silent alert, and communications between dog and trainer.

Following the dogs jump through a flaming hoop the skit was climaxed with a touch of humor when a toy poodle was released from a large pen after being headlined as a "vicious sentry dog" trained to attack any movnig man.

During the afternoon break those in attendance walked through the 197th's barracks, craft shop, library and chapel.

A static display with weapons and equipment ranging from a .45 caliber pistol to the Corporal missile an from armored personnel carriers to a huge crane was also on exhibition.

The festivities were climaxed when eleven members of the Fort Benning Parachute Club free-fell from a height of 10,000 feet out of a "Choctaw" helicopter and landed inches from an X laid out on the jump field.

The crowds enthusiasm and interest was termed "wonderful" by Col. Keyes. He added that he was "delighted to show the visitor the facilities and men of the 197th and was especially pleased at the turnout."

"The show was just wonderful," commented Mrs. Hugh K. McElhannon, "my family and I especially enjoyed the Scout Dog and Ranger demonstration."

"I found the Scout Dog demonstration and static displays of military equipment to be of special interest," said Air Force Lt. Col. (Ret.) Charles Cunningham of Columbus.

Twin Subs Join Fleet

GROTON, Conn. (AFPS) — Two nuclear submarines, the Polaris missile submarine Tecumseh and the attack submarine Flasher, were launched here in a simultaneous ceremony.

It was a big day for the Navy with launching of two other nuclear submarines, the Polaris missile submarine John C. Calhoun at Newport News, Va., and the Polaris-armed Daniel Boone at Vallejo, Calif.

An hour before the ceremonies began, a submarine that bore the name Flasher in WWII was towed from the nearby Navy Submarine Base at New London, on her way to the scrap heap. The old Flasher was launched here 20 years ago.

The new Flasher is a sister ship of the USS Thresher. She is 279 feet long and displaces 3,750 tons. The Tecumseh is 425 feet long and displaces 7,000 tons.

Unlike the Tecumseh, the Flasher does not carry strategic Polaris missiles. Her mission is to attack shipping and other submarines.

2nd Engineer Dedication Set

Saturday Ceremonies Also Change of Command As Lt. Col. Carter Departs 2nd Infantry Division

AIR CAVALRY. . .On display at the 7th Cavalry Organization Day was the latest element of the famous Air Cavalry Troop destined to add modern and vital facilities to this already diversified combat unit. Their talent? See story, P. 15.

By Bob de Camera

A lot of awesome history is penned up in a steel and glass edifice no larger than a good-sized newspaper stand waiting for an official ceremony of recognition Saturday.

When U. S. Marines and soldiers joined together in 1917, sewed on "Indianhead" patches and fought through Chateau Thierry as the 2nd Infantry Division, the 2nd Engineers had already battled and built their way through the War Between The States, the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection.

Add three more major wars and a lot of muddy, bloody campaigns, sprinkle with glory, train well and you have the history of the 2nd Engineers.

Into the memorial constructed by the battalion and planned and designed by Lt. Col. William C. Carter, the unit's commander, have gone the Korean battle colors, a picture of the engineer's Medal of Honor Winner, dozens of campaign ribbons, trophies and lineage charts.

The ceremony will have a double significance for Col. Carter. Immediately following the dedication ceremony on Marshall Bowl Field, the colonel will pass on the present unit colors to Lt. Col. Beverly C. Snow and relinquish command of the engineer battalion.

Col. Carter's new assignment is with Fort Benning's Infantry School as chairman of the Engineer Committee. Col. Snow comes to the "Second to None" division from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

The 2nd Engineers began as the Battalion of Engineers on August 3, 1861. They spilled their first blood fighting with the Blue in the Peninsula Campaign.

Joining with other units to organize the 2nd Infantry Division in 1917, they helped the "Second to None" return home from Europe after World War I as the most decorated American division.

Combat engineers fight like the infantry and build roads like the engineers. Their equipment is weighty. It includes tank-mounted bridges, truck-mounted cranes, five - ton wreckers and the largest bulldozers available.

The Wirtzfeld-Bullingen Campaign in Germany in World War II was the engagement that spawned the engineer's greatest hero, a technician fourth grade. The soldier was Truman Kimbro, and his picture lies prominently displayed in the showcase.

Through the Korean Conflict, side by side with the other men of the 2nd Division, the engineers fought and labored. They've got all the decorations and all the campaign participation ribbons. And now they've got the place to put them.

The memorial was started the first week in May and completed the beginning of this month. Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, will dedicate the case, attended by Col. Carter and Col. Snow.

Then the battalion will retire to Marshall Bowl Field for the change of command ceremonies.

2nd Division Sergeant Is Commissioned; Top at OCS

One of the 2nd Infantry Division's "sharpest" soldiers, SSgt. Robert J. Baker, added new laurels to his amazing record last week by becoming "Lieutenant" Robert J. Baker when he graduated from Officer Candidate School (OCS) as the honor graduate of his class.

At the ceremonies held recently in Fort Benning's spacious main theater, and before a host of dignitaries, Lt. Baker was called to the head of the line to have his gold bars pinned on by the commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and by the lieutenant's wife, Ursula.

Tough Training

In addition to numerous complimentary citations read in a letter from Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, Lt. Baker received a plaque from the Association of the United States Army, an infantry silhouette from The Infantry School and an engraved bowl from the Infantry Officer Candidate School.

From the first minute, six months ago, when, then, "Candidate" Baker, reported for OCS and was confronted with such things as: "Suck in that gut! — Pull in that chin! — Don't eyeball, drop down and give me 25!" — a strange life began.

TOP OCS GRADUATE LIEUTENANT BAKER
Accepting Honors From Gen. Billingslea

For 18 weeks Candidate Baker went through a gruelling mental and physical training program without ever seeming to have the slightest lull. Then after completion of 18 weeks he received his blue helmet—thus becoming a "Senior Candidate." It was at this point that he began to become treated as an officer. All the junior candidates in other companies were required to salute and call him "sir." For the remaining six weeks, until graduation, the frenzied pace relaxed and he became molded toward commissioned status.

Officer Candidate School consists of 23 weeks of rugged testing for aspiring officers. To graduate is an honor in itself, but to be honor graduate requires that something "extra." Lt. Baker was chosen top in his class on the basis of academic and leadership superiority.

Lt. Baker entered the Army from his home state of Colorado in 1956 as an enlisted man and served with the 8th Infantry "Pathfinders" Division in the U. S. and Germany.

Joining 2nd

His association with the 2nd Division began in October 1960 as a member of the now-reorganized 23rd Infantry. From there he was assigned to the division's Headquarters and Headquarters Company in December 1961 as a squad leader in the security platoon and, later, as security platoon sergeant.

Before his selection to attend OCS, Lt. Baker was known throughout the division as a soldier who did things well.

During the ceremony honoring the new officers some humor was injected when a photographer's flash bulb exploded on stage and Gen. Billingslea turned to the audience and said, "It's like combat."

Lt. Baker's first choice for assignment after completion of OCS was flight school at Fort Rucker, Ala. In a few days he will depart Fort Benning for Fort Rucker and aircraft pilot's training.

As wives and families looked on happily at the end of the graduation ceremonies, the new officers lofted their garrison caps in the air and donned the gold-trimmed caps of the United States Army Officer.

Featured speaker for the occasion was Maj. Gen. Ethan Allen Chapman, commanding general of the 12th U. S. Army Corps in Atlanta. Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, U. S. Army Infantry Center commanding general, officiated at the commissionings and introduced the speaker.

For 2nd Brigade

Troops Present Splashy Review

Despite a sudden downpour last week at Kelley Hill's Esbagger Field, the 2nd Brigade of the combat ready 2nd Infantry Division held a review and awards ceremony.

As the 2,500 troops marched onto the field, the cloudy sky opened up and drenched the soldiers. The rain failed to dampen the men's spirits, and ignoring old mother nature, the review was carried out.

Col. Dwight Dickson, commander of the 2nd Brigade, reviewed the battalion - sized units and sloshed through mud and water as he briskly "trooped the line."

Col. Dickson presented awards to two officers and five enlisted men: two letters of commendation, a trophy for best mess, and one for a softball tournament; and also awards to outstanding squad leaders for the past month.

Special guests at the ceremony were Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the "second to none" division, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander.

Maj. Russell Bakey was the commander of the troops.

Army Friendships Flow Like a Wide River Across Many Lands

By Bob de Camara

Army friendships flow like a wide river across countries and commands, knowing no boundaries. In places the water broadens to include officers and enlisted men. Isolated dates and battles in history unite and gain significance.

The river is only dammed by one occurence, retirement, and then only partially.

Last week at the 2nd Infantry Division, a sergeant major hung up his khakis after nearly 21 years and withdrew from the main flow.

On Easy Green

Sgt. Maj. Benjamin C. Franklin fought D-Day on the easy green sector of Omaha Beach, a 19-year-old, poised soldier with two years of combat experience already under his cartridge belt.

Near him on the sandy no-man's land, under constant enemy fire, labored a young infantry commander and his first sergeant. All three were with the 1st Infantry Division in the first wave of American troops to hit Omaha on June 6, 1944.

The young Infantry commander, several battlefield decorations, promotions and one general's star later, was on hand at Marne Field in 1963 to honor the retiring sergeant major.

And Sgt. Maj. Franklin has not lost track of the first sergeant of Omaha Beach.

From 1959 to 1962 in Germany while Franklin, reunited with the 26th Infantry, bossed Company B of that unit as first sergeant, the battalion sergeant major whom he served under was the first sergeant from Omaha Beach, Sgt. Maj. Theodore L. "King" Dobol, ranking enlisted man in the U. S. Army.

In August 1962, prior to the 26th's rotation to the states, Franklin, now a sergeant major himself, replaced Sgt. Maj. Dobol as the 26th's enlisted leader.

And in another twist this year, the reorganizing 2nd Division sent the 26th to Fort Riley, Kans., transferred Franklin as sergeant major to the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry and restored "Mr. Blue Spader," Sgt. Maj. Dobol, to his former position with the 26th.

Franklin's plans for retirement border on the unusual also. With money he has saved, he plans to open a ski school in Gatlingburg, Tenn. He will live in Knoxville, Tenn., with his wife, Ula, and their two children, Mark, 14, and Nera, 8.

For five years in Germany from 1952 to 1957, he served as an amored infantry company first sergeant, doubling as a ski instructor as an additional duty.

One more instance where, Franklin's path crisscrossed another. . .The 2nd Infantry Division Intelligence chief, Lt. Col. Richards O. Stewart, led the Berlin Honor Guard Platoon for two years in the forties and a member of his platoon was—that's right — Sgt. Maj. Benjamin C. Franklin.

Major Jones Comes Back To the 38th

By 38th Artillery PIO

Maj. Dillard F. Jones is back with the 38th Artillery, this time as the battalion commander.

He served originally with his new unit in 1960 as battalion executive officer.

Entering the Army in 1940, Maj. Jones was first assigned to Fort Bragg, N. C. During World War II he served in the European Theater of Operations with the Third U. S. Army. He participated in the liberation of France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Germany.

Leaving military service in 1946, he returned at the outbreak of the Korean Conflict, assigned to the 20th Artillery of the 25th Division. Here he served as S-2 officer, battery commander and S-3 officer until the end of hostilities. Maj. Jones was awarded the Purple Heart.

Following Korea, the major was stationed in Alabama as Professor of Military Science and Tactics with the ROTC program of Jacksonville State College.

He left Alabama for Germany in 1957 and returned to the U. S. in 1960. Joining the 2nd Division in that year, he was assigned to the 38th Artillery. After serving briefly with this battalion, he became executive officer of the 12th Artillery composite battalion. He served in this post until his recent return to the 38th.

Fainting Soldier's Recovery Is Fitting Tribute to 2nd Division June Retirees

"By order of the President of the United States the following military personnel are retired from active military duty . . ." So read the opening announcement last week at Marne Field when 17 Second Infantry Division soldiers retired from active service at ceremonies in their honor.

Undoubtedly these men can look back over their many years of service and recall many memorable moments. Among the foremost, of course, will be their retirement parade. But, each time they recall this great day in their lives, they will probably remember one special soldier who, unrehearsed, paid them a fitting farewell.

Near the end of the ceremonies, the Division band began playing the National Anthem. It was at this point that one of the members of the color guard fainted from the pounding-blistering sun.

He still lay on the ground as the guard was ordered to pass in review. As the unit turned to begin their march, the young soldier struggled back on his feet, and, still groggy, returned to his place in formation just as the honor guard moved out.

White-faced, hot, and still slightly dazed, the young soldier fought to regain his composure as his unit neared the reviewing area. And by the time "Eyes Right" was given, he was steady, erect and marching proudly. As the sharp honor guard's last rank passed before the stands there seemed to be one member of the marching unit who, to all those that watched, stood ten feet tall.

The retirement list was headed by Chief Warrant Officer Joseph H. Morgan Jr., of the 15th Artillery Battalion and Sgt. Maj. Benjamin C. Franklin, sergeant major of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

The site of the retirement review was packed with battalion commanders and sergeants major, and the small field lined with state flags as the division gathered to pay tribute to the soldiers departing active duty.

An honor guard and color guard from the 2nd Military Police Company took part in the ceremonies. Also on hand was the "Indianhead" Division band.

Over three hundred and forty years service to the United States Army was represented by the men who stood proudly at attention, perhaps for their last time, and listened as Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, expressed the 2nd Division's gratitude for a job well done.

Gen. Billingslea told the men that even though they were retiring from active duty he hoped they would continue to show the civilian populace the proud army traditions.

The General added: "I want to thank you for the 2nd Division for your faithful service. I hate to see you go. I hate to see all this knowhow and determination that is represented by you men leave."

The 2nd Infantry Division commanding general also said that since the retiring men had served through two wars and been in almost every country on the globe, their experience and knowledge would continue to be useful to civilians as well as military after they left the service.

In final parting, the commanding general remarked: "Again, I'm sorry to see us part. All the officers and men of the 2nd Division bid you a hearty well done and best of luck in your future careers."

After Gen. Billingslea's speech he went to the head of the line of retiring men and shook hands and spoke a few parting words.

Show Sponsored by Youth Activities Club

Spectators Captivated By Youth's Puppets

Hansel and Gretel captivated a young audience last Saturday at the Brat Barracks as the Youth Activities Club (YAC) put on a free puppet show.

The young spectators were fascinated by the antics of puppets as they moved in near-perfect unison with the tape-recorded music and voices.

Bob Corley, son of the assistant division commander Brig. Gen. John T. Corley; Don Todd, son of Col. William A. Todd Jr., chief of Martin Army Hospital; and Don Ogden, son of Capt. Charles Ogden from the 95th Evacuation, arranged and conducted the entire show.

Bob Corley and Don Todd handled the puppets while young Don Ogden handled the recordings and directed his two performing friends.

The scenery used during the production, as well as special effects, were all devised and handled by the three showmen. Different colored lighting effects for the various acts were set overhead of the small puppet stage. Backstage, the floor was a cluttered array of wires, puppets, tape recorder, phonograph, records, scenery boards, microphones and lights.

All three boys performed well and the hustle and bustle backstage was indicative of professional show business.

Unit 'Beachcombs' For Lt. Colonel, Mrs. Huck

Officers and ladies of the 12th Artillery held a farewell party for Lt. Col. and Mrs. Terence W. Huck at the Main Officers Open Mess swimming pool.

The party was given in anticipation of Col. Huck's upcoming transfer to duty in Hawaii.

The party was planned by officers of Battery A, 12th Artillery. Guests were dressed in various beachcomber attire and Mrs. Huck was given a hula skirt and leis at the door.

After dinner there were water games in the swimming pool.

Col. Huck was presented with a marble desk set with a gold-plated Honest John Rocket mounted on it, the traditional 12th Artillery cannon; several framed pictures of firings of Honest John Rockets; and a chrome - plated "shipping plug."

STRENGTH FOR 7TH CAVALRY ROLLS BY REVIEWING STAND
Col. Atkinson (L), Staff, Take Organization Day Salute

Cavalry Celebrates 97th

Troops of the 7th Cavalry, a unit made famous by Brevet Maj. Gen. George Custer in 1876, marched onto the 2nd Infantry Division's Knight Field last Friday to begin a day's celebration.

The occasion was the 87th birthday of the "yellowleg" 7th Cavalry, and events were planned for all age groups present.

The kids especially enjoyed riding in the cavalry tanks and armored personnel carriers, following a review which included a war-painted Indian and horse - mounted cavalrymen in uniforms well known through Hollywood westerns.

At least a hundred cars were parked in an area across the road from the review field when the parade began. In back of the cars smoke was rising from a field mess tent in a pine knoll where white-suited cooks prepared a barbecue.

The anniversary review was started by Capt. James L. O'Neill who gave the adjutant's call, and the cavalry's five troops (a troop is about 145 men in cavalry language) strode onto Knight Field.

Orders were read organizing the 7th Cavalry on July 28, 1866, and then, to "Gary Owen" played by the "Indian-head" Division band, the men passed in review.

Headquarters Troop came first followed by Troops A to D. Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson, commander of the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, returned the men's salutes while Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commanding general, and Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, watched from the spectators stands.

The Indian and horsemen came next. Behind them rumbled four jeeps with machine guns, two tanks named "Barracuda" and "Bushwacker" and two armored personnel carriers also sporting colorful names, "Blueblood" and "Brenda."

The "chopper" flew over an orange silk marker on the ground, let down rappelling ropes which were grabbed by two cavalrymen below and down the ropes slid two of the air cavalry in khaki uniforms.

The last of the ceremony was a presentation to the division's two generals of honorary memberships in the 7th Cavalry.

Gen. Billingslea's certificate appointed him "an honorary Gary Owen trooper entitled to all the rights and privileges hereof including the wearing of a yellow scarf, singing of 'Sergeant Flynn' and bellowing 'Gary Owen.'"

Then came the invitation to the children to hop in a tank for a ride, and the tanks and personnel carriers were in use soon after.

For the celebrating 7th Cavalry, and wives and children, the rest of the day included sports and games and a picnic outdoors.

9th Is Examined On Mechanizing

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

Mechanization proved omnipotent recently when the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry went to the field for a three-day Army Training Test (ATT).

Battling 90 degree temperatures, choking dust and "aggressor forces," the "Second of the 9th" flexed its mechanized muscles for the final time before departing for a six-month tour of duty in Germany.

Tailored Test

This test was tailored, according to officials, to the characteristics of a Rotaplan unit.

Rotaplan units are mechanized. Several movements were made that would have been impossible with "leg" units.

On several occasions elements of the Manchu battalion, travelling in armored personnel carriers, were able to slip around aggressor forces, span rough terrain,, and encounter the "enemy" from the rear.

Swift flanking movements and tactical long - distance road marches, executed with short notice, deployment of reserves into blocking positions, were all accomplished by the mobile "Manchus," often resulting in encirclement of the aggressor.

Selected Ranger - qualified men from the battalion received special praise from the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Jack Samson, as did the men of the supporting 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

"Our long - range patrols played a vital part in the success of our mission," Col. Samson said. "Their constant surveillance of aggressor movements and buildups were indispensible.

Support for the Army Training Test was supplied by Company A, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor; elements of the 2nd Engineer Battalion; the 2nd Aviation Battalion and the 2nd Medical Battalion.

Capt. Evans To MacDill For Liaison

By 2nd Bn., 38th Inf. PIO

Capt. Bobby G. Evans, executive officer of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, leaves this week to serve as ground liaison officer for the 2nd Infantry Division with the 12th and 15th Tactical Air Wings at MacDill Air Force Base, near Tampa, Fla.

Capt. Evans, a 1954 graduate of Henderson State College, Arkadelphia, Ark., will aid in coordinating air missions between the 2nd Division and the two MacDill-Stationed Air Force units.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

Words of an Opponent Parallel Jefferson's

We have just celebrated the 4th of July. For many of us it was swimming, fire-crackers and relaxation . . . a sort of carefree abandonment from the frenzied pace of daily life—a life of free men.

Throughout history are many people to whom we owe our freedom, and one of these was, among other things, a writer. And the most important document he ever wrote has become priceless. It cannot be bought, stolen, destroyed or altered. Yet, its conception, the plot, may be borrowed at anytime, by anyone, truly desiring it.

Two Hundred Years

It was almost two hundred years ago that this writer sat working in his small room at the corner of Market and 7th street in a, then, small city. The weather was hot and sticky and perspiration dripped from his brow onto the ancient portable desk where he labored. Time and again he would wad up a sheet of paper he had started, grumble to him — self, throw it into an overflowing waste basket, and start another.

The dim glow from his lantern gave insufficient light and his eyes were strained as he wrote. His window was open, yet no cool breeze could be felt. Occassionally he could hear the clatter of horse's hoofs on the street below and faint sounds of voices as people passed by. He was hot and tired and it was difficult to work.

Above his oak desk hung a framed quotation that had been written two years previous by a political opponent of his. It was one of his favorites and he looked at it often. The words captured the tidal wave of dreams of his young nation and were basically synonymous to the papers that laid before him on his desk. He read the quotation again: "Brandishments will not fascinate us, nor will threats of a halter intimidate. For under God, we are determined that wheresoever, whensoever, or howsoever we shall be called to make our exit, we will die free men." Beneath these words was the signature — Josiah Quincy, 1774.

As he read the words again he wondered to himself if what he was doing would ever be anything more than just so many written words, sheived in later years in some obscure cabinet, forgotten, and growing yellow with age.

But, here he sat, hot and sweaty, working on the draft his council had assigned him. It was his second effort at the task. The committee had read his first draft and made many changes. He had thought their recommendations deplorable, and had told them so; but, he made their corrections. In total they had ordered 86 changes, deleting 400 words, and that was a lot of time and hard work scratched out.

July 4, 1776

He finished the final draft in mid-June and the results were forwarded to the council-committee on June 28. Then, on the 4th of July, 1776, Thomas Jefferson's manuscript was adopted.

He was right in his assumption that the paper would become yellow with age, but far wrong that the words would be forgotten. For even today, 187 years later, those words Thomas Jefferson wrote; their full meaning for freedom - loving Americans and peoples all over the world, are a lasting symbol to the ever-present hopes of liberty - seeking men. A symbol that will never become shelved, under any circumstances.

The first 35 words of the second paragraph in Thomas Jefferson's manuscript are, perhaps, the most famous part of the thousand-some-odd word script he created. They read exactly today as they did when he wrote them almost two centuries ago. It reads . . .

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness."

In June, when he had finished his draft, Thomas Jefferson was still faced with one remaining abstacle. There was no title to head the text. He had to search for the right words that would sum up his work, and, after reaching a decision, he had dipped his quill into an ink-well and wrote . . .

"The Declaration of Independence."

Conqueror's Softball '9' Wins a Pair

By 1st Bn, 87th Inf PIO

After being at the mercy of old mother nature's downpours for the past week the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry finally got back into the swing of the softball season last week with wins over the 37th Artillery, 16-4; and the 2nd Aviation Battalion, 8-7.

The "Conquerors" have their eyes on winning the Division Softball Tournament and their recent double victory has given their standings a big boost.

Members of the highflying "Conquerors" are: Pilar Spence, Leroy Myrick, James Clark and Don Grantham from Headquarters and Headquarters Company; Glenn McCammon, Robert Cordiero, Jorge Perez and Clarence Fogg from Company A; Guillermo Avila, Leucious Willis, Howard Hill and Nolton Richard from Co. B., Douglas Brande and Gary Aesque from Company C. Frank Schuette, Headquarters and Headquarters Co., is manager and Marreo Narvaez, Co. A, is coach.

The 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry has two more games on tap and are looking for another double win which will help in their push for the championship.

Medics Edge In on Admin Team Lead

The 2nd Medical Battalion defeated the 702nd Ordnance, 9-8, and 17th Artillery, 14-8, last week to edge up to within one game of the league leading 2nd Administration Co. in softball standings.

The Medics have only two games left to play, one of which is with the 2nd Administration Co. If they can beat the Administration nine, the Medics will be almost assured of a tie for playoffs.

In the game played with the 702nd Ordnance last Thursday, it was a combinaton of a home-run by PFC Hagen of Company, B. with two men on, and pitcher Bradley's fanning the final two batters in the last of the 7th to ice the game, 9-8.

The score was knotted at eight-all in the top of the seventh when the medics pulled ahead scoring a run on a walk and base hit.

In the last of the seventh, the Ordnance team got one quick out then put the next two men on base. It was then that PFC Bradley began to bear down and struck out the remaining two batters.

To Wind Up Season Soon

With the softball season coming to a close, attention is focused on the 2nd Administration Company, who are sitting in first place. However, there are still a few games left to play and possibilities of a playoff are not unlikely.

The 2nd Medical Battalion is only one game out of first place and still have two games remaining to play. One of which, is with the 2nd Administration Company.

Swim Away the Hot Days

Gads it's hot!

If you find yourself saying this on these hot Georgia days, perhaps you have not availed yourself of the Sand Hill swimming pool.

Located across from Service Club 2, and beside the Provost Marshal Office, the Sand Hill pool is that cool water oasis that washes away the hot summer days with the first splash.

Open until about eight p.m. each night, the pool draws a large crowd each day and people going for their first time should try to get there early. Facilities are available for changing clothes and the concrete area surrounding the water offers space for sun-bathing.

Swimming always seems to leave a man hungry, and after refreshing hours in the pool, the snack bar of Service Club 2 is right across the street.

There is also a numerous amount of unscheduled entertainment available to the swimmers when young explorers venture onto the springboard to try their hands at fancy diving. The results are often humorous as half-twists or tuck gainers are attempted for the first time.

In contrast, however, there are some excellent divers frequenting the pool, and watching their proficiency is also entertaining.

So far this summer, the Sand Hill swimming pool has attracted a large number of swimmers. Each day, prior to one p.m. a long line of customers can be seen waiting for the pool to open. The treat of being able to "cool off" on some of the more sweltering days has made the swimming pool into one of the most active places on post. Attendance is growing daily and on the weekends the pool is actually crowded.

Parking space is available near the Provost Marshal Office, and also behind Service Club 2. The bus line runs down Scott Avenue, just a block way, affording easy transportation for those who need it.

The pool is situated near the center of Sand Hill activity. In addition to the service club and snack bar, the library and 2nd Division Museum is nearby and the main post exchange (PX), drive-in snack bar, and theater 6, are all within a short walking distance. This gives the swimmer an opportunity to catch a cool dip before taking in a movie etc.

Building 3811, located at the pool, houses changing areas for both men and women. Admission is free.

So when the heat makes living seem unbearable drop down to the Sand Hill swimming pool and relax. It doesn't cost a cent and the only requirement is a bathing suit.

Crown-Rites Cop Bowling Tournament

The 184th Chemical Platoon's bowling team, "Crown-Rites," are the new champions of the Diet-Rite Cola Bowling League held last week at Victory Bowling Lanes.

The new champions hold most of the league honors for bowling skill. J. R. Miller was the outstanding bowler for the Crown - Rites, winning the league's high average with a 187 single, and 643 high series. Bob Cunningham was the most improved bowler for the Crown-Rites and the league.

Members of the new champion team are: J. D. Keresey, team Capt.; Bob Cunningham, Warren Shepard, and J. R. Miller.

Top YAC Players Receive Trophies

Under expert coaching from Sp4 James Pearson, the team of 8 and 9 year-olds coasted to a record of 13 wins and no losses during the season.

A few minutes later at Green Field, trophies were presented to members of Team No. 4 of the Ten League. Their record was almost as sparkling. Their coach, SFC Charles Hickerson, led them to a 13 and 1 worloss record.

As part of the YAC Carnival activities, both leagues staged All-Star games with each team being represented. All-Star players were presented certificates.

BIG WINNER

The 24th Infantry Division in Europe is the first Army unit ever to win four consecutive sports championships in the area. They won football, bowling, basketball and boxing during the '62-'63 season.

Pugilism Card Slated Tonight

At 7:30 p.m. the smoker gets into the swing with 12 bouts slated. Each test will be three rounds long with each round lasting two minutes.

The fights, which will be held on the tennis courts behind Headquarters and Supply Company in the battalion area, are, according to airborne training officials, designed to raise the morale of the trainees.

But, they also stressed that everyone interested in watching good boxing may attend at no cost.

Better Bowling

NUDGE IT . . . When the pins in a two-pin leave stand close together, the leave is called a "baby split." Such is the case with the familiar leave of the three and 10-pin. To convert this leave, the ball must be delivered from the left-hand corner of the alley toward the right side of the three pin. The ball deflects just enough from the three-pin to nudge over the 10-pin.

The 'Sport for People,' Bowling; And It's Many Do's and Don'ts

Bowling has been described as a sport "for the people."

It takes no physical attributes not possessed by the majority of American citizens; thus, bowling has become one of the most popular leisure activities in America.

Almost anyone can learn to bowl well. Certain tips can help a bowler improve his game. Those uninitiated into the intricacies of the sport often wonder how so many persons bowl so well. How do they do it?

For Beginning Keglers

1. DO put the ball in motion, outward and downward, as soon as you take your first step.

2. DON'T rush the foul line. A brisk shuffle will keep the ball in a smooth are.

3. DO keep your eyes directly on your target at all times during the delivery.

4. DON'T loft or bounce the ball onto the lane. Both your game and the lane will suffer.

5. DO keep your shoulders parellel to the foul line during your entire delivery.

6. DON'T try to throw a big hook or a speed-ball. The best bowlers will tell you that control is the most important ingredient for high scores.

7. DO work on your spare shots. You may bowl as high as a 190 game without a strike by sparing in every frame.

8. DO practice, practice, practice!

For Intermediate Bowlers

Most of the nation's top bowlers use the four-step approach. Experience has proven that it is best for bringing about a free, natural, easy delivery, the aim of the good bowler. Here it is, step by step:

3. THIRD STEP. At the start of the third step, accelerate speed SMOOTHLY and bend the body in preparation for your slide and the release of ball. The ball is now moving naturally, of its own momentum, to the top of the backswing. It never should go higher in backswing than shoulder height. Keep your wrist firm at all times.

4. FOURTH STEP AND SLIDE. At the start of the fourth step the right foot pushes you forward and then leaves the floor to provide balance. Bending the left knee, slide forward on the ball of your left foot as the ball begins its natural forward motion. Timing is all important. Stop your slide at the precise moment you release the ball.

5. FOLLOW-THROUGH. This is vitally important. It is at this point that many bowlers ruin an otherwise good delivery, according to AMF. If you swing naturally in releasing the ball on target, your fingers will give a natural "lift" to the ball. Continue the follow-through until your arm reaches eye level or higher.

For Advanced Keglers

Champion bowler Frank Clause, author of "How To Win At Bowling," offers these tips for advanced bowlers who have scoring problems.

1. TEN-PIN LEAVES. When the ten-pin remains on what seems to be a good pocket hit, the fault generally lies with the bowler. Experts in the sport feel the reason for it is that the ball doesn't have enough rolling action when it strikes the 1-3 pocket, or the ball may be traveling at too great a speed when it hits the pins. If you are bothered by ten-pin leaves, try giving the ball more roll, less spin, and less speed.

2. POCKET SPLITS. Many bowlers are bothered by troublesome splits that occur on what should be 1-3 pocket hits. If this happens to you, it is an indication that the ball is "quitting" — failing to finish in the proper rolling fashion. Usually this is caused by the thumb coming out of the ball too late. As a result, the ball is given inadequate finger-lift. To overcome this failure, shift the position of your thumb in the ball—bring it up to at least nine o'clock.

3. SPARE SHOOTING. Many of the more advanced bowlers stand to the left of the approach area when attempting to convert pins remaining on the left side of the lane. This is done to diminish the possibility of "chopping" — but its definitely not recommended to newcomers. The left side of the lane can be troublesome unless you have a precise understanding of just how the ball is going to react.

LT. COL. ROBERTS

Lt. Col. John Kerr Roberts Jr., a 1940 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, has recently been appointed deputy commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Col. Roberts came to this assignment from Korea where he was with Eighth Army Headquarters in Seoul.

Col. Roberts entered the Army in December, 1932 and received an appointment to West Point four years later. He graduated from West Point in 1940 and came to Fort Benning to attend Basic Infantry Officer Course.

Col. Roberts was assigned to the 65th Infantry Division during World War II. In 1943, he returned to Fort Benning to attend the Advanced Infantry Officers' Orientation Course. He then went to Fort Leavenworth to Command and Staff College in 1944.

After the Korean War, Col. Roberts served with The Infantry School here as chairman of the Training Committee. In 1955 he was assigned to the Operations Committee with TIS.

With the completion of his tour here, Col. Roberts was assigned with the Arctic Test Board at Fort Greely, Alaska as operations officer. In 1958 he returned to United States as an ROTC instructor at North Carolina where he remained until 1962.

Col. Roberts' decorations include the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantry Badge, World War II Victory Medal, American Defense Medal and Korean Service Medal.

Col. Roberts is married to the former Florence Streich of Raleigh, N. C.

More Money Spent On Candy Than Teeth

By Capt. Robert Cress

I am certain that no one reading this article today has failed to hear a statement relating dental decay to eating of sweets.

Dentists are in agreement on the necessity of reducing sugar in the diet, since no useful benefit can come from sugar which other, more nutritious foods don't supply.

Yet, what do I find published in a national dental magazine? The consumption of candy reached an all-time high in 1962, with an average of 17.2 pounds per person in the United States.

But even more astonishing to me, was the fact that people spent more than 100 million dollars more for candy than for dental work. And the money spent for denistry only filled 140,000,000 cavities, and left 800,000,000.

Why do people continue to spend money on something which they know will cause trouble? This is difficult to understand, as certainly no one walks around begging for new decay.

Perhaps the point is not clear - Sugar helps cause dental decay. How can you prevent dental decay? Cut out the sugars, brush your teeth after each meal, and take advantage of fluorides.

I won't back down on this statement, and I'm certain my children will not receive even one-half the candy of the national average.

Why give candy to children? First, don't ever offer it for being good. This teaches them to associate candy and sweets as being good, giving them absolutely the wrong idea. Second, give them candy only with meals and while still at the table. Third, cut down the amount.

Let's reverse the trend, and spend all the money for dental care in repairing the 800,000,000 cavities, and not in producing millions more. You eventually pay with your teeth.

West Point To Receive New Bowl

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AFPS) —The Richard King Mellon Trusts of Pittsburgh have given the United States Military Academy $200,000 for an outdoor amphitheater. The announcement was made by academy superintendent, Maj. Gen. W. C. Westmoreland.

General Westmoreland said the theater would be built on Trophy Point in a natural hollow below the West Point Plain. It will be used for cadet summer chapel services, band and glee club concerts, outdoor symphony concerts and other performing arts.

The money has been credited to the West Point Superintendents Fund, a special account established in 1961 in the West Point Alumni Foundation.

AT THE Movies

A TICKLISH AFFAIR, starring Shirley Jones, Gig Young, Red Buttons and Carolyn Jones, is a comedy drama in color. The hilarious story of pretty yound widow who thought she had to answer a cynical bachelor who thought he did . . . and the crazy orbit of the space age that changer her "single" track mind.

MADAME is a comic adventure that stars Sophia Loren and Robert Hossein. From prison camp to palace, from battlefield to boudoir, from maid to madame; this is the story of the "devil-may-care" charmer who caused an uproar wherever she went.

CROOKS ANONYMOUS tells the story of a zany band of reformed crooks who battle temptation in the form of fresh new greenbacks. It stars Wilfrid Hyde White, James Robertson and Julie Christie.

WHO WAS THAT LADY is a comedy that stars Tony Curtis, Dean Martin and Janet Leigh. The fantastic story, hatched by his friend to get him off the hook, when his wife catches him kissing one of the students in his chemistry class, brings about the capture of enemy agents and restores him once again into her good graces.

Sky Soldier Is Musician 'After Duty'

A lab technician with Company A, 11th Medical Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Support Command, Sp5 Richard J. S. Tokar, is, in his spare time, following in father's footsteps as a musician.

After joining the Army in October, 1960, "Young Tucker," as he prefers to be called, played with dance and combo bands throughout the Southwest while he was assigned at Fort Sill, Okla.

Later he formed his own orchestra and made several recordings as a singer.

He was assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division in February when the division was first activated and has since been interested in getting a dance or combo group started.

"Young Tucker" is an accomplished musician, playing the sax, drums and piano.

Board Blames Piping For A-Sub Disaster

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A naval court of inquiry, convened the day after the submarine USS Thresher was lost off the coast of Cape Cod, has for the past two months been trying to find the cause of the worst submarine disaster in the Navy's history. After recording 1,700 pages of testimony from 120 witnesses, the court believes it has the answer.

Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth announced that the tragedy was most likely caused by a piping system failure in one of the sail-water systems, "probably in the engine rooms."

The systems used sea water for balance, ballast and for flushing sanitation facilities. Testimony showed that enormous water pressure had probably caused flooding, knocked out electrical circuits and caused loss of power. "Within moments USS Thresher had exceeded her collapse depth and totally flooded."

The court reported there was no evidence of sabotage or hostile action in connection with the loss of the submarine. In addition, the court found that there was no indication of increased radioactivity in the search area.

Secretary Korth said that some rescheduling of construction and overhaul intervals on submarines will be made, although we have found nothing to cast doubt on the basic soundness of the program."

Continuing, Secretary Korth said, "The tragic loss of Thresher has caused the Navy to review in minute detail the design, construction, operation and overhaul of our nuclear submarines. We have found nothing to cast doubt on the basic soundness of the program but, in every analysis of a major catastrophe at sea, lessons are learned.

"The Record of Proceedings of the Court of Inquiry headed by Vice Adm. Austin is receiving most careful and detailed scrutiny. It will undoubtedly serve to lessen the hazards inherent in operating beneath the sea."

The Navy presently plans to build 22 more ships of the same class as the USS Thresher.

COL. MONTGOMERY

MTU Chief Is Assigned To Europe

Col. Robin Montgomery, who has been commanding officer of the Marksmanship Training Unit (MTU) since May, 1959, has been reassigned to Europe and will depart for his new duty station in July.

Col. Joseph Peot will assume command of the unit in July. Carlisle Barracks, Pa. where he was with the Institute of Advanced Studies. He visited MTU in May and was briefed by all OICs and Section Chiefs on the mission and functions of the unit and its shooting program for the remainder of the year.

The MTU under Col. Montgomery has enjoyed unparralled success in national and international shooting competition.

On the national scene Army shooters have won every major rifle and pistol individual and team trophy available.

Perhaps the greatest progress made by MTU during the past four years has been in the field of international shooting.

This newest of the unit's three major divisions has soundly established itself in matches with the top rifle and pistol competitors from the Americas and Europe.

The unit has undergone many changes in organization, mission and functions, under Col. Montgomery, and today on the eve o fhis departure, it has an outstanding reputation with domestic shooting set.

Review Honors 197th Infantry's MSgt. Walker

Lt. Col. Boyd Assumes Post With School

Lt. Col. William E. Boyd has been assigned to The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department as chairman of the Basic Airborne Training Camp.

Col. Boyd replaces Lt. Col. Victor K. Harwood, who has been assigned to Germany.

A graduate of the University of Arizona, Col. Boyd entered the Army at Camp Blanding, Fla., Nov. 25, 1941, and was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduating from the Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning Aug. 19, 1942.

He served with Headquarters, VIII Corps, in England, Normandy and northern France from December, 1943, to September, 1944, and with the 506th Parachute Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division in Holland, the Ardennes and Central Europe from October, 1944, to June, 1945.

Col. Boyd was with the 223rd Infantry, 40th Division, from July, 1952, to August, 1953.

Besides Officer Candidate School, Col. Boyd is a graduate of the advanced Infantry officers course, Fort Benning; Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; nuclear weapons employment officers course and senior officers nuclear weapons course, both at Fort Leavenworth.

He is the recipient of the Bronze Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal, Combat Infantryman Badge with Star, Senior Parachutist Badge, and French Fourragere.

Col. and Mrs. Boyd, who are residing at 210 Miller Loop, Fort Benning, have three children, William John, 6, Katherine Evelyn, 5, and Mary Laura, 3.

Col. Foxworth Is Reassigned

Col. Edward M. Foxworth Quartermaster Corps, The Infantry Center, has been reassigned as chief of the newly formed Services Section here.

The new service unit, composed of the Purchasing and Contracting, Quartermaster, Signal and Transportation Sections of The Infantry Center, became effective last Monday.

SEARCHLIGHT TURNS NIGHT INTO DAY
800 Million Candlepower Is Produced

Army's Only Searchlight Unit Is Stationed Here

"Flick, Hold, Cut."

These are the words likely to be heard as searchlight crewmen of Battery B, 29th Artillery (Searchlight) go through their drill.

Most people associate howitzers and missiles with the Artillery but few realize that searchlights are also organic to the Artillery. The mission of a searchlight unit is battlefield illumination in general or direct support or any combination thereof.

Since Battery B, commanded by 1st Lt. Bobby J. Sherwood, was assigned here in 1958 their mission has been to render direct support of The Infantry School during night training problems.

The 60-inch searchlight commands 800 million candlepower by passing a current through two carbon electrodes, negative and positive before a highly polished rhodium, concave reflected mirror. The effective range of this searchlight is 18,000 meters at a pin point beam.

Using the direct lighting an object or area can be illuminated comparable to a sunny day; however, direct lighting is not the most desired light because it is too easy to locate and destroy. Plus the fact that this light will cause temporary blindess to troops or an observer with the beam set range of 10,000 meters.

In comparison to the direct lighting technique, the indirect or refracted lighting is for the most part safer and will cover a larger ground area than the direct beam. In this method the light beam is directed and rebounded off of the clouds. This procedure is at its's maximum effectiveness when a high overcast is prevailing.

The width of the 60-inch beam can be adjusted as desired within a range from 22 mils at pin point beam, to 265 mils at the spread beam.

Unlike the searchlights of the circus, fair or grand openings, the Army lights are laid for direction by an aiming circle, just as the conventional Artillery.

Battery B is presently composed of three platoons and each contains six searchlights. Each of the platoons average three night problems during an average week.

9 Complete Instruction For Mojave

Nine pilots from the 188th Transportation Helicopter Company, 10th Air Transport Brigade, completed transition training in the CH-37 Mojave helicopter, the 11th Air Assault Division's largest cargo carrier now in general use.

The transition training involved a minimum of 450 flying hours and 25 maintenance hours for each hour of flight.

The pilots who completed the special course were: Capt. Keith L. Grooms, Capt. Robert J. Kuhn, Capt. Robert A. Price, Capt. David C. Senay, 1st Lt. Walter L. Hall, 1st Lt. Thomas R. Hamilton, 1st Lt. Lewis R. Jones Jr., CWO Joseph M. Mikel and CWO Waldo B. Tomlinson.

Each pilot is now qualified to fly several types of cargo helicopters that the 11th Air Assault Division uses in its air mobile operations. The pilot instructors for the course were: Capt. Donald M. Vosel, CWO Leonard P. Heath, CWO Sidney H. Levine and CWO Curtis A. McVey.

The course also included night landings and instruction in carrying external and internal loads. Special landings were also made at night in confined areas.

Maximum performance tests were made when the CH-37 had to clear a heavy dense area in the shortest possibly time while fully loaded.

Experimental Dinner Is Tested By 11th Air Assault Division Staff

The division commander and staff officers of the 11th Air Assault Division, which has been organized to test a new concept in air mobility, were the subjects of a test recently when they were served an experimental meal under development by the Armed Forces Food and Container Institute of Chicago, Ill.

Prepared as Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard and his staff officers looked on, the meal, Quick-Serve, 25-man, as it is officially called, was ready to eat in about 20 minutes.

On hand to prepare the meal were Lt. Mike Wilkinson of the Armed Forces Food and Container Institute, a field element of the new Army Materiel Command, and CWO Thomas E. Jones of the 10th Air Transport Brigade, who is acting Division food adviser. Lt. Wilkinson also gave a brief orientation concerning this meal and other rations currently under development.

The meal, Quick-Serve, consists of non-perishable components assembled in 6 and 25-man modules. The meal can be prepared simply by adding hot or cold water as appropriate, mixing, and holding for not more than 20 minutes.

It requires no separate or non-expandable equipment for its preparation, serving, and heating except for a water heating device. All foods are reconstituted in their respective packages. Plates, cups, spoons, knives and serving utensils are furnished in the container.

Lightweight aluminum liners in the shipping container give insect and other protection and also provide receptacles for heating water. The 25-man module such as was used here weighs an average of 36.8 pounds and occupies slightly less than two cubic feet of space.

The meal will be used to feed dispersed groups in combat areas where organized kitchen equipment cannot be provided. The meal requires no previous training in order to prepare and any soldier in the field can quickly master the simple procedures needed to cook this meal. To further adapt the preparation of the food to the environment of the combat soldier, all water amounts are measured in terms of the canteen cup which the soldier carries with him at all times.

According to Lt. Wilkinson, these meals, of which there are 21 different menus, are scheduled for gradual integration into the Army supply system starting in FY 1964. The meal served here consisted of chicken chunks, gravy, mashed potatoes, green peas, bread and a butter substitute, fruit cake, a cold cola beverage, and coffee with cream and sugar.

An individualized accessory package provided after-dinner cigarettes, chewing gum, and various condiments.

MAH Holds Graduation

Guest speaker at the commencement exercise was Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Philip E. Gallagher.

Gen. Gallagher emphasized the fact that the young doctors and dentists are also officers.

"You have been trained in the 'nth' degree here at the hospital," he said, "but it is not enough to be a good doctor. You must be a good officer."

"Unless all Americans are cognizant of our responsibility to our country we are lost," he warned. "Each must remain fully qualified in his own field. This means that you must continually work at keeping up to date technically and professionally. The final test, however, is what you are."

Medical interns graduating included Capt. Dee D. Atkinson, Capt. Thomas L. Cook and Capt. Ernest C. Deeds.

Capt. Frank B. Gray, Capt. Larry W. Goetz, Capt. Leland F. Haney, Capt. Lynn E. Hickman, Capt. Francis L. Hulse and Capt. Louis L. Leatherman.

Dental interns included Capt. Jerry L. Cremer, Air Force Capt. Billy R. Kennemer, Capt. George T. Graham, and Capt. James E. Kennedy.

Col. Rogers Is Assigned To TIS Post

Lt. Col. Dixon C. Rogers and Capt. Arthur M. Harris, recent graduates of Command and General Staff College and the Artillery Officers Career Course, respectively, have been assigned to the Attack Committee, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department of The Infantry School.

A 1944 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, Lt. Col. Rogers served with the 42d Infantry Division in Europe during World War II and with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea in 1950. His decorations and awards include the Silver Star, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Army Commendation Medal, Purple Heart, and Combat Infantryman's Badge with star.

In 1962, he completed a three year tour in Germany with the 3rd Infantry Division. An Infantry officer, Capt. Harris was selected to attend the artillery career course at Fort Sill.

Capt. Stauffer, Capt. Wingard Take New Posts

A dual change of command for the 39th Transportation Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command, was seen Monday during retreat ceremonies when two new company commanders received guidons of their respective companies.

Capt. Lawrence W. Stauffer, who succeeds Capt. Henry W. McDonald who is going to Korea, takes over duties as commanding officer of the 666th Transportation Company. Capt. Stauffer served previously as adjutant of the 39th.

Capt. Flen Wingard was next to receive the guidon, this time it belonged to the 505th Transportation Company. Capt. Wingard succeeds Capt. Cyrus Williams who has assumed duties as the S-3 (Operations) officer for the Battalion.

The new company commanders received their guidons from Lt. Col. Harry F. Boyle, commander of the 39th.

Capehart Quarters Are Opened

Eighteen units of the Capehart housing quarters for enlisted personnel were officially opened recently with ribbon cutting ceremonies by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, at the residence of Sgt. Maj. Lory Bell, 105 Lavoie Ave.

The Bells have three other children, Linda,, 15, Mike, 14, and Chuck, 12.

1st Sgt. Lusk (L), Capt. McCluney Hold Trophy

29th Infantry Unit 'Tops' at Carnival

The Commanding General's Trophy for the outstanding unit, an annual presentation at the Fourth of July Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival, was won this year by Battery C, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Second place in the individual awards went to Sp5 James E. McQuinn, Company A, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, and third place to OC John E. Dyer III, also of the 52nd Company.

The winners were determined on the basis of performance in competitive events held during the morning of the carnival.

197th Infantry To Welcome CO

Col. Robert M. Williams, who is succeeding Col. Richard W. Keyes as 197th Infantry Brigade commander, will assume command during ceremonies tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. at the Brigade parade field.

The public is cordially invited to attend the ceremony and remain for refreshments and open house activities at Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Col. Keyes is leaving the Brigade for assignment to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations in Strategic Plans and Policy, the Pentagon, Washington, D. C.

Col. Williams, who received his commission through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps in 1938 from Texas A & M University where he was graduated with a bachelor of science degree in petroleum engineering, comes to The Infantry Center from Spain where he was chief of the Army Element of the Military Assistance Advisory Group.

Col. Williams' initial assignment upon entering the Army was to the 26th Infantry Regiment at Fort Warren, Wyo. He received a regular Army commission in July, 1939 and remained with the 20th Infantry Regiment as a platoon leader until July 1940.

In August, 1940, he was assigned to the 5th Infantry Regiment, Panama Canal Zone and served as a platoon leader and company commander until May, 1942.

Infantry Instructor's Conference Is Scheduled July15-19 by TIS

The world's largest Army educational institution, The Infantry School, will host more than 80 U. S. and foreign military officers for the biennial Infantry Instructor's Conference Monday through Friday.

The objective of the conference is to bring Infantry instructors at other service schools up to date on Infantry tactics, doctrines and techniques.

The conferees will include officers from all U. S. Armed Services, including Brig. Gen. Ward S. Ryan of the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., as senior officer.

Also among the conferees will be Lt. Col. Paul Aussaresses, French liaison officer to The Infantry School; Lt. Col. John E. Dent, British liaison officer; Maj. Colin G. Forest, Canadian Liaison officer, and Majors E. B. Peters and A. V. Robbins representing the Royal Canadian School of Infantry, Camp Borden, Ontario, Canada.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commandant of The Infantry School, will kick-off the conference with a welcoming address at Pratt Hall.

First Class

The School's Communications and Electronics Department will present the first class covering the Infantry battalion and brigade communications and electronics systems, including an orientation on new items of communications equipment.

The Weapons Department will take over next, covering the recent changes in the marksmanship program to include basic, alternate, and proficiency marksmanship courses; the use of the .22 caliber rifle in these programs; facilities required, and status of training literature on basic marksmanship training.

The quick fire instinct shooting training program will be reviewed covering the results of tests on quick fire instinct shooting and its effect on future marksmanship training programs.

An orientation on the automatic rifle is next on the agenda, showing the capabilities and limitations of three automatic weapons in the engagement of both point and linear targets.

Antitank

Antitank weapons, mines and the Davey Crockett are the next subjects to be gone over by the department. The subjects will be lectured on and a live fire demonstration will include the 90-millimeter recoilless rifle, the ENTAC and the Davey Crockett surface to surface missile.

A full display of all weapons in the Infantry's inventory will cap the Weapons Department phase of the conference.

The Airborne-Air Mobility Department takes over next, orienting the conferees on the basic and advanced courses with demonstrations and a lecture on the mission, history, organization and capabilities of Army pathfinders. The prerequisites and content of the pathfinder course and a static display of pathfinder equipment will bring the airborne portion to an end.

The Mobility Department is spotlighted next, covering characteristics, capabilities and limitations of newer tactical vehicles, recent aspects of vehicular maintenance and commander's inspections of ground tactical vehicles.

Demonstration

A lecture and demonstration on Ranger training including a brief history of the American Ranger follows the Mobility Departments phase.

Army physical fitness will also be covered by the Ranger Department including every aspect.

The Brigade and Battalion Operations Department will cover the Battalion in attack, the Infantry brigade in counterguerilla operations, the mechanized Infantry battalion task force in area defense, the airmobile operations of an Infantry brigade and the logistical support for Infantry and mechanized Infantry, Battalion and Brigade.

DNRI Conference

The Department of Non-resident Instruction will present a conference outlining the mission, organization and major responsibilities of the department.

The Army Infantry Human Research Unit (HumRRO) will present a lecture on HumRRO research and development ac-

TIS Airborne Record Set In FY '63

The Airborne - Air Mobility Department of The Infantry School graduated 20,112 paratroopers during the 1963 fiscal year, the highest number in any one year since World War II.

The 1963 figure marked the fourth highest in a single year's total in the 23 - year history of the Airborne School, ranking below 1945 (30,310), 1944 (27,220) and 1943 (24,578).

The 1963 number, which represents 82.2 per cent of the 24,468 who entered training, brought the total number of paratrooper graduates to 235,414 since airborne training was begun here in 1941, when only 255 graduated.

The average class strength during 1963 was 521. The total input of students does not include 1,544 students currently enrolled in airborne classes, 43, 43A and 43B, all slated for graduation in fiscal year 1964.

The department was scheduled by Continental Army Command (CONARC), Fort Monroe, Va., to conduct 43 regular classes and four special Reserve classes during the year.

The department conducted 50 regular classes, four special Reserve classes (two-week course), two general grade classes, two special field grade classes (four hours per day for five weeks), one special CONARC class (seven days duration), and also trained 109 cadets from the U. S. Military Academy and the Air Force Academy.

tivities. Emphasis is placed on research products which should be of interest and use to Infantry instructors.

The Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency will explain its mission, functions and organization to the conferees.

The Army Infantry board will present a static display of standardized Infantry weapons and equipment.

A briefing to familiarize the attendees with background events which led to the air mobile project will be held. It will summarize the 11th Air Assault Division and the 10th Air Transport Brigade, their mission and organization.

Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of the School will monitor a question period by the conferees as the closing class.

Carnival

Individual awards were presented by John Nilan, commander of the Military Order of World Wars which gave the plaques.

The carnival grossed $24,000, the largest amount in its history. After the carnival is subtracted, the balance will be used to finance youth activities on the post in 1964.

Some game booths, rides and concessions were set up on Eubanks Field. Highlighting the activities which began at 11 a.m. were the buddy seat ride, a simulated parachute jump from a 250-foot airborne training tower, and the junior jump towers.

Following the activities at Eubanks Field, the sky-diving club presented an exhibition of free falling at Glen Field. Jumping from altitudes of from 5,000 to 7,000 feet, the men fell to 2,300 feet before opening their parachutes.

The day's activities were climaxed at Gordon Field when the sky was illuminated by a spectacular display of fireworks which lasted almost an hour.

CO

The 100th Infantry Regiment was his next duty assignment where he served as headquarters commandant, battalion commander and regimental commander.

During World War II, Col. Williams participated in the Rhineland, Central Europe, and Ardennes-Alsace campaigns. Among his awards and decorations are the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with two oak leaf clusters, Army Commendation Medal, Meritorious Unit Emblem, Combat Infantry Badge, American Defense Service Medal, World War II Victory Medal, Army Occupational Medal (Germany), National Defense Service Medal and the French Croix de Guerre with Palm.

He is a graduate of the Army War College, the Armed Forces Staff College, the Command and General Staff College, the Spanish Army War College and the Canadian Army Infantry School.

Troops participating in the ceremony will be organized into five battalions consisting of 197th Infantry Brigade troops; 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry; 1st Battalion (Mech), 58th Infantry; 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, and 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery.

The reviewing officer for the ceremony will be Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

EM In Vietnam To Be Promoted Without Quotas

WASHINGTON (AFPS — Army enlisted men assigned to the Republic of Vietnam may be promoted to grades E-4, E-5, and E-6 without regard to monthly- enlisted promotion quotas distributed by Department of the Army.

This new promotion policy was announced July 1, its effective date. The announcement said that all other provisions of Army Regulations governing enlisted promotions will remain in effect.

The change will not result in any wholesale promotion in Vietnam since the individual being promoted must be fully qualified for the assignment he is being promoted to fill, and he must occupy a position vacancy calling for a higher grade than the one in which he is serving.

A further restriction limits an individual to not more than one promotion during a 12-month period — the normal tour in Vietnam.

Lt. Col. Baker Named New TSB Exec

Lt. Col. Claude W. Baker recently assumed the duties of executive officer for The Student Brigade.

Col. Baker entered the Army in October 1940, and graduated from Officer Candidate School in October, 1942.

He went to Europe in July, 1944, with the 90th Infantry, 9th Division, where he became company commander of the Heavy Weapons Company, 1st Battalion, 376th.

In February, 1949, he became commanding officer of the 51st Quartermaster Company, 51st Quartermaster Base Depot, Hawaii. In July, 1949, he was assigned as company commander, Company D, 5th Infantry Regiment.

Col. Baker took the Associate Infantry Officer Career Course here and graduated in February, 1952.

He was assigned to the 8th Infantry Regiment in Europe in July, 1955, as a battalion commander, 2nd Battalion, and later as the regimental executive officer.

In August, 1956, he graduated from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

He became director of instruction at the Army Cold Weather School at Fort Greely, Alaska, in May, 1959. In May, 1961, he became commandant of the School.

Col. Baker holds the Silver Star Medal, the Bronze Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Army Commendation Ribbon with Medal Pendant, the Purple Heart, the Korean Service Medal; with five Combat Stars, the Armed Forces Reserve Medal, the Army of Occupation Medal, the American Defense Service Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with four Combat Stars, the World War II Victory Medal, the Presidential Unit Citation with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Expert Infantry Badge, and the Combat Infantry Badge with Star.

He now lives with his wife and two of their sons at 306 Austin Loop, on post. Their other son is attending Michigan State University.

U.S. Jumpers Score Sweep In Sky Diving

FORT MONROE, Va. (ANF) — Scoring a clean sweep over eight international rivals, the United States Sports Parachute Team, comprised of members of the U. S. Army Parachute Team, emerged with top laurels in the first European Cup sky diving championships held at Leutkirch, Germany.

The United States totaled 2106.086 points, 54.262 more than its nearest rival, West Germany. Third place Great Britain ended with 2129.214 points. Also vying for laurels were national teams from Spain, Switzerland, Belgium, Ireland and Austria.

Rain, the last two days of the meet, canceled the final event, the 2,000 meter (6,500 feet) individual style contest which requires near - perfect weather conditions for judging purposes.

The team, in capturing the first of three international events in which it is scheduled to participate during a three-month European tour, emerged with a one-two finish in the 1,000 - meter (approximately 3,900 feet) individual accuracy competition and top honors in team accuracy from 1,500 meters (approximately 4,875 feet).

The Army jumpers are scheduled to return to Sembach Air Force Base, Sembach, Germany, to continue training for appearances at Spa, Belgium, August 5-11 and in the unofficial world championships in Yugoslavia, August 24-31.

Missilemen To Train Israelis

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Israeli military men will start training in the United States, during July, in the use of the Army's Hawk air defense missile.

Although built to knock down low-flying airplanes, the Hawk has shown it can intercept battlefield missiles like the Honest John, according to the Army.

Early in June, the Army set in motion a project to improve the Hawk's ability to engage tactical ballistic missiles; the type that might be encountered by a field army.

The Army said 114 Israeli military men will be taught in this country to use and maintain the Hawk system.

A group of 35 Israelis will go to the Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., during July for ordnance instruction in connection with operation of the Hawk.

Another 72 Israelis will report to Fort Bliss, Tex., in August to begin drills in firing the missile.

Sometime next year, seven Israeli technicians will undertake a course at Fort Belvoir, Va.

NASA Intern System Aids Get New Men

HOUSTON, Tex. (AFPS) — NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center here has developed two programs to recruit talented personnel for its mission of sending men to the moon.

Thirty-seven top-ranking college students and recent graduates have already started work in these programs.

Twenty - seven comprise the first Aerospace Summer Intern Program. The Summer Interns were selected from undergraduates who have completed their junior year and from graduate students planning to return to school for graduate work.

The remaining ten graduates make up the second program, the Management Intern Program. They are all graduates in business administration fields and eight have done graduate work.

Their administrative apprenticeship lasts one year while the summer program is for a 75-day period of employment.

The programs are designed to help MSC in recruiting exceptional graduates and to improve communications between colleges and NASA.

President Visits Berlin During Airlift Birthday

NEW YORK (AFPS)—President Kennedy's visit to West Berlin on June 26 coincided with the 15th anniversary of the Berlin airlift, which broke Soviet blockade of the city.

During the airlift that started June 26, 1948, and lasted until May 12, 1949, United States and British aircraft flew nearly 2,500,000 tons of food, coal and medical supplies to Berlin.

Ceremony Is Held To Greet Col. Short

Col. Walter D. Short became commander of The Student Brigade at appropriate ceremonies recently at Eubanks Field replacing Col. Otto R. Koch Jr.

Col. Koch, who commanded the Brigade since January, 1961, has been assigned duties in Turkey as deputy chief of the Army element there.

In brief remarks at the ceremonies, Col. Short said, through the officers, non-commissioned officers and other soldiers of the brigade, the unit will "do the utmost to continue to accomplish in an outstanding manner "the mission of the brigade on commanding, administering, supporting and getting specified training to the students.

Col. Short, a 1942 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., was born in Oklahoma City, Okla., July 11, 1920, and was reared at numerous Army posts throughout the country, being the son of a distinguished Army officer, Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short.

He graduated from Cleveland High School in St. Louis in 1938 and attended Johns Hopkins University until July, 1938, when he entered the U. S. Military Academy.

He has had a wide variety of combat and peacetime assignments, including command of Infantry companies and battalions, duty as a member of the Allied Secretariat in Berlin, service on the Department of the Army staff, planning staff officer with SHAPE in Paris and duties as an instructor at various Army service schools.

Among his decorations are the Silver Star Medal, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with V Device and two Oak Leaf Clusters, Combat Infantryman Badge, French Croix de Guerre with Silver Star and the Army Commendation Medal.

A graduate of the basic and advanced Infantry officers courses at Fort Benning and Staff College, Col. Short served with the 76th "Lightning" Division in the Ardennes, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns in World War II.

He also served as a battalion commander and later as executive officer of the 5th Regimental Combat Team in the Korean conflict, thereby earning a third Oak Leaf Cluster to the Bronze Star Medal.

Col. and Mrs. Short, who reside at 204 Miller Loop, have three children, Emily 16, Walter D. Short Jr., 14, and Margaret, 12.

Don't Slap! Fleas Cost $1.68 Per

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Military personnel world-over are being alerted to a new "off" and sometimes "on duty" avocation — the capture, care and protection of fleas.

Miss Testo, who is willing to pay the going rate of $1.68 a dozen for the little varmints, said, "I need all sorts of, fleas that get on human beings," she went on. "They live for months and can be trained for various acts."

For years, a flea circus has flourished at 42nd Street, near Times Square. Here the trained flea dances, pulls a stage coach and moves a gun. At this time there has been no announced shortage of fleas in America.

Thompson Takes Title For MTU

FORT KNOX, Ky. — SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, opened a tight three-way tie here Sunday with a blazing 890 out of a possible 900 score with the .22 caiber pistol to capture the Regional Handgun Championship with a 2,851 total.

He passed SFC William B. Blankenship Jr., a teammate, who came in second with a 2,849 score. Third place went to the MTU's SSgt. Hershel L. Anderson with a 2,846.

The Army Blue team won the .45 caliber team championship with 1,163 points, the center fire title with a 1,174 score and the team aggregate match with a 3,509 score.

Dental Corps — Professional Training Programs is the subject of Department of the Army AR 601-131. The regulations prescribe the Department of the Army programs for the procurement and professional training of career Dental Corps officers. The two programs set forth in the publication are the Senior Dental Student Program and the Dental Intern Program.

Military Training for Physicians and Dentists Registered under the UMT&S Act, as amended is the subject of AR 135-14. The regulations enunciate the current laws and policies of the Department of Defense and Department of Army concerning active duty obligations for physicians and dentists. The regulations also provide a program for fulfillment of the military obligation by those physicians and dentists who are excess to active Army requirements through Reserve participation in lieu of two years of active duty.

Costs of Accidental Injuries to Army Personnel have been revised to reflect changes in monetary costs and days lost. The data contained in Department of the Army Circular 385-5 will constitute the only data of this nature authorized for use in connection with the Army Safety Program, except for internal use within organizations where accurate individual costs can be determined easily.

Army Circular 40-20 Authorizes use of New Measles Vaccine — Dependent children of Army personnel may now receive a newly licensed vaccine for measles. The vaccination may be obtained at Army medical treatment facilities for all children of nine months of age and older, who have not previously had the disease.

Instructions Pertaining to a Special Dependent Evacuation Gratuity for U. S. Army military personnel evacuated per JCS MSG 9776, 6 Nay 1963, or who removed dependents at their own expense from Haiti as a result of the April-May 1963 crisis in that country, are provided in Department of the Army message DA 340685 dated 11 June 1963. The message states that Army sponsors whose dependents were removed from Haiti will obtain NAVCOMPT Form 2023, Claim for Reimbursement of Dependent Travel and-or Dislocation Allowance, cross out the title of the form and substitute the title, Special Haitian Evacuation Gratuity. The amount of the gratuity will be $288.00 for each authorized dependent 11 years of age or over and $144.00 for those under 11 years of age.

The Peace Corps has asked Congress to double its appropriation so it can send twice as many volunteers to Africa and Latin America. Corps Director Sargent Shriver said the foreign demand for Peace Corpsmen "far exceeds our capability to meet it." If Congress grants his request for $108 million Shriver said 13,000 volunteers would be sent abroad by the end of 1964.

During a House Armed Services Committee meeting, Rep. William H. Bates (R-Mass.) announced that he had a question about one of the bills under consideration. Before he could phrase his query, Committee Counsel John R. Blandford interrupted to say he had "anticipated" the question and was prepared to provide the desired information. In that case, Mr. Bates said, "there's no point in my starting it. "Good," said Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.). Just "put the answer in the record," he told Mr. Blandford. As the laughter trickled away, Mr. Bates commented that he would like the record to show that he, also, had "anticipated" the answer.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) chairman of the Senate Armed Forces Committee predicted that the Senate would complete action on the military pay bill — affecting nearly two million persons on active duty and in other uniformed federal services — before the civil rights bill comes up for action.

The Children's Bureau of the Welfare Department said a complete revision of "Infant Care" is just off the presses. A 108-page booklet, it sells for 20 cents. The first version was printed in 1914 and 48 million copies of the publication — now in its 11th edition — have been distributed. It is the governments best-selling publication.

Beat the Litter-Bug, Keep America Clean

The citizenry of America is organizing an all-out elimination of a two-footed, two-armed, two-eyed, too careless bug known as the litter bug.

To the military man or woman the fight against the litter-bug isn't new. From basic training and "boot" camp to the decks of proud and mighty aircraft carriers, clean-up and pick-up details are regular duty. The war against the litter-bug in some military establishments usually costs a littering officer or enlisted man much mental pain and anguish despite the fact that military littering in most cases is accidental. It doesn't pay the serviceman or woman to be forgetful.

The United States Department of Commerce is cooperating with the National Conference to Keep America Beautiful; to preserve and improve America's scenic and man-made beauty through a continuing program of public education; and to instill in every citizen a feeling of pride and responsibility for the appearance of his country.

The military man knows the value of cleanliness and, knowing that the United States is very much his country, also adopts the anti-littering slogan; in fact takes the next step and is "KEEPING AMERICA FREE AND CLEAN." (AFPS)

Road Testing Your Faith

By Chaplain (Capt.) John E. Green

The best evidence of your faith is the way it stands up under stress.

We do not like to buy an automobile untested. We normally accept the testing made by the experts who make this their business. Our faith will be tested. The question is whether it can stand the test. Lets "Road Test our Faith".

The first "road test" of our faith is power. Is there adequate power to overcome problems; climb over the mountains of doubt and guilt? The real source of power is faith in God. He alone can give the strength and guidance necessary for a successful life. If your life has lost its "people, it is possible you need a "tune up". This will come as a direct result of our willingness to follow God.

The second "road test" of our faith is Practicability. Faith that is not put in practice is lost faith. We operate an automobile because it is the most practical means of transportation. We want all the equipment to work and with practical efficiency. Our lives can daily benefit from the practice of a living faith.

The third "road test" of our faith is external appearance. We want a "good looking" auto for our personal pride. How much time do we spend making our faith attractive to others? The effect our faith has on others will be determined largely by what others see. It is not a matter of external polish, but a genuine outworking of an inner faith. The Bible says, "Let your light so shine, that others may see your works, and glorify God."

There are two reasons for approaching the subject of personal faith. The first, to examine the condition of our present faith. The yardstick used may seem strange, but the purpose was to cause each reader to examine his own faith in God. I recommend weekly worship in a Chapel or Church of your choice.

We can find many ways of improving our inner life by quiet meditation on things eternal. No man can stand in the presence of the Almighty and go away unchanged. We need a sincere, intelligent faith to guide us through the wonderful experience of life.

The second purpose of this article is to show the need for an active faith. Theories and ideals must be put in practice. These must "work" in our lives to produce better men. The world follows a man who knows where he is going, how to get there, and what he will do on arrival. Our lives will not be wasted if we live them in faith.

"Road Test" your faith! Will it make the journey of life? I wish you a safe, happy, and prosperous journey in your life of faith.

Scholarship Plan Opened

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Cyrus R. Vance, Secretary of the Army, has approved plans to establish an Army Welfare Dependent Education Program that would provide scholarships and student loans for minor dependents of Army personnel.

The program will be supported entirely by nonappropriated funds and joins existing Army programs of morale, recreation, and welfare activities from which all Army personnel and their dependents benefit.

It will be administered by the National Merit Scholarship Corporaton (NMSC) and will provide, initially, for 40 scholarships and 40 student loans each year.

Both loans and scholarships are for a four-year college education and are expected to average about $1,000 per year.

The loans will be repayable in eight years beginning a year after graduation and will carry no interest.

Eligibility for the program will be based on two qualifying tests, the first of which will be given to second semester high school juniors.

Semi-finalists chosen by the first test will be given a second test early in their senior year of high school to determine final eligibility.

It is expected that the program can be implemented in time for the Fall college term of 1964.

Small Arms Firing School Offers Thousands Marksmanship Classes

Borne by explorers in etching our land and carried by soldiers at Lexington, Ardennes, Iwo Jima and Pork Chop Hill, the rifle has continually played a dominant role in preserving our democratic way of life.

Of no other country can it be said that the pioneer and soldier, carrying their rifles, played such a dominant part in molding and holding a country of such power and wealth.

Each year this rudimentary skill of our forebears is made available to all Americans by personnel of The Infantry School at Camp Perry, Ohio, during the Small Arms Firing School.

Though this schooling, which has been an integral part of the National Rifle and Pistol Championships at the Lake Erie Camp since 1919, has always been open to any United States citizen over 14 years of age, sessions of the school's earlier years were largely attended by military competitors. Civilian students were definitely in the minority.

This situation has changed in recent years to a point where the civilian attendance number in the hundreds and increases yearly.

Learn to Shoot

From one coast to another, people who've always wanted to learn to shoot have heard the "word" from proud possessors of Small Arms Firing School certificates of completion. They have become aware that they, as citizens, may receive small arms instruction from the world's leading marksmanship teachers at the Camp Perry sessions.

The methods of instruction used by the school's cadre of 33 personnel of the Weapons Department, The Infantry School, in teaching firearms safety, mechanical operation, safeguarding and accurate use, are exactly those School has received acclaim from leading educational authorities the world over.

The majority of guest instructors this year are from the Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning. These men were selected as instructors on the basis of their high degree of skill as marksmen transmit their knowledge to others through marksmanship courses.

The "classrooms" of the school are the green expanses of Camp Perry's ranges on the shores of Lake Erie, some 40 miles east of Toledo. "Desks" are six student tables, each of which is supervised by a top-ranking marksmanship coach acting as assistant instructor.

Crack instructors utilize latest training aids with which they expertly "sell" salient points of training and yet temper the serious vein with humorous anecdotes and skits.

The program of instruction is conducted in two major phases. The Pistol School will open Aug. 2 and continue to Aug. 4 with an expected attendance of 3,000, many of whom will be members of federal and state law enforcement agencies who will receive specialized handgun training. The balance of the class, however, will consist of people from all walks of life intent upon earning coveted pistol certificates.

Instructors

Leading the guest instructors will be CWO-4 Oscar Weinmeister of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit. George Snavely, a distinguished pistol shot, member of the 2,600 club and winner of the .45 caliber slow fire hard ball match at the 1962 National Matches; SFC William A. Blankenship, a distinguished rifle, pistol and international pistol shot and National pistol champion for the past three years.

Also included will be 1st Lt. Gail N. Liberty of the Air Force who will instruct in the women's course. She is an international distinguished pistol shot and the 1962 women's National Champion.

Police course instructors will be headed by Maj. Donald Barger of the Army Military Police School, and will have working with him Inspector William Jordan of the U. S. Border Patrol; Lt. Ray Daugherty of the Los Angeles Police Department, and Sgt. William Crawford of the White House Police.

Go to Work

At the close of the Pistol School, many of the students will put their new knowledge into practice by entering the National Pistol Matches which will follow and then attend the school's rifle phase of instruction Aug. 14 to 17.

Another 3,000 students are expected to participate in the rifle phase. A large percentage of these shoot in the week long series of rifle matches which cap America's competitive marksmanship year.

Contrasted against the snap and precision of the presentations given and the starched khaki and blue-and-white striped helmets of the school's instructors will be the casual civilian air manifested by a student body dressed in everything from cotton house dresses to the summer uniforms of rear admirals.

Guest Instructor

Maj. Kless Gyzen of the MTU will be the chief guest instructor bringing with him such instructors as 1st Lt. Ivan Flowers of the MTU, a distinguished rifle shot, SFC D. B. Teague of the MTU, a distinguished rifle shot, a member of the 250 club and a member of the presidents hundred.

Mrs. Alice H. Bull, National Women's Champion in 1952 and 1953 will instruct the ladies. Dr. Herbert C. Weigand will be the civilian rifle instructor.

Instituted by the National Defense Act of 1916, the Small Arms Firing School is presented by direction of the secretary of the Army and held under the supervision of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice.

Staffed by The Infantry School, the famous course provides the American citizen with the opportunity to receive a type of weapons instruction unequaled anywhere.

Lending Closet

New Arrivals May Borrow Goods

By Marge Lemon

What would a carpenter do without a saw? What would a dentist do without a drill. How can a housewife get along without kitchen equipment?

Frequently, she is forced to do so. It's not too unusual for Army families to arrive at new assignments ahead of their household goods.

Suppose it happened to you. What would you do without such necessities as a frying pan, double boiler, paring knife, dishes, drinking glasses or a coffee pot? At any other post you'd probably dash out to the nearest store and purchase these items; but not so at Fort Benning. Here we have the Lending Closet.

Consider the plight of a young woman who recently moved here. She was about to have her first baby and had already bought several hundred dollars worth of baby furniture and supplies.

Her furniture and household goods, however, had been "misplaced" by the moving company en route to Fort Benning and were temporarily lost for weeks.

The lady was in luck, though. Someone had told her about the Lending Closet.

Created last October by the Women's Club, the Lending Closet is available to any enlisted or officer personnel moving into government quarters on Fort Benning but not having received their household goods.

The Lending Closet furnishes most items for light housekeeping such as dishes, silver, pots and pans, many kitchen utensils and a limited supply of baby furniture. They do not furnish linens, however.

Mrs. Garmon Aure, who heads the Lending Closet, reports that four complete sets of dishes were recently donated by the Women's Club welfare fund, as were most of the other lending articles.

"Before you clear your quarters or do a little summer house cleaning," says Mrs. Aure, "check to see if you have any usable coffee pots, mixing bowls, odd dishes or utensils that you could donate to the Lending Closet. Someone will be very grateful to receive them. . .and it could be you!"

People wishing to donate articles are asked to call Mrs. Aure at LI 5-7130 or Mrs. Dawn Humphries at MU 9-4392.

BACK TO SCHOOL FASHIONS . . . For girls returning to school two new versions of fall fashion are being revived: The pinafore. Pictured here is the transitional wash and wear plaid and a solid wool version. For accessorizing try knee socks, leotards, sweaters or jerseys, as well as solid, pin-dot or pin-stripe man-tailored skirts.

Capt. Poydasheff Featured Guest At July Luncheon

Capt. Robert S. Poydasheff was the guest of honor at the monthly luncheon and business meeting of Daughters of the U. S. Army (DUSA) held July 2 in the Main Officers Open Mess.

Preceding his talk on legal assistance available to military personnel, Capt. Poydasheff was presented a gift in appreciation of his association as legal advisor to DUSA for the past seven years.

Hostess for the luncheon were Mrs. Robert Gilmore and Mrs. I. J. Turon. Guests, in addition to Capt. Poydasheff, were Mrs. Donald Bowman, Miss Sylvia Kunzig, Mrs. Charles Kilbourne, Mrs. Robert Weigand, Mrs. William Klein, Mrs. Robert Towler and Mrs. Al Dunn.

Chaplain Blunk Outlines MAH Spiritual Program

By Fran Silver

"The Function Of The Hospital Chaplain" was the topic of a talk given by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James B. Blunk, Martin Army Hospital chaplain, to members and guests of The Infantry Center Protestant - Women-of-the-Chapel at a recent meeting.

In pointing out the far reaching scope of the chaplain's program in the hospital, Chaplain Blunk cited examples of the king of work that is carried on. Statistics served to underscore the tremendous job of meeting the spiritual needs of hospitalized persons.

With the cooperation of other chaplains on the post, a chaplain is available at any hour to patients. Chaplain Blunk went on to say that more directly in line with the scheduled program in the hospital, every patients are met daily. These needs could be in the areas of terminal illness, surgery, emotional, personal or family problems.

In order to meet the particular needs of the person confined, Chaplain Blunk stated that their work must be coordinated with other agencies. These include consultations and meeting with the Red Cross, relative community agencies, county officials, civilian clergy, unit chaplains and professional social workers.

Regularly scheduled chapel services are held for Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish patients and personnel. Patients who are unable to attend may listen via the Martin Army Hospital Radio Station.

The devotions for the meeting were brought by Mrs. Blunk, wife of Chaplain Blunk. With scripture and thoughts she pointed out how lives could be revitalized by meeting each day with maturity and a will be accomplish.

In the business meeting following the program the group voted to join the churches of Columbus in the purchase of hymnals for use in the religious program at Milledgeville Hospital. The offering from this meeting was directed to be used in this effort.

Members were asked to raise their hands if they were interested in making cancer bandages. The response was unanimous. With this in mind the Program Committee has planned a community service program for July 24, and will show a film strip on smoking provided by the American Cancer Society.

Non-members may join the group for this meeting at the Bldg. 2605, on Dixie Road at 9:30 a.m.

Maj. Mason Welcomes TSB Wives

The wives of students in Basic Infantry Officers Course met for an orientation coffee recently in the dayroom, Detachment 22, 2nd Student Battalion.

Maj. P. L. Mason, battalion commander, welcomed the ladies, described the course and emphasized the importance of the wives' roles while their husbands were students.

Mrs. John S. Stannard, wife of the assistant chaplain, talked about Army life and the advantages of travel.

Lt. Stuart A. Yablon, detachment commander, added his welcome and further discussed the course. Mrs. Mason said she hoped the wives would take advantage of the social opportunities available.

Guests at the coffee were Mrs. Otto R. Koch Jr., Mrs. Walter D. Short, wife of the new brigade commander, and Maj. Ralph Viesterz, the incoming battalion commander and his wife.

22 Players Meet Here For Bridge

Monday afternoon, 22 ladies gathered at the Country Club where they played 26 boards of duplicate bridge.

Under the auspices of the Women's Club, the group meets each Monday at 12:45 p.m. and is directed by Mrs. Paul Serff, who noted recently that the activity has been in operation for over 12 years.

"One reason for this popularity," says Mrs. Serff, "is probably because of our informality." This is an opportunity for bridge enthusiasts to gather and help plan an interesting summer bridge schedule. It is an excellent way to gain new friends and meet newcomers to the post.

Mrs. Serff invites all interested women to attend alone, come with a partner or bring entire bridge groups.

Reservations and partnerships may be arranged by calling Mrs. Serff at 689-6087.

Help! Won't Someone Please Help

Several committee chairmen of the Women's Club have expressed a need for various instructors and helpers.

Mrs. James O. Jones, 1st vice - president and activities chairman needs a qualified children's art instructor to teach this fall. Anyone qualified may contact Mrs. Richard Knowles at 545-2408.

Mrs. Jones also needs someone to instruct beginners bridge and someone to serve as chairman of the party bridge group. Call Mrs. Jones at 555-1608 for more information about these jobs.

Mrs. James Lennon, publicity chairman, is in need of feature writers, artists and "extra helpers" to fill in for vacation-bound chairmen and to help prepare for coming Fall activities.

Especially desired are ladies to make posters announcing new fall classes and the opening Fall tea. The club furnishes all materials. Mrs. Lennon may be reached by telephoning 545-1700.

HAVE GUN, WILL DRAW
OC Eggen, Former Gunslinger

'Fastest Gun' Now Carries M-14 Rifle

By OC James L. La Prade Jr.

"The Fastest Gun in the West" is now in the 53rd Officer Candidate Company striving to be "The Fastest Commissioned Gun in the Army."

The man whose fast draw has been slowed down to the deliberate accuracy required by the Officer Candidate Training Program is Albert B. Eggen, known in his heyday as "Gentleman Al, professional gunslinger."

When asked why he became interested in this unusual sport, Eggen remarked that he had simply seen a quick-draw contest between two neighborhood enthusiasts and bought a $130 gun and holster rig the next day. After six months of determined practice, Al began to win every competition he entered.

A member of an exhibition team known as the "4 Colts," he won West Coast titles in quick draw and accuracy competition and took top honors in the 1957 Nationals held in San Francisco. The Colts performed for various Western and Pioneer day celebrations, besides putting on safety-with-firearms exhibitions at Parent Teachers Associations, Boy Scouts and American Legion meetings.

In August, 1957, Al was at the peak with a world record of an eleven-hundredths of a second draw and 173 trophies won. At this time, Eggen earned his title as the fastest quick draw in the world.

Eggen was then assigned to the 503rd Airborne Infantry Battle Group in Okinawa, where he trained Vietnameses troops in combat tactics.

Deciding that he wanted to make the Army a career, Al applied for Officer Candidate School, and in February, 1963 he was accepted to attend the Officer Candidate Class beginning March 31, 1963.

He was not long here before his fellow candidates got wind of his unusual title and national reputation. Again, he is referred to by the inevitable tag, "Gentleman Al, professional gunslinger."

Infantrymen Asked to Enter Mag Contest

Infantrymen the world over have been invited to enter Infantry Magazine's recently announced short story contest.

First prize winner will receive a $100 savings bond and second place winner will be awarded a $50 savings bond.

Entries may be fiction, serious or humorous, but must be related to the Infantry in some way. Stories should not exceed 3,000 words and must be typed or printed in ink and double-spaced using only one side of the paper. Authors may draw on personal experiences for writing.

Entries should be in good taste and not reflect adversely upon any person or upon any agency of any government. Non-U. S. contestants have been requested by Infantry's editors to write in English, since the magazine has no translators.

Authors should identify themselves to include rank and military address. A short biographical sketch, suitable for publication, should accompany each manuscript. Entries must be accompanied by a self-addressed return envelope and postage if contestants desire return of manuscripts.

Entries must be postmarked not later than August 1. All entries will be acknowledged. Winners will be announced in the November - December issue, along with publication of the first prize article. Other winners will be printed in subsequent issues.

Manuscript entries should be addressed to: Writing Contest, Infantry Magazine, OAS, USAIS, Fort Benning, Georgia, USA.

Judges for the contest will be selected personnel of The Infantry School and Center.

Joint Service Medal Authorized by DOD

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Establishment of a Joint Service Commendation Medal which will be awarded in recognition of outstanding performances of duty and meritorious achievements by members of the Armed Forces assigned to joint staffs and other joint activities has been announced by the Department of Defense (DOD).

The Medal, to be awarded in the name of the Secretary of Defense, is the first which unified commanders can award without going through Service channels. It will not be awarded to any individual for a period of service for which the Service Commendation Medal or similar decoration has been awarded.

Any member of the Armed Forces who distinguishes himself by meritorious achievement or service while serving in any specified joint activity after January 1, 1963, is eligible for the new award. Directive 1348.14, which establishes the medal, specifies these joint activities:

1. Office of the Secretary of Defense; 2. Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; 3. Defense Supply Agency; 4. National Security Agency; 5. Other Department of Defense agencies or joint activities reporting through the Joint Chiefs of Staff; 6. Headquarters, unified and specified command; 7. Headquarters of joint task forces, joint commands or control groups reporting through the Joint Chiefs of Staff, unified, specified or subordinate joint commanders, to include service components assigned to a joint command for exercise purposes (E. G., STRIKE Command); 8. Other joint activities reporting to commanders of unified or specified commands (e.g., Military Assistance Advisory Groups or Joint Missions).

The Medal consists of four conjoined hexagons of green enamel, an eagle with outspread wings and grasping in its talons three arrows all in gold, topped by 13 gold stars and with a gold base representing land, sea and air, all within a gold circular laurel wreath bound with gold bands. It will be accompanied by a certificate bearing the name of the recipient and details of the award. The ribbon for the medal is colored blue, green and white.

Authority to award the Medal has been delegated to the Deputy Secretary of Defense, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Director of Defense Supply Agency, Director of National Security Agency, and Commanders-in-Chief of Unified and Specified Commands. This authority may be further delegated only in wartime and then only at the direction of the Secretary of Defense.

NEWEST HELICOPTER . . . The first of 16 CH-47 Chinook helicopters for Company A, 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Group, has arrived at Lawson Army Airfield. The Chinook, which is the Army's newest and largest cargo helicopter, will be used primarily to deliver large numbers of troops and supplies to their destination in the division area of operations. It can carry 33 fully equipped combat troops. It has a range of up to 1,000 miles, and an average cruising speed of 130 knots. The crew consists of four men, pilot, co-pilot, flight engineer, and crew chief. Company A is commanded by Maj. Algin S. Hawkins.

Solar Eclipse Viewers Warned Of Sun's Harmful Infra-Red Rays

The fascinating sight of a solar eclipse can mean permanent vision damage for those unsuspecting Georgia adults and children who peer at the darkened sun through sunglasses, smoked glass, or exposed photographic film on Saturday, July 20th.

A warning on the hazards of eclipse watching was issued by the Georgia Society for the Prevention of Blindness. It was stressed that there is no safe way to look directly into the eclipse without risking incurable burns of the eye from invisible infra-red rays of the sun.

"Sunglasses, colored glass smudged with smoke, photographic film, or welders' goggles do not offer adequate protection for observing the eclipse" today's warning said. "Only by indirect methods such as on television or with homemade projection devices can this phenomenon be watched without endangering the eyes."

The threat of vision damage is magnified during an eclipse because it can occur without the victim knowing it, explained E. C. Hammond, chairman of the Georgia Society for Prevention of Blindness. Although the dazzling brilliance of the sun is reduced during the eclipse, the infra-red rays are still emitted.

The sunglasses or film will not screen these rays, and when they reach the retina of the eye, an irreparable burn results, in much the same way a magnifying glass is used to burn a hole in a piece of paper. When the burn is serious enough to scar that small portion of the retina where the rays were focused, no treatment can cure it. The scar then causes a defect of vision which results in a blank spot on whatever the eye is viewing or reading.

The Georgia Society urged that special caution be taken with children, who are particularly susceptible to eclipse burns, and by photographers who may be risking eye damage if their camera equipment does not afford protection in the viewing and focusing systems.

A simple projector for observing the eclipse can be made with two pieces of white cardboard. Punch a pinhole in one cardboard and hold it several feet above the second. The pinhole serves as a tiny lens to focus the image of the eclipse onto the surface of the second cardboad. This image may be watched without danger to the eyes.

The Georgia Society for Prevention of Blindness cautioned against looking at the sun through the pinhole, or using a mirror to reflect the image, as a mirror also reflects the harmful rays of the sun.

Engineers Begin Work On Heliport

Company D, 806th Engineer Battalion (Const), has begun work on a large heliport-motor pool complex off Jamestown Road in the Harmony Church area for use by the expanding 11th Air Assault Division (Test.).

When completed, facilities here will include 52 pierced steel plank pads, a control tower, an aircraft wash rack, and a fenced motor pool containing a grease rack and a vehicle wash rack.

To fulfill these requirements approximately 40 acres must be cleared and graded before the helicopter pads can be placed. The area is subdivided into 2 smaller areas. One area will contain 20 parking pads (60'x75') and 2 landing pads (100'x100'); the other will contain 28 parking pads and 2 land pads. Between the two areas will be a 34-foot control tower with a beacon and a concrete aircraft wash rack.

New Novel Spotlights MacArthur

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Pacific campaign that redeemed General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's historic pledge — "I shall return" — has the spotlight in "Triumph in the Philippines," written by Robert Ross Smith.

Mr. Smith re-creates the climactic operations that recaptured the island of Luzon, liberated the capital city of Manila and avenged the tragedy of Corregidor during World War II.

Mr. Smith's coverage ranges from the conference table atmosphere of Washington, where top commanders and planners debated the issue of whether to invade Luzon or to bypass it in favor of a direct descent on Formosa, to the bloody realities of guerrilla warfare on Mindanao.

"Triumph in the Philippines" may be purchased for $8 from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25 D. C.

806th Engineers Near Completion of Projects

By PFC Frank Luzzi

Every unit in the Army has deadlines to meet.

Bravo Company of the 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction) is working long hours in a determined effort to meet the deadlines imposed by its obligations as a support unit for The Infantry Center Troop Command and the new 11th Air Assault Division.

The 4500 block of buildings, which will house quartermaster personnel of the 11th, is all but completed. The much talked about Squad and Platoon Attack Course, designed for ROTC and Reserve training, is another high priority job which is nearing completion as this is written.

Men and equipment from B Company are also aiding D Company of the same battalion in its drive to complete a heliport in the Jamestown Road area. This heliport will accomodate choppers from the 11th Aerial Rocket Battery of the experimental 11th Division.

A vast plot of land in the old regional hospital area is already on its way to becoming a working heliport, due to the long, hard hours put in by the men of B Company. With a July 19 deadline staring them in the face, the men are scurrying to lay down enough pierced steel planking (PSP) to finish in time.

Although blistering heat and torrential rains have hampered progress, the engineers continued to put down PSP at such a rate that they outran their supply. But that problem has been solved and the men of Bravo are heading into the last lap of their breakneck race.

This is in conjunction with the construction of another heliport which will be built in that region. This landing tract will accomodate the larger helicopters, such as the mighty Chinook.

By September 15 another landing strip in the same area will be ready to house light planes and short take-off craft, such as the Caribou.

Concurrent with this job will be the relocation of Hour Glass Road to make room for these landing facilities.

In a recent discussion period the company commander, 1st Lt. Clarence D. Griffith Jr., explained to his charges that, although the hours would be long and the work back-breaking, he looked forward to the best possible effort being exerted all the way down the line.

He said he was confident that B Company, which boasts one of the finest work records of any engineer company at Fort Benning would come through in typical Engineer-soldier fashion, and chalk these projects up on an already impressive lists of jobs "well done."

Mobilization Is Speeded By Computers

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Administration of the U.S. Army's constantly shifting manpower blueprint to maintain up-to-the minute mobilization readiness has been assigned to a network of computers planned for the command centers of the six U. S. Continental Army areas.

In discussing the computer plan, Maj. Gen. Joe C. Lambert, The Adjutant General, said: "Not only will paperwork be handled in a far swifter fashion and with a higher degree of accuracy, but with a greatly reduced annual operating cost."

The electronic data processing application involves collecting, editing, coding and processing organizational and personnel data for Active Army members and Army Reservists in each of the Army areas. The computers will be used to feed up-to-the-minute data to Corps Headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command, and other command levels up to the Department of the Army.

The six RCA 501 systems are being leased from the Radio Corporation of America and will be under the technical supervision of the U. S. Army Data Services and Administrative Systems Command. The Adjutant General's Office.

Handbook Available To Officers

The Infantry Leaders Handbook, a pocket-sized reference guide for small unit leaders, has been published by Infantry Magazine at The Infantry School here.

An expanded, revised, and updated version of a similar handbook published in 1962, the 1963 edition will be sent free to all subscribers to Infantry. Extra copies will be available for 25 cents (plus 5 cents for postage or 10 cents postage for non-APO foreign orders) by writing The Book Store, USAIS, Fort Benning, Ga. A 10 per cent discount will be allowed for orders of 100 or more handbooks. Payment should accompany the orders, the publishers stated.

The 88-page handbook was compiled from the latest information available at the Infantry School on weapons, tactics, equipment and techniques. It includes vital new information on weapons, mines, patrolling, demolitions, stream crossing expedients, map readings, artillery registration and adjustment, shell reports, first aid, characteristics of Army helicopters, landing zone assembly techniques, and communications equipment.

June Best Mess Presented 611th

Company A, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion, 11th Air Assault Aviation Group, was judged as having the "Best Mess" in the 11th Air Assault Division during the month of June.

A team of food experts headed by division food supervisor CWO Grover C. Johnson made the final selection subject to approval by the commanding general of the 11th, Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

The 611th was in competition with 14 other mess halls within the division. The food experts checked five important areas before they decided on a winner. Areas checked were: preparation of food, records and administration, sanitation and maintenance of equipment, conservation and storage of food, and cleanliness of the building and the outside area.

UNITED STATES ARMY READY FORCE

Fort Benning, Ga. FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1963 Page 11

Division Will Be Swift Strike 'Red'

Units of the 2nd Infantry Division will transfer their forces from Fort Benning, Ga., to South Carolina in late July to fight in the U. S. Strike Command's largest maneuver of the year, Joint Exercise Swift Strike III.

Chosen part of the "Red" task force, the Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Division will join the 5th Infantry Division, coming from Fort Carson, Colo., Headquarters and Headquarters Company, III Corps, from Fort Hood, Tex.; and Fort Hood's 1st Logistical Command.

Present plans for the exercise call for major ground maneuvers to take place August 4 to August 17. Administrative breaks in "war" activities have been tentatively set for August 8, 11 and 14.

Second Division troops will move by motor convoys, stopping at Fort Gordon, Ga., during the two-day move.

The division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, will be part of task force "Red," headed by Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Dunn. The overall exercise is under the command of Gen. Paul D. Adams, Strike Command commander.

Elements pitted against the 2nd Division will include the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N. C.; The 101st Airborne Division from Fort Campbell, Ky.; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, XVIII Airborne Corps, from Fort Bragg; and the 5th Logistical Command, also from Fort Bragg. These units make up the "Blue" task force.

Air Force units will be attached to the two task forces and will add realism to the exercise with their tactical fighters and bombers.

The exercise will be conducted in North and South Carolina corridor extending from Fayetteville, N. C., and Augusta, Ga.

Purpose of the exercise is to test the reaction capabilities and readiness of selected units under the most realistic conditions possible.

Swift Strike III will be the largest joint training exercise the U. S. Strike Command has held to date, including nearly 80,000 troops.

9th's Move to Germany Ready; Jets Fly Monday

By 2nd Bn., 9th Infantry PIO

Three is the magic number for the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, now as the countdown narrows for its departure to Europe.

Within three days, the "Second of the Ninth" will begin to depart for Mannheim, Germany, and a subsequent six-month Rotoplan tour of duty. It relieves its sister unit, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, which has just completed a three-month tour.

Fourth to Germany

In so doing, the Manchus become the fourth unit sent to Germany under Rotaplan, the Army's newest unit rotation system.

The next 72 hours, however, will not be a time for leisure for the Germany-bound battalion.

Some 12,310 pounds of equipment, including weapons, individual records, and other battalion material must be packed and readied for the transatlantic flight.

The "Second of the Ninth," commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson, will journey to Warner-Robbins Air Force Base, Ga., via commercial busses for the flight to its temporary German assignment.

When the two detachments join next week, it will mark the first time in almost four weeks that the 'Manchus', have been at full strength.

In addition to the separation of the advance party, pre-departure leaves, beginning almost four weeks ago, have kept the battalion comparatively dispersed.

The departure of the main body marks the end of long weeks of preparation for the Manchus. In accordance with pre - departure requirements, the "Second of the Ninth" has undergone a stepped-up training program.

Included in that program were German language classes, intelligence training, and intensive mechanized training.

A Female Joins Rank And File in Artillery

By 15th Artillery PIO

As was bound to happen eventually, a female — with the unlikely name of "Armageddon" — has joined the roster of Battery A, 15th Artillery at the 2nd Infantry Division.

This female will not cause an extraordinary housing problem, however, as she is a Peregrine Falcon — a species of hawk noted for its fierceness and its unerring accuracy when "swooping" on its prey.

The bird will be the mascot of the "Honor Battery" of the 15th Artillery, a distinction that Battery A has held since November 1962.

It was no easy task to recruit a falcon for the artillerymen. The decision to adopt the bird as a mascot triggered a three - month search that met with no success. This species of hawk is a rare bird, very difficult to catch and protected in most nations of the world. In the U. S. the bird is found in the northern and western sections. However, the procurement of falcons is a task handled by few people, according to Capt. B. L. Jervell, Battery A commanding officer.

The delivery of the female falcon was finally made through a Silver Springs, Fla. firm dealing in live animals.

Arabia Interested

At the same time the battery was in correspondence with the Silver Springs firm, a letter was received from the U. S. Embassy in Jidda, Saudi Arabia, indicating that the director general of the Arabian Ministry of Information had taken an interest in the plight of the artillerymen and would correspond directly. Falconry is a sport widely practiced in that part of the world, Capt. Jervell said.

The falcon arrived by air express July 2 and took her place as the only female member on the rosters of Battery A, 15th Artillery.

FALCON MASCOT

"Battery A's association with so distinctive a bird seemed fitting," Capt. Jervell said. "Aggressiveness and ferocity are desirable qualities for any soldier or for any military organization.

"Unerring accuracy on target is essential for an artilleryman," Capt. Jervell continued. "Speed is no less essential for the artillery in delivering its fire support."

Armageddon made her debut July 3 when Battery A presented a 115 millimeter Multiple Rocket Launcher demonstration to the officers and men of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery at Concord Range. In the future she will appear with the battery, in company with her handlers, at all battery functions in which Battery A participates, Capt. Jervell said.

As usual with the female, (See FALCON, Page 22)

He's Got Secret Formula--Shine!

By 1st Bn., 87th Inf. PIO

What does it take to be appointed colonel's orderly 14 times? Sp4 Jerry R. Burton, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, has done just that.

Having noticed Burton's omnipresence, Lt. Col. George Crosby, battalion commander, asked him about it, and learned that he also has been supernumerary 10 times.

A native of Westmoreland, Tenn., Burton is an armored personnel carrier driver and gunner for the "Davy Crockett" section. When asked what it did take to get colonel's orderly so often, he said "Shine your shoes."

Company Builds 'Coat of Arms'

A sign constructed from plywood was made by Company C, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry soldiers bearing the company legend.

The 23rd Infantry coat of arms and a scroll listing the battles that the 23rd Infantry participated in are encarved on it.

Col. Huffman Takes Command of Artillery

In ceremonies held at the 2nd Division's Knight Field Wednesday, Col. Burnside E. Huffman assumed command of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery, replacing Col. Ralph K. Jones who is leaving to attend the Army War College in Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Col. Huffman's previous assignment, before coming to the "Indianhead Division was in the office of assistant chief of staff for Force Development, Department of the Army, in Washington, D. C., as assistant director of material requirements.

FOR ARTILLERY
Col. B. Huffman

Col. Huffman entered the Army in 1941 after graduating from the U. S. Military Academy. His first assignment was as a battery executive officer of the 20th Field Artillery, 4th Infantry Division, at Fort Benning.

He served in the European Campaign in 1945 as battalion executive officer of the 718th Field Artillery Battalion, 63rd Infantry Division, and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

After the war he served with the War Department General Staff in Washington D. C. until 1947 when he retired to Fort Benning to attend "Jump" School.

In Korea, Col. Huffman served as S-3 for the 67th Airborne Field Artillery Battalion, 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, from September 1950 until June 1951. His outfit made two jumps in Korea — Shukchon in 1950 and Munsan in 1951 — and he was awarded his second Bronze Star Medal.

Col. Huffman attended the Command and General Staff College in 1955 and 1956, and in 1960 he graduated from the Army War College.

He is married and has four children. He is a native of Columbus, Ga., and attended Columbus High School. His mother, Mrs. Samuel Smithers, lives at 2338 16th St.

Dominicans Visit 87th On a Tour

By 1st Bn., 87th Inf. PIO

Four staff officers from the Army of the Dominican Republic visited the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry recently while at Fort Benning to study the history, organization and mission of The Infantry Center.

Maj. Gildardo Aquiles Pichardo Gautreaux, Supervisor of training, "27th of February" Armored Battalion (Dominican Republic), Maj. Rafael Emilio De Luna Peguero, sub-director of the Armed Forces Training Center and commander of the General Gregorio Lupercon Artillery Battalion, Maj. Eddy Anibal Bobea Perez, chief, Officer of Engineers, and Capt. Fernando Rafael Cabral Ortega, S-3 officer of the "Francisco Del Rosario Sanchez" Infantry Battalion. The tour party was received at 1st Battalion headquarters by Lt. Robert A. Bianchi, escort officer, where they talked with Maj. Joseph K. Westbury, executive officer, who described to them the organization and mission of the battalion.

In addition, they examined a weapons and equipment display at Company B, and explored an armored personnel carrier.

SAFETY SERIES

DEATH COMES TO A SOLDIER

On June 27, "PFC Stroller" sustained fatal injuries when he was struck by a car while walking on the highway.

"PFC Stroller" and "Pvt. Friend" were walking south on the highway about one-and one-half miles north of the Russell County-Lee County line, in Alabama. "Pvt. Friend" was walking on the shoulder of the road and "PFC Stroller" was walking to Friend's left on the edge of the road. "PFC Stroller" was struck from behind by a vehicle. He sustained multiple injuries and died.

The probable causes for the accident were reduced driver visibility due to darkness and "PFC Stroller's" close proximity to the road.

This accident may have been prevented if the simple pedestrian rule of walking facing traffic when on a highway or rural road where no sidewalks are available and walk a safe distance off the side of the road, had been followed.

Safety does not just hold to the adage of "always look where you are going," but it also holds to the hard fact of "make sure YOU can be seen."

Religious Education Work Wins Chaplain a Medal

By 1st Brigade PIO

Chap. (Capt.) Duie Jernigan, 1st Brigade chaplain, was recently presented with his second award of the Army Commendation Medal.

Chap. Jernigan was presented an Oak Leaf Cluster by Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Brigade commanding officer, for meritorious service while serving as Resident Protestant Chaplain of the Sukirna Army Chapel, United States Army, during the period October 6, 1960 to January 29, 1963.

The citation states, in part, "through his careful planning, tact and spiritual leadership, Chap. Jernigan developed one of the most effective and far reaching religious programs for military and civilian personnel and their dependents within the Ryukyu Islands. The bible study groups, choirs, ushering staff, men's, women's and youth groups, which he organized, have had a remarkable impact upon the spiritual and moral life of this command and enhanced the image of the military in the eyes of the local populace.

"Chap. Jernigan planned, organized and supervised the largest single religious education program within the Ryukyu Islands, personally recruiting, and establishing the training policies and programs and supervising the functions of our 80 religious teachers. Through his single effort this religious educational program grew by over 20 per cent each year of his supervision.

Col. Coffin Tours 38th On Briefing

In one of his first inspection tours since taking over as assistant commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, Col. Robert E. Coffin paid a morning visit last week to the 38th Artillery Battalion.

The colonel's tour took him first to the office of the battalion commander, Maj. Dillard F. Jones, for a briefing.

Following this, Col. Coffin was met by the commander of Battery A, and escorted to that battery's dayroom for a look at recreational facilities.

Next, the commanding officer of Battery B guided the new assistant division commander through a battery barracks.

The final item on the colonel's visit was a showing of the consolidated mess hall by the commanders of Battery C and Service Battery. A farewell by Maj. Jones to his visitor outside battalion headquarters ended Col. Coffin's visit.

Deputy Army CG Flies In; Sees Division

A distinguished military visitor was welcomed on Marne Field by commanders of the 2nd Infantry Division last week as he alighted from an Army helicopter.

The visitor was the newly-installed deputy commanding general of the Third U.S. Army Maj. Gen. Daniel O'Connor. On hand to greet Gen. O'Connor was the assistant division commander, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, and chief of staff, Col. Frederick V. Harris.

The two-star general's first stop was the nearby division conference room where he was briefed by general staff officers and met by commanders of major 2nd Division units.

Leaving the conference, the motorcade, including a shiny black Chrysler Imperial flying a two-star flag, toured the 2nd Division's Sand Hill area. The general officers stopped at the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry for a walk through a barracks and a visit to the mess hall.

