Elements of five battalions from Support Command will participate in the parade in the morning, after which everyone is invited to the Support Command Headquarters area for free refreshments in Headquarters Company Day Room, and to see the various displays set up by the separate battalions. The displays will include vehicles, field showers, fuel resupply points, C-rations prepared for air-drop, field and surgical hospitals, ambulances, and weapons. The Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course located in the Support Command area will be open as announced by Maj. Herbert L. Bergen, commander of the School.

The separate battalions along with Support Command Headquarters will have their offices and buildings open for the public, and they encourage visits from everyone. The different shops of the headquarters will be explained so that the public will be able to better understand the operation of a military unit under the ROAD concept.

The battalions, consisting of the 2nd Medical Battalion, 702nd Maintenance Battalion, and the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, are responsible for the outstanding displays to be presented to the general public on Organization Day at Support Command Headquarters. The units will have their displays open after the parade until 4 p.m.

There will be a 24-inch trophy given to Company B, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion for having the best drilled platoon in Support Command. The platoon was under the direction of SFC Deoye McMahan, whose black - helmeted, white-gloved platoon, breezed through selected movements.

The other units who competed in the drill contest were: 2nd Medical Battalion under the direction of SSgt. Dale H. Berg and 702nd Maintenance Battalion under the direction of Sgt. David J. Taylor.

One platoon representing each battalion went before a staff of judges composed from the staff sections of Support Command Headquarters. Each platoon leader was required to form their platoons, prepare them for inspection, give them the Manual of Arms, form them in a column of twos from a column of fours and reform a column of fours from a halt, and execute column and flanking movements.

Support Command Mess Halls will have family style dinners for personnel and their guests, with turkey.

Fourteen 'Indianheads' Have Birthday Tomorrow

In fact, there are few areas of Army life that the "big digit" doesn't stretch out to touch.

Tomorrow on Wetherby Field, the "numbers" game reaches a torrid pace as the "Indianhead" Division jumps from 45 to 46 years old, and, fittingly, 14 division troopers will keep in step with birthdays of their own.

These men are set - up in ideal circumstances for a birthday with a ready-made celebration of impressive scope. At the top of the list, by rank, is a 39-year old major with 20 years of active duty, Maj. Jerome J. Repsber, executive officer of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

At the other end of the military spectrum, a 20-year old private first class, Kent J. DuVall of headquarters Co., 3rd Brigade, guards the rear gate.

MSgt. Edward H. Phillips, G-3 section is another celebrant. Like MSgt. George L. Tyler, who also scores another year with time's invisible chalk, Sgt. Phillips joined the 2nd Division at Fort Benning in 1958 when the 10th Division was redesignated the 2nd.

Sgt. Phillips is the assistant to the chief of operations' sergeant major and a veteran of nine Army schools. He and his wife, Mary, and four sons live at 6123 Buena Vista Rd., Columbus.

Sgt. Phillips, at 33, is a year older than Sgt. Tyler, the noncommissioned officer in charge of the "Second to None's" rugged Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course and a member of 3rd Brigade.

Master Sergeant number three to age one year tomorrow saw Europe with the 2nd Division in 1945 and Korea

Past Year Has Brought Various Individual Awards

officers and soldiers of the 2nd Infantry Division have, to a surprising number this past year, garbed themselves in something more tangible than the will to win, the spirits of a fighter and the discipline of a highly-trained infantryman.

In addition, a number of division troopers have added medals to their tunic fronts, from the coveted Bronze Star Medal and Combat Infantryman's Badge, two awards rarely seen in peacetime, to the Army Commendation Medal and on down to a host of lesser, but prized, awards.

In between have been scattered some oddities, for an infantry division, such as the Air Medal pinned on Capt. Henry J. O'Connor of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry who distinguished himself in numerous aerial sorties over the troubled face of South Vietnam. The medal was Capt. O'Connor's second award, an Oak Leaf Cluster.

The actual number, variety and names of winners of all division tribute could not possibly be listed. Citations range from letters of appreciation and commendation through the best mess plaques and best-maintained vehicles to acknowledgment of safety, gunnery and skill and daring on Exercise Swift Strike III.

The initial Bronze Star Medal given this year, in June, went to Capt. Robert M. Wiggins of the 122nd Signal Battalion. For commanding the unit which strung the first large-scale network of communications across South Vietnam, often "subjected to hostile fire," Capt. Wiggins was honored with presentation ceremonies in the conference room at Division Headquarters.

Later, another veteran of Vietnam stood at attention on Knight Field on a broiling, Georgia Saturday morning, his birthday, and received a Combat Infantryman's Badge in front of massed artillery battalions. The heat seemed to bother the officer not at all. He is Capt. David Mead, formerly executive officer of the 38th Artillery, more formerly, an intelligence team chief in shaky Quang Ngai province and intelligence advisor to the Republic of Vietnam's 2nd Infantry Division.

In September, both a Bronze Star Medal and a Combat Infantryman's Badge were presented to the same man.

During Capt. Clyde T. Sheffield's year in Vietnam, from February 1962 to February 1963, the captain peeled off "15 or 17" operations as an advisor to the 41st Civil Guard Battalion in Long Khanh province against a hostile enemy.

The number of Army Commendation Medals given does not detract from the value of the medal. It indicates, instead, a large number of division soldiers who gave an extra measure of duty and were recognized.

Listed below are the names, units and ranks of the awardees as they appeared at time of presentation. The Army Commendation Medal was pinned on two lieutenant colonels: Lt. Col. William E. Conger, of the now deactivated 1st Infantry; Lt. Col. William H. Cox, 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry.

One major received the green and white ribbon. He is Maj. John J. Petorock, 122nd Signal Battalion.

Six captains were honored: Capt. Edmund Rondeau, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; Chap. (Capt.) Duie Jernigan, 1st Brigade; Capt. William C. Cosgrove, Adjutant General Section; Captain Raymond D. Wentz, G-2; Capt. Walter R. Coker, G-3; Capt. James W. Phillips, G-3.

The lieutenants winning the ACM were three: Lt. James R. Howard, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; Lt. Floyd W. Blunk, 87th Infantry; Lt. Robert Clarke, 9th Infantry.

Two sergeants major led the enlisted men in awards. They were Sgt. Maj. Wilson R. Mouser who was decorated as he retired from active duty with the 1st Infantry, and Sgt. Maj. William J. Conway, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry.

The remainder of the enlisted winners, a considerable number, were: 1st Sgt. James A. Scott, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry; 1st Sgt. Floyd M. Griffis, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry; 1st Sgt. Terry M. Rimes, 2nd Engineer Battalion; 1st Sgt. James E. Dyer, 2nd Medical Battalion; MSgt. James W. Liggett, 7th Infantry; MSgt. Floyd H. Bowman, 2nd Engineer Battalion; MSgt. Horace W. Van Valkenburgh, 38 Artillery.

Warrant officers were not left off the list. They were represented by two of their number: CWO Ralph J. Cook, 2nd Administration Co.; CWO Arthur Kinson, 2nd Aviation Battalion.

For some of these men, the award was an Oak Leaf Cluster—that is, they had already received an Army Commendation Medal before and were getting it again for the second, or third or more, time.

An Enviable Record

THE MEN OF THE '2ND'

All members of my command and staff join me in extending congratulations and sincere good wishes to you, your officers and men on the occasion of the 46th anniversary of the organization of the 2d Infantry Division, on 26 October 1963.

From its very beginning at Bourmot Haute-Marne, France, in October 1917, the 2d Infantry Division was in the thick of fighting at Chateau-Thierry and Belleau Woods in World War I, at Omaha Beach and the Remagen Bridge during World War II, and at Chipyong and Heartbreak Ridge in Korea. It played a courageous part in overcoming the enemy during these and many other engagements.

It is gratifying to know that the Indianhead Division has not rested on this enviable record of victory in time of war, but has gone on to become an outstanding member of our national defense team in time of peace.

Korean Bowl Is Memorial

It is the "Korean Bowl" memorial to men who have died in battle under the banner of the 23rd Infantry Regiment in every American war since 1812.

The bowl was made of combat infantry badges earned by men of the 23rd Infantry in the first 18 months of fighting in Korea. Records show that 5,610 of the badges were melted down for the bowl, each of them earned by an Infantryman for enduring sustained ground combat.

The bowl was manufactured in April 1952, by silversmiths of Mikimoto, Inc., in Tokyo, Japan. It took 30 silversmiths over four months to complete the bowl, which holds 60 gallons and weighs 188.6 pounds. Representatives of silver manufacturers in the United States have claimed that it is the largest sterling silver vessel in the world. They say it would cost $100,000 to replace the "Korean Bowl."

Hardest Working Division Says Secretary of Defense

Last summer Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, accompanied by Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance, came to Fort Benning to pay a visit to the 2nd Infantry Division. After completing a tour of the "Second to None's" facilities and reviewing its recent accomplishments, Mr. McNamara remarked, "The 2nd Infantry Division has been called on for more activity in the last year than any other division in the Army and was the first to be organized on a ROAD basis. Its performance has more than met our objectives and plans."

Congratulations,

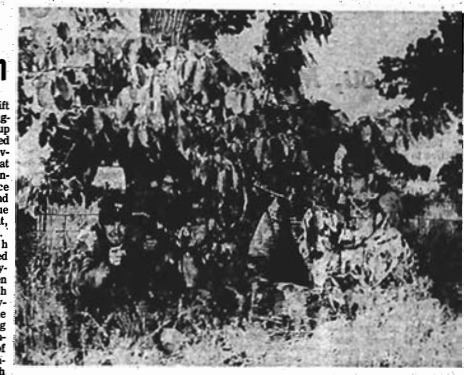
'Sneaky' Was the Word for Them

That Swift Strike Bunch



THAT SNEAKY BUNCH . . . If you look closely you can see them. Part of the team that caused the Airborne enemy during the recent Swift Strike III maneuvers to label the division "That Sneaky Bunch From Fort Benning."

During Joint Exercise Swift Strike III, staged last August in the Carolinas, a group of 972 officers and enlisted men of the 2nd Infantry Division were tagged as "that sneaky bunch from Fort Benning" by opposing Air Force officers for their daring and brilliant capture of the Blue Forces' main supply point, Donaldson Air Force Base.

The operation began with Terry's Task Force—named for Lt. Col. Dudly Terry-penetrating to within ten miles of Donaldson, which was located deep in enemy-held territory. Here the spearhead force, consisting of insurgent fighters reinforced by one company of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry and a battery of the 38th Artillery, gave the "go" sign for a surprise air assault on the base by an additional 300 members of the 38th Infantry.

Three hours after the "green light" was given, the air assault was completed and Donaldson's main runway was seized. Forty-five minutes later Terry's force arrived on the scene and captured the control tower.

This surprise attack imprisoned the 101st Airborne Division's entire 327th Battle Group which was stationed there.

Shortly afterwards airborne units of the Blue Forces arrived at the scene to carry out a counterattack and the ensuing developments became so snarled that umpires called for a four-hour administrative break in the mock battle.

During the break Col. Edgar R. Poole, then commanding the "Second to None's" 1st Brigade, arrived at Donaldson with two rifle companies and a small staff to take command of the situation.

Immediately after the break ended the entire 327th Battle Group, which had been captured earlier, made an all-out attack on the base and although devastated by "Indianhead" artillery was credited with victory.

This decision forced Col. Poole's troops to withdraw from the outskirts of the landing field. Meanwhile the Blue Forces were arriving by air and Col. Terry's men, who were now operating the control tower, directed the planes to a certain point on the runway. Here the 38th Infantry's chief scout, Sgt. Clifton Smith, was eliminating them with the aid of a 3.5 inch rocket launcher.

After repelling and destroying more than 2,600 enemy troops with his comparably small force, Col. Poole was ordered to pull out to the Southeast.

After successfully avoiding contact with large elements of Blue Force troops, he arranged by radio for helicopters to transport his men to their new destination — which just happened to be a new battle area containing over 1,000 enemy paratroopers not far from 2nd Division headquarters.

After Joint Exercise Swift Strike III was completed, Col. Poole took time out to convey a "well done" to every member of "that sneaky bunch from Fort Benning" who had given such an excellent account of themselves during the now famous battle of Donaldson Air Force Base.

Unit Birth

The 2nd Medical Battalion was first organized in September, 1919 at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., as a member of the 2nd Infantry Division.

2nd Division Patch Has Unique History

Members of the 2nd Infantry Division have been wearers of the famed "Indianhead" patch in three wars. The insignia had its origin during World War I as the identifying mark on the vehicles of division supply trains.

The commanding officer of the division trains held a contest in March, 1918 to select a distinctive identifying symbol for use upon the vehicles after he had seen vehicles of adjacent French units decorated in this manner. Through his adjutant he sent out a memorandum authorizing prizes for the best suggestion. The winning insignia, which gained the final approval of division headquarters for use upon supply vehicles in April, 1917, was the striking red and blue Indianhead superimposed upon a white star. The head covered the angles of the star and exposed only the points.

In October, 1918 the commanding general of the American Expeditionary Forces requested units to furnish insignia for approval. Maj. Gen. LeJeune of the U.S. Marine Corps, in reply to the request, submitted a red and blue Indianhead upon a white star, only this time the head was contained within the reentrant angles of the star, and the whole design was set within a circle three and one-half inches in diameter. Since the Indianhead in this representation was somewhat crudely constructed, the St. Gaudens Indian, depicted on five dollar gold pieces, was substituted.

On November 14, 1918 an order was published by Headquarters, 2nd Division announcing that the "Indianhead" insignia had been made official.

Marine Guests to Witness Division Organization Day

The commanding officer and sergeant major of the 6th Marine Regiment, 2nd Marine Division, Camp LeJeune, N.C., will be special guests at the Organization Day ceremonies.

The two, Col. Glenn R. Long and Sgt. Maj. Nicholas D. Parice, represent the several Marine units, including the 6th Marine Regiment, which were part of the 2nd Infantry Division during World War I. The division was, in fact, commanded by a Marine Corps general officer, Maj. Gen. John A. LeJeune, during the early days of World War I. It was Gen. LeJeune who selected the star and Indianhead as the official division insignia.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

'No More Battles for You, My Sons'

The many good 2nd Division soldiers who have died will never be able to speak again. For they are gone. But if they could relay a message to those still living, perhaps it would sound like this:

"Life was good and its memories sweet. But that was yesteryear. All that remains of our soldier lives is a slab of stone, a cross of wood, or perhaps, a fond recollection.

"Where many of us were last seen the ocean's waves caress, or the light spring rains and winter snows fall. Grass grows and flowers bloom where once we trod, and children play on what was once our battlefields.

"To us, the smell of powder, the sound of shot, or a scream of pain has long since faded from reality. The long, muddy marches, bayonet's gleam or roaring trucks are now divorced from our senses. No such memories linger here; no such thoughts prevail. We have found the final healer of such remembrances.

"We are dead and buried, you say! Killed by another human and mournfully laid to rest. How foolish are such beliefs. We are gone, yes; forgotten, perhaps; but infinitely dead—no!

"All who fell at such places as Chateau Thierry, Belleau Woods, Normandy, Chipyong, or wherever our cause was fought, are here. By the thousands in number, with deadly wounds healed, we exist in a world so far removed from that which we had known it is beyond description. We live side by side with those who were even once our enemies, for there is no distinction here.

"It is noted you keep a roster of us, and often a name or two is mentioned in reverence. We feel stately and proud t'was not in vain our tombstones mark the earth.

"And, so proud we are of you — ever conscious of your beliefs, strong and protective to your land. No matter how the uniform and weapons have changed, there still dwells the man; the soldier. So much like us in every possible way that it chills the spine with pride.

"We have watched your progress; your mistakes, and never once felt shame or pity. Though the struggles will be long and battles hard, we view success in your future.

"And when such perfection of total peace does come, remember us then. For we helped you make it so. Whether we wore leggings, OD's, or your modern Army dress, we walked the same earth, faced enemies for the same purpose and goals, and died like soldiers.

"We follow you on every trek and feel your sweat from the heavy packs. Our shoulders sting from the recoil of your rifles and the wetness of your spilled blood moistens our skins.

"In watching we recall our laughter, and our tears. The hot days, the long nights, the inspections, the parades, the blisters, the mosquitos, the fear, the loneliness, the friends — we remember.

"And, when our final call came, we answered. Though our earthly remains laid fast, sifting through our shroud of earth we began our last great march. Upward we journeyed.

"When finally we arrived at the last barricade to ever face us again, the golden entrance shone softly on our faces. And a voice so gentle it could bounce from a feather, asked: 'Who stands before my door, so tall, so straight, so proud?'

"And humbly, yet staunchly, our answer came as one. 'An American soldier reporting, sir.'

"Without a sound the enormous bright gate swung open, and as we passed through, our greatest of commanders' voice spoke again. 'Enter. You are welcome here. No more battles for you, my sons.'"

Huge Birthday Cake Built

By Bob de Camara

A three-tiered birthday cake combining 80 lbs. of hard wheat flour, 40 lbs. of soft wheat flour, 36 lbs. of shortening, 50 lbs. of granulated sugar, 72 lbs. of powdered sugar, 4 lbs. of baking powder, 16 ozs. of vanilla extract and 180 eggs is the confectioner's dream to be doled out at the 2nd Infantry Division's birthday party tomorrow on Wetherby Field.

The cake is largely the result of one master baker's prowess, SFC Earl E. Jaeger, the mess steward at Company A, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry. In overall charge of the vast baking project is the division food services officer, Mr. Earl Butterfield.

The first cook of Headquarters Company, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion will help out with the cream icing lettering — which is considerable. It is Sp5 Robert Rideout's task to write with frozen blue icing on the sides of the lofty pastry all the combat arms and support branches of the "Indianhead" Division.

The bottom tier measures 30 by 24 by 6 inches; the second tier, 24 by 20 by 5 inches; the top tier, 14 by 12 by 4 inches. Supporting the towering structure will be cardboard frosted over with icing and pile-driven with hardwood dowels.

On top of the third tier, raised for everyone to see, will ride the division's famous "Indianhead" patch carried to prominence in three wars since 1917. It will be done in the patch's colors of red, black, white and blue.

The general motif of the cake is white frosting lettered in blue, the corners and edges hued a delicate golden yellow, flowered with red rosettes.

At the conclusion of the formal ceremonies on the parade field, the commanding general of the 2nd Division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, will stylishly slice the cake in open view with a full-length saber. The cake will then be carried to a back tent for service to distinguished military and local civilian guests.

On the field near the tank display and behind the spectator stands, iced tea, coffee, cake and cookies will be available for the public. These simple buffets will be hosted by soldiers of the three brigades and Division Artillery.

The second tier announces "World War I", "World War II", and "Korea" in bold blue letters.

Five layers of white cake make up the cake's base. Sandwiched in the center are four layers of white cake. The top tier has three layers.

Association President To Be Guest

BILL CREECH: ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT

A combat veteran of the "Indianhead" Division who is now president of the 2nd Division Association will be one of the distinguished civilian guests present tomorrow to help celebrate the "Second to None's" 46th Anniversary.

A "Long Tall Texan," Bill Creech joined the 2nd Infantry Division in 1939 as a "buck" private and was discharged six years later as a lieutenant after participating in five major campaigns in the European Theater of Operations.

Mr. Creech was elected president during the 1963 reunion staged last August in San Antonio, Tex. Prior to his election he held the post of vice-president for four consecutive years. Also present this weekend is Mr. Haslen Sellers, National Secretary of the Association.

3rd Brigade

During World War I, the 3rd Brigade was organized from existing Army elements and assigned to the 2nd Division. On August 11, 1917 the 1st Provisional Brigade was organized at Syracuse, N. Y., and a month later was redesignated as Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Infantry Brigade.

The name of the brigade changed in 1925 when it was redesignated 3rd Brigade

The 9th became part of the 2nd Division upon the division's birth in France in 1917 and stayed with it until 1957 when the 2nd Division was deactivated and the 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry remained in Alaska. In October 1958 the "Indianhead" Division was relocated at Fort Benning with the 2nd Battle Group, 9th Infantry an integral part.

2ND BATTALION
Lt Col W. Coxe/Sgt Maj Beach

23rd Infantry

The 23rd Infantry was organized July 8, 1861 as the 1st Battalion, 14th Infantry and fought in battles during the Civil War. In 1862 it was renumbered the 2nd Battalion, 14th Infantry.

After the Civil War it was redesignated the 23rd Infantry Regiment and took part In the Indian Wars. Element of the battalion journeyed to Alaska in 1867 to accept the new territory from Russia. Following its part in the Spanish-American War it became the first American unit to circumnavigate the globe.

The 23rd Infantry Regiment joined the 2nd Infantry Division in September, 1917.

Division Arty

The 2nd Infantry Division Artillery was organized as Headquarters, 2nd Field Artillery Brigade on September 21, 1917 and completed its organization on January 1, 1918 at LeValdehon, France.

Division Artillery earned five campaign streamers during World War I. Its decorations include two streamers and the Fourragere; all in the colors of the French Croix de Guerre.

The unit was disbanded on October 1, 1939 and reconstituted as Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 2nd Division Artillery at Fort Sam Houston on October 1, 1940. The unit participated in all the major campaigns of the division and was awarded the Belgian Fourragere, cited in the Order of the Day of the Belgian Army for action at Elsenborn Crest and in the Ardennes and earned five campaign streamers.

38th Infantry

The modern history of the 38th Infantry dates back to 1917 when it was reorganized as a regiment in Syracuse, N. Y., and was assigned to the 3rd Division bound for France and World War I.

The 38th earned the designation "Rock of the Marne" when it met and repulsed nine German regiments in the Marne River area. General John J. Pershing called the action "one of the most brilliant pages in our military annals." The 38th earned six campaign streamers.

In 1939, after 22 years of active duty with the 3rd Division, it was assigned to the 2nd Division. The 38th landed on Omaha Beach, Normandy, on D-Day plus 1.

72nd Armor

72nd Armor was organized as the 72nd Tank Battalion on January 14, 1943 as part of the 5th Armored Regiment.

Six months later at Camp Chaffee, Ark., the 16th Armored Division was activated with the 72nd becoming the 16th's 1st Battalion. On September 3, 1943 the 1st Battalion was relieved from assignment to the 16th Division and redesignated as the 717th Tank Battalion, it became the 717th Heavy Tank Battalion on March 3, 1948.

12th Artillery

The 12th Artillery Regiment (Battery A) was organized as a member of the 2nd Infantry Division on June 7, 1917. During World War I the unit was cited twice in the battle orders of the French Army for outstanding conduct and bravery in the face of the enemy. Following the cessation of hostilities it assumed the chores of occupation duty in Boblenz, Germany.

After 23 years of duty at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., the 12th Artillery celebrated its 27th birthday by taking part in the Normandy Invasion in 1944. During World War II the unit participated in five major campaigns: Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes - Alsace and Central Europe, and was twice cited by the Belgian Army for gallant actions.

15th Artillery

The 15th Artillery was organized June 1, 1917 at the State Fair Grounds in Syracuse, N. Y. from a cadre of the 4th Field Artillery and was assigned to the Second Infantry Division on September 1 of that year.

During World War I it supported units of the division and returned to the United States on August 16, 1919 after serving eight months of occupation duty in Germany.

On October 19, 1940 the regiment was reorganized into three light battalions, the 15th, 87th, and 38th with all records, standards, and decorations of the regiment remaining with the 15th Artillery Battalion.

The 17th Field Artillery Battalion was originally organized as the 17th Field Artillery Regiment on June 6, 1917 at Camp Robinson, Sparta, Wis., from a cadre of the 8th Field Artillery Regiment.

The battalion was assigned to the 2nd Division during World War I, serving in France where it fought in six campaigns and received from the French government the Croix de Guerre with Two Palms and the Fourragere.

Demobilized in 1919 and reconstituted in the Regular Army in 1933, the unit was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. seven years later.

The designation of the 38th Artillery evolved from Battery B, 38th Field Artillery in 1940, to Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 5th Howitzer, 38th Artillery in 1960, to its present designation as a result of the ROAD concept in 1963.

37th Artillery

The section became a provisional company with the 2nd Division in 1954 at Fort Lewis, Wash., and Alaska. It was deactivated in 1957.

The 2nd Aviation Company was reactivated at Fort Benning in 1958. In 1959-60, it formed a provisional battalion and in June, 1961, a STRAC Air Cavalry Troop.

Division Highlights of the Past Year

This year the Strategic Army Corps' 2nd Infantry Division has answered call after call to exercise its combat-ready might both in regular and special training missions and in quick reaction to national and international crisis.

In October, 1962 in response to a presidential order, men of the 2nd Infantry Division moved to Memphis, Tenn., committed to the integration crisis in Oxford, Miss. Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commander of the "Indianhead" Division, became field commander of troops committed to this mission. The main element of division soldiers involved came from the 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry.

In the same month, the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry became the first division unit to participate in the Army's new unit rotation system called Rotaplan. This plan was designed to take a major division unit by jet aircraft from the continental United States to Germany and special training attached to a Europe-based division. Once there the battle group became qualified to fight alongside units defending the freedoms of Western Europe. The 38th's temporary overseas tour was to last for six months under the condition that dependents would remain in the U. S. A special "Rota-Wives" Service Center was established at Fort Benning by the 2nd Infantry Division, designed to help wives and families of Rotaplan soldiers in emergencies of every description. This center became the first of its kind ever established in the U. S. Army and existed as a symbol of the division's promise to "take care of its own."

Immediately upon departure of the 38th Infantry, the division's 23rd Infantry began training for Rotaplan duty scheduled in April.

As a direct result of the U. S. military buildup during the Cuban Crisis, the 2nd Division's 69th Armor left for Fort Stewart, Ga., in November for special training and possible commitment. The tank battalion returned in early December to Fort Benning.

In January, 1963 the Department of Army announced the 2nd Infantry Division would be the first old line division to reshape its basic structure under the Army's new Reorganization Objectives, Army Division (ROAD) concept. This complete revamping hit every element in the Second, making it into the most heavily - gunned and most maneuverable division in U. S. history.

To make way for reorganization under ROAD the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry; the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry; the 4th Battle Group, 7th Infantry; and the 27th Artillery Battalion were removed from division ranks. The 13th Transportation Battalion was combined with the 2nd Quartermaster Company to form the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion. The 69th Armor was replaced by the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 72nd Armor, the latter stationed permanently at Fort Stewart, Ga. The 3rd Reconnaissance Squadron, 7th Cavalry became known as the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry. The division's aviation element increased from a company into the 2nd Aviation Battalion. Three brigade headquarters units were established as nuclei for the Second's infantry force.

Infantry battle groups split into battalions, forming two battalions of the 9th, 23rd, 38th and 87th Infantries. The 702nd Ordnance Battalion became the 702nd Maintenance Battalion. What was once called the 2nd Division Trains was redesignated 2nd Division Support Command.

A special Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course was planned and constructed at Fort Benning in February, 1963, designed to teach small infantry units the tactics of action and reaction when confronted with guerrilla type warfare. The course was set up in answer to a Continental Army Command directive on counter - insurgency training. Tough and realistic training in a setting that duplicated in many ways conditions in southeast Asia placed emphasis on the survival of the individual soldier.

In April, 1963 the 38th Infantry returned from duty in Baumholder, Germany, where it had been attached to the 8th Infantry (Pathfinder) Division under Rotaplan. In its place the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry moved to Mannheim, Germany for three months overseas service and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry took on six months duty in Baumholder.

When a second integration crisis flared up in Birmingham, Ala. in May, elements of the 2nd Division went on alert and traveled to Fort McClellan, Ala., there to await possible involvement in that city.

In June, with reorganization under ROAD completed, the highly mobile 2nd Infantry Division soldiers began training for Exercise Swift Strike III, the largest joint-service maneuver ever staged in the U. S. in peacetime. Division forces joined the 100,000 - man exercise in late July in North and South Carolina. Friends and families of division soldiers read daily about the mammoth exercise and the winning mobility that put the Second on top in every phase of exercise operations. The "Indianhead" Division concentrated on small unit operations and extreme mobility to out-maneuver and surround airborne soldiers of the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions in approximately 15 days of simulated combat.

Arriving back at Fort Benning in late August, the division was told the Army would discontinue the Rotaplan mission. Prior to Swift Strike III, the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry had crossed the Atlantic to replace the 1st Battalion at Mannheim. With the cancellation of the entire plan, 2nd Division units stationed in Germany received the designation and colors of the 87th Infantry. The 9th and 23rd Infantry unit designations and colors returned to the U.S. to remain with the 2nd Division.

In late August 5,000 soldiers began operations for amphibious training in Little Creek, Va., sponsored by the Naval Amphibious Training School. In mid-September 2,000 men left for Virginia and training that climaxed September 27 with an amphibious landing at Camp Pendleton Marine Base. The second group took their place on the same date for a two-week course, landing on the beaches. The division's 2nd Brigade was designated the control unit for this operation. Major units participating included the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry; the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry; both the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 72nd Armor; the 2nd Engineer Battalion; 38th Artillery and the 15th Artillery.

Today the 2nd Infantry Division looks forward to another full year of continued challenges in training and battle exercises as it lives up to the reputation it has upheld for 46 years of war and peace—the spirit that made it truly "Second to None."

Gen. Wheeler

An Illustrious Past

OFFICERS AND MEN

On behalf of the men and women of the United States Army, I extend congratulations and best wishes to the officers and men of the 2d Infantry Division on the occasion of its forty-sixth anniversary.

Born of war, the "Second to None" Division emerged from the battlefields of Europe with more combat decorations than any other American division in World War I. Its record of achievement was carried through World War II from the beaches of Normandy to Czechoslovakia. In Korea, the Indianhead Division again demonstrated its exceptional combat ability as it broke through the Pusan perimeter and drove to within 50 miles of the Manchurian border, exacting a heavy toll from the enemy. Today, as a member of the Strategic Army Corps, the division contributes to our war-deterrent role and to the strength and readiness that are so essential to the security of our Nation.

It is a pleasure to join with other soldiers of the United States Army in saluting your proud history and in expressing confidence that the 2d Infantry Division's future will be marked with the same success that has distinguished its illustrious past.

EARLE G. WHEELER
General, United States Army
Chief of Staff

BRAGG'S TAILBACK MOVES FOR GAIN AGAINST DOUGHBOYS
Bill Pratt (No. 31) Crosses Scrimmage Before Doughboy Carlton Waskey Can Make The Stop (Photo by MSgt. W. G. Smith)

Injury Riddled Doughboys Take on Lackland AFB

Injury-riddled Fort Benning, shot from the saddle of a 20-game win streak last weekend, will be out to ride herd on the Warhawks from Lackland Air Force Base this afternoon on the Texan's field.

With both "White" and "Blue" team fullbacks Ron Quillen and Warren Macaroni on the ailing list, a chance looms that head coach Oren DeHaven may switch halfback Bobby Towns to the fullback slot this week.

Quillen, a workhorse for the Doughboys this season with 41 carries in five contests for an average of 5.8 yards per carry, has teamed with Macaroni, who has lugged the pigskin 10 times for a 2.4 average, to give Fort Benning plenty of punch at fullback.

Cranford Out

The Doughboys also lost the services of center Luther Cranford recently when the 6-foot, 2-inch, 195 - pounder suffered a broken arm.

Injured in the Doughboy's 14-7 upset loss to Fort Bragg last Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium also were stalwart guard Pat Dye and defensive specialist Raymond Eddy. Both should be ready to go this Friday.

Quarterback Deere

Lackland, which operates out of the winged-T formation, similar to that of Fort Eustis, Va., builds their offensive around pint - sized quarterback Monte Deere, a 5-foot, 10-inch, 165-pound former University of Oklahoma star.

The Warhawks round out their backfield with Clarence Freney, a 5-foot, 9-inch, 180-pound halfback from Arizona State; Don Mollik, a 6-foot, 2 inch, 185 - pound wingback from East Carolina College and fullback Newton Bowers, a 6-foot, 2-inch, 218 - pounder from Texas Southern University.

Hill to Start

The tackle position will be manned by Ben Gallagher, a 6-foot, 2-inch, 225 - pounder from North Carolina and Frank Jones at 6-feet, 3-inches and 220 pounds from Georgia Tech.

Guards slated for starting roles are Phillip Parrish at 5-foot, 10-inches and 225 pounds from Tennessee State University and Hayzel Robinson, a 5-foot, 10-inch, 222 - pounder from Shaw University in Raleigh, N. C. Center will be manned by Durward Smith, a 6-foot, 190 - pound athlete with service football experience.

Host Of Backs

Fort Benning will turn its host of backs loose on the Warhawks in an effort to get back on the winning trail.

Expected to see plenty of action for the Doughboys are halfbacks Brewster Hobby, Billy Williamson, Raymond Eddy and Ken Bolin, and quarterbacks Dave Sarette, Marvin Tibbetts and Dewayne Jeter.

Bolin has been the Doughboys big money man this year, carrying the ball 26 times for 306 yards, for a sparkling average of 11.8 yards per carry. Oddly enough the 170 - pounder has not crossed the goal line once.

Hobby Behind Bolin

Behind Bolin in the statistics department are Hobby, with 155 yards on 19 carries for an 8.1 per carry average, and Williamson, with 207 yards on 33 trips through the line for a 6.3 average. Williamson, a 160 - pounder has electrified Fort Benning fans with his punt returns all season. He returned four in the Bragg game for a total of 118 yards.

Eddy, a 5-foot, 11 - inch, 195-pounder, has been an outstanding back on defense for the Doughboys in addition to picking up 26 yards on two trips with the football.

1st Battalion's 'D' Company Leads League

With the first two weeks of the 1963 Infantry Center Troop Command basketball league action gone to the record books, Company 'D' of the 1st Battalion looms as the only unbeaten team with a 3-0 mark.

Breathing down the backs of the Company D contingent are Co. C, 577th Engineers with a 4-1 record and Co. C, 1st Battalion; 98th Ordnance Co., and Headquarters Co., 577th, all with identical 3-1 standings.

Surging Co. C, 1st Battalion, dropped an opening encounter to Co. D and since has really caught fire in rolling to three straight, including a 54-25 bombing of Headquarters Co., 577th.

Headquarters Co., CTC, holds down third place with only a 13-point loss to Co. C, 1st Battalion, blotting an otherwise perfect 2-1 mark while the Military Police Co., and 534th Signal are tied for the fourth spot at 1-3.

The fifth place in the league standings is occupied by the 320th Ordnance Co., with an 0-2 mark while sixth and seventh respectively are held by Co. B, 1st Battalion, with an 0-3 mark and Co. D, 577th, at 0-4.

UNLIMITED SUBSTITUTION

Sixty-seven per cent of 123 major college football coaches polled say they prefer unlimited substitution.

TIC Pugilism Card Slates Ten Matches

Boxing will step into the Fort Benning sports picture tonight at 7:30 when some 20 fighters are scheduled to square off in ten three-round bouts at Briant Wells Field House.

The "Smokers" are set to take place at the field house every other Friday night between individual fighters with a post all-star team to be selected either in late November or early December.

SFC Larry Jones a member of The Infantry Center Special Services Section and a referee for the bouts, said that "the boxers who are picked as the tops on post will represent Fort Benning in the Third U. S. Army Boxing Tournament at a site to be named at a later date."

Some of the more noted fighters now at Fort Benning include Jimmy Scates, 1960 All - Army and Interservice Welterweight Champion; Leon Hall, 1949 All - Army Middleweight title holder; Howard Moore, Light - Middleweight All-Army Champ in 1955; Eddie Smith, 1960 All - Army Featherweight champion; Luther Floyd, All-USAREUR Light - Heavyweight champ in 1960, and Amos Crumbly, a tough light-heavyweight from the 197th Infantry Brigade.

At present the 197th Infantry Brigade is the only major unit on the post with an organized boxing team. Other fighters from various units work out nightly at the Old Post Gymnasium in an effort to ready themselves for the Smokers.

Paul Drayton Makes Plans For Olympics

FORT DIX, N.J. (ANF)—Private Paul Drayton is one of the United States Olympic hopefuls who will be competing in Tokyo in 1964. He has already shown that he has ability to win a gold medal in his specialty—the 220 yard dash.

Drayton ran for Villanova University and has twice competed against the Soviet Union in Moscow. This summer Drayton was a member of the U.S. Track Team which competed against teams of Russia, Poland and West Germany.

Private Drayton's comment on the successful trip was simply: "We beat everybody that we faced, but we could have beaten the Russians a lot more strongly than we did."

Luckless Doughboy Eleven Edged By Dragons, 14-7

By Dave Braun

The Fort Bragg, N.C., "Dragons" turned two Fort Benning first half aerials into touchdowns last Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium and then hung on in grabbing a 14-7 victory over the previously unbeaten Doughboys.

Outrushed by Fort Benning by 65 yards on the ground and unable to connect on but two passes, the fired - up Dragons took advantage of four Doughboy pass interceptions and three fumbles.

The Fayetteville, N. C., team jerked the throttle on a versatile Fort Benning offense and sent the local squad to their first loss since Pensacola, Fla., turned the trick in 1961, 12-6.

First Quarter

Late in the first quarter Benning took over on downs on their own 14. After five slashes at the Bragg defensive wall, "Blue" team quarterback Dave Sarette fired a pass in the right flat which slotback Charley Thomas intercepted on the Doughboy 48, and raced all the way into the end zone.

Second Period

In the second period, "White" team signal caller Marvin Tibbetts intercepted a Fort Bragg pass on the Benning 24, returning it to his own 32.

Following a five - yard penalty and two quick bursts at the line by Ron Quillen, Tibbetts, on a rollout, saw his pass fall into the waiting arms of Cary Rivers on the Doughboy 35.

The 6'0", 200-lb. tailback tucked the ball away and raced down the sidelines into paydirt with 11:08 remaining in the first half.

Midway in the second stanza Bragg failed to gain and was forced to punt from their own 21. Billy Williamson, Fort Benning's 160 - pound scatback, took a Freddie Durham punt on his own 45 and scampered along the sidelines to the Dragon three - yard stripe.

Quillen Scores

Two plays later, warhorse Ron Quillen, who carried the pigskin 15 times in the contest, cracked in for the score. DeWayne Jeter split the uprights with his extra point attempt and it was 14-7 at the half.

The second half was a defensive battle, the Doughboys wasting a couple of scoring opportunities.

In the third quarter Benning drove from their own 42 to the Bragg 19 only to see a Jeter field goal attempt blocked. Later in the same period Williamson returned a Dragon punt 46 yards to the airborners 20-yard line.

Bolin Fumbles

Quillen got three yards through the line and Ken Bolin, on a slant, was hit and fumbled. However, an alert Wayne Peters pounced on the loose ball on the Dragon nine for Fort Benning.

Raymond Eddy got a yard, but a defensive charge on second down spilled Dave Sarette back on the 18. Jeter's second field goal attempt fell short and Bragg took possession.

The Doughboys, paced by some razzle - dazzle running by Williamson and Quillen, moved to the Dragon 18 late in the final period.

After four plays the Doughboys wound up back on the Bragg 24 where the Dragons took over possession first and ten. This marked the final Fort Benning scoring threat.

Rivers For 45

On the North Carolina team's first play from scrimmage Rivers shot around right end and sped all the way to the Benning 31. Fort Bragg managed to reach the Doughboy 24 before relinquishing the ball on downs with only seconds left.

In a desperation effort Sarette fired the long-bomb on the final play only to have Al Rushatz pick it off on the Doughboy 32.

Between the Sidelines

By Ted Williamson

Gridiron heroes were everywhere; upsets and surprises continued to haunt unsuspecting coaches and Texas was still sitting on top of the football world at the close of last Saturdays action. Records fell like frost-bitten hickory nuts as a score of great quarterbacks kicked up their heels in quest of All-America recognition.

Being a staunch Big Ten supporter myself, it grieves me to point out that the outstanding performances came from the South. In a Friday night spectacular in Miami, Georgia's Larry Rakestraw and Miami's George Mira disdainfully ignored their ground troops and went strictly airborne, as they clobbered all sorts of passing records. Rakestraw smothered Mira, 31 to 14.

Then, on Saturday afternoon, came the celebrated duel in the sun at Grant Field in Atlanta, as Jimmy Sidle bossed Auburn to a 29 to 21 victory over 'Mr. Cool' and company, namely Billy Lothridge and Georgia Tech. Auburn mentor Shug Jordan concedes that Sidle is probably the best quarterback in collegiate football, and hasn't had too many dispute his word. However, the list of outstanding quarterbacks grows each week, and there are rumors afloat that the whole All - America team may be made up of triple-threat quarterbacks.

In other action, big bombs were dropped on both coasts. North Carolina shocked previously unbeaten North Carolina State, 31 to 10, and Southern Cal's explosive offense, dormant so far this season, exploded all over Ohio State in the L. A. Coliseum. The Trojans annihilated the Buckeyes, 32 to 3.

After the dust had settled Saturday evening, our top ten looked like this.

1. Texas (5-0)
2. Wisconsin (4-0)
3. Pittsburgh (4-0)
4. Northwestern (4-1)
5. Oklahoma (3-1)
6. Mississippi (3-0-1)
7. Alabama (4-1)
8. Louisiana State (4-1)
9. Auburn (5-0)
10. Illinois (3-0-1)

MAIL DEPT.:

Mr. Williamson,

Regarding "Between the Sidelines" of today's Bayonet.

You, apparently, are not a Texan. Please be informed that the state song of Texas is "Texas, Our Texas." That song you mention is the school song of Texas University. (Ugh!)

Don't feel too bad tho. Most Texans think as you did, much to my dismay.

Lt. R. D. Smith
Abilene, Texas

Lt. Smith, we stand corrected on your state song, and appreciate your attentiveness. It's surprising to learn that most Texans do not know the name of their state song.

'Anti-Upset Vaccine' Eases Football Pain

College football is recovering. After suffering an acute case of upset-itis for two weeks, campus gridiron warriors seem to be settling down—at least most of them.

Apparently the anti-upset vaccine didn't reach Miami, Atlanta or Chapel Hill where Georgia, Auburn and North Carolina still showed symptoms. We hope everything is in proper order this week.

Larry Rakestraw earned the rave notices as he passed for more than 400 yards while completing 25 passes in leading his Georgia Bulldogs to an ultra - impressive 31-14 shellacking of the Miami Hurricanes.

This week's headliner pits Big Ten powers Northwestern and Michigan State. Tommy Myers will be tossing the ball before hometown fans and should lead the Wildcats to victory. Don't underestimate the Spartans. Their offense is powerful. They'll score on anybody and will stay within seven points.

NORTHWESTERN OVER MICHIGAN STATE. . . Tommy Myers and the passing game will spell the difference.

LSU OVER FLORIDA. . . Florida beat big, bad 'Bama,' but they won't be so lucky with the Tigers. LSU is stronger defensively and can score quick touchdowns. They'll win by a touchdown.

ILLINOIS OVER UCLA. . . The Cuartel Quarterback has become an Illinois fan. They are great. They will win by two touchdowns.

GEORGIA OVER KENTUCKY. . . Rakestraw won't complete 25, but he will throw enough to dismantle the sophomore laden Wildcats. Look for a 21-7 ballgame.

DUKE OVER NORTH CAROLINA STATE. . . Could be that another case of upset-itis will develop, but we'll go along with the favorite on this one. Duke should win by six points.

NEBRASKA OVER COLORADO. . . The Cornhuskers are too rugged for this year's Buffalo edition. They will whip them by 20 points or more.

ARMY OVER WASHINGTON. . . Another shaky one—Army is a big favorite, but they'll have to hustle to vanquish the Huskies. This one will be decided by an Army extra point or field goal.

NAVY OVER PITTSBURGH. . . Pitt is a slight favorite, but Navy is just the team to knock them down the rating charts a notch or two. Navy will ride the All American arm of Roger Staubach to a ten point victory.

NOTRE DAME OVER STANFORD. . . The Irish are the superior team. Stanford won't play dead, but they'll have to play their hearts out to stay in the game. Notre Dame will win by three touchdowns.

Mississippi over Vanderbilt
Mississippi State over Memphis State
Texas over Rice
Georgia Tech over Tulane
Iowa over Purdue
Oklahoma over Kansas State
Southern California over California
Tennessee over Chattanooga
Cornell over Princeton
Indiana State over Slippery Rock

Hobbyist Collects Memorabilia

Baseball hobbyists run the gamut from schoolboys who collect bubble gum cards to people with extensive private collections of baseball memorabilia.

Somewhere in between is Air Force Capt. Mel Bailey of Offutt AFB, Nebr., who has been a collector for 21 years.

His basic collection contains a complete run of baseball guides since 1895. A guide contains a detailed history of the previous season — batting, fielding and pitching averages for all the leagues; pictures, rules, and reviews.

Guides which sold for a dime at the turn of the century now bring close to 10 dollars on the collector's market.

Space Survival Studies Aided by White Chickens

SAN DIEGO (AFPS) — Spacemen of the future may be selected partly on the basis of results of a current experiment with white leghorn chickens.

The program is underwritten by the Navy, National Science Foundation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The chickens are being used in a physiological experiment to help determine body changes resulting from long-time exposure to a simulated gravity greater than earth's.

Results of the experiments will indicate the effect of weight, as distinguished from mass, on living things.

Chickens were chosen for the weight experiments because they are two-legged like man. They have the same vertical distribution in the brain, heart and feet.

The chickens are placed in metal cages — as many as 10 to a cage—with feed and water facilities designed to operate while a unit of 16 cages is spinning on a barrel-shaped, self-aligning bearing.

Know Your Senior NCOs

SGT. MAJ. BETTIN

Although he is now serving as sergeant major of The Infantry School, Sgt. Maj. Joseph J. Bettin long has been noted for "getting out with the troops."

The 39-year-old sergeant major, whose everyday dress is that of a polished Infantry soldier, is a veteran of more than 20 years service.

A native of Valley City, N. D., where he was born June 24, 1924, Sgt. Bettin first enlisted for active duty with the Army March 19, 1942. Five years later he was discharged.

Re-entered Army

He re-entered active service Oct. 27, 1948, and was assigned as a platoon sergeant with the 11th Infantry Regiment, 5th Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, S. C., where he remained until April, 1950.

The high-ranking NCO then became a scout section leader with the 44th Heavy Tank Battalion at Fort Bragg, N.C., for three months and shortly thereafter was assigned as an assistant platoon sergeant in the 34th Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division for two months.

He was a patient at St. Albans Naval Hospital, Jamaica, N. Y., from September, 1950, to June, 1951, and he remained in New York to become an ROTC instructor at New York University until 1954.

The likeable sergeant became a platoon leader again with the 2nd Regimental Combat Team in Iceland from August, 1954, to August, 1955, and then was assigned as platoon sergeant of the 22nd Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash.

They Gyro-ed

"The most interesting assignment in my career was my seven years with the 23rd Infantry," said the sergeant major. "In 1956 we 'gyro-ed' with the 23rd to Alaska, where I became first sergeant of Company A," he added.

"Training in Alaska was a challenge and was most rewarding," Bettin commented. "The training consisted of everything from skiing in the winter to mountain training and glacier techniques in the summer," he recalled.

In December, 1959, he was promoted to first sergant, a rank he held until June 26, 1962, when Maj. Gen. Ned D. Moore, commanding general of U. S. Army, Alaska, pinned sergeant major's stripes on him.

On hand to watch the ceremonies were his wife, the former Ruth E. Kelly of Smallwood, N. Y., and Col. Richard J. O'Neill, First Battle Group commander.

A holder of the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge and Distinguished Unit Citation, Sgt. Maj. Bettin was assigned to The Infantry School Secretary's Office Oct. 8, 1962.

OC Boettcher Was There When Allied Bombers Blitzed Germany

By Pvt. Herbert Katz

In 1943, when most American school children were getting war news from radio and newspapers, a young German youth was finding out first hand what war is like.

In that year, as Allied bombs fell on Berlin, Wolfgang Boettcher was attending grade school. Due to the bombings, school hours became so irregular that classes had to be held in basements.

Early in 1945, OC Boettcher's father was inducted into the German Army. After two months combat he was captured by Czech guerrillas. The Russians, finding that he was a mechanical engineer, sent him to Russia. Eventually he escaped and walked more than 1,500 miles back to Germany.

Immediately after the war, OC Boettcher started high school in Stuttgart, Germany. After graduation, he went on to receive an associates degree in arts from Eberhard-Ludwigsgymnasium.

OC Boettcher's desire to come to this country stemmed from his interest in a German - American club he founded in Ludwigsburg. The club established an exchange program with San Luis Obispo High School, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

In order to get the money needed to come to the United States, OC Boettcher worked as a surveyor in Germany. The dean of students of San Luis Obispo High School acted as his sponsor in this country.

Boettcher arrived in this country in November, 1956, and entered the Army in January, '57. After completing basic training at Fort Ord, Calif., he was sent to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., for aldman training. He also received advanced training as a medical lab technologist. After training he was sent to the U. S. Army Hospital, Dadkreuznach, Germany.

In January, 1961, Wolfgang Boettcher became an American citizen.

58th Infantry Wireman Is 'Multivocationalist'

CHECKS A SCARRED GEORGIA PINE
Sp4 Boyce Was Once a Tree Surgeon

Do you have a sick tree? Or do you need someone to take care of your horse? Or perhaps you might need some one to cook up some ham and eggs real quick.

Just call the 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade and ask for Sp4 Richard W. Boyce. He does all these things—and more.

This jack-of-all-trades was assigned last week as a lineman in the 58th.

He started on his road as a "multivocationalist" when he was 13. First, he was a janitor, working in the post office of his hometown, Atlantic Island, N. J. During his spare time he earned extra money as a landscaper and later as a tree surgeon.

During the summer, he found the water of the Atlantic more profitable than the grass of his neighbors' lawns. He embarked on a row boat renting job, but this lasted only until he was overcome by the lure of the sea, at which time Richard Boyce became a baiter on a charter fishing boat.

The following year found Sp4 Boyce working indoors as a packer of electronics equipment. He then became a street cleaner, but this lasted only a short time until he became a short order cook. He then went from the stove to the stable and became a stable boy at Monmouth (N. J.) Race Track and then Lexington Race Track.

However, he soon returned to the sea and became a clam digger on a clam boat. He then met a friend who taught him a new trade—tin smither's apprentice until he was 20 years old, when he joined the service. After basic training he learned to be a wireman.

Army Is Testing A Flamethrower

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new flamethrower has been delivered to the Army for final testing before issue to combat units.

The new weapon, designated M132, mounted on the M113 Armored Personnel Carrier (APC), will give troops a highspeed, more mobile flame thrower with a greater range.

Designed in kit form, the new equipment can be changed from one APC to another in the field in a short time.

Your Dental Health

Don't Pull the Tooth; Try Nerve Removal

No one likes an aching tooth. It just keeps on hurting and hurting. What can you do for pain relief? Obviously, removal of the tooth is an easy solution, but isn't always necessary.

A better solution, in many cases, is pulpotomy, or the removal of a portion of the nerve; or pulpectomy, which is removal of the entire nerve. Here again, if there is any choice, pulpotomy, the more conservative method is preferred. This procedure leaves one with a live, or vital, tooth and is done in one visit to the dentist.

Pulpectomy, or the removal of the entire nerve, is done when either: (1) the pulpotomy is unsuccessful, or (2) when in the dentist's judgement, too much of the nerve is involved for partial nerve removal to be successful.

The removal of the entire nerve, done competently, is highly successful. There are, however, definite disadvantages of a so-called "dead" tooth. A dead tooth will still decay, and it is definitely more brittle than a live tooth. Yet, it is still a tooth, and no one has devised a replacement as good as the tooth nature gave you.

This tooth with the nerve removed can still last a lifetime, and will, if given proper treatment. A crown may be required in some instances, and this is still better than the loss of the tooth.

Can every tooth be saved? No, in some instances infection is present in such a location as to prevent access for removal of the infection. And removal of existing infection is the necessary requirement for saving any tooth.

Occasionally, a tooth will require further treatment after pulpectomy. This way even involves removal of diseased bone. When the diseased bone is removed, a portion of the root tip is also amputated. The bone will fill in, giving a solid tooth.

Col. Malley Takes Over Assault Unit

Lt. Col. Robert J. Malley, one-time executive officer of the 11th Airborne Division's 127th Engineer Battalion, is now an 11th Division battalion commander after a 13-year absence.

He assumed command of the 127th early last month.

Col. Malley is a 1946 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy and holds a masters degree in civil engineering from the University of Minnesota.

He originally joined the 11th Airborne Division in February, 1949, serving alternately as commander of the 127th's Company B, and later as battalion executive officer.

Leaving the 11th in 1950, Col. Malley was assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division's 307th Airborne Engineer Battalion where he served as S-3 officer, and subsequently as commander of Headquarters Company.

PX Food Facilities Battle for Plaque

Lt. Col. John Setaro, Infantry Center Exchange officer, has announced a competitive policy which is being inaugurated among exchange food facilities in order to maintain high standards of sanitation.

Each quarter, a plaque is presented to the unit with the highest score. Sanitarians of preventive medicine inspection together with reports of the post food supervisor determine the winning snack bar. Col. Setaro reports that the program has stimulated a spirit of competition among the managers "They are all enthusiastically participating," the colonel said.

Since the program began two snack bars have been recipients of the plaque. Branch 24, Custer Terrace, under acting manager Mrs. Suzanne Clark, won for the first quarter, and Branch 20, Kelley Hill, was named winner for the second quarter. Branch 20 is managed by James Elmore.

If any branch maintains the plaque for the majority of the calendar year, it earns permanent possession.

Cortez Lawrence Returns From Boy Scout Jamboree In Athens, Greece With Granddaddy of All Memories

By PFC Tom Lace

A boy's life is filled with many memories — sports heroes, Saturday movie matinees, fishing trips and his favorite dreams — but one Fort Benning youngster has the granddaddy of all memories—a European trip to the World Boy Scout Jamboree in Athens, Greece.

The boy, Cortez Lawrence, son of MSgt. (Ret.) and Mrs. Lester Lawrence, was selected to represent local Boy Scouts at the 11th world jamboree in August.

The husky, 17-year-old Columbus High School senior was co-sponsored by the Fort Benning Youth Activities Club and his parents for the trip, which included short visits to Great Britain, Switzerland and Italy before he arrived at the jamboree site in Greece.

Shortly before Cortez left for the jamboree, he said the main reason he wanted to go was to see how people, especially young people, lived and to learn their views and impressions of the United States.

"Everyplace that we (the American Boy Scout contingent) went people stopped us and started talking and asking questions about our way of life," Cortez said.

"I found that people from all over the world were interested in our nation and its people. Some knew more of our country's history than I did," he mused.

"Once we had a chance to meet and talk with people from other nations, I found that international tensions and barriers were forgotten and that we weren't so different from them," he explained.

Jump-off Point

The first leg of Cortez's trip was from Fort Benning to the Army Information School at Fort Slocum, N. Y., the jumping off point for the American scouts.

During the three-day stay at Fort Slocum he was briefed on American history, and languages and customs of other nations. He also practiced skits he and ther scouts were to perform at the jamboree.

"We also learned scouting songs, American folk songs and the Greek national anthem," said the Fort Benning ambassador - of - good-will.

"Our first attempt at singing the Greek anthem probably made Zeus and his cronies roll over in their mythological heaven. Eventually, we took as much pride in singing the Greek anthem as we did our own," he stated.

Scouts always thought Great Britain was a land of fog and darkness," he said, "but during our three-day stay the skies were clear and the weather was very mild."

During the American scouts' visit they saw many of London's world - famous sights, including Buckingham Palace, London Tower, Parliament and Westminster Abby.

"The highpoint of our stay in England was our first foreign campfire ceremony. As we sat around the campfire English and German scouts taught us their scouting songs and we, in turn, taught them ours."

Cortez's next stop was at Lausanne, Switzerland.

He said his first impression of the French Alps was they "were just a shade different from the clouds."

Toured Cathedral

"Our landing in Venice was unusual because it seemed we were coming in on the deck of an aircraft carrier rather than an airport," the Fort Benning scout said. "I guess it just seemed like an aircraft carrier because there was so much water around the airport."

Excursions to San Marco Square, the Grand Canal, Bridge of Sites, a gondola ride through winding canals, and many other scenic parts of the old city capped the scouts' stay in Italy.

"Shortly before we were scheduled to leave Italy for Greece a few other scouts and I found a shooting gallery on the Grand Canal," the local youth said.

"Naturally a spirited contest began among the scouts and we found ourselves in the center of a crowd cheering us on to higher scores," he said.

"The wonderful part of the 'shooting match' was the instructions the Italians tried to give us. None of us could speak Italian very well and they couldn't speak English very well either, so the contest ended as one big confused, but happy, jumble of words," Cortez reflected.

Reached Site

When Cortez and the other American scouts arrived at the jamboree site, there were more than 14,000 scout representatives from 85 countries, busily engaged in setting up their campsites, attending demonstrations and just plain "getting to know each other."

Almost two years were spent in preparing the jamboree's 11 sub - camps and exhibition grounds.

The largest contingents at the conclave, of more than 1,000 each, came from the United Kingdom, France and Greece. Next, with more than 500 members, were Germany, the United States, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

"Greek, Swedish, German, Belgian and English scouts already set up in our subcamp, 'Pandionis,' made us feel very welcome when we arrived," Cortez stated.

Once the boys had pitched camp and were oriented on the over-all camp layout they were free to participate in many of the activities and demonstrations held at the Marathon site.

PT Test

"The jamboree was highlighted by classical games and the Labors of Hercules, a three-part physical fitness course which included Lumberjack Lane (log rolling and wood chopping), Atlas Alley (an obstacle course) and Pioneering Park (log hauling, flagpole raising and chariot racing)," the local scout said.

Cortez also participated in such All - American activities as Indian dances, log-rolling, whip - cracking and other contests and events displaying the early pioneer spirit.

"A few of the other scouts and I presented an Indian skit and dance in the Parthenon amphitheater," Cortez said.

"Following the performance we were literally mobbed by Greek visitors and scouts. I felt more like Elvis Presley than an American scout."

Before Cortez left Fort Benning he was frantically scurrying to his scouting friends to assemble emblems as many American home - made articles (arrowheads, Indian gear and beadwork) as he could for the international "swap" at the jamboree.

"'Swap-time was one of the most unique and helpful features of the jamboree," he said.

"Through exchanging gifts I learned about the natural products and national heritage of different countries.

The 11 - day jamboree was climaxed by an impressive ceremony and the singing of the jamboree song.

"The 14,000 scouts and scouters all joined together at one time in huge circles and sang the words of the jamboree song. I can't really explain the emotion we all felt, but it was just great," he said.

When asked to sum up his impression of the jamboree, Cortez said, "The one, and I hope most lasting, result of the jamboree was that people of different races and creeds can work together and build a 'tent city' and live with friendship and understanding."

His Polo Team Beat Yale

During the days when Gen. Custer made his last stand and "Doc" Holliday joined Wyatt Earp for the gunfight at the O. K. Corral, it was the rule for professional soldiers to be expert horsemen. Today it is the exception.

Maj. Hernan O. Morales, a Guatemalan Infantrym a n training in The Infantry School's career class No. 1, is an example of that exception.

The energetic young career officer is an expert equestrian and polo player. During his riding career he has helped represent his country in the Central American, Latin American and Pan American Games. A few years ago, he was a member of the Guatemalan Polo team that whipped the rugged Yale crew which was in Central America on a good will tour.

The major entered the Army in September, 1951 after being graduated from the Military Academy of Guatemala. Until 1954, he served as a platoon leader at the Puerto Barrios Army Base. Then he returned to the academy as an instructor.

In 1959, after being promoted to captain, he became an instructor in the Guatemalan Army Service School. He remained in this job until June, 1961 when he was named commandant of the student company at Adolfo V. Hall Institute.

After his promotion to major in September, 1962, he became commandant of a cadet company at the military academy from which he had been graduated in 1951. He was serving in that capacity when he was chosen to attend The Infantry School.

This is Maj. Morales' second trip to Fort Benning. He attended the Infantry Officers' Basic Course here from November, 1960 until February, 1961.

School Extension Courses Available In Newly Revised Editions

Revised editions of The Infantry School extension courses are now available. The courses provide necessary military education for approximately 35,000 military personnel.

The Infantry School anticipates that the revised courses, recently converted to the current Army ROAD concept, will materially contribute to furthering the education of Infantrymen at all levels. These Army extension courses reach students all over the world who cannot attend resident classes.

In announcing the revision of these courses, the director of the Department of Nonresident Instruction said that most of the new material will be ready by the end of November, 1963.

There are several courses available to Infantry extension course students, but the three major programs are: Precommission, Officer Basic and Officer Career. The programs of instruction for all of these courses are as closely related as possible to the resident courses given at Fort Benning. The material presented is up to date and designed to help the student understand the ever changing concepts of the United States Army.

The most basic of these three major programs is the Precommission course, which consists of 19 subcourses totaling 220 credit hours. This course is designed to reflect current Army thought and doctrine and is administered by The Infantry School for all branches of the Army, except WAC.

Subcourses range from such basic subjects as weapons, camouflage and concealment to advanced subjects such as nuclear weapons, armor and artillery. Although completion of this course satisfies only one of the prerequisites for a reserve commission, it can be an important step toward that "Gold Bar."

For those officers who have just had a recent branch transfer or have not completed their basic branch training, The Infantry School offers the Infantry officer basic course. This course is designed to assist officers in attaining branch proficiepcy and meets the military education requirements for promotion to the rank of captain, Infantry. Subjects range from the duties and responsibilities of Infantry platoon leaders through the employment of a rifle company task force in the attack. Consisting of 18 subcourses, this course will prove challenging and interesting to anyone enrolled.

The third program is the Infantry officer course. This course is designed to provide the Infantry officer with a working knowledge of approved command and staff techniques and doctrinal concepts for the training and operational employment of Infantry units up to and including the brigade.

Consisting of 41 subcourses, which provide advanced study for Infantry officers, this course is also a means for U.S. Army Reserve and National Guard Infantry officers to satisfy military educational requirements for advancement to major and lieutenant colonel. A unique features of this course is that part of this material may be taken during a resident special two week active duty phase.

The Infantry School announces also a new package plan to be used as a refresher for Infantry officers. Consisting of tactical subcourses on the new ROAD concept, this packet will refresh Infantry Officers on the latest techniques and methods of operations under the ROAD concept. These packets are available on the company and battalion level.

In addition to the Army extension course program, the Department of Nonresident Instruction supplies material for Army ROTC, USAR Schools, National Guard state officer candidate schools, and active duty programs which are all aimed at offering the Infantryman the utmost in military education opportunities.

The Infantry School urges all personnel, active and reserve, to continue their military education. Whether an enlisted man or an officer, the Army extension courses can and will help one to advance in rank and knowledge of military subjects.

Full information on procedures for enrollment may be found in The Infantry School extension course catalog, which has been distributed to all major units, and in Department of the Army Pamphlet 350-60.

If further information is desired, interested personnel are encouraged to communicate directly with the Deputy for Army Extension Courses, Department of Nonresident Instruction, The Infantry School, Fort Benning.

Post's Busiest Mortar Platoon Part of 197th Infantry Brigade

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade has the distinction of having the busiest mortar platoon on the reservation.

Commanded by 2nd Lt. Sammuel K. O'Neal, the men of the mortar platoon are concerned every week with Infantry School Problem No. 2822. They see that students become fully aware of the potentialities of the 4.2 inch mortar and its ammunition.

Set-up at the Catcus OP mortar firing range, the platoon is broken down into four firing groups, a communications team and a command and computation team.

Once the sights have been set on each of the weapons, the range is told to be prepared for a barrage of mortar shells. Each day the firing groups have a supply of 5 to 0 live blast and white phosphorous to use each. That adds up to the highest amount used weekly by any mortar platoon on post — 500 to 600 shells.

Problem No. 2822 is part of the Infantry weapons subcourse offered at The Infantry School for associate career officers training and for Infantry officers candidate training. The officer candidate is taught the methods of implementing the mortar in an Infantry company.

Has Anyone Seen 'Tiger'

TIGERVILLE, USA — A little patch of land surrounded by a bunch of camouflaged tents about 28 miles north of Fort Stewart, Ga., is called Tigerville, USA, by men from Company A, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion who are participating in SKY SOLDIER I with the 11th Air Assault Division. Their landing strip is named Tigerville Municiple Airport.

If you want to contact them by telephone, you must use the word "Tiger" when you call, as the call sign. The pilots who fly the aircraft use the word "Tiger" in their communications system.

Capt. Frank L. Henry, battalion commanding officer, decided on the nickname "Tiger" when the outfit was activated along with the 11th Air Assault Division last February. The nickname has remained a good luck charm.

The maintenance shop, where the UH-1B and UH-1D Iroquois helicopters mechanics keep at lease 80 per cent of the aircraft in the air at all times is named "Tiger." The outfit has 31 aircraft and the airport lands over 100 daily on the Tiger airstrip.

Air Assault Units Impress Officials With Air Safety

An impressive safety record emerged from the maze of after-action statistics compiled this week by units of the 11th Air Assault Division following Sky Soldier I, revealing only one serious injury during the 21 days of sustained field operations.

With slightly over 6,375 hours flown by the units involved, and under conditions not always favorable, the 11th's G-1 Section considers this to be a remarkable achievement, especially in view of the fact that Sky Soldier I was the first such exercise to be conducted.

Although a number of minor accidents not uncommon to field tactical operations did occur, the 3,318 missions that were flown during the course of the exercise reflect highly on the performance of the pilots and maintenance personnel of the Aviation units, according to officials.

Autumn weather means many things to many people, but to most boys, autumn means FOOTBALL.

Not to be out-shown by the Benning Doughboys, the YAC football season this year features a three-league program, with teams organized in the 105, 115 and 125 pound classes.

The Biddy League, organized in the 105 pound class, has an eight-team roster and thus far has proved to be an exciting, competitive class. The first place Blue Devils kept their rating in their last game by playing control-type ball against the third place Red Devils. The Blue Devils ended the game with a 19-7 win.

Blue Devils 3-0
Tigers 2-0-1
Red Devils 2-1
Crusaders 2-1
Cavaliers 1-1-1
Tankers 1-2
Packers 0-2
Wildcats 0-3

Moving over to the 115 pound Doughboy League, we find Coach Plowman's Packers well out in front of the pack with a 3-0 record. In their battle with Coach Gibson's Giants, the Packers moved out to a commanding 13-0 lead on touchdown runs by Curtis Baker and George Heider, and then fought off a spirited Giant rally to come away with a well earned 13-6 victory.

The Doughboy League standings are:

Packers 3-0
Giants 1-1
Colts 0-2

In the Intermediate League, a close tussle is developing between the Colts and Bears, both sporting 1-1 records. Out ahead of the pack are the Redskins with a neat 2-0 record, and occupying the cellar are the Chargers with an 0-2 slate.

All the games are played at Blue Field and start at 5 p.m. Come out and cheer for your favorite team. The boys in all three leagues play a good brand of football and want your support. Doughboy and Intermediate teams play each Tuesday with the Biddy League competition on Wednesday. See you there.

Little Theater Production Draws Capacity Crowds

By Larry Rykken
Drama Critic

An admirable job in overcoming what must have been major technical difficulties and a quite competent performance was seen by capacity crowds last week in the Fort Benning Little Theater's production of "The Lark."

The production was mainly a "mood" play portraying scenes and sequences, not so much in a historical context, but dealing with the psychological implications of the events surrounding the short period in the life of "Joan of Arc," a simple country maiden who reluctantly played out what she considered her destiny — from the time "the voices" selected her in the fields through the period of her improbable victories to her capture and burning at the stake as a heretic.

The focal point is a trial conducted by church officials in an attempt to get her to deny her divine selection and humbly submit to the Church, who alone is able to evaluate the various theological subtleties involved.

Special lighting effects, designed by PFC Peter G. Nyberg, were an effective aid in establishing and carrying the somber mood, broken now and then by the humorous antics of Jerry Murray, playing the ineffectual, feeble-minded Charles, the Dauphin. Carolyn McGeee did an excellent job with the lead and was generally well-supported by the rest of the cast.

I'm sure the majority of the theater goers considered the time well spent and will be looking forward to the next production.

Insurance And Wills Up to Date?

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The importance of adequate insurance and valid wills for servicemen has been brought out by a recent survey.

The survey used the records of an unidentified Naval disaster to illustrate this need.

Of the men involved in the disaster, one officer failed to change his beneficiary from his mother to his wife. His widow and three children were left with no insurance benefits.

His widow stated she was with her husband when he made her the beneficiary for his National Service Life Insurance, but the change was not recorded and the insurance went to his parents.

One will lacked the third witness required in the state where the estate was probated and was invalid. The widow was made guardian of all his property but must appear in court before selling any of his effects; even personal clothing.

In a number of cases no wills existed causing confusion in settlement of estates.

Red Cross Goes With the Troops Across Atlantic

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Exercise Big Life troops are accompanied by a team of Red Cross representatives that will provide welcome services during the maneuver.

The five - man team departed with troops of the 2nd Armored Division, Fort Hood, Tex., and flew to Germany aboard Air Force C-135 jet transports.

During the exercise the team will provide welfare services to the military, counseling for personal and family problems that may arise and emergency financial assistance.

Exercise Big Lift (Oct. 22-Dec. 21), is a demonstration of the United States' capability to reinforce NATO forces through an airlift of a U.S.-based division to Germany.

The division will use combat equipment positioned overseas.

Top Show Picked Up By AFRT

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Servicemen throughout most of the world will be able to see "The Lieutenant" — a new full-hour television series about the adventures of a young Marine Corps officer.

Armed Forces Radio and Television Service in Los Angeles has announced that the series will be sent out for telecast over five circuits, or a total of 40 outlets at points around the globe.

American soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines in Europe, Asia, Alaska, Greenland, and the Pacific, the Caribbean and the Mediterranean areas are scheduled to receive the series.

The series stars Gary Lockwood, who portrays Lt. Bill Rice, an Annapolis graduate who intends to devote his life to Marine Corps.

'Pastry Makes a Meal'

SFC Howard Holds Classes In 'Post Graduate' Cooking Skill

By PFC Tom Luce

A good baker needs the sure hands of an artisan, the patience of a watchmaker and the mind of a chemist to turn out pastries for 300 to 600 troops, says the instructor of the Post Food Service Branch pastry baking course at Fort Benning.

SFC Chester Howard has seen more than 50 of his students graduate since the course's inception five months ago.

"Pastries make the meal," said Sgt. Howard. "If the mess hall serves the best possible meal and then tops it off with a sorry pastry, the troops will go away grumbling and complaining about the food. But, if you top the meal off with good pastries, the men will leave the mess hall with a feeling of satisfaction."

Before the course began, Howard visited mess halls on post at intervals of two weeks for on-the-job training.

"But, the system of training we are now using allows me much more time with up to 12 men instead of the previous two or three students," Howard said.

"More cooks are able to receive pastry baking training over a longer period of time without sacrificing the personal contact of the student - instructor relationship," he added.

The three - week course is broken down by weeks into various areas of instruction. The first week is devoted to Sgt. Howard and instruction on the theory of baking. Special emphasis is placed on the ingredients, combination of the formula and the proper baking temperature used for best results.

During the second week the students are divided into teams and while working on a rotation basis either mix the ingredients, makeup or "pan" the dough into baking containers, or are shown the proper heat control of the ovens.

The final week is devoted to the mastery of 48 types of pastry recipes and the refinement of baking practices. As a graduation "final exam" the students prepare all 48 pastries.

During the three - week course Sgt. Howard constantly suggests improvements and techniques which will broaden the students knowledge of baking.

"Most of my students are volunteers who have either had on-the-job training or have been to the Army's cooks school," Sgt. Howard said.

"The course serves as both a refresher and post-graduate cook's and baker's school," the sergeant added.

When asked if there were any particularly "tricky" points to be learned in baking, he said, "One of the hardest tasks in baking is the handling of the dough.

"For instance, if a man is making rolls and he gets too much flour in the dough the rolls will burn if he gets too little flour in the dough the rolls will have a rough finish," he said.

"I try to teach each student to know exactly what he is doing, and to prepare in advance the equipment he will use during the work period," Howard explained.

"One of the easiest recipes to follow is for a sponge cake," he added. "Yet, if one drop of oil is in the container or on the mixer during the mixing of the egg-sugar batter, the cake is a goner."

"Since the baker's ingredients are issued on a two-day basis, there isn't time nor material for another try if the first batch fails . . . a baker must be near perfect at all times," Sgt. Howard said.

When asked about the future prospects of the course, he said, "Food Service Branch is planning to increase the instructional staff and lengthen the students training to four weeks with an advanced 'post - graduate' course."

World War II Medical Story Unveiled in Book

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Another volume of the Army medical story of World War II has been published.

The latest addition to the history of the Medical Department, U. S. Army, is a 548-page book titled "Personnel in World War II." It tells how the Medical Department grew from 1,500 medical officers on active duty in 1940 to almost 50,000 at war's end.

Discussed are the difficulties and achievements in maintaining highest professional standards of medical care at home and in the service despite a sweeping redistribution of doctors.

First Lieutenant Jerry D. Millett has assumed command of the 510th Engineer Maintenance Company, which is attached to the 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction). The 510th is a newly formed unit still in the process of receiving both personnel and equipment.

What Was That?
Slang Hazes Allied Pupils

FORT LEE, Va. (AFPS)—American slang so confused foreign students at the Army Supply Management School here that instructors prepared a special course in colloquialisms.

The coffee break was the cause of it all.

Maj. Robert E. Carlson, an instructor in the executive skills division, told his students to take a break. "But then I remembered they had no idea what I meant," he recalled.

Tape recordings of American colloquialisms were made and the students, who represent England, Korea, Turkey, Ethiopia and Libya, were soon speaking as casually as their American counterparts.

Lecture Series Started On Cold War Dimensions

Columbus College has scheduled a series of six monthly lectures on "Dimensions of the Cold War," in cooperation with the nationwide Education for Freedom Foundation.

The lectures, which are open to the public, will be presented by the faculty of the Institute of International Studies at the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Richard Walker, professor of international relations and director of the University's Institute of International Studies, delivered the first lecture of the series Wednesday night at the Columbus College Gymnasium. His topic was "The United States and the Moscow-Peking Degree."

Dr. Paul Blackstock, an intelligence and psychological warfare research specialist, is scheduled to present the next lecture Nov. 20. His topic will be "Communism and the Intellectuals—Inside and Outside the Berlin Wall."

Dr. Blackstock is a magna cum laude graduate of the University of Colorado, where he received the master of arts degree for work in linguistics. He attended the Institute de Phonetique of the University of Paris and earned the master of science degree from American University in the field of International relations. After specializing in covert political warfare at AU, he received his doctor of philosophy degree.

Advance Studies Unit Probes Army's Future

WASHINGTON (ANF) — While deep space probes drift toward new planets, a group of Army planners probe the imponderables of future war and peace on this one.

Military-civilian teams at the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command's Institute of Advanced Studies examine in depth such topics as the nature of future earth environments, the Army's roles in the whole spectrum of war and the effect of science and technology on land warfare from the present to twenty years from now.

While the Combat Developments Command, in its role as the "Army's Idea Proving Ground," studies and recommends how the specific Army units will be organized, equipped and fight, its Institute of Advanced Studies considers the strategic joint and unified operations of the Army in a theater role.

Ideally located with the U. S. Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., the Institute, commanded by Maj. Gen. William F. Train, draws heavily on a carefully filtered pool of Army experience and expertise — the faculty and students of the War College.

This inter-play helps the IAS experts prepare studies on broad international, national and departmental matters affecting land warfare. Their long-range mission also requires that they maintain liaison with the scientific, academic and technological communities to keep abreast of the expanding frontiers of knowledge in many fields as they affect current and future land warfare.

Camera Warfare On the Rampage At Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AFPS) — American military and civilian visitors to the Berlin Wall report on what is called here the "Camera War."

Last year 60 cameras were issued to West Berlin police on border duty. They were ordered to photograph any East German guard, especially while he was firing at an escaping refugee or apprehending one.

Attempts are then made to identify the border guards.

More than 350 East German guards have fled across the border into West Berlin in the past two years.

Congratulations.

Astronaut Has 'More Power' With Transistor

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new device has been invented that allows an astronaut to control his space capsule by scarcely moving a muscle.

The purpose of the system is to enable him to exert control when the gravity of "G" forces would otherwise hold him powerless.

Sensors are attached to the astronaut's arms and legs to detect electric currents that normally flow into the muscles when they react to orders from the brain.

Using a transistorized sensor that is also an amplifier, the system produces enough current to operate a mechanical control.

Astronauts may use the system just before the booster engine is cut out on take-off, and on re-entry, when he may be temporarily unable to move.

TRANSISTOR IGNITION KIT by Mallory

VALUABLE COUPON

Mallory KIT 79.95 WITH COUPON

1. CONSTANT MAXIMUM VOLTAGE AT ALL SPEEDS: This is particularly important, for with the old system the voltage of necessity did drop appreciably at high speeds. This also increases fuel economy to a considerable degree.
2. CONTACT POINT LIFE IS EXTENDED to eight or ten times former expectancy, for the points now carry a fraction of their former load.
3. THE CONDENSER IS ELIMINATED, thus crossing off one more possibility of ignition failure.
4. SPARK PLUG LIFE IS INCREASED to a remarkable degree. Because of the higher voltage across the electrodes they remain clean, and at high speeds the greater voltage ignites the gas efficiently, thus preventing fouling.
5. IMPROVED STARTING CONDITIONS IN COLD WEATHER—this is brought about by the fact that the tungsten contact points are clean—not oxided by high amperage of slow opening gap of slug gish engine.

Col. T. W. Long Takes Over School's Airborne Dept.

Col. Paulick Moved To U.S. STRICOM

Col. Talton W. Long has succeeded Col. Michael Paulick as director of The Infantry School's Airborne-Air Mobility Department.

Col. Paulick has been assigned to U. S. Strike Command MacDill Air Force Base, Fla.

Lt. Col. A. S. Madding has been acting director of the airborne department since Col. Paulick's departure Sept. 15.

Col. Long served as executive officer, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations (ODCSOPS), Department of the Army, before his assignment here.

The colonel entered the service as an enlisted man in July, 1941, and was commissioned as a second lieutenant after being graduated from Officer Candidate School in July, 1942.

He was assigned as platoon leader in the then, newly activated 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment in April, 1943, and by January, 1946, had risen to the position of regimental executive officer.

In January, 1947, the colonel returned to the United States and was assigned as the assistant chief of staff, G-1, with the 2nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., until August, 1948.

Following graduation from the Command and General Staff College (Logistics) at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in 1949, he assumed duties as executive officer of the Organization and Training Division, Headquarters Allied Forces Southern Europe in Naples, Italy.

Upon his return to the United States in August, 1954, he served as executive officer and staff officer of the Training, Doctrine and Requirements Branch, G-3, Headquarters U.S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va.

From August, 1955, until August, 1957, he remained at Fort Monroe as chief and research and development coordinator of the Army Aviation and Airborne Material Division.

The Infantry School leads in collections with 81 per cent of their fair share goal reached. The 197th Infantry Brigade is second with 64 per cent, and The Center Troop Command third with 55 per cent.

Unit Boasts Business With All the Infantry

By Sp4 Jerry T. Williams

The Student Brigade which boasts having either fed, billeted, counseled, guided or disciplined every Infantry officer in the United States Army, celebrates its 21st birthday tomorrow.

On its rosters are not only the names of every Infantry officer but the names of many other branch officers along with a large number of Allied officers.

This unit, which is commanded by Col. Walter D. Short, plans a day of festivities tomorrow celebrating its Oct. 26 anniversary beginning with a parade at the Infantry School Battalion field at 9 a.m. in the second quartel area. Following the first parade, a second will ensue at 10 a.m. on French Field, when students from the Officer Candiate School, having completed their 18th week of training, will become upperclassmen by turning "blue." This will be their "Blue Day Revue."

Open House

The rest of the day will be devoted to open house in many of the units which make up The Student Brigade.

U. S. Army Infantry officers and other students who are or have been assigned to The Student Brigade are schooled in the subjects ranging from the intricacies of wheeled vehicles and missile firing to the extremes of Ranger training in the Georgia mountains and Florida swamps. They learn also the basic principles and problems of leadership in the modern Army, and the complexities of the battle group organization and staff.

ISD Formed

In 1940 the Infantry School Detachment was formed operating both the School and post headquarters. This was changed to the Infantry School Service Command in 1941.

The Student Training Brigade was formed Oct. 26, 1942, as a part of the reorganization of The Infantry School Service Command. The Student Training Brigade was composed of three student training battalions, each of which had about 800 men. They were charged with giving logistical support

Assault Unit Open House Is Success

Sky Soldiers of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group, staged an action-packed "Family Activities Day" Saturday, for all dependents of the men of the 227th.

From jeep rides to helicopter rides, Saturday's program was a complete success, providing the 227th dependents with their first opportunity to see their husbands and fathers in action in line with the new air assault concept.

Displays Start

Beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday morning at Manila Heliport, numerous displays of aircraft and equipment attracted the attention of adults and teenagers, while various "kiddie" events dominated the interest of the youngsters.

The children's program, complete with refreshments, included jeep rides, firing blanks from the new M-14 Rifle, and operating the new electronic communications equipment.

Rode Choppers

Helicopter rides were available to all dependents through the courtesy of the Bell Helicopter Company which provided a civilian counterpart to the Army's OH-13 Sioux, a light two-place observation helicopter.

Climaxing the day's events was a battalion air show, featuring formation flying demonstrations similar to that done in the field on actual operations, picking up sling-loaded equipment, performing gun runs, and other air assault duties.

Four members of the 17th Infantry's Pathfinder Team made parachute jumps, preceded by a four-man rappelling demonstration from a UH-1D Iroquois helicopter.

East and West Move Slowly Toward Peace

Just over a year ago the United States and the Soviet Union confronted each other on the brink of nuclear war.

If it were possible, every American should live again through the week which began on Oct. 22 when President Kennedy announced "unmistakable evidence" that the Russians were building bases in Cuba for offensive missiles.

Six tense days later on Oct. 28 Premier Khrushchev agreed to dismantle these bases.

In those six days the whole world gazed into the abyss of nuclear conflict, and nobody liked what he saw.

How well have the lessons of those anxious days been learned? Certainly the world situation seems altered for the better.

A limited test ban treaty has been signed; the Chinese - Russian disagreements have clouded the myth of a monolithic Communist bloc; Russia and the United States have agreed to keep the arms race out of space and have again pledged themselves to work for future disarmament.

But if peace is to be secured, more strides must be taken.

Exactly what these steps may be are not entirely clear now. Berlin is still a problem, and so is the economic and social emergence of new Africa nations and the halting of Communist expansion in Asia.

The task is a huge one, but the last year gave us new hope that the cold war can be ended. When it will end or how long it will take no one can say. We must remain vigilant and hope that an end to the cold war and the way to lasting peace will be found. (AFPS)

Chaplain's Corner

For the 5,426th Time

By Chaplain (Capt.) Raymond B. Fullam

The young soldier had an eager look on his face as he hurried out of the P.X. toward the snack bar. It was obvious that he considered the small package in his hand a great buy.

A few words of conversation revealed that the bracelet was for his girl-friend back home. The earrings were for his mother. It would have been cruel to point out that one stone was loose.

After the usual conversation about his home town, the unit he was in and the work he does, we spoke about Church on Sunday. With all the assurance of a philosopher our young friend said, "No, Father, I haven't been to Church lately." There was a loud silence. Then he blurted out what has been said before by other young men perhaps 5,426 times; "I'm not a hypocrite, so I don't go to Church." The word "hypocrite" curled on his lips like a dirty word.

To the young men we say: God welcomes sinners into His Church. It is for our own good that God reminds us. Keep holy the Sabbath Day." As regards "hypocrites," who on this earth has a right to judge others as hypocrites? Only God can do that. A real saint is about the only one who doesn't need to go to Church. If we do not pray in church on Sundays, it is very likely that we will not pray much at all. Christ praised the man in the back of the church who prayed, "Lord have mercy on me, a sinner."

To the adult church-goers we say: could not religious services be made more appealing to young soldiers? Let young men be ushers, participate and feel they are genuinely welcome. The appellation "hypocrite" is very strong, but may-be the shadow of it might appear to youth to tinge our adult lives. Youth abhors falsehood but admires sincerity. So does God. God loves the young; so should we.

14 Days Remaining In CAA Fund Drive

Everybody likes the feeling that comes with helping people, but too many have a habit of putting off good deeds until a more convenient time.

Procrastination is almost as easy as passing the buck, and that comes easy.

We should quit saying "Wait until next payday" to take care of our obligation to the Community Activities Association Fund Drive, and to ourselves.

All the procrastinating, buck-passing and rationalizing in tre world won't alter the fact that if someone, or rather everyone, doesn't get on the ball, the CAA drive is going to be hurting.

This week, drive officials announced 49 per cent of the goal had been reached. This is 10 per cent behind the same period last year, and considerably below what drive officials had hoped for at the time.

Only 14 days remain until the drive is concluded. During those 14 days drive workers are going to have to do as much work as they have in the past 46 days, if the drive is to reach its goal.

Much has been said about what each individual's fair share should be, and what it does, but it never hurts to remind ourselves.

The programs supported through CAA are essentially health, welfare, youth and character-building organizations.

They provide such services as the Armed Services YMCA, the Cerebral Palsy Center, the American Red Cross, Salvation Army, boy and girl Scout organizations, and many more.

The one thing all the organizations have in common, put in simple terms, is that they help people.

They help those who hope to live free from crippling diseases, those who need a home, those who need advice, and people with just plain problems.

CAA also helps communities to be better places in which to live, an activity in which we all have a stake.

The fair share Fort Benning personnel are asked to give is lower than the dollar value received from the various agencies. In figures, Fort Benning contributes 11.9 per cent of the agencies' budgets, but gets back over 43 per cent of the total budgets.

Army personnel meet and conquer many missions in their jobs, from winning wars to making maps.

When it comes to community responsibilities the military seldom lets anyone down. As Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben Jenkins told a group of CAA fund drive workers, "We pay our own way."

It's time we quit making excuses and started doing just that.

The Judge Says . . .

Digested from Military Law Review, April, 1963

When a service member and his dependents travel under government orders, there is reasonable assumption that the government will foot the bill. Usually, this is the case.

However, there are cases on record in which the service member was compelled to reach into his pocket to pay for travel performed under military orders. Purpose of this article is to provide advance warning so that the serviceman will recognize the pitfalls that have caused other members loss of time, money and composure.

General Rules: A member of a uniformed service is entitled to travel and transportation allowances for travel performed or to be performed under orders; (1) upon a permanent change of station; (2) on temporary duty away from his permanent station; (3) from home to his first duty station; and (4) from his last duty station to his home.

Travel allowances usually involved: (1) Monetary allowance for a member's travel; (2) monetary allowance for travel of a member's dependents; (3) shipment of household goods at government expense, and (4) dislocation allowance.

Pitfall situations: (1) Where the travel is performed prior to the issuance of orders; and (2) where the orders are revoked or amended after some or all of the travel has been performed.

Travel prior to or in anticipation of orders: The general rule is that travel allowances are not authorized when the travel is performed prior to the issuance of orders. For example, Capt. A and wife were stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

In January, his wife visited relatives near Fort Ord. In February, Capt. A received orders to Fort Ord. His wife did not return to Fort Benning. He could not claim travel expenses for his wife because her travel to Fort Ord was performed prior to the issuance of orders affecting her husband's transfer.

Effective date of travel orders: The rule in connection with the "effective date" of travel orders is considered by many to work an extreme hardship on those servicemen who fall victim to its application. This is due, in large part to the fact that the rule must be read in conjunction with the rulings of the Comptroller General.

The resulting general rule is that the "effective date" of orders is the last date on which the member must depart by rail in order to reach his destination on the report-in date.

To illustrate: Capt. A was directed to proceed from Washington, D.C., to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., by June 25, 1963. He was authorized travel by privately owned vehicle. Travel time by train is three days; by automobile, five. Capt. A departed June 20 and reported June 25. But on the 21st, his orders had been revoked and he was required to return to Washington, D.C. Capt. A is not entitled to be reimbursed for travel expenditures.

To compute the "effective date" of travel, the time required for rail travel, three days, must be used; accordingly, June 22 is the "effective date." Since the revocation arrived on June 21, Capt. A would have received the revocation but for his premature departure.

Proposed remedy to "effective date" rule: DOD Proposal Number 87-176 offers hope of relief because if this proposal is adopted, the "effective date" of travel would be the actual date of departure. Further, since this proposal would operate retroactively (as of Oct. 1, 1949) it would recompense old losses. Remember, however, that until this proposal is enacted, any premature departure will subject the member to the pitfalls of military travel.

Infantry Magazine Is 42 Years Old

Keeping abreast of the Army's ever - changing face is a nearly impossible task. The major obstacle is the informational gulf between the introduction of new techniques and weapons and the publication of official training literature and its distribution to the field.

Hurdling this gap, however, are the service publications — such as INFANTRY Magazine, published by The Infantry School.

Entering the 42nd year of keeping the troops informed, INFANTRY is a far cry from its original form as the Infantry School Mailing List — which consisted primarily of reprinted instructional problems without illustrations. Now a bi-monthly publication with slick professionalism evident in both layout and content, INFANTRY has gained worldwide respect as the professional journal for Infantrymen.

Unlike Others

Unlike its brother publications in the military, INFANTRY operates without the financial backing of any military organization or governmental office. INFANTRY staff members must be as adept at squeezing a penny as they are at editing a story, since all funds for operating the magazine come from subscriptions. There's no appropriated fund to lend a boost; no advertising to bring in extra dollars. The 11,000 plus subscribers keep their magazine on the presses.

Despite its tiny budget and tinier staff, INFANTRY consistently produces valuable articles for every military level. By policy, the magazine is more concerned with the platoon, company, and battalion picture than with the problems and concepts at division level and higher. The aim is to offer assistance to the junior officer and enlisted man in the field. The result is a bi-monthly compendium of practical knowledge on all phases of Infantry activity.

The requests for reprint permission that pour into INFANTRY's office testify to the quality of its material. Within the past few months there have been requests for reprints from the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation and the Marine Corps Gazette, as well as from numerous military publications in other countries. INFANTRY'S quick action in getting a comprehensive article in print just weeks after the Army's M - 79 Grenade Launcher was introduced brought a flood of requests for reprints from military units throughout the world.

INFANTRY's authors come from every area of the Armed Forces and from every rank from General to Private First Class. The magazine annually offers a series of awards for articles in various fields, and competition runs high. Anyone can contribute to INFANTRY.

Many Sources

Material published in INFANTRY is received from many sources. Naturally, the proximity of the Instruction Departments of The Infantry School affords the magazine an excellent means of acquiring the most up-to-date Infantry information and concepts. Each officer on the INFANTRY staff reads each manuscript and comments on its appropriateness for the magazine. Some manuscripts are forwarded to Infantry School Instruction Departments for review. All comments are carefully studied by the staff before a decision is reached. The editor has final authority on the selection of articles.

Heading the INFANTRY staff is its editor, Maj. Ross L. Johnson (1949 USMA, and MA English, Columbia University). He assures the magazine's subscribers of a well - balanced package, providing current information equipment, tactics and techniques. The "how to" side doesn't make up the entire magazine, howver. INFANTRY also aims at providing a forum for progressive military thinking through controversial, historical, and thought - provoking articles.

Tackling the actual job of producing the magazine from its raw materials are Capt. Stephen K. Werbel (1959 USMA), production chief, and Lt. Robert M. Ruggles (BA and MA Journalism, University of Oklahoma, and Phi Beta Kappa) the assistant editor.

The remainder of INFANTRY's staff belongs to the business and clerical side. Mrs. Lena Biskup, business manager, is a seven-year veteran of the magazine. Among her many duties is keeping up with the constant address changes of INFANTRY subscribers, spread across the United States and 53 other nations.

Handling the mountain of typing for the staff is Miss Betty Miller, the magazine's secretary. In addition, Sp4 Larry M. Bold, PFC Benjamin Bruno and PFC Ruth Miller assist in the business office. PFC Jake J. Chavez, illustrator, fills out the production department staff.

Publication of the November - December issue next week will mark the beginning of INFANTRY's 42nd year. A steadily growing circulation and a greater selection of timely, pertinent articles ensures INFANTRY of its pre-eminent positon among professional military journals.

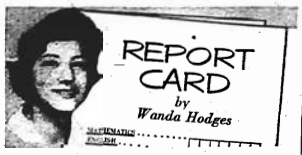
Abundance of Lunches and Parties Highlighted School's Social Week



The Youth Activities Club has done much toward the advancement of the education of boys and girls of all ages. During the summer, YAC sets up a Youth Employment Bureau. This keeps many youngsters from being bored, and teaches them responsibility.

The athletic department of Youth Activities Club is headed by Mr. Max L. Spurlin. Among his many jobs is organizing the post football teams, excluding the post "Doughboys."

There are eight "Biddy League" teams of boys raging from ages 8 to 10. The next group of boys, ages 11 to 12, are the doughboys. Last, but not least, are the four intermediate teams of boys ages 13 to 15.

Both the Doughboys and the intermediates have cheerleaders to yell them on to victory. The girls are sisters, girl friends and just friends of the football players.

The games take place on Blue Field. As of Wednesday night, the intermediates will play at Gowdy Field. The competition is really rough. The highest scoring has been thirty-five points.

These football teams teach sportsmanship. It gives the boys an opportunity to participate, and inspires leadership. Quite a few well-known high school football players started on these YAC teams. Among the athletes are Penny Pennington from Columbus, Corky Henderson and John Corley from Pacelli, and outstanding quarterback Paul Ferguson from Baker.

Many football players from the Fort Benning Doughboys do the officiating for the games. In fact, a couple of the men help coach the teams, giving them helpful tips.

It's been a gay and active week for all of us.

Mrs. Walter D. Short introduced and welcomed two new members — Mrs. Ned B. Mabry, wife of Lt. Col. Mabry, the newly assigned commander of the Fifth Battalion, and Mrs. Leon G. Simmons, wife of Lt .Col. Simmons, newly assigned commander of The Infantry School Battalion.

The afternoon was spent discussing plans for the impending Fall Formal. Mrs. Claude W. Baker reported on the decorating progress and received more volunteers for her committee.

Plans were made for their future coffees while the ladies enjoyed the dainty refreshments served by the hostess.

2nd Battalion Wives

While over at Second Battalion the wives of Infantry Officers' Basic Course No. 5 met for a casserole dinner in the dayroom of Detachment 22.

Each lady provided a delicious casserole, salad, bread or dessert of her own specialty to be served. An evening of social planning and getting acquainted was enjoyed by the wives, while their husbands were on bivouac.

Mrs. James C. Yarbrough was the cadre hostess for the ladies attending.

10CC 1 Wives

The Fountain Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess was the scene of a luncheon for the student wives of the Infantry Officers Career Course No. 1 of Detachment 1 of the Second Student Battalion.

The social chairman, Mrs. Richard M. Renfro, and Mesdames Benjamin Robinson, John M. Arnold, Lyle E. Blank, and Jon C. Crawford acted as hostesses for the affair. Plans for future social activities were made.

Side-tables bedecked with black cats with jeweled eyes complimented by green and gold leaves of foil were used as decorations throughout the room.

Mrs. Ronald E. Craven won the door prize, an arrangement of yellow and white asters and snapdragons. About 85 ladies attended the affair.

ACAR Wives

Welcoming speeches were by Lt. Col. Joseph E. McCluskey, commander of the Second Student Battalion, and 1st Lt. Billy R. Prestridge, commander of Detachment No. 2. Chap. (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes spoke on the activities of the Christian Religious Program offered by the post and The Student Brigade.

Mrs. William E. Killoran spoke to the ladies regarding social activities.

An orange fall arrangement was used on the serving table. Mrs. Joe H. Rodriguez and Mrs. James C. Yarbrough were cadre hostesses for the ladies attending.

We are all looking forward to tomorrow when we celebrate The Student Brigade Organization Day, so come out and join us.

Assistant Commandant's Wife

Cheyney Norton, a Warm-hearted Next-door Neighbor

By Marge Lennon

Cheyney Norton is the kind of person one associates with early morning sunshine, good coffee, and a warm-hearted next-door neighbor.

She is quiet and soft-spoken, extremely feminine and has a genuine and sincere interest in other people. Her happiest moments come in the evening when she and Gen. Norton are together with their three children.

Born in Nogales, Ariz., while her Cavalry officer father was stationed at Fort Huachuca, Cheney and her younger sister accustomed themselves to Army life at an early age. Frequent moves took her family from one part of the country to another. Among their assignments were Fort Riley, Kans., Fort Bliss, Tex., and Washington, D. C., where she spent most of her teen and "growing up" years.

All of this was to be invaluable training for her future role as that of Mrs. John Norton, wife of Brig. General John Norton, the assistant commandant of the U. S. Army Infantry School.

After completing three years at Visitation Convent in Washington, Cheyney MacNebb attended George Washington University for a year. At that time Cadet John Norton was "a good friend!"

When he returned from Europe, Lt. Col. Norton was assigned to Fort Bragg, N. C., with the 82nd Airborne Division and she was working for the Army Intelligence Section in the Pentagon. He had very little time for frequent visits to Washington so most of their courting was done over the telephone.

They were married in Dallas, Texas, on April 14, 1946.

It was at Fort Bragg, their first post, that the two Nortons became three—John Jr., was born. He is now a junior at Columbus High, he has an avid interest in athletics and hopes to go to West Point.

The Nortons were sent to Washington for five years where Col. Norton was the military aide to Mr. Frank Pace, then Secretary of the Army. In Washington, the Nortons met many interesting people and made several lasting friendships.

Alexandra, or "Sandy" as she is known, was born in 1951 and is presently a seventh grader at Faith School. Her sister, Cheyney, is a fifth grade student at the same school. The girls are very active with their Girl Scouts, piano and ballet lessons.

Two years were spent in Yugoslavia where they were assigned to the military aid group section. Returning stateside, the family traveled to Fort Rucker, Ala. and Col.

MRS. NORTON

Norton learned to fly. Next stop was Washington again, then Korea and then to Fort Monroe, Va., where he was chief of the Aviation section.

The Norton home on Eames Avenue is tastefully done in what Mrs. Norton calls an "Army Conglomeration" style of furniture. Several pieces of carved macadonian ware from Yugoslavia and beautiful Oriental rugs are placed strategically throughout the household.

Among her interesting possessions is a 300 pound loom, used for weaving rugs and blankets. She has made several articles with it but is interested in learning more about it.

In addition to her many official activities as the wife of the assistant commandant, Mrs. Norton is an honorary board member of the Women's Club of Fort Benning and also is chairman for the club's annual Distaff Dance to be held Nov. 15. Committee selected "The Playboy Ball" as its theme this year and it promises to be an event not to miss.

The Women's Club of Fort Benning salutes Cheney Norton as an advisor and as a friend!

500 Military Personnel Attend Religious Confab

Col. Adrian L. Hoebeke, deputy post commander, told the assembly that religion is paramount to the survival of the Western civilization.

"The sincere and honest practice of religion is necessary for the continuance of our Army and the strengthening of our nation," he said.

Challenged Participants

Col. Hoebeke challenged each participant in the retreat to "self examination, repentance and rededication" to the ideals and teachings upon which America was founded.

After the assembly, Jewish personnel went from the theater to the Jewish Religious Center, Bldg. 1971, where Rabbi Alfred L. Goodman conducted the Jewish phase of the retreat. He is Rabbi of Temple Israel in Columbus.

At the Main Post Catholic Chapel, "A Day of Recollection" was conducted by the Rev. Father Damian Breen of Holy Trinity, Ala., assisted by Catholic chaplains on the post.

Bishop Speaks

Retired Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta, and Paul Anderson of Vidalia, Ga., were guest speakers at the Main Post Protestant chapel.

Bishop Moore expressed "great pride in my country that you men are permitted to take a day off from your work to come here to renew your faith."

"You are not living in a quiet evolutionary period of hisory," he told his audience. "You will live your lives out in a turbulent and revolutionary period of hisory. For 50 years, we have been in a catastrophic convulsion of the world's life."

"No well informed person can deny there are forces at work in the world that threaten ideals we cherish," the veteran minister said.

"Twice I have seen mankind march up to the crossroads at midnight only to find that all the sign boards had been taken down," he said.

The future of the American way of life, according to Bishop Moore, does not depend on what happens in Washington.

Americans need, he said, a revitalizaton of the spiritual ideals that brought this nation into being.

Make Conscience

"If I could make the conscience of America Christian, I'd have no fear for our nation," the bishop said, adding, "The faith of a people is the most potent power in a nation."

Paul Anderson, Olympic star known the world over for his exceptional strength, gave an athlete's commentary of the "strong man of the Bible," Samson.

Anderson, who operates a youth home at Vidalia for teen-age boys and girls who need a place in which to grow up, related the stories of Samson's early feats, his mistakes and, the accomplishment of his mission in life— the destruction of the Philistines.

Hard Way

As he told how Samson, blinded, ridiculed and abused, in one final surge of strength, brought down a temple on his enemies and himself, Anderson said, "He did it the hard way."

"Samson was called to begin to deliver Israel from the Philistines' and though he flaunted his strength, made mistakes, and suffered humiliations, he finally accomplished his mission," the speaker said.

"Samson did what he was called to do, but he made it awfully hard on himself," he emphasized. "W are all called. Sometimes we need time to think, as Samson must have thought as he pushed his enemies' grindstone round and round."

"Like Samson, I feel that my strength is a gift of God. I, too, heard a call — to do something for teen-age youths who needed guidance. Until I answered that call, everything went wrong for me," he said.

"CONGRATULATIONS, CADET" . . . Citadel Cadet J. M. Foxworth (L), son of Col. and Mrs. E. M. Foxworth, is congratulated by Gen. Mark W. Clark, commanding general of The Citadel, for his outstanding performance during the 1963 ROTC summer camp here. He will be commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation in June. Col. Foxworth is chief of The Infantry Center's Services Section.

Know Your Senior NCOs

Lots of soldiers "come back" to Fort Benning. The home of The Infantry School is a post that many career men see often during their "twenty or thirty."

One soldier "came back" in 1960, but he had never before been assigned here. His experience with Fort Benning was different. In the spring of 1940, a young private led a mule through the area. He is now 1st Sgt. Stephen F. Jordan of Company C, 1st Battalion, The Center Troop Command.

When he led his mule through Fort Benning almost 24 years ago, Sgt. Jordan was a pack driver in F Battery of the 4th Field Artillery Battalion at Fort Bragg, N. C. His unit was on maneuvers in Georgia.

Sgt. Jordan, a native of Fremont, N.C., joined the Army in October, 1939. He joined the 4th Field Artillery after basic training and remained in field artillery units until 1953, when he became a platoon sergeant with the 843rd Engineer Battalion in France. He remained in the "engineers" until last month when the 806th Engineer Battalion was inactivated, and he was assigned as first sergeant of Company C.

He is a combat veteran, having served in Germany with the 204th Field Artillery, a National Guard unit from Utah, from June, 1944 until Sept. 1945. He was a ground observer with the 204th.

He left the Army after the war, but re-entered in Nov. 1948. During his career he has served more than 96 months in overseas assignments.

He came to Fort Benning in May, 1960, and became first sergeant of Company D of the 806th Engineers.

SGT. JORDAN

Among his awards and decorations are the Army Commendation Medal, Good Conduct Medal with four clasps, Army Defense Medal, European Campaign Medal with four stars, Victory Medal and European Occupation Medal.

Sgt. Jordan is married to the former Miss Mary Ellen Wells of Hinesville, Ga. They have two daughters, Gwyneth, 3, and Stephenis, 6 months.

In reflecting over the 24 years since he joined the Army, Sgt. Jordan remarked that he had seen something happen that seemed impossible. "I saw the Army grow from a small force in '39 into a huge, tremendous fighting force in World War II; I saw it dismantle, and now I have seen it rebuild into another tremendous force."

Rifle and Pistol Club Members Choose Officers

Maj. James O. Duke, commanding officer of the Third Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit was re - elected president of the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club last Sunday.

The election of the slate of officers for 1963-64 was held at the club's annual barbecue at the pistol range.

Capt. Richard Wentworth of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit was voted in as vice-president.

Lt. Lewis B. Sharp of the MTU was elected executive officer; MSgt. Aubrey Wells of Third Army AMU won the secretary's post and Capt. Thomas W. Beld of The Infantry School's Weapons Department will be the treasurer.

'Ex-Colonel' Chosen Tops in 11th AAD

A staff colonel for the city of Chicago in high school ROTC, PFC Frank J. Pjosek of Headquarters Company, 11th Support Command has been named "Soldier of the Month" in the 11th Air Assault Division for October.

PFC Pjosek was judged on his personal appearance, knowledge of military and civilian subjects, weapons, and customs and traditions of the military service.

The Sky Soldier was in competition with other soldiers from all major commands in the 11th, including the 10th Air Transport Brigade, which is an attached unit.

A personal letter from the commanding general, Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard is being sent to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Pjosek Sr. of Chicago. He will also receive an engraved wrist watch, and be designated as enlisted aide to the commanding general for one day.

PFC Pjosek entered the Army in December, 1962, and received his basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., after which he was assigned directly to the 11th. He is an assigned as driver for the commanding officer of the 11th Support Command, Col. Robert C. Shaw.

The Chicago native is a graduate of the Gage Park High School in the class of 1956. It was while he was engaged in the High School ROTC program in 1957 that he was selected as staff colonel for the city of Chicago.

46th Birthday; The 'Greatest'

More than 3,000 "Indianhead" troopers, keeping in step with the division band, passed in review under a bright morning sun last Saturday as the mighty 2nd Infantry Division celebrated its 46th anniversary as a proud protector of our nation's freedom.

The ceremony, held at Wetherby Field and witnessed by more than 10,000 spectators, was highlighted by a massing of the division colors which were brought forward to the center of the parade grounds while our National Athem was played.

The commander of troops, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, accompanied the division commander, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and the distinguished guest of the day, Lt. Gen. (retired) Reuben Jenkins, as they reviewed the "spit and polish" soldiers of the "Second to None".

During his speech to the assembled throng, Gen. Jenkins stated that "every leader who has been associated with the 2nd Division in any way in a position of great responsibility, especially in war, is indebted to it — for reasons explained in the pages of history."

Other distinguished guests of the division included Col. G. R. Long, commanding officer of the 6th Marine Regiment, 2nd Marine Division, Camp LeJeune, N.C. and Mr. William Creech, president of the 2nd Division Association in San Antonio, Tex. Following a short speech, Col. Long presented the "Indianhead" Division with a plaque commemorating the many battles it has participated in during its illustrious and valiant past.

Immediately following the gigantic parade a huge, three-tiered birthday cake weighing over 250 pounds was brought onto the field. There the first cut was made by Gen. Billingslea with the aid of a glistening military saber.

After the ceremonies on the parade grounds were completed, the spectators had the opportunity of various displays ranging from a World War I, horse drawn artillery piece to a nuclear-age Honest John missile.

That afternoon displays of military might and "open house" were the order of the day at all units in the division. But the standout was a tank mobility demonstration at Knight Field put on by the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor where the spectators saw an M-48 tank run an obstacle course, climb a 60 degree slope and crush an old 2½ ton vehicle.

The long list of Organization Day activities concluded that evening with the commanding general's reception and dance at the Main Officers' Open Mess and a non-commissioned officers dance at the Harmony Church Field House.

PSgt. Thames; Tops For 1964

During Organization Day ceremonies held last Saturday morning at Wetherby Field, PSgt. Donald L. Thames, operations sergeant, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, was named the "Indianhead" Division's Career Soldier of the Year from a group of 20 "top notch" noncommissioned officers representing various units throughout the "Second to None."

In order to achieve this coveted title, Sgt. Thames, along with his fellow candidates, underwent a week of intensified testing which included knowledge of military subjects, overall knowledge and educational development, appearance and military bearing, character of service, instructor ability and physical fitness.

Last year, in addition to being named the 1st Infantry's Soldier of the Year, he was selected as runner-up for the title of Post Soldier of the Year and the 2nd Infantry Division's Career Soldier Award.

Numbered among the various prizes accompanying the title of Career Soldier of the Year are a $100.00 Savings Bond, a dress blue uniform, a radio and a wrist watch.

Shortly after graduation from his hometown high school, located in Fort Smith, Ark., in 1948, Sgt. Thames entered the Army and completed his basic training at Fort Riley, Kan. He then attended the Basic Airborne course here at Forg Benning and was assigned to the 11th Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky. until the out break of the Korean War.

Arriving in the "Land of the Morning Calm" in September of 1950, Sgt. Thames joined the 187th Regimental Combat Team and fought with it through three major campaigns over a three-year period.

Following his rotation back to the States in August, 1953, he served short tours at Fort Polk, La. and Fort Hood, Tex., before going to the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell.

In 1956 he rotated to Germany with his former airborne outfit, the 11th Division. Two years later he accompanied the 187th Battle Group, 24th Infantry to Lebanon when that small, Near East country was threatened with an internal Communist takeover.

Returning to the U. S. in August of 1959, Sgt. Thames became a member of the elite "Special Forces" and served as a ski instructor until his reassignment to the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry in July of 1961 which became the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry last February under the ROAD concept.

Included among his various awards and decorations are the Good Conduct Medal, the Combat Infantryman's Badge, and The Korean Service Ribbon with three Battle Stars.

MAJ. GEN. CHARLES BILLINGSLEA, DIVISION COMMANDER, GIVES THE ORDER STARTING ORGANIZATION DAY REVIEW

Lt. Col. Seaman Takes the Helm Of the 1st of 9th

By 1st Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

The newest battalion commander in the 2nd Infantry Division is Lt. Col. Robert W. Seaman. A 1946 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. Col. Seaman took command of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry on the 14th of this month.

The West Pointer originally came to the "Indianhead" Division in December, 1962 from a logistics command in Europe, but shortly after his arrival at Fort Benning he was sent to the Command General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Col. Seaman, who experienced combat in Korea during 1953 as a company commander with the 351st Infantry, served briefly as 3rd Brigade executive officer before moving over to the 9th.

A Million Shots Fired in a Year By 15th Artillery

By 15th Artillery PIO

News of the 15th Artillery often comes from many directions, even from those who have known or served with the battalion over the years. News came recently — and unexpectedly — from Viet Nam, in the form of a letter from Col. Wilbur Wilson to one of the battalion staff officers. Included therein was an unusual historical note.

On a cold morning in December 1951, the 15th Artillery, then in support of the 9th Infantry Regiment, was commanded by Col. Wilson. On that morning, Battery A of the 15th fired the 444,444th round that the battalion had fired during the Korean War.

It is a matter of some interest too, that the 15th Artillery reported to Korea on July 21, 1950, and on August 6, Battery A fired its first round in support of the 2nd Division in Korean combat.

1st of 9th SOM Is 3rd Brigade Top Man for Oct

By 1st Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

The choice for the 3rd Brigade's Soldier of the Month for October fell to PFC Mark J. Hancock, a machine-gunner at Company B, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Named Soldier of the Month at his battalion last week, Hancock was again chosen by the brigade for his outstanding military appearance, bearing and knowledge.

Three DivArty Sgt's Promoted

By Division Artillery PIO

Rockers may denote old age to some, but to 2nd Division Artillery they symbolize achievement.

Three sergeants of Headquarters Battery are displaying double rockers on their sleeves as their promotions to the grade of E-7 were announced last week.

38th Artillery Takes Trainfire Qualifications

By 38th Artillery PIO

"DivArty officers came, saw, and participated," is the slogan that depicts the scene that took place on Malone Trainfire Range last week as Battery B of the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery played host for the M-14 rifle familiarization and qualification of all personnel in the battalion.

Col. Burnside Huffman, Division Artillery commander, observed the training Tuesday morning and by noon the colonel and his staff were participating in the familiarization phase of the firing.

17th Arty Capt Praised for Duty In Swift Strike

By 17th Artillery PIO

Capt. Charles B. Harper of the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery recently received a certificate of achievement in the office of the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert, for outstanding performance of duty during Joint Exercise Swift Strike III.

For Capt. Harper's logistical support rendered as S-4 and Service Battery Commander during this period, the award was signed by Lt. Gen. Dunn, commanding general of Joint Task Force RED.

Capt. Harper is scheduled to retire at the end of this month and this award is one among many which he can be proud of during his military career.

Ten Promoted At Division Arty

By 12th Artillery PIO

October 8 meant promotion day to ten members of the 1st Battalion, 12th Artillery. Newly appointed to the hard-to-get specialist fourth class grade were: Lawyer Newton, Sidney Ramey, Brian Garrett and Otis Gilliam of Headquarters Battery; Otis Malone, Benjamin E. Kocher and Robert Moore of Battery A; Fred A. Godish, Herbert A. Porter and Norman R. McClain of Battery B.

Lt. Col. James H. McClurkin, battalion commander, presented orders to the men out in front of "Jessie May", an old World War I three-inch field piece that has stuck with the 12th Artillery for many years.

Local Boy Scout Troop Honors Division Indian

By Bob de Camara

Boy Scout Troop 200 of the Cherokee District initiated a full-blooded Kiowa Indian in to their clan one night last week with all the pomp and ceremony an energetic bunch of youngsters can muster.

Sp4 Marland Tahbonemah's appearance in flowing chief's headdress and buckskin costume in front of a blazing campfire at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer which sponsors the troop set off a wave of "oohs" and "aahs."

Tahbonemah is known as "the chief" at the 2nd "Indianhead" Division where he serves more or less as a living symbol of the three-war famous division.

Doug is the chairman of the Chattahoochee Lodge 294 dance team and was the only member of the Order of the Arrow present for the meeting.

After an invocation delivered by the church pastor, the Rev. John Ellwanger, a few rousing scout songs were sung.

Then "the chief" stepped into the circle and held the boys' attention with a history of the Kiowas and his own unique costume and background. Every inch of the buckskin has a story from the minktufted neckpiece to the sash he wears about his middle which once belonged to his grandfather, Chief I-See-O.

At the end of his talk, "the chief" fielded a lot of eager questions, some of them puzzling. One keen-eyed scout, noting the only un-Indian part of Tahbonemah's dress, put this one to him. "Chief, why do you wear socks?"

Mike Hinesley received the star rank from the adult warrior, "the first achieved in this unit," according to troop chairman Doug Nelson. And several merit badges were awarded, "the chief" shaking hands and awarding each one.

Troop 200 has been in existence only since March but has already won a camping award for the year.

The meeting was a prelude to a hike to Camp McKenzie the next morning and a two-and-a-half day camp-out under the guidance of Bill McCullar, Cherokee District executive, and the two assistant scoutmasters, Spd Joe Groth, 2nd Division, and Jim Wilson.

Maintenance Arty Topic

By 12th Artillery PIO

All forms required in the maintenance and use of the equipment of the 12th Artillery were displayed and their use and distribution explained last week.

Sgt. Homer P. Kendrick and Sgt. James T. Bennett of the Ground Mobility Department, Command Supervision Committee, U.S. Army Infantry Center made the presentation.

The instruction was designed to eliminate many doubts and questions that might arise when the new Equipment Records System Procedure becomes effective on January 1.

Orders authorizing the advancement of SFC Forester and Sgt. Flanagan were presented to them by Col. John K. Walker Jr., commander of the 3rd Brigade.

Anniversary Review Aided by Engineers

By 2nd Engineer PIO

Through the combined efforts of Companies B and C of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, Wetherby Field was spruced up and given the finishing touches as the Second Infantry Division Organization Day approached.

The project began two weeks ago, when both Company B and Company C began erecting timber trestle bridges. Company B's bridge, which is located directly behind the permanent stands on Wetherby Field, is capable of supporting 40 tons at any given time, and effectively aided in the transportation of the Commanding General and his guests, distinguished visitors, and spectators to the 2nd Division Organization Ceremonies. The bridge was built to replace an old timber trestle which had rotted away. It took SSgt. Raymond R. Ewers and his nine man squad from the third platoon of Company B a day and a half to completely tear down the old bridge and erect the new one.