There they met with Col. Dwight B. Dickson, commander of the 2nd Brigade, and toured the Kelley Hill area. This included visits to the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 87th Infantry and another round of trips through barracks and mess halls.

Gen. O'Connor departed the 2nd Division by helicopter at Kelley Hill.

Army Stresses Proper Training and Use of NCOs

"Members of the Noncommissioned Officers Corps are the enlisted leaders of the finest fighting men in the world."

These were the written words of Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, commanding general of the Third U. S. Army, in a letter of instructions recently sent out to major commands.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, has distributed the letter throughout his command. He stresses the importance of the letter by adding:

Proper Training

"An area of immediate concern to me is the proper development and training of the junior noncommissioned officers and of those individuals who will be noncommissioned officers in the near future. Each commander will study this problem and take necessary implementing action to insure that today's NCOs continue to be properly used and that tomorrow's NCOs are fully capable of discharging the responsibilities that will be theirs."

Gen. Billingslea also said that he felt that the 2nd Infantry Division has made good progress already in stressing the importance, responsibilities and position of our senior NCOs.

Throughout his letter, Gen. Watson stressed the importance of proper utilization of the NCOs. He mentioned that it was their intelligence, their enthusiasm, their ingenuity and their initiative that was among the Army's strongest assets.

However, the general said: "One of the most disturbing trends in our present day military establishment is the gradual erosion of the authority, initiative, and prestige of its noncommissioned officers.

The general went on to say: "In the years prior to World War II, the U. S. Army prided itself on its splendid professional Noncommissioned Officer Corps. The expression 'I used to have more power as a Corporal than I do as a Captain today' has been for years a familiar refrain among veterans of that period. Indeed, this nostalgic feeling of respect toward the noncommissioned officers of their youth is almost universal among the senior officers of today. Many of them will relate, with little urging and great warmth, that as new second lieutenants they were first schooled in their duties by one or more of the senior sergeants assigned to their first duty stations. Few officers commissioned since World War II have experienced similar situations."

The letter spoke of how the NCOs of today are in a different position. Even though commanders at all echelons continue to support the idea that NCOs are the backbone of the Army, many of their policies and directives in actuality serve to the opposite cause.

Gen. Watson spoke of the importance of the chain of command. He mentioned that the NCOs form the foundation on which this structure must be based. It is the NCOs who deal directly with the great body of private soldiers, whose combined efforts in the final analysis will win the battle."

In explaining how the diminution of the prestige of the NCOs started, Gen. Watson placed emphasis, primarily, to the unprecedented influx of inexperienced personnel into the Army and their subsequent rapid elevation to NCO status in World War II. "Although all but a few performed their wartime duties admirably," the general added, "they were relatively unfamiliar with the traditions of the service and the basic duties of their grade when compared with their pre-war counterparts."

Gen. Watson's letter explained that during the war, because of this inexperience, officers had to assume more responsibility and exercise closer supervision than had been the case prior to war. Then, in 1946, when many of the old-timers retired, the problem was compounded.

"Theoretically," Gen. Watson continued, "as the length of active service and experience of the Noncommissioned Officer Corps increased during the late forties and the fifties, its authority could and should have been gradually restored. This has not been done."

One of the reasons why seems to be the numerous directives and regulations that have come into effect. As an example, in certain units today directives require that all unit instruction be conducted by officers, and, in other units, it is required that officers be present when unit instruction is being given by NCOs. Gen. Watson states: "All such directives are unnecessarily restrictive and demonstrate a lack of confidence in noncommissioned officers which cannot fail to dampen their initiative, dimish, their authority, and reduce their prestige. Poor mission performance is the inevitable result."

In recommending solutions to the problem, the Third U. S. Army commander suggested that commanders, especially those at lower echelons, realize the value of restoring the NCO to his proper place in the chain of command. He adds that it will not be easy: "A whole generation of officers has been commissioned since 1941. Many of them believe sincerely that only those things actively supervised by officers will be done well. In effect, they presently require the company commanders and platoon leaders under their command to perform the duties of squad leaders and have reduced their NCOs to the status of overpaid privates."

"It is a characteristic of the 2nd Engineers that they are technicians, builders and fighting men."

So spoke Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, at the recent dual ceremonies held by the engineers to dedicate a memorial and change commanders.

On Marshall Bowl Field, Lt. Col. B. C. Snow Jr., received the colors of the 102-year-old unit from Lt. Col. William C. Carter who is reassigned to Fort Benning's Infantry School as chairman of the Engineer Committee.

At the memorial dedication preceding the review, companies of engineers stood at rigid attention in the hot sun to hear their unit's history praised by Gen. Corley.

The memorial is a steel and glass edifice no larger than a good - sized newspaper stand planned and built by the engineers. Into the case which was designed by Col. Carter, have gone the Korean battle colors, a picture of the engineer's Medal of Honor winner, dozens of campaign ribbons, trophies and lineage charts.

When U. S. Marines and soldiers joined together in 1917, sewed on "Indianhead" patches and fought through Chateau-Thierry as the 2nd Infantry Division, the 2nd Engineers had already battled and built their way through the Civil War, the Spanish - American War and the Moro Insurrection in the Philippines.

Add three more major wars and a lot of muddy, bloody campaigns, sprinkle with glory, train well and you have the history of the 2nd Engineers.

The new commander, Col Snow, joins the engineers from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

New Officers Join Division Signal Units

By 122nd Signal PIO

The 122nd Signal Battalion recently welcomed new officer personnel.

Maj. Elliott H. Smyzer came to the 122nd Signal after completing an assignment in Taiwan with the Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG). He was the signal advisor to the 2nd Chinese Nationalist Field Army.

Prior to his assignment in the far east, Maj. Smyzer was with the 101st Airborne Division where he served as a rifle company commander and also a signal company commander.

The major received his commission through the Officer Candidate School (OCS) and is also a graduate of the Airborne Course, the Infantry Officer Communication Course and the Infantry Officer Advanced Course.

He and his wife, Norma, and their three children, live at 1232 Arrowhead Rd.

Lt. Conte is a graduate of Hofstra University at Hempstead, N.Y. He is also the graduate of the Signal Officers Orientation Course.

Newly arrived Lt. Joseph W. Murray took only a short walk to join the 2nd Infantry Division's signal battalion as he comes from the 87th Infantry, also on Kelley Hill.

Lt. Murray received his commission from Officer Candidate School (OCS). He is also a qualified paratrooper and holds the Expert Infantryman's Badge. His new post with the 122nd Signal Battalion is as radio officer. He lives with his wife, Anne, at 20 Douglas St., in Columbus.

Lt. John A. Long comes to the signal battalion after graduating from Mississippi State College as a distinguished military graduate. He has been assigned as assistant S-4 for the battalion.

2nd Division Wives Club Attended By Mrs. Coffin

The 2nd Division Officers' Wives club held their July coffee in the Custer Terrace Officers' Club Tuesday. The fourth of July keyed the free Membership coffee.

The hostesses, wives of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion and the 2nd Medical Battalion, wore nametags cut-out in the shape of award ribbons with red, white and blue streamer ribbons. Tags were also worn by the club officers. Mrs. Philip H. Taft and Mrs. Jack Wallace were co-chairmen for the affair.

The highlight of each refreshment table was a sheet cake decorated in keeping with the theme of the party. One was designed with a replica of the name tag and the other with an American flag surrounded by firecracker bursts. Both cakes read "Welcome New Members." Large cardboard copies of the nametags were attached to the skirt of each of the tablecloths on the serving tables. Mock firecrackers, made by the hostesses, were placed around serving platters.

Pictures of the club's activities were attached to a curtain at one end of the room and scrapbooks from recent years, depicting events and news about the club's members, were on display on a table. Guests were able to get a clear idea of the many areas touched by the Wives club: Hospital Aid, Thrift Shop, Rota-Center, College-Age Group, Fort Benning Ballet School, Bowling Team, and Division Engagement Calendar, Charity, Scholarships, and Entertainment, to mention some.

Mrs. Edgar R. Poole, President of the club introduced Mrs. Robert E. Coffin, wife of the new division assistant commanding officer, to those present at the coffee.

Wives Hold Coffee For Departure

The home of Mrs. Wallace M. Evans was the setting for the recent monthly coffee of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry wives.

Hostessing with Mrs. Evans were Mesdames Thomas E. Laske, James B. Brynes, Henry Thorpe, and Xavier Exposito. Mrs. Thorpe served at the refreshment table, which was covered with a white and blue linen tablecloth and scattered with pink and yellow gladiolas.

New arrivals welcomed at this time were: Mesdames Thomas E. Laske, James C. Krannawitter, Oren Brown, James B. Byrnes, Xavier Esposito, Lyman C. Culver, and John Moscirp Jr.

Farewell was bade to Mrs. Edward R. Hinson Jr., who is returning with her husband to civilian life in Houston, Tex., and to Mrs. William W. Francis, whose husband, Lt. Francis, has been transferred to 2nd Division G-3 section.

The coffee was followed by a short business meeting conducted by Mrs. George D. Crosby, wife of the battalion commander.

A Formal Dance Set for Cadets

A formal dance will be held beginning at 8 p.m. on July 23 at the Main Officers Open Mess for Citadel cadets presently attending summer camp at Fort Benning. The dance is sponsored by the Fort Benning - Citadel Club.

The club has extended an invitation to Citadel alumni, both old and new. Dress for gentlemen will be formal, for ladies cocktail dress.

In order to bring the club roster up to date alumni have been requested to call Maj. Dudley Bunn (544-7633) or Lt. Richard Weeks (544-7123) and give their name, class and organization.

Mrs. Priest Wins Bridge for July

Ladies of the 2nd Aviation Battalion held their monthly bridge in the home of Mrs. Everett Hamilton.

High was won by Mrs. William Priest, second by Mrs. Walker Webb, and low by Mrs. Everett Hamilton .

Ladies Farewell Tea Honors Mrs. Atkinson

A farewell tea was held by ladies of the 7th Cavalry in honor of Mrs. Quintus C. Atkinson, wife of the squadron commander, in the home of Mrs. W. B. Hill, wife of the executive officer.

The table was decorated with an ecru cut-work tablecloth, centered with pale yellow candles and a floral arrangement of tinted green carnations in a silver leaf bowl.

Refreshments included finger sandwiches, nut bread, petit-fours and mints. Coffee, tea and punch were served.

Monthly Coffee

The monthly coffee of the 2nd Aviation Battalion was held in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess recently.

A silver wine cooler engraved by ladies of the cavalry was presented to Mrs. Atkinson in appreciation for her accomplishments in behalf of the 7th Cavalry.

Farewell regrets and words of thanks were proffered by the ladies and festivities were climaxed with the honoree being the recipient of the flower arrangement from the table.

S&T Coffee Held

The officers' wives of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion held their monthly coffee in the home of Mrs. John Stoecker.

Mrs. John Horvath was welcomed to the group as a newcomer.

Mrs. W. Conger Testifies To Unusual Experiences

By Carol Sue Hal

The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings." Robert Louis Stevenson provided us with this thought and it suits Mrs. William Conger, wife of Lt. Col. Conger.

The daughter of a Methodist minister, she had moved all over the state of Louisiana as a young person, so marrying William Conger and embarking on the moves required of an Army wife were nothing new for Betty Hicks. The change was that her scope became world-wide.

The Congers met at a Methodist summer camp in Arkansas when they were in high school, but did not begin to date until they were both students at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute in Rustin, Louisiana. After receiving her Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration and Secretarial Science she worked for the Superintendant of Schools in Lake Charles, Louisiana. William Conger went on from Tech to accept an appointment to West Point, from which he graduated in 1947. Lt. and Mrs. Conger were married by Mrs. Conger's father in his church in Alexandria, La. right after June Week at the Point. The newly-weds were sent to Fort Riley, Kansas where they lived in a hospital ward with eight other couples, all newly-weds and classmates from the Point.

It was quite an experience," says Mrs. Conger, to have only two tiny rooms to yourself: a sitting room and a bedroom, and to share a ladies room at one end of the hall and a men's room at the other. We ate in the mess hall." Not only was their housing an experience in Kansas. They arrived in August when the thermometer read 118 degrees and left for Fort Benning on a day in January when it read 8 below.

It seemed that hospitals were to be their housing for a while, for when they were assigned quarters here at Benning they were placed in a hospital ward again. But this time they had one all to themselves. In what is now the Martin Army Hosp. annex one whole section had been given over to housing. They had one small bedroom and a kitchen divided off from the ward and the rest of the area was open space. The wives in other "ward homes" got together each morning and held exercises here and then ate coffee and doughnuts and gained back what we had taken off by exercise," Mrs. Conger remembers. The stove in the kitchen was institutional size and one of the most humorous things about living there was how pathetic two slices of toast looked in the great expanse of the oven every morning.

Captain Conger was sent to Korea in 1948 and it was here that one of the singular coincidences of the Conger's life took place. Mrs. Conger's brother, Dr. Guy M. Hicks Jr., a naval doctor, was called into the Army due to a shortage of Army doctors, and was sent of all places to Captain Conger's Infantry Regimental Combat Team in Korea. Captain Conger, suffering an arm wound, became his brother-in-law's first casualty.

In the summer of 1949 Mrs. Conger joined her husband in Hawaii, where they had the first real housing of their married life. They lived on the island of Oahu in an Army stucco duplex with a lanai (porch) and flowers in abundance. There was an avocado tree in the front yard and the family had lunch from it every day until "I learned there were 600 calories in each one," says the trim Mrs. Conger. Their first child, Betsy, now 13 years old, was born in Hawaii.

When the Korean Conflict broke out in earnest Mrs. Conger came back to the States and moved in with the Hicks in Shreveport, La.

In April 1951 the Congers came back to Benning and this time Martin Army Hospital was home for Mrs. Conger only while she gave birth to their daughter, Carroll, now nine, who was born in a ward only one row away from her parents first "home". The family lived in Custer Terrace, which was new at the time and "all red clay and not a blade of grass." It was quite a contrast to the lush tropical grounds in Hawaii.

From Benning the Congers moved to Wels, Austria, where they found a most fortunate situation: The Spanish Riding School, usually located in Vienna, had since the war trained their horses in Wels, right across the street from where the Congers lived. The school dates back 210 yrs. and is famous for the white stallions — the Lipizzaners. Mrs. Conger took her two daughters over every morning to watch the training. The family became very interested in the horses and traveled to Salzburg and Vienna to see their precision performances.

Capt. Conger was transferred to the Office of the Attache at the end of the occupation of Austria and the family moved to Vienna. She was now to live in a king's home: a castle halfway up the Kahlenburg in Vienna Woods. When asked how they happened upon so unlikely a home, she explains that it was "the only thing we could find that we could afford." The castle had been the summer home of a musician who lived in Vienna and since his death had been rented by his daughter. There was a piano larger than a concert grand in the living room, and this was a living room that could house so large an instrument: it measured eight hundred and fifty square feet! A huge skylight brightened the mahogany panelled room. The gardener's ability to speak seven languages impressed Mrs. Conger no end, until she found out it was two or three words of each. There was a swimming pool on the grounds. The house still had many of its original beautifully carved pieces of furniture dating back to the reign of Franz Josef, and combined with the Conger's own, some from the Embassy and some from the Army, it was well furnished. There was a great deal of work to be done and for days, Mrs. Conger says, "we did nothing but polish brass: solid brass rods at each window, brass hooks in the entrance hall to hang coats on, but by the time we were through we wished we could take the place with us on our next assignment."

They lived in Vienna during the Hungarian Revolution and because the border was only twenty miles from Vienna, they were involved. The wives of the embassy set up a soup kitchen and fed, clothed and housed the refugees as they came across.

Coincidences have occurred more frequently in Mrs. Conger's life than in most people's and one which happened in Austria proves this. The Congers attended a little Czechoslovakian church because it was the only English-speaking one in the area: The minister, a retired missionary and Czech by birth, had prepared for the ministry and held churches in the United States. He had known Mrs. Conger's father while there. Here on another continent in a little country church, Mrs. Conger found a link to home.

If they had known what housing was in store for them at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, they might have bought a lamp and a genie to see what they could do about bringing the castle with them. The whole house at Leavenworth fitted into the living room of the castle. But still another coincidence in their lives made this a most memorable assignment. Mrs. Conger's cousin is married to a Naval Commander. And he turned out to be the only Naval officer stationed at the Command and General staff school at the same time the Congers were.

COOK of the WEEK

BY VIRGINIA FREEMAN

What could be a better "hot weather pick-me-up" than cream vichysoisse soup served thoroughly chilled with attractive garnishing.

Mrs. Jake Cantrell, member of the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, shares with readers her recipe for cream Vichysoisse.

4 Leeks
3 cups sliced pared potatoes
2 cups boiling water
4 chicken bouillon cubes
1 tbsp. butter or margarine
¼ tsp. paprika
1 cup light cream
1 cup milk
1 tsp salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. minced chives

Cut leeks with a 3-inches of green tops into fine pieces. Cook leeks and potatoes in water, covered, until tender — about 40 minutes. Press without draining through a fine sieve into top of double boiler. Add next six ingredients stirring well. Heat over hot water. Serve hot or thoroughly chilled, garnished with chives and paprika.

2nd Division Builds Its Own Vietnam Asian Village

If you travel down enough miles of dirt road in the back areas of the Fort Benning military reservation and are lucky enough to hit upon the right combination of trails, you might end up before a high split-log sign lashed to supporting log columns.

HIDDEN AT FORT BENNING
A Village for Asians

Off to the sides of the uprights run log fences and, behind those, brushland scattered with small trees and bushes, wild plum and blackberry, thicket and open area.

At first glance, it resembles a dude ranch. But the Army is not noted for dude ranches, especially in the middle of training acreage. And only the most conscientious dude would travel miles through the boondocks for a ranch-type rest.

Closer inspection of the signboard above the main gate will answer a lot of the uninitiated observer's questions. Burnished into the light, rough-grained wood are the words "Cua Cong Hau" in unmistakably oriental script.

This is the 2nd Infantry Division's Asian Village, a new addition to the division's already - tested "Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course." As such, it is only the second village of its type in the United States. Fort Bragg, N.C., the home of Army Special Warfare, has the other.

Under normal operations, the village will be stocked with 15 or 20 "natives," some cooperative, some hostile, all living off the land. Plans for row crops and animals have been made.

By September, when Asian Village will be used for the first time, counter - insurgency troops, flushing the village for enemy operatives, can expect to encounter an impassive clutter of chickens, pigs and calves.

Down the main avenue from the gate — a footpath, two men wide, trampled by the 2nd Engineers during construction — the first dwelling belongs to the chief. It is elaborate in comparison to the others.

The simpler huts of the tribesmen are of two kinds, the stilted type which would be found in water-logged country and a smaller version of the chief's hut. All three types have flat roofs and large window spaces.

There is another aspect to the huts, an aspect which lends the entire village a sanquinary atmosphere and brings the spectator back to dwell on the reason for Asian Village's existence.

On close inspection, sections of the interior panelling lift up. Part some ferns and there is space for a submachine gun or two; brush aside some leaves in the corner and a hole is exposed convenient to cache explosives or supplies.

Another popular trick of guerrillas for unnoticed entry and exit from villages is the carefully-laid conduit. Below several feet of dirt in any given section of Asian Village is likely to be a ready-made tunnel running from a villager's home to a carefully-concealed opening at the village perimeter.

One bit of realism that the "mock up" town lacks, for safety's sake, is the ubiquitous Viet Cong spike. Short on money for manufactured articles of death but long on imagination, the ragtag forces of North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh have devised an ingenious variety of needle-sharp spikes, the poison - tipped and the plainer, lacerating type.

"Second to None" infantrymen who undergo the one-day course at Asian Village in September when the counter-guerrilla range reopens can expect to be up against a problem that's plaguing our soldiers in Vietnam everyday.

The problem is how to distinguish between the friendly villager and the Viet Cong terrorist or Viet Cong sympathizer. Both farm by day. At night, the one slips past the village boundaries to join insurgents.

Indications are that with the uniform skill the 2nd Engineers have shown in building the Asian Village, it's going to be hard to distinguish.

Intelligence Sgt. Is Made Master Sgt.

By 1st Brigade PIO

MSgt. Linwood Taylor, the 1st Brigade's S-2 (Intelligence) sergeant, was recently promoted to the rank of master sergeant (E-8).

Sgt. Taylor came to the 2nd Infantry Division in March 1963 and was assigned to the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry as the intelligence sergeant. With the division change-over under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept in April of this year, the 1st Infantry was deactivated and most of its personnel were assigned to the 1st Brigade. Sgt. Taylor was among those making this change.

Sgt. Taylor entered the Army November 14, 1947 in his hometown of Norfolk, Va. After his induction, he was sent to Fort Jackson, S.C. where he completed his basic infantry training.

His first assignment found him stationed with the 59th Antiaircraft Attack (AAA) Battalion at Fort Bliss, Tex. Shortly thereafter, he was sent to Mannheim, Germany where he was assigned as the 1st sergeant of Headquarters Battery, 34th AAA Brigade.

Sgt. Taylor stayed here until 1953, when he was reassigned to the 65th Infantry Regiment, Korea. While here, he served as mortar platoon sergeant.

After returning to the U.S. for a short tour of duty with the 1st Armored Division, Fort Hood, Tex., Sgt. Taylor received his second overseas assignment to Germany. This time he was assigned to the 36th Infantry, 3rd Armored Division, Kirchgoens, Germany. He served as a platoon leader for Company A until his return to the U. S. and subsequent reassignment to the 2nd Division.

Sp5 James McQuinn Wins Another Honor

By 1st Bn, 38th Inf PIO

Earning the distinction of being chosen as one of the top three soldiers to serve at Fort Benning for two years in a row came to Sp5 James E. McQuinn last week when he won second place at the annual Youth Activities Club (YAC) carnival's outstanding soldier competition.

He won this honor by taking the first place trophy in competition with the M-14 rifle; second place trophy in firing the .45 caliber pistol, and another second place trophy for military appearance. In addition to the three trophies he received $75 in cash.

This was not the first time that the Indianapolis - born soldier has shown himself to be one of the Army's best trained Infantrymen. At last year's YAC carnival, Sp5 McQuinn placed third in the same competition. Also, during 1961, his first year in the Army, again at the YAC event, he won the football-throwing contest.

While serving in Germany with the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, he was named soldier of the month for the Battle Group twice during his six-month Rotaplan tour.

Also, in 1961, during his advanced Individual Training, he placed second in Battle Group mortar firing competition.

Sp5 McQuinn has served with the 38th Infantry since its organization as the 1st Battle Group, 11th Infantry and plans to make the Army his career. Needless to say, the 38th Infantry would like to keep him permanently.

Tanker Assigned To 72nd Armor

A new "Tanker" has been recently assigned to the Company A, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor. He is Lt. Thomas Kirwan.

Lt. Kirwan entered the Army in April 1963 and went to Fort Knox, Ky., where he completed the Armor Officers Orientation Course.

Upon completion of this schooling, he was assigned to the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, with duties as a platoon leader in Company A.

Lt. Kirwan graduated from St. Mary's High School in Rutherford, N.J., and then enrolled at Providence College. He graduated from there with a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting.

38th Helps In Training Of ROTC

By 1st Bn, 38th Infantry PIO

Individual weapons, mortars, mine warfare, and communications are just a few of the training phases being supported by troops of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry here in conjunction with six weeks of Infantry training being given to 1,900 ROTC students.

Employing the committee system, the 1st of the 38th is providing all troop support for the cadet training. The 38th Infantry personnel are acting as demonstrators, instructors, and "opposing forces" for the field training, which is designed to enable the students to see and do things as opposed to reading about them during the college school year.

After receiving training in individual weapons, machine guns, mortars, first aid, field fortification, and security movement, the students will conduct battle drill exercises and move into the field for training in the squad in attack and the platoon in attack.

They will conduct a field problem test and a field training exercise near the conclusion of their Infantry training.

72nd Armor Bn. Welcomes New Platoon Leader

By 72nd Armor PIO

A graduate of Auburn University and the Fort Knox, Ky., U.S. Army Armor School, Lt. Robert E. Volland, has been assigned to the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Upon receiving a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics from Auburn University, Lt. Volland received his Reserve commission and entered active duty March 1963.

His first assignment was with the U.S. Army Armor School at Fort Knox, Ky., where he attended the Armor Officer Orientation Course. This course combines intensive class and field training in tactics and its various phases of deployment.

Lt. Volland, his wife Bobbie, and their seven-month-old son, Richard, will reside in Columbus.

Not the Debonaire Private-Eye

He Spent Six Years With Reading Police

By Les Aucoin

He's not the suave, debonaire private-eye hero seen on television every Friday night. Nor is he the superhuman crime-buster depicted in paperback mystery novels.

Sgt. Joseph L. Garl, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, is, however, an ex-plainclothesman of the Reading, Pa., police department.

And even though he didn't single - handedly smash a nation-wide crime racket or accomplish the feats seen on the Late-Late Show's cop-versus-robbers movies, he did lead the life of an active law enforcement officer.

Six-Year Tenure

During his six-year tenure with the Reading police force, Sgt. Garl's activities ranged from juvenile rehabilitation to traffic accident investigation, a job that offered plenty of excitement through the years.

Sgt. Garl now works in message center at the "Manchu" battalion and, although his present job differs drastically from that of a police detective, he plans to return to law enforcement after his Army retirement.

Sgt. Garl enlisted in the Army prior to the Korean Conflict and served with the 25th Infantry for four years, receiving the Purple Heart.

Following the conflict, he returned to Pennsylvania to launch a career as a policeman. He attended a course in law enforcement officer training, became a "rookie" for six months, and then a patrolman.

Meanwhile, he graduated from the Pennsylvania Institute of Criminology, where he studied police science. Shortly thereafter, he was promoted to detective.

As a detective, saving a child's life by mouth-to-mouth respiration, salvaging a delinquent's personal life, and having the less pleasant task of informing a wife of her husband's fatal accident were all part of Sgt. Garl's work.

In 1958 Sgt. Garl reentered the Army and was stationed in Germany with the Seventh U.S. Army Security Company until 1960. He then returned to the U.S. and the 9th Infantry where he has remained.

Artillerymen Set Birthday

On June 1, 1917, the 15th Artillery was organized at the state fair grounds at Syracuse, N. Y., and later that year joined the 2nd Infantry Division.

Next Thursday the officers and men of the present 15th Artillery will pause to celebrate their 46th anniversary. Organization Day activities will be conducted in the battalion area or Kelley Hill, and all are cordially invited to attend.

Softball Tourney In Final Stages

White spheres went flying all over the division last week as softball games dominated the sports calendar. As the division softball tournament draws to a close, enthusiasm summits as the drive for first places in each league comes down to the wire.

As of the first of the week the leagues leaders were: 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, in the "Comanche League;" 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, in the "Cherokee League;" and, in the "Apache League" there is a heads tie between 2nd Administration Company and the 15th Artillery. Both are deadlocked with five wins and one loss.

In games played last Thursday, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry defeated the 37th Artillery easily by a score of 15-4. The 2nd Medical Battalion won a close one over the 702nd Maintance Battalion, 9-8. The only other game on the day's docket saw 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry blank the 12th Artillery, 11-0.

On Friday, the 72nd Armor Battalion edged the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry by a score of 4-2. The 2nd Medical Battalion outscored the 17th Artillery, 14-8. The last game saw the Aviation Battalion win a close one, 8-7.

There were four games played under the lights last Monday. The 7th Cavalry defeated the 122nd Signal Battalion, 7-5. The 15th Artillery swamped the 2nd Aviation Battalion, 12-2, then the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry barely got by the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry by a score of 8-7. The 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, made it three in a row, in as many days, by dropping league-leading 2nd Administration Company, 7-3.

On Tuesday, the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry continued their winning ways by blasting the 122nd Signal Battalion, 8-1. Moving themselves into a tie for first place with the 2nd Administration Company, the 15th Artillery ran over the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry by a score of 12-3, ending the latters three game winning spree. In two other games played last Tuesday, the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry crushed the 2nd Medical Battalion, 11-0, and 72nd Armor blanked the 12th Artillery easily, 11-0.

Sports Bulletin

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

As a result of their recent 5-1 victory over the 2nd Supply and Transportation Battalion, 1st Battalion (Mech), 87th Infantry "Conquerors" achieved a three way tie with 15th Artillery Battalion and 2nd Administration Company for the 2nd Infantry Division Softball Tournament title.

During this game Nolton Richard, Company B, pitched his fourth win. A drawing at division headquarters this morning will determine the play-off pattern.

Only two games were played on Wednesday. These contests saw the 38th Artillery squeeze past the 7th Cavalry, 8-7, and the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry bomb the 72nd Armor by the lop-sided score of 9-0.

A Falcon Joins Ranks of 15th

Armageddon is having trouble with her dress. At this time of year — and lasting until late fall — falcons are in the process of molting. Until all new feathers are fully grown and the bird is "hard-pinned, she cannot be flown without harming the new feathers," Capt. Jervell said. Usually falcons are left in their "mews" or cages during this period.

"However, there exists a thorough regimen of training in store for Armageddon in preparation for her more active performances during the winter months," Capt. Jervell continued.

Immediately, the falcon will go through a course known as hooding and manning. Manning is the process of getting the bird accustomed to the presence of her handlers and of crowds. She will also be trained to perch on the gauntlet of her handlers.

Hooding is the process of getting the falcon accustomed to wearing a hood over her head. The hood is removed when the bird is sent out to hunt.

"For the next few months, Armageddon will be trained on a creance, a 100-foot string, to prevent her from escaping. She will be trained to attack a lure and to return to the handler's gauntlet on call," Capt. Jervell explained.

When she successfully passes all of her tests, she will be permitted to fly free through her maneuvers.

2nd Inf. Division Tennis Tournament to Begin

The 2nd Infantry Division begins its 1963 Tennis Tournament at the Sand Hill Tennis Court Monday. The tournament will run through July 23.

All entries for the competition will be on an individual basis. There will be no team championship. All military personnel assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division are eligible to participate.

Competition will be in accordance with the 1963 U. S. Lawn Tennis Rules as amended. The tournament will be conducted in two divisions. There will be a Men's Open Division (Singles and Doubles) and a Men's Senior Division (Singles and Doubles). Entries in the Men's Senior Division must have reached the age of 40 on or before July 22.

Tournament competition will be single elimination. In the Open Division, the preliminary rounds will be the best two out of three sets. The semi-finals and finals will be the best three out of five sets.

Individuals eligible to enter the Senior Division may enter the Open Division, but by doing so, will forfeit their right to compete in the Senior Division.

Competitors will provide their own equipement for practice and tournament play, except tennis balls, which will be provided for the tournament play by the division special services officer.

The division special services officer will act on all matters pertaining to the tournament. Individuals desiring to enter the tournament will report in person to the division special services office, building 3019, Sand Hill, not later than July 11, in order to fill out entry forms.

The division special services officer will be responsible for the assignment of officials, providing game balls, and the selection and presentation of awards.

Points towards the Commanding General's Sports Trophy may be claimed as prescribed in the 2nd Infantry Division Circular Number 28-10, dated February 27, 1692; except that no points will be awarded for individual entries and two points will be awarded for each victory. Senior Division participants are not eligible for points.

Sharp No-Hitter By Fred Gibson

By 1st Bn, 38th Inf PIO

Fred Gibson tossed a no-hitter Tuesday night as the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry slammed the 2nd Medical Battalion, 11-0, to take the 2nd Division Cherokee Softball League championship, and jump into the Division play-offs.

The undefeated Marmenen knocked off the 2nd Engineer Battalion; 702nd Maintenance Battalion; 17th Artillery; 2d Battalion, 23d Infantry, and the 2nd Medical Battalion on their way to the championship.

Gibson allowed only one man to reach first base when he walked a man in the fifth inning. Other than that the Medical Battalion was helpless as the Marmenen knocked out a 12-hit attack, including four homeruns. Jim Ayers accounted for two of the round-trippers, and Ronnie Hopkins and Clarence Barrett clouted one apiece.

Shough's Sports Scope

(Editor's Note: Returning for his second week as guest columnist is PFC Ted Williamson of Company C, 1st Battalion, The Infantry Center Troop Command. Ted works for the Classified Documents Control Division of The Center's Adjutant General Section. His future aspirations are all in the baseball vein. Statistically, Ted has never failed whether it be averages, crowds, stolen bases, etc.)

By PFC Ted Williamson

Baseball fans were treated to an exciting evening last week at Gowdy Field when The Student Brigade and The Infantry Center Troop Command locked horns in what turned out to be one of the most fiercely contested battles seen at the local ballyard for a long time.

TICTC not only handed TSB its first loss of the second half of the season, but sent Charlie Spell down to his first defeat of the summer and his second loss in two years of pitching at Fort Benning.

Clutch pitching, timely hitting and some brilliant defensive work did the trick.

Righthander Ted Argianis pitched his way out of several tight situations and Dick Carton came on in the ninth with two on and one out to strike out Jesse Joyce and then got Pedro Berrios to line to short-stop Paul Durak, who made one of the most fantastic catches ever seen.

Joe Barke, whose hitting in the second half of play has been a pleasant surprise for manager George Doerr, made life miserable for Spell with three hits including two doubles. First-baseman Jamie Vargas also helped by chipping in with two hits.

Spell was undoubtedly off after a long layoff, and to TICTC he seemed like a long-lost cousin. Hats off to both clubs for providing one of the highlights of the 1963 season.

The Student Brigade's slugging left-fielder Pedro Berrios seems to have captured the fancy of the younger fans around Gowdy Field with his colorful play.

Berrios presents quite a sight when he misses an enemy pitcher's offering., Pedro takes a vicious cut at the ball, and when he fails to connect, he spins around a couple of times, his batting helmet usually flying off, and more often than not he winds up in a sitting position somewhere down the third base line.

Berrios also has a booming voice that can be heard all over the ball park as he urges the umpire to call every pitch a strike.

The 197th Infantry Brigade team continues to ride merrily along on the strong left arm of pitcher J. R. Miller. Miller seems to get better each time he pitches and he is one of the best hitting hurlers in the league.

The 197th nine is a scrapping bunch and they fight tooth and nail until the last man is out.

This team is slightly reminiscent of the 1960 Pittsburg Pirates when it comes to spirit and desire.

☆ ☆ ☆

The 428th Medical Battalion continues to lose although they can no longer be counted as pushovers. The Medics are still hustling and have tightened up their defense considerably since the first of the season. Only a weak hitting attack keeps them from crashing the win column. The smallest unit in the league, the Medics don't have quite the selection enjoyed by the other three clubs.

☆ ☆ ☆

Fred Valentine, who starred for The Infantry Center Troop Command nine last year, has been called up by the Baltimore Orioles. After starting a game last week, Valentine was injured and had to be replaced by veteran Al Smith. The extent of Fred's injury is not known at the present time, but we hope he has a speedy recovery and returns to the line-up real soon.

☆ ☆ ☆

An old baseball maxim is that the team leading the league on the 4th of July will win the pennant. If this is true, Walter O'Malley will present his first World Series extravaganza in plush Dodger Stadium this October, as the Dodgers led the race on Independence Day in the National League.

However, St. Louis, San Francisco and Cincinnati would like nothing better than to disprove this belief.

Strictly old news in the American League, the Yankees are in first and there is little doubt that they will remain there.

☆ ☆ ☆

Much comment has been circulating about the chances of Early Wynn winning his 300th game. Some being picked up by the Cleveland Indians, Wynn has pitched well enough to win but just hasn't got the support.

Gus is a master craftsman of the pitching art and only time separates him from joining Warren Spahn as the only modern-day members of the 300 Club.

Benning Golf Enthusiasts To Compete

More than 80 entries are expected for the 1963 Fort Benning Golf Tournament to be held at the Main Officers' Open Mess Golf Course July 15 to 18.

The tournament will be conducted in three divisions including the men's open division, the men's senior division and the women's division.

All players will play 36 holes initially with the leading 36 scorers in the open division and the 15 leaders in the senior and women's divisions finishing up the 72 hole course.

In the event of ties for the first four places in the open division and first or second place in the senior and women's divisions, a sudden death playoff will be held until the winners of each of these places have been determined.

The four leaders in the open division, and two in the senior and women's divisions will represent the post in the 1963 Third Army Golf tournament also to be held at The Infantry Center August 13 to 16.

Wolfe narrows the senior's division down to Holbrook and Jack Aure, TIC's aircraft maintenance officer, as the favorites.

Sport 'Chutists' Receive Plaudits From Air Force

Eight members of the "Diving Doughboys," The Infantry Center's sport parachute demonstration team, "were the highlight of the 20th birthday celebration of the 454th Bombardment Wing of Columbus (Miss.) AFB," according to Col. Orie O. Schurter, wing commander.

At Col. Schurter's invitation, the team traveled to Mississippi to participate in the birthday celebration last week.

The jumper winning the precision landing competition was PFC Paul Dobson, who landed "on the money." Dodson received a standing ovation from the 25,000 onlookers when he touched down.

Others making the trip were Capt. Joe Sellers, SFC George Williams, SFC Frank Norbury, SSgt. Noble McGehee, Spé Tom Pride, Spé Terry Carroll and Spé James Fountain.

Nine Hitters Slugging At .300-Plus Rate

For the first time this season, the Major Unit Baseball League has produced nine batters who are hitting well over the .300 mark.

The Student Brigade and 197th Infantry Brigade shared top honors as each placed three men among the heavy hitters.

However, the number one spot went to The Infantry Center Troop Command's (TICTC) Porter Wooten. With three weeks already completed in the second half, the hard hitting left-fielder leads the four-team league with a lofty .473 average. Wooten has connected with nine hits in 19 plate appearances.

Pedro Berrios of The Student Brigade, who leads the league in RBI's with eleven, is in second place with a respectable .444 batting average. The third-sacker has twelve hits in 27 trips to the plate. Berrios also leads the Major Unit League in total hits.

Batting third in the league is George Rogers of the 197th Infantry with eight hits in 21 turns for a .389 average. One point behind is TICTC's Joe Berko with a six game average of .388.

In the pitching department, fast-baller J. R. Miller of the 197th Infantry leads the league in strikeouts with 30. Miller, unbeaten thus far this season has pitched 25 innings giving up just one earned run for a 0.35 ERA. Jerry Rider, another hard throwing hurler from the 197th has turned in a 0.52 ERA enroute to a 2-0 record.

Foust Cops Tennis Title; Clobbers Frey in Finals

The Main Officers Open Mess Tennis Courts were the scene for 10 days of grueling elimination play as six young men, outlasting a starting field of 35 other tennis hopefuls, were named to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army Tennis Tournament at Fort Bragg, N. C.

In the open singles event, Art Foust captured first place blasting by Bob Frey in three straight sets: 6-1, 6-1, and 6-2. Frey who had been unbeaten until the final match could do little against the hard smashing Texan.

Foust had little trouble in winning the open event as he breezed by four straight opponents, shutting out two of them.

Frey grabbed the runner - up spot defeating Dustin Silver in a five set marathon which lasted three hours and 15 minutes. Frey took the first set 6-4 then dropped the next two by scores of 2-6, 3-6. Silver's rally fell short in the fourth set 7-5, and Frey wrapped things up in the fifth set 6-1.

In the Open Doubles event, Frey and Foust combined their talents to defeat Don Abbott and Joe Gibian for the championship 6-1, 6-1, and 6-2.

Rounding out the top finishers in the open singles, Abbott finished third. Abbott's only defeat came at the hands of Art Foust 6-1, 6-2, and 6-2. Marvin Malmberg captured a berth on the Benning team by defeating Gary Carter in a play-off series 6-1, 6-3, and 6-1.

The commanding general of The Infantry Center, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, presented the winners and runner-ups with sterling silver trays and Revere Bowls.

NEW CLUB HOUSE . . . The new club house at the Special Services golf course in Sand Hill was officially opened July 3 by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center. The club house features a complete pro shop, a refreshment counter, dining and lounge area, and a patio. The pro shop carries a complete line of golfing equipment for everyone from the novice to the experienced player. The food at the club ranges from complete breakfasts to the charcoal burgers. Soft drinks and other beverages are also served. The patio offers a pleasant place for the golfer to relax. Refreshments may be taken from the club house and enjoyed in these surroundings. In front of the patio lies a well kept practice putting green where players may sharpen up before teeing off.

Fact or Fable Is the Question In This Story

How long is a fish story?

The thing that makes this a fish story in the true sense of the words is the fact (or fable) that this large mouth bass wasn't caught with a hook or any other paraphanalia usually employed in fishing. It simply gave up and jumped in the boat.

The anglers who tell this story are two of The Infantry Center's most prominent bass basters, 1st Lt. Terry Sands of the Information Section and Sp4 Elias Tallas of the Signal Photo Lab, who both claim the bass, being one of the smartest of the species, simply saw the futility in fighting its fate, and gave up without a struggle.

Of course a fish story is a fish story, but the fishermen have the picked over skeleton for proof of their catch.

Number 2 To Become Re-Run House

Movies such as "Gigi," "High Noon," "Pride of the Yankees," and "Stalag 17," all old but good, will become the main attraction of Theater No. 2 starting July 14.
Theater No. 2 will deal exclusively with the re-run type films while all other movie houses on post will show first-run movies only.

Fire Victims Receive Aid From Army

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Soldiers and airmen of the United States Southern Command, Canal Zone, teamed recently to aid more than 200 persons left homeless after a devastating fire swept an area of Garachine, a small town 110 miles southeast of Panama City on the Pacific Coast of the Republic of Panama.
The military personnel worked through the pre-dawn hours preparing to move enough Army tents to provide shelter for the people living in this remote part of Panama's heavily jungled Darien area.
Canvas portions of the tents were air-dropped from U. S. Air Force C-130 aircraft, while wooden support poles and soldiers to erect the tents were flown to the area by U. S. Army helicopters and U. S. Air Force fixed wing aircraft.
The joint relief mission started with a request for assistance from the President of the Republic of Panama, Roberto F. Chiari.

AT THE Movies

Lancelot and Guinevere, an action drama starring Cornel Wilde, Jean Wallace and Brian Aherne, takes place in the heroic age of King Arthur and the gallant 'Knights of the Round Table.' The plot revolves around the strife caused when Lancelot finds his loyalty torn between devotion to duty and his love for the beautiful Guinevere.

☆ ☆ ☆

I Could Go on Singing is a musical drama starring Judy Garland and Dick Bogarde. Judy portrays an internationally successful entertainer who goes to London to appear at the Palladium and to renew bonds with her son who she gave up 14 years before, and his father, a successful British surgeon.

13 Frightened Girls, starring Murray Hamilton and Joyce Taylor, is a dramatic mystery story. A young girl becomes involved in international intrigue and narrowly escapes a violent death at the hands of a master spy. A knife attack provides a shocking scene not designed for the weak of heart.

Get on With It is a family comedy. Shirley Eaton and Eric Baker star in this madcap movie in which a wild scheme hits paydirt. Two technicians waylay an American senator who is to place a tape recorder aboard a satellite, substituting a tape with their wild plan, which succeeds beyond their wildest dreams.

Five-Digit Mail Code To Speed Delivery

On July 1, the United States postage stamp was 116 years old and, to celebrate the event, the Post Office Department came up with a system of speeding mail delivery at reduced postal costs.

Mr. Zip, an antic cartoon character, is the symbol for the Post Office Department's Zone Improvement Program which calls for the use of a five-digit code in addressing mail. Large volume mailers will be the first to benefit from the new system that may bypass as many as six mail handling steps and reduce the time between deposit and delivery as much as 24 hours.

Here is how the five-digit code will be used to speed delivery:

Suppose you live in the 3300 block of North Dinwiddie Street, in Arlington, Va. Your present address is Zone 7. Your Zip Code will be 22207. The first numeral 2 designates one of ten national service areas, consisting in this case of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina and the District of Columbia. The second digit, 2, identifies the service subdivision, in this case Northern Virginia. The third digit identifies the Arlington post office. The last two digits, 07, identify the station from which the mail to that address is delivered.

ZIP Code directories may be obtained by writing to Headquarters Services Division, Post Office Department, Washington, D. C. 20260.

To help explain the new system, a Zip song will soon be heard on radio throughout the country. Mr. Zip will also appear on TV public service films and in the yellow pages of many telephone directories.

Jet Plane To 'Pursue' Sun Eclipse

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A jet plane carrying a research laboratory is being prepared to record a "hot pursuit" of the total eclipse of the sun on July 20.

The project is being sponsored by the National Geographic Society along with 13 other scientific, educational, industrial and military agencies.

The DC-8 Delta jet will be equipped with telescopes, spectroscopes, cameras and other devices used to observe the heavens.

A 520-mph chase will take place over a 25-mile path near Fort Providence in Canada's Northwest Territories. From a high vantage point, scientists will record the eclipse for about 144 seconds.

One main reason for the use of the jet-borne laboratory is that the aircraft will be flying above 85 percent of the earth's atmosphere and above 99 percent of its water vapor, permitting clearer sightings of the solar phenomenon.

SOLDIER OF THE MONTH. . .PFC James J. Gagliardi, a member of Service Battery, 2nd Battalion (Composite) 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade was recently selected as the Soldier of the Month for June. He was selected on his personal appearance and general military knowledge over six other men of the battalion. PFC Gagliardi came to the 10th Artillery in February and is assigned as a S-4 supply clerk.

Anderson's reading rate increased from 299 to 632 words per minute. She was among 19 military personnel who attended the course two nights each week for six weeks. (Photo by PFC Doug Prelgovisk)

Magazine Cites Need for Quality

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Army's need for "Quality Soldiers" and the procedures for recognizing, procuring, training, utilizing and promoting them are the major subjects in the July issue of Army Information Digest.

Five the Army's top general officers contribute to the Digest's main feature, and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, draws a parallel between Ralph Waldo Emerson's "American scholar" and todays American soldier.

Warren Becomes Council Member

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric, chairman of the Defense Industry Advisory Council, has announced the appointment of J. Ed Warren as a member of the council.

Mr. Warren has been associated with the petroleum industry in various capacities throughout his entire career. He served as deputy petroleum Administration for Defense during part of the Korean conflict and also served as a consultant on petroleum matters to the Department of Interior.

Mr. Warren is replacing Mr. David A. Shepard who recently resigned from the council.

Think Before You Speak; Make Yourself Understood

Do you understand what the following sentence means? "Upon the advent of the investigator, his hegemony became minimally coextensive with the areal unit rendered visible by his successive displacements in space."

Translated into plain, everyday English, it simply means, "He came, he saw, he conquered."

Now, look at that first sentence again.

There's nothing grammatically wrong with it.

All of the words can be found in the dictionary. The sentence can be diagrammed. The only trouble, apparently, is that nobody can understand it.

Too many people make the same mistake. They use gobbledy-gook when they should be using plain, ordinary English. And the consequences of faulty communication can be disastrous — for the student who submits a paper, for the housewife who addresses a P.T.A. meeting, for the businessman who dictates a letter.

To get your ideas across, properly and persuasively, semanticists and psychologists recommend that you follow these five rules:

Avoid words that are too familiar — or not familiar enough. Words that are heard too often end up by not being heard at all. They make no mental impression. They are stale, lifeless,, "blah". Nowadays, perhaps the most overworked word in the entire English language is "fabulous", but no doubt you have heard of the fellow who said that the two most over-used words were "great" and "lousy". (He was asked, "What are they?")

Don't confuse or misuse words. Even one of America's greatest writers has cofused words. William Faulkner, in his novel Requiem for a Num, consistently used the word "euphemistic" when he meant to use the word "euphonious". ("Euphemistic" means substituting a mild expression for one that might be unpleasant; "euphonious" means having a pleasant sound.)

Easy Mistake

It's easy to make a mistake. A "Breton" lives in Brittany, France; a "Briton" lives in Great Britain. A "correspondent" is someone you communicate with; a "corespondent" is a person involved in a divorce suit. "Enormous" means large; "enormity" implies something horrible. "Sensuous" means pertaining to the senses; "sensual" means voluptuous. "Ingenious" means imaginative; "ingenuous" means naive.

All of these words are deceptive because they are similar to other words with different meanings. But there are also words that people simply misuse. A "fulsome" speech is an offensive speech. A person who "tinkers" with a radio is doing a bad job of trying to repair it. Most Scotsmen don't appreciate being called Scotch —that's the name of a whiskey. A person who is "masterful" is domineering.

As the saying goes, "When in doubt, look it up or leave it out."

Know Words

Recognize the connotation of a word as well as its denotation. A word's denotation is what it means precisely. Its connotation is what it suggests. And if you want to make friends instead of enemies, and persuade people to your persuasion, it would help if you recognized the emotional implications of the words you use.

Take the word "mother". It suggests many more things than the word "woman", or "parent", or "relation".

As John B. Opdyke, the language expert, has said, "house for sale" is cold — but "home must be sacrificed" is expressive. The same holds true for "infants' wear" and "togs for tots"; "janitor" and "sanitary engineer"; "open to parents" and "fathers and mothers welcome"; and "automobile" and "jalopy".

If you don't understand the difference between denotation and connotation yet, try calling woman "fat" instead of "plump".

Be Simple

Seek simplicity. Of all the 450,000 words in Webster's New International Dictionary, only one out of ten comes from the Anglo - Saxon (Old English). Yet these are the most essential ones — they are the short, hard, gritty words, the words that bite. (Examples: "the", "short", "hard", "gritty", "words", "that", "bite".)

Now if you follow these five rules carefully, you won't necessarily become a Daniel Webster or a William Shakespeare. But these rules will help you avoid embarrassment, put the most pleasing aspect on your words, add interest to what you say, and — most important of all — help get your ideas across.

Famous Dogs, Mascots, Cats Buried Here

About 50 concrete slabs, embedded on the side of a hill on 10th Division Rd., mark the final resting place of a member of small animals which once belonged to military personnel and dependents on the post.

Names such as "Hoosie Honey Johnson" and "Tiger Hamilton of Arrowhead" are but a couple of the many titles inscribed on brass plaques placed on the slabs.

Found among the many markers, laid for dogs, cats and a sheep, is the marble headstone of "Butchie," whose owner was Gen: (Ret.) Herbert B. Powell, former commanding general of CONARC and one time commander of Fort Benning.

Gen. Powell's dog was buried Oct. 21, 1957.

The sheep that has a spot in the cemetery belonged to the laboratory at Martin Army Hospital and was sort of a Mascot.

Personnel of the section see that the animals are buried, that the area is kept clean and the three by two-foot slabs are put in place.

Individuals wishing to bury his or her pet must provide a wooden box, requested by the Veterinarian Section to be not much larger than the animal itself.

NEW METHOD FOR DETECTING LAND MINES . . . The Army is investigating the use of a Ground Effects Machine (GEM) carrier, or "floating" platform to locate land mines. The jeep-mounted platform will be free to move in all directions compensating for irregularities in the terrain. The actual detector will be mounted on the platform. The GEM Mine Detector system will have an on-road and a cross-country capability.

Measle Vaccine Offered

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —Dependent children of Army, Navy and Air Force personnel are now authorized immunization against measles using a newly licensed vaccine.

The innoculation was described recently by the Army's Office of the Surgeon General as a two-injection treatment given at the same time in opposite arms. One of these injections contains live attenuated (weakened) measles virus and the other contains measle immunization serum, globulin.

Children over nine months old who have not previously had the disease may receive the treatment. It has been found that those under nine months fail to respond adequately to the vaccine.

Army Circular 40-20, of June 3, 1963, outlines details of the program.

GEN. RICH PREPARES FOR FLIGHT
Lt. Col. Woodyard (R) Is Pilot

Gen. Rich Is Briefed On AF T-33 Trainer

An Army general received an Air Force in-flight jet orientation course recently at Lawson Army Airfield.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, was given a pre-flight briefing and then rode the "stick" of an Air Force T-33 jet trainer during an orientation.

The posts Air Force representative, Lt. Col. Jean K. Woodyard Jr., talked the two-star co-pilot through various training maneuvers which illustrated the combat support capabilities and limitations of jet aircraft.

Col. Woodyard, an instructor of tactical air operations at the school, semi-annually punctuates classroom theory by flying interested staff officers and students over the flight course.

"The flight is no "joy-ride," " he stressed. "During the time we are in the air, the passenger co-pilot and I put the jet through maneuvers which not only test and demonstrate the aircraft's capabilities but also the passenger's."

Col. Woodyard said the reason for the in-flight training and orientation course was to give officers and students a better understanding of the problems facing any operation involving high-speed aircraft.

Once the jet is airborne the "co-pilot" is talked through a series of high-speed stalls, G-force maneuvers, simulated in-flight flameouts and rolls and loops demonstrating the maneuverability of the jet.

The flight is climaxed by a low altitude simulated combat support mission and a demonstration of the reconnaissance potential of swift striking aircraft.

The T-33 trainer was flown especially from the Air University at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala., for the flight training and briefing program at The Infantry School.

Armies Respond to CONARC's Plea to Curb Ever-Increasing Costs

FORT MONROE, Va.—Faced with ever-increasing costs of keeping a modern standing Army, the Continental Army Command (CONARC) finds itself asking such domestic questions as:

Why let valuable grazing land stand idle when it can reap big profits?

What's so sacred about a $3500 jeep when a $1784 all-purpose utility vehicle will do as well?

Answers to these and other questions are enabling the Continental Army Command to pull in the ol' abdominal muscles and tighten its money belt another notch or two.

It's all part of "Project Trim," CONARC's name for the Army-wide Cost Reduction Program. Rising costs of keeping and maintaining a peacetime Army with modern weapons has caused Department of the Army and CONARC leaders to exert austerity pressure on Armies and installations. Some of the results, besides being practical, are also interesting.

Rent Land

For example, Sixth Army in the Far west ran surveys at its installations and learned it owns 692,220 acres of prime grazing lands with an annual rental value of $352,924. That ain't hay! Especially since the land might otherwise lie idle.

Not in the same fiscal category, but interesting nonetheless, was the penetrating look Fort Lesley J. McNair took at its food commissary to come up with some good lessons in small business management.

Fort McNair, located in the Military District of Washington, learned that experienced and highly paid butchers spent much of their time grinding hamburger. Ground beef is a big seller, but it doesn't take a butcher to prepare. Besides, roasts, chops and steaks were in short supply as a result.

Now the butchers only carve and slice while lower - paid meat workers feed the hamburger machines. The end result was the elimination of two high-paid butchers from the payroll.

The same commissary has instituted a policy of hiring only people versatile enough to cross-train in both shelf stocking and cash register operation. They report that no longer will they have to take on additional checkers during holiday and pay day peaks — another small saving.

Time Saver

Fort McNair borrowed the civilian food store method of socking the shelves at night to free employees for checking orders and it also keeps the aisles clear for more rapid shopping.

But so far in "Project Trim" it is Sixth Army which is going after the big dollar. Displaying an admirable aggressiveness of purpose, Sixth came up with another cost-saver closely rivaling its grazing land rental.

They've substituted competitively - priced commercial vehicles for tactical ones in administrative motor pools, a healthy savings of $350,000 during the life of the vehicles. Most represent jeeps — which cost $3500 each, and which are adequately replaced by a light commercial rig costing a mere $1784. There are 133 of them involved at a savings of $220,000.

Fort Dix, N. J., has gone in for some "cannibalization" to save First Army some dollars.

Re-Use Parts

Instead of buying vehicle replacement parts on the market, Dix is stripping many of them from non-usable vehicles and then selling what's left as scrap metal. Estimated savings? $31,350.

In First Army, at Fort Monmouth, N.J., the Army Signal Center and School turned in some 3,000 accessory equipment items to Army supply centers for reissue, which is $11,100 the Army won't have to spend to procure these items elsewhere.

Fifth Army made a deal with the Minnesota National Guard for maintenance to track-laying vehicles which has resulted in $7,500 in savings in five instances already. Fifth Army was formerly shipping the heavy equipment (track-laying vehicles can't travel over highways) to a state field maintenance shop. Now the National Guard sends a team of specialists wherever needed to give on-the-spot service, completely eliminating shipping, loading and unloading costs.

These are but a few of the areas in which CONARD is looking for more mileage out of its allotted dollar. "Project Trim", as the name implies, is a concentrated effort at Headquarters, United States Continental Army Command to trim its operating expenses at all levels.

Homework To Follow

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Military field kits of the future may contain do-it-yourself courses in the Russian and Chinese languages.

The basic concept is that a rudimentary knowledge of the enemy's language may be useful for on-the-spot interrogation of front-line captives when there are no trained interpreters available.

Under the direction of the Army and George Washington University, the Langauge and Area Training Division of the Human Resources Research Office here is conducting a program to find out whether automated learning can be applied to such military uses.

Approximately 50 hours of self-study are needed to provide a basic military vocabulary, enough to question an enemy soldier.

In the language training no grammar rules and almost no set rules are followed.

NASA Chief Reveals Women Play Vital Role in U.S. Space Efforts

NEW YORK (AFPS) — While the United States is keeping its women on the ground it is recognized that John Scott, Wally and Gordo could not have done all they did in space without Jocelyn's help and, of course Nancy's.

It may well turn out that the yet-to-be-nominated Apollo astronauts who visit the moon later in this decade will owe their safety to Marcia and Harriet.

In the manner of pure space science, some of America's greatest triumphs to date could not have been achieved without Eleanor, Ann, Edith, Jaylee and Barbara.

One could go on and on in this vein, citing scores of brilliant hard-working women who have made careers for themselves with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

While NASA has no women astronauts, it does have hundreds of women scientists, administrators, matchematicians and technicians. This does not imply that NASA feels a woman's place is in the laboratory or behind a desk.

The agency's job specifications say a potential astronaut must be a test pilot with engineering or scientific experience. There aren't any women at the moment with those qualifications.

Working with Dr. Roman in NASA's astronomy program is Dr. Jocelyn Gill. She briefed L. Gordon Cooper on the stars he would be guided by in his May 15-16 orbital flight. She had previously briefed Cooper's predecessors among the Mercury astronauts who flew orbital missions.

Dr. Marcia Neugebauer of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Harriet Maliston of the agency's Goddard Space Flight Center are trying to anticipate the dangers the Apollo astronauts will face in 1970, or before, as they attempt a proposed trip to the moon.

Eleanor Pressley is responsible for scheduling scientific sounding-rocket launches. Ann Bailey is a co-discoverer of the fact that the earth is shaped somewhat like a pear.

Edith Reed prepares instruments for both rockets and satellites. Jaylee Burley, a mathematician, computes satellite trajectories and analyzes tracking information.

Barbara Lande is working on a special kind of earth sensor for high altitude communication satellites, and on satellite stabilization systems.

And so it goes; while the men soar, the women are down on earth preparing for their return.

Your Dental Health

Jaw Bone Structure Affects Anesthesia

By Capt. Robert Cross

This article will be used to explain local anesthesia, and how it works or doesn't work.

When you receive an injection, or shot, from a dentist, you receive a drug which blocks off the flow of pain along the nerve fibers. You do not receive a general anesthetic, which really amounts to being put to sleep, but a local anesthetic, or absence of pain in a small area.

For a drug to produce freedom from pain, it must be placed close to a nerve. The bones of the upper and lower jaws vary considerably, the lower having much thicker bone surrounding the teeth than the upper.

With thinner bone in the upper, it is possible to produce numbness by injection slightly above the tooth. The drug enters the bone, penetrates it and reaches the nerve of the tooth, where it acts as a blocking agent, preventing the passage of pain. Often in the upper, only one or two teeth are numbed by a single injection.

Now, in the lower with its thicker bone, we must go to block anesthesia, where the injection is given not near the tooth, but near the nerve some distance from the teeth.

This has a certain advantage, deep analgesia in that all the teeth on one side of the jaw are numbed by a single shot, which can be a disadvantage, also, for often more teeth are numbed than are worked on.

Why aren't all shots for anesthesia completely effective? First, they may be given too far from the nerve. Second, remember we produce local anesthesia, so the sense of touch is still present.

An overanxious patient may may misinterpret this as pain. Third, infection present can produce by - products which break down the drug, preventing it from working properly.

New DOD System To Streamline Codes

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Military codes are designed most often to confuse the enemy. Sometimes they are designed to simplify communications or cataloguing. The Pentagon has come up with a new code for Defense Department (DOD) use that should fill all these requirements.

Scheduled to be in effect by July 1, 1964, the code will be used by all services for logistics, finances and general statistical reporting.

The new code will use numbers for all states from 00 to 51 (including the District of Columbia) giving two letters for all countries with the first letter indicating continent, and reducing the United States of America to just plain "50."

Alabama is 01 and Wyoming is 51. Some examples of the various countries and regions include: British Honduras, BP; Costa Rica, CE; French Guiana, CT; Panama Canal Zone, DT; Virgin Islands, CC; Soviet Union, JC; United Kingdom, JL; Vatican City, JN; Upper Volta, QC and away they go.

While some of the code changes bring instant approval to harried clerks and typists, some confusion also exists. Perhaps the most confused item was the change of United Nations from an old UN designation to its new call letter symbol of YP.

However, all was joy when the new code book showed DEFREPNAMA (Defense Representative, North Atlantic and Mediterranean Areas) had been changed to just plain YD.

A Baseball Record

The Washington Senators of the American League set a record recently by running their winning streak to seven in row, the longest consecutive string for the club in 14 years.

Thompson Handgun Victor

SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit blazed out an 891-43X score in the .22 caliber matches Sunday at the seventh annual South Central Regional pistol championships to capture the regional crown with a three-day total of 2,651-128X.

Same Name Designates All Rockets

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Rockets and guided missiles of the Armed Forces will have a common basic designator beginning in July when the services implement a DOD directive issued last December.

Regardless of branch of service, rockets and missiles with a similar combat or combat related mission will be known by the same designation. Space vehicles and space boosters are not affected by the new directive.

The system will have letters to indicate whether it is a test or experimental model, type of launching environment mission, and kind of vehicle; a number to denote each vehicle type with the same basic design and another letter to indicate a major modification.

Systems with popular names will not be changed.

Nurse Unit Graduates

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Tex. (ANF) —A pilot study group of eight members of the Women's Army Corps have completed their basic medical training as students in the Medical Specialist Advanced Course at Brooke General Hospital, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

The opening of the advanced course to other medically inexperienced Army personnel will depend upon how well the pilot group is able to apply its new knowledge.

The Medical Specialist Advanced Course is a 40 - week course of intensive study. Selected enlisted personnel are thoroughly trained in the subprofessional aspects of nursing and learn many of the simpler nursing techniques. Upon graduation, students are eligible to take the licensing test of the Texas State Board of Vocational Nurses. However, graduates always work under the supervision of Army professional nurses or medical officers.

The course was started and continues because of the desperate shortage of professional nurses in the Army.

The pilot study group students were 18 and 19 years old and had an average of seven months and 24 days of Army service as opposed to an average age of 20 with from two to 20 years experience in the Army Medical Service for the other 53 members of the class.

'Flying Fans'

The Minnesota Twins, for a recent game, had special accommodations for "flying fans." In addition to a ticket to the game, pilots received parking space at a nearby airport, a box lunch and a ride to the ball-park.

By Snag Tallas

Due to heavy rainfall recently, the fishing on the Chattahoochee river hasn't been too good. But to a die-hard fisherman like myself, there is still that hope that the bass are biting, and they are, providing you don't mind missing "Twilight Zone" and the "Untouchables."

With the water being as muddy and warm as it has been, largemouth and smallmouth bass prefer the depths of the deeper water during the day. At night though, they come to the surface in search of food.

This is the time for you to wipe the dust off of those surface plugs that have been sitting in that tackle box since you bought it, and put them to use.

Refrain from using that gaudy six inch submarine with the propellers at both ends. Use that small one or two inch plug with the treble hooks on the underside and the tail of the plug. The plug should have a silver finish. Remember, that water is muddy and those bass need something to see.

A six pound test line should be used, no weights, and a short spinning rod for maximum distance casting.

Cast against the current, letting the plug ride for a few seconds, then start reeling in. Reel the plug in medium-fast, with a pause in reeling every few seconds letting the plug drift each time a few seconds.

This will create an effect that resembles a crippled minnow fighting against the current, attracting those surface feeding bass.

A night light can also be of great value, providing you want to purchase the set-up. Any tackle shop will have a night light set-up. The light attracts the bass when it is flashed towards the plug, causing the light to bounce off the silver finish.

If you plan on going night fishing, remember, two in a boat are just right, and don't leave those life preservers in the back seat of the car.

X-15 Plane Sets Space Flight Mark

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AFPS) — Air Force Maj. Robert Rushworth became America's second winged astronaut and the second highest flying airplane pilot when he soared more than 54 miles into space in the X-15 rocket plane.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Rushworth flew to an altitude of approximately 286,000 feet — a little over 54 miles — at a top speed of about 3,545 miles an hour.

Maj. Rushworth's flight came within an estimated five miles of the world airplane altitude record of 59.6 miles set in the X-15 last year by Air Force Maj. Robert White.

At the peak of his flight Rushworth was high enough to view three countries — the western coast of the United States and the tips of Mexico and Canada.

Best Wishes to the OFFICERS and MEN of the 11TH AIR ASSAULT DIVISION (TEST)

Brig. Gen. R. R. Williams Named Training, Evaluation, Control Chief

INFANTRY CONFERENCE . . . Two officers attending the Infantry Instructor's Conference discuss the military value of an armored personnel carrier during a demonstration and vehicle display in the Harmony Church area. They are Col. E. E. Mayer (L), representing the U. S. Army Special Warfare School at Fort Bragg, N. C., and Maj. Colin G. Forrest, new Canadian liaison officer on post. The 80 conferees received briefings and demonstrations which included the airborne, pathfinders, new weapons and troop utilization programs and Army physical fitness program.

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, commanding general of the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, will become chief of the training, evaluation, and control group here in August, the Department of Defense has announced.

In his new assignment, Gen. Williams will be in charge of the test and evaluation of 11th Air Assault Division (Test) which is commanded by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

The air assault division has been organized by the Department of the Defense to test new methods and use of air vehicles in ground warfare.

Pioneered Aviation

The findings made with this air assault test division is expected to revolutionize the use of ground troops in future military tactics.

Gen. Williams is a pioneer of Army Aviation. He has served with the Army air force since its inception in 1942. He was the first master Army aviator and the first director of what is now the Army Aviation Test Board at Fort Rucker.

In June 1942, when the Department of Air Training was formed in the Field Artillery School, Gen. Williams was appointed chief of the Flight Division, and became the first ground officer to receive an instrument rating.

Attended War College

In 1947, he was aviation officer of the U.S. Constabulary in Europe and formed the first ground force operational aviation unit. Prior to his assignment with the U.S. Army Aviation Board at Fort Rucker, he was the first chief of the Army Aviation Branch, Department of the Army.

The air officer departed from the Army aviation board in 1958 and—after attending the Army War College — he was assigned chief of the Air Mobility Division, chief of research and development, Department of Army.

He was promoted to brigadier general a month after taking command of the Army Aviation Center in March, 1962.

Gen. Williams and his wife Jean have three children. The oldest, Robert B., is attending George Washington University. The other two children are Kathleen and Keith.

Col. Crown Assumes TIC Engineer Post

COL. CROWN

Col. Francis J. Crown has assumed his new duties as post engineer of The Infantry Center.

He succeeds Col. Riel S. Crandall, who has been assigned as post engineer of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

Col. Crown came to The Infantry Center from duty with the Korean Military Advisory Group in Seoul.

A graduate of the U. S. Military Academy and Texas A&M College at College Station, Tex., where he received a master's degree, he also graduated from the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth in 1951.

He entered the Army as a private in June, 1924, and received his commission as a second lieutenant in June, 1940, following graduation from the Military Academy.

Col. Crown took the student company officers' school and student communications course at Fort Benning, graduating in April, 1941.

By September, 1943, he had finished taking the Engineer School advanced course and served as a training officer in the South Pacific with Eighth Army Headquarters until April 1947.

In July, 1953, he became support services officer for NATO in Izmir, Turkey, staying there until April, 1955.

He served with the strategic planning division of the Army Map Service in Washington, D. C., from May, 1955, to May, 1957.

In May, 1957, he became chief of the doctrines branch, deputy chief of staff for operations, Department of the Army Washington.

He was assigned as commanding officer of the 2nd Engineer Amphibious Support Command in Fort Lewis, Wash., from July, 1960, until July, 1961.

He is a member of the Society of American Military Engineers.

Col. Crown is married to the former Lyra Talbot of Columbus, Ga. They have two children, Francis, Jr., 20, and Patricia, 15. Francis is a cadet at the Virginia Military Institute in Lexington, Va.; and is now training in a ROTC unit at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Cover

Promotion Quota Highest Since January

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —The August quota for Army enlisted promotions is the largest since January. The total authorization of 22,190 exceeds the July quota by more than 12,000.

All grades except E-8 share in the gain. The second highest enlisted rank, which had topped 500 in June and July, and had been even higher in earlier months, takes about a 15 per cent reduction from its July total.

By grade, the August quotas are: E-9, 118; E-8, 449; E-7, 646; E-6, 1,187; E-5, 6,846; E-4, 12,944.

The number of "frozen" fields also decreases slightly.

Col. Gueymard Appointed Infantry School Secretary

Col. Joffre L. Gueymard has been named secretary of The Infantry School, succeeding Lt. Col. James S. Douglas.

Col. Douglas, who has served as secretary since July, 1962, has been assigned to the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Iran.

In another announcement, Lt. Col. Ned B. Mabry was named assistant secretary of the school.

A native of Carville, La., Col. Gueymard served as director of The Infantry School's Department of Non-resident Instruction before assuming his present assignment.

He entered the Army May 13, 1941, and was graduated from the Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning in June, 1942.

During World War II, he served with the 1st Philippine Infantry Regiment during the Buna campaign in New Guinea in 1944, and the Southern Philippines campaign in 1944 and 1945.

From 1952 to 1953, he attended the Senior School, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., and from 1953 to 1956 served first with the Combat Arms Advisory Group, and then with the Infantry Section, U. S. Continental Army Command (CONARC), Fort Monroe, Va.

Col. Gueymard spent from 1956 to 1958 in Korea; serving successively as the commander of the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry; assistant chief of staff, G-1 (personnel), 24th Infantry Division; deputy chief of staff for plans, 24th Division, and chief of staff, 24th Division and 1st Cavalry Division.

Among his awards and decorations are the Bronze Star Medal and Army Commendation Medal, both with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

He is married to the former Kathleen McLaughlin. They have two children, Joffre, Jr. 18, and Kathleen Mary, 16.

Col. Mabry, who recently completed a tour as deputy chief of staff, Headquarters, U. S. Army, Caribbean, Panama Canal Zone, entered the Army at Washington, D.C., in September, 1941.

He served in the European Theater of Operations from August, 1944, to September, 1945, with Headquarters, XX Corps as operations officer.

From August, 1953, to March, 1954, he served with Headquarters, Eighth U. S. Army, Korea, and was commander of the 3rd Battalion, 35th Infantry from March, 1954, to April, 1955.

From April, 1 1955 to May, 1956, he served with Headquarters, 25th Infantry Division, Hawaii, and then in the Infantry Branch, Career Management, at the Pentagon from July, 1956, to June, 1957.

Following a three-year tour of duty in the Office of Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel, at the Pentagon, Col. Mabry served as post commander of Fort Amador, Panama Canal Zone, before assuming his deputy chief of staff assignment with Headquarters, U. S. Army, Caribbean.

A graduate of Furman University, Greenville, S.C., and a former instructor at the Florida Military Academy, St. Petersburg, Col. Mabry is the recipient of the Bronze Star Medal.

He is a graduate of The Infantry School advance officer course and the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. and Mrs. Mabry, the former Gloria Tucker, have a son, Michael, 18.

Canadian Liaison Post Filled

Maj. C. G. Forrest has been named Canadian liaison officer to the Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency and The Infantry Board.

He succeeds Maj. Gordon A. Gunton, who has been named second-in-command of the 1st Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, effective July 22.

From 1959 to 1962, he served as operations officer, 1st Battalion, The Black Watch (Royal Highland Regiment) of Canada, which was then stationed in Germany.

Maj. Forrest and his wife, Marjorie, will reside at 305 Austin Loop on the post.

Maj. Gunton is schedule to go to Victoria, British Columbia, from Fort Benning, and subsequently join his unit in Germany in October.

Editor's Note

The Bayonet is happy to devote this edition to the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) and the officers and men who are part of the Army's newest division.

This special edition is especially designed to inform our readers about the 11th and what it is doing, and plans to do, at Fort Benning. For the outstanding job of supplying information, our thanks to Maj. Ben Nichols, 11th Air Assault Division Information Officer, and MSgt. Michael A. Kukler.

A Decade of Courage Gone-By Since Korea

It is now a full decade since the shooting war in Korea came to a halt with the signing of the Military Armistice Agreement on July 27, 1953. In the absence of a political settlement, the longest military armistice in history is but a ceasefire.

The Armistice Agreement created a Demilitarized Zone, the DMZ, to serve as a bufier of Korea. The southern border of this zone, heavily guarded and fortified, is patrolled around the clock. Along this border, stretching 157 miles across the Korean peninsula, are forces of the United Nations Command: the Eighth United States Army, the First ROK Army, and units from Turkey and Thailand.

Their mission is a demanding one and calls for the utmost skill and dedication. The primary task, of course, is the maintenance of the Armistice. But they are prepared to meet Communist aggression with whatever force is needed to insure triumph. The men of these forces know this would be a formidable job. But they are tough, well-equipped and superbly trained soldiers who have all the confidence that comes from the conviction that their cause is just. They represent a powerful and enduring reminder to the Communists that any full scale attack would be folly.

Because of this awareness, the Communists have resorted to a policy of violations of the Armistice Agreement. Unprovoked attacks on Eighth Army observation posts and infiltration of United Nations lines are but a few of the acts of aggression that make the task of the UNC forces arduous, complex and dangerous.

In the face of these Communist provocations, the United Nations Command, secure in its own strength and preparedness, has not deviated from its basic policy of preserving the Armistice until a satisfactory political solution has been reached.

In accomplishing this vital mission, an admirable tradition of respect and friendship has been forged between the dedicated men of the United Nations Command who represent the entire Free World and the brave South Korean people who are unrelenting in their opposition to the Communists who sought and are seeking to oppress them. This partnership in freedom, matured and tested by a "Decade of Courage" will insure the containment of tyranny and the expansion of freedom in this most strategic area of Asia.

MEDAL OF HONOR

On June 2, 1951, in Korea, Army Sergeant Cornelius H. Charlton assumed command of his platoon and led three charges that carried to the crest of the ridge during an attack on a heavily defended enemy hill position. He observed a remaining stronghold on the reverse slope and although severely wounded, charged the position alone routing its defenders with a devastating fire. He sustained further wounds which resulted in his death. Sgt. Charlton was awarded the Army Medal of Honor posthumously for his heroic actions in Korea.

Service Education Is Indeed Negotiable

All of us have come across, at one time or another, the familiar penny match book and its familiar simple boast: "You can earn a high school diploma at home."

But how many of us would want to settle for such cheap education of such dubious negotiable quality as is here obviously offered? Not very many. Like various other match book boasts, we take this one as a piece of idle advertising and as somewhat of a joke.

What is not a joke, however, is a similar slogan seen on many of your bulletin boards: "You can earn a high school diploma while in Service." Military education is very negotiable —a high school equivalency earned by sucessful completion of the high school General Education Development test may be exchanged for a certified diploma from the high school in your home town or a state certificate of high school equivalency.

Make arrangements to complete high school while in service. Visit or call the Army Education Center, Building 2512, Phone 545-4111, for information or advisement.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

The Price of Freedom

By Chaplain (Capt.) Robert S. Salemme

Americans are in danger of losing their liberty if they will not fulfill the conditions of freedom.

Now, freedom is one of those words that everyone uses, and few people understand. Every school child knows, for example, that America stands for freedom, and from the beginning we have fought our wars to defend it, but even a college graduate has difficulty in describing with any precision what is meant by freedom.

One such misconception is that freedom is unrestrained individualism. A man is free, it is supposed, when he is subject to no restraints, when he does not bump into regulations that keep him from doing what he wants to do. This leads to the ultimate conclusion of "survival of the fittest."

What then can we say for the "blind", course, is not freedom; it is anarchy, and it is not what Americans have fought to defend.

Another misconception that some people have is that freedom is license. They interpret any attempt to restrict the use of liquor, or to purge immoral and criminal scenes from motion pictures, as a threat to their freedom.

It doesn't occur to them that one person's freedom interfers with another man's freedom to drive on safe highways; that one man's freedom to film whatever his distorted mind can concoct interfers with another man's freedom to bring only wholesome influence to bear upon the minds of his children.

So you see, freedom is not as simple as some people think it is. It requires discipline, and discipline is the price of freedom, and freedom is the voluntary acceptance of social responsibility.

Help End Vandalism; Use Post Activities

Vandalism is something to do.

It's something that seemingly provides an escape from the humdrum life that everybody seems to lead. It gets a youngster a few minutes of "excitement" and occasionally gets him a few extra cents of spending money. It also gets him into a lot of trouble.

That's what vandalism is all about.

Vandalism always hurts somebody. When a window is broken, somebody has to pay. If a trash can is overturned, someone has to clean the mess. If money is pilfered, it has to be replaced.

Since July 7, vandals have broken windows at Wilbur, Patch, Faith and Loyd Schools on post. A coke machine was robbed at Patch. Faith School was broken into. At Loyd School the teachers' lounge was broken into and the coke machine there was pilfered. The machine was damaged, cokes and money were missing.

Total damage has been assessed at $325. Was the "excitement" worth it?

Vandals don't like to pay for their damage. Neither does Uncle Sam. Parents must bear the responsibility.

What's the answer?

Unfortunately there is no pat solution. But it would help if parents encouraged their children to satisfy their urge to do something through the many supervised activities on post. For example, there is a YAC league for every age group. There are theaters located in every area of the post showing good first-run movies. There are swimming pools for us all to enjoy. There are also good libraries—and no one has been hurt by a book yet!

There are many ways to beat the humdrum, but the simplest way is to take advantage of what you have. Don't create your fun at someone else's expense.

11th Air Assault Division (Test) Owes Conception to Gen. Howze

When, in the early summer of 1962, Lt. Gen. Hamilton Howze was appointed to head a board of distinguished officers, few people were aware of the revolutionary concept this board would recommend in its evaluation of existing Army tactical doctrine.

In August, 1962, the Howze Board, so named for its chairman, had completed its testing and was ready with its recommendation.

From this recommendation sprang the concept embodied in the Army's latest experiment in air mobility, that an almost completely air mobile force, practically void of wheeled vehicles and relying mainly on air vehicles to implement its movement capability.

Testing and developing the new concept began in mid-February here with the formation of various units grouped into a test model known as the 11th Air Assault Division (Test). Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, who has more than 21 years experience in airborne operations, was selected to command this new unit. His staff consists of carefully chosen officers and men and includes Col. Elvy B. Roberts as chief of staff, Lt. Col. Robert A. McDade as G-1 (personnel), Lt. Col. Frederic Ackerson as G-2 (intelligence), Lt. Col. Peter E. Kelley as G-3 (operations and training), and Lt. Col. Joseph E. Jenkins as G-4 (logistics).

Activated Units

Units already activated include an air assault Infantry battalion and a composite Artillery battalion including 105mm howitzers, Little John missiles, and aerial rockets. An aviation group provides surveillance, troop lift in the battle area and aerial supply and support. A tactical brigade headquarters exists for the command and control of task forces tailored for specific missions.

Other supporting elements already activated include a support command for administration and logistics, a signal company and an engineer company.

The division will also be supported by a test version of an air transport brigade that will use helicopters and fixed - wing aircraft. Such a brigade has both the capability for hauling combat troops and for "retailing" supplies brought to "wholesale" distribution points by the U. S. Air Force.

Fighting Unit

The air assault division promises to be the most versatile fighting unit yet conceived. It can operate as a large, coordinated, highly mobile striking force, or as a series of small, independent units, skillfully employed by specially trained brigade headquarters. In either event it can get off the ground and move. It can attack an enemy where he least expects it.

According to Gen. Kinnard the air assault division was the Army's next logical step. He said, "Time was when we carried cavalry horses up to the front in trucks so as not to tire them. Then we stopped carrying the horses and simply used the trucks. Now, in this stage, we are leaving behind the jeeps and trucks and seeing how far we can go by using aircraft."

Unit History

The division looks to the famed 11th Airborne Division for its heritage and tradition. Both the first and last commanding generals of the airborne division have visited the new unit, and many mementoes have been received which further tie the 11th Air Assault Division to its parent unit.

Among these are the 11th Airborne Division colors and the "Troopers Tub", a beautiful urn made from shell casings, hand-grenades and expended cartridges. It is embossed with the division crest and encircled with paratroopers wings.

The 11th Airborne Division, nicknamed "The Angels", distinguished itself during World War II in the Pacific Theater. It fought at Leyte and Luzon through some of the bitterest fighting of the war. Almost every unit with the division was awarded the Presidential Citation. The Angels were the first American troops to touch Japanese soil, landing on August 29, 1945 at Atsugi.

15,000 Men

The Army testing of this new unit will be followed by tests of the joint aspects of the concept under the direction of the U. S. Strike Command. At this time the division will consist of about 15,000 men—Infantry, aviators, and support units. It will have a number of highly-trained battalions of infantry who would be as much at home in helicopters as seasoned paratroopers are in their parachutes.

In a statement before the House Armed Services Committee recently, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff, indicated that the Howze Board found that a unit provided air mobility can execute combat tasks far better than a unit not so equipped. "And," he added, "perhaps of even greater significance, air mobile units can accomplish other tasks that a conventional unit could not attempt at all." This, then, is the reason for the 11th Air Assault Division jumping off the ground and into the air.

BRIG. GEN. HARRY KINNARD
11th Air Assault Commander

Col. Shaw Heads Support Group

By Sgt. Lester Gibbs

The 11th Air Assault Division Support Command, commanded by Col. Robert C. Shaw, provides the majority of the division level combat service support, with the exception of the military police and non-tactical construction and communication, to the elements of the 11th Air Assault Division.

It's mission is made possible by the drawing together of several support units that functioned separately under the former division structure. These units include the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, the 11th Administration Company, the 11th Medical Battalion, the 408th Supply and Service Company, and the 711th Maintenance Battalion. Another unit, Company A of the 611th Aviation Supply and Maintenance Battalion, is attached to the 11th Aviation Group.

The Support Command Headquarters provides command and supervisory control of the Division Support Command but does not have operational control of certain special staff elements assigned to the Administration Company.

The 11th Administration Company provides personnel and administration support for the division. This includes the replacement section and five special staff sections which presently include the Staff Judge Advocate, Finance, Chaplain, Information and Adjutant General Sections.

COL. SHAW

The 11th Medical Battalion, with its Headquarters and Headquarters Company and Company A, provides the division with air ambulance service, plus normal medical facilities through the dispensary. It is one of two units within the support command that has a previous history with the former 11th Airborne Division.

The division supply function is provided by the 408th Supply and Service Company. This unit furnishes all classes of supply with the exception of special ammunition, repair parts, medical

Aviation Group Gives 11th Eyes

By 1st Lt. Daniel Funk

While many units of the 11th Air Assault Division can boast of proud heritages and have strong ties with distinguished Units of the past; there are also those within the division that have no prototypes, no forerunner, no foundation on which to base organizational structure and doctrine.

One such unit, and an unique one in all respects, is the 11th Air Assault Aviation Group, commanded by Col. George P. Seneff. This group, which was born February 15, 1945 along with the division itself, is the striking innovation which distinguishes the division from all others, because the division must look here for the very essence of its air mobility concept. Here is where the air aircraft, both helicopter and fixed - wing, are concentrated.

The group provides the eyes and ears of the division - an air cavalry troop with its fast, armed helicopters, some of which can pack a punch as heavy but more effective than conventional artillery.

Ahead of the helicopters would be the Army's Mohawk surveillence aircraft, using their detection capability to direct artillery and rocket - firing helicopters to any targets they acquire.

Troop units, ground based weapons systems, and supplies will be quickly transported into positions from which surprise attacks can be made against enemy concentrations.

In some cases assault troops will be delivered right on top of the enemy. Thus the air assault division develops the terrible shock action which can immobilize and destroy the will to fight of enemy forces even though they may severely out-number our forces.

The jobs performed by the group are many and varied, ranging from administrative aviation support to providing fire support directly on an objective. Comprising a Headquarters and Headquarters Company and eight tactical units, each with a specialized mission, the group becomes the hub of the concept embodied in the air assault division.

Flexibility Is Key To Brigade Role

By 1st Lt. Richard Sinatra

Flexibility is the key word to describe the organization and operations of an air assault brigade.

Following the ROAD principle, the 1st Air Assault Brigade, commanded by Col. George S. Beatty Jr., is a major tactical command headquarters to which combat and supporting elements may be attached to perform specific missions.

The brigade itself has no organic units other than a headquarters. However, depending upon its mission at any particular time, from two to five Infantry battalions and supporting units may be attached to the brigade, giving rise to a "tailored" combat force. It is here at brigade that the men, weapons, and aircraft are bonded together to form that potent force embodied in the air assault concept.

The brigade may be employed as a part of division, or may conduct independent or semi - independent operations against an unsophisticated enemy, the air-mobile brigade can control an area encompassing some 6,000 square miles. This is a staggering figure considering the limited capabilities of a normal infantry brigade dependent upon land lines of communications.

To illustrate, if the brigade established a base of operations in the heart of Columbus, its area of control would cover a circle 95 miles in diameter. Unhampered by terrain restrictions, the air lines of communication make this possible.

The aerial marriage of Army aviation and the combat - equipped Infantryman gives the air assault brigade the range and the striking power to destroy the enemy and to keep him off balance.

Brigade headquarters, relieved of administrative responsibilities as far as possible to allow concentration on tactical control, may also act as an alternate headquarters for the division.

The basic tactical maneuver elements of the brigade are lean and mean air as-

July Named Community Service Month by PWOC

"Community Service," the theme being used for the month of July by The Infantry Center Protestant - Women-of-the-Chapels (PWOC) will be observed with two major projects.

One will be in the area of cancer education and the making of cancer bandages, which according to the American Cancer Society, are greatly needed in the Columbus area.

On Wednesday, July 24, at 9:30 a.m. in Bldg. 2605, the regular meeting day of PWOC, a film strip on smoking will be shown by the American Cancer Society. During the meeting the ladies will make cancer bandages. For this purpose all attending will need to bring scissors, needle, white thread, and four clip clothes pins.

The group will be open to all teenage girls who would like to help in this work.

The free-will offering for the month of July will be used to assist in outfitting her with some college clothes. The Ann Shepherd Home is one of the 33 United Givers Agencies in Columbus. Further plans will be announced at the meeting concerning arrangements that have been made to help provide summer recreation, fun and informal education for the girls in the Shepherd Home.

Ladies who cannot participate regularly, but who are interested in this month's projects are welcomed and urged to come by with club members. Any who need transportation to the meeting, teenage girls included, may call Mrs. Grace Woolf, 544-1557. Mrs. Woolf will arrange rides with regular members.

Hostesses for this occasion will be Mrs. Silas Decker and Mrs. Lylian Kennedy.

A free nursery will be available in Bldg. 2606 on Dixie Road.

NCO Wives Club Holds First Meet

The Non-Commissioned Officers' Wives Club held its first business luncheon of the summer recently at Crain Hall.

Centerpieces of snapdragons, daisies, stocks and gladioli, laced with green ferns, carried out the theme of the luncheon, "Summertime." White tablecloths and green and white crystal completed the decorations.

A short business meeting was held, and announcements were made concerning forthcoming events of the NCO Wives Club.

Mrs. Henry Webb was hostess.

Members serving on various committees are: parliamentarian, Nita Valent; program, Peggy Farmer; bridge, Bertha Blois; hospitality, Louise Sanderson: ceramics, Wanda McDonald, chairman, Marie Doyle; membership, Pat Booth, sunshine-flowers, Alma Smith, and cards, Edith Sassner.

Publicity, Rachel Lowery; mimeographing of newsletter, Peggy Denany. Marie Fowler, addressing newsletters, Mary Barfield, Rita Samples, Edith Sassner and Katie Graham, and Red Cross coffee call, Edith Fritz.

Welfare, Inez Monyhan, Bernice Henderson, Eleanor Dobrosky; games, Flora Brewer, chairman, Phyllis Resiak, and Bernice Henderson; workshop, chairman, Helen Henson, Ethel Speech, treasurer, and Dorothy Blanton, buyer.

Bermuda Party Held at MOOM

The wives of student officers, Associate Career Course (ACAR) 4, Detachment 2, 2nd Student Battalion, held their final meeting in the form of a bermuda party on the Supper Club Patio, Main Officers Open Mess.

Mrs. Paul Winthers extended a special thanks to the guest of honor, Mrs. William E. Kiloran, for her continued aid to the ladies.

Arrangements were made by Mrs. Victor E. Esch and the social committee.

New Intern Wives Are Briefed On Life at Army Hospital

Wives of 10 of 15 interns recently assigned to Martin Army Hospital attended an orientation recently in the hospital's main conference room.

The medical and dental Intern wives were welcomed by Col. William A. Todd Jr., hospital commander, and Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, post dental surgeon.

The duties and responsibilities of interns and projected plans for the 1963-1964 intern program were presented by Major George J. Schonholzt, assistant director of professional training at the hospital.

Mrs. Todd discussed customs of the service, while Mrs. Schonholtz outlined Woman's Club activities.

The intern wives also took a guided tour of the post by bus. Mrs. Frederick F. Krauskopf, wife of Col. Krauskopf, chief of the Department of Surgery, narrated.

Teens Learn Sewing Art

Several young ladies, ranging in ages from 12 to 17, have just completed a six week course in teenage sewing, taught by Mrs. Elizabeth Westall.

The sewing sessions were given with the thought that by being with other girls, the students would learn from each other. They were taught methods of measuring, cutting and stitching their apparels, and were told about various types of materials.

Mrs. Westall's class gave information on the finer points of producing seams, economy in cutting of fabrics and attractive workmanship. Says Mrs. Westall: "Producing a scrap of fabric into a presentable, wearable garment is a joy to both the student and the instructor. It is an artistic skill!"

Students in the teenage sewing class were Jo Anne Coveny, Wanda Hodges, Sue Kendrich, Patricia McGarry, Bonnie Nelson and Kathy Morgan. Others were Elvira Shanchez, Barbara Sankey, Beth Schlitzkus, Pat Reid and Alison Youngs.

Adult sewing classes in three sections will begin in the fall. Mrs. Westall will instruct in beginner, intermediate and advanced sewing. A special class on pattern drafting or costume designing will also be introduced to the ladies who have completed advanced sewing, or the equivalent thereof.

Pre-Kindergarten Open for Tots

By Marge Lemon

Have you ever spent a rainy morning alone with a three or four-year-old toddler?

Chances are you were probably swamped with dozens of "Mommy, what can I do?" type questions after chasing them throughout the house as they attacked your perfume or lipstick or as they playfully wrote all over the walls.

But these busy mornings for Mom and boring mornings for the toddler can be used to advantage. Mom can be free to handle her obligations without worrying about the tot, and the tot can have fun with others its age and can use the time to learn.

Your children can go to school in September. The Pre-Kindergarten of Fort Benning accepts enrollment August 21 and 22.

As a project of the Woman's Club, the school runs a regular nine - month educational term with classes in session from 9 to 11:30 a.m. The children are transported to and from school via the car pool system.

The primary aim of the pre-kindergarten school is the development of respectful attitudes. The children are taught respect for each other, their clothing, toys and health. They learn to recognize colors in painting class, to sing and draw, and to stand quietly in line.

They are taught to recognize their own coats hanging in the hall and to button them by themselves — all difficult tasks for the very young.

Following directions in a group is a new experience to most, but the post fire marshall reported that the children respond so well to orders that even in the midst of finger-painting sessions, they clear the building in less than a minute at weekly surprise fire drills.

The program of the school is designed around themes. They start with back-to-school; all activities are then centered around that theme. In February the children are given their first introduction to history, as Washington and Lincoln are the themes then.

The school's music supervisor, Mrs. Frank Doose, visits the school three mornings a week and teaches them songs which blend with their theme for the month. Decorations are always changed to match each theme.

Mrs. Gregory Brickhouse is the principal of the Pre-Kindergarten. She will be aided by an assistant principal, nine teachers and a nurse.

The nurse at the school offers demonstrations, films and stories which introduce the children to what he may expect on his first visit to the dentist, school nurse or doctor.

Applications arrive at Fort Benning each summer from as far away as Germany. A waiting list is always maintained. The maximum enrollment is quickly filled.

Mrs. Robert M. Hall, who has three children of her own, is chairman of the school board.

Pre-School Teachers Are Needed

The Pre-Kindergarten School, sponsored by the Women's Club, is accepting applications for teachers for the coming school term.

Women interested should reply before July 26 by writing the Pre-Kindergarten School of Fort Benning, P. O. Box 1852, Fort Benning, Georgia. The letter should include the applicant's educational background. Interviews will be arranged in approximately three weeks.

Registration Planned

Registration for Pre-Kindergarten School has been set for August 21 and 22 from 9-12 a.m. at the school building.

It is located in Bldg. 322 in the Old Hospital area on Baltzell Ave. Signs will be set up to guide parents to the school.

The school is open to all children of military personnel ages three and four. The school day runs from 9-11:30 a.m.

For further information, contact the school principal, Mrs. Brickhouse, at 545-7777.

11th Provides Quick-Hitting Support

Mobility has long been the major differential in the determination of success on the battlefield. Hannibal had his elephants, Genghis Khan his mounted Cossacks, and Stonewall Jackson his lightening-fast Infantry.

For centuries there was no major advancement in the means of mobility, but rather field commanders achieved their victories by unique application of the means available—foot soldiers, cavalry, and chariots.

During the American Civil War, the infant railroad was used to great advantage by both sides for the strategic movement of large bodies of troops. The first major breakthrough in tactical mobility came about during World War I with the advent of the truck, the tank, and the air vehicle, both the conventional airplane and lighter than air craft.

It was during World War II that the means of mobility made rapid advances and we first began to see the marriage of ground combat units with an air vehicle and we demonstrated the advantages of airborne operations. Perhaps the greatest achievement was in the area of converting the airplane into a weapons platform so as to provide close air support as well as long - range strategic bombardment.

Era of Research

The period since World War II has been an era of research, development and experimentation. The greatest contribution has been the vertical or near vertical take-off and landing capabilities of helicopters and certain fixed - wing aircraft. These new air vehicles generated new thinking in the area of mobility, support and logistics.

These ideas resulted in the Howze Board which studied our current aviation technology and the advances in recent years in conventional weapons. It was recognized that these advancements offered a great potential to Army combat power through vastly increased mobility and the accompanying improvement in the variety and volume of firepower that could be delivered on an enemy in the ground battle.

Howze Board

One objective of the Howze Board was to take a bold new look at land warfare mobility with a view to substituting air mobility systems, employing the helicopter and light fixed - wing aircraft to replace in part, as well as to augment, the traditional ground systems—the truck, ground fire support, and the armored combat vehicle wherever such a substitution resulted in an improvement of the Army's combat effectiveness.

The 11th Air Assault Division was organized to test the validity of the assault concept. The training and test program which the 11th is undergoing is essentially designed to test the tactical teams of squad and platoon size and to progress through company and battalion size problems to larger unit exercises.

The field exercises are designed to evaluate the capability of the effectiveness of Army rotary and fixed-wing aircraft as a means of resupplying the air mobile units actively engaged in combat. The integration of aviation in the ground combat environment is a logical and much needed step in the evolution of tactical mobility.

First 1000 Feet

The Army does not desire to dominate the earth's atmosphere. It is, however, vitally concerned with the use of the first thousand feet or so above the earth's surface. It is in this zone that air assault operations will be conducted.

It is here in the environment of the ground soldier that we should take advantage of the capability to move through the air free from the restrictions of the ground which halt or divert ground movement. It is here that the capability and versatility of the helicopter can best be exploited. With rockets, missiles, and rapid fire weapons, it becomes a formidable fighting vehicle capable of immense amounts of firepower.

The suppressive fires helicopters are capable of providing in support of air mobile forces while en route to their objectives will reduce the indirect fire of the enemy along their routes. The very fact that helicopters have these capabilities reduces the effectiveness of the enemy soldier on the ground who knows that he will draw fire in return.

The old adage that there would not be as many duck hunters if the ducks could shoot back was never more true than in this era of rapid advancement of air mobile assault units of which the 11th Air Assault Division is the pioneer.

Air Assault Artillery Unit Traces Its History Back to World War I

By PFC Don Bachman

Like most other division units, the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery is in an embryonic state of development.

Divarty at present consists of a Headquarters and Headquarters Battery and a composite artillery battalion. However, according to Col. Richard T. Knowles, Divarty commander, it will grow along with the division as the air assault concept matures.

Despite the newness of Divarty, the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 42d Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. John H. Linden, is the oldest unit in the 11th Air Assault Division and is again participating in a major transition between past and future Army concepts and development.

In 1918, when the Army was undergoing the change from horse flesh to horsepower, Battery B, 42nd Field Artillery, was organized as an element of the 14th Division and earned its campaign streamer in Alsace that same year. It was demobilized in 1919.

In 1933 the 42nd Field Artillery was reconstituted as a regular Army unit. In 1940, the unit was redesignated the 42nd Field Artillery Battalion. During World War II it won five campaign streamers for action in the European Theater. In addition to these honors, the unit holds five decorations, including the Belgian Fourragere.

In 1946 the 42nd Artillery was deactivated and in 1947 activated once again and in 1950 was consolidated with Battery B, 2nd Coast Artillery, to be designated Battery B, 42nd Field Artillery Battalion. In 1957 the unit was relieved from assignment to the 14th Infantry Division, deactivated and concurrently redesignated Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery.

In 1958, the 42nd again became active witness to Army progress when it was redesignated as the 2nd Missile Battalion, 42nd Artillery, and assigned to the Third Army Missile Command at Fort Bragg, N.C. This unique command not only proved a milestone in Army weaponry, but also helped to foster air transportability as a working concept.

With this background of progress and tradition while serving in two World Wars and the trying times in-between, it was no surprise to unit personnel to find that the 42nd Artillery had been chosen to provide the fire power support for the new 11th Air Assault Division.

For the third time in its history the unit finds itself involved in one of the Army's great strides forward. In what has been termed of equal importance to the transition from horses and mules to vehicles, the 11th Air Assault Division is developing a concept that will make entire divisions independent of land transportation and give them the capability to move and deploy entirely by air.

Today the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 42nd Artillery, has expanded to include five batteries: Headquarters, Headquarters and Service Battery; Battery A (105 mm Howitzer); Battery B (Little John Rocket); Battery C (Aerial Rocket); and Aviation Battery.

Divarty is engaged daily in the sling loading of howitzers and Little John rockets to develop and test the new concept. It makes use of helicopters and STOL (Short Take-Off and Landing) aircraft as a means of swift tactical mobility.

Its men maintain a high degree of soldier proficiency and individual readiness through a strenuous program of psysical training and technical instruction. Individual field training is highlighted by the air assault tactic of rappelling from hovering helicopters, a technique used extensively by survey crews who may be the first to land in a forward area firing position.

Testing will continue during the summer at Fort Benning and Fort Stewart, Ga.

The 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery, will continue to add to the tradition and history of its service to the nation as a part of the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery through its contributions to the air assault concept of mobile fire power.

Prototype of Modified M-14 Rifle Received by Museum

By John Holland

The first prototype of a modified M-14 rifle, an automatic weapon which retains the good characteristics of the old Browning automatic rifle (BAR), but which also has several advantages over the BAR, has been presented to the Infantry Museum by Col. Robert C. Williams, president of the Infantry Board.

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, accepted the rifle on behalf of The Center and the museum.

The idea for the modified rifle was conceived by Capt. Durward D. Gosney, a test officer with the Infantry Board.

Through the use of four major modifications to the standard M-14 rifle, Capt. Gosney's weapon has three outstanding characteristics:

(1) It is lighter in weight; (2) it is more reliable, and, (3) it provides for use of the same basic mechanism in both rifles and automatic rifles within the Infantry rifle squads, reducing training and maintenance problems.

All advantages of the weapon over the BAR were realized while still retaining both the accuracy and firepower characteristics of the BAR.

The standard M-14, which was supposed to replace the M-1 rifle and the BAR, has been a success as a replacement for the M-1. But, when it was tested by troops in the field, it was found not to be an adequate replacement for the BAR due to its large dispersion pattern and excessive recoil effects.

The four modifications employed by Capt. Gosney to make the M-14 shoot as well as the BAR, but still retain the other advantages of the M-14 were:

(1) A compensator at the end of the rifle barrel which reduces recoil by 25 per cent; (2) the compensator, through large ports in the 10 o'clock position, tends to hold the weapon to the right (this reduces the tendency of the dispersion pattern of an automatic burst to move to the left when fired by righthanded firers); (3) a straight-line stock, which makes the effects of the remaining recoil less severe, since the straight stock innovation causes the weapon to recoil directly to the rear, where a rubber pad at the butt further softens the recoil, and, (4) the addition of front and rear pistol grips further increases the gunner's control of the weapon.

Ground Pressures

When the front (hinged) handgrip is pulled to the rear, the total ground pressure of the bipod legs is increased from seven to approximately 31 pounds (when fired by the average soldier) and this increased pressure securely anchors the front end of the weapon.

Through the modifications, any M-14 can be converted into an automatic rifle in a matter of minutes by the company armorer without altering the basic M-14 system.

This weapon almost never malfunctions and has another added function over the BAR in that it can be fired semi-automatically and is particularly good when fired at a rapid semi-automatic rate.

Initial work on the modified rifle was started by Capt. Gosney in January, 1962, and had been fabricated under his guidance. In addition, sufficient firing tests had been completed to prove the validity of the concept.

On April 12, 1962, a firing demonstration was conducted for Gen. Herbert B. Powell, then commanding general of Continental Army Command. The demonstration was so successful that CONARC recommended that modifications conceived and fabricated by Capt. Gosney be refined and engineered by personnel of the Springfield Armory and furnished to the Infantry Board for tests.

Before any Springfield Armory models were received, Capt. Gosney fabricated additional models and continued his testing. Results surpassed requirements stated in approved the automatic rifle.

DA Officers

In November, 1962, another successful demonstration was conducted for Department of the Army senior officers and in December another for the assistant secretary of the Army in charge of research and development.

Information was received by the Infantry Board early this year that sufficient funds had been allocated to purchase 8,350 of the modified stocks and compensators so two M-14 USAIB rifles could be contained in each rifle squad.

"The ingenuity and resourcefulness displayed by Capt. Gosney in developing these modifications to improve the automatic fire capabilities of the M-14 rifle should be an inspiration to all members of the U.S. Army," Col. Williams said.

Presentation

Another presentation made to the Infantry Museum the same day was one of the first developmental models of the 90-mm recoilless rifle, an anti - tank weapon designed to replace the 3.5-inch rocket launcher.

And the troops say ahhh! The U.S. Army CH-47A Chinook designed and produced by the Vertol Division of Boeing can open its rear-loading, 30 foot long cargo compartment to handle internal loads up to 7'6" wide x 6'6" high. Internal loads of 6 tons can be carried for the Army's standard 100-nautical mile radius mission. For shorter missions the Chinook can carry over 7 tons of external payload.

Whether it is personnel, supplies, or weapons the Chinook can pick up a big payload and put it down—FAST. Add to this load carrying ability, all-weather, day-night flight capability and ease of maintenance, and you can see why the Chinook will do its job and do it well for the U.S. Army in the outposts of the Free World.

Creative engineering, forward thinking weapons system program management and the vast resources of the Boeing Company have made the Chinook possible.

2nd Battalion Rotaplans to Mannheim As Sister Battalion Departs Europe

By Bob de Camara

Soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry from Fort Benning, loaded down with battle gear, loaded on waiting Air Force jet transports at Warner-Robbins Air Force Base last Tuesday. The destination of the 2nd Division troops was Germany and six months of duty under the Rotaplan rotation system there.

They took with them a solid block of orientation in the customs, history and traditions of Germany. They also had months of intensive tactical training during which the men spent four days of every week bivouacked in the field as their battalion changed over from straight infantry to a mechanized infantry unit.

Many of the men also left behind families in the Columbus area. An economic factor of Rotaplan stipulates that "dependents" may not be transported overseas for the short tours at government expense.

While in Germany, Rotaplan units from Fort Benning train with the "Golden Arrow" 8th Infantry Division. The 2nd Battalion, 9th is the fourth 2nd Division unit to see duty in Europe since Rotaplan's inauguration in October of last year.