At the same time SSgt. Walter C. Turner and his 15 man crew from Company C erected another timber trestle on the rear access road from Wetherby Field to Custer Road. This bridge enabled the participating troops to march on to Wetherby Field without interrupting traffic. It took Sgt. Turner and his crew four days to construct the 32 foot long bridge which is capable of supporting a load of 24 tons at one time.

The erection of timber trestle bridges on the roads surrounding Wetherby Field was not all that the engineers were required to do. Company B also had the responsibility of leveling, seeding, and watering the field. This was accomplished by a platoon of men who under the direction of SFC Dale A. Hawkins, repaired several culverts and put in new culverts along the road which circle Wetherby Field and all roads adjacent to it.

Upon completion of these culverts SFC Hawkins' men undertook to level off the area directly to the rear of the field and with the help of bulldozers and road graders, pushed the swamp back, making an area available for for Battery A, 15th Artillery to fire their salute.

By 38th Artillery PIO

Sgt. Lloyd entered the Army on July 25, 1950. He is assigned as section chief of the 6th Howitzer Section.

17th Artillery to Test Ability at Ft. Gordon

By 17th Artillery PIO

The 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery moved to Fort Gordon, Ga. on October 28, where its three firing batteries will take the annual two-week-long training test.

Shooting a battery test in unfamiliar area will test the "know how" and ability of the officers and men of these batteries. The tests will be administered by a testing team from 2nd Infantry Division Artillery. The batteries will get a few practice tests on their own and will be tested at least once by a team composed of members of the battalion prior to shooting the test for record.

The battalion, minus "Alpha" Battery, is scheduled to return to Fort Benning November 8. A Battery will depart Fort Gordon on November 5 for Fort Stewart, Ga., where it will support the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry's undergoings of counterguerrilla training.

Many people believe that scoring the highest score on the battery test is the best thing that can happen to the battery all year. One battery of the 17th Artillery will return from Fort Gordon with this honor.

New Speed Firing Is Tested With 'Buck Rogers' Type Rifle

By Bob de Camara

It has long been the theory of the Infantry Board's Capt. Dean Gosney that a soldier in close combat will stay healthier if he points his rifle like a skeet shooter rather than aims it like a marksman, especially if the sight mount is uncluttered.

Requests by Capt. Gosney to the Human Engineering Laboratories at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. resulted in the laboratory's dispatch of a young engineer to Fort Benning to check out the theory.

After two weeks of firing an AR-15, a carbine and a modified carbine rifle, it appears that 2nd Infantry Division riflemen who are taking part in the tests and Capt. Gosney have made a point.

NEW SPEED FIRING TESTED

According to Richard R. Kramer, the engineer, studies at Farnsworth Range will help design the next generation of weapons.

The AR-15 is often compared, by shape, to the Buck Rogers disintegrator ray gun of science fiction fame. Its sight is complex.

The modified carbine has the simple sight of a shotgun.

When both weapons and the regular carbine are pointed and fired like a shotgun, without aiming, the modified carbine invariably gets the nod for accuracy.

The conclusion is that the sight, weight distribution and configuration have much to do with whether a rifleman will hit his target when firing quickly. Of the three, the sight used seems to be the most important.

"If you had a lot of time to shoot," says Kreamer, "it wouldn't matter if the rifle looked like a steamroller had gone over it so long so it still had a sight."

But the virtue of speed firing is that while someone else is aiming, you point your rifle in nine-tenths of a second to an accuracy of a little less than half a degree and fire three to five times. On the battlefield it make a deathly difference.

Kramer got the 2nd Division soldiers off to a start two weeks ago firing all three weapons. After three days the men switched to the modified carbine for three days. Farnsworth Range was the last say for firing the AR-15 with weights attached.

The test controls are many and varied. Firstly, the groups are switched from day to-day. Before firing the rifles the testers supply, the men are drilled on the M-14 to give Kramer an idea of their ability and then split into three units.

At the end of the day after all the men had checked out on the AR-15, one of the least promising scorers (10 hits out of 77 shots at pop-up targets) took a modified carbine and put 25 out 45 quickly-fired shots on target.

1st Brigade Best Mess Is in 2nd Bn, 38th

By 1st Brigade PIO

SSgt. Elton G. Karm's mess hall recently won the 1st Brigade's "Best Mess" award for the month of October. The mess sergeant for Company C, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, Sgt. Karm and his assistants were presented the 1st Brigade's "Best Mess" plaque by Col. William J. Ray, commanding officer of the 1st Brigade. On hand for the presentation of the award were Lt. Col. Donald E. Lanier, commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, and Capt. John F. Santulli, commanding officer of Company C.

Sgt. Karm's mess hall won out over four others during a rugged five-part examination conducted by officers from the 1st Brigade and the 2nd Medical Battalion. Among the points covered in the examination were: administration, personnel, the kitchen area, and the preparation, serving and conservation of food.

Following the short afternoon ceremony, Col. Ray, Lt. Col. Lanier, and the brigade and battalion officers sat down to sample Sgt. Karm's coffee and cake, which were later given a rating of superior.

'. . .Every Man Shall Hold. . .'

Famous Note Added to Relics Of Indianhead Division Museum

By Bob de Camara

In August, 1950 the situation in Korea was desperate. UN forces were making a last ditch stand on the Naktong River Line, the last natural boundary between them and the Sea of Japan.

On the evening of August 31, six North Korean divisions slammed full into the "2nd" and the line wavered. Then word came down from division headquarters:

"For the honor of the Division and Country, every man shall hold his position to the last on the ground he now occupies," signed Keiser.

One afternoon last week at Fort Benning, now the garrison area of the 2nd Infantry Division which marked its 46th anniversary tomorrow, the note, hand-written on ordinary tablet paper, came to rest in the division museum.

It had been sent from Bettendorf, Ia. by a retired lieutenant colonel, William C. Wood, to whom the note had been handed by Maj. Gen. Lawrence B. Keiser after the general had scrawled it out in the early hours of the morning when the situation looked extremely bleak.

The curator of the 2nd Division museum, MSgt. Robert G. Walden, accepted the laminated curio from the present commanding general of the division, Maj. Gen Charles Billingslea.

Standing by at the brief ceremony were sergeants major of the two units which the note primarily affected during the breakthrough at Naktong. (The North Korean salient was repulsed after heavy fighting; the "2nd" broke out itself and raced northward in a sweeping rout of the Communists.)

Sgt. Maj. Alkeus Stokes of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and Sgt. Maj. Jesse C. Easterwood, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, stood silently by as the note was laid to rest for posterity in the jam-packed museum.

Since October 26, 1917 when the "Indianhead" Division was organized in Boumont, France, the 9th and 23rd Infantries have fought with the division in every major engagement.

The museum is a long, narrow room tacked onto the library at Sand Hill. It is crammed with articles of war, many of them of deep significance for members of the "Second to None."

As an example of its contents, it has everything from the baseball used by the men of the 5th Marine Regiment (then a division unit) in occupied Germany in 1919 to an armored vest of the type worn in Korea.

In between are Japanese rifles, German SS daggers, compasses, gas masks and two pink handkerchiefs embroidered by gracious frauleins.

Yet another wall is spaced into World War I, World War II and Korean War sections. Mementoes, mostly personally donated like Col. Wood's note, make up the various collections.

At present, the division is looking around for new buildings to store its growing treasures.

Each year, almost each month, the 2nd Division can expect some new gift to add to its list of keepsakes, of which the "stand or die" note is the latest in a line.

Chief of Staff Assistant Praised for Past Record

During a brief ceremony held October 21 in the 2nd Infantry Division conference room, a letter of appreciation was presented to the former division chief of staff assistant by Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant division commander, 2nd Infantry Division.

Maj. Dudley T. Bunn received the letter for the outstanding manner in which he performed his duties since assuming the position last May 10. The letter read in part: "Throughout the period of your service you have exhibited outstanding maturity, tact, and knowledge. You have worked with officers of all ranks, displaying the utmost in courteous consideration.

You have shown great initiative in shouldering portions of the Chief of Staff's workload. Your knowledge of the division, its history, its problems, its organization, and its personnel has elicited many favorable comments and has been of great assistance to your superiors."

Maj. Bunn leaves the division tomorrow for a tour of duty with the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) in Tiawan.

A 1950 graduate of the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., he fought with the 15th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division during the Korean War from September 1950 until the following June, earning the Silver Star and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Since then he has also served a three year overseas tour in Germany with the 22nd Infantry Regiment, 4th Infantry Division in addition to various assignments in the Continental United States.

He came to the "Indianhead" Division in July of 1961 after completing the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and served with the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry until May of this year.

Exercise 'Swamp Fox'

Counter-Guerilla Course for 3rd Brigade

By Sp4 Robert Kilman

The fox has entered the swamp as the 2nd Infantry Division's Counter Guerrilla Reaction Course (CGRC) matures into a tripie threat operation complete with a foreign guerrilla force, a Special Forces team and several mythical countries.

Called "Exercise Swamp Fox," Phase III of the guerrilla course will be conducted in the area of Fort Stewart, Ga. Guerrilla soldiers from selected 2nd Division units are training now prior to departure for "Guerra" and "Liberti" (Mythical countries in the Fort Stewart area).

The inspiration for the name of Phase III of the CGRC comes from Marion Fox, the famed "Swamp Fox" of the American Revolution. The "Swamp Fox" initiated many of his guerrilla activities in the lowlands and swamps of Georgia and South Carolina.

Accordingly, the guerrilla leader in Exercise Swamp Fox calls himself the "Swamp Fox". A gray fox recently inducted into the 3rd Brigade Headquarters has been designated symbol of the operation and mascot of the roving guerrillas. The "Swamp Fox" has not yet been identified by those opposing the guerrillas. The gray canine was dubbed Mr. J. K. Fox.

A check of the general situation for the third phase of the CGRC took place in the 3rd Brigade's S-3 office. Captains Jack J. Clark and Clifton D. Lollar supplied the information concerning Guerra and Liberti.

Liberti is a small nation that gained its independence in 1954. Bordered by Guerra, Liberti has been subject to insurrection sponsored by the border power. With the aid of a U.S. Assistance Mission, Liberti has been able to contain the guerrillas but has not been ale to seal its borders against infiltration.

Further assistance from the United States consists of a counter guerrilla task force (battalion size), Special Forces assistants and support groups. Actually, the counter guerrilla force will consist of those 2nd Division units entering the off-post phase of the CGRC.

The 1st Battalions of the 9th and 23rd Infantry and the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry compose the Infantry units entering the third guerrilla phase.

The 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, 7th Field, 17th Artillery and the 2nd Engineer Battalion provide the fleshing out of the Task Force for each training group. Also providing movement control and support are units from the 2nd Military Police Company and the 2nd Supply and Transportation Battalion.

Special forces personnel from the 6th Special Forces Group, Fort Bragg, N. C., are assisting in each element of the training phase. A liaison team consisting of Capt. Robert W. McNatt and SFC William H. Ettman furnish the guidance for the guerrilla course. A detachment headed by SFC Vincent Gaston is training the guerrilla band now. Four more Special Forces Detachments will be distributed among the units forming Counter Guerrilla forces.

The 3rd Brigade, commanded by Col. John K. Walker Jr., will supply the staff guidance for the problem. A special group from the brigade headquarters company will provide a headquarters detachment. Soldiers from the 3rd Brigade security platoon and communications section will compose the bulk of the group.

Little Guy; Big Job

Found: A Native-Born Georgian

By Jay R. Sharbutt

It has been said that there are no native Georgians serving in the 2nd Infantry Division.

Apparently, the boys from the Peach Tree state are harder to find at Fort Benning than reindeer in Death Valley. But within the ranks of the 1st Brigade there is a certified native-born Georgian, a Sp4 Willie P. Bedgood by name. He comes from Swainsboro, a small town which had 6,000 souls at last count.

Physically, Willie is a little guy. There isn't enough of him to glut a baby buzzard. At a cannibals' feast he would be hors d'oeuvres. From a pebble you could carve a life-size statue of him and have enough left over to travel the bottom of a bird cage. Oddly enough, his job consists of wheeling a big deuce-and-a-half around for the 1st Brigade. And he does it well, according to Sgt. William K. Moore, his section leader.

Sp4 Bedgood is the resident Southern wit of Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade. He spends a good deal of time quietly defending the Southland against the verbal onslaughts of those from the more northern colonies. For example, he sees nothing strange in having grits for breakfast.

"Grits are good for you," says Willie to the Yankee standing in the morning chow line with a look of disbelief on his face. "An average serving has more than four grams of acetylsalicylic sugof vitamin B-1 2complex and if the pain persists, see your physician."

"Now where did you learn that?" inquires FC and "Doc" Young, the 1st Brigade's medico.

"Made it up," replies Willie, who is equal to all occasions.

It might seem odd for a man born in Georgia to be serving in Georgia, but it suits Bedgood fine. The only time his Army career has taken him from his home state was during his basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C.

38th Infantry SSgt Has Athletic Prowess

By 1st Bn, 38th Infantry PIO

Staff Sergeant Earnest Francis is a graduate of Central Academy, Palakta, Florida. While a student at the Academy, Sgt. Francis literally "ran away" with five trophies in athletic competition, specifically in the one hundred yard dash, and the four hundred forty yard relays.

After completing his basic combat training at Fort Jackson, S.C., he spent nineteen months in Hawaii in the capacity of squad leader.

Sgt. Francis' great stamina and athletic prowess came to the fore once again, for upon his return to the States, he completed the difficult airborne training course at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Across the Atlantic to Mannheim, Germany was the chain of events; and he proved his merits once again, this time as squad leader in a heavy mortar platoon.

After a stint here at Fort Benning, Sgt. Francis crossed the world in the opposite direction, to serve for thirteen months in Korea as a platoon sergeant.

In recognition of his past service, Sgt. Francis was awarded the Army Expeditionary Medal; and for his more recent endeavors, he was presented, in a ceremony officiated by Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, the commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, and Capt. James R. Hoover, Headquarters Company commander, on the 6th of October of this year, with his present grade of Staff Sergeant.

Units Being Instructed By 2nd Medical Battalion

By 2nd Medical Bn, PIO

The units within Support Command are presently receiving instruction on Emergency Medical Treatment Procedures. This instruction is being given by selected instructors from the companies of the 2nd Medical Battalion.

Important in both military and civilian life, proper emergency medical treatment procedures can save a person's life. In many instances, where there has been need of emergency medical treatment, many people find themselves lacking the knowledge to perform simple first aid. Also, with the ever present possibility of total war, there will always be need for people with some medical knowhow.

Organized into three blocks of instruction, the following areas of emergency medical treatment were covered: Survival Care Procedures, Medical Aid and Damage Control, First Aid for Burns and Wounds, Cause and Control of Bleeding and Shock, First Aid for Fractures, First Aid for Chemical Casualties, Artificial Respiration, Transportation of the Sick and Wounded, The Use of the Phase 1 Kits, and Psychological First Aid.

A practical application test will be given upon completion of the instruction. This test will allow each individual to apply his learned medical treatment procedures on realistic cases. It is hoped that each individual will retain some of this knowledge for his future use.

Complete programming of this training was the responsibility of Capt. Pollock and Sgt. Rampey of the Battalion S-3 section.

By 2nd Bn, 2rd Infantry PIO

The 2nd Battalion (Mech), 23rd Infantry is giving support to the counter-guerrilla camps operated by the 2nd Infantry Division.

Company B was given this support mission. Lt. Fred Hasen, executive officer, conducts a class on ambush. He is assisted by SSgt. Wesley L. Pickett, SSgt. Charles J. Riddle, who leads the guerrilla forces, and other members of the third platoon. Lt. William D. Carson, a platoon leader, assisted by Sgt. William Smith, instructs on suspension traverse.

During suspension traverse training, Lt. Carson uses ropes to demonstrate the safe methods of crossing streams and canyons. Another platoon leader, Lt. George Jennings, has the job of teaching a class on methods of constructing rope bridges. Lt. Jennings, with the assistance of Sp5 Otis Hull, is also responsible for the training in survival and field craft.

The other subjects are taught by non-commissioned officers. Sgt. Calvin Morse holds a class on traps and snares. Sp4 Jimmie Jakes conducts training on fish traps and Sp4 Richard Bosch shows how to start a fire without matches.

The classes are designed to teach the soldier how to combat guerrillas and how to survive if cut off behind enemy lines.

There's Nothing Quite Like a Parade

"I love a parade. . ." are the opening words to a well known tune that signifies the feelings of most people. A parade is a national symbolic heritage to Americans. They have thrilled to the sights and sounds of the big marches and brassy bands since childhood. And, even as adults, they continue to get a kick out of watching the musicians, the troops and colors go by.

Last week the Army's 2nd Infantry Division celebrated its birthday with a gala review. Thousands upon thousands of people lined the field and highway to watch a scene that most had witnessed many times over. But, there's nothing like a parade.

Lining one side of the parade ground were displays of various assortments. There were rockets, guns, vehicles, mess tents serving coffee, and even a man on horseback dressed in World War I uniform.

The road leading up to the stands was busy with staff cars unloading general officers and other dignataries. Flashy military policeman kept the area free from congestion.

Reporters and photographers roamed about filling their needs. But, the main attraction to the milling throng, especially the children, was the division indian dressed in complete tribal costume. The Army specialist, a full blooded Kiowa indian, posed for pictures with all of the children wanting one, then just prior to the parade, took his place on the field.

On the other side of the grounds, directly behind the rows of lined troops, stretched a copse of woods. There, now and then, could be seen blurs of faces as youngsters peered from behind the trees to get a closer look at the thousands of soldiers standing rigidly in the early morning sun.

Flashing colors raised on high, commands were barked, and shiny black boots stepped off in unison. Company after company the long line of men executed their turns as the band and colors led the way — down the field they came.

Old Glory brought the spectators to their feet as she passed by and that unexplainable chill entwined with the hot Georgia sun to touch each person in turn.

Unit after unit marched past the reviewing stand with sharp "eyes right!" and guidons lowered. Helicopters and aircraft flew overhead in salute to the famous "Indianhead" Division; some streaming colored smoke in their wake, and the low-rapping music of John Philip Sousa reigned.

Critical-eyed commanders watched as their representatives passed by the star - studded reviewing stand and smiled contentedly as each element marched in line, straight and soldierly.

All the pagentry and esprit de corps became overshadowed for me by two seemingly unnoticed occurrences. In the bleachers, near where I stood, an elderly lady sat with tear-filled eyes as the soldiers marched down the field. A memory, perhaps, of another soldier, at another time.

Then, two rows behind her, my sight was attracted to a little girl in indian dress and a young boy in Army fatigues, standing and pointing onto the field the small boy shouted, "There's daddy!" And with arm and hand angled high, small fingers fitted into a salute, the youngster stood at proud attention. At the same time, embarrassingly hoping no one would notice, the little girl tossed a kiss into the wind.

Looking quickly onto the field I saw a company passing by with its leader rendering the hand salute. And, his eyes were not on any general or dignatary, but fixed upon a little boy and girl in the bleachers.

Yep! There's nothing like a parade . . .

Capt Westall Leaves 1st Bn, 38th Infantry

By 1st Bn, 38th Infantry PIO

After seventeen months at 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Headquarters, we are about to lose the services of a man who has become almost as permanent a fixture here as our symbolic Rock of the Marne.

Capt. Bynum P. Westall initiated his military career in 1946, and by 1950, he had climbed the enlisted man's ladder from private to platoon sergeant of a rifle platoon to master sergeant, first sergeant, and eventually to sergeant major.

In 1952, in the midst of the Korean War, he was awarded a battlefield commission as a second lieutenant, and later became the commanding officer of a company.

Since joining the ranks of the Marnemen, Capt. Westall has held the positions of Battle Group S-2, Battalion, executive officer, and Battalion S-3, which is his present capacity.

Among the awards received by Capt. Westall during his memorable military career are the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Senior Parachutist's Badge, the Good Conduct Medal, the Navy Unit Citation, the Distinguished Unit Citation, as well as the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, and the Purple Heart with two oak leaf clusters.

Capt. Westall's new assignment will be at the headquarters of the 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division.

Awards Ceremony Held by 1st of 38th

By 1st Bn 38th Infantry PIO

At an awards ceremony of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, Sgt. Maj. Harry B. Hopkins Jr. was presented a Certificate of Achievement for outstanding performance of duties with Headquarters, Special Troops, Eighth United States Army by Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, commanding officer.

The citation read, "Sergeant Major (E-9) Harry B. Hopkins Jr. is cited for outstanding service as Sergeant Major, Headquarters, Special Troops, Eighth United States Army, from 15 August 1962 to 25 July 1963. Demonstrating outstanding leadership and administrative ability, he constantly strove to achieve a more efficient operation by improving office procedures. Through the exercise of sound judgement in discharging his many complex responsibilities, Sergeant Major Hopkins accomplished all assigned duties in an outstanding manner. With perservance and untiring devotion to duty, he overcame the many administrative problems inherent in a command with such varied and widely dispersed subordinate units. His professional competence and exceptional ability in dealing with others assisted greatly in coordination with the Sergeant Majors of other staff sections. During field exercises, his thorough planning and meticulous attention to detail were major contributions toward rapid movement and establishment of the Headquarters Commandant section in the field. Sergeant Major Hopkins' tact, cooperative attitude, exemplary leadership and high standards of conduct not only enhanced the morale and efficiency of the personnel who worked under him, but earned him the respect of superiors and associates alike. His outstanding performance of duty reflects great credit upon himself, Headquarters Special Troops and Headquarters, Eighth United States Army."

Sgt. Maj. Hopkins is no stranger to the 2nd Infantry Division having served as Sergeant Major of the 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry prior to his assignment to Korea.

Fox, for the highest participation in the Savings Bond Program for September and to Company A, commanded by Lt. Harold W. Birthday Dedication Of 9th Inf Museum

By Bob de Camara

Last Saturday's Organization Day celebration for the 2nd Infantry Division consisted of several ceremonies within a ceremony.

For the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, this was the day they dedicated a museum.

The museum is a room in battalion headquarters. The objects collected over a century of campaigning from one end of the earth to the other were in the room, waiting to be officially recognized by the commanding general of the 2nd Division, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, who cut the ribbon, and other guests at the 11:15 a.m. ceremony.

It is hard to pick out of the storehouse any one object more fascinating than another. Financialy speaking, the Liscum Bowl, hand-crafted at the turn of the century of silver ore chunks, heads the list with a $125,000 price tag.

Legend surrounds the unit's two-man Chinese rifle. (By the way, the 9th Infantry has long been known as the "Manchu" regiment for its extensive duty in China and the Far East.)

Ripley, of "Belive It or Not" fame, claims it takes the firer of the two-man rifle two days to recover from the recoil. As late as the Korean War, according to a battalion officer, the Chinese Communist Forces were reportedly using that weapon.

The museum also houses Chinese, Japanese, Swiss, German and Austrian small arms; trophies at the regiment, division and army level; German army uniforms; a plaque from the governor of Thailand; a 360-lb. Balangiga bell rung by Philippine insurgents to marshal their attacks in 1901; and the remains of a World War II machine gun struck by a German 8 mm shell which killed the gunner and his assaistant.

As a complement to the giant and valuable Liscum Bowl is the Banker's Bowl, donated to the unit in 1901 by the Chartered Bank in India. Its history is somewhat clouded.

All these relics and more are on display at the museum, which received official dedication last Saturday as the "Indianhead" Division marked its 46th year.

Unit Origin

The 26th Chemical Detachment was organized at the U. S. Army Corps Training Command, Fort McClellan, Ala. on September 4, 1959 and was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division on January 21, 1960.

72nd Armor Selects SOM

By 72nd Armor PIO

The combat-ready 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor's Soldier of the Month for October was Sp5 Paul E. Hutcheson of Headquarters Company.

Sp5 Hutcheson, recently promoted to his present grade, was selected over three competing candidates.

The basis of selection was military appearance and knowledge of current affairs.

Unit Motto

On June 16, 1900 the 9th Infantry received orders directing it to China during the Boxer Rebellion. On July 13 the 9th made its famous assault on Tientsin and it was there that Col. Emerson H. Liscum was killed while leading the regiment. While dying, he gave birth to the unit's motto, "KEEP UP THE FIRE."

By 1st Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

2nd of 23rd Supporting Division's New Counter-Guerrilla Camps

By 2nd Bn, 23rd Infantry PIO

The 2nd Battalion (Mech), 23rd Infantry has initiated a MI13 Drivers' Training Course. The objective of the course is to train, qualify and license all drivers and assistant drivers in the battalion.

The instruction is given by Lt. John Greene, battalion motor officer. Lt. Greene commences the course with an orientation covering safety, maintenance, before starting and after running operations.

On the second day, the students are taken through a rugged drivers' course. Each driver must drive from six to eight times, depending on the driving skill that they have developed. The drivers' course, which covers all available types of terrain, is designed to give each driver a thorough understanding of driving under actual combat conditions.

On the third day of instruction, a convoy is formed and the APC drivers are led to Sand Hill where they receive instructions on loading and unloading Armored Personnel Carriers on rail cars. After the class on loading and unloading, the class is taken to the swamp where they receive two hours of swamp training and the first phase of amphibious training.

Teaching Career Traded For Role of Army Wife

MRS. COCHRAN

Upon completion of her grade and high school years of study in Jackson, the former Jo Marian Hoffmeister went to Southeast Missouri State College where she majored in Education. While at school, Jody was an active member of the debating team and found particularly rewarding a course that gave her an opportunity to do speech correction work with small children. It was in the college town of Cape Girardeau, during her junior year, that Jody met John Cochran. The following year in Tunica, Miss. she became the Captains' bride.

In October of 1946, Capt. Cochran was sent to Trieste, Italy, assigned to the 88th Division. Unable to accompany her husband, Jody returned to Jackson, Missouri, where she gave birth to her first child, John III.

It was April of 1948 when Mrs. Cochran joined her husband in Italy. They lived in the town of Opicina, housed in a compound of military families. Here Jody was kept occupied caring for her young son and hand washing the family laundry.

Returning to the States in 1949, the Cochran family lived in Columbus at the Victory Apartments while the Capt. attended the Infantry Officers Career Course at Fort Benning. They moved across the river in 1950 to Opelika, Alabama where Capt. Cochran was assigned as Professor of Military Science and Tactics at Cliff High School. While serving there the Cochrans were blessed with a daughter, Candace, and the captain was promoted to major.

The year 1953 saw the family settled at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas where Maj. Cochran attend the Command and General Staff College.

Jody had occasion to return to Jackson, Missouri the following year to await the return of her husband who had been assigned to Korea. With John III now in school she decided to keep busy teaching. One year of instructing the combined classes of the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th grades was enough to convince Jody that teaching, as a career, was not for her!

When the Maj. returned in November, 1955 an extended leave was enjoyed by the family. The New Year brought orders for Fort Monroe, Va. and Jody was moved into converted barracks. The stay proved most pleasant as the barracks were located just across from the beach, and it was here that Mrs. Cochran became interested in that Scottish Highland game; golf.

SHAPE Headquarters, Paris, France, read the Majors' orders in July, 1959 and Jody became an Army wife living on the European economy. Their new home was in the village of Vaucresson, just outside Paris. Maj. Cochran was promoted to Lt. Col. while stationed there. From here, Mrs. Cochran traveled the French countryside in a little Renault Dauphine, seeking antique furniture pieces. She was richly rewarded, and now possesses a beautiful collection ranging from a country French, hand carved oak hutch to a Louis Quatorze Armoire of magnificent proportion. Painting started as a hobby while in France, and here-to-fore latent talent came to light in Jody's beautiful oils now displayed throughout the Cochran home.

In August of 1962, when Col. Cochran was assigned as the 2nd Infantry Division brigade executive officer, the family took up residence at 101 Rainbow Ave., Fort Benning, Ga.

Jody was again separated from her husband in February of 1963. Col. Cochran became commander of the newly organized, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, a unit destined for a six month, experimental Rotaplan tour in Baumholder, Germany. This was Mrs. Cochrans first experience as an "on post", geographical army widow, and as such she found much pleasure and pride in sharing the events of this period with the other Army wives. Col. Cochran returned to Fort Benning in September of this year and was assigned to his present position as assistant chief of staff, G-3, 2nd Infantry Division.

Jody Cochran is now an active member of the Womans' Club of Fort Benning and the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club. She is second vice president of the Womans' Club, a position traditionally held by a wife from the 2nd Diivison, as such, she is liaison between the two clubs and project chairman for the cookbook, "Queen of Battle, Her Recipes."

Col. John W. Armstrong

New Commander Is Assigned To Division's Support Command

The 2nd Infantry Division's Support Command has a new leader.

He is a United States Military Academy graduate, a combat veteran who entered the service as a private and rose to the rank of colonel, and a tireless believer in the flow of responsibility upwards and down.

Tuesday afternoon, after duty hours in Theater Seven on Sand Hill, Col. John W. Armstrong accepted the colors of the conglomerate support unit from the outgoing commander, Lt. Col. Charles A. Morris.

Col. Armstrong inherits an important division command only in existence since division reorganization in February. Under the new ROAD concept, the 2nd Medical Battalion, the 2nd Administrative Company, the 702nd Maintenance Battalion, the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion and Headquarters Support Command and Band have been lumped together to form Support Command, a unit which has otherwise been known since the division's birth in 1917 as "Trains."

Around the Indianhead Division, Support Command is more familiarly known as the "man behind the gun."

In addition to a farewell talk by Col. Morris, who goes to the 1st Brigade, and a speech of acceptance by Col. Armstrong, the meeting in the theater before officers and top-ranking noncommissioned officers of the Support Command also served as an opportunity to honor a composite platoon of Company B, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

The platoon has been chosen best-drilled in the Support Command. Tuesday afternoon they carried away a trophy given by Col. Armstrong.

The leadership switch began with a talk by Col. Morris in which he said, "For me, the last eight months have been most profitable for my career, outside of actual combat experience. You have taught many lessons and I have learned more about your business than I could have acquired through formal schooling in twice the time. If I have imparted to you an equal insight into the so-called art of basic soldiering, there has been a highly profitable exchange of knowledge."

Col. Morris noted that in his months with the unit, he has grown attached to Support Command.

"Perhaps I'm overly sentimental about leaving Support Command; but I readily confess that I am not at all happy to do so. I feel that I am a part of this Command—and I am truly proud of it. To me, you are the finest outfit in the division."

The departing commander admitted that in eight months not all wrinkles have been ironed out of the new unit. "You have your problems. You have some few people who are not doing their share. But most of you who are here today are aware of your problems and are working toward correcting your deficiencies."

The basic theme of Col. Morris' farewell talk picked at the points at which support units are basically the same as infantry units and yet different because of mission.

Since taking over Support Command in February, Col. Morris has had to make a compromise. "I have had to become less insistent on formations and tactical training which, if held too often, would preclude your having enough time to do your primary job."

"On the other hand, you have come to realize that it is possible to do more basic training than you had previously thought."

Next, Col. Morris briefly summarized Col. Armstrong's career before turning over the colors with a challenge.

Sgt. Maj. Laurence H. Berger, Support Command sergeant major, handed the colors to Col. Morris who gave them to Col. Armstrong.

Col. Armstrong strode to the rostrum. "Sit down, please."

The audience sat. Through the doors at the front of the theater, the best-drilled platoon, wearing olive drab field uniforms and crimson scarves, marched smartly to the speaker's platform, their heels drumming loudly in the silent theater.

They took the stage and formed up in tight ranks, the voice of the platoon sergeant rasping harshly over the quiet room. The trophy was given. The platoon marched off.

Col. Armstrong then launched into a three-pronged speech. He prefaced his remarks with compliments to the men in front for their superior performance on Organization Day, the division's birthday last Saturday which featured a large review on Wetherby Field.

The colonel said he had heard that several of the senior commanders of the 2nd Division had mentioned the Support Command as the most impressive on the field Saturday. He, himself, had toured the areas after the marching and found the unit displays well-arranged.

"While I knew I was being given one of the most important commands in the division. I had not known that excellence in the basic soldier skills was an additional accomplishment of Support Command.

The meeting in Theater Seven, as Col. Armstrong explained it, was for the leaders, and the "large majority of the key leadership of Support Command" was present, to get to know him and for the colonel to get an initial look at them all under one roof. It was the people in the theater who, to the greatest extent, would determine if Support Command was to be "real hot outfit of fighting."

The first phase of Col. Armstrong's talk dealt with responsibility. Generally speaking, the responsibility of the lowest-ranking man in Support Command and of the commander is the same. "The differences are only in the details of performance and the levels at which each applies his responsibilities."

He likened responsibility to a cross. At the top is responsibility to seniors; and at bottom, to juniors. On either sides of the cross is the responsibility one owes to his neighbors; in the case of the 2nd Division, the responsibility Support Command owes to the combat elements.

Why is this important?

"How well we do our job will to a great extent measure how well the division will accomplish its missions. Any one of the brigades may fail; DivArty can do its mission in a mediocre fashion; and the whole division may still perform in an outstanding manner."

"However, if we don't do our jobs well, the division won't, either. The rest of the division could be magnificent, but a poor Support Command will make it a poor division."

The colonel then outlined his responsibilities to Division Artillery and the three brigades, his responsibility to Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, the division commanding general, and to each of the members of the audience and the other personnel who make up Support Command.

"My next point to discuss is 'The Support command as One Unit.'"

"The ROAD organization concept," Col. Armstrong warned, "is not for military amateurs." However, as ROAD is a fairly new working idea for the 2nd Division, "we will soon be entering what I call the development phase.

"By this, I mean that procedures we know are working well must be refined and made habits. Procedures which require adjustment must be changed to better ones — more efficient ones."

Under the second point, 'Support Command As One Unit', Col. Armstrong also laid stress on entering as a profession rather than a job. Therefore, there are no set hours.

"The soldier's time allocation is based on the immediate workload, how much his family can do without him, how much rest and relaxation he has to have to do his best.

"Now, Support Command is unique in the division. Everyone has to eat, have gas, have equipment in a ready-to-go-shape whether we're in the field or garrison.

"Everyone in Support Command must be trained — only in their peculiar skills but in the soldierly skills as well. Support Command must also plan for any situation."

"The senior never loses the responsibility to train his inniors. The junior also has the responsibility of tactfully training his senior."

The colonel went on for another minute in this vein, exploring the necessity for conditioning each other and arriving at an understanding of capabilities and limitations.

The colonel wound up his talk with a thank you and an offer to be of help at any time possible. "My door is open to you and your men to help in solving any problems that can come up."

A native of New York who currently makes his home in the South, Col. Armstrong enlisted in the Army in July 1938 as a private.

After a brief period with the 16th Infantry, the colonel received an appointment to the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., graduating with the class of 1943.

Courses at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, and several stateside positions prepared him for duty in the European Theater of Operations where he went in August 1944 as a company commander in the 47th Infantry.

In overseas combat, the colonel earned a Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Since those early days of service, Col. Armstrong has served in a variety of positions and tabulated a string of accomplishments to his military record.

He has completed schooling at the Command and General Staff College and the U. S. Army War College. In 1961, he supplemented his academy degree with a Masters Degree from George Washington University.

By 1st Bn., 38th Infantry PIO

While training at Little Creek, Va. recently, the members of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry found time in their busy schedule to participate in an intra-battalion drill competition. A platoon and squad from Company A proved their ability and coordination superior to the other companies. They not only placed first and second in the squad drilling, but walked away with first place as the outstanding platoon.

Their facing movements were as if by remote control. To the onlookers that gathered about the field, it appeared as if a massive robot was drilling rather than a platoon.

On their return to Fort Benning, Company A once again proved their superiority by placing first in the company drill.

He returned to the states in 1946 and after several stateside assignment's was on his way overseas again, this time to Japan. He was again assigned to the 24th Infantry Division.

3rd Bde Men Conduct Laymen's Sunday Church Service at Chapel 3

Laymen in thousands of churches throughout the United States and Canada, and servicemen in chapels around the world worshipped recently in a Laymen's Sunday service. Laymen's Sunday is the day when the laymen of the church prepare and conduct the regular worship service in the church.

The Laymen's Sunday service held in the Sand Hill Chapel 3 was sponsored by Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade. The service was conducted by members from each of the units of the 3rd Brigade.

Guest speaker for the Sunday morning service was Col. John K. Walker Jr., commander of the 3rd Brigade. Col. Walker based his sermon on the world wide theme for Laymen's Sunday, "Your Neighbor as Yourself".

In his talk, Col. Walker emphasized the true dictionary meanings of the words love, neighbor and yourself. With this he brought out the implied meanings of these words as they apply to Christ's commandment, "Love your neighbor as yourself."

The Laymen's Sunday service was led by Sgt. William H. Poe of Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade. The responsive reading was read by PFC Odell Wilmer.

Division Football Tourney Swings Into High Gear Kelly Leads 1st of 23rd to Birthday Squeaker Win

7th Cav Stuns 12th Arty As Williams Leads Attack

Quarterback John Kelly passed for all three touchdowns and scored all three extra points as he led the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry team to a 21-19 thriller victory over 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry in a special Organization Day flag football game Saturday at Knight Field.

The 9th Infantry started off the afternoon's scoring in the first quarter when guard Joseph Chambers intercepted a 22nd Infantry pass. This set up a 20-yard scoring pass play from quarterback Robert Smith, who also had a sensational day, to end Lucuis Willis.

A 49-Yarder

The victor's first period touchdown was also set up by an interception. Here Frank Martin made the snare. Kelly then unleased his first bomb of the day, a 49 - yard chuck to right halfback Bobby Sparks. Kelly then ran the pigskin over for the point after touchdown to give the 23rd a 7-6 lead.

But 2nd of the 9th came back strongly in the second stanza, scoring twice to take a 19-7 lead. Smith was responsible for both of these, the first coming on a 19-yard pass to end Jimmie Bailey. Toward the end of the first half, Willis intercepted a Kelly pass and then Smith passed to Leroy Myrick. Smith then tallied the extra point to complete his team's scoring.

But 1st of the 23rd wasn't through and the final up team wrapped up its victory in the third quarter with a 14-point spree.

Rollers on Scores

The 9th received the kickoff on the 20-yard line but was unable to move the ball and had to punt. Gerald Rogers ran the punt back 37 yards for the 23rd to the 10-yard line. Kelly then whipped a pass to Herbert Rolleson for the six-pointer. Kelly tallied the extra point narrowing the gap to 19-14.

After the touchdown, 2nd of the 9th was unable to move the ball and 1st of the 23rd took over. Kelly then moved his team to the opponents 21-yard line where he let lose with an aerial to Charles Hawkins for the victory. Kelly added an insurance point moments later.

Ironically, the losers dominated play most of the way, collecting 168 yards passing to 1st of the 23rd's 109, and 34 yards rushing to 15. The 2nd of the 9th grabbed off six first downs to the victors' three but gave up 31 more yards in penalties than 1st of the 3rd.

Marines' 7-0 Record Boasts College Wins

Fort Benning's Doughboys will face their toughest opponent of the 1963 gridiron season tomorrow night when they tangle with the Quantico Marines on the Virginians' field.

Led by star signal caller Tom Singleton, the Marines operating out of the winged-T have raced past seven straight opponents this year, including two victories over major college elevens.

Falling before the Leathernecks have been Xavier of Ohio, 9-7; Fort Bragg, N.C., 18-6, Fort Lee, Va., 10-0; Fort Campbell, Ky., 41-0; Fort Dix, N. J., 54-6; Fort Devens, Mass., 42-6, and Holy Cross, Mass., 7-6, last Saturday night.

97 First Downs

Quantico has rolled to 97 first downs this season compared to 40 for its opponents. On the ground the Marines have amassed 1,226 yards to 256 for the opposition and 497 to 264 in the air.

Among players with over 20 carries this season, Frank Finizio heads the list with a 5.3 rushing average coming on 117 yards in 22 rushes. Close behind are Singleton with 327 yards in 66 trips for a 4.9 average and Dave Hayes with 502 yards in 103 carries, also a 4.9 average.

In the passing department, rifle-armed Singleton has completed 17 of 27 for 167 yards with six interceptions and no touchdowns. Behind Singleton are Pat McCarthy with 10 of 16 for 109 yards, one interception and two TD's and D. McKibban with 10 of 18 completions for 190 yards with one interception and three TD's.

Leading scorers for the Marines are Hayes with 42 points, Finizio has 24, Singleton with 20, Jim Davis with 16, and Herm Brauch with 12 points.

Leading ground gainer for Fort Benning is halfback Ken Bolin who dropped more than a point Friday in his average yards per carry which now stands at 10.2, coming on 316 yards in 31 carries. He has not crossed the goal line a single time this season.

Bolin Leads Doughboys

Behind Bolin are Brewster Hobby with 190 yards on 31 carries for an average of 6.1, Ron Quillen, out of the Lackland game with an injured ankle, with 5.8 average on 7 yards in 41 carries, and scatback Billy Williamson of Atlanta with a 5.7 average coming on 235 yards in 43 rushes.

The 160-pound Williamson leads all scorers with 60 points. Next are DeWayne Jeter with 31, Hobby with 26 and Marvin Tibbetts with 20.

Passing Off Form

In passing the Doughboys have been somewhat off form this season. Tibbetts holds a slim edge over Dave Sarette, with 11 completions in 32 attempts for 46 yards and a 34.3 average. Sarette has hit 10 out of 32 for 141 yards and a 31.1 average. Both have had three aerials intercepted and have thrown twice for touchdowns.

Fort Benning's record stands at 6-1, its only loss coming at the hands of Fort Bragg, 14-7.

Deer Season At Benning Opened Today

The deer season on the Georgia portion of the Fort Benning reservation opened at sunrise today.

Safety is being stressed by Fort Benning Fish and Game authorities more emphatically this year because of the narrowing of hunting areas caused by increased training space.

The season lasts through Jan. 5, 1964, and restricts hunters to shotguns using only buckshot or slugs.

The resrevation's Alabama season opens Nov. 9 and runs through Jan. 1.

Week's Lineup Promises Upsets; Ole Miss Underdog in Tiger Den

Most of last week's games followed pre - game scripts, but as usual, upsets sprinkled the lists of results. The way Stanford manhandled Notre Dame's Irish surprised everyone — including the Indians. Ohio State shocked a few with their 13-10 win over favored Wisconsin and Texas Tech impressed fans with their 13-9 shocker over Southern Methodist.

This week's lineup promises to supply more upsets as rival schools begin to face each other across the country. The big headliner will be the Ole Miss, LSU battle in Baton Rouge. This is always one of the prenier battles in the SEC. Both teams field top flight teams this year and both appear bowl - bound. Fans at Fort Benning will be able to hear the leather pop from here when these giants tear into each other.

LSU OVER OLE MISS. . .

The Tiger Den in Baton Rouge is murder for visiting teams, even those quarterbacked by Perry Lee Dunn. The score may surprise you. LSU will win by two touchdowns.

AIR FORCE OVER ARMY . . .

The Cadets are capable, but the Falcons look more talented from here. Terry Isaacson will lead his team to three or more touchdowns. Army won't tally more than 10 points.

NORTHWESTERN OVER MICHIGAN. . .

It's redemption time for the Wildcats. Tommy Myers will take up the slack left over from last week's heartbreaker with Michigan State and lead his team to a 19 point victory.

GEORGIA TECH OVER DUKE. . .

The Atlantic Coast Conference still can't play with upper division SEC teams. Lothridge & Co. will dismantle the Blue Devils and emerge the victor by at least two tallies.

FLORIDA OVER AUBURN . . .

The Plainsmen have to lose sometime and this could well be the week. Larry Dupree is as good as Fredrickson and Tom Shannon can almost keep up with Jimmy Sidle. The Gators will be the team with the most to gain and will play like they did against Alabama. Look for a 14-10 ball game.

SOUTHERN CAL OVER WASHINGTON. . .

They're still one of the best and will beat Washington handily. The Trojans have too much offense for the Huskies. They'll outscore Washington 27-13.

PITTSBURGH OVER SYRACUSE. . .

Pitt is smarting from the spanking administered last week by Roger Staubach and his Navy teammates. They will rebound and win by score of 21-17.

KENTUCKY OVER MIAMI (FLA) . . .

Rick Norton can pass with anyone and Larry Rakestraw proved two weeks ago that Miami is weak in the defensive secondary. Norton's Kentucky crew will win a close one. The score will be high — maybe 24-20.

Alabama over Mississippi State
Arkansas over Texas A&M
Baylor over Texas Christian
Georgia over North Carolina
Ohio State over Iowa
Penn State over Maryland
Minnesota over Indiana
Florida State over Furman
Tulane over South Carolina
Texas over SMU

Williamson Scores 2 In 14-13 Squeaker

By Dave Braun

Halfback Billy Williamson sprinted for two touchdowns last Friday afternoon at sunny Warhawk Stadium and once-beaten Fort Benning squeezed by Lackland Air Force Base, 14-13, before a capacity crowd of 7,500.

Behind 14-7 with 50 seconds remaining in the game, Lackland's Jim Geist hit Wally Hill on a spectacular pass play in the end zone and then missed an attempted try for a two-point conversion.

Lineman Lloyd Brown fumbled the opening kickoff and the Warhawks recovered on the Doughboy 37. Four plays later, former University of Oklahoma star quarterback Monte Deere rambled to the Fort Benning 17 on an option play for a first down.

Deere Injured

Injured on the play, Deere, a five-foot, 10-inch, 165-pounder was taken from the contest. It was disclosed after the game that he had received a fractured wrist.

Five bucks at the Army team forward wall, aided by a five-yard penalty, put the ball on the Doughboy one-yard line. From this point with 9:49 left in the quarter, fullback Clarence Freney of Phoenix, Ariz., rammed in for the touchdown. The extra point try was good and the Warhawks led 7-6.

Williamson Scores

Late in the first period the Doughboys began an 84-yard scoring drive, finally capped by Williamson's 10-yard spurt around right end with 14:22 remaining in the second quarter. DeWayne Jeter's extra point boot was perfect and the score was knotted at 7-7.

Quarterback Marvin Tibbetts dropped back in the pocket on first down and overfaked Fred Murphy in the right flat, but then came back on the second play to connect with Brewster Hobby on the Warhawk's six-yard stripe.

When Hobby failed to pick up any yardage in the middle of the line, Tibbetts pitched out to the 160-pound Williamson who darted in around right end standing up.

With 44 seconds remaining on the clock in the half, Jeter again split the uprights and it was 14-7.

Early in the final stanza Fort Benning was forced to punt from its own 26-yard line. Tibbetts boomed the ball all the way to the Lackland one-yard stripe where halfback Malcolm Griffin was dropped in his tracks.

Field Goal Missed

Failing to make the needed yardage, the Warhawks punted dead on the Lackland 40. Fort Benning quickly moved to the 11-yard line, spearheaded by a 19-yard loss from Tibbetts to Murphy. Four running plays coupled with a penalty put the ball on the nine-yard stripe where a Jeter field goal try from the 17 went wide.

Between the Sidelines

By Ted Williamson

One hundred and fifty pounds of lightning bolted through Dyche Stadium in Evanston, Ill., last Saturday and left a throng of slightly more than 50,000 dazed and amazed.

Traveling under the name of Sherman Lewis and wearing the green and white colors of the Michigan State Spartans, this miniature form of devastation played havoc with Northwestern and succeeded in making All-American quarterback Tom Myers the dizziest man in football. Myers, it seemed, would throw the ball in the general direction of one of his receivers, and then have to make a quick about-face in order to catch a glimpse of Lewis, ball in hand, streaking in the opposite direction.

Needless to say, this dastardly sort of banditry resulted in a Spartan victory, and all but shattered the Wildcat's dreams of grabbing the elusive Big Ten title.

Three of my top ten from last week took it on the chin Saturday and there resulted another shuffle for the top positions. I don't think there is any doubt in any one's mind who is tops. Here's how they follow Texas.

1. Texas (6-0)
2. Oklahoma (4-1)
3. Illinois (4-0-1)
4. Auburn (5-0)
5. Mississippi (4-0-1)
6. Louisiana State (5-1)
7. Wisconsin (4-1)
8. Navy (5-1)
9. Alabama (5-1)
10. Pittsburgh (4-1)

Only Texas and Oklahoma figure to be overwhelming favorites this week, although the Longhorn's opponents, Southern Methodist, cannot be taken too lightly. The Sooners meet Colorado in what should be a runaway. Illinois meets Purdue's "Spoilermakers," Auburn takes on up and down Florida and Ole' Miss clashes head-on with LSU in Baton Rouge Saturday night. Wisconsin must face those swift Spartans from Michigan State, Navy travels to South Bend to do battle with the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame and Alabama will try to pin the Second loss on rugged Mississippi State. Pitt's Panthers face the unenviable task of trying to recover from last week's loss to Navy against Syracuse. The Orangemen could well turn out to be the class of the East.

According to some of the so-called experts here in the South, Rebel football is far superior to that played in other parts of the country. They point out that Southern football teams, SEC teams in particular, have sent the greatest number of college heroes on to the National Football League.

In view of this, I decided to check around, and I came up with what I think is an interesting figure. In checking the pre-season rosters of the NFL clubs, I found that there were approximately 40 per cent more players listed from schools in the Big Ten area than from schools in the SEC region.

BILLY WILLIAMSON

KEN BOLIN

Williamson and Bolin Have Speed to Burn

By Dave Braun

'Lightning in Blue' could very well describe Fort Benning's "Blue" team halfback duo of Billy Williamson and Ken Bolin — both have speed to burn.

The two light-footed backs have scurried and scampered through enemy territory all season, applying pressure to Fort Benning opponents.

Williamson, a fleet 5-foot, 8-inch, 160-pounder already has tucked 10 touchdowns under his belt this year and is knocking on the door of an average of six yards-per-carry.

Georgia Tech Product

One of a long line of outstanding small backs who have set foot on the Georgia Tech gridiron, likeable Williamson was a three-year veteran of Southeastern Conference football.

He climaxed his collegiate football career by being named to the All-SEC teams in 1960 and 1961. Co-captain of the "Rambling Wrecks" eleven in 1961, he also was a three-year veteran infielder of the Tech baseball nine.

A dangerous breakaway threat, Williamson has constantly electrified fans with his punt returns this season. In the Oct. 19 Fort Bragg tilt he returned four punts for 118 yards.

Bolin Weights 170

On the other hand, his running mate at left half, Bolin, the bigger of the two scatbacks at 5-foot, 11-inches and 170 pounds, has been less prolific in the scoring department. Although he has not scored a point this season, Bolin is the Doughboys top ground gainer.

Bolin leads all Fort Benning ball carriers with an average of 10.2 yards per carry on the ground. With just 31 running plays from scrimmage in six Doughboy contests, the swift halfback has picked up 316 yards.

A four-year footballer at his University, Bolin was co-captain of the Cougars in 1961, and voted the most outstanding back in 1960 and 1961.

Overcomes Record Breaker

Great Comeback Gets Win for Sgt. Anderson

By SSgt. Lee La Combe

SSgt. Hershel Anderson of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit swept from behind last Sunday to capture the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club's monthly pistol tournament with a three-gun aggregate score of 2,657 out of a possible 2,700 points.

MTU teams racked up victories in all four of the team matches with the Blue squad capturing three championships and the Grey quartet chalking up one.

The service pistol aggregate went to MTU's SFC John Lingle, who had to overcome a record-breaking effort by teammate SFC Loyd Burchett.

Burchett's 200-15x in the Timed Fire match surpassed the old mark of 200-13x set by Capt. T. D. Smith of the Air Force. Burchett finished second in the aggregate with 869.

SETS NEW RECORD
Sgt. Burchett

MTU shooters grabbed the top five places in the grand aggregate. SSgt. James McNally was runnerup with 2,639; Sgt. Robert Wilford finished third with 2,634; Sgt. Merriweather Jones was fourth with 2,633 and Sgt. Anton Hermann came in fifth with 2,633.

Anderson's winning total in the .45 caliber aggregate was 887 out of 900. McNally was runnerup with 877.

The Army Blue team won the .22 caliber Center Fire and service pistol team championships with scores of 1,180, 1,182 and 1,141 respectively. The Grey squad broke the streak by taking the .45 caliber match with an 1,159.

SSgt. Leland Wessel, who was the first day leader in the race for individual honors, won the .22 caliber individual aggregate with an 893.

Sgt. Howard Gulliksen of Third Army AMU captured the Center Fire title with an 883.

Your Dental Health

Do It Yourself Packages Available for Oral Care

By Capt. Robert Cross

Did you see the "Dear Abby" column October 21st? A woman wanted to buy a "Do-it-yourself-dental - kit" for her husband whom she felt could do anything. Wouldn't that be something?

Can't you see this spreading across the country like a grass fire in dry weather! Imagine your wife opening her mouth and saying "It's that one, dear," and then you go to work.

Of course, the better kits would have a warning to you not to treat your wife or mother-in-law.

Seriously, we do have do-it-yourself dental kits. It is a preventive kit with components known as tooth brush and tooth paste. Accompanying it are specific instructions on maintaining a natural dentition in perfect shape. In case you misplaced the instructions, here they are again:

1. Brush your teeth after each meal or snack.
2. Reduce refined carbohydrates in the diet, especially between-meal - snacks.
3. Get regular dental check-ups and treatment when indicated.

He Commands Police Unit

Lt. Col. Jack Subardja, an Indonesian student in The Infantry School's associate career course No. 1, began his military career when he joined the student army of Indonesia which was fighting the Dutch for control of the government after World War II.

He served with the revolutionary forces until 1949 when the United Nations was able to negotiate a settlement between the two factions.

In 1950, Col. Subardja became a member of the Indonesian Police Force which is in a sense part of his country's military forces. When he was chosen by his government to attend The Infantry School, he was serving as commanding officer of the 2nd Regiment of the Mobila Brigade, — organized and maintained as a military unit. His unit is stationed in West Java.

The veteran officer earned a master's degree from the Faculty of Police Science in 1956, and became a member of the General Staff of the Mobila Brigade.

COL. SUBARDJA

In other assignments before taking command of the 2nd Regiment, Col. Subardja was executive officer and commander of the 11th Regiment of the brigade.

The colonel speaks Indonesian, English and Dutch.

Col. Subardja's country consists of four major islands — Java, Sumatra, Borneo and Celebes — and almost 3,000 other smaller ones stretching over 3,000 miles in Southeast Asia. Throughout the country, the climate is tropical with a dry season prevailing from June to October. Indonesia's government is a "guided democracy" under President Sukaro.

Big Lift Aftermath

U.S. Will Not Trim Overseas Forces in Foreseeable Future

CHICAGO (AFPS) — Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric has announced that "for the foreseeable future the United States will maintain both large overseas deployments and significant capabilities to reinforce such military power with great rapidity."

The Secretary said that there lies ahead of the U.S. military establishment a series of evolutionary changes in the composition and disposition of its military units stationed overseas.

"For years the United States has backed up the protection of its vital interest and its alliance commitments," the Secretary said, "by keeping a large proportion of its active forces on duty abroad."

Secretary Gilpatric emphasized that 10 years ago we lacked the ability to put into the field large quantities of logistical support and to bring to combat theaters U. S.-based airpower. Today we can do this in no more time than it took previously to deploy planes stationed on rear bases overseas.

He mentioned that the Big Lift exercise (airlifting troops from Texas to Germany) will demonstrate our ability to project our military power far more quickly over far larger distances than has ever been the case in the past.

The Secretary continued, "By employing such a multi-based capability the United States should be able to make useful reduction in its heavy overseas military expenditures without diminishing its effective military strength or its capacity to apply that strength swiftly in support of its worldwide policy commitments.

"Any such adjustments will of course be based on consultation with our major allies and so far as possible upon agreed NATO policies.

"In particular we look forward to continued close understanding with our allies in the German Federal Republic who share with us a primary responsibility for the central front of the Western Alliance.

"The central object of our policy will be unchanged to sustain a major American presence in the defense of Western Europe at all levels of force," Secretary Gilpatric said.

3-A Shooters Host 9 Allies In Big Clinic

The Third Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit (TUSAAMU) carried on some military assistance advising last week when they played host to nine Canadian soldiers at the annual Third Army Rifle Instructors clinic.

In this clinic, the Canadians along with about 80 marksmen from posts throughout the Third Army, learned the techniques used by the Army's finest shooters, member of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training unit (USAMTU) who carried on the classes.

"Rifle coaches are to shooting what Casey Stengel was to the New York Yankees, Maj. James O. Duke, TUSAAMU commander explained.

The coaches, Canadian and U. S. alike, will return to their home bases with a bevy of information to spread through their posts' lower echelons and bring the Army's basic skill, marksmanship, down to the individual level. This lower echelon instruction will begin the wheels rolling of the Army's marksmanship year which will start at the Company level in the competitive matches and work its way through the Army area level to the Army level and finally consummate itself at the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Brrr! It's Cold

10 Benning Troops Back From Bad Weather Test

Ten Fort Benning soldiers recently participated in volunteer tests for cold acclimatization studies at the Army Institute of Environmental Medicine at Natick, Mass.

Along with six soldiers from Fort Chaffee, Ark., and six others from Fort Sill, Okla., the Fort Benning volunteers tried to help researchers learn whether a man can become acclimatized to the cold while he sleeps, and if there is any difference between day and night time exposures.

The tests were conducted in the climatic chambers, a research facility in which temperatures may be regulated from -70 degrees to 16 degrees Fahrenheit. Wind, humidity, solar radiation, rain and snow also may be created to duplicate environmental conditions anywhere in the world.

With the temperature regulated at 40 degrees F. in the chambers, the day subjects wore gym shorts and sneakers for a six hour period, while the night volunteers slept in lightweight sleeping bags for eight hours. Instruments recorded their oxygen consumption, body temperatures and shivering.

Cold acclimatization studies consisted essentially of exposing a person to a cold temperature for a certain period of time to determine if he can tolerate more cold after the test than he did at the beginning.

Those who participated from Fort Benning are Sgt. Vernon H. Ferguson, Sgt. James R. Haggerty, PFC James K. Gandee, and Spc E. W. Oliver, all of the 2nd Division; Sp4 Frederick F. Ferry, PFC Carl E. Herriage, and Pvt. Jerry L. Spurlock, 197th Infantry Brigade; PFC John Gardon, 60th Armor; PFC Maurice E. Lee, 72nd Engineer Company, and Sp4 Kenneth T. Crawford, 54th Quartermaster Company.

No Numbers Available

'Sorry, Sir, You'll Have to Wait'

It was a day about like any other when the telephone company started running out of numbers. An East Coast man was the first victim — he had to settle for a phone without a number. He could dial out, but nobody could dial him.

Not long afterward, the shortage spread to a Mid-western City. New residents added their names to a waiting list, hoping for someone to move out of town and leave his telephone number behind.

One city reported a black market in telephone numbers. An expanding manufacturing firm bid $50, but the asking price was $150. . .

Of course, this is an exaggerated situation conjured up to dramatize a simple fact: The day wouldn't be far off when the nation started to run out of numbers if telephone companies didn't embark on their new numbering system — All Number Calling. The system identifies phones by seven-figure numbers, and was specifically designed to keep pace with booming telephone growth.

The number of U.S. phones has increased by more than 60 per cent in the last 10 years. Almost a quarter-million are added each month.

The numbers assigned to all phones must fit a nation-wide telephone numbering system so that each can be dialed from any other phone in the country — and someday, from any other phone in the world — with ease and without error.

ANC, telephone talk for All-Number Calling, was adopted by telephone companies throughout the United States and Canada as the best way to avoid running out of numbers. There were alternatives, but ANC offered the most advantages and the least change in existing dialing habits.

Critics of the change usually contend that man is losing his identity to social security numbers, credit card numbers, checking account numbers and, now, all-number telephone numbers.

Telephone people acknowledge this sentiment and recognize the attachment many persons have to exchange names such as BUtterfield, MELrose and LIberty. But, though reluctant, they are compelled to make the change.

Why? Because a telephone numbering system using all figures will provide almost half again as many numbers as the system combining two letters and five figures.

It provides several hundred new numerical combinations and avoids the pitfalls of other proposed remedies. Most important numbers such as 555-2368 — which means the same to dial switching equipment as KL 2368—will accommodate telephone growth into the next century.

The switch to All-Number Calling started with a trial run in Wichita Falls, Texas, in 1958. Since then, seven-figure telephone numbers gradually have been introduced elsewhere, and 30 per cent of the 86-million phones in the United States and Canada will have ANC numbers by the end of this year.

ANC offers several fringe benefits, too: Wrong numbers caused by misspelling and mispronouncing exchange names are eliminated. Dials of the future can be smaller and yet easier to read with just numerals.

YACtivities

By John Cerar

Highlighting the week's football activities in the YAC league we find the standings much the same as last week, with a minor exception in the Biddy League.

The two big games pitted the Red Devils and Tankers, and the Crusaders and Cavaliers. The first match saw the Tankers, sparked by Bob Faulkners TD's, score an 18-6 victory over the Red Devils and take over fourth place. The Crusaders put together a stiff defense and balanced offense to take over the third place slot with a 13-0 win.

Over in the Doughboy circuit, the Packers took their fourth straight from the Rams with a 6-0 win. The single TD was turned in by Curtis Baker on an end sweep. The Giants eased by the Colts, 7-6, and held on to second place behind the Packers.

The Intermediate League furnished the best action this week with the Redkins overwhelming the Chargers, 35-0 and the Colts and Bears ending in a 19-19 tie. This last game saw some of the hardest charging line play thus far. The Colts were down 19-13 with 10 seconds remaining in the game. QB Walt Donaldson let loose with a long pass and hit Josh Slappy for the TD. With just seconds remaining the Bears stiffened and stopped the extra point attempt. The standings remain the same with the Redskins out in front and the Colts, Bears, and Chargers scrambling for the runner-up spot.

The eight team Bowling League is nearing completion with two teams scrambling for the top rung on the statistics ladder. The current first place team of Mark Stirzenback, Rick Kubauch, James Barrown and Richard Cutler keep rolling along, with the second place team of Susan Scott, Denny Hartman, J. T. Fare and Dana Loteat right on their heels.

Individual honors for high series go to J. T. Fare, 580; Al Simmons, 567; Karen Bowland, 523; Bopead Poteat, 510. Karen Bowland also turned in the girls high game with a 199, while the boys bracket was topped by Daniel Ramage's 233.

At the Movies

UNDER THE YUM-YUM TREE, starring Jack Lemmon, Carol Lynley, Dean Jones and Edie Adams, finds Lemmon as a "cutie chaser" who rents his apartment only to gorgeous gals; his schemes and dreams backfire when a former "glamour tenant" shows up and upsets his apple-cart.

CARRY ON TEACHER, starring Joan Sims and Leslie Phillips, is a side-splitting comedy which finds a group of students engaged in hilarious extra-curricular antics when they decide to "sabotage" the efforts of the principal who is planning to leave the school.

SPENCER'S MOUNTAIN, produced by Warner Brothers, stars Henry Fonda, Maureen O'Hara and James MacArthur in a drama in color. It is the story of a rugged, hard-living father of a family of nine who is determined to achieve the best for his brood. When one of his sons decides to go to college, a family crises arises because of the lack of money.

Army Now Using New Food Pack

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new method of food preservation— called freeze-dehydration—will be put into operation soon at Army posts across the United States.

The Department of the Army said the new method will make the preserved foods significantly more acceptable in flavor texture and appearance than foods preserved by older methods.

Freeze - dehydrated meats soon to be on Army mess hall menus include beefsteak, pork chops, fish patties, beef patties and flaked beefsteaks.

Packed in cans, freeze-dehydrated foods require no refrigeration and are extremely light weight. First the food is frozen, then dehydrated and finally packed.

The Army said another big advantage of the new method is that hot meals can be served easily in situations and areas where refrigeration and storage facilities are limited.

11th Division Chaplain Speaks to Managers

"It is our idea of man and his destination in life that has made us the greatest nation on earth," members of the Armed Forces Management Association were told at Fort Benning last Tuesday night.

Speaking in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Mess, Chaplain Rowland chose as his subject, "What is Man?", a question asked long ago by the psalmist, David.

"In the 11th Air Assault Division we have a lot of planes," the speaker said, "but sometimes we fail to get ourselves 'off the ground.'"

It is normal for man to sometimes take a down-grading look at himself, as did the prophets Isiah and Job in Old Testament times, he continued.

The chaplain said people sometimes look at their fellow man through dark glasses. They may think too highly of themselves at the same time, and they also may have too low a view of God.

Chaplain Rowland said God put man in the world and expected him to do something about it.

"When we learn to see ourselves as we really are, made with a Divine spark, then we see God as He really is," he said.

"Without God, man is a failure," he continued. "God is God whether I vote for Him or not. God has called each of us to do his job, whether it be office manager, doctor or preacher."

"No man is low," he said. "No man is to be sneered at. No man is to go hungry."

The chaplain added, "No man is low unless he lives low — don't apologize for God. Just follow Him."

Unique Terrain Model Can Bring Battlefield to Commander's Feet

FORT ORD, Calif. (ANF) — The dream of many an Army combat commander, the ability to have miles of his battlefield laid out in detail at his feet, is a reality for officers of the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Experimentation Center. A unique terrain model made of styrofoam and fiber glass and representing 100,000 acres of the Center's field laboratory at Fort Ord, Calif., is used in the planning phases of field experiments.

In operation, all of the model's 17 sections may be assembled on the floor in jigsaw fashion to its full 90 by 80 feet or as segments of the test terrain. All features of the model, including vertical distances in the mountainous areas, are clearly and accurately reproduced on a 1 to 1,000 scale. With the proper segments laid out on the floor of the tactical simulation center, the project teams can preplay and schedule the actual experiment.

A closed-circuit television camera with a wide-angle lens may be used with the model to provide commanders with an enlarged view of the particular terrain involved in the situation. A motion picture camera suspended from the ceiling records all details of the posed situation, such as placement of troops, weapons, and equipment, for future reference.

The umpire-controller personnel, who monitor and record all the actual phases of experimentation on the Army's "live - chessboard," find that the model is a valuable asset in spotting "eyes and ears" in locations where every action may be observed and immediately reported to the Experimentation Control Center.

The primary purpose of the terrain model is to reduce the preparation time of an experiment. However, it also is ideal for after-action critique and discussion and allows problems to be rerun under alternate conditions.

Bloodmobile Schedules '64 Visits

On Jan. 9 and 19, the Atlanta-based bloodmobile will visit The Infantry Center Troop Command and the 428th Medical Battalion.

The 2nd Infantry Division is slated for three two-day visits from the bloodmobile, Feb. 13 and 14, Apr. 16 and 17, and June 25 and 26.

On March 19 and 20, the bloodmobile will visit the 197th Infantry Brigade, Lawson Army Aviation Command, and the Student Brigade.

The bloodmobile will visit the 11th Air Assault Division June 4 and 5.

Units to be visited by the bloodmobile during the remainder of 1964 will be announced after April 1, officials said.

The goal of a two-day bloodmobile visit is the donation of at least 500 pints of blood.

Donors are relieved of military duty for four hours following a donation and from any strenous activity for 12 hours.

Donations to the bloodmobile are processed for whole blood transfusions for use by the Red Cross in welfare, disaster and other emergency uses. The blood is not for commercial sale nor used in any way for monetary gain officials said.

4 AFMA Members Attend Convention

Four members of Chapter 13 of the Armed Forces Management Association attended the association's national convention at San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 28-31.

Delegates include Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, a former president of the chapter; Lt. Col. William R. Nettles, current chapter president; Dr. Harold S. Tate, and J. Dan Reed.

Old Aid Station Has Become New Dispensary

The battalion aid station of the 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, has been converted into a dispensary. It is designated Martin Army Hospital Dispensary No. 4.

Officials stated that the conversion took place because the Harmony Church Dispensary No. 1 was taken over by the 11th Air Assault Division.

The inside of the old aid station has been given a new look by post engineers who added two doctors' offices, a treatment room, records room, store room, pharmacy and three new sinks. Martin Army Hospital supplied equipment necessary for the new dispensary's operation.

Capt. Edmund Casper has been assigned as dispensary surgeon.

AUSA Meeting Held At the Sheraton Park

With the theme, "Modern Army On The Move," the AUSA presented a full program to its members encompassing the world-wide objectives of the national defense system in general, and the Army missions more specifically.

Special exhibits stressing the accomplishments of the Army in the fields of electronics, battlefield technology and other facets of the Army's defense objectives were also part of the program.

"I welcome you to this meeting, and I express appreciation to you on behalf of all our fellow citizens for the work that you are doing to support and strengthen the Army. It has been a great source of pleasure and satisfaction to me that during the last few months, the last years, we have worked successfully and hard to build a stronger and more effective Army. And I think today that we have the strongest peacetime Army in the history of our country, and one which can meet its responsibilities all around the globe. To make it more mobile, to increase its training and competence, to make it better able to fill its missions; these are the assignments of the Army, and I believe that a strong Army can mean a strong America.

"There are one million Americans serving the United States overseas, and I sometimes wonder whether our fellow Americans realize how much they owe to the men who serve under our Colors. It is their service thousands of miles from our shores which make it possible for Americans to live in peace—to live in a secure country — for dozens of our allies, who depend upon us, to look to us for security.

"We must continue to meet our responsibilities, we must continue to have a strong country and a strong alliance and a strong Free World, and to do that, we need a strong Army which is the point of the spear.

"We'll continue to make that Army strong and I appreciate the support that you're giving to this great effort."

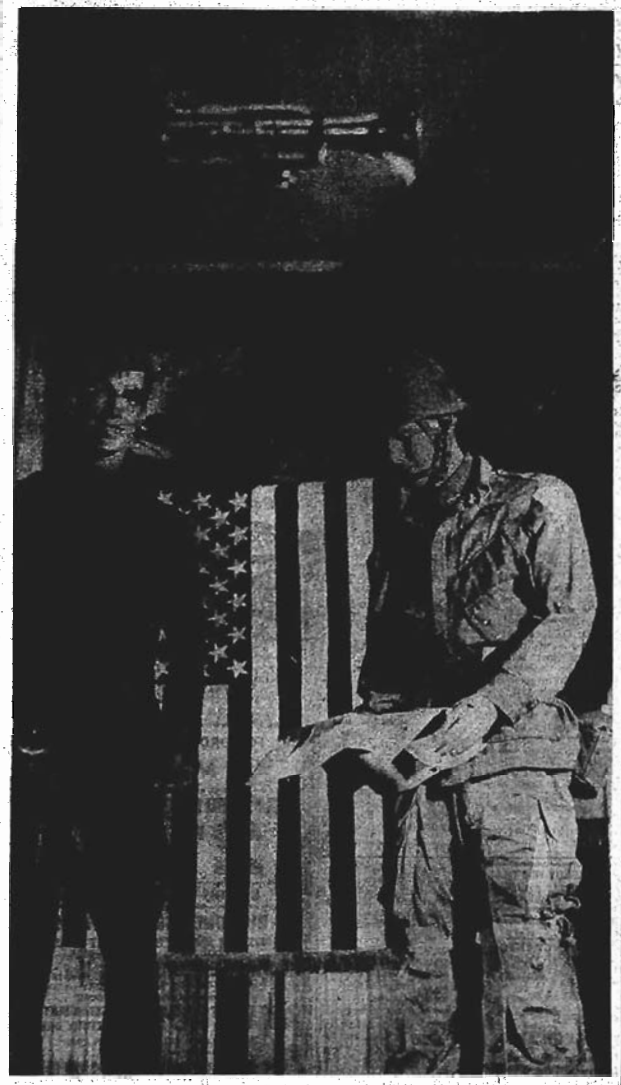
FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 22, NO. 9 | FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1963 | FORT BENNING, GA. | 36 Pages — 5c



Honors Set On Monday

Post military and civilian personnel will have a holiday Monday when Fort Benning joins other U.S. military posts around the world in honoring American servicemen who served in the Armed Forces during wartime.

Infantry Center officials reported that like most other installations, Fort Benning will observe Veterans Day with a one-minute period of silence at 11 a.m.

The city of Columbus will observe the holiday with a graveside ceremony at Riverside Cemetery. A bugler, firing squad and Army chaplain from The Infantry Center will help with the wreath-lying ceremony. This activity is also scheduled for 11 a.m.

Armistice Day was inaugurated after World War I and was originally intended to honor the dead of that war. However, in June, 1954, President Eisenhower signed a bill changing the name to Veterans Day and extending its meaning to include those Americans who served in all wars the nation has fought to preserve its freedom.

In his 1963 Veterans Day proclamation, President Kennedy pointed out that the day has dual significance. "Each one of us has an opportunity both to pay due honors to the dedicated men and women of all races and religious beliefs who have honorably served in our Armed Forces in time of war and to re-emphasize our determination to achieve world peace with patience, perserverance and courage," the President concluded.

Fort Benning safety officials have expressed concern about the danger of traffic and hunting accidents during the three-day weekend. Pamphlets and posters are being issued to all unit commanders who are encouraged to indoctrinate members of their commands on driving and hunting safety.

CG's Veterans Day Message

As we observe Veterans Day on 11 November each year, we are reminded of the debt we owe to the men and women who have served our country throughout its history.

American citizens enjoy the privilege of a life of freedom in a world that is filled with strife and oppression. This privilege exists because of the sacrifice made by members of the Armed Forces.

The true meaning of this national holiday gives us hope for the future and an opportunity to re-dedicate ourselves to the principles upon which our country was founded.

500 Industrial and Military Leaders Expected Here Nov. 18-20 For AUSA Tactical Mobility Symposium

The Association of the United States Army (AUSA) Tactical Mobility Symposium, to be held at The Infantry Center Nov. 18-20, is expected to draw some 350 leading industrialists and 150 top military officials.

Vance will deliver the keynote address at a dinner at the Main Officers' Open Mess Tuesday night (Nov. 19) and will leave the post shortly afterwards.

Gen. Gavin Presides

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) James M. Gavin, national AUSA president, will preside at the symposium and will introduce the distinguished military speaker scheduled to address the conclave at Theater No. 1 Nov. 19.

The delegates are scheduled to arrive between noon and 6:15 p.m. Monday (Nov. 18) for registration and will be honored at an AUSA reception and buffet that night at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Symposium attendees will officially be welcomed by Gen. Gavin and Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, at 8 a.m., Tuesday (Nov. 19) at Theater No. 1.

Speakers, scheduled to address the symposium Tuesday morning and their topics, include Lt. Gen. Ben Harrell, assistant chief of staff for Force Development, "Army Mobility Objectives"; Maj. Gen. Edgar C. Doleman, deputy assistant chief of staff for Intelligence, "Current and Future Mobility Capability of the Soviet Army"; Lt. Gen. William W. Dick Jr., chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army, "Report on Army Mobility Research and Development"; Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson Jr., commanding general, U.S. Army Material Command, "Role of AMC in Army, Combat Developments"; Gen. Edward L. Rowny, special assistant for tactical mobility, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Force Development, "The Air Assault Concept."

To See Displays

After the speeches, the attendees will look at Army and industry static displays set up near the theater and later will witness a rifle company team in attack demonstration at Buma Hill and an air assault demonstration at Concord Observation Post.

An official reception and dinner is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Main Officers' Open Mess, at which Secretary Vance will speak.

Lt. Gen. Dwight E. Beach, commanding general, U. S. Army Combat Developments Command will speak Wednesday morning (Nov. 20) on "Development of Army Mobility Doctrine," and Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, commanding general of the Test, Evaluation and Control Group, Fort Benning, will speak on "Test and Evaluation of Air Mobility."

The conferees will then attend a dynamic demonstration of developmental items, including aircraft and vehicles, at Lawson Airfield, to be followed by closing remarks by Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Walter L. Weible, AUSA executive vice president.

Gen. Paul D. Adams, commanding general of U. S. Strike Command, MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., and two major generals from STRICOM, are expected to attend the symposium, along with many other high echelon military officials.

Education Section Plans Open House for Friday

In observance of National Education Week, the Education Section will hold open house Nov. 15.

The post Education Center is prepared to help soldiers complete elementary, high school or four years of college training.

In addition to assisting the individual soldier toward his desired education goal, the program is aimed at developing better soldiers and better citizens, according to officials.

An increased awareness of the role of education in the Army's future is producing two trends in education on the post, according to Leonard S. Ozley, education officer.

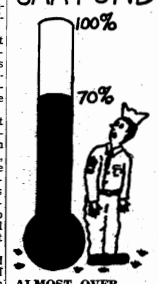
One is the rising interest among officers for more college training and the other is an increased effort by noncommissioned officer to complete high school studies, he explained.

For those who have not completed elementary education, preparatory classes in English, arithmetic, history, science and geography are offered. Successful completion of these courses earns students eighth grade certificates and qualifies them to take the high school General Educational Development tests.

A high premium is placed on the General Educational Development tests which measure both high school and college educational development. The high school tests are accepted for admission by many colleges and universities. The college level test may be taken to obtain recognition of educational ability equivalent to completion of the first year of college work.

Through the center, military personnel can enroll in U. S. Armed Forces Institute (USAFI) courses, available on a correspondence basis. Some 200 courses of both high school and college level are offered through USAFI.

The American University, Columbus College, University of Georgia and Albany State College lure about 2,000 Fort Benning students annually. The Army pays up to three-fourths of the tuition costs for military personnel enrolled in civilian schools and colleges.



ALMOST OVER . . . The CAA Fund Drive is almost over, and the post is nearing its goal. Personnel have now contributed 70 per cent of their fair share, a jump of 20 per cent since last week. The drive ends Nov. 15. (Bayonet cartoon by PFC Dave Braun.)

Will Dedicate Window

Chief of Chaplains to Visit Sunday

The Chief of Chaplains, Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles E. Brown Jr., will dedicate a stained glass window at The Infantry Center Chapel Sunday.

Chaplain Brown will unveil the window during the 11 a.m. worship service and deliver the sermon.

At 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Chaplain Brown will be guest of honor at a dinner at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Hosts will be all chaplains on the post.

Born in Coldwater, Kans., Chaplain Brown was ordained as a Methodist minister in October, 1938.

He is an A.B. graduate of Southwestern College in Winfield, Kans., where he was honored with a Doctor of Divinity degree in 1961.

Chaplain Brown was graduated from Iliff School of Theology in Denver, Colo., with a Master of Theology degree.

Service schools he has attended include the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and the Command Management School at Fort Belvoir, Va.

During World War II, he was regimental chaplain of the 30th Infantry Regiment before going to North Africa as division chaplain with the 3rd Infantry Division. He later served as chaplain of the Fifth Army in North Africa and Italy, and as Adriatic Base Command chaplain in Italy.

While serving as commandant of the Chaplain School, then at Fort Slocum, N. Y., and now at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., Chaplain Brown was named Chief of Chaplains Nov. 1, 1962.

Chaplain and Mrs. Brown, the former Miss Ava L. Currier of Dodge City, Kans., have a son, Kenneth, 14, and a daughter, Mrs. Richard E. Kline of Arlington, Va.

NEW COMPTROLLER . . . Col. William M. Preston is the new comptroller for The Infantry Center. He succeeds Col. John Bisbing who retired Oct. 28.

Organization Day Held By The Student Brigade

A miniature review at the Infantry School Battalion field kicked off Organization Day festivities for The Student Brigade Saturday when they celebrated their twenty-first anniversary.

The ceremony was highlighted by the first display of the new brigade colors which were recently provided by the Department of the Army. The colors were brought to the center of the field while The Infantry Center Band played the National Anthem.

Speaking to members of his command, TSB commander Col. Walter D. Short said "the Infantryman has been tested in many parts of the world since TSB was born 21 years ago."

He went on to say that the Infantryman has demonstrated the ability to cope with the changing situations of today's world and explained that "this kind of achievement is made possible only by the dedicated efforts of individual members translating their missions into accomplishments."

He congratulated each member of the brigade for demonstrating the spirit and ability necessary for the successful accomplishment of his tasks.

The anniversary activities were concluded with open house and buffet dinners in each brigade unit.

PTA Sets Open House Tuesday

Fort Benning PTA members will attend open house at the post's six Children's Schools Tuesday beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The event is part of the dependent schools' observance of American Education Week, proclaimed by the president for Nov. 10-16.

Col. Vern L. Joseph of Horicon, Wis., president of the PTA said that parents are urged to visit each school in which they have a child enrolled.

F.B.I. Investigation Involves Entire Post

The personal image is something with which everyone should be concerned. Pride in personal appearance is instilled at an early age, and its important.

But there's a broader image that, unfortunately, is often neglected. This is the image if those, or that, which we represent. Specifically, it is the image of the Army and Fort Benning as reflected by the military assigned, or the civilians employed here — your Fort Benning image, (F.B.I.).

Consider the impression upon a harried mother who takes a feverish child to a military dispensary for treatment, only to be pushed and shoved around and told to "See a civilian doctor if you don't like it."

Consider the impact upon a visiting officer who, by force of habit, writes out a check to the nearest dollar when making a purchase on post, and is asked if he thinks he's in a bank instead of being courteously told regulations require checks to be for the exact amount.

What kind of a Fort Benning image do newly assigned personnel get when they receive only a minimum of assistance and instructions and are forced to lug their gear from one place to another by commercial taxi or on foot? Yet seldom a day passes when you don't see a bewildered assignee trudging along or sitting astride his duffel bag waiting for someone to guide him to his unit.

And the commissary employee isn't concerned with "image" when he kowtows to an officer in uniform one day but is surly and uncooperative the next day when the same officer comes into the store in civilian clothes.

These cited instances are but a few of many which impart an undesirable image, and they have a common denominator — disrespect for the "customer."

Too few military personnel and civilian employees regard those with whom they do business during the day as "customers." Yet telephone operators, post exchange and commissary employees, personnel clerks, dispensary receptionists, finance personnel and even clerk-typists are in their particular positions solely because there is a proven need for their services.

And their services are becoming increasingly in demand with the rising population on post. Facilities and services are being taxed to the utmost. Time and tempers are apt to run short.

Still there is no reason why anyone should expect less courteous treatment on the military post of Fort Benning than they would receive in a civilian department store, business office or public institution.

Civilian, commercial establishments recognize the fact that their public image is reflected in their business ledgers. Profit or loss may not be a prime factor in the operation of military facilities but those who let this influence the manner in which they perform the duties to which they are assigned, or for which they were hired, are taking an unfair advantage of a captive clientele. The image they create is one with which we could all do without. How do we stack up?

CONARC Veterans Day Message

Veterans Day 1963, on which we honor the servicemen of all wars in which the United States has fought for freedom and liberty, finds the United States Continental Army Command performing with devotion and diligence its mission toward defense of the free world.

From the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean and beyond, the American soldiers and their families are day-to-day examples of the determination of the United States to stand strong and in concert with our fellow citizens in the face of potential aggression.

On this national day of remembrance, then, let us recall with reverence and thankfulness the sacrifices of American veterans. Let us rededicate ourselves with pride to upholding the traditions of service to God and country, our heritage through the years.

Chaplain's Corner

The Hill Top View

By Chaplain (Capt.) Claude E. Moorfield Jr.

What can be more important than the outlook and aspect of the soul? The soul has windows, just as the house does, and nearly everything depends upon what we see through those windows. Centuries ago the psalmist sensed that as he wrote in Psalm 121, Verse 1 and 2, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the Hills. From whence shall my help come? My help cometh from the Lord."

A hill-top is a moral as well as a physical elevation. Men often seek the solitude of the mountains for worship. There to build churches and places of worship. Mountains have always given to men the fellowship of greatness, the feeling of majesty and awe that brings God near. They speak also of the abiding faithfulness and guardianship of the Eternal God. This is most surely taught in the words "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is orund about his people from henceforth even forever".

Moreover, the mountains inspire hope within us. To lift up our eyes unto the high hills is to see wider horizons, larger aspirations, and to obtain nobler convictions. To lift our eyes unto the high places will deliver us from depression and free us from care. To lift our eyes unto the hills will safeguard our sound ties of kindred and friendship. To life our eyes unto the hills will preserve in us intelligent judgment in our personal and in our military life. The hilltop view is full of hope because it is full of God.

One Dead

It Happens In Less Time Than a Second

This editorial is reprinted from the July 13, 1962 issue of the Fort Ord Panarama. It is of particular value today with thousands of Fort Benning troops leaving post for the long Veteran's Day weekend.

Thomas Smith, 42, of 310 Crestview Drive, was instantly killed last night when his car struck a tree of Highway 1, two miles south. . .

Daily newspapers carry thousands of news briefs similar to this every year. It is a tragically common form of death, but one about which very little is known.

For a number of years, researchers have crash-tested hundreds of cars. The primary reason for this research has been to reduce fatalities by making cars safer, more "crash-proof." But out of this research has come something else; the terrifying picture of what happens to steel and glass, to flesh and blood, in those last split seconds when a human being is hurled into eternity.

This is the slow-motion, split-second reconstruction of what happens when an automobile, traveling 55 miles an hour, crashes into a solid immovable tree:

1-10th second — The front bumper and chrome "frosting" of the grillwork collapse. Slivers of steel penetrate the tree to depths of one and a half inches and more.

2-10th second — The hood crumples as it rises, smashing into the windshield. Spinning rear wheels leave the ground. The grillework disintegrates. The fenders come into contact with the tree, forcing the rear parts to splay out over the front doors.

In this same second tenth of a second, the heavy structural parts of the car begin to act as a brake in the terrible forward momentum of the 2½ ton body. But the driver's body continues to move forward at the vehicle's original speed. This means a force of 20 times gravity; his body weighs 3,200 pounds. His legs, ramrod-straight, snap at the knee joints,

3-10th second — The drivers body is now off the seat, torso upright, broken knees pressing against the dashboard. The plastic-and-steel frame of the steering wheel begins to bend under his terrible death grip. His head is now near the sun visor, his chest above the steering column.

4-10th second — The car's front 24 inches have been completely demolished, but the rear end is still traveling at an estimated speed of 35 miles an hour. The driver's body is still traveling at 55. The half-ton motor block crunches into a tree. The rear of the car, like a bucking horse, rises high enough to scrape bark off low branches.

5-10th second — The driver's fear-frozen hands bend the steering column into an almost vertical position. The force of gravity impales him on the steering wheel shaft. Jagged steel punctures lung and intercostal arteries.

6-10th second — So great is the force of the impact that the driver's feet are ripped from his tightly-laced shoes. The brake pedal shears off at the floorboard. The chasis bends in the middle, shearing body bolts. The driver's head smashes into the windshield. The rear of the car begins its downward fall, spinning wheels dig into the ground.

7-10th second — The entire, writhing body of the car is forced out of shape. Hinges tear. Doors spring open. In one last convulsion, the seat rams forward, pinning the driver against the cruel steel of the steering shaft. Blood leaps from his mouth. Shock has frozen his heart. He is now dead.

TIME LAPSED: Seven tenths of one second.

A good Army photographer must be a rare combination of adventurer, track star, timekeeper, mechanic, diplomat and, above all, an artisan with the camera.

Their photographic subjects range from hula dancers and review ceremonies to microscopic blood cells and guided missiles.

Photographers have talked with and posed personalities ranging from four-star generals to privates to top civilian officials.

During the past fiscal year, the 15 military and civilian members of the Pictorial Branch of the Signal Services Division at Fort Benning have taken approximately 250,000 pictures.

Within the past fiscal quarter (July-Sept.) photo facility personnel have taken more than 10,000 pictures and processed an estimated 70,000 black and white prints.

According to SSgt. Paul W. Puckett, non - commissioned officer in charge of the Pictorial Branch, "Our primary mission is pictorial support of the Army and its objectives."

"This support is a vital and is used extensively in various phases of training, information, historical records, publicity and in building morale fiber of the Army," he said.

"Each picture we take is a relatively simple, rapid and available means of conveying a thought with the minimum number of words," he added.

Three additional means of picture-taking available in the photo facility include the identification section, copy studio and portrait studio.

In the identification section, Army personnel and their dependents are fingerprinted and photographed. Utilizing a 10-second Polaroid camera and a roll-type lamination, the section is able to process an average of 300 ID cards a day.

Official portraits, school application and passport photographs are taken in the portrait studio. The studio also is used for taking field and training manual photographs.

The copy studio reproduces photographs where a negative is not available. This facility also is capable of copying and reproducing color slides and transparencies.

The photographer's job is far from over after he has taken the shot. The exposed film must be processed and and developed into the final print.

Exposed film is sent to the negative developing dark room where it is placed on wire hangers, hand - run through chemical solutions and "fixed" in a pure water bath.

Men working in the dark room need an acute sense of direction and touch. During the first part of the process they must work in total darkness. It is only during the last half that a yellow light is permitted to be turned on.

It takes approximately one and a half hours to properly process a group of negatives.

In the color print room, four-by-five-inch color negatives are enlarged to 8-by-10 inches on a special enlarger which has built-in filters to correct the color balance of the print.

Consistency during the seven-phase color process is of the utmost importance. The slightest change in agitation from one chemical to another will change the color balance. The processor is temperature-controlled with a tolerance of plus or minus one-half degree Fahrenheit.

Two photographic printers are used in the black and white print room. The contact printer utilizes a strip of photographic paper and with the proper application of time and light, the negative is exposed directly onto the paper.

The projection method is used more commonly in the print room. A single negative is taken and enlarged, or "dropped," through a system of lights. Photographic paper, connected in rolls, is sectioned through the machine and exposed.

A roll of as many as 500 shots is put on the automatic processor and sent through various chemical developing solutions on a conveyor line. The chemical process takes approximately 20 minutes from the moment the paper enters the machine until the print is made.

Almost every Army photo lab specializes in one particular phase of photography. The Fort Benning lab has the capabilities of handling and processing all types of film, both color and black and white.

According to Sgt. Puckett, "Our plans for the future call for faster and improved methods, and equipment which will help us upgrade the quality and quantity of photographic work produced by the Pictorial Branch."

Top German Officer Tours Center

General Doctor Hans-Speidel, special adviser to the Federal Government for Questions of Atlantic Defense, Federal Republic of Germany, arrived yesterday for a day of briefings and orientations.

Gen. Speidel's visit to The Infantry Center is one of several he is making to military installations in the United States at the invitation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

A 17-gun salute welcomed him to Fort Benning at honor ceremonies on Chapel Field. Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, was local commander for the review.

A distinguished military staff officer during World War II, the 66-year-old general served as commander-in-chief of Land Forces Central Europe from 1957 until he stepped down earlier this year.

Gen. Speidel, whose rank with the West German government is equivalent to that of an adviser to President Kennedy, was born Oct. 28, 1897, at Metzingen Wuerttemberg. After World War I, in which he rose to the rank of first lieutenant in the Royal Wuerttemberg Army, he attended the Universities of Stuttgart and Tuebingen from 1921 to 1925.

An economics and history major, he received his PhD magna cum laude from Tuebingen in 1925.

He served in various important staff positions with the Germany Army from 1925 until 1944, when as chief of staff of Heeresgruenoe B, commanded by Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, he was arrested by the Gestapo in connection with the July 20, 1944, plot to assassinate Adolf Hitler.

Gen. Speidel remained a prisoner of the Gestapo until the liberation of France in 1945.

After the war, he returned to the University of Tuebingen as a lecturer and while there authored a book, "Invasion 1944," which was published in 1949.

His current visit is the third one to the United States since 1955. In 1955 he toured for 26 days and in 1960 he visited for seven days.

He is slated to leave Fort Benning this morning.

The Infantry School's Associate Career Course No. 1 boasts more than 23 Allied officers from 12 countries including Ali Ashraf Salari, a captain in the Iranian Army.

His military career started in 1952 when he was graduated from the Iranian Military Academy in Tehran, his country's capital.

After graduation he became an Infantry platoon commander until 1954 when he was made company commander of the Kermanshah Division. His next assignment was with the Marines as a company commander.

From 1957 to 1961 he was G-3 (operations) Liaison officer of the 7th Division, after which he was made deputy chief of G-3 for the same division.

After being selected as a student for the Associate course at The Infantry School, Capt. Salari was sent to his country's Army Language Center to be schooled in the English language. Following his graduation from the language center he came to Fort Benning.

He cites the "Infantry Battalion in Defense" as his most impressive demonstration in his course so far. His fellow classmates he finds kind and very cooperative and is very impressed by the educational level of all those he has met in the United States.

His graduation is scheduled for Dec. 6, after which he plans to return to Iran.

For Interim Service

Sophisticated New 'Brain' Leased for Use by School

Fort Benning has leased a "sophisticated" Univac 1004, but an even more sophisticated computer is slated for late 1964, officials said.

Both machines, the 1004 and a proposed digital computer, are part of a long-range plan to automate a variety of the activities of The Infantry School.

Maj. Charles E. Welch, chief of the Data Processing Center, said the new 1004 is an interim device to "maintain the 'state-of-the-art' of data processing at the school until we get the digital computer."

The recently installed Univac 1004 is "punch-card oriented," Maj. Welch said.

Information about approximately 32,000 resident and 40,000 nonresident (correspondence students annually enrolled in the school) is fed to the machine on cards. From the punch cards, the machine can produce lesson grades, examination scores, class rosters, reports, transcripts of credit, question analysis data, posted grades, and coefficients of correlation between various sets of data such as two sets of test grades.

"The 1004 can pick out students who need to be called in for counselling about their work," Maj. Welch said. "It also selects and notifies nonresident students who are getting behind with their work."

Calls Attention

"The machine not only reveals student weaknesses — it calls to the attention of The Infantry School, areas of instruction that should be reevaluated and perhaps revised."

Maj. Welch said the next step in the school's data processing program will be to send specifications for a digital computer to approximately 15 manufacturers.

"Our specifications for a digital computer for The Infantry School resulted from a study begun in January, 1962, and completed in August, 1963," he said. "We made an inventory of all present and anticipated computer - applicable types of work. These tasks were analyzed and adapted to machine operation."

Reviews Study

The Infantry School study was reviewed by an automatic data processing team ment of the Army, the major said.

Manufacturers will review the specifications and make from Headquarters, Department proposals including machines and personnel needed as well as cost to the school.

Expected to be installed in the new academic building sometime in late 1964, the long-range computer will do all the 1004 does and more—it will store information in a "memory bank."

Has Memory

"It will be like a library," Maj. Welch said. "Facts and figures will be fed to the machine for future reference."

The digital computer will be able to accept data from both punch cards and high speed magnetic tape.

In addition to performing the many mathematical and recording processes in connection with student instructional activities, the computer will eventually handle scheduling of classes and equipment, instructional research and analysis, computer - based programmed instruction, details of war games and many administrative functions of the school.

AUSA President Will Address Local Unit

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) James M. Gavin, president of the Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA), is scheduled to address the Columbus—Phenix City—Fort Benning chapter of the association at a dinner meeting her Nov. 18.

The affair is slated to begin at 7:30 p.m. with a social hour at the Main Post Cafeteria, followed by dinner and the speech at 8:30 p.m. in Briant Wells Field House.

Ambassador to France in 1961 and now president and chief executive officer of Arthur D. Little, Inc., Cambridge, Mass., Gen. Gavin retired from the Army in 1958 after 33 years of active military service.

A 1929 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., his military assignments included over two years in the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group of the Department of Defense and four years as chief of Plans and Operations, Plans and Research, and Research and Development of the Department of the Army.

During World War II, the three - star general led the 505th Parachute Combat Team when it spearheaded the assault in Sicily in July, 1943, and in the parachute landing at Salerno Bay.

An assistant commander of the 82nd Airborne Division, he participated in the parachute invasion of Normandy on D-Day.

He is the author of two books, "War and Peace in the Space Age" and "Airborne Warfare." Gen. Gavin has received an honorary degree of doctor of engineering from the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., and an honorary doctor of laws degree from Dartmouth College.

TOP SOLDIER . . . Spc. John W. Ohe, Headquarters Company, Center Troop Command, has been selected Soldier of the Month for October. He is chief file clerk for the command.

Trapped Drivers Suffer From Fear and Panic

Many of the 400 Americans who are trapped, and drowned each year when their cars accidentally plunge into lakes or rivers die needlessly.

That's the report from insurance safety specialists who have purposely driven cars over embankments into deep water in safe driving experiments.

The researchers emerged all wet, but their findings aren't. In a test which revealed many of the same basic safety principles as those produced in a study by Indiana University and the American Red Cross, these specialists came up with several life-saving methods of escape if victims can overcome their biggest enemy — panic.

Before you can escape from a submerged vehicle you must survive the plunge from land into water without disabling injury. Safety belts will increase your chances. If you don't have a belt, brace yourself in a crouched position with your head below the top of the front seat for protection from flying glass and debris. This is important because the windshield will probably shatter in a drop of five feet or more.

Once a car hits the water it will usually remain afloat for up to three minutes if it's a regular-sized sedan, slightly longer if it's a compact model. Best means of escape is through an open window before the vehicle submerges.

Passengers physically unable to get out by this method often panic when they find the doors jammed shut by water pressure as the car sinks.

By waiting until the car interior nearly fills with water, you can open the doors easily, barring structural damage, because pressure will then be equalized. Thus, the water that comes swirling into a sinking vehicle may become, in effect, the key to escape.

When necessary to wait to open the doors, look for the air pocket which generally will form in the highest position inside the car. Since most American - made cars have the engine in front, they will usually sink front first and the air pocket will be near the roof in the rear.

Use of the air pocket does have its risks. The trapped air bubble may be pushed into the trunk if the car sinks front first. Or, if the car happens to sink bottom up — a possibility in deep water — the air pocket may escape and very little air will be left. Thus, safety specialists advise that escape through a window should be sought as soon as possible.

Before leaving the submerged car, take a deep breath, then exhale slowly in your ascent to the surface. Otherwise, the compressed air inhaled in the air pocket will expand internally as you rise, damaging the lungs and possibly causing paralysis or death.

If you drive safely, chances are you'll never find yourself suddenly off the road and into a lakeful of trouble. But if it does happen you can probably escape if you react calmly, quickly and correctly. Keep your head and your car won't become your coffin.

Binoculars To Improve Mobility

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (ANF) — Helmet - mounted infrared binoculars, designed to improve soldier's nighttime mobility, are currently undergoing tests by the U.S. Army.

The binoculars were developed by the U.S. Army Mobility Command's Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir. Illumination is provided by the invisible infrared rays from filtered vehicluar headlamps. Veterans Day Message

OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 2D INFANTRY DIVISION

Veterans Day, 1963, on which we honor the servicemen of all wars in which the United States has fought for freedom, finds the 2nd Infantry Division performing with devotion and diligence its mission of free world defense.

It is fitting that we salute those who bravely struggled to preserve the principles upon which our great nation was founded. This Day not only provides an occasion for reflection on the victories won in our country's service but also for expression of tribute to the fighting men, living and dead, who made them possible.

In this spirit, we now serving in the Second Infantry Division, should take time to rededicate ourselves to the vital mission of our free nation and to uphold the beliefs and traditions, which the veterans of our past wars have passed on to us.

New Division Finance Office Visited by Commanding General

By Bob DeCamara

The commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division took a first tour of the new division finance office on October 30 and heard about the increased pay flow due to the recent raise.

Maj. Rex T. Dittamore, finance officer, told Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea that an additional $275,000 is now being handled by his men to send the monthly pay roll over the $2,000,000 mark.

The finance office is still located on Sand Hill in what used to be the personnel office. The quarters are more spacious, better lighted, warmer in winter and cooler in summer than was the old office.

A long counter faces the front door. The counter is usually manned by two or more men to take care of the soldiers who seek adjustments in their pay slips.

To the left of the door are two large steel cages; the one for a cashier, the other for check writing and guarding cash. To the right of the large front office a door opens into the second of the two main work areas where desks piled high with accounting papers are lined up from wall to wall.

Besides these two large offices and the cage areas, there are other smaller rooms for a variety of purposes.

All of this is the work of the 577th Engineers, a Fort Benning outfit.

The building and attached machine trucks house four officers and 36 enlisted men. By September, division finance had completed the switch from a manual pay procedure in which every step was done laboriously by hand to a system employing six or seven different types of complex business machines. These are housed in mobile truck units nearby the finance office.

Capt. Lucius Wingate helps Maj. Dittamore wield this progressive new instrument as assistant finance officer. The non-commissioned officer in charge of the payment apparatus is MSgt. Joe Ozbolt, and Sp4 Leo Golden is chief of the travel pay section.

Along with Gen. Billingslea to view the security conscious office came the division chief of staff, Col. Lucien F. Keller, and Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder, G-1.

The finance office is normally well-guarded by two soldiers bearing M-14 rifles. During the period that the large payroll is actually inside, security is stepped up by providing two more riflemen and two .30 caliber machine gun crews, one of which is trained day and night on the front door.

In the intricate chain of Army command, division finance comes under the 2nd Administration Company which in turn is a part of Division Support Command, the last level before the entire division on the scale of organization.

The general's tour of the office took him to the desk of Sp5 Dewey Coburn, a disbursement specialist, where he engaged in a long talk with the specialist and Maj. Dittamore.

After checking over the caged areas and other aspects of the new building, Gen. Billingslea was closeted for a long briefing in Maj. Dittamore's office.

Mythical Land of 'Liberti' Is the Scene Of Counter-Guerrilla Warfare Training

By Bob DeCamara

Phase III training in counter-guerrilla warfare for the 2nd Infantry Division officially opened last Monday as division forces sped to Fort Stewart, Ga. to the aid of a mythical country.

The history of the "Indian-head" Division's beleaguered friend, the little country of Liberti, has been spotted since independence in 1954 with trouble fomented by the unneighborly country of Guerra.

The entire eight-day continuous problem takes place on a strip of wild land measuring 15 by 30 miles on the Fort Stewart military reservation not far from Savannah.

The 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry is slated as the first division unit to undergo the Phase III cycle.

In a remote area of heavy forest, swamp and rugged terrain, ideal for guerrillas, the 38th Infantry can expect to meet up with a bearded band led by a man known only as the Swamp Fox — also the name of the exercise.

Although for purposes of the excercise, Swamp Fox and his men have been slipped across the Guerra-Liberti border or been recruited from dissidents in the Liberti population, they actually are other 2nd Division troopers trained by a 6th Special Forces Group team from Fort Bragg, N. C. and made up from the three battalions scheduled for Swamp Fox.

On the day the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry leaves Fort Stewart to return to Fort Benning the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry will be in a convoy heading for Fort Stewart and their eight-day training cycle.

Following them, the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry goes on the road to do battle with the Swamp Fox, one of the two constants in the exercise not counting an unchanging terrain of swamp, forest and water.

The second of the two groups which will be at Fort Stewart for the duration of the counter-guerrilla warfare is the supporting element which left Fort Benning November 1.

This consists of the control organization, 3rd Brigade Headquarters, and composite teams from the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, the 2nd Medical Battalion and the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

Col. John K. Walker, commander of the 3rd Brigade, is in overall charge of the maneuvers. The deputy controller is the 3rd Brigade operations officer, Capt. Jack J. Clarke, and he is assisted by SFC Bobby D. Forester, the operations control sergeant.

All forces to take part in Swamp Fox have taken Phase I and II of the Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course since it reopened at Fort Benning in September after a layoff for Swift Strike III.

In addition, two teams of Special Forces have worked with the 2nd Division, one for six weeks, to set up the exercise and drill the men in patrolling, survival technique, guerrilla communications and intelligence.

While at Fort Stewart, both sides will operate strictly in the field, free of base control, except for aerial resupply drops. It will be a continuous tactical exercise, played out as a regular battle with spectacular successes and periods of monotonous seesaw fighting expected.

No units will be issued live ammunition. Instructions are for the men to not fire blank cartridges at a closer than 50 foot distance.

2nd Med Moves to Field For Swamp Fox Battles

By 2nd Medical Bn. PIO

On the morning of October 31, Headquarters and Support Company, 2nd Medical Battalion, departed for Fort Stewart, Ga. to participate in Exercise "Swamp Fox". A rotation plan has been developed which will allow each medical company to spend two weeks in the field during the counter-guerilla training. This rotation will insure that the 2nd Medical Battalion obtains maximum utilization of this training.

Attached to the 3d Brigade, the 2nd Medical Battalion has been given a dual mission of not only providing general medical service to the various units under-going training, but is also required to furnish personnel to participate in the exercise itself. To meet these requirements, each medical company will set up and operate a clearing station and will also furnish medics to function as aid men in the various units present for training. Complete medical treatment facilities will be available, as well as the necessary medical and dental officers.

Another letter of commendation was awarded to SFC Edward P. Faulkner of the signal battalion for "meritorious" service with that unit.

The second platoon of Company A, 122nd Signal Battalion represented the 2nd Brigade in the recent division-level drill competition, and won recognition with a trophy for best in the brigade.

On the next higher plateau, best-drilled company sought out Company C of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, a regular brigade unit, which had marched for the brigade in the competition.

AIRMEN BECOME MEMBERS IN 2ND DIVISION ASSOCIATION
(L-R) Gen. Billingslea, Capt. Webb, Capt. Keller, Maj. Moore, S-Maj. Brown

Division's Air Liaison Officers Become Association Members'

By Bob de Camara

The 2nd Infantry Division has, since the beginning, had both Marines and the Army represented in its Indianhead Association.

In Bourmont, France on October 26, 1917 when the 2nd Division was brought into being, it was formed of Marine and Army units.

But of the Air Force, the Indianhead Association had none.

Recently, in the office of the commanding general of the division, this situation was rectified and three Air Force officers joined the association as dues-paying members.

It took just about a year exactly to square away the gap in joint service membership. Last November, the three Air Force officers, all qualified pilots of jet aircraft, were assigned to the 2nd Division under the new bond formed by the Tactical Air Command and the Strategic Army Corps.

At that time, Maj. Dana T. Moore III, Capt. John J. Keller and Capt. Arthur W. Webb sewed on the Indianhead shoulder patch and settled down to duties at their Sand Hill offices.

In the year that they have been here, maneuver elements of the division have benefitted by the close air support of swept-wing supersonic fighters called into action by the Air Force trio.

Maj. Moore's title is Air Liaison Officer. The two captains are forward air controllers, the men who travel with the troops on the ground and direct air strikes from front-line positions.

A first vice-president of the Indianhead Association handed the three men their membership cards in Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea's office at Division Headquarters.

The first vice-president is permanently on hand at Division Headquarters for such occasions as his primary job is to Shepherd the division's enlisted personnel from the position of division sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown.

Col. Lucien F. Keller, division chief of staff, was also present for the brief ceremony.

2nd Engineers Construct Raft On Victory Pond

By 2nd Engineer PIO

On October 28, 1963, Company B of the 2nd Engineer Battalion engaged in the construction of a five float Reenforced Raft on Victory Pond. This was one of the many missions the 2nd Engineers undertook to increase the combat efficiency of the infantry, by performing engineer tasks, such as bridge construction.

Company E of the 2nd Engineers furnished one bridge section consisting of three normal loads, two offset loads, and two end-loads; the transportation, and the technical advice for the construction of the raft. All this was supervised by PSgt. Carl Vanderberg, Company E, and SSgt. Dudley V. Guy, also from Company E, 2nd Engineers. Company B, instructed by PSgt. Alvin E. Thompson, SFC Burley F. Adkins, and SSgt. Bennie L. Hughes, built the raft.

During Joint Exercise Swift Strike III Company B was involved in the dismantling of an M4T6 bridge. During this work, it was discovered that the company needed more bridge training to become proficient. The training was set up for the week of October the 28th, 1963; and the company was given 24 hours of classroom work and practical training in the construction of an M4T6, 5-float reinforced raft, and the construction of a fix span using two class 50 trestles. This training was designed to better increase the maneuverability and combat effectiveness of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Support Command to Hold 2-Day Religious Retreat

By Support Command PIO

Colonel John W. Armstrong, 2nd Infantry Division Support Command commander, has designated November 13 and 14 as days of Religious Retreat for Protestant and Catholic personnel in the division's Support Command.

"I strongly feel that this opportunity to re-examine our individual obligations to God and to our Country should be wholeheartedly supported by each and everyone of us. . ." the commander stated during an interview.

The Retreat is a one-day function being conducted once on November 13 and again on November 14, which will permit as many as possible to attend one of the two sessions that begin at eight o'clock in the morning with an address to the group by Col. Armstrong at Sand Hill Theater 7.

From there, the Retreat is split into two parts: one for Protestants at Sand Hill Chapel 5 and a Catholic program at Sand Hill Chapel 4. These programs are quite varied in scope and feature guest speakers.

Chaplain (Capt.) Calvin H. Garner will open the Protestant program with a devotional followed by Chaplain (Lt.) Irving C, Njus' Bible Study, "Studies in Phillipians." Support Command Chaplain (Capt.) James F. Bray will lead a group discussion, "A Soldier and His Religion." Chaplains (Capt.) Duie R. Jernigan and James F. Bray will conduct conferences on "Christian Witnessing" and "Christian Marriage". A film "Missionary to Walker's Garage" will precede the message from the guest speaker, Dr. Sidney A. Gates, Pastor, First Presbyterian Church in Columbus.

The Retreat Master for the Catholic program will be Father Damian from Main Post. Father Damian is a well-known speaker throughout the Georgia - Alabama area and frequently called upon to lead "Days of Recollecton" for retreats similar to those planned for the Support Command.

The Commanding Officer outlined the purposes of the Retreat "To enrich the religous and moral life of the men of the Support Command by creating a better climate for individual worship and personal dedication to God and to increase attendance at regularly scheduled services and greater participation in the religious program of the Support Command." He concluded his comments by stating his desire that all men of Support Command make a dedicated effort to attend one of the two days of the Support Command Religious Retreat.

Maj. Stafford Takes Helm Of 1st Bn, 23rd Infantry

By Bob de Camara
A 2nd Infantry Division change of command took place this week in the future trophy room of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

In front of the huge silver Korea Bowl, orders were read making Maj. Mial D. Stafford, formerly executive officer, commander of the historic battalion.

Maj. Stafford replaces in that position Lt. Col. William H. Cox who moves over to the 3rd Brigade as executive officer.

The green tabs of leadership were pinned on the shoulder epaulets of the new commander by the chief of the 2nd Brigade, Col. Dwight B. Dickson.

The room where the ceremony took place is stocked with treasure. On a wall hang colors retired since 1919, a date which by itself places it older than many units, and the 23rd Infantry actually stretches back to the War of 1812.

In a wallcase lie the regimental colors carried to the Battle of the Little Bighorn River in relief of Gen. Custer's unsuccessful sortie against 6,000 irate Cheyenne Indians.

The Korea Bowl, the prominent feature of the room, is a 60-gallon relic of the 22-rd's epic Korean War battles. The bowl was hand-crafted in Japan of Combat Infantryman's Badges won at battles such as Heartbreak Ridge and Chipyong-ni.

Also present for the occasion were the commanders and first sergeants of the battalion's companies and the sergeant major, Sgt. Maj. Jesse C. Easterwood.

Maj. Stafford came to the 2nd Division in September.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

His Job Is the Greatest of Them All

Americans celebrate numerous days each year as holidays. In addition to Christmas, Thanksgiving, Memorial, Easter; and many more, there are others that have no nationwide festivities. These are days proclaimed by the government in tribute to various things. Such, is Veterans Day.

Webster describes Veteran as: "Old and experienced; a person who has served in the armed forces of a country." In truth, this seems lacking and inadequate. Because, few people realize that Veterans Day actually exists. And, the only mass that does observe the occasion with any emphasis is the military. To the military, Veteran is an important word. They respect its meaning and its namesakes. To them, a Veteran is many things.

He is the one who trudged through the snow at Valley Forge in bundled feet, and was also called "Yellow Hair" at the Little Big Horn. He rode with "Teddy's" Rough Riders; wore both Blue and Grey at Atlanta, and breeched the walls of Tietsin during the Boxer Rebellion.

The Veteran wielded a machete in the Philippine Insurrection and then destroyed the Kaiser "Over There." He has ridden through New York City on the "Avenue of Heroes," and fell to sleep at the Marne. Nicknames have fallen upon him like raindrops: Doughboy, Trooper, G. I. Joe; and even The Unknown Soldier is he.

He has written and rewritten history books with his valor and inspired numerous great works of art. His name has passed across lips in every language of the world and his combat boots have left imprints in all the lands of time. He shed blood and tears at Bataan, and prayed at Normandy. He smiled and rejoiced at the Rhine, then felt pangs of disappointment in Korea.

Still, the Veteran is not only synonomous to war. His heralded deeds are as constant as the seasons. Protector, guardian; his presence is a barrier between danger and the public he serves. He has shot into space, calmly remarking, "Boy! What a Ride!", then rode the submarine "Thresher" to the bottom of the sea. He has etched his name at Formosa; and again, in Viet Nam. He has stood at "Checkpoint Charlie" as a symbol more powerful than any wall, and yet, has a paternal tenderness that makes his strong hands soft to a child's touch.

He is also the man whose military uniform has long since been packed away in an attic. He is a grocer, a salesman, a farmer—many things is he; but a Veteran, always.

He is the man to whom defeat is unknown. No lands, no seas; not one mile of space can become a highway of aggression without finding him standing there — immovable. Like a statue of steel, he guards. The same soft smile and blazing eyes that for years has confused and destroyed many enemies—he is a sentry.

And, November 11th, is his day. Some may celebrate, some may not; and some may even forget. But, he will remember. And, even though Veterans Day belongs to him, he will not rest his vigil. That is his lot; his decree.

And if ever the sands of time run out, and the world is returned to its Maker; and all life ceases to exist, there on the wind - swept face of earth will be seen a cross or two with rustic helmets as crowns. A symbolic epitaph of a veteran —the man who will face the end of the world with fixed bayonet.

Official Change of Command Takes Place at 1st of the 9th

By 1st Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

Lt. Col. Robert W. Seaman officially took over as commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry last Friday from Lt. Col. Donald T. Paul in change of command ceremonies held at Sand Hill's Theatre 7.

Before handing over the unit colors Col. Paul, who commanded the battalion since its organization in February of this year, commended the officers and men of the battalion and thanked them for the outstanding job they did for him during the past eight and a half months.

Under Col. Paul's command, the battalion spent three months in Germany on the now defunct Rotaplan. They took part in amphibious exercises at Little Creek and finished phase I of Counter Guerrilla training.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, the assistant division commanders, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley and Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, and the division chief of staff, Col. Lucien F. Keller looked on as the "MANCHU" colors were passed from Col. Paul to Col. John K. Walker Jr., 3rd Brigade commander, then to the new Battalion Commander, Col. Seaman.

Col. Seaman, who attended Newport News High School, Newport News, Va., entered the Army in 1943. After graduating from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. in 1946, he came to Fort Benning where he attended the Infantry Officers Basic Course.

The Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kan. came next and in 1948 he was assigned to the 351st Infantry Regiment, Trieste, France, where he held various company assignments.

He was reassigned to the states and upon completion of the Infantry Officers Advanced Course at Fort Benning in 1952 was ordered to Korea where he served as a company commander and battalion S-3 officer with the 35th Infantry Regiment, 25th Infantry Division.

Returning to the states in 1964, Col. Seaman was assigned to the Office of Comptroller, Fort Bragg, N. C. and in 1960 was ordered to the Chief Special Plans Branch, Army Chief of Staff, Communications Zone Europe.

2nd of 9th Still Undefeated As Quarterback Smith Stars

By 2nd Bn., 9th Infantry PIO

The "A's" of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry have jumped off to a flying start by taking their first two games in the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Tourney.

Last Monday night's game saw the "A's" take a squeaker from the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion by a score of 12-7.

Leroy Myrick of Headquarters Company answered Supply and Transport's first quarter TD by taking a 20 yard pass from quarterback Bobby Smith in the end zone. Midway through the second quarter Roy Prince of Company C scored the winning points when he went over from the 10 yard line on an off-tackle slant. His TD climaxed an 85 yard march down field.

Lucius Willis of Company B broke the scoring ice early in the first quarter when he caught a 20 yard pass from Smith.

Late in the second quarter Willis again caught a "Smith Special" in the end zone to climax an upfield march.

Prince scored the "A's" third TD when he pulled in a 40 yard spiral from Smith and crossed the goal line for the tally.

Jimmy Bailey of Headquarters Company racked up six insurance points on a 40 yard run late in the fourth quarter.

23rd Topples 7th Cav 13-6

By 1st Bn. 22rd Infantry PIO

Monday, November 4th. Essebagger Field, Kelley Hill. The "We Servers" of the 1st Bn, 23rd Infantry edged out the 7th Cav. team for a 13-6 victory.

With the fine combination of Shankles aerial offensive and the swift running plays of Kelly, the team broke through the 3rd Quarter tie to take the game.

Outstanding on the defensive line was right end Caldwell who seemed to have those flags in hand at every turn.

Offensive plays by Sparks, at left half, sparked the team to victory. Making the initial score of the game, Sparks snatched the ball out of the air with one hand to ride into the end zone and tally six points. He also made the extra point.

122nd Signal Bn On Victory Road

By 122nd Signal PIO

Flexing its muscles in the inter-division athletic competition, the 122nd Signal Battalion Flag Football Team got off to a slow start by losing its first game to the 7th Cavalry, 20-6. The team, however, roared back by trouncing its next two opponents; the 39th Artillery 7-0, and the 1st Battalion of the 32th Infantry by 25-6.

Presently they hold second place in this league and have cast their eyes longingly on first place.

A Real Life Stoney Burke . . .

1st of 23rd EM Is Rodeo Champ

By 1st Bn. 23rd Infantry PIO

Mounted on a quick, tough cow pony, the rider carefully measures the loop in the lariat. He shakes the loop out wider and nods to the official in the timing booth.

The chute opens with a bang and the calf bolts from the opening and races across the arena.

The rider is on his heels. He snakes the lariat through the air and catches the calf in mid-jump. He quickly dismounts, and with one hand on the taut rope runs to the heifer. A few deft movements and the contest is over.

Specialist William D. Mayfield is an amateur rodeo champ. He has racked up top honors in rodeo competitions in California and Oregon.

Sp4 Mayfield was born in Licking, Mo., but moved to Taft, Calif. when he was only a few months old. He attended Taft Union High School.

At the age of 13 he broke his first horse and from that time on he participated more and more in the "cowboy competitions" in and around his home area.

After graduation from high school, he traveled to the ZX Ranch in Oregon where he worked, breaking horses, until March of 1961. He then returned to California and enlisted in the Army.

Fort Benning was his first stop. He was assigned to the 11th Infantry for Basic and Advanced Infantry training. He then went to the 39th Infantry where he was a squad leader.

Mayfield then transferred to the 23rd Infantry in the arms and supply section. He stayed with Arms and Supply, but changed over to the 9th Infantry, after which he went to the 87th Infantry as supply clerk.

When the 23rd Infantry returned to Fort Benning and changed places with the 7th, Mayfield stayed on at his old job in Company C.

Company Armorer Once Taught Dodgers' Koufax and Drysdale Land Mine Warfare

By 1st Bn. 23rd Infantry PIO

Specialist Herbert Holloway once taught Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale. No, he didn't show them anything about baseball, but he did explain Land Mine Warfare to them at Fort Dix, N.J.

Holloway, now Company Armorer for Company C, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, entered the Army in May of 1956 at Fort Jackson, S.C. It was there he took Basic and received his orders for the 7th Infantry Division in Korea. He was a member of the 31st Infantry Regiment until his rotation back to the Sates and assignment to Faculty Company of the Specialist Training Regiment at Fort Dix.

This was when Holloway met and instructed Koufax and Drysdale, the authors of the recent overwhelming victory for the Dodgers-Yankee World Series upset. Here he applied for and was accepted for duty with the Special Services in Berlin, Germany.

He reported to his new assignment in Berlin in 1959 and was placed in the Sports Division of Special Services. Sp4 Holloway worked with many well known sports figures while stationed in Berlin. One of these men was middleweight boxer, Eddie Crook, Olympic Gold Medal winner. Holloway was responsible for the Major and Intra - Mural sports events, while serving as assistant to the Sports Officer.

In 1962 Specialist Holloway returned to the States and assumed the duties of Company Armorer.

MARINE QUARTERBACK SINGLETON SCORES LONE TOUCHDOWN
On Keeper-Play Goes In For Game Winning Score

Fort Belvoir 'Engineers' Play Here Tomorrow Night

By Dave Braun

Hard - luck Fort Benning, unable to buy a break in the past three weeks, returns to the football wars tomorrow at 8 p.m. against the Fort Belvoir Engineers at Doughboy Stadium.

The red and white clad Engineer squad, coached by Richard Lipinski, brings to Georgia a 2-5 mark, having dropped a 20-6 mud-battle to Fort Bragg, last weekend in their own backyard. The Braggsmen scored twice in the final stanza.

On the other hand, the Doughboys, guided by Oren DeHaven, are presently sporting a 6-2 record, the two losses coming as the result of a 14-7 upset at the hands of Fort Bragg three weeks ago and a 7-3 defeat handed to them by the Quantico Marines last Saturday in northeastern Virginia.

Lackland Win

Sandwiched in between was a 14-13 victory over Lackland Air Force Base. In the contest a Doughboy lineman fumbled the opening kickoff which eventually led to a Warhawk touchdown and late in the game Lackland quarterback Jim Geist put together back - to - back long bomb aerials that resulted in a TD and almost spelled defeat.

As the Doughboys prepare for the upcoming Fort Belvoir tilt, several key players are still nursing injuries. Doubtful starters are halfback Brewster Hobby, guard Don Schade, tackle Bob Creviston, tackle Bill Rice and guard Bill Daniello.

Hobby missed last weekend's Quantico game and Schade saw no action at all. Rice received a broken thumb during the first half of the game with the Marines and played the entire second half with it in a cast.

Daniello, who recently had a leg operation, is presently confined to the hospital while Creviston, a former University of Illinois standout, had a recent death in his family.

The Fort Belvoir Engineers, members of the Eastern Coast Interservice Conference, will use the following defensive lineup in an effort to knock off the Doughboys.

On the defensive line will be Fredrich Scott, a 6-foot, 1-inch, 200-pound end; 6-foot, 1-inch, 205 - pound James Crawford and 6-foot, 2-inch, 230-pound Mike Davila, at the tackles; Tom Tierney, a 6-foot, 1-inch, 215-pounder and M. Schuesemann, a 6-foot, 1-inch, 225 - pounder, at the guards; and center Rowell Smith, a 6-foot, 1-inch, 215-pounder.

In the defensive secondary, 6-foot, 2-inch, 185 - pound Rogers Sherwood and 5-foot, 9-inch, 180-pound Pat O'Meally, will lineup at the halfback slots while John Bradley, a 6-foot, 195-pounder, will occupy a linebacker position.

Defensive Backs

Earl Lawrence, a 6 - foot, 175 - pounder will also be in the defensive backfield along with Charles Reilly, a 5-foot, 11-inch, 170-pounder.

For the Doughboys, the following are the probable starting lineup. At the ends will be Fred Murphy and George Walstad. The tackles will be Wayne Peters and Bill Nance; the guards will be Don Schade and Hal Erickson. At center will be Carlton Waskey.

In the backfield will be quarterback Dave Sarette, halfbacks Billy Williamson and Ken Bolin, and fullback Ron Quillen.

Doughboys Second Loss

Marines Lone Touchdown Edges Aroused Doughboys

By Dave Braun

Quantico's unbeaten Marines struck for a single touchdown in the third quarter last Saturday at muddy Butler Stadium and made it stand in carving out a 7-3 victory over an aroused Fort Benning team.

About 12,000 wind-chilled fans watched Marine quarterback Tom Singleton guide his team 33 yards in seven plays, aided by a 15-yard penalty, to paydirt with 5:14 remaining on the clock in the third quarter.

The drive started as a result of Marvin Tibbetts' line drive punt from the Doughboy 32 that glanced off the helmet of a lineman and into the waiting arms of Quantico's Ron Eckert on the Fort Benning 43. The husky guard returned the shortened punt 10 yards to the Doughboys' 33.

Fort Benning netted three points earlier in the period when halfback Bobby Towns returned the Marine second half kickoff 72 yards to the Quantico 18.

Ron Quillen went to work and carried the Doughboys to the five-yard stripe. Here the Marines dug in and on the fourth down DeWayne Jeter split the uprights from the 13-yard line with a field goal and the doughboys had a short-lived 3-0 lead.

Near the close of the third period Fort Benning got possession on its own 27. On the first play from scrimmage, Quillen, who during the game picked up 111 yards in 22 carries, rambled all the way down the sidelines to the Marine 28. Quantico's defensive unit held, however, and the Doughboys' threat came to an end on the Marine 24.

Coaches, Writers to Vote For All-Army Footballers

Fort Benning personnel will be among the many head coaches and football writers from U.S. Army posts across the country who will be casting their ballots soon for the 12th Annual Army Times All-Army football team.

These votes will form the basis for Army Times official selections of 22 players for a first and second team, as well as a Most Valuable Player Award.

The players will receive engraved 22-caret gold, 17-jewel Zodiac watches to be presented before the Christmas vacation period. In addition, the Army Times will distribute the results of its poll to all the major wire services and newspapers from coast to coast.

Some of the former All-Army football picks include such gridiron stars as Cotton Davidson who made the team while playing at Fort Bliss, Tex., in 1955, and Paul Cameron who starred for Fort Ord, Calif., the same year.

Others include Bob Pellegrini, a .457 selection at Fort Knox, Ky., Rudy Estrada, a 1958 pick while in Korea and Jerry Brown who was chosen in 1960 while performing for Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Results of the poll will be announced in a mid-December edition of the Army Times.

Skydivers From 82nd Get Award

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Matthew B. Ridgway Trophy, symbol of supremacy in military sport parachuting, was awarded to the 82d Airborne Division Sport Parachute Club at the Memorial Luncheon of the Airborne Association convention held here at the Shoreham Hotel.

The formal presentation of the trophy was made by Lt. Gen. T. J. H. Trapnell, USA (Ret.) to SSgt. Ray Duffy, President of the 82d Club.

The Ridgway Trophy, initiated in 1959, is awarded annually to the military club that has the highest score in meets sanctioned by the Parachute Club of America, and graduates the greatest number of jumpers to the U.S. Army Parachute Team.

Blushing Soothsayer Foresees Auburn Conquest of Miss. State

Not since Hannibal crossed the Alps only to be annihilated by Caesar's legions has anyone gone to so much trouble only to be beaten so badly. But the Cursed Quarterback almost matched this nebulous feat last week when six of eight featured picks went amiss.

Ole Miss deserves the spotlight as they met their first big league competition and completely demolished any doubts as to their potency. The Rebels looked like Green Bay as they methodically ripped LSU apart at the seams.

Another noteworthy performance was the Michigan Wolverines surprise win over Northwestern.

North Carolina stock also went up when they whipped a good Georgia team 28-7.

The Auburn, Mississippi State battle promises to be one of the top games in the SEC area this week. Auburn's dream backfield has led them to an undefeated season thus far. The defense seemed to catch up last week when they held Florida scoreless. Mississippi State could be the spoiler. The Bulldogs are enjoying their best year since the Stone Age and would like nothing better than to wreck the Plainsmen's dreams of an undefeated season.

AUBURN OVER MISSISSIPPI STATE . . . Auburn is rated No. 5 in the national polls, but they won't run over the unranked Maroon team; but until someone proves that Jimmy Sidle can be stopped, we'll string along with Auburn. They will win by a score of 17-12.

MICHIGAN STATE OVER PURDUE. . . The Boilermakers couldn't stop Illinois last week and they won't be able to contain the Spartans Saturday. Look for a 30-12 Spartan victory.

WISCONSIN OVER NORTHWESTERN. . . After two weeks of disappointment, we are abandoning Tommy Myers' Wildcat crew. Wisconsin will beat them by ten points, but they may have to score 30 to do it.

TEXAS OVER BAYLOR... The Bears get their chance to kayo the kings this week, but we believe in riding with a winner. Darrell Royal has the Longhorns honed razor-sharp. They want their choice of bowl games in addition to the mythological national crown.

Benning Sport 'Chutists Jump at FAA Birthday

The Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club helped the Federal Aviation Agency celebrate its fifth birthday at Pensacola's Municipal Airport Sunday.

On the first jump, five members jumped to open the air show, signifying the five years the FAA has been in existence.

This group was led by 2nd Lt. Danny Byard, a veteran of over 1,000 free fall jumps. Lt. Byrd of the 11th AAD was a member of the United States International sky diving team for three years, and has competed in various countries around the world.

Also on the first jump were W.O. C. A. Webber, a pilot with the 11th Air Assault Division, PSgt. Frank Norbury, Airborne Tower Committee; Sp5 Bruce Swindle, Airborne-Air Mobility Dept. and Sp5 Thomas Pride, of Parachute Maintenance.

On the second jump, nine members of the team made a mass exit at 12,500 feet. Their descent was marked by smoke grenades attached to their feet. They were led by Sp5 Pride.

A member of the FAA at Pensacola said the Fort Benning team was invited because they were recognized as the best in this section of the country.

The men making the second jump were Sgt Morgan, Tower Committee; Sgt. Blaney, Pathfinder Committee; PFC Dunham, Parachute Maintenance; Sp5 Castille, Parachute Maintenance; SFC Williams, Parachute Maintenance, and Sgt. Jergens, Tower Committee.

YAC tivities

By John Cerar

Entering the final three weeks of play, the YAC football leagues are really beginning to go all out. With the wrap-up games scheduled for the week of the 18th, the teams are all scrambling for the trophy positions.

In the Biddy circuit, the Blue Devils picked up their fifth straight win at the expense of the Red Devils, 6-0. The Crusaders are in sole possession of second place with their 6 - 0 win over the Cavaliers. Third place is being shared by the Tigers and Tankers with fifth position up for grabs between the Wildcats and Red Devils while the Cavaliers and Packers are scrambling to get out of the cellar.

Top Game

This weeks top game again came from the Biddy League with the Tankers putting on their 19-7 win over the Packers. Bob Faulkner tossed three TD's with his favorite target, Junior Dillard hauling in two of the passes. Robert Hardey broke loose in the end zone for the third 6 pointer late in the game.

Over in the Doughboy League it's all but over with the Packers making it five straight with a fine 20-0 showing over the Colts. The Giants came up with win number three in a 19-0 effort over the Rams. A special salute goes out to Jim McNeil for his fine defensive showing. From his defensive left end position he sparked an outstanding defensive effort.

Intermediates

The Intermediate League Championship is still up in the air with one game separating the first three teams. In a do-or-die contest, the Colts knocked off the previously unbeaten Redskins, 6-0, in a fine defensive showing, and remained in the race. QB Bill Roberts and HB Walt Donaldson combined for the TD early in the first quarter. Game honors go to the five defensive linesman: White, Jackson, Dryer, Smith and Caldback of the Colts who put in an excellent effort against the powerful Redskins. In an upset victory, the Chargers took the Bears 19-0.

Swimming

Indoor swimming is in full swing again. Swimmers are readying themselves for A.A.U. meets to be held at Briant Wells Field House with competition from swim clubs throughout the valley area. As a reminder, swimmers meet daily at 4 p.m. at Briant Wells Field House.

With the crisp fall weather upon us, the bow and arrow season begins. The Archery Program, headed by Capt. Gillette, is slated to begin operation Saturday. A full scale instruction program has been organized and is open to both boys and girls, with or without experience. Give a call to the YAC office, 545-2130, for more information on this healthy, popular sport.

AT THE Movies

LAWRENCE OF ARABIA, starring Peter O'Toole, Alec Guiness and Anthony Quinn, is the story of a brash young British officer who encounters the beginnings of the allied revolt in the desert against the Turks, and plays an almost godlike role in uniting the Arabs into an effective fighting force.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE WHEELER DEALERS is a wild and wooly comedy in color starring Lee Remick, James Garner and Chill Wills. A "Wheeler Dealer" oil tycoon arrives in New York to raise some fresh capital after hitting some dry oil wells. He meets a lovely blonde stock analyst whose job is in jeopardy and decides to help her via some wheeling and dealing.

☆ ☆ ☆

HOOTENANNY HOOT, produced by Metro - Goldwyn Mayer, is the first motion picture ever made about the swingin' foot-thumping folk tunes and country music that have taken the nation by song. Peter Breck and Ruta Lee star.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE MINOTAUR, starring Bob Mathias and Rosanna Schiaffino, is the raging spectacle of an age that worshipped a savage beast. When the people of ancient Crete are threatened by a half-bull, half human monster, a brave warrior with a sacred sword comes to their aid and vows to destroy the beast.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE WAR LOVER is the story of American fliers in England during 1943-44 who were a dedicated group who daily flew the B-17's to bomb the enemy and pave the way for the invasions which would speed the end of the war. Almost all of the men detested their job of destruction, but this is the story of one hot-shot pilot whose only love was war. Stevie McQueen, Robert Wagner and Shirley Anne Field star.

Surgeon Says

Is There a Killer in Your Home

By Maj. Mary P. Feley, ANC
Senior Army Health Nurse

A potential killer — the Castor Plant — is a common shrub which grows freely in yards and empty fields in this area. The Castor Bean which is found in clusters on the stalk of this plant is highly poisonous and may cause death if eaten. Survey your yard and play areas, and if the Castor Plant is found, warn your children not to touch it.

However, the castor plant is not the only potential killer around your home. Adult and baby aspirins, tranquilizers, iron pills, and pesticides head a long list of medications and household items which yearly account for more than a half million poisonings and hundreds of deaths in children under six years of age. In September alone, 51 "under-six" dependent children of Fort Benning soldiers were referred to Martin Army Hospital for emergency treatment, because they had swallowed various medicines, common household cleaning agents or other poisonous substances left within their reach.

ONE COMMONLY FOUND KILLER PLANT
Maj. Foley Points Out Castor Plant

Parents must keep medications and household cleaning materials and other poisonous substances out of the reach of their small children who are curious and who love to climb and explore. Old medications that are no longer needed must be flushed down the toilet and not discarded in the trash or garbage can. Household materials and the medicines that are being used must be kept in a securely locked cabinet.

1. Stay calm — you can be of no help to your child if you panic.
2. Try to determine what the child has swallowed.
3. Keep the container and take it with you to the Emergency Room or Doctor's office.
4. Call the Emergency Room, Martin Army Hospital, 544-2112 or 544-1123, and ask for first aid advice.
5. If you are unable to get help or advice, give the child a large glass of milk to drink, or a full nursing bottle of milk that he can drink enroute to the Emergency Room.
6. Try to have the child vomit. However, DO NOT TRY TO INDUCE VOMITING if the child:
   a. is unconscious.
   b. is in convulsions.
   c. has swallowed lye or a caustic agent.
   d. has a burning of the mouth and throat.
   e. appears to have a burned or white mouth.

Time is important! Go safely, but quickly to the Emergency Room. To do this, it is not necessary to risk your life in an auto accident. Drive sensibly, within the set speed limits, and within existing traffic conditions.

It is better to be safe than sorry. Keep unsafe things in a safe place and save your child.

Your Dental Health

Dentist's New Tools Easier on Patients

By Capt. Robert Cross

Recently, we wrote about dentistry of the future. Now, let's talk about dentistry today, and note some improvements already present.

Many of you, as children, remember climbing a dingy stairway to a second floor office, as though going to your doom. Generally today, surroundings are far more modern and easily approached. Dental offices are decorated in restful pastel colors, mood music is piped to the various rooms, a pleasant, cheerful, receptionist greets you, and everything is done to put you at ease so that you'll be a calmer and better patient.

With the improved equipment available today you can anticipat a speedier and better treatment with much less discomfort than 15-20 years ago. Local anesthetics are used for most procedures today. These are administered using throw - away needles which are always sharp and sterile, and the anesthetic itself is more efficient and leaves the patient without ill effects.

If the patient requires a filling, the use of a modern anesthetic and the ultra-high speed dental drill allows the dentist to do more work in a shorter period of time. These drills run at 50 times the speed of ones used only 8 years ago. Probably the best thing about the new type dental drill is the absence of vibration, which was actually one of the worst problems with the old type drill.

The new types of cavity liners are also a marked improvement. They go in place quickly, and do a good job of insulating the tooth against cold and heat, thus preventing much of the aftermath of having a tooth filled.

The new materials used in fabricating partial dentures and full dentures are also improved. Plastics have been improved in color and have become more dense, thus preventing much of the so-called "denture - breath". The chrome - cobalt metals used in partial dentures are also an improvement, especially in the weight factor. Their high strength allows a much thinner, lighter partial.

Don't Run From That Automobile Salesman

By John Ballard

A Fort Benning sergeant looked cautiously at the "automobile salesman" who approached him at work last Wednesday at the Parachute Maintenance Section.

Although he didn't say it, SFC George W. Williams must have thought about the 1960 auto he already had paid for and wondered, "Who put this guy on me?"

But the cautious talk and leery eye soon disappeared and turned into a grin of disbelief.

The "salesman" turned out to be Tex Windsor, general manager of WTVM, a television station in Columbus, who presented Sgt. Williams with the keys to a 1964 dark beige Chevrolet Impala, first prize in the station's "You're the Critic" contest.

Contestants were asked to rate the fall lineup of shows for popularity in the WTVM viewing area.

Sgt. Williams, a veteran of more than 17 years service, said he entered the contest "just once" and "had no idea" he would win.

When his fellow workers chided him about "which one are you giving the wife," Sgt. Williams just grinned again and pointed to the old car in the parking lot.

STACKER HIGH

'Blue Day' Held Here

Members of the 50th Officer Candidate Company, 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, recently celebrated reaching senior status with "Blue Day" ceremonies.

The term "blue" is used because after reaching Senior Status, which marks the completion of 18 weeks of training, the candidates wear blue helmet liners and blue shoulder tabs. This is second in importance only to graduation. At this stage of raining the senior candidates do not have officer privileges, but command the same respect from OC's.

Highlight of the review was the traditional attachment of a streamer to the company's guidon by Col. Walter D. Short, commander of The Student Brigade. Reviewing officers also included Lt. Col. Ned B. Mabry, commander of the 5th Battalion, and 1st Lt. Donald A. Holmes, commander of 50th Company.

OC Maier Is Expert At Wrestling Game

By Pvt. Herbert Katz

When the 53rd Officer Candidate Company begins its hand to hand combat training, the candidates had better watch out for OC Fritz Maier.

In fact, OC Maier is so adept at defending himself that he wrestled his way to four conference championships, one AAU title and two collegiate championships while at American University in Washington, D.C.

OC Maier began his wrestling career while attending Somerville (N. J.) High School. In his senior year he was undefeated, winning the district 157-pound championship and finishing fourth in the New Jersey State Championship.

In 1959, he won the Mason-Dixon 157-pound wrestling championship and in 1960-61-62, he added the conference 167-pound title to his collection.

In 1961 he received the Most Valuable Player Award, given each year to the outstanding athlete at American University. In 1961-62, OC Maier received a trophy for amassing the highest number of points in wrestling meets. In his junior and senior years he captained the wrestling team.

In 1962, OC Maier won the Washington D.C. AAU 157-pound championship. In the following two years, he was Washington Intercollegiate 167-pound champion.

After graduation and prior to entering the service, OC Maier worked for the Bureau of the Census, as a digital computer programer.

Air Assault Unit Doubles Share

The men from Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 11th Air Assault Division Artillery have contributed more than twice their fair share in the 1964 Community Activities association Fund Drive.

Their fair share total for the drive is $178 and they have collected more than $378. Each individual has contributed in an attempt to reach the 200 per cent mark.

Battery commander Capt. Harold M. Hamilton said, "I don't know quite how the high mark contest got started, but I'm sure the men will reach the goal they have set for themselves."

U.S. Will Engage In Big Operation

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The United States, at the invitation of the Republic of Colombia, is scheduled to participate in Operation America which will be held on Nov. 27-30 at Tolu, on Colombia's Caribbean Coast.

U. S. tactical participation in the exercise will consist of a mechanized infantry company from the Canal Zone and three photo reconnaissance aircraft from U. S. Strike Command. Some U. S. air and sea transport will also be furnished by the United States as part of their contribution to the exercise.

The Colombian Armed Forces hosted a planning conference in Bogota for the Exercise. Latin American nations represented at the conference in addition to Colombia included Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela.

Two 'Spy' Satellites Successfully Orbited

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Two experimental U. S. nuclear detection satellites are now in orbit.

Information obtained from the two satellites, according to the Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency (ARPA), will be used to design improved world - wide nuclear test detection systems of the future, and to provide general radiation data which will be of great value to other U. S. space programs.

Each nuclear detection spacecraft is five feet in diameter and weighs about 500 pounds. They were placed in orbit from a single launch, but are now nearly one hundred thousand miles apart.

According to ARPA, much of the radiated energy from a nuclear bast is in the form of a pulse of X-rays less than a millionth of a second long.

Because of nuclear processes, gamma rays and neutrons are also radiated.

ARPA said special detectors should make it possible to distinguish between radiation from nuclear blasts and natural radiation.

With such sensors it is believed to be possible to detect nuclear tests conducted in space more than 10 million miles from the earth.

The agency said it expects simultaneous operation of the radiation sensors aboard the two spacecraft to insure that a cosmic ray collision with one spacecraft will not give a false alarm.

The absence of a simultaneous signal in the other spacecraft will not give a false alarm.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

Re-Up Program to Aid First-Term Enlistees

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — New opportunities are now available to first - term Regular Army enlistees and AUS inductees.

Enlisted men who have completed one year of active federal service, are on their first enlistment and recommended for retention by their commanders, are eligible.

All options currently available for personnel with less than four years service for pay purposes are available for first term personnel serving in CONUS.

The reenlistee may remain in the same command, made a PCS to CONUS for training and reassignment, return to CONUS for TDY training and return to same command, transfer to another overseas command or re-up for a CONUS station of choice.

These options also include opportunities for airborne training, special forces, MOS producing schools, Army Security Agency, intelligence corps, certain ARADCOM assignments, band, career group training or reenlistment for own vacancy.

Pedro Ponce Scores Win In MOOM Tennis Match

Fort Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess held its annual Fall Tennis Championships last month with 37 officers and their dependents participating in the play.

In the Men's Singles, Jim Glick, seeded No. 8 had to go all out in the second round to slip by Jim Griffin, 4-6, 8-6, 6-2. Glick then defeated Charles Saint in the third round by the identical scores of 6-3, 6-3.

In the quarterfinals, Glick ran up against the No. 4 seed Gray Carter and he seemed to have lost some of the touch he had shown in the previous matches and went down 6-0, 6-3.

Joe Grubbs the No. 3 seed advanced to the semifinals with relatively easy wins over Whann, 6-0, 6-1; Holman, 6-2, 6-1; and Cheatham 6-2, 10-8.

In the semifinals his ball control and excellent court play was nullified by the powerful strokes and net rushing tactics of Gil Stephenson.

In one of the better matches of the tournament, Grubbs bowed 6-3, 6-4. The other semifinal match pitted Gray Carter against Pedro Ponce the No. 5 seed. Carter had moved into the semifinals with wins over Van Meter, Cobb, and Glick — while Ponce had earlier defeated the No. 1 seed Osborn 10-8, 6-2 in the quarterfinals.

Carter won the first set and appeared to be in complete control until the middle of the second set when Ponce switched from hard ground strokes to a soft balling technique and forced Carter to repeated errors. From here Ponce went on to win the next two sets 7-5, 6-1.

In moving into the finals Ponce had defeated the No. 1 and No. 4 players and met the No. 3 player Stephenson for the championship. In the best 3 out of 5 sets the issue was in doubt only once when Stephenson held game advantage several times only to see it repeatedly deuced. Ponce went on to win by the scores of 6-3, 7-5 and 6-1.

Hourglass Road Is Being Re-Located

A 1.7 mile portion of Hourglass Road between Kings' Pond Road and Pine Tree Road is being relocated by Company "B", 577th Engineer Battalion (Construction). This work was made necessary when the McKenna Complex facilities dictated closing the old road — in fact, the new 2,400 foot runway now crosses the former roadbed.

New Commander at CTC

Col. Holton Gets TIC Position

In two major staff changes made recently at Fort Benning, Col. Earl F. Holton became deputy post commander and Col. Jess W. Walls assumed Col. Holton's former position as commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

In his new position, Col. Holton assumes command supervision of all major units of the Infantry Center, except the 11th Air Assault Division.

Before coming to Fort Benning as commander of CTC, Col. Holton served for two years with the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Korea.

West Point Grad

A graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., Col. Holton was commissioned in 1936. He served with the 79th Division during World War II, and following the war returned to West Point as as instructor, a position he held from 1948 until 1952.

Before his MAAG assignment in Korea in 1961, Col. Holton served with the Infantry Board at Fort Benning for three years.

Gets Eagle

Col. Walls, who was promoted to colonel Tuesday afternoon, comes to Fort Benning from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., where he served with the Communications and Electronics Agency, Combat Developments Command from February, 1963, to November, 1963.

The colonel was assigned to the U. S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va., from November, 1961, to February, 1963, and with the Military Assistance Advisory Group in Spain from July, 1960, to November, 1961.

Entering active military service Sept. 30, 1936, at Oklahoma City, Okla., he was commissioned a second lieutenant Sept. 27, 1941, following the completion of Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning.

NEARING THE TOP . . . The Community Activities Association Fund Drive reached 87 per cent as it entered the final week of collections. The Student Brigade was the first major post unit to exceed 100 per cent. The Brigade, commanded by Col. William D. Short, reached 107 per cent the first of this week. The drive officially ends today. Results will be run in next week's Bayonet.

Col. Vern L. Joseph Is Named Director of Mobility Department

Col. Vern L. Joseph has been named director of the Mobility Department of The Infantry School.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Vernon T. Mergler, deputy director, who has served as acting director of the department since July.

Col. Joseph came to the post in August, 1960, from Headquarters, Commander-in-Chief, Pacific, where he was Army military assistance training officer in the J-3 Division.

He commanded the 2nd Battalion of The Student Brigade at The Infantry School until March, 1963, when he became chief of the recently dissolved Office of Advanced Studies.

Col. Joseph was born in New London, Wis., and received his civilian education at Ripon (Wis.) College where he was graduated with a B. A. degree in 1940.

During World War II, he served in the European Theater with the 2nd Infantry Division.

COL. JOSEPH

Col. Joseph has served in Turkey as an adviser to the Turkish Army and later, in Washington, D. C., as a member of the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations.

Service schools he has attended include The Infantry School, Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va.

Among his awards and decorations are a Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infantryman Badge, French Croix de Guerre, Order of Silver Star, and a Belgian Fourragere.

Col. and Mrs. Joseph, the former Mary C. Rupp of Eden, Wis., have two daughters, Mary Beth, 16, and Peggy Lee, 12.

Gen. Kinnard Is Nominated For 2nd Star

President Kennedy has approved the nomination of the 11th Air Assault Division commander, Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, for promotion to the rank of major general. However, the promotion will not be effective until the Senate confirms it.

Gen. Kinnard has more than 21 years of airborne duty and has always been vitally interested in Army Aviation. Last July he qualified as a fixed-wing aviator and is now training for rotary wing helicopter qualification.

He graduated from the United States Military Academy (USMA) in 1939. In July, 1942, he attended the Parachute School at Fort Benning. After graduation he was assigned as S-3 of the 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment which was organized at Camp Toccoa, Ga.

Gen. Kinnard parachuted into Normandy with the 501st, a unit of the 101st Airborne Division, on the night of June 5, 1944. Later, while serving as division G-3, he was credited with coining the reply "Nuts" to the German surrender demand during the Battle of the Bulge. At the age of 29 he was commissioned a full colonel.

After the war he headed the Airborne Test Section at Fort Bragg, N. C. His next assignment was as technical advisor to the MGM Studios

F.B.I. Editorial

Courtesy Is Called A Two-Way Street

Last week's story on the Fort Benning Image (F.B.I.) produced the expected protests of righteous indignation from some who may, or may not, have felt the pinch of a shoe that fit too well. On the other hand there was an encouraging number who felt that what was said had needed saying for some time.

Also noted was one point which we had already planned to cover this week. "Courtesy is not a one-way street." Indeed it isn't. We will be the first to admit that "customer discourtesy" is also prevalent.

There are people who would try the patience of Job with their demands for special treatment or service. Their attitude is sometimes brought about by rank, either that of the individual, or by dependents who feel the weight of their husbands or father's rank.

Happily, only a few comprise this group, but even one can do serious damage to the image and dignity which should go with every grade or rank from private to general.

But here again, those who serve, those who by virtue of their assignment or employment must contend with these people, must learn to discipline themselves so as to not meet discourtesy with discourtesy.

So far we have dealt only with discourtesies in connection with facilities and services, their operation and use. But there is another area equally important to F.B.I. — the operation of motor vehicles. Jekyll's transformation into Hyde was a minor accomplishment compared to that which takes place when some people get behind the wheel of an automobile.

Consider the sergeant, or lieutenant or major or civilian worker who during duty hours is the epitome of efficiency and courtesy. It's quitting time; he changes.

Don't try to cross in front of him on Wold or Vibbert when he's driving. When the homebound traffic is moving at a snail's pace, he won't be the one that hangs back so you can get out of the parking lot. Chances are he won't change his driving habits when he goes off post, either. He'll be just as inconsiderate of pedestrians and other drivers off-post as he is on the reservation. And F.B.I. suffers; good impressions created over the years by most Fort Benning personnel are wasted.

The post bumper tags are comparatively small, but every car that has one might as well have a neon sign with letters two feet high proclaiming the driver as military or as a military - employed civilian. The civilians in the surrounding area know these tags well; know what the different colors stand for and can even estimate the driver's rank from the number of digits on the tags.

You can be assured the appreciative pedestrian who crosses the street in front of a car that has been halted to allow that crossing, makes a mental note that the car was from Fort Benning, as do other drivers who have been treated courteously by a Benning driver.

And you can be sure mental notes are also made, and probably etched deeper, when flagrant acts of vehicle discourtesy by Benning drivers occur.

What it all boils down to is that every moment, whether walking or riding, on post or off, our family image is being judged just as we judge others. This is one responsibility that can't be bucked to someone else with the notation, "for your action."

How would you "reply by indorsement" on the subject of your personal effect on the Fort Benning Image?

Chaplain's Corner

Are You Disheartened?

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) L. W. Gardai

Has trouble found your dwelling place? Has one trial just passed with another waiting to strike? It is not surprising that your courage may grow faint. We become depressed and disheartened, but we never lose hope.

Our Creator has given us a great hope. Hope points us to a promising future. We have God's assurance that He cares, provides and delivers.

St. Paul has this assurance, saying, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God." It states a firm conviction, grounded upon the unfailing Word of God.

"We know" leaves no room for doubt. It means in times of sorrow as well as joy. Your present trouble must also be for your good if you love God.

How do I know, you ask? We do not know His mysterious ways nor can we question His wisdom or doubt His love. Ours must be a trusting faith.

Your trouble may be discipline for you. For there is a small difference in the spelling of the two words "Disciple" and "Discipline".

There is no comfort for the ungodly in this blessed promise. The greater the trouble, the more we need the help of God.

Ask Him for help, believing, and you shall receive. He says, "Call upon Me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify Me."

The Judge Says . . .

By 1st Lt. James D. Santini

The push is on. The Infantry Center has launched an assault on excessive indebtedness. It is not necessary to elaborate on the gravity of the problem. It is only necessary to talk with any member of the Army who has fallen into the indebtedness quicksand, or has a command responsibility, to confirm that it is serious.

It is recognized that the principle source of difficulty is the irresponsible serviceman. However, most unit commanders are virtually helpless to contend with irresponsible businessmen who are also partially to blame for the indebtedness problem.

Generally, businessmen of the Columbus area are conscientious and responsible. However, there exists a small but potent contingent that are irresponsible or unscrupulous in their business operations. These men must be made to account for their actions.

But, we need your help.

Appropriate officials cannot act on their own intuition or impulses. Each step must be a calculated one. To that end, the Soldiers Advocate Division of The Infantry Center SJA Office has organized an open file containing all complaints registered by servicemen or their dependents against sharp practices that they have experienced in their dealings with some local businessmen.

Personal consultation with the offending merchant sometimes can produce desired results. In an extreme case, it may be necessary to take the case before the Armed Forces Disciplinary Board or state officials. Because such action will necessarily have an adverse effect on private business, it must be clear that the action is completely justified. There must be tangible factual evidence to support the case. The primary source of this evidence is statements of those persons who have been victimized by unprincipled businessmen in the past.

If we eliminate this problem, it will go a long way toward the control of the indebtedness problem.

Your Dental Health

A Year's Experience Provides Information

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

After a year of efforts in preventive dentistry, we can make certain statements regarding our results.

First, we have learned that Fort Benning personnel brush their teeth about twice as often as the average American. National average is .85 times daily. Here it runs between 1.6 and 1.7 times per day. How high can we expect to raise this average by further education of our personnel? We recommend four times per day as ideal, but we would be elated if the average rose to three brushings a day.

Another thing we have learned is that most people want to know about their teeth, but they are embarrassed to ask. One of the best ways to teach the fundamentals of mouth care is by group lectures, as no one is actually singled out, and many principles of good dentistry can be given. Children in lower primary grades are especially benefitted by lectures. They are always ready to listen to advice — outside the home.

With the older groups, especially military, our job is much harder. Here, we must contend with individuals who are often set in their ways, and have habits which are not easily broken. The prime concern is to teach them to brush thoroughly, and only individual chairside instruction can teach proper toothbrush proper toothbrushing. Lectures and training films are a good way to teach the proper way to brush, but each patient needs further help that only personal instruction can supply.

It is evident that dental instructions must be given on a recurring basis, since the dental interest is highest right after consultation, but decreases gradually until the patient returns to his old habits. Therefore, he should be counseled again and again, preferably on each visit to the dentist. Only by this method can an old dog learn new tricks!

Immediately following a delicious meal, the ladies were dazzled by a galaxy of fine furs furnished by Kayser-Lilienthal, Inc., of downtown Columbus. The collection included a wide variety of styles: evening jackets, stoles, daytime jackets and full length coats. The styles were created from many types of furs including persian lamb with mink trim, black mink with chinchilla trim, and autumn haze and ranch mink.

PLAYBOYS AND THEIR BUNNIES

MRS. COCHRAN

MRS. COBLEY

By Marge Lennon

Tonight's the night for the "Playboy Ball," and the night that some very lucky person will win a fabulous autumn haze mink stole or one of many valuable door prizes.

It's also the night that the Bunnies will come out in full force selling "Cigars, Cigarettes. . .?" and taking candid polaroid pictures of people at the dance. Mrs. John Corley will present another of her clever and amusing productions as the entertainment for the dinner dance.

A skit entitled "On the Town" will feature playboys and their bunnies nightclub "hopping" from one spot to another with scenes from such famous clubs as the Copacabana, Hernandos Hideaway and a special dance done by the Mata-Hari girls. Mrs. Corley has really outdone herself this time!

Draw A Picture

Have you ever wanted to draw a picture but after you began your "masterpiece" thought to yourself that possibly you were going about it the wrong way? Frequently all the average frustrated artist needs is a few words of advice from an experienced artist or teacher. Mrs. Patrick B. Watson is just that.

She teaches the Women's Club adult art class skill in still life, landscape and portrait painting and also adds those important pointers to help your work attain a more professional look.

Children's Art

Mrs. George L. Johnson is the children's art - instructor and has done wonders with children whose parents thought nothing could be done. Both instructors are now accepting additional students for their classes. Mrs. Richard T. Knowles will give you further details. Call her at 545-2408.

Quick Reducing

The Slim 'N Trim room, located in Building A-15 on Baltzell Ave., offers to our members the use of Stauffer couches, reducing belts, bicycle pumps and other machinery for speedy weight reducing. With Thanksgiving and Christmas just around the corner many extra pounds will be added. This is an excellent way to lose them quickly. Mrs. George Seneff at 545-3546 will fill you in on the hours of use.

For Christmas giving there are very few presents that you could buy for $2 which would be appreciated as much as "Queen of Baitle, Her Recipes."

The cookbook is now on sale at the Post Exchange, Thrift Shop and Book Store on the Post and in Columbus at Whites, Dixie Ceramic Supply on Lumpkin Road and Milton Carroll Furniture Store.

OC Graduates Told

U.S. Cares for Its Armed Forces

No other nation in history has taken such good care of the men in its Armed Forces as the United States, 137 Infantry Officer Candidate School graduates were told at Fort Benning last Wednesday.

Gathered at the foot of The Infantryman Statue, the young men, fresh from six months of intensive training, listened to a message of challenge and encouragement from Brig. Gen. Robert L. Ashworth, deputy commanding general of the Army Training Center at Fort Jackson, S.C., guest speaker at the commencement exercises.

"You became an officer candidate after a great deal of thought on your own part and after a careful screening by others," Gen. Ashworth said, "but I wonder if you are fully aware of the significance of the oath of an officer which you will take today."

"It means," he said, "that you will be accepted everywhere as a gentleman. Your integrity will be taken for granted — your word will be considered your bond. Your uniform will admit you anywhere, even to dine with kings. You may be trusted with millions of dollars and you will be trusted with authority over men."

"Your country will look after you. No other nation in the world has come close to caring for its Armed Forces as ours does," he added.

"In return, the nation expects from you as high sense of duty and, in or out of uniform, conduct that is above censure," the general said.

"Most of you will be commissioned in the Infantry, although a few have chosen other branches," he continued. "You Infantrymen are taking on the hardest job of all, in peace or war. In heat, cold, rain or snow, you and your men will be the ones who meet the enemy face to face—the ones who seize and hold the ground."

"Conditions seldom seem ideal, but when men are cold, hungry and exhausted, obstacles seem greater and troops tend to bog down. This is when you must never be too tired to give it one more try; this is when you must inspire your men to make one more effort," the speaker said.

"Set high standards for your men and accept nothing less," he advised. "You will be accused of being too hard but stick to your guns. You may not win a popularity contest but you will win the admiration and respect of your men."

Gen. Ashworth presented a letter of appreciation to the honor graduate of the class, Candidate B. R. Davis whose average for the course was 93.5 per cent.

Gen. Ashworth presented a miniature Infantryman Statue to the winner of a Leadership Award, based upon performance as well as academic qualities displayed by the candidate during OCS. He was Candidate Charles S. Abel.

Hungarian Citizen Asks For Help From America

The following article is reprinted from the daily column of Millard Grimes, editor of the Columbus Enquirer.

The dateline on the letter was Szolnok, Hungary, and it was written in Hungarian. Fortunately, an interpreter was available in the person of Mrs. Shirley Burris of Columbus.

Mrs. Burris is from Hungary. The letter was from her aunt, who raised her, and whom she has not seen for 19 years. The aunt, Mrs. Selma Sterbenz, was writing to The Enquirer for help in getting out of Hungary and to the United States where she wants to join her foster daughter and see her nine foster grandchildren.

Mrs. Sterbenz would be a valuable addition to the U.S. population. She is a master violinist and now teaches the violin in Szolnok.

Because the immigration quota for Hungary is filled, Mrs. Sterbenz needs a sponsor who will guarantee her employment if she is able to come to the United States. Mrs. Burris, of course, would provide her a home.

Certainly, Columbus could use a person of Mrs. Sterbenz' talent with the violin, and a civic organization, or music group could find no worthier project than sponsoring her as an immigrant to the United States.

Mrs. Sterbenz, in her letter, gave this information:

"I am a teacher of violin and speak fluently in both Hungarian and German. I don't smoke or drink, am dependable and have happy personality. Maybe you could find someone who would be willing to marry me and pay my fare to the United States.

"I will learn English very fast so that I can teach the children violin in Columbus."

Mrs. Burris escaped from Hungary in 1944 when the Russians invaded. She came to America shortly after World War II and lived in Columbus for a time in the mid-50s. She returned last year with her husband, Sgt. Carrol Burris, and nine fine children.

Her dearest wish at present is to see her aunt again after nearly two decades of separation. She has written the immigration authorities and the answer is that her aunt needs a sponsor.

Immigrants who can make a cultural contribution to a community have always been welcome in America. Mrs. Sterbenz appears to be such a person.

Any group interested in sponsoring Mrs. Sterbenz should contact Mrs. Burris FA 4-3189.

'Idea Center' Opened At 11th Air Assault

A new "Idea Center" for the development of suggestions submitted by personnel of the 11th Air Assault Division is currently being established, and is scheduled to open soon according to 1st Lt. Franklin D. Cooper Jr., officer in charge.

Initiated by Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 11th commander, the center will process ideas from within the division, for improvements in equipment, methods, techniques and tactics. The center will operate under the general supervision of Col. Richard T. Knowles, division artillery commander.

Complete with its own drafting section, planning rooms, a panel of experts and a main conference room, the center will occupy a one-story building located in the Aerial Rocket Battery.

An individual's basic idea is submitted to the center for evaluation and modification. If a drawing or other physical action is required, it is sent to the appropriate section, such as the drafting section.

Progressing through an established chain, it is then sent to the conference room for an initial examination where experts from each unit thoroughly analyze the proposal, and recommend specific action.

When the requirements from the initial conference are met, the plan is sent to a final board for finishing action.

In some instances, such as equipment design and engineering changes, action may be required by industry or other outside sources, in which case, a final report with recommendations will be accomplished and forwarded to the appropriate agency.

Air Assault Gets a New Division IG

Lt. Col. Leroy W. Caulder who returned last month from a 34 - month assignment in Italy, became the inspector general of the 11th Air Assault Division last week.

Col. Caulder is a veteran of over 23 years active military service, and has served in numerous command and staff assignments.

A native of Camden, S. C., the colonel enlisted in the Army in September, 1940, and upon completing initial training, attended the Infantry Officer Candidate School here.

Receiving his commission in February, 1943, Col. Caulder was assigned to the 124th Infantry Regiment of the 31st Division in the South Pacific, serving in New Guinea, Dutch East Indies and Philippine Islands.

A graduate of the University of Omaha in Nebraska, Col. Caulder has attended numerous military schools, including the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Post Boxers and Football Stars Get 'Personalized' Mouth Guards

Custom - made at the U.S. Army Dental Laboratory on the post, each man's mouth guard is as individual as if it were a partial plate or complete denture.

Boxing coach, Sgt. Edward M. Marotta, said 11 of the boxers have their own fitted mouth guards.

"As a former fighter, I know how important it is to wear a mouth guard that fits you," the sergeant said. "Why, a well - fitting mouth guard can save a fellow from getting a broken jaw."

Coach Marrotta, platoon sergeant in Company B, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, has worked with the post preventive dentistry officer, Capt. Robert E. Cross, in a recent campaign to get athletes to have the guards made.

"We have made mouth guards for 11 boxers and 13 football players this season," Capt. Cross said.

"This is a cooperative project," Capt. Cross continued. "The impressions are taken and the devices fabricated at the Dental Lab. Two technicians, PFC Kenneth D. Reuterdahl and PFC Mel A. Gray, have done most of the work."

"The vinyl guard fits the man's mouth. It will not fall out, nor slip," Capt. Cross said. "When a boxer is whammed on the jaw, the resilient vinyl cushions the shock. This protects the teeth from being cracked, broken off or even knocked out."

Mouth guards also reduce the danger of brain damage, according to the deputy post dental surgeon, Lt. Col. Hubert W. Merchant.

"Cushioning a blow to the jaw reduces the jolt to the brain," he said.

Most athletes find that wearing a guard on the upper teeth alone is sufficient to provide protection.

Sgt. Amos L. Crumbly, who won the Fort Benning light heavyweight championship competition Oct. 25, wears two mouth guards.

"I wear the upper guard to cushion a blow and the lower one for comfort," he said. "You see, my lower teeth are rather sharp. It feels better to have them covered with the vinyl."

Another thing Sgt. Crumbly likes about the mouth guards made from impressions is that "you can keep them in your mouth — they don't interfere with talking."

Sgt. Crumbly is a member of Company B, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division.

Blind Workers Under Contract

During July, August and September the plant renovated 951 mattresses at $5.60 each. New mattresses would have cost $10.80 each.

Deducting the plants bill and other costs incidental to the operation, the saving to the government was approximately $3,000.

The Infantry Center entered into a contract with the firm during the last quarter of fiscal year 1963.

The Georgia Factory for the Blind utilizes blind personnel in the manufacture of brooms, mops, mattresses, box springs and rubber and plastic floor mats.

The plant operates under contracts to commercial firms as well as under government contracts.

The celebration began with dinner at 6:30 p.m. and was followed by dancing and short speech by Marine Maj. M. P. Newton, Infantry Board liaison officer, on the honor, spirit and heritage of the Marines. He also read a special message from Gen. David M. Shoup, commandant of the Marine Corps.

Lt. Col. Stanley Davis, Marine liaison to The Infantry School, then cut the cake which was decorated with the famous Marine Corps emblem of globe, anchor and eagle.

Infantry School Copied By Vietnamese Rangers

U.S. FORCES, VIET NAM — "Follow Me!," the slogan of The Infantry Center, is a cry that would fit in well at the Duc My Ranger Training Center — the Fort Benning of Vietnam.

The center, which began operating in April, 1962 as the only Ranger Training Center in Southeast Asia, is currently training a class from the Dalat National Military Academy.

Students at the academy are required to complete a two-week orientation course at the Ranger Training Center prior to graduation and commissioning into the Vietnamese Armed Forces.

The training center is operated by the Vietnamese Army, with the assistance of U. S. Army and Australian Army advisors who have specialized in ranger and airborne training.

The rugged course concentrates primarily on the things a combat soldier must know to survive and win against the Viet Cong. The instruction, which is patterned after the Ranger course at Fort Benning, teaches the soldier modern communications, weapons, demolitions, hand-to-hand fighting, first aid, navigation, survival and intelligence.

The course is taught in the jungle, swamps, and mountainous areas of central Viet Nam, where the Rangers develop into a tough fighting force, able to survive off the land.

One of the toughest phases of the training is the "confidence" drill, a series of manmade courses. The "death slide," one of the most dangerous, is a rapid descent of eighty feet on a pulley cable, which plunges the student into a lake. In another, students are required both to walk across a 100-meter, 3-rope bridge and hand-walk a single rope over the lake; both of these are 80 feet above the water. From these tests the Ranger develops confidence in himself and his equipment.

"Not having the experience of throwing baseballs or softballs as most American soldiers have," Gore explained, "he has some difficulty aiming for his target."

Placing the 'birds' fish-side up in a well-greased pan, she poured over the top a sauce made of butter, salt, pepper, lemon juice and chopped onion, with paprika added for both its flavor and color.

"Color is an important factor in preparing fish dishes," the home economist said. "Fish alone is apt to look drab and colorless. Add color to dress up a dish and tempt the diner to try it."

That "fish in the frying pan" has given way to fish in the oven, the expert said. "Oven frying has several advantages over deep fat frying," she maintained.

"You can prepare breaded fillets in well-greased pans and keep them in the refrigerator until 15 or 20 minutes before time to serve the meal. Popping them into the oven is a lot better than standing over a vat of deep fat."

To keep the tail portion from over cooking, Miss Fontaine placed the fillets in the pan with tails overlapping, "giving an even thickness throughout."

Another helpful hint in preparing fillets is to "use one hand to dip the fillet into milk and the other to roll it in bread crumbs," she said.

"Times given in recipes are relative," she said. "The size of the pan you use is apt to influence cooking time. The best rule is to test the fish with a fork. It will flake lightly when it is done."

Students included mess stewards, first cooks and major food service personnel of the 428th Medical Battalion, Lawson Army Aviation Command, The Student Brigade, Center Troop Command, 197th Infantry Brigade and 11th Air Assault Division.

Demonstration for the 2nd Infantry Division food service personnel will be conducted Nov. 18 and 19.

Fish Cooking Demonstration

Flounder Fillets Hold the Spotlight

Cooks at Fort Benning learned a lot about the "fish in the sea" as well as the "fish in the frying pan" at classes conducted last week by the Fish and Wildlife Service of the U. S. Department of the Interior.

Miss Bertha V. Fontaine, a home economist from Pascagoula, Miss., mixed into the classroom atmosphere such ingredients as helpful hints, the tantalizing odors of well prepared dishes, facts about the fish and shell fish she was cooking and an invitation to the students to share a feast of seafood.

Busy with flounder "fillets", the American equivalent of the French word 'filet,' Miss Fontaine told her students that a flounder is born with an eye on each side. He acquires the habit of swimming on one side. The upper side developes and shows color, while the under side turns white. The eye from the under side gradually assumes a more strategic position, jockeying into place alongside the upper eye.

The story of the flounder was a running commentary as Miss Fontaine placed a white bread dressing on fillets, rolled them and speared each one with a tooth pick.

Bell Ringing Signals Life

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Once every hour a bell shrills and the "hot line" teletype connection between the Pentagon and the Kremlin springs to life.

The "hot line" is an emergency communications channel designed to reduce the risk of accidental war.

The hourly tests are made to be certain the circuit is working in the event an emergency requires instantaneous communication between the Russian and American heads-of-state.

It's not a life-or-death message from President Kennedy to Soviet Premier Khrushchev, or the other way around.

This kind of testing has been going on since the line was declared open Aug. 30.

The decision to establish the "hot line" was a direct outgrowth of the serious delays that developed in diplomatic communications between the two capitals during the Cuban crisis last fall.

Normal diplomatic messages are still sent over commercial channels to the United States and Soviet embassies in Moscow and Washington.

2 Companies Over 100 Pct. At 38th Inf

The Community Activities Association Fund Drive is on; for some, it is over, and for others, it continues even though the goal has already been attained.

Company B of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry surpassed its goal of $455.00 by $26.00, and Company A of the "Rock of the Marne" hundred per cent share of $449.00 exactly. The commanding officers of the above companies, Capt. Eugene A. Fox, and Lt. Harold W. Darden, respectively, received the following letter of commendation from Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll:

"It gives me a great deal of pleasure to congratulate you and all members of your unit who made possible your company's surpassing the Fair Share Potential in the annual Community Activities Association Fund Drive. Your generosity in this important charitable drive is commendable.

"I especially would like to express my appreciation for your effort at the command level. Needless to say the past two months have been busy and sometimes hectic and your concern for the success of this drive during this time is noteworthy."

2nd Medical Ceremony Honors Two

Sgt. Kelly was awarded the First Oak Leaf Cluster to the Army Commendation Medal for performance of his duties in the 25th Medical Battalion, 23th Infantry Division. Sgt. Kelly served with this unit from September 1960 to Feruary 1963.

Due to a typographical error in last week's Bayonet the CAA Fund Drive percentage of the 12th Artillery was erroneously printed. The unit exceeded its goal of $830.00. A total of $726.00 was collected. This represented 115 per cent of the 12th Artillery's goal.

It is participation by units such as the 12th Artillery that will give the 2nd Infantry Division a boost toward the 100 per cent mark, division-wide, in the CAA Fund Drive.

Division Artillery Is 188 Years Old

Sunday Marks Big Anniversary

By Division Artillery PIO

Sunday marks the 188th anniversary of one of the U.S. Army's most vital and powerful arms, the artillery.

In 1775, with the capture of Fort Ticonderoga, 55 seized artillery pieces were hauled from the fort to Boston to aid the ragged colonials in their rebellion. Thus, the artillery arm of the U.S. Army was born.

From meager beginnings in the 13th century, when it was valued more for its psychological effect than for its destructive capabilities, modern artillery has developed one of the most lethal displays of weaponry man has ever known.

Artillery as an effective force roughly parallels the improvements in the manufacture of gunpowder. The first man to recognize the potential importance of artillery was Charles VII of France who organized the first permanent artillery department in 1436 and headed it with a Master of Artillery.

Brass guns and cast-iron shot did not come into general use until the 16th century, but in that same century effective hand firearms were invented marking the decline of light artillery. Heavy guns were developed whose mobility, however, was extremely limited. As a result, the cumbersome weapons were subject to numerous changes of ownership in any campaign.

In the 17th century a Swedish king, Gustavus II, made great advances in developing artillery into an effective force. Lighter equipment was produced, materials and equipment were standardized, and two guns were attached to each infantry regiment to increase the mobility of artillery.

Returning to America, the colonies, at the height of the Revolutionary War, had 40 artillery companies in four regiments. At the end of the war U. S. Army artillery strength consisted of just one battery, stationed at West Point. From this one battery all our subsequent artillery units have come.

During the War Between the States, nearly 8,000 field pieces were issued to the Union Army alone. By war's end, the Union artillery had fired nearly five million rounds.

During the Indian Wars, the .45 caliber Gatling gun was utilized as an artillery piece.

Infantry division during the first World War had a field artillery brigade, each brigade with two 75mm gun regiments, a 155mm howitzer regiment, and a 6-inch trench mortar battery. Each battery except the mortar battery had four pieces, giving the division a total of 48 light guns, 24 medium howitzers, and 12 trench mortars.

DuringWorld War II, each infantry division had three 105mm howitzer battalions and one 155mm howitzer battalion. By the end of the war, 89 divisions had been activated, requiring 339 artillery battalions. Besides this staggering total, an additional 326 nondivisional battalions of field artillery had been organized.

In the modern Army, infantry divisions still have their artillery battalions, but the space age has ushered in powerful new artillery weapons to add to the bristling array of conventional armament. These are rockets and missiles such as the Corporal and the Honest John—potent, modern weapons for a potent, modern Army.

Signal Bn To Conduct Radio Class

By 122nd Signal Bn. PIO

An FM radio supervisor's course was conducted November 13-14 by the 122nd Signal Battalion for all the division communication officers and chiefs.

The course was a refresher course covering general practices and procedures as well as field expedients designed to provide greater range and more reliable communications with the current series of FM radios. At the close of the course, all attendees were presented lesson plans for a suggested 36-hour course for their respective units.

The classes were taught by selected officers and NCO's of the battalion under the direction of Maj. J. E. McIntire, battalion commanding officer and Capt. Anthony Suso, battalion S-3.

2nd of 9th Changes Commanders In Review at Essebagger Field

By 2nd Bn., 9th Infantry PIO

It was cold and grey last Saturday morning when the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry marched down the hill onto Essebagger Field. The visitors who came to see the battalion in review sat in the stands huddled into coats and blankets against the raw wind.

The battalion was formed to honor the change of command from Lt. Col. George D. Crosby to Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder. Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, 2nd Infantry Division commanding general, and Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, asst. division commander, were on hand to witness the event.

Lt. Col. Crosby leaves the battalion after a period of ten months as battalion commander to assume the duties of asst. chief of staff, G-1.

Col. Ponder comes to the 2nd of the 9th from the G-1 position. The green tabs of the leader were slipped onto his epaulets by Col. Dwight B. Dickson, 2nd Brigade commander.

Col. Ponder is a native of Syracuse N. Y. and is a graduate of Syracuse University.

He began his military career upon entry into Officers Candidate School and was commissioned as a lieutenant in September 1943. He has served as a professor of Military Science and Tactics at the University of Hawaii, intelligence officer at Fort Holabird, Md., and as a member of the Central Army Group (CENTAG) attached to NATO.

He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel while serving with the 1st Battle Group, 26th Infantry. He received the assistant chief of staff position in January of this year.

Col. Ponder's decorations include the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Army Commendation Medal, and the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Division Soldier of the Year Vacations at Callaway Gardens; Fishing and Golfing Dominates PSgt. Thames' Dream Weekend

SGT. AND FAMILY WITH GEN. BILLINGSLEA

WELL, IF BEN HOGAN CAN DO IT . . .

HOW ABOUT THAT! AND ON THE VERY FIRST TRY!

Family Holiday Is Big Surprise

The rich experience of PSgt. Donald L. Thames this past weekend might spur other soldiers of the 2nd Division to greater efforts next year in the Career Soldier of the Year contest.

Sgt. Thames, an operations sergeant at the 2nd Battalion, 22rd Infantry, this year's division choice, spent a luxurious weekend with wife and family at Callaway Gardens' Holiday Inn.

To tour the thousand or so acres of the beautiful gardens, Thames was loaned a 1964 automobile. The dining rooms, dancing areas, golf course, exclusive hunting preserve, abundantly - stocked fishing lakes and every other leisure activity at the Gardens were available to the sergeant on a please-make-use - and don't - pay - us-a-thing basis.

The sergeant, his wife, Barbara Ann, and two small children, Deborah Ann and Gary Don, were welcomed on Friday afternoon at the modern Holiday Inn like royalty — which they are, of a sort.

Of course, they also arrived regally in the big, black sedan belonging to Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, the commanding general of the 2nd Division.

Before leaving Fort Benning on the hour-long drive up U. S. Highway 27 to the resort at Pine Mountain, Gen. Billingslea had invited the Thameses to drop in at Division Headquarters to have a chat and pick up the car.

The two young children fidgeted as Thames and Gen. Billingslea, both fishermen of long standing, swapped fish stories. Two-year-old Gary Don's meeting with the general brought a burst of tears which were soothed away for awhile when Gen. Billingslea gave the two youngsters miniature flags to wave.

Meeting the sergeant and his family were two of the Gardens' chief representatives, Alvin Davis, vice-president, and James B. Ford, the sales manager.

PSGT. THAMES AND WIFE PLAN THEIR WEEKEND

For the first morning of the holiday, Thames chose to get up at 5:30 "from force of habit." (His wife, who is not so habitually forced, stayed in bed.) By 6 a.m., Thames was putting about one of the Gardens' 11 lakes, fishing, by himself; and by mid-morning when he brought the boat to shore, he had a string of 15 largemouth bass.

After lunch, a tour of the 2500-acre Gardens occupied the guests; and, later in the afternoon, they drove to Warm Springs for a look at the Little White House, Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt's summer home.

SGT. THAMES AND WIFE VIEW LAKE

In the evening after dinner, the vacationing sergeant and his tall, blonde wife stopped in at the Saturday night square dance, something Sgt. Thames has known since childhood and something he considered when making tentative plans earlier. Back in Arkansas when the sergeant was growing up, "we'd go to a square dance every Saturday night, a regular barn dance."

Up at seven the next morning, some more fishing was in order, this time with wife in tow. By lunchtime, the sergeant had plucked six more fish out of the juicy lake; his wife lured none. The weather was rainy and windy.

After a farewell luncheon, the Thameses packed to leave and were picked up at two by the general's sedan. The end of a good weekend.

As far as the 2nd Division is concerned, and this it showed by the balloting, nothing is too good for its Soldier of the Year. The management of Callaway Gardens obviously thinks so too and chimed in with the surprise free weekend.

This year, the operations sergeant with the varied and colorful backrgound made it to the top.

Interrogation of Guerrillas Handled Expertly by MP's

By Peter E. Donoghue

Interrogation and processing of prisoners of war are as important in a training exercise as in actual combat. For it is in maneuvers that one can learn and recover from mistakes. Not in war.

Hence the interrogation of PW's is important to the action in Operation Swamp Fox, a counterinsurgency exercise being conducted by units of the 2nd Division at Fort Stewart.

During the now completed first cycle of the operation, more than a score of guerrillas were captured by various units of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, the first of three 3rd Brigade units to undertake this form of training. Each one of the prisoners was brought to a temporary PW camp operated by men of the 2nd Military Police Company.

In charge of the handling of prisoners was SSgt. William M. McNeill, a platoon sergeant with the MP's at Fort Benning. A veteran of the Korean War and an MP since 1953, Sgt. McNeill earned the respect, if sometimes the hate, of his charges during the eight days of action at Fort Stewart.

Sgt. McNeill explained that it was his job and that of the eight MP's under him to perform "routine" interrogations on the prisoners and, cooperating with the battalion S-2, extract as much useful information from them as possible. The prisoners were then transported from the maneuver area, a swamp — infested zone in the northeast portion of the Fort Stewart reservation, to main post and 3rd Brigade headquarters.

In Operation Swamp Fox, prisoners could be held only six hours before they had to be allowed to reinfiltrate back into the guerrilla system.

Sgt. McNeill was obviously pleased with the handling of prisoners as he was with the number of them captured. "There would have been more," he said, "if it had rained more." He said the morale of the guerrilla prisoners was pretty low as it was.

Although he has been charged with handling prisoners several times before, this was Sgt. McNeill's first times in a counterinsurgency problem. He enjoyed it. And he learned from it. Because all the guerrillas were supposed to be civilians, it was a new experience.

He said that all prisoners were segregated by rank in a normal exercise but that here, because they were all "civilians", the prisoners were handled differently, according to their suspected positions in the guerrilla bands. He said a lot of stock was placed in their condition and morale in determining how to handle each individual.

Second Brigade Assistant S-1 Receives His New Captain's Bars

By 2nd Brigade PIO

Thursday, November 7, will be a day long remembered by the 2nd Brigade's assistant S-1 officer. This was the day that Lt. Guenther J. Tisson, at approximately 12:15 p.m. was promoted to the rank of captain at a surprise ceremony held in the office of Col. Dwight B. Dickson, commanding officer of the 2nd Brigade.

Capt. Tisson's wife, Ursula, knew about her husband's promotion before he did, and collaborated with Col. Dickson so that she could be present at the ceremony without his knowledge.

After graduation from Officer's Candidate School and two courses in the U.S. Army Quartermaster School, Capt. Tisson departed for Korea where he served for 13 months. After Korea, he returned to Fort Benning in November of 1962 to serve as assistant S-4 for the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry. His next assignment brought him to the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry as the S-4. In August of this year he was assigned to Headquarters, 2nd Brigade as the assistant S-1.

Arty Units Fire ATT's At Gordon

By 2nd Division Artillery PIO

During World War II a U.S. Army general said: "The battlefield achievements of the artillery arm have enhanced the prestige of the entire American Army. . ."

To insure the strength of that vital arm is the purpose of the artillery's annual training tests (ATT) now being conducted at Fort Gordon, Ga., with units from 2nd Division Artillery participating.

Firing batteries of two battalions, the 17th and 37th Artillery, have completed the tests while a third, the 15th Artillery, is at Fort Gordon now. The 38th Artillery, last to be tested, winds it up in December.

The Artillery ATT is two weeks long, the first week being devoted to training and instruction. Battery tests are conducted during the second week.

Each battalion has three or four firing batteries. The 15th, 17th, and 38th Artillery each have three 105mm howitzer batteries, and each battery has six howitzer sections. The 37th Artillery has one eight-inch and three 155mm howitzer batteries.

Guerrilla-Type Warfare Good Training for 38th

By Lt. Harold W. Darden

Alpha Company crossed phase line Boston sharply at ten a.m., October 31, 1963, in three zones of action covered by ten different eight to twelve man patrols. Each patrol had one AN-PRC-10 radio, one ration per person, and a bedroll for every two men. Each patrol had the initial mission of locating as many guerrillas as possible, and covering the entire area as soon as humanly possible.

In addition to locating two guerrilla cache points and capturing four guerrillas, all patrols had marched some eight thousand meters across the entire country of Jabodia, and accomplished their first mission prior to three p.m.

The remainder of the afternoon and evening was spent in setting up ambush sites, locating guerrillas, and staking out areas exhibiting evidence of guerrilla use. After finding and fixing them, dawn brought more guerrillas under capture.

Half of the antiguerrilla activity slowed up at ten a.m., as the patrols were resupplied with food, water, and radio batteries by H-34 helicopters. All drops were brought in right on target by the use of panel markers and AN-PRC-10 radios, although some of the resupply drops were not exactly at the predesignated points. Only one of the drops was detected by the guerrillas; and six of them were quickly subdued and captured near the drop zone, trying to capture the resupply.

There was never a period of more than thirty minutes when the commander could not talk to every patrol. Nor was there ever a period when more than two patrols (twenty-five men) operated from the same base.

The success of communications was greatly enhanced by the use of radio batteries taken from the guerrillas; and the men feasted on guerrilla rations taken on the first day.

Interrogation, and searching of the guerrillas proved to be fruitless, until one, captured on a three p.m. helicopter raid in the rain was searched, and found to have an encoded message between his toes.

With the thermometer wanting to the forty degree mark, and the rain descending in torrents, the prisoner finally sold the code (which broke the encoded message) for some warm clothes.

The information contained in the message indicated that all the guerrillas were to rendevous at a given point during the night, since the patrols had run them all out of their camps, and had taken their food and supplies.

The commander, feeling that this information was planted to trick his unit, started to set up ambush sites along traveled routes and trails, and sent out reconnaissance patrols to locate the apparent exodus of the guerrillas.

By two a.m. of the third day, the reconnaissance patrols had located the new guerrilla base camp.

At four a.m., four patrols surrounded the enemy by sneaking and crawling into position by different routes. All other patrols were sent on decoy missions and ambush sites.

Four-nineteen a.m. brought a rude awakening to the guerrilla camp: All their weapons were confiscated, and all twenty-nine guerrillas were "killed" or captured.

The speed with which Company A moved, the willingness of individuals and small unit leaders to work, the element of surprise, continuous communication, and team spirit kept the company organized and under control. They kept the guerrilla on the run, never let him get organized, took his supplies, detected his radio frequencies, and took his country from him by employing his own tactics.

One guerrilla was bitten by a rattlesnake, but fortunately, it was not serious, nor nearly as harassing as the mission of the ninety-two men from Company A: To clear the area of guerrillas as quickly as possible.

The mission was successfully accomplished: Alpha Company "killed" or captured about fifty guerrillas, the most captured by any unit in the 2nd Infantry Division to date.

After the 4:19 a.m. raid, and with all the guerrillas captured, the problem was called off approximately eight hours early; and a tired, sleepy group of men who had done their job, returned to Sand Hill for a two-day-late payday.

Aviation Battalion Flush Guerrillas From Swamps

By Peter E. Donoghue

Yeomen service in support of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry during Operation Swamp Fox at Fort Stewart was turned in by 20 men from the 2nd Aviation Battalion.

The men, 12 enlisted men and eight officers, were here with five helicopters and provided a variety of services under the leadership of Capt. Reginald Corliss, senior officer.

Three of the aircraft, CH-34's were employed primarily in supplying the battalion with rations and ammunition. However, as the problem pushed toward its climax, the 34's were pressed into service as an "Eagle patrol."

The Eagle patrol is principally a reconnaissance mission where a 60mm machine-gun team attempts to mow down guerrillas from the sky or flush them out into the open where ground forces can capture or destroy them. The idea is a new concept used with considerable success by forces in Viet Nam.

One CH-34 performed a special mission during its stay when last Wednesday the chopper piloted by Capt. Corliss was used to ferry Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, back and forth to the field to witness armor - infantry training involving the 2nd Division's 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, stationed at Fort Stewart, and the 82nd Airborne Division, from Fort Bragg, N.C.; and both guerrilla and counterinsurgency operations.

The two other aircraft of the 2nd Aviation Battalion at Fort Stewart were OH-13's. These small choppers were used by Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier, 2nd of the 38th commanding officer, for scouting and medical evacuation.

Although not taxed as much as many, the detachment from the 2nd Aviation Battalion nonetheless was involved in much action which tested its resourcefulness. The apparently simple task of dropping C-Rations to the troops provided many hazards in heavily forested areas where landing was impossible:

3rd Brigade British Visitors Highly Praise Ranger Schooling

BY BOB DeCAMARA

Two British Army officers, one the Sandhurst - graduate son of the governor of Basutoland and the other an honor graduate, have nothing but praise for Fort Benning's Ranger School.

The two finished the school and then spent time with various units of the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade learning how theory works in practice.

Capt. William N. A. King of the 1st Battalion, Lancashire Regiment, British Army of the Rhine entered the Army in 1954, finished Officers Candidate School in 1955 and since then has trudged from Berlin to Hong Kong to the Arabian Gulf with the British Army.

His promotion to captain came at the end of his Ranger School training and his announcement as honor graduate. One thing the British Army has in common with its American counterpart — all young career officers seem to be flocking to military schools for specialized and advanced training.

The 26-year-old Captain, who habitually carries a swagger stick with his dress uniform in the best tradition of the British military, is a qualified parachutist and has taken the Infantry School's Heavy Weapons Course — two things he shares with Lt. Robert S. B. Watson of the Royal Scots (The Royal Regiment). A Scotsman himself and a native of Edinburgh, the young dark - haired, square - jawed lieutenant calls home Basutoland, Africa, where his father is chief British administrator.

As a son of Sandhurst, Britain's equivalent of the military academy at West Point, pride in profession is steeped in Lt. Watson's blood. From North Africa and an assignment as a rifle platoon leader, he came to Fort Benning for the Ranger School which both officers believe to be an almost perfectly - distilled essence of broad military principles.

Both officers had been previously familiar with portions of the course through prior Far East, counter - insurgency and desert warfare in the Middle East and winter conditioning in Sweden and Germany.

The Ranger School's nine-week course will hopefully give the two a smattering of all that they might return home and institute similar programs for their own units.

Lt. Watson emphasized that the Ranger training is an introduction to each element, a necessary restriction due to the course's time span.

Capt. King praised the school in these words. "In eight years I have been in the service, the finest patrol training I have ever received was at Ranger School. The principles that I learned could be applied to any of my previous training in small units or in snow, mountains, jungle or desert."

Finishing Ranger School, the two careerists in their stiff American fatigue uniforms with United Kingdom labels toured the "Indianhead" Division's 3rd Brigade for three weeks, the first week with the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor where they observed tank crews and companies on field maneuvers.

They next rode to the boondocks (the reservation wilds) to study the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry at the Counter-Guerrilla Reaction Course and, later, working with the Davy Crockett missile.

Pugil training, the advanced bayonet bouts matching men with canvas - tipped stout oak rods which the 2nd Division introduced a couple of months ago, was seen by Capt. King and Lt. Watson performed by the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry.

A patrol planning session at the 7th Cavalry included the Britishers and, lastly they sat in with each of the four 3rd Brigade special staff sections.

During their entire stay with the 3rd Brigade, Capt. King and Lt. Watson were escorted by Capt. Walter D. Everhart, late of "sneaky bunch" fame in Swift Strike III as second in command of Task Force Lyon.

Sylvester retired from the Army with over 20 years active service early in October. He was a member of Company A, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Battalion Surgeon At 38th Infantry Was Top Student

Capt. Robert A. Kimbrell, battalion surgeon of the Marnemen, after seven years of examination(s) by the professors at the University of Alabama and its affiliated Medical School, was diagnosed to be a Doctor of Medicine. The chief symptoms leading up to this diagnosis were his scholastic average, which fluctuated between A minus and B plus, and his internship at Nashville General Hospital.

As Dr. Kimbrell plans to go into the field of pediatrics (the medical term for "kids do the darnedest thing"), the treatment rendered him for his condition was to convalesce in the pediatric clinic at Martin Army Hospital four afternoons per week.

Viet Nam-Bound 2nd Division Chaplain Is Awarded Army Commendation Medal

BY BOB de CAMARA

A large number of people turned out at Indianhead Lodge last week on Sand Hill to say goodbye to the assistant 2nd Division chaplain, Chap. (Maj.) Frank E. Deese, who left the division for Vietnam.

Included in the gathering were the chaplains from Main Post, the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) and the 2nd Infantry Division. A number of wives and children were also on hand.

Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Division commander, pinned a green and white Army Commendation Medal on Chap. Deese who came to the Indianhead Division in late December 1960.

Since then, the assistant division chaplain has taken part in a whirlwind of 2nd Division activities, including the cancelled Rotaplan, and was promoted to major in a wooded ceremony on Swift Strike III last summer.

Chap. Deese and his wife, Gaynelle, sliced a red, white and blue cake with a long, flashing saber. On the cake in red rosebud lettering were "Happy Birthday Mrs. Deese" and "Farewell Maj. Deese."

The division chaplain, Chap. (Lt. Col.) James C. Carroll, hosted the affair to which came numerous friends of Chap. Deese outside the chaplains branch of the Army.

From The Infantry School came Col. Maurice Holden, formerly a commander of the 2nd Division's 38th Infantry, a unit which Chap. Deese once served.

The departing chaplain told the group that his experience with the 2nd Division had been rewarding and spoke of the division as a "great outfit", and then listened as the 3rd Brigade chaplain, Chap. (Capt.) John Green, related a humorous anecdote and presented a desk pen set.

The cake that the crowd sat down to eat with coffee was the handiwork of the 2nd Administration Company's night baker, Sp5 Andrew Kozee Jr. The "Admin" Company commander, Capt. George L. Quinn, and the company's chief mess sergeant, SSgt. Ernie Meyer also attended.

Signal Sergeant Is Commended By U.S. Strike Command CG

By 122nd Signal PIO

At a review and ceremonies held recently at Essenbagger Field, MSgt. Edward P. Faulkner, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 122nd Signal Battalion, was recognized for receiving a Letter of Commendation from Gen. Paul D. Adams, Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Strike Command, for meritorious services rendered on Joint Exercise Swift Strike III.

The letter read in part: "The importance of the Signal Operating Instructions to the proper functioning of a Division cannot be overemphasized. Without it the Division could not function. During Joint Exercise Swift Strike III, the 2nd Infantry Division Signal Office produced three complete SOI's and two complete changes to these SOI's. The amount of manpower necessary to perform this near inhuman feat is almost impossible to estimate. The credit for this work must go to you as Chief SOI Clerk in the Division Signal Office.

"It was your duty to see that the innumberable items of the SOI's were properly prepared, written, printed, bound, and distributed. The complexity of this task is difficult to describe within a confined space. Yet time after time during the two week period that the exercise ran, you efficiently and diligently went about your work. Endless hours were spent in the preparation of SOI items and final distribution of these items, only to find that somewhere along the battlefront a compromise had occurred and the items in question had to be re-written and re-distributed. However, at no time during the entire exercise did the Division find itself without an SOI it knew to be reliale for use.

"Few men have the knowledge or ability to so rapidly and efficiently produce a product as complex and delicate as a complete SOI. Yet, for all practical purposes, you were responsible for producing five of these volumes in a two week period. Your performance of duty was in keeping with the highest traditions of the US Army" Signature, Paul D. Adams, General, Commander in Chief.

Sgt. Faulkner is the chief clerk in the Division Signal Office. He and his wife and children live at 1415 Kevin Court, Columbus.

By 1st Bn., 38th Infantry PIO

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry will soon lose the services of it's S-1 officer, Capt. James W. Grey. He is leaving for Viet Nam.

A native of Chicago, the captain is a graduate of Weber High School in the Windy City. While there he managed the basketball and football teams.

Following his high school graduation in 1950, he spent a semester at Purdue University before electing to make the Army his career.

Four months at Stanton Prep, located in Cornwall, New York, was the initial plateau in Capt. Grey's military career. From there, he attended the United States Military Academy at West Point where he graduated from the rigorous four-year course with a Bachelor of Science degree in military science, and a Regular Army commission.

Capt. Grey is both Airborne and Ranger qualified and has attended both the Basic Officer's Infantry Course and the Advanced Officer's Infantry Course.

Division's New G-5 Arrived at Busy Time

By Bob de Camara

The officer who serves the 2nd Infantry Division as assistant chief of staff, G-5, received a slight jolt upon arrival at the heavy - duty "Indianhead" Division.

On May 10, a Friday, he reported to the 1st Brigade commander and was given the weekend to register his car, square away his family and put his affairs in order after the jumble of traveling.

On May 13, Monday, Maj. David A. Forsythe kissed his wife and two young daughters goodbye and started off for his first day's work as brigade intelligence officer.

In the major's words, "The 1st Brigade had only been put together a short while before. This was sort of a shakedown cruise, something like when it puts a new ship to sea. I can tell you one thing — working days and nights, the men of that brigade sure got to know each other."

Maj. Forsythe is no infantry division neophyte although this is his first tour of duty with the "Indianhead" Division. About this time seven years ago, the major was on Sand Hill with the 3rd Infantry Division.

The position of G-5 is, in peacetime, a liaison service between the civilian and military. It is a fresh adventure for the major who left three weeks ago for the Civil Affairs School at Fort Gordon.

Maj. Forsythe's military education includes the Italian language at the Army Language School, Presidio of Monterrey, Calif.; studies at the Signal Corps School shortly after entering the Army in early 1945 as a private.

Sgt. Mulkey entered the service in November, 1942, completing basic training at Camp Robinson, Ark. He joined the 5th Infantry Division and fought with them during the entire European campaign. He returned to the estates for a year before returning to Europe to serve with the constabulary. After spending another year in the states for a year before re-at the outbreak of hostilities, serving with the 25th Infantry until September, 1951.

Twice more he was sent to Germany, once to serve with the 6th Infantry in Berlin and then "gyroscoped" with the 3d Infantry from Fort Benning in 1958.

In 1960, he returned to the states and Fort Benning. He is presently serving as platoon sergeant of the anti-tank platoon.

Sgt. McKinney entered the Army in May, 1942, serving with the 314th Infantry and the 79th Infantry Divisions in Europe. He saw additional combat action in the Korean War when he served with the 1st Cavalry Division. He came to Fort Benning in 1961 and as the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry was activated, he became chief clerk, S-3.

Sgt. Bowlin entered the Army in October, 1952. After completing basic training at Fort Lee, Va., he was sent to the 1st Cavalry Division in Japan. After returning to the states, he was assigned to the 3d Infantry Division at Fort Benning. He "gyroscoped" with the unit to Germany and returned to Benning in 1961 as a cadreman in the basic training center. He presently is the assistant operations sergeant in the battalion.

Sgt. Kennedy's Army career started in 1953 after graduating from Mendenhall, Miss., High School. He recently scored the highest grade on the General Subjects Examination administered to all non-commissioned officers in the battalions. He was Company C's top man on the Proficiency Test last year.

Esprit de Corps

Esprit de corps, according to Webster's New World Dictionary, is "group spirit; sense of pride, honor, etc. in common interests and activities, as of those in the same profession."

Our profession is soldiering. And it is perhaps more important to us than any other profession that we possess the highest possible degree of esprit de corps.

Our lives depend upon it.

Without a sense of pride, honor and purpose, the chances of this nation's survival, let alone progress, would be tantamount to impossible. Without team spirit in a just cause, victory in any of our country's battles would have been improbable.

You can gather together the world's finest footballplayers but if they don't have team spirit, its not a team. If these eleven men don't pull together, they will be beaten easily.

The military is built on individual talents. But this individuality must be channeled toward common goals in order to produce the desires results.

Our aim as soldiers and Americans is to protect and foster the democracy we have. We must be prepared to pull together to protect our freedom. Our potential adversaries are not free men but are held together with fear. This is not the type of team spirit we want.

Pride is an important factor. Pride in our unit and our country are surely essential things. But personal pride is most basic. If we fail to have this, we needn't worry about the others.

Fortified with pride in ourselves and a knowledge of our mission, a soldier can be proud on our American ideal. It is based on the individual dignity of man. He can proudly fight for it.

Hand and hand with esprit de corps is morale. A man can not have esprit de corps if his morale is not high. But if he is aware of the importance of what he is sworn to defend, he can put up with most anything and still have the determination to continue.

We in the 2nd Infantry Division have a long and glorious past of which to be proud. But this alone can not make esprit de corps. It is our future freedom, certainly worth preserving, which will make us pull together as in the past.

Infantry Board Research Assisted by 2nd of 23rd

By 2nd Bn, 22rd Inf. PIO

Members of the 2nd Battalion (Mech), 22rd Infantry took part in a research which was administered by the Infantry Board recently.

The individuals from the 2nd Battalion, fired carbine and M-14 rifles. They were taught an effective method of firing that is similar to a method that was used during World War II. Some of the participants commented that this method was more reliable than the standard sighting and aiming method. They felt that this method could be more reliable during actual combat because many soldiers are afraid to the extent that they will not sight and aim.

The technique mentioned above consists of aiming from the hip. The soldier aims from the hip, brings the rifle butt up to the shoulder and fires without moving the barrel from the previously pointed position.

During the research, the soldiers fired several rounds for familiarization and then took a firing test. They fired ten rounds at stationary targets and then at pop up targets.

Sgt. Southern W. Hewitt, Company A, hit 70 per cent of targets. This was the highest percentage of hits since the beginning of the research. Overall, the Battalion's representatives were above average on the firing line.

Indianhead Generals See 17th Artillery in Action

By 2nd Division Artillery PIO

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea and Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, the 2nd Infantry Division's commander and assistant commander respectively, visited Fort Gordon on successive days last week to see 2nd Division Artillery units in action.

Gen. Billingslea visited the artillery ranges on Monday, November 4, and Gen. Coffin followed the next day. They observed firing batteries of the 17th Artillery taking the annual training test. (The 37th Artillery is a 105mm howitzer battalion.)

A highlight of Gen. Billingslea's tour was an emergency fire mission, or "hip shoot," executed by Battery C of the 17th Artillery. The emergency mission tests the speed in which a battery can ready itself to fire. Battery C was ready to fire within six minutes of the alert.

Both generals included in their tours a visit to an observation post (OP) where they were afforded a view of the impact area.

After the noon meal, Sgt. Maj. Clarence Butler of the 17th Artillery presented Gen. Billingslea with a plaque bearing the battalion crest and motto on behalf of the unit's non-commissioned officers.

9 Medals to Viet Nam Advisors Given During Awards Ceremony

By Bob de Camara

Two Bronze Star Medals and nine Air Medals were awarded at Marne Field on November 8 to an assortment of 2nd Division officers and enlisted men.

All the awards were for service in an advisory capacity in Viet Nam.

Capt. Henry J. O'Connor, commander of Company B, was the most heavily honored. He took a Bronze Star Medal for "operations against hostile forces" and an Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster (two awards) for "aerial combat support of ground forces of the Republic of Viet Nam," the citations read.

The second of the two Bronze Star Medals given went to the commander of the 7th Cavalry's Headquarters Troop, Capt. Robert E. Mays, for staff advisory duties from December 1962 to March 1963 with the 2nd Vietnamese Armored Cavalry Squadron, a section of Viet Nam's IV Corps.

Another 7th "Cav" soldier, this one from Troop D, had three Air Medals coming for three separate stretches of duty ending in March. He is Sp5 Joseph H. Keys.

The division's aviation battalion was solidly represented for Air Medals. Sp5 Charley J. Pierson of Company B accepted three; Sp4 Stanley J. Meiners, also of Company B, received one of the medals.

The ribbon of the Bronze Star Medal, which is most commonly worn on the uniform in place of the bulky medal, is red, white and blue. Blue and gold are the colors of the Air Medal.

The commander of troops at the parade field was Col. William J. Ray, the 1st Brigade's commanding officer, whose troops participated in the event.

In addition, an artillery battalion salute battery boomed out the start of the award ceremony, and the division band was on hand as usual with marching music.

Assistant S-3 at 3rd Bde Found Thailand Beautiful

By 3rd Brigade PIO

The Joint U. S. Military Assistance Group for Thailand has occupied the last 23 months time of the 3rd Brigade's newest S-3 assistant.

Capt. Norris F. Dendy joined the brigade staff recently. His duty station in Thailand was Udorn. Situated in the northeast part of Thailand, it is 400 miles from Bangkok and 30 miles from the Thailand - Laos border.

"The country is beautiful", commented Capt. Dendy, "but they have some transportation problems in the northeast sector." River passage, railway and a national airline provide the main types of transportation. A current U.S. project is the highway from Korat to Nong Khai on the Mekong River. The friendship endeavor will pass through Udorn on its way to the river that borders Thailand and Laos.

Advising the Royal Thai Army's Regimental Combat Team at Udorn, Capt. Dendy participated in civic affairs as well as operating in his official capacity. "One of the brighter aspects was the presence of my family for 20 of the 23 months that I was in Thairland," commented Capt. Dendy.

Capt. Dendy has been with the Army since 1953. An ROTC graduate of North Carolina's Agriculture and Technical College, he majored in Chemistry. The captain has attended the Infantry Officer's Orientation Course, the Airborne School, and the Career Officer's Course, all at Fort Benning.

His duty assignments include the 11th Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky.; the 522nd Infantry Battalion, Fort Sill, Okla.; the 3rd Infantry Division, Germany; and the U. S. Army Training Command, Fort Knox, Ky.

Division Officers Complete Rigorous Airborne Training

By 1st Brigade PIO

The C-123, filled to capacity with airborne instructors and students making their first equipment jump, was cruising in cloudless skies at twelve hundred and fifty feet. The doors on either side of the rear fuselage had been removed and lashed to the tail ramp. There was a chill morning breeze whistling throughout the entire plane, and the combined roar of wind and engines made conversation impossible.

MSgt. James L. McCaskill of the Airborne Air Mobility Department, USAIC, pulled up a seat next to me and sketched out on the back of a paper poop bag the rectangular route our C-123 would take in arriving over the drop zone.

We were flying from Lawson Field for seven minutes to Hurtsboro, Ala. From there we'd make a left-hand turn and fly for ten minutes to Eufaula, also in Alabama, then make another left turn and back into Georgia. Final approach to the DZ would be from Lumpkin, a flight of seven minutes. We would make three passes over the jump site, flying a circular race-track pattern.

In a "stick" of five field-grade officers making the jump was Col. William J. Ray, 1st Brigade commanding officer. He was travelling with Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, 2nd Infantry Division assistant commanding general, and Col. John K. Walker Jr., 3rd Brigade commander. Six veteran paratroopers from the Airborne Air Mobility Department were slated to exit the plane on the first pass. Called the "dummy stick", their mission was to make the initial jump onto Fryar Field and test the air turbulence near ground level for the succeeding jumpers.

SSgt. Vincent A. DiFilippo, the jumpmaster, edged up to the right-hand door, grasped the handholds firmly and peered down at the ground.

Assistant Jumpmaster SSgt. Howard L. Miller, manning the left-hand door, waited a few signals, then shouted "Go!" and vigorously whacked the first jumper on the back of his chute. In rapid sequence the rest of the dummy stick popped from either door, slipping from the plane like balled paper thrown from the window of a speeding car. They'd delay just a second in space, then the windblast would catch and hurl them down and away.

When the six turbulence testers had departed the plane, the pilot put the aircraft in a gentle thirty-degree bank and swung around for the second pass. On this run, Brig. Gen. Coffin, Col. Ray, Col. Walker, and three other officers of Airborne Class 14 got ready, stood up, checked their equipment, sounded off, and safely jumped twelve hundred and fifty feet down to Fryar Field. Three weeks of vigorous airborne training had paid off.

A Parade of New Lieutenants Joins 1st of the 38th to Start Military Careers

By 1st Bn. 38th Inf. P.I.O.

Leading the parade of new lieutenants entering the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry is Lt. Lloyd L. Gardner, a graduate of Henderson State College in Ark.

During his collegiate career, he was named to the honor roll on several occasions, as his academic index of B would indicate. In addition to his fine scholastic achievements, he also distinguished himself in ROTC training while at school.

Following receipt of his commission, Lt. Gardner attended the Basic Officers' Course and later was a platoon leader with the 5th Armored Rifle Battalion at Fort Chaffe, Ark.

Lt. Gardner is of the opinion that one learns something new every day, so upon his arrival at Fort Benning he attended the Airborne School and the Mortar and Davy Crockett School. He is now expounding his knowledge in the latter field for the benefit of (and as platoon leader of) the Mortar and Davy Crockett Platoon of the Marnemen.

Another exceptional and affable individual is Lt. Allen C. Smith of Bravo Company. Although this is Lt. Smith's first active military assignment, he carries with him into the Army a rather impressive background.

He was an all-around collegian at Western Michigan University at Kalamazoo, taking his barcalaureate (B.S.) in history with a minor in biology, in addition to his ROTC training where he was a Distinguished Military Graduate.

He attended the Basic Officer's Course at The Infantry School, as well as airborne training, and is an accomplished rifleman, placing second during each years of his ROTC training. He was also captain of his rifle team during his junior and senior years at Western Michigan

Not only is Lt. Smith an outstanding student of academic and military training, but he is also an accomplished musician.

Lt. Thomas S. Akins comes to the Rock of the Marne Battalion from the University of Oklahoma where, in addition to receiving his ROTC training, he was awarded his Bachelor of Arts degree in English.

Lt. Bryan Long, another new member of the battalion, holds a Bacelor of Sciencc degree from the University of Southern Mississippi where he also took his ROTC training.

A reservist, he spent six months at Fort Jackson, S.C. for basic combat training, and also attended the supply clerk's school there.

Lt. Long was a member of the Second Battalion of the 9th Infantry before coming to Company B.

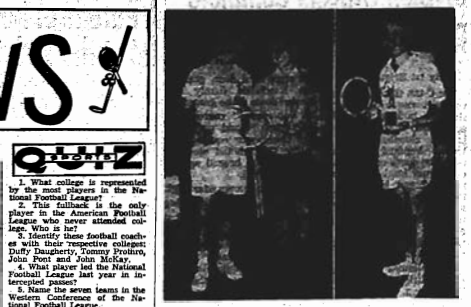
23rd Infantry Sergeant Had Close Call in Korea

Can you imagine the weird feeling that must accompany the ghastly thought of dying? Can you stretch your imagination to that extent? If you can, then you can guess what it was like once for Sgt. William D. Woods of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

"The hours were slowly passing; the Koreans were attacking, and night was coming on," Sgt. Woods describes his experiences during a battle at Naktong River in Korea. The Koreans penetrated the 23rd Infantry's line and continued their attack. Sgt. Woods was wounded by a burp gun, which knocked him unconscious. When Sgt. Woods woke up his comrades were stretched out all over the field and his boots, wallet, and other personal objects were missing. The Koreans thought he was dead, so they left him with the other casualties. While in the hospital at Pusan, he was listening to the Communist news cast which usually named a long list of American soldiers killed in action.

Sgt. Woods thought of his pernicious experience and narrow escape. When he heard his name called as "dead", he sighed with relief and thanked God that he was still alive. "I had a strange feeling when I realized that I was the only survivor from my platoon," Sgt. Woods said.



TOPS IN TENNIS . . . PFC Robert Piltch (R) of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry recently captured the first place trophy in a tennis tournament at Service Club 2. He defeated Sgt. Both Alagna and Low are with the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery. (Photo by 122nd Signal)

Between the Sidelines

By Ted Williamson

Years ago, Chicago, Ill., was noted for its mobster element, its gang battles, rumbles or what have you. Those days have supposedly passed from the scene along with the trolley cars.

This Sunday, however, the Windy City's Wrigley Field, that staid old baseball field with the ivy covered walls, will become the scene of one of the fiercest gang battles ever witnessed by the local case-hardened citizenry.

The local combatants will be the Chicago Bears, former "Monsters of the Midway," now making their strongest bid for prominence in several years. The invaders are the Green Bay Packers, long time rivals of the Bears and currently riding the crest of success in the National Football League.

As in most gang battles, there is more than just prestige at stake. In this instance, it is the NFL's Western Division title, a very important stake indeed.

Both teams have identical records, eight wins and one loss. The Packers lost to the Bears in the opening game of the season, 10-3. The Bear's lone setback came at the hands of the lowly San Francisco 49'ers, 20-14.

The Packers' will be without the services of their great field-general, Bart Starr. The Bears will probably get only partial performances by end Angie Coia, and half-back Ronnie Bull has not been able to go full speed in the last three games.

The Bears mighty defense, which has been the stingiest in giving up points, will receive its sorest test against the Packers' resourceful offense. By the same token, the Packers' defense, the best in the NFL against rushing, will have to be at its strongest Sunday, despite the fact that the Bears' offense is not considered to be very strong.

In a matter of hours it will all be over, and Wrigley Field can return to what it was meant for. However, the ivy covered walls, and the smooth turf may never lose the battle scars of this pigskin tete-a-tete.

College football is still in a big turmoil with bigger upsets occuring every Saturday. Last Saturday was no exception as two of the big ones, Auburn and Illinois, took it on the chin from rather unexpected angles: Michigan's Wolverines became the upsetters for the second week in a row as they upended Illinois and all but eliminated the scent of roses around Champaign.

Mississippi State, almost forgotten after losing to Memphis State, halted Auburn's drive for the national championship, derailing the War Eagles on a last second field goal.

Only T. C. U. and Texas A&M stand between the Texas Longhorns and their pre-season dream — Number 1 team in the nation. The rest of my top ten has turned topsy-turvy week after week, and this week is no exception.

1. Texas (8-0)
2. Mississippi (6-0-1)
3. Michigan State (5-1-1)
4. Navy (7-1)
5. Oklahoma (6-1)
6. Illinois (5-1-1)
7. Auburn (6-1)
8. Pittsburgh (6-1)

Eustis 'Wheels' Upset Quantico

Special to the Bayonet

QUANTICO, Va. — The Fort Eustis Wheels crashed in on two of many Quantico miscues to upset the previously unbeaten and Missile Bowl bound Marines, 13-0, before 8,500 at the Marine Corps School last Saturday. It was Quantico's first loss in nine games and upped the Wheels' record to 6-2.

Former Southern California quarterback Ben Charles had a hand in both scores. Charles passed six yards to halfback Tom Boris for the first TD following a fumble by the Marines on their own 21 yard line 58 seconds before halftime. Midway through the third quarter, Boris intercepted a Quantico pass at virtually the same spot and Charles plunged one yard for the score following a 15-yard personal foul penalty against the Marines.

A rock-ribbed defense and widespread penalties (128 yards) proved too much for the Marines who saw their most serious scoring threat die, smothered early in the game. Quarterback Pat McCarthy failed to complete a fourth down pass on the Eustis four yard line after his team had driven 45 yards downfield.

Quantico's only other threat of the game came in the final quarter when halfback John McNitt intercepted a Charles pass and returned it 12 yards to the Eustis 28 yard line. Fullback Dave Hayes was thrown for a loss and three other plays, two of them passes, were not enough for the first down.

Last Home Appearance

Final Game Set Against Fort Dix

By Dave Braun

The Fort Dix Burros will provide the opposition for Fort Benning at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Doughboy Stadium as the Doughboys make their final home appearance of 1963.

Fort Benning which ran its season's record to 7-2 last Saturday night with a 47-8 conquest of Fort Belvoir, will be facing a team that has found the going a bit rough this year.

Playing in a rugged Eastern Interservice Athletic Conference, the Burros own wins over Fort Belvoir and Fort Devens, Mass.

Several key Fort Benning players will be seeing their last game at Doughboy Stadium among whom are tackle Joe Wendryhoski and center Elliott Moseley.

Other Doughboys slated to play their last home game include ends Fred Murphy and Dan House, quarterback Marvin Tibbetts, halfbacks Brewster Hobby and Bobby Towns, and fullback Ron Quillen.

Rounding out the list of players who have performed for the Doughboys through this season and with last years unbeaten contingent are halfback Raymond Eddy, guard Wayne Peters, halfback DeWayne Jeter, fullback Wally Johnson (on the injured list), tackle Bill Nance and end John Trueman.

The Doughboy's record dating back to the start of the 1962 season is 17-2.

Doughboys Drop Belvoir, 47-8

By Dave Braun

Fort Benning bounded back on the victory trail Saturday night at rain-threatened Doughboy Stadium, waylaying the Fort Belvoir Engineers, 47-8, before an estimated 8,000 fans.

The local contingent opened up the scoring festivities early in the first stanza when fullback Ron Quillen capped a 59-yard drive by darting in from the three-yard stripe with 10:23 left in the quarter.

Quillen then split the uprights with a perfect conversion and the scoreboard read 7-0.

Quillen's second extra point attempt of the evening went wide and with 2:27 remaining in the quarter the Doughboys led 13-0.

2nd Quarter

Just after the start of the second period Fort Benning took over on the Engineer 39. Quarterback Dave Sarette quickly moved to the 25 on a sneak and five plays later from the 17, Sarette hit end Fred Murphy for the TD.

Quillen's extra point kick was perfect and with 13:07 remaining in the half it was 20-0.

Bobby Towns cracked the right side of the line to the nine-yard marker and, following a five-yard penalty which set the pigskin on the four, Raymond Eddy plunged in for the tally. With 6:?? remaining in the half, Quillen made it three for four in the extra point department and the score was 27-0.

On the first play from scrimmage halfback Elroy Foley took a handoff and galloped unmolested 78 yards to paydirt. Quillen again split the uprights and the blue and white clad local squad moved ahead, 34-0.

Still hungry for points, Fort Benning bounced on a loose fumble on the Engineer 43 and three downs later, coupled with a 15-yard penalty, quarterback Gary Stutzman hit end Anthony Schowell of Baltimore on a 20-yard TD pitch.

A bad snap from center prevented the extra point attempt and the Doughboys went to the locker room at halftime with a 40-0 lead.

Fort Belvoir got on the scoreboard in the third quarter after recovering a Doughboy fumble on the Fort Benning 20. Six plays later quarterback Charles Reilly found sideback Earl Lawrence.

Reilly flipped another aerial to halfback Pat O'Mealy on the two-point conversion try and Fort Benning led, 40-8.

The final score of the evening came late in the third quarter when Stutzman, a third team signal caller, threw back-to-back strikes to Schowell for a first down on the Engineer 13.

Ray, Tom and Roland took time out between plays to practice as a combo. Both Ray and Roland play the guitar, while Tom accompanies them with the piano.

Back to football for just a minute. The big game between the Coumbus Blue Devils and the Baker Lions was played two weeks ago.

Leaving post was quite a chore. Traffic was backed up all the way to the entrance to Fort Benning. Cars were traveling at a "snail's" pace. Terrie Setaro mentioned that conversation was carried from car to car.

School spirit held its place as cheering sections competed along with the football teams. Cars were decorated with streamers and school colors. One Baker car had a crowned Lion sitting on the hood.

Early one morning recently the men were out hunting. Col. Shuck and his son wandered in about 4 p.m., but could report no luck. Bill strange and his father went out,' but likewise, were unlucky.

Not everyone was so unfortunate. Charles Ogden shot a six-point buck, weighing 105 pounds. He made his kill at Harp's Pond.

That same afternoon, J.A.DA.. had its fashion show-luncheon. Mothers and daughters sat starry-eyed at the array of colorful sportswear. With Chrsitmas coming up, Santa shouldn't find it too hard to figure out what these girls want. Mrs. Davis helped the 14 models with their posture and grace on the run-way.

Last Saturday evening found approximately 30 teenagers at the Keekin house. Sue, David, Emily and Loyd had some of the "kids" in for popcorn and dancing.

Speaking of dancing, there are a "string" of parties coming up.

Tomorrow, "Follow Me Club" is having a Spaghetti Dinner. E. Y. C. and all Protestant youth of high school age are invited. The price is 50 cents.

The dinner will be at the adult Sunday School Building on Dixie Rd. from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. JoAnn Morgan is chairman of the food committee, and Cathy Jones is in charge of publicity.

Each weekend, a few "college kids" come home to "rest-up." Recently, Jack Strange and Bill Tuck came home. Jack attends Spring Hill College in Mobile, Ala., Bill claims the University of Georgia, in Athens as his "second" home.

Walter Griswold, a senior in an Alabama high school, visited his home for the first time since school started for him.

Tennis Tourney

Linda Glover Is Victorious

In the ladies singles of Fort Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess annual Fall Tennis Championships Linda Glover posted a 6-1, 6-1, victory over Gayle Baker in the finals to win the laurels.

In an earlier match Glover won over Diana Ponce 6-2, 5-7, 6-0. Baker, in gaining her final position, met Sally Sims and played a marathon match finishing under the lights in a set that lasted well over 2½ hours. The final score was 7-5, 7-6.

In the men's doubles one major upset took place when Jim Glick and John Bradley defeated the number 2 team of Gil Stephenson and Pedro Ponce by the score of 6-3, 6-3. Consistency, ball control and flawless play marked their win. In the finals Gray Carter and Joe Grubbs defeated Glick and Bradley, 6-3, 6-3.

The mixed doubles saw the team of Baker and Carter defeated by Lou Kearns and Ace Osborn, 6-3, 6-3.

The men's class A singles championship was won by Charles Saint in his final round match with Allen Mathews, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Cuartel Quarterback

Illinois and Alabama Elevens Slated as Winners This Week

A funny thing happened to Auburn on the way to a championship Saturday. They ran into 11 hard-nosed Bulldogs from Mississippi State and after a four-quarter scrap, came up on the short end of a 13-10 count.

The Tigers went into the game with the SEC's only unblemished record and with dreams of going all the way. Now they must depend on these same Bulldogs to stop Old Miss, a perennial power whose only blemish is a season-opening tie with still surprising Memphis State. However, they still can't win the championship as State has yet to taste league defeat. They were tied early in the season by wishy - washy Florida, and were defeated by Memphis State.

One of the most important battles this week takes place when finally-defeated Illinois takes on rugged and ready Wisconsin. A Rose Bowl bid hangs in the balance for the Illini. They lost a close one to Michigan last week but like the famous advertisement says, "Nobody's perfect." They are still a superior football team and should take the measure of a disappointing Wisconsin eleven.

ILLINOIS OVER WISCONSIN . . . They have to win this one or they can hand all the laurels over to Michigan State. Wisconsin rallied last week to defeat Northwestern, but Tommy Myers crew isn't on par with the Pete Elliot coached Illini.

ALABAMA OVER GEORGIA TECH . . . We choose to ignore the Tide's fluke loss to Florida and will consider them a great team until someone proves otherwise. Tech is good, but it'll take Billy Lothridge's best day to beat "Bama." Look for a 19-10 Tide victory.

NAVY OVER DUKE . . . Navy is rated high on the wire services polls and should increase their prestige with a resounding 28-7 romp over the Blue Devils.

LSU OVER MISSISSIPPI STATE . . . State has to lose another game. LSU is still embarrassed over their ragged performance against Ole Miss and must take out their revenge on State since they won't have another opportunity with the Rebels. The score will be 15-11.

OKLAHOMA OVER MISSOURI . . . This can go either way, but the Sooners appear to be about a touchdown better than Missouri. It should be a 14-7 game.

OHIO STATE OVER NORTHWESTERN . . . Until Northwestern can best Wisconsin, they can't hope to contend with the always-powerful State team. You can expect a 21-10 score.

PITTSBURGH OVER ARMY . . . The Panthers are faster, bigger, more experienced and more likely to come up with the great game. They will clobber Army 37-13.

Battalion Level Basketball Replaces Major Unit Play

A battalion level basketball league will replace the former major unit level league in the 1963-64 cage year at Fort Benning.

League play will be scheduled during the period Nov. 13 through March 15, 1964. At the completion of league play a battalion level play-off will be conducted between the winning teams of The Infantry Center, 2nd Infantry Division and 11th Air Assault Division to determine the post champion.

The Infantry Center basketball league will consist of a double round robin divided into two halves of play. The winner of each half of league play will be determined on the basis of total games won and lost.

Each team will be limited to 12 uniformed playing members, one coach and a trainer.

All league games will be played at Briant Wells Field House (Bldg. 933). League play will be governed by the 1964 basketball rules of the Amateur Athletic Union.

A meeting of team coaches was held last Wednesday in the sports office to discuss administrative details governing league play.

A roster of team members will be furnished by the official scorer, and The Infantry Center Special Services Section will furnish game officials.

Appropriate team and individual awards will be presented to the winner and runner-up squads for The Infantry Center league championship.

Surgeon Says

Radioisotopes Are Often Used For Diagnosis and Treatment

By Maj. Kirwan T. MacMillan, MC

During the past 20 years the radioisotope has become available to the physician in the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

It is ironic that this recent addition to the healing art is available mainly because of the intensive research and testing carried out in World War II during the development of the atomic bomb.

Since 1946 the medical use of radioisotopes has become commonplace. Once only great medical research centers performed simple tests of thyroid function using the carefully hoarded and limited supplies obtained from the cyclotron, or atom smasher, but now the smallest community hospital and health center can offer a variety of radioisotope tests and treatments for human disease.

The word "radioisotope" is derived from Latin and Greek, and roughly translated means, "A Ray In The Same Place". Radioactivity refers to the giving off of energy in the form of rays or tiny particles. All material things, whether solid, liquid or gaseous, are composed of tiny building blocks of matter called atoms.

Atoms have smaller parts consisting of a central nucleus. The atom might be compared to the solar system with the sun at the center corresponding to the nucleus, and the encircling electrons corresponding to the planets.

Electrons are so small that they have almost no weight or mass, but their number and distribution around the nucleus is important in the chemical and physical nature of the atom.

Most of the atoms of a pure chemical element such as iron, or gold, are exactly alike. That is, they have identical numbers of electrons and particles in the nucleus. Such atoms are stable and do not change over long periods.

Some atoms however, differ in the total numbers of particles present and these are called isotopes of the particular element. If these isotopes tend to be unstable and break down or decay, giving off small particles and rays of energy, they are called radioactive isotopes.

Some radioisotopes, such as Iodine, Phosphorus and Chromium are useful in medicine. Although radioactivity cannot be detected by our senses, certain intricate electronic equipment has been developed which can detect and measure the amount of radioactivity in the area in which it is placed. Some of this equipment has been modified for use in measuring radioactivity in the human body.

Thus, for example, a small "tracer" dose of radioactive iodine may be given to a patient. Since radioactivity is not blocked by the human body, the physician, using certain detection instruments externally, can determine the amount of the medicine taken up by this gland, and hence find out the function of that organ. This is possible because the thyroid gland takes up natural iodine normally in the production of thyroid hormone. The body uses radioactive iodine just as readily, and so we can "trace" the location and concentration of both the natural and radioactive substance.

Sometimes it is important to know exactly where and in what concentration the radioactive substance is located in a particular organ. A test known as "scanning" is then carried out, which gives a black and white picture of the organ. This test may help the physician decide whether drug treatment or surgery is the proper treatment for the condition being investigated.

Although most of the radioisotopes used in medicine are diagnostic work, certain conditions affecting the thyroid gland, the blood and some cancers are greatly benefited by treatment with these substances. An excellent example is Grave's Disease (over-active thyroid condition), in which over 250,000 patients have been treated to date.

While concern about radioactivity is widespread in the public, due to current discussions among nuclear scientists concerning the hazards of fall-out radiation, the amounts of radioactivity to which an individual is exposed in the average diagnostic test using radioisotopes is negligible and is not regarded as a health hazard. It is evident then, that the word "radioactivity" must be interpreted according to the circumstances in which it is found. Not all radioactivity is "bad", therefore, just as not all water is "pure" and fit for drinking.

Although we have seen rapid advances in the field of medical radioisotopes, or nuclear medicine as it is now called, one cannot help but feel that, in the words of the poet, "the best is yet to come".

All that old-hat about football players being all brawn and brain has been proven untrue; however, one fellow we know won a football letter and his coach had to read it to him.

Know Your Senior NCO's

Sgt. Maj. Earl E. Greenhaugh, sergeant major of the Combat Developments Infantry Agency, is serving his first tour at Fort Benning after more than 21 years of service.

He entered the Army in September, 1942 and was assigned overseas to the European Theater of Operations in June, 1943. He returned to the United States in December, 1945 at which time he accepted his discharge and remained a civilian for nearly four years.

During this period he owned and operated a cement block manufacturing plant. However, the lust for military life and travel remained with him and over a pre-dinner cocktail one evening, he and his wife took paper and pencil to list the advantages and disadvantages of a military career.

According to his statement, the "advantage" side was filled while the "disadvantage" side contained only a few paltry items that are also inherent to civilian careers. The decision to re-enlist was made and he reentered the Army in August 1949.

In pondering over his "advantage - disadvantage" list, Greenhaugh remarked that all items have proven true.

W-2 Forms

Record of Earnings Being Returned Home

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Bureau of the Budget has directed the military services to furnish a serviceman's statement of earnings (W-2 form) to his state of domicile and, in some cases, local government.

This procedure, effective with the 1963 tax year, resulted from various states claiming that "they were not receiving just revenue from individuals who claimed a domicile but resided elsewhere."

It has been the obligation of each serviceman to file a statement of earnings to state or local government where required.

The Bureau of Budget circular sent to all servicemen said, "If no indication of legal residence is made by the serviceman, the W-2 form will be sent to the jurisdiction (state) in which he is currently serving."

This procedure does not apply to servicemen stationed outside the United States. For tax purposes, Hawaii and Alaska are not considered outside the United States.

Ordinarily, a military member's legal residence (domicile) is "that state in which a member entered the service ago. unless he has taken proven steps to change his state of legal residence."

A pamphlet entitled "All States Income Tax Guide," prepared by the Air Force Legal Assistance Office and used extensively by all services proclaims "members of the Armed Forces of the United States are not excused or exempt from such state or local income taxes merely because they are on active duty, unless the law of the particular state or locality with which they are concerned so provides."

Fourteen states which do not presently have a state income tax law are: Conn., Fla., Ill., Maine, Mich., Nebr., Nev., Ohio, Pa., R.I., S. Dak., Tex., Wash., and Wyo. However, some of these states have cities which require statements of earnings for local taxes.

Information of individual tax obligations may be obtained from local legal assistance offices.

Army Urges Personnel To Study Nuclear Power

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Interested Army personnel are encouraged to apply for training as Nuclear Powermen, under the provisions of AR 350-224, as candidates of Fort Belvoir's thirteenth class of the Nuclear Power Plant Operators Course.

Applications for the March 1964 class must reach the Office of the Chief of Engineers, Washington, D. C. - 20315, prior to January 1, 1964; those received later will be considered for subsequent classes.

The current rosters of qualified Nuclear Powermen for Army must be increased due to the scheduled completion of U.S. Army's floating MH-1A Nuclear Power Plant in 1965.

Since the Nuclear Powerman career field (MOS 358) demands minds and hands conditioned to meet the challenges of a new and expanding technology, standards for the selection of operator trainees are rigid and discriminatory.

The course, which lasts twelve months, covers the operation and maintenance of the nuclear power plants used by the Military Services.

Upon graduation, the Nuclear Powerman can also expect assignments at field plants, research and development facilities, and on teaching and technical staffs. Additional post - graduate instruction is available on a continuous basis at various civilian companies and educational institutions. Promotion opportunities range through all enlisted levels and include warrant officer appointments.

Defense Department Plans Big Service-Wide Voting Campaign

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower Norman S. Paul has told representatives from 20 federal agencies and the military services to make every effort to encourage absentee voting in the coming election as an obligation and responsibility of citizenship.

At a meeting in the Pentagon, Paul asked the conferees for their assistance in a vigorous educational and publicity campaign to encourage greater voting participation by Armed Forces ployees.

Recognize Importance

He told the conferees that the military services and agencies participating in the absentee voting program fully recognize the importance of voting privileges to citizens serving away from home.

The representatives were asked to follow through on the voting campaign. The secretary then said the rest will be up to the individual voter.

The Secretary listed six areas to be stressed during the 1964 campaign to gain maximum voting participation:

100 Per Cent

One hundred per cent inhand delivery of federal post card applications to all voting age personnel of the Armed Forces and recommendations for the same percentage by all other agencies.

Top - to - bottom command emphasis upon the individual citizen's responsibilities to register and vote.

Emphasis upon selection by agencies of persons of outstanding qualifications to serve as voting officers.

Greater coordination effirt on a government - wide basis to insure maximum compliance with program objectives by all participants.

Inspection

Intensive inspection of federal voting assistance program activities at home and abroad, beginning in early summer and proceeding until the week immediately before the November elections.

Full emphasis upon making Armed Forces Voters Day a major election year event and success.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara is the Presidentially - appointed executive agent for the voting program, which was established in 1955 for the purpose of providing maximum opportunity to vote in local, state and federal elections for those U. S. citizens comprising the total defense effort and related activities.

Mr. Paul is the federal coordinator of the government-wide absentee voting program.

Unit Joins Air Assault Division

The newest member of the 11th Air Assault Division Support Command, the 165th Air Equipment Supply Detachment, was officially organized recently under command of Capt. Charles G. Fields.

The 40-man detachment is designed to provide technical assistance and support for the airborne elements of the 11th Air Assault Division. As units of the division become airborne qualified, the 165th will also be responsible for parachutes. Every member of the detachment is both airborne qualified and a trained parachute rigger.

Temporarily located in Bldg. 4029 in the Harmony Church area, the detachment will expand its operations to cover parachute handling at Lawson Army Airfield as the 11th Air Assault Division continues to grow. Parachute maintenance is directed by Capt. Glenn R. Estep, division parachute officer.

Area Cub leaders, prospec-masters, Den Mothers and pack committeemen were in attendance from the South Columbus, Fort Benning area.

The fine showing of leaders in the scouting program insures future progress in this area.

Highlighting the weeks football activities, we find the Blue Devils of Coach James Gregory in fine position for the winner's trophy. With a showing of offensive might, the Blues humbled the Caveliers, 27-7. TD's were turned-in by Steve McCarren, Kirk Peterson, Randy Jackson and Jimmy Gregory.

In the 112 pound Doughboy League, Coach Plowman's Packers added another victory to their unbeaten skein by topping the Giants, 12-6. Both tallies were rung up by Curtis Baker, who exhibited beautiful broken - field running in leading his team to their sixth straight win. Tomorrow, the 16th of November, the Packers will be playing an exhibition game with the Warner Robins team on Blue Field, at 2 p.m. The stands have been erected and there is plenty of parking space.

The Intermediate League is still furnishing quite a bit of excitement in their trophy race. With the league leading Redskins dropping their second game, 13-6, to the Chargers, the Colts have moved into perfect position for a showdown game for the championship. The Colts are now 3-1-1 for the season while the Redskins are 3-2. With three more games remaining, anything can happen.