Soldiers consigned to the 8th Division were allowed 125 pounds of personal gear along with the mandatory military equipment that each man packs.

Before the 12,310 pounds of weapons, records and other combat equipment could be loaded for the trans-Atlantic flight, a series of announced and unannounced inspections were made to assure the gear's perfect order.

The inspections necessitated preparations down to the smallest detail. Perhaps the most grueling of these was the unheralded Command Maintenance Readiness Inspection. Another, the annual general inspection, gave soldiers the benefit of a warning, but was unparalleled for thoroughness.

Strike Commander Visits 'Second to None' Division

By Bob de Camara

Gen. Paul D. Adams, four-star commanding general of U. S. Strike Command, flew into the 2nd Infantry Division garrison area at Fort Benning last Monday for a close look at the division's preparations for Swift Strike III.

As overall commander of the joint Army and Air Force units which make up Strike Command, Gen. Adams will be in charge of the mamouth Swift Strike maneuvers upcoming later this month in the Carolinas.

Second Division troops will start leaving Fort Bening later this month for the war games, largest the peacetime services have ever held.

Gen. Adams addressed more than a thousand division officers and key enlisted personnel in a movie auditorium during his visit. The general brought up various topics on Swift Strike III of interest to the "Indianheads" who take part as one of the chief combat forces on the "Red" side.

The realistic, simulated battle lines up with the 2nd Division aligned with the 5th Infantry Division from Fort Carson, Colo., against the Army's airborne divisions. Each side will also boast squadrons of the Air Force's latest swept-wing jet fighters for air support.

In the division conference room where Gen. Adams and Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Division commanding general, headed after leaving the theater, major unit commanders of the division and the general staff officers greeted and briefed the visiting general.

Emphasis was placed on training the division has undergone in anticipation of the huge summer conflict. Routes to the Carolinas were reviewed.

In the auditorium Gen. Adams stressed this year's streamlined look of the joint forces. Joint supply and logistics was one field given intense consideration. So were new air support systems.

"There's not a single service that can win a war by itself but between us, by gosh, we can."

The "current national strategy of flexible response" was described by the four-star general as knowing how hard to hit an opponent.

"If you're in a fight with someone you might not want to kill him but just knock him down." This topic came up when Gen. Adams spoke of the modern Army's knockout power, running the gamut from the Sunday punch of battlefield nuclear weapons down the line to small-unit skirmishing.

The commanding general of Strike Command, which combines the Strategic Army Corps and the Tactical Air Command, got in a personal note when he said that "a leader always knows where his men are and takes care of them."

Officers, sergeants major and squad leaders listened attentively when Gen. Adams brought up Operation "Coulee Crest" in the state of Washington and the Army private who was stranded for hours in a live fire zone.

"We had a man in our last maneuver who got more fire in one day than anybody in this room probably got in a whole war, because his squad leader forgot where he was." (In Operation "Coulee Crest" a young private, fresh out of basic training, stuck by his post for hours and was left unharmed after a pounding by artillery, fighter planes, fighter-bombers and tanks.)

Last Pre-Strike Field Maneuver Held by Division

Combat units, Headquarters and rear elements of the 2nd Infantry Division moved out last Friday by convoy to staging areas on the Fort Benning military reservation for another round of training battles in preparation for Swift Strike III.

The Swift Strike exercises are massive joint force maneuvers in the Carolinas. This year's exercise will pit the 2nd Infantry Division combined with the 5th Infantry Division from Fort Carson, Colo., against the Army's airborne divisions.

The smaller, single division training last week was the third in a series of pre-strike tests. The first two, labeled Pre-Strike I and II, were of the command post exercise type, involving 2nd Division Headquarters, the administration company and support units.

The three-day exercise beginning last Friday was a field training exercise in which the entire division took part. The major difference between a command post and a field training exercise is that the latter includes the fighting line companies.

As in previous preparatory maneuvers, the problems were based on the structure of Swift Strike III. Emphasis was on counter-guerrilla warfare and anti-airborne operations. Communications and intelligence was given a thorough testing.

Details of Swift Strike III are carefully guarded by the units involved. The war game is treated as seriously as the real thing, and the simulated combat made as realistic as possible.

Swift Strike III will kick off at the end of this month when participating units start rolling towards the Carolinas. On the ground, foot-slogging Army infantrymen will be supported by squadrons of the Air Force's latest swept-wing jets.

Last weekend, as will be the case in Swift Strike, the battles were fought for mythological countries.

Noncoms Upped To E-7 at 87th

By 1st Bn 87th Inf PIO

Five noncommissioned officers of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry recently received orders promoting them to the grade of E-7.

They were called to battalion headquarters where Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, battalion commander, presented orders at an informal ceremony. The new E-7's are Edwin W. Shute and Burl D. Claborn, Headquarters Company; Charles L. Eschbach, Company A; John L. Keller, Company B; and Randall E. Earl, Company C.

NEW SUPPORT COMMAND COMMANDER
Col. William J. Ray

Col. Ray Takes Charge Of Div. Support Command

Col. William J. Ray recently took over as commanding officer of the 2nd Infantry Division's Support Command. He comes to the 2nd Division from the U. S. Army War College.

Col. Ray received his commission in June 1943 when he graduated from the U.S. Military Academy. He had previously spent one year at Harvard in Cambridge, Mass. His military schooling has consisted of two courses at the Infantry School; the Command General Staff College; U. S. Army Management School, and he graduated from the U. S. Army War College this year.

After West Point, he served with a 28th Infantry Company. He then first joined the 2nd Infantry Division where he served as a platoon leader and also company commander.

In 1945 he became S-3 for the 3rd Battalion, 9th Infantry. He then served as regimental adjutant for the 9th Infantry until January 1946. He then became a student at the Infantry School studying various weapons.

He went to the Pentagon in 1947 and was assigned to the representative branch. While stationed in Washington, D.C., he served with the military staff center for the United Nations.

In 1948 Col. Ray became Aide-de-Camp for Lt. Gen. Ridgeway, who was at the time the commanding officer of the Caribbean area. Before leaving this assignment he was the commanding officer of Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 33rd Infantry.

In August 1950 he studied management at Harvard University and later became athletic director for his alma mater, West Point.

In 1953 he returned for his second time as aide-de-camp for Gen. Ridgeway. Then in 1955 he became the aide-de-camp to Gen. Maxwell Taylor.

Col. Ray came back to Fort Benning in 1958 as an Instructor for the Tactical Committee Charlie Command and Staff Department, U. S. Army Infantry School. He then became USAIC's deputy comptroller.

Safety Pays Off

There were NO deaths from any cause in the 2nd Infantry Division reported during the Independence Day holiday period. In fact, there were no fatalities in the entire Third U. S. Army area.

This achievement is commendable and is a reflection of command effectiveness at all levels and representative of progress realized in safety awareness among personnel of this command.

Reception Party By 1st of 87th Is Big Success

The officers and wives of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, were honored at a reception and dinner party at the Main Officer's Open Mess recently.

Guests were received by Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, battalion commander; and Mrs. Crosby; Maj. Joseph K. Westbury, executive officer; and Mrs. Westbury.

Special guests were several officers who recently departed the battalion for other duties. They were: Capt. Ernest E. Cross, Lt. and Mrs. William Francis, and Lt. and Mrs. Henry B. Thorpe Jr.

Before dinner, the officers and their ladies gathered for cocktails in the main ballroom of the club: in the center of which stood a large hors d'oeuvres table adorned with a dozen tall candles and a centerpiece of red gladiolis and white carnations.

Following the dinner in the Supper Club, Col. Crosby welcomed new members to the battalion family. He then presented "baby cups" to Mrs. Westbury, Mrs. Francis, and Mrs. Dahl Marshall for the newest arrivals to the battalion.

A quartet from Companies B and C, who call themselves "the Conquerer's," entertained with musical selections, and were well received by the guests.

87th Receives New Lieutenant

By 1st Bn., 87th Infantry PIO

Lt. Robert E. Prichett, newly graduated from The Infantry School, was recently assigned as communications officer at Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Mech), 87th Infantry.

He succeeds Lt. Anthony J. Zevgolis, who is assigned as antitank platoon leader.

A native of New Castle, Ind., Lt. Prichett worked with Western and Southern Life Insurance Company prior to entering the Army. He enjoys bowling and playing basketball.

Reveille Reveals (Six) Missing

By Carl Halstead

The soldiers grumbled, as all soldiers do after waking up so early in the morning; especially after having a long weekend. Most were dressed, but a few hopped along on one foot trying to make formation and tie their boot-strings at the same time.

The platoons fell into line and squad leaders took count. Their reports went to the platoon sergeants, and from them to the first sergeant. Finally, the company report was in. It was at that moment shock set in.

"Whaaat!" A voice shouted. "Are you sure?"

A bewildered, sad reply came, "I sure am Sarge. They're gone — AWOL! All six of em!"

All Gone!

Panic ensued. Everyone rushed to the front of the building. Sure enough! They were gone. All six of 'em!

A general search of the area was made, but to no avail. With regret, the roll-call roster was marked that the following names were absent without leave from morning reveille: Capt. Lollar, Lt. Hasen, Lt. Carney, Lt. Fulton, 1st Sgt. Santiago and Sgt. Miles. Six two-foot long alligator deserters — REAL alligators!

In a fenced in area in Company B, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, had been housed six alligators, one crocodile and a turtle. Pets, mascots—you name it! Whatever the case, six were gone.

On Saturday, before leaving for a long weekend, the men reported all pets present and accounted for. But, when the "Bravo Rangers" returned to duty the following Tuesday, there remained only one crocodile and a turtle. Someway, somehow — at sometime; six alligators had packed AWOL bags and made it!

Today, almost a month later, there is still no word on the escapees. No one has the slightest idea where they disappeared to. But, scuttlebutt has it, all six have been given up for lost.

Capt. Clifton D. Lollar, commanding officer of Company B, and for whom one of the alligators was named, said that the remaining crocodile would be rewarded for his "devotion to duty" for sticking it out instead of "going over the hill" with his slimy friends. There was no mention of a reward for the turtle. What can you give a turtle? However, the reward for said crocodile is to be a companion. (An old Army adage comes to mind: "Never volunteer for anything.")

The crocodile has had companions before. In one three-day period, the lonely fella had two snakes and a rabbit for bosom buddies. But the word has it, "all proved unfaithful to duty."

Just where six alligators would go in the 2nd Division Kelley Hill acreage is anybody's guess. However, a lot of soldiers have suddenly taken up a nightly ritual of looking under their sheets before getting into bed.

2 Officers Join Armor

By 72nd Armor PIO

Company B, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor received two new officers this week. New to the battalion are: Lt. Grady R. Leeman and Lt. Wayne J. Lewis.

Both officers entered active duty on April 15, 1963 and reported to Fort Knox, Ky., to attend the Armor Officer orientation Course, prior to joining the 72nd Armor.

Lt. Leeman, a graduate of Middle Tennessee State College in Murfreesboro, Tenn., received a Bachelor of Science degree in agriculture and a Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) commission. After graduation, Lt. Leeman went to work for the Leeman's Landscape Company in Lebanon, Tenn., as a landscape contractor. He was also an active member in the Lebanon Jaycees.

Lt. Lewis, a graduate of Clemson College in Clemson, S. C., received a Bachelor of Science degree in horticulture and, also, an ROTC commission.

Armor Captain to Retire In August After Twenty

Capt. Cecil O. Burbank, commanding officer, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, will retire August 1, after more than twenty years service.

Capt. Burbank started his military career on January 27, 1941 and his first assignment was at Fort Bragg, N.C., as a stable sergeant. He then was transferred to Fort Sill, Okla., and assume the duties as a chief of a firing section on a 105-millimeter howitzer.

Attends OCS

In December 1941, he attended Officer Candidate School (OCS) at Fort Riley, Kan., and graduated in February 1943 as a lieutenant in the U. S. Army Reserve.

He was then assigned to the 9th Cavalry Regiment, 2nd Cavalry Division, at Fort Clark, Texas and assigned duties as regimental horse officer. Shortly thereafter he was transferred to Camp Forest, Tenn., where he became a platoon leader for an assault gun platoon.

In 1943, Capt. Burbank was assigned to the Pacific Theater of Operations and participated in the invasion of Biak, a Pacific Japanese stronghold.

He and his wife, Lee, will go to Virginia Beach, Va., after he retires in August. He plans to catch up on his fishing and relaxing.

Famous 'Indianhead' Division Week Named

The battle-proven 2nd (Indianhead) Division returns to San Antonio after an absence of 21 years—but not for garrison duty this trip. Mayor W. W. McAllister officially proclaimed July 21-27 as "Second Division Week" in the Alamo City this year.

Some 400 past and present members of the Army's Infantry unit will converge on the Southwest Texas city for three days of goodtimes talking about oldtimes during their 42nd annual reunion. A large contingent is expected from Fort Benning, present home of the division, now a combat-ready unit of Strategic Army Corps (STRAC).

On hand to accept the proclamation July 10 was Maj. Gen. Hayden L. Boatner, (U. S. Army Ret.) president of the San Antonio Branch, Indianhead Division Association.

The division's slogan, "Second to None" sums up the unit's fighting history in World War I, II, and the Korean Conflict.

It was activated October 1917 at Bourmont, France, made up of Army and Marine Corps units, and won more decorations than any other division in six battle campaigns.

The division remained in San Antonio until November, 1942, then shipped to Wisconsin for training in ski and paratroop operations. From there they went to Ireland and Wales for training during the period October 1943 to June 1944.

On D-Day they hit the Normandy Beach and fought their way across Europe in five major battles until May 1945 when at Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, the war in Europe ended.

Called into action again during the Korean Conflict, the division was among the first combat-ready units to hit the peninsula in 1950. During that bitter three-year struggle, the men wearing the black shield with its white Indianhead fought in ten major campaigns.

72nd Armor Sergeant Retires After Twenty

By 72nd Armor PIO

More than 20 years service will end August 1, when SFC John H. Dickey, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, retires.

Sgt. Dickey entered the Army in January 1943 and took his basic training at Fort Knox, Ky. After basic, he proceeded to Fort Campbell, Ky., and served in the 20th Armored Division.

Later in 1943 he was sent to Fort Ord, Calif., for amphibious training. After completing this training he was shipped with his unit to Hawaii for more amphibious training and jungle warfare training.

Assigned to the 7th Division he was part of the force at the invasion of Tacloban, on the island of Leyte. He was also a part of the amphibious force that invaded the stronghold of Okinawa.

When the war ended in the Pacific, he rotated to the U.S. and was assigned to the 11th Infantry Regiment, 5th Infantry Division, at Fort Jackson, S. C. In 1947 he was assigned to the 16th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division, in Salesburg, Austria. In 1951 he went to the Infantry School at Fort Benning. In 1952, with the fighting still going on in Korea, he was shipped to the Logistical Command there and received two combat stars.

In 1955 Sgt. Dickey was assigned to the 85th Artillery, 10th Infantry Division, at Fort Riley, Kan., and was with that unit when it was assigned to Kitzengin, Germany.

He returned to the U. S. with the 85th Artillery, stationed at Fort Benning, where the 5th became redesignated as the 12th Artillery.

Later, in 1958, he was assigned to the Main Post Military Police Company with duties attached to the Wild Life Association. He became a game warden. In 1961 he was assigned to the 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 69th Armor, now known as the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Sgt. Dickey is the recipient of the Good Conduct Medal with 5 loops; the Asiatic-Pacific Theater Ribbon with two bronze stars and an arrowhead; the Philippine Liberation Medal; World War II Victory Medal; Occupation Medal; the Korean Service ribbon; United Nations Service ribbon; and, for outstanding performance of duty, the Army Commendation Medal.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

Twentieth Century Prince Charmings

From A d a m's rib came Eve . . . from Adam and Eve and an apple tree came more Adams and Eves . . . and, personally, I think the whole thing was a ghastly mistake!

Today, all Adams think about nothing but all Eves, and all Eves — ah, yes — all they think about, dream about and scheme for, is an Adam . . . a six-foot-five, radiantly handsome Prince Charming to come riding on his white horse and rescue them from the clutches of whatever in the world they are clutched by.

Bronze Adonis

Actually, what they want and d r e a m of is a great bronze adonis who will come charging up the road in his white Mercedes throwing thousand dollar bills to the peasants. A dream guy who works only at getting a suntan on the beaches of the Riviera and obtains callouses solely by straining at the wheel of his yacht. Yet, a Samson who can be easily subdued by a snap of the finger from a tiny provocator of lipstick commercials.

Our gullible Prince Charming is a tower of strength; a pillar of knowledge; yet, a fathead when it comes to the frail, innocent charms of the female. When confronted by one of these modern miracles of subversion he gladly offers a synopsis of his life history — slightly altered.

He is, or at least was, a combination of D o n a l d O'Conner, Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly on the dance floor and knows at least ten famous movie stars personally. He has vacationed in France, Hawaii, and just about every other elite spot in the world (though he hesitates to mention that this took place while he was a PFC in the Army). While in college, he was either a Johnny Unitas, Bob Feller or Ben Hogan and graduated Phi Kappa Phooey, or something.

In other words, this egotistical, charming prince often resembles a mule and the composer of "The Donkey Serenade" must have been inspired by him.

When d a d d y - O Prince Charming first meets his dream girl all sorts of things happen. He starts spending hours before the mirror just to get that last couple of locks in the right place . . . of course, he is automatically the original two-dab man. He begins doing push-ups each morning and gets the car washed and waxed once a week. He stuffs his billfold full of pictures of all his old flames just to see if his dream girl will become jealous. The results of this brilliant idea is the immediate cremation of all pictures and letters, or anything that pertains to another female. Instead of making the guy bristle with anger, this only pleases the big nut.

When he talks over the phone with her . . . uungh! He sighs, murmurs and mumbles a bunch of gooey stuff and smiles like a possum eating razor blades when she tells him how clever she thinks he is. If he could ever hear these "talks" played back to him via a tape recorder he would undoubtedly become violently ill.

Prince Charming Slips

Then, at long last, he lands her. (We pause here for a moment of silent prayer) They unite in Holy matrimony and Prince Charming begins to slip off his white horse then and there. The callouses on his hands aren't from the wheel or any yacht and the only suntan he gets comes from mowing the yard with his shirt off.

The sight of his dream girl in the mornings with all the grease, pin curlers and, suddenly, no eyebrows is enough to pop one of Frankenstein's electrodes.

Usually, he falls asleep on the couch and his real-life princess drifts off into slumber dreaming herself to be Elizabeth Taylor, all alone, w i t h half-a-dozen wedding bands on her finger, and surrounded by horrible monsters. Then, just like fantasy - land, appearing out from a corner of her dream comes a white stallion racing toward her. And tall in the saddle is her Prince . . . looking strangely similar to Rock Hudson. Sighing, sleep comes. And so, to P r i n c e Charming and his Princess . . . goodnight, sweet dreams, and baloney!

Classroom Instructions

Drivers of the battalion received classroom instruction in European road signs and highway laws. Each classroom boasted identical, and confusing, replicas of the colorful markers that dot German autobahns and village streets.

In every area of military exercise, the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry had been primed to fit smoothly into the realistic routine of American Army units already on duty only short miles from the Iron Curtain in Germany.

In Europe, the 2nd Battalion, 9th will pick up mechanized maneuvers where it left off at Fort Benning. Months before each Rotaplan unit's departure date, the units are converted from straight infantry to mechanized infantry.

No sooner had the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry started on their way for Germany than men of the 1st Battalion, a sister battalion of the 2nd, started arriving back at Fort Benning's 2nd Infantry Division.

New G-4

A new chief of supply and logistics (G-4) for the 2nd Infantry Division took place yesterday.

He is Lt. Col. John E. Connolly, formerly commander of the 37th Artillery Battalion of the 2nd Division Artillery. In ceremonies on Knight Field recently, Col. Connolly relinquished command of the 37th.

The colonel will replace Lt. Col. Edwin T. O'Donnell who is going to the National War College in Washington, D. C. Col. O'Donnell also headed a division battalion before assuming duties as G-4. His old command was the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

New Sgt. for 7th

By 7th Cavalry PIO

Among the newly assigned personnel at the division's 7th Cavalry is Sgt. Eleno Roldan. He is assigned as a rifle squad leader, 1st platoon, Troop B.

Sgt. Roldan arrived in the "Gary Owen" on June 20. His last duty station was Fort Jackson, S. C.

Q. M. Sales Van To Tour Division

The latest convenience in clothing sales for the Second Infantry Division soldier is a huge tractor-trailer van stocked with all the items an infantryman needs for work clothing.

A mobile extension of Army Quartermaster Clothing Sales, the truck will alternate at the Sand Hill and Kelley Hill areas five days a week all year long, selling articles of military apparel.

Such things as fatigue uniforms, boots, neckties and unit crests will be sold. Dress uniforms, khaki and Army green uniforms and civilian clothing will not.

Maj. Charles O. Chisley II, assistant chief of supply and logistics, credit the original idea to the personnel section. The major testifies that he "took the ball from there and coordinated with Main Post to get it done."

Previously, "Indianhead" soldiers seeking to replace clothing had to make the considerable trip from Sand Hill or Kelley Hill to Fort Benning proper to buy.

It is "a tremendous timesaver from the division standpoint having this facility in the division," says Maj. Chisley.

The idea at first was for the truck to operate only two or three days a month. The tremendous outlay of money to equip and operate the van makes it necessary to operate it full time. Continued operation will be based on response.

"We encourage our people to use it in order that we may justify its existence," adds the supply major. "We welcome ideas on things to have in the van to make it more successful."

Monday and Friday mornings from 9 to 12, and Wednesdays from 1 to 3 in the afternoon the truck will be on Sand Hill in the shopping area. Tuesday mornings from 9 to 12, and Thursday afternoon from 1 to 3 it will be located on Kelley Hill.

Col. Mendenhall to Head Division's 37th Artillery

The second change of command ceremony involving 2nd Division artillerymen in two days took place last Thursday on Knight Field and saw Lt. Col. Francis E. Mendenhall installed as 37th Artillery Battalion commander.

On Wednesday, at the same field, a native of Columbus and graduate of Columbus High School, Col. Burnside E. Huffman, took command of division artillery as a whole.

In his first day of overall command, Col. Huffman sat on the sidelines and witnessed the changeover in leadership of the 37th, one of the five artillery battalions he commands.

Col. Mendenhall replaces Lt. Col. John E. Connolly, who became the division chief of supply and logistics yesterday.

The highlight of the ceremonies came as the battalion soldiers passed in review under the looming barrels of four 37th Artillery howitzers. Mounted on firing tripods and facing the parade field, the eight - inch howitzer and three 155-millimeter howitzers are a sampling of Col. Mendenhall's command.

The Knight Field review also included brief talks by the incoming and outgoing commanders. Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commander of the 2nd Division; Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander; and Col. Robert E. Coffin, assistant division commander, were present for the ceremonies.

Col. Mendenhall comes to the 2nd Division from a position with the Department of the Army in Washington, D.C.

The colonel is married. He and his wife, Gertrude Karen, have two children, Karen Sue, 14, and Francis E. III, 7.

Bound for Europe

By 38th Artillery PIO

Sp4 Edward E. Manns, one of the members of Battery B, 38th Artillery, has received orders for Europe and will report during the month of August.

He is a native of Buffalo, N.Y., and came to the 37th Artillery in 1962. He was subsequently assigned to the 38th.

17th Artillery Man Promoted in Grade

By 17th Artillery PIO

Capt. William Heyman, Battery A, 17th Artillery, was recently promoted to his present rank.

Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert, commanding officer of the 17th Artillery, presented Capt. Heyman with the new captain's bars while in the field last Saturday.

Capt. Heyman, who now makes his home in San Francisco, Calif., attended Boston University before enlisting in 1958. Capt. Heyman attended the Officer Candidate School (OCS) at Fort Sill, Okla., and was commissioned in July 1959.

Prior to joining the 17th Artillery the OCS graduate served with the 77th Artillery in Korea.

BEST DRIVER CITED . . . PFC William T. Kirschbaum, Company B, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, is awarded his certificate for being chosen driver of the month from Capt. Alfred E. Klemm, company commander.

MRS. WARREN G. FREEMAN, Publicity Chairman, Ladies of the Big Indianhead ☆ ☆ ☆ MRS. RICHARD HAY, Publicity Chairman, Officers Wives Club

Mrs. Smith Is Awarded U. S. Lady Monthly Title

By Mrs. Warren G. Freeman

A presentation of a gleaming silver platter to Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith by Mrs. Wayne Cliff, president of Ladies of the Big Indianhead, highlighted the July luncheon of this organization.

An extremely distinguished board of women headed by Mrs. Robert S. McNamara, wife of the Secretary of Defense, makes a selection monthly from thousands of applicants upon which to bestow this singular honor.

One's contribution to her community through volunteer work with clubs and community agencies plays a major role in guiding the decision of the board. Serving together with Mrs. McNamara are wives of Chiefs of Staff, wives of the heads of each branch of service, the chiefs of each of the women's branches and selected enlisted men's wives.

Mrs. Smith's active membership in Ladies of the Big Indianhead dates back to the early fall of 1958, with her having joined shortly after the chartering of the organization. She has served as a president and under other administrations as chairman of publicity, entertainment, and hospital welfare committees.

Continuing a notable contribution to the Columbus - Fort Benning community, Mrs. Smith is president of Sword and Pen, a member of National Travel Club, The Chattahoochee Valley Natural History Club, Noncommissioned Wives of Fort Benning, and a volunteer worker in the bloodmobile unit of the American Red Cross.

A dedicatory song was requested. The number "Trees" was played by Mrs. Warren G. Freeman.

Mrs. Jones Reddick, writer of the article submitted to the U. S. LADY, was present and introduced as a guest.

Mrs. Cliff presented a farewell gift to Mrs. James D. Speer, who was serving her second term as secretary of Ladies of the Big Indianhead. Mrs. Speer's husband received orders for Korea and they will soon.

Following the introduction of other guests and new members, the ladies enjoyed bingo. Ladies whose husbands are 2nd Division personnel are urged to join and take an active part in this organization.

ROTA-CENTER HAS CHANGE IN COMMAND CEREMONY
(L-R) Mrs. Jack Samson, Mrs. Donald Paul and Mrs. Robert Coffin

Change of Command Held At Rota-Center Meeting

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

Rota-Center, an organization of the dependents and for the dependents of Rotaplan soldiers who serve temporary overseas tours, underwent a "change of command" in ceremonies last week.

Ladies of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, assumed responsibility of the Center from 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry wives in a morning ceremony at the Center's Main Post location. Special guests were: Col. and Mrs. Robert E. Coffin, assistant division commander; Col. and Mrs. Lucion F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander; Lt. Col. and Mrs. Jack Samson, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry commander, and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Donald T. Paul, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry commander.

Also present from the "Second of the Ninth," were Sgt. Maj. and Mrs. Michael S. Reis, and the first sergeants and their wives.

One other 2nd Infantry Division, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, is now in Germany, with three months of its six-month Rotaplan tour remaining. Ladies of the 23rd are currently donating time to their portion of the Center, also.

The purpose of the Rota-Center is to provide assistance, if necessary, for the Rotaplan families while the head of the household is overseas.

Signal Wives Hold Recent Coffee Call

Recently the officers' wives of the 122nd Signal Battalion held their monthly coffee in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess, where Mrs. Donald W. Goodman and Mrs. Walter Johnson acted as hosteeses.

Mrs. Johnson poured and favors were given to those who are leaving. A small pizza was given to Mrs. Gus H. Grisard, who is going to Italy.

Engineer Wives Club Greet New Members

The new members are: Mesdames Joel N. Pugh, Joseph L. Andrews, and Robert Redd, all from Ft. Belvoir, Va.; and Mrs. Thomas M. Kaney from Tampa, Florida.

Silver trays were presented as farewell gifts to Mrs. Neil R. Weinser, who is returning to civilian life, Mrs. Miles McClendon, who is moving to Birmingham, Alabama, while Lt. McClendon is in Korea, and to Mrs. William C. Carter Jr., whose husband is assuming duty at the Infantry School.

Mrs. Geoffrey Fosbrook presided over the business meeting. Plans were made for a welcome luncheon which was held Monday at the Main Officer' Open Mess in honor of Mrs. Beverly Snow, wife of the incoming battalion commander.

The coffee for August was cancelled because of the planned absence of many of the wives.

Holds Farewell

A picnic theme with picnic basket decorated with flowers served as the centerpiece, and later as the doorprize, which was won by Mrs. Braxton Snowden.

Farewell was said to Mrs. William Priest.

Newcomers welcomed were Mesdames William F. Zucchelli, Robert Fitchett, and Dick Roach.

S&T Wives Host Coffee

The Supply and Transport Battalion wives were hostesses for the Support Command Coffee held in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. Chester Kock arranged zinnias and fern in a Meissen bowl for the table decoration. Mrs. Norman Essick poured.

The S&T wives are planning their August Coffee to combine farewells to those departing and welcomes to new members.

Departing Mrs. L. Kunzig Honored at Farewell Party

Hostesses for the affair were Mesdames Frederick V. Harris, Edwin O'Donnell, Richards O. Stewart, William C. Harman, Dudley Bunn, Howard M. Steele Jr. and David S. Moore.

Mesdames Stewart, Harman, Steele and Mesdames Sidney Roche, and John E. Connolly, served.

Pink was the decor color and was carried out in pink tapers in champagne glasses filled with pink water. In the center of the serving table were three feather trees with very small pink satin bows on them. White illusion was gathered at the base of the trees with baby's breath and other summer flowers on the fabric.

Mrs. Charles Billinglea presented Mrs. Kunzig with a silver Revere bowl. She also received a corsage of pink carnations from the hostesses.

Mrs. Robert E. Coffin, wife of Colonel Coffin, new Division assistant commanding officer, and Mrs. Burnside Huffman, whose husband is taking command of Division Artillery, were introduced to the ladies present.

Other newcomers to Division Headquarters are Chief of Staff: Mesdames Walter Robertson and Julian Simerly; G-1; Laverne Dahl, Granville Detherage, and Sherman Everly; G-2; Clarence Vicory, Lawrence Donnerstag, Shelby Roberts, and Forrest Wood; G-3; John McIntire; G-4; John E. Connally and Beverly Dice.

Farewells were said to Mrs. David S. Moore, Mrs. Howard M. Steele and Mrs. Edwin O'Donnell.

COOK of the WEEK

By Mrs. Warren G. Freeman

We're dining out tonight. No, not at a fashionable restaurant, but just outside in the backyard.

Manufacturers of leisure furniture have made it possible for outdoor lovers to turn patios, terraces, or just backyards into attractive areas for out of doors dining.

Our main menu attractions will be our meat and our dessert. Barbecued ribs, and for dessert, snow cake. Mrs. Richard O. Funk and Mrs. Phyllis Maynard respectively share with us their recipes for each.

Barbecued Ribs
2 to 4 lbs., cut in pieces
1 lemon (More if desired)
1 large onion
1 cup catsup
3 cup Worchester sauce
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 teaspoon salt
2 cups of water
Tabasco sauce

Place ribs in shallow roasting pan, meaty side up. On each piece place a slice of unpealed lemon, a thin slice of onion, then roast in oven one hour. Combine remaining ingredients to make sauce. Bring to a boil and pour over ribs. Continue baking in slow oven until ribs are tender — about one to two hours. Baste ribs with sauce every 15 minutes.

Snow Cake
(Prepare Indoors)
½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
½ cup milk
1¼ cup flour
2 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg whites
½ teaspoon vanilla extract or ¼ teaspoon almond extract

Beat egg whites until stiff; add half the sugar and set aside. Cream butter and remaining sugar gradually, beating constantly. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt together; add milk. Fold in egg whites and add flavoring. Bake in moderate 350 degree over 30 minutes.

Bon Voyage Party Given 2nd of 9th

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

A "Bon Voyage" party was held in honor of the officers of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry recently as preparations for their Rotaplan departure for Europe drew to a close.

Sponsored by 3rd Brigade Headquarters, the party, held in the 3rd Brigade messhall was attended by special guests; Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Infantry Division commander; Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander; Col. Robert E. Coffin, assistant division commander; Col. and Mrs. Lucion F. Keller, 3rd Brigade commander; Lt. Col. and Mrs. Jack Samson, commander of the German-bound "Second of the Ninth," and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Donald T. Paul, commander of the returning 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

In a brief speech, Gen. Billingslea spoke of the high standards that have been set by 2nd Division Rotaplan units while overseas.

"We wish the Manchus the best of luck," he said. "I'm confident that they'll uphold the 2nd Infantry Division tradition."

Approximately 50 officers and their ladies attended the afternoon affair, highlighted by a buffet.

Brigade Ladies Meet at MOOM

Ladies of Headquarters of the 2nd Division's 2nd Brigade held their monthly coffee in the Normandy Lounge of the Main Officers Open Mess recently.

Hostess was Mrs. Russell F. Bakey. Mrs. Walter R. Coker poured.

A short meeting was held by Mrs. Dwight D. Dickson, making plans for Summer and Fall activities.

Special guests were Mrs. George D. Crosby and Mrs. William E. Conger.

Farewell Tea Sponsored By Mrs. McIntire

Last Wednesday afternoon Mrs. John E. McIntire honored Mrs. Gus H. Grisard with a farewell tea at the Supper Club.

Special guests included Mesdames Joe Ely, Robert Gabardy, Ben Silver, Edward Townes, Charles Nietman, Tom Nicholson, and W. Wilder.

The floral centerpiece was composed of pink snapdragons and white carnations in a white compote. Mrs. Donald Goodman and Mrs. Charles Clemens presided over the punchbowls, and Mrs. Dwight Covington poured.

Chaplain Section Takes on Enemy In Recent Division Combat Games

By 1st Brigade PIO

Usually the Chaplain's section consists of quiet, mild-mannered soldiers who lend their talents to the burdens that are oft-times heaped upon a Chaplain. When field problems come up they continue this work, out in the boondocks with the rest of the troops. But, war games are for the warriors; not the chaplains or their assistants. However, during the recent 2nd Infantry Division's Pre-Strike field maneuver, combat took a strange twist.

Chap. (Capt.) Duie Jernigan, 1st Brigade chaplain; Sp5 Richard B. Fulton, chief clerk of the chaplain's section; and, PFC William A. Grant, driver and chaplain's assistant, were traveling north up Moye Road, heading for the battle zone, when they came upon the intersection.

As they drew near it another vehicle approached from the north. Both jeeps slowed down for the intersection. The other vehicle turned to the left and the chaplain's jeep went to the right.

Aggressors

It was at this time that the men from the 1st Brigade noticed that the occupants of the other jeep wore the red hats and green jackets of the aggressor forces. The same sudden knowledge must have come upon the aggressors, because both jeeps stopped simultaneously. The aggressors looked at the crew from the chaplain's jeep and they, in turn, stared at the aggressors. Quickly, recognition dawning, the driver of the aggressor vehicle stomped on the gas and the jeep sped away leaving nothing but a cloud of dust in its wake.

"After them!" Shouted Sp5 Fulton.

The Brigade jeep leaped forward, made a quick turn, and took off in pursuit of the enemy. PFC Grant barreled the jeep down the dry and dusty road, but couldn't close the gap. It was then that Sp5 Fulton remembered that only a few minutes previous two convoys of the "good-guy-troops" had turned into the same road the aggressors now traveled.

Realizing that at the rate the enemy was speeding, it would be only a matter of minutes before they ran into the tail of the convoys.

Sure enough, as the aggressor jeep reached the summit of a slight knoll, the driver skidded to a stop. Slowly he turned the jeep around and headed back toward their pursuers.

The chaplain's jeep was quickly placed sideways on the road and the occupants took up positions on both sides of it.

The aggressors approached slowly. When only a few feet from the blockading vehicle, they stopped and got out.

An aggressor with the markings of lieutenant on his shoulder stood by his vehicle as Sp5 Fulton approached him. The lieutenant raised his 45 and Sp5 Fulton leveled his M-1 at him. The lieutenant placed his weapon over his head, looked at the chaplain's clerk rather apprehensively, and laughed.

"Ha! Apparently you guys didn't get the word. We're on an administrative break."

Chap. Jernigan, with rifle in hand, walked up to the two men. The lieutenant pointed at him and cried, "You can't capture me, you're non-combatant!"

"True," the chaplain replied, "but they aren't;" pointing to his assistants. The lieutenant went back to maintaining that they were on an administrative break.

After deciding that no one was getting anywhere standing in the middle of the road, the chaplain and his men ordered the aggressors to follow them to the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry headquarters where they would determine whether or not there was an administrative break. The aggressors obeyed.

It was established, once at headquarters, that there was no such break and that the lieutenant and his men were prisoners.

"But I know we're on a break," he maintained. "You can't do this to me!"

The lieutenant continued to insist that he was on an administrative break as he was placed in the division prisoner of war camp.

Capt. Smith; New S-2 For 2nd Bn. of 38th

By 2nd Bn, 38th Infantry PIO

Capt. Fred Smith has recently joined the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry as the new S-2.

He is a native of Norman, Okla., and a graduate of the University of Oklahoma. He received his commission through the Reserve Officers Training Corps program.

Capt. Smith is a qualified Airborne - Ranger and also schooled in both fixed and rotary wing aircraft.

After attending schools at Fort Benning, Camp Gary, Texas, and Fort Rucker, Ala., Capt. Smith was sent to Fort Devens, Mass., for a flight assignment.

In July 1961, he was sent to Korea and served with KMAG Flight. Following his Korean assignment, he returned to Fort Benning where he was commanding officer of the Combat Support Company, 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry.

Before coming to the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, Capt. Smith served as commanding officer of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

He and his wife, Betty, live at 217A Christian Lane, Fort Benning.

Division Awards Presented In Marne Field Ceremony

A miniature review on flag-rimmed Marne Field last Monday honored 2nd Infantry Division award winners.

Commanders and ranking enlisted men of the "Second to None's" line infantry units attended. Over the weekend the division exercised in remote areas of the Fort Benning military reservation in preparation for Swift Strike .III.

By Monday morning all units were infiltrated back into their garrison areas and ready to pay tribute to the monthly high units in competitive categories such as enlistment and reenlistment.

Participants wore Khaki uniforms and marched to the music of the 2nd Infantry Division band. The commanding general of the 2nd Division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, made the presentations.

SSgt. Edgar S. Jones accepted the "Best Mess" plaque of Sand Hill for Headquarters Company of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

The Kelley Hill plaque was taken by SFC Earl E. Jaeger for Company A of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry.

The quarterly safety award for battalion-size units was won by the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor and accepted by Maj. Robert C. Culverhouse. The company-size plaque belongs to Headquarters Battery of Division Artillery.

Sgt. Emory R. Williams Jr., was given the monthly first term enlistment and reenlistment

1st of 87th, Aggressors In Division War Games

By 1st Bn. 87th Infantry PIO

Special missions marked the participation of the 1st Battalion (Mech.), 87th Infantry in the 2nd Infantry Division's largest field training exercise of the summer, held in Fort Benning's vast military reservation east of U.S. Highway 27.

The most unusual task was a 72-hour command post exercise during which the 1st Battalion was designated as aggressors against all of the other participating elements from the combat ready 2nd Division.

Commanded by Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, the "Conqueror's," wearing dark green, red-hatted aggressor uniforms, effected two major assaults, "blew up" bridges and crossing sites, made helicopter drops of rifle squads, forced a river crossing, and rounded up some prisoners.

From the first hours of the problem their activity varied from initial sporadic small arms fire to simulated heavy mechanized assaults, and it was a tired dusty and field-tested battalion that returned to Kelley Hill when it was finished.

38th Artillery Gets New MSgt.

By 38th Artillery PIO

MSgt. Delmon L. Blackburn, has been assigned to Headquarters Battery, 38th Artillery, as operations sergeant for the S-3 section.

Prior to his arrival to the 38th Artillery, he served with Headquarters Battery, 5th Battalion, 31st Artillery, in Korea, with duties as S-2 Sergeant.

Sgt. Blackburn was assigned to the 101st Airborne Division during World War II, taking part in the Airborne invasion of Normandy in 1944. During the Korean Conflict he was assigned to the 187th Regimental Combat Team during 1950 and 1951.

WEEKLY SERVICE CLUB TOURNAMENTS AROUSE INTEREST

Sports at Service Clubs Are Daily Entertainment

If you ever want to witness some real hot competition I suggest you drop in on your local Service Club most any night. Here you will find a "game" of some kind going on constantly. Choose your poison, or cake if you will; ping pong, pinochle, pool, chess, hearts, shuffle board, or what-have-you. Regardless of your sporting pleasure, there is some kind just especially for you at the Club.

At least once a week the Service Club sponsors prize-winning contests in a lot of the "table games." The pool players at the Kelley Hill Club claim their superiority while the Sand Hill boys are downright challenging that no one, but NO one can beat their pinochle champs.

Yet, each and every week there are new challengers for each of the contests. And, some of the games, are as exciting to watch as any game between the Pros.

There are many varieties of card games, but probably none more stimulating than a good pinochle match. Usually played by opposing partners to a game score of 500, the tricky skill of the players make the game real interesting.

When the score runs up to about 420 to 410 you can watch the bidders playing it close to their chests; squeezing their hands for every possible bit of meld. And, nothing pleases the guy with a good run and about a hundred aces in his hand than to hear his partner give him a solid thirty meld bid.

The game is entertaining to watch and, if you know the way its played, it's fantastic to compete in: especially in competition at the Clubs.

Pool, of course, needs no elaboration. The game calls for utmost in concentration, skill and know-how. Usually the weekly contests at the Service Clubs find the best in the area turning out. And when a couple of good boys get matched in the pairings, then you're in for a real treat.

Ping Pong is probably the fastest of the table games. That little celuloid sphere does some fancy tricks in the ping pong tourneys. There are a number of the 2nd Division soldiers who know how the game is "really" played and can come close to making the white ball talk.

Chess, of course, is a game of concentration and patience. I have always found the game intriging. The players will sit for lengthy periods of time and do nothing but stare at the small statuettes. Occasionally one might decide upon a move and slowly reach out for his choice, then, changing his mind suddenly, he will draw back his hand as if he had come close to touching a snake.

These are a few of the indoor sports readily available at your Service Clubs. Each week there are different players, some new champions.

Sports Bulletin

Wednesday night 2nd Administration Company knocked out a close victory over the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, 6-5, in the division softball championship tournament. This loss by the 38th was their second in the double elimination tournament and put them out of the running.

Both the 2nd Administration Company and 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, have one win and no losses in the tournament. They now collide with each other for the division title. The first one to lose twice comes out second-best.

There were two homeruns during the game; one by each side. Hopkins of the 38th hit one in the bottom of the seventh and Falgout hit one for the Admin Company.

The best two out of three that will now be played by the 2nd Administration Company and the 2nd Battalion, 87th will determine the division champions. It is expected, weather permitting, that the tournament will be over this week.

INDIANHEAD SPORT NEWS

2nd Battalion, 87th Wins First Contest

Defeats 1st of 38th

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry lost a tough one Monday night to the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry 4-3. It was the first game of the division championship softball tournament.

The three leagues winners; 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry; 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry; and, 2nd Administrative Company are meeting in a double elimination tournament to decide the 2nd Division 1963 softball champions.

In the first drawing, 2nd Admin Company drew a "bye" while the 38th and 87th tangled. The loss by the Marnemen puts them squarely in a bind. Their next game, with idle 2nd Admin is a "must" game. One more loss and the 38th nine is out of the tournament.

In the game played under threatening skies, the Marnemen outslugged the opposing team, but still found themselves on the short end of the final score. In the 2nd inning Denis Hunziker slammed a homer over the right field fence for the 38th team and pushed the Marnemen ahead by 2-0. In the first inning Jim Ayers led off with a triple off the center field fence and came on in to score the first run for the Cherokee League champs on center-fielder Alton Calvez's single.

However, starting in the fourth inning the 87th squad began to settle down. By the end of the sixth they had run the score to 4-2, the final verdict. Pitcher Ross Telford of the 38th left in the fourth and Fred Gibbson finished the game.

Now the fat is in the fire, so to speak, for the Marnemen as they must get by the 2nd Administration club to stay in the tournament. If the 38th can drop the Administration nine then they will draw a breather while Admin and the 87th lock horns.

In double elimination tournament play, the team keeping from losing twice is the winner. It is often possible and frequent that the winning team in a double elimination tourney will lose once in play.

All three of the league winners; Commanche League, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry with an undefeated season of 4 wins and 0 losses; Cherokee League, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry with, also, an undefeated season of five wins and no losses; and, Apache League, 2nd Administration Company with five wins and one loss.

The 2nd Administration Company had to have a sudden death playoff in its own league before taking the championship. Both they and 15th Artillery were tied at the end of the season with five wins and one loss apiece, along with the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, who were also wound up in the triple tie. Second Administration Company won out to take the league title and now are facing the once beaten 38th in the first game, for the Administration nine, in division championship play.

It is tentatively planned that the softball championship can be decided by the end of the week.

Admin. Company Takes Championship Playoffs

The Apache League softball playoffs were conducted last week at Admin Field. Three teams completed the regular season deadlocked for first place. The three: 2nd Administration Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry and 15th Artillery swung into playoff action on Wednesday. The 15th Artillery won a thriller from the "Conquerers" by a score of 5-4, thus eliminating the 87th Infantry team.

Then, on Monday night the 2nd Administration Company bombarded the 15th Artillerymen to win the league championship 7-0.

Now the three league winners, 2nd Administration Company, Apache League; 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, Comanche League; and 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, Cherokee League winner, begin a double - elimination playoff for the division championship.

The 2nd Administration team drew a "bye" for the first game at the drawings held at special services. The 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry square off for the first game of the championship. The 2nd Administration team will play the winner of that game

Fort Benning Captures Third Army Tennis Title

By Dave Braun

Fort Benning tucked away another championship last week as its tennis team swept the 1963 Third Army Tournament at Fort Bragg, N. C., copping the open singles, open doubles, senior singles and senior doubles crowns.

Art Foust, runner-up for the post net title in 1962, and former Rice University player, grabbed the open singles championship, downing Shelby Price of Fort Jackson, 6-0, 6-3, in the finals.

In the open doubles competition Foust teamed with Robert Frey to nail the championship, hanging a 6-3, 6-3, defeat on Fort Jackson.

Earlier the twosome had defeated the Fort Bragg doubles team, 6-2, 6-3.

In the senior doubles division once again it was Posado and Joseph Hall of Fort Benning as they raced to a 6-0, 6-0, victory over Fort Bragg in the finals.

Rounding out the team which made the trip to North Carolina were Donald Abbott and Marvin Malmberg.

Malmberg grabbed a 6-2, 6-2, victory in the first round of the tourney before tasting defeat as did Abbott, who outplayed Andrew Alford of Fort Rucker, Ala., 6-2, 6-3, in winning his first round match.

Better Bowling

FOLLOW THROUGH . . . Following something through is as important in bowling as it is in all other things. Even after the ball has left your hand, you must follow it through. For then, and only then, can you be sure that you have gotten the most of your delivery. The follow-through motion guides your ball, keeping it on course. You should be bent over the foul line, hand either at or slightly above eye level. Hand should never be thrown out to left or right.

Local Shooters Represent Army

A strong shotgun team from the Army Marksmanship Training Unit will compete in the Georgia State Skeet Championships at Savannah, Ga., this weekend.

Leading the six-man contingent will be Maj Henry Parr. Shooting on the team will be 1st Lt Gordon Horner, 2nd Lt William Morris III, M-Sg Henry Shaw, Pfc Neil Discianni and Pfc Warren Jensen.

OUTDOOR OUTLOOK

By Snag Tallas

It seems that someone around this area has proclaimed that this year the bass are biting on purple colored artificial worms and eels.

I would like to know why bass on the prey for food should suddenly acquire a taste for a lavender rubber band?

I cannot condemn the use of the purple worm, but at the same time, black, yellow, white, spotted and polka-dot artificial worms are also hooking their fair share.

The artificial worm has been proved to be one of the best still-water, and in some instances fast-water, lures. The worm should have at least two weedless hooks, one at the front and one at the midsection.

The proper method of retrieving this lure is as follows: 1-Keep the top eye of the rod no more than two inches from the surface of the water (this will keep the worm below the surface). 2-Upon contact with the water, let the worm sink almost, if not, to the bottom. 3-Start reeling the lure in very slowly, occasionally jerking the rod, causing the lure to increase its speed for just a second. This sudden quick movement might attract a bass that didn't see the worm before.

Fishing has been fairly good with artificial worms, especially in the Bartletts Ferry area. Quite a few anglers have reported excellent catches of bass.

If you have any angling tips or questions that you would like discussed, send your letters to "Snag" Tallas, c-o Information Section USAIC, Ft. Benning, Ga. Attn: Bayonet.

HOLE-IN-ONE-BALL . . . Soon the Columbus-Fort Benning-Phenix City area can now have their hole-in-one balls mounted free. The Columbus Bank and Trust Company (CB&T) will provide the trophy to anyone scoring a hole-in-one on any of the area golf courses. CB&T president James W. Blanchard (L) presents the first of the trophies to Dr. M. W. Jackson Jr., who scored his ace at the Columbus Country Club.

Early Leaders Hold Big Lead In Post Open

Bill Martindale and George Hardgrove, perennial powers in Fort Benning golf competition, were headed for almost certain wins in their divisions of the post tournament when the Bayonet went to press Tuesday.

Martindale, who seems to set a record everytime he picks up a club, did it again on the tourney's opening day. He fired a blazing 64, touring the back nine of the Main Officers Open Mess Pine Side in 29 strokes, to set a new competitive record. He was well ahead of his nearest competitors in the open division.

Hardgrove held a 16 stroke lead over the field in the seniors division after playing two consistent rounds to compile a score of 141, one under par.

The competition will determine the post championship, but probably of more importance to the players is that it will determine who will represent Fort Benning in the Third Army tournament later this summer. The top four men in each division will compete.

Martindale followed up the opening day record with a one under par 71 for a 72-hole total of 135. Behind the Texan is a former U. of Ohio golf and basketball star, Paul Colby who has a two-round total of 148, four-over par and 13 strokes behind the open division leader.

Joe Hamby was still in the running Tuesday, 17 strokes behind the pace-setting Martindale with a 152. Dean Potter was in the fourth slot with a 155.

Other Open Division scores were:

Robert Hines, 158; Robert Jensen, 159; Paul Wolfe, 160; James Remmert, 162; William Arnold, 162; Morrow, 163; S. N. Smith, 168; M. T. Lewis, 169.

Senior Division:

Howard Holbrook, 159; William King, 164; G. O. Aure, 166; W. G. Skelton, 170; P. Mitchell, 178; C. Ritche, 184.

Airborne Boxers 'Packin Em In' Friday Nights

The training section of The Infantry School's 4th Student Battalion reported today that the weekly boxing smokers, featuring bouts between airborne trainees, are proving their worth.

The smokers were conceived to help maintain high morale in the trainees with the added benefit that it would provide good entertainment for post personnel who like to watch good boxing.

According to officials, the program was met with more enthusiasm than was expected, and the crowds are filling the stands to over-flowing.

Infantry Hall of Fame Honors 181 OCS Graduates of Former Years

By Ida C. Evans

The Infantry Hall of Fame honors 181 of the more than 81,000 officer candidates who have graduated from The Infantry School since 1941.

Selected for the Hall of Fame are Officer Candidate School (OCS) graduates who have been awarded the Medal of Honor, distinguished themselves in the field of government or attained high rank while on active duty.

Established June 21, 1958, the hall is housed in an OCS classroom named for 2nd Lt. Thomas W. Wigle who was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

A portrait of Lt. Wigle, painted by his father, A. Palmer Wigle, is prominently displayed in the hall, with a biographical sketch and a copy of the citation.

The citation reads, "Second Lt. Thomas W. Wigle, 01314729, Infantry, United States Army. For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty in the vicinity of Monte Frassino, Italy. On 14 September, 1944, the 2nd Platoon, in attempting to seize a strongly fortified hill position protected by three parallel high-terraced stone walls, was twice thrown back by the withering crossfire of machine guns and intense barrages of mortar and artillery fire.

"Lt. Wiggle, acting company executive, observing that the platoon was without an officer, volunteered to command it in the next attack. Leading his men up the bare rocky slopes through intense and concentrated fire, he succeeded in reaching the first of the stone walls. Having himself boosted to the top and perching there in full view of the enemy, he drew and returned their fire while his men helped each other up and over.

"Following the same method, he successfully negotiated the second wall. Upon reaching the top of the third wall he faced three houses which were the keypoint of the enemy's defense. Ordering his men to cover him, he made a dash through a hail of machine-pistol fire to reach the nearest house. Firing his carbine as he entered, he drove the enemy before him out the back door and into the second house. Following closely on the heels of the foe, he drove them from this house into the third where they took refuge in the cellar.

"When his men rejoined him they found him mortally wounded on the cellar stairs which he had started to descend to force the surrender of the enemy. His heroic action resulted in the capture of 36 German soldiers and the seizure of the strong point."

Eight other Infantry OCS graduates who were awarded the Medal of Honor are members of the Hall of Fame. The list includes Capt. Reginald B Desiderio, 1st Lt. Bernard J. Ray, 1st Lt. Jimmie M. Monteith Jr. and 2nd Lt. Paul F. Riodan, each of whom received the award posthumously, and Col. Cecil H. Bolton, Lt. Col. Charles P. Murray Jr., Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, and Lt. Col. Raymond Harvey.

Gen. Omar Bradley, who was commandant of The Infantry School when the first OCS class was convened, established the principles and standards of discipline and leadership that are still in effect, officials said.

Explaining why the program was so rigorous, Gen. Bradley said, "Early in the course, the fact must be brought out that these candidates should stop thinking as enlisted men and think as officers. As enlisted men, someone else worries about plans and about looking after the men; as officers, they must plan and think of their responsibilities. The discipline must be of a very much higher type than that of an enlisted company."

Between July, 1941, and May, 1947, more than 67,000 candidates completed OCS at Fort Benning. At the peak of World War II, The Infantry School graduated one OCS class a day, six days a week.

Military and civilian visitors from the United States and allied countries visit Wigle Hall each year. A guest book on a table beneath the portrait of Lt. Wigle bears the names of dignitaries who have toured the hall, received briefings on officer candidate training and paused to pay tribute to the men who came up from the ranks to meet their country's need for combat leaders.

Second Lt. William C. Bailey is officer-in-charge of the Hall of Fame. He is adjutant of the 5th Student Battalion. Lt. Col. George P. McLendon is battalion commander. Col. Walter D. Short commands the Student Brigade.

COMMISSIONED . . . First Lt. G. R. Kobaly, personnel officer of the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction), was recently promoted to his present rank under a totally new and unique system. He was directly commissioned from CWO W-2 to 1st Lieutenant, Adjutant General Corps. To date, only one other officer has received this particular type of direct commission. Some 18 months ago, Lt. Kobaly was serving as a staff sergeant.

Hq. Unit Is Named Best of 58th

Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Mechanized) has been named "Best Company of the Quarter" in the 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

1st Lt. John M. Bennis, commander of the winning company, received the engraved plaque at ceremonies conducted during a weekly meeting of company commanders with Lt. Col. John L. Kennedy, former commanding officer of the 58th.

Headquarters Company provides 4.2 mortar and Davy Crockett fire for most Infantry School demonstrations and instruction. It was their outstanding performance in this respect that weighed heavily in their favor for selection as "best company."

Air Transport Brigade Provides 11th With Air-Lift Transportation

By CWO Thomas Jones

A basic tactical principle employed by all successful armies is that of economy of force.

This simply means using just the right amount and "mix" of men, equipment and supporting units to accomplish the job at hand. One way of doing this has been for higher commands to keep forces under their control which can be attached to subordinate units to aid them in accomplishing specific missions.

Such a supplementary force is the 10th Air Transport Brigade, commanded by Col. Delbert L. Bristol. Like the famed truck companies of World War II, its mission is to provide troops and cargo transport to other units which are not completely mobile by themselves.

COL. BRISTOL

The difference is that the brigade furnishes air transport for one or more air assault divisions. It provides the additional air-lift which makes the Army's new air mobile concept a reality.

The brigade presently is composed of five units: The 37th Air Transport Battalion and four companies attached to the battalion. They are the 187th Transport Airplane Company, the 188th Transport Helicopter Company, the 478th Flying Crane Company and Company A of the 170th Transportation Battalion (Aircraft Supply and Maintenance).

Although the present organization is basically designed for purposes of training, the overall concept of the air transport brigade is a highly flexible one, designed to cope with any problem encountered in a combat situation. Each battalion and company has a mission which, although they may differ slightly due to specific capabilities, constitutes an integral part of the overall concept.

The mission of the 37th Air Transport Battalion, like that of the brigade, is to effect transportation of supplies, equipment and personnel. The battalion is organized into a headquarters element and several companies. In this instance, the four attached companies. The battalion may be employed as a whole, by individual companies, or as a combination of its assigned or attached units.

The 187th Transport Airplane Company is assigned the mission of providing airlift for movement of supplies and personnel along air lines of communication, and to provide airlift of combat units and air resupply of units engaged in combat.

Also included in its mission are functions of air traffic control, technical assistance and supplementary aeromedical evacuation. To accomplish this, the company employs the CV-2 Caribou, the Army's largest fixed-wing aircraft.

The mission of the 188th Transport Helicopter Company is basically the same as that of the airplane company with the exception that its airfield requirements are less. Both the CH-37 Mojave and the CH-47 Chinook are in use by the company. However, at the present time, only the Mojave is operational within the company.

The 478th Flying Crane Company provides combat service support airlift for the movement of heavy supplies, vehicles, aircraft and other equipment. One prototype of this mammoth helicopter is under government contract from Sikorsky Aircraft and its performance and application to the air mobile concept will be evaluated by the members of the 478th.

Company A of the 170th Transportation Battalion (AS&M) is assigned to the 37th Air Transport Battalion for the purpose of providing maintenance for all battalion aircraft. It performs support - level maintenance for the aviation units. The company also provides backup support for organizational maintenance elements.

All units of the brigade, including the brigade headquarters, are capable of providing both communications and local security forces in a tactical situation. Each unit also is responsible for local maintenance and support.

With the air mobile concept rapidly gaining favor in the Army today, an army-level air transport brigade will soon occupy a position of prime importance in future organizational tables. When this time comes, the standard to which other air transport elements will look is the 10th Air Transport Brigade, pioneer of a new concept.

sault Infantry battalions. In actual operation, the brigade employs its battalions in bold aggressive actions, designed to capitalize on the air assault concept of rapid, successive surprise attacks.

The battalions, dependent on brigade-division for the bulk of their combat support and the majority of their service support, are made up of three extremely light, air mobile rifle companies. Retained in the air assault battalion is the ROCID combat support company concept.

The battalion command structure is designed to accept augmentation of forces to accomplish its mission. Thus a battalion may operate as a sub task force with appropriate additions.

All equipment authorized the battalion is air transportable, making the unit ideal for strategic and tactical employment by air. The unit, further streamlined, relies completely on higher headquarters to provide rapid movement means, for reinforcing both direct and indirect fire support means, for resupply including water, medical evacuation, messing, and for communications support.

Phase I of the division testing schedule began on February 15, 1963 and will continue until October 15, 1963. During this phase, 1st Brigade headquarters is operating at a cadre strength of one quarter its authorized personnel. However, a full strength infantry battalion is attached, being the nucleus of the testing effort of Phase I. This is the 3rd Infantry Battalion, 187th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey. The battalion looks to the 187th Infantry, a major unit of the former 11th Airborne Division, for its history and traditions. Their nickname, "The Rakkasans," which is Japanese for "falling down umbrellas", comes from the unit's airborne operations in the Pacific.

COL. HENNESSEY

Phase II will begin about November 1, 1963, and will continue through the summer of 1964. It will repeat the testing procedures of Phase I, but will be based upon a full strength brigade with three full strength battalions attached.

Whatever follows in Phase III and after will be stamped with the work and the personal effort that the pioneers, the 1st Air Assault Brigade and the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, have given to the air assault concept.

Aviation Provides Eyes

support for the division headquarters, aviation group headquarters, support command, and all other division units without organic aircraft, is supplied by the 11th General Support Aviation Company. The company has both OH-13 Sioux and UH-1B Iroquois helicopters assigned. A primary goal of the unit is to have each aviator qualified in both aircraft for maximum flexibility.

A fast-moving, hard-hitting unit is Troop B, 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry. This is the forward reconnaissance unit for the division. It has the capabilities of visual detection and destruction of the enemy on contact. The troop is equipped with Sioux and Iroquois helicopters, both armed with weapons systems specially designed for the reconnaissance function.

Aviation field maintenance and supply support is provided by Company A, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion. This versatile unit not only repairs both helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft, it also is capable of performing recovery operations, a most hazardous job under combat conditions. Inasmuch as the company has a very real maintenance mission to perform, most of the training is done on the job.

Two companies of the 226th Aerial Surveillance and Attack Battalion are assigned to the group. Company A provides aerial surveillance of routes, zones or areas of possible enemy activities and acquires targets. Company B furnishes immediately responsive aviation support and air firepower. Both companies use the sleek, fast Mohawk aircraft, but Company A's planes are equipped with either infra-red detector systems or side looking airborne radar (SLAR), while those of Company B carry armament.

A unit capable of supporting airmobile troops with rockets, missiles, and machinegun fire during all types of airmobile operations is Company A, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion. Aircraft used by this company are Iroquois helicopters appropriately armed.

Another unit of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion provides tactical air movement of combat troops, supplies and equipment in air assault operations. This is Company B which is currently using CH-39 Choctaw helicopters, but which will ultimately be provided with the new D model Iroquois.

Operating the Army's newest and largest helicopter, the mighty CH-47 Chinook, is Company A, 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion. This unit provides air transport, expedites tactical operations, and furnishes logistical support in the combat zone. Because this aircraft is still in short supply, members of the company are spread from Morton, Pa., where a factory maintenance course is being conducted, to Fort Rucker, Ala., where flight training and maintenance courses are under way.

The aviation group embodies the concept that makes the air assault division such a radical and revolutionary departure from accepted practices. So equipped, the air assault division operates with devastating mobility.

AT THE Movies

GIRLS! GIRLS! GIRLS! is a tune-filled drama in color. It stars Elvis Presley and Stella Stevens. The plot reveals a tuna boat skipper who "moonlights" as a nightclub entertainer and finds his exciting life filled with boats, blondes and brunettes. The skipper's main interest is sailing, but this all changes when a tempting blonde dreamboat drifts his way.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE VALIANT, starring John Mills and Ettore Manni, is a war drama styled for family consumption. During the undercover, underwater war between the British and Italian navies in World War II, a ship's captain tries to find out from two captured frogmen where they have placed the mine which will blow up his ship.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE NUN AND THE SERGEANT is a more explosive war drama starring Robert Webber and Anna Sten. The story revolves around what happens when the paths of a nun and a sergeant meet on the war-torn terrain of the Korean battleground. The marine is leading a patrol behind enemy lines, and the nun is leading a group of girls in search of safety.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE RAVEN was produced by Alfred Hitchcock. It is a shock thriller in "eerie" color starring Vincent Price, Peter Lorre and Boris Karloff, filmdom's shock-masters. During a primitive time ruled by magic, fear and superstition, three sorcerers engage in a fantastic duel of magic that tests their power against each other and leads to a deadly battle for survival.

'Opry' Boss At Benning

The soldier in ranks often finds himself standing next to a movie star, famous personality or other civilian-life celebrity.

That's the way of the Army, and such is the case of the men of Headquarters Company, 10th Air Transport Brigade of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Pvt. Stephenson, before entering the Army, was the traveling business manager of the famous Grand Old Opry. His wife is the daughter of longtime Opry singer Kitty Wells.

Pvt. Stephenson entered the Army in November, 1962 and took basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga. After he completed basic, he was assigned to the 151st Engineer Group, here as a clerk typist. In March of this year he was transferred to Company D, 577th Engineer Battalion, and in April, he was assigned to his present position.

Chess Tourney Begins Tonight At Service Club

The Fort Benning Chess Tournament, to be held at Service Club 1, is slated to run Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The tournament will be conducted on the basis of a five round Swiss system.

The competition, which is open to all military personnel, offers a chance for selection to the Third Army team which will compete in the Fourth Annual Thomas Emery Armed Forces Chess Championship in Washington, D.C., Oct. 12 to 19.

Hours of the tournament will be 6 to 10 p.m. nightly and 1 to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Additional information concerning the championship may be obtained at any service club.

S. American Staff Officers To Visit Here

Twenty - eight Latin and South American officers attending the command and staff course at The Army School of Americas, Fort Gulick, Panama Canal Zone, are slated to arrive here Sunday for a two-day visit.

The students, who represent seven countries, will be briefed on The Infantry School, including its history, organization and mission.

They will also tour The Infantry School's Communications Department, see airborne training and field fortifications and demolition.

The visit will mark the conclusion of a 17-day tour of Army installations in the United States, as well as official stopovers in Washington, D.C., and New York City.

Other Army posts visited include Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Riley, Kan., Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and Fort Lesley J. McNair, Washington, D.C.

Following the Fort Benning stop, the group will leave Lawson Army Airfield July 23 for Miami and the return trip to Panama.

The officers and the countries which they represent are: Col. Rogelio Ayala, Bolivia; Lt. Col. Armando Contreras, Chile; Lt. Col. Miguel A. Veras, Lt. Col. Miguel A. Hernando, Maj. Rafael A. Cordero, Capt. John H. Carrasco, Dominican Republic; Maj. Jose Herrera, Maj. Gustave A. Hernandez, Capt. Eduardo Calderon, Capt. Federico Castillo, Capt. Jose C. Flores and Capt. Anibal Palma, El Salvador.

Lt. Col. Jesus N. Delgado and Lt. Col. Augusto Garrido, Guatemala; Lt. Col. Jose M. Espinosa, Lt. Col. Alvaro E. Pallais, Major Francisco De Franco and Major Richardo A. Lopez, Nicaragua; Lt. Col. Heraclio Amzola, Lt. Col. German L. Pena, Lt. Col. Jose F. Rangel, Lt. Col. Jose E. Sazzarini, Lt. Col. Alfredo Lewis, Lt. Col. Angel A. Leon and Lt. Col. Diego J. Valderrama, Venezuela.

Railways Offer Low 1-Way Fare

WASHINGTON (ANF)—Low one-way railroad coach fares for military personnel, equal to one-half of the existing round-trip furlough rate, are now available.

"This is the first time railroads have established a special military rate for one-way travel anywhere in the United States," according to A. J. Winkler, chairman, General Passenger Committee, Eastern Railroads.

The special rail tickets will bear a three months' time limit permitting stopovers at all points enroute. The rate, limited to coach travel, permits checking of 150 pounds of baggage transported free of charge in baggage cars, plus whatever hand luggage servicemen carry into the coaches.

YARD OF THE MONTH . . . MSgt. Claude Valentine (R) of 134-G Baker Street, receives the Yard of the Month bronze plaque and citation for June from Col. Dale D. Dixon, G-4 (logistics officer) of The Infantry Center, during recent ceremonies at the sergeant's residence. The citation, signed by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, commended Valentine for "the time, imagination and effort spent maintaining and enhancing the yard."

Medical Service Marks Anniversary July 27

July 27 will mark the 188th anniversary of the Army Medical Service.

Beginning in 1775 rather humbly by today's standards, the hospital of the Army has grown into a service of gigantic proportions. The commissioned officers of the Army Medical Service are distributed into six corps or groups. They are the Medical Corps, Dental Corps, Veterinary Corps, Army Nurses Corps, Medical Service Corps and Army Medical Specialist.

In discussing the service in connection with the anniversary, Lt. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, the Army Surgeon General, said "the role of medicine as a positive force for goodwill is being increasingly recognized."

"The wide deployment of Army troops throughout the world, and the problems of military medicine automatically bring the Army Medical Service into close contact with the peoples of the world, their medical problems and their natural aspirations for life and good health," the general continued.

The general enumerated several "missions of mercy" being carried on by the service and outlined projects underway which will help medical science solve many of the health problems fscing mankind.

Gen. Heaton concluded by saying, "We look back only to check our sights for the future. It is our responsibility, and our intent, to continue and accelerate our efforts to build an Army Medical Service capable and ready to meet all eventualities, but dedicated, and aggressively so, to peace, and to the health and welfare of all mankind."

Col. C. H. Boardman Assigned With CDA

Lt. Col. Charles H. Boardman recently arrived here to join the Combat Developments Agency (CDA).

Col. Boardman is a Chemical Corps officer and was assigned to his present duty from the U.S. Army Communications Zone, Europe, where he served as commander of the Chemical Supply Control Agency.

He is the recipient of the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Army Commendation Medal.

Col. Boardman is a graduate of Ohio State University where he received a master's degree in chemical engineering. He and his wife, Janet, and four children will reside at 305 Miller Loop, Fort Benning.

Thumb-Sucking Will Endanger Oral Health

By Capt. Robert Cross

Recently, I read two conflicting articles on thumbsucking. To say the least, they were quite confusing.

In the morning issue of a newspaper it stated that thumb-sucking was extremely bad and could only give trouble.

Now, this is the generally believed idea, since the results of excessive thumb-sucking are readily seen by any dentist. However, the evening edition carried another article quoting a dentist as saying "let the child suck his thumb, the bad results are highly magnified, and the thumb sucking child has fewer cavities." He continued with the idea that fewer cavities occurred because of increased salivation, and a better cleansing action from the extra saliva.

Unfortunately, even discounting the crooked teeth resulting from thumb-sucking, it is very doubtful that increased salivation in this case will decrease dental decay. Anyone who has observed a thumb - sucker asleep, will notice that even after removal of the thumb, the child continues sucking movements. This results in a form of mouth - breathing; thereby drying the mouth and reducing salivation; in fact, producing a very dry mouth.

Now, we see we have made no gains for the plus side, and we still have our orthodontic problems. The two most common causes of orthodontic problems which are preventible are thumb-sucking and early loss of the baby teeth.

Early loss of deciduous teeth is a situation which demands the attention of a dentist in placing fillings in any decayed tooth, and interest from the parent in seeing that the child receives regular dental care. The thumb-sucking problem can best be handled by a pedodontist.

In cases where the child is older, an appliance can be used to help break this habit. If your child has the habit and is three years of age, or older, check with your dentist to see what can, or should, be done.

Air Assault Division Gets Own Engineers

By Spt Glenn Hodson

On February 7, 1963, Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, was activated as an integral part of the 11th Air Assault Division, for the purpose of increasing the combat effectiveness of the division by overcoming obstacles and impeding enemy ground progress through construction and demolitions.

In conjunction with its purpose, the company has begun several projects among which is the survey and design of airstrips and helipads for the division.

The company has also been one of the forerunners for promoting the concept of rapelling in the division. Not only has the company constructed the three rappelling towers presently in use within the division, but the company's personnel have been so motivated by this modern technique that it has been interwoven into a vigorous physical training program.

The engineers base their history and tradition on the 127th Airborne Engineer Battalion which was part of the famed 11th Airborne Division. The battalion fought in three island campaigns: Leyte, Luzon, and New Guinea.

During the Luzon Campaign the engineers participated by parachuting into the enemy-held zones at Nasgubu Point, and helping to drive the Japanese from the island. In recognition of the battalion's record during the period of October 17, 1943 to July 4, 1945, it was awarded the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation.

When the Korean conflict broke out, Company A, 127th Airborne Engineer Battalion, took part in three major combat actions: the UN offensive, the CCF intervention, and the first UN counter-offensive. In the combat action of the UN offensive, the 3rd Platoon of the company so distinguished itself through its heroism, gallantry, determination and esprit de corps against the armed enemy that it was recommended for and awarded the Distinguished Unit Citation.

Future projects of the company include field tests for developing and adopting light weight, mobile and versatile engineer earthmoving equipment to augment the pioneer construction capability of the company, and devising means for field camouflaging of helicopters, light Army aircraft, and their assault landing sites.

Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, intends to make its motto, "That Others May Follow", a reality in the 11th Air Assault Division and the Army.

Sp4 J. D. Panetta Is Honored by Unit

Sp4 James D. Panetta, has been selected as Battalion "Soldier of the Month" for the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction).

A member of Company A, Panetta was selected on knowledge of his military occupational skill, Army regulations, general military information and current events.

A native of Nanticoke, Penn., Sp4 Panetta, was also chosen for his appearance and military bearing.

Surgeon Says

Sprains Often Can Be Treated in the Home

By Maj. Ruth W. Bradley, Physical Therapy Section, MAB

Certainly persons who sustain injuries of questionable degree should see their doctor, but there are certain minor disabilities that can be treated effectively in the home.

Injuries such as sprains, benefit from an ice massage or immersion in ice bath followed immediately by active exercise. This helps prevent swelling, pain and limitation of motion in the involved joint. Normal motion of a part should be checked by comparing it with the uninvolved side. If pain and swelling persist a doctor should be consulted.

Backaches or strains can be very uncomfortable, but may sometimes be eased by the use of a hot pack or ice massage.

The majority of back strains occur from a lack of knowledge of correct body mechanics in lifting, pushing, carrying heavy objects and standing for a prolonged period.

When lifting an object, always keep the back straight and bend the knees to grasp the object then straighten the knees, keeping the back straight, and lift. This puts the strain on the heavy leg and buttock muscles instead of on the relatively delicate back muscles. To carry a heavy object, keep the back upright and straight, and the object close to the body.

The key to good posture is the pelvis. To avoid backaches, one should learn to live with the pelvis tilted forward twenty-four hours a day. To practice the pelvic tilt, lie on the floor with the knees bent and push the hollow of the back flat against the floor. This requires contraction of the abdominal muscles and tightening of the buttock muscles.

Learn to do this while standing, but be sure to keep the knees relaxed. If the knees are locked, the pelvis nearly always is tilted the wrong way. Finally hold the chest high and let the shoulders drop back comfortably.

Pregnancy poses special problems in posture. In the advanced stages the mother-to-be hyperextends her back to balance the protruding abdomen, thus tilting the pelvis incorrectly, causing painful backachs. To keep the pelvis tilted forward, the pregnant woman needs to keep her abdominal muscles strong. This will also help her when it is time to deliver the baby.

To strengthen the abdominal muscles, lie on the floor with knees bent and push the hollow of the back against the floor, and then roll to a sitting position. Start by tucking chin to chest and lead with forehead keeping low back flat.

Acquiring the habit of good posture, sleeping on a firm mattress and spending a few minutes a day doing exercises described above can serve as a deterrent to backaches as well as help cure an existing one.

Generally speaking, the incident rate of minor injuries is decreased when one is in good physical condition. A few minutes out of every day devoted to exercise, will not only increase muscle strength, but is beneficial for general health purposes.

TEC Maintains Liaison Throughout Higher Commands Within CONARC

A new Army concept is not just born. The idea, perhaps, comes easily, but the task of proving the feasibility and practicability of the concept is a long and sometimes trying job.

Such is the case with Project TEAM (Test and Evaluation of Air Mobility), the name given to the total effort of all elements Army-wide which contribute to the development and testing of the air assault concept.

The boss of Project TEAM at Fort Benning is the test director, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School. Established as his principal agency to observe, test, evaluate and report on the progress of the concept is the Training Evaluation and Control Group (TEC) headed by Col. Hubert E. Strange.

COL. STRANGE

TEC insures on the spot coordination of organizing, equipping, training and testing of both the 11th Air Assault Division and the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Within the scope of its mission, TEC is responsible for observation and evaluation in a number of specific areas: organization, training, testing and evaluation. TEC maintains liaison with elements of the Continental Army Command, Combat Developments Command, the Army Materiel Command, other Army agencies and with civilian industrial firms with regard to progress in the various areas under examination.

All findings and recommendations are relayed to higher headquarters so that a progressive survey of current air mobility doctrine may be maintained. TEC is also responsible for briefings given to official visitors to Project TEAM on post.

TEC is divided into six main functional areas with each group further subdivided into the necessary number needed for a comprehensive evaluation. The six principal classifications are: Field Test Division, Scientific Support Division, Organization and Materiel Division, Joint Test Division, Aviation Detachment and Test Support Division. The latter two are primarily designed as support activities for TEC.

The Test Support Division, for instance, is similar to a headquarters company with support, personnel and supply sections.

Each of the other divisions within TEC is or will be responsible for a specific area of testing and evaluation as the 11th Air Assault Division and the 10th Air Transport Brigade continue their training program.

The Joint Test Division is the link between unilateral Army test plans and plans for the joint test to take place sometime next year.

Planning, critical materiel, personnel and equipment organization are the responsibilities of the Organization and Materiel Division. Included in this area are the TOE's and Manning Tables and equipment Lists as well as present organizational and operational policies of the tested units.

In the Scientific Support Division there are 10 civilian scientists whose job it is to observe and evaluate all phases of the new air assault concept.

The Field Test Division at the present time is a very active group with six sections concerned with evaluation of present training and designing tests. These sections are oriented to the areas of security and reconnaissance, mobility, communications and control, combat support, combat service support, and controller activities. Personnel of these sections are in the field with units of the air assault division and the air transport brigade.

The training and progress of the 11th Air Assault Division and the 10th Air Transport Brigade are under constant and critical observation by a team of experts whose job it is to test and evaluate the principles and innovations of the air assault concept.

Gen. Kinnard Is Qualified Army Aviator

Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard recently completed a special flight training course for general officers after a full year of attending ground training classes and getting in flying time whenever he could free himeself from other duties.

The general logged over 200 flying hours to complete the course prerequisites.

Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, vice-chief of staff U. S. Army, DA, pinned on Gen. Kinnard's new wings at Fort Rucker, Ala., the Army's aviation center.

Honored by Division

Gen. Kinnard was honored last week by elements of his command at a retreat ceremony when orders announcing his new qualification as an Army aviator were read to an audience of division staff officers, unit commanders, senior noncommissioned officers and invited guests.

After retreat, refreshments were served at the General's Mess. Highlighting the reception was the cutting of a cake prepared in honor of Gen. Kinnard's accomplishment.

Unique Knife

A unique knife, called by Col. Elvy B. Roberts, division chief of staff, "the 11th Air Assault Division's version of the traditional saber," was used to cut the cake.

The knife was fashioned from the tail rotor of an OH-13 helicopter by personnel of Company A, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Support Battalion.

According to Col. Roberts, the knife will be used in the future to cut other special cakes and for similar functions.

Capt. John Cowley Gets New Position

Capt. John F. Cowley Jr., was recently assigned to the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency as a project officer in the Doctrine and Organization Division.

He was awarded the Combat Infantryman Badge for duty in the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Viet Nam, his last duty station.

Capt. and Mrs. Cowley and their three children reside at 310A Merrill Lane, Fort Benning.

511th Signal Battalion Headed by Capt. Fry

By Sgt. Kenneth Larsen

Providing immediate and dependable communications under the conditions of wide dispersion and fast deployment inherent in an air assault division is a most challenging and provocative task.

Such a mission has fallen to Company A (Command Operations), 511th Signal Battalion, commanded by Capt. William J. Fry.

Forming the nucleus of what will eventually be a complete signal battalion, Company A was activated in February 15, 1963 and assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division. Since this time progress has been made in organizing and developing a light, dependable airmobile signal unit.

The company is composed of three platoons: Command Signal Center Platoon, Support Command Signal Center Platoon, and Rear Echelon Signal Center Platoon. Each of these platoons has a definite role in fulfilling the mission of the company.

The Command Signal Center Platoon furnished all signal support for the operation of the division forward command post and for communication with all major units subordinate to the division.

In a typical operation the three sections of the platoon, wire, radio and message center would land simultaneously at a proposed command post (CP) via helicopter. Upon touchdown the radio section, employing the latest light weight, long-range equipment would immediately open all nets, communicating with other sets perhaps as much as 100-200 miles away.

The wire section would promptly install its switchboard, which was air-lifted in a package and ready for operation in a few minutes, and run wire lines to all staff sections of the headquarters and to the message center. Meanwhile the message center would have set up its facility and would be available to process written messages as well as to coordinate radio-telephone traffic between all division agencies and to all major units.

The other two platoons provide similar functions to the various elements they support. The Support Command Signal Center Platoon operates in the vicinity of the 11th Air Assault Division Support Command and ties together all elements of the division involved principally in administrative and logistical functions.

The Rear Echelon Signal Center Platoon provides communications for the division rear area and ties together many far flung operations which would otherwise be quite isolated.

Speed and flexibility in communicating is vital to any field commander in maintaining effective control of his fighting units, but the air assault unit places even more demands on signal men and equipment. The answer for Company A, 511th Signal Battalion is training, training and more training, to make it the fast, dependable, air-mobile unit necessary to provide communication for this new concept in tactical mobility.

CAPT. FRY

PX Birthday Celebration Set Thursday

The Post Exchange will celebrate its 68th anniversary Thursday and a gala celebration is planned, including prizes and outstanding specials at the Main Store, Branch 5 (Custer Terrace), Branch 17 (Sand Hill), and Branch 39 (Kelley Hill.)

On the anniversary day, the Main Store will remain open one hour later than usual, while the other three will stay open a half hour longer.

Post Exchange employees also will receive service awards ranging from five to 30 years of service. The awards will be presented at ceremonies at the Post Exchange cafeteria.

Prizes will be given at the Main Store at 6:30 p.m., Custer Terrace at 7:15 p.m., Sand Hill at 7:45 p.m., and Kelley Hill at 8:15 p.m. Thursday.

CAVALRY IN JAPAN

Upon the capitulation of the Japanese Empire in World War II the 1st Cavalry Division was selected to make the initial entry into Japan. The 2nd Battalion, 7th U. S. Cavalry escorted Gen. Douglas MacArthur on his official entry into Tokyo.

Services performed by the 608th include bath and salvage services. In future combat operations the company will also provide graves registration service and clothing exchange. The company has the additional mission of providing limited motor transportation to the division, and it maintains the division supply reserve.

The 711th Maintenance Battalion traces its lineage to its activation on February 25, 1943 as the 711th Airborne Ordnance Maintenance Company at Camp Mackall, N.C.

For its service during World War II with the 11th Airborne Division it is authorized battle streamers for New Guinea, Leyete Gulf, the Luzon Assault Landing, and it was awarded the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation. The unit is authorized the occupation streamer for the occupation of Japan from August, 1945 to February, 1949.

Following a tour of duty in the United States, the unit was sent to Germany with the 11th Airborne Division and it was there, in Munich, Germany, that it was deactivated on July 1, 1958.

As an element of the Support Command, the 711th Maintenance Battalion provides support and maintenance to both main and forward elements of the division. The battalion recently completed an effective program of weight reduction to insure that the forward support elements are readily air transportable.

The tools carried by the forward support detachment have been matched to the type of equipment found in the air assault units and those in excess to the minimum essential for operation have been eliminated.

All units in the 11th Air Assault Support Command, with the exception of the 11th Administration Company and the Headquarters Company, are organized so that they can provide close support to each air assault brigade in its forward area. The headquarters of these units remain with the support command headquarters and provide combat service support to other divisional units.

The 11th Air Assault Division Support Command provides the lifeblood for the air assault division. Through its veins flows the support required to keep the division combat ready and prepared to accomplish successfully its assigned missions.

Unit Boasts Of Power

Twenty - one of the Army's most powerful artillery weapons, ranging from the standard 105-mm howitzer to the "Big brother" of the artillery family, the M-107, gives Fort Benning the distinction of having one of the most advanced artillery units in the world.

Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade, supports The Infantry School by giving students demonstrations of what can be expected in the way of artillery fire in combat.

Members of the battery, under the direction of Capt. William E. Trent, combine artillery firepower, versatility and mobility with their own professionalism while demonstrating the effectiveness of the weapons.

Weapons included in the artillery demonstrations are three new additions to the diesel powered, self-propelled artillery family, the M-107, which has an effective range of 20.5 miles and is the only one in the Third Army area, the M-110 howitzer, and the M-108 howitzer which fires a 155-mm projectile.

Also included in the battery's arsenal are three gas powered, self-propelled guns, two M-42 antiaircraft guns and one M-55-inch howitzer.

Eight 105-mm howitzers, commonly seen firing during review ceremonies, one 8-inch howitzer, and six 155-mm howitzers complete Battery A's arsenal.

M-107 IS ONE ARMY'S LARGEST WEAPONS
It Can Fire a 175-mm Shell Effectively For 20 Miles

Defense, Army Secretaries Visit

United States Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Army Secretary Cyrus R. Vance visited Fort Benning and The Infantry School yesterday, marking the first time that the leading civilian cabinet officials had visited the post.

Greeting the officials upon their arrival at Lawson Army Airfield at 9 a.m. were Third Army Commander Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, Fort Benning commander, and Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Secretary McNamara wound-up a whirlwind tour and briefing session late yesterday afternoon and departed at 4 p.m. Secretary Vance was scheduled to depart this morning around 8:15 a.m.

Inclement weather forced cancellation of the honors ceremonies scheduled for Chapel Field.

Following a brief visit to the office of Gen. Rich, Secretaries McNamara and Vance were briefed on activities of The Infantry Center and Infantry School. Later in the morning they observed associate Infantry Officer Career and Infantry Ground Mobility classes in session and saw weapons of the Infantry demonstrated at Hook Range.

After lunch with officer candidate students, the two officials visited the Second Infantry Division for a briefing on ROTAPLAN and Swift Strike III. Later they saw a Ranger demonstration at Victory Pond.

The secretaries later were briefed on the 11th Air Assault Division by the Training, Evaluation and Control (TEC) Group.

Col. Reynolds to Head Weapons Department

Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds has been named director of The Infantry School Weapons Department.

He succeeds Col. R. A. Guenthner, who has been selected to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Since Col. Reynolds came to the post in July, 1961, he has served successively as director of The Infantry School's Editorial and Pictorial Office, recently designated the Office of Advanced Studies; commander of the 1st Battle Group, 29th Infantry, 1st Infantry Brigade, now the 197th Infantry Brigade, and as director of the Mobility Department of The Infantry School.

COL. REYNOLDS

Before coming to Fort Benning, Col. Reynolds commanded the 1st Battle Group, 17th Infantry, 7th Division in Korea from 1960 to 1961.

From 1955 to 1960, he served with the Department of the Army in Washington, D. C., as action officer, Organization and Training Division; deputy chief of staff for operations; military assistant to the assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and Reserve Forces, and military assistant to the undersecretary of the Army, in successive assignments.

Col. Reynolds was G-4 (logistics officer) for the 25th Division in Korea from 1954 to 1955 and commander of the division's 3rd Battalion, 14th Infantry from 1953 to 1954.

In 1951, he went to Sewanee (Tenn.) Military Academy as professor of military science.

Col. Reynolds received his commission in 1950 after graduating from Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg. He entered active service in 1940.

During World War II, he was assigned to the 43rd Division and XI Corps in the Pacific Theater.

He served overseas 69 months.

Col. Reynolds has twice been a student at The Infantry School. In 1946, he attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. Griswold New Deputy IB President

Col. George M. Griswold of Jasper, Ala., has been named deputy president of the Infantry Board (IB).

Col. Roy L. Inman, who served as deputy president in an interim capacity, is the new chief of the board's Small Arms Division.

Before assuming his present assignment, Col. Griswold was senior adviser to II Corps, 1st Republic of Korea Army.

During World War II, he served as commander of the 3rd Battalion, 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment and commander of the 513th Parachute Infantry Regiment in Europe.

From August, 1955, to August, 1958, Col. Griswold was director of the Airborne Service Test Division, Airborne and Electronics Board, Fort Bragg, N.C.

From Fort Bragg, Col. Griswold was ordered to Taiwan to serve as chief of organiza-

AER Drive Final Push Under Way

With the August payday weekend set as the final push for the 1963 Army Emergency Relief (AER) Drive here, major unit commanders are working to reach 100 per cent contribution.

Only the 428th Medical Battalion, with 100.8 per cent contributions, has approached the "fair share" goal which has

7 TIC Units to Depart For Swift Strike III

Seven units of The Infantry Center will soon depart for North and South Carolina to serve as support units in the U.S. Strike Command's largest maneuver of the year: Joint Exercise Swift Strike III.

Infantry Center units, or unit elements, to participate in the exercise include the 690th Medical Company, 230th Ordnance Company (see magazine photoon), 54th Medical Detachment, 50th Medical Company, 92nd Signal Detachment, Headquarters Detachment of the 428th Medical Battalion, and the 86th Military Police Detachment.

During Swift Strike III, The Infantry Center units will be assigned at various places in South Carolina, including Fort Jackson, Aiken and Blythewood, and at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Units of the 2nd Infantry Division also will begin moving to South Carolina to become part of the "Red" task force, in which it will be joined by the 5th Infantry Division, Fort Carson, Colo., Headquarters and Headquarters Company, III U. S. Corps, and the 1st Logistical Command, both of Fort Hood, Tex.

The 2nd Division, commanded by Maj. Gen Charles Billingslea, will be part of the task force headed by Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Dunn, which will be pitted against the "Blue" task force composed of the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., Headquarters and Headquarters Company, XVIII Airborne Corps and the 5th Logistical Command, both of Fort Bragg.

Air Force units will be attached to the two task forces to add realism to the exercise with tactical fighter bomber support.

ROTC Cadets End 6-Week Training Here

The Army Reserve was scheduled to add 164 second lieutenants to its roster at 8:30 a.m. today at the closing ceremony of the 1963 ROTC summer training camp at The Infantry Center.

More than 1,800 cadets from 39 colleges and universities in the Third Army area, Kansas, Indiana and Puerto Rico participated in a parade at 4 p.m. yesterday at Gordon Field.

At the closing ceremony on Stroup Field (Harmony Church area), Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center, was to deliver the closing address and present special awards.

Physical Exams Set

Fort Benning military dependents who will enroll in off-post schools in September for the first time will be given physical examinations at the Physical Examination Section, Bldg. 396, beginning Aug. 2.

Children whose last names begin with the letters A through G are requested to be at the clinic at 8 a.m. Aug. 2, H through M Aug. 9, N through S Aug. 16, and T through Z Aug. 23.

Record forms will be available at the Physical Examination Section and will be given to the child when completed.

BEST MESS . . . Sp5 Robert M. Webb (C) acting mess sergeant of Company A, 806th Engineers, accepts the Best Mess Award (temporary building) for the month of June from Col. Adrian E. NASA May Develop Lunarbase in 1970's

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A four month study by NASA is underway to determine whether the United States should try to put a scientific outpost on the moon in the seventies.

The study is the first phase of a broad lunarbase study to determine if a base should be established on the moon after the Project Apollo manned lunar landing mission is accomplished.

The first Apollo expedition to the moon is scheduled for 1967-68.

One plan under consideration is to establish a manned orbiting laboratory near the earth. This would serve as a scientific observation post and a technical forerunner for capsules that would take manned expeditions to the planets.

Another possible project is one to establish a permanent base on the moon to make observations of the solar system and the universe.

The initial studies are concentrating primarily on the concept of an expandable base. This would be built up from individually launched modules, which, at the outset, might provide a two-man outpost. Later these could be enlarged as a permanent installation housing up to 18 persons.

The study will pay particular attention to the life support system, nuclear power plant and a regenerative fuel system for powering the surface vehicles of the base.

Results of all the studies will be incorporated into a final comprehensive picture of the design of the base and its advantages and limitations as a scientific outpost.

Kennedy Is Third Pres. to See Pope

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Kennedy is the third President of the United States to be received in audience by a Pope.

The number of cadets commissioned in the various branches of the Army Reserve include: Infantry 25; Artillery, 33; Armor, 18; Engineers, 26; Signal, 15; Army Intelligence, nine; Chemical Corps, seven; Ordnance, 21; Medical Service, five; Transportation, two, and one each in Finance, Military Police and the Adjutant General Corps.

In addition to the commissioning activities, 10 trophies and plaques were to be presented to cadets in recognition of outstanding, individual and group achievements, including the outstanding cadet of the 1963 camp, outstanding rifle fire competition, the best athletic company and the camp's honor company.

Col. Sam J. Rasor, professor of military science at the University of Alabama, is the deputy camp commander, serving under Maj. Gen. C.W.G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

6-Year Service Bill Is Passed

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The House has passed a bill to require at least four months of active duty and a total of six years' service by men who enlist in the Reserves to fulfill their military obligations. The bill, which would make permanent the Reserve enlistment program, due to expire August 1, now goes to the Senate.

Issue Boot For Jungle Warfare

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new Army jungle boot with a stainless steel insert in the sole is being rushed to United States servicemen in South Viet Nam for protection against rusty spikes and sharpened bamboo stakes emplanted by Vietcong guerrillas.

These crude defensive weapons, some of them smeared with infectious materials, have been placed in rice paddies and on trails and will penetrate the conventional boot to inflict painful and even fatal wounds.

Completed, the boot sole consists of a molded rubber outsole and a built-in stainless steel, spike-resistant insert. Early models of the new boot, which already are in Viet Nam, will be equipped with a steel insert which can be fitted inside.

AIR ASSAULT LICENSE
Capt. Lorenz Owns Tag

License Tag Marks Soldier

The unit to which a soldier belongs is most easily recognized by the patch he wears on his uniform. However Capt. Dwight L. Lorenz, adjutant of the 11th Aviation Group, 11th Air Assault Division, has gone a step further. The license plate on his car bears the designation 11 AAD.

According to Capt. Lorenz, a native of Bennington, Vt., the tag is not at all accidental. He requested the plate from his state license bureau, thinking it would be an excellent means of promoting interest in the division and identifying himself with the unit.

When he received the unique plate, Capt. Lorenz failed to tell many people of its origin and as a result, calls began pouring into the 11th Air Assault Division Information Office. A search for the owner was begun and only after the captain noticed a story in the division newspaper, the "Sky Soldier," did he identify himself

Senior Aviators Are Assigned

Two Senior Aviators were assigned recently to the 11th Air Assault Division.

They are Capt. Denzel L. Clark and CWO Robert D. Bivens.

Capt. Clark was assigned to the "Sky Soldiers" after completing the armor officers career course at Fort Knox, Ky. He has over 1,800 hour flight time in fixed and rotary-wing aircraft.

WO Bivens came from the 19th Transportation Helicopter Company in Korea. He has over 2,800 hours of flight time in both type aircraft.

Senior Aviators must be instrument rated, have at least 1,500 flight hours, and be qualified as an aviator for at least seven years from date of graduation.

America, a Beacon Of Freedom to All

Nearly every serviceman and woman knows the story about the bumblebee. According to accepted principles of aero-dynamics, it cannot fly. Its body is too thick, its shape is too square, and its wings too short. But the bumblebee does not know this, so it goes ahead and flies anyway.

Maybe it's because the bumblebee wants to fly. Apparently the laws of nature don't seem to bother him one bit. Using a human analogy, how many times have we ourselves done the 'impossible' just because we decided we wanted to or had to?

Let's look at the first European explorers to reach American shores. Their wooden ships, awkward and small, might be compared to the bumblebee. But their spirit prevailed and they accomplished what the rest of the world had doggedly maintained for centuries was navigationally impossible.

Because the early settlers of the New World were dedicated to a cause—individual freedom and human dignity — the overcome the hardships, sorrows and tragedies of settling in a new, wild and undeveloped country.

They came from a crowded continent, across a sea so vast and featureless that distance became simply time without end. Because they wanted to they set foot in a dazzling new continent where the space and freedom stretched from horizon to horizon.

The pioneers left us a heritage full of feeling for a land that they built on a firm foundation of love and dedication. Neither we or our children, nor theirs, will ever quite get over the wonder that is America. For this is the land of the free. (AFPS)

Hearings on the military pay raise will begin July 16 before a subcommittee headed by Sen. Howard Cannon (D., Nev.). The senator said the hearings are not expected to run more than several days and he feels sure the subcommittee will report the bill out promptly after hearings are completed.

"I would anticipate that we would come up with some changes in the bill," Sen. Cannon said. "I am not convinced that the House bill is the complete answer."

The senator would not elaborate on this statement until he has studied the bill more and the subcommittee has started working on it.

Pentagon construction officials are studying a proposal for combining chapels and theaters.

In hearings on military construction before the House Armed Services Committee this year, Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) asked the Air Force to look into the possibility of combining the two. The request also has implications for the other services.

Air Force officials say design engineers are studying the feasibility of buildings which could serve as combination theaters, chapels and even gymnasiums.

Your Dental Health

Toothbrush Valuable Friend in Field Duty

By Capt. Robert E. Cress
Preventive Dentistry Officer

When large groups of troops return from a field training exercise, the Army Dental Clinics serving them are flooded with patients complaining of "bleeding gums."

Wartime experience has proven this condition can disable large numbers of men. Is this evidence of a flaw in the combat - preparedness of our Army? Why is it that in our modern, well-fed, finely trained Army, a few days of peacetime field training makes dental casualties of some of our healthiest soldiers?

The answer — some of our soldiers mistakenly feel they can't brush their teeth in the field!

Actually, "bleeding gums" is a symptom of the first stages of periodontal disease, commonly known as "trench-mouth," affecting the gingival (gum) tissues and the bone that hold teeth in place. It starts as bleeding of the gums and through the years destroys the supporting structures of the teeth until they become loose and have to be removed.

Since periodontal disease is the greatest cause of loss of teeth about age 35, it is a serious disease, and one we should all know about.

Many Factors

There are many factors which help cause or aggrevate periodontal disease. The most important is irritation. Imagine how irritated your eye would get if you packed sand under your eyelid and left it all day. The gums are irritated by food and also hard deposits called calculus. Our gums don't have the sensitive nerve endings that our eyes do, so we often allow these irritants to stay under our gums, and this leads to periodontal disease.

The important thing to remember is that periodontal disease can be prevented by practicing two rules.

Brush your teeth carefully, immediately after eating.

Have your teeth cleaned at least once a year by a dentist or hygienist.

And this brings us back to the soldiers who thought they couldn't brush their teeth in the field. If we can repair vehicles, use telephones, cook meals, we can brush teeth. The only necessary equipment are a toothbrush and a canteen of water, and every good soldier will carry both.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

All Must Serve

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Joseph F. Alutius Jr.

For many of us the familiar sight of the old steam locomotive racing across the countryside with smoke pouring back across the cars, the drivers clanging in their own noisy way, and the whistle screaming at every crossing, is just a memory.

The steam locomotive was and still is an interesting subject. The smoking monsters presented a complex picture of valves, knobs, gauges, and levers as one first entered the engine cab.

Dominating the interior of the cab was the long lever protruding from the top center of the boiler. With this lever the engineer would force the engine to move by allowing steam to escape from the boiler to the pistons. The pistons in turn would use the power of the steam to turn the huge drive wheels on the engine. To the casual observer it would seem that the throttle was the most important lever in the whole engine, but underneath the engineers left arm was a lever no longer than three inches which effected another part of the engine. This tiny lever controlled the sand which was necessary to help the engine get the necessary friction needed to move a train. Without a thin line of sand on the track the engine's drivers would only slip and spin. Prominent as the throttle drivers appear, they are useless without the sand.

Many times Christians feel that only the notable things count in the work of the Kingdom. Jesus said, "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, varily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." The church will always need great orators, teachers and the examples of sainthood. These people will appear to be more prominent; however we must never forget that small tasks of Christian service performed by unnamed persons are just as necessary as the tasks of the greatest of saints, for in the sight of God all service ranks the same.

Conelrad System Replaced

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has written into its rules system a successor to the Conelrad warning system to be used in the event of an enemy attack.

The new system, which becomes effective August 5, differs from the 12-year-old Conelrad system in that certified radio stations will be permitted to broadcast over their regularly assigned frequencies if there is an attack.

Called Emergency Broadcast System (EBS), its chief use will be to set up priorities for disseminating information in time of national emmergency.

Imagination, Ingenuity Spark Ideas

By Maj. Ben Nichols

Imagination and ingenuity are characteristics possessed by everyone in varying degrees and belonging to no one person or group of persons.

Recognizing this, Brig Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the Army's newest "idea," the 11th Air Assault Division, has asked all men of his command to make known their ideas on improving the air mobility of the division's units.

The seed of imagination planted by Gen. Kinnard has already borne fruit, but, more than that, his plea to look for the fresh, new approach in performing daily tasks has evidenced two stimulating side effects.

First is that the morale and esprit de corps in the division is extremely high and likely to stay that way because the men understand that their opinions are solicited, considered, and often valued.

Second is that as new ideas are presented, and evaluated, and adopted, a snow-ball effect takes place, and other ideas are advanced which may be completely new or perhaps based on previous ones.

Among many novel ideas under development within the division is one involving the use of a UH-1B Iroquois helicopter as a roving command post, another is the tailoring of resupply loads for combat units into standardized bundles relating to a specific mission and another is the use of lightweight Italian artillery pieces.

It is practically certain that the division commander will be airborne a good deal of the time in trying to keep up with the far-flung operations envisioned by the air mobile concept. To keep him abreast of the situation while in the air, the 11th Air Assault Aviation Group is outfitting an Iroquois helicopter as a "roving command post."

The interior of the helicopter contains a large map of the entire area of operations. Troop and activity positions will have three radio sets for air-ground communications in addition to the normal communication facilities in the aircraft.

The 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, has come up with a requirement for subordinate units down to platoon level to analyze a variety of typical missions in which the unit can be employed and to prepare lists of items which cannot be initially carried into the battle area in the hands of troops.

Pre-planning of such lists will enable the units to assemble "mission bundles" which are tailored to the task at hand and can be airlifted into the battle area practically on the heels of the combat troops.

The content, and therefore the size and weight of the bundles, will be entirely dependent upon the mission of the unit. However, in all cases, the bundles will be completely air-transportable by aircraft utilized for the mission.

Examples of items to be carried in "mission bundles" are: emergency lights for night helicopter operations, combat rations, water, pioneer tools, weapons' cleaning equipment, insecticides, camouflage material, repair kits and spare radio batteries.

Light Artillery

The 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery, is experimenting with the use of an Italian 105 mm howitzer. This weapon is smaller and lighter than a U. S. howitzer and, when airlifted into an area, can be more effectively man-handled into a firing position where it can be used as a quick deployment weapon.

Many examples of the redesign of equipment and equipment carriers to lighten loads for better air transportability can be found throughout the division's units. For instance, members of Company A, 511th Signal Battalion, have responded with two innovations in communication equipment.

The first idea was developed by the men of the Wire Section, Command Signal Center Platoon.

The signalmen have mounted a field switchboard on an airborne skid so that it can be air-lifted, internally or externally, by all utility and cargo helicopters assigned to the division as well as by the CV-2 Caribou, the Army's largest fixed-wing aircraft.

The second idea is a terminal devised by the Communications Center Section of the Command Signal Center Platoon. It is mounted on a ¼-ton jeep trailer, and, like the "skid", can be air-lifted by all division utility and cargo aircraft.

Davey Truck

The Shop Set, Contact Maintenance Set 2, better known as the Davey Truck, is basically a ¾-ton truck used for repair and maintenance of all equipment organic to an air assault brigade, except signal equipment and aircraft.

Loaded and ready to perform its mission it weighs 789 pounds. By carefully matching the tools carried to the type of equipment found in air assault units and eliminating those excess to minimum essential operations, a gross weight reduction of 520 lbs. has been realized to date. It is hoped that the contact truck can be eventually reduced to about 6,000 pounds.

Mobile Container

Also under test by the maintenance battalion is a new, highly-compact type of container called the S-141, Evaluation Mobile Container (MOCON). Carrying spare parts and supplies are 2nd and 3rd echelon maintenance in support of an air assault brigade and its accompanying units, the MOCON weighs approximately 5,000 pounds loaded, and is air transportable.

Another van-type unit which is being modified for air-lifting is the MSM 16, a unit capable of supplying an air assault brigade and its supporting elements with complete signal repair facilities. Drawer type shelves specially designed to carry all necessary spare parts helps to make this a unit which can be ready to operate in a minimum period of time after its arrival in an area.

Helipad

In addition to lightening loads, many ideas have been put forth which involve new or better ways of doing things. An example of such an idea is the conception of operation "Instant Helipad" by the men of Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion.

The goal of "instant helipad" is to clear an otherwise inaccessible area in a matter of minutes so as to allow delivery and pick-up of troops, equipment, and supplies directly on the ground.

The concept is for an engineer squad, delivered by a single helicopter, to rappel into an area carrying pre-set demolitions and chain saws. The pre-set charges would be placed around trees and other obstacles, connected to a ring of explosive detonating cord around the entire area, and everything blown simultaneously. Final clearance of the area would be made by using additional demolitions and chain saws to reduce the debris to a suitable size for manhandling off the site.

The communications chief for Company C, 3rd Battalion, 17th Infantry, has come up with another new technique. Using the Army's new AN-PRC25 radio as the basic unit, the company command net has been extended to a range of 30 miles by substituting an RC-292 antenna and relaying through helicopters.

The attention of the members of the 11th Air Assault Division has been directed to improving present air mobility theories and to the conception and development of new ones. Many of the ideas will be scrapped quickly as impractical for various reasons.

A few, though, will survive the most rigid testing and application and will become part of the tactical doctrine of tomorrow.

New Basic Class Wives Hold First Social Event

WIVES, HOST, BOARD BUS FOR TOUR OF POST

Before the coffee, 2nd Lt. Allen R. Thayer, detachment executive officer, took the ladies on a bus tour of the post.

The wives were greeted by Mrs. Charles C. Bowie, wife of the detachment commander. Battalion cadre hostesses, Mrs. Joe H. Rodriguez and Mrs. Remo Quijano Jr., presented each one a folder which contained a social roster of the married officers, some tips on social life and customs at Fort Benning and a pamphlet on items of interest in and around the post.

The bus tour provided the first look at Fort Benning for all the wives. For the majority, the coffee marked the first social engagement since their husbands entered the Army. To aid them in their adjustment to military life, the informal talks, presented in capsule form, gave information regarding the Army, the post, and the basic course their husbands are attending.

Maj. Mason gave the wives a sketch of the composition and organization of The Infantry Center and School, stressing the part their husbands had in it.

Chaplain Estes outlined the religious activities on the post and invited the ladies to regard the chaplains as they would civilian ministers.

After Lt. Bowie advised the ladies that the air conditioned lounge is available to serve as an extension of their own living rooms, Mrs. Bowie and Mrs. Mason added the womans' touch to the affair.

While partaking of coffee and iced tea the wives met the honored guest, Mrs. Walter D. Short, wife of the brigade commander, and Mrs. Ralph J. Viestenz, Mrs. William E. Killoran, Mrs. Frank Perri and Mrs. Billy R. Prestridge, cadre hostesses.

The group formed a social committee, arranged for another coffee and made dates for playing golf and for afternoon swims and bridge games.

OC Wives Hold Coffee In Dayroom

Guests included Mrs. Walter D. Short, wife of Col. Short, Student Brigade commander; Mrs. Claude W. Baker, wife of Lt. Col. Baker, executive officer of the brigade; Mrs. George P. McLendon, wife of Lt. Col. McLendon, 5th Battalion commander; Mrs. Willie O. Carr, wife of Capt. Carr, 52nd Company commander; Mrs. Kenneth D. Geissler Jr., wife of Lt. Geissler, 52nd Company executive officer; and Mrs. Raymond A. Baliatico, wife of Lt. Baliatico, 52nd Company tactical officer.

Capt. Carr gave a brief talk on the officer candidate program. Then the ladies toured the barracks.

A talk on the proper procedure for writing invitations was given by Mrs. Baliatico.

The following wives were elected officers for the club: chairman, Mrs. Robert F. Olson; co-chairman, Mrs. Richard Wade; treasurer, Mrs. Raymond L. Madsen; publicity chairman, Mrs. Donald Grundmann; hospitality chairman, Mrs. Charles T. Clark.

Hostesses were Mrs. Grundmann, Mrs. Herbert Sklar, Mrs. Robert A. Strode, Mrs. Wade, Mrs. Ellis L. Webb, and Mrs. James T. Wilson.

Medical Service Wives Greet New Members

The Medical Service Wives honored the incoming medical and dental interns' wives at a coffee held recently at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

In the receiving line with Mrs. George J. Schonholtz, president of the club; Mrs. William A. Todd Jr., wife of Martin Army Hospital's commanding officer, and Mrs. Frederick F. Krauskopf, wife of the deputy commander, were Mesdames Robert J. Balserak, Daniel P. Denenberg, Donald R. Eubanks, Philip H. Creech, Theodore A. Robinson, Robert C. Rowland and Mitchell Woldoff.

Other newcomers welcomed were Mesdames Richard R. Buckius, Jay C. Fish, A. Keith Gilchrist, Kenneth C. Hanson, Robert F. Haas, John T. Leddy, Donald M. Nay, Louis E. Soscia, Victor Spear, Kenneth Spitzer and C. R. Kesmodel.

Farewells were given to Mesdames Roderick A. Comunale, Louis D. Dubilier, William E. Oakley and Arnold Winston.

Red, white and blue decorations in celebration of Independence Day were in the charge of Mrs. George I. Johnson. Other hostesses were Mrs. Frederick F. Krauskopf, chairman, and Mesdames Thomas Burton, Clyde Gerhardt and Thomas Lane.

During a short business session, Mrs. Robert M. Herman, chairman of the nominating committee, presented a new slate of officers to be voted on and installed at the August meeting.

Mrs. Louis D. Dubilier, program chairman, suggested that the club sponsor the Coffee Call at Martin Army Hospital on the third Friday of each month. This was agreed upon and volunteers were requested for serving.

Hostesses for the August coffee will be the wives of the Medical Service Corps officers.

Com. Dept. Wives In Informal Meet

The ladies of the Communications Department met Friday, 12 July, at the home of Mrs. Jack O. Gardner.

The afternoon coffee was an informal gathering.

Mrs. James C. Borroum was hostess at a bridge party held at her home on Friday.

Protestant Group Picks 3 Officers

Mrs. E. G. Gibson was elected first president at an organizational meeting of the Protestant - Women of the Chapel (PWOC) Evening Circle held recently at the adult Sunday school building on Dixie Road.

Mrs. John M. Waldrop, acting chairman pending election of officers, opened the meeting and gave a short devotional.

Capt. Ann M. Damsbo of the physical therapy clinic of Martin Army Hospital, presented the proposed constitution.

The group voted to accept the constitution.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Lillian Kennedy, vice-president, and Sp5 Tommie J. Devans, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Hollis C. Lewis sang "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Waldrop.

PWOC Evening Circle meets on the third Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. and welcomes all ladies in the area who care to attend.

Mrs. Reynolds Honored Guest At MOOM Meet

Ladies of the Mortar Committee, Weapons Department, were hostesses at an informal coffee in the Corregidor Room, Main Officers' Open Mess recently.

The guest of honor was Mrs. Lawrence S. Reynolds, wife of the new Weapons Department director.

A watermelon centerpiece was the focal point on the serving table. The basket-shaped watermelon was filled with assorted fresh fruit.

New members welcomed to the group were: Mrs. Clyde N. Sedgwick, Mrs. James L. Widick, Mrs. Larry G. Gillory, Mrs. Kenneth J. Both, Mrs. Douglas Williams, Mrs. Arthur J. Hogan Jr., Mrs. John E. Barnett, Mrs. George W. Goldsmith Jr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ruple.

Mrs. Jack Barker and Mrs. Edwin Cannon were guests.

TIB Wives' Club Meets at MOOM

Col. Robert C. Williams, president of The Infantry Board, told the ladies of the Board that they should be familiar with what their husbands are doing at work, during the monthly luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Col. Williams introduced a film on the Army Training, Evaluation and Control Group.

Name tags were miniature copies of Infantry Board patches.

Mrs. George Griswald, wife of the deputy board president, and Mrs. Charlie Wahle, a newcomer to the group, were guests.

Hostesses for the affair were Mrs. James Sudderth, Mrs. George Johnson and Mrs. Durward Gosney.

Wives of TICTC Meet Newcomers At Recent Coffee

Thirty-nine wife of officers of The Infantry Center Troop Command met recently in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess to welcome several new members and to say farewell to another.

Those welcomed were Mrs. Robert Stubblefield, Mrs. Earl E. Schnieder and Mrs. Glen R. Wingard.

Mrs. Luther E. Oswalt, who is moving to Washington, D.C., was bade farewell.

The centerpiece, provided by Mrs. Robert L. Kresl, was made of tiered Zinnias.

Mrs. Liston L. Edge won the doorprize.

NCO Wives Meet Here

The Non - Commissioner Officers Wives' Club entertained with a coffee at its clubhouse recently.

Honored guests included Mrs. Joseph Sparicino and Mrs. Ulysses Walters. Both ladies are former members of the NCO Wives' Club, and are visiting friends in this area. They were presented corsages of white fleur-de-mur by the club president, Mrs. Robert E. Lamb.

Also attending after a two-year absence was a new member, Mrs. George C. Forrester. The Forresters are making their home in Columbus, Ga.

Pink candy stripes were the decor color and were carried out in the coffee service and cafe window curtains. In the center of the serving table was an antique Bavarian vase filled with summer flowers to indicate the theme of the coffee, "Carousel."

Hostesses were Mrs. Jesse Henson and Mrs. Henry Speech.

Decorations were by Mrs. William Krilling.

JAG Corps Marks Anniversary Monday

The 188th anniversary of the Army's Judge Advocate General (JAG) Corps Monday will be observed by 20 officers, enlisted men and civilians of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section.

The nine officers, one warrant officer, six enlisted men and four civilians who man the busy leagal office of The Infantry Center, have an annual workload of approximately 525 local legal claims, 8,000 legal assistance cases and 1,000 legal opinions.

Under the leadership of Col. Edwin G. Schuck, staff judge advocate, the section furnishes legal advice to the commanding general, his staff and deputies, as well as to military personnel and their dependants in the Fort Benning area.

Supervision of all administration of military justice within the command is one of the responsibilities of the staff judge advocate and his staff.

Legal activities of commands subordinate to The Infantry Center are also supervised by the section.

Legal matters handled by the Staff Judge Advocate Section include questions of interpretation and application of laws, regulations or statutes that have a bearing on the operation of the local command.

As at other installations throughout the Army, Judge Advocate General Corps members have a responsibility to see that regulations, customs and statutes of the service are correctly and fairly executed.

In addition to responsibilities on the command and public relations level, corps members render personal legal services to individual servicemen and their dependents. These services include domestic relations, wills, power of attorney, taxation, estates, real property, sales, leases, contracts, notes, affidavits, personal property, depositions, citizenship naturalization and change of name.

The JAG Corps sets a high standard of education, training and personal behavior for its personnel, according to officials.

The Army's first judge advocate general was William Tudor, appointed July 29, 1775, by the Second Continental Congress.

His responsibility and the importance of his position were made clear the following day when Gen. George Washington issued an order dated July 30, 1775, which said that the judge advocate would "in all things relative to his office. . .be acknowledged and obeyed as such."

NEW EXEC . . . Maj. Leslie H. Gilbert has assumed the duties of executive officer of the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction). Maj. Gilbert has recently returned from France where he served with the 97th Engineer Battalion. Maj. Gilbert wears the wings of an Army senior aviator and has served with 4th Logistical Command in Verdun, France.

2nd Ready For Battles In Carolina

The garrison area of the 2nd Infantry Division is a buzzing hive of activity as soldiers prepare to move out on joint exercise Swift Strike III.

The giant-size maneuver, already underway in the Carolinas with Air Force units of both sides fighting in the air, will be the largest peacetime mock battle ever held anywhere in the world when the fight is joined early next week by the infantry.

Olive drab trucks bearing the white star of the Strategic Army Corps line streets, sidewalks and even lawns as the men of the "Second to None" division load up.

Scattered odds and ends of Army Equipment sit outside barracks wearing the fresh coats of paint they will take with them to Swift Strike. The men themselves have already undergone months of rigorous training in preparation for the annual summer melee.

Swift Strike III stacks up as a battle between the Army's airborne division's and "Straight leg" infantry divisions, each side supported by air power and logistical commands.

The divisions involved have colorful names earned in a half century of campaigns across the face of Europe and the Far East. On the "Blue" side the "Screaming Eagles" of the 101st and the "All Americans" of the 82nd Airborne Divisions menace the "Red Devils" of the 5th Infantry Division from Fort Carson, Colo., and the "Indianheads" of Fort Benning's own 2nd Infantry Division.

Both sides bring glamorous reputations to the fray. The airborne divisions are the babies of the four, being born in 1942. In World War II their hardfighting ability earned them the nickname "devils in baggy pants" from the German forces they opposed in Europe.

The Germans also tagged the 5th Division with "Red Devils", and the 2nd Division has carried the name "Indianhead" for the patch its soldiers have worn since World War I when they returned to the U. S. as the most decorated American division.

The bulk of 2nd Division combat units will slip away from Fort Benning in a few days, traveling to the Carolinas over secret routes. Maximum security is being main-

Division Marksmanship Detachment Wins Honors

By Carl Halstead

The 2nd Infantry Division Marksmanship Detachment walked off with flying colors at the recent annual 1000-yard High Power Rifle Tournament conducted at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and followed a week later with victories at the Atomic City Pre-Perry Outdoor Pistol turnament, also conducted at Oak Ridge.

In Match 1 (any rifle-iron sights), SFC Richard F. Tompkins won a score of 100-10V, and he also took March 3 (Grand Aggregate) with a score of 198-20V.

In the Team Match (Any Rifle-Aggregate), 2nd Division's Marksmanship Detachment took first place honors with a score of 348-23V.

In the pistol tournaments held at Oak Ridge, Sgt. Grant Hoskins won Grand Aggregate, High Service; Center Fire Aggregate, High Service .22 caliber Match, 1st Master (Camp Perry Course); and the .22 Caliber Match, 1st Master, Rapid Fire Match.

Sgt. Vincent Angus took the .45 Caliber Match, 2nd Expert, Aggregate and PFC George Armanino, who is also the unit's gunsmith, captured the .22 Caliber Match, 2nd Expert, Timed Fire and .45 Caliber Match, 2nd Expert, Timed Fire.

PFC Athur J. Arrowood took the Center Fire Match, 1st Expert, Rapid Fire.

In the pistol team matches, the 2nd Infantry Division Marksmanship Detachment won as 1st Expert Team both the Center Fire Team Match and the .45 Caliber Team match.

The commanding officer of the 2nd Division Marksmanship Detachment, Lt. Raymond E. Carney, received word that SFC Richard Tompkins, of his command, set two range records at the Oak Ridge Sportsman's Associated High Power Rifle Range during the recent tournaments.

CROSSING RIVERS AT FORT BENNING THIS WEEK
Members of 2nd Division's 72nd Armor Battalion

The Officers and men of the battalion, wearing steel pots, belts and M-14 rifles, loaded onto 5-ton trucks and moved out in the direction of Victory Pond, in the Harmony Church area.

On the first crossing, they tested the river, and how the boat reacts in the water. On the second crossing, they all moved out on signal, and assaulted the opposite shore.

During the first crossing, the men found out that if they did not keep the bow of the boat upstream, they would drift downstream at a very fast rate, and would miss the assault point.

The second crossing proved to be the best. As the boats were about in midstream, there came a blast of fire from machineguns and rifles, from the opposite shore. As the boats neared shore, the aggressors started to pull back,

Giving up conveniences like round door knobs should not be much of a sacrifice for the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry. This is the price they are paying for six months temporary duty in Europe.

Last week the fourth group of 2nd Division soldiers left Fort Benning by bus, climbed aboard Military Air Transport Service (MATS) jets and embarked on an adventure in military training in Europe. In being the fourth group, these soldiers saw a Rotaplan rotation working with unusual smoothness. The entire transfer of soldiers between the U. S. and Germany was accomplished in three days beginning early last

Photos By Shaner

Wednesday morning as the command flight of 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry personnel, commanded by Lt. Col. Jack Samson, flew out from Warner-Robins Air Force Base. The last flight of incoming 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry soldiers arrived back to the U.S. early Friday morning, winding up the latest Rotaplan transfer.

Each of the 12 flights of 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry personnel began at Fort Benning. Gathering in full combat gear and carrying nothing more than a single small bag, the soldiers had packed their baggage days in advance. All battalion luggage and equipment had been sent ahead and coordinating authorities along the way were given the responsibilities of insuring that baggage for each flight was aboard the designated aircraft.

Following a muster of personnel, each flight group traveled by bus from Fort Benning to Warner - Robins Air Force Base outside Macon, Ga., received meals in an Air Force Mess hall if they happened to arrive at a particular meal time, and then were driven to the flight line to await preparation of their jet aircraft.

Throughout the processing of individuals and baggage in the U.S. members of the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor and the 7th Cavalry aided Air Force personnel and rotating soldiers with their trip.

The four-engine jets left from Warner-Robins at approximate four-hour intervals. The windowless aircraft, packed with heavy equipment and individual duffel bags, and approximately 70 soldiers, flew nonstop to Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt, Germany.

At that end soldiers were met by welcoming committees and the band of the 9th Infantry Division, going by bus from the air base to Mannheim and Sullivan Barracks, their home for the next six months. This last bus trip took them by way of the famous German Autoban where they took a first good look at their temporary home and training grounds; the dark woods of tall trees bare but for a cluster of green on top, the countryside of highly cultivated farmland; the tiny country villages of weathered and red-tiled-roofed houses; and the distinctive international roadsigns with which soldiers have been practicing at Fort Benning since the start of Rotaplan in the 2nd Division.

BATTALION SERGEANT MAJOR MICHAEL J. REIS AND LT. EDWIN VOGAN EMBARK

Entering the Sullivan Barracks compound, the stucco military buildings and adjacent motor pools present quite a change in living conditions for the 9th Infantry soldiers used to wooden barracks of Fort Benning's Sand Hill.

Looking forward to the mechanized training and upcoming field training exercises, the soldiers also can look forward to tours in Europe during the most festive time of the year and also the most balmy. Some members of this unit will have the chance during their temporary stay to visit relatives and friends in Europe. While maneuvering in Europe they will be introduced to the hundreds of inquisitive German children who in the past have made fast friends with other 2nd Division Rotaplan soldiers, holding their intensive exercises on the German countryside.

And after six months it will be "back to the glorious land of the round doorknobs" again. Soldiers of the 2nd Division not rotating with Rotaplan units have one word of warning to members of the 2nd Battalion 9th Infantry: "Enjoy it. You're luckier than you think."

tained for the movement as both sides have slipped spies into the opposing camps. The convoys will be tactical and liable to be "attacked" at any moment enroute.

In a late development this week, a message arriving at the 2nd Division from higher headquarters states that the air forces of the "red" and "blue" have met for the first time with both sides claiming scores.

It was also reported that a joint unconventional warfare task force aircraft "dropped propaganda leaflets depicting a high-ranking red military leader as a "beast."

Reunion

Mayor W. W. McAlister of San Antonio has officially proclaimed July 21-27 "2nd Division Week" in the city that for so many years served as the "Indianhead" Division's garrison area.

The group from Fort Benning numbers many sergeants major, first sergeants and combat veterans of the 2nd Division. In San Antonio the men will be quartered at the Hotel St. Anthony for the length of the reunion.

Organization Ceremonies Held by 15th Artillery

Two oddities (for an artillery battalion) were on hand at Kelley Hill recently to spice up a 46th birthday party by the 2nd Division's 15th Artillery Battalion.

The first was a young falcon, named "Armageddon," which perched on her trainer's arm impassively for the battalion's parade ground ceremonies. More active was a full-blooded Kiowa Indian, Sp4 Marland Tahbonemah of Headquarters Battery, whose authentic Plains Tribe dress added the colors of the rainbow to the affair.

Artillerymen of the 15th massed on Essebagger Field while the 2nd Division band played march tunes and stood at rigid attention for a reading of the unit's lineage by Capt. Broder L. Jervell.

The 15th Artillery was organized on June 1, 1917 at the State Fair Grounds in Syracuse, N.Y. In September the 15th was assigned to the as yet unborn 2nd Infantry Division and sailed in December aboard the SS Adriatic for France, stopping on Christmas morning at Liverpool, England.

Chateau-Thierry gave the men a taste of trench warfare. Now combat veterans, they campaigned at Soissons, Marbache, Champagne and the Meuse River.

The artillerymen listened intently as Capt. Jervell ticked off their lineage and honors, followed by an address by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. John M. Evans.

Later, anniversary guests, families and friends of the soldiers, took stock of the battalion equipment and lunched with the men in the mess halls. Pony rides and a movie in the theater awaited the children.

Signal Bn. Changes CO and 'Exec.'

A change of command ceremony on Kelley Hill's Essebagger Field has given the 2nd Infantry Division's signalmen a new leader.

Maj. John E. McIntire, formerly executive officer of the 122nd Signal Battalion, has taken over as commanding officer. He replaces Lt. Col. Gus Grisard who goes to Naples, Italy as a signal officer.

The battalion, which will leave ahead of the rest of the 2nd Division for the Carolinas and Swift Strike III, has also gained a new executive officer to replace Maj. McIntire.

He is Maj. Elliott H. Smyzer, serving his first tour of duty with the "Indianhead" Division. Maj. Smyzer, comes to Fort Benning from Taiwan where he served as signal advisor to the Second Nationalist Chinese Field Army.

A military science graduate of the University of Maryland, Maj. McIntire entered the Army in February 1940 as an enlisted man and served til 1944 in the Europe-Africa-Middle East Theater of Operations.

He and his wife, Donna, have three children: Gwen Louise, 11; Jane Lynne, 9; and Sharon Lee, 2.

Eight Volunteers Will Get Stress Pay for 'Freeze'

Volunteers are being selected from 2nd Infantry Division units for duty helping the Army conduct a cold acclimatization study in Natick, Mass.

By the end of July, eight 2nd Division Soldiers will be picked for this two-month assignment with the U. S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine. They will be used to run tests determining how much response change can be obtained from differing amounts of cold stress exposure in terms of time.

Individuals selected for this potentially uncomfortable series of tests will be eligible not only for daily temporary duty (per diem) pay but two months of "thermal stress pay." People already receiving hazarous duty pay are not being considered for this stress pay assignment.

People selected will all be enlisted men and their military occupation specialty (MOS) is immaterial. The assignment at Natick, Mass. will last from August 15 to October 15. Volunteers will be screened beginning Monday by a medical officer from the Institute of Environmental Medicine.

Individuals selected will be placed in four groups by the institute. One control group and three groups which will receive two, four and six hours per day cold exposure respectively. The cold exposure groups will be further divided into sub-groups who either experience their cold stress in one continuous block or who get it in two daily blocks separated by rewarming.

Every effort is being made to select volunteers carefully due to the complications of these experimental tests. The institute expects difficulties in differentiating the results of these experimental groups in their exposure to cold.

Among units of the 2nd Infantry Division submitting names for this duty are the 2nd Administration Company, listing 17 volunteers; Division Artillery Headquarters, 1; 38th Artillery, 1; 2nd Medical Battalion, 1; Division Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4; 2nd Brigade Headquarters, 3; and 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, 1.

A total of eight will be selected from the 2nd Division. In addition, 16 other enlisted men will be selected from Fort Benning's Infantry Center.

Mrs. Huffman Honored By Division Artillery

The ladies of Division Artillery Headquarters honored Mrs. Burnside E. Huffman at their monthly coffee Tuesday. Mrs. Huffman's husband is the new DivArty Commander.

The home of Mrs. Floyd L. Johnson Jr. was the setting for the event. Mrs. James J. Brenner assisted Mrs. Johnson with the hospitalities.

Coffee was served in the dining room, where Mrs. Huffman presided at the silver service. The table was covered with a white lace cloth and an arrangement of tangerine gladioli centered the table. Mrs. Huffman was presented with an orchid corsage from the ladies.

Mrs. James R. Adams, wife of CWO Adams, was welcomed by the DivArty Headquarters ladies, as was Mrs. J. F. Pulley. Chap. (Capt.) Pulley recently assumed the duties of DivArty chaplain. He was previously assigned to the 2nd Division's Support Command.

Mrs. F. P. Sheridan was bid farewell as her husband, Col. Sheridan, will be leaving for Vietnam in August.

Coffee was followed by a short business meeting conducted by Mrs. Huffman.

Mrs. Greene Tops Support Bridge

At the Country Club recently Mrs. Frank D. Greene won high at the Support Command monthly bridge. Mrs. Wallace Bruce was low and Mrs. Pete Burke, a newcomer, was second high.

Hostess for this time was Mrs. James D. O'Bryan, who set up for the five tables. One table was expressly for beginners — a new practice for the group, which meets from 1 to 4 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month.

Mrs. Evans Farewells Said by 15th

Co-hostesses for the recent monthly coffee of the 15th Artillery Officers' wives were Mrs. Edmund Rozecki and Mrs. William C. Tempel at the home of Mrs. Rozecki. A stork centerpiece decorated the serving table at which Mrs. Tempel poured.

A baby cradle held the gifts for the surprise pink and blue shower in honor of Mrs. Hoyt Abney who recently gave birth to a daughter. Fond farewell and very best wishes were extended to Mrs. John M. Evans, wife of the commanding officer, who will be leaving the battalion soon.

The group also presented Mrs. Evans with a corsage of red roses in appreciation of her work and leadership during her stay with the 15th. New members welcomed to the group were Mrs. Frank Wasko, Jr., Mrs. Charles Vinez, and Mrs. William K. McCurry. During a short business meeting conducted by Mrs. Rozecki, Mrs. Temple was appointed as new hospitality chairman.

2nd Div. Support Command Shows New Van to C.G.

By Support Command PIO

The 2nd Infantry Division's Support Command was paid a visit recently by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Billingslea who inspected a truck-van to be given to the general by the Support Command operations center.

"This is fascinating," stated Mrs. Billingslea as soldiers unfolded the van to show her the advantages it has over the conventional tents.

The fan is completely air-conditioned for the hot summer months and has a double heater system for the winter season. The lighting system is rather unique. It has flourescent lights and black-out lights with an electrical system for changing one to the other as the door is opened and closed.

7th Cavalry Change Of Command Held

At 7th Cavalry Headquarters on the 2nd Infantry Division's Sand Hill, command of the eldline cavalry unit changed hands.

Lt. Col. James L. Keown received the colors from Lt. Col. Quintus C. Atkinson who goes to Fort Monroe, Va.

Col. Keown, a graduate of the University of Omaha and a native of Evansville, Ind., was last assigned as chief of combat arms at the U.S. Army Chemical School, Fort McClellan, Ala.

This is the new cavalry leader's first tour of duty with the 2nd Division, but he has had prior service on Sand Hill. Shortly after entering the Army in 1939 Col. Keown, an enlisted man then, helped to organize a tent camp for the World War II influx of soldiers where the wooden barracks now stand.

In 1942 the colonel graduated from Armor Officer Candidate School (OCS) at Fort Knox, Ky., and was shipped to the European Theater of Operations and the 3rd Armor Division.

Col. Keown and his wife, Rita, have nine children; three boys and six girls.

'Cox's Army' Capture Division Softball Title

The final game of the 1963 Second Infantry Division Softball Tournament was won by the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, over the 2nd Administration Company in a hard fought contest 6-3.

The game, played under the lights at 2nd Administration Field last Saturday, found a large crowd on hand to root for the teams. The bleachers were loaded and cars crammed the parking lot. Spectators lined the hillside and many sat perched atop their cars.

Lt. Col. W. H. Cox, battalion commander of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, was on hand to watch his team play, managing officer of the 2nd Administration Company.

Also in the stands was Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, who watched the game and then made presentations of trophies in ceremonies following the contest.

The first inning saw the Administration nine go down one-two-three. In the 87th-half a run scored on a fielder's choice and the foot-soldiers led 1-0.

James Drake, pitcher for the 87th, continually smiled, as he pitched, which brought a lot of howls from the 2nd Admin bench. He used an unusual windup, a spred-eagle effect like a high-diver preparing for a swan dive, and the razzing from the opposing players only seemed to make him smile all the more; which only caused the rabid Admin fans to howl all the louder.

Admin tied it up in their half of the 2nd inning on a double by Grady Rose, a single by William Northgraves and Rose stealing home. The score remained tied at 1-1 as the 7th team failed to score.

Admin went down in order in the 3rd and "Cox's Army" came to bat. MSgt. Gerald Comer let one on base with a walk and the runner took third on a bunt. Another walk loaded the bases and Roy Nichols began warming up for the Admin team. A single to center followed by a call-safe at home on a bunt totalled the inning for the 87th. They took the lead 3-17.

Once again the 2nd Administration team went down in order and the 87th came to bat in the 4th inning. The Kelley Hill boys made it 4-1 on a steal at home on a bad throw.

In the 5th inning the Admin nine scored two runs on a walk, a steal, a single and a double. The score remained 4-3 at the end of the inning as the 87th team failed to score in their turn at bat.

Spt Torise Maae took the mound in the 6th for the 7th squad and Admin failed to score.

Roof Falls In

In the bottom of the 6th the roof fell in on the Administration team. The 87th nine lead off with a double, followed by a bunt single and a run scored on a long fly to center. Another single gave the 87th squad a 6-3 lead, and that is how the score remained.

Admin came to bat in the 7th. A fly to center, a walk to Nichols, another walk to Eddie Fuch; then a fly to short center followed by still another walk loaded the bases for the Admin nine and things began to look like a real thriller was in the making. However, Maae got the final batter on a pop to 1st to end the game and make the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, the division champions.

Finally, after the boisterous celebrating subsided, Gen. Corley spoke to the assemblage: "I think it indicative of the 2nd Division that we can turn out teams like we had here tonight."

The assistant division commander presented trophies to the winners and also to the runner-ups.

Swimming Tournament

A swimming meet, sponsored by Service Club Two, was held at the Sand Hill swimming pool recently. The events were held hourly throughout the day with the main event starting at 1300. Medals were given to the winners of each meet.

Charles E. 'Ehler, 11th Administration Company, 11th Air Assault won top honors for the day. He won the Medley and Butterfly and also took first place in the Diving event. His two-and-a-half forward somersault was the smoothest seen at Sand Hill's pool in a long time.

The swimming meet was open to all Enlisted men at this installation.

2nd Admin. Evens With Thrilling 10-9

After losing the first game out of the best-of-three series for the division championship to the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry team, the 2nd Administration nine pulled out all the stops in the second game to edge the 87th 10-9 in a real thriller.

The second game saw Spt Torise Maae pitching for the 87th and Marvin Bays pitching for Admin. In the second inning "Cox's Army" scored two runs to take the lead. The Administration team came back in the third to run ahead 2-2 on an in-the-park homer by Sgt. Edward Valence with Sp5 Eddie Futch on base; then a back-to-back homerun by Sgt. William Bradt, followed by a triple off the bat of PFC Grady Ross.

Admin increased the lead to 4-2 in the fourth when Bays walked and took two on a wild throw from the catcher.

The lead continued to change back and forth. In the fifth inning, Admin loaded the bases and MSgt. Gerald Comer came in to pinch-hit. He quickly sailed a grand-slam homerun over the right field fence.

Starting the extra innings found the 87th squad facing pitcher Nicols of 2nd Administration Company. A ground rule double by Willie Critton with John Wells on base and a bad throw from 1st scored Wells. The end of the 1st half of the 8th inning found the 87th leading 9-8.

James Drake was pitching for "Cox's Army" and the Admin bench began to raze him loudly. Both teams began to poke fun at one another. The 87th nine began packing as if the game was over and the Admin boys began singing "On Top Of Old Baldy" — pitcher Drake for the 87th is minus hair. Admin took the game by scoring two runs in the bottom of the 8th.

Martindale Runs Away With Title

Texas golf star Bill Martindale fired a final round par 72 last Thursday afternoon and walked away with a 13-stroke victory in the 1963 Fort Benning Golf Tournament at the post Country Club.

Martindale put together successive rounds of 64, 71, 75 and 72 for a four-round total of 282, 13 strokes better than his closest competitor, Joe Hamby, who finished at 295.

Paul Colby captured third place with a 307 tally while fourth place went to Jim Remmert with a four-round total of 312.

George Hardgrove, a retired colonel, once again won the seniors crown as he came home with a 75 to complete a four-round score of 289.

The runner-up spot in the seniors division went to Howard Holbrook, pro at the Country Club, with a final score of 329.

The first four winners in the open tourney and the winner and runner-up in the seniors competition will represent Fort Benning in the Third Army Tournament to be held at the post Country Club Aug. 13-16.

.05 Cup of Coffee Is Still Around

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Armed Forces food service outlets are among the few places left where a five-cent cup of coffee can be bought, according to James Weir, Chief of the Food Branch Services Division, Headquarters Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

By 'Snag' Tallas

Anglers ths week have had some good catches of bass, catfish and pan fish.

Fishing on the backwaters has been fairly good, with anglers bringing in nice size bass and catfish.

And at Fort Benning the fishing has been fair at Harps, Weems, and Russ Ponds. Russ just re-opened Saturday, and if you like catfish, that's the place to go.

I went to the pond to try my luck. I caught my limit within five hours. None of the fish weighed under a pound and all were catfish. Unfortunately I can't stand catfish, so I fed them to my wife.

The cats were biting mainly on liver.

I understand that the bass have been hitting on a top-water lure called the "Dalton Special." It has an action which is probably the reason bass have been striking.

According to the manufacturer, the "Dalton Special" should be used in still-water for best results. When in the water, the "DS" has just the head of the lure out of the water, the rest is just below the surface. Upon completion of the cast, let the plug remain stationary for at least 90 seconds; then begin retrieving the lure by jerking and taking up the slack. Let the lure remain stationary again, but this time for ten seconds. Keep using this method until you have recovered the lure.

The movement of the "Dalton Special" is a bobbing from side to side, while at the same time there is a spinner which disturbs the water enough to attract the fish.

A safety hint for you fishermen with children. Keep a lock on your tackle boxes. One child in the news recently swallowed a box of his fathers best fishing flies.

'62 Team Defeated 10 Straight Opponents, Swept Championship

By Dave Braun

The sound of leather popping and the barking of signal calling will begin ringing at Fort Benning Monday as the 1963 Doughboy football team prepares for "full steam ahead."

With a host of players returning from last year's squad which compiled a 10-0 record en route to the national service championship, Coach Oren E. DeHaven will be looking forward to another fine season.

Listed among the returnees who will have jobs nailed down when the team begins practice Monday are Marvin Tibbetts, who played in the quarterback slot last year and Fred Murphy, who hauled in six touchdown passes as an end.

Both played at Georgia Tech for Coach Bobby Dodd.

More danger lurks for Doughboy opponents in the backfield where returning will be plie-driving fullback Wallace Johnson, former University of Oklahoma star; halfbacks Bobby Towns, former Georgia Bulldog who scored 36 points last season; Ron Quillen, who scored three touchdowns against the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Tigers and DeWayne Jeter, a combination quarterback-flankerback.

Added depth in the backfield will be provided by scatbacks Raymond Eddy and Brewster Hobby.

On the line Coach DeHaven will have Joe Wendrybloski, former Illinois guard; Dan House at end, Elliot Moseley at center; Bill Nance, a 230-pound tackle, and Wayne Peters, a guard.

Sarette made the 1962 All-East squad and played one year of professional football in the Canadian League.

Donald Shade also will be making his first appearance in a Doughboy uniform this fall. Shade, co-captain of the 1961 University of Wisconsin team which played in the Rose Bowl, is a rugged performer.

Another newcomer to the red, white and blue clad team is Bob Crevishon. Bob is the tallest and heaviest member on team, tipping the scales at 245 pounds while standing six-feet, four inches.

Off the campus of the University of Illinois where he was a starting tackle, Bob will add aggressiveness to either the offensive or defensive units.

Standing five-foot, 11 inches and weighing 200 pounds is newcomer Pat Dye, University of Georgia All-American in 1959-1960. Dye is a guard.

Bruce Roach, a six-foot, one-inch, 210-pounder, will be another welcomed addition to the Doughboy squad. A fleet-footed end, Roach was named to the Kansas All-Conference in 1961 and 1962 while playing for Kansas Satte.

Carlton Waskey, a five-foot, 11-inch, 200-pound center, will add a lot of hustle and spirit to the Fort Benning squad. Waskey played collegiate football at Georgia Tech.

George Walstad is another newcomer who will provide additional depth at end. Three years as a regular for Oklahoma State University, the collegiate star will be gunning for a berth on the starting team.

Harold Erickson, six foot, 220 pound guard and a four-year veteran of Georgia Tech football, will see plenty of action as offensive or defensive guard.

Erickson was named to the 1960 All-Southeastern Conference team.

With the addition of a talented bunch of newcomers, Coach DeHaven will be hoping to fill the slots vacated by workhorses Allen Everhart and Lindell Lovellette, tackles, and Sam Stellatella, a guard whose toe booted 27 points through the uprights last season.

With three weeks of practice scheduled before they tangle with the Southwest Florida Athletic Association at Doughboy Stadium Sept. 7, Coach DeHaven's Army eleven should be ready to go.

Tech All-America To Address Group

A former Georgia Tech All-America, Bobby Davis, will be the guest speaker at the July meeting of the Fort Benning Chapter of the Defense Supply Association.

The meeting will be held in the Royal Crown Cola auditorium at 7:30 p.m. tonight, according to C. L. Canington, president of the local DSA chapter.

4th Battalion Boxers Putting on Weekly Spectacular

By Frank Gibson

Remember the good old days?

Many can recall the days of the good five cent cigar, the big nickle candy bar and the thriving boxing club where all the local pugs met to sharpen their reflexes.

Every Friday night more than 3,000 enthusiastic lusty-voiced fans gather around a colorfully decorated ring in the 4th Student Airborne Ranger Battalion area to see 10 three-round boxing bouts.

The spectacle is unbelievable. In the tension-filled prefight minutes bright march music enshrouds the bleachers surrounding the ring which sits in the center of what was formerly a tennis court. Many of the fans arrive to the sharp beat of a drum corps. The color and music build to an almost fantastic degree until finally the announcer steps into the ring.

Officials are introduced and the action begins.

Observers soon realize that not all the competitors are professional. Some are not even experienced amateurs, but to a man, they're spirited and willing. They are at Fort Benning to "go airborne." Each boxer is an airborne volunteer and is assigned to The Student Brigade's 4th Battalion.

Conceived by Lt. Col. John J. Lissner, battalion commander, as a method of improving the morale of the trainees, the weekly smokers have become increasingly popular with the trainees and with other Fort Benning personnel who help fill the stands.

The battalion training section schedules the bouts, and weight and experience of each man determines who he will fight.

Golden Gloves

In last Friday night's most exciting bout Charles Westbrook, a former Golden Glover from Iowa spent almost the entire fight retreating from Melvin Owens who had never taken part in an organized boxing match. Late in the final round, Owens backed Westbrook into a corner.

In the Closing Seconds

James Snell, a 115-pounder from Michigan Center, Mich., and Victor Jacob, 112 pounds of heart from Philadelphia, provided the crowd with its brightest moments, as they exchanged quick punches for the full six minutes of fighting time, each gamely carrying on until the final bell. Snell got the nod from the judges via a split decision.

The fights start at 7:30 p.m. and are held behind Headquarters and Service Company in the 4th battalion area.

Baseball Banter

By Ted Williamson

The withdrawal of the 428th Medical Battalion from the Major Unit League has resulted in a tighter race, even though a three - team league is virtually unheard-of.

The remaining schedule will be a strenuous one for the three teams, particularly for the pitchers. The prospects of playing every other night with only two or three strong pitchers is not a pleasant one for any manager. And furthermore, The Infantry Center Troop Command, the 197th Infantry Brigade and The Student Brigade all have potent hitting attacks that can wear out a pitcher on any given night.

TSB seems to have the biggest headache now that Charlie Spell is gone. They have only two dependable pitchers left. Both Gary Moston and Glen Ponte have been pitching well, but this may not be enough. The 197th has used five pitchers this season: J. R. Miller, Jerry Rider, Ken Harper, Charlie Perry and Steve Muehl, but only Miller can be counted on to win consistently.

While TICTC has no outstanding hurler on the mound staff, the staff itself seems to be the most solid one in the league. Ted Argianis, Dick Carton, and Lee Parker have been doing yeoman-like work for George Doerr's crew, and Don Davis and Sammy Soto have come up with good performances lately.

Baseball experts say that pitching is 75 per cent of game, and this will certainly be proven by the end of the second half of the season.

As we mentioned before, Charlie Spell has departed the Fort Benning scene. Charlie has reported to Spokane of the Pacific Coast League, where he will perform for Danny Ozark, who was his manager before he entered the Army.

Spell kept the telephone lines humming last week as he was in touch with Dodger general manager Buzzy Bavasi almost every day. There was some question about baseball's National Defense rule, which was changed after Charlie came to the Army.

When we tried to establish a statistical record for Spell's career at Fort Benning, we hit a roadblock in that no records were kept last season. But we were able to come up with some fairly accurate estimates.

His won-lost record was 35 wins and 3 losses. He struck out approximately 350 to 375 hitters and walked less than a hundred. His earned-run average was somewhere around the 2.50 mark.

That's pitching, in anybody's league.

Charlie's final appearance Monday night was a typical Spell performance. He chalked up sixteen strike-outs and walked only two in whipping the league leaders, the 197th Infantry Brigade. Spell's baseball grace was an asset to the league and he had the respect and admiration of every player in the local circuit.

If the Dodgers win the National League pennant this year, they can thank Sandy Koufax. After losing Koufax last year about this time, the Dodgers folded and lost the pennant. However, this year, Koufax is healthy and on his way to his greatest year.

If Sandy can keep up his present pace, 16 wins and 3 losses for an .842 percentage, he will wind up the season with a record of 31 wins and six losses. This would be the highest number of wins in the majors since 1934, when Dizzy Dean won 30 games with the St. Louis Cardinals.

SFC Lorenzo Plowman has announced an exhibition schedule for his YAC All-Star baseball team. The next game will be on the ninth of August with a team from Robins Air Force Base.

Glowing Ink Is Tested For Airmail

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The U. S. Post Office has announced a new electronic sorting device to speed up airmail service.

Field tests of the new device, in which a luminescent ink will be overprinted on airmail stamps, will begin August 1, in Dayton, Ohio.

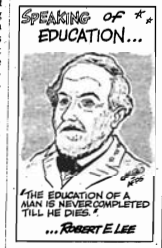
An extractor identifies and automatically sorts into a special bin all envelopes carrying airmail stamps or stickers imprinted with the new phosphorescent tagging inks.

A small black box added to the photo electric cancelling machine separates specially-treated airmail stamps at an estimated rate of 30,000 per hour.

The inks are harmless and do not change the appearance or color of the stamps.

Postmaster General J. Edward Day stated that the device would save considerable time in the dispatch of airmail.

If the field tests are successful eventually all stamps will be phosphor-tagged.



Better Bowling

COMMON LEAVE . . . The 1 - 2 and 8 - pin leave, and its counterpart for left - hand bowlers, 1-3 and 9 — is a common one. It is also one that can be picked off consistently with practice. To complete the spare properly, angle the ball from the right corner so that it will hit between the one and two pins. The eight will be taken out by the two. The 8-pin is a hidden pin or "sleeper" which makes the shot look harder than it actually is.

COOKIE COINCIDENCE

Joe Garagiola, now a baseball broadcaster, picks the St. Louis Cardinals to win the National League pennant. "After all," says Joe, "it's an Ecumenical Year."

YAC 'Stars' Clobber AF

The Youth Activities Club (YAC) Doughboy All-Star team, managed by SFC Lorenzo Plowman of the Infantry Center's, MP Company shellacked the Eufaula Air Force All-Stars here last Friday by the lopsided score of 29 to 0, as Mike Casey and George Magner combined to pitch a one-hitter.

Curtis Baker, Tom Jones and Craig Plowman led the All-Star hitting attack with a total of 12 base hits. Baker had five hits in five trips to the plate, Jones had four in four turns, including a double, and Plowman had three, also including a double, in three trips.

The All-Stars will travel to Macon this afternoon to meet a team from Robins Air Force Base, and will meet the same club here on the ninth of August. Home-and-home games also have been scheduled with teams from Fort Rucker, Fort McPherson, and Turner Air Force Base.

The All-Star team is made up of 11 and 12-year-old boys who were chosen by their coaches after participating in the local All-Star series played by All-Star teams from the Main Post and Custer Terrace. Custer Terrace emerged victorious in that fray by sweeping two straight games from the lads from Main Post.

Teenage Golfers Organized Here For Instruction

A new organization is being formed for teenage golfers at the post Country Club by the Ladies' Golf Association here.

The organization, known as the "Girl Golfers," is designed to instruct any teenage dependent in the basic fundamentals and proper etiquette of the popular sport.

The girls are first given instruction at weekly clinics by club professional, Howard Holbrook. Then they are required to play five rounds of golf with an experienced player. A test on rules and regulations wraps up the instruction period.

AT THE Movies

The Birds is a suspense thriller in color. It was produced by suspense - master Alfred Hitchcock who says, "Be prepared for sheer stabbing shock!" The stars are Rod Taylor, Jessica Tandy and Suzanne Pleshette. The story is about a peaceful California seaside community which becomes involved in a mounting atmosphere of terror resulting from mass attacks by birds. It builds slowly to a terrifying climax.

The Castilian stars Cesar Romero and Frankie Avalon. It is an adventure relating the struggle of the Spanish people to overthrow the 200-year grip of the mighty Moors. It is a spectacle of raging conflict and pageantry.

The Caretakers features an all-star cast of Robert Stack, Polly Bergen, Diane McBain, Joan Crawford and Janis Paige. The superintendent of nurses at a mental hospital comes into conflict with a new doctor who introduces an experimental system of group therapy which allows the patients more freedom and keeps them in closer contact with the normal world.

Lolly Friedman Set to Appear At Service Club

Vocal stylist Lolly Friedman will make a return engagement to Service Club No. 3, Harmony Church, Sunday, 2:30 p.m. for one of her inimitable performances. Miss Friedman has an unusual talent and singing style, encompassing all ranges of singing from operatic selection to popular.

She is a cousin of the late Al Jolson, and judging from her previous performances, she has inherited much of his art.

Eisenhower 'To Return' To Make TV Appearance

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Former President and General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower will return to Normandy in August for the filming of an hour-long television program to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the Allied invasion in World War II.

Gen. Eisenhower, who was Supreme Commander of the invasion forces, will give his personal recollections of D-Day and the deliberation of France, as well as his reflections on the meaning of the wartime events for today's world.

The general will visit his former headquarters in Portsmouth, England where the "go" decision was made that sent thousands of men into battle across the English Channel and eventually to victory over Germany.

The program, titled "D-Day Plus 20 Years; Eisenhower Returns to Normandy," will be televised about June 6, 1964, the anniversary of D-Day.

The 73-year-old general has asked that the program be made available to all countries that supplied troops for the Normandy invasion.

He emphasized that it would be a tribute to all Allied dead who fell on D-Day or subsequent battles in Europe.

Capt. Spear Is Chess Champion

The 1963 Fort Benning Chess Championship was conducted over the weekend at Service Club No. 1, under the auspices of Special Services, TIC.

The winner was Capt. Victor I. Spear of Martin Army Hospital. He was awarded a desk trophy with a clock, pen and chess figure.

Second place was won by Capt. Charles P. Saint, of the Infantry Board.

The names and chess records of these two winners, plus that of PFC Yuri Koral, B Company, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, who placed third, will be forwarded to Third Army for consideration in selecting candidates to participate in the Thomas Emery Armed Forces Chess Championship to be conducted in Washington, D. C., Oct. 12-19.

GOOD JOB. . .Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, seated, the commander of the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade looks on as PFC William Olson of Headquarters Battery presents his inspection sheet from a recent "surprise" inspection that caught Olson in the field. Olson, two other men, Sp5 Bradford Masterson and PFC James J. Kuntz, and their vehicles came out "smelling like a rose." The three men were awarded three-day passes for their effort.

U.S.-USSR 'Hot Line' Speeds Communication

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—The "hot line" soon to be established between Washington and Moscow will be far speedier than the communication system already linking the two capitals.

Presently, it takes hours to get emergency messages from one capital to the other, as messages have to be coded, sent to relay centers, passed on to embassies, decoded, and then physically carried to the seat of government.

The "hot line" will not permit President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev to talk directly. But they can transmit and receive coded teletype messages across 10,000 miles of undersea and land cables and microwave relay stations in minutes.

In the event something goes wrong with the teletype system, an emergency radio link will be available.

At each end of the "hot line" there will be both Russian and American teletype equipment, thus allowing either side to send and receive in either Russian or English. The messages are automatically decoded upon receipt.

2 Service Clubs Cop High Places

The Bayonet learned today that Fort Benning won both second and third places in Category 1 of the 1963 Third Army "Operation Service Club" contest.

Club No. 4 at Kelley Hill, won second place and Club No. 1, Main Post, won third. Miss Elizabeth Shanks is the director of No. 4, and Miss R. I. Coll directs No. 1.

The awards are for $50 and $25 respectively and are to be used in the improvement of the appearance of or for operational aids in the service clubs involved.

The entries have been forwarded to Department of the Army for competition in the Army-wide contest to be held later this summer.

Chaplains Corps Will Celebrate 188th Birthday With Reception

The 188th anniversary of the founding of the Chaplains Corps will be commemorated here with a reception at 3:30 p.m. Monday, in Bldg. 5.

Hosts for the event will be personnel of The Infantry Center Chaplains Section.

As in Army chapels throughout the world, the anniversary will be featured Sunday in all worship services on the post.

The Infantry Center Chaplains Section is headed by Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, post chaplain.

There are 36 chaplains assigned to Fort Benning. Of these, 20 serve with The Infantry Center, which includes one chaplain in the 11th Air Assault Division. There are 16 chaplains assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division.

Approximately 70 enlisted men work with the chaplains as assistants.

There are 18 chapels on the post in which 32 worship services are conducted each week, including Jewish, Catholic, general Protestant services in both English and Spanish, Day Saints (both Reorganized and Mormon), and Christian Science Services.

Four youth fellowship groups on the post include Junior Fellowship for boys and girls in grades four through six; Crusader Club, grades seven and eight, and the Follow Me and Episcopal Young Churchmen, both for high school students.

Four Sunday Schools here have a combined enrollment of more than 2,000 military personnel and their dependents.

The schools are the Protestant Women-of-the-Chapels, Jewish Sisterhood and Catholic Sodality.

This varied religious program reflects the Army's effort to meet the religious needs of all its personnel and their dependents throughout the world, Chaplain Decker said.

In the early days of the Chaplains Corps, a chaplain performed many tasks in addition to ministering to the spiritual needs of the troops, Chaplain Decker said.

It is not uncommon for the chaplain, for instance, to serve as sales (exchange) officer, welfare officer, member of a defense council or court martial, or even as athletic director for a command, he continued.

The corps has developed, "keeping stride with the forward march of the modern U. S. Army in a wide program of worship, religious education and guidance," Chaplain Decker said.

The Army, through its Chaplains Corps, provides for the religious life of all its personnel, Catholic, Jewish and Protestant.

In addition to conducting worship services and related activities for these three major religious groups, chaplains encourage and support individual denominational groups in organizing and conducting services and study groups.

The Chaplain Corps, from its inception July 29, 1775, has provided moral and spiritual leadership to an untold number of soldiers in peace and war, Chaplain Decker said.

Through the American Revolution, the War - Between - the States, the Indian Wars, two World Wars and Korea, as well as at crucial points of unrest throughout the world in more recent years, the chaplains have, along with our soldiers, helped to mold the heritage of the nation, Chaplain Decker added.

Maj. Riddle Heads 11th's PM Office

A veteran of World War II, Maj. Hugh H. Riddle has been assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division as its first provost marshal.

The provost marshal will employ the 11th's military police in support of the division. This support will enhance and extend the ground mobility, and in turn, the combat effectiveness of the division, according to officials.

Maj. Riddle, a recent graduate of the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., attended Central High School in Charlotte, graduating in 1941.

In March, 1943, he entered the Army, completing basic training at Fort Benning. From that time until 1946 he served with Company F, 399th Infantry in France and Germany.

While in Europe he was awarded the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart and Combat Infantryman Badge.

In 1948 he attended the Officer Candidate School at Fort Riley, Kan. In 1950 he returned to Germany and served with the 382nd Military Police Battalion until 1953 when he was assigned to Fort Benning with the 3rd Infantry Division.

After completing the career officer course at Fort Gordon, Ga., in 1955, he served as aide-de-camp to Lt. Gen. Emerson L. Cummings in Korea and Japan until 1959.

In 1959 he again was transferred to Fort Riley, Kan., where he served until 1962.

In addition to his World War II decorations, Major Riddle wears the Army Commendation Medal.

He received a B.A. degree from Kansas State University in Manhattan in 1961.

101st Vets Plan Trip To France

Combat veterans of the 101st Airborne Division who participated in the D-Day jump in Normandy are planning a 1964 trip to that area to participate in the 20th Anniversary Celebration of their operations there in 1944.

Tentative program for this trip calls for departure by chartered planes from New York City on or about June 1, 1964, to land in Paris, France. The return trip will leave Paris on or about June 15. Total cost of the roundtrip by commercial aircraft is $355.00. Meals, accommodations and travel expenses in France are extra. There are no restrictions on travel during the stay in France, except that participants are expected to share in the celebration program, probably in the town of Graignes, about six miles from Carentan, France, to be held on June 6, 1964.

Most of one planeload is already signed up. Any combat veterans of the 101st Airborne Division who desire to take part in this return to Normandy may obtain additional information from Frank P. Juliano, formerly of "B" Company, 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment, who is "honchoing" the trip. His address is: 223 Wardwell Avenue, Staten Island, New York-10314.

Reservists Are Invited To Meetings

Leaders of Columbus, Ga. civic clubs have extended an invitation to National Guardsmen and Army Reservists undergoing summer training here, who are members of civic clubs in their hometowns, to attend meetings of the local organizations.

Primary purpose of the invitation is friendship, but summer trainees also may gain credit for attending meetings of their respective clubs while on temporary military duty.

For the information of the National Guardsmen and Reservists, here is a list of clubs, meeting times and places in Columbus:

Rotary Club, Wednesday, 12:50 p.m., Ralston Hotel; Kiwanis Club, Tuesday, 1 p.m. Ralston; Kiwanis Club of Greater Columbus, Wednesday, 12:45 p.m., Martinique Motor Hotel and Columbus Lions Club, Tuesday, 7 p.m., Ralston.

Junior Chamber of Commerce, second and fourth Thursdays, 7 p.m., Ralston; Muscogee Lions Club, Monday, 1 p.m., Ralston; Exchange Club, Thursday, 12:15 p.m., Ralston; Civitan Club, second and fourth Tuesdays, 7 p.m., Ralston, and Sertoma Club, Wednesday, 12:30 p.m., Columbus Country Club.

ICBM Missiles Join Strategic Air Command

ELLSWORTH AFB, S. D. (AFPS) — The first two flights of the Wing II Minuteman ICBM that became operational recently have been transferred to the Strategic Air Command (SAC) here.

Ultimately three Minuteman squadrons will be operational within SAC's 44th Strategic Missile Wing. These three will be responsible for 150 missiles located at sites dispersed throughout southwestern South Dakota.

Each squadron will include five flights of 10 missiles. Every flight has its own launch control center and 10 missile silos, all underground.

Assistant Defense Secretary Norman Paul Praises Military Pay Bill

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — "Simple justice requires recognition of the fact that we have a continuing obligation to our servicemen and women who have contributed so much to the security and welfare of this nation by remaining on active duty beyond any period of obligated service."

Assistant Secretary of Defense Norman S. Paul (Manpower) made this statement to the Senate Military Pay Subcommittee when he appeared before that body with Defense Department recommendations regarding the pay bill (H. R. 5555) passed by the House of Representatives and under consideration by the Senate group.

Secretary Paul went on to say, "They do not work an eight-hour day or a 40-hour week. There is no overtime pay for the longer work days and work weeks which so many must put in."

"I do not believe," he said, "we can actually compensate in dollars for the hazards and hardships that member of the Armed Services must be prepared to accept, and do accept, in wearing the uniform of their country. But, I do believe that the administration and the Congress have a mutual duty to see to it that the rates of pay for service members are regularly adjusted in line with the pattern of steadily increasing civilian earnings in the United States."

He told the committee of the retention problem in the Armed Services especially among officers and enlisted members who are completing their first term of service. He explained that DOD recommendations were aimed at improving the retention rate among these two groups.

Mr. Paul repeated what Secretary of Defense McNamara previously said to the effect that a pay raise for the men and women of the Armed Forces is long overdue. In conclusion he said, "The Secretary of Defense and all those associated with him believe that the increases which we have proposed are fully justified both on grounds of effective management of the force and of equity to the individuals concerned. We have established in the Department of Defense a procedure whereby we will keep military compensation under continuing review, and we will make prompt recommendations to the Congress in the figure when we determine that military pay is not keeping abreast of productivity changes in our general economy, as it most certainly should."

Secretary Paul was the first of Defense Department officials to appear before the Senate Subcommittee when it began hearings on the military compensation proposal July 16.

Sleek New Bathyscaph Is Developed

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The five-dive mission recently concluded by the bathyscaph Trieste, in the Navy's search for the nuclear submarine USS Thresher, in effect ended the operational career of what might be called a Model-T of the bathyscaph.

A new float, or principal structure, for the bathyscaph is due for completion at the Mare Island Naval Shipyard, near San Francisco, August 15.

Search for the Thresher emphasized the limitations of the original bathyscaph. The new model will be longer, faster and more maneuverable.

The new bathyscaph will use the same two interchangeable spheres and, at first, the same propulsion devices that have served the original bathyscaph.

Eventually a new propulsion system will enable it to move at about twice the present rate, which is about 1.4 knots. The float will be towable at 10 knots, as against 3 for the old.

Shaped like a teardrop as viewed from above, the new float will have less draft (12 against 19 feet) than the old one but will be longer (67 feet, 10 inches to 57 feet, 4 inches) and heavier loaded (230 tons to 150).

In 1959, the bathyscaph Trieste set a world record with a dive of 35,800 feet off Guam, thus living up to the generic name, bathys for deep and scaph for a ship from the "Greek."

McNamara Cites DOD '63 Savings

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — "Eliminating Goldplating" was the title of one of the Defense Department's (DOD) cost reduction methods reported to President Kennedy by Secretary of Defense McNamara.

Generally, the term means replacing expensive pieces of equipment, or their components, with items that are more simply designed and less costly without sacrificing efficiency or dependability.

The report included examples of Defense savings to date, so far initiated. One example was a fan protector screen assembly used on T-38 aircraft which cost the government $88.79 and required considerable labor.

Replacing the item is a simple cover, resembling the protective guard on a household electric fan, which costs $1.95 — a savings of $86.84 on one small item.

Maj. Gen. Rich Expresses Thanks

Upon their departure after visiting Fort Benning on 25 and 26 July, Secretary of Defense McNamara and Secretary of the Army Vance were highly complimentary and most enthusiastic about the operations they observed. Their favorable comments on the appearance of the troops, the training accomplished and the caliber of the men conducting and participating in the problems and demonstrations were most gratifying.

I wish to express my appreciation for the concerted effort by all personnel to assure the complete success of this visit. My congratulations to the members of this command on the finished performance presented for these distinguished guests. Well done!

ARMY SECRETARY GREETS RANGERS AFTER DEMONSTRATION

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Army Secretary Cyrus R. Vance departed the post last week visibly impressed by what they saw and heard during their Thursday tour of The Infantry School, 11th Air Assault Division, and 2d Infantry Division.

Marking their first visit to the post, the Washington officials were greeted upon arrival Thursday at Lawson Army Airfield by Lt. Gen. Albert Watson, II, Third Army commanding general, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, and Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

With inclement weather forcing cancellation of a scheduled honors ceremony at Chapel Field, the secretaries made a quick stop at the office of Gen. Rich, after which they were briefed on the needs and training of the Infantry and its support units.

Later in the morning they observed associate Infantry officer ground mobility classes in session and saw Infantry weapons demonstrated at Hook Range.

From this point Secretaries McNamara and Vance headed for lunch at the 51st Company of the famed Officer Candidate School after which they took a look at the school's training program.

In the afternoon, the boarded a helicopter and skimmed three miles across the reservation to the Sand Hill area where they met Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Gen. Billingslea briefed them

Col. Hoebeke Gets New Post

In two important staff changes this week Col. Adrian L. Hoebeke moved up to become deputy post commander and Col. Earl F. Holton took over Col. Hoebeke's former post as commander of Center Troop Command.

COL. HOEBEKE

Brig. Gen. G. C. Kelleher, who formerly occupied the post assumed by Col. Hoebeke, is on terminal leave and is scheduled to retire in the early fall.

In his new job, Col. Hoebeke assumes command supervision of all major units of The Infantry Center, except the 11th Air Assault Division (Test.).

Col. Hoebeke has served as commander of USAICTC since April. Before that assignment he was deputy commander and chief of staff of U. S. Army, Hawaii.

The West Point graduate has had four previous Fort Benning assignments. He attended The Infantry School's regular course from 1938 to 1939, served with the 29th Infantry from 1939-41, was battalion commander of The Infantry Officer Candidate School from 1941-42, and commanded the Student Brigade from 1957-59.

Col. Holton assumed his duties as commander of CTC following a two-year tour with the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Korea.

A graduate of West Point, Col. Holton was commissioned in 1936. He served with the 79th Division during World War II, and following the war

Gen. Underwood Gets 2nd Star

The Army's chief of information, Brig. Gen. George V. Underwood, was promoted this week to the rank of major general.

He supervises all troop and public information activities throughout the Army.

In May the general received the Silver Anvil Award of the Public Relations Society of America for the Army's outstanding information program concerning the release of reservists who had been called up for the Berlin crisis.

Exams Set for Off-Post Students

Members of the Physical Examination Section, Bldg. 396, will give physical examinations to all military dependents who plan to enter off-post schools for the first time this fall.

The clinic will begin at 8 a.m., with examination of children whose last names begin with the letters A through G on Aug. 2; H through M, Aug. 9; N through S, Aug. 16, and T through Z, Aug. 23.

Record forms will be provided at the clinic. When completed, they will be given to the child.

Each child is required to carry his immunization record to the examination section. Those who need immunizations will receive them at the Immunization Clinic.

Children under 14, who are not accompanied by a parent, must bring written authorization from their parents to receive pre-school immunizations.

All children under 10 years old must be accompanied by a parent.

Rangers Set Public Show

"Rangers in Action," a training problem of The Infantry School's Ranger Department, will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Victory Pond. The demonstration and problem are open to the public.

Spectators are requested to be seated in the bleachers by 10:45 a.m.

Children under six years old will not be admitted. Children six and older may attend but must be under parental control at all times.

Hoebeke

returned to the Military Academy as an instructor, a post he held from 1948 until 1952.

Before his MAAG assignment in Korea in 1961, Col. Holton served with the Infantry Board at Fort Bening for three years.

Col. and Mrs. Holton reside at 301 Lumpkin Road with their three children, Henry, 21, William, 16, and Harriet, 14.

Secretaries

on ROTAPLAN, the arrangement whereby the 2nd Division rotates a battalion for service in Germany every six months and on ROAD, a reorganization of the division from battle groups back to the old battalion formations.

Within an hour, McNamara and Vance were in the office of Brig. Gen. Harry W. C. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

Here they received a briefing on the progress of tests which are to decide whether or not the Army will adopt this new type of unit which depends on aircraft rather than trucks and wheeled vehicles for its mobility.

The secretary of defense departed Fort Benning shortly after 4 p.m. for Washington, D. C.

Vance, who remained on the post Thursday evening, dined with Gen. Rich at his home and was guest of honor at a reception at the Main Officers' Open Mess. He departed Friday morning at 8:30 a.m.

NEW 1ST SERGEANT

First Sgt. Thomas J. Samul Jr. joined D Company, 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) as first sergeant. First Sgt. Samul comes to Delta Company from Company "C", 44th Engineer Battalion in Korea.

TSB Chapel Services Doubled

Because average weekly attendance at the Student Brigade Protestant Worship Services have more than doubled recently, an additional Sunday morning service has been planned.

The World War II type chapel seats only 300 comfortably, but attendance has averages more than 400 per week during July.

Beginning this Sunday, services will be held at 8:45 and 10 a.m. They will be conducted by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes and Chaplain (Capt.) John S. Stannard.

New Heliport Near McKenna Readied by 806th Engineers

The 806th Engineer Battalion, fast becoming expert in the art of building heliports, has tackled another one.

They are beginning work on huge landing areas, designed to accommodate the mighty armada of the 11th Air Assault Division.

This comes hot on the heels of the recent completion of a heliport in the Old Regional Hospital Area and another at Jamestown Road. Hardly pausing for a breath, the men and machines of the battalion have shifted to the new job site and are already in high gear in the never-ending struggle with construction deadlines.

The new heliport, to be located in the McKenna Strip area, is actually a three-fold task. "B" Company is rerouting Hourglass Road in order to allow enough room for the construction of suitable pads for the Chinook - type Helicopters.

"D" Company, meanwhile, is busily engaged in the construction of a 3,500-foot landing strip, and adjacent facilities, for short take-off fixed-wind aircraft, such as the Caribou.

In order to maintain the rate of work needed to meet the tight schedule involved, the soldier-engineers have begun eating their lunches right on the job site. While the earth-movers have been hustling on the project itself, the construction platoons have been preparing a suitable area in which to serve the noon meal.

This is exclusive of motor pool and latrine construction, and the laying of culverts, which will also be accomplished by these platoons.

Maintenance tents are being erected in order that on-the-spot repairs may be made on the heavy equipment. "A" Company will provide third echelon repairs in another tent, along with the task of laying the asphalt on the landing pads.

Due to the vast scope of the earthmoving phase of the job, an SOS was sent to the 577th Engineer Battalion for more machines. The 577th responded graciously with numerous machines and operators.

All in all, it's another full scale effort by the 806th Engineers in their role as engineer support to TIC and the 11th Air Assault Division.

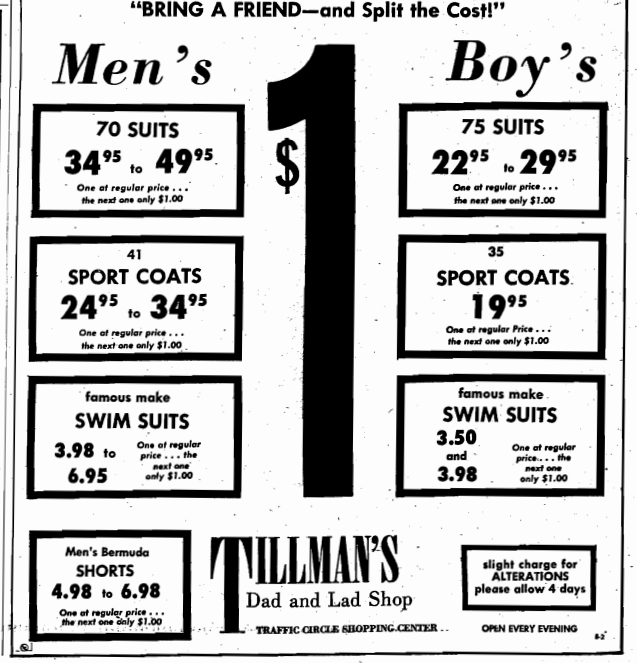
Medical Terms Standardized By U.S. Army

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Department of Defense has ordered all services to adopt standard names and medical terms used by the American Medical Association.

Until now two multi-service publications prescribed the terms used in medical records, "Joint Armed Forces Statistical Classification and Basic Diagnostic Nomenclature of Diseases and Injuries" (NavMed P-1294), and "Joint Armed Forces Nomenclature and Method of Recording Psychiatric Conditions" (NavMed P-1303).

The Defense instruction orders all diagnosis nomenclature for medical records be based on the "Standard Nomenclature of Diseases and Operations," 5th edition, published for the American Medical Association.



69th Armor Sets Organization Day Activities for Tomorrow

Organization Day activities for the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow on Todd Field will include individual and company competitive events, static displays of equipment, rides for children and a barbecue.

The eleven month old battalion, part of the 197th Infantry Brigade on the post, is commanded by Lt. Col. William T. Van Atten, who will officiate at a formal ceremony at 9:30 a.m., opening the festivities.

A company guidon relay is scheduled for 10 a.m.

A volleyball tournament will begin at 10:15 a.m. with a championship game scheduled for approximately 11:15 a.m.

Six teams expected to compete in the tournament will represent Headquarters Company, Companies A, B and C, the staff officers and the non-commissioned officers of the battalion.

Other events planned for the morning include a three-legged race, tug of war, and weapons assembly and track breaking contests.

There will be jeep rides and other activities for children.

There will be a barbecue lunch at noon, followed by an award ceremony at 1 p.m.

Members of the 4th Battalion, their families and invited guests are urged to attend the day's festivities.

The 4th Battalion provides tank support for U. S. Army Infantry School training problems and demonstrations.

The battalion has more than 500 officers and men and 62 tanks.

During the first 25 days of July, the battalion participated in 89 Infantry School problems, racking up a vehicle participation of 421 tanks. Rated on their work by Infantry School instructors, the men of the battalion received 81 outstanding ratings and eight satisfactory ratings on the 89 problems.

Although the 4th battalion is less than a year old, it carries on the traditions of the 69th Armor which participated in World War II and Korean Conflict campaigns.

Initially activated in Fort Knox in 1940 as the 69th Armored Regiment, the unit was redesignated as Company D, 69th Tank Battalion in 1943.

As Company D, the unit participated in campaigns in Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardenness - Alsace and Central Europe.

During the Korean Conflict, the unit was known as Company D, 69th Medium Tank Battalion. On July 25, 1958, Company D (Patton), 69th Armor was activated at Fort Benning as an element of the 1st Infantry Brigade.

In changes last September under the Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) concept, the unit became the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Determination: Major Step Toward Success

Determination may be defined as "the mental quality, habit or power of deciding definitely and firmly; decision of character." This definition aptly applies to a Marine staff sergeant stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif., who lost his lower left leg in a parachuting accident last fall.

Through sheer determination, this man has mastered an artificial limb that he helped design. To prove he can do as much now as he could prior to his accident, he has danced, gone SCUBA diving, piloted a plane and worn a boot on his artificial leg to get used to the extra weight.

His efforts have not been in vain—he has received permission to remain on active duty and go back to parachuting instead of holding a limited duty desk job.

The determination shown by this man and many others like him in all the services should cause us to stop and evaluate ourselves. Would we be able to accomplish this feat? Would our determination be great enough to overcome such a handicap?

We'll never know the full answer unless we find ourselves in similar circumstances. However, we can apply ourselves to our assigned duties and concentrate on self-improvement with a similar determination.

If each man in uniform applied himself with such determination to duty, can you imagine the overall improvement? For nearly 200 years, the U.S. military man has earned the respect and admiration of the American public. We can't expect to rest forever on laurels of the past.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Esprit de Corps

By Chaplain (Capt) Thomas L. Strayhand

Esprit de Corps literally means Spirit of the Body. Let's refer to it here as the living spirit of the living body. In the military service we are many members but one body. Just as the hands, eyes, feet, are members of the physical body so are we members of the one body in service.

One member suffers and the whole body suffers. The body staggers under the influence of every single man who gets drunk. The single DR is one against the entire body. The body feels the sting of every blow passed in a fight or brawl. Every scar of immorality is worn by the body.

The single person's act of disorderly conduct causes public suspicion of the body. Is this fair to those who try to do right?

Are you concerned about the body or just about yourself? You cannot exist without the body, neither is the body complete without you. Mangled and non-restorable limbs of the physical body are sometimes amputated and a substitute given in their places. No member need be amputated while functioning properly. This impairs the proper function of the rest of the body. Other members of the body have to take on additional functions in order that the work may be done. The strength of the body depends upon your own strength. You are an important part of the body regardless of your job.

The spirit of the body is kept as high as you wish to keep it. Restore the self respect, devotion, loyalty and prestige due the body by your own self respect, devotion, loyalty and prestige. Only you as an individual member can do it.

A lot of Esprit de Corps means that all members are working together in their various capacities to give the body the needed strength to fulfill its purpose. It requires no miracle but a simple act and realization that each one is important to all and all cannot be complete and good without each one doing his part. The spirit of the body is tempered by the spirit of you.

Safety Program Gets Outstanding Returns

Around-the-clock concern for the safety of its personnel has always been a policy of the Army. An aggressive program of safety education, geared to the soldier's activities both on and off duty has paid off in an outstanding safety record. Only one out of every 54 soldiers is injured each year, while one out of each 34 members of the Nation's workforce is injured during the same period.

But cold statistics are no consolation, for accidents hit everyone where it hurts the most. To the individual, they bring suffering; to his family they bring personal loss or financial hardship; to the Army, they cause a tremendous reduction in its most important asset — manpower.

Our campaign against accidents is as old as the Army itself. One of our earliest safety regulations dates back to the days of Valley Forge. An order from General Washington's headquarters stated that there would be no open fires in buildings where gunpowder was being processed or stored. Terminology may change and equipment grow more complex, but the foundation remains the same — individual common sense and good judgment.

As judged by its results, the Army's safety program is one to be proud of. In recent years the Army has earned the President's Safety Award three times and has earned the National Safety Council's Award of Honor 17 times in the past 19 years. But the better the record, the greater is the challenge to exceed it. There is still room for improvement. Each year, more than 1000 Army and civilian personnel are killed and about 24,000 are injured in Army operations and activities.

In the final analysis it is not more safety slogans or posters that will reduce this number. The answer is the individual who knows how to use his equipment and who displays good sense both on and off the job. He is the cornerstone of any organization's safety record.

Enlisted Evaluation Testing Is Important

Each year thousands of soldiers find themselves seated at a desk taking what is called a Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) Evaluation Test. Among these thousands are many who don't fully understand what they are taking or why they are doing it. It is one of the most important things a soldier does throughout the year and should be fully understood.

MOS Evaluation Tests are a major part of the Army's Enlisted Evaluation System — a system designed to measure the individual soldier's technical knowledge, ability and military competence in comparison with all other soldiers in the Army who are classified in the same MOS and skill level (4-digit MOS). The Enlisted Evaluation System provides each soldier specific guidance for improving performance in his MOS and offers financial reward for his efforts.

The test provides the individual solder the opportunity to demonstrate how well he knows the reuirements of his job or what he can do in everyday performance. The Commander's Evaluation Report supplements the test score and provides the opportunity for the soldier to demonstrate how well he performs the requirements of his MOS, or what he does in performing his job.

The MOS Evaluation Test helps the Army assure each soldier a fair and impartial evaluation, since the soldier himself is responsible for the number of correct responses made on each test. After the test has been given, the test answer sheet and the Commander's Evaluation Report are forwarded to Enlisted Evaluation Center at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. for scoring.

Construction of Evaluation Tests is a team effort. MOS subject matter specialists at various Army installations prepare the questions. These technicians are skilled in job areas especially important in the MOS. Most of the Evaluation Tests consist of 125 questions for non-commissioned officers and 100 questions for specialists.

Each question consists of a statement of a problem situation and four possible answers. One of the answers is best, while the other three are designed to be plausible to those enlisted persons who lack the knowledge or skill that the question is designed to measure. Each test is revised yearly to bring it up-to-date and replace questions which do not differentiate adequately between the lesser and better-qualified soldier in the MOS.

Commanders at all echelons, world wide, have indicated favorable acceptance of the MOS Evaluation System and of MOS Evaluation Test contribution to the Army's enlisted personnel management program. Surveys conducted by Department of the Army Military Personnel Management Teams reveal that the annual evaluation test benefits the individual as well as the service because it continuously motivates soldiers to seek additional education and training. The testing program has also increased quality in reenlistees, increased job knowledge and encouraged the soldier to continually advance his skills.

The House has passed bills to allow the awarding of the Medal of Honor and other top medals in cold war situations and to ease the travel problems of military men. The bills now go to the Senate.

The travel bills approved would allow advance movement of dependents, baggage and household goods at government expense and provide that the government would pay for travel performed when a man's orders are later cancelled or modified.

The House also approved a measure extending the Missing Persons Acts benefits to cold war situations and extending the six-month Reserve training program.

Company Operations Department Is 'Something New' At Benning

What's new at the Infantry School?

As far as instruction departments are concerned, the Company Operations Department can lay claim to being one of the very latest to grace the Fort Benning scene. It dates back only as far as May 1, 1963, when it was formed to train Infantry platoon leaders and company commanders.

Its formation was unique also, in that elements of three instruction departments were united to permit the Infantry School to more effectively prepare young Infantry officers for company - level duties.

Nucleus of the young department was the headquarters of the former Special Subjects Department, which also brought along its Leadership and Map Reading Committees. To this solid base were added the Platoon Tactics Committee from the Ranger Department and the Company Tactics Committee from the former Command and Staff Department.

The vital mission of the Company Operations Department is accomplished through resident instruction presented by these four committees operating under the direction of Col. William R. Lynch, department director. Col. Lynch is assisted by a staff headed by Lt. Col. Jesse L. Morrow, Jr., deputy director, and which includes Maj. W. W. Lewis, Jr., the operations officer, and Lt. Richard F. Billingsley, the administrative officer.

Leadership

Lt. Col. Floyd S. Gibson and the other members of his Leadership Committee are charged with the task of providing our future Infantry leaders with a sound knowledge of the principles and fundamentals of leadership. This committee also teaches Character Guidance and Officer Indoctrination at The Infantry School and monitors military leadership training in all Continental Army Command service schools.

This instruction is based on the concept that leadership is an art and, as such, can be learned by, developed in, and practiced by anyone possessing average mental and physical abilities. The majority of the committee's efforts are devoted to classroom instruction. Films, tape recordings, and written handouts are used to present realistic situations depicting leadership problems which the student may encounter in combat, training, or garrison situations.

Students are then required to proffer solutions, and thereby acquire a sound knowledge of the all-important ingredients of leadership.

However, the committee does have one out-of-doors class, the famed Leaders' Reaction Course presented to all Officer Candidate School and Infantry Officer Basic Course students.

During the conduct of this course, each student has the opportunity to lead a group of his contemporaries in the accomplishment of a physically demanding, combat-type problem. Successful completion of the mission requires that the student leader properly apply the leadership principles and techniques previously presented in the classroom. Qualified officer instructors, headed by Cap. Charles W. Chapman, observe student performances on the course and subsequently counsel each pupil on his strengths and weaknesses.

Map Reading

Lt. Col. Lester R. Dillon's Map Reading Committee holds the distinction of presenting instruction to the greatest number of different courses than any other committee in the Infantry School.

In addition to teaching map reading this committee presents instruction in aerial photograph reading and land navigation as well, and also monitors land navigation instruction throughout the US Army.

A training film intended for Army-wide use in presenting land navigation instruction, currently is being filmed at Fort Benning under the supervision of the deputy committee chairman, Capt. Patsy A. Milantoni.

Map reading instruction is specifically tailored to fit the level of the students' experience and rank. Classes given to the Basic Course student or Officer Candidate emphasize the field application of fundamentals in moving from point-to-point on the ground, while the instruction for advanced students stresses map problem-solving sequences required by staff officers and commanders at battalion and higher levels.

Platoon Tactics

"As the platoons go, so go the divisions." These words echo the significance of the mission of Maj. Wilbur J. Thiel's Platoon Tactics Committee: to train the rifle patoon leader in the tactical employment of his platoon.

Most platoon tactics classes are directed at junior officers and Officer Candidates and are designed to provide them both the tactical and technical skill required to lead and control their platoons successfully in combat. Major emphasis is devoted to mastering the critical fundamentals of offensive and defensive tactics. The techniques of platoon tactical employment in both "normal" situations and in special operations are taught. Livefire exercises and practical work are bywords for the training conducted by this committee.

Company Tactics

The Company Tactics Committee under the direction of Lt. Col. Paul E. Johnson, is in the tactical employment of the rifle company, the weapons platoon of the rifle company, and the combat support elements of the battalion headquarters company. In addition to presenting this instruction to all resident classes aimed at training Infantry leaders, the committee also teaches students of specialist courses the tactical employment of the Antitank Platoon and the Mortar and Davy Crockett Platoon.

The Infantry School has a world-wide reputation for its impressive demonstrations; two of these are presented by the Company Tactics Committee. One is the Infantry-Tank Team in the Attack, conducted by Capt. John W. King at Buma Hill, and the other is the Rifle Company Task Force in the Defense (commonly called the Mad Minute), presented at Ruth Range under the direction of Maj. John J. Plosay.

Challenges

Arming its students with a thorough knowledge of tactics, leadership, and the techniques of map reading and land navigation, the Company Operations Department can take great pride in its contributions toward meeting the Infantry's continuing requirements for able platoon leaders and company commanders. Young Infantry officers can confidently face the challenges of tomorrow, well versed in professional skills provided by the Company Operations Department.

Sae Byut Orphanage in Korea Is Aided by Local Woman's Club

By Marge Lennon

The Woman's Club of Fort Benning, along with the dependents of U. S. military and civilian personnel at Camp Walker, Korea are carrying out their own brand of "Peace Corps" operation in the city of Taegu, Korea.

What began in 1961 as friendly competition with Korean teams in the good old American game of baseball has developed into a self-help project for more than 80 Korean children at the Sae Byut Won Orphanage in Korea.

The entire project began when Lt. Col. Orville O. Munson, his wife and four sons left for Camp Walker in Korea after spending five years at Fort Benning.

The Munsons, who are old pros at helping the less fortunate, discovered the orphange through their sons, who played softball with the orphans.

Seeing the need for financial assistance, Col. Munson wrote the Woman's Club a letter describing the orphanage and and their problems. The Woman's Club responded immediately with a check for $300, thereby adding 80 orphans to their long list of welfare projects.

Wrote Col. Munson in his letter to the women: "Korea has thousands of orphans and the impossibility of doing something for all of them is understood. In fact, some of the orphanages sponsored by American units or Christian organizations are so well organized and equipped that no further assistance is required. However, the little fellows just keep coming and the number of orphanages keep growing. Somehow they are provided with the essentials of food, water, clothing, shelter, love and good schooling.

"Upon investigation it was learned that this orphanage, however, was not sponsored by any organization. Mr. Choi, the founder of the orphanage, and his wife have dedicated their last ten years to working with the children and have passed through some trying times. Mr. Choi believes they can become self-sufficient through the raising of chickens, hogs and beginning a dairy."

What the Americans found back in the fall of 1961, was an orphanage badly in need of assistance. One of the two main buildings which housed the children had been severely damaged by a strong wind storm the year before and had not been repaired because of lack of funds.

Two Holstein heifers, penned in one corner of the orphanage grounds, along with 200 chickens, 2 hogs and 5 rabbits, added to an unhealthy situation. The two wells were in need of repair, as was the old out-door latrine. They had no barn or silo and the chickens were in danger of losing productivity because of unhealthy quarters.

Today, a visitor would see that the damaged building has been reconstructed, the wells have been repaired and a new building is well on its way to completion. A silo is now being built.

For all of these improvements much credit must be given to the American youth from Camp Walker. They raised money by selling soft drinks at the summer ball games, gathered rock and sand to help build the new dormitories, and gave the orphans a Christmas party, where they tasted their first hard candy.

Although the Sae Byut Orphanage has other supporters now, the Women's Club is one of its steady contributors, recently having sent $600 for the purchase of a new heifer.

Thus, starting with a game called baseball and backed by the interest and aid of a small number of American youth and the 1,000 ladies of the Woman's Club of Fort Benning, the Sae Byut Won Orphanage (which, incidentally, means Sunnifield Home) has taken a large step forward on the road to becoming completely self-sufficient.

Writes Mr. Choi, the founder of Sae Byut, "I am only a trifle being, a farmer. With this I am satisfied and happy. I can not feed these children physically but I can give them all my love and the inexhaustible food and love from the Bible. The children and I pray daily. We thank God for the wonderful people who have helped us. We know now that God must also love orphans, for he has favored us with many good things. Our children will continue to pray for all of you and your health. Until I write thanking you again, may God bless you all." (Signed) Choi Dong Yoon.

Capt. Ramsey explained the procedure at the senior status review, and a mock receiving line was held.

Hostesses were Mrs. Judy Chenault, Mrs. Judith Ebert, Mrs. Ronnie Good, Mrs. Barbara Jones, Mrs. Dianna Kennedy and Mrs. Frances Reasoner.

Air Assault Wives Meet

Over 50 ladies from the 10th Air Transport Brigade, 11th Air Assault Division, enjoyed an informal brunch at the Main Officers' Club recently. Mrs. Delbert L. Bristol, wife of Colonel Bristol, commanding officer of the 10th Air Transport Brigade, discussed various phases of activities of the Officers Wives' Club slated for the coming fall season.

She also gave a special greeting to the guests and new wives, who were: Yvonne Brooks, guest of Mrs. Willard M. O'Nellion; Libby Peoples, guest of Mrs. Charles Drawdy; Mrs. Lola McGee, guest of Mrs. Calvin A. McGee; Mrs. Martig and Miss Brigette Martig, mother and sister of Mrs. Charles W. Edmond; and Mrs. James E. Hooker, Mrs. Henry A. Paladino, and Mrs. Jutta Brooks, newcomers.

Mrs. Robert A. Price and Mrs. Lola McGee were winners of the two door prizes.

Hostesses for the affair were Mrs. John G. Bugenske, Mrs. Nickolas Leone Jr., and Mrs. I. J. Turon.

70 Ladies Watch Film

About 70 ladies, including a large number of teenage girls, met recently to make cancer bandages and to see a film on cancer education.

Sponsored by the Protestant Women-of-the-Chapel (PWOC) as part of their theme for July, "Community Service," the meeting was described by a spokesman as "most rewarding" for the ladies present.

PWOC presented a certificate of appreciation to Mrs. Charles Chapman Jr., for her outstanding work as Hospital and Missions chairman of the group. She is leaving the group this month. Mrs. Hollis C. Lewis, PWOC president, made the presentation.

During a coffee break Mrs Silas Decker and Mrs. Lylian Kennedy served cakes, coffee and punch.

The morning's activities were crowned with a luncheon attended by most of the teenagers who came to the meeting and several of the adults. The luncheon was sponsored by Mrs. Benjamin Silver, Mrs. T. M. Scovill, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Floyd Beaseland and Mrs. Ben Collins.

New Airstrip Completed For 11th by Engineers

By Sp4 Chuck Lowenhagen

The 11th Air Assault Division has a new airstrip and helport. Christened "Manila," the facility was put into operational use last week. It is located adjacent to Highway 27 in the Harmony Church area.

Built by the 806th Engineer Battalion for the 11th, the combination airstrip and heliport has the capability of handling both fixed and rotary wing aircraft. When it is completed it will be the home of the 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group whose aircraft at present are stationed at Lawson Army Airfield.

The 11th Aviation Group, commanded by Col. George P. Seneff, is a unique unit. It has no forerunner and no foundation of experience on which to base its doctrine and organizational structure. Here is where the fixed and rotary wing aircraft of the division are concentrated.

The group is capable of general support, field maintenance, recovery operations, aerial surveillance, responsive aviation support and firepower, and tactical air movement of troops and equipment for logistic purposes, before and during combat. It can also serve as an air ambulance service, removing casualties from a combat zone.

The 11th Air Assault Division owes a large part of its flexibility and versatility to the 11th Aviation Group.

Concert Set Next Week At Center

The post Jewish Center is presenting a concert of secular classical and semi - classical music for organ and voice at 8 p.m. next Thursday at the Center.

Organist Kenneth Bade and tenor soloist Daniel Liddell will perform.

Bade is well-known in the mid-West, having done work in both educational and religious seminars. He lives in Kankakee, Illinois, and has three choirs under his direction. He also directs a bell choir which has toured extensively.

Bade holds Bachelor and Master Degrees of music from the University of Illinois, and has pursued doctoral studies.

He has done concert work and for eight years was a professor of music. At the request of the Pentagon, Bade entertained Armed Forces personnel during two consecutive Christmas seasons.

Liddell has done much professional work, including appearing as soloist with the "Northerners." He is a graduate of the University of Illinois, holding both Bachelors and Masters degrees in music. He has also done advanced work toward his doctorate.

Liddell served as professor of music for seven years at Olivet Nazarene College in Kankakee, Ill., and now heads the music department of the public school system there.

Liddell, at the request of the Pentagon, has traveled to Puerto Rico to entertain Armed Forces personnel.

The 'Old Man' Cuts the Grass As Promised

MISAWA AB, JAPAN (AFPS) — The enlisted men here have "forced" their commanding officer to personally cut the grass throughout this base.

Lt. Col. Wyatt Hedrick promised to perform the chore in person if a lagging drive to raise funds for an eye bank at late University reached its goal. The response was electric and the money poured in.

The enlisted men cooperated to the extent of delivering a lawn mower to their CO and true to his promise, he cut Misawa's lawns under a broiling sun during the weekend.

12,000 to Get 'Call' in Sept.

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —An Army draft quota of 12,000 men for September, the same as for August, has been announced by the Defense Department.

The call is intended to help fill the Army's estimated requirement of 23,700 for September and maintain current strength.

This will bring the total number of inductees requested of Selective Service to 2,845,450 since the September 1950 call.

The Navy, Marine Corps and the Air Force do not intend to place calls with Selective Service during September.

Air Force Weather Unit Named 'Best' for Quarter

An Air Force unit at Fort Benning has been named outstanding detachment from among 48 weather units across the nation.

The 10th Weather Detachment, under command of Lt. Col. Clarence E. Vicroy, received the honor for the first quarter of 1963. The unit is part of the 2nd Weather Group which serves the Tactical Air Command, the Continental Air Command, the U. S. Strike Command and the Continental Army Command.

Officials explained that the selection is based on technical performance in forecasting, the taking and reporting of weather observations, administrative efficiency and accuracy of severe weather warning forecasts.

The winning unit is stationed at Fort Benning to provide weather service to The Infantry Center, the 2nd Infantry Division and the 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

Special teams from the detachment accompany both divisions on all field problems to provide weather support at all times, and to advise the commander on meterological matters.

The unit has a satellite station at Camp Oliver, Ga., to provide the 11th Division support during maneuvers.

They are equipped with radio equipment which facilities diect pilot to forecaster communication, enabling the pilots to receive current information while in flight.

NCO Of The Month

Sgt. Kenneth E. Trainham of Company B, 577th Engineer Battalion, has been selected as "NCO of the Month" for June.

Sgt. Trainham previously was the Non-Commissioned-Officer of the Month for February.

A squad leader in Company B, second construction platoon Sgt. Trainham is presently engaged in the construction of a squad platoon attack course here. He has been a member of Company B since January 18, 1963.

Television Station Honored

Television Station WTVM in Columbus received a Department of the Army Public Service Plaque recently in ceremonies at Fort Benning.

Major Gen. Charles W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, presented the plaque to Joe Windsor, WTVM station manager.

The presentation was made in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess at an official luncheon.

The Public Service Plaque is awarded annually to public news media in recognition of active interest in Army affairs, post officials said.

Swift Strike-Stay-Behinds

Col. Preston Takes Over Div. Rear Elements Here

By BOB de CAMARA

Orders issued from Headquarters Wednesday designated a lieutenant colonel as "officer in charge of 2nd Infantry Division elements at Fort Benning during the period of joint exercise Swift Strike III."

The assignment as chief of 2nd Division forces at Fort Benning, which normally belongs to a major general, fell to Lt. Col. William D. Preston who has been acting chief of the division's 2nd Brigade.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the "Second to None," along with the two assistant division commanders are in the field with the bulk of the division forces, engaging in the massive U. S. Strike Command exercise in North and South Carolina.

The largest contingent of troops left behind is the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry which is currently undergoing training for its ROTAPLAN rotation to Germany in mid-October.

Representatives of the general and special staff sections have also been tabbed for stay at home duties. These include members of finance, the inspector general section, staff judge advocate, the adjutant general, the general staff personnel, training and supply sections and the information office.

Col. Preston is "responsible for all actions affecting rear elements," a quote from the orders.

The air phase of Swift Strike III kicked off on July 21 with squadrons of jet aircraft belonging to both the "red" and "blue" sides meeting and claiming scores.

Phase II involving the infantry, four divisions strong, two to a side, begins tomorrow and 2nd Division troops from Fort Benning started rolling towards the Carolinas early this week to take up battle stations.

Altogether, the exercise will pit in the vicinity of 100,000 troops of U. S. Strike Command which is comprised of the Tactical Air Command and all combat-ready units of the Continental Army Command.

Col. Preston, commander of the home forces for the 2nd Division, has been at Fort Benning about one year. He came to the division from Thailand and the joint staff of Task Force 116, a fire-fighting brigade sent to Southeast Asia last year to put on a show of force during shaky moments across the Thai border in Laos.

A 30-year span of Army service that Col. Preston began in May 1933 as an enlisted man, getting an officer commission in 1942 at Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School, is spotted with colorful experiences and rugged assignments such as his stint in World War II with the 4th Division's 8th Regiment.

As commander of a rifle company in the European Theater of Operations, Col. Preston responded to a question on his decorations with "everything up to and including the Silver Star."

In the middle Fifties when planners in the pentagon were catching sight of the strategic importance of unconventional warfare, the colonel served in Washington on planning committees.

He put his new knowledge to work in 1956 when he shipped to Vietnam in one of the first group of United States advisers and guided two infantry regiments in the Kontum area of central Vietnam.

Preparation for that tour of duty was at the Strategic Intelligence School in Washington. His other Army schooling was at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, and the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Col. Preston was in Hawaii as chief of plans, G-1, with the Headquarters of U. S. Army Pacific when the joint task force was formed and sent to Thailand for four or five months of maneuvers. It was in Thailand as chief of the joint staff personnel section that Col. Preston received orders assigning him to the 2nd Division.

Girl Falcon, Kiowa Indian Spice Up 15th's Birthday

By BOB de CAMARA

Two oddities (for an artillery battalion) were on hand at Kelley Hill to spice up the recent 46th birthday party of the 2nd Division's 15th Artillery.

The first was a young female falcon, named "Armageddon," which perched on her trainer's arm impassively for the battalion's parade ground ceremonies. More active was a full-blooded Kiowa Indian, Sp4 Marland Tahboonemah of Headquarters Battery, whose authentic Plains Tribe dress added the colors of the rainbow to the affair.

Artillerymen of the 15th massed on Essebagger Field while the 2nd Division band played march tunes and the men stood at rigid attention for a reading of the unit's lineage by Capt. Broder Jervein, battery A commander.

The 15th Artillery was organized on June 1, 1917 at the State Fair Grounds in Syracuse, N.Y. In September the 15th was assigned to the as yet unborn 2nd Infantry Division and sailed in December aboard the S.S. Adriatic for France, stopping on Christmas morning at Liverpool, England.

Chateau-Thierry gave the men a taste of trench warfare. Now combat veterans, they campaigned at Soissons, Marbachem, Champagne and the Meuse Rver.

In 1919 they steamed home on the S. S. Lukenback as a part of the most decorated American division in World War I, the "Second to None."

On D-Day plus one, 1944, the 15th hit Omaha Beach and battled continuously for 71 days on the Normandy Beachhead. When peace came to Europe in 1945 the 15th had pushed its cannons in bitter fighting across the face of Europe to Czechoslovakia.

In Korea the 15th smashed through 10 of the bloodiest campaigns in its history in three years, starting at Pusan in July 1950.

The artillerymen listened intently as Capt. Jervell ticked off their lineage and honors, followed by an address by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. John M. Evans.

Hands Off

Word's out that those big, bad, blue airborne troopers of the 82nd and 101st are out for our general with a price on his head.

First, who's the cheapskate that thinks Gen. Billingslea is only worth $500?

Second, we've got 10 Indianhead soldiers guarding that man, airborne. What makes you think that 1,500 of your undertrained and overfed troops can lick those odds?

Our advice to the aggressor guerrillas is: it's bad enough being "blue" for Swift Strike III; why be black and blue?

Rotaplanning 23rd Infantry Parades Through Luxemburg

By 1st Bn., 23rd Infantry PIO

Members of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, under the command of Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., took a major part in the Remembrance Day ceremonies for Gen. George S. Patton Jr., in Ettelbruck, Luxemburg, June 29 and 30.

An advance party from the battalion consisting of Maj. Robert Kendrick, Capt. Louis Menetrey, Chap. Smith, PFC Rod Steltz, SSgt. Wilburn Waddle, SSGT Carpenter, and Sp6 Robert Dunaway, supervised the erection of a tent city for the incoming troops.

Large transport trucks made the long journey to bring in tanks, track vehicles, and missiles for the exhibition. The battalion medical section maintened an aid tent in the center of the display area. It included the latest medical facilities and an aidman on duty at all times. A rifle squad, under Sgt Marvin Helmick, demonstrated the technique of off-loading from a helicopter and moving into combat ready formations.

Following the memorial service for Gen. Patton in the Parish - Church, the officials moved to the Patton monument, where floral tributes were offered by the Prince of Luxemburg, the American Ambassador, the American Army, the American Air Force, the Government and Army of the Grand - Duchy, and the mayor of Ettelbruck.

Then followed the Grand Military Parade, in which the Battalion colors were carried by Sp5 Michael Spratling, Sgt. Douglas Foster, Sgt Richard L. Jones, and Sgt. Henry Hillard. West Point Cadets Kevin Kelley, Mark Brennan, and George Domas, Company A, and platoons from Companies B and C, made up the representation for the battalion in the parade.

Sky - diving demonstrations by the Army and Air Force teams; judo exhibitions, square dancers; athletic events; concerts by the 8th division band and the Luxemburg band rounded out the weekend of activities.

The observance is hosted annually by the city of Ettelbruck, located at the entrance to the Ardennes mountains, and commemorates the liberation of the community by Patton's Third U.S. Army during World War II. It is an event which draws as many as 25,000 spectators from Germany, France, and Belgium, as well as from Luxemburg.

EXECUTIVE UPPED . . . Promoted recently to the rank of 1st lieutenant is Lt. Irving Ortiz-Rodriguez, executive officer of Battery A, 38th Artillery.

Rain Forces Retirement Indoors

RECEIVES AWARD . . . Col. Robert E. Coffin assistant division commander, is presented with a Certificate of Achievement by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander. The certificate came from Col. Coffin's last assignment with the U. S. Army Europe.

Officer, 11 Enlisted Men Met by Gen. Billingslea

By Bob de Camara

For the second time in a row, darkened skies and drizzling rain forced the 2nd Division's monthly retirement ceremony off Marne Field and into the division conference room.

Inside where wives and families gathered, an officer and 11 enlisted men, totalling almost two and a half centuries of Army service between them, officially departed active duty.

The list of retirees last Thursday also included two sergeants major and three master sergeants, both eight-stripe ranks.

"The division itself owes you a tremendous vote of thanks," spoke Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the "Second to None." "This group represents service in every theater of operations in which the U. S. has been involved in two decades."

Other witnesses present for the retirement were the division's assistant commanders, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley and Col. Robert E. Coffin, and the major unit commanders and top sergeants.

In a message from the Army Chief of Staff in Washington, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, the men were praised "for the service which you have given to our country."

Gen. Wheeler's note went on to say, "You have helped to maintain the security of this nation during a most critical period in its history with a devotion to duty and a spirit of sacrifice in keeping with the proud traditions of the military service."

The retiring Army officer, Capt. Cecil O. Burbank, commanded Headquarters Company of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway, sergeant major of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, and Sgt. Maj. Frank E. Rinaldo, Division Artillery sergeant major, left active duty "by direction of the President" in orders that also named M-Sgt. Fay Crews of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion's Company B.

Other retirees were MSgt. William W. Fielding, 37th Artillery Battalion; MSgt. William K. Gibbs, 122nd Signal Battalion; SFC Arthur P. Brown, 122nd Signal Battalion; SFC John H. Dickey, 72nd Armor; SSgt. Elmer R. Gilliam, 2nd Engineer Battalion; Sp5 John D. Barber, 702nd Maintenance Battalion; and PFC Frank H. Cavalry.

MSgt. (Ret.) Crews, a native of Florida, has returned to his home in Jacksonville with his wife, Catherine, and 19-year-od son, Dewayne, who will enter Florida State University in the Fall.

Sgt. Crews has also served the 2nd Division information office as ranking enlisted leader during his brief tour of duty with the division. The sergeant served in the Pacific Theater of Operations in World War II and in Korea with the U. S. Forces.

Hours Before Swift Strike

12th Artillery Changes Command

By Bob de Camara

Standing in combat gear outside headquarters, soldiers of the 12th Artillery Battalion welcomed a new commander just hours before the battalion was scheduled to move towards the Carolinas and the start of land warfare in Swift Strike III.

The ceremony set a different pace here at division from the usual change of command. Instead of khaki uniforms and garrison caps, the men wore fatigue uniforms and pistol belts heavy with canteens and first aid packs, ponchos and bayonets and toted M-14 rifles to the ceremonies.

The men formed a horseshoe inside the heavy equipment that goes to the field for Swift Strike III, the annual joint forces "battle" staged by units of U. S. Strike Command.

New Leader

New leader of the 12th is Lt. Col. James C. McClurkin. Col. McClurkin joins the 2nd Division for his first tour of duty from Auburn University in Alabama and a post there as assistant professor of military science.

The colonel is also a graduate of Auburn.

Replaced as 12th Artillery commander is Maj. Clifford Phifer who moves over to Division Artillery Headquarters as S-3.

In a career that spans 20 years, Col. McClurkin has served with four of the Army's five airborne divisions (only two are now active) and been on the ground floor of Special Forces when it was started in 1952.

Entering the Army in 1943 as an enlisted man, the 12th's new commander quickly completed Officer Candidate School and went to Europe as an officer with the 17th Airborne Division.

Won Bronze Star

In the European Theater of Operations, a Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart were won by Col. McClurkin in various operations.

The green beret of the Special Forces soldier was added to Col. McClurkin's uniform in 1952, and he was with Special Forces until 1956 in Germany where the 10th Special Forces Group is now stationed.

Commander of troops for the ceremonies Tuesday morning was Capt. Edward Reed, battalion S-3.

The men of Battery B who stood at rigid attention inside the horseshoe to welcome Col. McClurkin will not be going with their new chief when he leads the battalion to Swift Strike III.

Battery Remains

Half of the men of the battery commanded by Capt. Jack Goodwin are enroute to Camp Drum, N. Y., where they will help train National Guard units. The remainder of the battery will be split up and divided among Battery A and Headquarters Battery.

The temporary duty at Camp Drum ends August 17

New Officer Jobs Listed At 1st, 87th

By 1st Bn. 87th Infantry PIO

Three new officers have joined the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry. Three others have been assigned to new positions.

Lt. Michael A. Kalla is a newly arrived officer assigned to a newly created position at headquarters: assistant adjutant. The lieutenant is the former assistant chief of staff, Headquarters, XIX U. S. Army Corps, Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Lt. Kalla attended John Carroll University in Cleveland, Ohio, where he studied business administration, and was graduated from Infantry Officer Candidate School (OCS) in 1962. He was awarded the Expert Infantryman's Badge and goes out for track.

Also recently assigned at the 1st Battalion are Lt. Robert Harris and Lt. Harold L. Rodgers.

Lt. Harris was graduated from Texas Technological College where he received a Bachelor of Arts degree in finance and an ROTC commission. He attended the Infantry School and was formerly assigned with the 1st Armored Division at Fort Hood, Tex. Born in Amarillo, Tex., Lt. Harris is a qualified parachutist and takes an active interest in tennis, golf and track.

Lt. Rodgers is a graduate of The Infantry School, The Airborne School and attended the U. S. Army Armor School. In addition, he attended the University of Maryland and Fort Smith Junior College. Born in Mortonville, Ky., Lt. Rodgers enjoys hunting and swimming.

Three 1st Battalion officers find themselves with new duty assignments. Lt. Richard R. Browning, former acting executive officer at Company B, is now armored cavalry platoon leader. Lt. Anthony J. Zevgolis, former communications officer, is assigned as weapons platoon leader at Company C. Lt. John Moscrip Jr., former platoon leader at Company B, is now antitank platoon leader at Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Ernie Pyle; An Infantryman at Heart

The 2nd Division library is chock full of fine reading material. It is a good place to study, read and relax. On its shelves, listed under "P" is a book I highly suggest to every member of the division. It is written by Lee G. Miller and is titled: "The Story of Ernie Pyle."

Ernest Taylor Pyle was born in the small farm community of Dana, Ind. and was destined to become the most famous war correspondent of all times. During World War II, Ernie, as the whole Army grew to call him, was a professed crusader for the infantryman. As he put it, "The world of the infantryman is a world so far removed from anything normal that it can be no more than academic to the average person."

Carved A Legend

From one end of Europe to the other, Ernie Pyle slogged through the mud with "his" infantrymen—writing their story; asking them about home; talking to them; watching out for them; and mourning for them when they died. From one unit to another Ernie carved his legend across the battle-scarred lands alongside the "boys" he loved. And to them he was the greatest. "Hi Pop!" or "Hey, look who's here; it's Ernie!" would resound across the no man's lands when the small grey-haired man arrived.

Ernie Pyle was one of the originators of the term "GI Joe" and wrote the true story of men at war. His column was carried daily by all the newspapers across the country and it was so uncommon sight to see the frail gentleman sitting in his foxhole, the rain pouring down, shells bursting all around, doing his daily story, "Old Pop Pyle's pounding on that damn typewriter again," the boys would howl from their trenches. On his head would be that "atrocious" cap he so often wore—fur ear flaps and turned-up bill.