Parents or other adults interested in working with children are needed to supervise the various activities offered by YAC. Providing clean, healthy and wholesome activities for our children is a major undertaking. All parents are urged to join YAC for it is through your financial and active participation that we can better serve the children of Fort Benning.

Little Theater Competes In Play Contest

Fort Benning Little Theater, in conjunction with the 1963 Third Army One Act Play Contest, will present a special performance of The "Zoo Story" by Edward Albee, at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the playhouse.

The Zoo Story was Albee's first work and the critical acclaim it received established Albee as the only major new American playwright in a decade. His first full-length play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolfe," now running on Broadway, has been awarded the 1963 Pulitzer Prize for drama.

"The Zoo Story" is a two-character tragedy of man's alienation from man. Albee's angry pen has torn into this deliberate sadness with the cynicism and sympathy that make a theatrical thunderbolt.

Peter Nyberg is directing the production, with David Lile and Ted Martin in the two roles. The Playhouse is Building 2519 on Main Post behind the Quartermaster Laundry. There will be no charge for admission.

AT THE Movies

ALL IN A NIGHT'S WORK stars Shirley Maclaine, Dean Martin and Cliff Robertson. Chess Contest Set Nov. 22 At Y.M.C.A.

The Armed Forces Y.M.C.A. in Columbus will play host to the City's first chess championship Nov. 22-24.

This five round open tournament which is being conducted by the Columbus Chess Club will open for registration at 7 p.m. on the 22nd with play beginning that same night. All interested personnel from Fort Benning are invited to register. A $1 registration fee has been set for the purpose of paying for the winner's trophy and the plaque on which the name of the champion will be engraved.

Karsh's prowess on the chess boards is of such high caliber that at one time he was asked to edit Chess Life, a magazine published by the U.S. Chess Federation.

2 Part Survival Kit Developed by Army

A new lightweight and compact survival kit which comes in two separate containers has recently been developed by the Army to aid the field soldier who has become separated from his unit.

Embodying the latest in packaging techniques, the kit will enable the soldier to treat himself against fever, infection and diarrhea as well as to provide him with such items as mosquito netting, fishhooks, a flare gun, lighter and saw. Each container, with case, weighs one pound and is 5 X 3¾ X 2¾ inches in size.

The first container, called the operational kit, is comprised of a signal mirror, flexible saw, flare gun with two white flares, gauze, adhesive plaster, absorbent adhesive bandages and bouillon cubes.

Also included are water purification, salt, and anti-diarrhea tables; a solution to treat cuts, scratches, and tablets and ointments, and other selected medical items.

As a backup to the operational kit is the reserve component which is principally comprised of the same items as the first kit with with additional features: fishing lines and hooks, sewing kit with magnetized needles to point north, chloroquine and primaquine tablets for malaria, headache capsules, and a fire starter.

Incased in polyethylene plastic, the bottom sections of the containers are slit at the corners so that the sides will fan out making all items which are secured to the sides by a nondrying adhesive, accessible to the user.

When closed, the containers are sealed with a waterproof pressure sensitive tape. The plastic cases are further contained in nylon bags which have been designed for attachment to the individual's belt or pack rigging.

Contingent upon favorable test reports, similar packaging techniques, which will improve user utility, will be incorporated on other kits used in the Medical Services.

The survival kit, which is currently being field tested, was developed by the Army Medical Equipment Research and Development Laboratory, Fort Totten, N. Y. and the Army Chief of Research and Development's Limited War Laboratory at Aberdeen, Maryland.

Parade to Commemorate The Gettysburg Address

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AFPS) — Ten sentences spoken here 100 years ago by Abraham Lincoln will be commemorated Nov. 19.

The occasion for Lincoln's speech was the dedication of the cemetery for the Union dead in the Battle of Gettysburg.

Three companies of the Third United States Infantry Regiment, units of the Pennsylvania National Guard, Valley Forge Military Academy and the Marine Band will participate in the parade.

Speakers at the Centennial observance will be former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Governor William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania and Prof. David Donald of John Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Copies of the address in the handwriting of Lincoln are in the Library of Congress, Illinois State Historical Library, Cornell University and Lincoln Room in the White House.

6 Choppers Fly Around The World

Seven pilots from the Air Ambulance Platoon, 11th Medical Battalion, have logged more than 4,000 miles, or the equivalent of nearly three and one-half times around the world in just seven months with six UH-1B Iroquois helicopters, and all without an accident.

The first of its kind, the Air Ambulance Platoon has logged the time since receiving its first aircraft in April. Its primary mission is to provide aerial medical support for the Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Division in daily training and field exercises.

The pilots and crew chiefs of each aircraft have participated in all division training, beginning with the squad-level exercises and progressing through Sky Soldier I, which was completed last month at Fort Stewart, Ga.

In addition to its many support missions, the platoon also has flown countless hours in rappelling exercises. All 16 men in the medical evacuation platoon are qualified rappellers.

In the 11th Medical Battalion, two company commanders, one a doctor, and two pilots also have qualified as rappellers.

Writers and Photographers Can Enter Picture of Year Competition

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Active duty Armed Forces photographers and information personnel are again invited to enter the 1963 "Picture of the Year" photographic competition sponsored jointly by the National Press Photographers Association, University of Missouri School of Journalism and The World Book Encyclopedia.

The competition serves to focus attention on the art of photojournalism and is designed to promote and recognize news sense, imagination and the technical ability of Armed Forces photographers and information personnel.

The deadline for entries is Dec. 31, 1963. To be eligible for the competition, photographs must have been taken and initially published between Jan. 1, 1963, and Dec. 31, 1963. Photos submitted can be made on official assignments or on own initiative.

Categories

Entry Rules

All photographs must be mounted on 16 x 20 mounting board. The photos themselves may be any size, mounted vertically or horizontally. The caption must be on the back of the mount only. No more than 20 prints may be submitted by a contestant, except that an entire picture story counts as only one print. Glassy or matte prints are acceptable but not toned prints.

Prizes and Honors

The top award of this competition carries the title of "Military Photographer of the Year." To win the top award, entries must be made by the contestant in all of the six categories listed above.

The first prize winner will receive a 37 volume reference library from World Book Encyclopedia in the Aristocrat binding; a 15-volume set of Childcraft the Child Development Plan; the two volume World Book Dictionary; and the "Cyclo-teacher" learning aid, a new kind of teaching machine for family use in the home.

Second prize is a 20 volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and the 15 volume set of Childcraft, and the third prize winner will receive a two-volume World Book Dictionary plus the 600 page World Book Year Book. A Certificate of Merit will be given for every prize and Honorable Mention. Citations will be presented to those photographers whose photographs are selected for exhibition.

The prize winning pictures will be exhibited during 1964, and the judging of pictures will occur at the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Mailing of Entries

No entry forms are required. Complete name, present military address and permanent home address should be shown on the back of all entries.

All entries, to be postmarked no later than December 31, 1963, should be mailed directly to: Picture of the Year Competition, Journalism Annex, Room 27-A, School of Journalism, University of Missouri, Columbia, Missouri.

Mrs. Pearl M. Brakonecke, principal of Edward A. White School, participated in a Georgia Educational Council meeting Nov. 11 and 12 in Athens as a member of the Leadership Committee.

The meeting was conducted in the University of Georgia's Center for Continuing Education.

Mrs. Mildred Carter, principal of the Hospital Area School, Ralph R. Toole, principal of Faith School and Mrs. Brakonecke will go to Rock Eagle, Eatonton, Ga., Nov. 21 for a three-day planning conference of the Georgia Department of Elementary School Principals.

Soldier Finds Military Uses For Paper

FORT BELVOIR, Va. (ANF) — A research facility for the wider use of paper products by the military has recently been set up by a young soldier-scientist at U. S. Army Mobility Command's Engineer Research and Development Laboratories here.

PFC. R. Gregory Meese, 24, designed and set up equipment that has enabled the Labs Materials Branch to broaden its investigations of the use of paper. The branch has developed the paper sandbag, which in tests has proven equal and, in some areas superior to the bags manufactured from imported jute burlap.

PFC Meese, a native of Benton Harbor, Mich., received his degree in chemical engineering from Michigan College of Mining and Technology. He was assigned to the Laboratories in May, 1962 under U. S. Army's Scientific and Engineering (S&E) Program. Prior to military service, Private Meese was employed by a commercial paper company.

The soldier - scientist said that he is gratified that his military assignment gives him a job in which he has had experience, and broadens his knowledge in the field which he intends to follow after completing his service.

New Colors 'Climb In' at 11th AAD

In keeping with the air assault concept, members of the 127th Engineer Battalion had their "battalion colors" rappelled in by helicopter last Friday on Dickman Field in the Harmony Church area.

First Lt. Stuart J. Barmen, and 1st Sgt. Brady J. Heffman Jr., from Company A, brought in the colors by sliding down a 120 foot length of rappelling rope. The colors were given to the color guard who presented them to division Sgt. Maj. Chester R. Westervelt.

He in turn handed the colors to Brig. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division. Gen. Kinnard then gave the colors with five battle streamers to Lt. Col. Robert J. Malley, the 127th commanding officer. Sgt. Maj. William A. Maxwell from the 127th accepted them from Col. Malley, who placed them in their staff near the reviewing stand.

The 127th earned its campaign streamers as part of the 11th Airborne Division during World War II and the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team during the Korean Conflict.

History of Communism

Bolshevik Group Awaited Perfect Moment to Strike

(Second of a series of 20 articles entitled The History of Communism, by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.)

It would seem appropriate at this point to digress sufficiently to discover what manner of man was Karl Marx. German-born in 1818, Marx was an intellectual who never did a day's work for pay in his life.

In his popular book, The Naked Communist, author W. Cleon Skousen writes, "Marx . . . dreamed of the day when the whole body of Humanity could be forced into a gigantic social image which conformed completely to Marx's dream of a perfect society."

He required the "total annihilation of all opposition, the downfall of all existing governments, all economies and all societies. Then (wrote Marx) I shall stride through the wreckage a creator.'"

It called for (again quoting Skousen) "the overthrow of all governments and the establishment of a Communist order with communal ownership of property in a classless, stateless society." In short, it was a monumental code of revolutionary depravity!

Neither is it likely that Czar Nicholas came to hear of Vladimar Ilyich Ulyanov — alias Nicholai Lenin — until the 1917 revolution which ended the monarchy. Lenin, however, began his usurpation of Plekhanov's position as head of the Social Democrats — an underground party busily spinning a web of subversion across the European continent — in 1903.

Lenin was a perfect model of the Marxist mold, wavering not the smallest degree from his course of revolutionism, violent and terrible and all - encompassing. Compromise was, to him, utterly nauseous.

Lenin and the other Bolsheviks took almost no notice of a serious uprising in Russia in 1905 (although one of their disciples, Leon Trotsky, was active in it) until the very end, when it was too late to do anything effective.

The insurgency failed, but did cause the czar to permit the formation of a parliamentary body, the Duma.

The Duma was only a faint breeze of democracy, existing or being disbanded at the czar's whim, but it was a step in the right direction and temporarily satisfied the Social Democrats — with the exception of the minority Bolshevik faction.

For eight years the nation prospered. Industries blossomed, foreign trade increased and crops were good. And the revolutionary movement virtually halted.

Prime Minister Peter Stolypin pushed through many reforms and by 1916 more than six million peasant families were farming their own land.

But if prosperity was killing the revolutionary movement, it was also stirring the fires of the Bolsheviks, who recognized the danger to their cause.

Lenin and the other leaders wrote endless tirades in their (illegal) newspaper, Pravda, charging Duma members to be in the camp of the czarists and urging the opposition block (Mensheviks) within the Social Democrats to support the Bolshevik movement.

And then Germany declared war on Russia Aug. 1, 1914, and paved the way for the Red Revolution.

Turkish General Completes Tour

Brig. Gen. - Cemal Sevasan, commanding general of Turkey's Second Army Artillery, left Fort Benning at 9 a.m. Saturday following a two-day visit for orientations and briefings at The Infantry School.

Gen. Savasan was briefed on the history and organization of The Infantry Center.

Assault Concept Being Featured In Infantry Mag

The 11th Air Assault Division and the air assault concept in action are spotlighted in the November-December issue of Infantry Magazine, published on Nov. 11.

In "The Sky's No Limit," Maj. Ben Nichols, the 11th's information officer, outlines the actions of the 11th in its first major field test, Sky Soldier I, held recently at Fort Stewart. The exercise tested the ability of this type unit to react rapidly in changing situations. Five areas of performance were investigated especially carefully: reconnaissance and security, mobility, combat support, combat service support and control and communications.

Pitted against aggressor forces from the mythical county of Georgana, the Sky Soldiers of the 11th were faced with four different test phases, although the same hypothetical political atmosphere and geographical setting were maintained throughout the test.

Army Will Help Ethiopians Map Their Territory

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The U.S. Army and Air Force will assist Ethiopians in mapping their country to facilitate its economic development.

A unit of the 64th Engineer Topographic Battalion stationed in Libya will be assigned to Ethiopia for the project, and will have its headquarters at Addis Ababa, the nation's capital.

The Army Map Service will provide technicians, equipment and administrative support to the Imperial Ethiopian Mapping and Geography Institute.

The U.S. Air Force will fly aerial photographic missions, mapping 390,320 square miles of the country from an altitude of 31,000 feet above sea level.

Ethiopian personnel will receive extensive training in their own country and the United States.

Ethiopia is rich in natural resources and has great hydroelectric power potential, but lacks the maps essential for their exploitation.

'TOM TURKEY' WILL BE REIGNING MONARCH

Military personnel stationed at Fort Benning and their fellow soldiers serving at installations around the globe will take time out Nov. 28 to celebrate a uniquely American holiday . . . Thanksgiving.

The tradition, passed down through the centuries since our nation's Pilgrim Fathers paused in an expression of hope and thanksgiving to God, will be carried on in troop mess halls and in the homes of soldiers stationed here.

November's reigning monarch, Tom Turkey, coupled with mincemeat and pumpkin pies, are almost as much a part of the day's tradition as devotions and quiet prayers.

Over 1,000 cooks, bakers and mess stewards of the Service Section Food Service Branch will be on hand in the post's 152 mess halls to prepare approximately 105 tons of food expected to be served during the day.

Food service officials estimate that 32,000 soldiers, dependents and guests will eat in the mess halls during the holiday as compared to the normal 18,000 troops served.

The amount and variety of food slated to be cooked and served during the main course almost staggers the imagination.

Approximately 27,000 pounds of turkey and 8,100 pounds of dressing, 14,000 pounds of white and sweet potatoes, 3,700 pounds of butter, 65,000 rolls and 2,400 pounds of cranberry sauce will head the day's menu.

As an added flourish, nearly 4,000 pounds of shrimp cocktail, sauce, crackers and assorted crisp relishes will

AUSA MEMBERS CHAT DURING A BREAK

AUSA Provides Classified Forum

The Association of the United States Army (AUSA) Mobility Symposium ended at noon Wednesday after two days of classified conferences and demonstrations. The symposium gave the Army an opportunity to show industry its modern mobility needs.

More than 500 top military and industrial minds from throughout the country were welcomed to the symposium Tuesday morning by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, and Lt. Gen. (Ret.) James M. Gavin, national AUSA president, at the first session at Theater No. 1.

Gen. Rich told the conferees it is a pleasure for Fort Benning to host the conclave, which will provide a forum in which "views can be exchanged and discussions started."

"At The Infantry School, we are primarily involved with the training of leaders," Gen. Rich stated, adding, "and we are interested in improving the role of the fighting man as he moves from Point A to Point B.

"In thinking of mobility, we want that fighting man to move from Point A in the least amount of time; to be subjected to the least amount of fire, and to conserve the greatest amount of energy, so that when he arrives at Point B, he will be in the best shape to use his courage, training and ability to take Point B," he added.

Gen. Rich and Gen. Gavin, whose welcoming remarks were not classified, were introduced by Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Walter L. Weible, executive vice president of AUSA.

Tuesday morning the symposium conferees heard classified reports from Army leaders on mobility objectives, current and future mobility capabilities of the Soviet army, mobility research and development, the role of the U. S. Army Materiel Command in Army mobility and the air assault concept.

Speakers who delivered the first session reports included Lt. Gen. William W. Dick Jr., chief, Research and Development, Department of the Army; Lt. Gen. Frank S. Besson Jr., commanding general, U. S. Army Materiel Command; Maj. Gen. Ralph E. Haines Jr., deputy assistant chief of staff for Force Development; Maj. Gen. Alva R. Fitch, assistant chief of staff for Intelligence, and Maj. Gen. Edward L. Rowny, special

Fund Drive Goes Over the Top

The Community Activities Association Fund Drive reached 102 per cent this week and left drive officials somewhat tired but happy.

The Student Brigade, commanded by Col. Walter D. Short, was the first unit to reach 100 per cent. By the end of the drive they had reached 115 per cent.

Col. Robert Williams, chairman of the drive and commander of the 197th Brigade, said, "The response of Fort Benning personnel was heart-warming and indicates a tremendous interest in the welfare of our community."

The total amount collected on post in the two-month drive was $139,023.49, according to drive officials.

Units and their amount of participation were as follows: TEC Group, 121 per cent; 11th Air Assault Division, 117 per cent; TSB, 115 per cent; 197th Brigade, 105 per cent; 428th Medical Bn. 104 per cent; Center Troop Command, 102 per cent; LAAC, 102 per cent; Infantry Board, 98 per cent; Second Division, 95 per cent; Martin Army Hospital, 81 per cent.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Hastes was project officer for the drive, and Capt. Jimmy Sloan was his assistant.

Funds from the drive go to support health, welfare and character building agencies that serve military and civilian employes at Fort Benning.

Vesper Services Set for Sunday

Approximately 100 young people from the First Baptist Church in Columbus will conduct a Vesper service at 4 p.m. Sunday (Nov. 24) at the U.S. Army Infantry Center Chapel.

At 5 p.m., the visitors will be hosts at a social hour for those who attend the service.

This is the first in a proposed series of such young peoples services and social hours planned to help soldiers assigned to Fort Benning to become acquainted with the young people of Columbus, officials said.

Promotion Ceremony Honors Gen. Kinnard

The commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, was promoted to his present rank Nov. 16 on Dickman Field in the Harmony Church area. His two star flag of new rank was rappelled in by four Sky Soldiers.

Kinnard's wife, Mikelle, pinned on the second star at the special ceremony. Each of the colors from the division's major units were represented.

Following the presentation, Gen. Kinnard and his staff watched four UH-1B Iroquois helicopters from the division unfurl four huge 50 foot banners that read "Congratulations Major General Kinnard."

Gen. Kinnard served with the 101st Airborne Division during World War II, making both the Normandy and Holland parachute combat jumps. He served as assistant division commander of the 101st at Fort Campbell, Ky., before becoming the first commander of the 11th Air Assault Division last February.

The general has more than 21 years of airborne duty and has always been vitally interested in Army Aviation. Last July he qualified as a fixed-wing aviator and is now training for rotary wing qualification.

NEW G-4 . . . Col. C. W. Youngman has been named G-4 for The Infantry Center. He succeeds Col. Dale D. Dixon, who retired recently.

Display Items

Following the opening sessions, the conferees inspected a static display of more than 90 experimental and standard items, both land and airborne, set up by Army and industry.

After a luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess, the group witnessed a rifle company team in attack demonstration at Buma Hill and an air assault demonstration at Concord Observation Post.

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff, made brief remarks to the conferees before the air assault demonstration.

Both Gen. Wheeler and Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance arrived Tuesday afternoon. The Army chief of staff left about 5 p.m., while Secretary Vance remained to address the symposium at an official dinner at the Main Officers' Open Mess Tuesday night. He left immediately following the banquet.

Classified reports presented the symposium Wednesday morning include ones by Lt. Gen. Dwight E. Beach, commanding general, U. S. Army Combat Developments Command, "Development of Army Mobility Doctrine"; Maj. Gen. Alden K. Sibley, commanding general, U. S. Army Mobility Command, "Environmental Problems in Mobility," and Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, commanding general, Test, Evaluation and Control Group, Fort Benning, "Test and Evaluation of Air Mobility."

A dynamic demonstration of experimental and standard vehicles took place later Wednesday morning and the conference officially concluded with a luncheon after the demonstration.

Turkey

add their touch as appetizers.

Pumpkin and mincemeat pies made from 1,700 cans of pumpkin and 270 gallons of mincemeat topped with 625 quarts of whipped cream will constitute dessert.

But the Food Service Branch is taking no chances with a man leaving the Thanksgiving table with a half-full stomach. As an extra attraction it is providing 14,000 pounds of assorted fruits, 2,000 pounds of candy and 500 gallons of mixed nuts to round off the meal.

Washing down these tons of solids will be 1,900 gallons of coffee, 7,250 gallons of milk and 1,150 gallons of juices.

Food service personnel are also engaged in making the mess halls as "homey" and decorative as possible, bales of hay, cat-tails, and huge pumpkins will soon start to appear in the post's mess facilities.

PROMOTED TO MAJOR GENERAL . . . Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard (C), commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, has his second star pinned to his uniform by Mrs. Kinnard and Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center. (See Story on Page 1)

World War II Jeep Is Sent to Musuem

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Armed Forces famous World War II vehicle, the jeep, will soon join other modes of transportation on exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution.

Army Secretary Cyrus R. Vance conducted a wide search for the original model jeep and finally found some at an Army depot in Japan.

Gen. Gavin Tells AUSA

'Strength Is Essential for Peace'

Speaking before the local chapter of the Association of the U. S. Army, (AUSA), Lt. Gen. (Ret.) James Gavin reaffirmed his faith in the role of the Army and emphasized the need for strength as a means to maintain peace.

Appearing before a packed Briant Wells Field House, the retired general, one time chief of the Army's Research and Development Department, expressed his sorrow at the association's inability to accommodate all of the "industry and Army personnel who should be attending" the AUSA mobility symposium which was held on post Tuesday and Wednesday.

The symposium gave the Army a chance to brief 650 of the nation's top industrialists, defense engineers and scientists on its mobility problems.

Gen. Gavin, who was introduced by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, and Carl Patrick, local chapter president, turned to the recent annual meeting held in Washington, D. C., which celebrated a decade of service to the nation by the association.

"Offsetting the new rays of hope on the horizon," Gavin said, are the "shadows of war in the jungles of Vietnam, on the Berlin - Helmstadt Autobahn and the Korean Truce lines where fire fights flared only a few weeks ago."

He also brought out the "ominous shadow over our own Western Hemisphere" in the Red presence in Cuba.

"It was in this sober vein that the membership attending the meeting addressed itself to the business of the association," Gavin went on.

He praised the men and women in uniform who are, today, "more experienced, more highly skilled and better educated than any in our history." He also praised the non-commissioned officers in the Army as "superb," and went on to laud the high mental and physical caliber found in the ranks today.

Even though the ranks are spread pretty thin by many commitments of the Army all over the world, the missions are still being carried out, he said.

"That the missions are being successfully accomplished is a tribute to all concerned," he emphasized.

He went on to reaffirm the vital role of man as the ultimate weapon and "not an inanimate object."

The goals set by the association at their national meeting for the coming year were gone over by the one time Ambassador to France and he said that they would be attained through the use of every means at the disposal of the association.

Gen. Gavin, president of the AUSA, then challenged members of the Columbus, Phenix City - Fort Benning chapter, "We can become an ordinary association as many are . . . doing routine things in just the average way, or we can become a dynamic, imaginative, inspired body of people dedicated and believing in what we are trying to do for our country in this very challenging period."

What Thanksgiving Means to Americans

What other American holiday sheds more light on American traditions than Thanksgiving?

That's the day — the fourth Thursday of November — that we have set aside to give thanks for simply being Americans. It's the day we give thanks for our churches and temples, our schools and colleges, our modern systems of communication and transportation, and our resource-rich land.

But is that all? Certainly not. We are thankful for the Constitution that guarantees free expression of ideas and opinions. It is, after all, the rights of man guaranteed in the United States that has made material growth possible.

Many people think we put too much emphasis on material things, and that an American giving thanks is too quick to remember big cars, household appliances and other modern comforts. Maybe.

But while we are pleased to have a televison set or a telephone, we also know that we must work to buy them. Our competitive society puts material things within our reach.

Thankful? You bet.

About Thankfulness

By Chaplain (Maj.)
Xavier J. Gigliello

Words express ideas. Ideas make for happiness or unhappiness in so far as these ideas move you and me to conform to God's laws. The idea that I want to write about is thankfulness. It means showing externally and internally an appreciation for what we have received from God, family and state.

Each of you have something for which to be thankful. The universe proclaims God's glory and thus engenders ideas of thankfulness. The running rivers that power our electrical plants to the small blade of grass that feeds the cattle or holds the earth together give another reason for thankfulness to God.

The uplifted hands of a small child, the food encrusted plate on a high chair, the trophies from school activities on the walls of a well - directed home — all these tell you of a child's thankfulness for his parents.

The chance to express thoughts on paper, the joy of living in city or town or in the country; the long newly paved highways; the schools, universities and parks dotting the country sides — all these cry out to you and to me and to the whole world the thanks you should have for this country and its people.

Yes, all these ideas make up for our Thanksgiving Day, our day, your day — the world's day to be thankful to God, to your neighbor and your country.

Thanksgiving Day Message

As this traditional American holiday approaches, I extend best wishes for an enjoyable Thanksgiving to all the military and civilian personnel of Fort Benning.

While participating in the festivities of this occasion, let us be ever mindful of the true meaning of this day of thanks. In the same spirit that prompted the Pilgrim Fathers to express their gratitude for a bountiful harvest after the vigors of that first winter in America, we must give thanks for the freedom and way of life that we enjoy in our great country today.

Although many of us will be unable to be with our families and loved ones, everyone should take advantage of the opportunity provided to participate in the traditional festivities of an American Thanksgiving.

U.S. Image Formed From Your Conduct

American military men and their families traveling and living outside the United States, either on pleasure or assignment, owe a debt to their homeland.

Friendly Americans aboard are probably the foremost battle line against unfavorable propaganda about the United States.

It's only spreading the truth to tell folks about America's freedoms — our free press, our freedom to work where we wish, to change jobs and addresses as we please, about our freedom to move from state to state without papers, to attend church when and where we like.

Perhaps the best way to explain America and Americans to other people is to tell them about life in your own community — the everyday things, both successes and shortcomings, the problems we are trying to solve.

Tell them the facts. Emphasize that there is stability, strength, good-heartedness and culture — a powerful, growing culture — which is inherited from all the other cultures of the world. Tell them in your own words, and speak of things you know.

Your smile to the waiter, the cabby, the train conductor appoints you Ambassador of Goodwill to the people.

Such small sincere gestures often go deeper into the hearts of our neighbors than professional diplomats are able to reach. (AFPS)

Civic Action Called Important Army Role

People have a natural desire for a better way of life for themselves and their children, and for the benefits offered by a stable government. Until these aspirations are satisfied, emerging nations may well be cold war battlefields in the world-wide struggle between communism and freedom. Today, in many new nations, the U. S. Army is actively engaged in this struggle under a plan of attack called Civic Action.

Civic Action is a broadly encompassing term used by the Army to include such things as public health, road construction, education, and other activities which promote social and economic development. The normal role of the U. S. Army is to send mobile training teams into host countries to train and advise the local military in these nation-building activities. The immediate objective is to foster popular support, loyalty, and respect for the country's military forces and the legitimate government they represent. Its long range objective is to enable the people, through their governments, to become self sufficient and capable of furthering their own progressive development.

Successful programs have been conducted, and are continuing, in many nations of Latin America and Asia, and increasing emphasis is now being given to the emerging nations of Africa. Just how essential this role of the Army is can best be judged from these words of the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler: "In the long run of the years ahead, it is entirely possible that this kind of peaceful application of military power may become one of the Army's most enduring glories because it can play such a large part in bringing stability to emerging nations."

The Judge Says . . .

Some time during his career, the soldier will probably have to rent quarters in a civilian community for himself and his dependents. The renting from a civilian landlord is a possible trouble spot if the soldier does not understand his rights and obligations under the tenancy agreement.

There are two types of of tenancy agreements. — written and unwritten. The written lease spells out the specific rights and obligations of the parties and is generally advisable if your move is a semi - permanent one. The unwritten or oral agreement is equally as binding by law, but being oral, it is sometimes subject to misinterpretation by the parties. The laws governing rentals by oral agreement vary from state to state, but the general principles are the same in most states.

The most common tenancy under an oral agreement is from month to month. If you pay your rent once every month and do not have a written lease, you probably are renting under this type of tenancy. Generally, you must give your landlord 30 days notice of a pending move. The landlord, if he wishes to terminate your tenancy, must also give you 30 days notice.

Should you fail to give 30 days notice, you are liable for the rent for the 30 day period even though you have ceased to live there. However, if the landlord should re-rent the property at any time during the 30 day period, you are only obligated to pay for the time that the property was empty.

It is a good idea to insist on a waiver of the 30 day notice period if you are transferred by official orders. Most landlords will agree to this and it will save last minute confusion.

Before entering into any written lease agreement, it is a good preventive measure to bring it to your legal assistance officer to get his opinion as to your rights and obligations. Legal asstance is available to all members of the armed services and their dependents.

Radio Mechanic Course Opens Bright Future

"Would you say that again, sergeant?" asked the eager but bewildered private.

"This double conversion, superhetrodyne, receiving apparatus requires connection to a primary power source of single-phase, alternating current prior to operation," repeated the instructor patiently.

To the incoming student of The Infantry School's Radio Maintenance Course of the Communications - Electronics Department, such a statement sounds like obscure terminology from a forgotten language of the past or from a strange vocabulary of the future.

His guess is more accurate than he realizes, however, because it is from the future—his future. For in just twelve weeks, upon his graduation from this course, no one would think of doubting his understanding of so elementary a concept — one would sooner have asked Henry Ford if he understood the automobile. Everyone knows that a radio must be plugged in before it will work. But it takes a highly skilled technician to fully understand and accurately express the complex reasoning behind the simplest scientific step.

700 Graduates

Each year, over 700 graduates of the Radio Maintenance Course return to their parent units, where they —as highly qualified organizational radio mechanics — become the men behind the "Voice of Command." Gathered from a diversity of sources which include the active Army, Army Reserve, National Guard, and the armies of our Allies, all graduates are united by a common achievement, a primary MOS of 311.1 - Radio Mechanic.

The department, under Director Col. L. A. Welch, requires 528 hours of instruction in the theory and application of radio circuitry to qualify a radio mechanic to carry out his mission — to provide a combat commander effective communications control of his unit. Therefore, over half of the academic time is devoted to demonstrations and practical exercises to provide optimum experience in applying the principles learned.

Fundamentals First

Of course, classroom fundamentals must come first. And SFC John P. Jones, operations sergeant of the Communications - Electronic Department, wastes no time in scheduling instruction in math, electronic symbolism, test instruments, circuit theory and principles of shop practice for the new student.

SFC Frank Strickland, NCOIC for this phase of instruction, assures the student of the background necessary to tackle more complicated circuitry, from which will grow an understanding of basic radio transmitters and receivers. In this phase of instruction, the student works with "breadboard" devices such as the Philco Trainer.

This training aid allows the student to assemble various circuits of transmitters and receivers from their component parts. After correct assembly, the student has a fully operative radio to study.

The student has now learned enough to begin "troubleshooting." A full understanding of proper circuitry must include the ability to convert an inoperative radio into one which will restore communications control to the Infantry commander.

A radio mechanic must be able to detect and correct malfunctions almost as rapidly as they occur. The Supply and Maintenance Section, under SSgt. John J. Cunningham, issues radio sets with deliberate malfunctions so that the student may learn to quickly locate, isolate, and repair an actual deficiency.

Exam Time

Integrated throughout the scheduled instruction are 15 hours of written examinations and 40 hours of graded performance laboratory-type examinations to ensure that the student is acquiring the cumulative proficiency necessary to successfully complete the course. Nine hours are devoted to after-action critique and review of these examinations.

The Radio Maintenance Course offers the student a distinct challenge and an equally distinct reward — the coinfidence that he is qualified to assume his vital role in support of the Infantry commander. The Radio Mechanic will leave the Communications - Electronics Department to troubleshoot and repair the radios of the Infantry, whenever and wherever the Voice of Command is heard.

3,000 Miles of Sheets

Laundry Washes 11 Million Items Yearly

By PFC Tom Lace

If all the sheets Fort Benning's Laundry Branch of the Quartermaster Services Division cleans yearly were placed end to end, they would form an unbroken line stretching from the coast of Georgia to California.

Over 3,750,000 sheets and 11 million individual pieces of clothing are processed and cleaned annually by the laundry's 264 Civil Service employes.

With such a monumental cleaning task, the facility measures soap and starch by the barrel and water by the hundreds of gallons. More than 30 million gallons of water, 48 tons of soap and 36 tons of starch were used last year.

According to Thomas H. Elliott, Laundry Branch supervisor, "The laundry is constantly trying to provide its customers faster and better service without sacrificing quality and workmanship."

He added, "The facility is usually able to clean, process, package and assemble individual and bulk laundry in three days.

Units Late

"However, many supply sections make only one laundry pickup during a week which results in a seven to eight-day wait before items are returned to their owners," Elliott said.

Dirty laundry is delivered to the facility and taken in lots of 60 bundles (individual bags). Each bundle item is hand checked and tagged with an identification and lot number for future use at an assembly point.

Retaining its lot status, the laundry is sped down a conveyor line to a classification center where employes separate it into nine groups based upon each item's color, type and use.

Then the clothes are loaded into washing machines with load capacities ranging from 60 to 1,200 pounds. Carefully "blended" soaps for each group are used during the wash cycle.

One unique feature of many of the washers used by the facility is that starch may be added while the clothes are still in the machine.

Once the clothes have been washed they are extracted and spin-dried in spinners with 70 to 450-pound work capacities.

Dried Further

After the clothing is partially dried in spinners, it is separated into categories which are either dried further in tumbler-driers or it is sent damp to the finishing section.

Civilian shirts, trousers and military clothing are sent to additional departments in the section for processing.

Six of the 10 civilian shirt finishers used by the section are new. Two operators process about 560 pressed shirts daily, compared to old-type finishers requiring three operators which press 500 shirts a day.

Fatigues are pressed in a high-speed fatigue finisher which turns out about 100 shirts an hour.

As an added touch, the laundry replaces missing and broken buttons. It also sews small rips and tears. The facility offers a special one-day rush service for men leaving on short notice.

An average of 20 lots or 1,200 bundles of laundry are processed each day.

Activation Day Held By Air Assault Group

The 226th Aerial Surveillance and Attack Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group, held "Activation Day" ceremonies at McKenna Airstrip yesterday at 2 p.m.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, presented the new battalion colors to Col. George P. Seneff, commanding officer of the 11th Aviation Group. The group commander then handed the colors to the 226th commander, Maj. Robert F. Litle Jr.

The 226th was organized when the 11th was activated last February. The battalion employs the sleek, fast Mohawk aircraft. The OV-1 Mohawk is the only fixed-wing aircraft organic to the division itself. Its primary mission is close-in battlefield surveillance. To perform this mission it can be equipped with a side-looking aerial radar system for reconnaissance or with cameras for photographic missions.

In this last role it also has an infra-red capability for night operations. The Mohawk is capable of carrying sufficient armament in order to protect itself against ground fire while on reconnaissance missions. This aircraft has a cruising speed of better than 200 miles per hour, but when required it can slow down to 70 miles per hour.

Its rugged and simple design and its ability to take-off and land using a very short, unimproved "cow-pasture" landing field gives this aircraft the ability to live in the field with the Infantry troops which it supports. The 226th makes up four companies, Headquarters, A, B, and C.

Engineers to Lease Local Resort Areas

The Army Corps of Engineers is offering four sites on the Walter F. George Reservoir for long-term lease for marina and resort development. Two of the sites are on the Alabama side and two on the Georgia side of the lake, which has been formed in the Chattahoochee River by the Walter F. George Dam near Fort Gaines. The dam is now in the final stages of construction.

Col. D. A. Raymond, district engineer in charge, announced this week that he will accept proposals until Dec. 17 for developing the four sites on a commercial concession basis to provide facilities and services adequate to meet the expected public demand and to develop the immense recreational potential of the new 45,000-acre lake.

Facilities and services are expected to include first-class resort-type motels or multi-unit lodges with swimming pools, family-type vacation cabins, eating facilities, covered and heated fishing docks, and marinas providing boat storage, docking and mooring, fueling and servicing, fishing and boating supplies, boat and yacht sales, boat and motor rentals, and repair services.

Proposals for leasing will be opened in Room 139, Palmer and Baker Building, 2460 Government Street, Mobile, Ala., at 2 p.m., (CST) on Tuesday Dec. 17.

Anyone interested may obtain a copy of the invitation for proposals outlining the type and extent of development desired from the Real Estate Division of the Office of the District Engineer, U.S. Army Engineer District, Mobile, P. O. Box 1169, Mobile, Ala., 36601. Arrangements may be made to inspect the sites by contacting the Reservoir Manager, Mr. Olin M. Taylor Jr., whose office is in the Supermarket Building, P. O. Box 281, Fort Gaines.

Air Assault Units Among Those Scheduled to Get New Weapons

NEW YORK (AFPS) — One hundred and four thousand M-16 (originally called AR-15) rifles have been ordered for special forces, airborne and air assault units of the Army and Air Force. Army units will get 85,000 of the new weapons and 19,000 will be issued to the Air Force.

Chambered for the 5.56 mm. (.223-caliber) cartridge, the M-16 is equipped with a 20-round magazine and an in-line (straight) plastic stock. Sling swivels and a carrying handle are provided.

Capable of full or semi-automatic fire, the M-16 fires a 55-grain bullet at a hot 3,250 feet-per-second, giving the small projectile the shocking power of larger, slower bullets.

The new gas - operated rifle weighs 6.9 poupds with a loaded magazine, has a barrel length of 20 inches and an overall length (with flash suppressor) of 38.8 inches.

The Navy bought 300 of these weapons in 1963. The Marines are still testing them.

How does this affect the controversial M-14, built around the NATO 7.62 mm. cartridge and designed to replace the M-1, M-2 carbine, BAR and submachine gun?

The M-16 was not presented as a competitor to the M-14, but it does require an addition to our ammunition inventory.

Used by the Vietnamese against the Communist Viet Cong, the M-16 passed its test with flying colors.

It is considered by the Advanced Research Projects Agency (DOD) to be materially better than the M-1 or M-14 for jungle fighting; more easily carried by light-traveling airborne and special forces troops and handier for men of small stature.

This weapon could be used as both a shoulder-fired grenade launcher and a rifle to engage area and point targets more effectively.

Fully loaded, it is expected to weigh no more than the current M-14 and will significantly increase the effectiveness of the combat infantryman.

Research and Development people leave no stone unturned to place the best weapon in the hands of the American fighting man.

Determination Is Absolute Must For Successful Wear of Dentures

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

We have said so much about the bad points of dentures that I feel it is time to try to help those who must wear them.

Dentures are an improvement over having teeth that are infected, loose or unsightly or over having no teeth at all. Some people even feel that they prefer dentures to their own teeth, but this is the case only when very poor natural teeth were present.

Let's say that you will receive your denture today, after having waited for the gums to heal. What can you expect? First of all, you will notice the tremendously large feeling of the new denture. There will be a great increase in salivation, as the salivary glands treat the dentures as food and try to dissolve them. Also, your speech will be affected for a few days, as the tongue has less room than it is used to, making it hard to speak.

The most important aid in wearing a denture is determination. It is a case of "sticking with it," until you forget you're wearing dentures. Look at it this way in the beginning:

Your new denture will be about as serviceable to you as a new piano on which you have never taken a lesson, and you must learn to play before it affords you any pleasure.

Your dentist can supply you with well-fitting dentures, but he cannot guarantee success since confidence and control are necessary for successful denture wear and only the patient can supply this. The denture tends to be uncomfortable at first since the tissue which bears the denture is not used to doing the job. This discomfort disappears in a few days if there is no area which is overloaded. If pain occurs, the wearer should visit the dentist for adjustment of the denture.

If your speech seems difficult, practice speaking before a mirror.

Do not listen to your friend's advice, their memories are poor, and they will gladly fib to you about the easy time they had, or how their Uncle Jake ate a steak the first night he wore a denture. Begin your denture-wearing with determination and the knowledge that no one finds it completely natural to wear dentures.

Distinguished Visitor Welcomed by Division

Yesterday the 2nd Infantry Division was accorded the honor of playing host to Lt. Gen. Albert A. Watson II, commanding general, Third U. S. Army.

Gen. Watson's main purpose in visiting the "Indianhead" Division was to view the Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course (PMIC) now being conducted at Support Command under the supervision of Maj. Herbert L. Bergen, division ammunition officer.

The Third Army Commander arrived at the PMI Course at 8:15 a.m., accompanied by the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, and received a "student's tour" of the day's curriculum. The three-star general reviewed equipment record procedures, log book forms, operator maintenance on vehicles and preventive maintenance indicators on the two and a half ton truck.

After finally seeing the preventive maintenance indicators on radar equipment used by the 2nd Aviation Battalion, Gen. Watson motored to the Division Headquarters for a briefing by Gen. Billingslea and general staff officers.

Gen. Watson departed shortly before noon for his return flight to Fort McPherson in Atlanta.

1st Brigade Reenlistment Sgt Wins Top Quarterly Award

By 1st Brigade PIO

Sgt. Ralph B. Barnard, reenlistment NCO for the 1st Brigade, recently accepted the 2nd Infantry Division's quarterly award for achieving the highest percentage of reenlistments within the division.

The award, presented to Sgt. Barnard, who represented Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade, was made by Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, during a miniature review held last Friday afternoon at Marne Field.

Sgt. Barnard, who was congratulated by Gen. Corley, said later that the 1st Brigade had enjoyed a forty percent reenlistment rate from June through September, 1963.

Division Commemorates 'Third Army Day' With an Awards Review

On that day, the Third U. S. Army, of which the 2nd Division is a part, observed the 45th anniversary of its founding at Ligny-en-Barrois, France, just a year and a month after the Indianhead Division was formed at Bourmont.

The division soldier of the year was honored at the review, best mess plaques and a series of reenlistment plaques were given out.

The troops at the affair were commanded by the commander of Division Support Command, Col. John W. Armstrong. The top-ranking officer in attendance was Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, assistant 2nd Division commander, who gave a short talk on the anniversary date.

A $100 savings bond, a wrist watch and a dress blue uniform, all three anticipated, were accepted by PSgt. Donald L. Thames, the Indianhead's soldier of the year and a member of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry's Headquarters Company.

Previously, Sgt. Thames, formerly special forces and airborne, had been presented with a free weekend at Callaway Gardens by the management.

The best first term enlistee was named. He is Sgt. Clyde Steely of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

'Indianhead' Division Needs More Ranger-Qualified Officers and EM

Only 53 Division Men List as Trained Rangers

Why are officers and men of the 2nd Division treating The Infantry School's Ranger Department like a plague-bearing object?

If you protest, remember: in this case, figures are outshouting words. As a Strategic Army Corps infantry division available for a mission at any time, the 2nd Division is allowed, and is aiming at, a goal of one Ranger-qualified officer per line company and one Ranger-qualified noncommissioned officer per line platoon — AND AT THIS TIME HAS A LEAN ROSTER OF ONLY 53 RANGER-QUALIFIED OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN IN THE ENTIRE DIVISION!

THE WIRE SLIDE BUILDS CONFIDENCE

The benefits of being a Ranger School graduate are immediate. For the enlisted man with an eye on an Army career, no other program has the possibilities of skyrocketing him to the non-commissioned officer class so swiftly.

The corporal or specialist fourth class who successfully completes the nine-week Ranger Course rises to the grade of E-5 with the concurrence of his company commander automatically, a perfunctory gesture. The promotion is not chargeable to a unit's TOE.

The rest of the benefits for the enlisted man, as for the officer, are less tangible. A Ranger stands out in the crowd, especially with the slim number the division now owns. Out of a total of approximately 16,000 soldiers only 53 are Rangers. There is the added respect which goes to the Ranger, which is seldom overlooked when it comes to promotion time.

How does the 2nd Division benefit? Simply by having men of that caliber in its units. A division is not a separate, mystic entity. It is what it is made of. Like the proverbial chain, units are only as good as their weakest link.

Do you want Ranger training? If so, most of you company - grade officers, sergeants and E-4's can have it. At least, you can get into the school for a trial.

Be warned. You will be hungry, cold, tired and dirty most of the nine weeks, climb mountains 'til you feel your leg muscles popping, wade for miles through water up to your waist and sleep at night under a moss-draped tree or maybe not sleep for Rangers function at night. You will scale cliffs, ford streams, live off the land and hunt other men with the instinct of an animal. In nine weeks when you graduate, you'll be tough and knowing, a-skilled night fighter, reconnoiterer and special missions man. Ranger training is a combat conditioner.

One of the most decorated combat veterans serving the Army today, the assistant commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, puts it another way. "Ranger is a concept of training. It's like a religion; you either believe in it or you don't."

Gen. Corley believes in it. For two years, from 1958 to 1960, he directed the activities of the Ranger Department and was instrumental in developing the physical combat proficiency test which has replaced the push-up as a measure of a man's muscular endurance.

All applicants for Ranger training must score 325 points in the physical combat proficiency test.

Over the years, the Ranger concept has undergone some basic changes.

What is the essence of Ranger?

"Ranger - type operations are overt operations conducted mostly at night in (within) enemy-held territory. Their duration depends upon the location of the target, terrain, type of mission, enemy capabilities and the tactical situation. Such missions

17th Artillery Returns After 2 Weeks Training

The 17th Artillery returned to Fort Benning November 8 after two weeks of field training at Fort Gordon, Ga. All three firing batteries fired and passed the Army Training Test.

The tests were administered by a testing team from 2nd Infantry Division Artillery during the second week of training. Alpha Battery took the test on November 4, Bravo Battery fired the test on November 5, and Charlie Battery shot the test on November 6. The first week was busy as the testing team composed of members of the battalion tested each battery twice.

During the second week the battalion received visits from Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander; Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, assistant division commander; and Col. Burnside E. Huffman, division artillery commander. Gen. Billingslea observed the battalion in action on November 4.

Thanksgiving Day Message To 2nd Division Men and Their Families

As we prepare to observe Thanksgiving Day 1963, I extend my best wishes to all members of the 2d Infantry Division and their families.

Let us be thankful that we who guard the frontiers of freedom in the Twentieth Century can enjoy this day in peace. May each of us remember the origin and meaning of this holiday and offer special thanks to God for the individual blessings we have enjoyed and for the security and welfare of our nation.

At this time last year the "Indianhead" Division was in a full alert status with the freedom of mankind facing a severe test. Many of you were temporarily separated from your families. Let us give special thanks this Thanksgiving Day that we are all together and rededicate ourselves to the principles of liberty and justice for all.

DivArty Commander Presented Yearbook

By Division Artillery PIO

The 38th Artillery presented 2nd Division Artillery (DivArty) Commander Col. Burnside E. Huffman with the results of four months of labor and tender loving care at a brief ceremony in the colonel's office recently.

Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Francis A. Chance, Jr., and Sgt. Maj. Joseph Chickini presented Col. Huffman with the 38th Artillery's first yearbook by way of indicating battalion appreciation to DivArty's commander.

Four months were required to compile materials, edit, print, and bind the yearbook. The yearbook is largely the work of Lt. Kenneth S. Breen of Battery C who was responsible for gathering the materials and working out an effective presentation.

The yearbook contains record photographs of all battalion personnel and numerous action photos of men and equipment as they participated in field maneuvers at Little Creek, Va., and during Swift Strike III. Most of the action shots and record photos were taken by the bn talion PIO photographer, Max A. Toro—Mattie.

Besides the photographs, the yearbook contains a brief outline of the battalion's history and a letter from Col. Chance in praise of the efforts expended by 38th Artillery personnel while maintaining pride in their unit. The inside front cover of the yearbook shows a world map pinpointing locations around the globe where the battalion has been stationed throughout its history.

As an indication of the 38th Artillery's esprit de corps, the yearbook, richly bound, has been purchased by most battalion personnel.

Demolitions Are Stressed During Training

By 2nd Engineer PIO

Company B of the 2nd Engineer Battalion recently completed a 24 hour block of training in demolitions. During this period of training, while the engineers were reviewing and practicing their demolition skills, a detachment from the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry was trained in the basic essentials of demolition by the Engineers. This training qualified the infantrymen for special jobs within their battalion.

The instructions terminated with an 8 hour practical exercise at the King's Pond Demolition area. Each man was required to prime a half-pound block of TNT non-electrically and electrically and to observe the various methods of detonating the charges. The students were also shown demonstrations utilizing demolitions to cut timber and steel, and to blow craters.

The personnel in charge of giving the training were Lt. James A. Ward, Sgt. Bennie L. Hughes, Sgt. Thomas Williams Jr., and members of the First Platoon of Company B, 2nd Engineer Battalion.

37th Artillery Sergeant Major Reenlists for '3'

A veteran of 21 years service, Sgt. Steele completed basic training at Camp Wolters, Tex., and advanced training at Fort Meade, Md.

While overseas Sgt. Steele participated in the invasions of Sicily, Salerno, Anzio, and South France, and he later served in campaigns in Germany and Austria. He was wounded in August, 1943, after the invasion of Sicily, but he returned to his unit for the invasion of Salerno.

The 21-year veteran counts among his many decorations a Silver Star, the Bronze Star with V and Oak Leaf Cluster, and nine Battle Stars for nine campaigns in Europe.

Sgt. Steele is married and has a daughter.

New Promotions For 1st Brigade Awarded to Six

By 1st Brigade PIO

Due to a temporary lack of funds, cigarettes instead of cigars were passed out during recent promotions within the 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division. However, six newly promoted soldiers have promised to cough up the stogies when their defense budgets are balanced.

At the top of the list is a mild-mannered expert mechanic, SP5 Donald H. Gabert, promoted to his present rank early this month. The twenty-three-year-old Gabert, a native of Morgantown, W. Va., entered the Army in December, 1957, and attended basic training at Fort Knox, Ky.

12th Artillery Officer Is Promoted to Captain

By Division Artillery PIO

Capt. Joseph L. Pitts Jr. was promoted to his present rank recently at a ceremony in the office of Col. Burnside E. Huffman, 2nd Division artillery commander.

Capt. Pitts is the commanding officer of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery of the 12th Artillery. His wife, Virginia, a surprise guest at the ceremony, pinned the twin silver bars of a captain to her husband's shirt collar.

New Lieutenant Is Assigned To the Engineers

By 2nd Engineer PIO

Lt. Gordon W. Richerson has been assigned to Company A of the 2nd Engineer Battalion as platoon leader. This is the first assignment for Lt. Richerson since completing the basic course at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Lt. Richerson is originally from Daphney, Ala., and attended the University of Alabama where he received a Bachelor of Science Degree in Industrial Engineering.

Already a veteran of three Army schools, Lt. Richerson finished the engineer Basic Course in September of 1963, then spent three weeks in Construction Planning and Maintenance, and finally left Fort Belvoir and came to Fort Benning where he finished the Airborne Training Course in October 1963. In his spare time Lt. Richerson likes to play golf and tennis, and enjoys all water sports.

Division Ranger-Qualiified Men Sought By 'Second to None'

as combat raids, to include: air-landed, air-evacuation or waterborne raids, combat patrols, ambush patrols and reconnaissance patrols are typical Ranger-type operations," states the Ranger Department brochure.

Why be a Ranger?

"The Ranger course has the capability of developing the overall combat potential of junior leaders to a higher degree than any other course in the Army. Men who make excellent tactical decisions in the classroom or in normal training programs, sometimes fail miserably under the stress of combat. Hunger, fatigue and the press of a tactical situation uncover weaknesses which an individual never knew he had."

"An individual in Ranger training gains an insight into himself and his fellow man. Not every man can qualify as a Ranger. It is a challenge for the professional officer or hard-core noncommissioned officer — a challenge to prove oneself under conditions of weather and terrain which equal and often exceed those encountered in combat."

Every Ranger returning to his unit will integrate the concepts and features of Ranger training into his unit's training program. Thus, attaining the goal of a Ranger-qualified officer for each line company, an NCO for each line platoon.

In 1756, a New Hampshire major by the name of Robert Rogers recruited nine companies of Rangers from the continentals to aid the British in their seven years' war against the French and Indians.

At the beginning the Rangers set a pattern that has struck with them through most of their existence. The British Army capitalized on their indomitable skills — daring, stealth, hardiness, courage, scouting finesse, self-subsistence and use of cover — in fact, all those things that came to be associated with early America's quest for Independence and, later, the frontier spirit which enabled the new Nation to push back its primitive frontiers and extend westward to the limits of its land horizon.

Maj. Rogers and his men did a good job for the British who gained a healthy respect for the Rangers, a respect which turned to glazed fear several years later when the advancing red line was ground through the invisible torment of Ranger attacks.

Daniel Morgan, born probably in Hunterdon County, N. J. and the victor of Cowpens, commander of the Virginia militia suppressors of the western Pennsylvania Whiskey Insurrection, was one of the first to turn Rangers against the British.

Morgan's Riflemen, a buckskin-clad band schooled in Indian forest fighting, were Revolutionary War Rangers of note along with the well-known Swamp Fox, Francis Marion, and his Partisans. (From whom the current 2nd Division exercise in counter-guerrilla warfare takes name.)

Two patterns of fighting emerge from a study of the Swamp Fox's tactics. The Rangers of this day operated in connection with larger conventional forces (the American Army) or independently, as they saw fit.

The Partisans disrupted British communications, prevented locals from organizing in support of the British and then vanished.

After a 25-mile chase through thorn, thicket, mud and water that ended at the mouth of a seemingly-impenetrable swamp, British Col. Tarleton tagged Marion with a name that stuck. "... the damned fox. The devil himself could not catch him ..."

It can be seen that, at this time, the Rangers were operating identical to guerrillas, pursuing irregular warfare yet seldom willing to stand on line.

This pattern continued throughout the War Between the States in the middle of the next century, the next war to produce a host of notable Ranger-type operators, and most of these Southern.

Mosby's Rangers — now widely - known through a television serial — and Gen. John Hunt Morgan's Confederate raiders harrassed the solid Blue to frenzy and upset the timetable for many a campaign.

A Virginian, John Singleton Mosby practiced law in Bristol, Va., following the war and later served the federal government as a consular official and as an assistant attorney in the U. S. Department of Justice. He wrote two books of reminiscences.

The next Ranger action followed the Civil War. This time the Rangers carried the banner of the U. S. Army against the Indians. A battalion of Rangers, later organized as the 1st Regiment Dragoons, only unit in the Army authorized mustaches, took the Wild West show to the redskins' doorstep.

The Ranger idea then lay dormant until, in June 1942 at Carrickfergus, Ireland, Maj. William O. Darby put together his famous volunteer group of Rangers, later expanded, which campaigned through North Africa, Sicily and Italy and hit the beaches of Normandy for the push eastward to Germany.

These men were not being used like the Rangers of old. They stood on line the same as a regular infantry counterpart; they spearheaded assaults. They did not operate behind enemy lines on a typical hit-and-run mission.

Only in the Pacific did the 6th Ranger Battalion carry on in the old style with long-range patrols, quick-fisted thrusts and shadowy reconnaissance. In Japanese-held Burma, "Merrill's Marauders," volunteers all, ripped at the enemy rear, making impossible marches through jungles, over mountains, across gruelling terrain while supplied clandestinely by air or by foraging in the countryside.

Again, in Korea, the Rangers fought on line — straight infantry — until in September 1951 when the Ranger units were disbanded and their experienced personnel scattered throughout the rest of the Eighth Army.

In October 1951, the Ranger concept came to rest — with continued modifications and refinements — as we know it today. By direction of Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, Ranger training was to "be extended to all combat units in the Army in order to develop the capability of carrying out Ranger-type missions in all infantry units of the Army."

A Ranger Department was established at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, and the emphasis shifted back to the old theories: how to move quietly and quickly at night and for long distances, living off the land, hitting hard and getting out. Graduates returned to their units to train the men and imbue every combat unit with the esprit and toughness of the Ranger.

Rangers are made, not born!!

How does the Ranger Department make Rangers? It selects qualified applicants and sharpens them with rugged, out-of-doors practical work — a nine week course in three steps.

1. The Fort Benning Preparatory Phase.

2. The Mountain Training Phase

3. The Jungle, Swamp, Airmobile and Waterborne Operations Phase.

The 2nd Division Ranger applicant, if an enlisted man or officer, must be recommended to G-3 schools by his unit commander.

The applicant must be able to swim 50 meters.

Once accepted, everyone removes insignias of rank to become simply "Ranger —." The first few days at Main Post are devoted to in-processing. Then the first phase begins, the Fort Benning Preparatory Phase, billed as two weeks but actually closer to 18 day long.

The new student is hardened with speed marches, calisthenics and confidence tests such as the "coon climb" and the suspension traverse, a neat device which whips the rider down a cable from a 75-foot height and drops him into the water.

In the first phase, basic combat skills are refreshed and new ones taught: intelligence and patrol reporting, hand-to-hand combat, troop leading procedures, air landings and aerial resupply, communications and demolitions — these are a few.

The Blue Ridge Mountains home of the Mountain Ranger Camp, 11 miles northwest of Dahlonega, Ga., forms the backdrop of the three-week second phase. Here the Ranger scales sheer cliff faces (sometimes manipulating a litter patient) and crosses swift streams using whatever is at hand. The terrain is heavily wooded with pine, hemlock, scrub oak and other growth.

Military mountain techniques are drilled into the student. Day and night patrols from one to four days in length sweep out through the ridges against aggressors. The second phase culminates in a carefully-simulated combat raid on enemy missile installations.

For the third phase, the Rangers move by tactical motor convoy to Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and the Ranger camp there — 100,000 acres of jungle environment similar to the Philippines or Malaya.

Off-shore islands, ocean surf, coastal dunes, wire-grass savannahs, dense swamp, tropical rivers, scrub oak and pine-palmetto lands are the earth features; poisonous reptiles, alligators, panthers and bears the inhabitants — plus the Rangers, of course.

By now, the Rangers are six-weeks mean. They reflect this in their night patrolling against a lurking aggressor army, always hitting, always trying not to be hit.

Rations are scarce; the Ranger forages. Rattlesnakes hold no terror for him; he eats them. He builds traps and shelters and slogs through water with his weapon held high. He relies on his knowledge of the map and compass on every mission and he's always on a mission.

The surrender of the aggressor army ends three-week phase three. After that comes graduation at Fort Benning — with five written examination in the entire nine weeks.

The new Rangers, officers and sergeants, sew on their distinctive black and yellow shoulder tabs and return to TOE slots more qualified to lead and instruct in the manner they were taught while advancing a step higher in the opinion of their companions and commanders.

At one time, Rangers fought virtually as guerrillas. Later, they stood on line like the infantry. Today, they fight with the line outfits to which they bring special knowledge of other types of operation. The idea today is to give every unit Ranger potential.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

The Greatest Word of All--'Thanks'

It was a dark, foggy, rainy day. The troops were tired and wet. Chills ran through their bodies as they huddled under trees and outgrowths for warmth and cover.

In the distance sounds of bursting shells echoed through the surrounding valleys and the soldiers sat, shivered, and watched the raindrops making their sporadic ringed tidal waves across the puddled ground.

There was still a line leading to the mess tent and these men danced up and down to shake away the cold. They looked like so many disfigured creatures from Mars hunched up in their ponchos and the rain rat - tat - tating upon their helmets.

Upon having their mess kits filled each man would hurry to the shelter of a vehicle or tree before his food became completely soaked.

A sudden thunderclap would set ears to ringing, and the ensuing rumble of artillery bursts lent an eerie discomfiture to the scene. Only the occasional flash of light, partially shrouded by the fog, aided in differentiating between the thunder of God, and that of man.

An officer came and herded the men together at the base of a clump of woods and were asked to postpone their eating until everyone had been served.

Grumbles were sounded and punchos quickly hid the mess kits from view. Glowing tips of cigarettes danced around the area like fireflies and the men sitting on the wet ground resembled dark mounds of mushrooms dotting the area.

Continuously a straggling line of tired, wet, and wounded, warriors came into view trudging along the road. Now and then an ambulance or carrier of some sort slid to a stop and a wrapped form would be laid in the mud alongside another in a long row. The men looked quickly away and fumbled with their soggy cigarettes or traced unimportant marks in the mud with their fingers. The rain grew more intense.

When all had been served and were assembled, a man who had been kneeling by the row of still forms rose and walked to the front of the hungry and cold men. His face was unshaven and his eyes tired. The faded silver-painted cross upon his helmet became more clear as the falling rain slowly washed away the mud and dirt.

He smiled slightly, then spoke. "Forgive me for delaying your meal. I realize this is not the most comfortable way to dine." The heavy sound of the rain was obliterated for a moment by successive sounds of gunfire — closer this time. The Chaplain looked off toward the sounds and his eyes blinked mechanically from the rain.

Turning, he looked down again at the hunched forms sitting before him. "I thought it would be only proper and fitting that together we would say Grace before this meal." Looking over toward the row of dead bodies, incognizant of the falling rain, the Chaplain added, "a sort of 'thank you' to our absent friends. A thanks that should be dus them in all the years that will follow. Especially on this day of each year."

Bowing his head, the Chaplain's soft voice continued. "In this year of our Lord, 1944, and upon this Thanksgiving Day, we ask for thy blessing and thank thee. . ."

Admin Company Arms Room Gets Complete Face Lifting Job

A bayonet closet which houses the steel weapons of close combat in individual riots is only one of the new features incorporated into the recently completed "face lifting" job which was performed on the 2nd Administration Company's arms room.

The originator of the bayonet closet and "chief engineer" of the remodeling operation was SSgt. Alfred A. Harvey, a combat veteran of the Korean War who has been supply sergeant of the "biggest little company" in the "Indianhead" Division for the past two years.

All work on the project, off duty as well as on, was accomplished by him and his supply staff, consisting of Sp4 Wilford Tyler, Sp4 Jacob Gurzak, and Sp4 William Moore, the company armorer.

The four men started the project in March of this year and stayed with it until its completion last August.

Besides the bayonet closet, four machine gun closets were installed which house 3.5 inch rocket launchers in addition to M-60 and .50 caliber machine guns. These closets are secured by means of thick steel bars which are kept in place with steel padlocks mounted at each end.

All rifle racks, which hold the new M-14 rifles, were painted and secured by means of a heavy-gage, steel cable which is locked to the wall.

Cleaning benches were constructed, painted and placed inside the arms room to protect members of the company from the elements while caring for their weapons.

Further security precautions were taken with the installation of a wire cage which separates the cleaning area from the weapons storage section.

Mrs Ray's Main Ambition Is Childrens Development

Anniston, Ala. is the home town of the former Maggie Owens. Here she attended Anniston High School, worked for two years, and from there went on to continue her studies at Northwestern University. Graduating with a degree in speech, Maggie went to work for CBS radio in Chicago. There she found script writing and producing to be a challenging and most rewarding job.

Two years later, while vacationing in the Panama Canal Zone, Maggie Owens met, and shortly thereafter married, William Ray. This was the beginning of a new career as Maggie Owens Army wife.

The first two years of her new life were spent in the Canal Zone where Capt. Ray served on the Central Carribean Staff and subsequently in the 33rd Infantry Regiment. While in the Canal Zone Mrs. Ray gave birth to her first child; a son, Bill Jr.

The Rays left Panama when Bill was six weeks old and proceeded to the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York for a two year tour. While stationed at the Academy in 1951 Maj. and Mrs. Ray welcomed their first daughter, Marrion (MIMI) Ray.

The following year found the Rays in Paris, France, where the major was assigned to SHAPE. During the next thirteen months Mrs. Ray accompanied her husband as he traveled the North Atlantic Treaty Nations. Maggie recalls this period as one of the most fascinating and enriching of her life as an Army wife.

From Paris the Rays returned to Washington, D. C. where Col. Ray served in the Office of the Chief of Staff, U. S. Army. While in Washington, Cathy, the Rays youngest child, was born. The family remained in Washington until 1955 when Col. Ray received orders for Fort Leavenworth, Kan. where he attended the Command and General Staff College.

MRS. RAY

Mrs. Ray set up off post housing the following year at Willeby Hills, Mass. while the colonel persued his studies at Harvard Business School. Obtaining his Masters Degree, Col. Ray was ordered to Fort Benning for a three year tour. But for Mrs. Ray and the children, it was a four year stay as she continued to maintain her household in the Fort Benning area while Col. Ray went on to serve a Korean assignment.

While serving with the Eighth U. S. Army in Korea, Lt. Col. Ray was promoted to colonel. Then, in August of 1962, he was sent to the Army War College at Carlisle, Pa. Mrs. Ray enjoyed living there in the small close-knit military community. While her husband was stationed there Maggie attended a series of evening seminars offered the wives and was able to travel to New York City where she made a tour of the United Nations Building.

In 1963 Fort Benning again welcomed the Rays. Shortly after arriving here the colonel was assigned his present position as commander of the 2nd Divisions 1st Brigade. Mrs. Ray was delighted to return to her favorite post and is now active here as a member of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, the Womans Club of Fort Benning, and is a Grey Lady.

Maggie Ray is a warm and charming person. She enjoys golf, loves music and reading, and when time allows will one day return to writing. Her foremost ambition is to live a good life and successfully guide the development of her three children to mature adulthood.

By 1st Bn., 22rd Infantry PIO

After a delay of eight months, Spc James E. Brooks, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry and Sigrid Maria Wiegel of Frankfurt, Germany were finally married.

The couple had been engaged in Germany and scheduled to be married there when the groom was taken ill and hospitalized. His illness warranted a flight back to the States for further treatment which postponed the wedding.

But, in eight months time all was well and the wedding date was set once more. Sigrid travelled from Frankfurt and on November 13, at the Kelley Hill Chapel, the two were united.

Chap. Lt. Henry F. Ackermann performed the rites that joined the happy pair. The bride was given away by Specialist Brook's First Sergeant, Loransia D. Bowen; the Maid of Honor was Mrs. Thomas Sechler and the Best Man was Thomas Sechler.

The newlyweds left for a honeymoon which will take them to Louisville, Ky. where they will visit the groom's parents.

Two Combat Veterans Join 3rd Brigade Staff

By 3rd Brigade PIO

The colonel received his commission upon being graduated from West Virginia University in 1940. His service record includes action in four World War II campaigns. His awards include the Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Glider Badge.

Col. Cox has served in Thialand as senior advisor to the 5th Royal Thia Infantry Division and in Greece as Chief of tactical training, Army Section. He has attended Advanced Infantry School, Command and General Staff College, and the Sanz Language School in Washington, D. C. where he studied Greek.

Twin silver bars are worn by Capt. Edwin G. Davis who has recently joined the 3rd Brigade as assistant S-2.

He is a graduate of Muniepie University, Omaha, Nebraska and enlisted in the Army in 1947. As a noncommissioned officer he served as an aerial observer in Korea where he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster. In addition to these decorations, the captain holds the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Capt. Davis was commissioned after completing Infantry Officers Candidate School in 1953. He comes to the 3rd Brigade from Viet Nam where he served as the advisor to a Vietnamese Civil Guard battalion in Chuong Thieu province.

CAA Fund Drive Topped by 38th Inf Hq and Company C

By 1st Bn, 38th Infantry PIO

Headquarters Company of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry has now surpassed its fair share goal in the Community Activities Association Fund Drive, and Company C of the Marnemen has equalled its fair share.

The amazing achievement in Headquarters Company's endeavor is that its fair share of $872.00 was based on the company's former strength of approximately 250 men. With only 199 men present for duty, Headquarters Company surpassed their maximum by fifteen cents.

That small sum above the limit may not appear to be much at first glance, but considering the fact that Headquarters Company surpassed its goal with 50 fewer contributors than had been expected reflects this outstanding accomplishment.

72nd Armor Officer Is Writing A Novel About 'Dulag Luft' Prison

By 72nd Armor PIO

The Nazi prisoner of war camp "Dulag Luft" is the subject of a book being written by Capt. James C. Shepard of Company C, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Dulag Luft, which literally means: "temporary airforce prison" was an Air Intelligence Interrogation Center. The mission at Dulag Luft was to obtain any type of information pertaining to Allied aerial warfare. The camp was operated by the Luftwaffe and responsible to the Nazi Air Minister and second - in - command, Hermann Goering.

Allied airmen were brought to Dulag Luft immediately after their capture for interrogation. The captured airmen were maintained at the camp temporarily. When the Germans were finished questioning them the PW's were transferred to the more permanent camps, the Stalags.

The book brings out how unprepared some of the captured airmen were for the crack German interrogators. Most of the Allied airmen had been taught to give only name, rank, serial number to their captors. Some prisoners had built a mental concept of a brutal Gestapo Officer questioning them, and using torture if necessary to obtain the desired information. The PW's were psychologically unprepared for the Nazi soft approach.

Instead of a tough interrogator the PW's were received by a German enlisted man, with full consideration of their rank, for a brief "chat". It was during this chat, which the interrogator kept on a friendly basis, that the prisoner was caught off guard and gave intelligence information unknowingly.

The many interrogation methods, the attempted escapes, the spirit of the prisoners are some of the interesting subjects covered by the book.

Capt. Shepard's interest in Dulag Luft developed when he was assigned duties as adjutant of the 513th Military Intelligence Group at Camp King, Germany. Camp King is situated on the site of the old Dulag Luft.

One day an Englishman came to the 513th's Headquarters and asked for permission to visit the camp. Due to the intelligence work that was then going on at Camp King the Englishman was not allowed to visit unescorted. As Capt. Shepard escorted him around the camp the Englishman explained that he had been a wartime prisoner at Dulag Luft and he was now making a "sentimental" return trip. As the Englishman told of the camp Capt. Shepard found himself asking many questions of the old Dulag Luft.

Later Capt. Shepard was designated Unit Historian of Camp King and he began the research of Dulag Luft. Capt. Shepard obtained information from American and British History and Records Centers, and from personal interviews and correspondence.

From the vast amount of research material he wrote the unit history of Camp King. He will use the unit history as a draft for his book. The final version will be expanded and contain more detailed information.

Capt. Shepard joined the 72nd Armor in June 1963 and served as S-3 and S-3 Air. He took command of Company C in September 1963.

He is a Distinguished Military Graduate of Stetson University of De Land, Fla. He lives with his wife Gladys, and their two children at Fort Benning.

1st of 38th Still Unbeaten In Flag Football Tourney

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry extended its victory skein to five without a loss last week to remain the only undefeated team in the 2nd Division flag football tournament.

The Marnemen increased their advantage in the Cherokee Division to a full game over the 2nd Engineer Battalion and the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, tied for second place, with a 1-0 forfeiture victory over 17th Artillery on November 13th.

In other games on the 13th, the 7th Cavalry pulled into a short-lived tie for first place in the Commanche Division with idle 122nd Signal Battalion by topping the 38th Artillery, 18-12. High scoring Fern Williams led the attack, scoring two touchdowns.

The 2nd Engineers and the 2nd of the 23rd kept their pressure on undefeated 1st of the 38th in the Cherokee as the engineers humbled Division Artillery 30-12 and the 2nd of the 23rd trounced hapless 702nd Maintenance Battalion, 32-0.

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, leaders in the Apache Division, got a scare on November 14th when they were forced into overtime before nipping 37th Artillery, 20-19. The win upped the leaders' record to 6-1. Third-place 2nd of the 9th topped 303rd ASA 13-6 in the night's other Apache contest.

The 122nd Signal Battalion squad again took undisputed control of first place in the Commanche Division on the 14th as Randy Johnson paced them to a hard-fought 25-18 win of 1st of the 23rd. Johnson tallied 18 points in the fray.

Last Friday the 72nd Armor defeated 12th Artillery, 20-7 and the 2nd of the 23rd blanked 2nd MP Company, 12-0.

Among his most noteworthy achievements is his Second Degree Black Belt in Chito Style Karate. He studied under 1st Sgt. Henry Slomanski, who is the second ranking Karate man in the world.

Capt. Jarrett is an accredited instructor and has several students who have also achieved Black Belt Status. He expresses an interest in starting Karate classes within the Battalion.

2nd of the 9th Drops Thriller By 14-13 Score

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry "Manchus" lost a "heartbreaker" to the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry last week when its winning streak ground to a halt. The score was 14-13.

The loss, however, still left them in first place in the Apache Division through last Thursday in a four-way tie with the 15th Artillery, 2nd Administration Company, and the 1st Battalion, 9th Infa-try.

The last play of the game which climaxed an 80-yard march in four plays by the 2nd of the 9th Manchus saw quarterback Lucius Willis' touchdown pass called back because of a penalty.

Johnson Holds Slim Advantage In Point Derby

Randy Johnson of the 122nd Signal Battalion took over first place in the flag football scoring race last week with a three-touchdown effort in a victory over 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

But James Lindsey, Division Artillery mainstay and leader for the past several weeks remained hot on Johnson's heels. Johnson has scored 48 points on eight touchdowns while Lindsey has tallied 46 on seven TDs and four extra points.

Tennis Champs Newly Crowned At 38th Artillery

Sp4 Vernon Low, battery clerk of Battery "C" and Sp4 John Alagna, a cook in Battery "B" represented the 38th Artillery in the 2nd Infantry Division Tennis Tournament which was held on the Sand Hill tennis court October 19-20. This was the first time that the Artillery had ever been represented at a tournament.

Alagna's delicate net play combined with Low's powerful serve made short work of their opponents from the infantry.

PFC Winn 'Maxes' PT Test For the Fifth Straight Time

By 1st Bn, 23rd Infantry PIO

One of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry's outstanding athletes has gained the maximum score on the Army Combat Proficiency Test for the fifth consecutive time.

PFC Ulysses D. Winn of Company C entered the Army in May, 1962 from his home town of West Palm Beach, Fla. He was sent to Fort Gordon, Ga. for Basic Training and there scored his first two triumphs with the Combat Proficiency Test. He was sent to Fort Jackson, S.C. for Advanced Infantry Training and, once again, "maxed" it.

Since his assignment to the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, Winn has made the maximum score twice; his latest being tabulated on November 7.

As a student at Roosevelt High School in West Palm Beach, Winn participated in basketball, football, and track. He set school records in 4 minutes, 35 seconds.

Due for separation from the Army in the near future, Winn is planning to return to college where he will study electronics. He eventually would like to enter the field of radio and television research and development.

Doughboys Win 56-0

Sarette Pitching Highlights Win

By Dave Braun

Dave Sarette pitched "perfect ball" last Saturday night at Doughboy Stadium, highlighting the Doughboys' 56-0 shellacking of the Fort Dix Burros before about 7,000 people.

The former Syracuse University star hit on seven of seven passes for 131 yards as the local contingent grabbed its eighth victory in 10 outings this season.

Head coach Oren DaHaven cleared his bench, playing members of his first two units only sparingly.

First Score

Fort Benning opened up the scoring festivities early in the first quarter when halfback Bobby Towns darted in from six yards away. Ron Quillen booted a perfect placement and with 9:32 left in the initial period it was 7-0.

Quillen this time watched his extra point attempt go wide and the home team led 13-0.

Touchdown No. 3 came when Sarette hit Fred Murphy on a 27-yard scoring pitch. Quillen's extra point try was perfect and Fort Benning forged ahead, 20-0.

Stutzman Throws TD

Near the intermission the Doughboys added another tally when third team signal caller Gary Stutzman connected with end George Walstad from the five-yard stripe.

Quillen again split the uprights with a perfect placement and the scoreboard read 27-0.

Fort Benning went to work quickly in the second half, moving 71 yards in seven plays with Quillen knifing in from the two-yard line. The stocky fullback added one more point to his personal point column with the extra point and the Georgia post squad was ahead, 34-0.

Moseley Intercepts

Only minutes later center Elliott Moseley intercepted a Burro aerial at midfield, returning it to the Fort Dix 39-yard stripe. Two downs later Raymond Eddy broke through the middle of the line and rambled 28 yards to paydirt.

In the final period Fort Benning traveled 49 yards in six plays with fullback Warren Maccaroni cracking in from the two-yard marker for the tally. With 11:30 left in the contest Stutzman hit speedster Elroy Foley with a two-point conversion pass and it was 49-0.

With only 2:24 remaining in the game Vince McBride found a hole in the Burro line, broke clear, and raced 85 yards for the final score. Joe Wendryhoski, the Doughboys big guard, then came on to end the home season campaign on a colorful note by kicking the extra point.

Onka Leads MTU Shotgunners To Interservice Trap Crowns

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

Pvt. Kevin Onka of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit captured the individual Clay Pigeon championship at the Interservice Invitational match held at the post last week and led the MTU to victory in the two-man and four-man team events.

KEVIN ONKA
Trap Champion

The 20-year-old soldier, who won the North American Clay Target championship at the age of 16, posted a four-day total of 378 birds out of a possible 400, a nine-target edge over runnerup 1st Lt. William Morris, also of the MTU.

Onka and Morris teamed up to take the two-man title with an aggregate of 747 birds. AIC Philip Ross and A2C Enos Hardy of the Air Force team from Lackland AFB, Tex., were in second place with 727.

The winning Army quartet, composed of Onka, Morris, Sp4 Hugh Brown and Sgt. Charles Fisher, had a 1,461 total, 28 targets higher than the runnerup team of Handy, Ross, A3C Ken Jones and SSgt Jackie Morris. The Marines were third with 1,374 birds.

The Army also took third place in the two-man team when Fisher and Brown collected 714 targets in the four-day affair.

Awards were presented to the winners Saturday by Col. Joseph Feot, commanding officer of the Marksmanship Training Unit.

Airman Handy took the lead opening day with a 95 with Onka trailing by three birds. But, the soldier blasted out a 95 Thursday to take a one-target lead. He raised this to three on Friday with a fine 94 effort and then slammed the door on his opponent with a spectacular 97 on Saturday, the last day of the shoot.

Lt. Morris had a bad round opening day but came back strong on the next three days to take the runnerup spot.

This week the MTU International Skeet squad has been participating in the Interservice Invitational Skeet shoot at the post with award ceremonies capping the program tomorrow.

This Afternoon

Battle-Weary Doughboys Meet Screaming Eagles

Battle-weary Fort Benning, wounded only twice in ten encounters, marches into enemy territory this afternoon for a 2 p.m. engagement with the Fort Campbell Screaming Eagles.

White and gold clad Fort Campbell, coached by Jim Dudding, has also been shackled twice this season while blasting five opponents. Defeats have come at the hands of Pensacola, Fla., 7-3, and Quantico, Va., 41-0.

Blanda's favorite target is end Frank Orgel, former University of Georgia standout. Orgel stands six-foot, two-inches, and weighs 218 pounds.

Fort Campbell, operating out of a tight-T formation, is basically a running team, reports Fort Benning Doughboy officials, with Wheelwright running often off the corners of the line.

Probable starters will be Dan House and John Trueman at the ends, Bill Rice and Joseph Pinkney at the tackles; Pat Dye and Joe Wendryhoski at the guards, and Elliott Moseley at center.

In the Doughboy backfield will be quarterback Marvin Tibbetts, halfbacks Bobby Towns and Billy Williamson and fullback Ron Quillen.

In the Kentuckians' backfield along with the six-foot, one-inch, 180-pound Blanda, will be halfbacks Jim Connors, a five-foot, 10-inch, 185-pounder from the U. S. Military Academy and Leonard Kelly, a six-foot, one-inch, 198-pounder, formerly of Michigan State.

At fullback for the Screaming Eagles will be rugged Ernie Wheelwright, a member of the San Diego Chargers professional league team before coming into the Army. Wheelwright, a pile-driving back, gave the Doughboys fits last year before he was injured and taken from the game.

YAC Activities

By John Cerar

The YAC football season is now in the final stretch with just one game remaining to be played by each club. The Blue Devils have cinched the Biddy League crown, and over in the Doughboy League, Sgt. Plowman's Packers are the trophy winners. Only in the Intermediate League is the winners circle still unclaimed.

Two feature games this week came from the Biddy League. The Tigers of Maj. Thomas vs. the Packers of Capt. McDevitt, and the first place Blue Devils, coached by Sgt. Gregory, pitted against Capt. McKittrick's Crusaders. This game was played before the start of the Fort Benning, Fort Dix contest Saturday night.

The Crusaders, with a chance to tie for first place honors, ran into an aroused Blue Devil eleven. At the final gun, the score read 39-7, and the Blue Devils made it known that they are tops in the Biddy League. Sparked by the spectacular running of Randy Jackson, Jim Gregory and Steve McCarren, the offensive team brought the spectators to their feet on many occasions. Halfback Jackson was "Mr. Everything" as he personally accounted for four touchdowns, all of which were on runs of over 60 yards.

The Crusaders fought gallantly but couldn't penetrate the defensive "stone wall" thrown up by the Devils. Special mention goes out to defensive ends Dave Price and Dick McClain who repeatedly boxed in the offensive efforts of the Crusaders. Judging from the enthusiasm generated throughout the crowd, this must rank as one of the best contests turned in this year.

Needing a win to tie for second place, the Tigers dominated play throughout the game and posted a 21-7 victory. Quarterback Chris Thomas called an excellent game and worked his two halfbacks, Rocky Burke and Gary Kondratek effectively. The strong ground attack struck three times with Burke scoring two touchdowns from five and eight yards out, while the third TD came on a 15 yard scamper by Kondratek. Defensive lineman Ballard led a stiff defensive unit that yielded but one TD late in the game.

In the Intermediate League the race for first place is between the Colts and the Redskins. The Colts, by virtue of their 19-0 win over the Bears, remained in first place by a half game margin. Quarterback Bill Roberts, halfbacks Butch Moore and Walt Donaldson all played excellent ball in racking up the 19 point total.

Between the Sidelines

By Ted Williamson

The 1963 football season is drawing to a close and the action seems to be getting more tenacious as the end nears. Most of the major conference title races are going down to the wire, with only the Southwest chase being considered decided at this point.

This week finds games in almost every loop that will have a great deal of bearing on championships, and, ever-cherished bowl bids. To add more excitement to the scene, traditional rivalries are consistent all over the country this week.

Michigan State and Illinois meet in the week's headliner at East Lansing, with the Big Ten title at stake and a bid to the big attraction at Pasadena on New Year's Day. The question here is can "Illini" All-America Dick Butkus stop Spartan All - America Sherman Lewis?

In the Atlantic Coast Conference, Duke and North Carolina battle for a possible tie with North Carolina St. The Wolfpack can cinch a tie by getting by Wake Forest. The Big Eight will also decide its champ tomorrow as Oklahoma meets Nebraska at Norman. The Cornhuskers are the most likely candidates to derail the Sooners' Orange Bowl train.

Few of the traditional games will have little effect on the outcome of conference battles. Some of the rivalries coming up this week are Pitt against Penn State; California and Stanford, Ohio State and Michigan, Purdue in the Old Oaken Bucket battle against Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee, and Southern Cal against U. C. L. A.

In the past weeks, my much "cussed" top ten has taken quite a beating. Not a week has passed that hasn't seen at least one of my selections being sent down to defeat. However, last Saturday, every one came through, some rather grandly, some in an unspectacular manner. I have made some changes from last week, namely Pittsburgh and Alabama after their impressive wins over Army and Georgia Tech respectively.

1. Texas (9-0)
2. Mississippi (7-0-1)
3. Michigan State (6-1-1)
4. Navy (8-1)
5. Pittsburgh (7-1)
6. Oklahoma (7-1)
7. Illinois (6-1-1)
8. Auburn (7-1)
9. Alabama (7-1)
10. Nebraska (7-1)

One of the most colorful players with Fort Benning's Doughboys is "Joltin" Joe Wendryhoski. Big Joe has been a standout for the Doughboys for the past two seasons, and last Saturday night he put the topper on the 1963 home season by adding the PAT to Vince McBride's 85 yard TD run. Joe came off the field like a frisky colt after his kick and the frozen few in the stands got a big bang out of his antics. Joe is colorful off the field as well, and he tells his teammates to pronounce his name Wend-rrra-hoo' ski (roll your r's). That's Irish, ain't it?

Cuartel Quarterback

Illinois Eleven Favored Over Spartans

ILLINOIS OVER MICHIGAN STATE. . . The Illini started with nothing and came to this big game on heart, determination, surprising talent and that nebulous "winning attitude" coaches pray for in their teams. Michigan State is plenty capable of winning, but I think it will be Illinois by two or three points.

MISSOURI OVER KANSAS—The Jayhawkers have another rugged team, but Dan Devine's crew is a little leaner and a little meaner. Mizzou will win by a touchdown.

S. M. U. OVER BAYLOR—The Bears might bounce back after last week's disappointment, but the Mustangs won't cooperate. S.M.U. is at least six points better.

NORTH CAROLINA OVER DUKE — If the Blue Devils can't tackle an All-America quarterback, they can't stop a potential All - America halfback. If Ken Willard doesn't run over Duke, Junior Edge will throw the ball over their heads. Carolina can stop Jay Wilkinson, Duke's only potent punch. Carolina will win in a 27-7 rout.

NEBRASKA OVER OKLAHOMA — This time my neck is way out. If the Sooners don't whack it off, they'll come up on the short end of a 13-7 score after one of the outstanding games of the season.

Auburn over Florida State
Clemson over South Carolina
Florida over Miami (Fla.)
Purdue over Indiana
Iowa over Notre Dame
L. S. U. over Tulane
Ohio State over Michigan
Wisconsin over Minnesota
Southern Cal over U.C.L.A.

Solar System Drawn Closer

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A giant telescope capable of probing billions of miles into the universe has been dedicated in the mountains of Puerto Rico.

The device is the world's largest known fixed-reflector radar and radio telescope. It is a gigantic steel dish nearly a quarter of a mile in diameter set in a bowl formed by mountain peaks.

More than three years in the making, the telescope is expected to provide:

1. A detailed map of the upper atmosphere and the inner Van Allen radiation belt.

2. A chart of the moon that will help astronauts find the best possible landing place.

3. A solar system yardstick of incredible accuracy.

4. Insights into the true nature of the planets Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

Regardless of what the giant telescope shows about creation and the universe, it is certain to revolutionize the astronomy of the solar system.

1st Moon Landing Will Be Televised

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Earth-bound followers of the Apollo lunar expedition may never see the cow jump over the moon via TV but they'll be able to watch the first U.S. astronaut step onto the moon.

There will be TV cameras in both the spaceship's three-man command module and the two-man landing craft.

WHAT'S THIS ONE? . . . A small student and his kindergarten teacher demonstrate lore of the Indians during a PTA Open House conducted in the Fort Benning Children's School as part of the observance of American Education Week Nov. 10-16. Five-year-old Albert Knight is the son of M-Sgt. and Mrs. Robert E. Knight. Miss Marilyn Elmore teaches in the Hospital Area School.

Air Assault Division Demonstrates Concept

Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Division supplied plenty of action in a spectacular demonstration this week for the Association of the United States Army's Mobility Symposium.

The air assault demonstration encompassed the organization's firepower, mobility and flexibility, and the shock - action effect of the air assault concept.

In addition to the novel techniques and tactics of the air assault division, the distinguished spectators saw the capabilities of the latest in military hardware.

Heavy artillery, consisting of 105-mm howitzers and the Little John rocket, were brought into the demonstration area, rapidly placed in position and fired on an attack objective.

As artillery fires were lifted, rocket - firing aircraft and racing assault helicopters moved into the zone of operations, firing rockets and machineguns, and dropping 500-pound bombs.

While the aerial artillery ships softened up the assault landing area, fast moving troop - carrying helicopters, flanked by armed escort ships firing final suppressive fires, sped into the area to discharge troops and equipment for the final attack.

After seizure of the objective area, a small supply base was established to meet immediate logistical needs, and to refuel helicopters.

A highlight of the supply operation was a parachute jump by the division's airborne pathfinders who marked a landing zone for helicopters and guided in aircraft.

He's a Future Instructor

The Infantry School's associate career course No. 1 received a promotion within its ranks recently from company grade officer to field grade, but it didn't come from the Pentagon — unless Iraq has one of those five-sided buildings.

Maj. I. H. Al Talib, who was serving as commander of the 3rd Company, 3rd Battalion of Iraq's 8th Division before being chosen for training at The Infantry School, was promoted to his present rank soon after he arrived here in July.

The major expects to be assigned as an instructor in his country's Infantry School upon his return to Iraq at the completion of the ACAR course in early December.

MAJ. AL TALIB

Maj. Al Talib started his military career after being graduated from Iraq's military academy in Baghdad in 1948. During his career, he has been assigned as platoon leader, company executive officer and company commander.

The major left the Army in 1959 and became a station superintendent with the Iraq Petroleum Company. He remained a civilian for four years and rejoined the Army in 1962.

He is the holder of four decorations from his country's medals list.

When asked about his hobbies, the major explained that he enjoys swimming, tennis and basketball.

Price of 'Fifth' In Outer Space Is Staggering

SAN DIEGO (AFPS) — The higher you go, the more you pay—for the price of a fifth in space will be about $400.

A fifth of water, that is. This estimate is based on a National Aeronautics and Space Administration study.

According to figures of the survey, each astronaut, on a long space flight, will need nearly a gallon of water a day.

The cost of getting that gallon of water into orbit is about $2,000.

Not only is this a prohibitive cost, but there's a limit to how much water can be loaded on a spacecraft.

Mild Winter Ahead

Unique 'Weatherman' Disagrees With More Scientific Oracles

NORTH WOODS (AFPS)—Thousands of dollars are spent daily on forecasting weather. Balloons, missiles and planes soar into the stratosphere and bring back myriads of figures to tell you which way and when winds will blow.

Military men and women also dust off their parkas, raincoats or "backdoor undies" to the tune of the weather-guesser.

All of the figure experts claim there is a cold, cold winter ahead for America. However, one source contradicts the experts.

A survey—in depth—of polar bears' fur, the autumnal activities of squirrels and the movement of hairy caterpillars point to a different prediction:

We Americans face a much milder winter than the one that nearly froze our marrow the last time around.

The polar bear this year is almost coatless. A keeper of polar bears said, "If the cold weather sets in tomorrow, he'd have to rent a wear-it-yourself coat."

In a park in the Washington area, another indication foretelling a mild winter was the total unconcern of the squirrel population to peanuts scattered about the park. In years when the winters were double-zero cold, these rodents carefully stored nuts in secret hideaways.

As for the hairy caterpillars, they have been strangely absent from the casualty lists on the local highways. In the years before bitter cold winters, these creatures committed mass suicide by crossing busy highways in direct opposition to all safety rules.

But the weather predictor, who watches the animals like all other weather men and all good military strategists, protects his retreat. He says, "Reindeer have developed real plus heavy coats which will make them the smartest animals in the woods, or the most overdressed this winter."

We'll soon see.

History of Communism

Czar Made Big Mistake When He Entered War

(Third of a series of 20 articles entitled The History of Communism, by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.)

Germany's declaration of war resulted from Russia's mobilizing against Germany, a measure that was equivalent to declaring war.

Germany's declaration of war on Russia in August 1914, although rumored quite freely, and indeed the result of Russian mobilization against Germany, still caught the Russians unprepared.

Russian artillery pieces were outmoded, ammunition of all kinds was in short supply and rifles were so scarce troops sometimes went into battle with only one rifle per 10 men.

Poor logistics, inadequate training and mismanagement which bordered on being criminally stupid, cost Mother Russia the greatest toll known in modern history and perhaps of all times.

Except for fragmentary successes by czarist forces, the real opponent on Germany's eastern front was the weather — the terrible winters which stopped Napoleon and later proved a downfall of Adolf Hitler.

After a year of war, Nicholas could be restrained (from the "game") no longer and took command in the field—another serious mistake since he was not a good tactician and lacked the strength of his ancestors such as Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great. Too, his absence from the capital (Petrograd) had the effect of turning the government over to the villainous Rasputin.

Rasputin, who claimed to be a holy man, was a filthy, drunken debaucher. The Czarina however, believed Rasputin to have divine powers and wisdom, and diligently sought to have carried out his every suggestion.

Consequently, as a result of her letters to Nicholas, Rasputin began naming and replacing ministers within the government — and his decisions were based largely on the beauty and availability of the candidate's wife. The management of fools and incompetents took their toll of the national stability.

The war became immensely unpopular. Soldiers deserted by the thousands and famine ruled the Steppes. In March, 1917, the people of Petrograd revolted.

On March 9, 300,000 demonstrators appeared in the streets of the capital city. Two days later, in another demonstration, shooting broke out. The telling blow of this uprising was the defection of the city's military forces. In three days some 170,000 men had mutinied.

Alan Moorhead's, The Russian Revolution, reports "... the crowd was running amok ... police stations were being attacked, looted and burned ... law courts were stormed and rioters ran through the building hurling documents out onto the frozen canal below... others attacked the jails and released the prisoners — murderers, thieves, political detainees ... When night fell many fires were burning throughout the city."

The Duma took over the government and sent a messenger to the Czar, demanding his abdication. Other messages were sent to the army commanders, advising them of the Duma's new status. Military commanders presuming the Czar already had abdicated, pledged allegiance to the Duma and the days of czarist reign were over.

Nicholas abdicated March 15, naming his brother, the Grand Duke Michael, his successor. It was an empty gesture. Upon being informed of his inheritance, Michael, too abdicated, for it was not a healthy time to be the czar.

Hearing Conservation Gets Army's Attention

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Exposure to noise has become one of the greatest health hazards in the Armed Forces as well as in industry. Early this year, one large Army training center reported that 53 per cent of all its personnel exposed to intense noise (gun - fire, tanks, aircraft, etc.) had hearing deficiencies.

The Army's Medical Service's Hearing Conservation Program is a preventive medicine plan aimed at protecting and conserving the hearing of both the soldier and civilian employes of the Army.

The program set up standards for the control of overexposure to the potentially hazardous noise caused by (a) small arms or artillery fire, (b) transportation, power and other mechanical sources, and (c) other industrial and military activities.

The two types of potentially hazardous noise are the steady-state, and the impulse. Steady-state noise is sustained sound, such as that given off by machine guns, generators in motor pools, machines in industrial plants, and jet and jet-prop engines on flight lines. The noise on flight lines is an increasing problem encountered in the expanding Army Aviation program.

Last Saturday night was the time for many-a-party at Fort Benning. The Spaghetti Dinner that the "Follow Me Club" had was a "fabulous success' in Cathy Jones' words. The spaghetti was cooked by Sue Ingle and Margaret Bowlen.

The entertainment consisted of games of various sorts. I understand that it got quite messy. Cathy Jones and Anita Braun, blind-folded, took turns stuffing each other's mouth with marshmallows. When they took off their blindfolds, they found out that the marshmallows had been covered with soot; so were Cathy and Anita.

Nonnie Walker, also, had a party that night. She invited the girls and left it up to them to choose their own dates. Among the guests were Betty Boisvert, Linn Coffin, Pam Brown, Bob Mays, Tom Scovill and Lindsey Koob.

Besides dancing, the group went on a "Scavenger Hunt." Some of the articles they were supposed to find were unbelievable: three fried marbles; a band-aid with cowboys and Indians on it; and last, but not least, a banana peel.

Meanwhile, Terry Stacey was having a slumber party at her home on Eames Street. Most of her guests had had dates before, and retired to Terry's house for what was to be a peaceful night's rest. But as you all know, at a slumber party, hardly anyone, sleeps. This was no exception; the girls went to sleep at 6 in the morning..

Recently, two 'Army Brats" had their pictures in the paper for being members of the group of girls that will be giving out "Thank You" bangles to those who have given to the Columbus Tuberculosis Association by buying Christmas seals and bond. These two girls, Sharon Kloeb and Kathy Knowles, will be wearing a "Miss Christmas Seal" banner.

Many girls from "Benning" have either brothers or boy friends at some near college that they can visit. I am speaking about Katty Tuck, JoAnn Morgan, Sheryl Riley and Sharon Silver. Just recently, Katty and JoAnn visited Athens for the Georgia Homecoming. Likewise, Sharon and Sheryl visited Auburn University for their Homecoming.

The emphasis now is on the Powder-Puff football game coming up. The senior girls from Columbus High divide into two teams: the Powders and the Puffs. Naturally, they play touch instead of tackle.

There is fun in this for everyone. The senior boys take over the part as cheerleaders and majorettes. For those under-classmen, there is the thought of "Twerp Week." That same weekend, the girls treat the boys. They ask them out and they pay the way.

As of yet, there is no set date for the "Powder-Puff" football game. As soon as I find out, you can be sure that I will let you know.

I can't say that there will be too much action to report next week. As of now, nothing is going on. That's a good sign — everyone is studying for their six-week tests.

STRICOM Chief Gets Added Responsibilities

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara recently announced that effective Dec. 1, 1963, Gen. Paul D. Adams will become responsible for all the U.S. defense activities in the Middle East, Southern Asia, including India and Pakistan, and Africa south of the Sahara (MEAFSA). Gen Adams will also have responsibility for the Military Assistance Advisory Groups and training missions in these areas. In his new capacity, Gen. Adams will be known as U.S. Commander in Chief, MEAFSA. These duties will be performed in addition to his present assignment as Commander in Chief, United States Strike Command (USSTRICOM).

Gen. Adams' staff, located at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., will be increased to discharge his new responsibilities. These changes in the present program were undertaken after several months of careful analysis by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. President Kennedy approved the change on the recommendation of Secretary McNamara. Jobs formerly fragmented among several commanders will now be consolidated under one commander.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

LYNDON B. JOHNSON

Johnson Is Commander-in-Chief

By Charles Black
Editor's note: Mr. Black is a staff writer for the Columbus Enquirer.

Lyndon Baines Johnson became President of the United States Friday afternoon in a moment of tragedy.

The oath of office was administered aboard an airplane as the world learned that President John F. Kennedy was dead of an assassin's bullet in Dallas, Texas.

Johnson, a tall man from the state where Kennedy died, enters office with three years of near-obscurity behind him, a transition from the time when he was a power in the United States Senate.

The youthful President Kennedy had been the focal point of his administration. The vice president had never entered the full spotlight.

President Johnson was born to a political prediction. His grandfather looked at him August 27, 1908, and according to a family legend made his prophecy:

"He'll be a United States Senator someday!"

It was a doting grandfather's remark, but 29 years after it was made, the grandson was elected to Congress and in 1948, at the age of 40, he won his first seat in the Senate by 87 votes.

Some of the mark of Johnson came through on the occasion of that slim margin for the start of a great Senatorial career.

President's Death Raises Question of Ascendency

By Maj. Paul A. Timm

There can be little doubt that everyone knows that in the case of death of the President, his office is taken by the elected Vice President of the United States . . .and that the office of the Vice President then remains vacant until the next scheduled presidential election.

But the legislative plan of who follows next in the ladder of ascendancy to the presidency is not well known.

The first five people in order to assume the office if the necessity arises are quite

"Well, here I am — Landslide Lyndon," he said when the results of the election were known.

As A Boy

As a boy Lyndon Johnson had a job at nine in the only barber shop in his hometown of Johnson City. He shined shoes.

He finished high school at 15. The old problem, an immediate need for money, confronted him. He went to work on a road-building gang for $1 a day. He worked out to California as an elevator operator, a car washer and a cafe handyman.

Coming back to Texas he went back to his road building job, then hitch-hiked to San Marcos and entered Southwest Teachers College. He got a job as a janitor, sold hosiery door-to-door, and worked in the office of the college president.

He had to drop out of school for a year and teach school in a small South Texas town to get money again, yet he spent his first pay check for athletic equipment for under-privileged Latin-American students at the school.

At the age of 22, he received his Bachelor of Science degree in 1930. The pace of Johnson's life was set in those days; hard work, long hours and determination to see a job through.

He taught in a Houston high school, then became a Congressman's secretary and while in Washington attended night classes at law school.

In 1935 he returned to Texas as Roosevelt's appointed state administrator of the National Youth Administration. He resigned that office to win in a field of nine candidates for his first trip to Congress.

During War

During World War II, he won the Silver Star and was the first member of Congress to enter active duty. He served as a Naval aviator in the Pacific.

After five successive terms in the House, he entered the Senate in 1948.

Johnson had 409 delegate votes to 806 for Kennedy in the convention that nominated the dead president. Johnson became Kennedy's choice for second place on the ticket when Kennedy said:

"Lyndon Johnson has demonstrated on many occasions his brilliant qualifications for the leadership we require today."

There is possibly only one other man who in recent history entered the presidency under such conditions of shock as does the 6 foot 3 inch, 200 pound man from Texas.

Harry S. Truman faced the same face presidential obscurity and the same numbed national reaction to the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt when he became president.

Perhaps Lyndon Johnson can best be summed up with words of his own, spoken in 1955 when a colleague disagreed with him. Johnson on that occasion said:

"I Am A Free Man"

"I am a free man, an American, a United States Senator and a Democrat, in that order. I am also a liberal, a conservative, a Texan, a taxpayer, a rancher, a businessman, a consumer, a parent, a voter and not as young as I used to be or as old as I expect to be — and I am all of things in no fixed order."

Questions

clear cut: the elected Vice President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, President Pro Tem of the Senate, Secretary of State and Secretary of the Treasury.

On July 18, 1947, the 80th Congress legislated that following the Secretary of the Treasury would come the Secretary of War, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Navy, in that order. Then on Sept. 18, 1949, the Secretaries of the Army, the Navy and the newly created Air Force were consolidated into the single cabinet position of Secretary of Defense. By interpretation, it is generally assumed that the Secretary of Defense would follow the Secretary of the Treasury in line of succession and that the Secretary of the Navy, no longer a cabinet postion, would not appear in the lineage of ascendancy to the nation's highest office.

By the 1947 law, the rest of the cabinet members were listed in order of their respective successions: Secretary of Interior, Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary of Commerce, and Secretary of Labor.

Although the legislation of 1947 does not indicate the position of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, it is assumed that, following precedent, this last cabinet post to be created, would follow that of the Secretary of Labor.

Therefore, by legislation, interpretation, and appointment the following men are now next in line for the presidency should anything happen to Lyndon B. Johnson:

John W. McCormack, Speaker of the House
Carl Hayden, President Pro Tem of the Senate
Dean Rusk, Secretary of State
Douglas Dillon, Secretary of the Treasury
Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of Defense
Robert F. Kennedy, Attorney General
John A. Gronouski, Postmaster General
Stewart L. Udall, Secretary of Interior
Orville L. Freeman, Secretary of Agriculture
Luther H. Hodges, Secretary of Commerce
Willard W. Wirtz, Secretary of Labor

The current Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Anthony J. Celebrezze, is not in line for the presidency since as a native born Italian he does not qualify for the position. That is one of the two qualifying factors required of any cabinet member designated to that position. The other qualifying factor is that the appointees to any of the cabinet posts, before he can qualify to ascend to the office of the President, must have been approved and confirmed for the cabinet post by the Senate.

In these days of possible nuclear warfare and mass casualty results of war, it is almost as if the authors of the Constitution could foresee the present: for it is written in that original document, a phrase that has never been changed, that if the persons indicated to accede to the office of presidency are not available or qualified, that the Congress shall determine who shall serve until the next regularly scheduled presidential election.

In the initial wording of the Constitution of the United States as finally ratified by the several states in 1790, Article II, Section 1, Clause 6 stated that the vice president of the United States will assume the Office of the Presidency in the case of "death, resignation or inabilities" of the elected head of the United States. (It may be recalled that neither the constitution nor any subsequent legislation indicates how these "inabilities" would be determined or by whom. This was a cause of major discussion at the time of ex-President Eisenhower's heart attack.)

It should also be noted that at the time of the writing of the Constitution, there was no such thing as a nominee for Vice President since the top man on the vote list was named President and the second place campaigner was named the Vice President.)

The writers of the Constitution did consider the fact that both the President and the Vice President might die in office. Although the Constitution made no provisions for successors to the vice president by title, it did state that "in case of the death, resignation or inability of the vice president, Congress will determine by law the next President."

The United States continued with only this guidance to line of succession until Jan. 19, 1886 when the 49th Congress legislated a more explicit line of succession: President, Vice President, Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, the Attorney General, the Post Master General, Secretary of the Navy, and Secretary of the Interior.

The second and last change to the legislated provisions for the line of succession was passed by the 80th Congress and approved by the President on July 18, 1947. It was at that time that our present line of succession was formed.

With the exception of the Secretary of the Navy (now not in line of succession) the determination of which cabinet member ranks was determined by the order in which the particular department was established. The departments of State, Treasury, War and Justice (now the Attorney General) were the four original posts in the cabinet of George Washington. The other posts were established as follows: Postmaster (1829); Interior (1849); Agriculture (1889); Commerce (1903); Labor (1913); and Health, Education, and Welfare (1953).

Age has always been a factor in the election of a president. At the time of his death, John F. Kennedy was 46 years old; Lyndon Johnson is now 55; John McCormack, next in line is 72; and Carl Hayden, Senator from Arizona and president pro tem of the Senate, is 86 years old.

Such is the system of American government — a government that has stood the test of time. In all of the eight instances where a vice president has succeeded to the highest office on the death of a president, not more than 24 hours has elapsed without a legal head of government.

Post in Somber Mood for Thanksgiving of 1963

Home Cooked Thanksgiving Dinner Came to Some Who Were Miles From Home

Ann Roney, a clerk typist for the Platoon Tactics Committee of The Infantry School's Company Tactics Department, serves PFC Tom Luce part of the Thanksgiving meal she prepared for him and Pvt. Dennis Davidson. It has become traditional for many citizens of the community to invite post personnel to their homes for Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner. While many are within traveling distance from their homes, thousands, like Tom and Dennis, cannot be with their families. Tom is from Maine, N.Y., and Dennis is from Memphis, Mich.

Shopping Differs But Effect Is Usually Satisfaction

Special To The Bayonet

While you're piling cans into a supermarket cart. . . or buying exotic products from far corners of the world on a direct mail charge account. . .or selecting a brand new refrigerator at your appliance dealer's, a French housewife is toting home her octopus in heavy brown paper. . .a Dublin mother shops among wheel-barrows in the street, for her "cockles and mussels, alive, alive-o". . . And a young man in the Brazilian jungles may buy his bride "on time" by working one year for his in-laws!

The ways of the shopping world are a fascinating study in persistence, cunning — and contrast. While the whole world seeks a bargain, where and how the bargain is finally found, priced and paid for, depends on where you live.

Snake-Charming Act

Everywhere, advertising brings merchant and customer together. 'Mas tiempo por amor' (more time for love) began an ad for a dish-washer in a Spanish newspaper a few years back. One Buenos Aires street vendor lures prospective buyers with a snake-charming act, gradually switching to a pitch for neckties.

What kinds of stores do the world's shoppers patronize? In many jungle areas and remote Pacific islands, none at all; the customer simply goes to the hut of the man who makes the particular item he wants. The "shopping center" of a Peruvian mountain village is apt to be a public square where farmers and craftsmen spread their wares on blankets.

No Money Involved

Shopping without the exchange of cash or words on either side, has been practiced since ancient times by primitive or nomad peoples in Africa, India, northern Russia and Finland.

It works like this: representatives of one tribe go to the trading spot, plunk down baskets, cloth or whatever, signal to the second tribe with a yell or the stroke of a gong and go off somewhere to hide. After looking over the pile, the second group lays down what it considers goods of equal value and it too, goes away.

If the returning first group is satisfied, it gathers up the offered swap and leaves. Otherwise, the "delegates" wait around till a suitable addition is made to the pile. The silent shopping spree concludes only when members of the second tribe have taken away the original wares. All sales final, no returns or exchanges permitted.

'Mop Fair'

At the annual "Mop Fair" in Stratford-on-Avon, England; farm laborers and household workers display themselves to farmers who come to hire help for the year. Each person holds the emblem of his trade — wool for a shepherd, a mop for a maid — hence the name of the fair.

How does the customer pay for his purchases? Most of the world's merchandise is sold without a price-tag. Haggling is a lively art (and a livelihood) to a good two-thirds of the earth's population.

Don't Pay Price

Pay an Iranian merchant the first price he asks and he'll hate you; for the rest of the day he'll gnash his teeth in rage at not having quoted you a higher price! Some South Sea Island tribes shop cashlessly by the exchanging of gifts! A farmer for example, brings a bushel or two of coconuts to the potter, who is honorbound to reciprocate with an equally tempting dish. "Cashless" buying in the U.S. in the form of credit cards and charge accounts has blossomed to the point where it now includes auto service dealers, lawyers, drug stores and specialty shops (including an Alaska taxidermist!).

Courage as Defined By John F. Kennedy

One week ago today the 35th President of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, met his death in the streets of Dallas, Texas, when he was framed in the cross-hairs of a scope-sight.

The whining bullet snuffed out the life of a great president and gallant American and plunged the nation and the world into mourning.

The high esteem in which the president was held was evident at the funeral procession when 26 heads of state joined Mrs. Kennedy and President Lyndon B. Johnson in the march from Saint Matthews Cahedral in Washington, D.C., to Arlington National Cemetery.

Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, a man who disagreed with the late President on many points of political policy, found this to say when he heard of the assassination: "We may disagree with people in public office because of philosophy and attitudes but this attack upon the chief executive is an attack upon the American system and I'm sure that whoever did it has the universal malice of all people of this country."

John Kennedy, who was not only a great statesman but a great author. His "Profiles in Courage" earned a Pulitzer prize. The book ended with a fitting paragraph for the President's epitaph: "To be courageous, requires no exceptional qualifications, no magic formula, no special combination of time, place and circumstance. It is an opportunity that sooner or later is presented to us all. Politics merely furnishes one arena of life one may meet the challenge of courage, whatever may be the sacrifices he faces if he follows his conscience — of his friends, his fortune, his contentment, even the esteem of his fellow men — each man must decide for himself the course he will follow. The stories of past courage can define that ingredient — they can teach, they can offer hope, they can provide inspiration. But they cannot supply courage itself for this each man must look into his own soul."

A Farewell Tribute To John F. Kennedy

The 35th President of the United States of America, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, was born 29 May 1917 in Brookline, Mass. He was shot and killed by an assassin at 12:31 p.m. Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas, Tex.

During World War II he served his country as a commissioned officer in the U. S. Navy. He distinguished himself in operations against the enemy in the Pacific. At the age of 29 years he began his service in the House of Representatives of the United States Congress.

At the end of six years in the House, he was elected a senator and served a period of eight years. He was elected President of the United States and took the oath of office Jan. 20, 1961.

Though born to great wealth he was sincerely devoted to the service of our country, believing that he had a worthwhile contribution to make to his nation and mankind.

In the United States Army we mourn the loss of a Commander-in-Chief while the nation mourns the loss of a Chief Executive.

Due to the democratic nature of our government, America has weathered many storms of national crises. We will sail safely through this one, for our country has always produced an abundance of able leaders and a courageous citizenry.

Third U.S. Army Thanksgiving Day Message

As we paused on Thanksgiving Day, 28 November, to express our gratitude for the countless blessings we enjoy as Americans, we needed only to look around us to realize how fortunate we are.

Ours is a good life — good not only because we enjoy the blessings of prosperity but good also because we are privileged to share and defend the principles of fundamental decency and right which we have inherited. We do not covet the wealth or lands of other peoples. Instead, we offer a helping hand to those in want, asking nothing in return. This we do out of the bounty which is ours by Divine Providence.

In a world ridden by tensions, we are a ray of hope to those who live in fear and confusion. We can be truly thankful for the part we play in the defense of freedom and our American principles.

Education Vital Rung On Ladder to the Top

National Education Week is now behind us for another year. But to a military man moving up the promotion ladder, every week of the 52 should be "Education Week."

When military men become eligible for promotion, particularly in the higher grades, they find that recorded educational qualifications and achievements are more important than ever before as selection factors. This is apparent in a number of ways.

In the first place, general information and education are heavily weighed. In order for a candidate to answer questions involving the chain of command, military mission, map reading, current events, and so on, he must not only have his own military specialty well in hand, but also have a background of general knowledge.

Secondly, achieving a certain recorded level of formal education is significant. Promotion chances, when everything else is equal, could swing on the highest level of educational accomplishment.

The Judge Says . . .

"Twisting" is a colloquial name given to the practice by insurance agents of persuading policy holders in another company to give up insurance in that company and to substitute insurance sold by the agent. The following resolution by Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center, advises against taking such action without worthy consideration.

Be It Resolved that it is rarely to the best interest of a policyholder to surrender or lapse an existing policy of permanent life insurance and replace it with new life insurance. Among the reasons why such action may be detrimental to the policyholder are the following:

1. Since the heavier initial costs of writing the insurance are charged against the premiums paid in the earlier policy years, the replacement of an old policy by a new one means that the policyholder must pay these costs twice.

2. The attractiveness of a life insurance policy as an investment increases as the policy grows older.

3. In many existing policies, disability benefits and provisions for installment payments and annuity incomes are more attractive both to the beneficiary and to the policyowner than those available in new policies.

4. The new policy may have the effect of reinstating the period during which the policy may be contested by the company.

5. Life insurance policies provide a unique medium for a safe and systematic method of saving. Replacement may involve the sacrifice of these advantages. In view of these potential disadvantages, if replacement is suggested, the policyholder should insist upon a written and signed proposal setting forth all the facts and comparing the relative benefits under the two policies. He should then submit this written statement to both the company whose policy is proposed to be issued and the company whose policy is to be replaced, with a request for their comments and analysis."

Chaplain's Corner

Love of Our God

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Laurence J. Silberstein

The story is told of two ancient sages who were discussing the problem of which was the greatest statement in the Torah, the Five Books of Moses. One sage claimed that the greatest verse was undoubtedly, "Thou Shall Love Thy Neighbor As Thyself". The other sage replied that the greatest message in the Torah was contained in the verse, "These are the generations of man, when God created man he made him in the likeness of God."

At first glance it appears certain that the first Sage was correct, for what greater rule is there than the commandment to love our neighbor. Upon closer examination however, it is the second verse which contains the profounder teaching and which is the foundation, without which, the first verse loses its meaning. While the first verse commands us to love our neighbor, it is only in the second verse that man's essential nature is linked to God. The second statement is teaching us that each man, every human being contains within him a spark of the Divine. Therefore the love and respect which we owe to our fellow man is not simply an ethical principle, it is a profound religious duty based on the fact that each man is in the likeness of God.

Leader's Reaction Course Provides Infantry with Practical Experience

No amount of knowledge about leadership will make a man a leader. He must practice being one.

The new Leader's Reaction Course of The Infantry School provides young Infantrymen with concentrated practice in active leadership. Nearly two decades of planning and development are represented by this series of team-tasks which furnish the student a physical understading of what he must do to lead men in the accomplishment of a given mission.

Similar courses were used by the German Army of World War II and the British currently employ a related series of leadership problems to evaluate candidates for Sandhurst and the Royal Air Force Academy.

In 1954, the U. S. Army established the Infantry Leader's Reaction Course to reflect Infantry situations and emphasize traits of greatest importance to Infantry leaders. Those traits most vividly illustrated by the configuration of the new course are decisiveness, judgement, enthusiasm, initiative, unselfishness, and endurance.

The purpose of the Leader's Reaction Course is to improve leadership by measuring the degree to which a student possesses these traits of effective leadership. The Infantry School constantly re-evaluates the methods of determining the presence or absence of leadership traits because an accurate measure of a prospective combat leader's present development provides basis for an individual program of self-improvement. The new Leader's Reaction Course features the incorporation of new tasks and a more efficient overall layout.

Under the supervision of Lt. Col. Floyd Gibson, chief of the Leadership Committee of The Infantry School's Company Tactics Department, the new course was built in three months by the 577th Engineer Battalion. The course was first run Nov. 5, 1963 and will be officially opened Dec. 4.

Capt. E. W. Hollenbeck, principal instructor for the Leader's Reaction Course, supervises administration of the course to all students of the Infantry Officer Basic Course, the Infantry Officer Candidate Course, and to visiting cadets of the United States Military Academy. Each year, the Leadership Committee provides this valuable training to over 5,000 Infantry leaders.

The cornerstone of the Leader's Reaction Course is the role of the rater. Selected from the Company Tactics Committee, the Platoon Tactics Committee, and the Map Reading Committee, the rater guides and counsels students to reinforce the individual learning experience. The rater also makes a problem more meaningful by relating the lessons learned to his own experience and to those which the student is likely to encounter as a leader of troops.