He trudged up the dangerous roads and hills, ducking the bullets and cracking jokes with his boys. He went from the Engineers to the Ordnance; from Armor and Air Corps to the Signal boys—always he tried to visit them all and write their stories. But, as appeared in one of his columns, the Infantry was his choice. "Now to the Infantry. The damned Infantry as they like to call themselves. I love the Infantry because they are the underdogs. They are the mud-rain-frost-and-wind boys. They have no comforts, and they even learn to live without necessities. And in the end they are the guys that wars can't be won without."

Capt. Waskow Story

It was the story of an Infantry captain that became one of Ernie Pyle's most classic works. Captain Henry T. Waskow, carried down a moonlit hill draped across the back of a mule. The reactions of the dead captain's men when he was brought in, inspired Ernie to write the column that appeared on front page of most newspaper in the country. It has been immortalized as the greatest piece of reporting in journalism's history. (For any who would like to read it, it can be found in the books "The Last Chapter," by Ernie Pyle, or, "The Story of Ernie Pyle.")

There was a movie made on Ernie Pyle's life and he had written many books before his death. But it was his daily column that brought the real war home and told the true story of his boys.

Ernie left for the States when the war in Europe was almost over, but quickly chose to go to the Pacific and cover that war too. As he wrote in another of his columns, "Anybody who has been in war and wants to go back is a plain damn fool in my book. I'm going simply because there's a war on and I'm part of it."

It was on the island of Ie Shima, near Okinawa, that Ernie Pyle died from a Japanese machine-gunner's bullet. It had always been his way during action to ask if everyone was okay. While pinned down in a ditch by the Jap machine-gunner, the tired old man raised his head after a burst and asked; "Are you all right?" And those were his last words.

Mourned By Army

He died just six days after President Roosevelt and the world mourned again; especially the world of the U.S. Infantryman. In a radio broadcast President Truman said, "No man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man as American fighting men wanted it told." In Europe, Gen. Omar Bradley had just sat down to dinner when the news was brought in; he put his head in his hands and could not speak. Gen. Eisenhower said, "The GIs in Europe — and that means all of us here — have lost one of our best and most understanding friends." But, it was Bill Mauldin who put it the way the foot-soldier felt, "The only difference between Ernie's death and the death of any other good guy is that the other guy is mourned by his company, Ernie is mourned by the Army."

His body was placed in a crude coffin and put in the ground a few yards from where the East China Sea strikes the shore of Ie Shima. On one side of him lay a dead infantry private and on the other a young Army engineer. With tears in their eyes two youthful, battle proven foot-soldiers carved out a cross to be placed at his head. "At This Spot The 77th Infantry Division Lost A Buddy. Ernie Pyle—18 April 1945."

West Point Cadets Visit 23rd Infantry While Touring Germany

By 1st Bn, 22nd Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry is hosting three United States Military Academy cadets during their annual overseas training program.

The cadets will spend four weeks with the battalion in Germany, working with commissioned officers and gaining valuable leadership experience.

The cadets assigned to the 23rd Infantry are Keven C. Kelley, Company A; Mark E. Brennan, Company B; George J. Damas, Company C. They will take part in all regular training with the battalion including field training exercises, river crossings, and all other exercises during their stay.

Upon completion of training, the cadets will be evaluated by their respective commanders. The opportunity for a short leave in Europe before returning to West Point will be granted to the cadets.

Three Sergeants Upped To Master Sergeants

In ceremonies held last Monday at division headquarters, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, presented promotion orders for MSgt. (E8) to: MSgt. (E7) Linwood Taylor, Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade; SFC Floyd M. Cunningham, Headquarters and Headquarters Co., 2nd Infantry Division; and P-Sgt. Joseph H. Ibach, Headquarters Co., 1st Battalion, 67th Infantry.

Sgt. Taylor was with the 3rd Armor in Germany before coming to the 2nd Infantry Division. He has been in the Army over 15 years and he and his family live on Highland Avenue in Columbus.

With the Army Security Agency (ASA) in Ethiopia prior to being assigned to the 2nd Division, Sgt. Cunningham has spent over 18 years in the Army. He and his family live at 136B, Baker Village.

Sgt. Ibach was with the 2nd Engineers in Europe before coming to Fort Benning and rejoining the 2nd Infantry Division. He has over 15 years service and lives at 4515 Sims St., in Columbus.

The three new master sergeants received their orders from Gen. Corley and were congratulated by the assistant division commander. He remarked to them that they had only one more promotion to reach the highest grade an enlisted man can receive.

A RADAR TEAM FROM 1ST BATTALION, 9TH INFANTRY EXERCISING IN GERMANY
(L-R) Sp4 Timothy Bailey, Sp4 Darrell Kohlenberger, Sgt. Julius Wilhelm

1st Battalion Describes Active Months in Germany

By 1st Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry has returned to its home base with the 2nd Infantry Division after a three-month tour under Rotaplan in Germany as a part of the 3rd Brigade, 8th Infantry Division.

Being relieved by the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, which started arriving in Germany on the 16th day of July at Rhein Main Air Base, the men from the 1st Battalion boarded the same planes used by the 2nd, for the return trip to Fort Benning.

The advance party for the 1st Battalion arrived in Germany in mid-March and immediately started getting things ready for the main body which was due to start arriving in the middle of April. Two weeks prior to the main group's arrival orders were received directing the 9th to move to Mannheim where it would be stationed for three months.

Taking Over

The taking over of property from the 38th Infantry which the 9th was relieving in Baumholder was stepped up and plans for moving the Battalion to Mannheim were made. With only a week to sign for all the property and pack it for the trip to Mannheim after the main group arrived meant a busy first week in Germany.

Early Monday morning, April 22, men and equipment of the 9th Infantry started the 60-mile motor march to Sullivan Barracks arriving there the afternoon of the same day.

Maintenance of personnel carriers and equipment started immediately in preparation for training and readiness tests. The first readiness test came a little over a week after the battalion arrived at Sullivan Barracks.

The training program was stepped up and the 9th took part in river crossing exercises and helicopter training. Along with this selected personnel participated in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) command post exercise Grand Slam II.

In May an inclement weather demonstration and a static display ranging from small arms up to the Honest John Rocket was put on by the 9th Infantry. Weapons and equipment not organic to the 9th were donated by other units of the V Corps.

PRACTICING 1ST BATTALION SOLDIERS AND CITY BATTLES

'Every Ready'

While the battalion staff and selected personnel moved out on the 3rd Brigade "CPX Ever Ready," the line companies participated in a 24-hour squad and platoon problem which ended with night infra-red driving.

June 1 saw the battalion moving to Baumholder where they took part in 14 days of field training. During these 14 days they participated in a "Welcome FTX" along with another Rotaplan unit, 1st Battalion, the 22nd Infantry which is in Germany for six months. The problem started with a readiness test and included a move into an assembly area, occupation of the FEBA, successive delays and night withdrawal. A daylight attack on Saturday terminated the problem.

Upon completion of the Exercise the battalion began squad and platoon exercises including live fire problems. Other training saw the firing of the 106 milimeter Recoilless Rifle, SS-10, 81 millimeter and 4.2 inch mortars and .50 caliber machine guns. "Combat in Cities" took up the last two days of training.

Friday morning June 14, saw the battalion moving back to Sullivan Barracks and the start of a busy maintenance schedule to prepare the equipment for turn over to the 2nd Battalion's advance party.

Although three months isn't a long time it gave many men their first look at Europe. The battalion, to give the men even a better look at the different countries in Europe, sponsored, in cooperation with the American Express office in Mannheim, a variety of tours to many of the big cities and interesting spots around the continent. The highlights of these tours was an eleven-day tour of Italy, Austria and Switzerland.

As the time for departure drew near and the last of the equipment was turned over, the men had time to sit back and think of the things they had seen and done. To somebody who has been stationed in Germany his entire time the training that takes the units through the many small towns and villages and scenic country sides it might just mean more training but to the men of the 9th who are used to taking all of their training on a military reservation in the states the chance to see things as well as train is something unusual.

When the battalion was first notified of their scheduled trip to Germany they were just organizing into the Battalion system under the Army's ROAD concept and were a straight infantry outfit. As soon as the changeover was completed they immediately went to the field in an intensified training program which kept them in the field four days a week.

As the weeks progressed the men became more and more profeient in their new duties as a mechanized infantry and at the end of this training showed their new abilities well in the Battalion's ATT.

In Germany the mechanized training continued but on their return to Fort Benning they again will become a straight infantry unit. This type of mechanization under Rotaplan keeps the unit highly trained in the different types of infantry units for a more mobile and flexible fighting force.

DURING A BREAK IN FIELD EXERCISING A SOLDIER TREATS A GUEST TO SPECIAL EXPERIENCE
1st Battalion, 9th Infantry PFC Robert Conluge Shows Machine Gun to German Child

3-Month 9th Home Again From Rotaplan Missions

Happy tears of homecoming lighted faces in the Sand Hill area of Fort Benning recently as wives and children gathered to welcome back men of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

The 2nd Division soldiers unloaded from busses into the waiting arms of families and completed a trans-Atlantic trip which took them by jet aircraft from Rhein-Main Airfield in Germany to Warner-Robins Air Force Base near Macon, Ga.

The "Manchu" soldiers were three months overseas, training with the 8th Infantry Division under the Rotaplan rotation system.

'Back to Wigwam'

After the first shock of greeting had died away, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, stepped up to a microphone and told his returning soldiers who wear the Indianhead patch, "Welcome back to the Wigwam" and "Thank you for the work you've done."

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry lead contingent arrived under the command of Capt. Raymond Kommaniecki, adjutant. As the other busleads of the battalion arrived later, Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, who earlier returned to Fort Benning, took charge.

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, a sister unit, has already left Fort Benning to replace the 1st Battalion in Mannheim, Germany. The "2nd of the 9th" will spend six months in Europe.

Rotaplan is being featured as a cure for the U. S. outflow of gold reserves. Tours of duty under the rotation system are purposely kept short as dependents may not accompany the soldiers overseas.

Many of the 2nd Division soldiers involved in Rotaplan leave families behind in the Columbus area while in Europe. Currently the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, along with the 2nd Battalion, 9th, are in Germany as the latest groups to participate in the plan which has been uninterrupted since its inauguration last fall.

Copters Weathered In

Original plans for the recent arrival had called for a command group to be lifted by helicopter from Warner - Robins and set down on the division headquarters parade field. The helicopters were weathered in at Robins, and the command group arrived by bus with the rest of the planeload.

Sgt. Maj. James Runyon, battalion sergeant major, and the company 1st sergeants arrived in the first group while the division band played "As the Caissons Go Rolling Along."

"At no time were we to forget we belonged to the 2nd Division and at no time would the 2nd Division forget us," spoke Capt. Kommaniecki as the brief ceremonies concluded. "We've always aimed to improve the reputation of the '2nd.' "

The men left their families and stood at attention in formation while the general and captain congratulated them.

The captain wound up his remarks, Sgt. Maj. Runyon called "Fall out," and the soldiers were back with families and friends and off on vacation leaves before resuming normal training with the 2nd Division.

An Indian for 'Indianhead'. . .

2nd Division Indian Is Real Kiowa Chief

By Bob de Camara

A seagoing Kiowa Indian who gave up ship for shore and joined the 2nd Infantry Division is being treated with loving care by his commanders at Fort Benning.

Reason: the 2nd Division isn't just any old division; it's the "Indianhead" Division. And the first step in Sp4 Marland Tahbonemah's grooming for official division Indian called for him to appear at the annual reunion of the "Indianhead" Association in San Antonio, Tex.

The seagoing chapter of Tahbonemah's life is the 10 years aboard destroyers of the U. S. Navy. Tahbonemah, who shucked that life in 1958 to work in Ohio as a metal finisher, ambushed an Army recruiter last summer and wound up some months later at Fort Sill, Okla., for artillery training.

The 2nd Division Indian's grandfather, a Kiowa chief named I-See-O, took a job with the Army for more than 40 years at Fort Sill as a scout. I-See-O's tribe was slightly miffed at the turn of events, but the Army was delighted enough to push a special enactment through Congress, making I-See-O a permanent sergeant.

The move is credited to I-See-O's good friend, Gen. Pershing, who wanted to save the scout the bother of reenlisting. For more than 30 years, I-See-O was officially 31 years old.

The commanding general of Fort Sill built I-See-O a bungalow, but the sergeant continued to sleep in a teepee pitched behind his new cabin.

At a briefing the other day for division representatives going to San Antonio, Tahbonemah entered the conference room in ceremonial Kiowa dress (which he had stashed in a box stamped "Indianapolis, Indiana") and stood like a statue for an appraisal. Everyone present, including the division commanding general who walked in, unexpecting, minutes later, was visibly impressed.

Tahbonemah wears a mink-tufted neckband as the descendent of an Army veteran and the double trail bonnet of a chief as the grandson of I-See-O.

Hand sewn of white buckskin and intricately beaded in the colors of the rainbow, the clothing was crafted by six Kiowa expressly for Tahbonemah. The division donated 10 days leave for the uniform-finding expedition to Tahbonemah's home in Lawton, Okla., and the division association gave $185.

The bonnet, apron, waistband, leggings, jacket, neckband and moccasins each bear the individual markings of the Indians who made them. According to Kowa tradition, the pattern evolves as the work progresses and once made cannot be copied by anyone else.

The moccasins are buckskin with a hardened cowhide sole. "After beef is killed, the hide is stretched over a frame and the hair rubbed off with stone," relates Tahbonemah of the shoes' manufacture.

The upper and lower parts are then sewn together with sinew from a buffalo's back or, in the absence of buffalo, beef cattle sinew.

The headdress is of eagle feathers and eaglet plumage. The feathers are the natural quill colors of brown and white. The plumage is dyed red, white and yellow, and the plumage and feathers stitched on beaded red broadcloth.

2ND DIVISION INDIAN
Sp4 Tahbonemah

Tahbonemah, born in Lawton and raised at an Indian school in Anadarko, Okla., is a radarman at Headquarters Battery, 15th Artillery and in the process of switching over to professional Indian for the division.

His high cheek bones and skin the color of Georgia clay made Tahbonemah the perfect choice for the "Indianhead" Division. He enunciates English clearly and speaks fluent Kiowa.

There's only one drawback. He can't say "Second to None," the division motto, in Kiowa.

"Second to None?" We don't have this 'Second to None' in our language."

Escapes From Iron Curtain

87th Infantry Sergeant Fled Communist Prison

Sgt. Ilie Belivakici, a squad leader of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, once led a very dramatic and hard life behind the Iron Curtain.

Ever since June 1945, when the Communist forces moved in and claimed his homeland, Yugoslavia, he and his people have constantly sought freedom.

For 11 long hard years Sgt. Belivakici had always hoped and prayed for freedom to become his once again.

While a college student, the Communists tried to indoctrinate him to their way of life. The Reds had a way of forcing the college students to join the party. Those who did not join were taken out of school by force as anti-government elements and were put in prison for life. These students were never seen or heard from again.

There Was A War

There was, however, one way to escape this totalitarian life. And that was — to escape. Sgt. Belivakici and two of his college companions did just that. On the first of September 1957, he and his two friends started off with their escape plan, leaving behind them their beloved families.

On September 12, 1957, Sgt. Belivakici and his two cohorts began to try for the Austrian border. But the Communists had learned of this plot some way and kept very close scrutiny on their travels. One day later they were apprehended and thown into prison on a trumped-up charge of trying to cross the Austrian border illegally.

After being in prison for two months awaiting their sentence, Sgt. Belivakici and his two friends escaped from prison by hitting a guard, taking his keys and making good their escape. This time they headed for the Italian border.

Only Pajamas

For three days and nights in wintry November weather, they moved toward the border with only a pair of pajamas and shower shoes to clothe themselves. They fought off hunger, cold wind, rain and lack of sleep. Finally, on November 19, they crossed the Italian border successfully and entered Sezana, Italy.

They were met by the Italian guards and were taken to Triest to be questioned by the International Police. They were asked their reasons for escaping and where they crossed the border. All three asked for political asylum.

After the International Police had finished with them they were placed into a refugee camp. Sgt. Belivakici was not sure he would be given political asylum due to the fact that many of the refugees, including one of his escaping friends, was turned back to Yugoslavia for unknown reasons. So, Sgt. Belivakici once again escaped. He tried for the French border, but was apprehended for traveling through Italy with out any legal documents. During this attempt at freedom he lost his other friend, who was taken away and never heard from since.

Sgt. Belivakici was taken back to the refugee camp and there waited three weeks to be transfered to another camp in Naples, Italy.

U. S. Screening Team

Almost 11 months later the United States Screening Team came through seeking volunteers under the Lodge Act Law, which admitted him into the United States Army for five years with a confirmation of becoming a U. S. citizen after receiving an honorable discharge.

He was one of the first to take this opportunity. From there he was stationed in Germany, where he served most of his tour of duty. Last January he came to the U.S. and was stationed at Fort Benning.

Sgt. Belivakici is presently residing at 423 Mellon St. in Coumbus. He does not say whether he intends to make the Army a career, but says he is proud to call himself a soldier of the U.S. Army and hopes soon to be called a U. S. citizen.

SGT. ILIE BELIVAKICI

STEER SEES 'RED' VICTORY

"Old Charlie," the white-bleached steer head trophy of Swift Strike II which hangs in the orderly room of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry predicted another victory for the Red Forces in Exercise Swift Strike III.

Charlie was "borrowed" from the Blue Forces last year when he was found mounted to the front of a Blue Forces jeep.

Generally not considered much of a talker, "Old Charlie" surprised everyone, even the unshakable 1st Sgt. Henry Siejka, when he made his statement. Until this time, Charlie was considered more of a conservation piece than a conversing steer.

Addressing a select gathering of the 1st Sgt. and company clerk, SP4 John Irsfeld, Charlie broke the sound barrier immediately following mention of the rapid striking power possessed by the Blue Forces.

"Frumpphe," grunted Charlie, a former member of the 101st Airborne Division prior to his capture by members of Company C. "Since you fellows became mechanized, those glory boys won't have a chance. Why, you guys have just about lived in the field for a month or two now. I've watched this unit get better and better as every day goes by. Man, with all that new air strike power you have to back you now and your rapid "strikability," those Blueboys won't even get out of the drop zone."

Too astonished to reply, the two soldiers were chagrined to see the conversation cut off at this point. Capt. Palmer McGrew, company commander, walked out of his office and ordered Charlie to be banished to the closet.

"He is," said Capt. McGrew, "a security risk."

Lt. Col. J. V. Stoecker, S & T Commander, Congratulates Sp5 Martin

2nd S & T Specialist Reenlists for Six More

By 2nd Supply and Transport PIO

Sp5 Martin entered the military service in 1953 and took basic training with the 31st Infantry at Camp Atterbury, Ind. He went then to the 4th Infantry Division in Germany for a tour of duty.

On return to the U. S., he tried a year as "Mister" Martin. A year was enough to cause him to reenlist again.

He reentered the Army at Fort Jackson, S. C. for assignment to the Army Artillery Board at Fort Sill, Okla.; where he was later assigned to the First Corps in Korea.

A Town Drunk, No Less. . .

87th Play Civilians During War Games

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

In a recent 2nd Infantry Division field training exercise members of Company B, 1st Battalion (Mech), 87th Infantry performed as guerrillas and civilians, and some interesting reactions to the training were expressed by participants.

A general description of the problem follows: after building three leaf-branch-and-wire cities and assigning appropriate townspeople roles, including a town drunk, the "civilians" of this operation functioned to present a situation which would require civilian control.

The "civilians" were able to choose sides. They could either support the Division forces, or pass information and create situations that would tend to support the guerrilla forces.

The selected men of Company B, who acted as guerrillas, operated in entire rear areas of the Division with bases close to the cities. They effected guerrilla sabotage behind the lines while division forces were engaged in "real" conflict. The guerrillas were hunted by the division forces and every bit of realism that could be safely induced was used during capture. By sneaking about in swamps and stationing personnel in the cities to spy on unsuspecting "civilians", they performed their missions with vigor and comprehension.

In regard to this exercise, Capt. Stanley Z. White, commanding officer, said that the problem provided every man the opportunity to see some of the difficulties that would confront in a reverse situation, that it provided insight toward what is happening in other parts of the world, and showed why emphasis is now placed on this type of warfare as the trend in armed conflict.

Lt. James Blouin, platoon leader, felt the men enjoyed a change of pace from the regular training and demonstrated how effective a few men in the rear of a force can be and how difficult it is to control guerrilla actions.

Sgt. Joseph Bender enjoyed taking opportunities to employ initative, particularly when he was taken captive and thwarted interrogation. Sp4 John L. Crittle said he benefited from training he received while attending the Army Jungle Survival School.

2nd Support's S-3 To Arty Committee

By Support Command PIO

S-3 officer, Maj. Bryant Evans Jr., left the 2nd Infantry Division's Support Command recently for duty with Fort Benning's Infantry Center.

A graduate of the Artillery Officer Candidate School (OCS) in 1946, Maj. Evans will be an instructor for the Infantry School's Artillery Committee.

Maj. Evans' assignments include serving in Japan with the 11th Airborne Division and as an instructor at Fort Bliss, Tex., for the anti-aircraft and Missile School. In 1957 Maj. Evans was on temporary duty from Korea to observe and report on Atomic testing in Nevada.

Sec's. McNamara and Vance Visit

7th Cavalry Welcomes Inspecting Dignataries

By 7th Cavalry PIO

The 7th Cavalry was honored by a visit from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and the Secretary of the Army, the Honorable Cyrus Vance.

At about 2:20 p.m. on July 25 a calvacade of sedans with red lights blinking rolled down Tenth street and came to a halt in front of the 7th Cavalry's Troop C orderly room.

Mr. McNamara and Mr. Vance stepped out to be greeted by the 7th Cavalry commander, Lt. Col. James L. Keown.

The visiting party, led by Troop C's commander, Capt. Lawrence Medlin, toured the troop's mess hall and the second platoon barracks.

Both Mr. McNamara and Mr. Vance commented to SSgt. Willie L. Stevenson, mess steward, that he had a "very nice looking" mess hall. Mr. Vance asked Sgt. Stevenson how long he had been with the Division, and Sgt. Stevenson replied: four years. Sgt. Stevenson and his cooks had a cake prepared for the secretaries, but they only had time to admire it and comment on what a beautiful job it was.

After the mess hall the party visited the second platoon barracks where they got a first-hand look at how the troopers are living. They showed particular interest in the condition of the buildings.

Upon completion of the barracks inspection, the party went to the orderly room where the secretaries commented to Capt. Medlin that the housekeeping was very good.

The squadron commander led the party back to the waiting sedans and they left.

1st Brigade Picks SOM

By 1st Brigade PIO

Sp5 Richard B. Fulton, who only recently was cited by the assistant division chaplain as "outstanding", has been chosen as the 1st Brigade Soldier-of-the-Month.

Representing Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Sp5 Fulton won the title in competition with candidates from the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 38th Infantry. Each of the candidates were judged on their military appearance and bearing and then put before a board which questioned them on their knowledge of military subjects and current events. The scores were then tabulated, with Sp5 Fulton being selected as the Soldier-of-the-Month.

This is not the first time that the young soldiers has received recognition for his outstanding efforts. A few weeks ago, then Sp4 Fulton, received a special letter from the assistant division chaplain, Chap. (Capt.) Frank E. Deese, citing his service with Headquarters Company of the 38th Infantry. The letter stated that, "Sp4 Fulton's leadership abilities and soldierly qualities were truly outstanding and were duly recognized." Shortly thereafter he was promoted to Specialist Five.

Also while serving in Germany with the 38th Infantry, Sp5 Fulton attended the 8th Infantry "Pathfinder" Division Noncommissioned Officer Academy, graduating in the top ten of his class.

Sp5 Fulton entered the Army in August 1961 from his hometown of St. Louis, Mo. After basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., he attended the Basic Administration and Chaplain's Assistant Courses at Fort Dix, N. J. Upon graduation, he was assigned to the 2nd Division's 69th Armor (now the 72nd Armor).

Eight months later, Sp5 Fulton was reassigned to the 38th Infantry where he soon found that the unit was on its way to Germany under Rotaplan. The 38th returned to Fort Benning and the 2nd Division in April of this year and was reorganized under the ROAD concept. Sp5 Fulton was reassigned at this time to the 1st Brigade where he became the chief clerk of the chaplain's section, headed by Chap. (Capt.) Duie Jernigan.

Upon the completion of his Army tour, Sp5 Fulton plans to attend college where he will work toward a degree in political science.

38th Lieutenant Gets Silver Bar

By 1st Bn., 38th Infantry PIO

Lieutenant Thomas C. Metsker, Company C, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, was recently promoted to his present rank on July 20, 1963.

Lt. Metsker is a graduate of The Citadel; the military college of South Carolina. He is also a graduate of the Basic Infantry Officer's Course and is Ranger and Airborne qualified.

While in college he was a four-year letterman; a member of the South Carolina intercollegiate pole vault team, track, and a member of the school's gymnastics team.

At Ranger School he won first place in the Combat Proficiency test and also first place in the Buddy Run.

Last year Lieutenant Metsker won a first place trophy at Main Post for pole vaulting.

While on Rotaplan with the 38th Infantry in Germany he was a member of the Small Bore Pistol Team and on his return to Ft. Benning he took over the managership of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry baseball team.

2nd of 87th Sp4 Is SOM

By 2nd Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

Sp4 Andres Cruz, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry was chosen Soldier-of-the-Month recently for his second time.

Sp4 Cruz was inducted into the service in March 1959 at Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico. Prior to entering the service he was a student.

After completing basic training at Fort Dix, N.J., he was sent to Fort Benning; assigned to Main Post. Later on he went to Hawaii and served with the 25th Infantry Division for three years.

After finishing his tour in Hawaii, he reenlisted and was sent to Fort Benning, and his present assignment.

17th Artillery Promotes Two Top Enlisted Men

By 17th Artillery PIO

Two members of Headquarters Battery, 17th Artillery, were recently promoted to their present grades.

SSgt. Francisco S. Diaz, the 17th Artillery personnel staff noncommissioned officer, was appointed from the rank of Sergeant. Sgt. Diaz, a native of Saint Just, Puerto Rico, was previously assigned to the U. S. Army Element, Joint U.S. Military Mission for Aid to Turkey; Ankara, Turkey. He and his wife, Marta, now make their home in Columbus.

Also promoted was Sp4 Gene A. Hansen of Racine, Wis.

Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert, commanding officer of the 17th Artillery, selected the two enlisted men for appointment after each achieved outstanding scores in promotion boards for the respective vacancies.

Cav. Headquarters Troop Gets Captain

By 7th Cavalry PIO

Capt. Henry H. Smith Jr. has been assigned to the 2nd Division's 7th Cavalry as commander of Headquarters Troop.

Capt. Smith comes to Fort Benning from the 11th Armored Cavalry's Aviation Company in Europe.

S-3 Air Assigned To 72nd Armor

By 72nd Armor PIO

Capt. James C. Shepard was recently assigned as S-3 Air officer for the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Capt. Shepard, a 1957 Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) graduate from Stetson University, came to the 2nd Division after completing the Armor Career Officer's Course at Fort Knox, Ky.

He has served with the 2nd Battalion, 37th Armor, 2nd Armored Division; the 513th Military Intelligence Group in Germany, and the 1st Battalion, 32nd Armored Division, also in Germany.

While in Germany, Capt. Shepard was awarded the U. S. Army Europe Certificate of Achievement.

She Sees Separations As Part of Her Army Job

BY JODY COCHRAN

Mrs. Robert E. Coffin is the wife of the new assistant division commander of the 2nd Division. She is a tall, willowy, graceful lady, whose charm and wit have already impressed members of the division.

Mrs. Coffin met her husband on an Easter holiday in Carmel, Calif., while both were students at Stanford University. They were married at Fort Lewis, Wash. in November, 1940. Their first separation came after six months when then Lt. Coffin was sent to California on maneuvers with the 3rd Division. Mrs. Coffin returned to her parents in Walla Walla, Wash. After the maneuvers were completed, the family returned to Fort Lewis and their first daughter, Barbara, was born there in September, 1941. With normal Army assiduity, Lt. Coffin naturally received orders the month after the baby was born. He left for Fort Sill, Okla. in October.

HAS A JOB
Mrs. Coffin

Mrs. Coffin and her new daughter again returned to Walla Walla. At her parents' insistence she decided to leave her daughter with them and spend Christmas with her husband in Fort Sill. Lt. Coffin met her plane in Oklahoma City on December 7, 1941.

Early in 1942 the Third Division went to Fort Ord, Calif., for intensive amphibious training. No one knew they were preparing for the North African invasion. In September 1942 Mrs. Coffin's young husband left for an extended tour of North Africa, Sicily, Southern France and Germany, extended to three and one-half years.

Barbara was four when her father saw her again. He rejoined his family in January, 1946. His orders were to Washington, D.C., where he took the Russian desk in the Intelligence Division. The Coffin's second daughter, Lynne, was born in Washington, D.C. in 1947.

After a year's troop duty the family moved to Fort Leavenworth, Kans., where Lt. Col. Coffin attended the Command and General Staff College and remained for three years on the staff and faculty. Mrs. Coffin thoroughly enjoyed her four years at Fort Leavenworth, which may be due in some part to the fact that Jimmy was born there in 1953.

The police action in Korea resulted in another separation for the Coffins. Mrs. Coffin took her three small children to Carmel, where they stayed until Colonel Coffin returned in 1955. His orders were to report to the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va.

The Coffins returned to the Pentagon in 1955, where Col. Coffin worked in Research and Development. They were able to remain in the home they bought in Arlington an extra year while he attended the National War College in 1959.

After nineteen years of marriage in the Army, it was finally possible for Mrs. Coffin to join her husband in a tour of duty overseas. He was assigned to the Southern European Task Force, and commanded the First Missile Command in Vicenza, Italy. After two years in Italy they went to Heidelberg, Germany, where Col. Coffin was assistant deputy for Operations in USAREUR Headquarters.

Mrs. Coffin thinks the nineteen year wait was worth it. Her excitement at seeing Europe's art shows in her face when she talks about it. Both the Coffins were pleased that their daughter, Barbara, had an opportunity to study at Stanford during the winter and tour Europe in the summer.

Mrs. Coffin's flair for art shows dramatically in her home on Lumpkin Road. She has featured the family's antiques. Two especially lovely pieces are a pedestal table and a Nantucket clock. The table came from Col. Coffin's mother's family. It was buried for safekeeping at Charleston, S.C., during the Civil War. The Nantucket clock is 200 years old and was made by one of Col. Coffin's ancestors, who settled Nantucket Island.

The family's newest acquisitions are two, two-month old, English setter puppies. Young Jimmy is kept busy with round-the-clock feedings at the moment.

The new assistant division commander's wife is quite obviously happy with her choice of an Army life. She has enjoyed change and variety and the opportunity to learn the characteristics of different parts of our own country as well as those of Europe. She feels there is something of interest to be learned in every locality. She believes military life is rewarding for a wife because she can feel a sense of participation in matters of national importance. She, too, has had numerous separations but thinks they must be looked upon as part of her job. Separations can give the whole family more appreciation of the times when they are together.

G-2 Section Gives Party

The G-2 section held a Hail and Farewell party at the Normandy Room, Main Officers Open Mess, on Satuday July 20. Receiving were: Lt. Col. and Mrs. Richard O. Stewart; Maj. and Mrs. Terue Miyagishima; Capt. and Mrs. David S. Moore, and Capt. Leon Givler.

The table was adorned with an off-center decoration of gold lame with a brass bowl holding gold fruit.

Corsages were presented to all ladies newly arrived and departing.

Lt. Col. Stewart greeted Capt. and Mrs. Stanley V. Wielga; Capt. and Mrs. Forrest Wood; Mrs. Thomas T. Orum, wife of Lt. Orum; WO and Mrs. Lawrence Donnerstag and WO and Mrs. Shelby Roberts. He also bade farewell to Capt. and Mrs. David S. Moore.

2nd Battalion Wives Meet

72nd Armor Has Aloha at MOOM

By 2nd Armor PIO

The officers and wives of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, had an Aloha party Saturday night at the Main Officers Open Mess (MOOM) for the newly arrived and departing Officers and their wives.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Arthur J. Lochrie, presented a silver baby spoon to Lt. and Mrs. Leonard M. Jones, for their baby boy, Leonard M. Jones III.

The Colonel and his wife, then greeted the 13 new Officers and their wives, and bid a fond Aloha to Capt. and Mrs. Cecil O. Burbank; who will retire July 31; Capt. and Mrs. Stephen C. Kovacs Jr., who were recently assigned to the General Staff (G-1) and to CWO and Mrs. Russell H. Piatt, who are assigned to the 23rd Infantry. Each of the couples received an engraved silver plate.

Col. Lochrie then presented Capt. Burbank with a memento for his faithful service to his country and the Army on his retirement.

Following the presentations, the couples, preceded by Col. and Mrs. Lochrie, adjourned to the dining room of the super club, for dinner.

At the conclusion of dinner, the couples danced to the music of Gene Kocians and his orchestra.

Mrs. B. Snow Is Guest Of Honor for Engineers

Mrs. Beverly C. Snow Jr. was guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Officers wives of the 2nd Engineer Battalion on Monday in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. Snow is the wife of the new battalion commander, Lt. Col. Beverly C. Snow Jr. and comes to the 2nd Engineers from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Pink snapdragons, white mums, and daisies with lavender mums formed a mass center arrangement on the L-shape luncheon table and was later presented to Mrs. Snow.

Also featured was a map of the United States, designed and made by Mrs. William L. Philpott. The map contained a pennant with each wife's name on it and was pin pointed where each one came from.

A silver tray was presented in farewell to Mrs. Kenneth J. Haveman, who is moving to New York while Lt. Haveman serves a tour of duty in Vietnam.

Mrs. Jere A. Drummond of Ft. Belvoir, Va. was welcomed to the 2nd Engineer Officers' Wives Club at this time.

COOK of the WEEK

By Mrs. Warren G. Freeman

The World Book Encyclopedia tells us that "Next to the products of agriculture fisheries produce the most of food for man." Together with commercial fishing that boasts an annual catch of 55,115,500 pounds of fish, fishing for sport and for the pleasure of preparing and enjoying one's catch is a pastime thoroughly looked forward to by leisure time fishermen. A fisherman with a simple cane pole and line can have as much fun as if he had an expensive rod and reel.

The classification of fish is extensive. Our recipes this week suggest the preparation of fish that could be caught while sitting quietly on the bank of a stream or caught by otter trawl net dragged along the ocean floor, an important method of fishing used by commercial fishermen.

Mrs. Jake Cantrell and Mrs. Leroy Arnold share with us their recipes for BAKED STUFF BASS AND CHEESE RICE SHRIMP CREOLE respectively:

Baked Stuff Bass

One 4 to 5 pound bass dressed
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
½ package prepared bread stuffing
1 small onion, grated
½ teaspoon rosemary
½ teaspoon Oregano

Wash fish and dry with paper towel. Combine ½ cup of butter or margarine with remaining ingredients mixing well. Fill fish cavity 2-3 full. Close opening with wooden pick, lace together with string. Cut 3 or 4 gashes through skin on each side and brush with butter. Line shallow baking pan with aluminum foil. Put fish in pan, bake in 400 degree oven 30 to 40 minutes until tender. Baste occasionally with butter. Put onto a heated platter and serve with lobster sauce. Makes six servings.

Shrimp Creole

1 cup coarsely chopped onion
1 cup diced celery
1 clove garlic
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon tobasco sauce
½ cup diced green pepper
1 1-pound can tomatoes
2 cups cooked clean shrimp

Saute onions, celery and minced garlic in butter until tender but not brown; add flour and seasoning and stir until blended. Stir in green pepper and tomatoes, then simmer 10 minutes stirring occasionally. Add shrimp and heat. Taste for added seasoning. Serve in cheese rice lined casserole.

Cheese Rice

One 1¼ cup long grain rice
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups shredded cheese
2 tablespoons minced onions
1 teaspoon prepared mustard

Cook rice according to package directions adding butter to cooking water. Drain thoroughly, add remaining ingredients. Gently fluff with fork to combine. Line a hot two-quart casserole with rice and fill center with shrimp creole.

Custer Terrace Club Site of 87th Coffee

A Coffee was held recently by the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry at the Custer Terrace Officers Club.

Hostesses were the wives of Company A; Mrs. Sidney S. Ragan, Mrs. Victor Hamilton, Mrs. Robert W. Boylston and Mrs. Lyman C. Culver. Mrs. Boylston poured.

The centerpiece was a floral arrangement of yellow gladiolas, yellow and giant lavender chrysanthemums, upon a white linen tablecloth.

Mrs. Michael A. Kalla and Mrs. Harold L. Rodgers, new arrivals, were greeted.

The guest list included Mrs. Ralph Wrobel, mother of Mrs. Raymond Celeste; and Mrs. Walter Lauchaire, mother of Capt. Raymond Celeste. Both mothers are here from New York City.

Mrs. Erik Grubbe-Gregersen, from Copenhagen, Denmark, is here with her husband who is attending the Associate Career Officers Course.

Mrs. George D. Crosby, wife of the battalion commander, presided over a short business meeting following the Coffee.

Next month's Coffee will be held at the home of Mrs. Henry Ackermann on August 27.

Mrs. Sommerville Hosts 2nd of 87th July Coffee

Mrs. William H. Cox, wife of the battalion commander, poured.

New arrivals in the group included Mrs. G. L. Long, Mrs. William C. Comer, Mrs. Bruce Cleaver, Mrs. Carl W. Brookshire, Mrs. Orth S. Leonard, Mrs. Clarence A. Bailey, and Mrs. George W. Moses.

New committee chairmen selected for the wives' activities were Mrs. Fitzhugh H. Chandler, Jr., Mrs. William H. Proctor, III, and Mrs. Walter F. Wall for the Hospitality Committee. Mrs. George W. Moses was Hostess Chairman and Mrs. William C. Comer the Publicity Chairman.

23rd Frolics As Rota Center Ages 3 Months

Three months have passed since the men of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry began their six-month tour in Baumholder, Germany. It has also been three months since wives of the 23rd banded together to assume the responsibilities of their section of the Rota Family Service Center.

To celebrate the half way mark of these important events the wives and children of the 23rd held a picnic at The Infantry Center (TIC) Recreation Area on Sand Hill.

The outing was planned with organized play and sport activities. Following an afternoon of fun and frolic a picnic supper was served.

702nd Ladies Hold July Coffee In Anzio Room

The 702nd Maintenance Battalion held their July Coffee in the Anzio Room at the Main Officers Open Mess recently.

Mrs. Hugh L. Donnell and Mrs. Richard E. Oswald were hostesses and Mrs. Walter Boyles poured.

The centerpiece was a decorated arrangement of roses.

Mrs. Philip H. Taft, wife of the battalion commander, conducted a short meeting to discuss plans for a Couples Party that is planned once Swift Strike is over.

Three new wives were greeted. They were: Mrs. Daniel B. Megeehee, Mrs. Thaddus Pinkney and Mrs. Robert D. Taylor.

Mrs. Dillard Jones Welcomed by 38th

To honor and welcome Mrs. Dillard F. Jones, wife of the battalion commander of the 38th Artillery, a coffee was held in the home of Mrs. David Mead.

Co-hostess was Mrs. Benson F. Landrum, who poured.

New arrivals welcomed to the battalion were Mesdames Paul S. Bloxom Jr., Roger E. Robichaud, and Joe E. Price.

Party Given 16 Officers

Officers and their wives of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, met recently at the Main Officer's Club to greet new arrivals and bid farewell to those departing in the near future. The new arrivals are: Capt. Fred Bane, Capt. Richard McKee, Capt. Michael Fortini, Lt. Donald Blair, Lt. Joseph Cunningham and Lt. Jerome Jurek.

RECEIVES LETTER . . . Sgt. Franke R. Eaton accepts a letter of commendation from Col. Frederick V. Harris, chief of staff of the 2nd Division.

Hqs Driver Gets Letter

A driver for a departed 2nd Infantry Division chief of staff received a letter of commendation from his old boss recently at Division Headquarers.

The driver is Sgt. Franke R. Eaton of Headquarters and Headquarters Company. The letter covers a period from October of last year to last month that Sgt. Eaton worked with Col. Louis A. Kunzig Jr., who is now assigned in Washington.

The letter was presented to the sergeant by the present chief of staff, Col. Frederick V. Harris, in the colonel's office.

"You have spent long and arduous hours during post exercises, field training exercises and other commitments which demanded a great deal of time and effort conscientiously performing your duties," the letter from Col. Kunzig stated.

"Always on hand and alert to the situation, you have proved to be a very definite asset in times of urgency."

This is Sgt. Eaton's first tour of duty with the "Second to None" Division which he has served for the past two and a half years. The sergent came to Division Headquarters from the 1st Infantry in October.

NEW COMMANDER

First Lt. Charles E. Mattix assumed command of Company A, 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction), recently. He succeeds 1st Lt. Luther E. Oswalt who will depart soon for an assignment in Korea.

Married in April, Sgt. Eaton and his wife, Dorothy, live at 1404½ Virginia St., Columbus.

Tankers Receive Special Awards

Recently the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor formed on Tankers field to honor Capt. Cecil O. Burbank, MSgt. Morris M. Sanders, and SFC John H. Dickey, all of whom are assigned to Headquarters Company of the 72nd.

Presentating awards was Lt. Col. Arthur J. Lochrie, battalion commander, assisted by Sgt. Maj. Bernard E. Bentfeld.

Capt. Burbank received the Oak Leaf Cluster for the Army Commendation Medal and Sgt. Sanders received a Commendation Ribbon for meritorious duty while a motor sergeant with the 25th Infantry Division, in Hawaii.

Then, Capt. Burbank and Sgt Dickey were presented certificates of appreciation from the Army upon their retirement from active duty, signed by the Army Chief of Staff, General Earle G. Wheeler.

Highlight of the morning was at the Headquarters Company mess hall where the two retirees were presented with a cake by the commanding officer, Capt. Richard W. McKee. Inscribed on the top was "For forty years of service." Both men used a saber to cut the cake.

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE VISITS . . . Mr. Robert S. McNamara, secretary of defense (L), arrives at the 2nd Infantry Division for an inspection tour. He is greeted and escorted by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, through the division area. The secretary was also briefed on the upcoming Swift Strike III maneuvers and the part that the "Indianhead" Division will play while in the Carolinas.

War Over Seven Years; Still Gets Purple Heart

By Carrol Headley

In June, last year in South Korea, Sp4 Richard H. Craven III, now assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, was shot twice by a North Korean during a skirmish in which Sp4 Craven attempted to capture, unarmed, an infiltrator.

He was wounded in the head and arm and taken to a field hospital by a buddy. For the wounds he received in combating an enemy he was awarded the Purple Heart — the first time since the Korean Conflict that such an award has been made.

The time was 4:30 p.m. June 2, 1962; the place South Korea. A sharp crack was heard and the whole platoon stopped their work to look over the edge of the hill.

Just below they saw three men running; two down the hill with such speed it seemed hard for them to keep from pitching forward head first onto the small razor sharp rocks that awaited them. The third man was running and stumbling like a madman for the near cliff that loomed just ahead.

In one split second the platoon sergeant realized something was amiss and shouted to his men, "Go get them!" Immediately the platoon broke into a bunch of howling and screaming G.I.'s; enough to scare an entire battalion of North Koreans into running; let alone three.

SP4 Craven and two other men went chasing after the third Korean, while the rest of the platoon went for the other two. SP4 Craven saw that by running along the ridge of the cliff, instead of taking the same path the other two men and the Korean had taken, he could cut the distance in half. As he was running along the cliff he heard another shot from down the hillside. Only then did he realize the man he was chasing was probably armed. As for himself the only weapons he had was the entrenching tool he had been using during the days work to dig battle positions. If any fear at all had sprang into life at the sound of that shot it was immediately destroyed by the one thought of capturing the Korean.

When only a few feet away from the man SP4 Craven gave one long lunge and found himself holding only a mountain-pack with webbing gear attached; for at the instant he grabbed the pack the Korean shed it as if it had only been taped to his back.

Before SP-4 Craven realized what had happened it seemed to him the whole world exploded. One second earlier he was a complete man with no defects or external wounds, but at the next a man with a large and elongated hole about the size of one's index finger over-flowing with blood located about one inch above his right eye. Blood was oozing from his eyes, nose, mouth and ears.

At first he thought he had lost half of his head, for with blood in his eyes and a pounding in his head like that of a base drum, little did he know of his present condition.

All this took place in a matter of seconds, for immediately after the bullet struck and knocked him to the ground another followed. This one entered his left arm just below the elbow and came out about five inches lower, tearing muscles, blood vessels and nerves.

As the Korean backed away he shot at Sp4 Craven a number of other times; the rounds hitting the ground knocking dirt in every direction.

As Sp4 Craven lay there he heard a voice about twenty or thirty feet away calling, "Craven, Craven, can you come to me?"

"I'll try," replied Craven, and he started crawling; dragging one arm and leaving a trail of blood anyone could follow.

He had gone about twenty feet when the bushes parted and there he was face to face with one of his buddies, PFC Roger Smith. Smith quickly drug him into the bushes and turned him on his back. He then took a first aid packet from his pistol belt and placed it over the head wound. While he was putting the first aid bandage on Sp4 Craven's head, another pistol round ripped through the bushes a few feet away. Smith said, "Take it easy, I'll get you out of here." Then he put a tourniquet around Craven's arm, made from part of his Tee-shirt, to stop the bleeding. He then lay on his stomach and told Craven to get on his back. Craven pushed himself over onto Smith's back with his good arm. With the same arm he held onto Smith by putting it around his neck. Smith started up the side of the hill with Sp4 Craven hanging on his back.

While crawling, Craven heard something in the bushes a short distance away. He knocked Smith's arms from under him and they both went to the ground like one wrestler falling atop another.

Two or three slugs struck the brush just above them. Sp4 Craven had flattened out as much as possible on Smith's back, but still he didn't think he was low enough; for only a hand's span was between him and another bullet. Once the fire lifted Craven lifted himself up a little to find Smith covered with blood all over the side of his head. At first he thought Smith had been hit, but that thought vanished as soon as he realized it was his own blood instead of Smiths'.

After crawling about another 100 feet they came into an opening where they saw the company jeep. Smith put Sp4 Craven in the jeep and the driver took off down the mountain. About halfway down they met the aid jeep and transferred Craven into it and took him on to the aid station where he had his shirt cut off and was given shots to kill the pain. He was then put into an ambulance and taken to the 44th Surgical Hospital, about ten miles north of Seoul, where he was put into emergency surgery. He was in surgery for two hours. During the operation he was awake the whole time.

After his operation he was told he would be fine and that the bullet had struck his forehead a glancing blow. As for his arm, it would remain weak for quite some time. He was also told the Korean that had shot him had committed suicide after being cornered by a number of the platoon, and that the other two North Koreans had escaped.

He was later put into the recovery room where he remained for one month. After completely recovering he was sent back to his company where he received the Purple Heart; the first since the Korean Conflict.

Sp4 Richard H. Craven III is now assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry as a team leader in a rifle platoon.

Officers Uncover Startling Similarity

1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

Among the newly assigned officers who appear on the 1st Battalion (Mech.), 87th Infantry roster, the two "Z's" at the end, Lt. Ronald L. Ziegler, heavy mortar and "Davy Crockett" platoon leader, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, and Lt. Anthony J. Zevgolis, communications officer, have uncovered a stream of identical circumstances in each other's background.

The list of coincidences includes: each served in the Marine Corps prior to entering the Army in 1962; both were sent to the same Officer Candidate School class and, subsequently, were graduated on the same day; both were assigned to the 52nd Company, (Officer Candidate), 5th Student Battalion; both have been accepted to attend flight school upon the 1st Battalion's return from Germany; each has two sons, the older of which is called David; each has a wife named Carolyn.

Undefeated Boxer Reigns in Germany

By 1st Bn, 22Rd Infantry PIO

On Friday, July 19, in Weberheim, Germany, Sgt. Amos Crumbly confidently stepped into the ring and 40 seconds later scored a TKO against his opponent, Motzch, a German lightheavyweight.

A previous fight, on July 2 saw Amos Crumbly win with a 30-second KO, the 36th KO of his USAREUR (U. S. Army Europe) Boxing career. Three TKOs round out the 39 win, no loss record for Crumbly.

Sgt. Crumbly, Company B, 1st Battalion 23rd Infantry, is now on temporary duty with the 8th Division boxing team. He is coached and managed by Sgt. David Keck, 23rd Infantry athletic and recreation chief.

87th's Bechthold Is Headquarters Company Head

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

Capt. Wayne H. Bechthold, former executive officer at Company B, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry, is assigned as commanding officer at Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Capt. Bechthold succeeds Lt. Charles C. McIntosh, now assigned as new executive officer at Company B. Lt. McIntosh came to the 87th from the 2nd Airborne, 41st Infantry, 4th Airborne Division in Germany, where he was airfield operations officer.

Capt. Bechthold arrived at the 1st Battalion from the 4th Armored Division in Germany where he served as an aerial observer. A 1959 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., he is a qualified Airborne - Ranger. Born in Grand Junction, Colo., he has studied German, and his interests include color photography, collecting handguns, playing football and boxing.

A Texas Captain Upped in 87th's 'Bravo' Company

By 2nd Bn. 87th Infantry PIO

Capt. John H. Bates was promoted to his present rank recently in a ceremony conducted in the office of Lt. Col. William H. Cox, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

Capt. Bates, a native of Breckenridge, Tex., attended Texas Technological College at Lubbock, Tex., where he graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in petroleum engineering.

A distinguished military graduate at college, he lettered three years in baseball, belonged to the Letlermans Association, was a member of the Scabbard and Blade Association and accepted a Regular Army commission upon graduation in 1959.

A graduate of the Basic Infantry Officer Course, he has served in Germany with the 4th Armored division and the 8th Infantry Division. He came to the 2nd Infantry Division in October 1962 by way of the Army's Rotaplan unit rotation system when he was assigned to the 26th Infantry.

2nd S & T Officer Promoted to Capt.

By Support Command PIO

Promotion to captain was the order of the day recently for Capt. Billy D. (Happy) Chandler, 2nd Supply and Transport's S-3 officer.

Capt. Chandler is a native of Springville, Ala., and began his military career in 1954 with a tour of duty in Korea.

He was commanding officer of Company B, 13th Transportation Battalion upon that unit's inactivation, and transferred to the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion and his present job.

Capt. Chandler recently completed a helicopter maintenance course at the U.S. Army Helicopter Maintenance School, Fort Eustis, Va., and will be leaving the division shortly for an assignment with an Aircraft Recovery Company in Vietnam.

Division Sgt. Given Award For Services

A 2nd Division noncommissioned officer in charge of division headquarters and grounds is the recipient of a letter of commendation from the commanding general of the "Second to None."

The noncom is Sgt. Chester F. Domin who leaves Fort Benning shortly for overseas duty with the 7th Infantry Division in Korea.

Paragraph two of the letter from Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea enumerates one of the principal reasons for the general's esteem.

"Your ability to consistently accomplish your mission in a superior manner, with a minimum of supervision and support, enabled this headquarters to devote more time to other tasks at hand."

The letter was presented to Sgt. Domin in the office of the commanding general recently. Following the brief ceremony, Gen. Billingslea and Sgt. Domin drank coffee and chatted about the sergeant's closing tour of duty with the "Indianhead" Division and his accomplishments.

"Your foresight and conscientious application to all details made even the major tasks appear simple. Service such as yours is deserving of our gratitude and appreciation."

Custodian Watched Country Club Grow Over Twenty-Year Period

By Pete Shough

Frederick McKnight is a person Fort Benning officers of the past and present have entrusted hundreds of dollars of equipment to and never given it a second thought.

Known as "Freddie" to the thousands of golfers, everybody who has ever swung a golf club at the post country club has had to deal with him at one time or another.

Freddie handles everything at the local club from repairing bent club shafts to replacing worn spikes on the hundreds of golf shoes that are stored under his care.

Freddie first came to Fort Benning from Richmond, Va., while he was with the Army during World War II in 1943. He immediately began to work at the club behind the bar serving refreshments. Upon his release from active service, he took a full time job as club custodian in charge of the reasonably small number of clubs stored there at that time.

Merchandise Grows

Freddie recalls that in the middle of 1940's it was his responsibility to clean the club house, shine golf shoes and maintain the 150 sets of clubs kept there

"It's hard to believe the way the club has grown over the past few years," Freddie relates. "I can remember when I only had 150 sets of clubs to care for, but now I am responsible for over 550 sets of clubs, over 200 pairs of shoes and 75 lockers."

Before the days of the gas and electric golf cart, Freddie was in charge of some 30 or 40 caddies, but now he has a staff of four men to help keep equipment in top-notch shape.

Freddie claims the long hours required of him to keep the club house in top shape don't bother him.

"I just work for the convenience of the golfers," he says. "On weekends, I usually come to work by 6:40 a.m. so the 'early birds' can get in that morning 18-holes before the heat of the day." A 14- or 15-hour days is nothing unusual for the pro shop employee.

The last time the All-Army golf tournament was played at the Fort Benning Country Club, it was Freddie's job to serve all the visitors and players refreshments during the week-long tourney.

"This was the longest, hardest week I have put in since I have been here", he says. "After the tournament was over they put me in the hospital to get a good solid 30-day rest," Freddie stated.

Four Pros

Freddie has worked at the club house under four club pros. Frank Goss was pro here when Freddie started in 1943 and the now Columbus Country Club pro, Charlie Harper, was next in line; Paul Bumann, present Green Island Golf Club pro, replaced Harper. The present pro, Howard Holbrook, succeeded Bumann.

Freddie's biggest thrill comes when a former member drops back to see him. He has seen hundreds of promotions. "A man I knew as captain will often stop back to say 'hello' as a full colonel or possibly a general," he claimed. "Everyone still remembers me by name and makes it a point to say a few words."

Freddie is looking forward to the day when "his little room" or the club storage area is remodeled to provide a little more space. The 11th Air Assault Division will mean hundreds of new golfing members who won't have a place to put their clubs.

The never-ending job of cleaning and repairing golf clubs is in good hands with Freddie McKnight and from the way it looks it always will be.

Freddie is married to the former Odell Butler of Phenix City, Ala. The couple has nine children.

Nelson Claims 'Every Job' Around Club

A face that has been seen around the post Country Club for many years is that of Nelson Jefferson.

Nelson, who first started at the club as a caddie in 1930, is in charge of the driving range and the 900 dozen golf balls that are available for practice.

Through the years, Nelson has seen many changes at the club. During the war years, Nelson claims his job included just about everything. He worked behind the bar, on the course, caddied and helped mow the greens.

Nelson, who is the father of nine children one of which is serving with the Army in Alaska, has caddied for sev-

Maru Double Decides It As TSB Defeats 197th

The Student Brigade pushed over three runs in the top of the twelvth inning to win a cliff-hanger from the 197th Infantry Brigade Monday night at Gowdy Field by a final score of 5 to 2.

The winning run scored when losing pitcher J. R. Miller walked Jesus Herrans, who went around to third when on a wild pick-off attempt and a bad throw to second by first-baseman Charlie Perry.

Ralph Maru promptly plated Herrans with a double to the left field corner, and two more runs scored later in the inning as the 197th infield faltered.

Newcomer Mike Carricarte and Miller were hooked up in a beautiful duel, for seven innings before Carricarte tired in the eighth and was relieved by righthander Gary Moston. Moston continued the duel however, forcing Juan Martinez to hit into a fast double play, and after nine the score was all knotted at 1 to 1.

Moston almost won his own ball game leading off the tenth when he smacked Miller's first pitch for a home run, a prodigious poke that sailed over the left-field fence near the light-pole and bounced over two streets to the printing plant.

Lost His Lead

Moston couldn't hold his lead however, as he walked Ken Johnson in the home half of the tenth, and Martinez blasted a triple to the rightfield fence. The big righthander held the rest of the way, giving up a single to Jessie Rigdon in the eleventh and a single to Ron Blevins in the twelvth before opening the exits by striking out Johnson and getting Martinez to ground out to Maru.

Carricarte struck out ten in first appearance for TSB, but eight walks kept him in hot water most of the game. Miller went the distance for the 197th and struck out twelve.

Ralph Maru led the TSB hitting attack with four hits in six trips to the plate. Martinez' triple was the big blow for the 197th.

TSB's win Monday night put them two full games in front of the pack with four games to go, and at the present time Bob Kinnard has the hottest team in the league.

Baseball Banter

By Ted Williamson

Bench-jockeying is a widely practiced art in baseball, and usually each team has one member who is highly proficient at it. The three clubs in the local circuit all have artists of this nature, and even the 498th Medics, before retiring from the league, had a good one.

Probably the loudest and most nerve - shattering is Steve Muehl, a pitcher for the 197th Infantry Brigade. However, Ralph Maru of The Student Brigade and Paul Durak of The Infantry Center Troop Command are not far behind when it comes to unnerving an opponent.

John Dillon, who was a pitcher for the 428th before that club left the league, was also a good bench-jockey, and when he wasn't pitching, he could be spotted on the step to the dug-out, yelling at the top of his lungs. Although Muehl must be considered the best at present, both Maru and Durak need only a little more polish before they become top - notch bench-jockeys.

☆ ☆ ☆

Brother acts are rare in baseball and even more rare in service ball. But we have one at the present time right here at Fort Benning.

Bill Joyce has joined his older brother Jesse on the Student Brigade team. Bill is an outfielder, and if he can supply a little punch to the TSB batting order, he will be a big asset as Bob Kinnard takes his nine down the final stretch to the second half pennant.

Brother Jesse has been a mainstay for TSB for the last two years at shortstop. This year has turned in some fine pitching performances in relief.

☆ ☆ ☆

It would be very difficult for anyone to select the outstanding second - baseman in the Major Unit League. All three teams are strong at this position.

Ralph Maru of TSB would probably get the nod because of his professional experience, but we can't help but admire the play of the other two keystone guardians. Both Eloy Zamora of the 197th and Odlin Iglesias of the Center Troop Command are of the same cut. They are the "hustle, beat 'em any way you can" type.

Of the two, Zamora is probably the better hitter, and he makes the double-play a little better than Iglesias. However "Iggie" is the surest glove man and he also gets on base a lot. All three second-sackers seem to have a steadying influence on their respective infields and provide the backbone of the defense. All in all, this seems to be the strongest position on the field.

☆ ☆ ☆

Skipper Bill Rigney of the Los Angeles Angels recently made a statement that the current edition of the New York Yankees is the greatest ever. This may seem a little rash in view of some of the great Yankee teams of the past. The '63 Bombers are strong defensively, but their pitching staff doesn't seem to be quite as strong as those in the past, even as recent as 1961.

However, with all the injuries the Yanks have suffered, their full potential may not have been realized. But then Rigney may have just been making excuses for all the other American League teams.

☆ ☆ ☆

Owner Charlie Finley of the Kansas City A's is once again making the news with his inclination to move his franchise to another city. Among the cities mentioned have been Dallas, Atlanta and Oakland. Dallas seems the least-likely choice, the main reason being the dispute over football in that city. Atlanta is making a big drive to obtain major-league baseball, but would probably prefer the Milwaukee Brave franchise, which is reportedly in trouble. So, if Mr. Finley can get together with Oakland officials, the A's may have a new home by 1965.

1963 Softball Tournament Is Scheduled

The 1963 Company Level Softball Tournament will be conducted at the WAC Field, Aug. 19-24, according to officials at The Infantry Center Special Services Section.

The championship will be determined by a double elimination with play to be governed by the 1963 Amateur Softball Association rules.

A schedule of tournament games will be published before the tournament, and any team not present at a scheduled contest by game time will forfeit.

The following major units may submit one team to play in the tourney: 2nd Infantry Division, 11th Air Assault Division (Test), 197th Infantry Brigade, Student Brigade, 428th Medical Battalion, Martin Army Hospital, Infantry Career Troop Command, and Lawson Army Aviation Command.

Company level teams entered in the tournament will be restricted to units or combinations of units within the Major Command and will not exceed an assigned strength of 250.

Companies, batteries, or detachments in excess of the assigned strength of 250 will conduct an intramural program.

The winning team will represent the unit in the tournament.

Each team may enter 15 uniformed playing members, a manager and a trainer.

Notification of entry must be submitted, in writing, to the sports officer in Briant Wells Field House no later than Aug. 9.

The Infantry Center Special Services officer will furnish officials and game balls for the tournament.

Third Army Tournament

Approximately 90 visiting military personnel will begin arriving at Fort Benning Aug. 18 for the 1963 Third Army Golf Tournament scheduled for Aug. 20-23 at the post Country Club.

Among the visitors from various Third Army posts will be about 40 male officers, five female officers and 45 enlisted personnel, according to officials at The Infantry Center Special Services Section.

At present the greens and fairways at the golf course are in good shape and by tournament time "the conditions should be excellent," golf pro Howard Holbrook said.

Bill Martindale, defending Fort Benning champion, predicted, "With good weather conditions between a 280 and 282 score for the four-round tournament would be enough to win."

Par for the Pine Side of the course where competition will take place is 72 for 18 holes.

A banquet will be held at the Country Club in honor of all participants prior to the tournament.

'62 Statistics Big Challenge To '63 Team

If the 1963 Doughboy football team hopes to surpass the record, compiled by last season's service champs they will have to erase the following records.

The 1962 squad scored 261 points in 10 contests, while limiting the opposition to 59. The most productive quarter was the first when the Doughboys scored 90 points. The least productive was the third or after dinner quarter, when they compiled but 35.

Halfback Bobby Towns and end Fred Murphy headed the scoring department with 36 points each while close behind were seatback Ron Quillen with 30, Sam Stellatella with 27, and Marvin Tibbetts with 24.

eral professional golfers who now are or once were on the PGA tour. The most noted pro he ever caddied for was Jimmy Demaret when the Texas pro played an exhibition round at the local course.

He also has caddied for Dorothy Kirby, well-known woman professional from Atlanta.

Nelson claims maintaining the driving range and dozens of balls hit weekly is a full-time job. On an average weekend Nelson will make as many as 10 trips around the range in his well-protected tractor to retrieve balls. On each trip his pick-ups average 210 golf balls or seven buckets.

Often in sorting through the retrieved balls he finds several balls not marked with the familiar red stripe which were hit off the first tee. These balls can often be purchased at the driving range shack for a low fee.

Nelson and his wife, Jesse May, live in Columbus.

Post Survey Reveals Teeth Often Ignored

By Capt. Robert E. Cross
Preventive Dentistry Officer

A test is being conducted here regarding the condition of gums and underlying bone.

It is a very simple but revealing experiment, in that the condition being checked is very easily recognized.

First of all, the gums are examined for inflammation or redness. All missing teeth are charted, then the teeth are checked for food debris in six areas. The final step involves checking for calculus, or tartar, beneath the gums.

Each patient is asked how many times he brushed his teeth. A few said they hadn't brushed the day before, and most said they had brushed once or twice the previous day.

Results of one day's survey showed only one man who scored 0, or perfect, on all counts. One out of 167 examinees, 186 men, had food debris on their teeth at the time examined, between 7:00 and 11:00 in the morning. Why? They either didn't brush after breakfast, or all had had a snack before examination time. Or, there is one other possibility I overlooked — they failed to properly brush their teeth.

What can you do about this?

First, most of the men were not brushing often enough. This is easily corrected. Remind yourself to brush as often as you know you should. Why ignore a problem you know exists? Go to your dental clinic and learn the proper method if you are not sure now. Next, check your teeth. We have the means with the disclosing tablets which will show any area neglected. Use them, they are an education in themselves.

Remember the importance of your teeth. They are supposed to last you a lifetime — with proper care they will.

Chaplains Trail Men Into Field

When a soldier moves into the field for maneuvers, such as Exercise Swift Strike III, he finds that most of his physical comforts depend upon what he can carry with him in his pack.

But moral or spiritual comforts, being intangible, cannot be rolled up and strapped in like a blanket.

To provide this necessity of life, ministers, priests and rabbis, in the form of Army chaplains, go with the troops whenever an exercise such as Swift Strike takes place. The chaplain will not, of course, follow each company at all times, but the men will find spiritual guidance within easy reach.

The men of Swift Strike III will find that Sunday is not completely a day of rest but neither is it a day without religion.

33 New 'Volunteens' Pinned and 'Capped'

SUSAN BAER (L) PINNED BY MRS. SUMMERS
One of 33 Volunteens Pinned at Hospital

Thirty-three teen-age girls qualified as "Volunteen" Gray Ladies and Staff Aides in recent capping ceremonies at Martin Army Hospital.

After successfully completing 12 hours of training for "Volunteen" Gray Ladies or nine hours for Staff Aides, the candidates were capped by Lt. Col. Muriel Burchfield, chief nurse at the hospital.

They were presented service pins by Mrs. William Summers, chairman of Volunteer Services on the post.

Certificates were presented by Mrs. A. Edward Smith, chairman of the Muscogee County Chapter of the American Red Cross Office of Education Relations.

Col. J. O. Jones, G-1 (personnel officer) of The Infantry Center, addressed the class, expressing praise for their unselfishness in serving the patients and assisting the hospital staff.

Col. William A. Todd Jr., hospital commander, thanked the "Volunteens" for their devotion to the Red Cross Volunteer program.

The graduates were presented by Mrs. William Morgan, "Volunteen" chairman.

Gray Ladies capped included Susan Baer, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Malcolm R. Baer; Penny Boothe, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. George Boothe; Carmen Cruz, daughter of Sgt. and Mrs. C. C Cruz, and Ivie Dendy, daughter of SFC and Mrs. Oliver S Dendy.

Four Officers Assigned To CDC Infantry Agency

Four officers have been assigned to the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency here.

Col. Powell, who commanded the 2nd Battle Group, 3rd Infantry, 7th Infantry Division, in Korea, has been designated chief of the agency's Combat Material Division.

A 1940 graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Col. Powell is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. In World War II, he served with the 8th Infantry and was awarded the Silver Star Medal and the Bronze Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters.

Col. and Mrs. Powell and their four children will reside at 509 Wickersham Ave.

Maj. Elliott, who will be a project officer in the Combat Material Division, comes to the agency from Georgia Institute of Technology, where he received a BS degree in electrical engineering.

A 1950 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., he has attended the Command and General Staff College and is Ranger and airborne qualified. His decorations include the Bronze Star Medal.

Maj. and Mrs. Elliott and their two children, reside at 102-D Running Ave.

Maj. Duggins, also a 1950 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, comes to Fort Benning from Mississippi State University where he received a bachelor of science degree in aero space engineering.

A project officer in the Doctrine and Organization Division, Major Duggins' decorations include a Bronze Star Medal with "V" device. He also is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College.

Maj. Duggins will reside at 117 Wilson Dr., Camellia Apartments.

He and his wife and three children will reside at 1097 Woodburn Dr., Columbus.

'70 Census Saves Cents

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The government is considering taking a "do-it-yourself" census in 1970. The traditional personal interviews would be replaced by mailed-in questionnaires.

Census Director Richard M. Scammon reports the 1960 census cost about $100 million. A saving of $15 million is expected from the mail system.

If the bill which is now pending in the House is passed, the Census Bureau and the Post Office Department would cooperate in drawing up a sample mail list. Scammon plans to mail questionnaires to most areas of the country except where illiteracy is high or there are a great number of transients.

Should the head of a household fail to return his questionnaire, a census enumerator would be dispatched to obtain the information in the customary style.

Preliminary tests of the system have brought more accurate and complete information than person-to-person interviews, according to Scammon.

Vinson Honored After 48 Years In U.S. Congress

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Rep. Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, has received the Navy's Distinguished Public Service Award for his "unparalleled guidance and support to our Armed Services."

In presenting the award to Mr. Vinson, Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth said, "Mr. Vinson, more than any other person, was responsible for the pre-WWII naval construction program, which ultimately brought into being the two-ocean Navy, our victory at sea, and our present superiority in sea power.

"Progressive in his thinking and possessed of rare wisdom and versatility, he has given the Armed Services of this country unparalleled guidance and support."

Two-hundred guests, including Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, attended a reception and a special full-dress Marine Corps parade honoring the Georgian, who has served in the House longer than anyone else.

Engineers Finally Get Turnabout

Company D, 806th Engr. Bn. (Construction), which has been supporting the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) with construction of heliports and rehabilitation of buildings, saw a turnabout last week when they received some support from the 11th Division.

The men of Delta Company were building a control tower at the site of the giant Jamestown Road Heliport. The building of the "house" atop the 34 foot tower required the lifting of a lot of construction materials.

When their crane was deadlined, "C" Battery, Aerial Rocket, 11th Division brought in a helicopter.

Because the chopper was available the construction was slowed only momentarily.

2 Mormon Advisers Sent Here

Two missionaries representing the Southern States Mission of the Mormon Church, Headquarters, Salt Lake City, will serve as advisers to Mormon personnel at Fort Benning.

Elder Charles W. Fowkes and Elder James L. Ward will assist 2nd Lt. William C. Bailey as leader of a Mormon Study Group.

The group meets at 7:30 p.m. each Monday in The Infantry Center Chapel.

The study group is affiliated with the Church of Jesus Christ Latter Day Saints Second Ward in Columbus. The Second Ward conducts worship services at 10:15 a.m. and 5 p.m. each Sunday.

Elders Fowkes and Ward have been officially recognized by the post chaplain, Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, to promote religious activities for Mormon military personnel and their dependents.

The chaplain said it is customary for a church to authorize representatives at installations where there is no chaplain of that faith. The appointment of such missionaries is made in coordination with the Committee on Military Chaplains in the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Mormon personnel who are interested in the study group may telephone Lt. Bailey at 545-7901 or Elders Fowkes and Ward at 296-8357.

New Citizen Happy to Be American

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (ANF) — "That first night in the United States, with the doors unlocked and left open," made a lasting impression on U. S. Army soldier Reno Roop, an Estonian refugee who boasts with profound pride of his new American citizenship.

"That first impression is still vivid to me now, for it is symbolic of the simplicity of the freedom which all Americans enjoy," said Roop.

Reno Roop is a specialist four with the 1st Battle Group, 12th Infantry, 4th Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash. He is one of the thousands of displaced persons, who during World War II, lived under the harsh rule of the Nazis and later the Soviets.

When he was five, his father was deported by the Russians to serve in the Soviet Army. Later, in 1944, he and his mother were part of the mass exodus of Estonians who escaped the on-slaught of the Red Army.

Sp4 Roop came to this country in 1953 with his mother and stepfather, a U.S. Army officer and settled in North Carolina.

Medical Science Has Eliminated Many Diseases

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Diseases which struck panic in military camps years ago are today considered rare as far as fatalities are concerned.

A report from the National Health Education Committee here said advances in medical research have extended the average life expectancy among U.S. citizens to slightly above 70 years. In 1943 the average life expectancy was 63.3 years.

Fatal diseases almost wiped out by research include flu, polio, tuberculosis and rheumatic fever. The death rate from these diseases have each dropped 83 per cent or more since 1943.

The committee disclosed that some 2½ million Americans, alive in 1961, would be dead today were it not for research.

Heart disease and cancer accounted for 71 per cent of all deaths in 1961.

Editor Calls AR-15 Rifle A Success

In today's world of super bombs, missiles and spacecraft, a major controversy in U. S. weaponry has centered around the American soldier's basic weapon — the M14 rifle.

For a clear insight into the present situation, contributing editor Frank Rathbun, presents an interesting summary, "The Rifle In Transition," in the August issue of ARMY.

Rathbun claims the AR15, the M14's possible successor, is one of the most recent and probably the most successful development in the trend for light and lethal weapons. Noting the AR15 has survived the best test of all — combat in South Vietnam — he cautions that some U. S. officials consider it a weapon of "limited use" and an interim rifle like the M14.

Throughout the weapons controversy, the former combat Infantryman believes the American soldier has never been less than well armed.

Most important lesson of the controversy, he believes, is that we recognize its procurement decision dilemma — when to throw away the old, when to spend a pile of money on something new, and when to hold on to the old until something really better comes along.

166 Cadets Commissioned At ROTC Graduation Exercise

Fort Benning's Stroup Field was the scene of a mass swearing-in ceremony last Friday as 166 ROTC cadets were commissioned as second lieutenants, eight of them in the Regular Army, and 158 in the Reserves.

The newly commissioned officers were members of a group of 1,800 cadets from 39 colleges and universities from the southeastern part of the United States, Puerto Rico and schools in Kansas and Indiana, who have spent the past six weeks in ROTC summer training on the post.

Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, was guest speaker at the closing exercises.

Commending the young college students for their work during the camp, Gen. Norton said, "I am sure you share with me the thought that it is a great privilege, as well as a patriotic duty, to grow up in this great country of ours and become one of its senior citizens while having served in uniform."

Gen. Norton told the cadets that the training they have received at Fort Benning will better qualify them as either Reserve or Regular Army officers.

Following the administration of the oath to the 166 second lieutenants, outstanding cadets received recognition.

Cadet Roy S. Fisher was presented an Association of the U. S. Army medal for his selection as outstanding cadet of the camp. He attends Mississippi State University at State College, Miss.

Cadet John M. Foxworth of Fort Benning, The Citadel, and Cadet Jack S. Williams from University of Fla., at Gainesville, outstanding cadets in the 1st and 2nd Battalions, received watches.

Transistor radios were presented to the outstanding cadet in each company. They included Cadet David R. Floyd, Clemson (S.C.) College, Company A; Cadet Addison L. Binkley, Auburn (Ala.) University, Company B; Cadet Wade H. St. John III, The Citadel, Company C; Cadet Alexander W. Patterson, University of Georgia, in Athens, Company D; Cadet Marion E. Francis, University of Tennessee in Knoxville, Company E.

Cadet Ronald F. Geiger, Florida State University, Tallahassee, Company F; Cadet James A. Beavers, Middle Tennessee State College in Murfreesboro, Company G; Cadet Jeffrey Fletcher University of Southern Mississippi in Hattiesburg, Company H; Cadet Robert L. Voelkel, University of Florida, Company I, and Cadet James T. Terrell, Stetson University in DeLand, Company K.

A plaque for the best company during the six weeks of training was presented to Company K. Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, made the presentation.

A second plaque, for athletic prowess, was presented by Gen. Norton, to Company B. The athletic award was based upon competition July 25 at Doughboy Stadium when the ROTC Camp staged a field day of intercompany events.

The 1,800 cadets paraded in company formation on Gordon Field Thursday afternoon. Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, deputy commanding general of The Infantry Center was local commander in the review. Cadet George L. Youngblood, a student at the Citadel, was brigade commander.

The color guard at both the review and the closing exercises for the camp included Cadets James C. Blakly, a student at The Citadel; Henry A. Arnold, Mercer University in Macon, Ga.; Ruben M. Cansler of Georgia Tech and Franklyn E. Barton, North Georgia College in Dahlonega.

Two Clerks Cited As 'Best' of 58th

Sp4 Larry Harris, Headquarters Company, 58th Infantry, and Sp4 John J. Schwartz, B Company, 58th Infantry, tied for honors as "Top Company Clerk" in the 1st Battalion (Mechanized) 58th Infantry.

They were selected on the basis of their knowledge of personnel actions and an inspection of their unit's files. Both attained scores of 140 out of a maximum 150 points on the combined inspection test.

COMING HOME . . . Second Lt. Richard Herman and his bride sit atop an artillery caisson as they travel through main post to the lieutenant's home unit, the 2nd Battalion (Composite) 10th Artillery of the 197th Infantry Brigade. An old tradition in artillery units, the caisson ride was revived for the occasion. Lt. Col. Wallis E. McClain, battalion commander welcomed them. The couple were married June 8 in Tuscaloosa, Ala. Lt. Herman is assistant executive officer of Battery C.

THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF THE BROTHERS GRIMM is designed for the whole family. It is a sensitive story of two famous story-telling brothers. The stars, Laurence Harvey, Claire Bloom and Karl Boehm add a magical touch to the magic of the great stores making magic entertainment on the screen. It is a spectacular classic in color.

DRUMS OF AFRICA, starring Frankie Avalon and Mariette Hartley is an adventure drama in color. The hero crosses jungle rivers, through untouched forests, defying forbidden lands to rescue the lovely young girl-captive of the slavers who raid and ravage the jungle for humans.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE EXPLOSIVE GENERATION is a story of youth on the rampage. The stars are William Shatner, Patty McCormack and Lee Kinsolving. A group of young people fight with ideas instead of switchblades. The arena for the fight is a highschool, where teenagers have, until now, been depicted as weapon toting rebels without causes.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE GIRL HUNTERS, starring Mickey Spillane, Shirley Eaton and Lloyd Nolan is a classic Mickey Spillane, mystery. It marks the first time that Spillane has played his mythical private eye, Mike Hammer. Accepting the responsibility for the disappearance and probable death of his beautiful secretary, Hammer follows one lead after another and finds that each trail invariably ends in another murder.

Little Theater to Open '63-'64 Season Oct. 16 With 'The Lark'

"The Lark," a drama written by French playwrite Jean Anouilh and adapted for the American stage by Lillian Hellman, will be the opening production of the Fort Benning Little Theater's 1963-64 season.

Production dates for this play have been set for October 16, 17, 18 and 19. Open tryouts for approximately 30 speaking and nonspeaking roles will be held in the Little Theater Playhouse, building 2519, on Fort Benning's Main Post.

The post's theater group is open to all interested military and civilian personnel. Production staff and crew for "The Lark" are now being assembled and persons interested in any phase of this production are urged to contact Lt. James Marmon, president of the group, at 545-4379.

Lt. Marmon announced this week that "The Lark" will be staged and directed by Sp5 Peter Tatistcheff, who serves the Information Office of the 2nd Infantry Division as editor of the 2nd Division section of The Bayonet. Sp5 Tatistcheff is known to local audiences for his work in such productions as "Tea and Sympathy," "The Bald Soprano," "Guys and Dolls, and "The Fantasticks."

"The Lark," says Lt. Marmon, "provides fresh insight into the historic magnetism of Joan of Arc, the warrior saint who rallied the ragged armies of 15th century France to victory over their English captors."

Director Tatistcheff will be casting in mid-August for parts of all ages to play nobles, peasants, churchmen and soldiers of 15th century France and England. Period costumes for the play will be designed by Maida Murray. She has designed costumes for the recent Baker High School productions of "Matchmaker," and "Brigadoon."

The set for the Fort Benning production of "The Lark" is being designed by Peter Jacobsen, a local architect. The setting for this drama is a trial in which the life of the French peasant girl is enacted from the first time she heard "The Voices," to her leading of the French army and her eventual trial and burning.

First Sgt. Russell D. Henry, a veteran of 20 years, is presently first sergeant of 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge).

Sgt. Henry, a native of Lewistown, Penna., is a graduate of numerous military schools, such as Engineer Officers Course at Fort Belvoir, Va.

The Engineer first sergeant graduated from Lewiston Vocational School in 1943 and upon completion of his high school education entered active service. He received basic training at Camp Maxey, Tex.

Sgt. Henry saw World War II combat duty with the 1288th Engineer Battalion from December 1944 to September 1945.

A veteran of the Korean War, Sgt. Henry served with the 2nd Engineer Group and the 84th Engineer Battalion from 1950 to 1952, during which time he received a battlefield commission. After two years of Korean duty, the first sergeant returned to the United States and served as S-3 of the 91st Engineer Battalion at Fort Belvoir.

During his tour of duty at Fort Belvoir, Sgt. Henry saw duty with 502nd Engineer Company, 37th Engineer Battalion and the 547th Engineer Battalion. In 1956, Sgt. Henry was transferred to Europe with the 547th Engineers.

SGT. HENRY

He returned to the States in 1957 and was stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. In February 1958, Sgt. Henry received orders to return to Europe where he served as first sergeant of the 502nd Engineer Company.

In 1959, Sgt. Henry returned to U. S. and his present assignment.

Sgt. Henry's decorations include the Bronze Star, Army Commendation Medal with Cluster and the Nobel Order of Crown of Thailand.

Sgt. Henry is married to the former Katherine V. Penner. The couple has two children; Roger, 9, and Brenda, 7.

TIS to Host Visiting VIP's August 5 to 7

Twenty senior officers from seven Far East countries, who are attending The Army Intelligence School, Fort Holabird, Md., will visit The Infantry School Aug. 5-7 for briefings and demonstrations.

The group is slated to arrive at noon Monday and will be welcomed by Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

While at Fort Benning the officers will be briefed on the Army's ROAD (Reorganization Objectives Army Division) concept and airborne training and will tour Officer Candidate School facilities.

They also will see weapons of the Infantry and Infantry-tank task force in attack demonstrations.

The group is slated to leave Fort Benning about noon Wednesday, Aug. 7.

Standard or Color

The term "standard," so far as organizations are concerned, is interchangeable with the term "color," except that dismounted organizations traditionally use the term "color" while mounted, mechanized and motorized organizations use the term "standard."

11th Division Chaplain Section Growing Along With Troop Units

During the observance of the 188th anniversary of the Chaplains Corps, the Chaplains section of the 11th Air Assault Division held a coffee call at Service Club No. 3 from 9:30 until 10 a.m. All officers and enlisted men of the 11th were invited.

The Chaplains Section of the 11th Air Assault Division began with the assignment of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ray M. Rowland and Chaplain (Capt.) Michael J. Rogers on Feb. 14, 1963, as division chaplain and assistant division chaplains respectively. Upon formal activation of the diversion on Feb. 15, the chaplains began conducting religious services and offering spiritual assistant to men and families arriving daily to join the division.

Since the chapel in the division area was undergoing improvements, services were held in Fredricksburg Hall until March 10. When the reserve summer camp opened in the Harmony Church area, the 11th Chaplains office was used to provide religious coverage. To accomplish this, Chaplain No. 5 was opened and both Catholic and Protestant services were scheduled.

As the training of the division progressed the chaplains assigned made trips to Fort Stewart to arrange religious coverage.

Chaplains (Capt.) Charles R. Gibbs and (Capt.) Ralph S. Spear were the first new arrivals to the section and were assigned to give coverage to the Aviation Group and 1st Air Assault Brigade. They were soon followed by Chaplain (Maj.) Roscoe L. Finnegan, who assumed the duties of assistant division chaplain; Chaplain (Maj.) Weldon F. Wright, 1st Brigade chaplain; Chaplain (Capt.) Gerald K. Hilton, Support Command chaplain and Chaplain (Capt) William R. French Artillery chaplain.

As in the past the chaplains section has always been where the troops are to assist in any way possible to increase the spiritual and moral life of the soldier. More chaplains will be assigned to the division as it increases in size and strength.

Army Officials Meet Industry

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Key management personnel from the Department of Defense and major industrial suppliers will meet during August and September for a series of cost improvement symposiums.

DOD value engineering policy and goals will be the primary subject scheduled for symposiums at five major industrial centers.

The project is under joint sponsorship of DOD and the National Security Industrial Association (NSIA).

NSIA is an association of some 500 industrial concerns of all types and sizes.

Walker Pilots X-15 Craft To New Altitude Record

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —Joseph A. Walker, chief research pilot of NASA's Flight Research Center, Edwards AFB, Calif., has set a record altitude of 350,000 feet (66.3 miles) in the X-15 research aircraft.

Walker surpassed all previous altitude marks for the manned, winged aircraft. The highest previous altitude of 317,750 feet was flown by Maj. Robert M. White, former Air Force project pilot.

Walker reached a top speed of 3,866 mph following launch from a B-52 at 45,000 feet over Smith Ranch Lake, Nev.

He set the record by running the X-15's rocket engine for 85 seconds at full thrust and reaching an altitude of 175,000 feet at burnout. The momentum of the X-15 then carried it to the record height.

Following a careful study of data obtained on the X-15's 600 pounds of instruments, operations officials will determine whether to make another flight to a higher altitude.

Walker's flight was the 90th made in the three X-15 aircraft since the program began in 1959. The X-15 was originally built under joint sponsorship of the Air Force, Navy and NASA, to obtain research data at speeds up to 4,000 mph and altitudes to a maximum of 250,000 feet.

U.S. Engineers To Aid Soldiers In Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AFPS) — A group of U.S. Army Engineers has arrived here to set up a training course for the Indonesian Army to help carry out a civic-action program initiated by President Sukarno last December.

The American engineers, 18 officers and 32 enlisted men, will instruct Indonesians in the use of American equipment, a U.S. Embassy statement said.

Some 400 Indonesian Army men have been chosen for the initial training program, which is scheduled for 14 weeks.

In the civic-action program the Army will participate in such projects as road and bridge building and land reclamation.

Mountain Division Vets Retrace Combat Routes

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Italy was the site of one of the most unusual reunions ever held by a U. S. Army unit.

Two hundred and forty veterans of the Army's famed World War II fighting unit, the U. S. 10th Mountain Division, arrived in Rome in July to retrace the battle route over which they fought 18 years ago.

The 10th, the only U. S. mountain division during World War II, participated in the campaigns of North Apennine and Po Valley.

The route took the veterans from Rome, where they placed a wreath at the tomb of Italy's unknown soldier in Piazza Venezia, to the American Military Cemetery near Florence, where a memorial service honored the division's dead. The group then journeyed to north of Bologna where the division crossed the Po River in April 1945.

Other sites visited during the tour of the battle route were Verona, Lake Garda, Desenzano, Sirmione, Lazise, Bardolino, Garda, Malcesine and Riva.

New Obstacle Course Developed To Build 'Sky Soldier' Confidence

A real swinging affair was held recently in a clearing adjacent to the headquarters of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Members of Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, leaped and jumped and climbed and swung on ropes through a fantastic series of obstacles which comprise the new confidence course built by Infantry Center engineers for the division. The course, which consists of seven obstacles, was designed by the men of Company A.

Trying out the products of their imagination is nothing new to the men of the engineer company. They were among the pioneers in the division in learning the art of rappelling from the training towers which they erected at various locations throughout the division area.

First Obstacle

The first obstacle of the course, "Balancing Logs," consists of a series of three, 16-foot logs, set at various angles to each other. The objective is to walk or run along the logs, each in succession, without losing balance until reaching the end.

Obstacle number two, "The Inclining Wall," is a solid board wall, approximately six feet high, set about a 60 per cent angle with the ground. The individual approaches the underside of the wall, grasping it at the top. He then pulls himself up and over and slides or jumps to the ground.

The "Swing, Stop and Jump," obstacle number three, has two parts. The first part is a log braced 20 feet off the ground, with several ropes suspended from it. Approximately 15 feet away is another log about three feet off the ground. The object is to gain momentum with a short run, grasp the rope and swing to the top of the second log. The rope is then released and the individual jumps to the ground.

Slide for Life

Obstacle number four, "Slide For Life," is a 40-foot tower with cross beams for climbing. Two ropes are strung to posts about 20 feet away, with the far ends only four feet off the ground. The object is to climb to the top of the tower and slide to the ground, using either of the ropes, with the body weight spread evenly between arms and legs wrapped around the rope.

The "Sky-scraper," obstacle number five, is a series of four posts set in the ground in the form of a square. These posts hold a series of five platforms around them. Each platform is a different distance from the one below it. The average distance is six feet with the top one 30 feet off the ground. The object is to jump or climb to the first platform then use any means possible to climb the rest of the way to the top and back down again.

High Climb

Obstacle number six, "The Confidence Climb," is a 40-foot high ladder. It has 11 slats in it, each a different distance apart. The object is to climb to the top of the ladder, go over it, and come down the opposite side.

Obstacle number seven, appropriately called "The Tough One," combines five obstacles into one. The individual first climbs a 35-foot rope, then descends a ladder to a platform. The platform is a series of latticed-worked logs, suspended 15 feet off the ground. He crosses the platform and slides down another rope to the ground. Next he runs and jumps over a log held four feet off the ground completing the course.

The over-all purpose of the confidence course is to help individuals gain confidence in themselves and to keep them in good physical condition. Close supervision is exercised at all times to prevent injuries since some of the obstacles are quite high and can also become slippery when wet.

Astronaut Candidates Named

HOUSTON (AFPS) — Seventy-one military pilots have been recommended to the manned spacecraft center as astronaut candidates.

The 71 recommendations include 26 from the Air Force, 34 Navy men, 10 Marines and one Army man.

A total of 271 applications have been received this year, including 200 civilian volunteers. Three of the volunteers are women.

The total of 271 applicants was 18 more than the 253 who applied last year.

COLORS FOR FLAG

On June 14, 1777, the Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, resolved: "That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

N. C. Reservists Arrive on Post

Approximately 75 staff and faculty members of the Raleigh U. S. Army Reserve School from North Carolina, are at Fort Benning for the USAR Infantry Officer's Career School, which started July 28.

The Raleigh School, which is under the direction of Col. Julian M. Fore, will conduct the training of approximately 700 student officers from the Third and Fourth Army areas. These men are a part of 25,000 Reservists of the XII U. S. Army Corps who are participating in annual training this summer.

Protestants Set Retreat For 10th

A Protestant Youth Retreat will be conducted from 8:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Aug. 10 at The Infantry Center Recreational Area.

Sponsored by the Follow-Me Crusader and Disciples Clubs; three youth fellowship groups on the post, the retreat will be under the direction of personnel of the Religious Education Center of the Chaplains Section.

All Fort Benning young people from the fifth grade through high school are invited, including boys and girls who have just finished the fourth grade.

The theme for the retreat will be "Christ for Me."

The day's activities will include music, Bible study, worship, discussion groups and recreation, closing with a Vesper Service around a camp fire on a nearby sand bar.

Each individual is requested to carry a lunch for the noon meal but the evening meal will be provided.

Cold drinks will be furnished for the campers. There will be a watermelon cutting in the afternoon.

Each participant should take a Bible, notebook and pencil to the retreat.

Transportation to and from the retreat will be provided.

A bus and cars will load at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2606, on Dixie Road, in time to depart at 8:30 a.m. and will return to the Center at 9 p.m.

Reservations should be made before 9 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 7, by telephoning the office of the director of religious education, 545-1334.

U.S. and U.K. Join Forces to Aid India Against Possible Air Attack

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — An agreement has been reached between the governments of the United States, United Kingdom and India on certain measures to stregthen India's defense against possible future air attack from Communist China.

The measures include:

The United States will provide India with radar and related communications equipment, initially in the form of mobile units, subsequently in the form of fixed radar installations. The United States will retain title to the mobile units, which will be withdrawn when the fixed radar installations are provided.

Training of Indian technicians by the United States in the operation and maintenance of mobile fixed radar installations and related communications equipment.

Elements of the U.S. Air Force and the Royal Air Force will join with the Indian Air Force in periodic, joint training exercises in India.

The above measures follow the findings of the Commonwealth-U.S. Air Defense Missions which visited India earlier this year.

A State Department announcement said that in the event of renewed Communist Chinese aggression against India, the United States has agreed, pursuant to the present agreement to consult with the government of India regarding possible measures to strengthen India's air defense in the light of the situation existing at the time.

The new agreement has not involved any commitment on the part of the U.S. government to come to India's assistance in the event of a renewed Chinese Communist attack.

Equipment for the fixed radar installations will be furnished to India under the terms of a Nov. 1, 1962, agreement between India and the United States regarding assistance to the government of India for the purpose of defense against Chinese Communist aggression.

Gen. Norton Opens 'Shoot' At Perry

Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, officially opened the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, Aug. 2 when he addressed more than 2,000 civilian and military pistol shooters at the Small Arms Firing School (SAFS).

The school, which is a traditional training session, is conducted by personnel of The Infantry School and is under the general supervision of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice.

The three-day pistol course, along with its counterpart, the rifle course which begins Aug. 19, is designed to develop instructors who can properly train others in their communities and organizations in the use of small arms.

Maj. William W. Gray, SAFS director, heads a faculty composed of instructors mainly from the Army Marksmanship Training Unit, The Infantry School's Weapons Department, Provost Marshal General's School, law enforcement agencies and the National Rifle Association and guest civilian shooters.

Among the subjects taught at the school are zeroing and preliminary preparations; positions, grip and breath control, sight alignments, slow, timed and rapid fire techniques, and ANNUAL SAFETY AWARD . . . Col. Robert M. Williams, (L), commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade presents the permanent brigade Safety Award to MSgt Paul A. Ingram, safety NCO of the 2nd Battalion (Composite) 10th Artillery. The award is the annual safety award and goes to the unit that has the least amount of chargeable accidents and the highest score on the monthly inspections.

Col. Earl F. Holton Takes Over TICTC

Coming to The Infantry Center from Korea, Col. Earl F. Holton has taken over duties as commander of The Center Troop Command.

Col. Holton, who is succeeding Col. Adrian Hoebeke who was boosted to deputy post commander, is a 1953 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy.

The new commander, whose two-year tour in Korea was with the Military Assistance Advisory Group, is no newcomer to Fort Benning circles. His first assignment here was with the 29th Infantry from 1936 to 1938. From 1938 to 1940 he attended courses at The Infantry School including the officers course and the commanders course.

During World War II, Col. Holton served with the 79th Infantry Division in the European Theater as battalion commander of the 315th Infantry. Campaigns included the Normandy Invasion, Northern France, Rhineland and Central Europe.

From 1946 to 1947 Col. Holton saw duty again at Fort Benning, this time as a member of The Infantry School.

In 1948 Col. Holton was graduated from the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

From 1952 to 1954, the West Point graduate served in Alaska and was brought back to the Third Army area in '54 to Third Army Headquarters.

The Military Assistance Advisory Group to Taiwan, Nationalist China, was his next duty station, from where he moved to the U. S. Army Infantry Board here.

Col. Holton is holder of the Silver Star, Bronze Star with oak leaf cluster, Purple Heart with oak leaf cluster and Army Commendation Medal.

JCOC Set Sept. 25 At Benning

The Department of Defense's 33rd Joint Civilian Orientation Conference is scheduled Sept. 22-28 and Fort Benning again will host the approximately 150 principal conferees and Continental Army Command guests for the Army phase Sept. 25-26.

The Infantry School will be the second stop on the tour. Principals and guests will first visit the Norfolk, Va., area for Navy-Marine training, and conclude their orientation with Air Force training at Eglin AFB, Fla.

The purpose of JCOC is fourpointed: (1) to serve as a military report to Americans and to inform, to be informed and to broaden the base of public understanding; (2) to acquaint leading citizens from all categories of civilian endeavor with the programs, policies and posture of the Department of De-

Top CISM Spots Taken by AMTU

For the second year in succession, men of The Infantry Center based Army Marksmanship Training Unit have taken all ten berths on the rifle and pistol team representing the U.S. military in the Council of International Military Sports (CISM).

The team, which will fire in the matches at Lahti, Finland, Aug. 8-15, will be captained by Maj. Fremont Burdick, also of the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Five riflemen and five pistolmen who were selected through all-service competition comprise the team which will carry America's shooting hopes against top competitors from most of the free world nations.

Rifle team members who will be firing the M-1 rifle in competition are Capt. Phillip Canella, this year's rifle team captain and a returnee from last year's CISM team; Sgt. Willie D. Jordan, holder of the Army individual rifle championship; SFC Tolani Teleso, the first Somoan to win the distinguished rifle shooters badge; Sgt. Charles Davis and MSgt. Francis McNerney.

Named to the pistol team were Capt. Cecil Wallis, pistol team captain and one of a handful of U.S. shooters to

Col. Schuck Is New SJA Head

Col. Edwin G. Schuck has succeeded Col. V. Homer Drissel as Staff Judge Advocate of The Infantry Center.

Col. Drissel has been assigned to the U. S. Army Judiciary Board of Review, Office of the Judge Advocate General, Washington.

COL. SCHUCK

Col. Schuck came to the post from Hawaii where he has served as deputy legal officer to CINCPAC (Commander - in - Chief, Pacific) since 1960.

From 1956 to 1960, he was chief of the International Law Division, Office of the Judge Advocate General in the Pentagon in Washington.

Col. Schuck served at Headquarters, U.S. Army Europe in Heidelberg, Germany, from 1952 to 1955 in successive assignments as chief of military affairs and chief of military justice in the judge advocate's office. He has served overseas 9 years.

Col. Schuck received his undergraduate education at The City College, New York City, where he was graduated in 1938 with a B.A. degree. He also holds an M.A. degree from Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Medford, Mass., and a bachelor of law degree from Columbia University School of Law in New York City.

Service schools he has attended include the former Coast Artillery School at Fort Monroe, Va. in 1941, and the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in 1943.

Col. Schuck was a member of the faculty at the Coast Artillery School from 1941 to 1943.

Col. Schuck is a member of the American Bar Association and from 1958 to 1960, served as chairman of the association's Status of Forces Committee, International Law section.

The colonel is the author of numerous published articles including "Concurrent Jurisdiction Under the NATO Status of Forces Agreement," which appeared in Columbia (University) Law Review in 1957, "Status of Armed Forces Abroad," Naval War College Review, 1958, and "Trial of Civilian Personnel by Foreign Courts," Military Law Review, 1958, a publication of the Judge Advocate General's School in Charlottesville, Va.

AU Branch Sets Registration For Sept. 3 to 7

The post branch of American University announced today that registration for Term I will be held Sept. 3 through 7.

Classes are scheduled to begin Sept. 8.

The post branch offers a choice of 18 resident college courses for military personnel and dependents. Cost for military personnel attending with government tuition assistance is $13.50 per course. Without this assistance, each course is $54.

University officials explained that credit hours completed may be used to accomplish a Department of the Army two-year college evaluation, to gain a degree, to acquire MOS proficiency, to qualify for selection in the Army enlisted training program in civilian educational institutions or to lead to a teaching certificate.

For further information about the university or the courses offered, telephone 545-5936.

Third Army Tournament Set Aug. 20

The Infantry Center Special Services Section has announced that the 1963 Third Army Golf Tournament will be played at the post Country Club Aug. 20-23.

Club Pro Howard Holbrook said he expects about 90 entries in the 72-hole tourney, representing almost every Army installation in the area. Among the golfers will be five WAC officers who will compete among themselves for the women's championship.

Fort Benning champion, Bill Martindale, a strong choice of post golfers for the title, predicts that a score of 280 or 282 will win the tournament.

The competition is set on the Country Club's Pine Side course which boasts a par of 72 strokes, so if Martindale's prediction is accurate, the winner must shave eight strokes off par during the tourney.

Holbrook reports that club officials expect the greens and fairways to be in excellent shape by tee-off time.

Winner of last year's tournament was Hugh Royer Jr., a native of Columbus, who was on active duty due to the Berlin crisis call-up.

fense; (3) to give a large segment of the American public a better understanding of national defense policies and programs through the conferees, who return to their communities with firsthand knowledge, and, (4) to develop public support through an informed citizenry.

Principal JCOC conferees, selected by the Department of Defense from various sections of the United States, represent many facets of civilian life. Selection procedures used are to assure that a geographical cross-section of American business, finance, industry, labor, farming, civic organizations, communications media and the professions is represented.

During the tour, conferees bear the expenses, with the exception of transportation from Washington to the military installations and return.

Conferees and CONARC guests tentatively are slated to arrive at Fort Benning at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 25.

Some of the demonstrations to be conducted during JCOC include weapons of the Infantry, Rangers in action, airborne training and a reinforced rifle company in defense, as well as other phases of training at The Infantry School.

Busy MP Commended 4th Time

A military policeman, who has handled the problem of steady traffic flow at one of main posts busiest intersections for the past six months, has recently been commended for his outstanding ability to cope with problems and for his courteous attitude.

Spc4 Mack E. Fennell, a member of the traffic platoon of The Infantry Center Troop Command's Military Police Company, received not just one but four letters of commendation from military and civilian drivers who motor to and from the post via the Vibbert Avenue and Sigerfoos Road intersection.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas F. Daley, deputy post chaplain, was the first to commend the Europe bound sentinel. Chaplain Daley commended Spc Fennell on his professional and courteous manner in dealing with the traffic and especially lauded his neat appearance and friendly smile.

A civilian employee, Mrs. Josephine B. Haggard, expressed the same sentiments as Chaplain Daley with an emphasis on the military policeman's kindness and attention displayed to children.

Capt. Mary L. Murphree, chief of the Funds Division of the Central Post Fund, and Lt. Col. Howard B. Wells, TIC Provost Marshal, also commended Fennell on his fine job and the credit he is to the Military Police Corps.

SFC Joseph P. Martin, traffic sergeant of the traffic platoon, brought out that Spc4 Fennell's duties also include escorting VIP's and helping with all official ceremonies.

He is one of 17 of the traffic platoon who are engaged in the same kind of activities.

Tickets on Sale For 'Opry' Show

Muscogee Exchange Club has announced sale of tickets to three shows which it will sponsor at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium at 3, 8 and 10 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 24.

Announcement was also made that tickets are to go on sale today at several Columbus and Phenix City locations.

The performances will be headlined by Grand Ole Opry stars Hank Snow, Carl and Pearl Butler, the Willis Brothers, Jimmy Newman, Dottie West and others.

Proceeds from the shows will be used to benefit youth activities in the area, according to club president L. B. Kent.

Ralph Gilbert, chairman of ticket sales, quoted the price at $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children.

Bay of Pigs Vets Finish Basic Course at TIS

Two - hundred and seven members of the 2506th Cuban Brigade were graduated from The Infantry School last week.

Maj. Gen. Daniel A. O'Connor, deputy Third Army commander, gave the baccalaureate address and presented awards and diplomas at the ceremonies held Aug. 2 in Theater No. 1.

The class completed a 20-week basic Infantry officers course under the Defense Department plan to permit voluntary induction of qualified Cubans for U. S. military training.

Combat Vets

Veterans of the Bay of Pigs invasion, the members of the class hold commissions as second lieutenants or ensigns in the Armed Forces of the United States.

Gen. O'Connor presented a plaque for high M-1 rifle qualification to 2nd Lt. Jose Dearing-Gonzalez, Marine Corps reserve.

A plaque for high physical combat proficiency went to 2nd Lt. Juan A. Monte-Pelaez, Army.

Student company commander was 2nd Lt. Ernesto A. Oliva-Gonzalez. Translator at the graduation was 1st Lt. Carmelo Avila. Class adviser was Maj. Merido Torres.

Raft Design Earns Cash

WASHINGTON (AFPS) —A life raft — first used under emergency conditions by Cmdr. M. Scott Carpenter — has won $1,000 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for its inventors.

The non-conventional life raft was designed by Matthew I. Radnofsky and Glenn A. Shewmake of the Manned Spacecraft Center, NASA.

The new raft has been included in the Mercury survival kit of every manned orbit beginning with "Friendship 7," flown by Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. Packed with five pounds of water it takes up 12 x 8 x 8 inches.

In Carpenter's case, he overshot his landing by approximately 200 miles, climbed out of his spacecraft, inflated the life raft and waited alongside "Aurora 7" for assistance.

G-4 Employee Awarded Civilian Service Medal

A Fort Benning employee has received the Army's second highest award for civilian service.

Dock B. Slaughter has been presented the Meritorious Civilian Service Medal by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center.

The citation accompanying the medal read, in part, "Dock B. Slaughter has received official commendation. . . .for meritorious service as supervisory program analysis officer, G-4 Section, U. S. Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning, Ga., from Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 1962. During this period he demonstrated superior professional competence in the performance of his duties."

The citation continued, "He has been particularly outstanding as G-4 action officer for the Command Channel Stock Fund project and rendered valuable assistance in developing and implementing an installation plan to centralize technical service supply, accounting and storage operations. His enviable record reflects great credit upon himself and the Department of the Army."

The citation was signed by Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, commanding general of Third Army.

Slaughter has far exceeded the requirements for satisfactory performance of his responsibilities at Fort Benning, officials said.

In his capacity as budget officer for the logistics program, he normally maintains a balanced program among 14 logistics activities. During the Berlin and Cuban crises, which arose during the period for which Slaughter was cited, he demonstrated "outstanding administrative and managerial ability in reprogramming fund and personnel resources to cope with these exceptional circumstances," officials added.

Col. Dale D. Dixon, Infantry Center director of logistics, said, "His farsighted and intelligent approach to the unusual problems created by these two crises was instrumental in maintaining an effective logistics program."

In the area of stock fund management, Slaughter is credited with outstanding performance that has been recognized throughout the Continental Army Command, officials said.

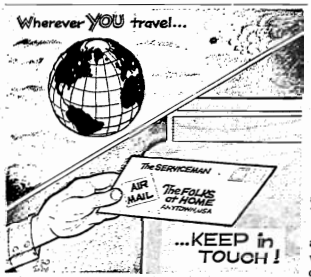
Express the Meaning Of Freedom for You

We service people are great ones for writing letters, especially when we are separated by long distances from our loved ones. We write home to the family, to friends, to relatives, describing the sights we have seen, the people we have met. And once a year, if we are really on the ball, we can write a letter to some people most of us have never met.

Their address—Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. This year they are asking to hear from us on the topic of "What Can I Do for Freedom?" in a letter of 500 words or less. And of course, as in the past, there are incentives in the form of 101 cash awards with the top winner receiving a sizeable $1,000.

The money is a nice reason for taking part in the Letter Awards Program. However, it is not the most important. If we sit down and ask ourselves the question "What Can I Do For Freedom?," we may realize that we have not been applying ourselves to this goal in the manner we should. Also we may come up with a clearer idea on just what we can do for freedom.

By being in uniform, service personnel are already actively engaged in defending their country, which is tantamount to doing something for freedom. The next step is to get it down on paper. Don't put it off; beat the Nov. 1 deadline. Write your letter today. (AFPS)



Ex-President Hoover To Be 89 Saturday

Herbert Hoover will be 89 years old on Aug. 10. It is a ripe age — and one can only hope that the 31st President of the United States will be with us for many years to come.

Few men have seen so much of the world or done so much for the world as Mr. Hoover. He has known triumph and tragedy, victory and defeat, exaltation and despair, all beyond the ken of most mortals. In private life and in public, whatever the destinies of the moment, he has gone resolutely ahead as his conscience and his heart and intellect directed. And he has emerged a wise and mellow man, whose friendships and loyalties are beyond numbering.

It is for his work on behalf of the hungry, the dispossessed and the downtrodden that Herbert Hoover will be best remembered in history — and it is history that, finally, separates wheat from chaff and presents a man whole in the context of his time. Mr. Hoover started from humble origins but knew financial success at an early age. Then he divorced himself from commerce and turned to public life. Through wars and revolutions his was the guiding hand that saved millions from misery, pestilence, starvation, and death.

Happy birthday, Herbert Hoover! The civilized world will echo that fine old greeting.

Capitol Notes

A House record which stood for 45 years has been toppled by Rep. Bob Sikes (D., Fla.). Now in his 12th consecutive term, the 57-year-old Appropriations Committee member has served in the House longer than any previous Florida Representative. The prior record (22 year's service) was established in 1917. Congressman Sikes, an Army Reserve major general, took his House seat in 1941 when Florida had only five Representatives. Today there are 12 and Sikes has been dean of the delegation for the last dozen years. During WWII, he temporarily resigned to enter the Army.

* * *

Personal income—the total of all wages, salaries, fees and other payments to persons—set a record in June as it climbed steadily for the fourth consecutive month. The seasonally adjusted annual rate was $462.1 billion, a gain of $2 billion over May and $20 billion over June of 1962, the Commerce Department's office of business economics said.

Servicemen Helped Save $1 Billion

How would you like to save $1 billion? Most servicemen find it hard saving a few bucks, much less a billion. But in a round-about way we all played a big part in the $1 billion savings for Fiscal Year 1963 announced by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Certainly we cannot take full credit for the saving, but the fact cannot be discounted that through concerted efforts by individual servicemen throughout the world quite an impressive chunk of the overall total was saved.

There still is much more that can be done, and since "saving starts at home," we can make Fiscal Year 1964 even thriftier.

We can all do our part by conserving supplies and utilities. In the barracks, messhalls and our working spaces, money is being burned and thrown down the drain in the form of unnecessary heat, lighting and water waste.

As individuals, we can avoid mishandling of government equipment and we can put new emphasis on preventive maintenance. Also any beneficial suggestions that could reduce costs or save time should be presented to the proper authority via the Incentive Awards program.

There were many ways in which the individual serviceman helped save $1 billion during the past fiscal year and just as many, if not more, ways to save a similar amount in the current fiscal year. (AFPS)

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

What Do You Think?

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Henry F. Ackermann

There are three things which are the measure of a man: what he does, what he says, and what he thinks.

These three are inseparable, for a person does what he thinks about, talks about what he does, and thinks about what he loves. To control our actions may be termed self-control; to control our tongue is speech control; but both of these are dependent upon our "thought life." As a man thinketh in his heart so is he.

How is your thought life? That is the acid test of character. True sanctification and self-control must include our thinking, as well as our acting and our speaking; yet this is the most difficult thing to control. Evil thoughts, impure desires and subtle temptations are constantly knocking at the door of our mind. This we cannot avoid, but we can keep them from coming in to stay.

We may not be abe to shut out evil thoughts as they are suggested to us in our daily contacts, but we can keep from "entertaining" them and making them "feel at home." The Apostle Paul says, "Whatsoever things are true . .honest . .just. . .pure. . .lovely. . .of good report . .think on these things"!

The best way to keep evil thoughts out, is to have good thoughts in. If we will begin the day with storing God's Word in our hearts, asking God to keep our minds pure, and then go forth filled with the Spriit, there will be no room for these other things. Fill up in the morning with the Word and prayer, and you can hang out the "No Vacancy" sign the rest of the day!

Remember, what you think about first—will stay with you till the last. Before you go to work take time to THINK about the Word, God's goodness, and His provision for our victory.

Army Education Level Higher Than Average

The past decade has brought significant changes within the Army—in organization, in materiel, and, most importantly, in personnel. In the last few years, for example, missiles have joined the Army's arsenal of weapons and counterinsurgency has become a common word in the soldier's vocabulary.

The hard fact is that the Army of 1963, with its complex responsibilities, demands individuals of high intelligence and discipline—of quality—to carry out its missions. And today, through unprecedentedly high enlistment and reenlistment standards, an Army of quality soldiers has become a reality, not just wishful thinking.

The educational level of soldiers now serving is a good measure of this quality. Where ten years ago only 48 per cent of our enlisted members were high school graduates, the figure by last year had risen to almost 75%. The national average for men over 25 is 24.6 per cent.

Further, some 91 per cent of all second lieutenants are college graduates, and 70 per cent of all Army officers hold college degrees, compared to a national average of 7.7 per cent for men over 25.

The emphasis on quality has greatly reduced the need for disciplinary barracks. In 1955, the Army had five disciplinary barracks with a prisoner population of 6,000. Today, only one such barracks is in operation and the number of prisoners is less than 800.

These statistics clearly show that the Army, by eliminating misfits and recruiting only men of high potential, is insuring that national defense, a matter of national survival, is in the hands of the best. For only the best can effectively perform this vital task.

Over 2,000 Shooters Study at Camp Perry

MTU'S SFC THOMPSON INSTRUCTS
Class Is on Slow Fire Technique

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—People from the length and breadth of the United States had an opportunity this weekend to get the "word" on techniques of firing as well as methods of instructing others.

As students at the Small Arms Firing School (SAFS), conducted annually at Camp Perry prior to the National Rifle and Pistol Championships, they had an opportunity to hear the nation's best military marksmen tell how they do it and learn from the Army's best instructors how to pass on this information to others.

The school is open to any U.S. citizen over 14 years of age and this weekend more than 2,000 civilian and military competitors attended the three days of classroom instruction and practical firing exercises.

The SAFS is conducted by personnel of the Weapons Department of The Infantry School. They were supplemented this year by guest instructors from the Army's premier shooting organization the Marksmanship Training Unit, which is also stationed at Fort Benning.

The program of instruction was conducted in two major phases. One phase consists of advance firing techniques and methods of instruction and the second concerns the rudimentaries of pistol marksmanship.

Attending the advanced phase were students whose job it is to coach others. Listening to crack instructors from The Infantry School, they had a chance to see how to conduct a class in marksmanship, utilizing training aids which vary from the unique to simple box cartons. The instruction, given by 33 members of TIS in firearms safety; mechanical operation, safeguarding and accurate use, is the same as that which has brought acclaim to the School from leading educational authorities all over the world.

The basic course was for those seeking to improve their own shooting ability.

Leading the list of guest instructors this year was three-time national champion SFC William Blankenship Jr., SFC Ralph O. Thompson, who won two major pistol crowns during July, and MSgt. George Snavely, a Distinguished Pistol Shot and member of the exclusive 2,600 Club and others from the MTU.

At the close of the Small Arms Firing School students received certificates of completion of the course. Nearly als of them had an opportunity to put their new-found knowledge to immediate use since they were entered in the National Pistol Championships which began Monday.

Mrs. Ruth Fernlund, probably echoed the sentiments of all the students when she declared: "I know that my scores are going to be considerably higher than they have ever been as a result of what I have been taught at the Small Arms Firing School."

Mrs. Margaret LaForest, director of the Woman's Club School of Dance has recently returned from a month-long tour of the north where she attended several seminars for dance instructors.

The National Ballet Company of Toronto, Canada, was one of her hosts for a week-long convention, as was the Cecchetti Council of America's Teachers' Seminar held at the Park Shelton Hotel in Detroit. She also took part in a similar session conducted in Chicago.

Along with hundreds of other teachers and dance directors from the United States and Europe, Mrs. LaForest journeyed to the sessions in order to take various refresher courses and view the very elite of her profession exhibiting their special talents and conducting classes.

Included in the faculty of outstanding personalities was the Russian prima ballerina, Valentina Pereyaslavec, from the Imperial School in Moscow. Mrs. LaForest received most of her lessons from the Russian ballerina in Detroit.

Technique and variations also taught were labnotations, character, and music for choreography, the latter course having been instructed by composer Julie Nunlist, a well-known musician from the Cleveland Composers' Guild.

While in Detroit, the participants were asked to create a dance interpreting selected proverbs. Mrs. LaForest's choreography was chosen among the most outstanding. Members of the Detroit City Ballet Company were made available to enact their dance.

Mrs. LaForest says the most interesting class was eurithmics, taught by Mr. Himes, who has exhibited this method in London and Paris. This is a new and special method to be used for the very young pupil which Mrs. LaForest plans to pass on to her younger students. She also intends to show some of the original variations of Mme. Pereyaslavec to her more advanced students.

"In Toronto," says the dance instructress, "our work was even more rugged. We had such a busy schedule that we didn't get out of our working clothes until after 10 p.m. It was lots of hard work but also quite enjoyable." She recommends the National Ballet School to all classical ballet instructors and career minded students.

A past choreographer for the Ballet Guild of Columbus, Mrs. LaForest has taught almost seven years in the Columbus area. This will be her second year with the Woman's Club School of Dance.

Registration for her dancing classes will be held at all post schools on August 26 and 27. These classes are available for all military personnel and children over four years of age.

IOBC 1 Wives Meet For Coffee

On July 24 a follow up coffee was held for wives of Infantry Officers Basic Class No. 1 students in the dayroom of Detachment 24, 2nd Student Battalion.

Miss Jan James, representing the Book Store, told the ladies of the merchandise available and invited them to come in to shop. Mrs. Charles C. Bowie, wife of the detachment commander, welcomed the ladies and discussed future activities. A casserole dinner was planned for August 22. Weekly card games, a Bermuda party and a farewell luncheon were also planned.

Mrs. P. L. Mason was a guest at the coffee. Hostesses were Mrs. William E. Killoran, Mrs. Grahm Nores, Mrs. James Yarbrough and Mrs. Frank M. Perren.

51st OC Wives Choose Officers

An election of officers highlighted the first coffee of the 51st Company Officer Candidate Wives Club held in the company dayroom recently.

Among the guests attending the first coffee were Mrs. John Norton, Mrs. George McLendon, Mrs. Raymond Fleigh, Mrs. Willis Jones, Mrs. James Barber and Mrs. Stanley Gerski.

Mrs. Joseph Landa was elected chairman of the club with Mrs. Wilbert Ford being tapped for co-chairman duties. Mrs. Ernest Akins was elected treasurer. Mrs. Donald Morrelli takes over the publicity chairmanship and Mrs. James Jackson is the hospitality chairman.

Captain James Barber's talk to members and guests on the officer candidate program was followed by a tour of the barracks with the tactical officers.

A talk on the proper procedure of sending and receiving invitations was given by Mrs. Louis Bixler.

Hostesses included Mrs. Landa, Mrs. Michael Lipowac, Mrs. Laurence Lorms, Mrs. Larry Lattimer and Mrs. Morelli.

MOOM'S MAGICIAN

Anti-Tank Ladies Hold Shower

The ladies of the Anti-Tank Committee of the Weapons Department combined their monthly coffee with a baby shower recently for Mrs. Doris Hill and Mrs. Lois Richardson.

The white clothed table in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess was decorated with a stork carrying a pink doll wrapped in a yellow blanket.

There was also a pink and a blue infant seat, each to hold the gifts that were received.

After the coffee and tea were served, the gifts were opened and displayed for the ladies to view.

Mrs. Bill Davis and Mrs. Ann Sutton were hostesses for the event.

Bridge Party Greets Newcomers To CDCI Agency

The monthly U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency buffet dinner and bridge party was held recently welcoming several newly arrived officers and their wives to the post.

Included among those welcomed were Col. and Mrs. Marcus L. Powell Jr., Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Boardman III, Maj. and Mrs. Joe F. Elliott and Capt. and Mrs. John F. Cowley Jr.

The buffet-bridge was hosted by Lt. Col. and Mrs. W. E. Chambers at their quarters at 211 Miller Loop.

Surgeon Says:

Breakdown in Communications Can Cause Emotional Stress

By Chaplain (Lt. Col) James B. Blunk, MAH

In his volume, "Further Fables For Our Times," James Thurber relates a fable of disturbance in communication. It concerns "a weaver who watched in wide-eyed wonder a silkworm spinning its cocoon in a white mulberry tree. 'Where do you get that stuff?' asked the admiring weaver. 'Do you want to make something out of it?' inquired the silkworm, eagerly. Then the weaver and the silkworm went their separate way, for each thought the other had insulted him. We live, man and worm, in a time when almost everything can mean almost anything . . ."

Religion, psychiatry, and social work are concerned with the breakdown of communication. In a sense, emotional disturbance, and sometimes functional or psychosomatic complaints, may be seen as the failure of an individual to express his distress effectively, to communicate his feelings so that his needs can be met and understood by others who are important to him. Successful communication consists of the ability to struggle to understand what another person is saying, and to react to this understanding in a way which is helpful to the other person as well as to yourself.

In the fable by Thurber, the weaver had the friendliest of intentions, and the response of the silkworm to him was equally eager and friendly. However, like many of us, both saw only the possibility of anger, unfriendliness and danger, and reacted to that possibility of threat rather than to the warmth that was present.

Same Problem

Within several departments and services of Martin Army Hospital, many problems come to our attention which show the breakdown of communication. Frequently this is the experience of families. Quite often parents find it difficult to come together and to remain for the period of time necessary for adequate family counseling.

Sometimes the mother and the father have ceased speaking to each other about the disturbances of the child. Within their own thoughts, and perhaps openly, both blame the other for the child's illness.

The father may feel that the mother is too lenient, too careless, too firm, too rejecting, too overprotective. The mother may feel that the father is too isolated, spends too much time in front of the T.V. when he "finally gets home from work," that he is too firm, not firm enough, too rejecting, too over-protective. Both find it easy to project fault onto each other. They feel it is too painful to deal with hidden sources of their concern about themselves in relation to their child. Each parent feels a sense of failure, inadequacy or guilt regarding ways he might have contributed to the problem. These fears serve to block free expression.

Those who do participate in the services offered become surprised that the other parents had felt the same fear and guilt, for they had assumed that the other was cold and uncaring. The process of getting the parents to talk together is accomplished by reducing the main obstacles to communication — anxiety and fear.

Same In Units

Patients come to our attention because of the breakdown of communication between people in their military organizations due to the same kind of fears seen in parents who come for help. Men sometimes hesitate to go to their superiors because they feel that this would be an admission of weakness, inadequacy or failure. Their problem drags on and they become increasingly frustrated, angry, fearful. Intense feelings, somewhat irrational, are directed inward, resulting in the decreased effectiveness of the individual.

This goes back to the fable where the desire to be friendly struggles with the fear of possible threat or unfriendliness. It is the strong, secure person who can ask for help without fear, and accept a relationship wherein there is a person who is being helped and a person who gives help.

Communication is important to one's well being, not only in families, and in units, but in one's religious life as well. The nature of one's relationship with another deeply influences the nature of communication. Communication with God is the means whereby man expresses, within his own religious faith, his basic needs to feel secure, to feel that he is worthwhile, to feel loved, and to feel that he can grow and improve.

Gen. Coffin Wins Stars in Field

Assistant Division Commander Promoted During Swift Strike

BRIG. GEN. ROBERT E. COFFIN PROMOTED ON SWIFT STRIKE
Gen. Billingslea (L), Gen. Corley (R) Pin Stars

Wearing the Circle Trigon insignia of the "Red" Homeland forces, a 2nd Infantry Division assistant commander has been promoted to one-star general rank in the midst of Swift Strike III, largest peacetime maneuver ever held anywhere in the world by U.S. troops.

The new general is Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, pinned with the stars of his new position in the combat operations center of the 2nd Division somewhere in the vast hinterlands "Second to None" Division in the Carolinas.

Both sides in Swift Strike III are maintaining utmost security precautions due to the operation of sizeable guerrilla bands in the area. The "red" divisions, the "2nd" from Fort Benning and the 5th Division from Fort Carson, Colo., are secretly shifting troops to meet the threat of airborne drops by the enemy.

Gen. Coffin, who came to the Carolinas from Fort Benning, where he was Division Artillery commander, was born in Bellingham, Wash., the youthful-looking Gen. Coffin began his Army active duty career in April 1940 with the 3rd Infantry Division, participating with the "3rd" in the assault landings at Casablanca, Morocco in October 1942.

Transferred to Gen. Patton's Armored Corps, he hit Sicily with the assault forces and campaigned through Palermo and Messina. Next came the landings in Southern France on D-Day with Gen. Coffin directing the naval bombardment from the beach.

As a young officer, Gen. Coffin shot up the ranks quickly to make lieutenant colonel at 27 on February 1, 1945.

Since World War II Gen. Coffin has held a number of important posts. Most recently before joining the 2nd Division at Fort Benning he served in Germany as assistant chief of operations at Headquarters, U. S. Army, Europe.

He has been chief of a missile task force in Italy, the 1st U.S. Army Missile Command; operations executive of the Southern European Task Force in Italy; and, before heading the Jupiter-C effort, headed the Army's Atomic Division in Washington.

Gen. Coffin took military schooling at the Command and General Staff College, the Armed Forces Staff College and the National War College.

His decorations include the Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters along with a host of other citations, awards and campaign ribbons. In World War II the general campaigned on seven fronts and took part in three assault landings.

The general belongs to Delta Tau Delta, Stanford chapter, and is a member of Kiwanis International. His hobbies are skiing and sailing.

Married to the former Joan Nelson at Fort Lewis, Wash., in 1940, Gen. Coffin and his wife have two daughters, Barbara, 21, and Lynne, 18, and a son, James, 10.

Div. Units' Fate Uncertain As DA Cancels 'Rotaplan'

By BOB DE CAMARA

The Department of the Army has called a halt to Rotaplan, the unit rotation system under which 2nd Division troops are currently on temporary duty in Germany.

The future of Rotaplan units overseas is uncertain. Presumably soldiers will be given a choice of returning to Fort Benning by individual replacement or remaining in Mannheim, Germany as a permanent duty station.

At this time the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry are overseas training with the 8th Infantry Division. The 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry up to this week had been in training for Rotaplan, forsaking the huge Swift Strike III maneuver underway in the Carolinas.

The 1st Battalions of the 9th and 23rd Infantries left the United States by jet aircraft from Turner Air Force Base in mid-April. Last month the 1st Battalion, 9th was replaced after only three months of duty by the 2nd Battalion, 9th which, until developments this week, faced six months of duty in Europe.

The 1st Battalion, 23rd also had more than two months of an original six months obligation to fulfill and had been scheduled for replacement in mid-October by the 1st Battalion, 87th.

At this time the 87th is undergoing mechanized infantry training, customary for all Rotaplan - designated units, American forces in Central Europe, to which 2nd Division units are assigned, are mechanized, the better to quickly negotiate the flat plains which are the prevalent factor in strategic defense of the area.

Since Rotaplan's inauguration in October of last year, the 2nd Infantry Division has provided by far the bulk of troops to the now-defunct rotation system.

Last October the "Second to None" exchanged the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry from Fort Benning for the 8th Division's 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry.

During the six months the 38th spent overseas, the 2nd Division was reorganizing under the ROAD (Reorganization Objectives, Army Division) concept. And when time came for the 38th's trip back to the states, the battle group was recalled in favor of the two battalions.

Under ROAD — the 2nd Division is the first old-line division in the United States to change over—the battle groups have been scrapped for the more flexible battalions.

The terse comment issued by the Department of the Army Saturday concerning the fate of Rotaplan noted the system as "an experimental program for the rotation of troop units between the United States and Europe."

It "is being discontinued because it generated considerable personnel turbulence and did not produce hoped-for gold-dollar savings."

Rotaplan had been designed by Pentagon planners with an eye on reducing the United States' outflow of gold reserves. Under terms of the system, soldiers rotating to Europe for the purposely-short tours of duty could not take dependents, wives and family, along at government expense.

To help counter the stay-behind effects and aid the wives as much as possible, the division instituted for the first time at any Army post a ROTA-Wives Family Service Center.

Wives could gather at the Center for coffee calls and social hours. The Center was manned constantly to handle incoming distress calls, ranging from the late allottment check to the wife who bought a "lemon" of a second-hand car. (The dealer was persuaded to take back the car.)

The "personnel turbulence" mentioned in the Army statement refers to the problems of operating and organizing such short-term trips abroad. Although the program called on the unit for six months of duty only, time spent in preparing battalions for departure and insufficient service time remaining for overseas duty made the plan unfeasible.

Formal cancellation of Rotaplan took place on Monday. This is the second-time in recent years that the Army has chucked overboard a rotation system.

While Rotaplan's demise spells an end to unit rotation as a permanent mission for the 2nd Division, the Army has other ideas in store, including the airlift of an entire division to Europe later this year.

As far as is known at this time, the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry which had been preparing for Rotaplan at the time of cancellation will continue as a mechanized battalion and slip back into the normal training routine of the 2nd Division when the division returns later this month from the Carolinas and Swift Strike III.

Members of the two units in Germany will presumably have the option of returning to Fort Benning or staying overseas.

Indianheads Strike Swift During Swift Strike III

The 2nd Division has been burning up the Carolinas with their speed and maneuverability. During the war games, now in force, the STRAC "Second to None" has routed the enemy at every turn—proving the past month's training was worthwhile.

While enroute to defend the mythical country of Columbia, located in the Carolinas, a continual maintenance check was kept up on the thousands of vehicles moving the troops, equipment and supplies in order to maintain a constant state of combat readiness.

Even the company clerks maintained their daily routine in makeshift offices set up in the rear of two and a half ton trucks as the convoy moved towards its initial destination somewhere near Blythewood, S.C.

Immediately upon arrival the line companies of the "Indianhead" division were deployed and assigned sectors as wide as 600 meters to screen as part of the front line defense.

The 2nd Infantry Division along with the 5th Mechanized Division and several other smaller units make up the Red Force which has the mission of defending Columbia against the Blue Force which is fighting a hit and run battle employing guerrilla type tactics.

The hard hitting Blue Force has as its major elements the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions from Fort Bragg, N.C. and Fort Campbell, Ky.

Besides maneuvering against each other in a test of initiative and knowledge of tactics, the more than 100,000 men now participating in the U.S. Strike Command USSTRICOM exercise must always be on the alert to cope with problems and hazards that can arise during extended field duty under actual or simulated combat conditions.

The U.S. Strike Command, composed of the Strategic Army Corps and the Tactical Air Command, must be prepared to move on short notice to any part of the globe and participate in either a brush fire action or an all out war.

Because of this reason its members who are now engaged in Swift Strike III have been thoroughly trained to handle any problems that would detract or limit USSTRICOM's power punch.

In order to maintain the fighting strength and morale of a unit in combat its members must have the necessary equipment and the physical stamina to use it effectively. And because of this the American fighting man learns to practice supply discipline and personal hygiene so that it becomes second nature to him in the field as well as in garrison.

Soldiers of the 2nd Infantry Division, as well as all other members of the United States military services, have learned through many hours of instruction that they are not only obligated to themselves but also to their unit and their country to maintain their physical well being to the best of their ability at all times.

During Swift Strike III each man is having the opportunity to put into practice, what he has learned during those long hours of classroom instruction

SGT. MAJ. J. A. SCOTT

MSgt. Scott Makes E-9

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

At an awards ceremony held recently at the Kelley Hill field house, Lt. Col. George D. Crosby announced to all of the men of the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry that MSgt. James A. Scott had just received orders promoting him to the grade of sergeant major.

Acting sergeant major at the 1st Battalion since the reorganization in February, Sgt. Maj. Scott was former first sergeant at the Combat Support Company, 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry.

With more than 20 years of active duty, during which he has received more than 30 letters of achievement, appreciation, commendation and recommendation, Sgt. Maj. Scott was an instructor in the demolitions, mines and booby trap course at the U. S. Army Engineer-Ordnance School, Europe, from 1955 to 1959, and was later assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division Noncommissioned Officer Academy as an instructor in leadership and map-reading.

He was honor graduate of the Third Army Noncommissioned Officer Academy, Class 9, in 1960. A veteran of the campaigns of Normandy, Northern France, the Rhineland, Central Europe, and the 1953 Korean Winter and Summer, his decorations include the Army Commendation Medal with Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman's Badge and Good Conduct Medal (five awards).

Well known in 2nd Division bowling and golf circuits, Sgt. Maj. Scott and his wife, Connie, have more than 65 athletic trophies in their home at 4442 Sentry St., Columbus.

17th Artillery Soldier Is SOM Of The Second Infantry Division

By 17th Artillery PIO

PFC John R. Moore, a member of Headquarters Battery, 17th Artillery, has been named 2nd Infantry Division Soldier of the Month.

PFC Moore, a native of Baltimore, Md., received congratulations recently during a Division Artillery review. Brig. Gen. John T. Corley and Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, assistant division commanders, extended their congratulations to PFC Moore, as did Col. Burnside E. Huffman, division artillery commander, and Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert, commanding officer of the 17th Artillery. An awards ceremony will be conducted upon the return of the 2nd Division Joint Exercise Swift Strike III.

Prior to being inducted into the Army, PFC Moore was graduated frm Baltimore City College, Baltimore, Md., and continued his studies in electrical engineering at Johns Hopkins University, also in Baltimore.

After completing basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., he went to Fort Sill, Okla., to attend Survey School at the Army Training Center there. PFC Moore was graduated from the survey course as the top man in his class.

In August 1962, PFC Moore was assigned to Headquarters Battery, 17th Artillery, where he is presently working as a survey instrument operator.

He and his wife, Sara, also a native of Baltimore, now make their home in Columbus.

A quiet and reliable soldier, PFC Moore grinned when questioned about his accomplishment and said, "It was a lot of hard work, but it was worth it."

Tanker First Sergeant To Retire This Month

By 7th Cavalry PIO

MSgt. Hubert D. McNeer, first sergeant of Troop C, is retiring from the Army this month after 20 years and seven months service. He first entered the Army in 1940, serving with the 4th Motorized Division at Fort Benning.

He saw action in Europe during World War II with the 529th Field Artillery. Taking a break in service for three years from 1945 to 1948, Sgt. McNeer reentered the service as a staff sergeant. Sent to Europe, he received his first duty assignment with an armored cavalry unit, the 14th Armored Cavalry.

Since then Sgt. McNeer has served with various armored units, including the 4th Reconnaissance (SEP) Battalion in Austria; 82nd Reconnaissance Battalion; 2nd Armor Division; the 40th Tank Battalion; the 13th Cavalry of the 3d Armored Division; and the 7th Cavalry.

Division Awards Given Four Men At Ceremonies

One of the first awards of the Combat Infantryman Badge to go to an artillery officer for service in South Vietnam was made recently on Knight Field in ceremonies that also honored two retiring sergeants major and a 2nd Division Soldier-of-the-Month.

The badge was pinned on the uniform of Capt. David Mead who served from early 1962 to 1963 as an intelligence team chief in shaky Quang Ngai province and, later, intelligence adviser to the Republic of Vietnam's hard-fighting 2nd Infantry Division.

The veteran of 17 combat operations in Vietnam, now serving the 38th Artillery as executive officer, had a double reason for celebration. The parade field award fell on his birthday.

In front of massed artillery battalions, the departing sergeant major of Division Artillery, Sgt. Maj. Frank E. Rinaldo, had read a letter of commendation from Gen. Earl G. Wheeler, Army Chief of Staff, in recognition of the sergeant major's "meritorious" career.

Sgt. Maj. Rinaldo was also pinned with an Army Commendation Medal.

Another letter from Gen. Wheeler praised the 37th Artillery's sergeant major, MSgt. William W. Fielding, who retires from active duty after more than 20 years.

The fourth soldier to review the troops as they marched by in formation was a private first class, winner of the Division Artillery Soulder-of-the-Month competition and the 2nd Division monthly top soldier contest.

He is PFC Robert E. Moore II of the 17th Artillery Battalion.

"Armageddon," the female mascot of the 15th Artillery, took a turn around the field when the men passed in review at the close of the ceremonies. The young falcon, still in the training process, perched on her handler's gloved arm and took in the display of generals and colonels unflappably.

The division assistant commanders, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley and Brig Gen. Robert E. Coffin, watched from the sidelines.

Col. Burnside E. Huffman, Division Artillery commander, reviewed the troops.

1st Brigade Is Assigned A New Capt.

By 1st Brigade PIO

Capt. George A. Redd has been assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division's 1st Brigade as liaison officer.

Capt. Redd first entered the Army in 1947 when he served for a year as an enlisted man with the Army Air Corps. In 1948, he left the service.

Reentering the Army in 1952, Capt. Redd was assigned to Company A of the 2nd Infantry Division's 38th Infantry in Korea. He fought in the Korean Conflict, receiving a Purple Heart for being wounded in action.

Following the Korean Conflict, Capt. Redd attended the Engineer School at Fort Belvoir, Va.

In January 1955, he attended the Officer Candidate School (OCS) at Fort Benning. Following his graduation, Capt. Redd was sent to Fort Chaffee, Ark. as a training officer.

In January 1956, Capt. Redd attended flight school at Moultrie, Ga., and later, Fort Rucker, Ala.

Since his graduation from flight school, Capt. Redd has served as a pilot at Fort Stewart, Ga., with the 14th Armored Cavalry in Germany, and 5th Corps Headquarters, Frankfort, Germany.

A Senior Aviator with seven years flying time and over 1,500 hours in the air, Capt. Redd has also completed the Army's Associate Career and Nuclear Weapons Employment Course.

Among his decorations and awards he has the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Purple Heart, the Army Commendation Medal and the Good Conduct Medal.

A native of Miami, Fla., Capt. Redd, his wife, Grace, son, Stephan, 6, and daughter, Kim, 4, reside at 400 Henson Ave. in Columbus.

SP4 MARLAND TAHBONEMAH, 2ND DIVISION INDIAN, ARRIVES IN TEXAS FOR DIVISION REUNION

2nd Division Association Reunions in San Antonio

DIVISION ASSOCIATION OFFICERS
Maj. Harmon, Bill Creech, Sgt. Brown

BY CARL HALSTEAD

"Gentlemen! As soon as we hit the halfway point on this bridge we will be crossing the boundary line between the United States and Texas."

Thus spoke our bus driver a little after midnight recently on our first day of travel from Fort Benning to San Antonio, Texas.

Some sixteen hours earlier, in the midst of a Georgia downpour, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Infantry Division commander, stood in the stepway of the chartered bus and bade "good journey" to 32 of his division soldiers. Myself, and the other 31, were about to embark for the land of the "Alamo" to participate in the annual reunion of the 2nd Infantry Division Association.

Heading the representative group was Maj. William C. Harman, Division G-1 Section, and division Sgt Maj. Robert Brown. Also present for the six day get-together was Chap. (Lt. Col.) James Fiser. Sporadically seated throughout the bus was 28 top non-commissioned officers, representatives of various units throughout the division, and one reporter (I bow in humble diffidence).

544 Years

If you were to total the number of years of service that were represented on the bus, it would date back to the year 1419 — before the birth of Columbus, (the sailor, that is). All told there were 544 years of military service riding the Greyhound, and of that total, 113 years of service was with the 2nd Infantry Division.

The only real problem I found on the trip to the "Lone Star" state was the obstacle course I had to run getting on and off the bus at stops. In the center aisle were stacked personal ice-coolers filled with cokes, seven-up etc, etc, etc. And rather than walk normally back and forth to one's seat we had to climb over these refreshment stands.

Andy Griffith

The bus stopped for supper in New Orleans and we picked up a new driver. And then the fun began. Our new chauffeur was a real Andy Griffith. His voice, features and actions all were synonymous to the famous celebrity.

The Greyhound was equipped with a public address system and quite often during the journey one after another of the riders would suddenly remember a "good one" and run the obstacle course to the front and tell it to one and all. However, Mr. N. K. Alexander, the bus driver from Lake Charles, La., decided to let the boys rest. So, he took over the microphone and began telling jokes. And for the better part of almost two hundred miles, Mr. Alexander kept the division soldiers in near hysterics. For the first time during the entire trip, no one talked, no one slept; everyone listened intently to the unequalled repertoire of this fabulously funny man.

One of the most unusual incidents happened in the wee hours of the morning when the big bus lumbered into the Houston, Texas station for a break. I sleepily crawled out, banging my shins for the umpteenth time on the coolers full of coke, seven-up, etc, etc, etc; and strolled into the bus station. I had just finished a cup of coffee and was walking around the station interior when I spied a neatly dressed soldier surrounded by the rest of the crew from the bus. In the center of the throng he stood, dressed in khakis, neat, starched and wearing the stripes of a SFC. He had 2nd Division patches on both sleeves, Adjutant General (AG) brass on both epaulets (the wrong place of course) and an SFC emblem beneath his garrison cap ornament. It seems that when asked what outfit in the 2nd Division he belonged to he gave a unit no one had ever heard of. To, make a long story short, it was found out he was not in the Army and was later hauled away by the local gendarmes. Actually, the imposter seemed relieved to be taken from the clutches of 30 some-odd men who belonged to the proud unit that he was falsely advertising.

San Antonio

The bus pulled up in front of the hotel in San Antonio around nine a.m. the next morning and 32 tired GIs climbed over the now empty coolers and went in and registered for their rooms and association meeting.

Inside the hotel members of the 2nd Infantry Division Association, World War I, II, and Korean veterans, were registering at the desk and greetings were exchanged between the old and the new.

A few moments later, everyone was treated as the doorway swung open and in came Spd Marland Tahbonemah, the division indian, in tribal dress. Above the lobby archway hung a large red sign declaring: "WELCOME INDIANS." Most appropriate.

That night a local merchandising firm hosted the entire association to a tour of their establishment and furnished a meal and entertainment. The big hit of the evening was "Chief" Tahbonemah, who was constantly besieged for pictures beside one person or another.

Lost Souls

The next day, Friday, the remaining arrivals were registered and a VIP meeting was held in the "Lost Souls" room.

Shortly after World War II, a few veterans joined the 2nd Division Association and were outranked, outaged, and constantly outmaneuvered within the association framework. Therefore, these scant few men retreated to their rooms and thusly became known as the "Lost Souls." However, the "Lost Soul" clan has grown over the years and now leads the association.

Friday afternoon was spent in closed session as the association teamed off to make plans for an election of new officers to take place on the morrow.

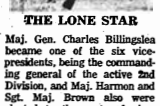
Geronimo!

That night, another local San Antonio merchandising firm sponsored the association to a dinner, dance and tour. It was at this point of the reunion that "Chief" Tahbonemah, tribal costume and all, got hold of a stagnant Pepsi or something, and decided it was way past the time in history for another Indian uprising. He spent the next day in his teepee watching TV.

Saturday was the big day. The elections were held in midmorning and the new president became Bill Creech, World War II veteran, from San Antonio.



THE LONE STAR

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea became one of the six vice-presidents, being the commanding general of the active 2nd Division, and Maj. Harmon and Sgt. Maj. Brown also were elected to the posts of vice-president.

After lunch everyone quickly changed into their uniforms and went to the memorial cemetery and paid military honors to war dead. The impressive ceremony was highlighted by a rifle salute and the laying of a wreath by Sgt. Maj. Brown.

Right after the association members returned to the hotel, Maj. Gen. Billingslea arrived from Fort Benning. He was to be guest speaker at the banquet that evening. After changing, Gen. Billingslea met the new president, Mr. Creech, and other members of the Association in the "Lost Soul's" room.

The Alamo

Prior to the banquet, myself, the division photographer and 1st Sgt. John Shevchenko, from the 72nd Armor, walked the three blocks from the hotel to the historic site of the Alamo. Sgt. Shevchenko served with the 2nd Division in both World War II and Korea, and was awarded the Purple Heart twice. He also earned the Silver Star for heroism. And it seemed only fitting that a modern hero should visit the heroic, legendary monument to such men as Travis, Crockett and Bowie.

The banquet hall was crowded and everyone enjoyed a fine meal. Following dinner the members of the speaker's table were introduced by Col. C. J. Hirschfielder (Ret.), World War I veteran and a member of the 9th Infantry in World War II. Upon introducing Sgt. Maj. Brown, the colonel remarked: "You know, division commanders may come and go, but sergeant majors stay on."

Gen. Billingslea

Gen. Billingslea was then introduced and he spoke to an attentive audience. While speaking about the representatives that came to San Antonio from Fort Benning's 2nd Infantry Division area, the general commented, "Your division likes to send men to your reunions because we get more out of it than we put in. Each man here represents about 400 more members of my command that belong to your association."

While praising the records that had been established by the division over the many years, campaigns and wars, Gen. Billingslea added, "The division will not let you down. I assure you of that."

The general reminded the vast audience that today every organization that existed with the 2nd Division in World War I is back again. "Every numbered unit the division owned," the general added, "is back in the fold again."

As Gen. Billingslea spoke of the modern weapons, vehicles and STRAC mobility the 2nd Division has today, he also reminded the old timers "We have not forgotten how to walk in the mud like a doughboy."

Continuing along the modern outlining of the famous 2nd Division, Gen. Billingslea praised his men. "The demand upon these young men of mine, not just the soldierly know-how, but also the technical know-how, is tremendous." Then smiling at the group, he added, "I wish you all could come down and see them, you'd be tremendously proud of them."

Hardest Working Division

The two-star general got an ovation when he described the jobs and assignments the division had carried out over the past year. And another ovation when he remarked on the statement issued by Secretary of the Army, Cyrus Vance, after his tour through the 2nd Division just prior to Gen. Billingslea's leaving for San Antonio. "Secretary Vance said that the 2nd Infantry Division had been the hardest working division in the Army over the past year."

Humor was interjected when the general explained how his capture during the forth-coming Swift Strike maneauvers was worth money to anyone who caught him.

Ending his speech, Gen. Billingslea spoke briefly on the active division's tasks, accomplishments and hard work. "This," the general concluded, "is your division."

Loading on the bus Sunday morning all the men bid farewell to the members of the association that came outside the hotel to say goodby. Again, there was the same old obstacle course in the aisle of the bus. You know, coke, seven-up, etc, etc, etc.

Down The Drain

Only one incident occurred on the trip back that was out of the ordinary. Shortly after leaving San Antonio someone had mistakenly put a cigarette out in Sgt. Shevchenko's "pepsi" can. When the good sergeant took his next big gulp his face turned green and he took off for the rear of the bus and the compact confines of the men's room. There he became ill and leaned over the deposit hole and deposited his bill fold from his shirt pocket. The leather wallet, with money, cards, pictures etc, gurgled from view.

Red faced, Sgt. Shevchenko reported the mishap and was ribbed mercilessly from the other men. However, Mr. Earl C. Pryor, the bus driver, made an emergency stop and, coat hanger in hand, fished out the misplaced object.

For action above and beyond the call of duty, Mr. Pryor, who also served with the 2nd Division in World War II, was given a paid membership in the 2nd Division Association by Sgt. Shevchenko as gratitude for the bus driver's prowess. But, the new charter membership in the division association was paid for with a rather soggy twenty-dollar bill.

WELCOMED TO LOST SOULS
(L-R) Gen. Billingslea, Bob Barr

The six day trip was most rewarding. The comradeship between the members of the association and treatment afforded all of us from Fort Benning was overwhelming. Many wonderful people got together to rehash old times spent with a great Army division. The 2nd Infantry Division Association is a large organization and is still growing. Next year the meeting will be held in St. Louis, and the coming year's progress of the active "Second to None" will again be reported, proudly, to old soldiers who have nothing left but fond memories. And again next year the words of Gen. Billingslea undoubtedly will be equally appropriate when speaking of the STRAC 2nd Division; "I wish you could come down and see them. You'd be tremendously proud of them."

Learned French Cooking On Parisian Tour of Duty

By Betty Blitch

Perhaps there are other ways of life, other arms of the service, and still other branches of the Army, but for the wife of the new division artillery commander, the Army and the Artillery have always been her way of life. Her husband, Col. Burnside E. Huffman, is an Artilleryman as was her father Lt. Gen. John P. Unkles (Ret.)

The only child of Gen. and Mrs. Unkles, Margaret Katherine, was born at West Point, N. Y. where her father was an instructor in the Military Academy. She has been called Marka since she was a small child. Her mother derived the name Marka by combining the first few letters of each name. As a young girl, she traveled extensively throughout the United States with her parents. The family would often visit Mrs. Unkles' mother, Elizabeth Banks, who lived in Columbus. Mrs. Unkles had grown up in Columbus and had met her husband while he was stationed at Ft. Benning.

MRS. HUFFMAN

Mrs. Huffman was destined to follow in the footsteps of her mother. During her junior year of college, in 1949, she spent the Christmas holidays with her grandmother in Columbus. A friend arranged a blind date for her, and it was then that she met the son of old family friends, Maj. Huffman. They attended a Christmas dance at the Officers' Club at Fort Benning. Some months later, after trips between Vassar ad Ft. Campbell, Kentucky, where Maj. Huff was stationed, they were married in the First Presbyterian Church in Columbus. After a honeymoon to Florida and Cuba, the newlyweds went to Ft. Campbell where Maj. Huffman was a battalion commander.

Two months after their marriage, Maj. Huffman was sent to Korea and Mrs. Huffman returned to Columbus where she resided with her grandmother. Columbus seemed to be home base, for it was here that she attended Columbus High School for two years. However, she was in Columbus for only a short time. Nine months later Maj. Huffman returned from Korea and Mrs. Huffman joined him at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma. From there the Huffmans went to West Point, N. Y. It was at West Point that their first two children were born; Lucy Elaine, now age 10, named after Col. Huffman's mother; and Lilly (Elizabeth Banks), now age 8, named after Mrs. Huffman's mother. After three years at West Point, the Huffmans were sent to Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, for a year, and then to Paris in 1956. Col. Huffman was assigned to USEUCOM. In Paris, Becky (Rebecca Ann), now age 6, was born.

Living in Paris gave Mrs. Huffman a golden opportunity. She loves to cook and Paris was the place to go to school and learn the Gourmet touch. She and a friend enrolled in the Cordon Bleu Cooking School and were instructed by wonderful French chefs. Mrs. Huffman said, "We would go home and try to duplicate what we had seen done, and it was wonderful until we both gained ten pounds!" However, her interest in cooking did not waver, despite the extra pounds. She still loves it, and is most flattered when a guest asks for the recipe of a special dish she has prepared. Her interest is not confined to just cooking. She enjoys playing bridge, and she likes to get her exercise from swimming. She certainly has an opportunity to get plenty of exercise with her small children. She has been encouraging them to master swimming themselves.

After three years in Paris and various trips in Europe, the Huffmans returned to the States and Col. Huffman attended the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania. It was there that their fourth child, a son, was born; John Unkles, now age 3½, named after Mrs. Huffman's father. A year later Col. Huffman was sent to Washington where he had a staff assignment at the Pentagon.

Living in Washington brought many memories to mind. Mrs. Huffman's life has brushed closely with two Presidents of the United States. Mrs. Huffman's father served under Captain Harry S. Truman in France during World War I. Captain Truman was the commanding officer of Battery D, 129th Field Artillery. When President Truman was inaugurated in 1948, the members of Battery D were invited, and Mrs. Huffman attended with her parents. At the same time, Mrs. Huffman was attending Vassar College and majoring in geology. A classmate and friend, Jackie Bouvier, was to be her second link with a President. The future Mrs. John F. Kennedy and the future Mrs. Huffman were in the same class and were both elected to be members of Vassar's Daisy Chain. The Daisy Chain is an old custom at Vassar graduations.

LITTLE BIG BATTLE

The battle of Little Big Horn, Montana, was one of the most disputed fights of all times, with the 7th Cavalry, Gen. George A. Custer and a small band of five troops totaling 264 men, annihilated by a force of more than 6,000 Cheyenne Indians.

Sword and Pen Holds Monthly Dinner Meeting

By Mrs. J. Reddick

The Sword and Pen, Fort Benning chapter of the Armed Forces Writers' League, met at the 2nd Division NCO Open Mess for their monthly dinner, August 1.

Pink was the decor color and was carried out in pink tapers in champagne glasses in the center of the serving table was a small feather tree. White illusion was gathered at the base of the tree with gardenia's and other summer flowers to indicate the theme of the dinner, "Happy Hour."

Honored guest was Mrs. John Mital, judge of the Allen Township election board of Ransom, Ill. Mrs. Mital was presented with a corsage of white and pink carnations by club president Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith.

Mrs. Mital an active member of the Womens Democrat club of Illinois gave a short talk about the presidents she has known. Listed among the great were, Calvin Cooledge, Franklin D. Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy, Presidents of the United States.

Mrs. J. Evans Pours at Fete

The home of Mrs. Aquila Stipes was the scene of the monthly coffee of the 15th Artillery Officers' wives at which Mrs. John M. Evans poured.

Two new members, Mrs. William K. McCurry and Mrs. Charles Vinez were welcomed to the group. Bon Voyage was extended to Mrs. Kie O. Doty who will accompany her husband on a tour of duty in Germany soon. Mrs. Evans presided at a short business meeting during which time Mrs. Charles M. Rives was appointed treasurer to succeed Mrs. Doty.

9th's Sergeant Major Promoted Permanently

By 9th Infantry PI O

In recent ceremonies at 1st Bn., 9th Infantry headquarters Sgt. Maj. James L. Runyon received his permanent promotion to sergeant major.

Prior to becoming sergeant major of the 1st Bn., 9th Infantry, he was sergeant major of the 2nd Battle Goup, 9th Infantry.

Sgt. Maj. Runyon a combat veteran of many World War II campaigns, started his Army career in 1943 with the 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment. With this unit he made jumps at Normandy and Holland.

During most of his extensive Army career he has served with Airborne units and while with the 82nd Airborne division in 1960 he posed for the Airborne Statue at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Sgt. Maj. Runyon's many medals and decorations include the Bronze Star with "V" device and 1st Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster.

Sgt. Maj. Runyon is married and has two sons. His wife Ann and sons, Charles, 10, and Danie, 8, reside at Fort Benning.

Artilleries Coffee Held

The 17th Artillery held a monthly coffee in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess, with Mrs. James Compton and Mrs. Robert Werner acting as hostesses. Mrs. Compton poured the coffee.

The table centerpiece consisted of yellow gladiolas and white mums. A doorprize of a free hair appointment for a wash and set was won by Mrs. Carl Baird.

A short business meeting was held and Mrs. Katsuji Shizumura from Ft. Sill, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Baird were welcomed to the group at this time.

Farewell was said to Mrs. Lonnie Wharton, who is departing Ft. Benning for Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas.

WINS MEDAL . . . Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway (L) has Army Commendation Medal pinned on by Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander.

Sgt. Maj. W. J. Conway Awarded The Army Commendation Medal

By 1st Bn, 39th Infantry PIO

"During the period February 1955 to July 1963, while serving, respectively, as platoon sergeant, Company A, 87th Infantry; platoon sergeant, Company C, 87th Infantry; first sergeant, mortar battery, 87th Infantry; and sergeant major, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway, performed his duties in a meritorious manner.

"The Army Commendation Medal is presented to Sgt. Maj. Conway for outstanding service as a senior non-commissioned officer in the 2nd Infantry Division. Sgt. Maj. Conway has served with the Division, continuously, for eight years and five months. During his entire period of service with the Division, he has held key positions and has performed each duty in a superior manner as verified by superior ratings, letters of appreciation, and certificate of achievement awarded by the 2nd Infantry Division.

Sgt. Maj. Conway's uncommon ability to handle men, knowledge of administration, and devotion to duty are unsurpassed by few. As a result of Sgt. Maj. Conway's professional leadership, the morale, esprit de corps, and efficiency of the 38th Infantry has been notable enhanced. Sgt. Maj. Conway may be justly proud of his service throughout the cited period, for it was in keeping with the finest tradition of the 2nd Infantry Division and the United States Army."

This is a copy of the citation given to Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway by Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, 1st Battalion 68th Infantry, recently.

Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, 2nd Infantry Division, awarded Sgt. Maj. Conway a commendation medal, the second in his 20-years of service.

The giving of the citation and medal were for his 20 years of service upon his retirement on July 31. For the past 20 years he has given all that he had to give, now Sgt. Maj. Conway has left. This is a great loss to the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry as well as to the division.

Among the honored guests were the assistant division commander, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, 1st Brigade commander, Col. Edgar R. Poole, past commander of the 38th Battle Group, Col. Maurice C. Holden, and 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry commander, Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll.

Drivers Trained To Cross Water During Exercise

BAUMHOLDER, Germany—Water operations are an integral part of the training for an Armored Personnel Carrier driver; and the drivers in the 1st Battalion, 22rd Infantry went through such training during the week of 7 thru 13 July on the Alt-Rhine river, near Leehiem, Germany.

Captain Reginald Corliss, Company C Commander, directed the training and was assisted by Lt. Ralph E. Austin. The problem was further supervised by safety officers, Lt. Clyde K. Cleveland, Lt. Charles J. Ferris and safety NCO's SSgt's. Lawrence Blankenship and Billy McDonald.

GETS GOLD LEAF . . . Maj. DeWayne P. Flannigan, S-4 of the 2nd Brigade, has his new promotion pinned on by his wife, as Col. Dwight B. Dickson (R), Brigade Commander, looks on.

Cigar Smoke Is Thick

Smokes Are Passed Around When Sergeant Is Promoted

By 1st Brigade PIO

Visitors to 1st Brigade Headquarters recently probably thought that they had walked in on a cigar-makers convention as everywhere you looked, men were sporting big black cigars. The occasion was the recent promotion of SFC David A. Vallee, 1st Brigade operations sergeant.

In a brief ceremony held in the office of Col. Edgar R. Poole, 1st Brigade commanding officer, Sgt. Vallee received his promotion. "It is with extreme pleasure that I present you with these chevrons and orders," said Col. Poole as he handed Sgt. Vallee his new E-7 stripes and copy of orders authorizing his promotion.

Sgt. Vallee entered the Army in 1951 at Springfield, Va. and took his basic training at Fort Dix, N. J.

Following basic trainng, he was assigned to Company C, 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Division, Korea. On returning to the United States in 1954, Sgt. Vallee was discharged from the Army.

In 1955 he reentered the Army at Fort Knox, Ky. In 1956 he was assigned as a squad leader in Company A, 2nd Battalion, Keflavic, Iceland. Sgt. Vallee's next assignment was with the U. S. Special Weapons Committee at Fort Benning.

In 1958, Sgt. Vallee was again sent overseas, this time to the 3rd Armored Division in Germany.

Returning to the states in 1961, he was assigned as a squad leader in Company A, 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division. With the reorganization of the Infantry in February, Sgt. Vallee became the assistant operations sergeant of the 1st Brigade.

Sgt. Vallee, his wife, Juanita, and daughter, Russeline, 15, reside at 85 Pelham Drive, Columbus.

German Police Are Aided By Rotaplanning 23rd

By 1st Bn, 22nd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, GERMANY — On the return trip home, from OPERATION SUNDAY PUNCH, Capt. William McGondel and men of Combat Trains of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, came across an accident involving six civilian vehicles near Warberg, Germany.

Capt. McGondel and his men unsnarled the ensuing traffic jam, cleared the wreckage with their recovery vehicle, and policed the scene of the accident. This was done with skill and speed and corrected a situation that might have developed into a far more dangerous one than it already was.

Below is a portion of the letter of appreciation from the Chief of Police.

". . . This aid was given without the police officer asking for it. The officer in charge offered his aid and the aid of his soldiers.

The spontaneous help of your soldiers, which is a demonstration of Deutch and American friendship and brotherly spirit, did not remain without notice. It is a real pleasure for me to thank the leader and his soldiers and also to state my appreciation."

87th Sergeant Gets Promotion

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

SFC Burl D. Claborn, mess sergeant at Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Mech), 87th Infantry, was recently promoted to the grade of sergeant first class.

Assigned to the 7th for more than three years, and formerly assigned at Martin Army Hospital, the 5th Student Battalion (The Infantry School), the 3rd Infantry Division, Sgt. Claborn has attained the distinction of winning a trophy for best mess on the post at every unit to which he has been assigned.

A 1960 graduate of Third Army Noncommissioned Officer Academy, his decorations include the Army Commendation Medal, Good Conduct Medal (5 awards) and the German Occupation Ribbon.

'Indianheads' Make Pathfinder Football Team in Germany

By 1st Bn., 23rd

PFC James A. Mathis and PFC William P. Powers, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 23d Infantry, traveled to Mainz, Germany recently to begin training with the 8th Infantry Division Pathfinder Football team.

PFC Mathis, a native of Pahokee, Fla., served in the line for Belle Glade High in Belle Glade, Fla. He entered the Army in March, 1961 and after basic training at Fort Benning was ordered to the 23rd. Shortly after joining the battalion, Mathis was accepted on the 2nd Division football team for the 1961-62 season.

PFC Powers, from Lansing Michigan, played ball for Lansing Everett High in Lansing prior to his enlistment in the service in March of 1961. He took basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., after which he was sent to the 2nd Division at Fort Benning. He was also accepted on the 2nd division football team shortly after his arrival in the unit. Powers also played basketball for the division for two consecutive years.

Training begins for the team on August 1, and the first game is scheduled for September 7th.

23rd Lists Nine Reups; 7 to Stay

By 2nd Bn. 23rd Infantry PIO

Nine 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry soldiers reenlisted for a total of 45 years during June according to statistics released by SFC V. M. McNeill, recruiter for the Kelley Hill Area.

Seven of the reenlistees will fill their own vacancy with the 23rd while two went to another Army area.

PFC Bill D. Lettner, Company A, reenlisted for six years and the Eighth U. S. Army while Sp5 William E. Boone, Headquarters Company, took three years and an assignment at Fort Sill, Okla.

Those filling their own vacancy were Sgt. Robert L. Smith and Sp4 Eddie Marshall, Headquarters Company; Sgt. Virgil Bunch, Sp4 William Stewart and PFC Karol Soles, Company B; Sgt. Sidney Cohen and Sgt. Lawrence Hughes, Company C.

1st Brigade Gets Commo Lieutenant

By 1st Brigade PIO

Lt. William R. Dydell, 1st Brigade communications officer, recently completed the Infantry Officer's Communications Course at the Infantry School.

The 12-week course covered all phases of communications for the infantry unit and was divided into three main areas of study; Wire Communications, AM and FM Radios, and Message Center Procedures. At the conclusion of the course, a three-day exercise was held applying the principles taught.

Lt. Dydell entered the Army in 1954 as an enlisted man. From March 1959 to March, 1962, then Sgt. Dydell, served with the 25th Signal Battalion in Karlsruhe, Germany. Upon his return to the U.S., he was accepted for Officer Candidate School.

Lt. Dydell received his commission as 2nd lieutenant September 21, 1962. He then attended the Airborne School where he received his jump wings.

Lt. Dydell was then assigned to the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry where he served as a platoon leader in Company A, and later as communications platoon leader.

COACH KINNARD ACCEPTS TSB BASEBALL TROPHY
Col. Hoebeke (L) Presents Trophy to Kinnard for TSB Team.

Student Brigade Nine Captures 1963 Pennant

The Major Unit Baseball League championship Trophy and individual trophies were presented to members of the victorious Student Brigade team by Col. Adrian Hoebeke, deputy commander of The Infantry Center, during ceremonies at home plate following Monday night's final game of the season.

Manager Bob Kinnard accepted the championship trophy for his team, and individual trophies went to Jesse Joyce, Ralph Maru, Pedro Berrios, Jesus Herrans, Homer Kendricks, Billy Joyce, Andy Zilka, Mike Carricarte, Marvin Rossato, Gary Moston, Glen Ponte, Herbert Lauve, Harry Franks and Kinnard.

Tech Coach To Address Jacket Alumni

Georgia Tech football coach Bobby Dodd will be guest speaker at the Georgia Tech Club of Columbus' annual stag barbecue Aug. 19, at the United Oil Farm on Macon Road, beginning with a social hour at 6:30 p.m.

Tech alumni at Fort Benning may attend the affair and tickets are $4 per person. Reservations may be made by remitting checks to Georgia Tech Club of Columbus, P. O. Box 38, Columbus.

Dodd, who will brief local area Tech alumni on the Yellow Jackets' football prospects for the 1963 season, will be accompanied by several members of his coaching staff and by Roane Beard, executive secretary of the Georgia Tech Alumni Association.

Baseball Banter

By Ted Williamson

Generally, after a baseball season has ended, there isn't much for baseball fans to do but reminisce about the past. And, invariably, the conversation will turn to most valuable players.

Now that the USAIC Major Unit League season has ended, and the ink before the Third Army play-offs has begun, we have an opportunity for such a discussion. We have in mind the little second-sacker from The Student Brigade, Ralph Maru, who was so instrumental in that teams' pennant winning season. It doesn't take an expert to realize that Maru is at home on the diamond, nor to recognize the fact that he is an accomplished performer around the keystone.

☆ ☆ ☆

Of course, Maru has the background to prove this is no mere hallucination. After graduating from high-school in 1956, he played on a team set up by the old Brooklyn Dodgers. Three of his teammates, Johnny Orsino, Tommy Davis and Bob Aspromonte, are now playing major league ball.

Ralph then attended Oswego College in Oswego, N. Y., on a baseball scholarship.

After picking up his sheepskin, he joined the Philadelphia Phillies organization, playing two years of minor-league ball at Dothan, Ala., and Elmira, N. Y., before coming into the service.

Since arriving at Fort Benning last year, he has been a fixture in the TSB infield.

In talking to Ralph before Monday night's finale, he stated that at the ripe old age of 26 he felt he would be getting a late start on a baseball career, and the teaching profession, upon his release from the Army, looks appealing.

As for Maru's performance while here at Fort Benning, he was steady as a rock. ("Rock" being his nickname). Ralph doesn't hit home-runs, but he led the league in 1963 with a .370 average, including 11 doubles and 4 triples. Some nights it must have seemed to enemy pitchers that Maru was on first base more times than the first baseman. In the field, Maru's 'piece-de-resistance' is the double play. He credits the expert coaching of Sibi Sisti, former Boston Braves infielder, as the big force behind his brilliant defensive play.

Another contribution, and maybe the most important as far as TSB was concerned, was the fact that he seemed to be the accepted leader and steadying influence on his club. This alone would make him a valuable man, but combined with his natural ability, hustle and desire, the results are overwhelmingly in his favor as the most valuable man in the league.

☆ ☆ ☆

Our congratulations to The Student Brigade for winning the 1963 Major Unit League championship. Bob Kinnard once again has turned out a winning club; and it could not happen to a better man. Kinnard is one of the most respected men on the Fort Benning sports scene. He must have something going for him, the way he can come up with the best athletes year after year.

At the same time, we would like to pay tribute to the other two teams in the league, the 197th Infantry Brigade and The Center Troop Command, for showing some fine baseball.

TIC Athlete Chosen for CISM; One of Three From Third Army

By John Holland

A young Fort Benning soldier has been named to a 25-man team of military track and field stars who will represent the United States in the CISM (Council of International Sports de Militarie) Games at Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 23-25.

The Fort Benning athlete, Sp4 Godfrey Moore is one of three men in the Third U. S. Army area selected to the elite squad.

Moore, a lithe, 24-year-old broad jump specialist, left Fort Benning last Thursday en route to Europe for three weeks of training and final preparations for the games, which will include military athletes from all of the NATO countries.

Horne Rough

Although he does not know too much about the Allied athletes he will face, Moore figures his roughest competition will come from Daryl Horne, a U. S. Air Force jumper who recently competed against Soviet athletes.

Running in fast and good competition will be no novelty for Moore, however, since he has competed against the best in his field, including famed Ralph Boston, the world record holder in the broad jump.

Moore credits Boston, who, incidently, broke Moore's national collegiate record in the event while a student at Tennessee A&I, with helping develop his jumping style through the use of what both refer to as the "special method."

"It's really difficult to explain what the method is," Moore laughed, "but it really boils down to a 'pushing' action off the take-off board rather than a 'pulling' action in the legs. It's just hard to explain it to someone who has never broad jumped."

Olympic Games

Moore, a gunner in the mortar section of the Infantry Board, has trained daily since December, and even though he is training to reach his jumping capacity for the CISM Games, his eyes are pointing to another target, the 1964 Olympic Games.

"I just missed making the Olympic team in 1960," he commented, adding, "I came in fourth behind Boston, Bill Robeson and Anthony Watson and they represented the U.S. in the Olympic broad jump."

Moore seems to think he has a good chance of an Olympic berth the next time around, however, since Robeson and Watson have ended their careers.

The five-foot, 10-inch, 18-pounder's broad jump career spans eight years, since he was 16 years old, and he was an All-American in high school for two years and for three years while a student at Winston-Salem (N. C.) College.

As a high school boy, Moore competed in France and England as a member of a team which usually consists of college athletes only.

In 1959, he was part of a team which toured South Africa and in 1962 he competed in Europe as a member of the All-armed Forces track and field squad.

In the CISM Games, Moore not only will broad jump, but will participate in the hop, step and jump ("triple jump") and probably will run one leg of the 440-yard relay.

When he returns to Fort Benning in early September, Moore will be separated from the Army and he plans to teach on the elementary school level, either in his hometown or "someplace in California."

No matter what the outcome of Olympic tryouts at Queens Island, N. Y., next June, Moore plans to "retire" from broad jumping.

Moore last May unofficially broke Boston's record of 27 feet, one and three-quarters inches with a leap of 27 feet, two and a half inches in a meet at Baltimore. The jump was never recorded, however, since a wind barometer was not employed and wind velocity data is an important necessity for an official record.

His best official jump, performed at San Antonio, Texas, last year as a member of the All-Army team, was 26 feet, seven inches.

Moore hopes to make a good showing at Brussels, but he also has his sights set on Boston's record, too.

YAC All-Stars Split Two; Baker and Casey Excel

The YAC Doughboy All-Stars split a pair of road games last weekend, whipping Turner Air Force Base 8 to 0 at Albany and dropping a heart-breaker, 2 to 0 at Fort Rucker despite a no-hit effort by Curtis Baker and Mike Casey.

Baker and Casey combined to hurl a two hitter against Turner AFB and Baker smacked two homers to lead the hitting attack. Baker and Casey split the hurling chores down the middle, each working three innings.

The game at Fort Rucker was an odd one as Fort Rucker's hitters couldn't buy a hit and the Benning nine played errorless ball to back up the no-hitter.

The only runs in the game came on two walks, an infield out and a wild pitch. The All-Stars touched Rucker pitcher Glen Butler for five hits but couldn't push across the necessary runs.

Clay Seems Nervous On Selective Service

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Cassius Clay usually has a verbose answer to every question, but during his visit to Armed Forces Press and Radio offices here, he ran into one that knocked him cold.

Reminded that as a 21-year-old he was approaching draft age, the loquacious heavyweight fighter was, for once, speechless.

"Have you given any thought to your military obligation?" Clay was asked. His lyrical wit abandoning him, Clay blinked, as from the sting of a punch, then began firing questions of his own.

"How much time have I got?" he queried. "When do I go in?"

Told that his questions could only be answered by his Selective Service Board, Clay boomed: "Well, just so they give me enough time to whip that big, ugly bear Sonny Liston for the championship."

Clay, who was accompanied by his look-alike younger brother, Rudolph Valentino Clay, said that he expects to fight Liston Sept. 30 for the world heavyweight championship.

"Liston will fall in eight to prove that I'm great," Clay cooed. "And if he starts to jive, I'll cut it to five. If that won't do, he'll fall in two."

Clay said he was in New York to cut a long-play record. He revealed that the album will include both songs and poetry.

The album, quite naturally, will be titled, "I Am the Greatest."

Marines Record Jackie's Waltz

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Rudolph Friml, recently back in the United States after a European concert tour sponsored by the State Department, said he had only one small worry. He couldn't help wondering how his delicate waltz "Jacqueline" sounded at the hands of the Marine Corps Band.

The song was composed for the 34th birthday of Mrs. John F. Kennedy. Mr. Friml sent her the score shortly before leaving on his European tour in April. It was recorded by the band at her request.

At his hotel, shortly after debarking from the liner Independence, Mr. Friml, who at the age of 83 can still summon a vigorous baritone, sang a few lines of the song:

Jacqueline,
For your name is a charm that you wear.
When the world that was gray turn to green,
You're a part of the joy in the air.

1st Air Assault Brigade Completes Nine-Day Exercise

By 1st Lt. Richard Sinatra

The 1st Air Assault Brigade of the 11th Air Assault Division, with supporting attachments, has successfully completed a nine - day, brigade-supervised field exercise at Fort Stewart.

The 1st Brigade is commanded by Col. George S. Beatty Jr., a rated fixed-wing aircraft pilot, who recently earned his helicopter wings.

The 1st Brigade employed its forces against a guerrilla enemy in a cold war situation. The U. S. government, answering an appeal from the country of Hostland to restore law and order there, alerted and employed the 1st Brigade to protect Hostland borders.

The brigade, a tactical command headquarters to which units can be attached for specific missions, organized for task operations with the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry; the 1st Platoon of Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, and an aviation section from the 11th Aviation Group.

The 1st Brigade also controlled Troop B, 17th Cavalry Squadron; forward support detachments of the 11th Air Assault Division Support Command, and the 1st Platoon of Company A, 511th Signal Battalion.

The division provided further aid with fire support from the 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery, and helicopter and fixed-wing aircraft support from the 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group and the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Six Phases

The exercise was conducted in six phases. Phases one and six were primarily the staff responsibility of the S-1, Maj. Samuel J. Merrill, and the S-4, Maj. Guy A. Eberhardt, who handled administrative movement to and from Fort Stewart.

Phases two through five were the staff responsibilities of the S-2, Maj. David O. Kramer, and the S-3, Maj. Harold G. Keebaugh. Here, the documents to support the intelligence and aggressor play and the plans and operations were drawn up with appropriate orders issued to participating units.

During the initial phase conducted July 23, the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, with task units, was ordered to seize bases of operations in the first sector of Hostland and to begin the elimination of guerrillas.

The next morning, after intelligence indications noted a company size "aggressor" buildup, the task force was ordered to attack on two flight routes with two companies in the attacking echelon.

In this operation a great deal of control and coordination between supporting aerial transportation units and air assault infantry were needed to insure that the objective was hit simultaneously at H-hour by both companies.

Guerrillas Trapped

The flight routes and landing sites were selected to close off the objective from guerrilla escape, since elimination was the prime mssslon.

Destroying the guerrillas, the "tailored combat force" was ordered to move to the final sector of Hostland to re-establish bases of operations before locating and destroying forces in that area.

A base was established 20 miles from the brigade, and company - size strongpoints were five miles from the battalion. With these increased distances, it was necessary for the brigade to step up communication and aviation support to provide quick reaction time needed to insure success.

In a final operation, aggressor forces had violated territorial rights by crossing Hostland border with lead elements of an armored division.

The 1st Brigade's mission was now to execute offensive operations against regular and irregular forces and to prevent reinforcements across Hostland border, while continuing to secure and defend positions, installations, and lines of communications in Hostland sectors. The air lines of communications across the swampy Hostland terrain made this extensive area coverage possible.

Commander Pleased

Col. Beatty commented, "Our aim was to increase the tempo of activity as the exercise progressed, to test the reaction time of Infantry, supporting units, and aviation. In this we were highly successful; troops and aircraft personnel responded speedily to each arising operation. The advantages of fusing Army aviation with ground units are becoming more obvious as all concerned become more knowledgeable and more adept in performing their part of the combined effort."

The aggressors, formed from Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, and from the 42nd Artillery Battalion, added an element of realism to the problem and tested intelligence capabilities of all participating units.

They opposed air assault landings on each objective and conducted night raids on Infantry and artillery operations to test their internal security. Armed with marking devices to "strike off" personnel and equipment, the guerrillas found the friendly units alert on all occasions in their attempt to penetrate positions.

USAR School Reunites Two Staff Officers

A reunion between two World War II staff officers of the 82nd Airborne Division took place when Col. Michael K. Berkut, a Reserve officer from Chapel Hill, N.C., reported for two weeks of active duty training.

The reunion was with Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Col. Berkut, who has just been promoted from lieutenant colonel, is a former commandant of the Durham USAR School. He is on active duty here for two weeks with the Durham and Raleigh USAR Schools, offering training for some 650 Army Reserve Infantry officers.

He is serving with the Atomic Energy Commission's Division of Biology and Medicine, Washington, D.C., while on a two-year leave of absence from the faculty of the Medical School at the University of North Carolina.

Col. Berkut served with the 82nd from the time of its designation as an airborne division in 1942 through its combat operations in Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Normandy, Holland, Ardennes-Alsace, and Central Europe until its movement into Berlin for occupation duty in 1945.

Both Gen. Norton and Col. Berkut served in regiments of the division and then as division staff officers under Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin.

Gen. Norton was G-3 of the 82nd and Col. Berkut was G-2 at the time. Col. Berkut left the 82nd to return to the United States following the war.

Third Army CG Speaks to Grads

Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, commanding general of the Third Army, was a guest speaker at The Infantry School Wednesday when 98 U.S. and 23 Allied officers from nine countries completed an associate officer career course.

The graduation exercises were conducted in Theater No. 1.

The Allied students, who received Infantry School "Follow Me" pins, represent Argentina, Burma, Denmark, Ethiopia, Honduras, Indonesia, Jordan, Tunisia and Turkey.

Your Dental Health

Toothbrush Best Bet Against Oral Germs

There are many things that you can do to keep your mouth healthy. We will discuss them in this column in weeks to come.

The most important thing you can do to keep your smile bright and cheerful is to brush your teeth immediately after eating. Not just after meals, but after snacks too, after every time you eat. How you brush your teeth is not as important as how often you do it, and the best criterion of success is whether your mouth is clean.

Teeth and gums that are properly cared for will last a lifetime. Have your teeth cleaned by a dentist or a dental hygienist periodically to remove soft and hard deposits that are irritating to the gums. Regular periodic visits to the dentist enables him to discover and treat dental diseases before they progress too far. When tooth decay is treated early there is little discomfort and less tooth structure is lost than if you wait for the danger sign of a toothache.

Gum Disease

Gum disease is one of the worst threats to good dental health because it leads to destruction of the tissues needed to support the teeth. Neglect is the most common cause of gum disease because it permits tartar to form on the teeth. As a protection, regular check-ups are necessary. They enable the dentist to remove the tartar, and make it possible for him to treat gum disease in time to prevent serious trouble.

Wouldn't it be nice if everyone could have handsome, healthy teeth with no toothaches or cavities or gum troubles?

Dental researchers have been looking for some painless, inexpensive, simple cureall. Much progress has been made in recent years.

At Fort Benning we have a Preventive Dental Health Program, sponsored by the Community Activities Association and supervised by the Dental Service, which is conducted on a continuing basis for dependent children (ages 3-18) of military personnel.

The program consists of cleaning and the application of a fluoride solution to the children's teeth. Appointments for this service can be made by calling the Dependent Dental Clinic at 545-4494.

The nearest thing we have at present to a cure-all is a toothbrush, however it must be used properly to receive the full benefit. If you are in doubt about proper brush techniques you should arrange to have a demonstration by your dentist. This service is offered at the Dependent Dental Clinic in Old Hospital Area.

Today's Soldier Is Not Covered By GI Insurance

ATLANTA, Ga. — Men entering the Armed Forces today are not covered by GI insurance, Pete Wheeler, director of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service, pointed out today.

Congress abolished the insurance program for incoming servicemen in 1956. All GI insurance still in force was issued before repeal of the program, Mr. Wheeler said.

National surveys show that many servicemen and their parents assume that government insurance is in force during active duty assignments, Mr. Wheeler said.

However, any veteran who served since April 25, 1951, can obtain a special policy (1) if the Veterans Administration rules he has a service-connected disability and (2) if he applies for the policy within a year after that VA decision is made. A National Guardsman or Reservist can also obtain the special disability policy if he meets the same eligibility requirements.

TIS's Only Armor Unit Celebrates Organization Day

Last Saturday, the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade celebrated its Organization Day.

With the companies of the battalion massed in a horseshoe formation, the battalion commander, Lt. Col. William T. Van Atten, read a proclamation pointing out the significance of the history and traditions of the battalion and announcing the activities of the day.

The ceremony got under way at 9:40 a.m. when a mounted color guard bearing the national and battalion colors and dressed in old style cavalry uniforms brought their mounts forward for the playing of the National Anthem. Col. Van Atten then introduced Col. Robert M. Williams, commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Col. Williams remarked to the assembled men, families, and guests that the 69th Armor, the only armor unit assigned to The Infantry School, has by its outstanding performance in the field, held high the tradition armor has had dating back to such colorful cavalry figures at Stuart and Sheridan, up through the more recent armor men such as Patton. Col. Williams noted that the battalion had a challenging job, for this in many cases was the first armor contact that the young OCS, ROTC, and enlisted students at Fort Benning had received.

Battalion History

Maj. Walter L. Watkins, the battalion executive officer, provided an inspiring moment for the tankers when he presented the lineage of the battalion and the history of armor, covering the entire transition from the horseback mounted cavalry trooper of days long past to the modern armor units mounted in the latest of combat vehicles —the tank.

During the narration The Infantry Center Band added color to the proceedings as they played a cavalry tune, "The Gary Owen March," recognized as being associated with the greatness of the past cavalry.

While the lineage was unfolding, the four mounted troopers in their uniforms taken from the pages of history paraded before the troops. As they galloped from the field, the music built to a great crescendo, and the familiar sound of tank engines started in the distance.

Then five tanks, one by one, broke from the woods at the end of the field, roared toward the formation, and halted in plain view, firing their main guns, one round from each tank in honor of the five great campaigns of the battalion: Normandy; Northern France; Rhineland; Ardennes - Alsace; and Central Europe.

Competition

Following the ceremony the men of the battalion competed for individual and company honors. The company guidon race started the events with four men from each company, including the company commanders and first sergeants, running a relay race while carrying their company guidons. This event was won by Company A.

It was followed by a three-legged race also won by Company A, a track breaking contest won by Company C; a tug-of-war won by Headquarters Company; a weapons assembly contest won by Company B, and a volleyball tournament which was won by the battalion staff officers.

Activities for the children included a dart throw, a sack race, a softball throw, and a dunking machine dubbed "Tank the Tanker".

Following the events, the men, families and guests had an outdoor steak dinner. During the meal in the battalion picnic area, the band gave a rousing 45-minute concert.

At the conclusion of the meal, Col. Williams presented the awards to the winning competitors in the events of the morning. The battalion commander's Organization Day Trophy was presented to Company A for accumulating the most points in the days activities. Cigarette lighters were presented to the individual winners.

Brig. Gen. Milburn Named Army's DSG

Brig. Gen. Conn L. Milburn Jr., recently became the Army's deputy Surgeon General.

He succeeds Maj. Gen. Howard W. Doan, who will be executive director of the Office for Dependents' Medical Care in Denver, Colo.

Gen. Milburn was previously director of the Personnel and Training Directorate, OTSG, and before that served as director of commandant of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington.

TIC Legal Officers Open New Division

Military personnel and their dependents have a personalized legal service at their disposal in the recently established Soldiers Advocate Division of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section.

Bringing together into one office, all direct legal services available to a soldier or his dependents, the division is expected to foster a closer relationship between the individual and his lawyer, officials said.

Presently in Room 14 of Bldg. 5, the Soldiers Advocate Division soon will operate in Bldg. 1679, which is undergoing alterations.

Col. Edwin G. Schuck, staff judge advocate, said the establishment of the Soldiers Advocate Division was in line "with continuing efforts to improve the effectiveness of legal service at Fort Benning."

"Military lawyers assigned to the division are responsible for providing all direct legal service for individual soldiers and their dependents," he continued.

Previously, direct legal services have been divided among other divisions of the Staff Judge Advocate Section. The consolidation of the personal legal services into one unit is expected to result in a more effective handling of an individual's total legal problems, officials said.

Capt. David E. Rebbin has been appointed chief of the new division. He is a B.A. graduate of Wittenburg University in Springfield, Ohio, and received his bachelor of laws degree from the Ohio State University College of Law at Columbus.

Col. Schuck said all personnel assigned to the Soldiers Advocate Division are qualified attorneys who have been admitted to practice law in their home states.

"Any communication between them and an individual is 'privileged' in the legal sense," Col. Schuck continued.

Under the concept, greater stress will be placed upon preventive law, Col. Schuck said.

"Each soldier, commissioned officer, warrant officer or enlisted man, is encouraged to consult his lawyer, the soldiers advocate, about any legal problem he may have," Col. Schuck advised. "This practice can prevent many minor problems from developing into major ones."

The practice of having a Soldiers Advocate Division in a Staff Judge Advocate Section originated several years ago at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Col. Schuck said, and has spread to commands throughout the world.

CAPT. REBBIN

Lopsided Odds Challenge 'Top Guard'

The odds against winning the supernumary of the main post guard three times in succession are 27,000 to 1. A soldier can overcome these odds only by thorough preparation and the application of a great deal of "spit and polish".

PFC Phillip G. Edwards, Company "B" 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) won the supernumary of the main post guard again on July 26, marking the third consecutive time that he has achieved the honor.

Now, the "top guard" is planning to make it again for four-in-a-row. The odds? 810,000 to 1.

806th Survey Crew Working 72-Hour Week

Working like the engineer soldiers that they are, the 806th Engineer Battalion's Surveying Section has been getting plenty of on-the-job training in recent weeks.

Committed to a number of construction projects which require exacting grades, elevations, angles and computations, the surveying party, under the control of Sgt. Kenneth M. Willis, has been working a 12-hour day, six days a week.

SFC WILLIAM BLANKENSHIP
'63 National Pistol Champion

Blankenship Cops '63 Pistol Crown

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—Army Sergeant First Class William B. Blankenship Jr., was announced Friday as the 1963 National Pistol Champion following tabulation of scores from three days of firing which began Aug. 6.

It is the first time in the history of the National Rifle and Pistol Matches that any pistol shooter has acquired the title four years consecutively. He has proven that championship does more than rhyme with Blankenship.

Blankenship came to the 1963 Matches having been beaten on the ranges during the year by five of the Nation's outstanding competitors who would be shooting against him at Camp Perry, and the rumors were flying that he was washed up.

"I pay little attention to what others shoot while the matches are in progress," he said, "I must shoot against myself."

The Richlands, Va., soldier said he was very pleased with his win. He had picked up the .22 cal. pistol championship Tuesday, the Center Fire Championship on Wednesday, and the .45 cal. pistol championship by only seven X-ring shots on Thursday.

Blankenship set a new National Match record for the pistol with a 2654-151. The previous record was his own 2636-128 set in 1960. "When I started firing, I only wanted to shoot the best possible score," the champion said, "I wanted to get better than 2636-128." He also set four other new records for matches in the subaggregate championships.

Blankenship, 33, entered the Army in April 1948 at Fort Jackson, S. C., but it wasn't until Christmas 1952 when he was 22 years old that marksmanship ever became an urge. He had received a .45 pistol as a gift, and the following months he had a chance to fire. Lt. Col. Elgin G. Radcliff, helped Blankenship with shooting problems at Fort Shafter, Hawaii. Three months later he shot his first match, winning ten medals in the new shooter class. He traveled to Camp Perry in 1953 as a rifle shooter on the Hawaii team, and in 1954 was part of the All-Army team. In the Mid-Winter Matches in 1955, he placed fourth in the grand aggregate with the pistol. He has been winning matches since.

One of the few shooters who hold the Distinguished Badge for both rifle and pistol, he is the only triple distinguished marksman in the Army. This June he was awarded the Distinguished International Shooter's Badge, only the eighth American shooter to receive it. The award is given only to members of U. S. International Shooting teams who place first, second or third in international competition.

Sergeant Blankenship is an instructor-shooter at Fort Benning's Army Marksmanship Training Unit. His wife Helen, daughter Linda, 12, and William E., 7 live at 2404 Broadmoor.

Third Army Golf Play Opens Here Tuesday

Over 90 top golfers will arrive at Fort Benning this weekend to tune-up for the Third U.S. Army Golf Tournament which will be played next week on the Pine Side of the Main Officers' Open Mess golf course.

The annual tournament officially gets underway Tuesday and continues through Friday. It will be played in three divisions—the Open, Senior's and Women's. Teams from 16 Third Army units or posts are scheduled for action.

The Open Division will host the largest field of golfers with 56 linksters set to teeoff on opening day. The Senior Division will host 35 men, while only seven women will be vying for top laurels in the southern Army district tournament.

Heading the list of Third Army golfers are some of the southeast's finest golfers, including Bill Martindale and host pro Howard Holbrook, heading the Fort Benning squad; Jerry Greenbaum who plays with Headquarters, XII Corps; John A. Troutman, who will head Headquarters IV Corps entries, and former All-Army golf champion Clifton Harrington, who will top the 101st Airborne golfers from Fort Campbell, Ky.

Harrington was crowned All-Army champion in 1961-62 and Third Army champion in 1958, 60-61. Last year's Third Army champion Hugh Royer, who is presently club pro at Ida Cason's Callaway Gardens golf course, was the only man able to break Harrington's two year victory string.

Army nurse Amelia Amizich is favored to grab the women's title. Maj. Amizich's titles include Hawaii State Women's champion, 1959-60; women's All-Army champion, 1955; women's All-Army runner-up, 1956-57, and Fourth Army champion, 1955-56-57.

Jerry Greenbaum will carry an impressive record to the tee Tuesday in the Open Division. Greenbaum's long list of titles include Piney Woods Invitational winner, 1958; International Jaycee Junior Tournament winner, 1958; Atlanta City Amateur winner, 1960; Sunkist Mid - Winter Tournament winner, 1961; Radium Invitational runner-up, 1962; captain, Tulane University golf team, 1960-62, and Atlanta City Amateur winner, 1963.

Representatives of the Third Army area golf teams include: Fort Benning - Martindale, Joe Hamby, Paul Colby and James Remmert, Open Division; Howard Holbrook, Gorman Aure and George Hardgrove, Senior Division.

Fort Rucker, Ala.—Robert Briggaman, Frank Dunham, Walter R. Brownback and James Carlisle, Open Division; Jack Martin and Norman W. Billiter, Senior Division.

Headquarters, Third Army Recruiting District — Myrlen Brown and William Hargrave, Open Division; J. M. Ogilvio and James V. Baldassaro, Senior Division, and Retta Dial and Shirlee Gardiner, Women's Division.

Headquarters, IV Corps — John Troutman, Archie Stubbs and Garry Brown, Open Division.

Red Stone Arsenal, Ala. — Edward S. Kroneberg, Ernie L. Bennett, Jerald Henderson and Everett Comstock, Senior Division; Rex Javins and Ralph Moore, Senior Division.

Fort Gordon — Bernard V. Porter, Louis R. Carnatti, William D. King, Floyd Harrell, and Harold Zink, Senior Division.

Headquarters, National Guard Advisory Group — Ned Broyles, Senior Division.

Fort Campbell — Clifton Harrington, James Solis, Larry Dahl, Gilbert Dvoracek and John Hartwell, Open Division; John Turner and Lawrence Varoom and Gene Castle, Senior Division, and Amelia Amizich, Women's Division.

Infantry Board Marks 1st Year As Army Materiel Command Unit

BY JOHN HOLLAND

The U. S. Army Materiel Command, of which the Infantry Board at Fort Benning is a part, recently observed its first anniversary.

The command, established last August, was formed to supervise the development, procurement and maintenance of all materiel utilized by the Army. To assist in carrying out the developmental segment of its mission, the command consolidated the Infantry Board and 17 other Army testing agencies under the Test and Evaluation Command.

Primary mission of the Infantry Board is to conduct realistic service tests of developmental items, tests which are conducted under field conditions at Fort Benning to determine suitability for use by the combat soldier.

Another integral part of the Infantry Board's mission is to assist the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency in establishing reali-tic requirements for new Infantry equipment and to provide guidance to developers of the equipment.

Board

The consolidation of developmental agencies, formerly under various technical services, and all test agencies, formerly technical services agencies, and U. S. Continental Army Command boards, under the AMC greatly facilitated this latter function of the Infantry Board.

Specific fields of interest of the board include firepower, target acquisition, fire control, ground surveillance and ground mobility for Infantry units, field-type clothing and equipment, rations, chemical warfare protective devices, and anti-personnel mines for Army-wide use.

Since the Infantry Board's assignment to the Test and Evaluation Command of the AMC, remarkable progress has been made in the development field to give the Infantryman the arms and equipment with which to fight and to succeed on tomorrow's battlefield.

The board's Small Arms Division has tested folding stocks for the M-14 rifle, improved hand grenades, the AR (Automatic Rifle)-15, hand-held signals and an infrared weapon sight.

In addition, Capt. Dean Gosney, a test officer in this division, designed and built the first prototypes of the modified M-14 rifle which will provide the automatic rifleman with a weapon equal in effectiveness to the BAR (Browning Automatic Rifle), yet it is approximately seven pounds lighter.

Capt. Gosney also designed an improved sight for the M-79 grenade launcher.

Among the items tested by the Supporting Weapons and Fire Control Equipment Division have been improved 81-mm mortar ammunition, an adaptation of the M-113 armored personnel carrier to provide self-propelled mounts for both 81-mm and 4.2-inch mortars, ballistic range arms to simplify mortar fire direction procedures, a 120-mm recoilless rifle and the light and heavy versions of Davy Crockett.

One of this division's test officers, Capt. Fred Mahaffey, designed, fabricated and conducted preliminary tests on a new method to combat ambushing patrols and designed an improved kit for mounting the 106-mm recoilless rifle on the M-151 quarter-ton truck.

The board's third division Field Equipment and Special Projects, has service tested a new armor vest, anti-personnel mines, M-114 and M-113EZ armored personnel carriers, decontamination kits for chemical agents, an automatic chemical agent alarm, chemical agent protective overgarments and mine detectors.

This division is conducting tests in Panama on tropical field clothing, boots, a new tropical hat, and a lightweight rucksack a type of knapsack on an aluminum frame.

The board, which was established at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in 1903, was moved to Fort Benning in 1919. Throughout the years many distinguished Infantrymen have served on the board, two of the more prominent ones being George Catlett Marshall and Omar Nelson Bradley, both of whom later became Generals of the Army.

The current president of the board is Col. Robert C. Williams who came to Fort Benning in 1960 after serving as commander of the 1st Battle Group, 12th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

'Ham' Club Helps People In Distress

Last month, radio hams from units throughout the post joined their civilian counterparts from Columbus and Phenix City to form a two-way radio communications club.

Named the Columbus Citizen Ban Radio Club, Inc., the organization is non-profit and is dedicated to the task of helping mortorists in distress.

Club members drive around the area from 6 to 11 p.m. on weekdays and around the clock on weekends looking for flat tires, vapor-locked motors or otherwise stalled cars. The club has a monitoring station at 3200 Victory Dr. which receives distress signals from the traveling trouble-shooters.

From the monitoring station help is dispatched to anyone needing assistance. There is no charge for the service.

Club president Bonnie M. Lanceford explained that the public is invited to call on any of the mobile units at any time for assistance. "That's the reason for the club — so we can help people," he said.

Expanded OCS Needs Qualified Applicants

The Infantry officer candidate program has been reorganized and expanded to meet the present and projected needs of the Army for more company grade officers.

The physical facilities have been expanded within The Infantry School's 5th Student Battalion, and the need for qualified applicants to fill these facilities has been created. This need has been widely publicized. Many have asked themselves, "Should I apply for Officer Candidate School" The remarks which follow should help answer this question.

The Army has individuals who are working far below their capacity for leadership and positions of responsibility, and as a consequence, are discouraged. The Officer Candidate program is one way for individuals in this situation to advance themselves and help satisfy one of the requirements of national defense.

Another reason is the material gain. This consideration enters anyone's mind who is considering an application, especially with the pay raises which are due in October.

There are other reasons a person should apply. If you are an individual who likes to rise to a challenge, then you will find the course to be one of the toughest and most demanding trial of your Army career, both physically and mentally.

If you contemplate a military career, possess the necessary motivation, leadership ability and want a chance to employ it in positions of responsibility, then you should consider applying for the school.

If you are looking for prestige and security, and possess the potential to become an officer, then you should apply, but only if you realize that while giving security and prestige, your commission will demand a great deal from you.

Many things can be said for the officer candidate program and many things gained from it, but these benefits are achieved after months of arduous labor and sacrifice. If you can meet the requirements, then go for that "Gold Bar."

10 Years of Tension In Korean Armistice

A troubled decade has passed since the Korean Armistice was accomplished.

In the conflict, that was neither won nor lost, the United States had 136,913 casualties: 33,629 killed and 103,284 wounded.

Two days after the 10th anniversary of the Armistice, North Korean raiders ambushed a U.S. Army jeep patrol, killing two Americans and critically wounding a third.

Three days later, another American died in an exchange of gunfire with North Koreans.

So, there was nothing to celebrate.

The puppet North Koreans, aping the belligerence of their mentors in Peking, have again shown the world that the West can expect no respite in the Cold War. It seems more than coincidence the guns should start crackling just after Moscow and the West reach an accord on a test ban treaty and the USSR appeared to disagree with the Peking government on how the Free World should be buried.

There was nothing to celebrate.

The end of the decade could only be marked, as the passing of 10 tension-filled years during which the inflexible ruthlessness of the Reds has not changed one iota. (AFPS)

Capitol Notes

Senate hearings have been completed on the military pay bill, and Chairman Howard Cannon (D., Nev.) is "hopeful" he can have a revamped bill ready for the full Armed Services Committee consideration early in August. Seven major areas of possible House-Senate disagreement emerged from the open hearings. They revolve around officer and enlisted basic pay, subsistence allowances, family separation allowances, combat pay, recomputation and special doctor-pay. It appeared likely the Senators would accept Defense Department recommendations to boost basic pay of officers in pay grades 0-2, 3, 4 and possibly 0-5. If the pay measure is reported out of subcommittee within the time period expected by Senator Cannon, and should win quick action by the full committee, the final bill probably would be ready for White House signature before the end of August.

An amendment to the Academy Bill sponsored from the floor of the House by Rep. Melvin Laird (R., Wis.), a member of the Military Appropriations Subcommittee, will require five years' obligated service of all Service Academy graduates beginning with those appointed after the effective date of the legislation.

* * *

Congressional action on military bills is continuing at quickened pace. "Cold War" medals legislation has gone to the President for signature. The Air Force emergency promotion authority for 4,000 lieutenant colonel spaces was signed by the President (PL 88-63). The House passed the Service Academy Bill (HR 7356) authorizing expanded enrollment for West Point and the Air Force Academy.

CHAPLAINS CORNER

Drawing Bigger Circles

BY CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.) ROY D. HIDY

The expression "running around in circles" describes the activity of many people today.

These circles are man's own making; they are fairly limited and often exclusive. People who do not fit their concept of life are excluded from the circle. People who differ from them in color, creed, politics, social status or what have you are out.

Edwin Markham is perhaps best known for his poem, "The Man With The Hoe," but that is not all he wrote. He and a friend had a strong disagreement over a certain matter. Heated words and separation resulted.

Out of the experience came these words from Markham's pen:

"He drew a circle that shut me out,
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
But love and I had the will to win.
We drew a circle that took him in."

The problems of discord and strife plaguing our country today, and the whole world for that matter, will be resolved only when individuals and nations are willing to draw bigger circles that will take in even their so called enemies. The solution is not a circle that shuts them out, but one that takes them in.

Honor Is Important Regardless of Rank

Throughout history honor has been the glowing quality which men esteem above all others. No other profession demands this high quality to any greater degree than that of the soldier.

A soldier's honor has nothing to do with position or grade. To be held in respect by his fellow man, the private must possess no less a degree of honor than the general.

Although honor is made up of many things, there are four particular qualities which are paramount. They are: courage, fidelity, integrity and dignity.

Courage is the ability to meet danger and difficulties, and to do so despite a shaking hand or pounding heart. Fear is common to most men in the face of grave danger, and courage is the quality which carries the soldier to his objective in spite of his fear of bodily injury and death. It also takes courage to act and stand fast on your beliefs — to stick to your ideals under the pressure of scorn, ridicule, isolation, abuse, and violence. Moral courage helps you choose the harder right instead of the easier wrong.

Fidelity is conscientious attention to duty and faithfulness to superiors, equals and subordinates as well as to country, family service and church. This quality binds armies together and strengthens the ability of soldiers to meet adversity with confidence and teamwork. Loyalty and trust unite men in fighting for those principles they believe to be good and true.

Integrity embraces all of the highest concepts of truth, honesty and dependability. A man of integrity is believed completely and trusted implicitly. This quality inspires his comrades, increases their confidence in him, compels their respect and encourages them to follow his example.

Dignity is the outward bearing and behavior which comes from inherent self-respect. It is a positive quality embodying the habitual observance of justice, courtesy, respectability, and fair play. Spirit without arrogance, courage with bombast, and fortitude without lament, are some of the qualities of the dignified man. He commands respect from others because of his quiet confidence and self-respect.

Benning Quartermaster Facilities Process 'Chow' for 42,000 Troops

Over 48 million pounds of meat, potatoes, vegetables, bread and other foods are processed annually through Fort Benning's Quartermaster Corps facilities for use in the post's 146 mess halls.

The massive job of getting the food to the 42,000 troops presently located here depends upon roughly 1,500 men.

The annual cost of this is approximately $9 to $10 million for the food alone, according to post food advisor Capt. Harry K. Barber.

But it's a long way from the menu to the meal, and a lot of work is involved.

The work at Fort Benning begins when the local menu board takes the master menu and makes additions and-or revisions on the basis of local food prices, climactic conditions and troop activities.

The board, made up of the post food advisor, commissary officer, surgeon and representatives of troop units, insure the nutrient value and variety of the food. This is done approximately 120 days prior to the actual serving of the meal.

Then the issue unit of the Commissary Branch takes over, about 50-60 days before serving time, and places the orders for the food by means of computor cards. These cards are sent either to Columbus, Ohio General Depot for items of carload size or larger, or to New Orleans Market Center for smaller loads.

The food then comes by rail or truck into the Commissary section on post where it is sent either to cold storage or warehouses.

Then the major command units submit requisitions seven days prior to the date of consumption.

These requisitions go several places, depending upon what type of food is called for.

Meat Processing

Fort Benning's Central Meat Processing Facility is a far cry from the "hand saw and fire ax" days when MSgt. Ray Wilson first joined the Army. Wilson has had almost 40 years experience in the meat processing business.

The modern facilities at Fort Benning allow the men working here to turn out 300,000 pounds of meat a month for consumption by the troops.

Beef arrives at the facility in 160-pound quarters, and through the use of modern cutting, grinding and slicing machines, the men prepare it for cooking in the post's mess halls.

MSgt. Wilson said that when he was first in the Army, units would receive a side of beef and "get a hand saw and fire ax" and try to figure out what part of the beef was the steak. The present methods "make it so much better," Wilson added.

Nothing is wasted at the meat facility, as all waste is sold to a civilian contractor and the fat is rendered and used as lard.

The meat facility is next to one assignment where the men never complain about the Georgia heat — the cold storage facility. The cold storage space has a constant temperature of three degrees below zero. It has never been as warm as zero in the new facility, according to SFC Norman Wesley, the NCO in charge.

Another section which receives requisitions from the major troop commands, is the post bakery.

A typical day there begins about 2 a.m. when the "sponge" man comes in to prepare the "sponges" for the day's work. A sponge is a mixture of flour, yeast, sugar, salt, water and lard that is allowed to ferment in order to make finished product—bread—turn out correctly. After several hours of fermentaton, the sponge has flour added, is mixed and at that point becomes dough.

Under strict temperature and humidity control all the time, the dough is made up in 450 pound batches, according to SFC Harold West, enlisted chief baker. In a normal day the Bakery can turn out 7,000 loaves of bread for consumption on post.

Presently the post bakery turns out white, whole-wheat, rye and raisin bread. Plans are being discussed for making French bread in the future.

After the processing, major units pick up the food except the meat and take it to a second breakdown point where the food is divided for the particular mess hall to which it is going.

Then, as a rule, the food is "tail-gate" delivered to the respective mess halls where it will actually be cooked and eaten.

From there on, it is up to the cooks.

Col. Edward M. Foxworth, Chief Services Section, has staff responsibility for feeding Fort Benning troops. Lt. Col. Alexander Soroka, Chief of Quartermaster Division, has the direct responsibility.

"Few things are more important in creating a first class unit and sustaining the morale of its soldiers than an ample supply of wholesome and nourishing food," Col. Foxworth said.

"The Army's ration has progressively improved throughout our history to benefit the health and well-being of the soldier because of the efforts of the food service personnel," he added.

One example of the "ample supply of wholesome and nourishing food" Col. Foxworth mentioned is that the average soldier receives 423 pounds of meat a year, whereas the national average is only 160 pounds.

Each piece of meat served at Fort Benning has been inspected as many as nine times before it is eaten.

Quartermaster food facilities represent the final link in a long food chain that includes the Army Support Command, Department of the Army, and the Defense Subsistence Supply Center.

The national set-up for the Army is much like large food chain stores, with wholesale, jobber, and retail units.

The Support Command in Chicago serves as coordinator for the over-all operation to insure sufficient variety and service of food at Army and Air Force installations throughout the nation. The command also plays a large part in determining what the soldier is fed, through the food plan in cooperation with the department of the Air Force.

Marriage In Turkey Is Different

Following the old adage "when in Rome, do as the Romans do," Sp4 Richard K. Gilmore of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 10th Air Transport Brigade, an attached unit of the 11th Air Assault Division, and his lovely bride were married "Turkish" style while he was serving with the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Turkey.

The new Mrs. Gilmore, daughter of a retired Army Chief Warrant Officer, was employed by an American firm in the ancient capital of Turkey, Ankara. After their meeting, the courtship and subsequent marriage were in real local style.

In Turkey, when a young girl becomes engaged, she wears a gold band on the third finger of her right hand. The couple are never left alone—the courting is carried on in the presence of the entire family.

When Dick and Lynda decided to get married, a date was set, but there was more to come. A public notice had to be posted for a period of fifteen days prior to the wedding date. During this time, anyone who had an objection to the marriage could make it known by writing it on the public announcement. This could have been sufficient cause for cancelling the marriage.

Both a civil wedding and a church wedding are sanctioned in Turkey. The young couple first exchanged marriage vows in the presence of a judge and his assistants, and then went through a religious ceremony at the church of their choice.

After both ceremonies, the newly-weds and their guests were presented cubes of sugar. This symbolized the sweetening of the marriage and expressed the hope for a rich life. After the wedding reception was over and the couple prepared to leave for the honeymoon, the guests, according to tradition, threw money instead of rice.

School of Dance Sets Registration Aug. 26, 27

Registration for the School of Dance, sponsored by the Women's Club of Fort Benning, will be held at all post schools on school registration days, August 26 and 27.

Representatives of the dancing school will be at Faith, White, Patch, Wilbur and Loyd schools to take registrations from parents of boys and girls of all military personnel, officer, enlisted, and civilians working on post are eligible to enroll.

Classes in tap and classical ballet will be taught for beginner, advanced and intermediate students.

Located in Bldg. 1008 on Baltzell Ave., next to the Dependent Dental Clinic, the school has been in operation for over ten years. Beginning her second year as director, Dental Clinic, the school has been in operation for over ten years. Beginning her second year as director, Mrs. Margaret LaForest, noted recently that the School of Dance boasts a yearly enrollment of between 100-125.

Mrs. LaForest has been involved with ballet since her early childhood days when she received instruction from her mother, who was a well-known European ballet dancer.

She later studied in East Prussia under Olga Petrassnajeff. Continuing her studies at the Ballet Academy of Berlin, she was awarded two scholarships providing for special study in Hungarian and Russian dances. She was chosen by the Berlin academy to audition for the Royal Ballet academy in London, which was at that time the Sadler Wells Ballet.

Mrs. LaForet began her professional career at the age of 15. She danced for six years in opera houses and operetta theaters throughout Europe. When the theaters closed during the war, Mrs. LaForest was already a member of the International Artist League.

In 1944, she escaped from East Germany and joined the Special Services for work in Munich and Frankfurt under the management of Mickey Rooney.

A past choreographer for the Ballet Guild of Columbus, she has taught dancing in the Columbus area for nearly seven years.

She limits the number of students in her classes to ten, as she feels it impossible to give individual attention to each child otherwise.

Said Mrs. Jean K. Woodyard, Women's Club chairman for the School of Dance and herself European born and raised, "I think the children of Fort Benning are extremely fortunate to have such a widely experienced and talented ballet instructor as Margaret LaForest."

The School of Dance is proud to announce that Miss Joan Sturmhofer will again instruct tap dancing classes. Brought back by popular demand, this will be her second year with the school.

The bookkeeper for the group is Mrs. William Hacker, who handles the billing.

Considered by many as a top-notch instructor, Mrs. Margaret LaForest has a sincere interest in her pupils and a strong desire to give them her very best.

Tot Town Nursery Made Available For Shop Workers

"One of the biggest problems in acquiring Thrift Shop volunteers," remarked Mrs. James Stacy, Woman's Club Thrift Shop director, "is the baby sitter problem.

"Many of the women who would like to volunteer cannot do so because of the expense involved in hiring a baby sitter. We now have a solution to this problem."

The Woman's Club executive board voted unanimously this week to foot the bill of Tot Town expenses for future volunteers of the Thrift Shop while their "mamas" work. Tot Town is a post nursery operated by the Daughters of the U.S. Army.

Mrs. Stacy may be contacted by calling 545-4890.

11th Officers, Wives Meet

The Custer Terrace Officers' Club was the scene recently of a gathering of the officers and ladies of the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division. Hosts for the affair were the officers of Company A, headed by Capt. Joseph F. Bellochi.

The guests were served dinner in the club dining room, which had been decorated with original cartoons created by 1st Lt. Jackie B. Cummings. Each place card featured a helicopter, emblematic of Air Assault. All arrangements for the dinner and for seating were made by 2nd Lt. George R. Stuardi, 2nd Lt. Karroll C. Whaley and 2nd Lt. Robert D. Sturdivant.

Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, commander of the 187th, introduced the staff of the First Brigade, special guests of the battalion. Included were Col. and Mrs. George S. Beatty Jr., Maj. and Mrs. David O. Kramer, Maj. and Mrs. Harold G. Keebaugh and Maj. and Mrs. Guy K. Eberhardt.

The 187th welcomed its new members, Capt. and Mrs. John P. Booth III, Headquarters Company, Lt. and Mrs. Wayne L. Davis, Company C, and CWO and Mrs. George B. Callahan, Headquarters Company.

Pre-School Registration Scheduled

The Pre-Kindergarten School of Fort Benning will accept registrations for three and four-year-olds Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. until noon at the school building.

Open to all military personnel, living on and off post, the school is located in Bldg. 322, in the Old Hospital area.

As a project of the Women's Club, the school runs a regular nine-month educational term with classes in session from 9 to 11:30 a.m. The children are transported to and from school via the car pool system.

Mrs. Gregory Brickhouse is the school's principal. She will be aided this year by a staff of ten teachers, an assistant principal, a music instructor and a nurse.

Mrs. Robert Hall is chairman of the school board.

Parents are reminded to come early on registration day as there is a limited enrollment quota and children are registered on a first-come, first served basis.

NCO Wives Hold Coffee For 350

The Non-Commissioned Officers Wives Club of Fort Benning entertained more than 350 patients and staff of Martin Army Hospital Friday with a coffee at the Red Cross recreation hall.

Chairman of the event was Mrs. Julias Fritz. Hostesses were Mrs. Cora Parrish, Mrs. Dave Sassner and Mrs. John P. Downey. They were assisted by Misses Phyllis Taccati, Jo Ann Hart, Donna Cadenhead and Jan F. Milles of the Junior Red Cross.