Each leader is assigned a group of approximately ten men which he immediately divides into two teams — a task team and a critique team. These teams alternate throughout the course. They not only establish unity and cooperation by working together, but also develop a spirit of healthy competition which enhances the performance of each man involved.

Infantry School Report

There are sixteen tasks to be negotiated, all constructed in one complex, yet completely isolated from one another. Ten of the problems involve water obstacles — a thorough dunking is the planned result of the failure to exercise good judgment.

Basically, each task is a small engineering problem-solving exercise. Each is designed to be solved simply and efficiently. But none can be successfully solved without the teamwork of individuals working in a group to accomplish a mission. Therefore, the skill of the leader determines the success or failure of the group.

The situation is outlined for the leader clearly, but only once. The leader also is alerted to task limitations and penalties. Simulated dangers, such as minefields and electric wires, are indicated in red and a foul results from hasty or careless action during the run of the problem. And, the liberal use of water on the course is not only a soggy reminder of unwise action, but also an additional safety feature of this well - designed course.

Following each problem, the observations and information gained by the rater are put to most beneficial use during the counselling period. An abundance of general leadership experience is acquired by leading a task-team, participating in the group effort, and by being part of the observer-critique team. Then the rater can counsel the student about specific strengths and weaknesses.

By the conclusion of the Leader's Reaction Course, the student has examined his leadership ability in scope and depth. He then stands ready to evaluate himself and initiate a continuing program of self-improvement. An Infantryman is a lifetime leader.

Women's Club Schedules 'The Song of Christmas'

By Marge Lennon

The Women's Club of Fort Benning will present its annual Christmas luncheon Wednesday afternoon at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Under the direction of Mrs. Robert M. Williams, the Women's Club Chorus will sing "The Song of Christmas," a cantata which tells the story of the Nativity in beloved Christmas songs, carols, scriptural verses and tableaux.

Composed by Ringwald, "The Song of Christmas" was first performed by Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians on NBC on December 25, 1945. It is designed to evoke in the hearts of its listeners the true meaning of Christmas.

The program will be narrated by Mrs. Richard H. Barratt. Pianist will be Mrs. George F. Marko and the organist will be Mrs. John S. Stannard. Decorations will be provided by the ladies of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department, headed by Mrs. Howard B. St. Clair.

Stage decorations have been arranged by Mrs. Louis C. Menefrey, and Mrs. James D. Clark is program chairman for the event. Costumes for members of the cast have been loaned by the Central Christian Church.

Members of the Women's Club Chorus are Mesdames Joseph F. Alutius, Richard H. Barratt, John M. Barnes, Word Bizzell, Paul E. Carpenter, Oren DeHaven, James Douglas, Arthur Dudley, Lawrence Franks, Ralph E. Hall, Dennis J. Harron, James L. Hudson and Lillian Kennedy.

Other chorus members are Mesdames George G. King, Albert H. Krapf, Herbert E. Knight, Hollis C. Lewis, Floyd B. Lyerla, James E. McKenzie, George L. Matthews, Wilbur R. Pierce Jr., Lewington S. Ponder, Merle G. Sheffield and Harriet Stockdale.

Miss Carol Nichols and Mrs. Ronald F. Treichel also are part of the chorus. Soloists who will sing for the luncheon are Mesdames Donald E. Gelke, Warren D. Hodges, Giuseppe C. Natale, John C. Snodgrass and Stanley S. Traymore.

Reservations for the luncheon will be accepted until noon Monday. Call Mrs. Clinton E. Male at 545-3508, Mrs. E. W. Buchanon at 545-3617 or Mrs. E. T. Westcott at 323-1678. Cancellations should be placed before noon Tuesday.

Mrs. Williams reports that the chorus members were so faithful in their attendance to rehearsals that one lady, Mrs. Thomas H. Griffin, missed only one rehearsal and that was to have her first child. The next week she returned to chorus practice — with baby in arms.

187th Infantry Ladies Hold Monthly Gathering

Mrs. J. B. Cummings was hostess recently at a coffee for the ladies of the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division. The morning event, held in the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess, served as the monthly gathering of the battalion officers' wives.

Welcomed to the group by Mrs. John J. Hennessey, were Mrs. Jack L. Bennett, Mrs. David Lamb, Mrs. William C. Roll, Mrs. Danny R. Byard and Mrs. John G. Gergulis.

The buffet coffee table was overlaid with a white cloth with stripes of red, white, and blue, the colors of the 187th Infantry, across the center. The centerpiece was an arrangement of red, white, and blue carnations. Mrs. Rutland D. Beard Jr., poured.

Tickets for the door prize, which was won by Mrs. E. M. Yon, were shaped as paratroopers' boots, pointing up the fact that the 3rd Bn., 187th Infantry, is now an airborne unit.

Farewells were said to Mrs. A. N. Sternfeld, Mrs. J. C. Mitchell, Mrs. D. A. Lewis, Mrs. C. F. Muchenhirn, Mrs. E. N. Kelley, Mrs. K. C. Whaley, Mrs. B. L. Dove, Mrs. J. C. Gross, Mrs. R. F. Ussery and Mrs. M. G. Ulveling.

Career Officers Told

New Nations Need More Unity of National Purpose

One of the greatest problems facing the governments of newly emerging African nations is finding a way to develop a sense of unity of purpose and national consciousness in their people, a State Department official told combined officer career classes at Fort Benning's Theater No. 1 last week.

The speaker was Clare H. Timberlake, chairman of the Disarmament Advisory Staff, U. S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Timberlake said this problem is a great one because "the guy in the street" and "the fellow in the village" are, primarily, tribally based and are only concerned with what goes on in their immediate surroundings.

Many of the countries, some of which are poor and others rich, are still in the infancy of economic development and will need aid and assistance before they can be exploited commercially, he added.

He said it was "manifestly necessary" that these countries become economically sound so these governments may have the revenue for the construction of such things as schools and roads.

"There are five things that the Africans want," Timberlake said. "1. Freedom; 2. Dignity; 3. More abundant life; 4. Unity (African unity), and 5. Stay out of the 'cold war.' "

Freedom they have, for the most part, Timberlake commented. Everybody wants dignity and they (Africans) are entitled to it, he added. Africans agree that the more abundant life calls for more for the common man, he said, "but they are not yet quite certain how it can be obtained."

Timberlake, a public servant for 33 years, said he thinks the Africans will get unity, but it will be a unity towards problems only in Africa and not world-wide problems.

These nations, he added, will align themselves with others in Africa in areas which are either technologically or emotionally based and will last as long as they are beneficial to the parties concerned.

As for the cold war, Timberlake remarked that he does not think the African nations are concerned with the Berlin situation, the space race or the atom bomb, but are more interested in Africa and its own problems.

He said he believes the new governments will maintain, as well as they can manage it, a neutralist posture for many years to come and does not believe they want to be pushed into a position of "having to choose up sides" in the East-West cold war struggle.

Timberlake was introduced by Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

New Technique Is Developed By Air Assault

An idea paid off for the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group recently when Sp5 Lawrence D. Salmon of Company A, developed a method for boresighting the XM-3 Rocket Launcher systems.

Sp5 Salmon has a technique that does away with the telescopic sight formerly used. Over three hours of time that was used positioning the aircraft can be saved

Tanker Cleaning Service Trims Military Budget

The gasoline tanker cleaning service at Fort Benning, a part of the Operations Division, Maintenance Section, under the direction of Thomas A. Bass, saved the government approximately $2,200 during its first three months of operation.

As a result of the increased emphasis that is being placed on the Army Cost Reduction Program, the Maintenance Section established the gasoline tanker cleaning service as both an economy measure and as a means of providing faster and more efficient service.

Before the inauguration of the service, the cleaning of these vehicles was contracted to commercial firms at an approximate cost of $50 per vehicle. Thirty days normally elapsed between the initiation of the call for bids and the completion of the cleaning process. Under the new procedure the job can be completed within 48 hours from the time of the request.

The $2,500 saved was the result of cleaning 52 tank trucks and semi-trailers.

Army Gets Flap for TW Uniform

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Marine Corps and the Army have settled a flap about a flap at an annual savings of $68,000.

The General Accounting Office reported that money could be saved if the Army would agree to have a 15-cent flap sewn onto the hip pockets of tropical wool (TWs) trousers.

The marines already wear flaps on their tropical wool trousers. The only difference in Marine Corps TW trousers and ones worn by the Army is the flap.

The GAO discovered that purchase of one style and not of both would save $68,000.

SEVEN-UP

Actor John Ashley, who is set for a key role in American International Pictures new musical comedy, "Muscle Beach Party," says that the reason he has given up going to the race tracks is that he has the same kind of luck as the guy who invented 4-Up, 5-Up and 6-Up and then quit the soft drink business.

So which style to choose? The Marine Corps will keep its traditional flap.

Since the Army enlisted men wear TWs as an optional summer uniform, and TWs for marines are "musts," the decision was to stick with the Marine Corps tradition.

Loss of President; a Terrible Blow

Col. Crosby Named Division G-1 Officer

COL. CROSBY

A recipient of the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Army Commendation Medal and the Combat Infantryman's Badge has assumed the duties of assistant chief of staff, G-1, for the 2nd Infantry Division.

Lt. Col. George D. Crosby, a native of Staunton, Va., began his military career in June of 1942 as an enlisted man in the Army Reserve.

Two years later he was commissioned a lieutenant in the infantry following his graduation from Officer Candidate School here at Fort Benning. In the latter part of 1944 he was assigned to the European Theater of Operations and remained there un-

Second Division Mourns Death of the President

BY BOB de CAMARA

With heads bowed in sorrow, soldiers paid last respects to their slain Commander in Chief last Saturday. Simple, military services were held around the world, and the United States Army went into mourning with all flags at half mast for 30 days.

At Fort Benning, the 2nd Infantry Division was in a solemn mood. In their garrison areas, division soldiers stood, rain dripping off their uniforms, as they listened to their commanders read the sad proclamation.

Nearby 2nd Division Headquarters on Marne Field, a field which has seen the bustle of many Army divisions in the past, there was no bustle, no movement. On the field an honor guard lowered its rifles to the national flag, and the band played mournful airs.

Officers and enlisted men quietly waited for the division commanding general to read the message from the Secretary of Defense, the message that no one the day before would have guessed they'd be hearing, or wanted to hear. Then, the trumpet sounded taps. The rain came down harder on the saluting men, and a simple prayer was read.

Many of the soldiers in the stands and on the field must have been thinking, as they heard the message from the Secretary of Defense refer to their Commander in Chief as a "gallant spirit," many of these men must have been thinking that the message was not to one man alone, but to all gallant men, everywhere, of every age, who believe in a better world — and are willing to give their lives to see it that way.

Third Army Commander Visits 2nd's PMI Course

By Bob de Camara

The commanding general of the Third U. S. Army, an area of command which includes Fort Benning and most of the South, motored to Sand Hill last week for a look at the 2nd Infantry Division's Preventive Maintenance Indicators (PMI) course.

For Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, this was his second viewing of PMI classes in a little more than one month.

Concern over the state of equipment readiness was pressed by Gen. Watson's repeated visits. As a member of the Strategic Army Corps, the 2nd Division is on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week for contingencies.

The three-star general arrived on Sand Hill by sedan from Main Post and went directly to the PMI course where he sat through two of the 16 classes.

Basically, the course suggests that certain common indicators can be used to judge equipment condition, indicators such as cleanliness, lubrication, the presence of leaks or noises.

In charge of the PMI setup is Maj. Herbert L. Berten, division ammunition officer, who calls the main classroom building the "big top" and says that "a carnival atmosphere" is maintained to keep up student interest.

Col. John W. Armstrong, is head of the Division Support Command, is responsible for the PMI school at the unit level.

Leaving the course accompanied by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the Indianhead Division, Gen. Watson next stopped over at Division Headquarters for a one-hour briefing by members of the general staff.

Heaven Is the Home of Great Men

Death is not really anything unusual to a soldier. Many have seen it in abundance and have felt the shock and pain of loss. To the military, violent death is expected at certain times. It is understood, accepted, and duties go on, even in mourning. Very seldom is the loss of a life so monumental that an entire Army feels the blow as one. But, last week, on November 22, such a blow was felt.

On the day following this tragedy, an appropriately dismal day, a formation was held outside 2nd Infantry Division Headquarters to pay respects to a fallen commander. There was none of the usual grumbling and discomfort that often is found when soldiers have to stand in the rain. It is doubtful that the wetness and cold was felt by a single man.

A eulogy was read and the band played a sad tune. Heads bowed in silent prayer as a Chaplain spoke the words of God. Then, almost as the first note of "Taps" from a bugle sounded, the soft falling rain changed, and the sky opened its heart and poured down its tears.

Death seems to be such a permanent thing. The absent one is grieved and missed. Only memories are left behind.

But, what of the one who has departed? Is everything void? Is there nothing but an empty infinity? Or is there truly another life—a much greater one?

Many times man has wondered what it would be like after death. Such thoughts have come to most people at one time or another. Perhaps, only a fleeting wonder; but thought of just the same.

When death comes will we get to see all the great men of history; Washington, Roosevelt, Jefferson, Lee, Grant, and all the rest? Will our relatives and departed loved ones be there to greet us? Shall all the pages of history unfold before our very eyes and allow us to feast upon them?

When the towering gate opens will we stroll down golden streets and see angels with their harps? Will we be dazzled by the brilliance and love of the place? Will children play in the streets; will we listen to Glen Miller again; see Babe Ruth swing a bat; or hear the soft "Howdy" of Gary Cooper?

Will we be able to sit and talk with Lincoln; watch Samson perform feats of strength; or be thrilled again by the beauty of Marilyn Monroe: shall we be able to gaze through the fleecy - white clouds below us and watch our loved ones, those left behind, live their lives?

And will all the great heroes of time pass before us, so close we could touch them? Will the soldiers of many wars gather and talk of times gone by; and, will the Master, Himself, call us by name?

All this must be true. Because Americans everywhere know that on Friday, November 22nd, 1963, the Lord spoke. And he said—"Welcome John."

Guerrillas Defeated By Victorious 38th

By 2nd Bn. 38th Infantry PIO

Since the end of World War II, the eyes of the world have been focused on the small conflicts that have broken out in obscure countries. Guerrilla warfare has become a major facet in modern tactics and the necessity for training in this "unconventional warfare" has become apparent to the Army.

The 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry moved to Fort Stewart, Ga., on November 4 for "Operation Swampfox," a ten-day field problem designed to teach the combat soldier the technicalities involved in fighting a war against the guerrilla. The boundaries of a theoretical country called Liberti were determined and the battalion was to drive a band of guerrillas from the small country.

The battalion set up camp and proceeded on their mission. They were constantly harassed by small guerrilla units attacking guard outposts and patrols. Each day patrols brought in guerrilla prisoners for interrogation as the 2nd of the 38th strived to push the guerrillas into one central location so that they might squash them.

In seven days 43 prisoners had been taken for questioning. Capt. Charles E. Bleisel, S-2 officer in charge of interrogation of POWs had much success in the interviews and soon the locations of guerrilla food caches, storage areas, and encampments were learned. Capt. Bleisel also learned techniques used by the guerrillas in their operations.

Daily patrols were sent out by Companies A, B, and C to scour the swamps and forests for the enemy. The patrols pushed the guerrillas back and on November 11 they were localized and beaten.

At the finish of "Operation Swampfox," Lt. Col. Donald H. Lanier, battalion commander, said, "As a result of this operation, we have identified our own mistakes and areas where improvement is necessary."

1st Brigade Discovers Chippewa Brave to Match Division Indian

By Jay R. Sharbutt

The 1st Brigade, after a long and arduous search, has recently discovered within its ranks a bona fide Indian soldier to match the 2nd Infantry Division's noted Sp4 Marland Tahbonemah. The local chieftan is Sp4 Louis Monchamp Jr., formerly of Michigan City, Indiana and the Chippewa tribe.

Monchamp drives a jeep for the 1st Brigade.

He was born twenty-three years ago in Red Lake, Minnesota and worked as a cabinet maker after high school. He joined the Army in May 1961. An expert woodsman and trapper, he credits his knowledge of hunting and fishing to a youthful stint in the Cub Scouts.

"They also taught me beadwork," he said. "In return, I taught them the famous dry dance, which is performed only when too much rain has fallen."

til the termination of hostilities in March of 1945.

At this time he returned home to resume his studies at Virginia Polytechnic Institute where he was graduated in 1947 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology.

Since that time, Col. Crosby has served three overseas assignments, two of which were in the Far East. Between 1948 and 1950 he was stationed with General Headquarters Far East Command and with the Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG), Korea between 1953 and 1955.

His only European assignment since the end of World War II was in Copenhagen, Denmark from 1959 until 1962 as the MAAG training programming officer.

Schools attended by him are the Officers Infantry Advanced Course, Fort Benning, in 1950 and the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., between 1958-1959.

After arriving at Fort Benning from Denmark in September of last year he was named executive officer of the 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry and later became commander of the same unit following its redesignation as the 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry under the ROAD concept. In September of this year the 1st of the 87th was again redesignated as the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Col. Crosby lives with his wife, Cornelia, and their three children at 115 Baltzell Ave., Fort Benning.

World War II

In World War II, the 2nd Division landed on Normandy Beach on June 7, 1944. It captured Tincherbray and liberated Brest in bitter house-to-house street fighting. The division manned a defensive sector along the Siegfried Line in Belgium and later captured the key German towns of Helenthal and Gemund. It had reached Pilsen, Czechoslovakia when the war in Europe ended.

Birth of the 9th

The 9th Infantry was organized at Fort Monroe, Va. on March 26, 1885 as a result of America's westward movement and since that time it has been in continuous service.

It Takes 'Real Man' to be a Ranger

Rangers Are More Than Men They Are Tough, Skilled Fighters

BY HENRY B. THORPE JR.

The olive-drab Army trucks bumped along the dusty mountain road, winding their way toward the base camp nestled in a valley near the Northern Front. On board were 160 alert, solemn faced young American fighting men. They peered intensely over the sides of the trucks searching the steep terrain rising above them.

The two-and-a-half ton trucks, with tops removed, bristled with the protruding weapons of the men, as the convoy weaved like a giant mechanical serpent toward the front.

Intelligence reports indicated active guerilla activity along the route, and the convoy commander was warned to be ready for anything. Natives in the area could not be trusted, and many openly sided with the enemy, according to G-2.

Suddenly, the quiet hillside to the left front of the convoy erupted with the sound of gunfire. From the trucks the men could see the deadly spitting fire from machine - guns and automatic weapons as they raked the column. The site was perfect for an ambush; the enemy selected well. To the right flank of the convoy was a thinly forrested, steep, almost sheer hill mass; and on the left flank stretched an open field leading over a killing zone of more than 200 meters into the flaming barrels of the enemy guns. To assault through this would be suicide.

Within seconds from the initial bursts of fire, the trucks brak : to a halt. Seemingly without a signal, the men on board sprang into action. Even before the wheels stopped turning, those along the left sides of the trucks were laying down a base of fire. The hammering sound of their eighty weapons rose instantly to a deafening roar. They quickly began to attain fire superiority over the enemy ambushers that lined the hillside. Simultaneously, the men on the right sides of the trucks poured over the rear gates of the vehicles and dropped to the ground. Truck commanders emerged and began directing the men into action. Some of the men added their fire power to the base of fire already established by those still on the trucks. They fired at the enemy from every conceivable position. . .over hoods. . .by the fenders and from under the trucks. Some of the men took up positions which would provide rear and flank security away from the main action. Other soldiers began to dodge from truck to truck toward the head of the column. Working their way to the front, they grouped and moved in an open sprint up the road beyond the lead vehicle. They began to maneuver around the right flank of the enemy position.

Action was fast, and the enemy was slow to react to the rapidly changing situation.

From the road the men on the trucks could see the maneuver element begin it's sweep down into the enemy position from the right flank and rear. The ambushers found themselves tapped in their own web by the fast, aggressive action. One of them broke into the open in an effort to escape the deadly trap. As he ran in panic across the hillside, he was cut down by bullets from a dozen guns. The Americans swept through the enemy position and mopped-up the few remaining pockets of enemy resistance. The dead were carefully searched for any information that might be of value.

The soldiers worked quickly. . .effectively. . .professionally. . .

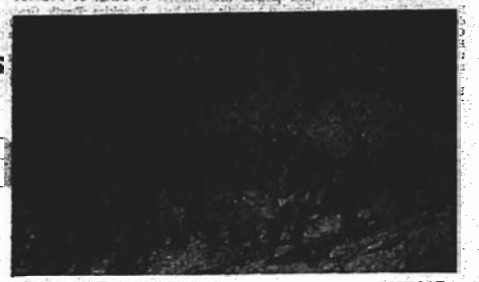
Slowly, their work done for the moment, the men came down from the hill as it once again became a quiet and serene part of the mountain scenery. They climbed aboard the waiting trucks and settled down for the remainder of the trip to the base camp. The powerful motors roared and breathed life into the trucks. The convoy moved once again northward along the bumpy, dusty mountain road.

This story is true, and did happen in the mountains of Northern Georgia. However, the bullets fired by both sides during the action were blank ammunition. This action was one of the realistic training problems undertaken by men training at the Army's Ranger School. They are being groomed to become the finest soldiers in the world. At the end of nine weeks of intensive, rough and hazardous training they will have earned the right to wear the simple black and gold cloth arc on their left shoulder inscribed with the word "RANGER".

Those few men in our Army who have earned the right to wear the Ranger tab have successfully completed the most gruelling course offered by the Army in it's history. They have met the challenge and taken the toughest mental and physical training that other rugged pressional soldiers could dream up for them, and they have come out on top. . .they became Rangers. . .

Col. John W. Jackson, director of the Infantry Schools' Ranger Department, makes every effort to see that true Ranger standards and conditions are met throughout the course.

His desires and interest are reflected in each of the three phases of training that the aspiring Rangers' student undergoes. The three phases; the first at Ft. Benning, the second at the Mountan Ranger Camp Northern Front) near Dahlonega, Ga., and the third at the Florida Ranger Camp (Southern Front) at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., have been compared to actual combat campaigns by former students. Every effort is made to simulate actual situations during training, set in a realistic atmosphere, with minimum restrictions on how the students play the problem.



THE CONFIDENCE CLIMB BUILDS MUSCLES AND COURAGE

The problems, interspersed with other physical and specialized training, are conducted over natural terrain obstacles such as rivers and streams, lakes, swamps, steep mountains and jungle-like area across some of the most remote and rugged parts of Florida and Georgia.

The Ranger student quickly learns that he is not a fair - weather soldier. He discovers that he operates best during periods of inclement weather, which provides him better concealment and the opportunity for greater stealth.

Photos By Shaner

As the student meets and conquers the various problems placed before him, his overall ability and self-confidence develops to a high degree. He learns that he must call on every ounce of his physical and mental stamina in order to accomplish his assigned mission. At the same time, he is confronted with hunger, fatigue, and the pressure of the tactical situation.

During the initial phase of training, at Ft. Benning, the battle within the individual begins. On the first day in Ranger school he takes off his rank and assumes the title Ranger. Next, the psychological battle begins. Under the keen eyed direction of Lt. Col. Christopher M. Gooch Jr., the next three weeks become an untountable number of hours spent in rugged physical training, hand to hand combat, patrolling in the most dense areas of the Ft. Benning military reservation, confidence tests that require an indefinable item called guts, and an introduction to surviving outdoors with the barest essentials.

During the Fort Benning phase of training the student is introduced to the fundamental principles and techniques of patrolling. But, more important, he begins to learn himself; his limitations and assets. For many, it's the first time in their lives that they have had to sleep on the ground wrapped only in a couple of Army blankets and a poncho. Many students report they have heard Col. Gooch asking the "Big Ranger" for rain during drought periods while classes were in bivouac. He feared his Rangers might miss gaining this valuable experience. More often than not, his request is granted.

From his first day as a Ranger, the student is told that he is being conditioned and trained for combat. Units on both the Northern and Southern Fronts are anxiously awaiting their arrival so that they can be relieved. From that first day, the situation and training progresses along a thorough and comprehensive plan which begins to build the Ranger. When he leaves Ft. Benning for the Northern Front he knows "Self Discipline and prompt Obedience".

Many persons believe that Ranger school today is primarily a high-powered course in patrolling. However, the student soon learns that patrolling is used as a teaching vehicle from which he can be evaluated and learn such intangibles as leadership, the ability to command, self - confidence and tactical know-how. It's true, he learns patrolling too; but more important, as he reflects back on the nine weeks of training, the new Ranger wonders how the miracle came about! He finds himself a new and different man . . .a RANGER.

When the student leaves the Ft. Benning phase for the Northern Front, he is conditioned to the fact that he is going into his first combat area. The Mountain Ranger Camp, some 400,000 acres of problem area, under the command of Lt. Col. George Tassey, comes as a shock to students. The terrain appears to be impassable. The realism of the situation begins with the ambush on the convoy outside the base camp and continues [illegible] each day. Trying to keep in step with the Everyone seems in favor of pretty girls and photographers are certainly no exception. Assuming that there is one in your vicinity such as Mabel here, and your whipping out a camera hasn't sent her screaming off into the woods, it's always nicer if your picture of her turns out pretty too. These pictures show some of the ways that they can turn out and why . . . We hope!

A MESS . . . This mess was made in bright, direct sunlight. It was too bright for comfort, obviously. Take Mabel's picture this way if you are tired of having her around.

IT'S BETTER . . . Here we are in open shade, which is out of the direct sunlight but open to the light from the rest of the sky. We also have used a flash bulb at the camera. Since the flash is so much brighter than the skylight it looks the same as flash only. Better, but not good.

DIRECT SUN AGAIN . . . Now we are back out into the direct sunlight again, but Mabel is looking away from it. This is called backlighting. It's a lot easier on Mabel, and makes a pretty nice picture of her with some sparkle in it. It's a tricky exposure problem too, though.

A CLOSE UP . . . Using the same lighting as before (back sunlight, flash fill), we make a close-up and it turns out well. Mabel looks alive, friendly and pretty and since this is what she is, it is how a picture of her should look. This exposure is simple, too. Just set everything as though you weren't using a flash, then stick in a flash bulb.

FLASH FILL ADDED . . . This picture is backlighted with the flash fill added. It's called a fill because it's weaker than the main illumination and it fills the shadow cast by the main illumination. Pose, expression and lighting all work together here for a successful snapshot of a pretty girl.

Air Force 'Blue' Goes STRAC

Close Air Force Support for Infantry Is Part of U.S. Strike Unit Concept

BY ARTIE KOFFMAN

Since the 2nd Infantry Division, stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., is a part of the U. S. Strike Command (USSTRICOM), it must have the ability to request and receive close Air Force support at any time during an assigned mission. This very necessary support explains the presence of a team of three officers and six enlisted men, dressed in Air Force "Blue", who are constantly observed and wondered about roaming the division area.

This small team is permanently assigned to the "Indianhead" Division from the Tactical Air Command (TAC), also a part of USSTRICOM, with the mission of providing it with a superior degree of close air support from available fighter and bomber wings.

The first half of this team, Maj. Dana T. Moore II, air liaison officer, together with Capt.'s John J. Keller and Arthur W. Webb, both forward air controllers, arrived at Fort Benning in October of 1962 after being handpicked by TAC's commander, Gen. Walter C. Sweeney, for the assignment.

Gen. Sweeney's motive for placing air liaison officers and forward air controllers with all Strategic Army Corps (STRAC) units was to increase the day-to-day flow of ideas between the two services, to improve TAC's understanding of Army requirements, and to solve minor problems before they balloon to major proportions.

All three officers, augmented by an additional contingency of 28 Air Force officers and enlisted men, participated with the 2nd Division during Joint Exercise Swift Strike III staged last August in the states of North and South Carolina, and contributed greatly to the excellent account the "Second to None" gave of itself during the 18 day mock war.

The second half of the team, comprised of three radio operators and three radio maintenance and repairmen, joined the division on September 1 of this year and brought with them the necessary equipment to outfit three tactical air control parties.

The group includes A1C Elmer G. Love, A1C Robert J. Williams, A2C John M. McQue, A2C Edward Hoffman, A2C James W. Whipple, and A3C Donald F. Matson.

As demonstrated during Swift Strike III, the Air Force will increase the size of this team to approximately 21 officers and 37 enlisted men.

An interesting note concerning the effectiveness of this team is that Maj. Moore, Capt. Keller and Capt. Webb are the only airborne qualified personnel serving in the "Indianhead" Division who are maintaining jump status. This fact stems from TAC's desire to have a minimum of five experienced, airborne qualified forward air controllers in each of it's tactical fighter squadrons.

Maj. Moore, a radio operator in the Navy during World War II, has had a varied career since receiving the coveted silver wings of an Air Force pilot in 1949.

Since that time he has been a flight instructor, served one year in the Republic of Korea, spent four years flying the F-100 Super Saber jet fighter, and completed a two-year exchange tour with the Navy as a pilot aboard the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Intrepid. Before coming to Fort Benning he was assigned to TAC Headquarters at Langly AFB, Va.

A native of Little Rock, Ark., Capt. Keller enlisted in the Air Force in February, 1951 and received his commission and wings two years later. Besides attending many in-service schools on such subjects as jet instrument and jet gunnery, he also served for three years as a flight commander in the F-100 assigned to the 4th TAC Fighter Wing in Chaumont, France.

Prior to his assignment to the 2nd Division he was a flight commander in the F-105 Thunder Chief with the 4th TAC Fighter Wing at Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C.

Capt. Webb became a qualified jet pilot in 1954 and since then has made a total of seven non-stop flights to Europe in the F-100D jet fighter in conjunction with rotations to Germany and Italy.

He attended the Basic Airborne Course at Fort Benning in August, 1961 and recently completed the requirements necessary for the senior parachutist badge.

The trio of super-sonic jet pilots recently scored a "first" for the Air Force when they became the first members of their service to gain membership in the 2nd Infantry Division's Indianhead Association.

The membership cards were presented to them in the office of Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander, by a first vice-president of the organization, Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, the division sergeant major.

Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course Has Carnival Atmosphere; Modern Approach Keeps Course Looking a Little Less Like a School

By Peter E. Donoghue

But it's not a carnival like you've ever seen before. No it's the 2nd Division's Preventive Maintenance Indicator (PMI) course decked out in gay colors. The idea is to make the course a little less like school. And it works.

Since this cycle of classes began on September 16th over 2000 students throughout the "Second to None" have attended the unusual school. This cycle ended last Friday. Supervisors, material readiness officers and operator-mechanics from 31 division organizations have completed the Support Command-sponsored course. Only the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor has not seen the carnival and the school is coming to them at their home station at Fort Stewart on December 10th.

Support Command has outdone themselves in creating the carnival atmosphere. Students move from gaily decorated county-fair station to station throughout the two-day period of classes. There are 24 such stations, two lounges and various vending machines.

Says Maj. Herbert Bergen, the guiding light behind the project, "We never give them a chance to fall asleep. We keep their interest by keeping them moving."

And the concept has already been tested. A group of operator-mechanics were tested to determine their interest and, says Maj. Bergen, "The results were more than satisfying."

But the course, of course, is more than a circus. It is designed as a continuing cycle of instruction on maintenance indicators dealing with most pieces of equipment in the division inventory. Following the special trip to Fort Stewart, the instructors of the Support Command will soon being a new cycle.

The continuing nature of the school is necessary, according to Maj. Bergen, because of the high rate of turnover within the division. He said that over the past year, there has been a 60 per cent change in personnel.

The course at Support Command is 16 hours long but when it is combined with field instruction, over 33 hours are spent on it. Classroom time was initially only nine hours but it was found insufficient.

Two basic areas of instruction are (1) the Army equipment records systems, and (2) the technique of inspection by use of preventive maintenance indicators.

An indicator is a point on a piece of equipment which can be inspected and by its condition show approximately the condition of the rest of the article.

The course is based on a family of nine basic indicators and from there is extended to some 1500.

The third phase of the training is in the field when the student is made the inspector. Inspectors then compare the student's inspection log with their own as a method of determining how much the student has learned.

Everyone who attends the course gets instruction in armament and motor stables. Additionally, selected groups receive instruction in the equipment records procedure, maintenance supply procedures, electronics equipment, quartermaster equipment, chemical equipment and a generator operators course.

Maj. Bergen, who is retiring tomorrow, said, "The maintenance of vehicular equipment is the sole and fiber of your mission. Always ask yourselves," he said, "will this equipment fight?"

The major is being succeeded by Maj. Ross L. Leety.

The course has drawn the interest of several people in high places. Only recently Lt. Gen. Albert A. Watson II, commanding general of the Third U. S. Army visited the school.

Every class in the PMI school kicked off by Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, assistant division commander. According to Maj. Bergen, "without his (Gen. Coffin's) support, we would have had a great deal of difficulty."

Both Maj. Bergen's commander at Support Command, Col. John W. Armstrong, and his past commander, Lt. Col. Charles A. Morris, praised his efforts in organizing the course.

"Success is primarily due to the efforts of Maj. Bergen," Col. Armstrong said, "under the direction and support of Col. Morris. He expressed confidence that Maj Leely could carry on in similar fashion.

Col. Morris stated that he had received a good deal of undeserved credit for organizing the course. He stressed that the real credit should go to Maj. Bergen and the instructors. The instructors, he said, are primarily privates and privates first class who had no special qualifications other than a desire to become highly proficient in this area.

"The instructors became specialists," Col. Morris said, "Because they felt obligated to become specialists."

Maj. Bergen stressed that work on the PMI course had been primarily a voluntary effort. He particularly praised Sp5 Billy Popham, the only original instructor in equipment records still with the course.

Fort Benning Cub Scout Pack Meeting Visited by 2nd Infantry Division Indian

By BOB de CAMARA

Two months ago, Cub Scout Pack 37 of Fort Benning was down to one den (one group of youngsters).

Last night, Pack 37 held its second meeting since receiving a large transfusion of boys and interest, and seven dens took part.

The auditorium of Wilbur Elementary School before the meeting got underway was a jumble of small fry in blue cub uniforms with yellow piping. The boys carried on in a holiday atmosphere about the tables where the pack had assembled its monthly displays, "The World of Sound," but came to quiet for the meeting.

After opening remarks by the cubmaster, Capt. Arthur W. Webb, an Air Force officer assigned to the 2nd Division (his wife is a den mother), Den 7 sang two choruses of "Puffer Billies" followed by Den Four's Telestar skit, commemorating the U. S.'s communications satellite.

The "chief" of the 2nd Division, Spt Marland Tahbonemah, a full-blooded Kiowa, made his second appearance at a Pack 37 meeting to aid in the presentation of awards. The chief stood at the front of the room, resplendent in his buckskin costume and flowing headdress, and handed out the awards as Maj. T. Miyagishima, an assistant cubmaster and commanding officer of the Indianhead Division's military intelligence unit, called the names.

In all, some 25 boys had a chance to march to the front and stand shyly and proudly while wolf pins, gold and silver arrows, lion's badges, round-up time badges (for recruiting new members) denner stripes, bobcat badges and year pins were handed out.

Den Four won the monthly streamer for having the most parents and friends present. Den Nine was named "honor den" of the month for its display which showed a clever paper accordion, harp, banjo and drum and a scattering of Thanksgiving turkeys manufactured by the boys from pine cones and paper.

The judging, done by impartial members of the audience, was close, and Den Nine zinged in on a tie-breaker.

Maj. Miyagishima's son, James, who is a weblo (an older cub scout) filled a table with sound effects instruments on the order of a cola bottle zylophone (bottles filled to different heights with colored water), a pot pie tin holding black-eye peas to be shaken for a rain effect, tin foil wrap to be shaken for thunder, and two hollow coconut halves on a wooden plank with this information: James Miyagishima — directions: take halves and tap on the board alternately."

The evening's program did not follow the printed sheet handed out to the visitors. Instead, cubmaster Webb chose to skip around in an unannounced order, and the audience was spared the pleasure of hearing Den Seven sing five verses of "She'll be Coming Round the Mountain."

Maj. Lemuel Thomas, chairman of the Pack 37 committee, handled the announcements which followed the awards. For the growing pack to ease labor pains Maj. Thomas had two remedies, money and help. Volunteers passed the cap in lieu of touching the cubs for the usual 10 cent monthly donation during the Christmas season when the boys presumably will be hoarding the change for family presents.

At the close of the ceremonies, Den Nine organized the boys at the front in circles, and the mothers and fathers were treated to den yells — one of which was "Aba-daba-doo" and the others also appeared to be inspirational.

The birth, death and rebirth of cub scout packs at Fort Benning is a perennial occurrence as parents move from one post to another. Starting from scratch about two months ago, Pack 37 has built up its membership impressively and is still growing. In the not too distant future, the pack hopes to have a full contingent of 10 dens.

The two newest dens, one and two, did not take part in last night's meeting.

The second of the pack's two assistant cubmasters, CWO Paul Higgins, is a 2nd Division warrant officer with Company B of the 302rd ASA unit. Fort Benning's 586th Engineers sponsors the pack.

Others were: Kenneth Higgins, James Higgins, David Stamps, Robert Weaver III, Roger Butterbough, Reginald De Roos, Larry Simmons, Chris Thomas, Thomas Harrington, David Dustin, Benji Mathis, Michael Pinkney, Stanley Wielga, Lee Hawley.

Mrs. E. N. Kelly, a pack advisor, won a three-year pin for three years of service to the pack.

12th Artillery Vet Reenlists

By Division Artillery PIO

An Army veteran of almost 19 years reenlisted recently during a brief ceremony at Headquarters of the 1st Battalion (HJ), 12th Artillery. First Sergeant Elton Roy Butler of Headquarters Battery repeated the oath, making his reenlistment official, after Battalion Commander Lt. Col. James H. McClurkin.

Sgt. Butler entered the Army in November of 1944 and completed basic training at Camp Blanding, Fla. He saw action during World War II in the Luzon campaign.

The veteran sergeant has attended the 2nd Infantry Division NCO Academy at Fort Benning and has completed a course in unit supply in Germany. His last assignment was in Germany as first sergeant of Headquarters Battery, 2nd Battalion, 73rd Artillery. He came to Division Artillery in July of 1962.

Heroic History

The colorful and heroic history of the 2nd Engineer Battalion had its beginning on August 3, 1861 when it was organized from one existing company and three companies of Engineer soldiers.

Russian Spy Touring Area Is Not Really

By 2nd Bn, 23rd Infantry PIO

The friendly Russian gentleman seen touring the Battalion area this past Wednesday, attired in the Russian winter uniform was not a Russian soldier, but the Battalion's own Sgt. Gerald A. Pinx of Hq & Hq Company.

At times he found this quite difficult to explain while under armed guard, as he was apprehended several times while trying to inspect the Battalion's rifle companies respective areas.

The purpose of this little masquerade was not to test the durability of the Russian uniform, but a climax to the classes that were given to the battalion on espionage and sabotage.

The reaction to a man wearing a Russian uniform in a rifle company area was one of curiosity if not complete bewilderment, as expressed by some of the younger members of the battalion, however he was immediately apprehended by men who recognized this uniform. That was the purpose of these classes.

Reconnaissance Platoon Leader Is Airborne--Ranger Qualified

Lt. Gerald A. Grochowski reported to Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion (Mech), 23rd Infantry to assume the responsibilities of reconnaissance platoon leader on November 4.

He has attended the Airborne and Ranger schools and was formerly a platoon leader in Company B.

Lt. Grochowski, who hails from South Milwaukee, Wis., was a 12-letter man in athletics at a Milwaukee high school. He enrolled in the Milwaukee branch of the University of Wisconsin as an art major where he continued his interest in athletics.

He was given a berth on the small college All-American Team in basketball and will coach the battalion team in competition this fall.

Deputy G-1 Was Commissioned With 'Second to None' in Korea

By Artie Koffman

It is often said that history repeats itself, and this old adage proved valid in the case of Maj. Elbert O. Shiflett, new division assistant G-1 officer.

Thirteen years ago Maj. Shiflett, then the first sergeant of Company G, 23rd Regimental Combat Team (RCT), 2nd Infantry Division, was doing his part in trying to stem the tide of communist aggression in Korea. It was at this time (September, 1950) that he received a battlefield commission and was sworn in as an infantry lieutenant by a 2nd Division's asst. G-1 officer; the same position which Maj. Shiflett assumed last month.

MAJ. SHIFLETT—AN ASS'T GI

Born and raised in Roanoke, Ala., the major entered the Army as an enlisted man in 1943 after graduating from Valley High School in La Nette, Ala. He completed his basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga. and served with the 76th Infantry Division in Mississippi for three months before shipping overseas as a replacement to the European Theater of Operations.

There he fought through five campaigns with both the 30th Infantry and 82nd Airborne Divisions, earning for himself the Silver Star, the Bronze Star Medal for valor with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Purple Heart with three Oak Leaf Clusters.

He received the Silver Star for gallantry in action while his platoon held a bridge for two days under constant enemy fire during the Allies famous "breakthrough at St. Lo," France.

Maj. Shiflett returned to the States shortly after V-E Day and the following year went back to Germany for three years of occupation duty with the 1st Infantry Division.

Joining the "Indianhead" Division for the first time in 1949, he accompanied it to Korea shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in June of 1950.

Besides receiving his commission, he also added an additional two oak leaf clusters to both his Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart while serving in the "Land of the Morning Calm."

He made his first trip to Fort Benning in December of 1950 when he was assigned as an instructor to the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Following a two year tour of duty in Alaska with the 4th RCT, he returned to Fort Benning for the second time in 1955 and remained here for the next five years, serving first as the S-3 officer of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry and later as a mortar battery commander in the 2nd Battle Group, 14th Infantry.

After completing the Officers Advanced Infantry Course in 1960, Maj. Shiflett again returned to Germany and duty with the 8th Infantry Division. It was from this assignment that he again journeyed to Fort Benning, rejoining the "Second to None" Division for the second time after a 13 year lapse.

Korean War

The "Second to-None" Division arrived in Korea in early August, 1950, and was utilized as a fire brigade, moving swiftly to counter enemy threats. It was cited by the Republic of Korea president for its role in breaking out of the Pusan perimeter in September, 1950.

Mrs. Charles H. Dornacker and Mrs. Ralph M. Mobley entertained the ladies of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 2nd Division Artillery Tuesday with a coffee held in the Mobley home on Arrowhead Road.

The focal point of the event was an exotic arrangement of red Anthurium, Anthurium foliage and Ti leaves which were sent from Hawaii for the occasion. The arrangement centered the dining table where refreshments were served by Mrs. Burnside E. Huffman.

Mrs. Dornacker bid farewell to the ladies of headquarters. Her husband, Lt. Col. Charles H. Dornacker, will assume the position of commander of the 17th Artillery early in December.

Mrs. Huffman conducted a brief business meeting at the end of the coffee.

15th Artillery Returns From 'ATT' Testing

By Division Artillery PIO

The 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery returned to Fort Benning last week from a two-week sojourn at Fort Gordon, Ga. where the battalion's firing batteries completed the Army Training Tests (ATT) for artillery.

Division Artillery Commander Col. Burnside E. Huffman visited Gordon last week and saw the battalion in action as it completed different firing missions.

The tests are being conducted at Fort Gordon this year rather than on Fort Benning's more familiar ranges to give the batteries practice in firing over different terrain features.

The batteries are required to complete several missions during the test, each mission designed to test different capabilities. An example of such a mission is the emergency mission or "hip shoot." In this mission, the speed with which the battery can move into position and fire with accuracy is regarded as the all important factor.

An observer near the impact area maintains radio contact with the battery. He watches the rounds as they explode and directs the firing of the weapons. When the battery has zeroed in on the target, he gives the order: "Fire for effect."

The evaluation of the battery's performance is carried out through a team of umpires. The umpire team is divided into six sections, and each section is responsible for observing and reporting on particular operations. They report their findings to a chief umpire and a rating — such as excellent, satisfactory, or unsatisfactory — is assigned for each firing mission and, eventually, for the entire test.

The umpires consider in their evaluations everything from selection and occupation of position to firing accuracy and maintenance of equipment.

Simulated aggressor attacks upon men and equipment are conducted to test security precautions taken by the battery. Casualties and losses are estimated, and the effectiveness with which the aggressor attack is resisted is recorded by an umpire team.

Division Artillery units conclude testing next month when the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, last to be tested this year, fires for record.

Field Training Is Put to Test At 7th Cav ATT

By 7th Cavalry PIO

The past month's training in the field and garrison by the 7th Cavalry will be put to the test this week with the beginning of the Platoon level, Army Training Test.

For Troop C, the test began at seven a.m. November 12, with the First Platoon leaving the squadron area enroute to the test area where they will be tested on their performance in various facets of Armored Reconnaissance missions; platoon level.

Following the First Platoon will be the Third Platoon, which will be out November 13-14, and Second Platoon, November 15-16.

World War II Veteran Signs For Six More

By Division Artillery PIO

A World War II veteran of numerous campaigns reenlisted in the Army last week during a ceremony in the orderly room of Battery B, 12th Artillery.

Sgt. Eugene E. Maletzke took the oath of enlistment, this time for six years, from Commander Capt. Thomas D. Brown. Area reenlistment counselor MSgt. George E. DeLong Jr. was also present.

Sgt. Maletzke first entered the Army in January of 1942. After completing basic training at Fort Barkeley, Tex., he was shipped overseas, landing at Oran, Algeria. At the conclusion of the El Amenn campaign he was sent to Bizerte where he witnessed the fall of Rommel's Afrika Korps.

On reenlisting in the Army in January of 1961, Sgt. Maletzke was sent to Korea. He is presently a gunner in the 12th Artillery's rocket section, but he leaves Fort Benning next month for an assignment in Germany.

The veteran sergeant resides with his wife, Eula Mae, and their son, Gregory, three months old, at Trailer Manor, Columbus.

Nine officers' wives of the 15th Artillery gathered at the home of Mrs. Robert J. Gabrielli Thursday evening to enjoy their monthly coffee.

The centerpiece for the serving table consisted of a lovely arrangement of bronze and yellow crysanthemums flanked by two miniature turkeys on a beautiful table-covering of vivid fall colors. Thanksgiving "goodies," including pumpkin pie and delicious cookies, were served.

Mrs. William Lundberg, co-hostess, poured.

Farewells were said to Mrs. William Temple. Lt. Temple is returning to civilian life and they will soon be at home in Kansas City, Missouri.

Mrs. Gabrielli presided at a short business meeting in the absence of Mrs. Edmund Rozecki. During the meeting, Mrs. Frank Wasko took over the duties of treasurer and hospitality chairman to replace Mrs. Temple.

Safety Is Important

Between November 10 and November 16, 2nd Infantry Division personnel committed 67 traffic violations, both on and off post, ranging from operating a privately owned vehicle without post tags to drunk driving resulting in personal injury. Were you responsible for one of these 67 violations.

If so, chances are you will be notified through your company commander that your mandatory presence is requested at a Remedial Driver Training Course, in Class A uniform, being conducted in classroom E-5, building 85, located near the Main Post commissary.

The training, which will be conducted by the safety officer of the United States Army Infantry Center (USAIC), is a direct result of the alarming proportions of accidental deaths and injuries arising from improper operation of privately owned and military vehicles and has been designed with the purpose of curbing this trend.

The 2nd Infantry Division Provost Marshal will notify unit commanders and the division safety officer of those individuals selected to attend the course. Offenses such as moving violations, suspended driver's license, and "at fault" accidents are good indications that remedial driver training is necessary.

So the choice is up to you. Play it straight and obey all traffic regulations or you may wind up not only attending Remedial Driver Training Courses but someone's funeral; and maybe your own!

2nd Aviation Is Assigned West Point Grad as Ass't

By 2nd Aviation PIO

A West Point graduate of the Class of '51 has recently been assigned as the assistant division aviation officer for the 2nd Infantry Division.

Maj. David A. Carroll arrived at the unit from the 7th Infantry Division in Korea.

Maj. Carroll entered the service in 1945 as an enlisted man and received his appointment to the United States Military Academy two years later. Upon graduation in 1951 he attended the Basic Infantry Officer Course at Fort Benning. He saw duty with the 28th Infantry Division in Germany from November 1951 until December 1952 when he was transferred to the Advanced Section COMZ in Verdun, France, as aide de camp to Brig. Gen. W. W. Ford, the section's commanding general. The major returned to the States in the fall of 1954 to Michigan State University as an assistant professor of military science and tactics. In April 1957, Maj. Carroll attended the Advanced Infantry Officer Course at Fort Benning. Upon completion, he attended rotary wing helicopter school at Fort Wolters, Tex.

Retiring Army Personnel Make Most of Experience

The basic principle for a retiring officer or enlisted man to follow when mapping a course for himself in civilian business life is this: "Make the most of experience accummulated through your military occupational specialty."

So said Richard Sanzo, senior editor of Dunn and Bradstreet's Business Education Division last year, the section which teaches better, more profitable management practices to thousands of businessmen - students. And the advice still holds true.

This basic principle might seem obvious; yet, notes Sanzo, it is surprising how many go into lines for which they are both unsuited and unprepared. The result can be failure and a loss of lifetime savings. Sanzo points out that both numbers of business failures and total liabilities have been mounting steadily in recent years.

In order to avoid winding up as one of these unhappy statistics, the retiring serviceman should select fields of enterprise for which military life has given him certain clear-cut advantages.

Sanzo is convinced that the principles of organization, discipline, through record - keeping, control of buying and inventory, emphasized in the military can be of crucial value in the management of any business. Aside from the general advantages, however, the military man often has long and thorough experience in a specialty which closely parallels a civilian occupation.

For example, veterans of Quartermaster Corps experience should fit well into businesses requiring careful keeping of large inventories such as hardware, independent specialty stores, and the like. Transportation Corps men may find a solid niche in service station or trucking operations — there always is a demand for skilled mechanics. Men with experience as Adjutants or in the Judge Advocate General Branch fit readily into personnel work, while those who have professional credentials may find adjustment to civilian practice immediate and natural.

For the military man who has shuttled about in a variety of assignments, Sanzo recommends particular fields — and warns against others. For example, the retail liquor business is an excellent line for a retired officer. His service record can win him the cooperation he needs from government officials. He need know little about merchandising and nothing about pricing for these are largely predetermined.

Real estate is another excellent field for a retired officer, though he must check closely the increasingly complex state regulations governing both real estate and insurance. On the other hand, the D&B expert warns against the apparent glitter of some lines such as coin-operated laundromats, motels and bowling alleys. While there are still fine opportunities in all these fields, "gold mine" fever has resulted in some overbuilding in all three. And businesses of this type require a sizable initial investment — a fact which dictates special caution.

Many a retiring serviceman will want his wife assisting him in a joint venture. In retail operations the help of a wife can be of great value, for while she graciously serves the customers her husband can devote more of his time to the many complex details of management. And many women enjoy sharing such an enterprise, for it is a welcome change from the routine of housework.

Aside from utilizing his MOS, a serviceman can capitalize upon hobbies and personal interests too. The combination of his military experience and an interest in hunting and fishing could, for example, make a sporting goods shop an ideal choice. The sergeant who has both run a supply room and devoted spare time to landscaping the company area would fit well into a garden supply business.

In general, Sanzo recommends that retiring servicemen shy away from retail food or clothing businesses. Both demand long hours and specialized experience and can, therefore, be a severe drain on one's physical stamina. Unless profit is of utmost importance, he feels that less demanding lines are more suitable for supplementing an income guaranteed by the government.

An exception in the food line is gourmet foods, but, though less competitive, this highly specialized field demands careful locating and assessing of community interests and income. Another exception is the combination food and dry goods store — the general store — in a rural location. This often frees the owner from intense competitive pressures and is an ideal choice for the retiring serviceman.

Seeks Master of Arts Degree

Bemedaled Commander to Continue Studies

By Robert Plitch

The colonel is going back to school.

For as good a reason as any, Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll, commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, will be saying farewell to his officers and men at the "Rock of the Marne" Battalion.

He will depart Fort Benning on December 5 to attend the University of Oklahoma where he will begin work for his Master of Arts degree in business administration. He will then return to devote full time to the service of his country (which has been his life's work) in the field of personnel management.

At present, Col. Carroll holds a Bachelor of General Education degree in psychology, education, and military science from the University of Omaha (Neb), and is a qualified teacher.

Militarily, the commander of the "Marnemen" has exhibited courage, determination, and valor, as well as fine discretion, far above and beyond the call of duty. This can be easily attested to by a perusal of his records, which show him to be the recipient of the coveted Silver Star, five awards of the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Combat Infantryman's Badge with star. He also proudly wears such decorations as the European Campaign Medal with three stars and the Korean Campaign Medal with twice as many stars.

Col. Carroll initiated his military career during World War II and was awarded a battle field commission in 1945 while serving with the 103rd Infantry Division in Europe. As a junior lieutenant, he held the very responsible job of platoon leader and company commander.

While fighting in World War II, our battalion commander was the recipient of two of his Bronze Stars and one Purple Heart.

During the interim between World War II and the Korean War, Col. Carroll served in the recruiting office at White Plains, N.Y. where he received several letters of commendation from his superiors for his outstanding achievements in his assigned field.

The year of 1950 brought Col. Carroll to Korea where he did more than his part in the defense of that republic from Communist aggression. It was during this period that he was awarded, in addition to three more Bronze Stars and his other two Purple Hearts, the third highest recognition for an American soldier: the honored Silver Star, with the following citation:

"Captain ... Edward F. Carroll ... for gallantry in action against the enemy on 2 November 1950, near Packchon, Korea. While the 2d Battalion was attempting to break through enemy lines to relieve a surrounded friendly unit, several casualties were suffered. Captain Carroll, leader of a machine gun platoon, unhesitatingly exposed himself to intense machine gun and small arms fire ... thereby drawing the enemy fire away from the rifle companies. He remained for three hours after the rifle companies had broken contact with the enemy, delivering covering fire until all the wounded men were evacuated. Captain Carroll's gallantry reflects great credit on himself and the military service."

Following the Korean War, Col. Carroll spent three and a half years in the comparatively phlegmatic capacity of adviser to the 69th Armor in New York City, the pride of his native state.

Onward to Hawaii was the next link in the chain of events for Col. Carroll, where he served as Military Personnel Procurement Officer at the U. S. Army Headquarters in Honolulu.

Col. Carroll's ladder of success soared upward — and he, along with it. The years of 1956 through 1959 saw him in the positions of battalion executive officer and battalion commander at Fort Dix, N.J. Then, in 1960, he was selected to attend the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Upon his graduation from CGSC in 1961, the colonel came to Fort Benning and the "Marnemen" as battle group adjutant.

Shortly after the Battle Group began its Rotaplan tour in Baumholder, Germany, Col. Carroll was elevated to the capacity of battle group executive officer, and promoted to his present rank. And when the pentomic system was abandoned in favor of ROAD (Reorganization of the Army Divisions), this proud but modest officer was placed in command of the 1st Battalion of the 38th Infantry; his present office.

Hats off to a distinguished gentleman, scholar, and soldier: Lt. Col. Edward F. Carroll.

38th Arty Pvt. Broke PT Marks While at Basic

Pvt. El Esperanzo Ortiz of Battery C, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery is a crack athlete.

He must be because he broke both the post training and PT test records while at Fort Dix, N.J. for basic training with Company K, 2nd Training Regiment.

He joined the 38th Artillery on August 30 and has been made a battery clerk.

Prior to entering the Army, Pvt. Ortiz held a supervisory position as an assistant division head for Ingersoll Rand.

His major interests, other than athletics, are jazz music, short story writing and music. He plays both the violin and viola.

2nd of 23rd Conducting Unit Projects

The 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry was a place of activity this past week. The center of this activity is the new parking area that has been constructed by the battalion.

Decorating the rim of the parking area are brightly colored barrels provided as trash receptacles to increase the emphasis placed on keeping the area clean. While battalion masons are busy erecting a brick and mortar monument to house the area marker, men are busy in the company areas remodeling driveways and laying curbstones encasing the grounds around the mess areas.

357 Total Years

Seventeen Division Men Retire

By Bob de Camara

Seventeen 2nd Division officers and enlisted men retired without fanfare Tuesday on Sand Hill.

In keeping with the Army's 30 day period of mourning, a tight restriction has been placed on ceremonial activities.

Usually, the monthly retirement ceremonies would be held on the field outside Division Headquarters with the band playing and an honor guard and color guard present.

Tuesday's affair, in contrast, was held inside the conference room with a minimum of officials attending. The program was bare and uncolorful.

An assistant division commander of the 2nd Division, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, was on hand to congratulate the men and thank them for their service.

A major led the list of officers retiring. He is Maj. Herbert L. Bergen, division ammunition officer and the chief of Support Command's Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course. The major had 23 years service.

The top-ranking enlisted man departing active duty also has logged the most years of those retiring. He is Sgt. Maj. James G. White of 2nd Division Headquarters, a veteran of 24 years.

Capt. Farris D. Alexander of Headquarters, Support Command is leaving after 21 years; and CWO Durvis F. Easley of the 12th Artillery retires with 22 years.

The rest of the retirees were enlisted personnel. Two first sergeants were included: 1st Sgt. William T. Craig, 2nd Medical Battalion; 1st Sgt. Paul M. Komiski, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry.

The others were: PSgt. David Eskin, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; SFC John T. Green, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; SFC James C. Burges, 702nd Maintenance Battalion; SFC Francis T. Doner, 12th Artillery; SFC Charles D. Fowler, 38th Artillery, SFC Gene O. Rivers, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry; SFC Walter Rozwilowics, 7th Cavalry; SSgt. Anderson P. Austin, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor; Sgt. Em-

Mailed Fist of U. S. Army To Mark 187th Birthday

By 72nd Armor PIO

The 187th birthday of Armor, the Mailed Fist of the U.S. Army, will be celebrated in two weeks.

On December 12, 1776, Congress signed into law a bill authorizing the Cavalry branch for the fledgling Continental Army. From that authorization, and through industrial progress and new concepts of tactics Armor evolved.

Tankers are typically American in character and spirit. Armor is the arm of opportunity and the Combat Arm of Decision. It conforms to the American principal of moving in and getting the job done.

In tempo and spirit, armor has moved forward as dynamically in its development as it has decisively in combat.

Armor can trace its history back further than 1776 though. In the Holy Bible, Book of Judges, Chapter 1, 19th Verse it says "And the Lord was with Judah, and he drove out the inhabitants of the mountain, but he could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley for they had Chariots of Iron."

From that time on man has used various armor type vehicles in combat. Even the great Leonardi de Vinci in 1482 designed an armored car. This car resembled a Chinese coolie hat on wheels, and was propelled by men inside turning an offset shaft similar to the automobile crank shaft of today. For this vehicle de Vinci developed tactics which were surprisingly modern and like those employed by armor today.

From then until September 29, 1918 when the first American tank, as we know it today, was committed in combat, man dreamed of and tried to develop a completely armored vehicle for smashing enemy lines with firepower, shock action and mobility.

While most tankers are proud of their historic and gallant past, they also have an eye on the future.

Using past experience and modern research and development, coupled with a spirit of change and constant improvement that has been its motivating force, armor has changed.

In the past 10 years alone the improvements have been self-evident. The great Iron Horse has gone from .30 to .50 caliber machine guns on up to 90 and 120 millimeter main guns, from half-inch armor plate to three or four inches and more. Advances in electronics, ballistics, and communications have greatly enhanced armor's effectiveness.

Insofar as ground forces are concerned, armor, properly supported, is the most decisive combat arms the battlefield has ever known.

In view of this, the 2nd Infantry Division pays tribute to the birthday of armor.

The division's armor might, the 4th Recon Squad, 7th Cavalry, and the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 72nd Armor, are presently engaged in tactical training that, in combat, would prove the armored "Mailed Fist" strikes the hardest blow.

2nd Supply and Transport Unit Provides for 'Indianhead' Needs

By 2nd S and T PIO

The II and IV Section of Company A, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, has the mission to receive, provide temporary storage for, and issue Class II and IV supplies and equipment.

Class II supplies consist of supply and equipment for which initial issue allowances to individuals and organizations are fixed by tables of allowances, tables of organization and equipment, equipment modification lists, or other written authority.

Class IV supplies consist of items for which allowances are not prescribed and items in excess of prescribed allowances or for purposes not regularly authorized. Special cold-weather clothing and equipment for use in a special operation or additional quantities of gasoline cans for a specific purpose are typical examples of Class IV items.

In addition, the II and IV Section has the mission to provide for receipt and processing of salvage property from supported units and to provide limited packaging for air delivery of supplies by Army aircraft. Finally, the II and IV Section must be prepared to defend itself and its installations against hostile ground attack.

The II and IV Section of Company A was activated under the ROAD concept in March, 1963 and since that time, has been a beehive of activity. Immediately upon the introduction of the ROAD concept the II and IV Section was transformed from a Quartermaster facility to a supply center for six technical services; Quartermaster, Engineer, Signal, Transportation, Ordnance, and Chemical.

This sweeping change brought many complex problems and tremendous supply traffic to II and IV. However, through on-the-spot experience, the section developed detailed supply procedures and policies, i.e., carefully selected areas within the warehouse were designated for the storage of supplies of each tech service and a break-down area was created in which each supported unit was assigned a specification. These and numerous other new procedures enabled the section to function efficiently in the handling of supplies for all six tech services.

The II and IV Section of Company A has successfully negotiated many gigantic supply operations during its brief eight months of existence. New CBR protective masks for the entire 2nd Division were procured from the Fort Benning supply facility and placed in the hands of troops within thirty-six hours. M-14 rifles also were received and issued to all authorized personnel of the 2nd Division.

Moreover, because the entire 2nd Infantry Division was reorganized under the ROAD concept in the spring of 1963, the II and IV section was called upon to issue vast quantities of newly authorized equipment and to receive for turn-in a large volume of outdated equipment. Finally, when the "Indianhead" Division was alerted for possible riot control duty in May of this year, II and IV equipped an entire task force with armored vests in twelve hours.

During Joint Exercise Swift Strike III, II and IV performed every assigned mission in the face of enemy obstacles and terrain complications. In one instance, 315 life preservers were loaded, transported, and issued to an engineer company located approximately seventy miles away within four hours, under simulated combat conditions.

On another occasion, sixty-nine personnel parachutes were transported and issued to a 2nd Division airborne task force located forty miles away in three hours. This supply operation was accomplished during the hours of darkness and with only scanty information concerning the location of the airborne troopers.

Today, the II and IV Section of Company A, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, is a competent unit which accomplishes its missions in a professional manner. It has come through the hectic learning phase after reorganization under ROAD and confidently faces the challenges of future supply operations.

Duty in Field Readies Unit For It's ATT

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

Cold shaves, C - rations, night marches and little sleep have been the rule rather than the exception as the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry prepares for its Army Training Test (ATT) in the first part of December.

Last week the battalion spent three days in the field in various phases of training. Each company went to its own area to participate in small unit training. Emphasis was placed on defensive positioning and on road march movement.

Headquarters conducted an extensive Command Post Exercise which featured rapid night movement and close night security.

Overseeing the far - flung operation from a helicopter supplied by the 2nd Aviation Battalion was Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder, the recently appointed battalion commander. This was the first time that he had been able to observe the men of the 2nd of the 9th in field action.

This week, the 2nd of the 9th "Manchu Warriors" are once again in the field and will probably be eating their Thanksgiving Day dinner there.

The emphasis during this phase of field training is being placed on the mechanized infantry unit in the attack.

Capt. Richard Jarrett of Headquarters Company summed up the attitude of the battalion when he described the unit as "approaching a state of readiness that few other units will equal."

School Trained Officer Returns

A young officer from the "Manshu" Battalion of the 9th Infantry recently returned from the U.S. Army Civil Affairs School at Fort Gordon, Ga. in time to join his unit for "Exercise Swamp Fox."

Lt. Joseph B. Egan III, assistant adjutant, successfully completed the six week course designed to prepare officers for liaison work abroad, such as with the military assistance advisory groups (MAAG).

Ranger

fast paced training schedule, the student discovers that a spare minute becomes a precious and treasured gem. He is confronted with a rapidly and constantly changing enemy situation. As a result, battalion must send out Ranger patrols on recon and combat missions. When the Ranger student isn't moving over the mountains along the Tennessee Valley Divide and beyond, he is undergoing briefings, classes or practical work as the lull in the enemy situation permits.

The work day can be anywhere from 14 to 24 hours long . . . sometimes three days long on a long range patrol . . .seven days a week . . .The Ranger FEM has frequent calls for "day stretchers".

The student learns other skills while in the mountains, besides the knowledge and experience gained from patrolling over really rugged terrain. He is taught by experienced, master teachers the fundamentals of mountaineering. By learning these skills and techniques the Ranger discovers that the rugged mountain terrain, which at first appears to be one unconquerable obstacle, can be overcome. He learns that the ruggedness of the terrrain works to his advantage in operations against the enemy. He can strike the enemy when and where he leasts expects it. With rope bridges, wide gourges become an avenue of approach into an otherwise inaccessable enemy target, or by repelling down a sheer, rock cliff-face 60 feet high the Ranger learns that he can drop quickly on an unsuspecting enemy who considered the cliff as an impossible avenue of approach.

The terrain itself is enough to break the body and spirit of the average man. But, the Ranger is not the average man. He has detremination. When the going gets tough. . . the Ranger gets going. . . He carries on the traditions and heritage born in the first American Rangers founded by Major Rogers in 1756. Since then this heritage has been continued throughout our history by the likes of Morgan, Mosby, Darby and Merrill. All of this is the birth-right of the Ranger of today.

Along the road to becoming a Ranger, the student is going to find the going tougher each day than the day before. The rope work will leave his hands caloused and bleeding, the fallen trees stumbled into on the night patrols will leave his shins bruised and sore, and many miles on mountain sides and soaking swamps will leave blisters and calouses on his feet in places most surprising. But, through the dedicated and professional service rendered by medics such as SFC James R. "Doc" Duncan, he'll find that he can keep going. The Ranger medics are conscientious and concerned over even the smallest blister, realizing that improper treatment or attention can lead to infection; causing a student to be dropped from the course or take the entire training cycle over.

In seven years of duty at the Mountain Ranger Camp, "Doc" Duncan has tended more than 7,000 pair of Ranger feet, plus an amazing assortment of other ailments from punctured eyeballs to blistered buttocks. The Ranger students, past and present, take their caps off to the "Doc" Duncans throughout the course that keep the body going and in one piece for the nine week hard.

The Ranger enters his third and final stage of training in the vast swamplands and waterways of the Florida Ranger Camp in northwest Florida. The camp is commanded by Lt. Col. Albert F. Alfonso. It is here that the student meets his final challenge on the road to becoming a true Ranger.

In the seemingly never ending swamps and backwaters he will find himself constantly on patrolling missions. Gross fatigue becomes a daily and permanent companion to the individual. Patrols seem to begin, just as others end.

What few breaks there are between patrols are filled with instruction on waterborne, air - mobile and survival operations. It is here that the Ranger student is introduced to the effects of tactical, high performance aircraft. For the first time he uses aircraft for delivery, extraction and resupply.

The mental stress and strain continues along with the physical, and the new experience of being wet constantly in the murky, stinchy swamp water adds to the experience. The Ranger students' respect for wildlife reaches new levels as he walks among the powerful alligators native to the swamps of Florida, and the silent but dangerous snakes that glide silently through the dark water.

By the end of this three week training phase in Florida, the raw, young combat leader emerges from the Ranger school embryo a better than average leader . . .he steps back into his place in the ranks richer in experience, self-discipline and self confidence, ready to lead other men into whatever mission may be assigned. He stands a littler prouder and a little taller among men, because he has met the challenge and proven himself to be the best. . .a RANGER. . .

There is a tremendous and growing need for this kind of man throughout our Army today. Under the new Re - Organized Army Division (Road) plan, each line unit should have one Ranger qualified officer per company and one Ranger qualified NCO per platoon. Most units fall far short of this TO&E requirement due to the lack of trained and available personnel.

For the young career soldier, the nine weeks of Ranger training affords him a golden opportunity to gain vast knowledge and experience, which might otherwise require years of normal duty to achieve.

Also, for the young corporal or specialist fourth class, the course affords him the opportunity to add another stripe to his sleeve; regardless of time in grade, slots available, MOS and quotas. The Department of the Army has granted the commandant, USAIS authority to promote enlisted personnel who successfully complete the Ranger course, in pay grade E-4, to the grade of E-5 with concurrent approval of his permanent unit commander.

For the career man, both officer and enlisted, there will come a time when the lessons learned at Ranger School will prove to be the turning point of a real-life tactical situation. One small piece of knowledge or a subconscious instinct developed during the course of this training may save your life or the lives of men you lead on the field of battle. It is better to make that fatal mistake with blank ammunition being fired at you and learn the lesson then, than to make that mistake for the first time in the jungles of a place like Viet Nam where there is no second change.

Ranger training is tough. Without a doubt it is one of the greatest individual challenges that a man can face during his Army career. Are you man enough to assume the title . . . "RANGER". . .?

Admin's Operation Sgt Has Many Various Duties

The responsibilities of SSgt. Patsey Pernestti at the 2nd Administration Company are many and varied. And his superiors agree he does them all well.

Officially he is the company's training and operations sergeant. But a quick look at his responsibilities will show you that his title doesn't tell half the story. He is in charge of preparing training schedules, troop information classes and public information. He is educational non - commissioned officer and field training NCO.

"I guess I fulfill most of the responsibilities of the S-2 and S-3 in this battalion-sized unit," Sgt. Pernestti said. He also said that an administration company under the ROAD concept is the largest type company in the Army.

"The work is never done," he added.

But of all his jobs, Sgt. Pernestti enjoys being educational NCO the best. "It is rewarding because I can help a lot of people," he said. In this job he must maintain education and training cards on all 456 members of the company and be in a position to assist any and all of them in need of information. At this time, he said, there are only 27 members of the company without high school diplomas whereas 166 have at least attended college. Primarily with Sgt. Pernestti's assistance, 32 company members are now working on college level work. Of the 20 division people now attending classes of the American University on post, 11 of them are from the 2nd Administration Company.

Sgt. Pernestti began his military career in 1945 when he served two years with the Army Air Corps' 8th and 15th Air Forces as a personnel control clerk. Following his discharge he went back to high school at Haning Rock, Ohio, graduating in 1949. For the next year he was an accounting student at the Ashland (Ky.) School of Commerce.

From 1950 until 1953, Sgt. Pernestti was employed with a mason force by the C & O Railroad's Bridges and Buildings division. In 1953, he attended the 15-week light and heavy infantry leaders course at the Infantry School as a reservist. He was a vending machine serviceman and an insurance underwriter until he returned to the Army in 1956.

Since reenlisting, Sgt. Pernestti has served with a missile outfit in Virginia; the XX Corps headquarters at Fort Hayes, Ohio as an offset pressman; in Keflavik, Iceland as a rifle squad leader; as a platoon and operations sergeant and a tactics instructor at the Armored Center, Fort Knox, Ky. and in Germany with the 4th Armored Division and later the Dachau Stockade as a confinement specialist.

He now has nearly nine years of active duty behind him.

Sgt. Pernestti is married to the former Joyce Kidd of Cattlettsburg, Ky. The couple have three sons, Joe, Robin, and Mike.

21 Year Vet Ups Length Of Service

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

In the midst of battalion field training last week, a command post exercise was interrupted long enough for Lt. Col. Lewington S. Scott took the seventh enlistment oath of his 21 year career in active service.

Present at the brief ceremony were the company commanders and first sergeants of the battalion.

His years of service have seen him participate in the Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Central European and the 1953 Winter and Summer Korean campaigns.

1st of 38th Bombs 2nd Medical, 33-6; Still 1 Game Up

Second Place Engineers, 2nd of 23rd Keep Pace

By Peter E. Donoghue

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry team maintained its one-game lead over second place partners 2nd Engineer Battalion and 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry in the Cherokee Division of the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Tournament last week.

All three teams chalked up victories with pace-setting 1st of the 38th running its unbeaten string to six games. The "Rock of the Marne" club took another step toward the title; bombing the 2nd Medical Battalion, 33-6, last Tuesday.

Still in Contention

The 2nd Engineers kept in contention with a 14 - 13 squeaker win over 2nd MP Company Thursday while 2nd of 23rd won over 17th Artillery on a forfeit, 1-0.

In other games during the week, Monday the 2nd MP's took a 1-0 forfeit decision over hapless 702nd Maintenance Battalion; 37th Artillery blanked 2nd Aviation Battalion, 18-0; 1st of the 23rd shut-out 12th Artillery, 25-0; and 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion nipped 303rd ASA Battalion, 19-13.

Division Artillery headquarters trampled 2nd Medical Battalion, 25-7, Thursday in the only other action. High-scoring James Lindsey, Don Smith and Willie Jackson led the DivArty attack.

McLuces vs. World

Donald Young paced the 1st of the 38th victory over 2nd Medical Battalion, scoring 13 points. Dennis Scott, James Allen and Barry Ayers each contributed a touchdown to the win. John Hagen tallied 2nd Med's only six-pointer.

It was 2nd Engineer's versus Bob McLuces in the 14-13 victory over the 2nd MP's. Arthur Barry opened the scoring for the Engineers with a touchdown and Joe Oliver added the extra point. Wayne Jones scored the second TD and Philip DiOrio tallied the winning point after touchdown. McLuces collected all of the MP's points.

2nd Division SPORTS

Flag Football Loop Race Heads Into Final Week

Undefeated 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry clashes with second-place 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry Monday night at Kelley Hill's Essebagger Field in the top game in the 2nd Division Flag Football Tourney's final week of action in tri-league round-robin play. Game time is 6:30.

The teams will be battling it out in the Cherokee Division race. Only one game separates 1st of the 38th from 2nd of the 23rd and the 2nd Engineer Battalion. The Engineer's meet 2nd Medical Battalion Tuesday at Essebagger Field at 8 p.m.

Barring unforseen postponements, the tournament should be ready for its championship phase following Tuesday night's action. The top two clubs in the Apache, Commanche and Cherokee divisions will engage in a double elimination tournament for the division crown. Dates are expected to be announced next week.

Although 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry has a 6-1 record in the Apache Division, both second place 15th Artillery (4-1) and 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry (3-1) could take the marbles.

1st of the 9th has completed its schedule but 15th Artillery could earn a tie with a Monday win over 2nd Administration Company if they defeated 2nd of the 9th this past Wednesday.

Lindsey Regains Lead in Flagball Scoring Contest

Division Artillery's James Lindsey regained the individual scoring lead in the 2nd Infantry Division Flag Football Tournament last week with a seven-point effort in DivArty's 25-7 victory over 2nd Medical Battalion.

The seven points pushed him ahead of 122nd Signal Battalion's idle Randy Johnson who had been leading Lindsey, 48 points to 46.

The 7th Cavalry's Fern Williams maintained third place in the point derby with 43 points. Williams' has played in only four games to Lindsey's six and Johnson's five.

Joseph Oliver of the 2nd Engineer Battalion is a distant fourth in the race with 32. He is followed by 1st of the 23rd's fast-closing John Kelly who has tallied 31 points.

Doughboys Tie Campbell, 3-3

By Dave Braun

Both Fort Benning and Fort Campbell rode a 30-mile per hour wind for second half field goals last Friday afternoon at muddy Fryar Stadium in Kentucky, battling to a 3-3 deadlock before about 7,000 fans.

The Doughboys' Ron Quillen split the uprights with a 25-yarder late in the third period and then watched the Screaming Eagles' Tom Blanda match moves with a perfect placement from 40 yards away in the final stanza.

Fort Campbell brought the crowd to its feet with 14 seconds remaining in the game, only to have a bad halt to a Blanda field goal attempt from the Fort Benning 17.

Drives Fizzle

The Doughboys, fighting furiously to put the finishing touches on a successful but frustrating season, appeared to be on the touchdown move several times only to have drives fizzle out.

The tie brings Fort Benning's 1963 gridiron campaign to an end at 8-2-1, the losses coming at the hands of the Quantico, Marines, 7-3, and Fort Bragg, 14-7.

Midway in the first quarter the local contingent took over on its own 39-yard line. Five plays from scrimmage later speedy halfback Billy Williamson made a jumping catch of a Dave Sarette aerial on the Fort Campbell 20.

Forward Wall Holds

The Screaming Eagles forward wall rose to the occasion at this point and on fourth down a Quillen field goal attempt from the 45 fell short.

At the onset on the second period the Georgia post squad took over on the Kentuckians' 48 - yard stripe. With Williamson and Quillen hammering at the Fort Campbell line, the Doughboys moved for a first down on the 23, only to have the Screaming Eagles put up another fine defensive stand.

Fort Benning's field goal came with 3:11 left in the third period following a 40-yard march to the Fort Campbell 25.

Wheelwright Powerful

Powerful Ernie Wheelwright set up the Airborne Division's three-point score with 8:08 remaining on the scoreboard clock in the game. The six-foot, three-inch, 235-pounder, cracked the Doughboy line with bruising runs, moving the pigskin from the Fort Benning 47 to the 24-yard marker.

Late in the contest Fort Campbell took over on its own 42. With Wheelwright getting the call on nine of 11 plays, the Screaming Eagles moved all the way to the Doughboy 24.

From here center Roy Cherry made a bad snap from center on the 30 and Fort Benning recovered the loose ball on the Screaming Eagles 39-yard line.

Between the Sidelines

By Ted Williamson

While I do not consider myself well enough informed to attempt to pick an All-America team, I have picked a team of eleven stalwarts whom I believe will have the best shots at All-America berths.

The center position should be unanimous this year. Illinois' Dick Butkus has no peers when it comes to rugged linebacking or offensive play. Butkus has been instrumental in the Illini's most successful season since the days of Tommy O'Connell.

The task of picking outstanding lineman is a difficult one, and becomes even more so when it comes to picking guards. Steve DeLong of Tennessee has been the lone bright spot in the Vols' disappointing season. DeLong is a 220-pounder who has been outstanding all season, and particularly in last week's stunning upset of Kentucky.

The other guard spot could well go to Jack Cverko of Northwestern. Cverko has been the mainstay of the Wildcat line for the last three years and has provided plenty of pass protection for "Tossin" Tommy Myers.

The nation's No. 1 team supplies one of our tackles in the form of Scott Appleton. Appleton anchors a line that has given up only 52 points thus far in the 1963 campaign.

Carl Eller, a standout at Minnesota, fills in the other tackle slot. Eller is a defensive standout feared by all opposing halfbacks, and is one of the top pro prospects in the nation.

Bob Lacey of North Carolina is one of the top pro prospects at end and is the Tarheel's leading pass receiver. Lacey combines with quarterback Junior Edge to make the Tarheels' air game one of the most effective in the business.

Louisiana State's Billy Truax would be our flanker for the other side of the line. Truax's defensive play has been a thorn in the side of opposing backfields all season.

Now we come to the glitter-getters — the backs. I'll save the best for last and start with the fullbacks.

Most of the other backs have been overshadowed by the quarterbacks this season, but Oklahoma's Jim Grisham has probably been the outstanding fullback in the nation this year. Grisham is a crunching runner and blocker and is also an outstanding linebacker.

The halfback slots are wide open and my choice could well get lost in the shuffle. Never the less, I am riding with "Squirmin" Sherman Lewis of Michigan State and Paul Martha of Pittsburgh.

Lewis has been the big gun in the Spartans' explosive offense and their drive for the Pasadena petal parade. Martha has led the Pitt Panther to an almost sure bowl bid.

There is no doubt in my mind who the greatest quarterback in the nation is at the present time. There are many great ones. There are Jimmy Sidles, Billy Lothridges, George Miras, Tommy Myerses' and Don Trulls, all great. But the greatest is Roger Staubach.

A week from tomorrow is the day for Staubach. The Army-Navy game is at hand and Staubach will be spotlighted for the last time this season on coast-to-coast television.

So here's how they stack up. At ends, Bob Lacey of North Carolina and Billy Truax of LSU; tackles, Scott Appleton of Texas and Carl Eller of Minnesota; guards, Steve DeLong of Tennessee and Jack Cverko of Northwestern; center, Dick Butkus of Illinois. In the backfield, Roger Staubach of Navy at quarterback, Sherm Lewis of Michigan State and Paul Martha of Pitt at the halfbacks and Jim Grisham of Oklahoma at fullback.

Norsworthy Paces 197th To 2nd Win

Brigade Troops had to go into double-overtime to subdue Center Troop Command Team No. 1 Saturday night at Briant Wells Field House, 98 to 92.

A 31-point effort by guard Jim Norsworthy highlighted the second straight victory for Jim Gregory's five. John Truehardt and Sam Brown also hit double figures for the Brigade, scoring 19 and 14 points respectively. Charles Freeman was the leading rebounder.

Joe Levitsky's 19 counters led the Troop Command attack in the nip and tuck contest. Levitsky was his team's leading rebounder.

Growing AFL Sets Sights On Pro Title

Will there ever be a "world championship" game between the champion teams of the National and American Football Leagues?

To date no official answer has been given to that question, only garbled opinion. Club owners in the NFL and AFL are at opposite ends of the stick.

The NFL, quite naturally, is slow to recognize the young AFL. The "senior circuit" has a good thing going and isn't anxious to share the wealth.

It's safe to assume that an inter-league championship game is still several years away, but the probability of such an annual championship game can't go unnoticed. When the paying customers decide that there should be a championship game between two titlists, then officials of both leagues will convene at the drawing board.

Army Could Block Clay-Liston Fight

Heavyweight challenger Cassius Clay fears not champion Sonny Liston nor an upcoming appointment for his Army draft board physical examination.

"I will be there," said Clay, in commenting on the announcement from his hometown, Louisville, Ky., that he has been ordered to report for his initial pre-induction Nov. 21.

The call to the colors could deliver a knockout sock to Clay's fat ulously rich title fight with Liston in February.

Clay and his entourage, traveling in the challenger's private bus, spent the night at a motel on Chicago's South Side en route to New York.

"I am not worried about anything yet. Not until I get the official greetings from the draft board," he said. "I haven't got them yet."

Then in more typical Clay style, he wisecracked: "Looks like Uncle Sam wants to miss out on the tax money from 15 million dollars, well, that's his lookout."

At Baltimore, Md., Bob Nilon, executive vice president of Inter - Continental Promotions, Inc., said plans for the championship match are apace.

"We are going right ahead with our plans because we are confident that the United States Government is too beneficient not to grant Clay a four - month deferment so he can make the most of his life — to fight for the heavyweight crown and the wealth that goes with it," Nilon said.

Clay an' Liston signed for the match recently. The site was not designated and it was anybody's guess where it would be held.

A spokesman from Clay's Louisville draft board ventured no opinion on when the Louisville Lip might be called up, assuming he passes the physical.

He pointed out that selective service regulations require at least 21 days between the notification of acceptability and induction. It's possible that two notices could be mailed at the same time, in which case Clay might find himself in khaki before the first of the year.

The draft board spokesman said the recent decree by President Kennedy which exempts married men has accelerated the drafting of single men like Clay, who will be 22 on January 17.

Top Small College Coach, Football Banquet Speaker

Dave Nelson, head football coach at the University of Delaware in Wilmington, is slated to be the guest speaker at the Fort Benning Doughboy's 1963 football banquet, set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the post Country Club.

The "Blue Hens" of Delaware are currently rated the number one small college football eleven in the country by the United Press International board of coaches.

The guests at the banquet, in addition to the Doughboy football squad and coaches, will include approximately 60 key officers from Fort Benning. Also on hand will be representatives of the Fort Benning and Columbus news media.

The Doughboys ended their 1963 football campaign last weekend against Fort Campbell, giving them a final season record of 8-2-1. The two losses came at the hands of the Quantico, Marines, 7-3, and Fort Bragg, 14-7. They tied Fort Campbell, 3-3.

Post Gets Its Own 'Zoo' For Test In Assault Unit

By Spt Bob Thomas

As the mighty Mojave settles to the ground, the nose doors swing slowly open and a Sidewinder, a Desert Rat and a Tote-Gote roll down the ramp. Nearby, a huge Chinook disgorges a Kangaroo and a Terra-Gator from within its yawning interior.

Something from Dr. Seuss' latest book for children? No, just a hypothetical description of an air assault landing employing some of the new experimental equipment under test by the 11th Air Assault Division.

Known to the Sky Soldiers as the "zoo," this collection of mechanical animals is just another of the facets of the new air mobile division. When the air assault concept was presented by the Howze Board in late 1962, it soon became obvious that standard Army vehicles were too bulky and cumbersome for practical use by the new division. Immediately the plea went out to Army planners: find or fabricate vehicles consonant with the air mobile concept.

Army Mule

The first member of the "zoo" was the already tried and tested mechanical mule. It was light enough to be slung beneath the assault division's helicopters, yet study enough to handle the equipment needs of the men. However, as the air mobile concept moved into the rigors of actual training, it soon was apparent that the mule was not the only answer.

New items of equipment were screened and given preliminary tests to determine their capabilities as potential air assault vehicles. Out of this has come the present air assault "zoo." At the present time, the "zoo" consists of six "animals" besides the mule.

The collection of mechanical innovations is housed, operated and maintained by the Heavy Equipment Section of the 11th Air Assault's 711th Maintenance Battalion. Personnel of the battalion are responsible for conducting the rigorous tests and have been doing so since the first machines were received last summer.

Kangaroo Truck

The Kangaroo, the only one of the "animals" which resembles a normal vehicle, is a military version of the commercial Jeep pickup with a diesel engine, a low cut cab and a reinforced bed. It is designed to give lightweight mobility with a lower overall silhouette than the standard three - quarter - ton truck.

The Kangaroo was fabricated only two weeks after the manufacturer received the specifications. Both the CH-47 Chinook and the CH-37 Mojave are capable of air-lifting the Kangaroo, loaded or unloaded.

Looking like go-karts with balloon tires, the Desert Rat and the Sidewinder are designed to transport two men and small amounts of cargo over virtually all types of terrain.

Featuring lightweight functional construction and identical gasoline engines, both machines are easily airlifted and may be utilized immediately upon landing. The principal difference between the two lies in the manner of steering and the fact that the Desert Rat has four wheels and the Sidewinder has three. Both vehicles are powered by chain drive and can negotiate sixty-degree slopes.

Tote-Gote Scooter

The Tote-Gote is a two-wheeled motor scooter that bumps, slides and bounces over all obstacles short of deep water. Its lightweight frame and powerful gasoline engine make it an ideal shuttle vehicle to otherwise inaccessible areas, and it could easily be employed as an emergency cargo vehicle dispatched to isolated areas.

Present considerations for the Tote-Gote also include using it as a means of transportation for commanders visiting the wide - spread elements of their units. It may be loaded internally or as a sling load on almost any Army helicopter.

Probably the most interesting of the "animals" is the Terra-Gator, so named because of its affinity to both land and water.

The Terra-Gator is extremely versatile and can negotiate steep slopes, deep water and rugged terrain with no more change than switching the propelling mechanism. On land, it is driven on six balloon tires; in the water, it is propelled by a small screw which is easily withdrawn into the hull. It can carry two men and their equipment or similar cargo and will be utilized as a reconnaissance vehicle for advance patrols.

The newest addition to the "zoo" is a six-wheeled M-151 jeep designed to provide additional cargo capability similar to the present mobility of the quarter - ton truck. Not yet given an "animal" nickname, the vehicle is simply a version of the well - known Army jeep with tandem wheels added in the rear.

Just how well the "zoo" will stand up to the rigors of air assault living remains to be seen, but there is little doubt that the men of the 711th will put them to a thorough test. In fact, the sight of an olive drab, low - slung, balloon-tired form scooting across the sand, bouncing over a hill, paddling through the water or otherwise propelling itself over land or water is becoming an increasingly familiar sight to the Sky Soldiers and Fort Benning.

Women Drivers Are Courteous and Safe

When it comes to driving, courtesy, women beat the men turn signals down.

At least that's the situation found among teen-age student drivers by 100 of the nation's driver education instructors who have taught a quarter of a million students how to drive. And most of the instructors are men.

But there's a consolation for the males. Boys usually are quicker to grasp the technical fundamentals of operating a car than girls are, according to the educators, who still give girls the nod when it comes to safety.

Ninety-seven per cent of those polled agreed that road courtesy — strong points of the girls — is more important to safe driving than manipulative skill.

The instructors chalked up another near-unanimous vote when it came to comparing students' attitudes toward academic study and their desire to become good drivers. Ninety per cent agreed that good students tend to make better drivers.

Drivetrainer teachers also pointed out a special reason why parents should be careful in their driving habits. Their teen-agers may be watching.

Students frequently bring into their Drivotrainer program bad driving habits picked up from parents and other adult motorists. The two adult delinquencies mentioned most often were speeding and failure to signal for turns.

In the Drivotrainer system, students "drive" stationary simulated cars through realistic traffic situations shown on a classroom movie screen. The instructors credited the system with enabling them to provide good training for handling highway emergencies, a phase of driving too hazardous to teach under actual on-the-road conditions. They also ranked the system high in developing good attitudes in beginning drivers.

Like most beginners, Drivotrainer system students have found backing and parallel parking to be two of the most difficult driving maneuvers to learn, the teachers said.

Now marking its 10th anniversary, the Drivotrainer method is currently in use in more than 300 high schools, colleges, and military installations throughout the United States. Half a million motorists have received Drivotrainer instruction, either as high school students or in adult courses offered by many of the schools using the system.

CG Receives Two Letters Lauding Post

Two letters received by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich commend highly the activities of Fort Benning personnel during the Association of the United States Army Mobility Symposium held here last week.

The Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, expressed his appreciation for a "job well done" and said in his opinion, "everyone who participated accomplished his task in a thoroughly professional manner." He said further that ". . . a performance of such quality by soldiers of high caliber served to create a favorable image of the Army in the minds of the key members of industry who were present." Gen. Wheeler also commended those who had "worked behind the scenes" to make the symposium such a success.

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) James M. Gavin, national president of the AUSA, also in a letter to Gen. Rich, said, "I felt that it was a milestone in our relations with industry. We have never done as well before and I know that it was most helpful to the Army." He added the administrative arrangements and demonstrations "went off like clockwork."

Surgeon Says

Prenatal Care Cannot Be Over Emphasized

By Maj. Richard J. Snyder

It is surprising that many women consider medical care during pregnancy unnecessary. Time and again one hears, "Why should I see a doctor during pregnancy and wait an hour to be seen for a few minutes when I feel well and have never had any problems."

Many women feel that presenting themselves for care in the last month of pregnancy constitutes satisfactory prenatal care or that prenatal visits may be skipped without consequence. Let's discuss some of the problems and pitfalls that may be avoided by adequate medical care during pregnancy.

The patient who is seen for the first time has a physical examination and certain routine laboratory studies. These are designed to pick up diseases the woman may have in association with pregnancy. Since many diseases are made worse by the added strain of pregnancy, it is important that any additional problems be diagnosed early in pregnancy for proper treatment.

A part of the physical examination is a pelvic examination with measurements of the bones of the pelvis. This is done to determine if the child can be expected to deliver normally or if cesarean section may have to be considered when labor occurs.

A cancer detection test or "Pap smear" is also part of the physical exam. This may detect early precancerous conditions in women who would not have come to a doctor if it were not for this pregnancy.

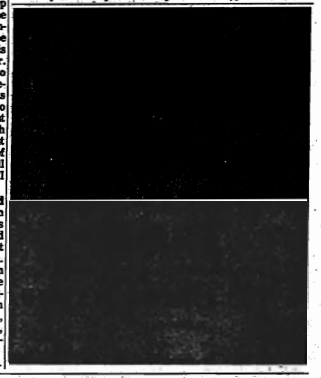
The blood tests taken during pregnancy are valuable in several ways. During pregnancy a certain amount of the mother's iron stores are given to the infant and therefore the mother may develop anemia which the routine blood tests will indicate. Another problem which may be detected by blood testing is the Rh negative mother. When a patient is found to be Rh negative she will require additional blood tests as pregnancy progresses to determine whether the infant is becoming sensitized to Rh negative blood. Without knowledge of the existence of this problem most infants will be stillborn or seriously ill when born.

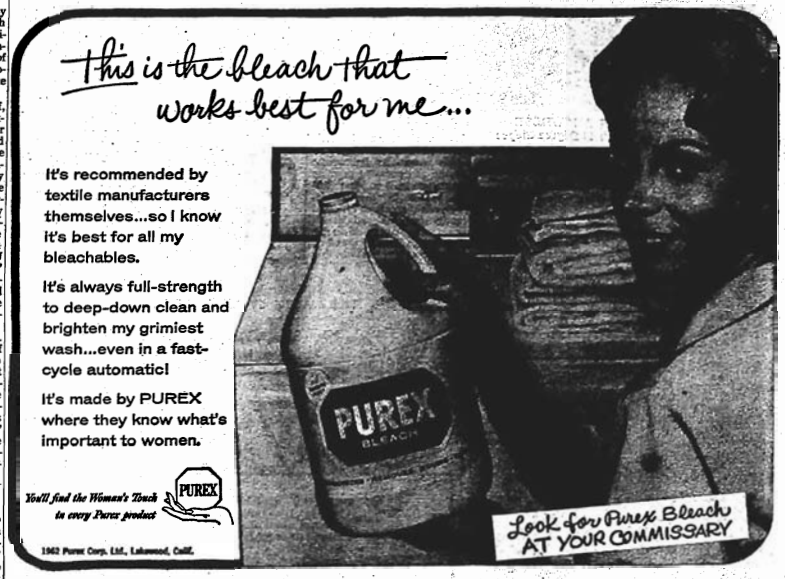
During the monthly and semimonthly visits attention is paid to several factors which may not seem related — blood pressure, weight gain, and a urine specimen. These determinations, when abnormal, may lead to the detection of toxemia of pregnancy or preeclampsia which has three cardinal findings, elevation of blood pressure, rapid weight gain, and albumin in the urine.

Since this disease of pregnancy is potentially so dangerous to mother and infant and usually does not manifest itself by overt symptoms until well advanced, it is of vital importance that these three determinations be made at periodic intervals. Here, too, a proper diet plays an important role in the prevention of toxemia, and the patient who is seen regularly in prenatal clinic is conscious of her weight and any tendency she may have to gain weight too rapidly.

In addition to the previously mentioned determinations, the growth of the infant is evaluated as is its heart rate and the position in which the infant is being carried is determined. In many instances an abnormal position is changed to normal quite easily during a prenatal visit.

This has been a brief glimpse of some of the objectives we hope to accomplish in the prenatal clinic.





Your Dental Health

Oral Specialists Have Never Ending Duties

At Fort Benning we have over 18,000 patients with more than 4 cavities, and 10,000 with 1-4 cavities. For estimating purposes, let's give each of the 18,000 men 5 cavities, and the 10,000 men 2 cavities. This gives us a total of 110,000 cavities, or about 2,000 cavities per dentist.

This amount of cavities really wouldn't be a problem if the patients remained static, but we all know the turn-over is such that about the time a patient is finished, he leaves, and a new patient appears.

Army statistics show that every 10 recruits need 79.5 fillings, 1 surgical procedures, and 1.8 dentures. In this case, if the replacement reporting at Fort Benning has received no dental care, we find ourselves behind the 'eight-ball', actually losing ground since the man he replaces had probably had his work finished or nearly so. Another factor entering the picture is the development of new cavities, which occurs steadily unless we interfere with the process.

Considering the almost hopeless situation pictured above, we still haven't considered 'pyorrhea' or 'gum diseases'. More and more we are realizing the fruitlessness of doing fine operative (filling) work on teeth with a shaky foundation. We must first eliminate these problems before we start any other treatment.

Good operative dentistry cannot save bad teeth undermined by pyorrhea anymore than a coat of paint can cure termite infestation. The underlying trouble must be removed — we must clean up the gum disorder first.

Must Prepare Quickly

'Chuck and Bud Show' Is Always Prepared

Holding three of four briefings a day on the air assault concept is not unusual for members of the Test Evaluation and Control Group's briefing section. They have done it many times. All they need is a few minutes notice to get their training aids set and they are ready to go.

Headed by Capt. Chuck Fountain, the briefing section has prepared briefings for military men from the Army Chief of Staff right on down the Chain of Command. Capt. Fountain is one half of what is known as the "Chuck and Bud Show". The other half is Capt. Bud Krapf II.

Although the two officers make it look easy, a tremendous amount of work has gone into the 200 briefings which have been given to more than 1,000 personnel since the inception of a regular briefing organization.

Both praise the outstanding support they get from M-Sgt. John R. Dale Jr. Sgt. Dale is operation sergeant for the TEC Group's Operations Branch which has the overall responsibility for all briefings. The branch is headed by Lt. Col. Royal B. Brown.

One of Dale's jobs is to develop and prepare training aids for almost all briefings given by TEC Group personnel.

He gets a big assist from SFC Elliott T. Brown and the drafting section which, in addition to Brown, is made up of Pvt. Kenneth Krall, PFC David L. McFarland, PFC Donald A. West and PFC Leroy C. Smith.

Once the briefing aids are drafted, it is up to Sp5 John Wright Jr., Sp4 Lindell L. Johnson and Sp4 Peter T. Basil of the briefing section to finalize the aids and operate the equipment used for the "Chuck and Bud" show.

Airborne Training

Jump Committee's Job Is Tops in Importance

Roaring engines shatter the morning stillness. Iron birds taxi down the runway. Open doors slam shut. Aircraft lumber into the sky. Aboard, there is no talking among the passengers. The planes circle to Alabama. The jumpmaster commands "Stand in the door." Innate fears must be conquered. Confidence in himself and his equipment is increased.

To be a paratrooper, an Infantry School student must make five parachute jumps from aircraft in flight, three of which must be mass exits and one with combat equipment. When a soldier becomes a qualified parachutist, the Jump Committee of the school's Airborne Air Mobility Department is certain that it has accomplished its mission, that of implementing the principles and techniques of military parachuting.

Commanded by Maj. Donald D. Dowie, a combat veteran and master parachutist, the Jump Committee is organized into three platoons: Rear Line, Field, and the Jumpmaster Platoon. Exceptionally well - qualified, the fifty enlisted men and officers of the committee can never regard their duties as routine when lives are at stake.

Getting Ready

From the time the prospective jumper double times to Lawson Field until the moment he boards his plane, he is under the direct supervision of the Rear Line Platoon. Manifests are verified, personal inspections conducted, equipment is issued and final platform instructions and briefings are given. Experienced cadre answer last-minute questions and reassure nervous students that they will become excellent troopers. No detail is too insignificant for the men of the Rear Line Platoon.

From the hands of the Rear Line crew, the jumper passes to the watchful eyes of the Jumpmaster Platoon. The student, completely equipped for his parachute jump, climbs aboard the aircraft where he meets his first jumpmaster, identified by his white trousers and bloused boots. While in flight, the jumpmaster is responsible for the troop compartment including the safety, morale and combat condition of his troops. Only on his command can a jump be executed.

When the green light in the troop compartment flashes on indicating the aircraft is over the drop zone, it is the jumpmaster who gives the command "Go!." Suddenly the aircraft is empty except for the crew. The jumpmaster's duty is done.

Hours before the aircraft leave the airfield, the Field Platoon is manning their stations at either of Fort Benning's drop zones, Fryar or Lee Fields. They have checked the wind velocity and terrain conditions. They have insured that medics are in positions and that coaches are ready to guide students in landing falls and parachute recovery. As the jumpers exit the aircraft, the silk billows at 1,250 feet and the planes skim overhead, the drop zone drama begins.

Commands are given while the jumpers are still aloft. Expert instructions are relayed to students with malfunctions. Jumpers are advised to make proper directional slips to avoid collisions with other parachutists. A minimum of accidents and injuries are the marks of the Field Platoon. Their performance record attests to that fact.

With teamwork as the keynote, the Jump Committee strives to accomplish its mission. The jumper stands in the door. Below him he watches the ground twist at crazy angles. He notices the contour of the land, the colors of the earth. At 1,250 feet jump altitude he is given the command "Go!". He is an airborne trooper.

Air Assault Division Plans Reflection Day

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, has proclaimed next Friday as Religious Reflection Day for men of his command.

The general stated that the purpose of the day would be the "enriching of the religious and moral life of the 11th and to assist in creating a better climate for individual worship and personal dedication to Almighty God."

He also stated his wish that all personnel give their support to the Day of Religious Retreat which will be held during duty hours for men of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths.

Increased attendance at regularly scheduled religious services and greater participation in the religious program of the division, were also listed by Gen. Kinnard as one of his objectives in issuing the proclamation.

"I am confident," the proclamation concludes, "that many moral benefits will be gained, spiritual strength increased, and the sense of God's blessings more fully realized by this Day of Religious Retreat . . . the effort of every member of the 11th Air Assault Division will prove worthwhile."

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ray W. Rowland, division chaplain, announced that the theme "High Moments With God" has been adopted for the Day of Religious Retreat.

Local clergymen from Columbus will be featured speakers Dr. Sidney A. Gates of First Presbyterian Church; Dr. Veyman R. Cleveland from Saint Luke Methodist Church, and Rev. Clarence E. Younce of Southside Baptist Church, will present the Inspirational Messages at the Protestant sessions.

Roman Catholics will be addressed by Rev. William Dowling, of Our Lady of Lourdes' Church, and Rev. Austin Martin, of St. Benedict's Church.

Rabbi Leonard Borstein of Shearith Israel Synagogue, will lead Jewish personnel in retreat exercises at the Main Post Jewish Center.

Protestant sessions will be conducted in three locations: 1st Brigade Chapel (Building No. 4486), 11th Division Artillery and 11th Aviation Group Chapel (Building No. 5201) and the 197th and 10th Air Transport Brigade (Building No. 2820). The Roman Catholic Retreat will be held in the 11th Air Assault Division Chapel in Building 4090, and the 197th and 10th Chapel.

THE PRIZE is a cloak and dagger suspense thriller in color for mature and young people. Paul Newman, Elke Sommer and Edward G. Robinson star. Six Nobel Prize winners gather in Stockholm to accept their honored awards and immediately become involved in foreign intrigue and mystery, narrowly escaping death at the hands of the Communists.

THE L-SHAPED ROOM, starring Leslie Caron and Tom Bell, is a romantic drama for mature people. Escaping from the suffocating atmosphere of her provincial home and after a loveless affair, a young girl finds true love with a struggling young writer.

GO NAKED IN THE WORLD with Gina Lollobrigida, Anthony Franciosa and Ernest Borgnine, is about the triangular relationship between a glamorous woman of the world, a returned Korean War Veteran who falls deeply in love with her, and the G.I.'s father who she has known intimately before meeting his son. The three are combined in this high-voltage adult drama for a good story.

THE TRAITORS, a Universal film, starring Patrick Allen, Jacqueline Ellis, and James Maxwell, finds a scientist who is trailed to a movie house where he passes secret information on to another contact. Interesting and intriguing is the pursuit of the spies through the streets of London by security agents.

Post Little Theater Group Presents 'The Zoo Story'

By Larry Bykken
Drama Critic

"The Zoo Story," by Edward Albee, was presented last week by the Little Theater Group as Fort Benning's contribution to the Third Army One-Act Play contest.

"The Zoo Story" was not a good play to represent the full versatility of the theater group. A park bench is the sole stage prop. The only background sound is a brief sequence of city noises which are heard at the beginning and end of the play. The weight of the performance, therefore, falls on the play's lone two characters, Peter and Jerry played by David Lile and Ted Martin respectively, and of course the director, Peter Nyberg.

The Little Theater Group chose to present a play that could have easily boomeranged. "The Zoo Story" is a fairly recent play that seeks to make a point through the use of shock tactics and brutally realistic dialogue — the point being man's alienation from man and his inability to communicate.

An effective presentation depends on the two characters (particularly the "permanent transient," Jerry) achieving the proper empathy with the audience. I did not feel that they completely succeeded — I would call their performances competent rather than noteworthy. Jerry seemed to display a slight stage nervousness at the beginning, but as he became more immersed in the play, the audience became more "involved."

The Third Army One-Act Play Contest is administered by the Third Army Special Services Section represented by Lt. Charles Greenwall. Lt. Greenwall is currently touring Third Army installations, judging the plays with the help of two local persons, considered to possess appropriate qualifications, selected at each installation. Judging the Fort Benning production were Jerry Murray assistant professor of the Language Division, Columbus College, and Joel Turner, WRBL publicity director.

According to Lt. Greenwall, the plays are judged by a point system with the main weight being given to interpretation which includes such considerations as overall conception, realization of roles, teamwork, and play ensemble. Consideration is also given to technical aspects, suitability, and various miscellaneous categories.

Memorial Honors Dog

'Calc' Was Impartially Loyal to All

By 2nd Lt. Errol Reiss

"Calculator. Born: ? Died: August 29, 1923. He made Better Dogs of Us All." Many of us pass the stone monument standing in the rear of the Infantry School Building which bears this inscription.

Who was Calcalator? Was he a famous World War I war dog whose heroic deeds earned him a permanent memorial?

Although few present personnel remember his story, everyone stationed here between 1921 and 1923 knew him. Far from a war dog, Calculator was a nondescript specimen of doubtful lineage who had a crippled leg. His name was suggested by the halting manner of his progress in which he "put down three and carried one."

He had an uncanny knowledge of Fort Benning automobiles and considered it his privilege to ride back and forth between Columbus and the post in any officer's car. Members of the garrison made a habit of driving by the Ralston Hotel corner on their return from town to see if "Calc" was waiting for a lift.

Not the one-man-dog type, Calc was impartially loyal to all his friends, never staying too long in one place. He always followed the most interesting events of the school, lending his presence to field problems and solemn occasions alike. The post mascot's panhandling and hitchhiking ceased when Calculator was unaccountably poisoned in 1923.

Everyone had grown so fond of him that a collection was taken for the monument which still occupies its place of honor.

11th Air Assault Signal Battalion Gets 101 System

Company A, 511th Signal Battalion, just received a new piece of special signal equipment called the MRC 101.

It is a four channel Very High Frequency (VHF) system mounted in a one-quarter-ton trailer. It can be slinged-loaded or air-lifted.

The new system is designed to relay voice and teletype messages or both at the same time over a distance of about 40 miles.

Three men are needed to put it in operation, but only one man operates it. This job falls to Sgt. Edward A. Leeson Sr. or Sp4 Donald L. Sibole.

This new system was proposed by the men from Company A in line with a plea from the commanding general to travel faster, better, and lighter within the division.

History of Communism

Bolsheviks Disenchant A Confused Population

(Fourth in a series of 20 articles entitled The History of Communism, by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Diego, Calif.)

While the revolutionary government was dominated by left-wing elements, it was not their revolution. Alan Moorehead notes, ". . .the truth was this March rising, like so many other lesser risings in the past, was not directly provoked by the revolutionary leaders, least of all by Lenin and the Bolsheviks" (who, in fact, were in exile at the time).

A provisional government was established and immediately gained recognition by America, Great Britain and France.

The somewhat disorganized Bolsheviks in Petrograd were commanded by two novice Leninists: Vyacheslave Djugashvili, the latter better known later as Joseph Stalin.

The time seemed right for the Bolshevik first string to move in. By secret arrangements with the German government, based on a pledge to sue for peace as soon as they could gain control, Lenin and others were shuttled through Germany in a sealed train and released at the Finnish border in mid-April.

Lenin was given a hero's arrival — until he spoke. His demand that the Provisional Government be destroyed, that workers, soldiers and peasants be armed for seizure of the factories, lands and government was not warmly received. He was severely rebuffed.

Fate, however, played into Lenin's hands. The majority groups (Social Democrats and Social Revolutionaries) were hopelessly divided and neither would yield ground to the other.

The workers (the "industrial Proletariat") found things no better in this new government, so again they revolted. When 30,000 workers appeared on the streets July 16, Lenin and his crew jumped on the bandwagon.

It was an ill-fated effort. A heavy summer shower dispersed the rioters and they never reassembled. Lenin was driven once more into exile, his Bolsheviks blamed for the entire affair.

By September, the Bolsheviks had regained much of their strength. In fact, they were able to ram through the Petrograd Soviet (council) almost their entire program: a government of socialists, exclusively; the control of industry by workers; land reforms; and agreements to sue for peace.

On the morning of Nov. 7, Trotsky, as chairman of the Military Revolutionary Committee, issued a proclamation announcing the fall of the Provisional Government — and then, with friendly troops, proceeded to deliver the coup d'grace.

By the 12th, Petrograd was firmly in the hands of the Leninists and on the 15th Moscow opposition collapsed.

Prime Minister Kerensky circumvented the Leninists and gained a national election for representatives to a new Assembly.

The Bolsheviks took a beating in the free elections. So Lenin waited until the assembly met and then, with his followers and a number of Bolshevik militia, routed the meeting and dispersed the membership. The date was Jan. 18, 1918.

Trotsky later wrote, "The simple, open, brutal breaking-up of the Constituent Assembly dealt formal democracy (in Russia) a finishing stroke from which it never recovered."

Gen. Billingslea Delivers Speech To MOWW Unit

More than 110 members of the Fort Benning Military Order of World Wars (MOWW), their wives and guests attended the chapter's monthly meeting at the Main Officers' Open Mess Nov. 21.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, discussed human aspects of the ROAD (Reorganization Objective Army Division) concept and the changes technology has had on human nature.

He also compared his division's participation in U.S. Savings Bonds campaigns and fund drives and the educational levels reached by his men with the national average.

Gen. Billingslea was introduced by Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Marcus B. Bell, third vice commander of the MOWW.

Next month's meeting will be held Dec. 19.

Gen. Harris Nominated To Become Full General

Lt. Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general of the Seventh U. S. Army in Europe, has been nominated for the rank of general.

The former Fort Benning commander will be promoted to the four-star rank upon confirmation of his nomination by the Senate.

Gen. Harris came to the post in April, 1960, as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School.

He served in the dual capacity until July, 1961, when he became commanding general of I Corps in Korea, a position he held until assuming command of Seventh Army.

Shortly after the activation of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) at Fort Benning Feb. 15, 1963, Gen. Harris came to the post to perform an obligation to his former command. He presented to the 11th Air Assault Division "Troopers Mug," which he had held in trust for the 11th Airborne Division.

The mug, which bears the names of former commanders of the 11th Airborne Division, a trophy called the ssion, was intrusted to Gen. Harris for safekeeping until "the 11th finds its wings again." The 11th Air Assault Division accepted the mug as successors to the "Angel Division."

89 Air Assault Division Troops 'Go Airborne'

Eighty - nine Sky Soldiers from the 3rd Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry, received their parachute wings in ceremonies held at the Infantry Center's Parachute School graduation exercises at Lawson Army Airfield Nov. 22.

This represents the largest group to qualify as parachutist at one time since the 11th Air Assault Division was activated in February. Company D, with 24 new troopers had the highest number of graduates. Both Companies B, and C, had 23 each, and Company A, was next with 11. Headquarters Company graduated 8.

Three major units in the 11th are expected to be fully airborne qualified before the Christmas holidays.

Interference With Army Convoys Is Nothing New in East Germany

The detention of a U.S. Army convoy by the Soviets is nothing new. It is the same old tune—a time which has been played off and on in different keys since the close of World War II. Inherent in the problem is one major factor—the division of Germany — geographically and politically.

With the unconditional surrender of Germany in May, 1945, the responsibility for the government of the German people fell to the four occupying powers—the United States, Great Britain, the U.S.S.R., and France.

The spade work for this government had been accomplished during the Yalta Conference but remained to be firmed up at the Potsdam meeting of President Harry S. Truman, Premier Joseph V. Stalin, Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill, and after Churchill's defeat in British elections, Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee.

The resulting agreement divided Germany into four zones and transferred chief authority within the zones to the respective American, Russian, British and French military commanders. Authority in matters regarding the whole of Germany was transferred to a four-power Allied Control Council. Berlin, located within the Soviet zone and separated from the western zones by some 110 miles, was to be occupied by all four powers and to be governed by an inter-Allied authority.

Seeds of such dissension sown between the U.S.S.R. and the Western allies found fertile ground within the Allied Control Council.

It had not even begun to function when the rift broke it up and Russia withdrew its representative. The deterioration of relations was further evidenced as the Soviets began to place obstacles in the way of communications between western Germany and Berlin. The first major muscle-flexing by the Russians took place in the form of the Berlin blockade instituted during the summer of 1948.

During its year of life, the blockade proved the mettle of the Western allies. The tally at the conclusion of the Berlin air lift showed that 2,323,738 tons of food, fuel, and raw materials had been flown into the beleaguered city. But more significantly, it clearly indicated the determination and resourcefulness of the Western allies to stand fast and if need be, to fight for their rights in Germany.

The success of the air lift led to the establishment of a tacit working agreement which left Berlin divided

'If Only' Drivers Make Up Majority of Motorists

Want to bet that you won't be involved in a traffic accident?

If so, get good odds, even if you have a perfect driving record, because the experts say chances are 50-50 that you or some member of your family will be involved in a highway mishap before your driving days are through!

With traffic accidents in the U. S. topping the 10,000-000 mark annually, the people whose business it is to help keep you safe point out that only around 2,000,000 of these accidents involve normally reckless or irresponsible drivers. Around 8,000,000 involve the usually proficient, normally conscientious, comparatively accident - free group, known as "good" drivers.

If you fit in this group—and most of us do — then beware, lest you become one of the nation's bargeoning crop of "If-Only" drivers.

What's an If-Only driver? The term was devised by traffic engineers of one of the nation's largest insurers of cars and trucks, after their studies revealed that nearly all of the country's 10,000,-000 annual traffic accidents could be prevented! An If-Only driver, they say, is one who gets involved in a traffic accident that could have been prevented if only he had acted, or reacted differently.

Authorities point out that even some of the most intelligent and experienced motorists sometimes court disaster. Before you eliminate yourself from the ranks of If-Only drivers check yourself against this list of five psychological driving types. If you fit into even one of these categories you have the makings of an If-Only driver:

The Power - Packer. The very young and the very old sometimes try to play this role. They use all their cars' power — especially enjoy sudden bursts of speed — because it makes them feel more powerful.

The Big Wheel. This man seeks a feeling of skill rather than power, is fond of shifting lanes and riding very close to the car ahead — trying to 'outsmart' the normal traffic.

The "Teacher." This driver seeks to "teach that guy a lesson" (often, by cutting him off) a public service. Secretly, the teacher is really trying to boost his own ego!

The Gambler. To this fellow a car is like a ride at an amusement park. He takes chances, enjoys the thrill of danger, and one day he'll run smack into his own fate on the highway.

The Economist. This penny - pincher delays replacing burned-out lights and worn-out windshield wipers and probably won't have his brakes adjusted until he's crawled up on your back bumper. In the long run his attitude will cost him more money than the repairs would have.

Attitudes like these, when the driver recognizes them, are easy to change. The chances for a lifetime of accident - free driving can also be increased by adhering to the simple fundamentals of driving; those basic rules that often are disregarded simply because they are so very common. Here are 10 reminders that can help you avoid If-Only driving, and perhaps save your life in the process.

1. Keep speed under control. Legal speed limits are set for ideal conditions. When traffic is heavy and conditions poor, lower your speed. Driving too fast for conditions is the biggest single factor in accidents.

2. Keep right of the center line. Sounds elementary, but head-on collisions are the most deadly type of accident.

3. Yield the right-of-way, even if it's legally yours. Who wants to be dead right? When in doubt — Yield.

4. Obey traffic signs every time. Nine times out of ten is no good; The time you don't is the time you wish you had.

5. Check rear - view mirror and be extra careful when changing lanes. Never pass on hills or curves, and watch out for those who do!

6. Long before turning, ease into the proper lane and give a continuous signal until turn is completed.

7. Keep a comfortable distance from car ahead. On open highway keep a car-length behind for each 10 mph of speed. Keep your eyes and mind ahead of the car ahead.

8. Never drive after drinking. Alcohol figures in one out of every three fatal traffic accidents.

9. Keep your car in good shape. Replace worn tires, keep brakes, lights, horn and windshield wipers working.

10. Drive defensively — that is, so skilfully that you do not create accident situations nor get trapped into those created by others.

Still, traffic engineers say that there are several million really good drivers who will drive for a lifetime without becoming involved in an accident.

Will you be one of this select group? The experts say you can be, if only . . .

The Forgotten Battalion

Lost Ranger Unit Re-Discovered

By 2nd Lt. David L. Davis

On the evening of Sept. 2, 1943, British dories quietly disgorged a group of black-faced night raiders in the waters near a small island off the Brittany Peninsula. The name of the island was Ile d' Ouessant. Its chief attraction — a German-manned radar station.

Upon reaching the beach at the rear of the station, the raiders cut their way through a thirty foot maze of barbed wire. Working with the precision which reflects a well-rehearsed plan, the unit divided into two groups and each moved to its assigned task. As the security element took up preplanned firing positions to insure the uninterrupted accomplishment of the mission, the main body placed demolitions around the station's control hut.

The only notification of the raiding party's presence, which the Germans received, occurred at the disintegration of the radar control center and its mast. As the surprised defenders ran out of their barracks, nearly thirty were killed by the automatic fire and grenades of the withdrawing raiders. None of the night fighters were injured.

During the withdrawal the raiding unit deliberately dropped a cartridge belt and helmet clearly marked, "Maj. R. Millholland, U. S. Rangers". Thus, the Germans learned about the existence of the U.S. 2nd Ranger Battalion.

Normally the story which has just been related would pass into history as one more event in the history of an Army unit. This event, however, was unique. The unit concerned was not the same U. S. 2nd Ranger Battalion which landed at Pointe du Hoc on D-Day in 1944 and fought through Europe. It never received a unit citation and is not listed in the Army Lineage Book. It was never officially constituted or activated, but it did participate in World War II. Officially, this unit never existed; therefore, it can best be called, "The forgotten Ranger Battalion.".

How could a unit be forgotten? What circumstances could permit such a development?

These same questions occurred to members of The Infantry School's Ranger Department recently when evidence was uncovered indicating the existence of this battalion. Until this year, it has generally been accepted that here were only six Ranger Battalions in World War II. The facts of the raid mentioned above, however, established the existence of a seventh battalion, and, to further confuse the issue, two of these battalions had the title, 2nd Ranger Battalion.

The story of this apparent confusion began in October of 1942 when the 1st Ranger Battalion, led by Lt. Col. William O. Darby, left England with the 1st Infantry Division as part of the North African invasion force. Behind him, Darby left a cadre of three officers and fifteen enlisted men to train a second Ranger Battalion.

Originally the Rangers had been formed to provide American troops to fight with the British Commandos and later be returned to their parent units as "combat seasoned" instructors in the rapidly expanding army Members of the 1st Battalion received their baptism of fire at Dieppe but, thereafter, fought as a unit.

On Dec. 20, 1942, the 2nd Ranger Battalion was formed at Tidworth Barracks, England. Most of the members were recruited from the 29th Infantry Division, including the battalion commander, Maj. Randolph Millholland, and, consequently the division's history refers to the battalion as the "29th Provisional Ranger Battalion". Headquarters of the European Theater of Operations, however, referred to the unit as the 2d Ranger Battalion.

In February of 1943, the battalion moved to the Commando Depot at Achnacarry, Scotland, to undergo the same training given to the 1st battalion, upon completion of the five week course, the unit was attached to Lord Lovat's No. 4 Commando.

During the same period, on March 11th the War Department authorized the activation of the 2nd Ranger Battalion at Camp Forrest, Tenn. Thus, while one battalion was operating in England, another unit — with the same designation — was constituted in the United States.

In July of 1943, the Rangers moved to Darlin House, Scotland, and prepared for the raid against Ile d' Ouessant. That raid, as mentioned in the beginning of this article, took place on Sept. 2. It was completely successful. It was the last.

Although the battalion trained for a new operation against the coastal guns at Pas de Calais and actually performed dry runs to within six miles of the French coast, the unit was disbanded before the operation could be completed.

Chief of Firing Battery of Battery B, 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery is demanding position, requiring an individual with versatile military skills.

He must "know artillery," must be a competent soldier, and must be a strong leader.

This individual, working directly under the battery executive officer, has direct authority over the fifty cannoneers in the various howitzer sections. His actions and decisions play an important role in the lives of the men under his supervision.

SFC Russell Cummins, the current chief of firing battery of Battery B, is such a leader. With more than 18 years of active military service, Sgt. Cummins possesses all of the requisites necessary to handle an artillery firing battery.

Sgt. Cummins completed his basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., in March, 1946. He has served in Korea, Japan, Alaska, Europe, at the U. S. Military Academy, and in Viet Nam.

Probably most prominent in his career was his assignment at the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1955. Here the Georgetown, Ky. native served as an instructor in artillery techniques, teaching gunnery to many of the cadets.

In 1962, he received an assignment in Viet Nam. As military advisor to the Vietnamese Army, the sergeant was part of a team of experts with the job of instructing modern artillery concepts and techniques.

Anti-Missile Missile Acquires New 'Eyes'

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. (ANF)—Army scientists seeking a better defense against ICBM's are investigating a computer that performs its logic in much the same way as the human brain.

The research on the device, known as an adaptive computer, is being carried on as part of Army's Nike-X anti-missile system project.

The computer's "identical building blocks" are modeled after the brain's cells, called neurons, but instead of living tissue, the cells in the computer would be made of electronic components such as resistors, capacitors and transistors.

Although scientists have known for almost a century that the human brain is a complex electrical mechanism, only in recent years have they tried to duplicate it by using electronic components and modern technology.

In the past, extremely simple forms of the adaptive computer have been built as laboratory curiosities. Now, the Nike-X project at Redstone Arsenal wants to know if one can be built as a working part of the system.

The computer's main function would be discrimination. Discrimination, in missile defense terminology, is the selection of a warhead from any decoys that might accompany the missile as sort of a smokescreen.

The adaptive computer would "learn" characteristics of ICBM flights of both decoys and warheads and then be required to discriminate between them.

New Air Drop Method Developed at Fort Lee

FORT LEE, Va. (ANF)—A radical new method of "getting the goods" via parachute to U.S. Army combat forces operating in rugged or impassable terrain has been developed by the Airborne Department of the Quartermaster School here.

This latest innovation in a continuing attempt by the Army to devise a fool-proof system of air dropping supplies, is called Low Level Extraction (LOLEX).

Regular air drops, though common, have two major drawbacks — accuracy and damage to parachuted goods. Even at 600 feet, air drops can go astray because of unpredictable surface winds. Parachute malfunctions have caused more than one load of supplies to be scattered all over the drop zone.

LOLEX eliminates the accuracy and damage problems inherent in higher altitude drops.

The system works this way: An aircraft approaches a field or clearing where supplies are to be delivered. It flys over the clearing about four feet off the ground at an air speed of slow, 80-knots-per-hour.

Within the plane is a load of supplies lashed to a wooden pallet. A parachute attached to the pallet by long parachute risers is released from within the aircraft. The packed chute flies out, hits the ground, bounces and opens. Its sudden drag literally yanks the pallet out the plane's rear loading door. The same drag brakes the pallet to a stop within yards of its landing point.

LOLEX has been thoroughly tested and over 250 tons of supplies have been dropped in various types of operations by Army pilots without incident.

Speed Records Are Claimed By U.S. Army

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U.S. Army has claimed six new world speed records for rotorcraft after Army piloted an Oh-23G Raven helicopter over California desert sands to nearly 124 miles per hour.

Certification is now pending with the Federation Aeronautique Internationale for world records in two weight classes on three courses for speed over a straight course and speed over a closed circuit.

Captain Leach, a veteran Vietnam combat support helicopter pilot, is now assigned as a Logistical Evaluation Project Officer at the Army Aviation Test Board, Fort Rucker, Ala.

The helicopter flights were conducted at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., and official timing of the runs was conducted by the National Aeronautic Association.

515th Truck Unit Returns to Post After 'Big Lift'

Men of the 515th Transportation Company, who participated in Exercise Big Lift to Germany, returned to Fort Benning last Wednesday.

They came in two groups, each with three officers and 77 enlisted men.

The first element of troops left Rhein-Main Air Base, Germany, at 7 p.m. (EST), Tuesday and arrived at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Lawson Army Airfield.

The second element came in nine hours later.

The 515th left Fort Benning Oct. 22 to join forces with the 2nd Armored Division from Fort Hood, Texas and other U. S. based units in the 14,000-man airlift to Europe.

The exercise engaged approximately 60,000 Army and Air Force personnel. The action phase of the maneuvers was conducted along the Main River in the Hanau-Budingen area.

Tactical Mobility Office Established

The U.S. Army Tactical Mobility Office (USATMO), under the command of Col. Edwin L. Powell Jr., has been established here. The new office is attached to the Test, Evaluation and Control Group.

The mission of USATMO, according to Col. Powell, is to provide a means for the assistant chief of staff for Force Development at the Department of Army to facilitate and coordinate support of the Army air mobile test units here; assist in the solution of problems requiring prompt action in terms of expediting support required by the test director and commanders of air mobile test units, and assist in the coordination of joint activities and support and the resolution of joint problems arising.

The office is with the Test, Evaluation and Control Group to which it is attached for administrative and logistical support.

The new office brings to Fort Benning an experienced Army aviator in Col. Powell. A 1941 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., Col. Powell came here from a tour of duty in the Office of the Director of Defense Research and Engineering, where he was a military assistant to the assistant director for Tac-

Latin America Group Here for Orientation

Seventeen Uruguayan officers arrived at The Infantry Center Sunday for a two-day orientation tour.

The group was welcomed to Fort Benning Monday morning by Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and later was briefed on the history and organization of both the Center and the School.

After lunch, the Uruguayan officers observed firing demonstrations at Patton and Shelton Ranges and were oriented on the Ranger Department.

Tuesday, the Allied visitors observed airborne training and a leader's reaction course, which was followed by an official luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Following a visit to the Finance Office, the group left Fort Benning at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Included in the group were Col. Carlos Zufriategui Escayola; Lt. Cols. Francisco Soler and Edison Alonso Rodriguez; Lt. Cndr. German Lariau Delgado; Majors Lautaro May Torres, Hugo Medina Ferrer, Oscar Silva, Juan Brazeiro Almeida, Manuel Nunez Salvagno, Juan Evia Cruz, Juan Reissig, Alfredo Rivero Deveredo, Florencio Molina Paez, Marcos Silvera Berrios, Pascual Cirillo Apolito and Hugo Camps Mattos, and Capt. Before Congress

Unceasing Peace Search Pledged by New President

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Lyndon B. Johnson spoke before a joint session of Congress Nov. 27 and pledged that the United States will keep its commitments from South Vietnam to West Berlin, and will be "unceasing in the search for peace" but will not let down its guard.

President Johnson's speech, carried by virtually all radio and TV networks, was delivered in the House chamber.

"Those who test our courage will find it strong," the new President said. "And those who seek our friendship will find it honorable. We will demonstrate anew that the strong can be just in the use of strength — and the just can be strong in the defense of justice."

In his first major address, Mr. Johnson said, "Under John Kennedy's leadership this nation has demonstrated that it has the courage to seek peace, and the fortitude to risk war.

"We have proved that we are a good and reliable friend to those who seek peace and freedom. We have shown that we can also be a formidable foe to those who reject the path of peace and those who seek to impose upon us or our allies the yoke of tyranny."

Repeatedly the President asked for Congressional cooperation and speed in pas-

Gen. Hamlett is coming to the post on the morning of Dec. 19 to address career students of The Infantry School from 10 a.m. until noon in Theater No. 1.

Service Tests Completed On New VATLS System

FORT SILL, Okla. (ANF) — Extensive service tests of the latest innovation in target acquisition — the Visual Airborne System (VATLS) — were completed recently by the U. S. Army Artillery Board at Fort Sill.

The system consists of ground tracking and support equipment, and airborne survey equipment, mounted in an Army aircraft.

Men in the aircraft select a target, then measure the angles to the target from several positions through a visual sighting device — relaying the material to the ground station. The ground station, which continually plots the position of the aircraft, then uses triangulation — a survey process — to determine the location of the aircraft and, in turn, the location of the target.

The tests at the Artillery and Missile Center were designed to subject the equipment to use under tactical conditions to determine its suitability and field worthiness.

Engineering tests were completed earlier at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and evaluation is currently underway on the system at Fort Monmouth, N. J.

Maj. Donald A. Van Matre, project officer for the Artillery Board, explained that the system was being studied by the Army as the possible answer to its need for a "rapid, accurate means of locating targets on the battlefield and extending survey control into the target area."

"VATLS," Major Van Matre said, "has the potential to fulfill the needs of the modern, mobile Army. With this system the artillery firepower of an entire division could be tied to a single fire direction center in a matter of minutes.

"VATLS is aptly suited for the nuclear or conventional battlefield of tomorrow which would require rapid location, firing, withdrawal and relocation of missile units. The ease and rapidity of such a system would definitely add to the flexibility of the artillery, particularly in unmapped areas of the world, to assure us more first-round hits and enhance our ability to move, shoot and communicate."

READY-AIM . . . Two members of The Infantry School's Weapons Department prepare to fire the 4.2 mortar during a field training problem. The mortar has a high explosive shell range of 6,000 yards.

School System Receives Okay For Top Rating

Fort Benning Children's Schools received accreditation Tuesday at a meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools in Memphis.

Representing the post's dependent school system at the recognition ceremony at 9 a.m. at the Peabody Hotel was Mrs. Hazel J. Scudder, superintendent, and Dr. Joseph T. Conforti, assistant superintendent for instruction.

The Children's Schools re-Schools received accrediation recently by the Georgia Committe on Accreditation, passing "with no deficiencies."

Appraisal of the schools was made under provisions of the association's Cooperative Program in Elementary Education.

sage of basic legislation which President Kennedy had asked.

"This is no time for delay — it is a time for action, strong forward-looking action ..." he said.

In the wake of President Kennedy's assassination last Friday, Johnson also took a strong stand against political extremism, right or left.

"Let us turn away from the fanatics of the far left and the far right, from the apostles of bitterness and bigotry, from those defiant of law, and those who pour venom into our nation's bloodstream," he said.

President Johnson ended his speech by quoting lyrics from "America the Beautiful."

"On this Thanksgiving Eve," he said, "as we gather together to ask the Lord's blessing and give Him our thanks, let us unite in those familiar and cherished words:

'America, America, God shed His grace on thee,
'And crown thy good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea.'"

Good Speakers Help Public to Understand

On May 8, 1945, Germany surrendered to the Allies. The usurping Third Reich was crushed and the once powerful "super" nation became a divided country under four power rule.

The implications that have evolved from that initial splitting up of Germany have caused troubles that have become so numerous that volumes have been written about them.

In an attempt to familiarize and make more lucid the happenings which have been occurring in divided Germany since the Potsdam Agreement, signed immediately following the war, the Education for Freedom Foundation will present Dr. James H. Wolfe, an assistant professor in the Department of International Studies and a research associate of the Institute of International Studies of the University of South Carolina, who will speak to the public on "Berlin and the German Issue in the Cold War."

Dr. Wolfe will speak at the Columbus College gymnasium Jan. 23, at 8:30 p.m. There will be no admission charge.

This address is part of the 1963-64 visiting lecturer series covering "Dimensions of the Cold War." It will be the third in a series of six lectures.

The remaining lectures include "America's Pressing Problems in the Far East," "American Security Interests in Africa," and "Latin America and the Communist Challenge." All speakers for the lecture series are members of the faculty of The Institute of International Studies, University of South Carolina.

Dr. Wolfe specializes in German and East European affairs, advanced international relations and Game Theory. He is in charge of studies at the undergraduate level, but also instructs in several graduate courses.

He attended Harvard University, receiving the B. A. degree in 1955. He received his Doctorate in June, 1962, from the University of Maryland. His dissertation dealt with the diplomacy of German reunification and was published as a book, "Indivisible Germany: Illusion or Reality," in 1963.

The Judge Says . . .

Occasionally a couple will rear a relative or step-child but won't bother to legally adopt the child. Such informal arrangements can be very harmful to the child. A child legally adopted by a person or couple usually assumes the adopting parent's name and by law becomes the parent's heir just as if he or she were a natural child of that parent.

To adopt a child legally, one must file a petition in an appropriate court, usually this court being in the county where the petitioner resides. Also, in most cases there must be written consent of the child's own parent, guardian or a responsible government official. If the child is over 14 years old, he or she must also agree to the adoption.

The judge must then satisfy himself as to character of the prospective parents and their ability to support the child. Also, the mental and physical condition of all parties, and what is in the best interest of the child must be considered.

Adoption laws are enforced strictly. The courts will not recognize an informal arrangement. Many children who were brought up by loving, well-meaning people, and were even told that they were adopted, have been deprived of an inheritance because their foster parents did not comply with the letter of the law.

It is therefore recommended that persons rearing unadopted minor children give serious consideration to adopting the children so as to create the relationship of parent and child in law. If you have any questions about adoption, see your Soldiers Advocate.

New President Speaks to Army

"We have suffered a great National loss and sorrow in the death of the Commander in Chief, President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. A man who knew war and hated it, he loved peace all the more and sought to make it secure in the world for your children and his. He will be remembered and honored forevermore for his valor and courage in serving that cause of peace which you serve in your faithful vigil for freedom.

"Our Constitution provides for the orderly continuity of the civil offices of our Government. In the transition brought upon us by tragedy, there is no interruption in the continuity of that commitment to strength, steadfastness and selfless sacrifice which has kept us free and the world at peace. As you stand your guard of freedom and peace, you may know that the policies and purposes of your country are unchanged and unchangeable in seeking honorable peace, the friendship and alliance of free nations and the building of a responsible world free of the causes of hatred, division, oppression and human despair. Praying to be worthy of God's guidance, let us rededicate ourselves to the continuing tasks before us remembering always that the price of our liberty is eternal vigilance."

About Communism

National Sentiment Is Restricted by Kremlin

QUESTION — To what extent is the expression of national sentiment by the people permitted in the satellite countries?

ANSWER — The spirit of nationalism has been suppressed by satellite governments whenever it conflicted in any way with Soviet policies. In fact, numbers of Communist Party leaders in satellite states have been purged — reduced in rank, tried for "national deviationism" or done away with — because they favored or appeared to favor the interests of their own country, rather than Moscow's.

After the attack on Stalinism by Soviet leaders at the Twentieth Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union — and especially after Party Secretary Nikita Khrushchev personally denounced the late dictator — some criticism of Moscow's present leadership was voiced in the satellite countries.

During the summer of 1956 this criticism was still relatively mild, but by fall the expressions of anti-Soviet sentiment by rank-and-file Communist Party members could no longer be ignored in Poland and Hungary.

Chaplain's Corner

The Bread of Life

By Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James B. Blunk

Scanning the pages of some of the home magazines just before a holiday dinner can be a stimulating experience. Page after page contain magnificent pictures of all kinds of luscious looking food. Cakes, pies, turkey and salad all in full-color pictures start the digestive juices flowing at a great rate. It is an excellent way to get prepared for the big meal.

Pictures of foods help to make us want to eat, but the pictures themselves do not provide a single calorie or vitamin to nourish us. There is a significant difference between a picture on the page and turkey on the table. The one stimulates our imagination, but gives us no strength. The other provides the energy which keeps us alive.

(Editor's Note . . . Last week's Chaplain's Corner, "Love of Our God," by Chaplain (1st Lt.) Laurence J. Silberstein, was not printed in its entirety because of an inadvertent lack of space. Because of its incompleteness, the meaning of the column was lost. The Bayonet regrets the inconvenience caused its readers and Chaplain Silberstein.)

Jesus said, "I am the bread of life; he who comes to me shall not hunger, and he who believes in me shall never thirst." The words on the page communicate exciting good news. They tell us about a kind of food which feeds not our physical bodies but the life of our soul and spirit. Yet these words on the page will not strengthen our lives any more than the pictures in magazines will strengthen our bodies.

Only as we appropriate for ourselves, and take into our being, the food which Christ offers will we actually be fed. Jesus Christ must become more than someone other people talk about. He must become for us the bread of life.

Jesus stressed the fact that the bread of life is available to any one "who comes to me" and "who believes in me." When we do come to Him through the Church, and actually believe in Him as the Lord of life, we are in fact fed by Him. By Him we are sustained when the petty irritations of life wear us down.

We are upheld in His strength when the crises of human experience confront us. And, at the bend of the road of life, we are sustained by Him as we walk through the dark valley. All of this Christ does. He is food to our souls.

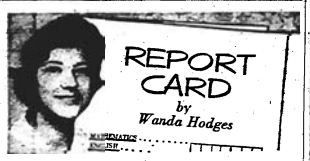
Fort Benning Society Women's News



It is not too late! Girls, run to the phone and call that boy you have been wanting a date with. This week is Twerp Week.

Every year, when the Columbus High School senior girls play "Powder Puff" football, the girls get the chance to ask the boys out. But, along with everything good, there are a few drawbacks: the girls provide both the transportation — and the money.

As was mentioned previously, the senior girls at Columbus High participate in an extraordinary form of entertainment. The fun comes in when the fans see the cheerleaders and the majorettes — who are senior boys.

For those girls belonging to J.A.D.A., the monthly luncheon has been moved to the fourteenth of December instead of the seventh. This is due to the college boards.

Each Christmas, the J.A.D.A. officers put on a luncheon. This year there will be door prizes, and singing. The main event will be the voting for the Christmas court.

In other social groups, E.Y.C. will be having a bake sale after the Sunday service at St. Michaels Church once a month. The group is raising money for several different projects. Among them is buying a suborium for the church.

Maybe a lot of you remember Martha Harris. She left Fort Benning early last summer. The last that her pepal, Cathy Gueymard, heard from her was that she is going steady, misses everyone, and wishes "you'al" a very happy Thanksgiving.

During the Thanksgiving holidays, there were a lot of "old folks" home. Cathy Gueymard entertained "just" a few of the college kids at her home on Saturday night.

Among the "intellectuals" were Jeff Gueymard, L.S.U.; Jim Stacey, Clemson; Sheila O'Conell, Auburn; also from Auburn was Marshal Austin. Susie Wells from the University of Georgia; Tommy Monahan, Steve Huppert, and Jack Jackson were there from Columbus College; Tommy Odom, Garry Ingham, Micky Bennett, and Skip Wilburn from North Georgia. Jack Wallace, Mike Bush, and Brian Paterson from Columbus College also were present.

During the weekend of November 23, Anita Braun had a surprise birthday party for Cathy Jones. Joann Morgan and Margaret Bowlin were there to help celebrate.

That same night, Sandy Powell, Kay Eckland, and Vicky Dalton, had a slumber party at Sandy's house. Some of the guests were Karen Kendall, Pam Walker, Julie Fielder, Beverly Taylor, Rica Spencer and Lee Short.

During the course of the evening Cathy Roberts was kept busy cooking for the clan. She's a pretty good cook to be able to please a bunch of particular girls. The party was so much fun and going so strong that only a few of the girls slept during the night.

If you are taking that college boards tomorrow, I hope you get a better rest than they did. Good Luck —

BOWLING FASHIONS ARE FOR MEN AND WOMEN . . . To cut a manly figure with the bowling league, especially the mixed league, men should try a navy worsted blazer designed with an action back and set-in half belt. The collarless jacket has an eased cut-away front and is worn over tapered grey worsted slacks. The two admiring young ladies also are up to date with their attire. (L) The strike-making jumper has a free-stride lined skirt over knee pants in black and white shepherd check wool, fashionably flashed with a brilliant orange sleeved blouse. (R) A winner in any bowling center is this double knit wool jersey two-part costume in horizontal grey and white stripes. The sleeveless elongated pull-over is the perfect topping for a side-wrap divided skirt cleverly formed into a concealed "culotte."

65 TEC Wives Receive Briefing On Hubby's Jobs

Some 65 wives of officers assigned to the Test, Evaluation and Control (TEC) Group attended a briefing recently presided over by Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, commanding general of the TEC Group.

Gen. Williams welcomed the ladies and told them that the presentation was designed to let them know the scope of their husbands' jobs.

Gen. Williams was followed by the briefing team of Capt. Charles D. Fountain and Capt. Albert H. Kraft II, who discussed the mission and organization of the TEC Group, the air assault test program and the recent field test exercise at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Following the briefing, refreshments were served.

Thrift Shop's Toytown Now Open for Business

By Marge Lennon

If you have been wondering "how to make ends meet" this Christmas without visiting a loan company, and still give your children all the presents you'd like, worry no longer.

The Thrift Shop's staff has created a new department for your Christmas shopping in its Toytown which is now open for business.

For thrifty shoppers Toytown offers everything from electric trains, bicycles, ice and roller skates to doll carriages and all types of games. Just about everything on your child's list for Santa Claus can be found at the Thrift Shop.

Come in on Tuesday's from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. and Thursday's from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. The shop is located across from the Infantry Museum on Ingersoll Avenue. It will close December 19 for the holidays and re-open after New Year's.

In addition to Toytown, an abundance of winter clothing is available. Hundreds of coats, sweaters, skirts, slacks and shirts are on sale each week.

More than 20 students were on hand Wednesday evening as the Tailoring class held its final lesson of its 6-week course with a special birthday party celebration.

Mr. Ensley, a professional tailor from Columbus and the instructor for the course, along with Miss Carol Jones and Mrs. Warren Hodges, who were students, all had birthdays that day. The entire class decided to celebrate the occasion with cake and ice cream.

A new advanced tailoring class will begin in January, giving ladies a chance to make themselves a spring suit or coat. Mr. Ensley also will show how to make formal dinner jackets. Anyone interested in joining this class should call Mrs. James Jones at 687-1608.

In addition to the 30 other classes being offered to Women's Club members in January there also will be another new activity, hatmaking. This extremely popular course will be taught by Mrs. Robert M. Brumback, an old pro at millinery instruction. She taught this class last year.

The popular gourmet classes, under the direction of Mrs. Jonathan E. Adams Jr. is continuing to meet once a month at Salerno Mess. This cooking conscious group was so large that it had to be divided into three sections with over 30 women in each group.

The women have already sampled foods used for a brunch, a cocktail party, and are now concentrating on foreign dishes. Each month the students take turns preparing dishes and sharing the specialties with others. New members may join this group any time.

New art classes for children and adults will begin this month. Mrs. Richard Knowles will give you all details on these courses. Call her at 545-2408.

Dental Wives Luncheon Carries Out U.N. Theme

A United Nations theme was carried out at the Dental Wives' luncheon recently in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Display tables were set up near the entrance of the room holding interesting and beautiful objects collected all over the world by wives of some of Fort Benning's dental officers.

The head luncheon table was centered with a beautiful arrangement of dried fall leaves, flowers, and fruit; and fall leaves were scattered down the center of the tables. Arrangements of miniature flags were spaced along all the tables, further giving an international flavor.

Hostesses arranging this luncheon with Mrs. Harold G. Carter, catering chairman, were Mrs. Bert Louscher, Mrs. Louis H. Guernsey, and Mrs. Robert E. Cross.

Mrs. Edward H. Karl, program chairman, started the program by reading a humorous and appropriate poem about the wife's roll in Army life. Then comments concerning their respective displays of foreign objects were made by Mrs. Edward P. Kruszewski, Mrs. George W. Grabiak, Mrs. Guernsey, Mrs. Charlie F. Konze, Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Edward H. Karl.

Mrs. Grabiak, president, welcomed the following new members to the group: Mrs. Nyman H. Halford, Mrs. Robert J. Neeson, Mrs. William L. Stultz, and Mrs. John W. Tucker.

Permanent Pay Raise

Quality Increase Award Presented for 1st Time

A new "quality increase" award for outstanding civilian employes was presented for the first time at Fort Benning Monday.

Two employes who received the award were among 16 military and civilian personnel of The Infantry Center honored with various awards in a progressive ceremony with Col. E. F. Holton, deputy post commander, officiating.

The quality increase which replaces a former "sustained superior performance" award provides an annual increase in pay rather than a single cash award.

Receiving quality increases were Mrs. Fred K. Cleary and Clark H. Streetman.

Mrs. Cleary is secretary to the provost marshal and Streetman is an accounting technician in the Finance and Accounting Office. Each of them was given an outstanding job rating in addition to a quality increase of $160 per year.

Col. Holton presented two letters of appreciation to Lt. Col. Walter R. Braun, deputy G-1 for The Infantry Center. Col. Braun was cited for a suggestion that an orientation on courtesies be given at all retirement ceremonies on the post and for a proposal that a handbook on supervision be published for the use of supervisors.

Leon S. Mixon also was presented a letter of appreciation for valuable contribution to the supervision handbook proposal. He is administrative officer of the Transportation Services Division, Services Section.

Outstanding job ratings went to Peter G. Rigdon, supply supervisor of the Headquarters Commandant Section; James L. Adams, radio dispatcher, Transportation Services Division, Services Section; Thomas W. Bass, chief of the Operations Division, Maintenance Section; administrative assistant in the Supply Control and Storage Section; Mrs. M. J. McVay, secretary to the post chaplain; Mrs. R. B. Traugh, a clerk stenographer, and E. M. Casady, registrar assistant, both of Martin Army Hospital.

H. D. Harden received both an outstanding job rating and $100 for sustained superior performance. His award was granted before the initiation of the new quality increase award.

Three employes of the Maintenance Section received monetary awards for work improvement suggestions. They are Jack L. Price, chief of the Assistance and Inspection Branch, Inspection Division, $25, Jesse A. Watson, a supply item identifier in the Supply Branch, Production Control Division, $25, and Charles C. Whitfield, a helicopter mechanic in the Aircraft Branch, Operations Division, who received awards of $75 and $25 for two suggestions and a letter of appreciation for a third.

Edward C. Bond received $35 for suggesting that a carrier for trenchers (trench digging machines) be constructed and $15 for proposal of the use of a universal tow-bar for towing trucks and cars. He is an automotive mechanic in the Transportation Services Division, Services Section.

Eye Disease

Glaucoma Test Urged For Army Veterans

How long has it been since you have been tested for Glaucoma? If you are over 40, the answer should be: recently. Yet the most common answer to this question is, "what is Glaucoma?"

Glaucoma is a disease which is associated with aging and is due to an increased pressure inside of the eyes. About two per cent of everyone in the United States over 40 is thought to have the disease and there are no signs or symptoms until the affected individual begins to lose vision. If it is discovered early, loss of vision can be prevented with medicine or surgery.

A simple screening test is available at most military hospitals and is called Tonometry. Tonometry measures the pressure within the eye by means of a simple gauge applied to the surface of the cornea (the outer-most clear part of the eye) after a few drops of medicine are applied to prevent the patient from feeling anything during the test.

Therefore there is no pain involved and the patient's vision is not disturbed by the test. The only precaution that must be taken is that for about one-half hour after the test is performed, one should not wipe the eyes, since the cornea can be scratched inadvertently.

This test was recommended by the Surgeon General in a recent bulletin from his office. It is not yet mandatory, however it is advisable for all officers and enlisted members over the age of 40.

High Award Sky Soldier Presented

First Lt. Theodore S. Danielson, from Company D, 188th Infantry, received the Bronze Star Medal recently from Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division. He earned the medal while serving as a member of a rescue team formed to search for a downed crew of a OV-1 MOHAWK in Vietnam.

The citation read in part: "Lt. Danielson was lowered from a rescue aircraft into a impassable dense mountainous jungle at the crash site on the evening of 9 March 1963 to evacuate wounded personnel. Later he led the men through Viet Cong infested territory for 10 kilometers to safety. Through his skillful daring and leadership the rescue party completed its mission successfully on 11 March 1963.

"This reflects great credit upon himself and the United States Army and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service."

Lt. Danielson is assigned with the Sky Soldiers as a mortar platoon leader.

Gen. Skeldon is scheduled to leave Fort Benning this afternoon.

Protestant Chapel Choir to Perform

The choir of Fort Benning's Infantry Center Protestant Chapel will present a Christmas cantata at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 15 at the chapel.

They will sing "The Wonder of Christmas" by John W. Peterson.

James E. Mahaffey, minister of music at the chapel will direct.

Big Airborne Project 'Stayed on the Ground'

Special to The Bayonet

One of the major projects undertaken by Fort Benning's Airborne - Air Mobility Department "never got off the ground", and oddly enough the paratroopers are proud of the fact.

After the consolidation of all airborne training here in 1961, one of the department's biggest problems was finding a suitable drop zone which could meet the Air Force's requirements for formation drops and room for the huge aircraft to salvo its capacity during a single pass.

Under the direction of the department's director, then Col. Michael Paulick, an airborne crew rolled up their sleeves and started clearing the land for the proposed drop zone.

Of the two existing zones (Lee and Fryar Fields) Fryar Field was the only piece of land available at Fort Benning that was large enough to meet the needs of the airborne department.

Although the Post Engineers supplied the heavy equipment for the project, the department's Jump Committee provided, from its ranks, the dozer and grader operators, demolitionists, carpenters, brick layers and manual laborers. They transformed the land into a functional drop zone.

Hundreds of trees and stumps had to go, new roads had to be built, old roads were graded over, a swamp was drained and numerous concrete foundations were removed before the field was expanded from 700 yards by 1,500 yards to its current size of 900 yards by 2,200 yards.

Today the drop zone stands complete with an elaborate new tower complex, parachute shakeout area, spectator bleacher area and a network of roads and parking lots for both military and civilian visitors.

UNITED STATES ARMY STRIKE READY FORCE

Fort Benning, Ga. FRIDAY, DEC. 6, 1963

Five 'Indianhead' NCO's Mark Reaching Army's 'Senior Status'

Five 2nd Infantry Division noncommissioned officers reached "senior status" at brief, simple ceremonies rushed through to beat the holiday lull.

The division conference room was the scene of the promotions last week during this time of Army mourning. Rather than wait until after Thanksgiving, the five men were pushed through to get them on the new, higher pay records immediately.

One soldier, Sgt. Maj. Irving S. Hodgson Jr. of 2nd Division Headquarters and Headquarters Company, became a sergeant major, the most exalted enlisted rank.

Two master sergeants won promotion to first sergeant: 1st Sgt. Harold W. Rampey of the 2nd Medical Battalion and 1st Sgt. Robert D. Herring of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry.

MSgt. Jack I. Cothern of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor was upped from master sergeant (E-7) to master sergeant (E-8), a difference in pay grades. A sergeant first class of the 12th Artillery Battalion became a master sergeant. The soldier is MSgt. Henry Glindeman.

An assistant commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, congratulated the men on their raises, shook hands with them and told them of the "pride and respect (you deserve) on reaching senior status.

The general spoke of expediting the "promotion procedure" in order that the men would not have to wait for the end of the holidays.

Also present at the conference room was Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, assistant commander of the 2nd Division, and a sizeable audience of top division commanders and noncommissioned officers.

10 Slots Change Hands

Intelligence Section Has Personnel Shift

The recent past and future are redesigning the shape of the 2nd Infantry Division's staff intelligence section.

Numerous changes in personnel have already taken place. Many more are expected in the next few months.

The officer who is to be the new G-2 (intelligence officer) has been at his desk since September. He is Maj. Arthur J. Rafferty, just back from advisory duties in Chuong Thien Province, Vietnam.

By coincidence, the man he will replace this month, Lt. Col. Richards O. Stewart has Vietnam as his destination.

Maj. Rafferty is a veteran of 17 years Army service.

A new man who tops the major by two years is MSgt. Donald J. Wright, formerly with V Corps in Germany as an intelligence sergeant, now in that position here with the Indianhead Division. He has 19 years active duty chalked up.

Two new captains are in the intelligence department. They are Capt. Donald G. Williams, a Ranger with 7 years active duty time and just returned from the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea; and Capt. John H. Leach who joined the 2nd Division last month, as did Capt. Williams.

Germany was Capt. Leach's point of departure for Fort Benning.

Descending the military scale, there's a new private first class and private. The one, PFC Warren G. H. Brown, newly - promoted to one stripe, is an intelligence clerk.

The other, Pvt. Lanny Thomas, fresh out of basic infantry training at Fort Gordon, Ga., has logged three months of Army time and is geting his advanced training on the job at the office.

Lanny Thomas is a journalism graduate at the University of Tennessee (his home is McKencie, Tenn.) with a year of reporting for The Oak Ridger, an Oak Ridge, Tenn. daily.

There are other changes planned, of people coming and going, also. Going is Spt Wray Standard in December and PFC Ray L. Bergmooser in February. Both are ending military service.

The convention was attended by 100 Florida delegates plus the Fort Benning 2nd Division contingency.

2nd Marks Thanksgiving 'With All the Trimmings'

Troops, Families, Friends Put Away Tons of Food

BY BOB DE CAMARA

Can anything be plumper than a juicy, local home-grown turkey this Thanksgiving Day.

Yes! A 2nd Infantry Division soldier or member of his family could be plumper if he stuffed himself with the thousands and thousands of pounds of food that was on tap for service Thanksgiving Day at division mess halls.

Starting from the bottom of the list and working up, he washed his golden crisp turkey and sage-scented dressing down with 1000 gallons of coffee and 500 gallons of milk.

(According to CWO Earl Butterfield, the division food service officer and an expert on such things, Thanksgiving Dinner is THE "maximum effort meal." For Christmas, the soldiers shie themselves home to enjoy the holidays with the family.)

Cooks began preparation of the turkey (9864 pounds) dinner the day before and worked through the evening. Between two and four o'clock Thanksgiving morning when the barracks were only dreaming of the holiday feast, the cooks started the actual cooking.

They prepared 2466 pounds of shrimp for shrimp cocktail, mashed 2775 pounds of white potatoes, candied 1800 pounds of sweet potatoes, thawed 1500 pounds of broccoli, de-tinned 1200 pounds of fruitcake, sliced 2200 pumpkin and 1845 mince pies and uncrated 1230 pounds of bananas and 1850 pounds of apples and oranges.

For the soldier, the soldier's wife or soldier's child who were still hungry following that, 740 pounds of candy was set out for munching.

The cooks made it a special point to see that all this bounty was tastefully arranged, artfully arranged even. There was a display table in each mess hall of a sample meal being served to 12,330 soldiers and guests.

On the table, a roast turkey lay in state, surrounded by fruits and other goodies.

Mess halls started serving at 11:30 in the morning and expected to feed the last hungry pilgrim's descendant by 1:30 in the afternoon.

Touring the division area and dining in the mess halls were the two assistant division commanders, Brig. Gen. John T. Corley and Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, and the division Chief of Staff, Col. Lucien F. Keller.

The officers and NCOs of the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery have just completed a two-day course on preventive maintenance.

This course, sponsored by the Support Command, consisted of one-half of a day of instruction and practical work on vehicle and generator log books followed by a day and a half of preventative maintenance indicators.

There were a series of stations which included almost every type of field equipment employed by combat units.

Rotoplanning 9th Soldiers Make Big Return Home

By 2nd Bn, 9th Infantry PIO

To the strains of "The Caissons Go Rolling Along" and "The Colonel Bogey March", 120 members of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry came home Monday.

This was the first large contingent to return since the 2nd of the 9th was redesignated and the battalion colors were moved back to Fort Benning.

The tired and happy soldiers listened while the 2nd Infantry Division band played a rousing welcome. Here and there soldiers flew into the open arms of waiting wives and loved ones who had somehow gotten the word that their husbands would be on that particular flight.

Until now, members of the returning 9th Infantry have been filtering back from Germany in small numbers.

On the 6th, 13 and 20th of December, large groups, such as the one that arrived Monday, will be returning. This will completely reunite the battalion for the first time since September.

In a short welcome home speech to the returning members of the battalion, Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder, commanding officer, praised the work that the 2nd of the 9th had carried on while they were stationed in Mannheim, Germany.

Most of those who returned, immediately took advantage of the leave that was offered them.

2nd of the 23rd Is Responsible For Division's School on Entac

By 2nd Bn., 23rd Infantry PIO

The 2nd Battalion (Mech), 23rd Infantry is responsible for giving instructions on the Entac Missile for the 2nd Infantry Division Entac School. Classes are conducted in the NCO classroom.

Last Monday saw the beginning of the first day of classes for the 2nd of the 9th. Lt. James A. Michaels, Anti-Tank Platoon Leader of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry and a recent graduate of the Infantry Center Entac School is the chief instructor.

Other instructions included SFC Arthur E. Mulkey of Headquarters Company, SFC Vincent Ackerson of Company B, SFC Flyth and Sgt. Wuestney of the Anti-Tank Platoon of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

The Entac, which is a French developed wire guided, remote controlled missile is the anti - tank defense for a ROAD infantry battalion. The Entac had a range of 2000 meters and its 130mm shaped charge warhead is capable of defeating any known armor in the world today. It can be launched either from a ¼ - ton launching vehicle or from the ground.

It is guided in flight by a gunner who operate a guidance control unit that is connected to the launching container by means of two strands of steel wire that unwinds from two bobbins that are located within the missile body. By manipulating the control stick on the Guidance Control Unit, the gunner can change the direction of the missile's flight at his will.

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry is the fourth unit from the Division to receive instructions in the new school. On Monday, the first day of classes, the men received three hours of instructions on descriptions, nomenclature and functioning of the missile and its associated guidance equipment. After the first three hours of instructions, the troops were taken to Buchannon Range where they witnessed a live fire demonstration conducted by the Infantry School.

On Tuesday, the class was oriented on the S-68 Simulator; electronic training device designed to make the student gunner proficient on control stick before he ever fire a live missile.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the class moved outside to undergo training in crew drill. These two days of training were climaxed by a squad competition test. On Friday morning the men moved back into the classroom and received instructions on preventive maintenance and tactical employment of the weapon system. In the afternoon the class received a summary test and critique on the week's activities.

No week in the Army seems complete unless use is made of an oily rag and steel wool and thus the week's training was terminated Saturday morning with on the job training in care and cleaning of the equipment in the ENTAC Weapons System.

702nd Maintenance Bn Gets New Commander

By Bob de Camara

The 2nd Infantry Division's 702nd Maintenance Battalion changed commanders last week in austere circumstances at their headquarters.

There was no ceremony. Quietly, command of the 702nd passed from Lt. Col. Philip H. Taft to the newcomer, Lt. Col. Joseph L. Sanders.

This is Col. Sanders' first tour of duty with the Indianhead Division. He comes to Fort Benning from the Erie Army Depot at Port Clinton, Ohio.

Col. Taft is leaving the division after one year, and turning his job over to a combat veteran of World War II and Korea.

A graduate of New York University commissioned through the Reserve Officers Training Corps, Col. Sanders entered the Army in 1941 and served during World War II in the South Pacific.

In Korea, he was with the 24th Infantry Division. Among others, the new 702nd chief holds a Bronze Star Medal, an Army Commendation Medal and an Air Force Commendation Medal which he won while with the NATO Supply Center in France.

The colonel is married. He and his wife, Ann, have one daughter, Ellen, studying at the University of Missouri; another daughter, Jean, is a sophomore at Baker High School in Columbus. Their third child is a son Richard, 11.

Present in the commander's office for the switch was the executive officer, Maj. Kenneth L. Cowan.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

Whatever Happened to Santa Claus?

Well, it's that time of year again. Time of colored lights, decorations, mistletoe and feverish shopping. It is the Christmas season.

The kids, Mom and Dad too, start dropping hints as to what they would like to see under the Christmas tree on that big day. Stores and post offices become swamped, and trying to find a parking space downtown is about as easy as going over Niagara Falls in a Dixie Cup.

Eggnog and artificial icicles become the nation's top sellers and all the children throughout the land suddenly become angles.

Pop starts wearing his old slippers and Mom begins complaining about the broken toaster. "Bossa Nova Baby" becomes replaced on the hit parade by "White Christmas" and family members, previously separated, start heading home.

But, most of all, it is the time of the year for the jolly white-bearded man in the red suit to dominate the thoughts of children. Soon, Santa will be coming to see them. At least, those who believe in him think so.

In this fast moving modern age of ours bringing up children to believe in Santa Claus has dwindled over the years. What once was a trait of life is slowly dying. The hurrying-off to bed Christmas Eve so Santa can come down the chimney isn't practiced by everyone.

A lot of children go to bed that night not peeking over the covers, and listening for the sound of footsteps or jingling bells on the rooftop, but wondering what Mom and Dad bought them. Leaving the tree lights lit so the famous old man can see his way, or setting some homemade cookies by the fireplace to aid his hunger has become a part of the past in a lot of homes. Because, belief in the man from the North Pole is not a complete part of reality anymore.

Is there a Santa Claus? Is his name Kris Kringle, Saint Nick — Santa? Who and what is he if he truly exists?

There is a Santa Claus!

He has lived for hundreds of years and will continue to live for hundreds more. He is the ideal and dream in every child's heart and is just as vivid as the excitement his name generates to youngsters all over the world. He is the spirit of giving; the loyalty of love, and the comfort for hardship. He is the warmth of clothes for the needy and fulfillment of food for the hungry. He is the smile that lights the faces of children on Christmas day, and he is that moment of memories. He is the bearer of happiness and the deliverer of dreams. He is a fable, a legend, a faith; he lives, in every sense of the word.

Many believed in him as children and will believe in him always. For it is this belief itself that makes him live. And to ask if there really is a Santa Claus is like questioning whether tomorrow will come. And if the time ever arrives that the sun will never more shine, and all tomorrows are gone forever, then that will be the day Santa Claus will cease to exist.

A fresh wood-and-brass plaque was handed to the Battery B first sergeant, 1st Sgt. Nick Russell, by battalion sergeant major Joseph Chickini.

The criteria for the selection of an outstanding monthly battery are training expertise, equipment maintenance, activities support within the battalion, general appearance and bearing of battery members and neatness, punctuality and completeness of paperwork.

Balloon-poppers Warned By Second Division Artillery

By 2nd Division Artillery PIO

If you are one of those perverts who derives some sort of fiendish pleasure from popping balloons and you honestly wish to avoid temptation, please be warned: 2nd Division Artillery Headquarters is not for you.

The radio section of Division Artillery is currently conducting tests with antenna-carrying metrological balloons. The balloons are being used to test the feasibility of a proposed new FM aerial system. The idea is to use the shelf-worn metrological balloons, anchored to the ground, as suspension for antennas linked to tactical FM radios. By suspending the antenna at treetop height, the range of the radio is greatly extended over regular antenna linkage.

Communications Officer Capt. Herbert F. Rankin is in charge of conducting the tests and reporting on the feasibility of the plan. He is to report on FM radio range comparison under the same conditions with the balloon-suspended antennas and with regular antenna linkage. The report is also to include the length of time it takes to erect the antenna, supply rates, hazards involved, and recommendations concerning camouflage of the balloons.

So if big balloons make your mouth water, please do not enter the Division Artillery area with sharp objects in your possession.

'GOMRAC' Is Here; Stalks the 2nd of 9th

By 2nd Bn., 9th Inf. PIO

Everywhere one turns throughout the battalion, one finds "GOMRAC". It appears mysteriously on the sides of vehicles, on walls, and in windows. Even Lt. Col. L. S. Ponder, commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, carries a shovel handle with the elusive "GOMRAC" painted on its length.

"GOMRAC" creeps silently and spreads like the plaque.

"GOMRAC" stands for "Good Overall Maintenance Requires Attention Constantly." It was originally born at the Armor School at Fort Knox, Ky. It was brought to Fort Benning by Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver who was executive officer of the 2nd Battle Group, 22rd Infantry. It was here-that "GOMRAC" found its home. The 2nd Battle Group, 23rd Infantry was then commanded by Col. Lucien F. Keller, presently the division chief of staff.

"GOMRAC" was brought to the 2nd of the 9th by Capt. William H. McGondel. It is designed to alert the personnel of the battalion to the need for a high state of material maintenance.

"GOMRAC" works and it is on everyone's tongue; and when it is well known it should cause that little extra care that leads to "Good Overall Maintenance."

Thanksgiving at DivArty Not Hampered by the Rain

By Division Artillery PIO

Last Thursday was a bad day for turkeys, but as far as Headquarters and Headquarters Battery of Division Artillery was concerned, old Tom would have been proud to know he was an indispensable part of a memorable occasion.

Thanksgiving Day was celebrated here in the traditional manner. Morning chapel services at DivArty Chapel were followed by the carving of the turkey and scrumptuous dinner in the seasonably decorated mess hall. Invitations to the dinner were extended to all Division Artillery personnel and their dependents.

After dinner the battery dayroom was opened and Headquarters Battery personnel and dependents alike took advantage of the entertainment facilities. Checkers, billiards, and table tennis were the feature attractions.

Even an afternoon downpour could not drench the spirit of thanksgiving. Those who did not retire to the dayroom remained in the mess hall, sat back in their chairs, chewed ye olde fat, and let it rain!

Safety While Hunting Can Save Many Lives

At this time of the year with the hunting season once again on the way for devotee soldiers, it might be wise to repeat 10 safety rules laid down last year by Third Army.

These are practical, simple, obvious rules that are commonly disregarded; rules which, if observed, can make this hunting season a pleasurable one rather than a ghastly occurrence.

The Bayonet stressed last year that Norman M. Evans, Infantry Center Safety Officer, was concerned with a possible rise in the accident rate. In this exclusive interview, Evans lays down the basic rules to be followed.

Three of the rules are: never shoot at objects indistinctly seen through trees or bushes, never lay a loaded gun down or in a car, and never lift a loaded gun by the barrel, either to carry it or pull it through a fence.

Also, don't fire at game when there is a house, barn, road or person in the line of fire, or leave your gun or shells near a fire, fireplace or stove.

Things to do include keeping the safety lock on at all times except just before shooting, inspecting the gun before going hunting, and familiarizing yourself with the boundaries and landmarks of the area.

A most important thing not to do, according to Evans, is drink either before or during the time you are hunting.

"It makes no more sense to drink and hunt than it does to drink and drive," Evans accuses.

A study of hunting accidents by the National Rifle Association conducted several years ago showed there were two major categories of mishaps: intentional discharge of firearms and accidental discharge.

The principal causes in the first category were the victim moved into the line of fire without warning, was shot by an excited hunter firing quickly at game, was not even seen by the shooter, or was mistaken for game.

Causes in the accidental discharge category included the hunter stumbling or falling, the trigger catching in brush, the gun discharging while the hunter was clubbing game or brush, bumping or jolting gun during removal from vehicle or boat, dancing to the music of a pocket-size transistor radio and sounding the weapon for rhythm, the gun falling from an insecure rest or being deliberately pushed, the gun discharging while the hunter crossed a fence carrying it with the muzzle toward him, horseplay, and lack of precaution during loading and unloading.

One way, Evans added, to avoid being mistaken for game such as a partridge or stump dove is to wear brilliant red or orange jackets, or caps. These items are available at any number of sporting goods stores or readily attainable for military personnel at the Post Exchange.

Hunting on the reservation is restricted to military personnel assigned to or living on the post, their dependents, and members of the Fort Benning Fish and Game Association.

All guns brought onto the reservation must be registered with the Provost Marshal Section. Registered guns are checked for their mechanical safety, and guns without a safety lock will not be registered.

Daily permits as well as state licenses are required.

Information on bag limits, open areas and hours may be obtained from the Fish and Game Association in Building 4050.

Active in Organizations Has Been Her Pleasure

MRS. FREEMAN

"Taking an active interest in a variety of organizations affords one a grand opportunity to meet and know many people — a pleasure perhaps in part made possible by living on an Army post," states Mrs. Virginia Freeman.

Joining her husband in January of 1956 in Germany, Mrs. Freeman was formally introduced to Army life at an overseas post. The introduction proved to be a friendly one opening doors to many more rich and fascinating experiences.

Even the mode of travel from one point to another has been pretty inclusive, says Mrs. Freeman, since she traveled by train and ship to Germany and returned to Fort Benning via plane and automobile.

Born in Kansas City, Kan., Mrs. Freeman lived and worked there until shortly after her marriage. Completing her high school education in Kansas City, she went on to the University of Kansas to receive her Bachelor of Arts degree, majoring in Sociology.

Mrs. Freeman began work that summer as assistant program director, attending the same teenage regional conference as a leader that she had attended as a teen.

She moved on to become Teenage Program Director of the Young Women's Christian Association. "I thoroughly enjoyed my work because there was much to do, not only within your own association, but also there were regional and national meetings to be attended."

Mrs. Freeman then took a summer off to study at the University of Wisconsin. Following that, a real desire to begin graduate work was nurtured, and Mrs. Freeman enrolled as a part time student at the University of Kansas School of Social Work and continued working full time.

"I had never really 'camped out' so I didn't know what to expect, however I applied and was accepted."

Mrs. Freeman spent a summer working as camp counselor and later as Senior Program Director for the YWCA of the city of New York at its summer camp, which was located about 90 miles north of New York City.

Having some opportunity to travel while overseas made possible many memorable experiences. While stationed in Germany, the Freemans traveled to Venice, Rome, and Florence, via the famed Innsbruck Pass in Austria.

While in Rome, Mrs. Freeman states that what proved to be an experience of lasting impression was that as Protestants to have joined the tremendous gathering of people from all across the world to listen in the courtyard of the summer palace to the Pope bless and greet the people in four languages.

The Freemans also traveled to Austria and to Berchesgaden, Germany, visiting the famed Eagles Nest.

While in Germany, Mrs. Freeman was active in NCO Wives Club work as secretary and treasurer, and in PWOC as pianist and Projects Chairman.

She is vitally interested in Ladies of the Big Indianhead, chartered with the organization and since having served as publicity chairman.

Mrs. Freeman is also secretary of USAIC Protestant Women of The Chapel. She is also a former Main Post Sunday School teacher. Mrs. Freeman is a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

"I now have had the wonderful opportunity to get back to my music," she adds. She is a pianist and organist, now playing the organ at Sand Hill Chapel 4 and Choir Director at Sand Hill Chapel 1.

Leisure time activity finds Mrs. Freeman bowling weekly with Ladies of the Big Indianhead, and she states that she is an avid reader.

SFC and Mrs. Freeman are the parents of two children; Angeline, 6; and Warren Jr. SFC Freeman, a member of Headquarters and Headquarters and Service Battery, 15th Artillery, and Mrs. Freeman reside on Arrowhead Road in Fort Benning.

A Menu For You

OLD FASHION SCALLOPED POTATOES

Peel and slice white potatoes into thin slices. Peel and slice onions. Butter a large casserole and place first a layer of potatoes, then a thin layer of onions. Sprinkle with flour, salt, pepper and a very little thyme, dill and rosemary. Dot with butter or margarine. Repeat, not making more than three layers.

Pour milk until it almost reaches the top layer of the potatoes. Bake in moderately hot oven (350 degrees) for 50 minutes or until potatoes can be pierced with a fork.

TOASTED CELERY BREAD

½ cup soft butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon seasoned salt
½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon chili powder
1¼ pound loaf unsliced enriched bread

Combine butter, seasoned salt, celery salt and chili powder. Remove crust from bread if desired. Cut down middle of loaf lengthwise, almost through to bottom. Cut at about 2" intervals crosswise also from top almost to bottom. Spread butter mixture over all surfaces except bottom. Bake on a cookie sheet in a hot oven (400 degrees) about 10 minutes. Serves 8-10.

A roll served at a meal is correctly broken with the fingers, not cut with a knife. In the case of roll sandwiches the knife is used to split or cut the roll.

Lily of the Valley; Bride's Flowers

In reading newspaper reports of what the bride wore and the flowers she carried, its impressive to note the revival of an old superstition concerning the Lily of the Valley which reads it is a good omen for brides to carry these flowers at their weddings. There is a legend that when the Virgin wept at the cross, her tears turned into the lily of the valley when they touched the ground. Even to this day, the flower is often referred to as the Virgin's tears.

In years past the lily of the valley was used in love potions. In the language of the flowers, the name Lily of the Valley signifies "Return of Happiness", Emblem of innocence, it has been esteemed throughout the centuries. Keats wrote "No flower amid the garden fairer grows, than the sweet lily of the lovely vale, the Queen of flowers." And an anonymous poet wrote of the tender bloom: "Dainty white lily Dressed like a bride, Shining with whiteness, and Scented beside." A. D.

Evergreens Are Best. . .

It's Easier to Decorate for Christmas Than You Think

Achieving distinctive and beautiful effects with Christmas evergreens is easier than you may think, even if as a decorator you are greener than the materials you will be working with.

For large wreaths, consider the fine, graceful, gray-green foliage of white pine or a blackish-green fir that doesn't shed. English ivy is perfect for making flat wreaths, as are the heart-shaped green or bronzegalax leaves, which are especially fine for table decorations.

Wreaths, boughs or table decorations can be given an especially festive sparkle with push-button ease. The trick is accomplished with new spray enamels that dry in minutes.

Cranberries, textile pieces, crepe paper, cardboard, nuts, fruits and cellophane, plus imagination, are some of the other ingredients you can use to make displays more dazzling.

Decorating starts at Saint Nick's doorway — the fireplace. A gleaming plate glass mirror over it provides the frame for sprays of holly tied with bright red ribbon, and boughs of white and silver spray, tasteful beauty.

If you have no fireplace, a large mirror centered over a bookcase, serving chest or long table to hold packages or Christmas cards will "center" your room decorations and provide a focal point — while reflecting Christmas from every view.

English holly, with its glistening foliage and splendid large red berries, is a most attractive wreath outside your home. To brighten up your door — and perhaps to distinguish it from similar doors in houses next to yours — a coat of bright red paint makes a good beginning.

Then, either hang the usual garland or experiment with special treatments: (1) an A-shaped figure of greens cut out of cardboard to resemble the silhouette of a Christmas tree; (2) an overhead mantle of spruce or hemlock (fine for outdoors but impractical inside the house because of their excessive shedding) or; (3) a display of nuts, pine needles and fruit mounted on a panel board.

To create a figure A, cut a square pyramid in the form of a tree. To this backing, sew or wire evergreen so that the cardboard is completely covered. Top it off with the addition of small cones or berries — or even mistletoe.

To mount a mantle of greens over the doorway, use thin lengths of wire braided together to hold the greens in the individual places. When mounting it, be sure to keep a firm grip on a stepladder. A variation on such overhead decorations is an old hula-hoop, wound with greens and decorations, mounted flush with the porch ceiling. A string of colored lights gives it drama by night.

To make the panel display from a board, as mentioned above, drive nails in from the back side of it long enough to hold fruits or gourds. You can also glue nuts in position, with pine needles as a background. Again, cover the entire board with your decoration pieces. Dime-store picture-hangers (the kind with adhesive) can then be used to attach the whole frame to the door without injuring the finish.

For simpler Christmas doorways, wire cones together in a pendant cluster, adding evergreen branches to cover the wires. Or tie three small bells to a door frame with a bow of gay ribbon and a few pine branches. Sleigh bells and ideal.

For window decorations, try a candle, a wreath, or sprays of evergreens, remembering though, how easily window decorations can become overdone and garish. You may like to let your child try water paints for a "stained glass window" effect — or try them yourself.

For your Christmas table, use a long tray upon which you put 10 candles of various heights, ranging in color from deep scarlet to pure white. Space springs of holberries for a finishing touch.

Let whatever table arrangements you prepare be low enough not to obscure views of faces or inhibit free conversation. And whichever way your creative bent carries you, use plenty of color and keep the effect harmonious. Too much unrelieved green becomes monotonous in artificial light; avoid this monotony by spraying on a touch of color. According to the experts, pale gold, silver, or copper-tone spray enamels are perfect for holiday wreaths, pine boughs or miniature trees. For traditional effects, sprays of white, green, or red colors are ideal.

As you add decorative cheer to your halls, be sure to include plenty of mistletoe. An old custom says that whoever steals a kiss from beneath the mistletoe has to pick one of its berries — and you certainly don't want to run out of berries!

No Ordinary Rope. . .

The History of the 'Fourragere' Is Illustrious

Ever give any thought to the origin and meaning of that "fourragere" you're wearing, soldier? You know, that rope on your shoulder.

Although there are literally thousands of servicemen wearing the fourragere, there are very few that can tell you of its very remote origin. After research on this decoration, the following accounts seem most logical.

The fourragere first had its origin as a forage rope. A long cord was fastened around the neck, then wrapped around the body, from the right shoulder to the left hip, and attached finally on the chest where it ended with two large plaits and two tassels.

Later the cord became a simple ornament of the uniform in the fashion of a braided cord fastened to the left shoulder by a double tassel and on the chest at the second vest button. The metal "aiguillettes," or "ferrets," as we refer to them, are said to date from the 16th Century. It is at this point that several versions appear as to the origin of the metal ferret.

One version is that the Duke of Albe, general of Charles V and Philip II's armies, had received orders to suppress the uprisings in the Low countries. A Flemish regiment retreated and the Duke, to show his dissatisfaction, decided that in the future, the punishment reserved for men of that regiment would consist of the torture of the gallows.

The Flemish, stung to the quick, replied proudly that they would from then on wear a rope and nail on their shoulders so that they would always be ready to be hung.

Since that time they distinguished themselves so valorously on the battlefield that the token that would formerly have covered them with disgrace became a glorious insignia for which other regiments envied them.

According to another version, the origin of the fourragere was a trifle different, and took place in a different time and place. In the time of Napoleon, a regiment received orders to defend, at all costs, an important position. The commanding officer of the unit subsequently ordered his men to "hang themselves" before surrendering. As a reply to this order, and to show that they were willing to hand, the men decided to wear a cord and nail in order to have in readiness the necessary material for their own hanging.

After the War of 1870, the fourragere was no longer used in the French Army and did not come into usage again until World War I, during which time it became a special insignia granted to the personnel of units who were cited in an Army order. Several degrees of the fourragere may be awarded:

In the colors of the Croix de Guerre for two citations; in the colors of the Medaille Militaire for four and five citations; in the colors of the Legion of Honor for seven or eight citations. Finally in September 1918, three more degrees for double fourragere in mixed colors were created; the Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre from nine to twelve citations. Legion of Honor and Medaille Militaire, from 12 to 14 citations; and Legion of Honor for both cords from 15 citations up.

The award of the French citation to an American unit entitles the unit to display the colors of the Croix de Guerre as a streamer on its flag, standard or guidon. Individual wearing of the Croix de Guerre is not permitted unless the individual has been specifically named in the citation. When a unit has been awarded two citations for gallentry in action, the French government, by separate official decree, may award the fourragere to be worn by all members of the unit.

7th Cavalry Ties 122nd Signal 9; Commanche Loop Playoff Looms

BY PETER DONOGHUE

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry was hard pressed Monday to pull off a 13-12 victory over 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry and clinch the Cherokee Division championship with an unbeaten 7-0 record in the 2nd Division Flag Football Tournament.

But action in the tourney's other two divisions didn't lack for activity—or curiosity. In the Comanche Division, long-time league leading 122nd Signal Battalion was tied by 7th Cavalry when the teams took a total of three forfeit victories in two days. "Gary Owen" gained the tie on "free" wins over 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry last Tuesday and 72nd Armor last Wednesday. The Signalmen held on to their share of the lead with a forfeit success over 12th Artillery Tuesday.

It took some help for 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry to cop the top spot in the Apache Division and it came from 37th Artillery and third-place 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry. The leaders, second - place 15th Artillery, and 2nd of the 9th each had one loss until last Tuesday when 37th Arty bombed 2nd of the 9th, 25-7, and last Wednesday when 2nd of the 9th stopped 15th Artillery, 20-7.

Dennis Scott's extra point late in the fourth quarter made the difference in 1st of the 38th's 13-12 win over 2nd of the 23rd. The decisive tally came after Robert Marshal had tied things at 12-all on a short run. The 2nd of the 23rd had opened the game's scoring in the third period when Arthur Sykes took a hand-off on a reverse and dashed 25 yards for the touchdown.

Scott then tied it up for 1st of the 38th "Marnemen" with a six-pointer but 2nd of the 23rd quarterback James Joslyn put his team ahead for the last time early in the fourth stanza on a right end sweep for eight yards and the score.

Half Win Each

The 2nd of the 23rd club was desperately fighting until the last but time ran out with them still 15 yards shy of the goal line.

In other games Monday, 2nd of the 38th and 72nd Armor were both credited with half a victory and half a loss when neither team was able to field a full team; and 15th Artillery came from behind in the second half to overcome a 6-2 2nd Administration Company advantage and win 16-6. David Blackwood and Harold Walker scored for the winners while Arelius Blair tallied 2nd Admin.'s only TD.

Last Tuesday's top contest was 37th Artillery's 25 - 7 trouching of 2nd of the 9th. Robert Jackson and Gary Kaylor sparked the winning attack, each of them scoring 12 points. In other Tuesday games, 1st of the 23rd defeat-

Ball Series Starts 9th

1st Opposes 2nd Place Flag 9's

The championship double elimination series of the 2nd Division Flag Football Tourney is expected to get under way Monday at Bennett Field, Sand Hill.

The series will take six playing days with two games between the first and second place teams in the regular season's three divisions being played the first three nights. One game a night is slated for the final three days.

Regular season action is expected to be wrapped up tonight with 7th Cavalry meeting 122nd Signal Battalion for the Comanche Division crown at 6:30 at Bennett Field. The two teams were tied with 5-1 records when the five-week season ended.

The final lineup of second place teams in championship series had not been determined at press time. In the Apache Division, if 2nd of the 9th defeated 2nd Administration Company this past Tuesday, they would have earned a tie with 15th Artillery and a playoff for the runnerup slot with third-place 2nd of the 23rd.

Game times and pairings for next week's championship series will be announced.

Veteran Viet Nam Pilot Joins 2nd Aviation Battalion

By 2nd Aviation PIO

A pilot with 183 combat support missions over Vietnam has been assigned as the 2nd Aviation Battalion S-3 (operations) officer.

Capt. Dick E. Roach, one of the new breed of Army aviation officers, assumed his position upon return from the Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) flight detachment in Vietnam.

Capt. Roach entered the Army in March, 1953 assigned to the Field Artillery Basic Officer Course at Fort Sill, Okla. In August 1953 he attended primary flight school at Gary Air Force Base, Tex. and returned to Fort Sill for the advanced flight training phase. Following fixed wing training he attended helicopter school at Gary AFB.

After a tour with the 1st Armored Division at Fort Polk, La., the captain was assigned to the Southeast European Task Force (SETAF), in Verona, Italy.

In January 1958 he became aide de camp to Maj. Gen. H. H. Fischer, SETAF commanding general and later to Maj. Gen. John P. Daly. Capt. Roach was promoted to his present rank in March 1959.

Reassigned to the Artillery Advanced Course and ground duty at Fort Sill until September, 1961, he, shortly thereafter, attended the University of Omaha and received his Bachelor of Arts degree, majoring in Military Science.

In the summer of 1962 the captain was sent to Vietnam with assignment to the Vietnamese Field Command as the Army aviation advisor. During this time he was chief of the Air-Ground Orientation Team. This particular job took the captain to numerous locations throughout that country.

Upon his return to the States he was assigned to Company B, 2nd Aviation Battalion as executive officer. He was recently transferred to the slot of battalion S-3.

Baseball and Football Are Lindsey's Best

Athletics play a major part in the life of James Lindsey.

Lindsey, a specialist four, is the 2nd Division Flag Football Tournament's leading individual scorer.

But that doesn't tell half the story. Football isn't even his major sport.

Lindsey is a veteran baseball player. While at Central High School at Columbia, Tenn., Lindsey earned three baseball letters and later played freshmen baseball at the University of Tennessee, at Knoxville.

A centerfielder, he played on the U. S. Army Artillery Training Center team at Fort Sill, Okla., in 1962. The center had nine professional ball players on its team.

But football has played no small part in his athletic career. He played varsity football in high school and at the helm of the Division Artillery team this fall he has piled up 53 points, five more than his nearest rival.

Lindsey got off on the right foot in basic training 22 months ago at Fort Knox, Tenn., when he won his units PT trophy. In addition to baseball at Fort Sill, Lindsey also ran on the track team and earlier this fall he coached and played a leading part in Division Artillery's third place finish in the division volleyball tournament.

But Lindsey, the athletics and recreation NCO for Division Artillery headquarters, has not always had such good luck. Candidly he admits boxing isn't his sport. In his only regular fight, in the Golden Gloves in Nashville, he was nearly flattened. And he's never boxed again.

Leading Flagball Scorer

Lindsey Retains First in Scoring; Myrick Arrives

The top three scorers in the 2nd Infantry Division flag football tournament individual scoring race held their positions while idle last week but not so below.

Leroy Myrick of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, came out of the blue to pull into a seventh place tie with Harold Walker of the 15th Artillery at 31 points. Myrick tallied 12 points against Walker's 15th Artillery last Thursday while Walker was scoreless. Walker scored six Monday night against 2nd Administration Company.

James Lindsey of Division Artillery continued to lead the pack with 53 points on eight touchdowns and five extra points. He was followed by Randy Johnson of the 122nd Signal Battalion with 48 points and Fern Williams of 7th Cavalry who has 43.

Moving into fourth place was John Kelly of 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry who scored seven points last Tuesday against 72nd Armor to reach 38. Robert Jackson of 37th Artillery followed with 36 and Joseph Oliver of 2nd Engineer Battalion had 32.

Pre-Season Pickers Rate NYU Top Team

By Dave Braun and Joe Moore

Once upon a time Cincinnati was NCAA basketball champion, then somebody showed Loyola the full-court press and the Windy City crew said — no more.

So now the Ramblers wear the golden crown of basketball, but not for long. We're going to overlook the fact that they have four returning starters and tumble them all the way down to the No. 3 slot on our pre-season picks.

Loyola left its impact on cage fans last March in Louisville, Ky., coming back from a 15-point deficit with 12 minutes remaining to overcome the mighty Bearcats, 60-58, in overtime.

The record books show that the boys from the Queen City outhit the Ramblers some 48 to 27 per cent, outrebounded them, 52-45, and were defensively superior. Nevertheless Cincinnati went ice box cold near the end and the rapid Ramblers became overnight heroes.

Although there is no debate about the Midwest being the hot bed of basketball, producing the NCAA champions for the past four years, Eastern powerhouse NYU is our pick for the national championship.

Led by 6-4 Barry Kramer, the nation's most nearly perfect player and the greatest ever at NYU, the Violets, will surely be one of the select four in this years NCAA finals.

With more than able support from 6-7 senior Harold "Happy" Hairston, the Violets also have on hand Ray Bennett, a 6-7 transfer who was absent last season.

Cincinnati, our second choice, lost their bavkcourt duo of All-America Tom Thacker and Tony Yates, but should be the most powerful team in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Returning to the Bearcats are prospective All-America Ron Bonham, a 6-5 dead-eye, and George Wilson who at 6-8 can play either forward or center.

If 6-8 Ron Krick, a sophomore of great potential who was out last season with a shoulder injury, plays as expected, the Bearcats could have the best forecourt combination in college basketball.

Cincy will have two juniors and two sophs battling for the vacated guard spots, with the two best defensive guards probably getting the nod at the starting berths.

Getting back to Loyola, our No. 3 choice among the elite, they'll have all they need in rebounding power and probably will be the fastest team in the nation.

Sizing up their scoring ability the Ramblers have a fellow named Ron Miller who at 6-2 head coach George Ireland says could make Chicago fans forget 1962 All-America Jerry Harkness. In the backcourt the Ramblers will have classy Jack Egan who hit at a 13.7 per game clip last year in addition to Les Hunter with a 17 point per game average for 1962 and Vic Rouse at 14.5.

The "Blue Devils" of Duke have earned our No. 4 pick. There's no doubt the North Carolinians have the personnel even with the absence of the since departed All-America Art Heyman. On hand will be Jeff Mullins, a Lexington, Ky., product who grew up in the atmosphere of Kentucky's Memorial Coliseum.

Overshadowed by Heyman last year, Mullins, who averaged 20.3, heads a fine ballclub that includes veterans 6-10 Jay Buckley and soph Steve Vacendak, at 6-1.

Wichita is our No. 5 pick for the year's cage season and they could very easily fool the Cincinnati Bearcats. The reason for choosing them on our top five preview is their all-around balance highlighted by two fine big men, Dave Stallworth and Nate Bowman.

Stallworth, a pre-season choice for All-America honors, is a 6-7 wizard who averaged and hit at a 9.2 clip.

58th Posts 63-56 Win On 609th

The 58th Infantry remained undefeated Saturday by defeating the 609th Radar Squadron, an Air Force unit from Eufaula, Ala., 63-56, and ran their win skein to four straight.

In earlier games the 29th Infantry won its third game against no defeats over the 10th Artillery, 76-55 and the 58th won its third straight game by defeating the 428th Medics, 58-54.

The 428th Medics took it on the chin again earlier when TSB toppled them 48-35.

In a more recent game the 69th Armor beat the 39th Transportation Battalion, 57-37.

Four Doughboys Up for All-Army

By Dave Braun

Four Fort Benning Doughboys have been nominated for the 1963 Army Times All-Army football team which will be released before Christmas.

Nominations, no more than four from any single team, were open to coaches and sports writers from U. S. Army posts throughout the world.

Nominees from the Doughboys for the 22-man All-Army squad are fullback Ron Quillen, halfback Billy Williamson, and guards Joe Wendryhoski and Pat Dye.

Quillen, a five-foot, nine-inch, 204-pound, former East Tennessee State star garnered 493 yards in 89 carries, an average of 5.5 yards per carry. He also scored 48 points, second highest on the team.

Billy Williamson, former Georgia Tech speedster, headed all Doughboy scores with 60 points this season. The five foot, eight-inch, 160-pounder, was an exciting punt returner for Fort Benning in addition to rambling for 381 yards in 82 trips, an average of 4.6 yards per carry.

Both Doughboy "White" team guards were nominated for the All - Army team. Wendryhoski, a six-foot, two-inch, 240 - pounder, from the University of Illinois was an outstanding blocker for the free-scoring Doughboys who amassed over 2,000 yards rushing.

Dye, on the other hand, while only five-foot, 11-inches, and 195-pounds, was a fearsome linebacker on defense, aiding in limiting Doughboys opponents to a meager 859 yards on the ground in 10 games.

Yankee Team Acquired By Local Group

Baseball will return to Columbus in 1964 when the Columbus Yankees open their first home game and the AA baseball year in Golden park April 17, Chamber of Commerce officials announced Monday.

Columbus' new club, formerly the Augusta Yankees, will be operated by Greater Columbus Baseball, Inc., headed by Richard E. Steele, local businessman and insurance executive.

The team will be in the South Atlantic Baseball League (Sally) and is a member of the American League champion New York Yankees farm system. They bring with them from Augusta the Sally League pennants for 1962 and 1963.

The holders of the new franchise reported that reduced admission rates would be available to military personnel from Fort Benning.

Golden Park, located on Victory Drive next to the Municipal Auditorium, will host the Columbus nine for their 70 home appearances. Plans are already underway for refurbishing the 5,000 capacity park which has been without a ball club since July, 1959.

The Yankees will do their spring training in Hollywood, Fla., and then return to Columbus for their opening day game, and opening day for the Sally League season, April 17.

The local team's schedule includes 140 games with Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tenn.; Charlotte and Asheville, N.C.; Lynchburg, Va.; Macon, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala.

D Company's 11-0 Record Paces CTC

With the first half of the 1963 Infantry Center Troop Command basketball league gone to the record books, the Company D, 1st Battalion, "Drivers" are all alone in first place with a perfect 11-0 mark.

The "Drivers" displayed their claim to the top spot over the weekend as they wheeled the second place "Chargers" of Company C, 1st Battalion, right out of the Old Post Gym.

Having their coldest night shooting-wise this year, flubbitten C Company saw their usual offensive punch go haywire. Time and time again D Company erupted with "the fast break" and C Company fell further and further behind.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, with a loss to C Company and D Company blotting an otherwise perfect record, is in third place with an 8-2 mark. C Company's record now stands at 9-2.

When the 1st rotated to Fort Riley in 1955 he also made the trip. His fourth tour in the European Theater came in 1960 when he joined the 18th Artillery. He came to his new assignment with the Sky Soldiers after his tour in Germany. He has a total of 16 years and three months of overseas duty.

His decorations include the Silver Star, Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Purple Heart with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Combat Infantryman Badge, and the Parachute Badge.

Sgt. Maj. and Mrs. Craig reside at 139 Bryant St., Fort Benning. They have three children, Charles, 20; Gail, 8; and Dawn 7.

New Helper Joins Santa

Santa has a new helper — Mr. ZIP — who will give jolly old Saint Nick a hand by urging the American public to shop and mail early — and use ZIP Code to speed the Christmas mails.

Through newspaper stories, TV animation and radio jingles, Mr. ZIP, the Post Office Department's cartoon symbol of speedier mail service, will carry the message to the nation's estimated 72 million users and to children who may be using the mails for the first time with letters to Santa Claus.

Land or Water Vehicle

'Tufi' Is Tested by Mobility Dept.

Officials at Fort Benning recently got their first look at "Tufi", a new amphibious concept vehicle, at the Mobility Department's vehicle obstacle course and at Victory Pond.

Arrangements for the demonstration were made by Capt. William A. Hookway of the Combat Materiel Division, U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, and Capt. Charles C. Howard of the Vehicle Capabilities Committee of The Infantry School's Mobility Department.

Following a description of the vehicle's capabilities and characteristics given by Chester Kurpiej, a project engineer for the corporation which made it, and a question and answer period, "Tufi" was put through its paces by Charles Bair, the firm's proving ground test driver.

A slow speed lap of the demonstration area showed the flexibility of the suspension system over log obstacles, hill climb and descent capabilities, mud and water traction, climbing and cresting barriers, and shallow stream fording capabilities.

The demonstration was then moved to Victory Pond, where without modification, the new concept was driven into the lake and its amphibious characteristics were shown to the Fort Benning officials.

The body of the vehicle is constructed of a lightweight plastic. It is non - corrosive, has high impact strength and may be repaired with epoxy resin, according to officials. The body is linked to a compact chassis which features many commerical components.

Powered by a 75-horsepower engine modified for military use and having a four-speed fully synchronized transmission, Tufi has a road speed of between 55 and 60 miles per hour and a water speed of two miles an hour when wheel propelled. This same engine satisfactorily completed a 500-hour durability test in Detroit, according to officials.

The three - quarter ton truck has four-wheel drive with heavy duty components and a limited slip differential. The coil spring suspension is independent both front and rear.

Fort Benning officers liked the basic concept of the vehicle, but they felt a number of modifications should be made before it would be accepted by the military.

Among the suggestions for improvements was a reduction in the size of the engine compartment which is behind the front seat and forward of the cargo area, a new location for the spare tire, water speed be increased, and although removable, the windshield should be made to fold down.

Early Outs Authorized This Month

A Christmas "bonus," in the form of an early discharge, will be given to approximately 1,400 men at Fort Benning during "Operation Santa Claus."

Operation Santa Claus is an annual program which allows certain military personnel to be released from active duty in time to be home for the Christmas holidays.

Separation processing will begin Dec. 9 for personnel whose normal expiration date of active obligated service is from Dec. 14 through Jan. 5.

Six-month Army Reservists who began their basic combat training from June 27 to July 25 also are leigible for the early out.

Doesn't Excuse Accidents

Winter Driving Tests the Driver

Special to The Bayonet

(Editor's Note. Although the conditions listed below are not likely to occur in the Fort Benning area, hundreds will be driving north for Christmas and may need refreshing about the hazards of winter driving.)

Wintertime driving tests the skills of all car operators. Bad weather is a challenge to one's driving ability — not an excuse or alibi for an accident. Good driving calls for a firm grip on the steering wheel at all times, heads-up control and a properly maintained automobile.

In winter, drive defensively by anticipating the mistakes of other drivers. It is wise, report safety experts, to consider these facts:

During winter you can't see as well. There are many more hours of darkness, each one is packed with three times the dangers of daytime driving. Snow-storms blanket your eyes. They cover up roads, culverts, guard-rails, and eradicate centerlines. They block roads with stalled vehicles and snow plows. After the storm, blinding snow blows up clouds behind passing vehicles — enough so as to endanger pedestrians or children at play. Remember that snow and ice on your windshield distort and conceal objects on the road.

During winter, your tire grip weakens. Skidding is involved in more than half of all accidents on snowy or icy roads. This is because tires may lose all but 10 per cent of the grip they possess on dry pavement.

Snow tires are better since they restore some 27 per cent of lost friction. Chains are best of all and are a big help on snow and ice, but they are not skid proof. They restore just about 40 per cent of full tire traction. So, with less traction, there is no chance for a sudden move to duck out of a tight spot. For added traction and maneuverability on an icy or snowy hill, shift down to low gear. Many transmission systems of today's automobiles have the facility to lock into low or extra-low gear ratios. To keep out of trouble, take it easy on wet, snowy and icy roads.

During winter, be prepared for skidding. You should, however, never find yourself in a skid if you adjust your rate of speed to fit driving conditions. If your car should start to skid, keep cool and turn the steering wheel in the direction that the rear end is skidding.

Accelerate slowly, leaving the engine engaged and, at the same time, pump the brake lightly with the left foot. As the car begins to straighten out, start straightening out the front wheels. Then reduce speed gradually, letting the engine brake the car. If you must stop, continue pumping the brake lightly. To stay out of skids, avoid sudden turns, stops, and fast acceleration. Always make slow and smooth steering wheel movements.

During winter, your hearing is handicapped. Closed windows are like ear muffs. It's harder to hear warning signals from other automobiles, trucks or trains. Guard against being overcome by carbon monoxide fumes, which are colorless and odorless, but deadly. Keep two windows partially open at all times to maintain a circulation of fresh air. Opened windows also improve your ability to hear better.

During winter, your reaction time is slower. Weighed down with heavy clothing, boots, rubbers, and the like for low temperature conditions, your arms and legs are not very fast on the draw.

Safety experts maintain that the best way to slow down a car on icy and snowy pavements is to pump the brakes. This recommendation is based upon the fact that the brakes must apply effectively, a function which can be assured only by inspection, proper brake adjustment and use of quality brake linings.

It is wise to check your car's brake system at slow speeds. If there is a side pull, have it adjusted promptly so as not to end up in a ditch or head-on collision. Brakes that grab, lock or drag are dangerous under all driving conditions. They are extra hazardous on ice or snow-covered highways. Make certain, therefore, that your brake system is in good working order and that the linings are not worn beyond the limits of safe usage. In addition, check the condition of your tires. The car's windshield wipers, defroster, lights, directional signals and horn should also be functioning properly.

Safe winter driving results when motorists have the right mental attitude, the physical ability, the knowledge and the skill necessary to meet successfully all types of road hazards. The practical motorist should consider these appropriate suggestions:

Heed all warning signs and be on the lookout for stalled vehicles and cars out of control, particularly on hills.

Keep your eyes on the road at all times and avoid being drawn into an accident trap by observing traffic patterns far ahead of your car — half a block in town and half a mile on the highway.

Yield the right-of-way if necessary to avoid an accident. Let honking motorists and those riding close to the rear of your car or those coming up fast, pass — they are far less dangerous when in front of you.

Look at your rear-view mirror frequently and keep posted on the traffic situation behind you. Consider the whole traffic pattern, not just the cars immediately ahead.

Map out a plan of action for every emergency. Condition your mental reflexes to anticipate dangerous accident situations.

Beware of the hours from 4 to 7 p.m., when most motorists are tired and are rushing home.

Remember that ice, at 32 degrees F., is twice as slippery as it would be at zero temperature, when it's dry.

24 Rakkasans Join Associates, Get Jump Wings

Twenty-four more Rakkasans of the 11th Air Assault Division's 187th Airborne Infantry pinned on the novice wings of a military paratrooper Monday during a graduation ceremony on Fryar Field Drop Zone after the jump class made its fifth and qualifying drop Monday morning.

Made up of troopers from each of the battalion's units, Tuesday's graduation brought the 187th up to a 57 percent airborne qualified status as other troops continued normal air assault training.

The announcement, made by Rakkasan S-3 Officer, Maj. Joseph F. Bellochi, showed the expanding ranks of airborne qualified personnel to be progressing according to schedule, and indicated that the battalion will reach their 100 per cent goal by the end of the year.

CAPT. NATALE

The U. S. Army's Special Forces have nothing on the Italian Army as far as unusual hats go. While the Special Forces men wear their green berets, men of Italy's Alpine Brigade wear their distinguishing "Tyroleans" to set them off as specially trained mountain forces.

A former member of this elite Italian Brigade is Capt. Giuseppe C. Natale, now a member of the Infantry School's Career Course No. 2, slated to be graduated in late May, 1964.

The Italian officer comes from a military background. His father was a colonel in the Italian Army and Capt. Natale followed in his footsteps by acquiring a commission in 1953 after a four year stint in his country's Military Academy at Modena.

His military career has been filled with many unusual assignments. His first duty station after graduation from the Academy found him on the frontier between Italy and Yugoslavia during the dispute between the two countries over the Trieste territory claimed by the Yugoslavians.

After his promotion to captain in 1958 he was sent to London, England, by the minister of defense for a six-month intensive course in the English language.

While in London he met his wife Georgina.

The elite Alpine Brigade was his next stop. He was located on the frontier between Austria and Italy near the Brenner Pass. This region is a constant source of trouble to the Italian government because of saboteurs who claim ownership of what they consider the south-Tyrol.

What Capt. Natale terms his most interesting assignment came when he was assigned to the position of aide-de-camp to Maj. Gen. N. A. Costello of the U. S. Army, chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group to Italy.

This career course is not his first acquaintance with Fort Benning. Last year during a three-week tour of U.S. military installations with Gen. Costello, Capt. Natale not only visited Fort Benning but Cape Kennedy, the Pentagon and West Point.

His wife accompanied him on his assignment here and has been an active member in the Fort Benning Women's Club. She is a singing member of the Women's Club Christmas Chorus.

16 Sky Soldiers To Be Trained For Air Traffic

Sixteen members of the 11th Air Assault Division's newest unit, the 72nd Air Traffic Company, will depart Dec. 1, 1963 for a special Air Traffic Controller Course at the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) Academy in Oklahoma City.

This course is especially designed for selected Army Terminal Control personnel. They are the first Sky Soldiers to be trained by the FAA.

The men are Capt. J. J. Norton, SFC Ryln L. Pitt, SFC Gerhardt Just, Sgt. Raymond B. Smith, Sgt. Brooks Rogers, Sp5 Bobby C. Gibson, Sp5 Michael Whalen, Sp5 Kenneth F. Carr, Sp5 Charlie F. Leach, Sp5 Charles H. Thornton, Sp5 Lynwood D. Cummins, Sp5 Kenneth N. Poe, Sp5 Albert F. Douglas, Sp5 Norman E. Snyder, Sp4 John A. Miller and Sp4 Thomas S. Crumrine.

Flag Taboos Are Outlined By Business

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The National Better Business Bureau reports that it has recently observed several instances in which the flag of the United States, or simulations thereof, has been prominently displayed in commercial advertising.

Although there is no federal law regulating the use of the United States Flag in advertising (except in the District of Columbia), a Joint Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on June 22, 1942, declares:

"The flag should never be used for advertising purposes in any manner whatsoever."

In addition, the Lanham Trade-Mark Act of 1946 prohibits the registration of a trade-mark which "consists of, or comprises the flag or coat of arms or other insignia of the United States, or of any State or municipality, or of any foreign nation, or any simulation thereof."

Regulations under the Federal Alcohol Administration Act specifically prohibit the use, in advertising or labeling of alcoholic beverages, of the American Flag, or any emblem, seal, insigne, or decoration associated with the flag or the Armed Forces of the United States.

Every state and the District of Columbia are reported to have statutes prohibiting the use in advertising of the United States flag or state flag.

Your Dental Health

Teeth Can Be Saved If Help Comes Early

By Capt. Robert Cross

The old saying, "Cold steel and sunlight stop an aching tooth from hurting," meaning that the only relief from pain is to pull the tooth, is literally a "pain in the neck" to dentists.

Often dentists wonder why a person will go to this extreme when a small filling, done before the tooth degenerated into such bad condition, would have been far less painful and more adequate. Often, however, people wait until the tooth is in hopeless condition before they contact their dentist.

Why do they wait? Most people, when asked, will tell you the reason is their lack of money. This is hard to believe, since many people with adequate funds are among the 22,000,000 edentulous (no teeth) in the United States.

Extractions are not pleasant. Oh, sure, it can be done painlessly, but pain often comes after the extraction. Remember, you just lost a good-sized tooth, and left a pretty big hole in your jaw. Mother Nature will handle the healing — at least usually.

Let's think about decay for a minute. A person is always aware of trouble before any tooth is ready for extraction, so, it is reasonable that something could be done to prevent the ache. The only answer for "why the patient waits" is fear. There is little understanding of dental care, so it is psychologically a blow to an individual when actual dental care is needed.

Everyone fears the unknown, and most of dentistry fits into the unknown category. Most of the instruments are frightening to the patient, and all appear capable of causing pain. The patient sits in the chair anticipating pain; pain which he is certain will be intense and of long duration. It requires many visits to the dentist to be convinced of the lack of pain offered by modern dentistry.

An aid in reducing the fear of dentistry is patient education. This is best accomplished by starting dental care at an early age, and visiting the dentist for regular check-ups and work, if needed. Dental examinations and dental treatment are free for all military personnel at Fort Benning. We can do more for more soldiers and officers if you come in regularly for checkups and-or treatment. Help us to help you.

USO to Honor Harry Truman

Former President Harry S. Truman and his wife will receive an unprecedented joint award from the USO early in December.

The award, first of its kind, is being presented "in grateful recognition of their lasting contribution to America and its most precious heritage, its youth."

William R. Baker Jr., USO president, will make the presentation in Kansas City.

The USO said that Mrs. Truman was an active volunteer hostess at the USO Club in Washington throughout Mr. Truman's career as Senator, Vice-President and President of the United States.

A spokesman said, "She was a member of the 'snackbar group'; helping serve lunch one day each week, and returning on Sunday evenings to assist with the buffet, through the war period."

While President, Mr. Truman called for the reactivation of the USO with the outbreak of the Korean Conflict. He served as honorary chairman of the USO, a tradition which both Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy followed.

Surgeon Says

Children's Feet Deserve Great Care and Attention

By Capt. Arnold Heller

One of the most common problems which parents face is the proper care of their children's feet. This is necessary if the child is to grow to be a healthy individual with good posture and grace in walking.

The feet of the infant at birth are immature miniatures of the adult foot in every respect. The bones of the feet form many joints which can be damaged, resulting in painful deformed feet.

Foot problems on children are most likely to develop in two periods of accelerated growth: (1) the early walk- when the foot is subjected to the forces of body weight and gravity; and (2) during the adolescent stage.

A parent can save his child hours and miles of discomfort if he learns to:

(1) prevent damage to normal foot development;

(2) recognize the importance of proper foot care;

(3) understand the relationship of foot health to good posture;

(4) know the role proper footwear plays in foot health.

It is known that most infants are born with good feet but by the age of 20, when most growth is completed, 75 per cent will have foot problems. Most of the problems arise from poor fitting shoes. Good foot health begins by letting your baby's feet alone. Until the baby starts to stand or walk unassisted, the only footwear necessary is warm, roomy, soft shoes or booties.

Shoes would be unnecessary if we walked on sand or soft dirt which conforms to our feet; however, we live in a "hard-surface era" — hardwood floors, cement sidewalks, asphalt playgrounds— and continually walking barefoot on these surfaces will produce foot strain and other foot problems.

As soon as your baby starts to stand or walk on a hard surface (usually between six and 12 months of age) he is ready for his first pair of semi-hard soled shoes. The sole should be flat and flexible and the back of the shoe (or counter) should be firm to hold the heel in place. The first walking shoes should not have a heel and will graduate to a ¼ to ½ inch heel at the early running stage. After age six, the heel can be gradually increased. High-top shoes are of benefit to age two or three, and help keep the shoe on the foot.

Hand-me-down shoes are poor substitutes. The life of the shoe can be lengthened by alternating with other shoes, keeping them clean, polished, and in good repair. If wet, they should be dried at room temperature and not over a heater.

All infants are born with fat pads where one naturally sees an arch; this condition may persist for several years and should not be misinterpreted as a flat foot.

Certain variations of the foot are within normal limits. Just as one finds birthmarks on one side of the body, or one side of the face slightly different, so may the infant's foot normally pronate (turn out) or supinate (turn in). This tendency for pronation or supination is accentuated by particular sleeping positions and one should guard against allowing the infant to habitually assume these positions. Your doctor can show you ways of encouraging frequent change of the infant's position.

There are many features to watch for in fitting shoes — the most important of which is to allow plenty room in a flexible shoe. The only stiff parts of the shoe should be localized to the heel region. The toe area should be ½ to ¾ inch longer than the longest toe. It is not so important to purchase an expensive shoe as to buy shoes frequently enough — most children will outgrow but not necessarily outwear their shoes.

Besides proper shoe fit, your child should be instructed in proper daily foot care. Just as you have him care for his hands and face, his feet should be cleaned daily in warm, soapy water to remove dead bits of skin and perspiration, fertile ground for fungus infection. Be sure he scrubs his toenails with a soft brush and dries carefully between the toes. The toenails should be trimmed straight across, leaving the nails about 1-16th inch longer than the toe and slightly rounded to prevent stocking snag. The stockings should be roomy, allowing three-fourths inch beyond the toes.

TOPS AT CTC . . . PFC William B. Smyser of Headquarters Company has been named Soldier-of-the Month for The Infantry Center Troop Command. PFC Smyser is a clerk and curator at the Infantry Museum. He was chosen on his military appearance and on his knowledge of military and current events. (Photo by SSgt. Betty Farmer).

Howitzer Unit Outshoots All Other Army Batteries

Probably no 105-mm howitzer battery in the Army fires as many rounds of ammunition as does Fort Benning's Battery "B" of the 2nd Battalion (Composite), 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade.

During the past fiscal quarter (June through September) members of "Bravo" Battery fired an estimated 10,000 shells in support of various demonstrations and Infantry School problems.

The 140 members of the battery, under the command of Capt. Allison H. Patrick, have at their disposal an arsenal of 30 towed and eight self-propelled 105-mm howitzers.

This is three times the number of weapons that a regular Table of Organization and Equipment (TOE) battery possesses.

As the primary firing battery within the 2nd Battalion, "Bravo" Battery renders artillery support for such school problems as "The Rifle Company in the Attack" and the "Mechanized Rifle Company in the Attack."

In addition it assists in requiring battalion - size support, such as the "Artillery Firing Demonstration" at Concord Observation Post.

11th Air Assault Division Chooses Its Top Soldier

A 25-year-old 90-mm Recoilless Rifle gunner, PFC Allen N. McLeroy of Co. B, 187th Infantry, has been named Soldier-of-the - Month for the 11th Air Assault Division, it was announced Tuesday morning by Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, 187th (Rakkasan) commander.

Competing with candidates from all major units of the 11th Air Assault Division, McLeroy underwent a thorough screening by the division board to emerge top soldier in the 11th for the month of November.

PFC McLeroy entered the Army following his high school graduation, enlisting in December, 1961. After basic and advanced Infantry training, he performed an overseas tour in Germany, and upon his return to the United States, served with the 2nd Division's 28th Infantry.

Emphasis Day Clergy Are Military Vets

Three Columbus clergymen who will participate in the 11th Air Assault Division's Religious Emphasis activities today are already familiar with military chapels.

Rev. Clarence E. Younce, pastor of Southside Baptist Church, and Rabbi Leonard Borstein, of Shearith Israel Synagogue, have both served as Army chaplains. Rev. William P. Dowling, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church, served as a Technical Sergeant in the Army Air Corps during World War II.

Rev. Younce was first called to active duty in 1942 and served in the European Theater of Operations throughout World War II, separating from the Army in 1945. In 1951 he was recalled to active duty for the Korean action, and served three years with the 1st Cavalry Division in the Far East before separating again from the service in 1954. He is still a Reserve Chaplain.

Rabbi Borstein served on active duty as an Army Chaplain at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., from 1960 to 1962.

As a Technical Sergeant in the Army Air Corps aboard a floating aircraft repair shop, Father Dowling participated in the World War II Pacific Campaign from Leyte and New Guinea to Manila Bay.

History of Communism

A Big Rebuilding Plan Was Necessary After Fruitless World War I

(Fifth in a series of 20 articles entitled The History Of Communism, by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Corps Recruiting Depot, San Diego, Calif.)

The Red Revolutionary government stood at the helm of Russia in Jan., 1918, with a very shaky hand on an insecure wheel. Over a million of its peasant soldiers had deserted, some from confusion and fear, others in an effort to get back home to claim their share of the abdicated-Czar's farmlands.

While there still was a Russia left to control, Lenin sent his representative, Solokinikov, to Brest-Litovsk, where he signed a peace treaty with Germany, March 3, 1918.

The terms were merciless: the loss of one-third (62 million), of her population, one-fourth of her territory, one-third of her crop land, 27 per cent of her income and better than half of her industries.

Counter - revolutionary forces (those from whom the Communists had wrested control), starvation and peasant unrest brought about by industrial and agricultural failures, bungled by a new-born government, threw the nation into another civil war which would endure well into 1920.

It is within the realm of probability that the Reds would have found themselves unable to maintain their hold had not the Germans capitulated to the Allies in Nov. 1918.

Germany's collapse, however, permitted the Reds to recoup their treaty losses. Moreover, Trotsky, who had been named to head the war ministry, was able to commandeer German weapons to aid in his rebuilding of Red military forces.

Throughout the civil war and well into the Twenties, Lenin and his followers felt — and fumbled — their way along. Time and again they strayed to the brink of political disaster, only to reverse their stand in the interests of expediency.

But while the Communist Party often changed tactics, it never changed its goal: the "proletarian dictatorship." It was simply a matter of assimilating doctrine and environment.

To understand the course of Communism in 1920-1930, it is necessary to understand the politico - governmental structure.

Ostensibly, supreme power lay in the hands of the Central Committee, a somewhat unwieldy body of party representatives. In actuality, a five-man Politbureau (the elite of the Central Committee) was the real government. Command of the Politbureau, in turn, went to its three-man majority of Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin.

Of this triumvirate, Lenin was foremost as recognized head of both party and government. Trotsky was the military and foreign affairs expert. And it may be said in fairness that the jobs neither of the two wanted went to Stalin.

When the drive for power emerged upon the death (due to a series of brain hemorrhages) of Lenin in Jan. 1924, Stalin was in the saddle and Trotsky was walking.

Next week: Red Industry.

Soviet Union Is Learning All About 'Missile Gaps'

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Soviets are estimated to have today only a fraction as many intercontinental missiles as we do. Their submarine - launched ballistic missiles are short range and generally are not comparable to our Polaris force.

That disclosure was made by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to members of the Economic Club of New York.

In reference to the balance of strategic nuclear forces, the Secretary said the U.S. force now contains more than 500 operational long-range ballistic missiles. Plans are for this force to increase to more than 1700 by 1966.

In addition to the missiles, the United States has Strategic Air Command bombers on air alert and more than 500 bombers on quick reaction, ground alert.

By comparison, Secretary McNamara told the group the consensus today is that the Soviets could place about half as many bombers over North America on a first strike.

The Soviets are estimated to have today only a fraction as many intercontinental missiles as the United States.

"The United States at present has a stockpile or planned for stockpile, tens of thousands or nuclear explosives for tactical use on the battlefield, in anti-submarine warfare and against aircraft," Mr. McNamara said.

The consensus is that the United States is presently substantially superior in design, diversity and numbers in this class of weapons.

During the past two years there has been notable increases in general purpose forces:

Combat - ready Army divisions increased by about 45 per cent — from 11 to 16.

30 per cent increase in the number of tactical air squadrons.

100 per cent increase in ship construction and conversion to modernize the fleet.

75 per cent increase in airlift capabilities.

Secretary McNamara emphasized that it is not only force that matters. "The key to the effective utilization of these forces is combat readiness and mobility."

Flight School Set to Open In Kansas

WASHINGTON (ANF) — An additional Army aviation training facility to train Army pilots in primary fixed wing and instrument flight will be activated at the Olathe Naval Air Station, Olathe, Kan., according to an announcement by the Department of the Army.

The use of the facilities will make it possible for the Army to meet aviation training requirements without opening a new installation.

Present plans call for this additional flight training school to be operational in time to accept the first class of students by mid-1964. Subsequent classes will be phased in on a periodic basis, until peak officer and enlisted student loads are reached.

Fort Rucker, Ala., the United States Army Aviation Center, will continue to operate at full capacity and will be utilized primarily for advanced training.

Flight instruction at Olathe will be conducted in Army aircraft. Contractors will soon be invited to submit offers for operating the school for the Army. Civilian contractors presently conduct primary flight training at Fort Rucker, Ala., and Fort Wolters, Texas.

Buying or Selling Home Can Cause Big Headache

It is common for military personnel arriving at a new permanent duty station to purchase a house rather than rent or lease. The Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Judge Advocate General, in discussions with many servicemen over the past few months has found a number of problems which appear to be recurring among military personnel. In an effort to help avoid unnecessary legal or financial entanglements, the Legal Assistance Office advises that all prospective buyers and sellers should take the following action:

Obtain legal counsel and representation for all aspects of the transaction.

Do not sign a contract to buy or sell without having it checked by counsel.

Insure that the contract provides a specific date upon which you may take possession and provides a penalty if for any reason you are not allowed occupancy on that date. This is particularly important if you are building a house. Failure to do this may result in your living in a motel for a considerable length of time.

Make sure that the contract contains a complete recital of all personal property which is being purchased with it.

If the house was recently constructed you should obtain a Warranty of Material and Workmanship. Otherwise you may spend a considerable amount of time attempting to force the builder to correct a number of defects.

Do not rely on verbal agreements or assurances concerning any aspect of the transaction.

Personally check the property before accepting it, and try to avoid making the final payment until you are sure that the other party has fully performed the contract, or has given a written agreement or bond to finish it by a specific date.

Make the seller give you an accurate and compete statement of what costs will have to be paid at settlement and a reasonably close estimate of the amount of each.

If selling a house, finish the entire transaction prior to leaving the area. Make sure that you begin putting the house up for sale far enough in advance so that this may be accomplished.

Personally check and supervise every aspect of the transaction. This is no substitute for competent legal counsel, but you are the only person who can handle your personal financial transactions exactly as you wish.

By remembering these simple guidelines, you should be able to avoid many of the serious legal difficulties which have troubled many other members of the Army.

Jewish Festival Is in Progress

Fort Benning Jewish personnel began the 1963 commemoration of the ancient Chanukah Festival of Lights and Dedication at sundown Tuesday. The commemoration will continue until sunset next Wednesday.

Services are being held at 5 p.m. each day of the Chanukah Season at the Post Jewish Center, Bldg. 1071.

In keeping with Jewish tradition, one candle of an eight-branched candelabrum will be lighted at the center each evening of the celebration.

Personnel of the Post Jewish Chaplain's office have built two giant wooden outdoor Chanukah candle holders and wired them with electricity to lend a festive air to the joyous celebrations. One will be placed outside the Jewish Center and the other near the Post Exchange.

A time of rejoicing for all Jewish people, Chanukah marks the triumph of religious freedom over forces that tend to belittle the dignity and worth of individuals.

The occasion which the season commemorates took place more than 2,000 years ago. Judah Maccabee, on that day, led the Jews to overthrow Syrian-Greek oppressors and drive them from the Temple and the city of Jerusalem.

The tradition of lighting eight candles for Chanukah grew out of the miraculous burning of one lamp, supplied with one jar of holy oil, while priests prepared a new supply of the fuel, after driving the enemy out.

The Eternal Light before the Holy Ark, burned on in the Temple for eight days, on one day's supply, keeping a time-honored symbol bright.

Jews burn the candles to commemorate their people's victory over tyranny.

"Safety Consciousness" and the 13-day Christmas - New Year holiday dominate the coming Yuletide season at Fort Benning.

The official Christmas-New Year holiday period will extend from 7 a.m. Dec. 20 to 5 p.m. Jan. 2, Infantry Center officials announced.

On tap for the period are two legal holidays and a number of non-duty and half-duty days. All personnel, both military and civilian, will be off on the legal holidays, Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

Other non-duty days for military personnel include Dec. 21, 24 and 28. The military will also have off the afternoons of Dec. 20, 23, 26, 27, 30, 31 and Jan. 2.

Civilians will work on these days unless they take leave. So will a number of military personnel performing duties considered essential to the operation of the post.

Infantry Center safety officials are conducting an extensive campaign to alert personnel to the need for highway safety during the holidays.

Among the things being done are insuring that commanders and supervisors orient personnel on the causes of holiday accidents, and the safety practices which can prevent them.

Safety officials also are advising commanders on the control of leaves and passes to discourage driving late at night, and where practicable in units conduct safety checks of private vehicles before departure.

There is also an effort being made to counsel persons granted leaves or passes on the necessity for safe driving, self discipline and courtesies of the road, and on the dangers of driving fatigue and other hazardous conditions prevalent during the holiday season.

One unique method of keeping safety constantly in the mind of the military is a leaflet which is attached to the soldiers' pass, reminding them that the best gift to their family is their presence.

Other safety posters and leaflets also are being distributed to the units, as well as weather and road conditions for major routes of travel.

Accidents other than automobile wrecks that usually cause injuries over the Christmas period are fires, altercations, carbon monoxide, being stuck by an auto while walking along the side of a road or crossing streets, and hunting and other firearm accidents.

Norman M. Evans, TIC safety officer, said the record over the past four Yuletide periods has been remarkably good, and he's for encouraging everybody to keep it that way.

However, he said, trends for the last few weeks indicate the need for extra caution.

Misuse and Abuse Can Ruin Anything

It's as old as history and as new as a two-bit haircut at the barber's school—bad women are trouble.

Solomon said in Proverbs "It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop than with a brawling woman in a wide house," but he also said, "Whosoever findeth a wife findeth a good thing and obtaineth favor of the Lord."

Few can deny that women are sometimes made bad by abuse, misuse and lack of understanding.

Now take a look at your sleek new automobile and think how much it is like a woman. Abuse it and mistreat it and it will give you hello dear — just like a woman. And in the process it will give you trouble and cost you money. Again, just like a woman, the worst treatment a car can get is misunderstanding. Misunderstand that automobile and it's likely to kill you.

Before you plan your Christmas and New Years activities, stop and consider that automobile — and that woman. With either you get better reactions when you keep yourself in order. Don't try to argue either when you're

Four-Star General To Speak Here

Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, Army vice chief of staff, is slated to arrive Wednesday for a three-day visit in which he will deliver two speeches and observe training at The Infantry School, 11th Air Assault Division and 2nd Infantry Division.

Gen. Hamlett will address combined Infantry officer career course classes at 10 a.m. Thursday at Theater No. 1 and will tour the 11th Air Assault and 2nd Infantry Division areas that afternoon.

At 8 p.m. Thursday he will speak to a meeting of the Columbus - Fort Benning Chapter, Military Order of the World Wars (MOWW) at the Main Officers' Open Mess. A social hour will precede the dinner, beginning at 7 p.m.

The four-star general is scheduled to depart the post at 1 p.m. next Saturday.

Was Balloonist

Gen. Hamlett was commissioned as an artillery officer upon his graduation from the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., in 1930. His initial assignments consisted of normal school, troop and staff duties, with one exception. During his early service. he became a rated artillery balloonist.

During World War II, he served initially in the North African campaign as assistant artillery officer of II Corps. In mid-1943, he was recalled to Washington to serve as assistant operations officer of the Army Ground Forces and in January, 1945, was assigned to Europe as artillery commander of the 16th Armored Division.

In the years which followed the end of World War II, Gen. Hamlett was graduated from the National War College and the French Superior School of War and served as director of the Department of Gunnery, U. S. Army Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.

A few days before the start of the Korean War, he became chief of the Supply Division of the Far East Command.

Commanded Artillery

He later became artillery commander of the 24th Infantry Division in Korea.

In late 1952 he was assigned to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans and Research and in 1955 he began his third tour in Europe, this time as VII Corps artillery commander. He subsequently was named commander of the 10th Infantry Division.

From 1957 to 1959 he served as commander of U. S. troops in Berlin and, following this assignment, served as assistant. then deputy chief of staff for Military Operations, Department of the Army. In this post he played a major role in the development of U. S. counterguerrilla forces.

He was named Army vice chief of staff in April, 1962, and as such serves as principle assistant and adviser to Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff. He is responsible for the effective administration, management, and coordination of the Army staff.

Portion of Route 103 Closed to Thru Traffic

Post officials have announced that the portion of former Highway 103 (Buena Vista Rd.) which crosses the Fort Benning military reservation is now closed to all "thru traffic."

The 15.4-mile strip extends from the Muscogee County Line at Schatulga Road to the Chattahoochee - Marion County Line. Return of the road to military control coincides with completion of Georgia Highway 26, which serves as a by-pass route for those motorists who formerly used Highway 103. The closed stretch of 103 has long posed a traffic problem in that it was subjected to intermittent closures for military training and weapons firing demonstrations.

Permanent roadblocks will be established at the east and west boundaries of the reservation before Jan. 1, military officials added.

The roadblocks will be of a "swinging - gate" variety, which can be securely anchored at the "open" end. Two-foot lengths of chain, at one-foot intervals, will hang from the gate and a large sign in the middle will attract further attention to the blockade.

Appropriate signs warning approaching motorists of the blockades also will be erected.

As with other roads on the military post, blockades may be erected at any point along the route without prior warning, even though the boundary roadblocks are not established.

Due to the nature of training conducted in the area traversed by the closed highway, motorists are cautioned to observe directional signs when blockades are in effect.

New Kennedy Stamp Sought by President

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Lyndon B. Johnson has asked that a Kennedy memorial postage stamp be issued.

It is an American tradition, dating back to Lincoln, to issue a memorial stamp when a Chief Executive dies in office.

The President has instructed Postmaster General John A. Gronouski to confer on the matter, at the appropriate time, with Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and other members of the late President's family.

Gronouski said that the Post Office Department is proceeding as directed.

In the past, the time lag between death of a President and date of issuance of his memorial stamp or stamps has varied greatly.

A series of four memorial stamps were issued for Franklin D. Roosevelt, the first of which came out at Hyde Park July 26, 1945, more than three months after Mr. Roosevelt's death Apr. 12.

A Harding memorial stamp was issued less than a month after his death. President Warren G. Harding died Aug. 2, 1923, and a stamp was issued Sept. 1.

To produce a stamp so quickly, engravers adapated the vignette, numerals and letters of the existing two-cent stamp of 1923. A portrait of Mr. Harding was added.

The Lincoln memorial stamp was issued June 17, 1866, more than one year after the President's death Apr. 14, 1865.

James A. Garfield died in office Sept. 19, 1881. A Garfield stamp came out Feb. 22, 1890.

President William McKinley died of wounds inflicted by an assassin Sept. 14, 1901. A McKinley stamp was issued in 1904.

Christmas Tree Fire Should Never Occur

To lessen the danger of a disastrous Christmas tree fire, the National Safety Council offers the following tips:

1. Choose a tree with springly rather than dry brittle branches.

2. When you get the tree home, keep it standing in snow or water until you are ready to take it indoors.

3. Before setting it up in the house, saw the trunk at least one inch from the original cut, and at an angle.

4. Place the tree in a sturdy, water-filled stand away from heat. Be sure the fresh cut is always under water. Remove the tree before its needles begin to drop.

5. The Council advises tree trimmers to use only electric lighting sets bearing the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., label. Check old sets for frayed or bare wires. Always unplug the lights before going to bed or leaving the house. Never have them on unless adults will be near the tree.

6. Keep all combustible decorations—paper, tree boughs, ribbon — away from lights, candles and fireplaces. Do not place electric trains under the tree.

Chaplain's Corner

Today's Shepherds

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Jerry M. Woodbery

One of the most beautiful stories in the Holy Scripture is the appearance of the angels to shepherds in their fields. God, through the Heavenly Hosts, proclaimed to all men his final act of salvation for mankind.

The shepherds, full of expectancy, ran to Bethlehem and found a miracle in a lowly stable. This stable had become the birth place of God. As they gazed upon the scene of mother and child, those common men of the earth became aware of the truth of glory.

On this night, and in this stable the Infinite and the finite had become one—and they were witnesses to it. In this one miraculous act, God's boundless and steadfast love had become available for all.

Returning to their flock the shepherd felt as different men — they knew they were different. In that stable they had experienced God as he had never been experienced by men. God had come to each of them as a person. He had taken on the flesh of men so every man could experience him in spirit and truth.

Through this experience with the Christ Child the shepherds were filled with the assurance of God's love and salvation. God had shown His love for the world in a unique way. He had given mankind His son, and whoever believed in Him would receive the eternal assurance of God's steadfast and saying grace.

The hope of salvation for all flesh will always be God's son wrapped in swaddling clothes. through out faith approach the lowly stable and we today, like the shepherds of yesterday, must witness the Babe. For it is here that we acquire the hope of salvation for a generation enmeshed

It is beside the crib of Christ that we gain in the anxieties and tensions of the nuclear age the sure knowledge that God is still all powerful and excelling in this time of great scientific achievement. It is through the experience of having God confront us as a person that we are able to proclaim a love which blots out today's hatred, confusion and chaos.

In surrender to faith men today can travel to and from Bethlehem with the shepherds of yesterday. In surrender to the Christ Child, men can gain assurance of God's salvation for this troubled age.

Gen. Rich Thanks CAA Participants

At the termination of the 1963 Community Activities Association Fund Drive, I wish to extend my sincere appreciation to all our personnel, both military and civilian, for their outstanding support.

As a result of the personal enthusiasm and active participation of all concerned with this year's fund drive, Fort Benning surpassed its announced "fair share" goal of $135,681. Although final results of the fund drive are still pending, contributions now approximate $140,000.

The high percentage obtained at Fort Benning is another example of the cooperation and participation of Fort Benning personnel in local community activities. We have cause for great pride concerning this achievement.

Commanding

The Judge Says . . .

You were ordered to report for active duty with the armed services. You owe money on your car, your home, and perhaps even on a personal loan. At the time you made these debts, you may have been earning more than you will earn as a serviceman. Thus, your service pay may not take care of all of these debts.

Congress realized that many citizens would be faced with this situation. Therefore, it decided to give you, in the interest of national defense, statutory protection. This protection is found in the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act which, as the name suggests, affords protection on civil matters only and does not affect criminal prosecution.

This act does not wipe out any of your obligations. Rather, it temporarily suspends some of the rights of your creditors if it appears that your inability to pay is due to your military service. Your obligation to honor your debts still exists and some day you must discharge this obligation.

Caution: The relief act is highly technical and your benefits under it are limited. If you are in financial difficulty as a result of obligations incurred prior to your entry into service, you should discuss the problem with your Soldiers Advocate (Bldg. 1679; Telephone 545-4893).

About Communism

Many Methods Used To Undermine God

(Eighty-first of a series of questions and answers from A Primer on Communism by George W. Cronyn, edited by Howard Oiseth. Reprinted by AFPS with the publisher's permission.)

QUESTION — How do the Communists go about the destruction of religion?

ANSWER — Communists employ many methods in attacking religion. By confiscating religious property and drying up sources of revenue, they seek to stifle the economic support of religious establishments. As Communist regimes control all publishing and newsprint, they are able to shut off the flow of printed religious material.

Communists attack religious education from two angles. They have abolished private religious schools on the one hand, and have assumed the supervision of theological schools and seminaries on the other. The entire staff educational system under communism definitely is antireligious in character.

Communist regimes also arrest and imprison religious leaders, but not on the grounds of religious belief. They are accused of crimes such as espionage, black market speculation, misappropriation of church funds, and so forth. These baseless accusations are designed to discredit church leaders in the eyes of their congregations and also to attempt to deceive the free world as to the real purpose of the trials — the destruction of religion itself.

Further, Communist youth organizations and Party members are spurred on to engage in antireligious campaigns, and in most of the Communist countries a "league of atheists" carries on antireligious activities.

In May, 1957, the CPSU sponsored an atheistic conference in Moscow which was attended by some 350 antireligious propagandists. Following the conference, the "League of Militant Godless," disbanded in 1941, was revived.

In 1958, "The University of Atheism" was established at Ashkabad, Turkmenistan, and a similar institution was organized in Leningrad. Other schools of this type were being set up in 1959-1960.

175 Pre-Schoolers To Entertain Parents At Christmas Program

Next week 175 pre-kindergarten children will entertain their parents with a Christmas program of favorite carols, songs and a rhythm and band performance.

Under the direction of Mrs. Betty Turon, the school's music instructor, the children meet twice a week to learn new songs that go along with their "History" lessons taught in the classroom. They have been concentrating on the Christmas season for the past month and have learned all the old favorites.