Assisting with the entertainment were patients, Spike Tanner, Jonathan Cashion and Charles Shearer.

Special guest was Mrs. John Mital, judge of the Allen Township election board of Ransom, Ill.

OC Wives Hold Coffee In Dayroom

Honored guests were Mrs. Walter D. Short, Mrs. George P. McLendon, Mrs. Billie R. Ramsey, Mrs. John L. Nelson, Mrs. Lawrence E. Remick Jr., Mrs. William E. McConnell, Mrs. Joe B. Merkle and Mrs. Robert A. West Jr.

Mrs. Merkle discussed calling cards and calls.

Hostesses were Mrs. Nelda Ford, Mrs. Ernestine Chronister, Mrs. Betty Anderson, Mrs. Claudine Northwood, Mrs. Gerda Taylor and Mrs. Sandra Chastain.

The next coffee is scheduled for Tuesday.

TSB Ladies Hold Coffee

The wives of officers, attending Officers Basic Course 2, met in the dayroom of Detachment 20, the Student Battalion for their first coffee recently.

Before having coffee, the ladies went on a tour of the post accompanied by Lt. James C. Yarbrough, Detachment executive officer.

Afterwards the wives were greeted by Mrs. Ralph J. Viestenz, wife of 2nd Student Battalion commander, and Mrs. James C. Yarbrough. Each lady was given a folder containing information about Fort Benning and the social courtesies around the post.

Maj. Viestenz briefed the ladies on the basic course, how they could help their husbands and matters in general about Fort Benning. He introduced the honored guests, Mrs. Walter C. Short, Mrs. Claude W. Baker and Mrs. John S. Stannard.

Chaplain Stannard pointed out the religious activities on the post and invited the ladies to visit the chapels.

Lt. Parrott told the ladies the part their husbands had in the course and encouraged them to use the dayroom as a place to get together while the husbands are on bivouac.

Mrs. Viestenz and Mrs. Yarbrough added points concerning the ladies role and activities taking place during the course. A social committee was formed and plans for a casserole dinner and card party were discussed.

Coffee, iced tea and cake were served to about thirty ladies. The table was decorated with a red and white floral arrangement.

DUSA Lunch Is Held At Officers Club

Mrs. Charles Dayhuff and Mrs. William A. Todd were hostesses for the monthly luncheon of the Daughters of the US Army (DUSA) held recently in the Main Officers Open Mess.

New members welcomed were Mrs. John Norton, Mrs. Donald Tisch, Mrs. Roy Lindquist, Mrs. Richard Gillem, Mrs. T. W. Krzeczowski, Mrs. James Waldeck, Mrs. Lawrence Franks and Mrs. Burnside Huffman. Farewell was said to Mrs. Michael J. Lalley.

Mrs. John J. Autcalt was the guest of honor.

During the brief business meeting Mrs. Norton offered her quarters for the annual tea honoring the Junior Army Daughters (JADA) to be held on August 27 at 3 p.m.

Favorite Meals Are Same In Ever-Changing Army

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — New and more sophisticated weapons come into his hands, Army reorganizations affect his assignments and new tactical concepts give his organization a new look and mission, but a few things never change with the American soldier.

High among these are the soldiers likes and dislikes in foods.

A 1963 survey of his food preferences revealed little change in his tastes. Fresh milk still is the best-liked food and close behind is another old favorite, grilled steak.

Other foods found to be in the top ten included apple pie, assorted fresh fruits, veal steak, eggs to order, fresh sliced tomatoes, southern fried chicken, roast beef, and hot roast beef sandwiches with gravy, but not necessarily in that order. Not in the top ten, but high among the 285 foods surveyed are breaded veal cutlets and orange juice.

The Armed Forces Food and Container Institute, Chicago, conducted the survey questioning 20,000 enlisted personnel using a nine-point rating scale by which the soldier rated foods from "like extremely" to "dislike extremely." Cooperating with the Institute was the Army's Office of Personnel Operations.

Results of the survey provide guidelines to Army and Air Force menu planners as well as food scientists and technologists developing new foods for the military.

Air Assault Unit Routs Guerrillas

Two platoons of Company B, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry of the 11th Air Assault Divison, completed a guerrilla and counter-guerrilla exercise last week.

Purpose of the small war game was to give members of the two units a chance to put counter-guerrilla training into practical application.

The third platoon, under the command of 2nd Lt. Max G. Ulveling, played the role of the guerrillas, while Capt. Everett M. Yon took charge of the friendly forces.

The two units were lifted from the Harmony Church area by four Choctaw helicopters to a company base of operations. A Sioux was used by the company commander, who surveyed likely guerrilla locations and then called back to waiting squad-sized units to move in by air-craft and destroyed the army.

The guerrillas, dressed in civilian clothing, had two vehicles and used these as their sole means of mobility.

Rendezvous and cache points were established to receive orders and supplies. Teams of six men were formed, each team responsible for one of six areas. Their mission was to set up ambushes, conduct raids, and harass as much as possible.

The base camp was established in a tight perimeter from which squad and platoon-sized units were dispatched as soon as guerrilla activity was detected.

M-Sgt. Clarence Linton Jr., who has had 14 months of this type training was the controller. He maintained radio contact with the guerrilla forces and kept both sides operating against each other.

He emphasized the need for tactical intelligence against a highly mobile enemy with little interest in the seizure and holding of terrain.

It was pointed out that the counter-guerrilla element must re-establish order and gain control, protect critical facilities and installations, make use of psychological operations to locate, capture or destroy guerrilla forces.

The exercise climaxed a rigorous training program which included classes in survival, land navigation and patrolling, instruction on traps and snares, and the use of psychological warfare. Also emphasized was the correct use of the challenge and password and the proper method of interrogating prisoners.

1-87TH TROOPER EYES TANK DRILL
Intensive Mechanized Training Is Key

Col. Keller New Chief of Staff

By CARL HALSTEAD

While the 2nd Division smashed the Airborne 'Blues' during the Swift Strike maneuvers still raging in the Carolinas, Col. Lucien F. Keller, formerly commander of the 3rd Brigade, took over as the "Second to None's" new chief of staff.

He replaces Col. Frederick V. Harris, who leaves for an assignment in Viet Nam shortly.

Prior to coming to Fort Benning's 2nd Infantry Division, Col. Keller spent 10 months at the National War College at Fort McNair, Va. Upon arrival at the "Second to None" he became the commanding officer of the 23rd Infantry.

Upon reorganizaton of the division, he became the commander of the newly formed 3rd Brigade.

Col. Keller was commissioned in 1939 through the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC), at the University of Akron, Ohio. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree in economics.

He has been assigned at Fort Benning on two previous occasions. In 1940 he attended the Infantry School taking the rifle and heavy weapons course. He returned in 1944 for the Officer Advanced Course.

Since 1940, when Col. Keller served his first overseas tour, Iceland, he has served in three other areas. During World War II he saw action in Europe and later worked with the Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) in the Philippines. Following this, and prior to an assignment as a military attache in Korea from 1958 to 1961, he attended the Army Language School studying the Korean language.

Col. Keller is the holder of many awards and decorations earned during his 24 years of service. Among them are the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Russian Medal of Valor (presented by the Russian government in 1945), the Expert Infantryman's Badge and the World War II Victory Medal.

Col. Keller was born in Cattlettsburg, Ky. He and his family now live at 605 Baltzell Ave., Fort Benning.

'Conquerors' Move Fast, Stay Flexible in Training

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

If a unit is flexible and adaptable enough, the essence and pace of its training mission can withstand inevitable changes the Department of the Army will adopt from time to time in streamlining the defense structure.

The 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry has given indications of this chameleon-like characteristic during recent weeks as a result of newly-announced changes in structure and mission within the 2nd Infantry Division.

Originally scheduled for rotation to Baumholder, Germany this Fall, the 1st Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, ground away all summer at intensified tracked vehicle and mechanized training, and completed the majority of important annual weapons qualifications, particularly that of the M-14 rifle.

During this period of tracked vehicle and mechanized training, despite the heavy accent on these two aspects, several other types of problems were executed during which all of the vehicles in the battalion were experimented with.

The stress was on mobility, the ability to load everything up and move it somewhere else in a hurry, and on the new organization of the infantry squad. The vehicles were used in problems involving aggressor and guerrilla action, helicopter drops of rifle and machine gun squads and are to be used in currently scheduled Army training tests and river crossings.

The degree of adaptability reached by the men resulted from guidance.

By avoiding the "one track mind" characteristic of ordinary mechanized training, the unit can stay in step with whatever training specifications may be placed on it.

On Swift Strike III

Brigade CO Installed

By Artie Koffman

In the second of two major command changes to take place in South Carolina during the gargantuan Swift Strike III exercises, the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade welcomed a decorated combat veteran of World War II as its new chief.

He is Col. John K. Walker Jr., who replaces Col. Lucien F. Keller, recently appointed as the new 2nd Infantry Division chief of Staff.

Col. Walker, who comes to the "Indianhead" division for the first time, was last assigned to Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) in Paris where he was in the Army section, combat readiness branch of operations division.

A 1941 graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Col. Walker received his commission in the United States Army after completing the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) program and was later assigned to the 3rd Armored Division in the European Theater of Operations.

Starting his military career as the S-3 officer of a self-propelled anti-aircraft battalion, Col. Walker finished the global conflict as the division G-3 officer and recipient of the Silver Star, the Bronze Star Medal for valor and the Belgium Fourragere. The colonel's unit won a Distinguished Unit Citation for the Ardennes campaign.

After World War II, Col. Walker commanded a quartermaster battalion with the occupation forces in Central Europe and in 1949 returned to the United States to attend the Advanced Armor Course at Fort Knox, Ky.

Upon completion of that school in 1950 he went back to Europe and assumed the duties of assistant commandant of a tank training center in Germany. In 1952 he was given command of a tank battalion in the 43rd Infantry Division, which at that time was also stationed in Germany.

'ESCAPE ARTIST' RETELLS SWIFT STRIKE II

BY BOB DE CAMARA

To be a soldier among civilians, on leave, in town, is to be left open at this time of the year for the inevitable question — What is Swift Strike really like?

To answer this, the soldier must fall back on the scraps and splinters at his memory's command. He remembers his meals, if they were good or bad, how often he and his buddies could find a shower point to wash up, maybe the words of his commander on the units's accomplishment and at least two or more stories which he thinks can rival anything his buddies have to offer.

Sitting in garrison this year and musing on last year's Swift Strike II with the rest of the 2nd Division information office hundreds of convoy miles away, this is one of the stories I remember about a jeep ride I'll never forget.

It started off humdrum enough, us driving 40 miles out of our way. But let me explain this . . .

Early on a Friday morning three of us enlisted men from the information office and one of Signal's photographers with a bundle of expensive equipment left the rear area in a jeep, heading towards what we understood to be the front.

It was a perfect day, not hot enough yet to be unpleasant. We were all breakfasted on a filling meal of C-ration hot dogs and baked beans and had scrubbed our faces in our helmets, shaved smoothly for the third time on our blue blades and were decked out in the combat gear we always wore outside the tent.

In the late morning we arrived, packing notebooks and rifles, at the front and discovered that the front was reversed, the fighting far in back of us. The "Blue" 101st Airborne Division had dropped a battle group behind our rear area, encircling the town of Sumter.

We headed the jeep in the other direction and drove directly back, passing through a succession of tired little towns where dogs curled up in the dust to the sides of the streets and the business of the morning was conducted at a dramatically slow pace.

After miles of chatter and speculation by the four of us in the jeep, we knew we were getting close to the activity; and, rounding a turn in the road, we were sure of it when we saw a "blue" checkpoint at a bridge a short distance ahead.

The soldiers, all from the 101st Airborne Division, were stopping cars at the bridge's approach and checking floors and trunks for their enemy. They worked politely and methodically and were dressed in the baggy jump pants and garishly camouflaged helmets of the airborne trooper.

Their weapons, short rifles that looked like grease guns, were menacingly alien to the eyes of a "straight leg" infantry reporter. Identification rode their shoulders in the form of a black, white and yellow "screaming eagle" patch. These impressions were gathered in an instant.

The driver wheeled our vehicle in reverse, but the road was narrow and the jeep's turning radius too long. Before the wheels could be straightened, a squad of the airborne were on the road, surrounding us and yelling at us to surrender. They had been lying out of sight on a bank that sloped steeply down to a stream. In the past week we had joked about surrendering to write a story on a POW camp.

The driver was kept with his vehicle; the photographer, another reporter and myself taken to an outpost for temporary detainment and search where we were jovially threatened and bound hand and foot with laces after removing our boots.

In the "safe pocket" of the other reporter, Colin Higgins, and supposedly not to be tampered with, was a list of division units and their probable location. This did the airborne little good as they didn't understand what they had found and, by then, 2nd Division units were catapulting from area to area.

The next role we played, and the last for me on two matching feet, was as prisoners regarded slighty less than cattle and, so, given a cattle truck to ride to the POW camp.

We three had the truck to ourselves, and the mood was excitement as we whipped down the blacktop road towards camp. The first thing that came up was escape. It wouldn't be hard, we thought. Although the truck had high wood-panelled sides which reached to a man's chest, the top was open and the driver slowed down enough in places for us to vault the sides.

I wanted to go, but I had a date to get married on September 1, about three weeks off, and I couldn't help worrying about injuring myself, I told him.

"I can't do it, Colin. I can't do it. What if I bust a leg?"

"No sweat," (peering over the side). "We'll wait til the truck slows and go over where they can't see us. You can't hurt yourself," and so on while the speedometer clicked off the miles, two, three, five, six miles. We estimated our speed at about 30. And every mile further was one more mile to infiltrate back to our lines.

The turn to the prison camp was 200 yards ahead when I threw myself over the side in a sort of unpremeditated western roll. I didn't get to see Colin's face but he must have looked astonished.

He positioned himself on the outside ledge of the truck and jumped, landing beside me where I now knelt in painful wonder.

I had hit the road on my left foot and heard the foot crack like an avalanche of chicken bones; I spun over once, completely, and lost my helmet but not my rifle. A follow-up jeep carrying four prisoners swerved to avoid hitting me but couldn't stop lest the driver be assaulted by his own passengers.

Now my foot was hurting enough to make me want to surrender my new freedom for hospitalization, but somehow, with Colin helping, we got across a railroad embankment and into a spacious cotton field, crawling parallel to the rows about 100 feet in.

Peering over the cotton, we could see that the field was patrolled. The only thing to do was wait until dark, about two hours away, and head for a farmhouse at the edge of the field.

I pulled off my boot and tied it to my cartridge belt. My foot ballooned and throbbed. For two hours or more, I swore softly to myself and idly picked cotton while Colin kept up with "How does it feel now," "We can make it," and more words in a similar vein.

By nightfall we were already edging towards the end of the field on our bellies, stopping at every sound, swearing and grating our elbows in the gravelly earth like a repeat of basic training's live fire course. Several times we thought we saw soldiers standing against the sky, but we kept crawling, adding a handsome accumulation of dirt to our already proud collection. I think we crawled for days.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

It Happened 18 Years Ago

AT 8:16 IN THE MORNING

This is the story of twenty-two days of war. . . and the birth of an era.

The end began on July 16, 1945; when the cruiser USS INDIANAPOLIS was suddenly ordered from her berth in San Francisco.

Aboard her was a mysterious cargo, known only to the two men on ship who escorted it. The haste and destination were the only facts known to the rest of the vessel. Knowledge of the contents of the crate, securely fastened to the ship's frame, was a closely guarded secret.

Within this wrapping of two-hundred pounds of lead, was a cylinder the size of a lard can. Inside the cylinder was something, simply called, U-235. And so, July 19, 1945 found the INDIANAPOLIS steaming due west across the Pacific.

Nestled in the Pacific Ocean, hundreds of miles away from the INDIANAPOLIS, a small island was continuing a normal day. Men scampered to and fro with their work and the sky was constantly receiving and surrendering the aircrafts of war.

This B-29 bomber base was all business as usual. To only a few select men went the knowledge of the impending break in routine.

Col. Tibbits

One of these men, a 29-year-old colonel by the name of Tibbits, stood in the hot sun, nursing his pipe as he gazed at his winged carriage standing alone on heat-glistened runway. This was the time for resting. No more missions for a while.

Only a few days before he had been given the information of the duty he was yet to perform and now as he stood looking at his ship, distinquishable by only the number "82" on her tail assembly, the quiet colonel was fascinated by her resemblance to a great eagle hovering over her nest. But, this was no ordinary egg the big plane mothered.

On the morning of July 26, the INDIANAPOLIS docked in the harbor of Tinian, a small island in the Marianas.

Quickly and efficiently its cargo was transferred ashore and quietly, seemingly unnoticed, escorted to its destination at the nearby air base. The morning's routine was still unbroken.

There was only casual interest in the arrival of the ship and its unloading procedure was hardly given a second glance by any who happened upon the scene. Everything seemed to be SOP and the only curiosity in the entire matter came from the crew of the cargo's oceanic conveyor.

They had spent ten days wondering about this cargo and whenever anything took on an atmosphere of secrecy, it was a natural tendency for all hands to start the scuttlebutt moving fast and furious. So, these men watched the unloading carefully and mused to themselves curiously as the crate was hurried away.

Torpedoed

Ironically, and tragically, most of these men who watched from the ship's decks were never to find out the importance of their mission. Because four days later, after making a stop at Guam, the USS INDIANAPOLIS was torpedoed and sunk.

A week after headlines blazed across the country of this tragedy, the world was rocked by the news of a resulting vendetta.

A few days after the ill-fated INDIANAPOLIS had delivered her precious cargo, the men and their bombers from the Tinian air base began a series of unusual tactics over Japan.

To the men on these missions, into whose senses already the smell of inevitable victory dwelled, these actions they were now performing seemed absurd and without credence. Even for the Japanese warlords, these American maneuvers were impossible to evaluate.

Day after day the B-29s continued to come, unloading a single small bomb—a 500-pounder whose total effectiveness was nothing more than that of a nuisance value.

To the men who transported this lonely small firecracker, as it was lovingly called, and even the enemy who received the drop, it was an irritating thing. Yet each new day the missions continued.

Finally the B-29 crews became annoyed at this slacked bit of destruction upon the enemy and individual ideas of how to break this monotonous chore began to be formulated during the missions.

Emperor's Palace

In the case of one B-29, the "Straight Flush," it was voted by the crew to drop their single bomb on the Emperor's palace.

This was attempted, but they missed the target and upon return to base were verbally reproached for the act; yet they were unsure if it was because of the attempted target or due to the fact that they had missed.

Then, suddenly, word leaked out throughout the base of a so - called "super-bomb," and the tension and security in the area hinted of the mysterious and a magnitude of importance.

In the staff buildings, plannings and briefings were going on day and night. Barbed wire was placed around Col. Tibbit's plane and a large black canvas screen was drapped around the area of the ship's bomb bay.

Security guards, Military Police and duty guards began constantly patrolling the grounds. Scientists and other VIPs arrived at Tinian at a daily clip and beneath the black curtain work was continually going on around the clock. Now the daily routine of the small island was gone. Normality was no longer in the dictionary.

One of the major problems facing the staff, now that the knowledge of the "bomb" was known, was the worry of getting Col. Tibbit's plane off the ground 10,000 pounds heavier.

Already there had been numerous crashes on take-off of B-29s carrying normal loads and if such should be the case when number 82 took off for her special trip, the results would be disastrous.

Capt. Parsons

Finally, after much discussion, a Navy captain by the name of Parsons, the armament expert for the "bomb," decided to try and see if it could be armed after the plane was in flight. He began experimenting, his hands becoming bloody and raw, attempting to find the answer in time.

Throughout the day and most of the night of August 5, 1945, Capt. Parsons sat cradled in the bomb bay of the great silver bird working desperately. Sweat poured from his brow as the hot tropical sun beat upon the metal of the plane.

At night the lights from the searchbeams played uncanny tricks upon the black veil that shielded him from view. Time and gain he would "feel" is way, his bleeding hands caressing the armament.

While Capt. Parsons worked within, Col. Tibbits again stood by the fence and gazed thoughtfully at his plane. He knew that quite possibly, very soon, his aircraft would become famous. It seemed significant that such a possible fame should not befall anything so simply titled by the number "82." An inspiration came and he headed for the quarters of his crew.

Enola Gay

There, a decision was agreed upon and within the hour a painter had inscribed on the great bird's nose the name of "Enola Gay," the name of its pilot's mother.

That night at around 7:20 p.m., the decision was made to arm the bomb after takeoff. This would ensure the safety of the small island if the "Enola Gay" should not get airborne.

Capt. Parsons was to ride the mission with Col. Tibbits and his crew, and he was certain, after many hours of study and experimenting, that the bomb could be armed after the plane was in flight. Therefore, all was ready for final preparations.

Onward the men worked, racing the hands of time, while the while clouds of the day changed into the soft blue hue of the night. And out on the darkened runway, eerily encircled by flashing lights, stood the giant plane still nestling over her egg. All about her men hurried with final touches of work — work that was preparing her for history.

Even the black curtain was gone and the lifting of the huge bomb could be seen slowly and carefully rising into the open jaws of the great plane's stomach.

Inside the quonset huts and recreation buildings, men moved about. Some laughing and joking; others lying on their bunks thinking of home. Still others wrote letters — personal, soft words to a loved one back home. Yet, all of them subconciously thinking of the morrow and the mission.

Very few slept this night. And while history turned to a new page for recording, the tropical night crept on and the cool breezes petted the dry sands of the beaches as the ocean's tide licked at the hot wounds left by the blazing sun of the day.

Zero Hour

Suddenly — it was time. The stillness of the early morning darkness was broken as powerful engines began to warm their frames. It was Monday morning, August 6, 1945.

Final briefings were over. The targets had been assigned. According to priority they were: Hiroshima, Kokura and Nagasaki.

Weather planes were scheduled for each city and would report visiablity conditions to the "Enola Gay," who would already be in flight. Then, just prior to reaching the coast of Japan, Col. Tibbits would get the final target destination from the weather planes.

Shortly after 1:30 a.m., three B-29 weather - scout planes roared down their individual runways. All that remained was the targetship and a few alternates.

The night was shattered by the sudden silence once the droning sounds of the weather planes had faded into the blackness of the sky. The island of Tinian seemed to be quickly engulfed by a vacuum of sound similar to that of a large theater at curtain time.

While in the center of the stage, spotlighted like a star performer, stood the history-bound "Enola Gay." Aboard her was a nine-man crew, one naval officer, and bedded in her protective housing was the "bomb" — and now the show began.

Take Off

With a mighty roar her engines raced as the great bird seemed to tremble all over. Yet slowly, so very slowly, she began her trek to fame. One hundred yards — two hundred — three hundred — the big ship moved down the dark runway. Then, with but a scant few yards of asphalt left, old number "82" slid into the night. It was just short of two a.m., Hiroshima time.

Two o'clock in the morning, Hiroshima, Japan — the city slept. The only marring of the peaceful night was the occasional air raid warnings, but still the city slept. Always the planes flew on to another target and the night continued hot.

Through the streets, quiet with the taciturnity of this early Monday morn, flickered very few lights and only a small amount of activity. One or two scraps of paper would now and then be brushed down the alleyways by some sudden soft breeze.

However, in one section of this port-city rang the sound of machinery from factories, turning out shells for their Army's might. And high above the city, unseen for the shadows of the night, a large peaceful cloud formation began to form an oval over the area.

Shortly after seven a.m. that morning, the Hiroshima-bound weather plane reached its destination. There below it, spread out for viewing by the naked eye, was a clear detailed picture of the Japanese city. A complete opening in the center of a cumulus laid the city out like an architect's dream.

The B-29 weather plane circled a few more times for intense scrutiny of the area, cautious of a few stray bursts of flack, then headed back toward homebase at Tinian and the end of their part of the mission. The operation they were to perform was over. Very soon now they would radio the final deciding factor that the target for this day would be — Hiroshima, Japan.

The Lone Wait

The weather report came. The staff office at Tinian began to buzz with activity. The primary target was perfect for the drop. Word was immediately sent to the "Enola Gay" and to Washington, D. C. There the country's leaders began the long, yet short, wait.

In the "Enola Gay" it was two minutes until drop-time. The crew had tensed once the weather plane's report had given the go-ahead for Hiroshima, yet Col. Tibbits calmly nursed the big craft along course. The bomb was armed and all was ready.

As the giant bomber emerged from a massive cloud formation, there sprawled below was the target. It was now thirty seconds from zero. At this point the bombadier took control of the plane and carefully placed his attention on the bombsight.

Second after second, the B-29 labored on.

Now. . .

The bomb bay doors swung open and automatically a large object fell into space.

The great plane jerked with the sudden loss of weight and its master forced her violently into a steep, climbing turn.

The poised pen of history was but 43 seconds away from an initial entry on a new page.

A clock in front of a small Japanese tobacco shop in Hiroshima reflected in the early morning sun. Directly over the top of the clock, and high above, a silver plane sped off for whence it had come.

On a small island in the Marianas, men paced the floors while through dark-lensed goggles hundreds of miles away, the crew of super-fortress, number 82, peered down through space.

Pearl Harbor

At home in the States, teenagers danced romantically to Les Brown's "Sentimental Journey" and some seven hundred miles off the coast of Guam, beneath a seemingly infinite amount of water, lay the broken hulk of the USS INDIANAPOLIS. And, but a few hours away from the final resting place of the INDIANAPOLIS — lay Pearl Harbor.

Here, on this peaceful Monday morning a small fishing boat edged its way past the protruding epitaph of the OKLAHOMA and ARIZONA — and in Hiroshima, Japan — the world exploded.

Today in Pearl Harbor lie the hulks of sunken ships and, forever encased, their men — an everlasting symbol of the mightiness of the sword.

All across the Pacific linger the names of: Tinian, Philippines, Okinawa, Iwo Jima, Bataan, Corregidor, Guam, Guadalcanal, Leyte, Hiroshima and many others.

Life Goes On

Today life goes on. World War II is but a memory. Now we ride past the threshold of space as man slips ever nearer the sanctity of the Holder of our prayers. Always the hands of time continue their constant unwavering circle of hours. Still the search continues. The search for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow — the silver-lined cloud of peace. Always onward the hands of time move.

Yet, on August 6, eighteen years ago, in the rubble of what was once a small Japanese tobacco shop, lay a shattered clock whose hands were forever fixed upon the hour of 8:16.

Through the city, shocked people gazed in terror at a strange mushroomed cloud. While high above the ruptured city, stunned and silent men sat their craft as it disappeared into the clouds.

On August 14, 1945, the pen became mightier than the sword — and the war was over.

house. I clambered on Colin's back and he was off, stumbling, while I helped push myself ahead with my one good foot like a kid on a scooter.

We reached the house, him carrying me, me carrying the rifles, while dogs yiped to accompany our exhaustion. We had been announced.

In the kitchen a light flicked on and questioning voices drifted out the open window. Presently a man appeared followed by a woman and a teenage boy and girl. In the small yard behind the house they stared at us in the weak, yellow light.

I could see we were going to have to talk although on our jarring trip to the house I had felt that my obvious plight warranted unconditional and sympathetic attention; specifically, a ride to the local hospital which we hoped was in "red" hands or, at least, neutral.

A period of bargaining and explanation set in. Of course, we weren't looking respectable. That is unmanageable in the "aggressor" uniform after a week on maneuvers. Crawling through the cotton field was for bonus points, points.

The farmer (and his family) eyed us dubiously, wanting to know which side we fought for — "the red side; we're your liberators" — and if it would be okay for him to help us which we assured him he could do without fear of swift and silent retribution.

Still not satisfied but relenting, he dispatched his daughter, oh, the farmer's daughter, and son to drive us to the town hospital. And for me, Swift Strike II ended there. Colin said goodbye and slipped off to rejoin our unit without much hope of success as it had finally moved.

Distaff Profile

Lady Engineer Serves As Women Program Chairman

By Mrs. Warren G. Freeman

Statisticians help keep us abreast of a number of trends, one such being the percentage of females in so-called all male fields.

"Ladies of The Big Indianhead" shares, perhaps, in a portion of these statistics by its having, as a member of the organization, a "lady engineer" in the person of Mrs. Lester Severns.

Mrs. Severns, wife of 1st Sgt. Lester Severns of Battery A, 37th Artillery, is currently serving as program chairman for the "Ladies of the Big Indianhead."

A native of Illinois, she is a graduate of The Academy of Aerodynamics, La Guardia Field, New York City. Having thus qualified as an aeronautical engineer, Mrs. Severns worked professionally on a number of fascinating and interesting projects.

After becoming an Army wife, life did not become less interesting; moreover, it took many more adventuresome turns.

"The dual appeal of living in a collegiate atmosphere as an Army wife definitely made our tours of duty at Yale University our favorite ones," says Mrs. Severns.

While the Severns were stationed at Yale, Sgt. Severns served as an R.O.T.C. (Reserve Officers Training Corps) instructor.

"Actually, New Haven, Conn., really seems more like home," states Mrs. Severns, "because we met many wonderful people there; and as a result, we have many of our friends there." Mrs. Severns also lived there while Sgt. Severns served a tour of duty in Iceland.

The Severns enjoyed a most interesting tour in Middlebury, Conn., home of, perhaps, the best known language school in the country, Middlebury College.

Mrs. Severns observed that students at the college had to speak the language studied whether on or off campus or be fined by their departments; so, often times, there were many conversations in many languages.

Together with Fort Benning, Sgt. and Mrs. Severns can count Fort Knox, Ky., and Camp Pickett, Va., as stateside tours of duty.

Needless to say, Mrs. Severns was equally enthusiastic being stationed in Europe. Giessen, Germany was home for the Severns there, and travels over the continent included stopovers in France, Spain, Austria, Holland and Italy.

While in Giessen, Mrs. Severns served two terms as president of the Noncommissioned Officers Wives Club.

Biaritz, France, a resort city in Southern France, ranks first on the Severnses' list of vacation possibilities. "Here the food is wonderful, and the city is beautiful."

Indoor gardening is a leisure time activity that Mrs. Severns thoroughly enjoys. She is also a collector of intricately-designed and dressed Japanese dolls.

COOK of the WEEK

By Mrs. Warren Freeman

Often it is the unique choice together with the attractive arrangement of relishes and pickles that makes an extra flavorful meal as well as lending exciting color to a well spread table. Since these pickles and relishes can be "home canned," a task of many housewives, especially during this time of the year, they can be enjoyed many more times throughout the year.

Our first recipe for watermelon pickles we hope will have a special appeal since watermelons are grown here and are relatively plentiful. These pickles are delicious with hot biscuits or to garnish many dishes gracefully.

Both recipes appear in "What's Cooking at Fort Benning" and were authorized respectively by Mrs. Joe M. Fay and Mrs. Kenneth Staveness.

Watermelon Pickles

6 pounds prepared rind
3½ quarts water
½ cup very granulated sugar
2½ cups cider vinegar
1½ lemons, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon whole cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
1 teaspoon cassia buds

Cut rind into 1½ inch wide strips. Now cut away the green skin and remaining pink flesh on the strips. Cut the white rind into 2 inch lengths. Cover with water and salt, and soak overnight.

Next morning rinse thoroughly with several changes of fresh water and cook until tender — about 1½ hours. Drain off water and put rind into vinegar to boiling; add lemon slices and spices tied in a cheesecloth bag. Cook until rind is transparent — about 1¾ hours simmering rather than boiling rapidly. Pack in clean, hot sterile jars, cover with syrup and seal — about 3½ quarts. Chill before serving. (Note: Cassia buds may be obtained from a druggist.)

Dill Pickles

25 to 40 cucumbers
3 tablespoons mixed spices
½ cup sugar
½ cup salt
1 quart vinegar (full strength or dry)

Wash, dry and cut cucumbers into halves lengthwise. Add spices (tied in bag), sugar, salt, and vinegar to 4 cups water. Simmer 15 minutes. Put head of dill in each hot jar; pack pickles. Heat brine to boiling and then pour over pickles. Cover pickles with dill. Process pints and quarts 15 minutes in boiling water bath.

Sword and Pen Has Big Luau

By Mrs. James Reddick

An Hawaiian luau, staged like a scene from an old Dorothy Lamour movie, greeted guests at the Coffee given by Mrs. Lawrence W. Smith, 11B-E Brostrom, Fort Benning, August, in honor of Mrs. John Mital of Ransom, Ill.

Sea shells, star fish and glass floats caught in a fisherman's net served as the table cover. Trays of fruit and orchids with a centerpiece of pink hibiscus by Mrs. R. A. Kolb, a local instructor and author, carried out the theme of the Coffee, "Aloha."

The hostess and guests were dressed in colorful South Seas mumuus with lei's of orchids.

Mrs. Mital was presented with a "Handbook on Germany" by the author Mrs Lawrence W. Smith, president of the Sword and Pen, the Fort Benning chapter of the Armed Forces Writers League.

Mrs. Bilbo Nowell, wife of Sgt. Maj. Bilbo Nowell, 2nd Infantry Division, poured.

Mrs. James Reddick, wife of Sgt. Reddick, 7th Cavalry, 2nd Division, a free-lance writer for the television shows "Gunsmoke" and "Twilight Zone" presided over the punchbowl.

'Conqueror' Sergeant Earns Seventh Stripe At 87th Headquarters

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry PIO

Recently promoted to the grade of platoon sergeant E7 was PSgt. Edwin W. Shute, "Davy Crockett" section sergeant at Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry.

Assigned to the 87th Infantry since 1961, Sgt. Shute entered the service in February, 1955. Placed with the 10th Reconaissance Company, 10th Infantry Division at Fort Riley, Kans., he was gyroscoped with the 10th Division to Kitzingen, Germany, and later to Bamberg. In 1957 he was assigned as a scout leader with the 7th Cavalry, 10th Division, and subsequently returned to Fort Benning in 1958, where the 10th Infantry Division was deactivated and the 2nd Infantry Division was activated.

Artillery Unit Gets Battery CO

By 17th Artillery PIO

Battery C, 17th Artillery has a new battery commander, Lt. Daniel B. Redner.

The University of Miami graduate received his commission through the ROTC program there. He attended the Field Artillery Officer's Orientation Course at Fort Sill, Okla., in 1962.

A former student of the United States Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., Lt. Redner was commissioned in the Regular Army in July, 1962. He is airborne qualified.

Lt. Redner and his wife, Beatrice, who come from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., presently live in Battle Park with their infant son, Jimmy.

Against Airborne in Swift Strike III

Gains Scored by 'Indians'

Editor's Note: The following is a recapitulation of Swift Strike III through Phase II of the exercise done by division reporters on the scene in South Carolina, site of the mammoth land battles.

WHITE ROCK, S. C., August 9—The second phase of Joint Exercise Swift Strike III ended abruptly this week amid splashy "Red" force victories and disappointing airborne drops by "Blue" force 82nd and 101st Airborne Division soldiers.

"Red" force 2nd and 5th Infantry Divisions, brought into the Carolina maneuver area last week, at first spent their time gathering intelligence reports, scouting possible drop zone areas and fighting guerrilla forces trained by the Joint Unconventional Warfare Task Force, led by Maj. Gen. William P. Yarborough.

Into the 5th's Hands

Last Sunday morning the 2nd Airborne Division scattered airborne soldiers over the Newberry-Laurens, S. C., area only to find them landing on 5th Division positions. The 5th Infantry Division inflicted 90 per cent casualties on one of the 82nd's battle groups, a percentage later reduced by common consent to 65 per cent.

Meanwhile the 101st Airborne Division was brought to Donaldson Air Force Base to the west of the combat "Red" forces and held in reserve.

While landings of airborne soldiers continued through the week, the "Red" defender 2nd Infantry Division moved to nine different locations in the Swift Strike maneuver area, testing the efficiency in movement through established supply lines.

The 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. William E. Conger, was assigned the mission of cleaning up the Newberry-Laurens area of 82nd Airborne Division paratroopers who had evaded the victories of the 5th Division.

'2nd' Takes Newberry

Advancing upon the city of Newberry from the northeast, Lt. Col. Conger's battalion split their forces into two columns, using approximately 54 armored personnel carriers, each carrying a squad of 10 or 11 infantrymen.

The "Indianhead" soldiers roared through airborne lines while exhausted paratroopers slept at their guard posts on bridges and road junctions.

A company of airborne troops was found asleep at the Newberry airport, southwest of the city. The 2nd Division lieutenant colonel threw one column of his movement plus an added company into the airport area to whip the airborne soldiers from their sleep.

Then, the airport captured, Lt. Col. Conger and his 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry closed on a previously selected rendezvous point at the town of Helena, west of Newberry.

It was here that the first phase of Exercise Swift Strike III ended, stopped suddenly by umpires. Lt. Col. Conger's battalions was fast advancing on an airborne battle group field command post when the chief umpire intervened and stopped the action.

To the 2nd Division, victory seemed even greater. The soldiers spotted Maj. Gen. John L. Throckmorten, commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division, in the area, giving them reason to suspect that the concentration they were about to overrun was, in fact, the command post of the recently air-dropped 2nd Airborne Division.

3 Officers TDY During Swift Strike

By 1st Bn., 87th Infantry PIO

Three lieutenants from the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry have been assigned for temporary duty to travel on Swift Strike III as assistants to the Inspector General.

They are Lt. Richard A. Smith, weapons platoon leader at Company A, Lt. Xavier A. Esposito and Lt. Alfonso Haro.

'Manchus' in Germany Test Water Skills

By Les Aucoin

MANNHEIM, Germany — "Manchus" of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry trained in river crossings near here this week, marking a "highlight" in the unit's overseas training schedule.

The battalion spent a total of three days at the river crossing site in Lamperthein, Germany. Each of three subordinate elements completed the training in one day.

The crossings were designed to train members of the "second of the Ninth" to cross rivers in Armored Personnel Carriers (APC's) quickly and safely during daylight and twilight hours.

Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Jack Samson, said "the unit benefited immeasurably from the exercise. . .the crossings have to be considered one of the highlights of our. . . training."

The "Manchus," however, were not totally unfamiliar with the techniques of a river crossing.

First, officers and noncommissioned officers received classroom instruction on safety measures to be taken in the crossings. The rest of the battalion then received water safety classes which included drills in abandoning APC's and instruction in the seaworthiness of the carriers.

The "Manchus" were given a review of their previous instruction at the water's edge prior to the actual crossing of the Altrhein River, a tributary of the Rhine River.

Skin divers were on hand throughout the problem as a further safety precaution.

PATTON MEMORIAL . . . The "Indianhead" Division's 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, in Germany on temporary duty, took part in commemoratory services recently at the Gen. Patton memorial, a huge stone block monument. With the 23rd Infantry's colors stands Sgt. Richard L. Jones, one member of the battalion's color guard representatives. The monument is located in Ettelbruck, Luxemburg.

DeHaven Is New Football Coach; Will Lead Doughboy Champions

BY DAVE BRAUN

When football coach Oren DeHaven was handed the reins of the Fort Benning Doughboys this year he happily took over a virtually intact team that raced to an undefeated season in 1962 and was recognized as Inter-Service champions.

DeHaven is stepping into the unscarred shoes of former head coach Leaton Cofield, whose 'rough and ready' gridders of last year rampaged over 10 straight opponents without a loss.

Another mark DeHaven has before him is Fort Benning's consecutive win streak which has now shot to 16 straight, only five shy of the military football record, that of 21 straight set by the Quantico Marines in the 1950's.

But, with him, the South Haven, Mich., native brings along quite a record of his own, that of never tasting defeat as a head coach in more than once in any one single season.

Born on Nov. 8, 1924, one of six children, DeHaven was graduated from South Haven High School in 1942.

He then enlisted in the Army for three years after which he enrolled at Eastern Michigan University in 1946, remaining there for two years.

The grid mentor re-entered the service in 1948 and was commissioned a second lieutenant at Fort Riley, Kan., after the completion of Officers' Candidate School.

During 1948 and 1949, DeHaven was both a student and a platoon leader at Fort Eustis, Va., and then in 1949 he was assigned to the Port of Embarkation in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he served as a competitive tour officer.

After his first trip to Fort Benning in 1950 to receive airborne training, the blonde-haired Michigan native was assigned to the 11th Airborne Division.

From 1952-1955 he served in Europe as a platoon leader and company commander and from 1955-1956 he was a student in the Advanced Transportation Course at Fort Eustis.

Upon completion of the transportation course he was assigned as transportation officer at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Between 1957-1958 DeHaven was a student in the Civil Schooling Program at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, from where he became a unit commanding officer and staff officer in Europe from 1958 until 1961.

A student at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., from 1961 to 1962, he finally returned to Fort Benning in 1962 where he became transportation officer for the 2nd Infantry Division.

He is presently transportation instructor and defense commander of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, The Infantry School.

Coach DeHaven began his football coaching career as a part-time assistant at Fort Eustis, Va., in 1955. In 1957 he became an assistant coach at the University of Tennessee while also coaching the varsity baseball team.

With the 7th U. S. Army Special Troops in Germany in 1960 he compiled a 10-1 record, good enough for a semi-finalist berth in the European playoffs. His club won the conference title that year.

"Perhaps in 1960 with that ballclub I received my biggest thrill," recalls DeHaven. "I had a tackle who kicked a 46-yard field goal in the final six seconds to win 23-21 to win the Southern Conference title," he went on.

While at Fort Campbell, Ky., he was selected to coach the 188th Air Infantry Regiment team which copped the regimental division crown with a lusty 10-1 record.

Then in Europe in 1952 he coached the 6th Armored Cavalry Regiment which compiled a brilliant 12-0 mark and the distinction of winning the European football championship.

Again in 1953 he was a finalist with the 28th Infantry Division, guiding his team to an 11-1 season and a runner-up spot for the European title.

In 1954 Coach DeHaven was grid mentor of the 7th Corps "Jayhawks" who were finalists in the U.S. Army, Pacific playoffs. Their record was 10-1.

An 11 letter winner in high school, DeHaven earned honors in varsity football track and baseball.

DeHaven was an offensive end in football while performing also at defensive halfback. In track he was a hurdler.

He is now married to the former Patricia Wilson of Bradenton, Fla., and they have two boys, Kirk, 13, and Kim, 9. The family resides at 202 Austin Loop on the post.

CDCIA Forms Intra-Agency Bowling League

The U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency has formed an intra-agency bowling league to determine who will represent the Agency in the Officers League this fall.

This competition serves as tryouts for the Agency's CAGINS, who had high team game and third place in last year's Officers League. The CAGINS plan to be stronger this year than last. Each division has formed a team that will bowl in a round-robin tournament to determine the high team.

In addition, the three low teams will pick up the tab for the winning team at a steak dinner to be held upon completion of the tournament.

Upon completion of the first round of tournament play the ASAPS are leading the league with a record of 4 and 0. The Doctrine Darlings and Head Shedders are tied for second place at 2 and 2.

The Top Tenners are in last place with a 0 and 4 record although they will provide tough competition when two of their better bowlers return from TDY.

YAC All-Stars Win Two More 13-6 and 3-0

The YAC Doughboy All-Stars continued their winning ways last weekend, emerging victorious in a pair of home games.

In Fridays game, Warner-Robbins Air Force Base fell before a 13 run barrage by the All-Stars and went home 13-6 losers. Curtis Baker and Mike Casey once again combined for a shutout in Saturday's contest, blanking Fort McPherson, 3 to 0.

Manager Lorenzo Plowman's nine faces its stiffest contest this evening when they play host to Maxwell AEB, 1963 Southwestern Air Force Little League champions. The game is scheduled to begin at 5 o'clock.

Tomorrow, the YAC'ers travel to Atlanta for a return engagement with Fort McPherson.

PENTATHLON WINNER . . . Breezing to an easy finish is Army Capt. James W. Moore, who won the U. S. modern pentathlon championship held at San Antonio, Tex., recently. He took first place by amassing a total of 4,918 points in the five events which consisted of riding, shooting, fencing, swimming and running. Through his win he has qualified for a place on the United States team which will compete in the world pentathlon championship to be held in September in Bern, Switzerland.

Baseball Banter

By Ted Williamson

The 1963 edition of the Fort Benning All-Star team has been announced. The big question coming from the fans is, "Why does the championship team, The Student Brigade, have only four men on the team, and two of those are pitchers?"

We can't hope to answer this question in its entirety, but we can say that undoubtedly, were it not for the fact that Jesse Joyce and Ralph Maru were being relieved from the Army before the start of the Third Army playoffs, TSB's representation would be increased by at least two. The presence of Joyce would certainly eliminate one of the trouble spots of the team, shortstop.

GOOD CLUB

As a whole, this year's club stacks up to be a potentially good one. This should be a good hitting club with enough power to score a lot of runs on any given night.

Team defense could be the big factor in the success of the Benning nine, including the effectiveness of the pitching staff. If the defense holds up, Bob Kinnard and his crew could easily bring home the bacon.

MUSIAL RETIRING

The news of Stan "The Man" Musial's forthcoming retirement at the end of the 1963 season is sad news indeed for the baseball world. It marks the end of the career for one of the few really great ball-players the fans of the present era have had the pleasure of watching.

Its common knowledge that Musial need only wait out the mandatory five - year waiting period before receiving entrance to the Hall-of-Fame. This is mere conjecture, but if St. Louis should win the National League pennant, wouldn't that set up one of the most dramatic World Series ever?

Stan Musial's final appearance as a player in the World Series against one of the most powerful Yankee teams ever; no doubt it would be a "Hot Stove League" subject for years to come.

ODDS 'N ENDS — Don't be surprised to see Rocky Colavito in the National League next year. Its no secret the Tigers will be trading and Colavito is prime trade bait, but the Tigers don't want him to come back and haunt them. — Rookie Tommy Harper of the Reds says he will put up the top four men in the Red's batting order, Pete Rose, Harper, Vada Pinson and Frank Robinson, and match any other top four in either league for speed. — Top Rookie-of-the-Year candidates; in the National League, Pete Rose of the Reds and Ray Culp of the Phils, in the American League, Pete Ward of the Chisox and Jim Bouton of the Yanks.

Publication Outlines Quarters Assignment System

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — In an effort to insure uniformity among the military departments and achieve quality for the individual serviceman in assignment to family quarters, the Defense Department has published a new instruction on "Assignment Utilization of Family Housing."

Military necessity may take precedence over all other considerations in priority of assignment to "on post" quarters, the instruction states, but such type assignments shall be held to a minimum.

The instruction (4165.44) explains that where military necessity is not a consideration in assignment to "on post" quarters, rank and family size and composition shall be considered in establishing assignment priorities.

Exceptions to this policy may be made when individual quarters are designated as "prestige quarters," or when unusual circumstances warrant other assignment.

In reference to three-bedroom and larger quarters designated for occupancy by personnel of the paygrade of O-4 and below, the instruction states that family size and composition shall be the primary assignment factor within each rank or grade.

Signed by Thomas D. Morris, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Installations and Logistics, the instruction states that assignment to family housing units under military control shall be made by commanding officers who have military jurisdiction over such units in accordance with regulations, and directives and-or service agreements of competent authority.

Family housing the instruction continues, shall generally be occupied by the grade or category of military or civilian personnel for which it was programed and constructed.

The new instruction said that family housing units, other than those designated for specific billet occupancy, shall not be kept vacant for any one individual unless the mission of the installation requires his assignment.

However, under no instance shall a unit be kept vacant for such occupancy in excess of three months. Other than special billets, a unit will not be kept vacant longer than 10 days after the unit has been determined ready for occupancy.

The instruction becomes effective in mid-October.

Your Dental Health

Early Care Saves Painful Dental Work

By Capt. Robert Cross

Recently, a very tooth-conscious young man asked me frankly if I did not feel it was malpractice to extract a permanent tooth on an adult.

He was quite disgruntled about anything relating to extraction. In answer to his question it was necessary to reply, "No," as he couldn't understand all the circumstances involved.

If a dentist were told to use his own judgment to extract or save a tooth, and the circumstances are favorable, I'm sure he would do everything he could to save the tooth.

Let's look at the other side of the picture. What does the dentist frequently see? First of all, there is seldom one tooth which is questionable, for usually we see a person who has neglected his mouth in the past.

Let's face it — his mouth is in deplorable condition. He hasn't thought about a dentist until he is painfully reminded of the one person who can stop the ache. Even at this stage, if aspirin or APC stops the pain, he may pass nature's warning signal in hopes everything will be O.K.

If the patient shows up at the clinic with early pain or with the knowledge he has a cavity, usually the tooth can be saved, and most dentists will do everything to save the tooth. But please don't come in with several teeth severely decayed or badly broken down, point to a certain tooth and demand that it be saved.

The dentist's answer probably will have to be "No."

People prize their front teeth for esthetic reasons, and will allow their back teeth to be extracted with much less concern. The back teeth are functional, and are more desirable to be retained than the front ones!

Look in your own mouth. Perhaps what you see will make you more conscious of your responsibility to yourself.

Gen. Gavan Gets Post With AUSA

Maj. Gen. Paul A. Gavan has been named director of regional activities for the Association of the United States Army (AUSA), it was announced today by Gen. James M. Gavin, AUSA president. In his new assignment, Gen. Gavan will be responsible for supervising AUSA's worldwide regional program.

Gen. Gavan, a veteran of 35 years Army service, retired from active duty on July 31, 1963. Prior to his retirement, he commanded the Military District of Washington (MDW), in the nation's capital for two years. His last overseas assignment was in Munich, Germany where he commanded the Southern Area Command.

During World War II, Gen. Gavan served as chief of staff of the Pacific Theater's Americal Division. He saw action in the North Solomons and Guadalcanal campaigns and two China offensives. His decorations include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster.

A resident of Arlington, Va., Gen. Gavan was born in Springfield, Mo. He attended high school in Joplin, Mo. and at Western Military Academy, Alton, Ill. Gavan attended Missouri University and graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1928.

He's married to the former Anne DeArmond. The Gavans have one son, William, who is a 1962 graduate of West Point and is currently serving with the Army.

Eight Years of Collecting Nets Scores of Clocks

STUTTGART, Germany — (ANF)— CWO Sidney S. Styles is literally a man with time on his hands. While some people collect coins, guns, or stamps, he is a collector of clocks. Scores of timepieces from all eras and all in different sizes and shapes line the walls of his apartment.

His interest in clock collecting originated in 1955, when he and his wife decided to buy a grandfather's clock. It took over a year to find the one they wanted, but during the interim several other clocks were accumulated, admired and, those that needed it, repaired.

In a recent interview, the articulate warrant officer pointed to a clock in the corner of his home and said, "That is my favorite. It is from the Black Forest region and not too old. . . around 1925. It is very accurate and only varies four seconds each week."

Picking up a tiny watch which was made during the 1740s, the veteran soldier remarked that his wife had discovered it in her niece's toy box while visiting her sister in Koblenz. Although its condition at that time left much to be desired, within a short period of time CWO Styles had it running as smoothly as a new watch.

Little Theater Slates Tryouts For 'The Lark' August 19 to 21

Open tryouts for the Fort Benning Little Theater's production "The Lark" will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Little Theater (Bldg. 2519) on August 19, 20 and 21.

"The Lark," written by Jean Anouilh and adapted for the American stage by Lillian Hellman, will be directed by Sp5 Peter Tatistcheff and presented on October 16, 17, 18 and 19.

Director Tatistcheff describes the play as "a steadily realistic and believable portrait of Joan of Arc, set in a drama of beauty, humor, and emotional power."

Joan's story is a pageant from which all of France and much of Christendom derives spiritual inspiration. The play calls for seventeen principal characters and approximately fifteen people to portray monks, soldiers of France and England, and the peasantry and nobility of France.

The setting for "The Lark" is the trial of Joan of Arc in the France of 1431. Joan, confronted by her English captors and representatives of the Church, is allowed to re-enact her life from the time she first heard the Voices through her rise in power to her confession, her denial, and her death.

Throughout the play she is examined by both French and English political and religious authorities. Scenes of her experience are recalled through flashbacks; the time of the play, therefore, is past, present and future.

Director Tatistcheff has provided a brief description of the principal characters as they will be portrayed in this production.

JOAN — An attractive, compelling, peasant girl, inspired by the religious intensity of the Middle Ages and driven by her devotion to a simple conception of God to rally the ragged armies of France to expel their British captors. Her personality reflects balance, strength, simplicity, sensitivity and mysticism, but above all she is a peasant girl who has chosen to sacrifice human love for her simple understanding of God, her King and her Country. The question of her saintliness does not apply to "The Lark." The validity of her experience of inspired leadership does.

EARL OF WARWICK—Stern and vain representative of the English Court, instrumental in the conviction of Joan, serves as both a character and the narrator of the play.

CAUCHON, BISHOP OF BEAUVAIS — Joan was captured in his diocese. It is he who insists that her whole story be played out, and although in many ways responsible for Joan's death, he always protects and believes in her.

THE PROMOTER —Prosecutor at the trial. His blasphemies, insults, and curses are brutal reminders of the corruption which prompted reformation of the Church.

THE INQUISITOR — Represents the highest authority of the Church. He considers Joan a "monstrous symbol of the faith decayed," yet exhibits a curious inability to sentence her to death. He is never quite satisfied that Joan is either a heretic or a saint and fears each conclusion.

BEAUDRICOURT — A simple, forceful, carousing, but unswervingly loyal officer of the Army. He fears neither God nor the devil, but is won over by Joan and agreed to help her reach the Dauphin.

LA HIRE — An earthy, professional captain in the Army and a loyal and devoted battle companion of Joan.

THE DAUPHIN, CHARLES VII OF FRANCE — The eleventh son of a madman and a totally amoral woman, who conceals cleverness under the guise of weak, silly, calculated childishness.

BROTHER LADVENU — A monk who brings youth, tenderness and compassion to the trial. His sympathetic outbursts nearly effect his removal. He must read Joan's confession to her and guide her hand to sign it.

AGNES SOREL — Mistress of the Dauphin and terribly concerned with competitive fashionable appearances. Quite qualified for her task of increasing Charles' virility.

Deputy National Guard Chief Tells Graduates to Set Sights on Stars

Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, deputy chief of the National Guard Bureau, Washington, Monday morning told 161 graduating members of the Officer Candidate (Reserve Component) Class 3 to "set your sights on the stars."

The Air Force general, who has been confirmed by the Senate to become chief of the National Guard Bureau Aug. 31, explained that at no other time in U. S. History has a National Guard or Reserve officer had more opportunity to advance to general officer rank than at present.

He challenged the graduates to encourage men serving under them at their home stations to complete necessary training to become qualified in their particular military skills.

"Your military education has just begun," he said. "You have available to you the world's best courses in military instruction and I urge you to take advantage of them."

"The men you lead must be trained to a degree of professionalism never before required of citizen soldiers. The National Guard and Reserve are now full partners with the active Army and so we must make sure that we are trained and maintained at a peak proficiency."

Gen. Wilson was introduced by Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School who made brief congratulatory remarks.

Honor graduate of the class and recipient of the Association of the United States Army plaque, Erickson Cup and Battalion Bowl was Sgt. Gary L. Anderson of (Route 2) Axtell, Neb. Sgt. Anderson is a member of Company A, 128th Engineer Battalion, Hastings, Neb.

Reserve Component officer candidates are not commissioned upon completion of the nine-week course, but are eligible for such commissions upon return to their home stations.

Port-Call Use Is Increased; Ends Delay

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Increasing numbers of overseas-bound Army personnel will be moving directly from their home stations or leave addresses to aerial or surface transportation terminals for immediate shipment as the Army extends its direct port-call system.

The system has been in operation on a limited basis since 1958.

The plan considerably reduces the time spent in non-effective transient status between departure from a state-side unit and arrival at an overseas station.

Record-checks and other overseas processing are accomplished before leaving CONUS stations, eliminating delays at overseas replacement depots.

Originally, the system was setup to handle accompanied personnel destined for all areas overseas, and to cover some unaccompanied officers and categories of enlisted men destined for certain areas.

The system depends upon the availability of overseas replacements simultaneously with the availability of transportation.

Because these do not always match, port-calls through replacement depots continue to be required to some extent.

Several direct dockside port-call tests of unaccompanied personnel have been conducted and further testing is planned before maximum implementation of the plan is made.

The Army said the major benefits of the system are improvement in morale of overseas replacements, reduction in non-effective transient times, reduction in operating costs of overseas replacement stations, and an acceleration of the replacement system.

Deep Freeze Commander Heads South

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Rear Adm. James R. Reedy is now making final arrangements to go south this fall so he can spend the winter in the summer.

Confused? Many people are when it come to the subject of Antarctica.

That's where Admiral Reedy and his staff are headed. As commander of the U.S. Naval Support Forces, Antarctica, he heads a program of scientific exploration and experimentation on the world's coldest and windiest continent.

A token U.S. force is spending the winter on Antarctica now. Since the seasons in the northern and southern hemispheres are always opposite, Admiral Reedy will join his men just in time for summer—if one can call sub-zero temperatures summer.

Called "Operation Deep Freeze," the expeditionary force works to gain information for the United States. The coming season will be Admiral Reedy's ninth at the South Pole.

Admiral Reedy was graduated from the Naval Academy 30 years ago. A Naval aviator, he won his wings in the Army Air Corps during the Thirties when the Navy could not assign some of the new ensigns. Later he served with the air arm of the Navy.

When Admiral Reedy took command of "Operation Deep Freeze," it was unofficially tagged the "coldest change of command" in U.S. military history. In that ceremony, Admiral Reedy replaced Admiral David Tyree while the mercury slipped to 33 degrees below zero.

806th Engineers Working 2 Shifts

Delta Company of the 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction) recently went into a two-shift operation in their effort to complete the McKenna Airstrip by Sept. 15.

The construction of this airstrip and allied facilities requires the movement of approximately 165,000 cubic yards of dirt in 30 working days so that other phases of the project will not fall behind. The two-shift operation will enable the earthmoving equipment to do twice as much work in the time allowed.

Reservists' Term Is Cut To 6 Years

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A change of policy which will effect men 17 to 18½-years-old who enlist in the military reserves was announced by the Department of Defense. These enlistees will be obliged to serve six years instead of the previous eight years obligation.

However, the Department said, they may have to spend more time on active duty with the regular forces for training.

Up to now the requirement for young men choosing to serve in the reserve forces has been six months of active duty. After basic training and OJT the remainder is served in the Reserves.

In a directive signed by Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell L. Gilpatrick, the Pentagon revised the program. The revision also applies to those who enter National Guard units.

About 763,000 youths have chosen the Reserves instead of regular service in the eight years the option has been available.

Army Interns Tour Military Installations

HONOLULU, Hawaii (ANF)—Twenty-five medical and four dental interns of the U.S. Army got a first-hand look at how their future patients live and work when they visited Army, Navy and Marine Corps installations in the Honolulu area.

The newly commissioned captains, who are beginning their one-year training at Tripler General Hospital in Honolulu, spent a week observing training and the working environment to which the hospital patient must return after his illness.

The interservice orientation, the first held for Tripler's annual intern class, was designed to aid the doctor in prescribing post-hospital care and to familiarize him with the clinical capabilities of the dispensaries and medical and dental facilities available at the various military bases.

Included on the interns' visit were the Army's 25th Infantry Division at Schofield Barracks; the Navy's submarine Base; and the Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station.

Overseas Pay

When enlisted members of the Army are on duty outside the continental United States or Alaska, elsewhere than in a territory or possession of the United States of which they are residents, they are entitled to foreign duty pay according to their grade, ranging from $8 per month for E-1's to $22.50 for E-9's.

Senate Passes New Pay Bill by 84-0 Vote

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—By an overwhelming 84-0 vote the Senate has passed a military pay bill which will give an average 16.6 per cent increase to the nearly two million persons now in the uniformed services with over two years' service.

Oct. 1 is still the suggested effective date.

The Senate version of the pay bill must now be approved by a Senate-House conference committee to iron out the differences and reach a compromise. The bill then goes to President Kennedy for his signature.

The pay raises would range from $5 to $230 per month, depending on rank and longevity. The biggest increase would go to officers below the rank of colonel and to skilled enlisted technicians and noncommissioned officers.

Officers with over two years' service will receive an average increase of 18.8 per cent, and enlisted men with over two years' service would average 15.5 per cent.

Included in the Senate version are increases for both officers and enlisted personnel with less than two years' service.

An extra $5 a month pay boost has been recommended by the Senate for E-4s through E-7s.

Other Senate proposals are: Additional pay for physicians and dentists who remain in the military for more than six and ten years.

Deletion of an increase in enlisted ration allowance and officer subsistence allowance.

Rejection of "hostile fire" pay retroactive to Jan. 1, 1961. A $55 a month pay for service under "hostile fire" conditions during peacetime was approved.

Authorize Secretary of Defense McNamara the power to determine which enlisted personnel are entitled to special pay for foreign duty.

The Senate accepted a House provision to allow all personnel retired prior to the 1958 pay increase to recompute their retirement pay, if this would benefit them more than a five per cent across-the-board pay increase.

U.S. Given Roosevelt's Birth Place

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Secretary of Interior Stewart L. Udall has accepted the deeds to Theodore Roosevelt's Long Island home and New York City birthplace along with a check for $500,000 to maintain them.

The deeds and check were from the endowment fund of the Theodore Roosevelt Association to the United States. In accepting the deeds and check, Udall signed documents designating the home and birthplace as national historic sites.

The brownstone house at 28 East 20th St., Manhattan, where the late President was born, was designated as the "Theodore Roosevelt Birthplace National Historic Site." Roosevelt, born Oct. 27, 1858, spent his childhood there.

'Flying Truck' Begins Testing

YUMA TEST STATION, Ariz. (AFPS) — A new "flying truck" has recently been delivered to the Army Transportation Research Command here for testing and evaluation.

The Flexible Wing Aerial Utility Vehicle nicknamed the "Fleep," is designed to operate out of rugged, unimproved areas where conventional airstrips are unavailable.

The handling characteristics of the "Fleep" are reported to be so stable and its controls so simple that personnel accustomed to operating ground vehicles can be trained to fly and maintain the aircraft.

Davey Jones' Secrets Endangered by Research

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secrets kept secrets may come float- during the next decade.

Scores of Davey Jones' best ing up from the ocean depths

Military needs, with the accent on underwater warfare, dominate announced United States plans for greater and deeper exploration of the oceans. By 1972, funding for oceanographic research, now $124 million, will more than double, according to a White House statement.

The President's Office of Science and Technology predicted the number of research and survey ships would grow from 76 to 128 and the number of scientists and engineers now studying the seas would be nearly tripled.

Both applied and basic research problems are concerned.

Among applied problems are detection of submarines, production of coastal and deep seas charts for navigation, safe disposal of radioactive wastes and prediction of the seas' conditions for economic routing of ships.

Basic research problems include understanding the sea's circulation, origin of underwater trenches and seamounts, fertility of the sea, and the complex air-seas interaction.

The Navy, with an estimated 36 per cent of the funding, will provide the largest share of support. Other major contributors include the National Science Foundation and the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries.

Annual appropriation requests to Congress for ocean research is based on plans prepared by the Interagency Committee on Oceanography.

U.S. Enters Military Pact With Bonn

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has announced the signing of agreements planned to increase military cooperation between the United States and the Federal Republic of West Germany.

Returning from his European visit, the secretary said he is "delighted" with the results.

One agreement established a joint-logistics committee which will arrange to integrate the logistical systems of West Germany and the United States.

Secretary McNamara also said both countries have agreed to enter into joint research and development projects. The first calls for the development of a new main battle tank.

West Germany will continue to buy goods and services from the United States. This agreement, according to the Secretary, means that West German money spent for American goods will equal the cost of keeping United States forces deployed there.

The Secretary also met with West German Minister of Defense Von Hassel to discuss the NATO strategy.

Secretary McNamara said he was pleased with the progress of West German forces.

Training Area Is Completed By Engineers

Company B, 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) has just completed the Squad and Platoon Attack Course No. 2, located toward the northern boundary of the reservation near Ruth Range.

This course embodies a new concept in range training, wherein teamwork and coordination are tested as well as individual ability. There are two distinct phases in the problem — a squad attack objective and a platoon attack objective. Both phases have attack preparation positions, a line of departure, final coordination lines, pop-up type targets simulating a counter-attack force for recapturing the objective.

In addition, demolition pits are strategically placed along maneuver routes to simulate mortar and artillery fires. All targets and demolition pits are manually controlled, and are operated from underground bunkers near the objectives.

First Infantry

The First Regiment of Infantry was authorized by an act of Congress on March 3, 1791.

STUDENTS REGISTER MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Dependent school children from kindergarten through the 12th grade who live on post will be required to register with the children's school system Aug. 26 or 27.

Registration will be conducted from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m. both days by grade and housing area. The school designated for registration does not necessarily mean that a child will attend that school, officials said.

Children in grades six and above will be permitted to register for themselves if they can give all required information.

For students in grades nine through 12 the registration consists of obtaining approval slips to attend high school in the civilian community.

The slips will be issued in the art room at Faith School during the scheduled registration hours. Actual registration for high school students will be conducted by the Muscogee County School System, the schedule to be announced in local newspapers.

Muscogee school officials require military dependents who live on the reservation and who register for grades nine through 12 to show Fort Benning approval slips, as well as birth certificates, records of promotion or grade placement and immunization records when they register.

To enter kindergarten at Fort Benning, a child must be five-years-old on or before Jan. 1, 1964. To enter the first grade, the child must be 6 years old on or before Jan. 1, 1964. Birth certificates must be presented at the time of registration for kindergarten or first grade.

New pupils will be required to show transfer certificates, report cards or similar documents to establish their grade placement.

Immunization records also must be shown. Immunization requirements include smallpox vaccination completed, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus (DPT) completed and booster shot if indicated, and polio series begun.

Registration of students who live in the NCO Capehart area and who are entering kindergarten will be conducted at Patch School, first through fifth grades at Loyd School, and sixth through 12th grades at Faith School.

Those who live in Custer Terrace, Battle Park, Upatoi and Officer Capehart will be registered for kindergarten at Edward A. White School; first through fifth grades at Wilbur, and sixth through 12th at Faith.

Benning Park residents, kindergarten at Edward A. White; first through fourth at Patch, and fifth through 12th at Faith.

Harmony Church and Main Post north of Baltzell and Wold Avenues kindergarten through fourth at Patch, and fifth through 12th at Faith.

Main Post south of Baltzell and Wold Avenues including the new NCO quarters northwest of Indianhead Rd., kindergarten through fourth, Edward A. White, and fifth through 12th at Faith.

All children who will attend the special class will be registered at Edward A. White School regardless of the residential area.

Loyd School is on Santa Fe Rd. near Victory Dr.; Wilbur School, just off Custer Rd., near the Wherry Housing Area; Patch School, at the corner of Baltzell Ave. and Lumpkin Rd., Edward A. White, on 1st Division Rd., and Faith on the Main Post off Lumpkin Rd.

Swift Strike

Gen. Adams Commends Participants

The following excerpts are from a message received by the Bayonet this week to be directed to all units which participated in Exercise Swift Strike III, recently completed by the U.S. Strike Command in the Carolinas. The message is from Gen. Paul D. Adams, commanding general of Strike Command. . . Editor

"I commend all personnel who have participated in joint Exercise Swift Strike III. Your performance of duty, whether in a player, control, or support role, has been of a high order. Realization of the exercise objectives is the product of your dedication and professionalism.

"We have learned many new and valuable lessons, and relearned some old ones. I believe that Swift Strike III has been a profitable experience and that it has appreciably

Army Secretary Praises Fort Benning

Thank you very much for the courtesies you extended during my recent stay at Fort Benning. Your fine, informative program contributed to a most rewarding visit.

The high standards of performance I observed throughout the Infantry School pleased me tremendously. I was especially impressed with the operation of the Officer Candidate School in general and with the Officer Candidates in particular. I know that the present high standard will be maintained as the operation is expanded.

I want to express my appreciation for the weapons demonstration. It gave me, for the first time, an opportunity to see the whole range of infantry weapons. In addition, the display of physical prowess on the part of the Rangers was most encouraging. Please convey my appreciation to all who participated in the excellent briefings and demonstrations.

Again, many thanks for the splendid visit to the Home of the Infantry.

Sincerely,
Cyrus R. Vance

AUSA Sets Fund Drive For Memorial Museum

The Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA) announced today that all post command echelons have been asked to give post personnel an opportunity to become a member in the "Guardians of Independence."

Membership is acquired by contributing to AUSA's drive to establish a memorial fund to support the U. S. Army Memorial Museum in Philadelphia. Contributions will be taken in connection with the August pay day.

The drive originated in January, 1961, when the Secretary of the Army approved plans for the museum. In 1962, Fort Benning contributed $3,889, placing tenth among the top twelve AUSA chapters taking part.

Total Army contributions were $175,000, buf because the cost of the building and museum exhibits is estimated at $600,000 and the Army's share is $300,000, the campaign has been extended.

AUSA officials expressed hope that all members of the Army, including Department of the Army civilian employees, would take part.

Zimmerman Tops at 144

Bob Zimmerman from Fort McPherson, Ga., grabbed the lead at the halfway mark Wednesday in the Third U.S. Army Golf Tournament at Fort Benning Country Club with a 36-hole mark of 144.

For a complete wrap-up of first round results turn to page 17.

Honors Tuesday For Gen. Williams

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, named last month as chief of the Training, Evaluation and Control Group at Fort Benning, will be officially welcomed to the post at 4 p.m. Tuesday with honors ceremonies at Chapel Field.

A reception will be held at the Main Officers' Open Mess after the honors ceremonies and approximately 350 military and civilian guests have been invited.

Gen. Williams, commanding general of the U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., will be in charge of the test and evaluation of the 11th Air Assault Division, (Test), which is commanded by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

Army Pioneer

A pioneer in Army aviation, Gen. Williams has served with the Army air arm since its inception in 1942, and was the first master aviator in the Army.

He also was the first director of what is now the Army Aviation Test Board at Fort Rucker.

GEN. WILLIAMS

In June, 1942, when the Department of Air Training was formed in the Field Artillery School, Gen. Williams was appointed chief of the Flight Division, and became the first ground officer to receive an instrument rating.

In 1947, he was aviation officer of the U.S. Constabulary in Europe and formed the first ground force operational aviation unit. Before his assignment with the Aviation Board, he was chief of the Army Aviation Branch, Department of the Army.

Gen. Williams left the Aviation Board in 1958 and — after attending the Army War College — he was assigned chief of the Air Mobility Division, chief of research and development, Department of the Army.

Before his assignment as Fort Rucker commander, he served in the office of the Secretary of Defense.

He was promoted to his present rank a month after taking over Fort Rucker in March, 1962.

Gen. and Mrs. Williams have three children. The oldest, Robert B., is attending George Washington University. The other two children are Kathleen and Keith.

500 Visitors Will Be Here For JCOC

Approximately 350 representatives of the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., and five U.S. Army schools will join the more than 150 principal conferees and Continental Army Command guests for the Army phase of the Defense Department's 33rd Joint Civilian Orientation Conference here Sept. 25-26.

The Army schools include the Engineer School, Fort Belvoir, Va.; Signal School, Fort Gordon, Ga.; Women's Army Corps School, Fort McClellan, Ala.; Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Va., and Judge Advocate General's School, Charlottesville, Va.

The Infantry School will be the second stop on the tour, which is being conducted Sept. 22-28. Principals and guests will first visit the Norfolk area for Navy-Marine training, and conclude their orientation with Air Force training at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

Principals and guests are scheduled to arrive at Fort

Senate Passes Military Pay Bill

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Senate has passed the Uniformed Service Act of 1963, H. R. 5555, by a vote of 84-0.

The bill provides for an effective date of October 1, 1963 and now goes back to the House of Representatives for action on the Senate amendments.

Senate amendments to the original House bill include provisions for:

1. Increased rates of base pay for most grades including grades E-4, E-5, 0-1, 0-2, 0-3 and 0-4 with less than two years service. (see tables).

2. Elimination of higher subsistence allowances, an area presently under study by the Department of Defense.

3. Elimination of the retroactive date of January 1, 1961, for those entitled to the bill's provision for $55 per month special pay for duty subject to hostile fire.

4. Increased extra pay of $50 and $100 for physicians and dentists at the six and 10-year points.

Personnel retired before the effective date of the bill would receive at last a five per cent increase. Not included in this provision are those retired under special acts of Congress, who would receive no increase.

Assault Medics Move Into Field For Exercises

Men and equipment of Company A, 11th Medical Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Support Command, were airlifted to the field last week in the first air movement by a medical unit.

The purpose of the exercise was to test the rapid reaction deployment of a medical company upon arriving in an operational area.

Three Iroquois helicopters were used in the movement which took about two hours to complete.

Lt. Col. Joseph E. Stroud, commanding officer of the 11th Medical Battalion, Capt. Richard P. Dorr, commanding officer of Company A, Capt. Francis A. Copeland, officer-in-charge of the air ambulance platoon and 1st Sgt. Leonard Julian were on hand to supervise the move and establish the treatment facilities.

The company has the capability to care for more than 60 patients.

577th Engineers Set Organization Day for Tomorrow

Tomorrow the officers and men of the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction) will celebrate the 21st anniversary of the unit with activities on the battalion parade field.

The battalion was officially activated at Fort Benning on Aug. 25, 1954, but prior to this had been operating under several other unit designations since April, 1942. As part of a "service regiment," the unit received campaign streamers for operations in northern France and the Rhineland during World War II.

At present the unit is a member of The Infantry Center Troop Command, and is charged with the mission of providing engineer support to The Infantry Center. In a theater of operations, this unit would have the mission to construct and rehabilitate roads, airfields, pipeline systems, structure, and utilities in the "communications zone," rear areas of the combat zone, and in support of airborne and beach operations; and to defend all construction sites.

Current projects and support activities here include construction of a Special Services Boat Marina, which will provide facilities for upward of 100 pleasure craft as well as other supplemental recreational assets; rehabilitation of existing buildings in the Harmony Church area for eventual use by elements of the 11th Air Assault Division; construction of a new Leaders Reaction Course for use by the U. S. Army Infantry School.

Construction of a concrete dam, reservoir, and pipeline with pump station to supply water for maintenance and improvement of Sand Hill Golf Course; renovation of an existing structure for use as the 2nd Infantry Division finance office; improvement of motor park facilities for 4th Battalion, 69th Armor.

Modification of existing buildings to serve as temporary type classrooms for military dependent children, and relocation of three holes, and construction of a driving range for Sand Hill Golf Course.

All of these projects are scheduled to be completed and in use this year, and numerous additional projects are now in final planning stages.

The commanding officer of the battalion, Lt. Col. William K. Jordan, has made it a policy of the unit to meet all target dates for completion of projects, but always with the continuing high quality of workmanship that has become a trademark of the 577th Engineers.

Currently, the battalion is organized with five organic companies—Headquarters and Headquarters Company, commanded by 1st Lt. Allan A. Pierce; Company A (equipment and maintenance), commanded by Capt. Charles E. Mattix; Company B (construction) commanded by 1st Lt. Michael C. Kearney; Company C (construction) commanded by 1st Lt. George P. Perdue; Company D (construction) commanded by 1st Lt. Robert D. Kresl.

In addition, attached units include the 586th Engineer Company (Float Bridge), 510th Engineer Maintenance Company and 86th Engineer Water Purification Detachment.

Do Not Be Too Quick To Pass Judgement

Ping Bodie, a famous baseball umpire, was getting a heavy shower of abuse from fans in the grandstand during a ball game played many years ago in California.

Suddenly, in the middle of the game, Ping called proceedings to a halt, walked over to the grandstand and climbed slowly to the top. When he reached the top row, he bellowed, "Play Ball!"

The bewildered managers rushed up to Ping and asked him what on earth he thought he was doing.

"If these people can see better from up here than I can down there," he roared, "then here's where I'll call 'em from. Play Ball!"

The soldier, sailor, airman or Marine often reacts to decisions in the same manner as the unruly California baseball fan. It's one of the easiest things in the world to sit on the sidelines and criticize the work of another.

The "complete picture" is often unrecognized by the individual, be he military or civilian, man or woman. Often we sit on the sidelines and are most critical of the small visible portion of the overall situation.

Since the small picture is often all we see, wouldn't we be better off to get down on the ground — or climb out of our own grandstand — and examine the complete picture, big and small? Then, rather than contributing vocal disagreement, roll up our sleeves, tighten our belt buckles, bend our backs, use our heads and work for the "big team" — the United States of America.

Judgement is valid in any situation only when based on full information. So, first we should secure the information and then we should act, not complain.

The old umpire, Ping Bodie, certainly demonstrated to the name-calling fans that he was willing to view his work from all angles before making any more decisions. (AFPS)

Chaplain's Corner

Pray for Your Country

BY CHAPLAIN (MAJ.) HUGH C. MCKEOWN

Some years ago as President of the United States, Dwight D. Eisenhower acting under a resolution approved by Congress proclaimed one day in the year as a "National Day of Prayer".

Among the reasons President Eisenhower gave for his actions were the following:

1. "In our time, buffeted by unprecedented changes and challenged by an aggressive denial of Divine Providence, we have continuing need of the wisdom and strength that comes from God.

2. "That we may be humbly mindful that this nation, under God, arrived at its present position by the toil and sacrifice of many citizens . . .

3. "That we may have Divine guidance in our efforts to lead our children in the paths of truth and to provide a healthy environment in which they may grow in body, mind, and spirit."

All of us, today, will agree that our country and its citizens are still in need of Divine guidance and protection. Because of recent events, Americans have become dismayed at the apparent unconcern for spiritual values in the national and international life. However, each American can offset this tendency by intensifying his own religious life both in personal and public profession.

Each, thus will do his part to keep these United States, as President Lincoln put it, "this nation under God" and much to prevent it from ever becoming "this nation without God".

Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord. Psalms 32:12

AG School Can Help You in MOS Testing

The MOS Testing Program can help you or hurt you. If you haven't already been tested in your MOS's, the odds are heavy that you soon will be! As evidenced by announced pilot tests for certain Reserve and National Guard units, it appears that the trend in MOS testing will extend to all components of the Army on an annual basis.

The U.S. Army Adjutant General School can help one to become MOS qualified through the Army Extension Course Program. Special extension courses have been prepared for administrative specialists, personnel specialists, military pay specialists, postal clerks, clerk-typists, stenographers, personnel staff NCO's, bandsmen, and data processing equipment and electrical accounting machine operators and specialists.

Shortly after the first of the year, refresher courses will be available to graduates of either the administrative specialist course, MOS 717 or the personnel specialist course, MOS 716. These refresher courses will be reviewed and revised annually so that interested personnel will be able to keep abreast of changes in regulation, policy, or procedure.

Today your primary MOS is being verified . . .Tomorrow you may be tested in your secondary or even additional MOS. Future job assignment, promotion and eligibility for proficiency pay may be largely determined by the results of an MOS test.

Enrollment in the Army Extension Course Program is free to all military personnel and to certain civilian employees of the government. A catalog of courses offered and an application form may be obtained by writing to the Commandant, USAAGS, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind. 46216, ATTN: NRTD.

Capitol Notes

The United States Senate formally expressed "profound sorrow and deep regrets" over the death of Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.). It quickly adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of Tennessee's senior Senator and former Democratic vice presidential candidate. Following the tradition in the Senate that the remaining Senator from the deceased's State make the official announcement of death, Senator Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) made the death announcement.

* * *

A House Armed Forces subcommittee was expected to give the Civil Defense fallout shelter program its first key Congressional endorsement. The committee, headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert (D., La.), was reported ready to approve the administration's request for authority to give communities millions of dollars in federal aid to help build shelters.

* * *

Senator Harrison Williams Jr., (D., N.J.) recently received a most unusual letter. "Let's put a stop to this featherbedding!" it concluded. When the Senator looked at the letter's return address he couldn't believe his eyes. He even double-checked with the directory. Sure enough, there it was, "Featherbed Lane."

Post Personnel Can Continue Education

The back to school movement will be in full swing for military personnel here on Sept. 3 when the American University, begins registration for the fall quarter and the Army Education Center inaugurates its high school, vocational and college level classes.

The Fort Benning Branch of The American University is offering 24 college courses ranging from freshman to post graduate level. Military personnel and their dependents are eligible to enroll, although only the military obtain tuition assistance. The cost per three semester hour course is $13.50 for military and $54.00 for dependents. Registration is Sept. 3-7.

The Army Education Center begins its high school level classes both on duty and off duty on Sept. 3 to be conducted in six-week cycles. Technical-vocational courses and an eighth grade completion program are also offered.

Language classes and speed reading courses are offered.

A testing program of college and high school level General Educational Development tests and end of course tests for all correspondence courses, both civilian and USAFI, is available.

The Judge Says . . .

By Col. Edwin G. Schuck

Bad debts can ruin your military career. Don't let the mirage of "easy credit" lead you into a mire of debt. The merchant who will lend you easy money without a thorough credit investigation is not interested in helping you to enjoy the good life. He's interested in making a profit, and hopes that the Army will collect his payments for him.

The Army will not act as a debt collection agency, of course. But, as a member of the Army, you are required to pay your lawful debts promptly. Your failure to do so, without good cause, brings discredit upon the Army, and for this you may be subjected to administrative or disciplinary action, either of which could terminate your military career. The "easy credit" lender is counting on this.

So don't succumb to the temptation of "easy credit". Don't let your finances reach the point where disciplinary or adverse administrative action becomes necessary in your case. If you are overextended, for whatever reason, discuss the matter frankly and honestly with your creditors, tell them how you plan to solve your problem, and ask for their cooperation. Your commanding officer can advise you, and the Soldiers Advocate Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate (545-4893), is available to set up a debt liquidation budget for you, if this is necessary to get you back on your financial feet.

The best way to avoid the bad debt problem is to seek advice before a minor difficulty becomes a major problem. Sixteen ounces of cure still don't outweigh one ounce of prevention.

HONOR GRAD . . . Sgt. Gary L. Anderson, (R), is presented the Erickson Cup by Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, deputy chief of the National Guard Bureau, Washington, after being named the honor student of officer candidate (Reserve Component) class No. 3 at The Infantry School Aug. 12. Anderson is assigned to NG Company A, 128th Engineer Battalion, Hastings, Neb. A former member of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, Fort Benning, Anderson was a Gold Medal winner four times during the World Shooting Championships in Cairo, Egypt, where he set three world records. He has the distinction of being the first American shooter to be awarded the International Shooter's Badge.

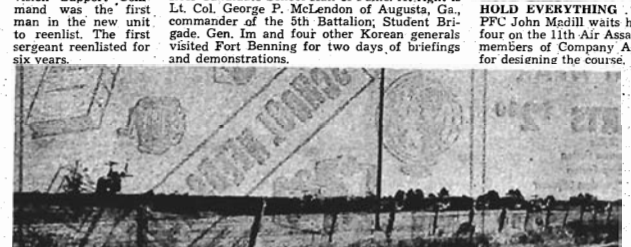
EXAMINING AN M-60 . . . First Lt. Claude E. Stuteville of Durant, Okla., a teacher in the Army Dependents School System in Nuremberg, Germany, traveled 5,500 miles to Fort Benning to attend the Raleigh (N.C.) U.S. A. R. School. He is a member of the Munich (Germany) USAR School, and is at this Georgia post for the active duty phase of the Infantry Reserve officer career course.

INFANTRY TROPHY TEAM CHAMPS . . . Eastern Region's rifle team blazed home in front of the field in the Infantry Trophy match at the Fourth Interservice Rifle championships with a score of 1,156 points. Front row, left to right, are: SFC C. L. Anthony, SSgt. Bobby Hogue, SSgt. Robert Ferguson, Sgt. David Fairweather. Back row: MSgt. J. E. McCaskill, team coach, SFC William Brushwood, Maj. Efrain Colon-Maldonado, SSgt. Dennis Lilly and SFC Roger Stanley.

FIRST FOR A FIRST . . . First Sgt. Leonard Julian, of Company A, 11th Medical Batallion, 11th Air Assault Division Support Command was the first man in the new unit to reenlist. The first sergeant reenlisted for six years.

ROK VISITS . . . Lt. Gen. Im Chunksik, left, commanding general of the Combat Arms Center, Republic of Korea, recently visited the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame. At right is Lt. Col. George P. McLendon of Augusta, Ga., commander of the 5th Battalion; Student Brigade. Gen. Im and four other Korean generals visited Fort Benning for two days of briefings and demonstrations.

HOLD EVERYTHING . . . PFC Wallace Rand slides down the rope as PFC John Madill waits his turn on the "Slide for Life," obstacle number four on the 11th Air Assault Division's Confidence Course. Both men are members of Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion, the unit responsible for designing the course.



AIR ASSAULT . . . Helicopters of the 2nd Infantry Division prepare to perform one of the newest ideas in combat techniques, the air assault, during Swift Strike III, the largest peacetime maneuver ever held anywhere in the world. The 2nd, which according to news reports, did so well during the joint maneuver, almost ended the entire war in the first week of action, as men of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, came within feet of capturing Maj. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division, when they overran his command post.

TANK KILLED . . . A "Bazookaman" moves toward his objective during Swift Strike III, the largest peacetime mock battle ever held anywhere in the world. The maneuver, which covered three states, Georgia, North and South Carolina, found the 2nd and 5th Infantry Divisions making up the force of the Strategic Army Corps with the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions making up the invading force.

"Summertime and the living is easy" is a term slightly misrepresented when applied to the vacations of Fort Benning teenagers.

To start off the vacation, the girls awaited the arrival of those handsome, broad-shouldered West Point cadets while the boys moped around waiting for the days when the girls would come back to them.

Steadies even gave their consent to their girls to go to the formal hop. A month after the withdrawal of the West Pointers, the Air Force cadets moved in.

I heard a story not long ago about the way the Columbus boys first combatted the situation that had arisen because of the cadets. Can you imagine the boys going on strike today? They sure did then.

Once in a while, cupid decides to do a little target practice. Last year we had just such a case. Karen Price met a West Point cadet who invited her to this year's "June Week." Karen returned not long ago with an "A" pin, which I understand is the next thing to engagement.

As the summer gradually passed on, more and more of our classmates moved away. Parties were given "left and right."

Among them was one given by Myra Paulick for Louise Williams. The party was very successful. Being an open-house, I'm sure Louise was able to see all of her friends before she left.

Betty Boisvert, a newcomer to Benning, gave a party for Pam Gates. Almost everyone from the age of 14 to 18 was there. Sara Walters, a Columbus High girl for three years, was the guest at a couple of slumber parties and a dinner before she left.

The summer hasn't just been a bunch of parties. There has been a lot of work. You may have seen Anita Braun, Mary Beth Williams or Bob Strange working in the library.

Terri Setaro and Sandy Duke got Y.E.B. to sponsor them as they taught swimming to youngsters. They have been teaching for about a month at Russ pool.

Others decided they liked to eat. Jim Stacey, Walter Braun and Jack Strange grew "fat" off pizza.

Some other teens have worked as lifeguards. A lifeguard must be mentally alert and in top shape. Among the outstanding workers are: Nancy Williams, Ray Lynch, Lindsey Koob, Carolyne Cole and Tom Elstad.

Speaking of the pool, I noticed something funny. The boys have finally started a fad, instead of wearing swimming trunks, they are wearing cut-off blue jeans.

A lot of girls have been keeping themselves busy this summer doing volunteer work for the American Red Cross. Not long ago, there was a course given in Volunteen Gray Ladies and Volunteen Staff Aides. Among the graduates were Susan Baer, Penny Boothe, Carmen Cruz, Ivie Dendy, Gayle Foster, Susan Gingrich, Beth Joseph, Maryla Lee, Christy Miller, JoAnn Morgan, Penny Roberts, Sandra Roche, Kathy Tillman, Jill Valenteen, Lynn Valenteen, Ann Vollentine, Shirley Webb, Laura Louise Williams.

National Magazine Cites Post Bank

The National Bank of Fort Benning is the subject of a recent national magazine article.

The article, entitled "Operation of 'The Infantryman's Bank'," ran in the latest issue of "Burroughs Clearing House," a national magazine for bankers. It was written by Erston G. Parks, first vice president and cashier.

NCO Wives Club Hold Luncheon

The Non-Commissioned Officers Wives' Club of Fort Benning entertained with a luncheon at Crain Hall recently.

Tables were laid with white covers, gleaming crystal and a center arrangement of summer flowers. Hostesses were Mrs. Raymond Faust, Mrs. Cora Parrish and Mrs. Brady Tolle.

Several games, featuring a "get-acquainted" theme, were played.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Robert E. Lamb, Mrs. Claude Valentine, first vice president, presided at a business meeting. Mrs. Valentine also bade farewell to the group since she is leaving soon.

Mrs. David Doyle, instructor at the ceramics club, is also departing.

Guests were Mrs. James R. Morrison and Mrs. Charles Puckett.

WRITING CONTEST

All members of the Armed Forces on active duty, including cadets and midshipmen of the service academies are eligible to compete for 101 prizes amounting to $8,500 in the 1963 Freedoms Foundation letter writing contest. First prize is $1,000.

'Queen of Battle, Her Recipes' Goes on Sale During October

By Marge Lennon

Wondering what kind of present to give your siser-in-law or favorite aunt for Christmas?

Worry no longer. The Women's Club of Fort Benning has an answer to all your Christmas gift-giving problems.

"Queen of Battle, Her Recipes" is slated to go on sale at the Opening Tea October 2. Containing 500 taste - tested recipes submitted by Army wives at Fort Benning, the new cookbook covers everything from fricassee to yummy deserts.

Much larger than previous cookbooks printed here, the 200-page book will contain recipes from over 20 foreign lands. Although some of the recipes have been compiled from past Fort Benning cookbooks, "Queen of Battle, Her Recipes" promises to be the most popular. Unlike the other books, it will be indexed and the individual pages numbered.

The cover of the book will be done in traditional Infantry Blue and white and recipes will be separated into different sections by blue pages.

Editor and chairman of the cookbook committee is Mrs. Melba Hawkins. Mrs. Bea Wostenburg is co-editor. Joan Morgan, Jerry Brophy and Yvonne Hawley are other committee members. Mrs. William R. Lynch assisted the group with printing problems and Mrs. Cochran acted as liaison lady between the printer and the cookbook committee.

Scheduled for its first public appearance October 2 at the Main Officers' Open Mess, site of the Opening Tea, the cookbook is priced at $2. A large quantity of books have been ordered pre-wrapped for Christmas mailing at $2.25. They are dressed up-by a bright Christmas seal, designed by the printer.

All profits made from the sale will be turned over to the Welfare Fund for eventual dispersal to needy families, a Korean orphanage, or college scholarships.

By paying $2.50 for the books, a buyer may have one sent anywhere in the world.

Orientation Is Attended By Wives

The wives of officers enrolled in the Infantry officers associate career class No. 1 attended an orientation coffee recently in the dayroom of Detachment 2, 2nd Student Battalion, the Student Brigade.

Maj. Ralph J. Viestenz, battalion commander, and Lt. Col. Billy R. Prestridge, detachment commander, welcomed the ladies to Fort Benning and spoke briefly of the course. Mrs. William E. Killoran added points of interest for the ladies.

Chaplain John S. Stannard spoke on the activities of the Christian Religious Program.

Honored guests were Mrs. Walter D. Short, wife of Col. Short, commander of The Student Brigade, Mrs. Claude W. Baker, wife of executive officer of the brigade, Mrs. Viestenz and Mrs. Stannard.

Coffee, iced tea and cake were served to about fifty ladies. The centerpiece was of red and white carnations. Cadre hostesses were Mrs. George C. Davis and Mrs. Joe H. Rodriguez.

Women's Club List of Events

The following list is a schedule of the Women's Club activities for the coming week. In order to participate in these groups, however, be sure to contact Mrs. Roy Inman, membership chairman, at 545-2207 to purchase your new card. Cost is $2.

53rd OC Wives Have Last Coffee In Unit Dayroom

The 53rd Officer Candidate Wives' Club met in the unit dayroom for a coffee on Tuesday. This was the last scheduled coffee for the group.

Honored guests were Mrs. Raymond L. Fleigh, Mrs. Billie R. Ramsey, Mrs. John L. Nelson, Mrs. Lawrence E. Resnick Jr., Mrs. William E. McConnell, Mrs. Joe B. Merkle and Mrs. Robert A. West Jr.

The committee chairmen reported on their plans for the club's luncheon, scheduled for Sept. 3 at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

A discussion on etiquette and courtesies of luncheons was given by Mrs. McConnell.

Air Assault Wives To Meet Monday

The 11th Air Assault Division NCO Wives whose husbands are in grades E-5 and up will meet in Victory Lodge Monday at 10 a.m., for a coffee get-together.

Mrs. George Foss has been elected first president of the newly organized NCO Wives Club. In addition to coffee, refreshments will be served and games will be played.

Booth Home Site Of 187th Infantry Monthly Coffee

The home of Capt. and Mrs. John Booth was the scene of the monthly coffee of the ladies of the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division. Hostesses for the affair were the ladies of Headquarters Company. Mrs. John Booth, wife of the company commander, was assisted by Mrs. Wayne L. Griffin and Mrs. Monte R. Tate.

The buffet coffee table, covered with beige linen, was centered by yellow gladioli. Mrs. Rutland D. Beard Jr., wife of the battalion executive officer, poured.

Special guest for the occasion was Mrs. George S. Beatty Jr., whose husband is the commander of the First Brigade, 11th Division.

Welcomed to the battalion distaff by Mrs. John J. Hennessey were Mrs. Wayne L. Davis and Mrs. George B. Callahan. Lt. Davis recently joined the battalion as a platoon leader in Company C, and CWO Calahan was assigned to the S-4 Section.

School of Dance Registration Set Early Next Week

Mrs. Jean K. Woodyard, chairman of the Women's Club School of Dance, told the Bayonet today that parents who wish their children to take dancing, must plan to register them when post school registration is held Monday and Tuesday.

Children may also be registered by telephoning Mrs. Woodyard at 545-5628.

Classes are to be formed in tap dancing and classical ballet. Miss Joan Stumhofer teaches tap; Mrs. Margaret LaForest is classical ballet teacher.

MAH Exec Set to Enter Honor Group

Col. Howard R. Scroggs, executive officer of Martin Army Hospital, has been nominated for membership in the American College of Hospital Administrators.

He will be admitted to the college at its 29th annual convocation ceremony Aug. 25 in New York City.

In its 30th year, the college was founded to provide recognition to men and women who are doing outstanding work in their professional careers as hospital administrators.

The convocation ceremony will be in the Imperial Ballroom of the Americana Hotel and procedes the annual meeting of the College of Hospital Administrators—which will be held in conjunction with the American Hospital Association Aug. 26 through 29.

Col. Scroggs is scheduled to depart the post for New York City Aug. 25 and return Aug. 29.

In addition to his responsibilities as executive officer of Martin Hospital, Col. Scroggs is president of the board for dependent schools here.

He holds three academic degrees, a B.A. in education from Central State College, Edmond, Okla., master of hospital administration from Northwestern University in Chicago, and doctor of philosophy from State University of Iowa at Iowa City.

Col. Scroggs wrote the thesis for his doctorate on "The Administrative and Social Aspects of the Medical Audit."

Before coming to the post in June, 1962, he was deputy director and instructor in hospital administration, Department of Administration Medical Field Service School, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Col. and Mrs. Scroggs, the former Clara LaVerne Schiffner, have two daughters, LaVern Kay, 19, and Sandra Jane, 16, and a son, Donald Howard, 12.

Associate Career Grad Begins Cross Training

A member of the Argentine Infantry, Maj. Miguel Alfredo Coquet, is currently receiving cross-training in different phases of U.S. Infantry operations through association with The Infantry School.

A student of the associate career officer' course No. 4 from March to early August of this year, the Argentine officer remained at the school after graduation to undergo the cross-train and on-the-job-training programs.

The cross-train program is spent with the 2nd Infantry Division in observer training. Plans and operations of the division are explored by the allied officer along with brigade and battalion operations.

The 197th Infantry Brigade will host Maj. Coquet for his on-the-job-training. He will be completely oriented on the 197th's function as support troops to the many facets of The Infantry School.

The major, who is the chief of section, General Staff of the Argentine Infantry, began his military career in 1946 when he was graduated from Argentina's National Military School and commissioned a warrant officer.

His first assignment was with the 29th Infantry Regiment from where he was assigned to Argentina's Infantry School in 1948.

In the latter part of 1948 he was promoted to lieutenant and two years later received another promotion to first lieutenant.

In 1959 he was graduated from the Superior school of war and soon after was promoted to his present rank and assigned to the General Staff of the Infantry.

11th Division Mojave Hauls Stricken Copter

The 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group scored another first last week as they airlifted an 0-1 Bird Dog beneath a huge CH-37 Mojave helicopter.

The plane, which made a forced landing in a field near Fitzgerald, Ga., some 100 miles from Columbus, was slung under the Mojave and returned to Fort Benning. This marks the first time such a feat has been attempted and accomplished.

Because of terrain obstacles near the downed plane, the craft had to be partially dismantled and moved to a nearby clearing where the huge Mojave had room to hover. The wings of the Bird Dog were stowed inside the helicopter while the entire fuselage was slung beneath.

Dozens of wide-eyed spectators watched as the helicopter raised its unusual cargo from the field. Many of them had never seen as large a craft as the Mojave, much less see one aircraft lift another and fly away with it. Even as the helicopter flew back to Fort Benning, residents of the towns and farms below were observed stopping their work and watching as the strange looking spectacle passed overhead.

The entire mission was accomplished without incident and the fuselage of the 0-1 rode smoothly over the 100-mile trip.

Lt. Col. T. E. Lawrence Takes Over HumRRO Unit

Lt. Col. Thomas E. Lawrence recently assumed duties as chief of the Army Infantry Human Research Unit here.

Col. Lawrence came to Fort Benning from Alaska, where he was executive officer and commander of the Maintenance Battalion, Support Command, U.S. Army, Alaska.

He is a 1944 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy.

A platoon leader and company commander with the 424th Infantry in Europe from Sept., 1944, to Sept., 1945, his military decorations include the Silver Star Medal, the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Lawrence Sr., of Litchfield, Minn.

His wife is the former Miss Portia Harriet Joubert of Macon, Ga., and they have two children, Valerie, 16, and Stephen, 13.

2ND DIVISION SWIFT STRIKE LEADERS RETURN HOME
(L-R) Maj. Gen. Billingslea and Sgt. Maj. Brown

Division Returns From Carolinas After Big Success

The end of U. S. Strike Command's Joint Exercise Swift Strike III left 2nd Division soldiers this week with the biggest clean-up job of the year.

Division elements that played the role of "Red" force defenders in the largest peace time maneuver ever held by Strike Command, returned to Fort Benning last week end in giant convoys from the exercise site in South Carolina.

This week the 2nd's brigades, battalions and companies set to the job of equipment maintenance in a belated war against the remaining dust and grime of an exercise during which vehicles and equipment received their biggest workout of the year.

Among the first to return from the exercise was Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commander of the 2nd Division, and his staff, flying into Lawson Army Air Field Saturday afternoon from Spartanburg, S.C. Officers earlier attended a critique in Spartanburg during which time the exercise was discussed by commanders and exercise umpires.

Division elements motored back to Fort Benning Saturday, Sunday and Monday from South Carolina, making one stop along the way at Fort Gordon, outside Augusta, Ga.

As the exercise ended 2nd Division troops were advancing from north of the Saluda River on Newberry, S. C., capital of the mythical state of Columbia. When the exercise was halted, front line 2nd Division troops were ten miles northwest of the key city pounding firepower on the "Blue" force 2nd Airborne Division.

Last Friday's front lines stretched some 60 miles between Lake Greenwood and Lake Murray, with forward elements as far north as 10 miles beyond the previously hotly-contested Saluda River.

The division's Third Brigade, under the command of Col. Jack Walker, continued to hold the high ground at Chappells Crossing, and the First Brigade, headed by Col. Edgar R. Poole, swept around the east end of Lake Murray and was heading for Newberry when umpires ended the hostilities.

The final hours of the three-week ground war so brilliantly fought by 2nd Division soldiers were witnessed by Gen. Maxwell B. Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Gen. Taylor, accompanied by Gen. Paul D. Adams, commander in chief of the U. S. Strike Command, arrived at headquarters shortly before noon and attended a briefing by Maj. Gen. Billingslea.

Following the briefing, Gen. Taylor proceeded to the front lines and talked with unit commanders and soldiers who were still covered with dust from maneuvering in the dry lands of South Carolina.

Col. Ray Takes Command Of Division's 1st Brigade

A change of command ceremony this week on Wetherby Field installed the former commander of the 2nd Division's Support Command as the new leader of the division's 1st Brigade.

Col. William J. Ray, who came to the "Second to None" Division and Support Command only last month, received the brigade colors from Col. Edgar A. Poole, brigade's departing commander, who goes to the Pentagon on assignment.

The 1st brigade, along with the rest of the "Indianhead" Division, recently returned from the Swift Strike III exercise in the Carolinas, and the commanding general of the division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, had many complimentary words at the ceremony for the brigade's combat of the exercise.

"You are combat ready," the general told the soldiers, standing rigidly at attention on the flag-decked parade field, "You can take on any assignment."

The man who now takes on the brunt of responsibility for the division's crack 1st Brigade is a 1943 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Support Command is now being managed by the former executive officer, Lt. Col. Charles A. Morris.

The mid-morning ceremony on Wetherby Field was complete with companies of brigade troops in their starched khaki uniforms passing in review before the ranking officers in the sand, followed by short talks from Gen. Billingslea, Col. Ray and Col. Poole.

Col. Poole spoke first. "You have taken every task that has been assigned to you and have done it well. I leave the brigade with deep regrets."

After a short acceptance speech by Col. Ray, the commanding general complimented the men on their outstanding military posture and briefly ran through a list of their feats on Swift Strike III.

"The 2nd Division used over 500,000 gallons of gas (on Swift Strike III), and I'm pretty sure the 1st Brigade used a pretty good amount of that," said Col. Ray.

Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, assistant commander of the 2nd Division, also attended the change of command.

Liscum Bowl Award Set

By BOB de CAMARA

From Alaska to Fort Benning comes an Army infantry captain to take part in the official presentation of a $125,000 punch bowl tomorrow morning on Knight Field.

He is Capt. Robert E. Looney of the 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry, the unit which has shipped the valuable silver Liscum Bowl to the 2nd Division's 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

The bowl arrived at Fort Benning for the 1st Battalion more than three months ago but could not be taken possession of until the 1st of the 9th returned from temporary duty in Germany.

While the massive hand-crafted punch bowl with its tray, ladle and 50 cups has been waiting here at Fort Benning for some time, it yet has to be officialy delivered.

The Liscum Bowl has a capacity of 20 gallons, weighs 90 pounds and is ornately fashioned of dragons and sea monsters intertwined about the sides of the bowl and forming the handles.

It is named after Col. Emerson H. Liscum, commander of the 9th Infantry, who was killed passing the national colors on to men of Company H during an early stage of the battle for Tietsin, China in July 1900.

Tietsin, at the time, was besieged by a many - nationed force, including a battalion of U. S. Marines and the 9th Infantry Regiment.

Two days after the regimental commander was killed, a 9th Infantry patrol in the south eastern sector of the city came upon the smoldering ruins of a silver mint, set on fire by Japanese and British artillery.

A guard was placed on the mint by the 9th; and later, two molten chunks of ore among a cache of silver bars valued in all at $276,000 was presented to the 9th by Prince Ching, official representative of Li Hung Chang, to whom the silver had been returned.

In the spring of 1901 while the regiment was quartered in that part of the Chinese city of Peking known as the Temple of Agriculture, at an informal meeting of 9th Regiment officers it was decided that the treasure would be transformed into a punch bowl.

The 50 cups were made first by a Chinese silversmith. In April 1902 the rest of the silver was shipped on a U. S. cruiser from Manila (in the Philippines) to Yokohama, Japan to be hand-crafted by Arthur, Bond and Company into the tray, ladle and bowl, the three of which took seven months to complete.

This expensive piece of Oriental workmanship was finally received by the 9th in April 1903 at Madison Barracks, N. Y., and the cups inscribed with the entire roll of officers from the battle of Tietsin.

The custom has been carried foward to this day with each new 9th Infantry officer adding his name to the ones before him.

The 1st Battalion takes possession of the Liscum Bowl as a result of structure changes in the Army. The bowl belongs to the "first" unit of the 9th Infantry, whether it be the 1st Battle Group, as previously, or the 1st Battalion, as is now the case.

Capt. Looney's 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry in Alaska was formerly the 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry; and the 1st Battalion, 9th at Fort Benning was known before 2nd Division reorganization as the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry.

Gen. Billingslea Praises Division

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Infantry Division commander, has issued a letter of commendation to all personnel of the "Indianhead" Division for their participation and hard work during the recent Swift Strike III exercise.