On Dec. 17 the older four year-olds will present their music program and on Dec. 18 the 3 year-olds are scheduled to entertain with theirs. Dec. 19 is the date set aside for the middle 4 year-old group to sing for their audience. The program will begin at 10 a.m. each day and parents are requested to come on the day their children are to perform.

Santa Claus will make a visit to the school Dec. 20 and distribute gifts to each of the youngsters. Gay Christmas decorations made by the children now cover the walls of the school. Mrs. Robert M. Hall is kindergarten chairman.

Allied Wives

The Allied wives living at Fort Benning, assisted by a committee from the Officers' Wives Club, have been very active lately as hostesses to many visiting foreign dignitaries and entertaining their wives while the officials tour the famous Infantry Center.

Headed by Mrs. Jesse L. Morrow, the 12 Allied wives have been kept busy recently with many varied activities. A special class in ceramics is being taught by Mrs. William Fite for all the Spanish speaking wives. The group toured a local peanut plant this week and most of the wives enjoyed true American shopping as they journeyed out-of-town with 200 other Officers' Wives Club members on the club's semi-annual shopping spree. Many of the allied wives and their husbands danced into the wee small hours last month at the Playboy Ball.

The six - member Allied Liaison Committee of American wives is designed to welcome and greet incoming arrivals to Fort Benning and to help them become adjusted to our way of life. They are taken to the hospital, commissary, post exchange, and introduced to other women living here from their homeland.

Women working with Mrs. Morrow on the Allied Liaison committee are Mesdames William Fite, Robert Fielder, Warren Horton, Luis Ruiz and Buenaventura Esteves.

Thrift Shop

The Thrift Shop will remain open as usual the first three weeks of December. It will, however, be closed for the Christmas holidays from December 23 through Jan. 2. It had been previously announced that the shop would close Dec. 19. The Thrift Shop still needs old style military "pinks" to sell.

Membership

According to Mrs. Roy L. Inman, membership chairman, the club now boasts a total of 1,517 members. The Officers' Wives Club is said to be one of the largest in Third Army area.

"It has come to our attention," said Mrs. Inman, "that several people who have taken part in many of our activities, such as dancing, sewing, ceramics and bridge, are not members of the club. These activities were originally designed for members only and it is essential that everyone participating pay the customary $2 yearly membership fee. If a person does not wish to become a member of the club she may still participate in these activities as long as she pays the $2. Please make sure that you have paid this fee if you are participating in any Officers' Wives Club activities."

Helicopter Wives Christmas Tea Held At MOOM

Amid the glitter of Christmas decorations, the wives of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion (Test) attended an afternoon tea at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club sponsored by the wives of Company "B."

The Christmas theme was highlighted by a small Santa observing all activities from the center of his "wee" sugar-plum village.

Coffee and tea were poured by Mrs. John B. Stockton and Mrs. Leo Soucek. Finger sandwiches and Petits Fours were served.

During the event Mrs. Stockton requested each company commander's wife introduce the many new wives who joined the group since last month.

No sooner do we get our Thanksgiving turkey digested and it's time for Christmas cookies and candy canes. This year's Christmas has fun in store for many Fort Benningites.

Lynne Coffin will be leaving for a two-week boat trip around the Bahammas Dec. 20.

A close friend of many, Kathy O'Donnell, will be staying with Karen Kendall for approximately a week during the holidays. Kathy moved to Falls Church, Va., last summer.

Each Christmas the Junior Army Daughters of America (J.A.D.A.) have a Christmas Dance. Kathleen Gueymard is chairman of the 1963 affair. During the course of the evening, a court of 11 girls will be named as the hardest working and most devoted members of J.A.D.A. These girls will be nominated and voted on at the December luncheon.

J.A.D.A. extends its deepest gratitude to those of you who contributed to the newspaper drive. It was very successful. Thanks also goes to Linda Taft for heading the campaign. Maj. Aure helped to deliver the papers downtown.

As long as J.A.D.A. has the spotlight, I might add that a group of girls from the organization are going to Tot Town Tuesday evening to help decorate for the Christmas holidays. The girls are Nevill and Johnette Brickhouse, JoAnn Morgan, Carol Zeranski and Terry Stacey.

Also coming up, is the open house at Betty Boisvert's, given by Betty and Lynne Coffin. The event will take place on Dec. 18.

Something unusual and something that the teen-agers appreciate is the manner in which Col. Boisvert tells everyone that it is time to go home. First he rings a big brass gong, and then, when no one takes the subtle hint, he carries out signs about how he is going to bed —written on paper hand-towels. Betty's parties are as much fun as her dad.

The events of the past week: Thursday morning was an unforgetable day for three Columbus High Students from Fort Benning. Ray Lynch, Terri Setaro, and Richard Cutler were inducted into the Honor Society.

Thursday night was an even more unforgettable evening for one Columbus High Senior. Ray Lynch gave a fine performance as a cheerleader. Rumors say that he made a real good-looking girl.

New Bridge

Repair Work Started By Army Engineers

Corrective work on the Chattahoochee River bridge, located about one mile below the post's Engineer pontoon bridge, is expected to begin this week and should be completed by mid-July, 1964.

The work is being done to correct conditions caused by an earth movement which was discovered after the bridge, as originally designed, was completed early this year. The bridge has never been open to traffic.

Col. P. W. Ramee, district engineer for the U.S. Army Engineers in Savannah, said plans and specifications have been completed for the necessary changes to make the bridge safe.

"The contractor has been issued a change order to proceed with the removal of certain portions of the existing structure and construction of the new work," Col. Ramee added.

Demolition is expected to start this week on three short spans, totaling about 150 feet on the Alabama side.

The new design calls for erection of six new spans, totaling 520 feet, of flexible structure, to accommodate any future minor movement of the remaining hillside.

Army Engineers in Savannah estimate that the bridge will be completed by mid-July, but this schedule depends upon how soon the contractor can procure the necessary steel.

The redesign and additional work became necessary when engineers, checking the bridge last spring, found a slight shift in the structure. The shift, imperceptible to the eye, showed up in instrument readings.

After extensive borings and tests, it was determined that the damage was caused by a deep, underlying earth movement that had in all probability been underway for perhaps a century or more, and might continue indefinitely.

Fort Polk Commander Addresses IOCC Grads

Maj. Gen. James H. Skeldon, commanding general of Fort Polk, La., addressed 103 graduates of Associate Infantry Officer Career Course class No. 1 last week at Theater No. 1.

In noting that many of the graduates will be assigned to command positions, Gen. Skeldon advised them to maintain a high degree of military discipline and integrity and added that the key to success as a commander is motivation.

"Do the best you can in any endeavor, under any and all circumstances," he said, adding, "Anything less than your best is not enough."

To those officers who "are not afraid of hard work," Gen. Skeldon invited them to request assignments to an Army training center such as Fort Polk.

Fort Polk has turned out some 45,000 trainees in all categories since the Louisiana installation was designated a training center some 15 months ago, Gen. Skeldon said.

Putting a wide cross section of American youth through eight tough weeks of basic training is a hard and challenging task, the two-star general commented. He also said his command relied heavily on motivating the trainees in both physical and marksmanship achievement.

Gen. Skeldon was introduced by Brig. Gen. John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Six New Skilled 'Second to None' Rangers Meet With Gen. Corley

A 2nd Division officer and five enlisted men, all newly graduated from the Army's stiff Ranger School, gathered in the division conference room at Headquarters Monday for a picture with a general.

All of the enlisted men are members of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry and all of them were recently promoted, one during school.

Brig. Gen. John T. Corley, an assistant 2nd Division commander and a former head of the Ranger Department, met with the men informally, talked with them and had a picture snapped with them.

The 2nd Division contingent to graduate from Ranger Class Three includes these men who met with Gen. Corley; Lt. Robert E. Fitchett, 2nd Aviation Battalion; and SSgt. Robert W. Leathers, Headquarters Company, promoted during school; Sgt. Lee Mons, Company A; Sgt. Richard G. Rivera, Headquarters Company; Sgt. Jonathan Barker, Company B; and Sgt. Jesse Bera, Company C.

Mons, Rivera, Barker and Bera were each given sergeants' stripes upon completion of Ranger training. Most soldiers completing the course, gain immediate promotion to sergeant for all corporals and specialists fourth class.

Sgt. James Hallam, another graduate, could not be present for the brief meeting. A former member of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, he is on leave prior to taking up his new duty station in Germany.

The officer, Lt. Fitchett, is assistant headquarters detachment commander at 2nd Aviation Battalion. He entered the Army active reserve program in 1953 and went on active duty at Fort Dix, N.J. in 1958. He then attended the Operating Room Procedure Course, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

"I think this is the largest group from the division to go through Ranger School," Gen. Corley stated as the group lined up for a photograph.

"Did anybody get promotions out of it?" the general asked.

"Yes, sir," replied the five sergeants.

The men started Ranger training at Fort Benning on September 19 and finished on November 21 after a nine-week, three-phase rugged course stressing wartime realism.

The bulk of the field work consists of night missions, long-range patrols, foraging and living off the land. The course teaches hit-and-run raids as a basic factor and the account is on individual performance.

Most of the new Rangers have put in for airborne school or Special Forces.

Tree Lighting, Caroling Slated December 17

A Christmas program, featuring a community sing and the lighting of the division Christmas tree, will be held at Marne Field on December 17 at 7 p.m.

The festivities will open with a 15-minute concert by the 2nd Infantry Division Band and will conclude with refreshments. The highlight of the evening will be the lighting of the tree, in the center of the field, by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, in his office as did Brig. Gen. Lawrence Tanberg Jr. who is the 9th Air Force's deputy for operations (a post equivalent to the Army G-3).

Ninth Air Force covers an area of command roughly similar to the Third U. S. Army which is headquartered in Atlanta. Ninth Air Force's headquarters is Shaw Air Force, S. C.

Gen. Bond's men are responsible for providing the planes required by Third Army operations. In training exercises, airmen of the 9th fly close air support, fire missions and other duties fixed for them by air liaison officers.

Besides honorary membership certificates which Gen. Billingslea handed to the two Air Force generals, they also received division engagement calendar books put out by the officers' wives club which list brief histories of "Indianhead" units.

Before Gen. Bond and Gen. Tanberg were allowed to leave Division Headquarters, Gen. Billingslea pinned on them lapel pins, miniature replicas of the shoulder patch.

The three Air Force officers wearing "Indianhead" shoulder patches are Maj. Dana T. Moore, Capt. Arthur W. Webb and Capt. John J. Keller who lead a contingent here of Air Force enlisted men.

Those three officers were at Division Headquarters for the unofficial visit as was Army Col. George Shivers, ground liaison officer to the 9th Air Force, who accompanied the generals from Shaw.

A ground liaison officer with an Air Force unit holds a position in reverse of an air liaison officer (Maj. Moore) with an Army unit.

The visiting duo of general officers, it is assumed, made plans with Gen. Billingslea to return to the "Indianhead" Division at a later date for a look at the 2nd Division in training and the Air Force with them.

Also at headquarters was an Air Force representative from Main Post, Lt. Col. Earl V. Riley, chief of the Combat Airlift Support Unit.

Gen. Bond's and Gen. Tanberg's itinerary also included visits to the commander of the 11th Air Assault Division and the commanding general of Fort Benning before flying back to Shaw.

Gen. Billingslea Kicks Off '63 Indianhead Division AUSA Membership Drive

Group Praised By CG; Urges Careerists Join

By Bob de Camera

Keep the Army out of the "doldrums" by supporting the Association of the United States Army (AUSA).

This was the essence of a talk by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, to commanders and sergeants at Theater 7 Monday afternoon as the general kicked off the annual AUSA membership drive.

Describing the AUSA as an "information organization" rather than a lobbyist group, Gen. Billingslea spoke of AUSA's continued efforts to keep the plight of the soldier before the Congress and industry.

The Kennedy Period

The general's talk preceded a short film made for an AUSA convention in Washington in October that showed the late President Kennedy reviewing American troops around the globe. The film lauded the healthy effects of President Kennedy's period of office for the Army.

It was introduced by Division Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown who pledged the "Second to None" to overtake the 8th Division's membership lead and capture the $1000 bonus money for largest chapter and greatest percentage of membership increase.

The project officer for the drive here, Maj. Robert E. Pardee, division chemical officer, closed the ceremonies with an admonition to his audience to join AUSA now and

Equipment Serviceability Tested at the 12th Arty

By 12th Artillery PIO

This past week the 12th Artillery conducted an Equipment Serviceability Inspection in order to determine a profile reflecting the combat serviceability of their equipment.

The inspection is primarily designed for the driver or operator of any piece of equipment to conduct himself in order to evaluate his own equipment against a standard and make any necessary replacements of worn out unserviceable parts. It also enables higher headquarters to determine the combat readiness of all units within its command.

The inspection lasted for three days with each battery taking a day under the supervision of a battalion team to evaluate its equipment. The battalion team which was set up by Maj. Dillard F. Jones, executive officer, consisted of the battalion motor sergeant, battery motor sergeant and battery mechanics.

All battery commanders agreed that the inspection revealed several problem areas which might have otherwise gone by unnoticed.

Two 9th Air Force Generals Are Awarded Honorary Membership

A 2nd Division Special

Unit Spends 8 Days at Fort Stewart For Counter-Guerrilla Training Test

BY BYRON DUNHAM

"A composite para-military guerilla force of undetermined strength" is what the operations order said the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry faced recently during their eight-day foray as participants in "Exercise Swamp Fox", a division-wide counterguerrilla training maneuver held in the vast water-logged woods of the Fort Stewart, Ga. reservation.

Swift and stealthy movement was the object of the "Manchu" Battalion's challenge to "kill" or capture the "Swamp Fox" and his 75 guerrilla terrorists, so individual platoons and squads of the three line companies and the Reconnaissance Platoon of Headquarters Company worked together performing clearly planned "sweeping" and "blocking" movements.

The result was something like a huge human guerrilla-catching trap. Clad in old fatigues stripped of rank insignia, name tags and "Indianhead" patches, riflemen and machine gunners hid out, one by one, in the tangle along certain lonely roads, facing the unseen river and swamp, and waited, while wary guerrillas trying to escape from the "Manchu" patrols appeared. Capt. George M. Font, Capt. Stanley C. Pore Jr. and Lt. Kenneth Schrieber, line company commanders, stuck their necks out a great deal while riding up and down the roads and twisted trails of the hostile perimeter checking out positions.

Photos By Bache

The Reconnaissance Platoon spent many hours on chilling searching parties on the river in small rubber boats, and in the swamp.

Lt. Col. Robert W. Seaman, the battalion's commander, was on the spot at every crises. The "Manchu" commander was accompanied everywhere by several jeepfulls of body guards bristling with M-14 rifles, and the command post was ringed with men from the Mortar Platoon, since it was rumored that the guerrilla who captured Col. Seaman would be awarded $75.00 and a three day pass. No one succeeded though.

Three times the multi-shaped Headquarters command post tents were collapsed and carried closer to guerrilla-hunting ground. Early in the problem when Headquarters Company was located on the Canoochee Creek near an aloof "partisan" fishing village, and while the company was still dismounting from vehicles, Sgt. Maj. Alkus Stobbe sent the battalion mail clerk, PFC Alexander Jauschneg, into the woods a scant 75 meters as a security guard. He was captured by guerrillas.

REENLISTMENT NCO HEEDS HIS OWN ADVICE

New Sergeant Major For 2nd Aviation Bn

By 17th Artillery PIO

A veteran of the European Campaign during World War II who participated in the Normandy Invasion was recently assigned as the senior non-commissioned officer of the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery.

Sgt. Maj. William H. Graham, a native of Woodland, Pa., first entered the Army in January 1941 and was assigned to the 190th Field Artillery Regiment at Camp Shelby, Miss. Eighteen months later he accompanied the unit to Ireland where it trained for six months.

In January of 1943 the regiment was reorganized into a group and Sgt. Maj. Graham became a member of the 200th F. A. Battalion within the new organization. On June 7, D-Day plus 1, the 200th landed on Omaha Beach and during the next 10 months participated in five major campaigns. When V-E day finally arrived, Sgt. Maj. Graham, along with the 200th, was sitting in Czechoslovakia.

He returned to the states in August of that year and received his discharge, only to be recalled to active duty in January of 1951 during the Korean War. At the time he made his first trip to Germany and remained there until October 1955.

Since then he served a second tour there with the 4th Armored Division and a single tour in Korea as sergeant major of the 80th Artillery, 7th Infantry Division. It was from this assignment that Sgt. Maj. Graham came to the 2nd Infantry Division.

He lives with his wife Rita and their two children at 142 E. Magrath St., Fort Benning.

15th Artillery Raises Murdock To Staff Sgt.

By 15th Artillery PIO

Battery C of the 15th Artillery Battalion promoted SSgt Daniel Murdock to his present rank on December 2.

Sgt. Murdock's achievement of this rank is unusual because he has been in the Army less than three years.

He took Basic Combat Training at Fort Knox, Ky. From there he was sent to Fort Sill, Okla. for advanced training and finally to Fort Benning. He has served as a prime mover driver, assistant gunner, gunner, chief of ammunition section and is presently chief of the battery's number one gun section.

The sergeant, who is only 22 years of age, enlisted for three years in his home town of Niagara Falls, N.Y., on January 31, 1961.

The sergeant is planning on making the Army a career.

ReUp NCO Leads Way For Troops

By 17th Artillery PIO

The reenlistment non-commissioned officer of Battery A, 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery recently set a good example by practicing what he preaches when he reenlisted for another six years.

The oath was administered to S-Sgt. Homer C. Ridley by Capt. William Heyman, his battery commander. Also on hand for the brief ceremony was M-Sgt. George E. DeLong Jr., 2nd Division Artillery career counselor.

Sgt. Ridley will soon depart for Europe after spending two and a half years with the 17th, most of which time as Battery A's communications chief.

During Joint —Exercise Swift Strike III, staged last August in the Carolinas, he had the distinction of belonging to that "sneaky bunch from Fort Benning," who drew so much praise for the excellent account they gave of themselves during the three week mock war.

Winner of Bronze Star 1st of 9th's New Adjutant

By 1st Bn, 9th Inf PIO

A Bronze Star Medal winner, recently returned from a year in Vietnam, has been assigned as adjutant of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

A graduate of the Airborne School and the Ranger School he was first assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division and later spent two years in Okinawa.

Prior to his departure for Vietnam in 1962, Capt. Schwab attended MAAG courses at Fort Bragg, N.C., and the U.S. Army Language School at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif. where he studied Vietnamese.

In addition to the Bronze Star Medal, issued in praise of his Vietnam service, his decorations and awards include the Combat Infantryman's Badge, Expert Infantryman's Badge, and Senior Parachutist Badge.

Although he takes time to play golf, Capt. Schwab is particularly interested in skin and SCUBA (self - contained underwater breathing apparatus) diving, spear fishing, and underwater color photography, all of which he took up in Okinawa.

Real-Life Cattleman Speaks

A Drover's Life Really Not All TV Land Depicts

By Jay R. Sharbutt

Every Thursday night, there appears on American television a western series called "Rawhide", which depicts the life and hard times of a picturesque bunch of cowpokes on their way to market with a few thousand head of cattle. Called drovers, these gents have colorful names, like "Rowdy" and "Mushy", and their lives are fraught with constant danger and disaster. In the course of their travels they get thrown in jail, shot at, cursed, rained on, maimed for life and occasionally distributed over six counties by a stampeding herd of fear-crazed bovines. It sounds like an exciting life, yet according to PFC Joe Sisneros of the 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, it just ain't so. And Joe knows whereof he speaks; he was a drover in Utah for four years until his draft board sent him a letter.

"I worked on a ranch in Kanosh, Utah," said Joe, a sad-faced soldier who now works in the commo section of the 1st Brigade. He speaks in short, laconic phrases and gives the impression of a man on his way to the hangman's noose with a bad case of strep throat.

Did the cowboys live in a bunkhouse with the customary dog, pot-bellied stove, guitar and jug of firewater?

"We had none of that jazz," said Joe disgustedly. "We lived in town. Used to get up at two in the morning and drive out to the ranch. Nothing special."

According to tradition, the Hollywood cowpoke has a horse - usually called Rex, Trigger or Max - who is the best friend in the world, supplies reliable transportation, and serves as a confidant.

But here's Joe's account: "The ranch gives me a horse. Just some old bum with four legs. I don't know his name. Don't care either."

"We had two roundups a year," he continued. "One in the spring, when we drove the cattle to the mountains, and one in the fall, when we took them to the desert. I never saw a stampede."

He admits that he had the usual problems with rain, snow, heat, dust and other discomforts of outdoor living. But he likes the life and tends to return to it when his military obligation is finished.

Provides Guidance for Aircraft

Aviation Battalion Assisted by 'Pathfinders'

By 2nd Aviation PIO

The time is 0330 hours. Eagle serial with four flights of CH34 helicopters is en route to the objective area with the assault element of an infantry battalion. It is a dark moonless night and Eagle leader is straining his eyes to keep himself oriented and guide his serial across the obscure unknown terrain. Amazingly enough, the aviator finds his way by dead reckoning to the final checkpoint. The rain begins to fall as he reaches for his push-to-talk button. Now this becomes a joint operation as the following transmission breaks the airwaves. "Pathfinder, this is Eagle with four flights at the CCP, over." "Eagle, this is Pathfinder, Vector, 360 degrees, enemy situation; negative, wind, northeast at ten. Eagle one and two, landing site azimuth 270 degrees, land blue, 015 degrees. Eagle three and four, landing site azimuth 090 degrees, clear to land, over." "This is Eagle, Roger, out." Though hypothetical, this situation occurs often in war as well as peacetime.

A dual support effort recently brought elements of the 2nd Aviation Battalion and the Pathfinder Committee of the Airborne Air-Mobility Department together for the purpose of qualifying Pathfinder students in the techniques of helicopter landing zone operations.

Army Pathfinders are selected airborne volunteers who are trained to provide navigational assistance to Army aircraft through the operation of airlanding or airdelivery facilities on or over enemy dominated or enemy threatened territory. This includes assistance to enable the aviators to fly to the objective areas. At the objective area, Pathfinders provide terminal guidance and actually control the aircraft within and on their departure from the operational area. Current doctrine calls for the employment of Army aircraft in helicopter assaults, air dropped and air resupply missions. In this particular exercise CH-3 (Choctaws) helicopters were used.

The first day was strictly administrative, with the aviators flying three CH-34's from the communications check points, to the release point, and then on the landing site itself. Armed with the information provided in a three hour class, the students with a cadre sergeant standing behind, landed the aircraft on the landing points. During daylight hours, panels are used to mark the landing site, and during the hours of darkness, various colored lights are used. Once the aircrafts are in sight of the landing site operator, hand and arm signals are used to guide the helicopters to the landing position. At night the standard military police batons are used to give the aviators the same landing instructions.

The second day, tactical day and night operations were conducted by the students under simulated combat conditions. Using the techniques of the preceding day the students completed their respective missions.

"Army aircraft will be used extensively in the future to gain the mobility necessary to fight, survive, and win. With the increased demand for Army aircraft, there will be an equal demand for Pathfinders to provide the positive guidance for them." This statement was made by Lt. Richard E. Bicknell, a training officer with the Pathfinder Committee.

Maintenance Platoon Sergeant At 702nd 'Does His Job Well'

A career soldier in today's modern Army is one who believes in the performance of his duty — and does it, to the best of his abilities.

Such a man is SSgt. William G. Cox, maintenance platoon sergeant in Hq & Co A, 702nd Maintenance Battalion, 2nd Infantry Division. Sgt. Cox believes that "a job worth doing — is a job worth doing well."

The twenty-nine year old Army sergeant has been doing his job — and doing it well for the past eleven years. Sgt. Cox entered the service in 1952 and went through sixteen weeks of Basic Infantry Training at Fort Jackson, S. C. Shortly thereafter, Cox found himself in Korea, where he was assigned to Company B, 38th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division.

This was in February 1953, about six months before the conflict ended.

While he was in Korea, Cox performed in various phases of Infantry activities, from the job of automatic rifleman to that of section chief in a 60mm Mortar Section. Before returning to the States in June of 1954 this industrious young soldier had attained the rank of Sgt and was made a platoon sergeant.

Sgt. Cox had only been in the Army for seventeen months.

This young combat infantry veteran was assigned to Camp Gordon, Ga. Training Replacement Center, where he was a General Military Subjects Instructor. In March of 1955 Sgt. Cox was assigned duty with the returning elements of the 351st Regimental Combat Team (RCT) which was returning from Trieste, Italy. Cox was assigned the duties of platoon sergeant in this outfit, which at that time was given the mission of training new basic trainees.

In September of 1955 Sgt. Cox was sent TDY to Fort Benning in preparation for exercise "Sagebrush." Upon completion of the three month "Sagebrush Maneuvers" Sgt. Cox obtained a permanent transfer to the 3rd Infantry Division, and was

Medical Section Of 1st of 23rd Versatile Bunch

By 1st Bn., 23rd Inf. PIO

The medical section of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry is a versatile group of men, containing skills and facilities not normally required of medical personnel.

Hanging on the wall of the aid station is a letter of appreciation from ex-Battalion Commander Lt. Col. John H. Cochran Jr., for outstanding contributions the medical platoon has made. Accordingly they have not only upheld their excellent medical performance; but have also been cited for their high standard of vehicle and equipment maintenance.

A short time ago, when the battalion was in Germany under Rotaplan, the platoon entered into pistol firing competition with the medical section of the 198th Battalion, Bundeswehr (German Army.) Firing the .38 caliber Mauser (for the first time incidently), the team, consisting of SFC Robert Kaplan, PFC Joseph Bates, PFC Stephen Willeford, and SP5 Harold Stanley, won over the German medics in the competition.

Sidney Lee Receives WO-1 at 2nd of 9th

By 2nd Bn., 9th Inf. PIO

Sidney D. Lee received his warrant as a warrant officer W-1 in a brief ceremony recently in the office of Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder, commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

The ceremony was attended by Mrs. Ann Lee who helped Col. Ponder pin the gold and brown bars of a warrant officer on her husband's shoulders.

Mr. Lee is a senior maintenance specialist.

A native of Waterloo, Iowa, he entered the Army in October 1953 upon completion of high school. He underwent basic combat training at Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md.

He served with the Army Security Agency in Korea in 1954, in Formosa in 1955 thru 1957 and at Venthill Farms, Va. in 1957. From 1958 to 1960 he was stationed with the ASA in Harrowgate, England.

He was stationed at Fort Sill, Okla. from 1960 until April 1963 when he was assigned to the 2nd of the 9th.

The award of the rank of warrant officer dates back to the days of the wooden hulled warships of the British navy. The warrant officer rating was originally awarded to the leading gunner, boatswain, and carpenter on each ship. Traditionally, there were only three warrant officers on even the largest ships.

The name warrant officer derives from the fact that these men were issued a warrant by the government which gave them the right to function as an officer. Even today the U. S. Army is the only Army which accords the warrant officer all the courtesy and privileges of the rank of the commissioned officer.

Mr. Lee, shortly after commissioning will be transferred to the 1st Battalion 9th Infantry for a short period prior to being assigned a European tour of duty.

General Billingslea

save a dollar. Beginning New Year's Day, the price of a one-year card jumps from $5 to $6.

One Sour Note

Gen. Billingslea, speaking without notes, tempered his talk with humor and reminiscence. One sour note was struck by his memories of the Army in the 1930's when sticks for rifles and lead pipes for machine guns were used as training aids. This was the time of the "doldrums" when public apathy reduced the Army's defense capabilities.

It is a "vastly different defense system today," said the general. "I won't attribute it all to AUSA, but we won't drift back. . ."

AUSA continues "pushing for national defense, the wellbeing of the Army and those within the Army" in that order, said the general. "This is not a social organization."

Pay. This was a major topic raised by Gen. Billingslea. The pay raise this year and the one on the docket for 1965 can be traced to the AUSA.

Gen. Billingslea described the organization as "prime movers" of pay raises and told that the philosophy of the watchdog body is to keep active and retired pay in tandem. Those who support the AUSA today while on active duty will see their retired pay keep pace with the cost of living.

Deserves Support

This had been traditional with the services until just after World War II when the pay of men on active duty climbed but the retired did not share in the gains.

The general remembered "not too long ago when we had a membership of 300 (in AUSA). This does not support our organization."

While not expecting noncareerists to contribute substantially to the group, it should "be supported by all career people in the Army."

After the general's talk, the film traced the recent growth of the Army. From 11 combat-ready divisions in 1960 when President Kennedy took office, the Army has increased to 16 combat-ready divisions.

Tension over Berlin early in the president's term prompted him to direct "a bigger, stronger Army," and "the new strength backed us in the Cuba crisis" which also was an impetus to build some more.

But "the spur was Berlin." The Army budget increased. Special Forces, in which President Kennedy had a special interest due to the current pattern of limited war, beefed up to 9,000 troops. The film pinpointed areas around the world where Special Forces is training local armies to resist the advances of communists and terrorists.

Need Strong Army

A message to AUSA from President Kennedy on the steps of the White House closed out the film with the words, "We need a strong Army."

Maj. Pardee then stepped to the lectern and instructed the assembled leaders to contact the unit representatives and fill out application blanks for membership.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

A Christmas Gift From Soldiers

To soldiers in many far off places, Christmas is a lonely day. Being unable to join their families and share in the festivities of the holidays forces homesickness to be most apparent.

It is difficult to get into the Christmas spirit on Guam when it is 100 degrees in December. Singing Christmas carols in front of the Berlin Wall seems repugnant. And decorating a tree in the shadows of Mt. Suribachi doesn't lessen the loneliness.

Walking guard on Christmas Eve, or pulling KP on that day of days, far from compares to being home. And even walking near the famous Eiffel Tower fails to still the pangs of daydreams.

It is inherent of Americans to share this great holiday with their loved ones. But, not all can.

And so, packages are mailed to various parts of the world, and mothers, wives and children are saddened. . .for their Christmas will also be a lonely one. But, even in this there is a greatness. The greatness of the gift. Because this absence, in itself, is a gift.

For the many millions of families across the nation who will be celebrating Christmas by opening presents, there will be an added gift for all. It will not be wrapped in attractive paper or tied with a colored ribbon, but will be there just the same.

It will have the postmark of every American military post in the world, and been secured by the strongest of hands. It will be guided in the-mail by the memories of many men and delivered by the hand of God.

It will pass over Bethlehem, and the shores of Normandy. It will grace the beaches of Pearl Harbor, and the cold, snow-covered ground at Gettysburg. It will cross the Smokies and the Rockies, caress the Alamo and Arlington, and join the echoes of American history.

It is the gift of having and enjoying Christmas in a land of free men; of being able to holiday without fear. It is a present of being able to listen to happy children instead of cries of battle.

And inside the invisible package is also hope for peace. It contains a heritage of freedom known always, and only, by this one land. It is filled with dreams and hopes and struggles. It is an ultimate gift.

And on Christmas morning this package arrives at every home in the United States. And if comparison of prices among gifts are measured, this one is the most costly of all. For it was paid for with more than dollars and cents.

The card attached to this package will read: FOR — The American People. . . Merry Christmas. . .FROM —G.I. Joe

2nd Brigade Unveils Hand Combat Arena

By 2nd Brigade PIO

A brisk, sunny, wintery morning marked the recognition of a new and different hand-to-hand combat area.

The 2nd Brigade acting commanding officer, Lt. Col. William D. Preston, attended the brief ceremony on Monday at the new range located directly opposite Essebagger Field, Kelley Hill. Capt. Cecil M. Henry, assistant S-3; Lt. Harvey C. Walker, 2nd Engineer Battalion and Staff Sergeant Henry McCoy, D Company, 2nd Engineer Battalion also attended.

Sgt. McCoy was the NCOIC of the project.

Col. Preston said Sgt. McCoy performed his job in an outstanding manner. The sergeant started the project on November 19 and finished it on December 4.

The 2nd Brigade worked with the 2nd Engineer Battalion to complete the job. The brigade supplied the "brawn" and the engineers supplied the "brains."

The building of the facility was suggested by Brig. Gen. John T. Corley when he was visiting the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry during hand-to-hand combat training on an improvised field. He remarked that "injuries to the participating men were likely due to the hardness of the ground."

When this was brought to the attention of the brigade S-3, he then selected a more suitable spot to build a pit for the course. The 2nd Engineer Battalion was called in and the job was then turned over to Sgt. McCoy of the engineers to complete.

The pit's outside circle is 200 feet in diameter and the small demonstration circle in the center is 30 feet in diameter. From the beginning of the student practical application circle to the beginning of the small instructor circle, the pit deepens from two feet to three feet. In the process of building, 342 truck loads of sawdust were used and to fill the pit, 1700 cubic yards of sawdust were poured into the area. The whole area has been wired for sound.

CAA Fund Drive Has Competitive High Unit Spirit

By 1st Bn., 23rd Inf. PIO

In the November 22nd issue of The Bayonet, this writer stated that Company C, 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry had been the first company in the battalion to surpass, by 27 dollars, the goal of $500.00 in the Community Activities Association Fund drive. So be it.

But; some two or three hours subsequent to the publication of the Bayonet the first sergeant of Company B, Charles W. Bernatovitz, informed this office, in no uncertain terms, that his men had donated $175.00 above and beyond the $500.00 goal for the drive. It was further stated that the reason Company C had compiled and turned in the figures first was that Company B was still donating, and donating, and donating.

And so . . . equal time has been alloted for the "First," and the "Foremost."

2nd Aviation Bn Vital Part Of Tough 'Second to None'

By 2nd Aviation Bn. PIO

The 2nd Aviation Battalion supports the 2nd Division with aircraft. The unit, under the command of Lt. Col. John M. Stephens Jr., has 16 fixed wing and 33 rotary wing aircraft with which to carry out its assigned mission.

The 2nd Aviation Company was constituted and activated in the summer of 1957. It was activated until that winter when it was transferred, less men and equipment, to Department of the Army control where it remained on paper until reorganization on June 14, 1958, at Fort Benning.

During the Korean War, 2nd Division aircraft support was handled by small aviation sections. The sections flew 3064 combat hours during that time having one man wounded, one man missing in action and three aircraft lost.

At the close of the war, the aviation sections of the various units were pooled into an aviation company.

Upon reactivation at Fort Benning, the 2nd Aviation Company became actively engaged in the support of the division and The Infantry School.

In the spring of 1959 the unit was given the mission by CONARC of organizing a provisional reconnaissance and security troop. This unit was to test the feasibilities of armed helicopters in a light combat reconnaissance role in support of an infantry division or a larger armored force. The result was the adoption of a new unit, "The Air Cavalry Troop."

In May, 1962, the 2nd Aviation Company started a diversified operation supporting the 2nd Infantry Division, the Infantry Center, The Infantry School and the Third U.S. Army. This required having personnel and aircraft temporary duty from the unit in some cases up to 90 days. The company completed its training the 1st of August so that all personnel might return in preparation for Joint Exercise SWIFT STRIKE II.

The 2nd Aviation Company's next active participation was in Operation Rapid Roads. The company was actually split four ways, to support the division, Task Force Delta, Division Rear and to assign eight aviators to the 31st Transportation Company to fly their aircraft.

Shortly after Rapid Roads the unit was alerted for the Cuban Crises, which necessitated the company having 20 additional Army aviators from all over the country temporary duty to fill existing vacancies.

In the winter of 1962, the unit was alerted that the division would be converted under the ROAD concept and the company would be redesignated a battalion. As preparations were being made for this transition, almost half of the officers were given permanent change of station assignments. All but seven officers of the battalion were transferred to the 11th Air Assault Division, or overseas assignments. On February 20, 1963 the 2nd Aviation Company was organized into the 2nd Aviation Battalion.

In the past seven months the unit has found itself in support missions on the reservation and off. The battalion played an intricate part in SWIFT STRIKE III last summer with air drops and reconnaissance missions over the Carolinas. At the present the 2nd Aviation Battalion is carrying on its primary mission of providing air support for the 2nd Division.

His stay at Fort Benning lasted until February 1967 when he was assigned duty as Shop Foreman of the 85th Ordnance Company at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Sgt. Cox describes the next event in his military experiences as, "the best thing that ever happened to me." He was assigned to the 66th Ordnance Company (which was later redesignated as the 328th Ordnance Battalion) in Vicenza, Italy. This "choice" assignment, as it was described, offered Sgt. Cox and his wife, Lillie, and three children, many varied and exciting experiences. "Vicenza, Italy," as Sgt. Cox describes it, "is located in an ideal geographical location."

"You see, its only a forty mile drive north to the snow-capped mountains of Asiago, where you have all types of winter activities. Thirty miles south of Vicenza you have the water wonderland area of Venice, Italy. My wife and I were able to visit such famous places as Rome, Naples, and Pisa, Italy. All factors considered, it was the most enjoyable tour."

From this tour of duty in Italy, Sgt. Cox returned to the States and was assigned to his present organization here at Fort Benning.

Sgt. Cox's family has increased in size, since he was in Italy, from three to six children, and they are residing with him in Columbus.

When asked about his military career, Sgt. Cox explained that he intends to stay in the service for thirty years, or, "as long as they'll let me."

Met Her Future Husband While Attending Wesleyan

MRS. SEAMAN

Doris Mae McKinney met Robert William Seaman in 1945 at Camp Wheeler, Ga. A World War II basic training center. She was a college student at Wesleyan, he was a 1st classman from the United States Military Academy. West Point, N.Y., in the south for training. After a correspondence courtship of several months Doris traveled to West Point for the traditional June week festivities. She recalls this week with happy smiles and remembers it as her first meeting with her future husbands' family.

Doris then returned to her home in Macon, Georgia and Lt. Seaman went to Fort Benning, Georgia to attend the Infantry Officer's Basic Course.

The romance matured through weekend visits and marriage plans were soon being discussed. Marriage vows were exchanged in December of 1946 at Saint Pauls Episcopal Church in Macon.

As a bride, Mrs. Seaman came to Fort Benning for the first time in January 1947. The housing situation was critical and her first home was a rented part of a house in Columbus with shared kitchen privileges.

April of '47 brought orders for Fort Riley, Kan. where Lt. Seaman was to serve as a tactical officer with OCS. Doris moved into a small apartment, but three months later moved to her first post quarters. It was an apartment located on the top floor of the Bachelor Officers Quarters; pleasant, but very hot in the summer.

Shortly after becoming a first lieutenant, Robert Seaman received orders for Trieste, Italy. Doris was given last minute permission to travel with her husband and they drove to Fort Hamilton, N. Y. and left for Europe on August 8, 1948. Doris was soon to be at home in the small village of Opicina, Italy, in a section nicknamed "Rocky Heights."

Life there proved quite a challenge for Mrs. Seaman. Her apartment had a big pot bellied stove in the middle of the hall for heating the whole place. The ice box was just that; a box that held a block of ice and it required daily attention or extensive mopping. But, with all this, and even though the name "Rocky Heights" was most appropriate as there was little or no grass in the area, Doris thoroughly enjoyed the tour.

Opicina was a beautiful little town overlooking Trieste and the Adriatic Sea and the military people had a warm, close-knit relationship from which many lasting friendships developed. And there, on July 7, 1949, the Seamans welcomed their first child, Robert.

The summer he was born there was a water shortage and no electricity during the day, so Doris often had to light the pot bellied stove just to heat his bottles.

Capt. Seaman returned to Fort Benning to attend the Advanced Infantry Course (now the Career Course). Doris and the baby moved into Victory Apartments here in Columbus. In October of 1951 Judith was born at the Old Hospital. Capt. Seaman completed school in April, 1952 and was assigned to the G-4 Section of the Infantry Center. Subsequently the family moved into quarters at Custer Terrace.

This assignment was short as the captain was sent to Korea in January of '53 where he served with the 35th Regiment of the 25th Infantry Division. Mrs. Seaman and the children spent this period with her parents in Macon.

Syracuse, N. Y. was the site of the next family home as Capt. Seaman returned from Korea and was sent to Syracuse University to obtain a Masters Degree in business administration.

This was Doris' first winter in the north and her first experience with heavy snows and extremely cold weather.

Captain Seamans' next tour of duty was at Fort Bragg, N. C., serving as Comptroller. When the family came to Fort Bragg they moved right into quarters and stayed for five years. Bobby and Judy started grade school and Doris became an active member of the Wives Club. She also took the Grey Lady course of instruction and worked at the Post hospital there.

Capt. Seaman was promoted to major while at Fort Bragg.

Overseas orders came again in 1960 when the Major was assigned to Headquarters, Communications, Zone Europe, at Orleans, France. There the family lived on the economy for a year, in an apartment overlooking the Loire River. After moving into quarters Mrs. Seaman took up junking, better known as antique hunting. She acquired many lovely pieces including a Louis the 15th dining room ensemble.

While in France the Seamans traveled frequently and Doris particularly enjoyed a week spent in Holland during the Easter Season. The tulips were in full bloom, the people warm and friendly, and the country very clean and well kept.

In 1962 it was back to Fort Benning for the Seaman family with the major being sent from here to Fort Leavenworth, Kan. for the Command and General Staff College. Mrs. Seaman moved into her present quarters on Austin Loop. Upon the majors' return to Fort Benning, he was assigned briefly to the division G-3 Section and then as executive officer of the Divisions' 3rd Brigade.

While in this position he was promoted to lieutenant colonel and in October of 1963 he assumed command of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, his present position.

Mrs. Seaman is enjoying this third tour of Fort Benning. She is a member of the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, sews often and does ceramic work when time allows.

15th Artillery Entertains 3 Vietnamese Officers

By 15th Artillery PIO

In answer to an invitation extended to Allied students of the U.S. Army Infantry Center, three officers of the Vietnamese Army were able, for the first time, to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner in the American tradition.

Because a large number of personnel assigned to the 15th Artillery Battalion are able to speak either French or Spanish, the battalion invited Allied students speaking these languages to join in its annual Thanksgiving celebration. It was felt that a holiday dinner spent with those speaking their own language would help increase the already strong feeling of friendship between the students and their American hosts.

Capt. Nguyen Phuoc Hunh, and Lts. Dang Van Tri and Nguyen Van Nam, all of the Vietnamese Army, were hosted by Capt. William Lundberg at the Headquarters Battery mess hall. There they joined the men, wives, and children of the 15th who had gathered for the feast.

The Vietnamese officers are scheduled to complete their Fort Benning training early this month. From here they will go to Fort Bragg, N. C., for further instruction, and upon the completion of this training, they will return to their homes, and the families awaiting them.

MOOM'S Anzio Room Site of Division Coffee

The Ladies of 2nd Division Headquarters recently held their bi-monthly coffee in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Hostesses for the occasion were the wife of the division G-4, Mrs. John E. Connolly, and ladies of the G-4 section.

Pouring for the occasion were Mrs. Charles Billingslea, Mrs. Robert E. Coffin, Mrs. William D. Dice, Mrs. Robert Kendrick and Mrs. C. P. Sheffield.

The outstanding event of the coffee was a pantomime skit, narrated by Mrs. Lucien F. Keller, depicting customs and courtesies of the service. Taking part in the event were Mrs. John H. Cochran, Mrs. Connolly, Mrs. Kendrick, Mrs. Floyd G. Stephenson, Mrs. Leon J. Givler and Mrs. Gerald P. Cody.

Following the skit, Mrs. Keller presided at a short business meeting and then welcomed new arrivals Mesdames Bruce W. Pound, Arthur Rafferty, Donald Williams, George Harren III, Alvin T. Wilson Jr., William B. Johnston, J. S. Brigham, Charles M. Britton, Gerald L. Hicks and George A. Redd.

Mrs. Jerry L. Teague and Mrs. Harvey C. Walker Jr. were co-hostesses for the affair held at the Teague home on Running Avenue. A Christmas theme was carried out with the table setting depicting the "Twelve Days of Christmas". Twelve men were "a strumming" around a coffee cake flanked by holly and two red tapers. "A partridge in a pear tree" was featured in the living room. Coffee was poured by Mrs. Gurvis L. Windham.

By 2nd Bn, 22rd Inf. PIO

Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion (Mech) 23rd Infantry added another Ranger to its ranks when Sgt. Richard Rivera returned to the company last week after completing the nine week Ranger School at Fort Benning.

During the nine week ranger course, Rivera made a short trip on a Navy ship in the Gulf of Mexico. This little jaunt was somewhat of a reminder of old times as he had served four years in the Navy with the Seventh Fleet before beginning his Army career.

While in the Navy, he worked as an Aviation Machinist Mate and achieved the rank of Petty Officer Third Class.

Before coming to the 2nd of the 23rd, Sgt. Rivera served with the 7th Cavalry in Bamburg, Germany.

2nd of 9th Leaps Toward Crown

1st of the 38th Stopped After Taking 7 Straight

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry took a giant step toward the 2nd Division flag football title Tuesday afternoon by defeating 122nd Signal Battalion, 13-7, in the six-team double elimination championship series.

The win was 2nd of the 9th's second in the series. The "Manchus" topped previously unbeaten 1st of the 38th 13-7 Monday.

The 2nd Engineer Battalion took an overtime 14-13 victory over 7th Cavalry in the other Tuesday game while 122nd Signal won the opener Monday, a 28-7 romp over 1st of the 9th.

The first and second place teams in the tournament's three regular-season divisions are competing in the championship series.

Last Wednesday 2nd of the 9th earned a berth in the series with a 20-12 win over 15th Artillery. The two squads had been tied for second place in the Apache Division.

It also took a playoff between 7th Cavalry and 122nd Signal last Friday to settle things in the Commanche Division. But it wasn't for a series' berth but to break the tie for first place. The cavalry unit won that game, 12-7.

The 2nd of the 9th had to wait until the last quarter to pull its victory out over 122nd Signal Tuesday. The signalmen had held a 7-6 edge until that point.

Chester Lewis sparked 2nd Engineer's thriller with 7th Cavalry during the regular period but it was a team effort that pulled off the victory in the overtime. Each team runs four plays in an extra period and the win is determined on the basis of yardage gained.

The engineers gained 14 yards to 7th Cavalry's minus five.

Melvin Lewis opened up scoring in the game with a touchdown for 7th Cavalry and an extra point by Kelly Waggoner made it 7-0. But the engineers came back in the second quarter and tied it up when Philip D'Orio scored and Chester Lewis converted.

Waggoner put 7th Cavalry ahead again in the third period on a scoring pass play but Chester Lewis tied it up in the final stanza via the same route.

Randy Johnson and Wayne Kube proved to be the big guns for 122nd Signal, in its upset win over 1st of the 9th Monday. They accounted for five touchdowns between them. Johnson scored two in the first half while Kube scored one.

Bob Dunbar of the 1st of the 9th scored the "Manchus" lone marker of the game in the first half.

The second half saw Johnson and Kube of 122nd Signal score a touchdown each in the face of a tighter Manchu defense.

The second half of the Monday double header played at Bennett Field saw the 2nd of the 9th "Manchu's" romp over the previously undefeated 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, first place finishers in the Cherokee Division.

The first quarter saw no scoring on either side and was characterized by tight defensive play. But in the second quarter Jimmy Blalock trapped the 1st of the 38th's quarterback Benny Scott in the end zone for a two-point safety.

The "Manchus" never looked back from that point on.

A Lucius Willis pass to Philip Broussard resulted in a touchdown play that covered 46 yards. Bobby Myrick converted. The second marker for the 2nd of the 9th came on a 30-yard pass from Willis to Harold Taylor in the end zone.

The score at the half read 15 to 0 for the "Manchu" warriors.

The third period featured tight defensive play that yielded no scoring. Early in the fourth quarter Willis tossed a 33-yard bomb to end Jimmie Bailey that gave the 9th those extra insurance points.

Gary Aesque scored 1st of the 38th's only TD mid-way through the fourth period when he slipped through the 9th Infantry line on a 62-yard romp to paydirt.

Quarterback Willis finished out the scoring in the game when he carried the ball himself the last 40 yards into the end zone on a quarterback keeper play that was designed to gain the short yardage for a first down.

'Manchus' Earned Berth By Topping 15th Artillery

The "Manchus" of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry fought their way into a play-off berth in the division flag football tourney when they defeated the 15th Artillery 20-12 in a December 4 play-off for second place in the Apache Division.

Behind the strong running game of "Manchu" quarterback Lucius Willis and halfback Harold Taylor, the 2nd of the 9th rolled up a 20-0 lead by the end of the first half.

Taylor turned two punt returns of about 50 yards each into touchdowns in the second quarter to spark the 9th Infantry win.

Willis scored the initial touchdown on a pass play.

The second half saw the 15th Artillery tighten its defense and take the offensive. Late in the third quarter, David Blackwood carried the mail on a 40 - yard romp around left end to take the 15th Artillery out of the scoreless column.

Boyd Abbott took a short pass over center and ran it 20 yards in the final period for the only other scoring in the game.

The last five minutes of the game saw both teams threaten but stellar defensive play by both teams prevented further scoring.

The 15th Artillery squad was forced into the playoff for a berth in the division flag football championship series when 2nd of the 9th, then in third place with a 4-2 record, took a forfeit victory over 2nd Administration Company on December 3, the final day of the regular season.

The top two teams in each of the tournament's three division are competing in the championship series.

Ex-Pentagon Research, Development Officer Takes Over at 1st of 23rd

By 1st Bn., 23rd Inf. PIO

A command change ceremony was held recently in the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry for new Battalion Commander Lt. Col. S. K. McMurdo.

Prior to taking over the reins of the battalion, Col. McMurdo was assistant executive officer in the Research and Development Office of Department of the Army.

Col. McMurdo comes from an Army family, his father being a colonel in the Medical Corps, and has spent most of his life traveling around the world. He was born in Sydney, Australia and attended no less than seven different schools by the time he reached the end of his high school education.

The new commander enlisted in the Army at Fort McPherson in 1940 with the 22nd Infantry. He entered the United States Military Academy in 1942 and graduated as a second lieutenant in 1945.

From 1945 to 1948, Col. McMurdo served with the 11th Airborne in Japan. He then returned to the states and Fort Campbell for a short stay, after which he was sent to Korea; first as commander of "Dog" Company and then as commander of the 5th Regimental Combat Team.

Col. McMurdo joined the Advanced Course at Fort Benning on the Staff and Faculty and later was assigned to the Staff College at Fort Levenworth, Kan. A year later the colonel flew to Honolulu to be the assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics (PMS&T.)

Lt. Col. McMurdo now wears the Bronze Star Medal, the Army Commendation Medal, the Combat Infantryman's Badge and Senior Parachutist wings.

The colonel and his wife Mary Jane have four children; Dahlis, 16 S.K. Jr., 14; Joseph, 9; and Michael, 8. They live at 109 Austin Loop.

Artillery Training Tests End

an enjoyable one as well as useful one.

As to the benefits derived from firing on other than the battalion's home ranges, Col Chance said that by testing a unit at an unfamiliar location, the results are more indicative of the unit's ability to "move, shoot, and communicate."

The annual training tests, he added, test not only the ability of a unit to place rapid fire on a target, but also check such areas as maintenance, intelligence, and reaction to guerrilla attacks.

The 38th Artillery contributes much of the great success it has enjoyed here to the availability of ranges and firing positions and to the outstanding support from the staff sections and personnel at Fort Gordon.

The first, and largest, of the four units to fire at Gordon was the 6th Battalion, 27th Artillery, which began testing on October 9. Commanded by Lt. Col. Francis E. Mendenhall, the unit contained four Howitzer firing batteries — three 155mm and one 8-inch.

Maj. Gen. Eugene A. Salet, Fort Gordon commanding general, pulled the lanyard to fire the first round and open the testing period.

Following at two week intervals were the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert; 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Lloyd Picou and finally the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, commanded by Col. Chance. Each unit is composed of three 105mm Howitzer firing batteries.

When the 17th Artillery unit completed its testing in early November, Col. Boisvert presented Gen. Salet a miniature cannon in recognition of the outstanding cooperation and support his unit had received at Fort Gordon. Commanding officers of the other units have also expressed similar appreciation.

Later in the month, Battery C of the 15th Artillery was chosen to fire a 19-gun salute in honor of the governor of Georgia on "Governor Sanders Day" here on November 23, but instead had the somber honor of firing 21 and 50-gun salutes at memorial services for the late President Kennedy who was assassinated on the preceding day.

Preparations for the testing actually began early in September when a survey team from the 2nd Division arrived at Fort Gordon to determine placement of targets, positioning of weapons, and the exact impact areas and to set up battery firing centers and observation points.

1st of 9th Photographer Wins 2 in Photo Contest

By 1st Bn., 9th Inf. PIO

Two first prizes awarded by Division Special Services at the close of their annual Photo and Art Contest went to a member of Headquarters Company at the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry last week.

PFC William A. Bache, the battalion staff photographer, became seriously interested in photography while the "Manchu" unit was "Rotaplanning" in Germany from April to July of this year.

Meriting first place in the action color category was Bache's "Holiday Starfire," a shot which captures one moment from a huge burst of July 4 fireworks in Mannheim. The other picture is a quietly exciting black and white still view of Heidelberg.

The photos were taken with a 35-millimeter Zeiss-Icon camera Bache purchased shortly after arriving in Germany. A native of Gainesville, Fla., he studied engineering at the University of Florida for three semesters before enlisting in the Army.

Sgt Jack Silver Tabbed to Leave 9th for Germany

By 1st Bn., 9th Infantry PIO

No sooner than he returned from fighting the "Swamp Fox" at Fort Stewart, Ga., SFC Jack Silvers, S-3 weapons sergeant at the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, was alerted for a new assignment in Germany.

According to the order cut at Division Headquarters, Sgt. Silver will go to the 3rd Battalion, 51st Infantry.

A wearer of the Combat Infantryman's Badge, he participated in the Korean War as a member of the 27th Infantry Regiment and the 25th Infantry Division from 1951 to 1953. After a tour with the 39th Infantry Regiment in Germany, he first arrived at the "Indianhead" Division as a weapons sergeant in the 1st Battle Group, 23rd Infantry.

NYU Still No. 1 Team Ahead of Loyola Five

By Dave Braun

While almost everyone's thoughts are focused on the grand gala of football games set for New Year's Day, two of the nation's finer roundball teams already have been dumped from the ranks of the unbeaten.

Cincinnati, who only last week was chosen as the nation's no. 2 team, crumbled before veteran outfit Kansas, 51-47. The loss to the Jayhawks was Cincy's first on their campus court in 90 contests.

Meanwhile, Wichita, whom I felt deserved sole possession to the No. 5 slot, has dropped two games and out of the top 10.

Not only were the Wheatshockers electrocuted by Texas Western before things got started, but last Saturday night Arizona State caught fire and drowned the Missouri Valley Wizards.

On the brighter side, the remainder of our top selections ran true to form.

Powerful NYU is still warming up with a 2-0 mark.

Paced by All-America Barry Kramer, a 6 foot, 4 inch, bundle of everything, and 6 foot, 7 inch, Harold "Happy" Harriston, the Violets have blitzed Cornell and Tulsa.

My No. 2 choice, Loyola, had a field night last Saturday, bombing Kent State, 100-59, and it could be just the start of bigger things to come.

Down in the number four position the Duke "Blue Devils" have been applying the winning touch to all their opponents.

The North Carolina crew copped the recent Centennial Classic championship, dropping always powerful West Virginia, 86-81, in the finals and Ohio State, a pre-season big ten standout, in the semi-finals.

Several other teams have made it apparent in the early stages of the season that they may have to be reckoned with. Arizona State and Kentucky head the list.

The Sun Devils blossomed last year with a 26-3 record and this season with a wealth of experience in four returning lettermen, have to be considered a threat.

Remember Ned Wulk's band of westerners took a "not-so-close-one" from Wichita.

I can't say too much about Kentucky except watch out. Doing a little traveling early in the season the boys from the "Bluegrass" have ripped apart Virginia, Texas Tech, Northwestern and Atlantic Coast power North Carolina, 100-80, Wednesday night.

It appears as if Cotton Nash has quit reading his press clippings, Ted Deeken has practiced all summer and both Terry Mobley and Larry Conley have decided they are both pretty good ballplayers.

Let's make Kentucky No. 5 and Arizona State six for the time being.

Wrapping up our top ten and in the following order are Michigan, Oregon State, Ohio State, and Texas.

1. New York University (2-0)
2. Loyola (2-0)
3. Cincinnati (2-1)
4. Duke (3-0)
5. Kentucky (4-0)
6. Arizona State (2-0)
7. Michigan (3-0)
8. Oregon State (3-1)
9. Ohio State (3-1)
10. Texas (3-0)

Williamson Is Chosen Most Valuable Player

Halfback Billy Williamson was honored as Fort Benning's "Most Valuable Player" for 1963 at the Doughboys annual football banquet held last Thursday night at the post Country Club.

The former Georgia Tech standout was presented a trophy by Dave Nelson, head football coach of the University of Delaware, on hand for the colorful affair as guest speaker.

"This is one of the highlights of my football career," said the five-foot, eight-inch, 160 - pound Williamson. "I hardly knew what to expect in service football after playing in high school and college, but everyone with whom I have been associated has just been swell," he said.

During the course of the season Billy picked up 381 yards in 82 carries, a 4.6 yard per carry average, in addition to racing for 10 touchdowns.

Doughboy head coach Oren DeHaven also awarded a trophy to trainer Charles Layne as the one person who contributed the most to the Fort Benning football team this season.

Layne received a tremendous hand from the Doughboy members and officers present at the banquet. Throughout the season the Florida State University graduate worked tirelessly in getting the Doughboys in shape for each encounter.

Trophies also were presented to guards Joe Wendryhoski and Pat Dye as team captains for the 1963 season.

One of the evenings highlights came when both Wendryhoski and Dye presented Major Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, the game football for 1963.

Gen. Rich, aided by Coach DeHaven, presented each member of the Fort Benning squad with watches. Watches also went to the team manager, John Mallick and assistant manager Joseph Marci. Assistant coaches John O'Grady, Wayne Williamson and Bobby Boylston also received watches.

Dave Nelson, whose 1963 "Blue Hen" team at Delaware was rated the number one small college team in the country and winner of the "Lambert Award" for small college supremacy among eastern schools, provided those present with a little humor in telling a few stories.

Gen. Rich introduced Nelson, a 1962 graduate of the University of Michigan.

YAC Champs Are Honored At Ceremony

The Youth Activities Biddy League football champions, the Blue Devils, were honored recently during ceremonies at Doughboy Stadium when team members were presented trophies for having achieved an undefeated season.

Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, made the presentations as supervisor of little league football at the post.

The team was coached by SFC James L. Gregory. Assisting Sgt. Gregory were MSgt. Ken Edens, Sp5 Joseph Thomas and Sp4 Henry Burkholder. The Blue Devils ended their season with a 9-0 record, scored a total of 222 points while their opponents scored only 23 points.

Cage Season Open for 11th

A former basketball, football and baseball star at the U. S. Military Academy, Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, officially opened the 11th Air Assault Division's Basketball League Tuesday night at the Harmony Church Field House.

Col. Hennessey, who in 1942 and 1943 starred as a guard on the basketball team at West Point, an end on the football squad and played first base on the baseball team, tossed the first jump ball for the 187th Airborne Infantry and 44th Air Transport Battalion.

The 187th went on to defeat the 44th, 58-46, while Headquarters Division Artillery bombed the 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion, 59-31, in the second encounter of the evening.

Jeep Accident Ends Legend of 'Man With Nine Lives'

STUTTGART, Germany — For twenty years quiet-mannered SFC John E. Luse unbeknowingly blazed a path that among military men made him a legend of his own time.

From privates to four-star generals, the magnetic appeal of his quick smile and outright disdain of fear made him a respected friend of all who knew him or knew of him. He had brushed aside fate's fickle finger with such alarming regularity that he became known far and wide as the "Man with Nine Lives."

That's why Sgt. Luse's untimely death late last month was an ironic, almost embarassing circumstance. It came in the line of duty during a mission for his unit, Seventh Army's crack airborne Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol, and happened near Kronach, Germany.

He and 1st Lt. David B. Tucker, the unit's operations officer, were riding in a jeep-trailer rig, driven by Sgt. Luse, along a lonely stretch of highway near Kronach. The pavement, slickened by a recent rain, proved to be Sgt. Luse's demise, for in the next instant the jeep went into a spin, overturned and pinned the sergeant underneath. A brain concussion and severely crushed chest brought instant death.

When Maj. Gen. James V. Edmundson, commanding general of United States 17th Air Force in Ramstein, Germany, was notified of the sergeant's fatal accident, he was quick to react by making arrangements to attend his memorial services.

Gen. Edmundson, who had been guided through Fort Benning's rugged airborne course by the then Senior Jumpmaster Sgt. Luse in 1960, added to the Luse legend, saying, "I've never known a soldier with so many outstanding qualities as Sgt. Luse. He had an outstanding record and I think that speaks for itself."

Spawning grounds for the Luse legend were places like Fort Benning, Normandy, Holland, Bastogne and a barbed wire prison camp in Germany.

Luse, a native of Mississippi, entered the Army April 5, 1943, completed jump school at Fort Benning and was assigned to the 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division where he remained for the duration of the war.

SFC LUSE

He made the first of two combat jumps with the 506th during the Normandy invasion. Later, in the first allied airborne parachute assault in Holland, he was captured by the Nazis and taken to a POW Camp near Kassel, Germany.

Nine days later he was a free man and the "Man with Nine Lives" legend had begun.

Sgt. Luse made friends with a Polish guard, despite the fact a word never passed between the two. But the sergeant's ear-to-ear grin and some hastily improvised sign language was an international communications link that anyone could understand. He and the Polish guard escaped together, each taking separate paths, Luse's leading back to the U.S. lines in Holland.

Later in Bastogne he survived a serious bayonet wound. And during the winter, sub-zero days of the Battle of the Bulge Sgt. Luse went AWOL from a hospital bed to save his frost-bitten feet which doctors had deemed necessary to amputate.

At the close of World War II he remained with the 506th Parachute Infantry and participated in the "Little Olympics" sponsored by the United States Forces in Europe and held in Nurnberg, Germany's famed Soldier's Field, scene of Adolph Hitler's most monstrous Nazi rallies.

He specialized in the 100-yard dash and because of his fine showing acquired the nickname "Jack Rabbitt." It's rumored that Gen. Maxwell Taylor, then commander of the 101st's "Screaming Eagles" was the one to peg Luse with the monicker.

In 1947, however, it seemed as though fate had caught up with the happy-go-lucky Mississippian. During a jump on the Benning reservation, both his main and reserve 'chutes failed to open and he plunged into a shallow creek bed from 1,200 feet. But life is cherished by those who enjoy it most and the plucky Luse was not about to throw in the towel. Six month's later, after many pain-wracked days in a full-length cast he emerged from the hospital.

There's another Fort Benning story about John Luse and his disregard for danger, this one told by his buddies, who were here when it occurred.

Luse was just as much at home on the 250-foot jump tower and its 18-inch catwalk as he was with his wife and two children. One day while walking the tower he slipped, but lady luck was with him that day, for he stopped his fall after dropping some 30-40 feet by grabbing one of the crossbars on the tower.

Sgt. Luse stayed at Fort Benning as an instructor in the airborne school and Columbus became his home. He spent a few brief months in Korea in 1953 but returned in 1954 to his old post as an airborne instructor.

As a senior jumpmaster he was to become intimate friends with several general officers, among them Gen. Edmundson, who went through the jump school.

After nearly 15 years of duty here, Sgt. Luse was assigned to the U.S. Army Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol Company in September, 1962 where he served as a platoon sergeant until his death.

Although his time in Germany was short lived, Sergeant Luse contributed to his own legend by becoming fast friends with the German 1st Airborne Division troopers with whom he spent countless weekends in the air over Germany and swapping jump stories.

The "Man with Nine Lives" no longer lives, but his legend continues to grow. A man's man, a soldier's soldier. . . this is how Sgt. John E. Luse is being remembered today by thousands of buddies who were associated with him during twenty years of service to his country.

Here's why you'll tell other people you like it.

Wide-Track, for instance. Wide-Track is what does away with tilting your way around turns. Pontiac's smoother, quieter ride is another thing you might point out. A big 389-cubic-inch Trophy V-8 is standard in each and every Pontiac. You get to choose from 34 engine/transmission teams to harness all that power. (Happy choosing!)

Now then—on to more of the things that make the '64 Pontiac so thoroughly likeable. Frankly, we couldn't think of anything radical to do with this car. Oh, we made the styling even more stylish, as you can plainly see. We lavished even more care on the interiors. We even improved the light bulbs. But as for more vital things, why change? Improve, refine, sharpen—yes. Change—no. And you can tell that to your friends.

Social Security Credit Adds Up to Important Benefits

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Whether you are a career serviceman, a one-termer, or already a veteran, some, or all of your military service may count toward social security benefits for yourself and your family.

These benefits may include:

Monthly payments to you and your dependents when you retire at age 62 or later. However, if you choose to take your benefits between 62 and 65, the amount will be permanently reduced.

Monthly payments to your dependent survivors when you die.

A lump sum death payment to your widow or widower toward burial expenses.

The amount of social security credits you need for each of these benefits varies in the individual case. Credits received for service in the Armed Forces, credits earned in civilian employment or a combination of both, can be counted toward the total of your social security credits.

Men and women in active military service before Jan. 1, 1957, did not earn social security credits for their base pay. However, credits may be granted by the Social Security Administration for active duty in the Armed Forces between Sept. 16, 1940, and Dec. 31, 1956.

Members of the Armed Forces, since Jan. 1, 1957, have been covered by Social Security in the same way as people in civilian employment.

Since 1950, the Congress has enacted laws giving Social Security wage credits of $160 for each month of military service during (1) the World War II period—Sept. 16, 1940, through July 24, 1947, and (2) the postwar period — July 25, 1947, through Dec. 31, 1956.

To get these wage credits of $160 for each month of active duty served between Sept. 16, 1940, and Dec. 31, 1956, a veteran must have been discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable.

In addition, he must have had at least 90 days of active service or, if he had less, he must have been discharged or released because of disability or injury caused by, or made worse, in line of duty.

Once every three years it's a good idea to secure a special postcard from the Social Security district office to get a statement of the earnings credited to your account. If there is any mistake — if all your earnings in work covered by Social Security have not been credited to you — your Social Security office can help get the record corrected.

Any free Social Security credits of $160 a month that can be granted to you for active service will not appear on this statement of earnings because the decisions as to whether you are eligible to receive these credits cannot be made until a claim for benefits is filed.

Questions concerning your individual Social Security problems should be referred to the nearest Social Security district office . . . these are listed in the telephone directory.

New Colors Acquired By 11th Unit

New battalion colors were presented to the men of the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division, during ceremonies recently at Todd Field.

Participating in the ceremonies were Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 11th commander, Col. George S. Beatty Jr., 1st Air Assault Brigade commander, Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar, commanding officer of the 188th, and Sgt. Maj. Alvin C. Kempson.

Maj. Ralph S. Dover, 188th S-3 officer, was acting commander of the troops marching in review.

The 188th, which was activated at Camp Mackall, N. C., in 1943, was known as the 188th Glider Infantry Regiment while part of the 11th Airborne Division throughout World War II.

During the war the unit was credited with liberating over 2,000 internees who were held by the Japanese at Los Banos Prison Camp in the Philippine Islands.

It also spearheaded the drive toward the dash on Manila and while in Manila, fought against the Japanese naval troops at Nichols Field.

Men from the 188th also seized Fort McKinley in southern Manila and were among the first American troops to land in Japan on Aug. 29, 1945.

Your Dental Health

Prevent Tooth Decay With Good Oral Care

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

Does it seem a little hard to believe that 40 million people have never been to a dentist? Or that 100 million go only when they have pain? Doesn't this seem a little careless in regard to our teeth?

About 40 million people are regular visitors to the dentist, but many of these are somewhat uninformed, as they believe decay must be endured.

Why have cavities? It really isn't a necessary part of life. If you were to go to a physician with pneumonia, and he could cure you of pneumonia but left you with the certainty of again acquiring the disease, you would doubt his ability as a physician. He doesn't guarantee your freedom from the disease but does give you advice on how to prevent its recurrence.

Dentists are capable of giving good advice too, but often we neglect doing so, because of our own fatalistic attitude toward what you may do to prevent dental decay. It is rather discouraging to know that a patient leaving our office will return with more decay. So, the problem of dental disease must be met on two fronts.

First, we have the responsibility to help understand what you must do to prevent the ravages of dental disease. Secondly, you must understand the nature of dental disease and your responsibility to yourself and your family.

Preventive service by the dental team to the patient is being stressed more and more in contact between the patient and dentist. Dentistry is changing from a reparative service to a preventive service field.

This can be accomplished only by reducing dental disease. The tools for success are available for beginning our attack on dental disease — the toothbrush and toothpaste. Now, the problem is ensuring that you, the people, use them and visit your dentist for regular care and checkups.

187th Men First Users Of Amplifier

Sky Soldier signalmen of the 187th Infantry's Communication Platoon will be the first unit in the Army to utilize a new RB-2 military field amplifier, according to 1st Lt. Monte R. Tate, the 187th communications officer.

Delivery of the special equipment is expected at any time. The RB-2 was manufactured by a civilian corporation as the result of field testing and recommendations of the 187th after use of the RB-1 during the first phase of the air assault buildup.

Designed to increase the power of field receiver-transmitter equipment at a ratio of 2-35 watts, the new air-dropable amplifier will offer many new advantages and has its own dispensable power supply.

The majority of the tactical field testing of the RB-1 occurred during Test Exercise, "Air Assault I" (previously called "Sky Soldier I") and resulted in a visit to the 187th by technical representatives of the manufacturer.

Setting a fast pace in the use of communications equipment, all commo equipment within the concept, now being used by division units, has been tactically field tested by the 187th.

4,000 Items Available At Training Aids Center

BY PFC TOM LUCE

Pocket-size helicopters and giant four-foot tall compasses are two of the more than 4,000 unique training devices stocked by Fort Benning's Third Army Training Aids Center.

Other locally fashioned aids range from danger signs and engineer knot - tying boards to mock radar panels and dummy guided missiles.

The raw materials used by the center's 20 military and civilian craftsmen in a constant effort to equal the Army's changing instruction-al program are dazzling with statistics.

Lots of Lumber

For example 20,000 board feet of lumber (enough to build and finish a two-bedroom home), 1,000 gallons of paint and thinner and 50 gallons of liquid glue were used last year.

Approximately three miles of various panels of building materials and over 7,000 pounds of miscellaneous hardware also were used last year.

According to Maj. Robert H. Schaffer, training aids officer, "Our primary mission is to provide fast, readily available training aids to all active Army, Reserve, ROTC and National Guard units within a geographical area which includes the southern portions of Alabama and Mississippi, southwest Georgia and the panhandle of Florida."

"Each training device is either procured through the Department of Army or made in our workshop with a specific goal in mind," he said.

"Some items are simply replicas of training equipment which have been either blown-up or reduced to a size desired by the instructor," the major added. "Others illustrate a lecture point by means of graphs, signs, pictorial support of working cut-away models."

"Dummy or mock-up equipment is also used extensively during certain phases of field training which involve costly, classified or extremely sensitive material," Maj. Schaffer said.

All Specialists

Each member of the center's three main divisions is a specialist in his particular work.

A blueprint, rough sketch or verbal idea of the desired model is submitted to the Device Division where craftsmen study plans and turn ideas into reality.

Skilled model-makers in the division, using the most modern wood and metal working equipment available, fabricate copies of such originals as the M-14 rifle, land mines, rockets and guided missiles, blackboards and rear sight assemblies.

Once the model has been fashioned, sanded and smoothed it is sent to the Graphic Division for art work.

Several processes are commonly used by the artist and illustrators before the copy is released for issue.

The silk screen process is used when a volume of reproductions, such as in general order signs, large maps, no smoking signs and multi-colored training charts, is required.

Photo Process

A black light process, utilizing an ultra violet light and fluorescence paint, has proved to be highly successful when used during a night problem or in a darkened room to illustrate a point.

A large percentage of the work finished by the division is done by the time-honored sketch and trace method using the freehand style.

The Supply and Distribution Division procures, stores, issues and ships various stocked training aids to units throughout the center's region.

Aids are distributed on much the same order as library books. A unit makes a request for a specific item and warehouse personnel "charge" the piece of equipment to the unit's account.

Maj. Schaffer said one of the most difficult tasks given the center was a huge terrain model, requested by the post's Test, Evaluation and Control Group.

Each hill and valley represented on the original map had to be cut and molded to scale on the 53-foot by 21-foot sectioned fiber board.

In addition each of the 39 sections comprising the map had to be handpainted and shaded with appropriate rivers, streams, roads and wooded areas.

Human Visual Apparatus World's Fanciest Camera

Whenever you open your eyes, you set in motion a process faster than sound, more efficient than photography, a thousand times more complex than any electronic system.

It begins with light rays streaming through the cornea, the clear "front window" of the eyeball. It ends with some delicate adjustments that the brain must make before you can really see what you're looking at."

Each part of your eye is ingeniously fitted for its job. The iris, which gives it color, is more important as the "shutter" which partially opens and closes to admit the light. A muscle in the iris controls the pupil — the hole in the iris through which light passes — making it bigger or smaller as more or less light is needed.

Adjustable Lens

Back of the pupil and iris is the crystalline lens. Like the cornea, it contains the only really transparent tissue in your entire body, with no pigment or blood vessels to blur its clear surface.

It is described as a double convex lens — like any ordinary magnifying glass. What makes this lens different is its ability to change shape to fit the visual situation.

To bring near objects into sharp focus, the ciliary muscles attached to the crystalline lens make it thicker in the middle. The relaxation of this muscle pulls the lens flat — and then you can clearly see the distant scene.

Has "Film"

An image is produced when the lens focuses light rays on the retina, the thinner-than-tissue - paper membrane which has been compared to the light - sensitive film of a camera.

The retina contains more than six million cone-shaped cells which detect the fine lines and points of an image and enable you to see color. The rod-shaed cells of the retina—about 115 million—give you night vision. They can detect outlines of objects in almost total darkness.

"Photo Lab"

Light rays, stimulating the millions of tiny nerve endings in the retina, set up nerve impluses which are carried along the optic nerve to the brain. Here, the picture "snapped" by the eye is finally "developed." The images on the retina, upside-down like those transmitted through a camera lens, are righted. The two views presented by the two eyes, never quite alike, are reconciled; from their differences, the brain judges such things as perspective and distance.

An amazing engineering feat? Yes! But look at all the things that can go wrong!

Some eyes are too long from front to back. Even when stretched to its utmost, the lens cannot bring distant objects to a focus on the retinas of these nearsighted orbs. Some eyes, too short from front to back, cannot bring near objects to a focus; these are farsighted. Many eyes have corneas which are oval instead of round, distorting light rays to produce the blurry images characteristic of astigmatism. When the two eyes do not work together properly, cross-eyes or wall-eyes are the result. One out of 20 men and one out of 200 women inherit imperfections in the cones of the retina which makes them color-blind.

Poor Vision

All in all, only two per cent of the population is born with completely adequate vision!

The child just starting school has far from what is mistakenly called "perfect vision"; according to the American eye care experts. The six-year-old with sight usual for his age has only 20-30 acuity. Eye coordination and speed of seeing also have a long way to go for peak efficiency. Studies made by the University of California's School of Optometry show that 27 per cent of all elementary school children need visual care compliated by the fact that it does little good to ask a child whether he sees well; with no yardstick for comparison, he thinks everybody sees as he does. More important, say experts, is to watch him for these telltale signs:

Avoiding use of eyes accompanied by a variety of excuses, can be significant. Tripping, stumbling, poor coordination, even temper tantrums and unsociality can be caused by faulty vision.

Related to reading, the following may be signs of vision difficulty: dislike for reading, losing place, avoiding close work, complaints of words or lines "jumping", holding reading too close, head movements, frowning, or squinting, facial distortions.

Often Complain

Don't ignore complaints of any kind: headaches, dizziness, tiredness, seeing double, itching and burning eyes are not normal in youngsters.

Sometimes, Junior's troubles may be that he lacks needed visual skills. Examination by a qualified eyecare specialist can bring out this fact; the same skilled specialist can also train him, with the aid of special instruments, in quick focusing, hand and eye coordination and binocular (two-eye) coordination.

Young children don't form the only age group with special vision problems. Many nearsighted youngsters tend to get increasingly nearsighted until the age of 18 or 20; it's especially important that their vision frequently be checked by a specialist. And there's an eye imperfection so common in people over 40 that it's known as "old-sightedness" (presbyopia) — it's manifested by that familiar need to hold a newspaper or magazine at arm's length. This is one reason why experts recommend an annual eye checkup for those who have passed their fortieth birthday.

Helpful Defects

On the other hand, some eye "defects" actually add to our pleasure! When an image has registered, the vision of it persists from 1-50 to 1-25 of a second. This is why our eyes are pleasantly fooled by "motion pictures" — actually a series of stills flashed at intervals of 1-40 of a second.

And if anyone ever tells you that you have a blind spot, don't worry — every eye has one, at the point where the optic nerve leaves the eyeball. But if you learn as much as you can about your eyes, and protect your vision by frequent eye examinations, you can never be accused of having a blind spot about your most important sense.

Two British Colonels Here For Briefings

Two members of the British Army Staff in Washington, Col. Albert N. Griffiths and Col. J. H. Marriott, arrived at Fort Benning Wednesday for a four day visit.

The visitors were met by Lt. Col. John E. Dent, British liaison officer on the post.

Col. Griffiths and Col. Marriott visited the chief of staff of The Infantry Center, Col. Samuel W. Koster, Thursday before beginning a series of briefings and observation tours of activities of special interest to them.

The British officers were briefed on airborne training and toured training facilities of the Airborne Air-Mobility Department.

Today both visitors will be briefed at the U.S. Combat Development Infantry Agency and attend a demolition field problem staged by The Infantry School's Ranger Department.

Col. Griffiths and Col. Marriott are scheduled to depart the post tomorrow at 9 a.m.

History of Communism

Stalin Gains Power During '20's

(Sixth in a series of 20 articles entitled The History of Communism., by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.)

In "Stalin: A Political Biography," author I. Deutscher writes, "Few important developments in history are so inconspicuous and seems so inconsequential to their contemporaries as did the amazing accumulation of power in the hands of Stalin, which took place while Lenin was still alive."

Stalin was: (1) Commissar of Nationalities, making him an all-powerful intermediary between the central government and the 65 million people who comprised the non-Russian element of the Soviet Republic; (2) Commissar of the Workers' and Peasants' Inspectorate, with authority to "act as the stern and enlightened auditor" of the entire governmental machine (he was in effect the head of a massive "super Inspector General" team); and (3) General Secretary of the Central Committee.

The latter post became almost unbelievably powerful and, when combined with Stalin's two commissariats and his position on the Politbureau, provided the thrust to gain Trotsky's ouster in 1926 and deportation in 1927.

In fact, by the end of 1926, there was on the Politbureau not one Party member who opposed the leadership of Joseph Stalin.

In 1928, crisis again struck (crises were the fellow travelers of the Red regime for its first decade, but most of them were not to enduring importance) when an agrarian reform institute several years earlier resulted in urban famine.

When the Communists' failure to permit a promised democracy prompted a panic in 1921, the Reds yielded to the extent of permitting private ownership of small farms — although these were heavily taxes in kind and in money.

After taxes, the farms had so little left over for their own sustenance, quotas for the cities went unmet. Thus, the urban panic reached its zenith in 1928.

Stalin's answer was collectivization of farms (note here again the subordination of the people to the program), an extremely unpopular answer to all but the poorest of farmers. His will, however, prevailed — with the aid of rifles and machine guns. Even so, collectivization soon feel over its own feet.

In order to succeed, the collectivized farms required mechanization and there were pitifully few tractors available. A quarter of a million tractors were needed and in the whole of Russia there were only 7,000.

Mass production of oil was a necessity, as were power transmission lines, coal, steel and — most of all — technical training. In short, the Russians needed an industrial revolution.

Stalin's solution, again supported by weapons, was the nation's first Five - Year Plan. Russia produced, in 1928, three and one-half million tons of pig iron.

The Five-Year Plan called for 10 million tons by 1933 . . . a goal it had not yet reached by 1941. Goals were too high, but Russia was fast gaining an economy of both industry and agriculture (hammer and sickle).

Defense Will Train More Supply Men

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department is expanding its joint training program for military and civilian personnel working in logistics management functions.

The new program is expected to meet the combined needs of the military departments and the Defense Supply Agency.

Plans now include converting Army inventory management courses at Fort Lee, Va., to become joint course for interservice use.

Also under consideration is the establishment of joint courses in production management and maintenance at the Air Force School of Systems and Logistics, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

The program calls for instituting a joint course in weapons system program management, which will help develop the skills required to reduce the time and cost of acquiring complex weapons systems.

Defense officials said this increased emphasis on joint training follows the success achieved in the joint procurement training program inaugurated in 1962.

The new program is outlined in DOD directive 5010.8, issued by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

First Sgt. Harry V. Balsar, a veteran of combat in World War II and Korea, is first sergeant of Company A of the 11th Air Assault Division's 187th Airborne Infantry. He recently assumed the post after returning from an assignment in Hawaii.

A master parachutist, Sgt. Balsar first pinned on the wings of an Army paratrooper in 1942, becoming a member of the separate 551st Parachute Infantry Battalion.

He later joined the 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment attached to the 82nd Airborne Division, and served with the unit throughout World War II in the European Theater of Operations. Sgt. Balsar served in Korea with the 2nd Division's Headquarters.

Included in the sergeant's lengthy airborne service is eight years with the Airborne School here where he served from 1948 until 1952, and from 1954 until 1960.

Sgt. Balsar's last assignment before he joined the 11th was with the 2nd Battalion of the 35th Infantry at Schofield Barracks where he served as first sergeant of Company B.

'Mr. Mohawk' Heads Up Unit

In aviation circles Maj. Clifford E. Johnson Jr. commanding officer of Company C, 226th Aerial Surveillance and Attack Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group, is called "Mr. Mohawk."

"Mr. Mohawk" has logged over 900 hours on this aircraft since January, 1960. Since that time he has played a major role in formulating plans for operation of the Mohawk. In February, 1961 he was credited with setting up the first Transistor Course in advanced training for fixed-wing aviators.

In July, 1962, while assigned to the Tactics Branch, Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., he set up the first Mohawk Gunnery School. Another first for Maj. Johnson was the crossing of the Atlantic through the Azores in an L-23 in August, 1957.

He entered the Army in July, 1943 as an Air Cadet and received his wings in September, 1944. During World War II he served with the 12th Air Force as a C-47 and P-50 pilot in the European Theater.

During the Korean Conflict he was with the 25th Division Artillery where he flew L-19 aircraft as an aerial observer. "Mr. Mohawk" is a qualified pilot in the following aircraft: L-19, L-20, OV-1, P-50, P-40, C-47, T-28 and AD-6.

A Little Dirt Is Necessary For Spacemen

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Craft workers who will help assemble the first unmanned spacecraft the United States plans to send to Mars in 1965 must be clean, but not too clean.

The measure is one of many being planned to avoid transporting microbes of any kind to the planet.

On the clean side, minor ailments, like dandruff, athletes foot or the common cold, will disqualify a craft worker.

However, men assembling the craft will not be allowed to bathe within a few hours before they report to work in the morning.

Dr. L. B. Hall, special planetary quarantine officer of National Aeronautics and Space Agency announced these precautions at the annual meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States.

Another care will be final heat sterilization of the entire craft before takeoff.

A Mayo Clinic source asserts that dissemination of organisms from the human body is five times as great just after one take a shower bath than it is a few hours later.

One theory is that the use of soap may break down the body oils that help prevent dissemination of bodily organisms.

Florida State University Wants Military Students

The School of Business at Florida State University has an educational program that has proved to be attractive to retiring military personnel and Bootstrap students interested in undergraduate and graduate study.

Because military men deal with the management of personnel and allocation of resources, they prove to be well suited to studies in business administration. Past military students have done well at FSU's School of Business, according to Dean Charles A. Rovetta.

The undergraduate school offers programs in management, marketing, accounting, finance, insurance, hotel and restaurant administration, and business education. The graduate school offers courses that lead to the Master of Business Administration and the Master of Accountancy degrees.

FSU is familiar with the educational needs of military personnel. The school has bootstrap programs at several Army and Air Force bases and has a program in the Management of Research and Development Installations leading to the Master of Business Administration degree which is conducted at the Eglin Air Force Base.

Know Your Allies

He Led Japanese Band

CAPT. HARA

Have you ever been to a concert and watched the conductor coordinate all the musical instruments? Did you ever wonder what would happen if there was no one to direct?

If you have, you can get a ready answer from Capt. Yutaka Hara, at student in The Infantry School's Career Course No. 1.

Capt. Hara, an Allied officer from Japan, says his most interesting experience as an Army officer was when he was band leader with his country's 9th Infantry Regiment. The captain doesn't know a thing about music.

"My only instructions to band members," the personable captain said, "was 'don't watch me.' "

"Luckily," he added, "I had a good trumpeter and drummer, and somehow things came out alright."

He was graduated from Japan's Officer Candidate School in Nov. 1952, and was assigned to the 9th Infantry Regiment as a platoon leader where he acquired his band leading job.

After his tour with the 9th he was reassigned to the 7th Recruit Training Unit as an instructor where he made first lieutenant in August, 1954.

Following that he was assigned to the Fuyi School as an instructor again and went to the rank of Captain. In 1959 he went to the Adjutant General Department of the Fuji School as AG officer.

Before coming to The Infantry School in late August this year, Capt Hara attended the Intelligence School in his country under a visiting officer's program.

He has also attended the basic and associate officer courses at Japan's Fuji School.

Capt. Hara finds all of his classes in his career course very interesting. His graduation is scheduled for May 20, 1964.

On his return to his country the captain hopes to move to the research section of the Fuji School. He will return to his wife and two children.

Nike Scores Another 'Hit' In Test Shot

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Army has made another successful interception of a target vehicle launched on a 5,000-mile trajectory at intercontinental ballistic missile speed in the continuing test program to further development of its Nike X anti-missile missile system, the Department of Defense announced recently.

The interceptor missile, a three stage Nike Zeus, was fired and controlled from the Army test installation on Kwajalein Island in the mid-Pacific.

Fired west over the Pacific Missile Range, the target vehicle was boosted by a Titan ICBM launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., in a training exercise carried out the Strategic Air Command.

The Army said precise tracking equipment proved the Zeus missile got within killing distance of its target. Neither missile carried a live warhead.

Components, concepts and techniques evaluated and proven in the test engagements are being applied to the Nike X system development, an advanced anti-missile missile system which is designed to provide greatly improved capability.

The Nike Zeus missile will be used in the Nike X system, as will other equipment developed in the earlier program. A high acceleration Sprint missile and a multi-function array radar (MAR) are also being developed for the Nike X system.

Special Footgear Will Be Needed In Space Cabin

SAN DIEGO (AFPS) — As space cabins increase in size, there will be a need for astronauts to walk. But, how, if their feet will not stay on the floor?

Engineer John F. Heard believes he has solved the problem of walking in a weightless state.

He has developed shoes that will allow astronauts to walk in space as normally as they would on earth.

The shoe soles are covered with nylon fabric consisting of thousands of tiny, closely spaced hooks. The hooks engage the spacecraft floor carpeted with a nylon pile "rug."

DOD Moves to Improve Missile Facilities Control

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Steps have been taken by the Defense Department to improve management of ballistic missile and test range facilities involving the Army, Navy and Air Force.

In a number of changes, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has established a central authority within the Air Force to coordinate planning of ICBM and space vehicle tracking facilities.

This single manager concept involves the following facilities: Atlantic Missile Range, with headquarters at Patrick AFB, Fla.; ICBM and space activities at Point Arguello and Vandenberg AFB, Calif.; and the Air Force Satellite Control Facility, Sunnyvale, Calif.

Other principal changes made by Secretary McNamara include:

Transfer of the Naval Missile Facility at Point Arguello to the Air Force.

Clarification of the responsibilities within DOD for on-orbit control of satellites by specifically assigning this function to the Air Force, consistent with its current responsibilities for all DOD space developments. Control of the Navy navigational satellites and military communications satellite programs will remain with the Navy and Army, respectively.

Arrangements which will lead to the transfer from the Navy to the Army of the anti-missile test support facilities at Kwajalein and the transfer from the Navy to the Air Force of the space tracking stations in the Pacific.

"The new arrangements will place the burden of range support more nearly upon the agency receiving the support," Defense officials said.

According to the Defense Department, the new arrangements will also permit a greater application of Navy skills and experience to the conversion and operation of instrumentation ships.

It will also relieve the Navy of the heavy burden of range support to Air Force operations.

Some changes in headquarters strengths are anticipated, phased over a period of a year or more as continuing efforts are turned over to Air Force cognizance.

DOD said these changes are expected to have little effect on the nature and level of field operations, which are performed under contract.

3 Staff College Officials Brief Post Delegation

A three officer instructor team from the Command and General Staff College (C&GSC) at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas gave two three-hour presentations on the Air Assault Concept here last week. The team was headed by Lt. Col. Thomas V. Morgan who was accompanied by Maj. Jack V. Mackmull and Maj. Thorveld R. Torgensen all of the faculty at Fort Leavenworth.

The audiences consisted of some 129 officers assigned to the Test, Evaluation and Control (TEC) Group, 11th Air Assault Division, Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency and The Infantry School.

Red Cross Lays Wreath On Lt. Marcado's Grave

On Nov. 24, 1943, Lt. Marcado, a native of Santruce, Puerto Rico, and then a member of the U.S. Air Force, was killed in a plane crash near Del Rio, Texas.

At the time of the accident Lt. Marcado's brother, Army Lt. Col. Luis Fernando Marcado, was stationed here. Because of war conditions and the difficulty of getting transportation to Puerto Rico and with the consent of his family, Col. Marcado asked that his brother be buried on the post.

Mrs. Mario Marcado, the lieutenant's mother, contacted the Puerto Rican Chapter of the Red Cross requesting that flowers be placed on the grave of her son at her expense.

Each year since 1943, the Fort Benning Chapter of the Red Cross has received funds from the chapter in Puerto Rico to carry out Mrs. Marcado's request.

Even severe rainstorms in 1949 and 1954 did not stop the Red Cross from putting the flowers on the grave. Since 1945 the grave also has been decorated with chrysanthemums and gladioli on Memorial Day at the request of Mrs. Marcado.

World of Hobbies

Indian lore and Indian customs and dances have been the main outside interest of Eldridge Tompkins, a guard at the U.S. Naval Avionics Facility, Indianapolis, Ind., for the past three years.

Soon after he became a leader of a Boy Scout troop and Cub pack, he began to learn something about Indian lore.

Since then not only he, but his wife, Helen, and their two young sons, Pat and Mike, have participated in Indian Pow Wows.

Last summer, the Tompkins family participated in the Wa-Be-Ski-Wa Pow Wow at Monterey Park in Janesville, Wis. Performing with the Midwest Indian Dancers, the Tompkinses took part in authentic chanting and dancing dressed in Indian costumes that they had made themselves.

Tompkins points out that the Boys Scout movement has always promoted an interest in the American Indian and his customs. All Scouts are given the opportunity of participating in Indian activities, he said.

At first, Tompkins remarked, the Indians were somewhat suspicious of people who tried to learn their ways, but when they found out that there was a sincere desire for understanding, they began to cooperate.

The Indians are now willing to teach members of organizations which show real interest in their history and customs.

That Tompkins himself rates high with Indians was recently indicated when he was made a chief of the Sioux Tribe. (AFPS)

Free Auto Tags Again Available To Disabled Vets

ATLANTA — Georgia veterans who lost limbs, use of limbs, or eyesight as a result of wartime service, again will receive free 1964 Georgia automobile tags, Pete Wheeler, director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, said today.

World War I, World War II and Korean War veterans who suffered these specific disabilities as a result of wartime service, are annually granted special license tags, prefixed with "HV."

The federal government has granted each of these veterans $1,600 toward the purchase of specially built automobiles.

Tag Application forms will be mailed to veterans who received this "HV" tag last year.

The Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist any veteran in applying for the tag, or any other state or federal benefit, Wheeler said.

Man, What a Headache!

Maybe It's a Pain in the Neck

Just what is a headache, anyway? Most people don't really know what "goes on upstairs" to produce that pain.

Oddly, though brain-teasing problems are often called "headaches," brain tissue never hurts; it's insensitive to pain. Headaches result, according to the most commonly accepted theory, from swelling, pressure on or pulling of the blood vessels that feed the brain cells. Nerve impulses from many different parts of the body, including the face, scalp and neck, can reach the brain's blood vessels to cause these reactions.

Indeed, one of the commonest types of headaches is almost literally a pain in the neck! In response to emotional stresses, the victim tenses his neck and shoulder muscles — much as a cat arches it back or a dog stiffens its tail when it senses a threat.

If the neck muscles are kept contracted for too long, pain develops and radiates upward to the scalp and skull — to produce the dull, "viselike" ache of the well-named "tension headache."

Emotions also play an important role in the all-too-common migraine or "sick" headache. Doctors know that the tendency to develop these throbbing, usually one-sided headaches is inherited; they also speak of a "migraine personality" that often accompanies the ailment. The migraine sufferer is frequently brighter and better-educated than average, with more than usual drive. But he tends also to be a perfectionist and a worrier who would rather do bothersome chores himself than delegate them to someone else who might not perform them as well.

The common cold often adds the insult of a headache to the injury of its other symptoms; many other infectious diseases, ranging in seriousness from mumps to meningitis, may number headaches among their symptoms.

Kidney and liver disorders can bring on headaches. According to information supplied by the Schering Corporation, hypertension (high blood pressure) sometimes produces a type of headache that occurs at the back of the head, is worse during the morning and goes away during the day.

Authorities have counted more than 200 possible causes of headache!

But the number of headache cures devised through the centuries would probably number many times 200. The ancient Greeks thought a wreath of violets would soothe an achy head; an old Roman "preventive" for headaches was to float a rose petal or two in the wine cup!

The poppy was recommended as a headache cure by some old-time herbalists because its flower was thought to resemble the human head. Nutmeg, which when cut open looks like the human brain, was endorsed by other sages.

Modern headache remedies are less imaginative, but much more effective. For tension headaches, some form of aspirin is often best. If a headache is only one symptom of a cold, the victim's best bet may be a medicine that combines aspirin with several ingredients that relieve his other symptoms.

A prompt consultation with the doctor is advisable for many types of headaches. Sudden severe headaches appearing out of the blue: headaches associated with fever, convulsions, mental confusion or local pain in specific organs like the eye or ear; recurring headaches; new headaches in older people; headaches following a head blow.

The doctor can also help to reassure the patient that he is not suffering from a dread disease — brain tumors, widely feared, actually cause a minute percentage of headaches — and to suggest changes in his daily routine which could make tensions, and headaches, less frequent.

But even with the greatest caution and care, few people can avoid headaches completely — and perhaps it's a good thing.

The headache, doctors say, it often nature's way of warning us to slow down and take things easier — an effective danger signal which usually does the body no real harm. Headaches, then, are part of the hazards of normal life, with the accent on "normal." Over the course of years, psychiatrists have discovered a curious fact: patients in mental hospitals are remarkably free of headaches of any kind!

In short, just go on using your head — even if it sometimes hurts to do so.

2 Sky Soldiers Get Senior Rate As Army Flyers

CWO James L. Winner, from Company B, and CWO Donald D. Eukel, from Company A, two seasoned Army pilots from the 228th Assault Support Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group, received their Senior Aviator Wings Saturday from Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver, 228th commanding officer.

Both pilots are qualified in rotory wing aircraft. Qualifications for the senior award requires at least seven years of Army flying from time of graduation. The pilot also must have more than 1,500 flight hours to his credit before he is considered for the badge.

10th Artillery Sgt. Went on 'Big Lift'

The recently concluded "Operation Big Lift" of the 2nd Armored Division involved one man from the 197th Infantry Brigade's 10th Artillery.

Sgt. Richard J. Guerrero, Battery D, 10th Artillery departed Fort Benning for Fort Hood, Tex. on temporary duty prior to the divison's four-week maneuver. After being airlifted to Germany, Sgt. Guerrero was a radio teletype team chief.

After three weeks in Germany, the sergeant returned to Fort Hood and then came back to his present unit.

X-RAY FILM

Enough sheets of X-ray film to stretch from New York City to Sweden were purchased during the past fiscal year by the Defense Medical Supply Center, Brooklyn, N. Y. The purchases amounted to 19,028,975 sheets. The Center is a field activity of the Defense Supply Agency.

Chances Almost Nil

Formal Resume Cannot Assure You Employment

It may come as a shock, but if you're leaving the service and hope to get a job by sending a mailed resume to a possible employer, your chances of getting the job by this method are only slightly better than "nil".

In an article written by Lt. Col. Kent J. Collings, results of surveys show that only five per cent of military retirees report success in finding jobs by mailed resume. Col. Collings is presently with the J-3 section of the U. S. Taiwan Defense Command. His article appears in the fall edition of The Retired Officer magazine.

"Oddly enough, the resume is so inbred into an officer's thinking that he still thinks it is good even when it doesn't really work," Col. Collings states.

He advises those who use a resume to apply for employment to bring out "marketable skills" in the wording such as engineer, physicist or electronic technician. Such key words however, as administrator, staff specialist, intelligence expert, logistician, etc., while highly respected in the military, do not excite the potential employer even mildly."

He feels that the only useful purpose of the mailed resume is to get the interview, not the job. He goes a step further, however, and states that the resume is not generally successful even in getting the interview.

How To Look

In conclusion, Col. Collings urges retirees to read the November - December issue of The Retired Officer (Published by the Retired Officers Association, 1625 Eye St., N.W., Washington, D.C.), in which he has published an article "How Should A Retiree Look for a Job?" In it he attempts to answer the question of finding a position after military retirement and also gives a list of firms which seem to be hiring executive officers.

Green Hat on President's Grave Is Tribute From Special Forces

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A green hat laying on the grave of slain President John F. Kennedy puzzles many Americans who visit the grave site in Arlington National Cemetery here.

"Where does the hat come from? Who put it there?" They ask softly.

The green hat is a beret, the kind worn by the Army's special forces. It was placed on the Commander-in-Chief's grave by Sgt. Maj. Francis Ruddy of the 7th Special Forces Group, Fort Bragg, N.C.

Sgt. Ruddy, whose unit formed a special honor guard at the request of the Kennedy family in the funeral cortege through the streets of Washington Nov. 25, took off his beret after the funeral and placed it beside the "Eternal Flame" that burns over the grave.

It was the special forces way of saluting the fallen leader.

Meanwhile, cemetery officials have counted an average of more than 3,000 visitors per hour during cemetery visiting hours since the President's burial.

Many of the Americans who come to pay respects are service men and women from stations all over the East Coast.

On Thanksgiving Day, when the number of visitors averaged 4,500 per hour, cemetery officials said Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard men and women streamed solemnly past the grave all day "in a touching tribute."

At the cemetery closing hour, Thanksgiving Day and the following weekend, civilians in the long lines urged uniformed people to go to the front of the line "because they knew many of the military personnel had to get back to duty stations," one observer said.

An Honor Guard unit from nearby Fort Myer, Va., stands watch over the President's grave day and night. They'll continue their silent vigil as long as Americans flock to the grave site which, from all indications may be for some time to come.

Army Requests 16,000 New Men

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service System to provide 16,000 men during January, 1964, for assignment to the Army.

The January call, in accordance with established policies, has been computed by the Army to cover losses, thereby maintaining the approved active Army strength.

Professional Journal 'Re-Visits' Normandy

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan., — Featured in the December issue of Military Review, the Army's senior professional journal, published by the Command and General Staff College, are: "Keeping Limited War Limited," "Normandy Revisited" and "Laos: Case Study in Civic Action."

Army Maj. Alton R. Wheelock states in "Keeping Limited War Limited" that we know more about weapons effect than we do about keeping war limited. The author says that three principles — the limited objective, the communication of intent, and political primacy — must be observed in order to keep war limited.

Maj. Wheelock is presently assigned as chief of the Commodity Section in the Program Branch, Research and Development Directorate, Army Materiel Command. The major, a Signal Corps officer, holds an MBA degree from Harvard Business School.

In "Normandy Revisited" Maj. Gen. (Ret.) H. Essame, British Army, concludes that Eisenhower's decisions to use airborne units and to proceed with the landing despite the equivocal weather reports won the battle of Normandy before the first soldier set foot in France.

Gen. Essame served as an Infantry brigadier in the British Second Army during the Normandy campaign. He is now a lecturer in military studies under the auspices of the Universities of Oxford, Exeter and Southampton. He is also a member of the Institute of Strategic Studies in Great Britain.

In "Laos: Case Study in Civic Action, The Royal Lao Program" Brig. Gen. Oudone Sananikone of the Royal Lao Army gives the reasons for the program's limited success. Gen. Sananikone, commissioner General of Civic Action of the Royal Lao Government from 1957 to 1959, states that the program's failure to meet expectations was due to a lack of trained personnel and interdepartmental interference and bickering.

Complementing Gen. Sananikone's article is "Laos: Case Study in Civic Action, The Military Program" by Maj. Charles W. Stockell, USA. Maj. Stockell, a 1962-63 regular course student at the CGSC, was the senior psychological warfare officer on the staff of MAAG-Laos during 1961-62.

Maj. Stockell begins with the civic action program in 1959 until its demise with the coup in 1960. In July 1961 another civic action program, modeled after its counterpart in South Vietnam, was begun under army control. This program also ended in failure due to the Laotian officers being unable to grasp what U.S. instructors were presenting.

The author points out the lessons we learned from these failures and says that they are valuable subjects for future study.

"In Utilited Professionalism' Maj. Walter F. Ulmer Jr., USA, a 1963 graduate of the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College regular course, contends that the Army must adopt controlled specialization for its officers.

Maj. Ulmer states that a true skill is required in some broad functional areas of operation.

For Your Information

LIGHTWEIGHT AND DEADLY . . . Two of Weapons Department's assistant instructors fire the M-60 machine gun during a recent Infantry School demonstration. The M-60 shoots 7.62-mm NATO ammunition and is a gas operated automatic weapon. It can place 200 rounds per minute of effective fire on a target up to 1,100 yards away. Since the maximum range is 3,200 yards, the effective range is determined by the gunner's ability to see and adjust on his target.

Christmas Color Photo

"T'was the night before Christmas and all through the house, not a creature was stirring"—except the children. In this case (L to R), it is Cherie, Sam and Saundra Rothrock, the children of Capt. and Mrs. Charles B. Rothrock. Cherie, who's four and knows all about these things, is explaining the pictures which illustrate the famous story to 10-month-old Sam and Saundra who's two and a half. Their dad is commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company of The Infantry Center Troop Command. (Color Photo by SSgt. Betty Farmer)

Silver Star Among Decorations Presented at Awards Ceremony

Two of the nation's highest decorations for gallantry in action and three for meritorious service were bestowed upon four U. S. Army Infantry Center officers and one enlisted man during an awards ceremony on Chapel Field Tuesday.

Receiving the Army's fourth highest decoration for valor, the Silver Star, was Capt. John W. Ault for gallantry in action while engaged in military operations against the Communist Viet Cong.

Capt. Ault was serving as an adviser to a Vietnamese airborne battalion when his unit came under fierce attack during an attempt to evacuate wounded Vietnamese soldiers by helicopter.

Waving the helicopter off, Capt. Ault completely disregarded his personal safety to cross an area under intense small arms fire to reach a radio to call for added support, reports said.

"Despite a wound from a hand grenade, he remained with his . . . (men) to advise and encourage them," the citation read in part.

Col. Maurice C. Holden, The Infantry School's coordinator of Instruction, received the first Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit for meritorious conduct in performance of outstanding services as commander of the 1st Battle Group, 38th Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division, from July, 1962, to May, 1963. The unit was the first one to be selected to participate in the Army's ROTAPLAN (a rotating overseas system).

Col. Ralph L. Dalton, a member of the Test, Evaluation and Control (TEC) Group was awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in performing outstanding services while chief of staff of Group G, U.S. Army Tactical Mobility Requirements Board, Fort Bragg, N. C., and later as chief of staff of the U. S. Army Concept Team in Vietnam from May, 1962, to March, 1963.

SFC Roy P. Barefoot, assigned to Company E, Infantry School Battalion, received the Soldier's Medal for heroism at Fort Benning May 7. While serving as a safety noncommissioned officer, a student dropped a live hand grenade into the rear of the grenade - throwing bay. Barefoot dived for the grenade, snatched it from the ground and, while lying on his side, hurled it over a concrete wall into the impact area, according to reports. The grenade had barely cleared the wall when it detonated, they added.

"Through his courage and spontaneous action, he averted injury and possible loss of life to personnel in the area," the citation read.

Col. Delbert L. Bristol, commander of the 10th Air Transport Brigade, 11th Air Assault Division, will receive the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service from March, 1962, to March 4, 1963, while serving as chief of the Army Aviation Division, U. S. Army Section, Military Assistance Advisory Group, Vietnam.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, was reviewing officer for the ceremonies.

His staff included Col. H. E. Strange, deputy chief, Test, Evaluation and Control Group; Col. S. W. Koster, Infantry Center chief of staff; Col. W. M. Preston, Infantry Center comptroller, and Col. J. L. Gueymard, Infantry School secretary.

Gen. Rich Addresses Local AFMA Chapter

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, was guest speaker Tuesday night at a Christmas banquet staged by the Armed Forces Management Association.

The banquet, conducted in the ball room of the Ralston Hotel in Columbus, was attended by 85 members and guests of the association.

Speaking on "Management at Fort Benning," Gen. Rich said, "Our primary reason for existence is The Infantry School, but we also have the 2nd Infantry Division, 11th Air Assault Division, Marksmanship Training Unit, Infantry Board, Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, Infantry Human Research Unit, as well as support units of the Infantry Center Troop Command.

"The training program of The Infantry School must produce the best Infantry leaders possible," he said.

"In spite of the limited resources we have, I want to make the 'Follow Me' motto the highest standard in the world," Gen. Rich said.

"I think I have the best job in the Army," he concluded.

Gen. Rich was presented a life honorary membership in Chapter 13, the Fort Benning chapter of the Association. Lt. Col. William R. Nettles Jr., chapter president, made the presentation.

Col. Stuart M. Mitchell, post dental surgeon, was presented a scroll in recognition of outstanding service to the chapter.

The scroll, presented by Gen. Rich, cited Col. Mitchell for his work since October, 1958, in varied capacities as president, member of the executive council and chairman of committees, Col. Mitchell is scheduled to retire early in 1964.

Scrolls for outstanding service during fiscal year 1963 were presented to Thomas Bass, a council member, and Clarence Hammond, chairman of the membership committee. They were cited for untiring promotion of projects of the chapter and enlistment of new members.

LIVE ANIMALS . . . Live animals borrowed from nearby farms add a realistic note to a Nativity scene on post. The creche, built by the Community Relations Committee of the Communications-Electronics Department of The Infantry School, is on display outside Bldg. 1828, near the Commissary, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. every day. It will be dismantled Dec. 28.

HumRRO Chief Visits Benning Infantry Agency

Dr. Meredith P. Crawford, director of the Human Resources Research Office, Alexandria, Va., visited Fort Benning Tuesday through Thursday.

On Wednesday morning Dr. Crawford called on Maj. Gen. C.W.G. Rich, commanding general of The Infantry Center, received a briefing at Infantry Center headquarters and then visited Dr. Harold S. Tute, Infantry School educational adviser.

Late Wednesday morning he received an orientation from the Human Resources Research Infantry Agency (HUMRO) after which he was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Gen. Rich at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Yesterday Dr. Crawford was guest of honor at a luncheon given by HUMRO.

Band Auxiliary Names Chaplain Decker President

The Infantry Center chaplain has been elected president of the recently organized Baker High School Band Auxiliary.

Elected to serve with Chaplain Decker was Lt. Col. George L. Freeman, vice president for band activities.

Approximately 70 per cent of the Baker student body is comprised of military dependents and an additional 20 per cent dependents of civilian employees of the post.

Official Writ Cannot Alleviate Army's Grief

This Sunday, at sundown, the official period of mourning for our late President and commander-in-chief will end. But bereavement and grief are not things which can be bracketed by designated periods or alleviated by official decree.

The loss the world has felt so keenly will continue to inspire eulogies, monuments and other expressions of honor and respect intended to immortalize the name, deeds and words of a man who was so much to so many people.

President John F. Kennedy was more than just another commander-in-chief to the U. S. Army. To quote an editorial from the Kansas City Star, "The 'New Look' Army Is a Monument to John F. Kennedy." The editorial cites the fact that the late President "took hold of a ground service relegated to an inferior position in the air age and gave it a new sense of destiny." He increased the size of the Army from 11 to 16 combat divisions and gave impetus to modernization of its combat gear.

Perhaps the most personal and direct tribute the President paid to each and every soldier in the U. S. Army today was contained in a speech he made for the opening of the 9th Annual Meeting of the Association of the United States Army on October 21, 1963, a month and a day prior to his assassination.

If, indeed, today's Army is a monument to President Kennedy, then that message should be carved deeply in the mind of every soldier. To this end, the following quotation will henceforth appear on the editorial page of each future issue of the BAYONET:

"We must continue to meet responsibilities; we must continue to have a strong country and a strong alliance and a strong Free World; and to do that we need a strong Army which is the point of the spear."

We regard those words as both a challenge and a creed of significance to every man or woman who wears the Army Green. We would advocate the reproduction of this quotation in every publication printed under the direction of the Department of the Army; we would like to see it printed by the Government Printing Office and distributed for display in every headquarters, every unit, every staff section and every office, to serve as a constant reminder of the Army's importance to the Free World, as it was viewed by John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Miracle of Christmas

By Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker
Post Chaplain

The Christmas season is enchanting and exciting for at its center is the incarnation of God's Son in human flesh. At Christmas a spirit of goodwill, kindliness and benevolence makes the world a place of understanding and loveliness. The miracle of Christmas is what God has to do with it. God sent his Son to you and me. In Jesus Christ we find this miracle. He gives strength, light, love and hope to all who seek Him.

A Christless Christmas is an ironic and mocking kind of celebration. A Christ-centered Christmas is a celebration where the miracle of it all, the birth of Jesus, fills the hearts of people with God's love.

At Fort Benning we will do our best to experience again the miracle of Christmas in our lives as we adore Christ our King. Your Chaplains have planned many wonderful religious services which can help you to experience this Miracle of God.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

(See complete list of Christmas Chapel Services on Page 33.)

'Best Wishes' Extended By Chief of Chaplains

Advent and Christmas herald the appearance of a Saviour who is Christ the Lord. This is truly the season of "Peace on earth to men of good will."

It is my privilege, as the Chief of the United States Army Chaplains, to convey my personal greetings and best wishes for a blessed Christmas to all the members of the United States Army, military and civilian and their families.

Our vital concern at this time of year is for the family. We are also concerned that we do not miss the reality of Christmas in the materialistic overtones of our family, chapel and community celebrations.

The surest and best way of guaranteeing the validity of our Christmas experience is to re-establish in our own hearts the simplicity of faith as embodied in the Christ Child experience. For, unless we become as little children in our faith and our love, we shall in no wise share the spiritual renascence of this Holy Season.

May God grant each of you his richest Christmas blessing.

CHARLES E. BROWN JR.
Chaplain (Maj. Gen.)
Chief of Chaplains

The Bells Will Ring This Christmas Day

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men.

So wrote Henry Wadsworth Longfellow about an "old familiar" Christmas Day. It was the kind of day, no doubt, when the family got together for a special feast and the warmth and fellowship around the family hearth.

Many members of the Armed Forces will again miss the traditional family fellowship this Christmas. Yet the very reason for men being away from their families is to protect their homes, their relatives and their nation from those who do not actually believe in "peace on earth, good-will to men."

The knowledge of this fact can contribute something to the special enjoyment of the families who will be together during Christmas, 1963.

So can the fellowship of comrades-in-arms. So can the special Christmas dinners and observations being prepared for America's fighting men from the Republic of Vietnam to the Berlin Wall.

This 1963 Christmas season brings to the forefront the great truth that an American is free to worship the God of his Faith, be it from a fortress or from his home. (AFPS)

From the Bible

Story of 1st Christmas

And there were in the same country, shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of heavenly host praising God and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child. And all they that heard it wondered at these things which were told them by the shepherds. But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart. (LUKE 2:8-19)

The Judge Says . . .

In Merrie Old England, when the business of insuring another's life was in its infancy, the usual crowd at the Pubs started an entertaining pastime of speculating on the longevity of certain people in the public light.

When the newspapers announced that a public figure was in bad health, or had suffered an accident, wagers would be placed as to how long he would live. This practice grew in popularity. Some of these sportsmen would bet heavily, and to insure their position would occasionally engage the services of the underworld to encourage the demise of the subject at the specified date.

Naturally, the untimely passing of noted people didn't go without concern, and the courts and Parliament announced that these practices were against public policy. This policy has carried down to the present day in life insurance, and before a policy can be valid today, the person taking out the insurance must have an insurable interest in the life of the insured person.

The insurable interest must be present at the time a life insurance contract is entered into, regardless of whether it exists later or not. For example, if a husband and wife mutually insure each other's life, a subsequent estrangement and divorce will not alter the insurance. The death of one spouse will still entitle the beneficiary to the proceeds. Insurance on property, on the other hand, requires that the interest exist at the time of the loss, rather than at the time of making the contract.

Also, life insurance is upon the person's life, and is not a payment for loss of a tangible thing; whereas property insurance pays for the thing lost, as a contract of indemnity. A human life is without pecuniary limitation, whereas property insurance will reimburse only its actual value at time of loss.

If you have any problems concerning the law of insurance, see your Soldiers Advocate or Legal Assistance Officer.

Infantry Board Ladies Club Holds Luncheon

Ladies of the Army Infantry Board met for their monthly luncheon recently at the supper club of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

A fall motif consisting of beautiful arrangements of autumn leaves, chrysanthemums and fruit placed in brass containers was used to decorate the tables.

This was the final luncheon for Mrs. Durwood D. Gosney who will soon be departing the post.

The decorations and luncheon were planned by Mrs. Monroe D. King, Mrs. R. M. Regnier and Mrs. Charles Wahle.

New 'Tree Box' Method to Aid Assault Concept

The 11th Air Assault Division is always looking for newer and better ways to travel lighter, faster and better, in the words of Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general. Members of the 127th Engineer Battalion have already submitted several ideas, the newest idea is "Operation Tree-Box."

Capt. Leon A. Zolnowski, Company A commander has devised a method to build a small box-like platform on top of the tallest tree in an inaccessable area. This platform inables a hovering UH-1B IROQUOIS helicopter to drop a ladder to men in the tree who can then be flown to safety.

The method has been tested by the 127th Beavers and it has worked every time. Final approval for Operation Tree-Box to be adopted as a regular part of Sky Soldier training will come from higher headquarters. The men are conducting this training near the confidence course in the Harmony Church area.

German Theme Is Highlight

The home of Mrs. William J. Walker was transformed into a bit of Germany last week to the delight of the ladies of the Tactics Group of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department.

Mrs. Walker and Mrs. John Barner entertained at the monthly coffee by recreating a typically German "koffee klatch" with a yuletide theme.

The house was garnished with German Christmas decorations such as the Advent Wreath, the Nurnburg Angel and the Spray of Switches and gifts which are familar to German children.

The tree bore only handmade decorations and small candles instead of electric lights.

The table displayed German refreshments such as Stollen, Bundt cake, Erdberrie schnitten and pfeffernuse cookies. Warm Glugwein was served as drink.

Mrs. Walker read a passage explaining in detail the significance of each decoration and item of food. The religious and historical meaning behind each custom also was a source of interest.

Honored guests for the occasion were Mrs. Howard B. St. Clair and Mrs. Donald T. Kellett. A welcome was extended to a new member of the Tactics Group, Mrs. Donald R. Pastella.

BEARDLESS BURL

Burl Ives, long known for his beard, will appear clean shaven in Warner Brothers' "Ensign Pulver." It's because of Navy Regulations. Ives portrays the captain in this sequel to "Mr. Roberts," one of the strongest characters he's put on the screen.

Bethlehem Story Retold By Young Verse Writer

(Editor's note: Although it is not the Bayonet's policy to print poems, an exception is being made due to the message, thought and simplicity of the words used by the 12-year-old author, Rebecca Northrop.)