The letter reads: "During the last three weeks of a fast moving maneuver you have met the best of the Airborne and have come out tops in each engagement. KERSHAW, LANCASTER, RIDGEWAY, CAMDEN, NEWBERRY, SALUDA, JOHNSTON, AND DONALDSON are names with which you are all familiar.

You name it and the the 2nd Infantry Division has been there. You have covered the maneuver area from one end to the other. Your actions at Newberry and Donaldson were classic engagements, and would have taken their place in history alongside any of the battalion and regimental battles of World War II.

Your soldierly habits and discipline, despite the heat and dust of the maneuver area, have held you in good stead. I am proud of your ability to react rapidly, fight, move, and communicate. Without the wholehearted help of the Division Artillery, Support Command and other combat supporting units, the maneuver elements could not have fought and maintained the fast pace in the aggressive manner they did. The fundamentals we practiced during Swift Strike III are 95% of combat. Considering this, there is no doubt in my mind that this division is covered ready, and that you are truly "SECOND TO NONE."

Division Goes on 'Air'

The first in a series of new radio broadcasts concerning the 2nd Infantry Division begins tomorrow with a special introductory feature on the history of the famed division.

Columbus radio station WDAK (540 on the dial) initiates the new program Sunday at 12:45 p.m. on the news and happenings within the 2nd Division. The first program will be narrated by Mr. Earl Newton, popular local broadcaster, and will be a documentary on the history of the "Indianhead" Division. The show was written by Lt. Henry Thorpe Jr., assistant information officer of the 2nd Division, and produced by Mr. Newton.

The new weekly series will consist of on-the-spot interviews of units, personnel and training taking place in the division. Lt. Thorpe and Lt. Jimmie E. Wilson, division information officer and coordinator and executive producer of the show, will conduct the interviews within the division.

All future schedules and programs will be listed in the 2nd Division BAYONET.

Radio station WDAK is furnishing the time and staff for the new division program as a public service.

West Pointer 'Enemy' Does Much Too Well

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

MANNHEIM, Germany — It's possible to do a job too well!

Just ask the members of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

During a company overnight field problem last week, "Alpha's" first platoon was designated as the "aggressor." Its mission: concealment from "friendly forces," composed of the company's second and third platoons.

Led by West Point Cadet William Major, one of three cadets from the U.S. Military Academy attached to the "Second of the Ninth" for six weeks of summer training, First Platoon accomplished its mission of concealment so well the opposing forces thought it lost for most the day.

The overnight field problem was directed by Capt. Robert G. Matheson, Company A commander, as a prelude to the Battalion's upcoming "Welcome FTX."

Before the problem halted for a lack of an "enemy," the "aggressors" were finally located and their position overrun.

Recreation and Rest Assured at Exercise

The mission of Special Services is to provide for the recreation and morale of the troops in the field as well as in garrison, and the 2nd Infantry Division's Special Services did just that during the recently completed gigantic military maneuvers, Swift Strike III.

Under the command of Lt. Virgil C. Peterson, Special Services started to carry out their Swift Strike mission even before the exercise began. Games such as chess, checkers and cribbage along with playing cards, magazines, books and sports equipment were distributed to the various units in the "Indianhead" division well in advance of their actual departure for the Carolinas.

A Rest Camp

Once the actual movement of troops began, Special Services set up rest and recreation for 2nd Division troops at Cliff Hill, the Fort Gordon, Ga. recreation center. Here the battle-weary soldiers were given the opportunity to swim, water ski, fish and attend movies. This camp was supervised by Sgt. Bobby C. McClellan of the Special Services office.

The remainder of the Special Services section traveled with the division, making approximately 12 moves during the intense mock war, in order to meet the recreational needs of the troops.

Besides additional amounts of the equipment mentioned above, first rate films such as "Experiment in Terror" with Glenn Ford, "Tall Story" with Jane Fonda, "Suddenly Last Summer" with Elizabeth Taylor and the famous English suspense thriller, "The 39 Steps" were made available to all division units upon request.

The biggest daily accomplishment of the Special Services section was the distribution of over 15,000 copies of the Columbus Ledger and Enquirer newspapers to the entire division plus the division weekly paper, The Bayonet in order to keep the troops informed of worldwide and local events.

Capt. Dunaway Departs Division for Vietnam

By 1st Bn, 87th Infantry, PIO

The 1st Battalion 87th Infantry will soon loose a competent popular officer when Capt. Roy S. Dunaway Jr. leaves the unit after his return from a National Guard Evaluation Board at Fort McClellan, Ala.

Capt. Dunaway joined the 87th before it was converted under the ROAD concept. He was commanding officer of Company A, 1st Battle Group, and it was while he was in command that the battle group participated in Operation Swift Strike II. Company A also received top ratings during the Annual General Inspection and the Command Material Readiness Inspection during Capt. Dunaway's command.

Capt. Dunaway was battalion executive officer immediately following the change from battle group to battalion under the ROAD concept and he was instrumental in the reorganization, working long hours on staff an company procedures.

He was also executive officer when the 87th became mechanized and his aid in this phase of reorganization was invaluable to the battalion.

Capt. Dunaway later served as adjutant and he was again invaluable as he launched the preparations for the 1st of the 87th's participation in Rotaplan.

He will leave the Battalion for training at Fort Bragg and then the Presidio of California. He is under orders to Vietnam in October.

Capt. Dunaway is a graduate of West Point, class of 1955.

2nd Brigade S-3 Gets New Officer

By 2nd Brigade PIO

A 1955 graduate of the Citadel Military College in Charleston, S. C., has recently joined the staff of the 2nd Infantry Division's 2nd Brigade.

Captain Graham J. Avera, a native of Augusta, Ga., has assumed the duties of Brigade S-3 air officer (air and ground operations).

The son of a retired Army colonel, the young captain entered the Army in August of 1956 at Ft. Benning, and received Airborne training with the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N.C., where he served as a platoon leader and assistant committee chief of the Airborne School.

From this assignment Capt. Avera became aide to the assistant commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division, Brig. Gen. Chester Braddock DeGarve.

From April 1959 to September of 1960, Capt. Avera served as aide to Gen. DeGarve while the general was chief of the Military Associate Advisory Group (MAAG) to Ethiopia.

Leaving this assignment, the captain went to Ft. Lewis, Wash., where he served in the positions of platoon leader and executive officer at the company level while serving with the 1st Battle Group, 39th Infantry.

Prior to joining the 2nd Brigade, Capt. Avera completed the Infantry Officers Career Course at Ft. Benning.

SSGT. LAWRENCE THOMPSON REENLISTS
Sworn In By Capt. David Mead (R)

Artillery Section Chief Reenlists for Six Years

A section chief in Battery A, 38th Artillery, who is now on orders for Korea, recently reenlisted for six years.

SSgt. Lawrence Thompson was sworn in during a brief ceremony at battalion headquarters by the battalion executive officer, Capt. David Mead. Also present was 1st Sgt. Austin D. Morrison, first sergeant, Battery A.

A native of South Carolina, Thompson first entered the Army on November 14, 1950. After completing his basic and advanced training at Fort Jackson, S.C., he was assigned to the 599th Field Artillery Battalion in Germany.

Following the completion of his overseas tour, Thompson returned to the U.S. and received his discharge October 19, 1952.

After working for two years as a carpenter he finally decided to make a career for himself in the Army. So in November, 1954 he reenlisted and was sent to Fort Sill, Okla. where he assumed the duties of a section chief of a firing battery.

Thompson remained there until 1956 when he was reassigned to Fort Chaffee, Ark. as a processing NCO.

In 1958 he embarked on an overseas assignment again; this time to the 25th Infantry Division, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

After serving with the "Lightning" division for two years, Thompson made his first trip to Fort Benning where he was assigned to his present unit.

38th's New Top NCO Promoted to Sgt. Maj.

At a ceremony held in Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea's office, 1st Sgt. Ismael M. Rangel, sergeant major at the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, was presented orders promoting him to the grade of sergeant major. Also present were Lt. Col. Donald Lanier, battalion commander, and Sgt. Maj. Robert Brown division sergeant major.

Sgt. Maj. Rangel joined the 38th Infantry in 1961 after an assignment with the 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry. He served with the 313th Regiment of the 79th Infantry Division from the period of the Normandy invasion until the end of World War II. After landing on the Normandy beaches on his 19th birthday, Sgt. Maj. Rangel saw action in the campaigns of Northern France, the Rhineland, Ardennes - Alsace and Central Europe, and was subsequently awarded the Bronze Star Medal with "V device", and the Bronze Star Medal for Meritorious Service.

After a between-wars tour with the 595th Transportation Detachment at Rhine - Main Airport in Frankfurt, Germany, which supported the 1948 Berlin airlift, he went to Korea with the 45th Infantry Division where he was a member of five major campaigns from October, 1952 until the signing of the Armistic in July, 1953.

Sgt. Maj. Rangel's other decorations include the Purple Heart, the European-African - Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with Silver Star, World War II Victory Medal, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

A native of San Antonio, Tex., Sgt. Maj. Rangel lives at 123 Englander St., Fort Benning, with his wife, Anna, and two boys, Michael and Rupert.

'Scalpers' Whoop It Up This Sunday

Dance music, which will be provided by the Vikings, will last from 6 to 11 p.m.

Dress for the occasion will be either Class A uniforms or coat and tie if wearing civilian clothes.

1st of 9th Wins 2nd Reup Award

By 1st Bn, 9th Inf PIO

The 1st Bn, 9th Infantry has received for the second time the 8th Division "Reenlistment Award." The 9th won the honor while stationed in Germany during its recent Rotaplan tour. The 1st award was for the month of May 1963 and the second was received for the months of April and June.

2nd of 9th Legal Clerk Promoted

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

MANNHEIM, Germany — Sp6 William C. McDonald, 2nd Battalion (M), 9th Infantry, was promoted to his present rank here recently, as the "Manchus" began to step up training operations.

Sp6 McDonald serves as the 2nd of the 9th's legal clerk, a position he has held since the 2nd Infantry Division's ROAD reorganization last February.

The promotion, the first since the "Manchus" arrived in Germany, came within two days of the 10-year anniversary of his original Army enlistment.

A veteran of European assignments, Sp6 McDonald is serving his third tour of duty in Germany. He was previously stationed at Schweinfurt, with the 1st Infantry Division, where he was at one time named "Soldier of the Month," and in Worms, Germany, with the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 48th Infantry.

In April, 1961, Sp6 McDonald came to the 2nd Infantry Division, serving with the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry. After the division's re-organization he was assigned to his current position with the 2nd Battalion.

Sp6 McDonald and his wife, Alice, reside in Columbus with their five children: William Jr.; George Cleveland; Virginia; Lorraine, and Andy.

Division Unit Dabbles in Politics

Editor's Note: The following item of 23rd Infantry unit history is reprinted from the January 1930 issue of Military Review.

Perhaps the most wonderful thing the 23rd Infantry ever did was to make every state in the Union change its laws. The way this happened was quite a joke.

After building the first government telegraph line across the Western States to the Pacific Ocean, the regiment was stationed with some companies in Alaska. They were the first U. S. troops there. Then the regiment started east.

Dinner Date

While moving slowly through Utah, a telegram came inviting the whole regiment to a grand dinner upon arrival at Green River.

This telegram was regarded as a joke. No one then, any more than now, was giving dinners for strange regiments that happened to pass through. Upon arrival at Green River, however, the regiment was marched into a hall and treated to a sumptuous dinner. Everyone in the unit was puzzled and kept asking why they were being treated so royally.

When the meal was finished, a gentleman mounted the platform and made a speech of welcome, and said they wanted to ask a small favor. They requested that as they pass out of the hall each man drop a piece of paper they had been given into a box at the door.

The regiment didn't know it, but this was election day. The pieces of paper were ballots and the box a ballot box.

As there were nearly as many members of the 23rd Infantry as there were residents in the state, needless to say the regiment's vote succeeded in electing a governor, member of Congress and a whole slate of political candidates.

Voting laws were changed allowing soldiers to vote only in their home state.

Major Funk Here Again; Still Armor

By 1st Bn, 72nd Armor PIO

Maj. Donald A. Funk joined the ranks of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor recently as its new executive officer.

Upon being assigned, Maj. Funk immediately assumed command of the battalion, in the temporary absence of Lt. Col. A. Lochrie, battalion commander, who went on temporary duty with the Mississippi and Alabama National Guuard at Camp Shelby, Miss.

Maj. Funk entered the Army in 1942 as an enlisted man and in 1943 was chosen to attend Officer Candidate School (OCS) at Fort Benning. After completion of OCS he was assigned to the 28th Infantry Division.

In 1948 he was assigned to Company B, 29th Infantry, in Okinawa. He became commanding officer of the Tank Company, 109th Infantry, in Germany in 1951. In 1954 he was company commander and Regimental S-4 officer under the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

In 1960 he received orders to report to Fort Benning with duty attached to the Weapons Department, Tank Gunnery Section, of The Infantry School.

Command Changes Within Company A, 1st Bn. 9th Inf.

By 9th Infantry PIO

Change of command ceremonies at 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry saw Lt. Kerop S. Nalbandian formally take over as commanding officer of Company A from Capt. Dick T. LeClere, who became the new Battalion S-3 officer.

Lt. Nalbandian, upon graduating from Selma Union High School, Selma, Calif., in 1956 joined the California Army National Guard. He attended the state National Guard Officers Candidate School and received his commission in 1958. As a National Guardsman he served as a Fire Direction Center Section Leader with the 185th Infantry.

He volunteered for active duty and in June 1962 was assigned to the 2nd Division's 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry as executive officer of Company D. During the division's reorganization to ROAD he remained as executive officer when his unit was redesignated Company A, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

'Man Behind the Gun. . .'

2nd Division Support Command Gave Swift Strike Supply Punch

By Bob de Camera

There used to be a saying in World War II that the Marines get all the glory, the Navy gets all the medals and the Army does all the work.

You can break that dubious axiom down further and say that in the Army the front-line combat units reap the newspaper space, as they did in the recent Swift Strike III exercise, and the supporting units are seldom heard from:

"They are the man behind the gun" is the way Col. William J. Ray puts it, the recent commander of the 2nd Infantry Division's Support Command, describing the job his men do.

If the happiness of an Army can truly be measured in the quantities of food it consumes, then the "Indianhead" soldiers were laughing as they shoveled away eggs in 30-dozen lots at 194,555 breakfasts. They also had a few chuckles as they stashed away the 26,000 pounds of meat provided daily by the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

And to cool things off with that hot Carolina sun blazing overhead from morning til night, CWO Earl Butterfield, division food service officer, served up a freezer-full of ice, 33 tons a day to be specific.

Food is just one of the many capacities in which the Support Command supplies the Fort Benning infantry division. In addition to Support Command Headquarters, an administrative unit handling organizational procedure, Support Command encompasses the 2nd Medical Battalion, the division "pill pushers" who have a much more responsible assignment than their nickname implies. What combat unit would take to the field without medical corpsmen?

The 702nd Maintenance Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Philip H. Taft; Capt. George Quinn's 2nd Administration Company and the division band are the other units making up Support Command.

In a training exercise the dimensions of Swift Strike III which numbered close to 100,000 participants for the three week battle in the Carolinas, the band did not get lost in the rush and toot trumpets forlornly in the background.

On the contrary, the band set up security forces for protection against marauding guerrilla elements; and towards the end of the exercise, Bandmaster WO Darrell G. Blumm's irregulars had set up a provisional infantry platoon and were aching to do battle with the airborne forces they faced.

Unusual? Not for Support Command's multi - purpose handymen. Any soldier's first job is fighting whether he be a personnel clerk, a tank mechanic or a tuba player.

A provisional infantry company of 702nd Maintenance troopers remained on 30-minute alert status throughout the exercise except the days they were on 5-minute alert.

Although these maintenance minutemen were unavailable for their normal duties, four of the battalion's five companies serviced all the 2nd Division repair needs and these included work on airplanes and trucks, 1555-millimeter howitzers and M-14 rifles, mortars, machine guns, diesel road graders and generators.

In fact, the only three things the 702nd won't touch are electrical accounting machines, cryptographic (code) equipment and medical instruments.

The customary amount of confusion and crowding accompanying any large-scale military operation in which units must hit and run fast was solved by the 702nd with an area service set-up. Maj. Herbert Bergon, maintenance's executive officer, explains this as a maintenance unit caring for any friendly unit's gear in its area.

Located west of the Wateree River in South Carolina, and packing and moving nine times, the 702nd watched over both the 2nd and 5th Divisions.

Food is only one of many items the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion provided in staggering quantities.

Gasoline to move the division's mammoth fleet of jeeps and turn the generators for electrical power in the field totalled 550,000 gallons. At Fort Gordon, Ga., alone on the one night stopover enroute to the Swift Strike III maneuver area, Supply and Transport (S and T) tankers pumped 70,000 gallons of fuel.

In addition to the more than half a million gallons of regular gas, S and T disbursed 30,000 gallons of diesel fuel for tractor trailers and the engineers' scoop loaders and road graders.

For the first time in any exercise, two - and - a - half ton trucks and tractor trailers imbibed thousands of gallons of a new high - grade propellant known as "combustion ignition engine fuel."

JP-4 jet fuel to the tune of 60,000 gallons sustained the Aviation Battalion's helicopters, including the Mohawks which flew front-line reconnaissance missions with "picture pods" wing - mounted. Other helicopters used 35,000 gallons of aviation fuel.

Pumping hundreds of thousands of gallons of engine combustibles and allied products such as grease, oil and lubricants (including 30,000 gallons distributed behind enemy lines) is the "S" of S and T, the supply.

A rundown of the vehicles necessary to disburse this ocean of octane and ferry food, clothing and men is an exhaustive list, the "T" of S and T. Headquarters Company and Company A and B together share 83 two-and-a-half ton trucks, 16 five-ton tractors with their 21 twelve-ton trailers, 2 five-ton wreckers, 21 one-and-a-half ton trailers, 6 two-and-a-half ton tankers and the "big daddies" of the lot, 10 five-thousand-gallon tankers.

Of course, this list does not take into consideration the scores of jeeps and covies of smaller vehicles such as three-quarter ton trucks and busses.

This massive component force is guided by Lt. Col. John V. Stoecker, and its true girth seems even wider measured 10,000 times (the number of 2nd Division troops who took part in Swift Strike III) against this typical quote — "I put 3,124 miles on my jeep. Some people put on more than that."

The 2nd Administration Company's clerks and typists are of generally thought of as combat types, but on occasion, such as their annual Army Training Test last May, they have proven they can skirmish with the experts.

In the field, a representative contingent of Capt. Quinn's company labored underneath canvas command post tents with rifles never more than an arm's length away from typewriters.

To South Carolina, backing the line infantry units, went personnel clerks and finance specialists, members of the Inspector General section and Special Services, Chaplains and their assistants and soldiers who make up the Adjutant General section's many-faceted operation.

Without "Admin," the combat battalions could not be payed; important orders would never be issued; personal records would be, a shambles or non-existent and troops would miss out on many benefits to which they are entitled. They would have no newspapers or troop sheets, church services or movies. During breaks the men could neither relax with a softball game nor paperback books.

The "Indianhead" Division was fortunate this year in not having a single major injury or death. The soldiers who guard against this and treat injury should it occur are the men of the 2nd Medical Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Jack D. Wallace.

Every exercise has its share of bizarre disorders, including this one in which a sergeant was probably more embarrassed than hurt when an ambulance ran over his foot.

The most constant medical needs, if a division is lucky, are for calamine lotion, salt tablets, foot powder, gauze and bandaids. The medical battalion spent hundreds of dollars to supply the men "fighting" in swampy lowlands, fields and thickets.

Mosquito and chigger bites were the most common complaint. "Heat didn't play as great a role as we had thought it would," testifies Lt. James A. Torrance of 2nd "Med" Headquarters.

Another recurring trouble were burns from blank cartridges. Live ammunition was not used on Swift Strike III, but blanks, fired at close range, can be dangerous.

On alert throughout the exercise were the battalion's 48 ambulances, each capable of carrying four wounded. Company A supported the 1st Brigade, moving when it moved, stepping back when it stepped back and nursing it standing still or moving. The 3rd Brigade was handled by Company B. Headquarters and Support Company took care of "med" battalion headquarters, and the commanders held Company C in reserve.

Watching over the entire operation of the three battalions, the one company and the band was Support Command Headquarters, Col. William J. Ray in charge. A 1943 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, Col. Ray came to the 2nd Division last month from the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Support Command functions as a higher headquarters for the units in its domain and is a resilient command group which centralizes the back-up operations, freeing the line units for purely combat affairs. Under the former "Pentomic" division network, support units belongs to a Division Trains. With that system, line units still handled the bulk of personnel work, and rapid movement was somewhat hampered by unwieldy personnel files, often in danger of destruction on the line.

The new ROAD (Reorganization Objectives, Army Division) concept has resulted in a "tailored" look with increased mobility. Units can now be made as large as the job, or as small, without the worries of added support duty.

As the first old-line division in the United States to undergo reorganization, the "2nd" is one of the first to have a Support Command, one of the first to have everything in one place at one time and one of the first to be streamlined to the needs of a modern Army.

The Fort Benning Ballet School Features Talented Vicki Morales

The Fort Benning Ballet School, under the direction of Rossie Gilmore and sponsored by the 2nd Infantry Division Officer's Wives Club, will begin classes September 3 in building 1953 in the old hospital area. Registration may be made at any one of the public schools Monday and Tuesday, August 26 and 27.

Classes will be given in pre-ballet, ballet and ballroom. Of special interest is the news that Jean Smith will again head the tap department of the school. Mrs. George Arnold is chairman of the dance activities.

The faculty is headed by Rossie Gilmore who this past summer was one of the three teachers from Georgia asked to attend a seminar on ballet at the School of American Ballet, home of New York City ballet.

The seminars were held two-and-a-half hours each day by Georgia Balanchine, artistic director of the New York City Ballet and called the world's greatest choreographer. In addition to her teaching, Miss Gilmore is artistic director of the Ballet Guild of Columbus which began in 1958.

Vicki Morales will begin her second year as instructor at the Fort Benning Ballet School. Vicki accompanied Miss Gilmore on her trip to New York City this summer and was accepted in the advanced class at the American School of Ballet.

She was instructed by six different teachers there, with one of her classmates being America's most famous ballerina, Marie Tallchief.

One of Vicki's teachers was Murial Stuart who at one time in her dancing career was in the company of Pavlova. Murial Stuart was especially helpful in Vicki's allegro work.

Vicki has been in Columbus since 1958 and she and her family are now permanent residents of the city. She has been dancing "seriously" since she was ten years old and has made a name for herself in Columbus with such roles as the lead in the Ballet Guild's performance of "The Ballet Master" and "A Legend for Moderns."

Vicki is a student at Baker High School and has been in many school musicals, the latest of which was presented by the Bi-City Council this summer at Baker. Vicki played that part of "Jean" in the production of "Brigadoon" and was the only girl in the Columbus Little Theater's production of "The Fantasticks.". In addition to her dancing and other accomplishments Vicki is also an accomplished pianist.

Jean Smith, who was formerly connected with the Fort Benning Ballet School, will teach pre-ballet and tap. Jean took a leave of absence last season but is now back to the school.

A permanent resident of South Columbus, she began teaching dancing at 14 and attended the Jack Stanley School of Dance in Miami, Fla.

Students who wish to register now are urged to call Mrs. James Peabody at MU 9-1209 or any of the faculty members: Rossie Gilmore at FA 3-3072; Vicki Morales at MU 9-3497 and Jean Smith MU 9-2747. Information sheets may be obtained at any of the schools on registration day.

Rota Fetes Emissaries At Center Coffee Hour

An informal coffee was held by wives of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry recently at the Rota Family Service Center.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. John Cooper and Mrs. William McGondel. Mrs. Jesse Easterwood poured. The table was covered with a cloth of white lace, highlighted by a centerpiece of bright summer flowers.

Guests of honor were Capt. Luther Kennedy, Battalion S-2 officer, and Sgt. James Dykes, 23rd Infantry. Capt. Kennedy and Sgt. Dykes returned recently from Baumholder, Germany in connection with the dissemination of Rotaplan.

Plans are under way at present to reunite the families who were separated early this year.

Capt. Kennedy and Sgt. Dykes were ordered to the States by the battalion to assist and advise wives of those men elected to remain in Germany. Following the old line tradition of "taking care of their own" the battalion has made arrangements to assist the families of its men in securing passports, shipping household goods, acquiring power-of-attorney and with the general turbulence of moving.

The Rota Family Service Center will continue to function until all of the families of the battalion have been reunited, either in Germany or at Fort Benning.

COOK of the WEEK

By Virginia L. Freeman

In approximately two weeks the well known "lunch box" will once again take on its usual significance. Although cookies were featured at one time in our "Cook of the Week" series, we thought, perhaps, that as time approached for many mothers to begin packing lunches again one or two cookie recipes from our "Whats Cooking at Fort Benning" could well be chosen for this week for that extra lunch box treat.

Sharing with readers their recipes for "Pineapple Oatmeal Cookies" and "Snickerdoodles" are Mrs. Gardell K. Kaney and Mrs. Joseph Rodzen, respectively.

Pineapple Oatmeal Cookies

½ cup Shortening
¾ cup brown sugar
½ Teaspoon vanilla flavoring
1 Egg
1 Cup Quick Oats
1 Teaspoon Salt
1 Small can pineapple, drained
½ Cup Chopped nutmeats
1 Cup Flour

Cream shortening, sugar; add eggs, vanilla, dry ingredients, nuts, and pineapple. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheet. Bake 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 2½ to 3 dozen cookies.

Snickerdoodles

1 Cup Soft Shortening
1 ½ Cup Sugar
2 Eggs
2½ Cups sifted Flour
2 Teaspoon Cream of Tarter
1 Teaspoon Soda
½ Teaspoon Salt
2 Tablespoon Sugar, mixed with 2 Teaspoon cinnamon

Mix first three ingredients together thoroughly. Sift flour, cream of tarter, soda and salt together, then stir into first mixture. Chill dough. Form into balls the size of small walnuts. Roll in sugar cinnamon mixture, then place about 2 inches apart on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in 400 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes, or until lightly browned, but still soft. These cookies puff at first, then flatten out with crinkled tops. Yield about 5 dozen 2-inch cookies.

9th Holds 2 Suppers

Two social functions were held by wives of 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry officers while the 2nd Division was on maneuvers in South Carolina.

A pot luck supper was held in the home of Mrs. Jack Samson, wife of the battalion's commanding officer. Each wife brought a covered dish to the supper.

Later in the month an informal dessert coffee was held in the home of Mrs. Robert Sanabria on Commander Drive. Another get together is planned in the near future.

At the last meeting announcement was made of the birth to Lt. and Mrs. Robert W. Sheffield of a girl, Lisa, born July 18.

7th Cav. Ladies Greet Mrs. Keown

Ladies of the 7th Cavalry extended their "Welcome" to Mrs. James L. Keown, wife of the new commanding officer at a coffee dessert in the home of Mrs. W. B. Hill, wife of the executive officer.

Light refreshments were served and Mrs. Earl R. Kirkpatrick poured coffee for the ladies.

Welcomes were also extended to Mrs. Edward D. Kahn and guests including Mrs. M. R. Marsh of Myrtle Beach, N. C., and Mrs. Lester Brown of Miami, Fla.

23rd Guerrilla Training Makes Use of 'Choppers'

By 1-23rd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany — The high pitched whir of the choppers sounded over the valley as the men of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry flew to their guerrilla training area near Birkenfeld, Germany.

The 10 helicopters, from the 8th Division Aviation Support, landed and out poured the troops, breaking into combat formations.

"Spread out!" The troops moved quickly with a firm knowledge of their jobs.

The guerrilla operations, with troop control under Capt. William A. Witt, were designed to familiarize the men of the battalion with unconventional warfare; that is indigenous to remote and isolated regions.

Capt. Louis Menetrey, Capt. Frank Harbor, and Capt. Reginald Corliss, commanders of Companies A, B, and C, respectively, administered the execution of the guerrilla tactics while Lt's. Lawrence Drinkard, Robert Mosher and Thomas Morris, execs, led the companies against the aggressors.

Lt. Clyde Cleveland, Headquarters Company, was in charge of the air support and utilized the choppers to their full advantage in dropping the soldiers into the combat zone.

In our day and age, when the infantry can, and is called into combat in far distant areas, training in unconventional warfare, or warfare common to the area, certainly seems to be a must. The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, is, again, keeping up with the times and keeping their curriculum filled with the necessary ingredients for survival.

BAUMHOLDER, GERMANY . . . Men of the 1st Battalion, 23d Infantry retrogade after a hit and run attack on aggressor guerrilla forces during a problem near Birkenfeld, Germany. Air support was provided by the 8th Division Aviation Support.

Germany Stationed 23rd Conducts Unit Orientation

By 1-23rd Infantry PIO

BAUMHOLDER, Germany—During a recent CPX, Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., commander, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, conducted a staff operation orientation for members of the battalion.

The men attending the orientation were not staff personnel, nor were they directly connected with the battalion operations. They were cooks, drivers, squad leaders, riflemen, and mechanics.

Col. Cochran conducted the orientation for his men so that they would have some idea of the work that goes on prior to the action that they see. The mystification of "Headquarters and Staff Operation" was explained; and the men and officers could work together understanding the "why" of what they did.

The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, is training intensely; and informed men, more clearly, understand the mission and purpose of the unit.

With the completion of their tour in Germany, the 23rd Infantry will move back to Fort Benning; another mission completed and strengthened by their overseas training.

Airborne 'Enemy' Terrorized by Task Force Lion

Your first reaction, if you had been part of "Red" forces during Exercise Swift Strike III, would have been to stop them, tie them up and send them bouncing on their way to the prisoner of war compound.

Task Force Lion was the weirdest bunch of soldiers maneuvering in South Carolina. They were so effective they looked more like an enemy than the enemy did. Dressed in the camouflage fatigue uniform with Carolina dust adding to the costume, the 32 men of this task force grew beards, making their disguise complete. If you ever managed to see one of them before he disappeared into a tree, a bush or a clump of grass, the only things you remember were two cunning eyes and the flash of an airborne insignia on his floppy hat.

This was the 23-man task force that took the aggressor "Blue" 82nd and 101st Airborne Division completely by surprise during Swift Strike III and provided invaluable intelligence data for commanders of 2nd Division units as they planned their tactics in South Carolina.

Following through on an idea conceived by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, Capt. Harold C. Lyon, former aide de camp to the general, was picked to organize and train these men who became known to many as "Lion's Tigers."

Capt. Lyon felt from the beginning that he needed a force of completely dedicated men, each self-reliant, who would be willing to go through just about any hardship and the most difficult mission.

Selecting 80 individuals from the division who were "jump" qualified, he informed them from the start that they would not be receiving "Jump Pay" for their assignment. According to the captain, this eliminated those who would do this only for the extra money it involved. Further weeding out was accomplished by rigorous physical conditioning.

What was left was a tightly united 23-man force who were willing to "Soldier for soldiering's sake."

Outfitting them in specially camouflaged fatigues and experimental models of the M-14 rifle, Capt. Lyon brought his group to South Carolina and put them to work immediately in special intelligence-gathering missions.

Daily intelligence patrols were sent out for locations of enemy positions and guerrilla action. At times division headquarters planning was a direct result of Task Force Lion information.

Their "big game" assignment was in conjunction with planned division movement across the Wateree - Katawba River, a move that was being heavily resisted by "Blue" force guerrilla action. Enemy guerrillas had been planted in the area weeks in advance, each planning to destroy bridges before the 2nd Division had a chance to move against air-dropped "Blue" soldiers.

While the guerrilla bands tried desperately to get to crucial bridges being defended by 2nd Division units, Lion's Tigers, following intelligence tips from civilians in the area, zeroed in on some suspicious civilians hanging out in a specially rented farm house. The result: top guerrilla leaders surprised red-handed with secret code books, call signs, details of missions and their guerrilla network.

Capt. Lyons recalls what he believes to be the most exciting and "best planned" spectacular mission. This was the blowing of a bridge across the Saluda River deep in "Blue" force country.

Lt. Richard Rockwell, one of the key "Tigers," and a recent distinguished OCS graduate, was given the mission to eliminate the bridge. Taking a force of men they were landed by helicopter, a few miles from the bridge site, they crept toward their objective and made the final approach on inflated air mattresses, hidden in camouflage.

Forced along to the bridge by a fast current, the men planted charges reduced the bridge and defending forces to a tangle and scooted, leaving "Blue" forces in complete confusion.

Task Force Lion's last mission was in conjunction with the 2nd Division's last minute dash to Laurens, S.C. in the exercise's last offensive action.

All 23 men were given the order to seize Laurens Air Field near Clinton, S.C. It was here that the 82nd Airborne kept their 82nd Aviation Battalion.

Landing successfully by helicopter, they surrounded the operations area, catching the Airborne Soldiers with their minds far from the war. They were actually practicing baseball. Baseball bats made ineffective rifles the airborne soldiers learned as they were completely inundated with firepower. Task Force Lion had a disappointment too, as it turned out. Just as they were about to lay their hands on the assistant division commander of the 82nd, they were told they were too late. "Sorry," said the general, "the exercise has been over for exactly three minutes."

Third Army Baseball Tournament to Begin Monday

BY TED WILLIAMSON

The Third Army baseball playoffs will begin Monday at Gowdy Field with defending Fort Benning serving as host team.

Minus such stalwarts from last years club as Charlie Spell, Marty Leicht, Jesse Joyce, Ralph Maru and Curtis Gentry, manager Bob Kinnard's nine faces a rough task to repeat as champs.

No information has come in on the other five entries, but it seems certain that the other clubs will be out for Fort Benning blood.

Teams from Fort McPherson, Fort Bragg, Fort Campbell, Fort Jackson and Redstone Arsenal will be making an attempt to shoot Fort Benning down. Drawings for the play-offs will be held when all the competitors arrive on post.

The Fort Benning club is made up of the best performers from the three teams that competed in the Major Unit League this season. A look at the team roster reveals what can be expected at Gowdy Field next week.

Post All-Stars

Heading the pitching staff is J. R. Miller, the bespectacled southpaw from the 197th Infantry Brigade. J. R. led the Major Unit league with a 1.20 earned run average and in strike-outs with 137 in 105 innings. He has a good live fast ball and a crackling curve and will share the bulk of the pitching with Gary Moston, fireballing righthander from The Student Brigade. Moston led the Major Unit league with a won-lost record of six and one. His only problem is control. A pair of righthanders from The Infantry Center Troop Command will also be counted on to help the "M" boys shoulder the pitching load. Ted Arglanis is a hard throwing righty, as is Dick Carton. Both pitch with their heads as well as their arms and should prove to be valuable men during the playoffs.

Two more established hurlers, Glen Ponte of the Student Brigade and Jerry Rider of the 197th will be waiting in the wings and should get plenty of work. Ponte is a righthander with a varied assortment of pitches and Rider is a stylish southpaw.

The catching department is three deep; with all candidates hitting from the right side of the plate. The 197th's Pat Corso is the leading contended for the starting berth. Corso is a holler - guy and a hustler. Another good holler-man is Jim Hill from the Center Troop Command. Hill is a good hitter and can also play first base if called upon. John Overcash, another representative of the 197th, is a dark horse contender, but showed plenty of potential after joining the 197th, and could conceivably wind up doing the bulk of the catching.

Good Infield

The Benning infield contains the punch of the local entry. TSB's Pedro Berrios will probably get the nod at first-base and for good reason. Pedro is a slim wrist hitter who has sprayed some screaming shots around Gowdy Field the past two summers.

He also led the league in RBIs in 1963 with 29. Backing up Berrios will be George Rogers of the 197th; however Rogers may be used as a starter in the outfield, as his .316 average warrants him more than a spot on the bench.

Second base belongs solely to Eloy Zamora, the regular secondsacker for the 197th. "Z", as he is called by his teammates, is a southpaw swinger and a dandy around the keystone.

Ron Blevins of the 197th will probably be a soloist at shortstop, as Troop Command's Paul Durak won't be around for the play-offs. Blevins has shown flashes of being a steady performer at the short patch, and will be counted on to plug the gap at that position.

Bob Kinnard's pride and joy, Jesus Herrans, is a fixture at third base. Herrans is just a little guy, but he swings from the heels, and he is the only man to hit the Gowdy Field scoreboard this season. "Jess" swatted enemy pitching for a .405 average in the past season.

Porter Woolen, Troop Command's pitcher turned outfielder, is the leading candidate for the left field berth. Woolen is a tight-handed slugger who made opposing pitchers lives miserable in the '63 season.

Base Thief

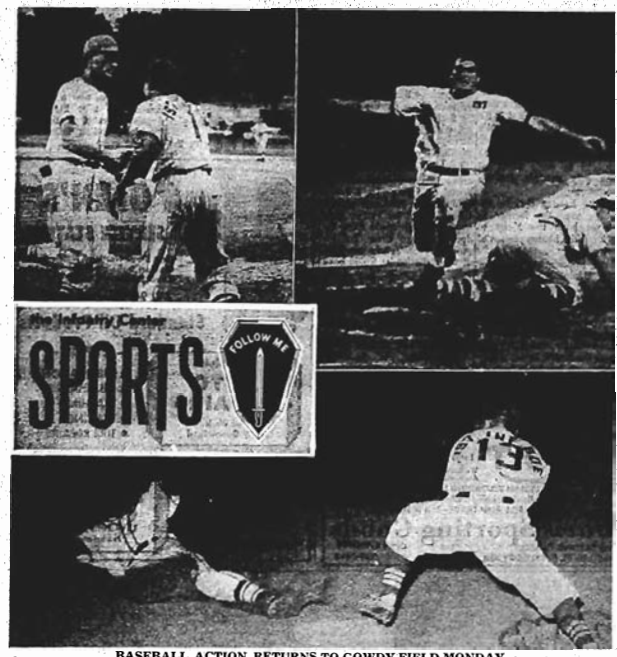
Stolen base king Juan Martinez of the 197th will roam the centerfield pasture for the Benning nine along with defensive whiz Roger Eagland from the Center Troop Command. Martinez, who stole 11 bases this past season, is a left-handed line drive hitter who should be quite an asset to the team, as will England.

And finally, right field — big Joe Barke is the leading contender, but could lose out to Rogers, or even platooned, as Burke swings righty and Rogers bats from the port side. Barke came along beautifully the second half of the season and finished with a .306 batting average. Big Joe also has displayed a powerful throwing arm.

Manager Bob Kinnard has a reputation for winning and doesn't like losing. Fort Benning could very well win again.

It will be a colorful, exciting and interesting week at Gowdy Field. Gowdy Field is not a large park, measuring only 325 feet down either foul line and 390 feet to dead center, so competing pitching staffs face a big problem in just keeping the ball inside the park.

YAC All-Stars will serve as batboys during the playoffs and have been invited to attend the kick-off banquet to be held tomorrow night.



BASEBALL ACTION RETURNS TO GOWDY FIELD MONDAY
Five Teams Seeking to Oust Defending Fort Benning Champs

TIC Golfer Ties for Lead in First Round

BY PETE SHOUGH

The Fort Benning golf team moved into an opening day lead at the 1963 Third Army Golf Tournament which opened Tuesday at the local post country club with all four team members scoring 75 or under.

The team, consisting of Joe Hamby, Bill Martindale, Jim Remmert and Paul Colby, was the only quartet able to remain under the combined 300 stroke total. The outstanding team tallied a total of 295 strokes, only seven strokes off par.

Joe Hamby put together an even par 36-36—72 round to lead the Fort Benning team. His 72 strokes were also good enough to give him the lead in the tournament along with Harold Zink, a retired Army major playing with the Fort Gordon, Ga., team.

Bob Zimmerman, former Moran Country Club assistant professional in Dayton, Ohio, was just one stroke off the pace with a one over par 73. Zimmerman is presently playing out of Fort McPherson, Ga.

Fort Benning's post champion, Bill Martindale, ran into trouble with his driver and had to settle for a third place tie. Along with Martindale, Jim Remmert, shared third place honors scoring two over par 74.

The Fort Gordon team was the only Third Army post able to put together a combined score anywhere near the host Fort Benning team. The four man team was 28 strokes behind Fort Benning with a 323 total. Fort Bragg is holding on to third place with a 325 combined total.

In the Senior Division, retired Army Lt. Col. George Hardgrove, jumped in front of the field with an even par 72. Hardgrove, who is playing with the Fort Benning senior division squad, is only one stroke in front of Harry Jenson, another retired lieutenant colonel.

Amelia Amizich grabbed a three stroke lead in the Women's Division when she matched the men's par on the back nine of the 6,668 yard course. The long-hitting female competitor toured the front nine with a five over women's par 43 and one under 36 to lead the five women golfers entered in the annual tournament.

The top golfers in the Open division are:

Open Division—Joe Hamby, Fort Benning — 72; Harold Zink, Fort Gordon — 72; Bob Zimmerman, Fort McPherson —73; Bill Martindale, Fort Benning—74; Jim Remmert, Fort Benning—74; Paul Colby, Fort Benning — 75; Forest Knight, Fort Bragg—77; Cliff Harrington, Fort Campbell — 78; James Carlisle, Fort Rucker—78.

Two 3-Hitters Give All-Stars Two More Wins

The YAC All-Stars continued their winning ways last weekend, nipping Maxwell AFB 3 to 0 and swamping Fort McPherson 9 to 0.

Bobby Bennett and Mike Casey shared the pitching chores in both games, stopping Maxwell on three hits and giving up a like number to McPherson. YAC hitting stars were Mike Moore, six hits in eight trips to the plate, and Ricky Valero, five hits in seven at bats.

The All-Star defense has committed only two errors in 52 innings of play, and manager Lorenzo Plowman has plenty of praise for his young infield.

Three games remain for the All-Stars, as they travel to Macon today to meet Warner Robins AFB and tomorrow at 3 p.m. they will try to avenge their lone loss when they meet Fort Rucker at Green Field. The YAC'ers will wind things up on August 30 when they travel to Maxwell AFB.

Legionaires Set Charity Baseball

A "charity baseball game" featuring two semi-pro teams will be held at Golden Park in Columbus Sunday with all proceeds going to the Ninth Street Branch Y.M.C.A. building fund.

The game, which will begin at 3 p.m., pits the Columbus All-Stars against the Alabama Red Sox of Phenix City and is being sponsored by American Legion Posts' 525 and 554 of Columbus.

In their last meeting, the Columbus All-Stars edged the Phenix City contingent by a close 3-2 score.

Advance tickets may be picked-up at either of the American Legion Posts Home, located at 1413 Cusseta Rd., or 2664 Buena Vista Rd. The Ninth Street Branch YMCA, located at 521 Ninth St., and the USO Club at 841 5th Ave., also are selling tickets.

Advance tickets will be 75 cents for adults and 35 cents for children. At the gate tickets will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

11th Division Units Invade 'Geobama'

The first division-controlled field exercise for the 11th Air Assault Division swung into action last week as the lead elements moved to the field to battle an "enemy" in the Republic of Geobama.

The name Exercise Eagle Strike was given to the problem.

Purpose of the four-day problem was to conduct further training in the air mobile concept; specifically to develop techniques and standard operating procedures by exposing the air assault battalion to a partial brigade environment in a simulated combat situation.

The exercise emphasized the following objectives: training for aviation elements of the 11th Aviation Group and the 10th Air Transport Brigade (minus elements participating in Swift Strike III) in day air mobile assault and pursuit operations, for the Infantry units in establishing battalion and company bases, for the Infantry battalion in planning and executing a specific air mobile raid on an enemy village, and in coordination and delivery of artillery and mortar fire support in an Infantry air mobile assault operation.

Also included in the scope of objectives was further training in pursuit operations and training in screening and reconnaissance operations for the division's air cavalry squadron.

Highlighting the exercise was a live fire problem Aug. 14, in which artillery units supplied fire support as Infantry units advanced on an objective.

The exercise was played in an unsophisticated environment against guerrillas in a cold war situation. Company A, 127th Engineer Battalion acted as the aggressor for the problem.

Brigadesmen Help Unveil New Aircraft

To prove the point, 154 men of Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, flew to Marietta to take part in the unveiling ceremonies.

The Infantrymen demonstrated to the crowd the troop carrying capability of the new C-141 StarLifter, designed for troop and cargo transportation.

X-Ray Is Necessary Part Of Dental Examination

By Capt. Robert Cross

Try to visualize a farmer's fence post, half of which is in the ground. Now, every year, paint that part of the fence post that's visible and take good care of it. It seems to be in good shape. But is it? What about that part that's hidden?

The farmer's post can be compared to one's teeth, of which only one-half can be seen.

But we have a definite advantage over the farmer in that we have the X-ray to check out the hidden portion of the tooth.

Some important reasons for taking dental X-rays are: to find small, hidden cavities; to determine bone abnormalities; to observe unerupted teeth, their presence and whether they are impacted or will erupt normally. The X-ray also allows the dentist to see whether his work has been properly done, such as in root canal therapy and seating of crowns and bridges.

Sometimes, the X-ray is of no value, as in acute infections, where there has been insufficient time for the bone to be destroyed. The X-ray cannot distinguish the amount of damage to the nerve, nor whether the nerve will die.

Dental X-rays are not dangerous in the amount used in dental diagnosis, because equipment is used with special filters to limit the X-rays. Also, improved high speed films reduce exposure time. Today's patient receives only one-third of the radiation he would have received four or five years ago. Don't fear having X-rays taken; the benefits far outweigh any danger.

X-rays should be taken whenever any diagnosis is being made, and always before any extensive work is undertaken.

New Movie Scheduled

HOLLYWOOD (AFPS) — "The Green Beret," an action packed adventure story based on the activities of the U.S. Army's Special Forces, has been scheduled by Columbia Pictures.

George J. W. Goodman, who will write the script, met with Defense Department officials at the Pentagon before flying to the Republic of Vietnam where much of the action in the picture takes place.

The film will deal with the Special Forces and their activities in modern guerilla warfare. Its title was suggested by the official "Green Berets" worn by the Special Forces as a distinguishing part of their uniforms.

BEST INFIELD

Pabst Blue Ribbon goes popular price!

Here's the best beer news in years! Now you can buy this famous premium beer—Original Pabst Blue Ribbon—and pay no more than you've been paying for ordinary beer. Original Pabst is the beer with the old-time flavor that likes you best—brewed as it was when it won the Blue Ribbon back in 1893. You can buy it in cans, bottles, quarts and cases, all at these new low prices. We think you'll agree it's the best beer buy in years!

Brewed by the first of the great Milwaukee brewers

T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Pabst Brewing Company, Milwaukee, Peoria Heights, Newark, Los Angeles

AT THE Movies

OPERATION BIKINI, starring Tab Hunter and Frankie Avalon, is a war-time adventure suited for mature audiences. Their orders took them to the bottom of the ocean in search of a sunken American sub in enemy waters off the island of Bikini.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE is a story of hope and intrigue set in a World War II atmosphere. The Glenn Ford, Ingrid Toulin, Charles Boyer and Yvette Mimieux. The story is set against the background of the German occupation of Paris and the suspenseful activities of the French underground. Two related families become bitter enemies as one achieves a high position in the Nazi Command while the other remains sympathetic with the Allies.

STAGECOACH TO DANCER'S ROCK, starring Warren Stevens and Jody Lawrence, is a Western designed for mature and young people. A strange group of companions boldly live a great adventure as they battle greed and prejudice in the bleak, desolate area of Dancer's Rock.

WIVES AND LOVERS is a comedy satire starring Janet Leigh, Van Johnson, Shelley Winters and Martha Hyer. It offers a fast-paced, highly sophisticated comedy about people in upper class suburbia and Broadway after dark.

Reserve Nurses Training at Benning Leave Husbands the Chores

"Take care of things around the house George, I have to go to two weeks' training in the Army Reserve."

That's a common statement in millions of American homes each year as part-time soldiers go to army summer camp.

But in Miami it's a little different — wives tell this to their husbands — along with other last minute advice on cooking for the family and even cleaning house.

The women are officers and nurses assigned to the 324th General Hospital, Florida's largest army reserve unit, that is training at Fort Benning. There are 20 nurses in the group; eight of them are married.

They, along with the doctors, dentists and other medical technicians are serving their two weeks working in the wards and labs of Martin Army Hospital, a spacious, modern, nine story, 750-bed facility.

The nurses, along with 50 other officers in this unit, are sharing duties with regular army medical personnel while caring for patients and helping train the 324th's 177 enlisted medical specialists.

Chief nurse is Lt. Col. Nellie B. Fuller, an operating room supervisor in the V.A. Hospital in Coral Gables. Her chief assistant is Lt. Col. Lois Hines, chief of nursing service in the same hospital. The active duty assignments and Wednesday night drills the nurses attend throughout the year are hardly more than an extension of their usual civilian occupations.

The nurses didn't have to fire rifles on the range as the men did, but they had their share of "shots" too. They had to give 1,694 immunizations during a four hour period to reservists from throughout the Southeastern United States.

Members of the unit reside from Pompano Beach to Homestead while one of the nurses, Maj. Dorothy Newman, must really like the 324th. She commutes to Miami for meetings all the way from her home in Sarasota.

"Our nurses do a wonderful job. We're proud of them," said Lt. Col. Chauncey M. Stone, commanding officer.

The unit returns tomorrow by train. Then the nurses will hand up their starched military uniforms and return to civilian duty — both at home and hospital.

Rookie Shooter Shows Vets How at Quantico

A 23-year-old Fort Benning soldier, with only 18 months in the Army, outshot more than 550 top military marksmen recently during the Fourth Annual Interservice Rifle Matches at Quantico, Va., to become the top rifle shot in the Armed Forces and set a new service record.

PFC Allan M. Ewing, a member of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit, blasted past the old record by one point with a 500-71V score out of a possible 500-100V breaking three previous records set by other military marksmen who have won the U.S. Armed Forces Rifle Championship.

In the first match of the shoot, Ewing took the second position with a perfect 100 score with five of his 20 shots landing in the tie-breaking V ring, the inner circle of the bull's-eye. He lost the first place position by only two V's.

In the second match, the 200-yard rapid fire match, he passed the old record. With a 100-17V score he added two V's to the record set in 1961.

A tie between Ewing and another Army firer was witnessed in the third match with Ewing taking second place by virtue the flip of a coin, according to rules set up by the National Rifle Association. Their scores were 100-13V's.

The V ring tie-breaking procedures were not applicable in this case due to the tie scores.

The 600-yard slow fire match, the fourth of the program, found Ewing in third place with another perfect score of 100-16V, losing out to another Army firer by two V's.

Senate Committee Told Of U.S. Nuclear Power

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the United States has nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union and is determined to maintain that superiority.

Testifying before the committee, which is studying the recent nuclear test ban treaty, the Secretary said that risks under the treaty are either small or under our control and the values of the treaty are substantial even if we consider only the military area.

"The scales are clearly tipped in favor of the treaty," he said, "and it has my unequivocal support."

With respect to warhead technology, the committee heard Secretary McNamara say that the United States now has the capability, without further testing, to weaponize a variety of possible anti-ballistic missile warheads, including those within the yield range desired by the designer of the Nike-X system.

These and other larger warheads can be improved even further by underground testing under the test ban treaty.

Regarding the deep space nuclear explosions, the Secretary said the United States on its own can deploy earth and solar satellite systems for detection of this type.

"The consensus," the Secretary explained, "is that the Soviets could not in a single series of tests, however carefully planned, achieve a significant or permanent lead in the strategic field, much less a super-weapon capable of neutralizing our deterent force."

Mayor of Skoplje Thanks America For 'Quake' Aid

SKOPLJE, Yugoslavia (AFPS) — The mayor of this earthquake-shattered city told a departing United States Army medical team that, "we will never forget your great work."

The mayor, Blagoje Popov, expressed Skoplje's "deep gratitude" for the American aid to Lt. Col. George C. Santos, commander of the Seventh Army's Eighth Evacuation Hospital, based at Landstuhl, Germany.

Colonel Santos pledged on his arrival after the July 26 earthquake that "the Americans will stay as long as we are needed."

International Shooting Matches Scheduled Sept. 9-23

175 Shooters To Compete In 29 Events

More than 175 of America's top military marksmen will meet at The Infantry Center Sept. 9-23 to vie for top honors in the Third Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competition.

Twenty-nine individual and team championships will be decided during the competition. The program is sponsored by the U. S. Continental Army Command and sanctioned by the chiefs of staff of the respective armed forces and the National Rifle Association.

The competition will be on world championship and Olympic levels.

The program will see five ranges used by the crack competitors who comprise the greater part of America's hopes in future world shoots, said Match Headquarters officials who will direct the shoot.

The Army, which won 23 of last year's 26 championships, will be the team (comprised solely of U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit shooters) to beat this year with most of her champions returning.

On the pistol scene the Army will lean on SFC William B. Blankenship Jr., last year's center fire champion who "maxed" the course with a perfect score of 600, setting the Inter-service record. SFC Lloyd Burchett, previous winner of the free pistol championship, also will be on hand.

The skeet and trap team suffered a big loss when 1st Lt. James R. Clark left the Army but MSgt. Henry H. Shaw, last year's International skeet champion, is still firing.

In the running deer tilts the Army will have both single-runs and double-runs champions back again this year. Sgt. Norman L. Skarpeess, who set last year's record with a 221 out of a possible 250, and SFC Loyd G. Crow Jr., the double-runs champion, who overfired the old record last

Summer Vacation Is Over for Post Youngsters

Bobby Puckett, a 10-year-old fourth grade student in the post's Children's School System, looks slightly unhappy with the situation as he settles down for another year of "reading, writing and arithmetic." Bobby is the son of SSgt. and Mrs. Paul W. Puckett. Almost 4,000 students registered this week for the '63-'64 school term. Classes are scheduled to start Sept. 3 in the post schools.

Post Officials Urge Troops To Take Care

Two Fort Benning soldiers—or dependents — will be killed and 35 more will receive accidental injuries over the Labor Day weekend.

That's the prediction of the Fort Benning safety officer, Norman Evans, provided prevailing conditions hold true. The safety officer said one highly dangerous factor in its prediction will be the tendancy of some personnel to "let off steam" after Joint Exercise Swift Strike III.

Monday will be an official holiday.

With the beginning of the long holiday only a few hours away, post officials again are urging personnel to use all caution in an effort to make the period the safest of the year.

Some dangers to which personnel will be exposed include fatigue, preoccupation, distractions and alcoholism, driving during the hours of darkness and traveling too far in the time allotted and at excessive speed. Another risk is the lack of proper safety checks on privately owned cars.

Commanding General

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, urged commanders at all levels to use every practical means of acquainting personnel with these hazards which might be encountered during the holiday period.

Noting that Labor Day is the last holiday for the summer season and that many persons will be on the highways going to recreational areas or to visit friends and relatives, Gen. Rich said all military personnel should be very mindful of others.

"It is a time to practice defensive driving," he said, adding, "This holiday can be made safe by making proper plans and actions."

Police supervision will be intensified over the weekend and careless drivers, if apprehend-

CONARC, Third Army Chiefs Visit 11th Air Assault Division

The 11th Air Assault Division staged briefings and demonstrations Wednesday for Gen. John K. Waters, commanding general of Continental Army Command (CONARC), Fort Monroe, Va., and Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, commanding general of The Third Army, Fort McPherson.

Gen. Waters, who arrived Tuesday at 7 p.m., was accompanied by Brig. Gen. Leonadis G. Gavalas, assistant CONARC chief of staff of personnel.

Gen. Watson arrived Wednesday morning at 7:15.

The visitors saw a helicopter confidence course, helicopter loading and marshalling and movement of artillery to support an air assault operation.

There were briefings on planned company assault and demonstrations of air cavalry support.

Gen. Waters attended a static display of a HU,1B helicopter with weapons, ground support equipment and Division signal equipment staged by the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry.

Gen. Watson visited Maj. Gen. Charles Billingsles, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, and attended a miniature review.

Gen. Waters departed the post at 11:50 a.m. Wednesday. Gen. Watson left at noon.

ed, will be delayed in returning to the post.

Most holiday traffic accidents occur within 10 miles of the victim's homes and in the heavy traffic of the early and late hours of the day.

Auto Accidents

Since most Labor Day injuries and deaths result from auto accidents, the post safety section urges drivers to avoid the hours of heavy traffic, to drive with extra care and to make use of the post's recreation and entertainment facilities.

To combat the accident toll, the safety office also urges the use of seat belts and the allowing of one car length of distance behind the car ahead for each 10 miles per hour of speed.

Common faults of some drivers are speeding, following too closely, ignoring red lights and stop signs, driving under the influence of alcohol, driving on the wrong side of the road and passing on hills and curves.

Traffic accidents are not the only ones which occur during the Labor Day weekend, Evans warned. Scores of people drown at this time. Victims are usually alone or in unpatrolled waters. Oddly, many of them are not swimming when they drown, but fall from boats, docks or piers.

Matches

year by 16 points with a 217 out of a possible 250, are shaping up as the backbone of the Army's team.

The rifle team has received the biggest jolt, losing Gary L. Anderson, four time winner in last year's event, and Capts. Daniel B. Puckel and Tommy G. Pool, who along with Anderson and 1st Lt. Presley Kendall, brought down the smallbore rifle prone championship. Kendall is the only returning winner from last year's matches.

Last year the competition was held jointly at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., Quantico, Va., and The Infantry Center. This year, because of the Center's complete complex of International - type ranges, the Army will host the entire program, Match officials stated.

This International - type firing is conducted over courses of fire and ranges especially designed by the International Shooting Union for world shoots.

Weapons, ammunition and other shooting gear must comply with rigid regulations. Targets used are designed to demand the utmost precision from the weapon - ammunition combination.

Education Does More Than Improve Wages

"Youth is the time to go flashing from one end of the world to the other," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson, "to try the manners of different nations: to hear the chimes at midnight."

Today's young military man faces greater opportunities and challenges of this sort than any other generation in history. He has been born in an age when miracles are occurring everywhere and when the air is filled with the throb of even greater marvels to come and when the opportunities for travel and learning are greater.

The military has accepted the responsibility of aiding these young men and women to become not only first-rate military personnel—but even more, first-rate citizens. The armed forces have developed programs that enable its people to see themselves as participating in this most exciting era and to have a sense of purpose in relation to it.

The military man who views his education opportunity simply as a means toward a better paying future job or improved social position seriously misses the main point of this education — or even of life itself. True education must help each man to find himself as an individual and, further help him to involve himself in causes, interests and ideas larger and more enduring than he is.

The military has undertaken to help every man in its organization develop into the broadest and deepest, most vital person possible. In fulfilling himself, the miitary man will arrive at moments of heightened insight when he sees more clearly than ever before what the world is all about and how he can better fit into it . . . and perhaps "hear the bells chime at midnight." 19 Ecuadorians Briefed on TIS

Nineteen faculty members and students of the Ecuador War Academy attended three days of briefings and orientations at The Infantry School this week.

The group, which includes six instructors and 13 students, was officially welcomed to The Infantry School at 8:30 a.m. Monday by Col. Maurice C. Holden, coordinator of instruction.

Tuesday they visited the Third Army Training Aids Center and saw demonstrations of the 81-mm mortar, M-60 machine gun and a rifle platoon in attack of a fortified position.

Pentagon Gets Strange Documents

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Veteran security personnel in the Pentagon were agog when papers and military documents bearing stamps reading "For Blue Eyes Only" crossed their desks.

Familiar with "Top Secret," "Secret," and "Burn," the secretary with brown eyes was green eyed until she learned that "Blue Eyes," was the code name used for the commanding officer of the Blue forces in the Swift Strike III war games.

Brig. Gen. R. R. Williams Honored at Chapel Field

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, new chief of the Training, Evaluation and Control Group was officially welcomed to Fort Benning Tuesday with an 11-gun salute at honors ceremonies on Chapel Field.

Gen. Williams and Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, stepped onto the field precisely at 4 p.m. as The Infantry Center Band sounded "Attention."

As the band played one "Ruffle and Flourish" and "General's March," the 11-gun salute was fired by members of Battery A, 2nd Bataalion, 10th Artillery.

Gen. Williams then trooped the line of the honor guard, Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, commanded by 2nd Lt. Warren B. Williams.

The ceremonies concluded with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the troops passing in review.

The new TEC Group commander was guest at an official reception at the Main Officers' Open Mess, which was attended by more than 300 military and civilian dignitaries.

Some of the Columbus persons were Mayor Steve Knight; Commissioners B. Ed Johnson and B. F. Register; Tom Moore, Chamber of Commerce executive secretary; T. G. Reeves, chairman of the chamber's military affairs committee, and Maj. Gen. (Ret.) George Lynch, Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Marcus Bell, Brig Gen. (Ret.) Winfred Skelton, Brig. Gen. (Ret.) James V. Thompson, Maynard R. Ashworth, president-publisher of The Ledger-Enquirer Newspapers, and J. W. Woodruff Jr., president of the Columbus Broadcasting Co.

Gen. Williams, former commander of the U.S. Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., will be in charge of the testing and evaluating of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Automobiles Not Built For 'Driving It Off'

When we read of an incident where a man has gone on a shooting spree with a high-powered rifle, we say he's "gone berserk." Fortunately, this does not happen too often, and when it does, there is some deep-seated emotional problem involved.

Unfortunately, similar incidents are not uncommon on the highway. In these cases, the motorist is venting his anger with the help of the ton or more of iron and steel that is carrying him to his destination. This destination may very well be death.

If you're inclined to take out anger, worry or tension on the other driver, or even on your car, itself, you had better stop and think about what you're doing.

Learning to drive an automobile is really a pretty simple task, when compared with the many other machine, manual and electronic functions we perform. Many of these require greater skill than driving a car.

However, proper handling of the vehicle, once you learn the mechanics, is a complicated business. This is easily understood when we consider the many decisions that must be made during every mile of travel. Some of these are split-second decisions that can mean the difference between life and death or serious injury.

If you've been using your car to work off anger, frustrations or worry, stop. Attitudes of "I'll show you" or "They can't do this to me, I'll show them," can only lead to disaster. Using your car and its tremendous power as an instrument to help you vent your anger is not only childish, but also suicidal and murderous.

The House of Representatives passed on to the Senate two bills aiding widows of veterans and children of disabled veterans. The first would increase by some $11,700,000 the benefits provided for the widows. Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) chairman of the House Veterans Committee said that this bill, coupled with the pending measure to increase the serviceman's pay, would add up to a 10 percent increase in widows' compensation. The second bill provides $3,300,000 in new educational allowances for children of completely disabled veterans. This fund would include aid for college level studies.

Senator Philip A. Hart (D., Mich.) was named chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on anti-trust and monopoly. Chairman James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) of the full committee, announced the appointment. Senator Hart, who succeeded the late Senator Estes Kefauver (D.,Tenn.), said he intends to make the committee "an increasingly powerful voice for the consumer," adding: "The subcommittee's function is to serve as a watchdog for the free enterprise system. It has always been — and should remain — alert to see that competition is not threatened by monopolies, price-rigging and criminal conspiracy."

COULD YOU. . .?

BY CHAPLAIN (CAPT.) JOHN S. STANNARD

Could you, without ever seeing one or hearing about one, plan and make an animal? Could you plan and develop its outside covering, its face, its legs, its tail, its insides so that the animal would be perfectly suited to its environment? Could you develop this animal's instincts for choosing the proper food, the proper climate for its living conditions, the methods to defend itself from its enemies, and the way of propagating itself?

Let's take the Bobcat for example. This animal, called a Wildcat, is a small, fearless hunter that may attack animals many times its size. It can climb trees to find its prey, but normally it finds them on the ground. Its diet consists of birds, rabbits, ground squirrels and mice. It makes its home in hollow trees or other similar protected places. This animal is rarely seen, but when seen, one can note its bobbed tail, thus its name, Bobcat.

Its coloring gives it protection from all enemies, yet it grows to a length of 3 feet and a weight of approximately 25 pounds. Babies are ready to leave their mothers about six or seven months after birth, capable of hunting on their own.

Could you ever have an idea, having never seen a member of the Cat family, of how to develop an animal such as a Bobcat?

How many did He produce? We are not sure, but to date we know that there are at least 12,000 kinds of mammals in the world plus many other types of animals.

When one realizes this, and all other phases of creation, he must realize how great God really is, and like the Psalmist says, "Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised; and His greatness is unsearchable." (Psalm 145:3)

The Judge Says . . .

How many times have you heard the phrase "something for nothing?" How many times have you found out that there just isn't any such animal?

Yet every year thousands of soldiers and their families are taken in by salesmen who promise them just that.

One of the current fads of the door-to-door salesman is to tell his prospective customer that he doesn't want to sell anything. Of course you will realize that this statement is not true inasmuch as that is how the salesman makes his living, but it usually takes the customer enough off balance, that they will allow the salesman to come in to tell them about this wonderful offer.

Once inside, the salesman explains to the customer that they can have this beautiful set of encyclopedias (or vacuum cleaner or high fi or whatever the salesman has) without paying a cent for it. He tells the customer that all that will be necessary will be to set up appointments with friends so they can see what a wonderful product it is.

The customer receives so much money off the purchase price of the article for each appointment.

What he is careful not to make clear however is that usually the friend must qualify before the credit is made. In most cases that means that if you receive any credit at all for the appointment, it will only be if the friend buys the product.

If you stop for a moment, you will realize that this is really nothing but a chain letter on a large scale. Before you sign the contract, stop and figure how many of your friends must purchase before you receive your product for nothing. And if you will look a little more closely at the contract, you will see that the contract actually binds you to pay for the merchandise whether or not you receive any credits for appointments. This contract is usually sold to a finance company which is interested only in being paid, no matter whether you go broke doing so or not.

This is the time to look at your budget and see what the result would be if you did not receive any credits and had to make the monthly payments as outlined in the contract. Too many times, the payment will be too much for the family budget and will become a burden on the family.

The salesman may tell you that you are the only one who is being given this opportunity in your area, but don't believe that either. In a period of two months a couple of years ago, I had six salesmen from the same company try to sell me a particular product with this line, and then two "supervisors" came around from door to door to see if all the houses had been covered.

The salesman may tell you that this offer cannot be held open and that in order to receive the benefits of the plan, you must sign the contract that very night. This is always a danger signal. Any firm that wants you to sign a contract without having time to inspect the contract and the reputation of the company must have something to hide. One good place to check on the reputation of a company is the Better Business Bureau.

Too many people think of the Better Business Bureau only when it is too late to help themselves, when if they had only checked before signing, they would not have signed in the first place.

New TIS Staff Agency 'Doles Out the Money'

Infantry School Report

The recent reorganization of The Infantry School brought to life a brand new staff agency, the Management and Budget Office. Although the Management Section of the Secretary's Office and the Budget Branch of the Operations Office had long existed at The Infantry School, the reorganization combined these two important elements into a separate academic staff office.

The Management and Budget Office was established to provide the assistant commandant with a single responsible staff agency to supervise the allocation of all Infantry School resources — both manpower and funds. Although these are the primary missions, the functions of Management and Budget are many and varied.

Supervising the activities of the office, and acting as principal advisor to the assistant commandant on management and budget matters is Lt. Col. David P. Heekin, management and budget officer. His deputy is Maj. Claude D. Taylor Jr. The office is organized with a Management Section, a Budget Section, and a small but tireless headquarters.

Headquarters

Management and Budget's headquarters devotes its attention to exercising general supervision over the operation of the two sections, and to providing them routine administrative services. Chief clerk SSgt William H. Horton and Miss Joyce Kennedy, secretary, assist in the latter area. Miss Kennedy also provides necessary secretarial assistance to other sections as required.

The Management Section, under the guidance of its chief, Capt. Max L. Powers, performs a wide variety of power, management improvement, and civilian personnel. Foremost and best known function of this section is that of coordinating the allocation of personnel spaces.

The Infantry School is organized under two Tables of Distribution (TD's) — one for the Academic Staff and Instruction Departments, the other for the Student Brigade. Maintenance of these TDs is a complex and time-consuming task accomplished by Mrs. Helen R. Gibson, TD Clerk. The total number of TD spaces must agree with that authorized by higher headquarters, and each MOS, grade, and title must conform to appropriate regulations. Requests for TD changes originating in each activity are carefully checked to insure that these requirements are met.

Of course, assigning personnel to fill all authorized spaces is a problem not encountered by the Management Section. Assignments are handled by the School Personnel Division, G-1.

Publication of the USAIS Quarterly Review and Analysis Report is another major effort of the Management Section. This new and unique reporting procedure, initiated in fiscal year 1962, has resulted in a Quarterly Review and Analysis booklet of more than 60 pages, including some 30 charts.

This document places pertinent statistics and information regarding trends and impacts within The Infantry School at the fingertips of all users in a readily usable form. Because of a short suspense date to higher headquarters, a feverish effort is expended at the close of each reporting period in the publication of this report. Feeder reports from all Infantry School activities are collated, coordinated, edited, and consolidated, along with appropriate charts, and submitted to the Army Field Printing Plant in camera-ready form. Publication of this type report has resulted in a CONARC request to all other service schools for copies of similar reports.

Statistical Data

Another prime function of the Management Section is the compilation and analysis of statistical data to support personal requirements. Many highly technical and complicated formulas are used by Sp5 David A. Spivey, management non - commissioned officer.

Sp5 Spivey is an example of the modern axiom that "statistics can be made to support anything, including statisticians," and continually relies on his M1A1 calculator to keep him in business. The results of his computations serve as a firm basis for further management surveys and recommendations to higher headquarters.

Coordinating the procurement, assignment, and transfer of Department of the Army civilian employees at the School is the task assigned to Mrs. Sara S. Hamilton, civilian personnel clerk. Though sometimes a seemingly thankless job, hers is one of major importance both to the School and its civilian employees.

Acting in a liaison capacity between The Infantry Center's civilian personnel section and the using activities of The Infantry School, she is able to keep administrative personnel actions flowing smoothly in both directions.

Additional tasks of the Management Section include supervision of both the School's Management Improvement and Incentive Awards Program, and preparation of the School's "Organization, Missions and Functions Manual."

Budget Section

Capt. Benjamin J. Ranieri's Budget Section keeps a watchful eye on the expenditure of funds to support Infantry School instruction. While he will not lend money on your signature, he is willing to lend a sympathetic ear to any activity chief in need of resources to finance his operations.

Capt. Ranieri, assisted by Mrs. Sadie Ratcliff, Sp5 Ray A. Blount, Sp4 Vincent C. Carbone, PFC Angel I. Cerpa and PFC Douglas C. Farley, coordinates the preparation of budget estimates for each activity of The Infantry School. These estimates are finalized into the USAIS Budget Estimate and submitted to higher headquarters for approval.

Preparation of the budget estimate is only the beginning of the budget cycle, which continues throughout the entire fiscal year. An accurate itemized account of the expenditure of all funds is maintained by the budget clerks. Each request for funded items must be carefully checked to ensure that funds have been budgeted, and that the current cost does not exceed that amount.

During the fiscal year, the Budget Section monitors all of the School's budget accounts, recommending ways in which the School can react to changes in programs which create new monetary requirements, reprogramming funds between activities, and, in general, doing whatever has to be done to ensure the greatest return on each of the dollars spent in support of Infantry School missions.

The Management and Budget Office keeps its fingers on the pulse of The Infantry School, to insure best utilization is obtained from the resources provided it — both men and money. By so doing, the members of this office, though small in number, contribute significantly to the School's mission of training Infantry leaders.

CAA Fund Drive Kickoff Scheduled for Sept. 16

The Community Activities Association Fund Drive will be held from Sept. 16 through Nov. 15 with Col. Robert M. Williams, commanding officer of the 197th Infantry Brigade, as chairman.

This year's drive will provide the majority of support for three on-post agencies—the Youth Activities Club, Visiting Nurses, and Preventive Dental Health Program.

In addition the funds will help support 32 United Giver agencies in the neighboring communities which provide services for the military.

The Youth Activities Club provides central organization for youth programs such as Boy and Girl Scouts, Brat Barracks, the Junior National Rifle Association and other recreational programs that give Fort Benning's youth leadership and opportunity in recreation.

The club served approximately 4,000 boys and girls last year, as compared to 3,500 the year before.

The Visiting Nurses Program renders health education to dependents by visiting homes or by consultation. A total of 11,365 people received the services of the Visiting Nurses last year.

The Preventive Dental Health Program provides free cleaning and flouridation of teeth for dependent children under 18 years old. Two qualified dental hygenists are provided by CAA funds, along with the necessary equipment to carry out the program.

In 1962 this program served 4,245 youngsters.

Without the support of the CAA Fund Drive, all or at least a substantial part of the services rendered by these three agencies would have to be dropped.

Among the 32 agencies in Muscogee and Russell Counties that receive some aid from the CAA, included are the Red Cross, Boy and Girl Scout groups, the YMCA, Mental Health Association, and the newly created Georgia Citizens Committee, Council on Crime and Delinquency.

Commercial banking facilities at Fort Benning will open Saturday morning, August 31, to accommodate patrons on the military payday, it has been announced.

Special hours of 9:30 until noon will be observed by the National Bank of Fort Benning, Ingersoll street and Wold avenue. Branches of the First National Bank and Columbus Bank and Trust, located in building 16 at Vibbert avenue and Hall street also will be open from 9:30 a.m. until noon. All three facilities are normally closed on Saturday.

Military Aid To Civilians New in Asia

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Assistance to the civilian population by its military forces is something entirely new to Asia. However, it is catching on there and is assisting in bringing unity to the Republic of Viet Nam and in defeating Communist efforts to take over the nation.

A Defense Department official explained this recently in a discussion of our Civic Action program in the embattled country.

He explained that Asiatic nations were accustomed to predatory military forces who were more likely to take from the people, rather than assist them.

Through the efforts of American Civil Action teams and U. S. military men in Viet Nam, the Vietnamese Army may now build roads and bridges, and establish "strategic hamlets" which play a decisive role in thwarting Communist activities.

They have also dug wells to provide water, treated the sick and injured, and conducted many primary education classes where schools did not previously exist.

The program, the spokesman said, is bringing the average Vietnamese a feeling of "belonging." He now identifies himself with his country which is doing its part to make his life more healthful and comfortable. As a result of this, he is more inclined to assist the military in its efforts against the Viet Cong.

17 Countries Represented At Confab

FT. AMADOR, C.Z. (AFPS)—Delegates from 17 American countries met here for the Fourth Annual Conference of the American Armies. After a week of conferences, both military and social, the following statement was released:

"During the past week the conferees of the Fourth Annual Conference of the American rmies were provided an opportunity to analyze collectively certain problems common to nations in the Western Hemisphere, and to discuss possible solutions to these problems. In the discussions, considerable attention was devoted to matters of military intelligence and communications, two vitally inter-related subjects."

The various countries internal security problems were also a matter of discussion.

Among the United States' representatives were Secretary of the Army Cyrus R. Vance; Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler and Teodoro Moscoso, U.S. Coordinator for the Alliance for Progress.

Other countries taking part in the conference were Argentina, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela.

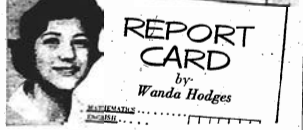
BIG WHEELS ON CAMPUS . . . Our four models show the wide range of choice for fall or back-to-school wardrobes. Featured (L to R) is the suedecloth wrap skirt with print shirt. Next is the orlon acrylic vest worn over a turtle-neck shirt along with the proportionized stretch pants. The third wheeler wears for recreation shorty kilties highlighting a V-neck sweater. Our book-toter is garbed in a wool flannel shirt accented by an imported cotton vest. Her skirt is the A-shape style.



The words "dance" and "football" seem the most popular in the schoolbound's vocabulary as the fall term approaches rapidly.

Last week started off with a dance at Brat Barracks, sponsored by the Sigma Delta Beta sorority. This hop was given for the incoming freshmen and upper classmen. Decorations were done simply in blue and white, the sorority's colors.

Sandy Colee was responsible for the posters scattered about the post. Cookies and small sandwiches were made by sorority members. Towards the end of the evening, a door prize was given. Linda Sewell won the "Surf City" album.

Among those I saw at the hop, was a brother-sister "dance team." Those of you who have seen Katey and John Hennessy in action, know what I mean.

Pacelli will be glad to hear that they are inheriting the Hennessy's from Columbus High, which had previously "stolen" them from Baker.

Pacelli really seems to be making the news lately. At the "kick-off" dance, they took the first place trophies for both decorations and best school spirit.

Baker shined when one of their girls received the title of "Miss Junior Optimist." Surprisingly enough, the "69-69" "Miss Junior Optimist" was from Baker, too.

The night was not a complete loss for Columbus High. Barry Mitchell and his partner won a dance contest. Maybe this is a sign that they will have to win in football, as the other schools have shined in spirit and workmanship.

Speaking of football, the '63-'64 season is about to start. It promises to be an exceitingly, rough year for all three schools.

Rivalry is already building up between Columbus and Baker fans. The fans may not see action on the field, but they certainly do their share of pranks at night. School chums have been known to get together and paint school buildings, and even "roll" yards.

Only two post representatives went out for football at Columbus High. They are seniors Ray Lynch and Lindsey Koob.

This will be the first year for both of them at Columbus High. Ray played football in his sophomore year for a school in Germany.

Players from Pacelli are Corky Henderson, Johnny Meads, John Hennessy, Dave Heekin and Tom Male.

That just about does it for this week. Remember, I need "your" help to write this column. Share some of your news with me so I can tell others about it. See you next week.

CTC Wives Fete Guests

An orchid corsage and an engraved silver tray were presented to Mrs. Adrian L. Hoebeke recently by wives of The Infantry Center Troop Command at the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. Hoebeke is the wife of the former commander of the Center Troop Command, and now deputy post commander, Col. Adrian L. Hoebeke.

Welcomed to the wives' group was Mrs. Earl Holton, wife of the present CTC commander, who also was a recipient of a corsage. Also new to the group were Mrs. Harry F. Boyle, whose husband heads the 39th Transportation Battalion and Mrs. John K. Roberts, wife of the CTC executive officer.

A seashore motif was created with the decorations by the wives of the 806th Engineer Battalion (Construction), who were hostesses for the coffee.

Name tags were decorated with shells and seaweed. The centerpiece on the serving table was a large conch shell in which flowers and plants were arranged, accented by a piece of driftwood.

A bowl of goldfish highlighted a corner arrangement. Featured were shells, glass floats, a fishnet, and driftwood, all arranged on colorful beach towels. Also a part of the decorations was a gay straw beach hat, which was given as the door prize to Mrs. Margery Rothrock.

The hostess committee, which was guided by Mrs. Felix R. Moss, wife of the 806th Engineer Battalion commander, was headed by Mrs. Kenneth Dimond.

40 Wives Attend 11th Air Assault Coffee at MOOM

Forty wives of officers of 10th Air Transport Brigade, 11th Air Assault Division, met recently in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess for coffee.

This social gathering was hosted by Mrs. Robert A. Price, Mrs. William M. Lewis and Mrs. Charles W. Edmond.

Mrs. Delbert L. Bristol welcomed newcomers and guests and conducted a short business meeting.

Ladies' Club Meets At Borrum Home

Ladies of the Communications Department met for coffee recently at the home of Mrs. James C. Borrum.

Mrs. Donald A. Beyer introduced Mrs. Ronald E. Blythe, whose husband, Capt. Blythe, has just been assigned to the department.

The invitation to the Ladies' Enquirer News Clinic was read by Mrs. Beyer. It was announced that Mrs. James S. Miles and Mrs. Bernard K. Doyle would attend.

Post's 'First Lady' Reminisces

BY MARGE LENNON

Mrs. C. W. G. Rich has always loved the Army. Born and raised in the Army town of Leavenworth, Kans., she decided as a youngster that it would be nice to marry a military man.

Although her parents were civilians, Betty Rich always had wanted to become an "Army wife." After being graduated from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., she met Cadet C. W. G. Rich on a date at West Point. They courted at the Point and were married in Sept., 1935, at Leavenworth.

Reminiscing about their first four here at Fort Benning (this is their third), Mrs. Rich described their quarters in 1938. "They were not luxurious — far from it. Actually, they were old Army barracks converted from World War I. Since then they have all been demolished.

"Little did I know at that time, that years later we would return to Fort Benning and live in this lovely house. It's quite a change from our first quarters here."

Mrs. Rich has accompanied her Airborne - Infantry husband, to many, many places. Among them were Fort Bragg, N. C.; Norfolk, Va.; Paris, Carlisle, Pa.; Washington, D. C.; Frankfort, Germany; Vancouver Barracks, Washington; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii (where they were caught during the attack on Pearl Harbor); West Point, N.Y. (where Gen. Rich was commandant of his Alma Mater), and Fort Campbell, Ky., their last tour before arriving here.

The Riehs have two children. Ann, the oldest, is married to Army Capt. J. T. Palastra, and is living in Okinawa.

The Rich's other daughter, Roselyn, is an airline hostess for Braniff Airlines and is based in Dallas, Tex.

Whenever Mrs. Rich gets any "free time" from her many official duties, she enjoys playing bridge, watching television or reading. Although bridge is her first love, she intends to go back to playing a little golf this fall.

Mrs. Rich has been an active Grey Lady since World War II. Her home is filled with flowers and many mementos of the general's military career. Her greatest pleasure in life is to be on the beach.

When questioned about her tastes in foods, she stated unhesitantly that Chinese dishes are her favorite.

Mrs. Rich expressed her feelings about the Army and her life in it with great fondness, "After 28 years in the Army I still love it. My husband and I both like to entertain. Having a lovely home as we do now makes it so much easier and more fun."

The Woman's Club of Fort Benning is indeed proud to have as its honorary president, such a lovely, congenial and distinguished "First Lady."

Miss Stumhofer Will Teach Tap Again This Year

JOAN STUMHOFER

The Women's Club School of Dance announced recently that Miss Joan Stumbofer, last year's tap dance instructor, will be back again this year by popular demand.

In addition to her other classes, Joan plans to conduct a special all boys tap class this year.

Now in her senior year at Columbus High School, Joan, besides her dance instructing, finds time to be a majorette-cheerleader.

When Ted Mack's Amateur Hour group came to Columbus, Joan was among 20 finalist of the 400 who auditioned. She has studied eight years in St. Louis and also in Atlanta under Jack Epley.

She is also interested in jazz and modern dance.

DOD Plans $4 Billion Yearly Cut

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — If cost-cut goals set by the services are reached, the Department of Defense will save an average of $4 billion a year from Fiscal Year '64 through FY67.

In line with the cost reduction program, each service has prepared briefings and seminars to be given to all major commands, both overseas and stateside.

The biggest savings is expected in the Air Force; which has announced hopes of saving $1.6 billion in FY64 and another $1.8 billion in FY65.

The Army's cost reduction program has been geared to chop $717 million and $930 million from the budget during the next two years.

Proposed Department of the Navy savings amount to $777 million during FY 64 and $1.05 billion in FY65.

Savings through the cost reduction program will be achieved, according to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, by three Defense Department objectives.

The program outline specifies that each service buy only what is needed, buy at the lowest sound price, and reduce operating costs.

Fund Drive Campaign Will Benefit Army's Memorial Museum

Through a fund raising campaign, being carried on by the Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), hundreds of thousands of visitors to Philadelphia will be able to see a chronological and concise history of the United States Army in a Memorial Museum for which the money is being raised.

The "Pemberton House," which will be restored in exact duplicate, will house the museum in the middle of Independence Square.

The overall fund drive quota is $600,000, being equally shared by the AUSA and the Navy League. Part of the total, $400,000, will be used for the restoration of the museum building with the other $200,000 being used for interior exhibits.

The Department of the Interior will be responsible for construction and will maintain the museum after it is completed.

Fund Drive officials kicked off the voluntary program in 1962 and estimated the Army's share of the goal would be reached by the first appeal. Due to personnel turbulence, reorganization of units and delay in initiating fund campaigns, receipts have only reached two-thirds of the proposed goal.

In providing everyone an opportunity to share in this project and in making this national site of American heritage possible, the fund drive has been extended in order that everyone may have a chance to participate.

In the earlier months of the drive, the AUSA Fort Benning chapter was tenth among twelve chapters in the drive, but when the new appeal is made payday, Fort Benning fund drive officials are hoping for a jump in the local chapter's standing.

The objective of the fund drive is not a set amount for the chapter, but 100 per cent participation by post personnel is desired, officials said.

The U. S. Army, which is inseparably associated through history and tradition with this five block area of Old Philadelphia, has picked this site for its memorialization in memory of its founding place.

The birthplace of the United States where the Continental Congress voted the final form of the Declaration of Independence and the home of the Liberty Bell will, together with the proposed museum, bring hundreds of thousands of visitors to the park annually.

The "Pemberton House" will be a three-story colonial brick building and is being reproduced as an accurate, historical reproduction of a large dwelling which stood on the same site during the Revolutionary period.

Sergeant Awarded Swift Strike Medal

SWIFT STRIKE AWARD WINNER
SFC Jeff Bass

A Joint Service Commendation Medal for outstanding service during Joint Army - Air Force Exercise Swift Strike III has been awarded to SFC Jeff Bass, motor sergeant for Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 2nd Division Artillery.

The only enlisted man to received this award in the 2nd Infantry Division, SFC Bass was cited for high quality of maintenance and performance of the 68 Army vehicles assigned him during the exercise. He was further cited for capturing 10 enemy "Blue" force soldiers.

The sergeant, who joined the 2nd Division Artillery in March 1963 from a previous assignment with the 47th Ordnance Group in Stuttgart, Germany, is a native of Pitkin, La.

He joined the Army in July 1948 and has attended the Tank Maintenance School at Aberdeen, Md.; and the Tire Classification School, Red River Arsenal, Ark.

SFC Bass controls the operations of 68 vehicles including one-quarter ton, three-quarter ton and two-and-one-half ton trucks. He was cited for not having lost any vehicles during the mamouth exercise whose greatest feature was constant motor marches. Despite not having new vehicles, he was able to keep them all running, by constantly replenishing his basic load of parts and keeping on the road night and day after such parts as batteries, spark plugs and points.

Speaking of the incident during Swift Strike III cited in his award, SFC Bass noted that he was aided in his ten-man capture by members of the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

After having been captured himself by "Blue" forces of the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions, he escaped through the window of a South Carolina Truck Stop restaurant, raced his Jeep to 5th Division front lines and returned with a 5th Division force to claim his own ceptors prisoner.

This award was also given to Capt. Harold Lyon, 2nd Infantry Division, for his role in Task Force Lion.

Silver Bowl Given to 9th

By Bob de Camara

The $125,000 Liscum Bowl, fashioned in Japan at the turn of the century from 90 pounds of molten silver, became a part of the glory-in-battle tradition of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry at 2nd Division ceremonies last week.

The valuable punch bowl is an ornately hand-crafted example of Oriental art with dragons and other monsters winding about the bowl in Far East profusion.

It sat under blue velvet wraps on the parade field flanked by two guards as the guests and top-ranking commanders and sergeants of the 2nd Division arrived to witness its presentation to the assistant division commander and then to Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul, commander of the 1st of the 9th.

The Liscum Bowl, named after Col. Emerson H. Liscum, regimental commander of the 9th who was killed during an early stage of the Boxer Rebellion fight for Tientsin, China in July 1900, was given first to Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin by Capt. Robert E. Looney of the 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry in Alaska, former proprietors of the treasure.

Gen. Coffin then turned the punch bowl, its 50 silver cups, ladle and tray over to Col. Paul by symbolically handling the ladle to the battalion commander on the reviewing stand.

The bowl's history is one of the strangest and most colorful chapters written by the 9th Infantry since its activation in March 1885, a history that has seen action in Indian Wars, the Spanish - American War and the Philippine Insurrection along with World Wars I and II, Korea, and, of course, the Boxer Rebellion.

Col. Liscum was killed passing the American flag on to men of Company H at the walls of Tientsin. At the time, the city was besieged by a many-nationed force, including a battalion of U. S. Marines and the 9th Infantry Regiment.

Two days after the regimental commander was killed, a 9th Infantry patrol in the southeastern sector of Tientsin came upon the smoldering ruins of a silver mint, set on fire by Japanese and British artillery.

A guard was placed on the mint by the 9th; and later, two shapeless chunks of ore among a cache of silver bars valued in all at $376,000 was presented to the 9th by Prince Ching, official representative of Li Hung Chang, to whom the silver had been returned.

In the spring of 1901 while the regiment was quartered in that part of the Chinese city of Peking known as the Temple of Agriculture, at an informal meeting of 9th Regiment officers it was decided that the silver would be transformed

Little Creek; Next Stop for 'Second to None'

By Artie Koffman

The initial phase of a two part training program in preparation for the 2nd Infantry Division's annual amphibious training exercise at Little Creek, Va. next month began on August 26 at 2nd Brigade Headquarters on Kelley Hill. The 2nd Brigade, commanded by Col. Dwight B. Dickson, has been designated the control unit for the entire amphibious operation.

The first phase of instruction, which deals in staff procedures, is being conducted by a Marine - controlled inter-service team of 28 officers and non-commissioned officers from the Amphibious Training School located at Little Creek. On the receiving end of this specialized instruction is a group of 100 selected personnel representing all units in the "Indianhead" Division scheduled to take part in this all important and vital training.

Along with the personnel who are attending the specialized classes, troops of their respective units are busy mastering such things as how to climb mockup nets used in debarking Navy ships and to overcome beach obstacles. They are also familiarizing themselves with amphibious technology and learning the art of waterproofing communications equipment. This combined training at Kelley Hill will continue through September 6.

Phase two of the operation begins the following day when Col. Dickson and his staff, who begin initial preparations for the exercise on July 17 of this year, depart for Little Creek in order to plan and write the necessary orders for the successful completion of the actual amphibious assaults.

Because of the size of this operation and the limited space available at the Virginia training site, participating units of the division will be divided into two separate groups, each with an approximate strength of 2,000 men.

Group One, composed of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry; the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, which is presently located at Fort Stewart, Ga.; the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, and Companies C and D of the 2nd Engineer Battalion will depart Fort Benning on September 14 and remain at Little Creek until September 28. Group Two, consisting of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, the 1st Battalion 72nd Armor; the 1st Battalion 15th Artillery, and Companies A and B of 2nd Engineer Battalion will arrive at Little Creek September 27 and return to Fort Benning October 12.

Departing along with Group One and remaining there for the entire period in a support capacity will be Company D, 2nd Maintenance Battalion; Company C, 2nd Medical Battalion, and a detachment from the Supply and Transportaton Battalion. Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade will also remain in Virginia during the entire exercise as the commanding unit.

After their arrival at Little Creek, the troops will receive both classroom and practical training in every aspect of the amphibious assault. This will include the waterproofing of vehicles, troop life aboard ship and the actual debarking from troop ships by means of wet nets.

The highlight of the entire exercise for each group will come on the final day's training when they will carry out a full scale amphibious landing on a portion of beach at Camp Pendleton, Va. Everything needed to sustain and complete a successful mission will come off the Navy ships. This will include, in addition to the troops and their personal equipment and firearms, tanks, vehicles, artillery peices and tons of simulated cargo for the establishment of supply points.

Besides facing the problem of getting themselves and their equipment onto the beach, the soldiers of the division will be welcomed by live aggressor forces, exploding TNT representing concentrations of enemy artillery fire and other realistically simulated battle noises.

The exercise will come to a halt after a successful beachhead is secured and a short inland move is carried out.

Transportation to and from Virginia for all 2nd Infantry Division personnel will be by means of chartered commercial busses. All tanks, vehicles,

Reservists Workout With 72nd

"We've had some mighty good close support from the 72nd Armor," spoke the reserve Army captain who had just been given the IV Corps Armor Leadership Award at parade ceremonies on Fort Benning's remote Darby Range.

The captain, Jimmie R. Tuten of Jasper, Fla., stood in a clearing in a wooded area off the range proper where his armor company was preparing to start tank drill for the day. Several feet away a Supply and Transport Battalion tanker pumped 250 gallons of gas into a tank that would only squeeze out one mile for every three gallons it swallowed.

Capt. Tuten and the men of Company D are part of the 3rd Medium Tank Battalion, 67th Armor which is being supported for two weeks of summer camp by the 2nd Division's own armormen, the 1st Battalion, 72nd.

Already the reservists had made two night tank marches of "about 20 miles." This week the men of Companies A, B and D underwent an annual Army Training Test. Company C of Chattahoochee, Fla., is still in the basic training stage.

The 67th is scheduled to leave Fort Benning tomorrow and resume the normal three meetings a month cycle which takes up two of their evenings and an entire Sunday for field duty.

Training at home is a different brand of conditioning than that which they receive during their summer camp. Companies A and B from Panama City, Fla., have one medium tank each and one tank trainer at their disposal as do Company D from Madison and Company C.

From Florida the men brought along wheel vehicles (jeeps and trucks) but depend on the "Indianhead's" 72nd for track vehicles (the tanks). The 72nd donated 28 M-48's this year along with a band of advisors, one of whom rides in each tank.

Company D's share of this wealth is six tanks, belonging to the 72nd's Company C. Tank Commander Sp5 Charles Alligood of Monticello has renamed his tank "Clyde" in honor of Company D's home-based tank. Riding with Alligood are the driver, Spd Francis Williams of Madison, a junior at the University of Florida who spent six months on active duty at Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Jackson, S. C., and the gunner, Sp4 Douglas Barrett of Monticello who works "Clyde's" .30 and .90 millimeter guns. The .90 millimeter turret gun is the payload piece which recoils 12 inches of solid steel in the tank's interior.

The 72nd's Sp5 Michael Tarby of Company C, a driver, shares the cramped inside quarters and serves the 67th in an advisory capacity. He fills up the loader's slot of the four-man crew.

"These guys are doing real well. They know how to handle the equipment, and are right up on their training. They always have a little communications trouble at first, but that gets straightened out when they settle down," Tarby observed of the reserve soldiers.

This high praise went to an insurance salesman, a college junior and a soft-drink salesman; Alligood, Williams and Barrett respectively, for these are their occupations in civilian life.

On Sundays at home the men take off for the field with their tank and tank trainer and maneuver them against two jeeps of the Company, practicing forcing tank on the attack, defense and retrograde (withdrawal).

In the Fort Benning boondocks they can do better than that and they lined up their six tanks, all gassed and spruced up, and then took off for a briefing. On this particular morning, the problem concerned a strong enemy armor force that had landed on Georgia and South Carolina beaches and pushed across the state to Fort Benning.

The armormen prepared to mount an attack, hold against the superior enemy force and withdraw to new positions. The entire game took place in the acres of pine and brush off Darby Range where the tanks lumber heavily off the road and bulldoze over small trees and any other obstacle they encounter.

Before the 597 men of the 67th, commanded by Maj. Lewis F. Branan, depart for Florida, they will have been put through their paces day and night in every sort of imaginative exercise the 72nd, their own commanders and Army regulations can devise for them.

The training test has been evaluated, gone over thoroughly by a professor of military science from Michigan State University. The reserve armormen know night marches and day marches. They can hit where an enemy will feel it most and get out when they've done a job; they can trap and defend and, most important of all, they know their tanks inside and out, what they can do—the full potential.

The leadership award ceremony on Darby Range for Capt. Tuten was attended by the commander of the IV Corps, Maj. Gen. George A. Carver. This corps, to which the reserve 3rd Medium Tank Battalion, 67th Armor belongs, is headquartered in Birmingham, Ala.

Engineers Prove Ability As Builders & Fighters

By 2nd Engineer Bn, PIO

Upon the arrival of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Beverly C. Snow Jr., at the joint exercise Swift Strike III maneuver area, the Engineers, unlike other units, went to work prior to the start of the exercise. The Engineers placed M4T6 pontoon bridging equipment and prepared sites at Fort Lawn and Camden, S.C. This was done to enable the Engineers to be ready upon the start of the problem to replace the bridges at those sites, should they be destroyed by the enemy. This move assured the 2nd Division the chance to move to the west and close with the enemy.

The 2nd Engineer Battalion also prepared every bridge on the Catawba River for demolition in order to cut off any attempt by the enemy to join his Airborne forces with an overland force.

An effective combat unit in the modern Army must be able to move, shoot, and communicate. The 2nd Engineers demonstrated that they could do all three, and do them well.

No one in the 2nd Engineer Battalion will forget the two 25-mile moves which they made on August 4: one during daylight hours and one at night. The Engineers showed that they could shoot and maneuver as Infantry; when Companies A and Companies C under Task Force Farmer, fought at New Hope; when Companies B and D, under Task Force Teague, fought near South Saluda; when Company C again maneuvered and fought a delaying action in the corridor between the Broad and the Saluda river; Companies E and Headquarters joined into the Battle of Southeast Saluda; and finally when the 2nd Engineer Battalion, as a whole, showed its combat effectiveness in the Battle of Gassaway Church by neutralizing the effectiveness of the First Battle Group, 327th Airborne Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, and capturing one of the unit's key officers.

Floating Bridge

At last, on August 14, the 2nd Engineer Battalion got their long awaited chance to put in their floating bridge equipment. This was done in a driving rainstorm at a time when there was heavy enemy ground and quickly erected an M4T6 pontoon bridge at Higgins Bridge, S.C. and at two p.m. that afternoon the commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingsles, landed in his helicopter on that bridge.

Joint Exertise Swift Strike III was highly beneficial to the 2nd Engineer Battalion and it proved once again that the Engineers are always combat ready.

6 Are Presented Special Awards By Col. Stoecker

During a retreat ceremony held recently by the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, Lt. Col. John V. Stoecker, battalion commander, presented awards to six men for their outstanding performance of duty during the recent Oak Tree and Palm Tree exercise.

Speaking to the entire battalion Col. Stoecker remarked: "This is a small token for these men. I wish I could give it to more of you. The entire battalion performed well during the operation."

After retreat was sounded, Col. Stoecker presented each of the six recipients with a letter of appreciation.

Those receiving the letters were: SFC Louie D. Sibert, forward supply section leader from Company A; Sgt. Willie McCluney Jr., acting 1st Sergeant for Company B; Sp4 Thomas L. Carter, supply clerk and clerk typist for the division supply office; Sp4 Jerry Sevy, class III distribution sergeant for Company A; and PFC Larry Johnson, class II and IV supply for Company A.

The 'Donaldson' Story

By Bradley A. Zachan

The most colorful and rewarding operation conducted by the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, during the recent Swift Strike III exercise was the successful take-over of Donaldson Air Force Base from the Blue Homeland Forces.

On August 8, the 1st Battalion was enjoying a much needed rest during an administrative break near Saluda, S.C. At the end of the break the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, received a daring mission from the 2nd Division's 1st Brigade. This mission was to provide a 300-man striking force to be airlifted to Donaldson Air Force Base for the purpose of securing the airfield and link up with a counter-insurgency force composed of elements of the 1st Reconnaisance Squadron, 1st Cavalry; 1st Armored and Company C, 1st Battalion, 38th. This counter-insurgency force was moving by road through the Blue controlled northern portion of Columbia.

Night Maneuver

At 8:45 p.m. on August 8, the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry left Saluda for Bush Field, Augusta Ga., by motor convoy. The night move was made smoothly, and safely with the unit arriving at Bush Field at midnight. The troops were moved to a staging area set up by the Air Force and were given hot coffee and fresh fruit during the waiting period for the beginning of the mission.

During this period the company commanders and battalion staff were briefed by the Air Force on the layout of the airfield, troop concentrations and objectives as determined by aerial photo-reconnaissance that same evening. To facilitate the battalion's mission, the Air Force had prepared schematic diagrams of the airfield in sufficient quantities to permit each squad leader to have one.

While the key officers were being briefed, composite units were being formed, utilizing truck drivers, headquarters personnel and mortarmen to build up the fighting strength of the task force to required strength. Rations and ammunition were distributed. The unit had to travel light so only weapons, ammunition and one "C" ration meal per individual were carried by the individual soldiers.

At 3 a.m. the trim task force composed of 307 men, one Air Force forward air control vehicle, and one 106 milimeter recoilless rifle, loaded aboard eight C-119 aircrafts.

At 3:30 a.m. the task force was airborne, winging its way north to rendezvous with the counter-insurgency force moving by road. The plan was for the aircraft to remain airborne until the ground force was 10 miles from Donaldson, and then to land using Blue Air Force radio call signs and frequencies to facilitate their landings. Landing was tentatively scheduled for 5:30 a.m., but the hours rolled by, the sun came up, and the aircraft remained in the air, circling and waiting.

The ride was far from smooth and personnel began to get sick. Finally, much to the relief of the cramped, white-faced soldiers, the word was given out that the planes were going into Donaldson. There was an air of expectancy throughout the aircraft as each soldier knew that as he exited from the aircraft he would be met by a "hail of lead" from the Blue Forces, or be immediately captured.

Each aircraft touched down at 20 second intervals and moved down the runways to their pre-arranged unloading positions. The 1st Battalion-men scurried from the aircraft and were greeted only by the roar of their own aircraft. The task force, broken into three forces, moved toward its objectives. Company A, commanded by Lt. Harold W. Darden, moved to the south end of the field to eliminate any resistance from the "tent city" there. Company A advanced through the tent area, taking approximately 250 prisoners, most of them still in their sleeping bags, and finally met scattered resistance from a truck company and a Quartermaster Company. The umpires held the advance at this point for several hours.

Move In On Airfield

The "Recon" Platoon, led by Lt. Phil Anderson, moved to secure the control tower. This force also was composed of the battalion command group. The force seized the control tower, a communications center, without firing a shot and was advancing on a fuel dump when it encountered token resistance. The resistance was easily overcome and the force moved on to take the XVIII Airborne Corps aircraft maintenance section complete with helicopters and fixed wing aircraft. This gave the Red Forces control of the north, south, and west ends of the airfield.

Meanwhile, Company B, commanded by Capt. Eugene A. Fox, was advancing across the field to the east, securing the loading ramps and the east runway. It was not until they neared the east runway that they encountered resistance from the large wooded area to the east of the airfield. It was determined that there was a Blue battle group bivouaced there, the 1st Battle Group, 327 Infantry, 101st Airborne Division. From the time our forces landed, the areas surrounding the airfield were subjected to Red air attacks. As Co. B advanced towards the woods they were "pinned down" by Blue Forces and the umpires called a halt to determine the situation.

The ensuing decision assessed the Blue Forces 700 casualties and the 1st Battalion, now reinforced by the counter-insurgency force, 89 casualties. This was assessed due to the fact that the 327th was caught non-tactical to the heavy air strikes on their massed troops in the bivouac area.

The fighting resumed with such fervor that new arguments broke out between the player forces and finally at one p.m. there was a four-hour administrative hold called by the umpires.

Blue Aircraft Land

During the day, the airfield was in control of the Red forces, but the field was still allowed to operate. Blue aircraft poured into the field with heavy equipment, artillery and more troops right into the waiting arms of the Red welcoming committee," a platoon from Co. B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry. The number of prisoners now held by the Red Forces was impossible to count and there were innumerable vehicles and artillery pieces being held. Finally the umpires allowed the Blue Forces to remove the equipment and personnel administratively. Also captured were 24 C-130 aircraft, rigged for airborne drops.

At 1:30 p.m. reinforcements from the 1st Brigade and Brigade Command Group arrived by air and took charge of the situation. The Red Forces now numbered approximately 1,100 men and had control of the airfield and all of its facilities. The Blue Forces were located to the east and south of the field with reinforcements rushing up to encircle the field.

Fighting resumed at 5 p.m. with the Blue Forces of the 1st Battle Group, 327th Infantry, making several suicide charges across the easy runway and being repulsed by heavy fire from automatic weapons and rifles from Companies B and C, 1st Battalion, 36th Inf. Then, at approximately 7 p.m., the word came down—the Red Force was surrounded. A meeting was held and the decision was made. The Red units were to break out and each force was on its own. On the edge of darkness, the 1st Battalion, 38th Inf., was the only unit remaining and it began its walk out. Skirting to the south, and east, the battalion moved through a platoon-sized roadblock and through a break in the fence. But before Companies B and C could get through, Blue reinforcements were rushed to the scene and closed the break sealing the two companies inside the airfield, or so they thought. Company C joined them in leaving the field, but the majority of Company C was captured, or split up, and joined with elements of the 1st Cavalry force.

Brigade Rejoins

Company A, led by Lt. Col. Carroll and his staff, moved several miles through the inky darkness until halted before contact with a Blue roadblock. Not certain of the strength of Blue Forces in this location, Col. Carroll decided to move into the fields and woods to spend the rest of the night to allow the men a chance to rest and regroup. Radio contact was made with Co. B, who headed towards the east, and with Capt. Benjamin Owen, Company C commander, whose company had been split up and was with the 1st Brigade Commanding Officer, Col. Edgar R. Poole.