CHRIST IS BORN

IT WAS IN THE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM, WHERE THE DEAR SAVIOR WAS BORN FOR MEN;

THE BLESSED MARY GAVE BIRTH TO HIM, THE ONLY BABY WHO COULD SAVE US FROM SIN;

JOSEPH, THE FATHER, STOOD CLOSE BY, AND HELD THE BABY WHEN IT CRIED;

THAT SAME YEAR, WISE MEN FROM AFAR, CAME TO SEE THE BABY, GUIDED BY A STAR;

THEY BROUGHT THE BABY GIFTS OF FRANKINCENSE, MYRRH AND GOLD, AND THIS STORY, TO JOSEPH WAS TOLD:

WE ARE SHEPHERDS FROM THE FIELD WHO SAW THE LIGHT WHICH HEAVEN DID YIELD, HOSTS OF ANGELS FROM ON HIGH JOINED IN CHORUS AS WE CAME NIGH,

PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD WILL TOWARDS MEN,

CHRIST IS BORN IN BETHLEHEM.

Officers' Wives Club Chatter

More Than 300 Hear Cantata

* * * * * * * * *

New Name Is Voted Unanimously

BY MARGE LENNON

More than 300 women turned out for the Officers' Wives Club of Fort Benning's annual Christmas luncheon recently and heard the choral group present its cantata of music, "The Song of Christmas."

At a short business meeting prior to the luncheon a unanimous vote officially changed the name of "The Women's Club of Fort Benning" to "The Officers' Wives Club of Fort Benning."

In addition to the many continuous activities now offered to members, such as bowling, bridge, ceramics, dancing, exercising, Great Books and music lessons, several new classes are scheduled to begin in January.

Knitting

Among these will be the knitting activity. Mrs. Harry Ferguson Jr., will again teach the art of knitting to club members. For those who have always wanted to knit but never had an opportunity to learn, here's your chance. The classes will begin early in January with groups for beginners and advanced students. These are the last knitting lessons that will be offered this year. Mrs. Ferguson will accept registrations over the phone. Call her at 687-1321.

Gourmet

The Gourmet class is continuing to meet once a month at Salerno Mess. This cooking conscious group was so large that it had to be divided into three sections with over 30 women in each group. Taught by Mrs. Jonathan E. Adams Jr. (687-0411), the ladies have already sampled foods used for a brunch and cocktail party, and are now concentrating on foreign dishes. Each month the students take turns preparing dishes and then share their specialties with others. January will be Hawaiian Luau.

Hatmaking

Also among these is the hatmaking course taught by Mrs. Robert Brumback. These classes will be given in her home at 112 Zuckerman beginning on Tuesday (January 14) from 6-10 p.m. and on Thursday (January 16) at the same time. She will teach beginners how to cover frames; design, line and remodel old hats, and how to bring "dead flowers" back to life. It is not necessary for the student to know how to sew. She may choose the form and material she desires and these are sold at special discount. Since a limited number of students may be accepted, it is suggested that you contact Mrs. Brumback early. Call her at 545-7149.

Charm

Popular Ann Roberts has been teaching charm and the art of poise to Army wives and teenagers for years. She continues with new evening and daytime classes in January. Call Mrs. William Gray at 544-2909 to sign up for these self-improvement courses.

The Officers' Wives Club of Fort Benning is offering their cookbooks for sale as last minute Christmas gifts.

Arms Group Wives Hold Coffee At Woodyard Home

The ladies of the Associate Arms Group of the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department were hosted by Mrs. Jean Woodyard and Mrs. Randall Wood at the Woodyard home this week during their monthly coffee.

Approximately 25 guests, including special guests Mrs. I. J. Turon, Mrs. Sydney Sacerdote, Mrs. Samual Koster and women from the Headquarters Group, attended the event.

Mrs. Howard B. Clair and Mrs. Koster assisted in pouring.

The Woodyard home was decorated with Christmas ornaments and featured a hand-made candy house and "egg" filled with tiny people. Wentworth home 1-14

Turon, the school's music teacher, the children sang such favorites as "Frosty the Snowman" and "We Wish You A Merry Christmas." The pre-kindergarten school is sponsored by the Officers' Wives Club of Fort Benning.

New art classes for children and adults will begin this month. Mrs. Richard Knowles at 545-2408 will give you all details on these courses. The children's art instructor is Mrs. George Johnson and the adult teacher is Mrs. Patrick Watson. Both are talented women and are already busy making plans for the annual Spring Art Show.

You'll be the envy of your friends and neighbors after taking the fabulous cake decorating course taught by Mrs. Curtis L. Hankins. It will be conducted every Thursday morning in the club building. Call her at 545-3018 to register. You certainly won't regret it.

"EVERYONE ALWAYS WELCOME!"

Many Changes Evident Since Infantry School Celebrated 1st Christmas

Infantry School Report

The Infantry School's first Christmas bore little external resemblance to the holiday season which begins today. In 1918, the ZIP Code was not even a distant dream for those who carried the season's greetings, often on horseback, to the students and cadre of the young Infantry School. The primitive postal facility was lucky to have a coal stove.

This year, the Post Office will dispatch nearly one million pieces of incoming letter-mail during December, almost half again as much as any other month. And, incoming parcel-post shipping will nearly triple its ordinary monthly volume by Dec. 31.

But the spirit of Christmas at The Infantry School remains unchanged. Dec. 25, 1918 did not dawn on a quiet scene of traditional white, but rather, an endless view of fluid reddish-brown. A month of downpours had rendered the infant encampment a sea of mud for the holidays. However, families quartered in the tents of "Squaw Village" demonstrated much individual ingenuity in adapting to their soggy situation.

The wife of a senior officer was particularly resourceful in conquering her muddy environment. She began by covering the improvised wooden floor of her damp and drafty tent with layer upon layer of newspapers.

The newspapers were in turn covered with discarded tarpaper, a premium item for sealing tent-tops. She then painted, shellacked, and waxed the tarpaper, on which she courageously placed her Oriental rugs for the holidays. Asked how she liked "Camp Benning," she replied, "Like it, I helped build it!" In a way she had.

Throughout The Infantry School today, holiday decorations have captured the simple joy of the season — a snowflake at the door of the Office of the Secretary, a wreath and a sprig of mistletoe for the Company Tactics Department. The Infantry School Battalion has erected a Nativity scene on its headquarter's lawn, while the Office of the Coordinator of Instruction carries the same theme indoors in miniature.

But, Christmas is basically a home - centered holiday and the Infantry School reflects this tradition in scheduling which allows both student and cadre personnel to take leave. This policy is met with near-unanimous enthusiasm, the possible exception being the administrative personnel who process the requisite paperwork.

Several students from Allied nations are using the holiday period to learn more of the United States, its people, and its customs. Capt. Yutaka Hara, of Japan, and Lt. Ali Ahmed Jajali, of Afghanistan, both attending Infantry Officer Career Course No. 1, are planning a motor trip to the Chicago area, while Capt. Charles Sebe from France, also attending CAR No. 1, will travel to New Orleans. Maj. S. Hussni Oesman from Indonesia will visit Washington, D. C., and then cross the continent to San Francisco during his leave from Infantry Officer Associate Career Course No. 2.

The Allied students remaining at Fort Benning will have informal holiday socials with their American sponsors and also will be the guests of local civic clubs.

Staff and Faculty personnel of the Infantry School have focused the holiday emphasis on children. The Mobility Department, in conjunction with the Operations Office, recently held a Christmas party for children of all assigned personnel. The highlight of the party was the arrival of Santa in a sleigh which looked suspiciously like a colorful distant relative of the "Mechanical Mule."

Even in the difficult times of Christmas, 1918, a great Christmas tradition was fulfilled at The Infantry School. And, again this year, as in every year since, there is a distinct reward for those remaining — a treat that cannot be denied by even the most fiercely loyal fan of Mother's home cooking. CHRISTMAS DINNER!

For just the noon meal on Dec. 25 the Commissary Troop Issue Department has placed a special order for 65,000 pounds of Christmas dinner items. This includes a mere 16,000 pounds of turkey, enough dinner rolls to reach over a mile and a half high, and one ton of holiday fruit cake.

With three and one - half pounds of turkey and trimmings designated for each Christmas dinner, The Infantry School has spared mother a monumental task.

First Christmas Greeting Was Old 1450 Woodcut

There's quite a story behind those Christmas greetings you've been sending and receiving by the dozen this holiday season.

The earliest known holiday greeting was actually a crude woodcut printed in 1450 in the Rhine Valley, Germany.

The card shows the Christmas Child standing in the bow of an ancient galley manned by angels, with the Holy Mother seated at the mast. The inscription reads: "Here I come from Alexandria and bring many good years to give generously. I will give them for almost no money and have only God's love for my reward."

English Card

Sir Henry Cole, an Englishman, is credited with publishing the first "mass produced" Christmas greeting. In 1843, he had an artist, John Horsley, design a Christmas greeting for him because he was "too busy to write to his friends at Christmas." The card carried the message: "A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year To You."

Cole had 1000 copies of the card printed which showed a friendly family party in progress, the oldsters with raised wine glasses in a toast to the person receiving the card.

Although Cole was hailed for his idea of inventing the Christmas card, his greeting met with severe criticism because it showed children at the same table with wine drinkers.

The first cards were unfolded pasteboards printed in color. Late in the 1850's and 60's, cards were die-stamped with designs combining ornaments and lettering. Larger cards became more popular in the 1880's.

By then, the idea had been introduced into the United States. Louis Prang, a prominent Boston lithographer, looking for ways to increase his business, began making Christmas cards in 1875.

Prang was an expert in the art of what he called "chromo-lithography" and his work and reputation was well established throughout Europe. By using slabs of a particular limestone found only in Bavaria, he printed pictures in multi-colors, as many as 32 different shades at times. He reproduced them so perfectly that you could scarcely tell them from the original paintings.

Prang sponsored an art competition to obtain his card designs. Within five years he was turning out five million cards a year, and it wasn't long before Prang cards trimmed with silk fringe and lace also became known worldwide.

Although Prang gave up printing Christmas cards in the 1890's, he is credited with establishing in America the joy of sending and receiving Christmas cards, and is known as the "father" of the American Christmas card.

The first American Christmas card, however, had been printed in 1853, when R. J. Pease, an Albany, N. Y. dry goods merchant, designed, printed and mailed a Christmas card which also served as an advertisement for his products.

The only known remaining original of the Pease card is now housed in the Rust Craft antique greeting card collection.

Story of Nativity Told

Christmas Tree Set Aglow At Marne Field Program

BY BOB de CAMARA

With the touch of a button, a giant Christmas tree on Marne Field was set glowing Tuesday night at the 2nd Division's annual "Christmas Carol Community Sing."

Men from all units of the division jammed the spectators stands in freezing weather to sing carols, hear the telling of the Christmas story and listen to both the band and a combined choir from Chapel 1 and the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, commanding general of the 2nd Division, wore a swirling, midnight blue cape over his dress blue uniform when he stepped to the microphone on the ceremony platform to speak briefly and light the tree. Other lights on the field had been switched off for the dramatic moment.

The 3rd Brigade Chaplain (Capt.) John E. Green opened the program with an invocation. Next, everyone joined in singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "The First Noel" which was followed by a Bible reading of Christ's birth by the Division Chaplain (Lt. Col.) James C. Carroll.

The division band, under the direction of CWO Darrell G. Blumm, sat in a semi-circle on the field in the cold and played selected Christmas tunes. And the combined chorus of men and women from the two chapels were led by Mrs. Virginia Freeman. Mrs. James A. Ward, wife of a 2nd Engineer Battalion officer, accompanied the group on the piano.

The commanding general had a few brief remarks to make prior to lighting the 20-foot tall tree. "In three days when the rest of our men return from Germany," the general said, speaking of the remnants of a Rotaplan unit, "We'll all be together again for the first time since last Christmas. I can promise you the division is going nowhere in 1963."

This remark, so close to the end of the year, drew a laugh from the audience. Gen. Billingslea stepped back up to the microphone and said, "1963. I make no promises for 1964."

He recounted some of the events which hard - pressed the division in the holiday season last year but kept his talk in a light, humorous vein. "Cuba was on us last year," he said, referring to the 1962 Cuba missile crisis. When his audience laughed at this, the general said, "I mean really on us. Some of the men were loaded aboard ships; many others were off post."

Before sitting down, he wished all of the division soldiers the best of holiday seasons and new years and passed out decoration plaques.

The men in the sands, many with families present, stood to sing "White Christmas."

And with a benediction by Chap. (Capt.) Calvin H. Garner of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, the annual carolling at Division Headquarters ended.

A lighted Nativity scene was tabled next to the band on Marne Field for the ceremonies.

Inside a heated tent following the program, SFC Fred H. White and PFC Antonio Suarez, cooks from Division Hq. and Hq. Company, served steaming coffee, cake and doughnuts prepared by the unit's night baker.

12th Arty Soldiers Test M-17 Protective Masks

By 12th Artillery PIO

Members of the 12th Artillery tested their new M-17 protective masks against heavy concentrations of a chemical agent recently in the Harmony Church area of Fort Benning.

The exercise was designed to prove the protective qualities of the mask and instill confidence in its use. The majority of the missile men came through with flying colors however the experience of a few vividly pointed out the need for proper maintenance and assembly of the mask and a thorough knowledge of its use.

After the initial assault on the chamber, those having improperly assembled or adjusted masks soon discovered the fact and corrective action was required. Extreme coughing, difficult breathing and severe burning and pain in the eyes caused some hardship but after the proper adjustments were made the chamber was reentered and all personnel successfully completed the course.

1st of 23rd Battles Guerrillas in Swamp

By 1st Bn., 23rd Inf. PIO

As part of the 2nd Division's Special Action Backup Force, the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry has just returned from Operation Swamp Fox; a jungle training problem in the marshland of southern Georgia, carried out at Fort Stewart.

The operation was a ten-day problem designed to familiarize the men of the battalion with guerrilla fighting and survival techniques.

The long green line of the convoy moved out of Fort Benning on December 3 at 4 p.m. Upon arrival at Fort Stewart the men were issued rations, ammunition (blank), and sent out for the problem.

During the course of the operation, in which the men were to catch the notorious "Swamp Fox" and his merry band, patrols, both motor and foot, were sent out. Roadblocks and ambushes were set up and manned; guards, messengers and weapons were bristling everywhere.

Then the rains came, making movement in the marshland even more precarious. The soldiers slushed slowly through the mire of the swamps in search of guerrilla forces as the Cypress trees dripped with the last of the recent rain and the boots splashed in the watery bog.

One evening, guerrilla forces erected a roadblock intending to delay and harass the battalion. A contingent of friendly fighters immediately rose to the situation and rushed the roadblock, turning the tables on the hidden aggressors. The sharp crack of rifles and the repetitious bursts of machine gun fire contrasted sharply with the guteral war cries of the men as they raced to the attack.

With the guerrillas routed and the roadblock cleared, the convoy moved through the previously held enemy sector and on to its destination.

But the action did not stop there. A small group of men, led by Sgt. Daniel Calhoun, kept up the chase and hunted down the guerrillas through the swamps. They returned some time later after flushing out and capturing three of the enemy.

Two of the men in this small war party were decorated "for valor and bravery in the face of enemy fire" with the "Guerrilla Killer Medal," by Brigadier General John T. Corley. The two men receiving the awards were Sp4 Michael Carmody C Company and PFC John A. Kohr, Headquarters Company.

Capt. 'Swamp Fox' Lollar Back at 3rd Bde. 'Lair'

BY JAMES GRAHAM

The "Swamp Fox" has returned to his lair. Capt. Clifton D. Lollar, the leader of the guerrilla forces during Exercise Swamp Fox, has come out of the swamp land of Fort Stewart, Ga. to return to his position as liaison officer for the S-3 section of the 3rd Brigade.

A native of Columbus, Miss. Capt. Lollar feels that he was a natural for the Swamp Fox assignment, having been born and raised in the swamp country of Mississippi and Louisiana.

The captain began his military career in 1949 at the age of 16 when, with his parents consent, he enlisted as a private. Shortly after his enlistment he volunteered for service with the 9th Ranger Company. As Capt. Lollar puts it, "Of the 1200 men who volunteered for this unit, I was one of the lucky ones (of 50) that remained with the 9th Ranger Company until it disbanded in October of 1951." At that time he joined the 508th Airborne Infantry Regiment. During his stay with the 9th Ranger Company and the 508th Airborne, from the rank of corporal to the grade of platoon sergeant which he held at the "ripe" age of 18. He continued his rapid advancement until at the age of 19 he was a first sergeant. It was at the age of 20 that he accepted a direct commission as a lieutenant.

Capt. Lollar is a holder of the Senior Parachutist Badge and is the veteran of 56 jumps, 90 per cent of which were made at night into areas with no prepared drop zone. He explains that a great many were designated as demolition jumps and during such assignments he has had as much as 80 pounds of explosives strapped to his body.

Along with his airborne badge, Capt. Lollar also holds both the Army's famous Ranger Tab and the Pathfinder badges. He has also earned the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

Included among the numerous service schools that the captain has attended are the Infantry Career Course at Fort Benning and also a Nuclear Weapons Course along with the Pathfinder School and Airborne School. He is also a graduate of Copilan-Lincoln Junior College in Wesson, Mississippi.

A dedicated officer and all around soldier, Capt. Lollar list his main hobby as soldiering.

26 Died in Fiscal 1963; Let's Not Top That Mark!

During the Fiscal Year of 1963, the 2nd Infantry Division lost 26 of its members due to accidental death.

Thirteen of these fatalities were either passengers or drivers of privately owned vehicles, four were pedestrians struck by vehicles and the remaining nine were killed by electrocution, drowning and various other causes.

As the first half of the 1964 Fiscal Year draws to a close, there have been only six fatalities in the division listed as accidental. Five were a direct result of traffic accidents and the remaining one was caused by electrocution.

Despite the improvement in this area, too many soldiers are still being needlessly killed and injured tremendous losses of military and civilian property are being experienced annually.

The prevention of accidents is everyone's responsibility.

2nd of 23rd's Co. A Returns From FTX

By 2nd Bn., 23rd Inf. PIO

Company A, 2nd Battalion (Mech), 23rd Infantry returned from the field recently after four days of playing aggressor against the 4th Battalion, 7th Cavalry.

Attached to Company A was the reconnaissance platoons from both the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, and the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, a tank platoon from Company A, 72d Armor and a forward observer team from the 17th Artillery.

Capt. James P. Locklear, Company A commander, led his combat team out to the northwest portion of the Fort Benning reservation on Monday, December 2 and started to set up his operations. Monday was spent in preparation for the upcoming Army Training Test with the troops in an assembly area west of the Upatoi and their leaders making their recons and plans.

Early Tuesday morning the units moved out. Their mission was to delay the advance of the 7th Cavalry from the 10th Division Road west of the Upatoi.

Lt. Thomas G. Patton moved the 2nd of the 38th recon platoon to the north, Lt. Gerald Grochowski moved his recon platoon from the 2nd of the 23rd, to the south, Lt. Greek moved Company A's 2nd platoon with the 72nd Armor's tank platoon attached to cover vital route in the north and Lt. Mathis' 1st platoon moved to guard an important route to the south.

Chief Umpire Lt. Col. Robert D. Danford commented on Lt. Greek's 2nd Platoon actions at Dozier Creek and described its execution of the action as "magnificent."

On Wednesday the company really began to move. Lt. Patton's recon platoon executed a feint in the north, Lt. Grochowski's recon platoon executed a feint in the south and the 7th Cavalry split to cover the north and south. Capt. Locklear led the remainder of the combat team up the middle.

Two rifle platoons and the tank platoon crossed the Upatoi in an area previously considered impassable. The route was discovered by Lt. James R. McMillan, Lt. John W. Mathis and PSgt. Garver from Company A during Monday's reconnaissance. This aggressive move cut-off elements of the cavalry causing these elements to extract themselves. The forward observer team led by Lt. Parming from the 17th Artillery fired thousands of rounds against the 7th Cavalry.

Gen. Coffin Visits Engineers; Gets Complete Tour of Activities

Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin recently paid a visit to the 2nd Engineer Battalion at the invitation of its battalion commander, Lt. Col. B. C. Snow Jr. While there Gen. Coffin witnessed the erection of an M4T6 Raft at Victory Pond by one platoon of Company D supported by a section from Company E (Bridge).

From Victory Pond, the general dropped by Wetherby Field to observe Headquarters and Company A take their Combat Physical Proficiency Test. He then departed for 2nd Division Training Area 100 to look on during a demonstration in mine field laying by a platoon of Company D.

Following the mine field demonstration Gen. Coffin was given a command view of Company C and Company E while they trained in demolitions at the St. Mary's Demolition Range.

A project in the Division Artillery Motor Po! was the next sight on the General's itinerary; here he was given a first hand idea of how an engineer company accomplishes an engineer project within the Division. Following this Gen. Coffin turned to the 2nd Engineer Battalion Motor Pool where he witnessed the procedures which the battalion follows in its maintenance program.

After viewing the 2nd Engineer Battalion Motor Pool Gen. Coffin retired to lunch where he ate with the battalion staff and company commanders in the Headquarters Company Mess Hall.

Following lunch Gen. Coffin gave a short talk in which he requested that each officer present ask himself what he could do as an officer and as an individual to better the present day Army by bettering the individuals who serve in it. At the finish of the General's talk, Col. Snow thanked him very much for his visit and, on behalf of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, presented Gen. Coffin with the latest copy of the 2nd Engineer Battalion Yearbook.

Part II

1st of the 9th Successfully Contained 'Swamp Fox'

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the last article in a two part series dealing with the participation of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry in Exercise Swamp Fox.

By Byron Dunham and William Bache

The point of "Exercise Swamp Fox" was to determine whether a battalion-size unit can deter guerrilla and terrorist activities confined in a delineated territory.

The 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry successfully did just this by tremendous effort put out by the man with the rifle. If it hadn't been for this "grass roots" effort the problem could never have been completed.

The men from the battalion's line companies constantly lived in the swamps. They were on the go day and night and were lucky if they got the chance to sleep during the cold night; their clothes wet from black swamp water and their own sweat. At the end of the exercise, more guerrillas had been captured than were in the Swamp Foxes' band. This was possible because many were captured several times.

A five man S-2 and S-3 nucleus which included Capt. Bruce Arnold, 1st Lt. Kerop S. Nalbandian, 1st Lt. John Blalock and Sgt. Earnest G. Castleberry had the job of not only plotting the initial attacks but also the intricate job of keeping track of the progress location of separated fighting units — platoons and squads, all with individual commanders.

During the exercise a detachment from the 6th Special Forces Group of Fort Bragg, N. C. performed as advisers to individuals and units of all levels, and participated in every thrust at the unconventional enemy.

A prior member of the 23rd Infantry until reorganization under the ROAD concept, the third platoon remained with their old friends until Thursday, December 12, 1963, when they returned to Fort Benning.

Carl Halstead's 'After Hours'

If a Christmas Tree Could Talk

Trees can't talk — they are not human. Therefore, this story cannot possibly be true. And yet, who knows? For this is a Christmas story as told by a tree . . .

For the better part of a year I didn't contribute much to anyone or anything. I just stood, silent, and grew. I drank when it rained and bent when the wind blew. I was a sanctuary, a home for birds and other children of Mother Nature.

My cloak shined and scented the land in the springtime and became a haven of cooling shade in the hot summer. I watched people at play and work, and gathered lovers beneath my embrace on warm moonlit nights while the stars in the heavens radiated their sparkling magic.

When autumn came, I colored and joined my contemporaries in giving beauty to the land. Then, as the first chill of fall caressed me I bristled and hardened from the gales. For it was then that I reveled in the knowledge that my special time in life drew near. And then came winter . . .

The first fresh snow shrouded me with all its magnificence. Though my limbs were heavy with the burden of it, the white softness was my prelude. Soon, that very special task of mine would come to pass. And there was no fear, only anxiety at first sight of him.

He walked to me, with axe in hand, and carefully judged me from every angle. I knew what was in his thoughts and inwardly hoped to fulfill his expectations. Then, as the first blow came, I relaxed. For I had been chosen.

After being stuffed, yet with care, in the trunk of his car I was taken to my first, and last, human home. There, with loving care, I was dressed, pampered over and decorated with many beauties. Water for my thirst was provided at my trunk and I watched with amusement as the household fussed over, primped and meticulously adorned me with ornaments.

Then, the big moment arrived. A connection was made and what seemed to be a million warm colored lights illuminated me. It was done. I was ready.

Other preparations were conducted around and below me. Brightly colored ribboned packages were placed at my base with special care, and the children now and then tried to sneak a look or feel of the presents. I didn't mind and would not have told on them if I could. It was for the children at this special time that I gave of myself.

At last, that marvelous night of nights came. I smiled to myself as I looked upon the scene before me. The parents and older folks struggled to get the children off to bed before Santa came, and the little ones used all the ingenuity they could muster to stay up.

Finally, the small fry went to bed and suddenly toys and special gifts were quietly placed before me. Then, out went all the lights except my own, and I was alone. The house was still.

Later that night the came. From where, I did not know. I couldn't see. He just appeared. He stood there before me with a smile on his face that could melt mountains of snow. He looked at me, then at the presents strewn about the floor. He knelt and touched each package in turn and moved his lips in blessing. Then he stood again, and his eyes sparkled as he looked all around. He seemed to act as if the gifts were for him personally. He gazed upon them like a man whose birthday it was. Then, sudden realization dawned, and I recalled the tales of the little town called Bethlehem. When I looked again He was gone.

Morning came, and I was thrilled by the excitement of the day. The happy chill made a shambles of the floor, and on every face was happiness. Though knowing that soon I would be discarded and existence would fade for me, I too, felt the joy of that day.

As the activity finally began to calm down one of the children laughed and said, "Oh Mommy! Santa Claus did come!"

I saw the parents nod to the child and then look at each other with that expression reserved only for the unknowing innocence of youth. Then I smiled. Because I remembered the gentle Man who stood before me in the darkness of the previous night and gave blessings to the gifts. And I knew what these parents did not. . . that the child's words had been true. A Santa Claus really had come.

Aviation Support for Rangers

Today's Rangers Are Trained To Make Use of Army Air Support

By 2nd Aviation PIO

Robert Rogers, Daniel Morgon, Francis Marion (the "Swamp Fox"), John Mosby, (the "Grey Ghost"), Gen. William O. Darby's Rangers, Gen. Frank Merrill's Marauders. These names and the individuals they belong to had one big thing in common. They were all associated with the word RANGER.

Rogers Rangers were most famous for their efforts in the "Battle of Bloody Ridge" while Daniel Morgon and his Riflemen fought their way through "Battle of Cowpens", but perhaps the most popular Revolutionary War hero was the "Swamp Fox." Marion was the first to use and master the swamps to first hit the enemy with surprise and retreat through the rugged wasteland.

STUDENT RANGERS PADDLE THROUGH SNAKE-INFESTED WATERS

A few decades later in the Civil War, John Mosby's exploits took him into enemy territory numerous times. Always outnumbered, the Grey Ghost and his rangers accomplished such missions as damaging supply lines, derailing trains and capturing generals.

In World War II, two groups of men distinguished themselves and became known as the fiercest fighters in the War. Darby's Rangers and Merrill's Marauders. From North Africa to the Burma Road, these infamous units reconfirmed the Ranger role in combat.

Today, 200 years after the first ranger, the name stands still looked upon with the admiration shown it throughout the years. The United States Army Infantry School decided in 1951, to make the ranger business a permanent thing by establishing the Ranger School. After a few minor changes, the school is basically the same with a three phase, nine week course from the classrooms of Fort Benning to the rugged mountains of north Georgia to the low marshy snake - infested swamps of Florida.

The first phase on the reservation, consisting of physical training and classroom techniques, has as its primary mission the building of self confidence in the men. Considered to be the least difficult of the phases, this preview of coming attractions is no cinch. Hand - to - hand combat, bayonet drill and patroling are all part of the familiarization part of this particular phases.

An important part of the Fort Benning phase is areial indoctrination. With support from the 2nd Aviation Battalion, the students are given instruction in terminal guidance, aerial resupply, hand and arm signal training and visual contact. CH-34 Helicopters were utilized in aerial and land resupply while CV-2 Caribous are used in terminal guidance.

Over two hundred miles north of Fort Benning, in the foothills of the Blueridge Mountains, the Ranger students begin mountain training. A heavily - wooded, tree-laden land, it provides excellent opportunities for the men to indulge in their climbing and scaling. In this three week effort the student is required to patrol the thick forests always with the aggressor just around the corner, cross the swift Toccoa River via a hastily made bridge and descend steep dangerous cliffs. An interesting part of this training and definitely a confidence - builder is the exercise affectionately known as the "death slide". Here the students climb a swinging swaying rope ladder for 65 feet, hook a pully block to the cable which stretches across the lake, ride down the cable at breakneck speed, and drop into the icy waters on signal. This terminates the tour in the mountains and the students move to the swamps.

The marshes and swamps of north Florida are quite similar to those heard so much about. The Amazon River, the China Coast, and those at the foot of the Himalayas. The students are billeted for two or three hours a day in a ten or fifteen building encampment 25 miles from all civilization. The other 20 or so hours are spent traveling to and from or in the swamps themselves.

Among other requirements you might find the students sitting in bleachers or on stumps in the middle of a bug-infested swamp listening to an instructor, waist deep in water, giving a class on dangerous reptiles found in the immediate area. A quite effective class.

Not only are there swamps but thick vine-laden, almost impassable jungles through which the students must patrol. In addition to the patrols the students participate in ambushes, waterborne raids, beach landings and evacuation operations.

This final three week phase at the Ranger Camp still employs the methods to instill in the students the ever - important self-confidence. This is again exemplified by another situation similar to the "death slide". The course requires the student to climb a spiked pole with a height of 30 feet; walk a narrow catwalk without using his hands and when he arrives at a designated position by using the monkey crawl, drops 35 or 40 feet into, this time, snake and alligator infested waters. The students are then flown back to the main camp and given the customary critique of the problem.

Throughout the course, the students are supported by CH-34 Helicopters of the 2nd Aviation Battalion. The Rangers are taught how to employ army aviation in Ranger tactics on missions such as aerial resupply, reconnaissance, and medical evacuation. In addition to these tactical missions, the Choctaw helicopters also perform numerous administrative type missions.

The graduation ceremony follows and the student becomes the Ranger. He receives the coveted Ranger Tab and over the loudspeaker he hears the Ranger's Motto, "Prompt obedience. Iron discipline." Only the Ranger knows the full meaning of these few significant words.

The Christmas tree tableau had Donna Hedrik, Kathy Ray, Michael Witter and Walter Wall in it, with Marian Ray singing a solo.

With choreography by Rossie Gilmore, the ballet scene entitled "Winter Wonderland" was danced by Vicki Morales and Sharon McGrath. Shepherds for the last scene were played by Louise McClure, Mary Laske and Joan Halbert.

Performing as soloists were Mrs. Ponder, Marian Ray, Mrs. Thomas Leahy, Mrs. James Landers and Mrs. Halbert.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Dwight Dickson and Mrs. Strathmore McMinn do.

The head table was decorated for the holiday season in red and gold with tall gold candlesticks at either end holding large red tapers. Gilt gold figurines encased in delicate, red, ball shaped holders were placed on the table.

Ballet School Students To Perform on WTVM

The Fort Benning Ballet School, sponsored by the 2nd Infantry Division Officers' Wives Club, will feature two dancers on WTVM television Christmas Day. The girls, Miss Vicki Morales and Miss Sharon McGrath, will dance a pas de deux, "Winter Wonderland." They will be appearing on Miss Patsy's Playhouse which is shown from 9-10 a.m.

The choreography for "Winter Wonderland" is by Rossie Gilmore, director of the Fort Benning Ballet School. The school was founded in 1956 by Miss Gilmore who has maintained and directed it since. The building is located in the old hospital area and classes in pre-ballet and ballet are conducted there after school each day. Students of all ages are accepted.

Originally sponsored by the Third Division, and briefly by the Army Daughters, it is now one of the major financial assets of its present sponsors. Mrs. George Arnold of the Wives Club is the activities chairman.

All of the instructors are civilians and have been with the school for years.

Vicki Morales, who began her dance lessons with the school, is now an advance student and acts as an assistant instructor of beginners and intermediate students. ean Smith is also on the faculty. With permanent residents as instructors, parents are assured continuity of instructions.

Registrations are now being taken for the spring sessions. For further information call Mrs. Arnold at 561-4600, or Rossie Gilmore at FA 3-3072.

Mrs. R. Stewart Given Farewell At Supper Club

Mrs. Richards O. Stewart was recently honored at a farewell coffee held at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess. The affair was hostessed by the ladies of the 2nd Infantry Division G-2 Section.

The ladies presented Mrs. Stewart with a corsage of mistletoe and holly and a gift as a token of appreciation for her work with the group.

Decorations for the morning folllowed the Christmas theme with mistletoe and holly arranged in a silver bowl as the table centerpiece. Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Teruo Miyagishima and Mrs. Arthur Rafferty poured for the occasion.

Special guest were Mesdames: Lucien F. Keller; John H. Cochran Jr.; George D. Crosby; John E. Connolly; and Kenneth Malcolm.

Buffet Luncheon Given By 2nd Aviation Ladies

The spirit of Christmas was very much in evidence at a recent buffet brunch held by the ladies of the 2nd Aviation Battalion at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Traditional Christmas decorations filled the room and an unusual ceramic centerpiece, in the form of lighted Christmas tree, graced the head table. The ladies exchanged gaily wrapped gifts with special guests Mrs. John T. Corley, Mrs. Robert E. Coffin and Mrs. John Norton each receiving a gift ceramic piece from Mrs. John M. Stephens Jr., wife of the battalion commander.

Celebration of Big Day Will Vary

2nd of the 9th Prepares For Approaching Holidays

By 2nd Bn., 9th Inf. PIO

Christmas is approaching rapidly. At the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, talk of Christmas leaves, of home, of girlfriends and dates is more frequent and more noticeable.

Christmas decorations are growing in color, size and abundance as company tries to outdo company and a battalion outdo battalion.

At Headquarters Company, Sgts. Charlie Wimmer, Charles Lieder and Clyde Norvelle are taking charge of the decorations and PFC Frank Nagle is supplying the artistic effects to round out the preparations.

In Company A, Lt. Esposito designed and supervised the decorations which employed a Christmas tree motif. Company C erected a huge paper mache snow man to provide the focal point of their decorations.

Over the whole battalion area floats the strains of Christmas carols from the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Personnel of the 2nd of the 9th are waiting impatiently for leaves to begin. Some are going outside the continental United States and some are staying at Fort Benning.

But regardless of where people will be, they will celebrate Christmas. Some will commemorate the holiday in the traditional American fashion. Others, from foreign countries, will observe the day in the manner peculiar to their ethnic traditions.

PFC Allan Harpelund of Co. A, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry is a native of Copenhagen, Denmark. This year he will spend his Christmas in the Army. His thoughts no doubt will turn to past Christmases in Denmark. There, they exchange gifts on Christmas Eve and celebrate the 25th as a religious day with the traditional Christmas dinner. The end of the gift-giving on the 24th is marked by a large meal with the whole family participating in the feast.

PFC Ferenc Jano of Headquarters Company will spend his Christmas with his family in Los Angeles, Calif. Jano is of Hungarian descent and Christmas in his family is a mixture of the American and Hungarian traditions.

Instead of celebrating St. Nicholas day on the 6th of December by exchanging gifts, the oldest male member of the family dresses as Santa Claus and on Christmas Day he delivers the presents to the rest of the family. They will eat turkey at their Christmas dinner rather than the traditional Christmas goose.

Spc Kolio Peteff of Co. A will spend Christmas on long distance. His wife is in Germany awaiting an immigration quota so that she may join her husband in this country. They will also exchange gifts at long distance.

Others members of the 9th will be going long distances for Christmas. Some are headed for Puerto Rico and one is even going as far as Equador for the holiday season.

Whether men spend Christmas with their families or away from them, wherever and however they celebrate the feast, the dominating thought will be that of brotherhood and good will. A time for "peace on earth" to which the men of the 2nd of the 9th and all the men and women of the Armed Forces are dedicated.

A Korean Christmas

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following poem was sent in by M. Rousey of St. Helena, Calif.

'Twas the night before Christmas
And all through the tent
Was the odor of fuel oil.
The stove pipe was bent.

The boots were all hung
By the oil stove with care
In hopes they would issue
Each man a new pair.

The weary GI's were
Sacked out in their beds
While visions of their loved ones
Danced in their heads.

When up on the Ridge line
There arose such a clatter—
A Chinese machine gun
Had started to chatter.

I rushed to my rifle
And threw back the bolt;
The rest of my teammates
Awoke with a jolt.

Outside we could hear
Our Platoon Sergeant Kelly,
A hard little man
With a little pot belly:

"Come Yancey, Come Clancy,
"Come Conner and Watson.
"Up Miller, up Schiller,
"Up Baker and Dodson."

We fumbled outside
In a whirl of confusion,
So cold that each man
Could have a transfusion.

"Get up on that hilltop
"And silence that Red,
"And don't you come back
"Till you're sure that he's dead."

Then putting his thumb
Up in front of his nose,
Sergeant Kelly took leave
Of us shivering Joes.

But we all heard Sam say,
In a voice soft and light,
"Merry Christmas to all,
"May you live through the night."

'Garry Owen' Mess Hall One of the Best

Anyone in 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry who says C Troop does not have the best food in the squadron simply has not eaten there. SSgt. Willie Stevenson and his "Garry Owen" cooks certainly know their business when it comes to the fine art of preparing tasty and appealing meals.

What kind of records do Sgt. Stevenson and his men have to back this up? Simply this: every time a best-mess in the squadron has been selected, C Troop has won hands down, including the most recent selection of the month of December. It's no wonder the men of C Troop think so much of Sgt. Stevenson.

At the Counter Guerilla Reaction Course recently, a two and a half day problem started on time.

This problem seemed to Lt. Robert E. Karney and Pvt. Kenneth Woodward, who are controllers of the course, like any other problem they have run. However, this one proved different.

The Company moved into the problem area. The Company was moving through a valley at four p.m. and as some men stepped over a stump, they discovered a diamond - back rattlesnake trying to crawl away.

The snake was killed by Pvt. Woodward. Lt. Karney and Pvt. Woodward skinned the snake and treated the skin. The snake measured exactly six feet, with nine rattlers and a button.

2nd of 9th Grabs Flagball Crown

Passing Game Plays Big Part in Victory

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry Manchu team whipped the 2nd Engineer Battalion, 20-7, Wednesday to capture the 2nd Infantry Division flag football championship.

Harold Taylor, Lucius Willis and Robert Smith paced the winning attack.

The 2nd of the 9th achieved the title the hard way. The club finished in a second place tie with 15th Artillery during the regular season in the Apache Division, forcing a playoff for a berth in the six-team championship series. They downed 15th Artillery, 20-12.

Once in the final playoffs, the Manchus got off to a quick start with triumphs over 122nd Signal Battalin and then undefeated 1st of the 38th. But then they hit a stumbling block, the 2nd Engineers, and were dropped into the loser's bracket of the double elimination tourney. The Engineers took them 12-12 in overtime last Thursday.

Punts	3-35.7	3-36.7

The loss forced the 2nd of the 9th to meet 122nd Signal again this past Monday but the club still held its feet, dropping the Signalmen, 13-7.

The Manchus' biggest test prior to Wednesday's championship victory came Tuesday. The team had to beat the 2nd Engineers, who had a playoff record of 2-0 against the Manchus' 4-1, in order to meet them again for the crown.

And win they did! The score was 33-20.

The two teams both held their ground during the first quarter but in the second period 2nd of the 9th broke out for 13 points while the Engineers scored six. PFC Brussard started things off for the winners, going three yards for the score. Quarterback Harold Taylor tallied the victor's second touchdown of the quarter with a 78-yard gallop over the 80-yard field. Leroy Mrick scored the extra point.

Tony Berry kept the Engineers alive in the second quarter when he took a 20-yard pass from Wayne Jones.

Both squads collected seven points in the third stanza. 2nd of the 9th's Taylor passed to Sims for 45-yards and six points and Taylor ran the point after. A 60-yard pass play from Jones to Joseph Oliver for six and a Berry to Jones pass for one accounted for the Engineers' points.

The victor's made a rout of it in the final canto. Taylor passed two yards to Willis who handed off to Roy Prince who went for the TD. Then Robert Smith dashed 18 yards for the 2nd of 9th's fifth touchdown and Willis capped the scoring, taking a pass from Taylor for the extra point.

Clarence Brown, scored the Engineers last touchdown on a 20-yard run. Berry passed to Brown for the extra point.

Engineers Win 13-12 In Overtime Thriller

2nd div engineers win 13-12

The 2nd Engineer Battalion and 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry gave flag football fans a preview of this week's action for the division title last Thursday. Then the Engineers took a thrilling 13-12 overtime victory.

Now evenly matched the two teams can be seen even more in the overtime period than in the final score. Each team runs four plays from the 40-yard line in the extra period and the team gaining the most yardage is awarded the point for victory.

In Thursday's overtime stanza the 2nd Engineers gained only one and one-half more yards than 2nd of the 9th. The comparison was 39½ to 38. Arthur Berry sparked the winner's action in the sudden death stanza.

The Manchus of the 2nd of the 9th opened up the scoring in the game's second quarters when halfback Bobby Myrick let loose to

Champions? Engineers Or Manchus

BY JIM BAKER

The Manchus of the 2nd Battalion 9th Infantry won the right to meet the 2nd Engineers in the final round of the division flag football championship Monday.

In a hard fought, rain-soaked afternoon game at Bennett Field, they eliminated the 122nd Signal Battalion by a score of 13 to 7. The game featured tight defensive play by both teams. The statistics show that the 2nd of the 9th gained a total of five yards along the ground while the 122nd showed a minus 14 yards in yards gained rushing.

The first scoring came in the dying minutes of the first half when Harold Taylor of the 9th Infantry returned a 122nd Signal punt 60 yards for the touchdown. The half ended with the score 6-0 in favor of the 9th.

STATISTICS

	2-9th	Signal
First downs	6	2
Rushing yardage	5	-14
Passing yardage	70	14
Passes attempted	7	3
Passes completed	5	1
Punts	3-26	4-32
Yards penalized	70	15

Early in the third quarter, the Signalmen's Wayne Kube took a handoff and carried 15 yards off-tackle to tie things at 6-all. John Gentile carried over for the extra point.

In the dying minutes of the third quarter, quarterback Harold Taylor connected with a 20-yard pass to Charles Simms who carried the last 15 yards for the winning touchdown. Simms converted his own touchdown.

The last quarter saw both teams having to punt on fourth down situations.

John Kube played an outstanding two way game for a Signal team that had lost its rural scoring punch through injury.

The 122nd Signal Battalion was forced to play without the services of its leading scorer Randy Johnson who was injured in last Thursday's 22-19 romp over the 1st of the 38th.

John Blalock and "Willie" Willis were the defensive standouts for the 2nd of the 9th.

1st of 38th Upset; Leaves Three Down--3 to Go!

Three of the six teams in the double elimination championship playoff for the division flag football championship were eliminated in last Wednesday and Thursday's action.

The biggest upset was probably Thursday's 22-19 defeat of once-beaten 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, the Cherokee Division champions, by 122nd Signal Battalion. 1st of the 38th had been the tournament's only undefeated team going into the playoffs.

The Signalmen took the initiative in the opening period when John Gentile chucked a 28-yard pass to Wayne Kube.

Both teams scored in the second quarter with Signal's touchdown coming on a 26-yard pass play from Randy Johnson to Nathaniel Vaughn. 1st of the 38th tallied on an eight-yard pass from Benny Scott to Barry Ayers.

The two teams both scored in the third period. It was a 30-yard pass from Johnson to Vaughn that did it for Signal and Gentile scored the extra point. Bob Johnson took a Scott pass for 22 yards for 38th's touchdown and Allen caught a pass for the point after to make it 19-13 in favor of Signal.

But the Signalmen weren't through and came up with two more touchdowns in the final period to put the "icing on the cake." Here a 10-yard pass from John Cushman to Kube and a Cushman extra point tallied seven, and an eight-yard toss from Johnson to Kube bit for six more.

The 38th's final score was a 30-yard pass from Scott to Allen.

On Wednesday 122nd Signal eliminated 7th Cavalry, a team they earlier bowed to in a playoff for the Commanche Division crown. The score Wednesday was 33-0.

The biggest plays of the game were Gentile's 50 - yard pass to Johnson and Johnson's 30-yard pass to Gentile. In the second contest Wednesday, 1st of the 38th set the stage for its loss to 122nd Signal by topping 1st of the 9th, Apache Division winners, by a 26-13 count.

The 38th's touchdowns were scored by Scott, Allen and Joe Johnson.

Head and Head Blanks 'Bravo' In Engineer Tilt

By 2nd Engineer Bn. PIO

In a hard fought defensive contest for the battalion football championship, Headquarters and Headquarters Co. of the 2nd Engineer Battalion handed Company B of the 2nd Engineers a 12-0 defeat last week at Bennett Field.

Godfrey A. Foshrock and John D. Currey and their defensive teammates continually harassed the Company B quarterback and were more than once responsible for catching him behind the line of scrimmage

From the beginning it was evident that the game was a defensive battle, with both teams showing outstanding rushing techniques and a good pass defense. The first score of the game came in the last minutes of the second quarter as the Headquarters Company quarterback Philip DiOrio faded back and found Robert Taylor in the open for a quick six points. A try for the extra point failed and the first half ended with a score of 6 to 0

The opening of the second half found both teams increasing their emphasis on defense and the third quarter went without score with neither team gaining much yardage.

Late in the fourth quarter Headquarters Company quarterback DiOrio again faded back and tossed a 15-yard pass to Dothel Edwards.

From the Foul Line

Loyola Ranked No. 1; NYU Falls to Second

By Dave Braun

You could compare the nation's top collegiate basketball teams this year to a list of the "10 most wanted criminals," the way they've been getting gunned down lately.

To begin with, New York University, which had held my No. 1 slot for two weeks, was completely stunned by Toledo, by five points; No. 4 Duke was bounced from the ranks of the unbeaten by a solid Vanderbilt ball club, 97-92, and once beaten, No. 6 ranked Arizona State dropped way out of the picture, bowing to Creighton and Denver.

Adding to the misery, Oregon State, my No. 8 ranked, lost to California last Friday night, 65-55, and No. 10 Texas was clipped by Wichita, 76-57, a team that held a spot in the top ten two weeks ago. Oregon State perked up a little on Monday night by trouncing the California squad, 61-49.

And if all this isn't enough, a few more of the top ten managed to escape being hurt, but were scared to death.

Loyola, to whom I now resolve the No. 1 spot after a two-week debating period with myself, managed to conquer a scrappy Detroit five, 113-108; Cincinnati retained its No. 3 position by waiting until the last minute to down Wisconsin, 65-60, and Ohio State dropped encounters to surging Davidson and Missouri.

This wasn't the whole picture this week, however, as a few leading teams continued to roll over their opponents in a savage manner. No. 5 Kentucky, which now has moved up into the No. 4 slot, scored 100 points for the third time in five games this season in bombing previously unbeaten Baylor, 101-65. All-America Cotton Nash provided the spark with 34 points.

Number 7 Michigan retained its undefeated prestige by racing to its fifth straight victory, a 104-81 clobbering of Western Michigan. Duke, dropped to the No. 5 position behind the "boys from the Bluegrass," trounced Clemson, 75-52, and newcomer Davidson blasted Jacksonville, 121-93.

On the move in the young season are Michigan State, remaining unbeaten with an 87-75 conquest of Pennsylvania; Vanderbilt, with their 7 point win over Duke and UCLA copped the Sunflower Tourney with a 74-54 victory over Kansas.

So here's the way it stacks up this week:

1. Loyola
2. New York University
3. Cincinnati
4. Kentucky
5. Duke
6. Michigan
7. Oregon State
8. Vanderbilt
9. Davidson
10. Michigan State

Loyola, with its big three of Les Hunter, Jack Eagen and Vic Rouse with its overall speed, should retain the top spot at least until the first of the year.

NYU, with top performers All-American Barry Kramer and Harold "Happy" Hariston, is likely to catch fire any time and will be battling it out for the No. 2 spot with Cincinnati, Kentucky and Duke.

Williamson and Dye

Two Doughboys Are All-Army; Wendryhoski on Second Team

PAT DYE
All-Army Guard

BILLY WILLIAMSON
All-Army Halfback

Doughboy halfback Billy Williamson and guard Pat Dye added another page to the post's sports history when they were selected to the Army Times 1963 All-Army football team.

Guard Joe Wendryhoski was chosen to the second squad while honorable mention went to ends Fred Murphy and Dan House, tackle Joe Pinckney, center Elliott Moseley, quarterback Marvin Tibbetts and fullback Ron Quillen.

Williamson, a 5-foot, 8-inch, 160-pound speedster, only two weeks ago was chosen as Fort Benning's "Most Valuable Player" at the Doughboys' annual football banquet.

Both Williamson and Dye, a 5-foot, 11-inch, 195-pounder, were picked to a first unit All-Army team that included only four players from military installations in the United States.

Also included in the 12th annual first-team selections were ends Charles Robinson, Fort Eustis, Va., and Eugene Kellogg, 7th Army Support Command, Germany, tackles Dan Grebo, 7th Infantry Division, Korea, and Willie Branch, Fort Eustis.

Guard Willie Williams, 24th Infantry Division, Germany, center John Ratesic, 7th Infantry Division, quarterback Mike Agee, 3rd Armored Division, Germany, halfback Clarence Childs, 24th Infantry Division, and fullback Jim Richardson, 7th Infantry Division.

Wendryhoski, who stands 6-feet, 2-inches and weighs 240 pounds, was selected to a second team which contained only five players from posts in the United States.

Williamson was a close choice for the "Most Valuable Player" award which went to quarterback Mike Agee, a former Washington State University star. Although he did not win the top award, the former Georgia Tech standout garnered more votes than any back in the United States.

During the past season Williamson scored 60 points for the twice beaten and once tied Doughboys, averaged 4.6 yards a carry from scrimmage. He ran back 20 punts for over 19-yards a run back and handled most of the punting chores, averaging 39.3 yards a punt.

His defensive work also gained him recognition among the many coaches and sports writers from military posts throughout the world who cast their ballots for the All-Army team.

Dye, who grabbed All-America honors at the University of Georgia in 1959 and 1960, was a unanimous first team choice based on his fine all-around play, especially from his defensive linebacker slot.

Wendryhoski, a former University of Illinois star, was an outstanding lineman for the Doughboys, opening up many holes in the middle of the line.

Fort Benning backs gained 2,177 yards in 10 games, an average of 217 yards per contest.

With the approach of the holiday season, I should like to extend my best wishes to all of you for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

At this time of the year, we may with justifiable pride reflect upon the contribution we are making, as members of the Army establishment, toward insuring "peace on earth, good will toward men". Aircraft Mechanic Comes Home a Pilot

A former enlisted man who worked in the 11th General Aviation Company as an aircraft mechanic, WO Donald F. Patton, has returned to the same unit as a qualified Army aviator. He will fly one of the unit's OH-13 Sioux helicopters.

He was assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group when it was activated last February after a tour in Hawaii with the 25th Infantry Division Aviation Company. In March he was selected to attend flight school at Camp Wolters, Tex. He was graduated as a rotary-wing pilot and re-assigned to the same unit.

Now WO Patton is busy flying the same helicopters that he repaired as a mechanic last March.

Know Your Allies

He Fought Locust Hordes

What would you do if a swarm of locust threatened to strip the vegetation from a large portion of your land?

An Allied student in The Infantry School's Career Course No. 2 has not only thought about this problem which plagues the Middle Eastern nations, but has had more than one skirmish with this notorious migratory insect.

Capt. Rushdi K. Areikat, an 11-year veteran of Jordan's Infantry said that while he was serving as a cadet platoon commander in 1954, a huge swarm of locust flew into the desert and were winging their way toward the farmlands in the western region.

"We used DDT to kill the locusts," he said. "The real problem was not the actual killing of the insects but getting to them."

"During our trip into the desert we were confronted by not only heat but water problems and transportation as well," Capt. Areikat stated. "Fortunately we only spent four months in the desert before the locusts were destroyed.

CAPT. AREIKAT

From 1958 to 1963 the captain served as a platoon commander and later as an instructor in map reading and military organization at the Royal Military Academy in Zarka.

The captain started his military career in 1953 when he was graduated from the Military Academy in Amman (the capitol of Jordan). After serving three years as a cadet platoon commander he was commissioned in 1955 as a second lieutenant.

In 1958 he attended a platoon commander course in England which lasted three months. He said that it was his first trip to England and that he was particularly impressed with the greenness of the island in contrast with his country's mountains, deserts and greenlands.

Capt. Areikat said that he finds The Infantry School's career course very interesting. When asked what impressed him during his stay in this country he replied. "It seems that wherever I go there are cars and more cars . . . everyone seems to have a car of some sort."

Lions Club Welcomes 36 Allies

Thirty-six Allied students from 25 countries, enrolled in courses at The Infantry School, were dinner guests of the Lions Club of Columbus Tuesday.

Held at 6:30 p.m. at the Ralston Hotel, the party featured a typical Christmas dinner from turkey and dressing to ambrosia and fruitcake.

The Christmas party is an annual event and is part of a continuing program of the Lions to get better acquainted with allied students.

Throughout the year, the Lions invite one allied student to each weekly meeting, climaxing the year with a Christmas party for all of them.

Countries represented at the dinner include Afghanistan, Argentina, Bolivia, Republic of China, Ecuador, Ethiopia, France, Great Britain, Greece, Guatemala, Indonesia, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Korea, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, Spain, Thailand, Turkey and Venezuela.

Sgt. Rosiak 'Polices Up' Lost Check

An Infantry Center soldier could possibly have had a very un-Merry Christmas had it not been for the sharp eyes of M-Sgt. Henry A. Rosiak.

While on duty as assistant team chief of the Rifle Marksmanship Committee at English Range, Sgt. Rosiak's eye caught a rectangular piece of light blue paper along adjacent Dixie Road.

The "blue paper" turned out to be a check for $2,500.

Sgt. Rosiak said the soldier returned some 45 minutes later and, after presenting proper identification, had his check safely back in his hands. The soldier, Rosiak said, had accidentally dropped the check from his pocket as he entered an automobile near the rifle range.

The soldier had received the check when he sold his car recently.

"I knew that it would be difficult for anyone other than the owner to cash the check," Rosiak said, "But, it saved a lot of trouble — having payment stopped, requesting another check and all that mess."

Giving Gifts at Christmas Is Strictly American Idea

Exchanging gifts on Christmas Day is basically an American tradition.

Many Europeans exchange gifts on New Year's Day instead. Christmas is strictly a religious day in most parts of Europe and is not celebrated with gaity, visiting and gift-giving.

Started By Romans

The gift-giving custom dates back to the time of the Roman Emperors from about 27 B.C. to 363 A.D. It was customary to send a gift to the Emperor at the start of the New Year to wish him good fortune.

At first, the gift was likely to be a branch of bay or palm which the whole populace felt obliged to send. But, in time, the gifts became more elaborate and costly — to win the Emperor's favor.

Spread To Europe

Later, the Romans began giving each other presents and sending special greetings to friends and relatives. From the Romans, the custom spread to Europe.

The ancient Chinese also celebrated the New Year by exchanging gifts, and they are responsible for introducing two Christmas decorating techniques — gift wrapping and paper honeycomb.

Chinese Symbolism

The Chinese liked to incorporate a special symbolism into their wrapped packages. Most gifts were wrapped in red and decorated with gold - leaf seals. The seal might represent the Fu Dong meaning "protection," the fir tree, signifying "long life," or the bamboo tree which meant "virtue, long life and many sons" for the recipient.

Biggest Occasion

Today, Christmas is the biggest gift-giving occasion of the year in the United States, accounting for 41 per cent of the gifts an average family buys each year.

This year the average American family will buy 30 gifts averaging $4.90 each, or a total of $147.

A staggering 1.5 billion gifts, in all, will be exchanged on Christmas morning.

Strange Start

The idea of gift wrapping came to the United States less than 60 years ago. It started quite by accident. A shipment of envelope lining papers arrived too late for a New York stationer's Christmas line, so rather than hold them in store, he decided to sell them for gift wrappings.

New Launch Site Opened in India

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The first rocket launching has occurred from a site which will be an international rocket launching facility at Thumba near the southern tip of India.

A joint statement by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the India Department of Atomic Energy said that India has offered to make the facility available to other nations for scientifically worthwhile space research projects.

The Thumba site, in addition to its unique character as an international rocket range, offers many advantages, according to NASA.

Chief of Staff Sends 'Best Wishes'

Each Christmas it is my pleasure to extend to all of you in the United States Army, and to your families, my best wishes for a very happy and joyous holiday season.

"Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men" conveys the spirit of Christmas and reminds us all that the goal of attaining peace on earth is among the noblest aims of mankind. Although many of you will spend the holidays away from home and family, you can take justifiable pride that your sacrifices are the foundation on which we hope to build a lasting peace.

To all the Army family, in and out of uniform, may this holiday season bring a full measure of happiness, and may the New Year bring a rebirth of our dedication and determination to defend the way of life we hold so dear.

Sky Soldier Prisoners Find Stockade Realistic

"Boy, that stuff is too real," was one paratrooper's description of the Rakkasan stockade for prisoners of war during the 187th Infantry's first field problem of the current Evasion and Escape exercises conducted by the 187th Monday evening.

The 22-year old paratrooper, who wished to remain anonymous, was on his way back to the first phase line to go through the problem again after his unfortunate capture and ordeal in the prisoner of war camp for those who failed.

Describing his internment as a period of "pure harassment," the soldier gave a brief account of the camp's activities, and various methods for extracting information from captured soldiers.

Arriving at the stockade at 8 p.m., the prisoners were searched, and all niceties such as candy and cigarettes were confiscated while those awaiting entrance to the stockade were made to remain in a squatting position.

Double - timed to a position near the commandant's office, the prisoners were again put in a squatting position under a glaring spotlight where they were briefed while awaiting interrogation, being constantly harassed throughout the waiting period.

Following the interrogation, many prisoners were ordered to punishment, which included the "Pole," where the victim's ankles and wrists were secured around the pole leaving him in a half-standing, half-sitting position.

Another refined technique was the "Barrel" where the victim is placed in a 55-gallon drum while his guard pounds on the barrel from the outside.

Supervision of the stockade was under the direction of SSgt. James R. Morton of Company B, camp commandant and former instructor for the Ranger Department. Special interrogators were 2nd Lt. Oliver S. Jackson of Company B and 2nd Lt. Danny R. Byard of Company A.

187th Troopers Score Success On Field Test

Rakkasan paratroopers of the 11th Air Assault Division's 187th Infantry Monday night completed their first evasion and escape problem.

Despite sub-freezing temperatures, rugged terrain and pitch darkness, commanders felt that morale and determination remained high throughout the night - long problem.

Approximately 25 per cent of the evading forces, composed of troopers from Companies B and D, were captured by aggressors from Company A, which constituted a remarkable achievement for both forces.

The other 75 per cent of the evading force managed to penetrate aggressor lines and travel the length of the 8,000 meter course (from Liberty Road to Yankee Road) without detection.

The roles of the two forces in Monday night's action will be reversed later, giving the troopers a look at the other side of the fence.

Santa to Take Toys to Needy

Over 500 toys, ranging from bicycles to skates, will be distributed to needy children in the Columbus area today. They are presents from Fort Benning's Mortar Committee personnel.

The toys, kept in the Weapon Department committee's workshop (Bldg. 5347 in Harmony Church) will be delivered by truck complete with a Santa Claus, said SFC Christ Lohere.

Sgt. Lohere and his helpers have put the second hand toys into "like new" shape. They were donated by military and civilian personnel of the committee.

In addition to the work on the toys, Sgt. Lohere has designed a group of reindeer and a Santa Claus in a sled outside the committee's headquarters (Bldg. 5343). Each object is hand painted.

THIRTEEN YEAR OLD HUNTER KILLS 71-POUND BUCK

Dead Deer Give Valuable Information to Biologist

BY PFC TOM LUCE

Dead deer aren't supposed to tell tales — but they sure do. At least this is the way a visiting Georgia Fish and Game Commission biologist looked at the "kills" made by hunters on the Fort Benning reservation.

The biologist, Richard W. Whittington, a member of the commission's Wildlife Study Group, recently conducted a two-day fact-finding survey on the reservation's deer population.

During the survey officials of the local Fish and Game Association asked all deer hunters to bring their kill to a check station for field dressing, examination and analysis.

Purpose of the survey, conducted under the auspices of the post's Fish and Game Association, was to determine the relative age, social climate and activities of whitetailed deer grazing on the reservation.

According to Whittington, "Deer and man share the same basic problems such as population explosions, social pressures and food supply.

"But, just as man is able to work out his problems with the aid of an economist and psychiatrist, a trained biologist is able to make certain observations and conduct post - mortem test with the deer which serve him almost as well as the economist's statistics and the psychiatrist's couch," he added.

Once the deer were brought to the check station during the survey, they were fieldressed and all internal organs were removed.

Some of the organs, including the complete eye of the doe were placed in a cloth bag and stored with other specimens in a 10 per cent solution of formaldehyde for laboratory analysis.

The biologist stated that the lens of the eye was carefully weighed and by using a ratio of the deer's size and weight its approximate age was fixed.

The lens is the only organ of the animal's body which continues to grow throughout life.

"Rack - size or the point count of a buck's antlers is not a true gauge of the deer's age," Whittington said.

"For instance, it is possible for a five - year - old buck to have only spikehorns. On the other hand a two-year-old buck may have a six-point rack. Rack size is usually determined by the social conditions and amount of feed in the area," he added.

The biologist said a more accurate method of determining a deer's age is by looking at its teeth.

According to Whittington, a three - ridged molar, located in the back portion of the mouth, is lost after the deer reaches 18 months of age and is replaced by a two-ridged molar.

"Upon examining the wear on the teeth and number of ridges the tooth has, a fairly accurate guess may be made as to the deer's age," he added.

Fish and Game Association officials stated that the number of doe or buck that should be killed during the two-month deer season is determined by estimating the amount of feed available and the number of deer the land could support without strain.

For example, the officials said, deer at Fort Benning number around 3,000. By killing one-third or 1,000 of this number the young will stand a far better chance of survival and they will grow larger and fatter due to the amount of feed and growing room.

Deer hunters may be interested to know that the smallest deer Whittington ever recorded weighed 25 pounds, undressed, and the largest 260 pounds, dressed.

Millions Make Use Of Education Grants

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Veterans Administration has announced that a total of 15 million who served have received education and training under the GI Bill.

It was also noted that VA has made grants totaling $69.2 million to provide special housing for paraplegics.

Records also show that veterans have proved to be extraordinarily fine credit risks in loans for homes.

Get in Step With Those Bagpipes!

By Spt Bob Thomas

Most U. S. Army units have, at one time or another, marched to the accompaniment of a band or drum corps: But who ever heard of American soldiers keeping step to the tune of a Scottish bagpipe?

The men of Company A, 511th Signal Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division, have not only heard of such a things, they are doing it daily. The man responsible for the unique musical accompaniment is PFC Roderick A. MacDonald, who "pipes" the company to physical training each weekday morning.

PFC MacDonald, a radio operator in the company's radio platoon, is a former member of the Chicago Stockyards Pipe Band. As a member of that organization he performed for many notable dignitaries including the late President Kennedy, Queen Elizabeth and former Vice President Nixon. His talents were also utilized in the Chicago area in many summer stock theater productions and other public appearances.

While stationed at Fort Gordon, Ga., PFC MacDonald "piped" Student Company E to and from Radio School four times a day.

SCHOOL'S OUT

Christmas holidays for Fort Benning Children's Schools will begin at the close of the school day today. Classes will resume Monday, Jan. 6, officials said.

'Rakkasans' Were Born During Korean Conflict

Low on the horizon of North Korea on Oct. 20, 1950, 80 C-119 Air Transports droned toward a target carrying American paratroopers to their first combat jump since the close of World War II. The target was Sukchon-Sunchon.

The paratroopers were Rakkasans, the men of the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, comprised of the 187th Infantry and supporting units, and they were going into combat as Rakkasans for the first time.

The men of the 187th had adopted the name Rakkasan while in Japan shortly before this historic jump. There was no word in the Japanese language for paratrooper, and the closest word to it was rakkasan, meaning umbrella man. Hence, the paratroopers of the 187th Infantry became known as umbrella men, Rakkasans.

Following the Sukchon-Sunchon drop, the Rakkasans slashed through a Communist Corps, killing or capturing over 8,000 of the enemy, and seizing enough combat equipment to completely outfit a regimental combat team.

After five months of ground battle and continuing combat missions, the Rakkasans cracked their umbrellas again shortly after dawn on Good Friday (March 23rd), 1951 over Munsan-ni, trapping a retreating Communist enemy for the kill.

Committed to action several times following the second combat jump, the story was the same. The "hit, destroy and move on" tactics of the Rakkasans brought fear in the heart of the enemy. The umbrella men had done their work well.

Today, three major airborne combat units make up the proud Rakkasans. The three units are the 1st Battle Group, 187th Infantry with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.; 2nd Battle Group, 187th Infantry with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky.; and the 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry with the 11th Air Assault Division

Season Seen In the Names

Traces of Christmas can even be found in Uncle Sam's Official Postal Guide.

"Santa Claus," Ind., "Bethlehem," Conn., and "Christmas," Fla., are a few of the more familiar post offices which each year handle floods of mail from senders wishing to obtain appropriate Yuletide postmarks or their greetings, notes Rust Craft Greeting Cards. The company estimates that more than 3½ billion Christmas cards will be sent this season.

Indiana's "Santa Claus" is the only town so designated in the United States. The privilege is reserved to its post office by Congressional Act. There is, however, "Santa" in Idaho, but only one "Christmas" — the one in Florida, plus a "Christmas Cove," in Maine.

There are two "Noels" — in Virginia and Missouri.

Army Tests Navigation Capability

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U.S. Army is currently testing a revolutionary Land Navigation System designed to assist combat forces in movements over difficult terrain such as deserts and arctic wastes. In recent experiments at the Armor and Desert Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., the new LNS proved itself capable of guiding night attacks and patrols with high accuracy. Other tests are also being conducted in Alaska and Europe.

The system consists of a power supply, a gyro compass, a heading and position indicator, a computer, and a map plotting board. Mounted on a combat vehicle, it continuously tells the driver his position and direction of travel. He can report his position quickly and accurately without depending on landmarks. In the tests at Fort Irwin, tank companies moving at night were able to respond quickly to commands for direction changes and to reach objectives of night attacks with remarkable precision.

History of Communism

Industrialization Engulfs Russia During Fever-Pitched 1930's

(Seventh of a series of 29 articles entitled the History of Communism, by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.)

The third decade of the 20th century was largely used by the Soviet Union—which is to say Stalin, since he was the prime power of that republic— to entrench. Industry, Stalin's personal position, the strength of the Communist Party, and military might — all were solidified.

The Thirties began in a fevered rush of industrialization, i.e., the carrying out of the Five-Year Plan begun in 1928. In bringing the directors of industry to heel, Stalin was, in the words of author I. Deutscher, "the arch - intimidator, the arch prodder, and the arch-cajoler. . . ."

There was appreciable opposition, both agriculturally and industrially to the unrealistic goals of the Five-Year Plan; Stalin was forced to slow down and a second Five-Year Plan (1932-1937) was not so ambitious. Nevertheless, by the end of the decade — Russia's economic attainments were amazing; coal increased 300 percent; oil production was up 200 percent; steel, employment and education had made impressive advancements.

Economic improvement brought much popularity to Stalin, even from "white (as opposed to "red" revolutionary)-Russians, who began to accord him the status of national hero.

He had, in effect, employed in peace time what many governments have done in war: control and direct industrial and agrarian production. He strayed from other governments in that he used force to accommodate the desired ends.

In strengthening his own position, Stalin held the infamous purge trials of 1936-38. He felt serious crises were ahead — as, indeed, they were — and he wanted to take no chances on the overthrow of his regime by other political leaders.

Next week: Prosperity Before War.

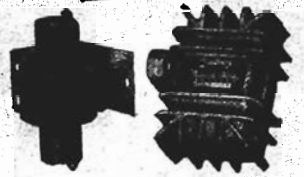
TRANSISTOR IGNITION KIT by Mallory



MANY ADVANTAGES ACCRUE FROM THE USE OF THIS NEW SYSTEM AS OUTLINED BELOW:

1. CONSTANT MAXIMUM VOLTAGE AT ALL SPEEDS: This is particularly important, for with the old system the voltage of necessity did drop appreciably at high speeds. This also increases fuel economy to a considerable degree.
2. CONTACT POINT LIFE IS EXTENDED to eight or ten times former expectancy, for the points now carry a fraction of their former load.
3. THE CONDENSER IS ELIMINATED, thus crossing off one more possibility of ignition failure.
4. SPARK PLUG LIFE IS INCREASED to a remarkable degree. Because of the higher voltage across the electrodes they remain clean, and at high speeds the greater voltage ignites the gas efficiently, thus preventing fouling.
5. IMPROVED STARTING CONDITIONS IN COLD WEATHER—this is brought about by the fact that the tungsten contact points are clean—not oxided by high amperage of slow opening gap of slug gish engine.

Surgeon Says

Many Factors May Contribute to the Cause of Varicose Veins

By Capt. James R. Shamblin Jr.

Varicose veins are tortuous and dilated veins of the legs. They occur most frequently in persons middle-aged or older, but they tend to occur at an earlier age in women who have had several children.

The basic defect is an incompetence of the valves in the connections between the veins in the muscles and those just under the skin. This can be caused by several factors such as heredity, injury, infection or increased pressure in the veins such as that which occurs in pregnancy. Once the condition has started, it may be aggravated by prolonged standing or by a person being excessively overweight.

Huge varicosities may produce no symptoms, while small varicosities may produce considerable discomfort, depending somewhat on the individual reaction to pain. The most common symptoms are heaviness of the calves, "drawing" pains, and cramping in the calves. Numbness or tingling may occur in the region of the dilated veins or in the ankles or feet.

These complaints, although bothersome, are not in themselves serious; however, large or extensive varicosities may lead to severe complications. An itching rash may appear over the ankle and lower leg. Ulcers of the skin over the inner part of the ankle may occur. Inflammation of the veins occasionally occurs and produces tenderness, redness and warmth over the affected veins. Although clots may form in the veins, it is extremely rare for these to break loose and cause serious trouble.

Swelling of the ankles and feet may occur as a result of varicose veins. The swelling usually occurs late in the afternoon or after prolonged standing and subsides overnight or upon prolonged elevation of the legs.

Occasionally a varicosity may rupture and cause moderate bleeding. This is readily stopped by elevation of the leg and compression over the bleeding area.

Varicosities complicated by frequent swelling of the ankles and a rash will, if not treated, produce a brownish, scaly discoloration of the lower leg.

Many other conditions may produce similar complaints and findings. Only by thorough evaluation can assurance be given that varicosities are the sole cause or even the main cause of symptoms in the legs.

Varicose veins that produce any of the symptoms listed above should be treated. Very large varicosities that have not yet become symptomatic should be treated in order to prevent complications from occurring.

If the veins are relatively small and cause minor symptoms, they can be treated by supporting them with elastic stockings and by avoiding things that tend to increase the pressure in the veins such as prolonged standing (especially in warm weather), constrictive clothing around the legs, and obesity. Periodic elevation of the legs during the day is very helpful.

For larger veins and those causing severe symptoms, the treatment is surgical. This consists of removing the veins by means of several small incisions in the areas of the dilated veins. A general anesthetic is usually administered for this procedure and the patient is required to spend a few days in the hospital. For several weeks after the operation, elastic stockings should be worn.

It is to be emphasized that the operation removes only the visible veins. Since the basic cause of varicosities is not remedied at the time of surgery, new dilatations may occur, but these are usually small and not troublesome.

Oral Care Program Outlined for Children

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

One-half of all two year olds have a cavity, and by the age of five years nearly all have at least one cavity. How many have been seen by a dentist? The answer is that one in ten children have been to a dentist and few of these go except to remedy a tooth ache. On the other hand, many children who go routinely enjoy going to the dentist.

It is extremely important for children to have dental treatment, for only by receiving early and routine care can our preventive program succeed.

Let's outline a suitable program.

Age 2½: first visit to a dentist, at which time the child's teeth are examined by dental mirror and cleaned using the stannous fluoride paste.

Age 3: the previous visit is repeated and the first dental radiographs (for finding decay) are taken. In the event of cavity, the work can be accomplished easily and quickly, due to the confidence gained on the first visit, for the experience is new to the child.

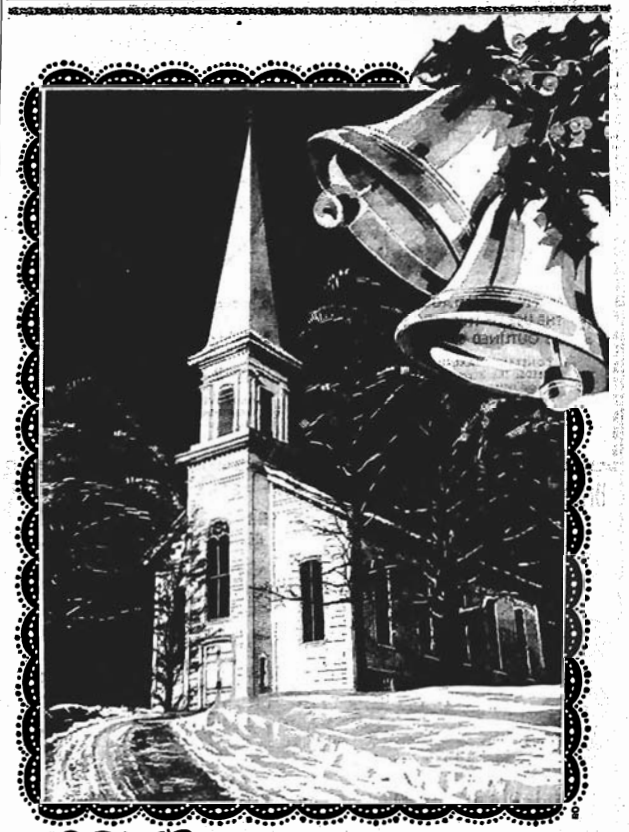
Age 4: cleaning is repeated and the child can be taught a toothbrushing technique suited to his ability to handle a brush.

Age 5: the first dental radiographs can be taken to determine the position of his permanent teeth, and whether all are present. Additional teeth are filled as necessary, but if the child has followed the dentist's previous advice, more filling is seldom required.

By keeping the appointments at short intervals, the few cavities that do form are kept small, and the arresting ability of the stannous fluoride may prevent their needing treatment.

With the appearance of the first permanent teeth, the child enters a new phase.

Early dental care can provide a solid basis for long continued interest in preventing dental problems.



In the happy spirit of the Christmas season, we send sincerest greetings to our loyal friends and customers, with hearty thanks for their patronage.

Most Popular Christmas Customs Began in Europe

Decorating an evergreen tree. Caroling through the streets on Christmas eve. Hanging stockings on the fireplace mantel. How did these and other old Christmas customs get started?

The Christmas tree dates back to the ninth century and Saint Winifred who was traveling around Northern Germany preaching Christianity. He came upon a group of people gathered around a huge oak tree to offer human sacrifice to their pagan gods.

According to legend, Saint Winfred hewed down the oak, and a tall fir appeared in its place. The miracle was hailed far and wide and from that day on, it became the custom for the German families to gather about a tall evergreen on Christmas Eve.

Martin Luther decorated the first tree in the 16th century. He placed candles on a small evergreen to symbolize the stars.

Started Caroling

Caroling started in 13th century Italy. St. Francis of Assisi encouraged villages to display the nativity scene and act out the Christmas story in passion plays. Later carols were composed to go along with the plays and the custom of caroling through the streets got started.

One of the most beautiful customs involving caroling is still observed in Austria every Christmas Eve. Beginning with the family living the farthest from the village church, torch-bearing carollers form a procession through the village. At each house, the procession is joined by all the inhabitants. Eventually the entire village is part of the procession as it arrives at the church steps.

Patron Saint

Saint Nicholas has been leaving gifts for good little boys and girls on Christmas Eve ever since the 4th century. The original St. Nicholas was a Turkish Bishop, noted for his works of charity, who became the patron saint of children.

Martin Luther later substituted the Christ Child or Christkindlein as the bearer of gifts in Germany. Later a German colony led by William Penn settled in Pennsylvania, and again Santa changed his name. The settlers had brought Christkindlein with them, but somehow it got transformed into Kris Kringle.

The Dutch may have nicknamed St. Nicholas "Santa Claus" for short, but his image as a fat little man with rosy cheeks and white beard comes from the famous American poem "The Night Before Christmas."

During the 19th century, Santa recrossed the Atlantic from the United States and become known as "Father Christmas" in England and "Pere Noel" in France.

Hung Stockings

The Dutch are believed to have been the first to hang stockings on the fireplace mantel. One story says it started when St. Nicholas came upon a poor man who couldn't afford a dowry for his daughters. Noticing a stocking hung up near the fire to dry, Saint Nicholas slipped some gold pieces into it.

In some countries, Italy for example, the children put out their shoes instead of stockings.

Card Custom

One of the more modern Christmas customs is sending Christmas greetings each year. In a little over a century — they first got started in England in 1843 — this relatively new custom has become well established.

In that year, Sir Henry Cole commissioned an artist named John Horsley to design a Christmas "greeting" for him because he was "too busy to write to his friends at Christmas."

Since then, the sending of Christmas cards has become almost universal, although in some countries, greetings are sent for the New Year, instead of Christmas.

This year, more than 3½ billion Christmas cards will be mailed in the United States, alone, says Rust Craft Greeting Cards. This is an average of approximately 18 cards per person.

New Guide Discusses Vote Rights

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A voting guide containing up-to-date information for members of the Armed Forces, their spouses and dependents, is being distributed to voting officers of all military units.

The voting information pamphlet, DOD Gen.—6, has current election dates and summaries of voting laws of the 50 states, the District of Columbia and U. S. territories.

Prepared by the Directorate for Armed Forces Information and Education, the guide explains requirements for voting registration procedures and how to apply for an absentee ballot.

Also included is a detailed explanation on distribution and preparation of the Federal Post Card Application for absentee ballot Standard Form 76. Under a new procedure, this form will be handed to each eligible voter of the Armed Forces.

The pamphlet points out that in accordance with laws and regulations, no commissioned, warrant, petty, or noncommissioned officer will attempt to influence any person as to his choice of candidate. The actual marking of the ballot — the voting — must be done secretly.

Most information in the pamphlet applies to any absentee voter. The guide is available to all government agencies.

WOMEN ARE CHEAPER

More "To My Wife" Christmas cards at .50 are sold each year than "To My Husband" cards at the same price, reports a greeting card company. The most popular "To My Husband" price is .35.

Top News Stories of '63 Feature Both Local and Far Away Tragedy

BY JOHN HOLLAND

Tragedy, both locally and from afar, unfortunately has to highlight the 1963 news year at Fort Benning.

The most tragic event to Army personnel was the assassination of President John F. Kennedy at Dallas, Texas, Nov. 22.

With his death, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson became the new commander-in-chief in a simple, somber ceremony aboard "Air Force One" at Dallas' Love Field, where he was sworn in as the 36th president of the United States.

The ceremony occurred within an hour after President Kennedy died at Parkland Hospital in Dallas of head wounds inflicted by the alleged sniper-assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

Local Tragedy

Locally, the fiery explosion of a CH-34 Choctaw helicopter on U.S. Highway 27 near Cusseta, Dec. 2 took the lives of three Fort Benning soldiers and hospitalized 10 others, two of whom died later.

Another news highlight of 1963 which materially affected Fort Benning personnel where it counted most — in the pocketbook — was the military pay raise, largest in U.S. history, which had been signed into law by President Kennedy in October.

In major command changes, Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich was named commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School in February, succeeding Maj. Gen. (now Lt. Gen.) Ben Harrell, who was assigned to the Office of Assistant Chief of Staff for Force Development.

In May, Brig. Gen. John Norton was appointed assistant commandant of The Infantry School, replacing Brig. Gen. Royal Reynolds Jr., who retired.

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Kelleher, deputy commanding general, retired in August and his job, redesignated deputy post commander, was assumed by Col. Adrian L. Hoebeke, who later retired and was replaced by Col. W. Earl F. Holton.

Col. Samuel W. Koster was named to succeed Col. (now Brig. Gen.) Raymond B. Marlin as Infantry Center chief of staff.

Air Assault

Another top event of the year was the Department of the Army order for the organization of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), under the command of Brig. Gen. (now Maj. Gen.) Harry W. O. Kinnard. The division was organized to train for the test of the Army's newest mobility concept, air assault.

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, former commanding general of the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala., later in the year was named chief of the Test, Evaluation and Control Group, the unit charged with evaluating the division's tests.

Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Army chief of staff, visited the post in July for a close look at the 11th Air Assault Division's progress, as well as The Infantry School and the 2nd Infantry Division.

Major Confabs

Fort Benning hosted two major conferences during the year, the 53rd Joint Civilian Orientation Conference in September, and the Association of the United States Army's Tactical Mobility Symposium in November.

The JCOC, which attracted more than 550 visitors, was designed to show principal conferees, U.S. Army Continental Army Command guests and Armed Forces service school representatives the fighting capabilities of the American Infantryman and the firepower available to him.

The AUSA symposium, headed by Lt. Gen. (Ret.) James M. Gavin, national AUSA president, drew more than 500 top military and American industrial leaders to The Infantry Center for demonstrations of the Army's current mobility and its future mobility needs through a series of classified forums and dynamic demonstrations.

In addition to more than 65 Army generals, both active and retired, Secretary Vance and Gen. Wheeler made brief appearances here during the conclave. The Army secretary also was keynote speaker for the symposium's huge banquet at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Big Lift

The 515th Transportation Company (Light Truck) helped make headlines in 1963 when it was named to participate in the mammoth "Operation Big Lift," in which the 2nd Armored Division from Fort Hood, Texas, and supporting units were airlifted to Europe.

The operation was planned to see how quickly an entire division — involving some 14,000 men — could be dispatched from the United States to a state of combat readiness in Germany.

The maneuver was termed by Army officials as an outstanding success and was conducted in less time than had been expected.

Two Infantry School officers, Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett and Maj. Edward R. Schowalter Jr., attended the late President Kennedy's reception and dinner for holders of the Medal of Honor in Washington in June.

The reception was held in commemoration of the centennial of the Medal of Honor. Col. Nett received his MOH for gallantry during World War II and Major Schowalter for heroism in the Korean War.

Distinguished Guests

In 1963, as in other years, The Infantry Center and School hosted many distinguished visitors. Besides Secretary McNamara, Secretary Vance and Gen. Wheeler, some of the more important American and Allied dignitaries included: Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, Army vice chief of staff; Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., commanding general, U.S. Army Europe; Lt. Gen. Albert Watson II, commanding general, Third U.S. Army, Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commanding general, Seventh U. S. Army, and USCONARC commander - designate, and Great Britain's Imperial General Staff, headed by Gen. Sir Richard Amgatt Hill.

Kal-Uwe von Hassel, Federal Republic of Germany's minister of defense; General Doctor Hans Speidel, special adviser to the Federal Government for Questions of Atlantic Defense, Federal Republic of Germany; Gen. Lia An-chi, commander - in - chief, Republic of China Army, and many others from throughout the world.

The Infantry School also hosted 550 cadets each from the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., and the U.S. Air Force Academy, Colorado Springs, Colo., who were here for annual summer training.

In addition, the Third U.S. Army Golf Tourney, the Third Annual Armed Forces International Shooting Competitions and the All-Army Rifle and Pistol Championships were conducted at Fort Benning.

SPECIAL AWARD . . . Charles B. Kneller (L), resident engineer at Fort Benning for the Savannah Army Engineer District, receives a special service citation and a monetary award of $250 for his outstanding performance as "carpentry instructor" at training schools conducted in Mobile and Chicago, earlier this year. Making the presentation is Col. Paul W. Ramee, district engineer. The presentation took place during a resident engineers conference in Savannah recently.

Rations Rate Is Set for Increase

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Stateside enlisted personnel drawing commuted rations will receive a two-cent increase beginning Jan. 1, while the ration rate for overseas personnel will be decreased two-cents.

In a directive signed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, the new stateside rate will be $1.05. The overseas rate will be $1.13.

The present rates of $1.03 for stateside and $1.15 for overseas went into effect Oct. 1, 1963.

The new rates are based on studies which determined the dollars spent by all services to feed personnel from last January through June 30. A study is conducted annually at the time of budget review.

Photos of Earth May Help Pick New Space Rout

BURBANK, Calif. (AFPS) —Space scientists think they may be able to determine the best landing areas on the Moon and Mars through photographs taken of the Earth from satellites.

This could be done by comparing the known physical characteristics of the Earth —as shown in small scale pictures televised from orbiting satellites—with similar space probe fly-by photos of the lunar and Martian terrains.

Dr. Paul M. Merifield, a scientist currently working on the project, stated that such photographic interpretation could yield information for manned spacecraft landing and base site selection such as oil composition.

Meaning of Christmas

By Chaplain (Capt.) Calvin H. Garner

It is always a thrill to tour the toy department of a department store at Christmas time. The children are usually lined up waiting to see Santa Claus. It is an experience that comes once a year to see the surging mass of humanity with multicolored bundles pushing, talking and laughing mysteriously about the spirit of Christmas.

In the midst of this, the greatest Christmas probably in history—from a commercial standpoint—millions have missed the real meaning of Christmas. Movements have been started in recent years to put Christ back into Christmas. However, there is no real emphasis of giving Him the preeminence Paul urged the early Christians to do.

On the contrary, many times He is left out. Only occasionally do we remember that it is Jesus' birth we claim to celebrate. Church attendance usually hits its lowest ebb the last three Sundays of the year. This is the time when it should be the highest.

By the birth of Jesus Christ, God and man were brought together. By His death on the cross a great reconciliation was made. God and man—were brought together. This is the work that Christ did. Christmas meant and means that the world had received a new light.

The prophet Isaiah said of Him, "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that sat in the land of the shadow of death, upon them both the light shined." His coming is the forerunner of civilization, and the herald of truth. His light has illuminated the highways of human progress and the pathways of knowledge. It has melted away superstition, dispelled the ugliness of totalitarianism and the shades of despotism.

The angels at Christ's birth sang, "On earth peace, good will toward men." Christ became the bridge that spanned the gulf that existed between God and man. All forms of peace on earth are by-products of the peace of God.

In history men have sought peace through the media of alliances, conferences, treaties and world conflicts. Abiding peace cannot be wrought by men if they know nothing about the "peace that passes all understanding." Peace can come to the world only as man discovers it, individually and personally, through accepting as Saviour the Lord Jesus Christ. He, as the scripture says, is our peace. All else is confusion, discord and disorder. He is humanity's harmonizer, the world's Peace Giver.

Time Killers Should Consider the Regrets

When it comes to killing time, there are a few servicemen guilty of first degree murder.

They're the ones who bellyache that in the service "there's nothing to do" during off-duty hours. They're the ones who blow their paychecks in one evening, then "kill time" until their next payday. Are you guilty of this capital crime?

In the Armed Forces, there's really plenty to do in off-duty time. For entertainment, the low-cost schedule runs the gamut from motion pictures to swimming pools to golf courses to recreation rooms. There are also libraries, craft shops and gymnasiums.

Why not budget your off-duty time? Put a little variety into it. Save an off-duty night or two for recreation, but be sure to leave room for self-improvement.

Self-improvement is one of the biggest bargains in military life. Self-study courses from the U.S. Armed Forces Institute are available at low cost. Anywhere you go, schooling always counts when promotions are passed out.

But school is not the only self-improvement challenge. Reading—good stuff—is another one. Compile a reading list—increase your knowledge of history, science and literature.

Or note the example of three servicemen who bought a guitar over a year's time, practicing and learning a few things about music.

Whatever challenge you take on in your off-duty time, don't risk painful regret in later life for having killed time during service days. (AFPS)

The Judge Says . . .

A recent circular issued by the Bureau of the Budget is causing a problem for many soldiers. It requires that a copy of each Federal income taxpayer's Form W-2 be furnished to the state of the taxpayer's "residence." This "residence" means domicile.

Because many important legal matters are controlled by the law of a person's domicile, every person must have a place of domicile. Simply stated, a person's domicile is his permanent home. Many soldiers left "home" when they entered the Army, and it is difficult for them to say where their permanent home is. A few basic rules help answer the question.

1. A child's domicile is his father's domicile (or his mother's if he does not live with his father).

2. Even after a person grows up and leaves "home", his domicile remains the same until he changes it.

3. A person establishes a new domicile by being at a place at the same time he intends it to be his permanent home. Even though he may know that, as a soldier, he will be away from his new home for long periods of time in the future, it will still be his permanent home if he intends to return to that place.

The intent of the individual controls his domicile. However, persons charged with enforcing legal rights and responsibilities sometime have difficulty deciding where a person intends, or intended, his permanent home to be. Such people must judge the individual's intent by evidence such as:

1. Where he lists his permanent home in Army records;
2. Where his will states his home to be;
3. Where he votes;
4. Where he pays state income taxes;
5. Where he owns property.

There are many involved and difficult problems in deciding one's domicile. If you have any trouble with this problem, it is recommended you consult your Soldiers Advocate or Legal Assistance Officer.

About Communism

Educate or Indoctrinate?

(Eighty-fourth in a series of questions and answers from A Primer on Communism by George W. Cronyn, edited by Howard Oiseth. Reprinted by AFPS with the publisher's permission.)

QUESTION — What is the aim of Communist education?

ANSWER — The primary aim of Soviet education and all other Communist education is to fit young people for their place in Communist ("scientific socialist") society, first by means of thorough indoctrination in Marxism-Leninism, and secondly by courses of training which are designed to prepare each individual for an assigned job or position in the state apparatus.

In this educational process, rewards are held out for this achievement of leadership in Communist Party programs and for technical accomplishments in other fields.

A further aim of Communist education is to prepare the minds of young people for acceptance of the Communist dogma that Communism is destined to rule the world. The assumption was rudely shaken in 1956 by a series of student revolts against communism within the Soviet bloc countries.

Wives Orientation Coffee Highlights Social Activities

By Shirley Viestenz

The wives of officers attending Infantry Officers Basic Course No. 9 met for an orientation coffee recently in the dayroom of Detachment 22, Second Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

Capt. William E. Killoran briefed the ladies on the basic course and how they could help their husbands and matters in general about Fort Benning. He introduced the honored guests: Mrs. Walter D. Short, Mrs. Claude W. Baker, Mrs. Arthur J. Estes and Mrs. Joseph E. McCluskey.

Chaplain Estes pointed out the religious activities on the post and invited them to visit the chapels.

Lt. James Yarbrough told the ladies the part their husbands had in the course and stressed points of interest concerning traffic regulations on post.

Mrs. Joseph E. McCluskey and Mrs. Yarbrough added their welcome and told the ladies of the social functions to be held during the coming weeks.

Cadre hostesses included Mrs. Killoran, Mrs. Donald F. Bennett and Mrs. Yarbrough.

The Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the scene of a Brunch held by the student wives of Infantry Officers' Career Course No. 1, Detachment 1 of the Second Student Battalion.

A display of Christmas decorations and gift items from the Gift Shop in the Cliatt Shopping Center was of interest to all. Each of the ladies received a Hallmark datebook and calendar.

Special guests included Mrs. Billie R. Ramsey, Mrs. Ralph B. Thomas, Mrs. Charles H. Renfro and Mrs. Willa May Edwards.

Centerpieces of Indian Corn bedecked all the tables and were presented as door-prizes to one lady at each table. About 61 ladies attended the affair.

The wives of officers attending the Infantry Officers Basic Course No. 8 met for an Orientation coffee in the dayroom of Detachment 21 of the Second Student Battalion.

Afterwards, they were greeted by cadre hostesses, Mesames Killoran, Joe Rodriguez, Melvin McMallister, Gordon DeRoos, Ramos Quijano Jr. and Kenneth J. Both. Each lady was given a folder containing information about Fort Benning and the social courtesies around the post.

Lt. Col. McCluskey briefed the ladies on the basic course and points of interest about Fort Benning. He introduced and welcomed the honored guests. Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Estes and Mrs. McCluskey.

Chap. Estes informed them of the various activities of the Christian Religious Program.

He was followed by Capt. Rodriguez, the Detachment commander, who discussed traffic regulations and how they could help their husbands during the course.

Mrs. McCluskey and Mrs. Rodriguez told the ladies about plans for future social activities to be held for them.

The Supper Club Lounge of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the setting for a luncheon recently for the student wives of Infantry Officers Basic Course No. 7 of Detachment 20 of the Second Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

A program was presented by Mrs. Ruth Jones, a Graphoanalyist from Columbus. She analyzed the handwriting of all the student wives and their guests.

Mrs. Horace G. Taylor was hostess for the affair. She welcomed and introduced the honored guests. About thirty ladies were present.

Aviation Group Fetes Children At Santa Party

Two hundred dependent children of the families of men in the 226th Aerial Surveillance and Attack Battalion, 11th Aviation Group, were recently entertained at a Santa Claus Party given by the battalion.

The program consisted of refreshments, group singing of favorite Christmas carols and viewing childrens' movies by both the youngsters and adults.

The event was climaxed when Santa was ushered in from his northern retreat to pass out gifts from his pack.

SFC Buford B. Morgan was the hit of the day in his portrayal of the jolly elf.

Swiss Exposition Slated In 1964

As a point of special interest to those military men and their families who may be stationed in Europe during 1964 and plan to tour the continent, the Swiss National Exposition will take place from April 30 to October 25 in Lausanne.

At the Exposition, which takes place only every 25 years, the entire Swiss nation will be on display. In the 42 sections of the Exposition, which will be housed in 12 futuristic buildings, there will be exhibitions on Swiss history, political, economic and social customs and institutions.

There is a Circarama at the Transport and Communications Center. This is probably the ultimate development in cinemascope. The Circarama is a movie played on nine screens which makes up a complete circle. It will show trains of the future, advanced developments in telecommunications, highways, air and sea transportation.

One of the most unique attractions at the Exposition will be the first submarine designed expressly for sightseers. A hostess will accompany the 40 passengers making the hour long trip to the floor of the Lake of Geneva.

As entertainment each of the 25 Cantons participating in this non-profit venture, will have a ceremonial day, which will give tourist an opportunity to see the Swiss practicing many traditional rituals. These days will be devoted to dances, parades, sports events, and musical presentations, all characteristics of the special Canton.

In addition, visitors will be able to see a circus, attend performances of music and drama, picnic or dine in lavish restaurants; and even take the youngsters to the games and rides offered at the Children's Paradise.

Facilities for relaxing will also be provided. Spacious areas will be placed around shady pools and fountains where tired visitors will be able to enjoy a quiet rest.

Dental Ladies Are Entertained At Yule Coffee

Mrs. Stuart M. Mitchell, wife of the post dental surgeon, entertained the Fort Benning Dental Wives with a Christmas coffee at her home last week.

Throughout the house were colorful arrangements and decorations of the Yule season. Attention centered on the coffee table which was covered with green and red decorations and a beautiful silver coffee service. Mrs. George W. Grabiak, president of the group, poured.

New members of the group attending for the first time were Mrs. Mark Govrin, Mrs. James Lavalla, Mrs. Nathan Meiselman and Mrs. Benjamin Stebor. Guests present for the coffee were Mrs. Arnold Feldman, Mrs. H. A. Guernsey and Mrs. Charles Ott.

TRICKY MEMORY

Why can we remember the tiniest detail of what has happened to us, and not remember how many times we have told it to the same person.

For most of the Fort Benning teens, school let out for the Christmas holidays on Wednesday (Dec. 18). For some unknown reason, there were a lot of parties that same night.

To begin with, the air explorers of squadron 142 had a progressive dinner party.

They started their rounds at the Explorer Hut where the boys and their dates became acquainted with one another. They, then, filed over to Tom Sankey's house for soup. Salad was served next at Buddy Knight's home. For the main course, the group of scouts and their dates went to Larry Preston's house. Scott Madding, Charles Robertson, Dale Wilson, and Larry held their mothers responsible for putting the meal together.

Now, what everyone waits for — dessert. Mike McNamara's mother fixed that. Following, the teens piled into cars and went Christmas caroling. The party finally broke up around 11 p.m.

That very same night found a large group of teens at Betty Boisvert's and Lynn Coffin's open-house. There must have been some 100 people there during the course of the evening. Among the high school set were Katti Hennessey, Bob Mays, Roland Keller, Lee Short, Merry Williams, Paul Ferguson, Dudley Wells, and many others.

A number of the college kids who returned for the holidays were at the party. Nancy Williams from Florida State, Jim Stacy from Clemson, and Jim Atkins from the University of Arkansas were among the many. Bill Heath, a graduate of Columbus High, was warmly greeted as he returned from the Air Force.

I was afraid that I had scared Col. Boisvert when I told everyone of his effective way of ridding the house of teenagers. But to my surprise, when 11 p.m. "rolled" around, Col. Boisvert came through the house with his bell and a sign reading: "It is now 11:00, think of your parents." I later found out that Betty had broken the large gong that was used previously in rousing the teens.

Before leaving, I chanced to walk through the kitchen where I saw three signs already made up — on paper towels. Each sign had a ten-minute interval. The last read as follows: "The time is now 11:30, think of Betty's parents." As I said before, "Betty's father has a way of putting things."

The following night, the Sigma Delta Beta sorority gathered at Martin Army Hospital to do a bit of Christmas caroling. The group of approximately 20 girls took cookies and punch to the boys in the orthopedic ward. They asked the men to join in as they sang. Later, they played various games, such as unscrambling letters to make different Christmas terms; guessing how many pieces of candy there are in a jar, and guessing the contents of a house with a hint in the rhyme that Neville Brickhouse wrote. The content was a candy cane.

The sorority girls also made puppets for the children but had to leave them with the Red Cross worker.

As you probably already know, J.A.D.A. has been in the news quite often lately. Their work seems to never end. As of now, the girls have made arrangements for helping the adults of Fort Benning find babysitters. A list of 54 girls has been turned over to an over-all chairman, along with their ages, phone numbers, and addresses.

This organization hopes to run indefinitely. Anyone who needs a sitter should call 545-2627. It would be of great help to the Junior Army Daughters if you would pass this information on.

More Soldiers Killed by Accident Than by Guerrillas in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Military accident statistics indicate that it is much safer to be facing armed Viet Cong guerrillas as a combat-advisor in the jungles of the Republic of Vietnam than to drive home for a weekend with the family.

Since Jan. 1, 1961, Army personnel have suffered more than 1,160 fatalities and 8,750 disabling injuries in non-Army motor vehicle accidents. The total Army casualties in Vietnam during this period was 463. Of these only 94 were fatal.

The privately-owned motor vehicle accident toll for the Navy and Marine Corps since 1960 gives a heart-breaking total of more than 20 thousand injuries and two thousand deaths.

During approximately the same period 1,241 young airmen met chrome-plated death on the highway.

With the Christmas and New Year period approaching, military commanders' holiday spirits are being dimmed by the shadow of grim death as thousands of service men and women make plans for that leave or visit with friends in a distant city.

An Air Force Inspector General's report warns, "The figures for 1963 have already reached an alarming total, surpassing the 1962 figure by a wide margin.

Military and civilian authorities are stepping up safety campaigns everywhere to bring these grim facts about death to the attention of the members of the Armed Forces who may be tomorrow's bloody statistics.

Safety officials say that trying to beat this limit usually combines most of the ingredients for another fatal accident.

John Norton, assistant commandant of the school, who called the colonel "a first-class soldier and a truly valuable asset to The Infantry School and the department."

The colonel expressed his appreciation to members of the Weapons Department and said if the citation were "true," then most of the credit should go to his co-workers.

Several members of the department, including Col. Lawrence S. Reynolds, department director, attended the ceremonies.

Gen. Hamlett Gets Briefed On Division

Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, Army vice chief of staff, visited 2nd Division headquarters last Thursday.

The Army's number two man arrived by helicopter at Marne Field early in the afternoon and was greeted by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, division commander. Gen. Hamlett, accompanied by Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, post commander, was then escorted into division headquarters where he was briefed on the mission and activities of the "Second to None." The briefing was attended by all members of the general staff and major unit commanders.

Prior to entering the headquarters building, Gen. Hamlett reviewed a 2nd Division Honor Guard and chatted a few moments with Division Indian Sp4 Marland Tahbonemah. The general told Sp4 Tahbonemah he had known the official Indian's grandfather, Sgt. I-See-O, a scout, at Fort Sill during the early days of his career.

Gen. Hamlett was at Fort Benning to visit the Infantry Center, the 2nd Division and the 11th Air Assault Division.

During the briefing at division headquarters, Gen. Hamlett was presented a miniature cannon by MSgt. Elton R. Butler of the 12th Artillery and bookends with mounted cannons by Sgt. Maj. Dennis J. Aamtuzio of the 15th Artillery.

Gen. Hamlett's first assignment following graduation from West Point in 1930 was with the 2d Division's 12th Field Artillery at Fort Houston, Tex. In August 1938 Gen. Hamlett was assigned to the 15th Field Artillery, also at Fort Sam Houston.

Gen. Hamlett also joined the Infantry Division Association while at headquarters.

He returned to the Infantry Center by helicopter following the briefing.

Saudi Arabian Army PM Visits 2nd MPs

Saudi Arabian Army Provost Marshal Col. Ali Wahbi paid a visit to the 2nd Infantry Division last Thursday and was given the opportunity to witness demonstrations ranging from the modern techniques of riot control to "Indianhead" troops in a livefire attack.

The top law enforcer of the Saudi Arabian Army, escorted by Maj. John F. Riley, assistant provost marshal of the "Second to None" arrived at Division Headquarters at 8:45 a.m. where he was officially welcomed by Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea, the division commander.

Next came a tour of the division Provost Marshal's office and a briefing on items of interest such as traffic incidents, statistical charts and the overall mission and functioning of the Provost Marshal's Office. The briefing was given by Lt. Col. Frank E. Hearn Jr., division provost marshal, and Maj. Riley. The morning's activities were completed at the 2nd Military Police Company. There Col. Wahbi was briefed on its mission by the commanding officer, Capt. DeWitt H. Hudson Jr., and saw the equipment and weapons which the U. S. Army Military Police Corps utilizes.

He also viewed a riot control demonstration conducted by Lt. John Pietrofesa. Assisting in the realistic riot was a mob furnished by members of the 7th Cavalry.

After the riot demonstration was completed, Col. Wahbi had the noon meal at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess. He then flew by helicopter to witness a Continental Army Command (CONARC) live - fire demonstration which was put on by members of the 2nd Division under the supervision of the 2nd Brigade.

Upon its completion Col. Wahbi returned to the Military Police Company where he watched a second demonstration, this time dealing with the handling of prisoners of war and followed by the methods of traffic control. Both presentations were made by Lt. Raymond Dwyer.

The afternoon session also included an unarmed defensive display and a communications briefing.

The visiting colonel parted the division at 4:00 p.m. with a better understanding of the mission, organization and tactical deployment of its military police.

Bravo Company Commander Capt. Clarence A. Bailey performed his first re-enlistment ceremony last week. And who was the man holding up his right hand on the other side of the desk? Why it was 1st Sgt Charles W. Bernatovitz, of course, taking his last re-enlistment.

Soon to mark his tenth year with the same unit, 1st Sgt. Bernatovitz took the re-enlistment oath from his 27th company commander. He began his Army career in Scranton, Penn. with his first enlistment and has served his country from Korea to Germany.

Capt. Bailey, a graduate of North Georgia College, is a qualified Ranger, fixed-wing pilot and parachutist. He began his career with the Officer's Basic Course at Fort Benning and has attended the Infantry Officer's Career Course and Special Warfare School prior to joining Company B, 1st Battalion, 22rd Infantry.

Manchu Unit Is Tabbed For 'Long Thrust IX'

By 2nd Bn, 9th Inf PIO

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry is Europe bound.

Lt. Col. Lewington S. Ponder, commander of the 2nd of the 9th read an official release to the battalion shortly after General Lyman L. Lemnitzer, supreme allied commander, Europe announced that Exercise Long Thrust IX, will be held during the period January 10 to 13, 1964. The exercise is a continuation in a series of air mobility exercises designed to test command and logistic capabilities for reinforcing NATO defenses in Europe.

The 2nd of the 9th, with approximately 900 men, will be deployed from Fort Benning to Germany by the United States Military Air Transport Service. It replaces the 2nd Battle Group, 26th Infantry, of the 1st Infantry Division at Fort Riley, Kansas. The 2626 returned to the United States last October aboard MATS aircraft taking part in Exercise Big Lift. This battle group had been airlited to Europe during a previous Long Thrust exercise.

Responsibility for the planning and conduct of Long Thrust has been assigned to General Jean A. E. Crepin, commander - in - chief, Allied Forces, Central Europe.

Maximum Christmas leaves have been granted to the battalion in excess of the 2nd Division quotas in order that personnel may settle personal affairs before the unit moves out.

Col. Ponder said the battalion was being sent as one of the best that the division had to offer and that they would "be the standard bearers for the division". He told the men that they "were picked for the assignment because of their high state of readiness".

The battalion most recently participated as the aggressors in Operation Sky Soldier I at Fort Stewart, Ga., and in numerous training exercises since that time.

Scored Many Firsts

1963 Was Busy Year For 'Second to None'

By Carl Halstead

Ring in the new, ring out the old. A new year is about to be born. The year 1964 is dawning and 1963 fades forever.

The wake of the past year will be recorded in history. Equally true in military annals will be the accomplishments and trials of the famed "Indianhead" Division, the 2nd Infantry Division.

At the very onset of 1963 the Department of Army started its new Reorganization Objectives Army Division (ROAD) by naming as its trail-blazer, the 2nd Division. It was to be the "Second to None's" task to change, build, and reshape itself quickly and efficiently into the most powerful and mobile division in history. And, this it did.

Side by side with ROAD came the monumental job of mechanizing and utilizing the famous "Second" under the new Rotaplan system; a rotation program for elements of the division to demonstrate mobility by sending units to Europe for training, and then bringing them home upon replacement.

Rotaplan, aimed at aiding in the gold-flow problem overseas, as well as testing the flexibility of an Army division, was cancelled later in the year when it was determined the program was not paying off.

However, the new shape, and streamlined blueprints built into the division remained. Battalions and brigades fused into the division structure, replacing the battle groups and former pentomic conceptions.

The ROAD and Rotaplan programs were in themselves a challenge worthy enough of any division. But, the 2nd Division was not to stop there. They were not to become dormant.

With civil disturbances frequenting the area the "Indianheads" found themselves on many alerts, and on acasion, deploying elements for readiness. In the midst of this, the famed "Second" built a special Counter - Guerrilla Reaction Course. A complete "Asian Village" was constructed, duplicating in many ways the actual conditions that exit in southeast Asia. All this with the primary goal in mind of giving the division top training to keep it STRAC, ready-around-the-clock.

Still striving for perfection in any and all military objectives, the division went into a new program it devised called Pugil Training. This new form of bayonet training gave the individual soldier a more complex and physical approach face to face combat.

Immediately following a lengthy alert status, Annual Training Tests (ATT) and

Holiday Recipe

Sour Cream Fudge

2 cups granulated sugar
½ cups sour cream
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans

Grease 8 inch x 8 inch x 2 inch pan. In two quart sauce pan combine sugar and sour cream stirring well. Stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved; cover, then bring mixture to a boil. Boil one minute or until all sugar crystals on side of pan have melted. Remove cover, (if using candy thermometer, set in place.) Continue cooking without stirring, over gentle heat to 235 degrees F. or until a little of the mixture in cold water forms a soft ball. Let cool without stirring or moving, to 11 degrees F or until outside of the pan feels luke warm to the hand. Add vanilla and beat mixture with a heavy spoon until it is very creamy and loses its gloss; about 8 minutes. Add nuts, pour into greased pan. Cut while warm. Makes about one pound.

Santa Brings Joy at 3rd Brigade

By 3rd Brigade PIO

The eyes of every child were aglow and the parents of these children could feel the excitement as the officers and enlisted men and the families of the 3rd Brigade gathered for an old fashioned holiday party complete with old Santa himself.

The festivities, which were held in the mess hall of Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, began promptly at 9:00 a.m. After the initial greetings were completed, a movie was shown.

Cookies and ice cream were the next order of business, and then the long awaited main event, the arrival of Santa Claus. At this moment the excitement grew to a fever pitch as each of the approximately 45 children present rushed to Santa to voice their last minute Christmas wishes. For each child that spoke to Santa there was a special gift of candy and a toy.

Ex-Marine Bomber Pilot New 2nd Aviation Bn CO

By 2nd Aviation PIO

A former Marine and two time winner of the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism in combat has assumed command of the 2nd Aviation Battalion.

In a change of command ceremony at battalion headquarters, Maj. Paul B. Robison assumed command from Lt. Col. John M. Stephens Jr., who departs for the Test and Evaluation Group here at Fort Benning.

Maj. Robison entered military service in September 1940 as an enlisted man and was discharged one year later. In July 1942 he reentered as a Naval Aviation Cadet in pre-flight training, graduating from the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Florida in 1943. After eight months in B-25 bomber training at Cherry Point, N. C., he was transferred to the South Pacific for combat flying. It was here that he received his two awards of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

He returned to the states in March 1945 and in the winter of that year was discharged. Employed as a manufacturers' representative but still active in the Marine Corps Reserve he transferred his commission to the National Guard in 1949. Recalled to active duty in 1956, the major attended Helicopter School at Gary Air Force Base, Tex., and Fort Rucker, Ala. Upon completion of the course he was reassigned to Fort Meade, Md., with the 56th Artillery Brigade flight section.

In July 1958, Maj. Robison was sent to Korea and the 15th Aviation Company, 1st Cavalry Division until the summer of 1959 when he returned to the states and Fort Banks, Mass. In September 1961 he arrived at the 2nd Aviation Company to assume command of the General Support Platoon. When the 2nd Division went under ROAD he became the Company A commander. He was promoted to his present rank in July 1962.

An interesting sidelight: Maj. Robison was a member of the first marine unit to fly the B-25 bomber from San Francisco to Hawaii. This was the same plane in which Jimmie Doolittle flew the first Tokyo raid. During his tour with the Marines the major received the Air Medal with seven Gold Stars.

Maj. Robison resides with his wife Rosemarie and daughter Janet on the reservation. He also has a daughter Rosemarie currently enrolled at Stonehill College, Mass. and another daughter, Kathleen at Mount Saint Joseph Academy in the same state.

1963 Was Busy

Field Training Exercises (FTX), the mighty 2nd Division swung into the Swift Strike III maneuver with full force.

During Swift Strike the busy "Second", referred to by the Secretary of Defense as the hardest working division in the Army, executed battle maneuvers so fantastic across the Carolina mock - battlefield that they captured the imagination and hearts of the Carolina people. In addition, they earned the nickname of "That Sneaky Bunch From Fort Benning" from their opponents.

Almost before the Swift Strike III dust had settled the 2nd Division began immediate training and briefing on amphibious warfare. Changing style, training methods and mobility in such a quick fashion it could put a chameleon to shame, the mighty "Indianheads" turned their abilities loose on the beaches of Little Creek, Va.

Here, the 2nd Infantry Division ran through beach landing assaults in rigorous amphibious style. Just as had been the case a few weeks before across the hot Carolina countryside, the men wearing the famous "Indianhead" patch caught the fancy and admiration of onlookers. In this instance, it was the Marines, a pretty fair judge of fighting men, who watched in awe as the doughboys from Benning took to beach assaults as if they were inborn instincts.

After finishing the Little Creek exercises, the most decorated division in World War I settled down to more training at home.

Operation "Swamp Fox" was the finale to a fast moving year for the men from Fort Benning. Trudging through the eastern Georgia swampland the already multi-battle indoctrinated troops sharpened their skills at realistic counter - guerrilla training. Through the swamp-infested marshlands the 2nd Division soldiers added more laurels to their heritage as they proved themselves equal to the task of fighting against, or as, guerrillas.

Continuing field problems, exercises and close scrutiny, has kept that "fine edge" that has slowly become synonomous to the 2nd Division. Stressing mobility, combat readiness, training for any type warfare; meshing them into one well-knit elite fighting force, the 2nd Infantry Division awaits the birth of 1964 — ready. Ready for anything, anytime, anywhere. . .

It Is New Years Resolution Time

A new year is about to be born. And with it comes the inevitable resolutions.

New Year's resolutions are an annual farce. Some are kept, but most are not. An example of resolutions less apt to be made, let alone kept, are listed below.

A GENERAL: "I will not chew out any colonel all year long and faithfully promise to have no staff meetings."

A COLONEL: "I will hold no surprise inspections and will throw away my tranquilizers."

A MAJOR: "I will not hate the colonel — I will not hate the colonel — I will not hate the colonel."

A CAPTAIN: "I will not give an Article 15 all year and will cancel all company details."

A LIEUTENANT: "I won't let the first sergeant scare me and I will not go to the Officer's Club at all."

A SERGEANT MAJOR: "I will not snarl at the platoon sergeants and will sit behind my desk and smile at everyone."

A FIRST SERGEANT: "I will not break my company clerk's neck. I will love all lieutenants."

A SERGEANT: "I will not growl or bark, but will be humble and kind to all the privates."

A CORPORAL: "I will throw away the sergeants stripes I have hidden in my drawer."

A PRIVATE FIRST CLASS: "I will never complain or gripe and will not whistle at any girls."

A PRIVATE: "I will worship all recruiting sergeants and save half my pay each payday."

These have been one side of the story. Here is a list of the resolutions that WILL be kept.

A GENERAL: "I will wish for another star."

A COLONEL: "I will wish for any star."

A MAJOR: "I will wish for a silver leaf."

A CAPTAIN: "I will wish for a gold leaf."

A 1ST. LT.: "I will wish for railroad tracks."

A 2ND LT.: "I'll take a martini and a silver bar, please."

A SERGEANT: "I will renew my NCO Club membership."

A CORPORAL: "I will try to make sergeant."

A PFC: "I want Spec Four."

A PRIVATE: "I just want OUT!"

And so, 1964 is about to replace 1963. Because of this, most everyone, everywhere, will perform the ritual of making resolutions. And if the punishment for failure to keep each new year resolve shoud be the loss of a tooth, denture "stick - um" would become the nation's number one selling commodity.

12th Artillery Visit Made by Gen. Coffin

Brig. Gen. Robert E. Coffin, assistant commander of the 2nd Division, toured the 12th Artillery recently and among other things, saw the positioning of a rocket launcher.

Gen. Coffin was met at Headquarters of the 12th by the 12th's commander, Lt. Col. James H. McClurkin, a veteran of four airborne divisions.

Formerly of the Army's artillery branch himself with numerous important assignments in that field prior to general officer rank, Gen. Coffin received a briefing on those two factors in the unit's trophy room.

Next, accompanied by Col. McClurkin, Lt. Col. Joseph R. Boisvert (newly - switched from commander of the "2nd's" 17th Artillery to Division Artillery executive officer) and acting Sgt. Maj. Elton R. Butler of the 12th Artillery, Gen. Coffin trooped to battery section rooms to inspect equipment displays.

A class in progress on "Special Weapons" was quietly watched by Gen. Coffin and his party; and then, in front of Headquarters, the one - star general witnessed the positioning of a rocket launcher.

He lunched at the 12th Artillery's consolidated mess hall and departed the area by sedan.

During Gen. Coffin's career as an artillery expert, one notable milestone was his direction of the Army's successful race to get a first U. S. satellite in orbit, the Jupiter-C, in January 1958. He then was the chief of the Missiles and Space Division.

Joint Mess Takes 37th Arty Award

By 37th Artillery PIO

The award for the best mess hall in the 37th Artillery and in the Division Artillery was presented recently to the consolidated mess of Battery C and Battery D for the month of November. The mess hall is operated by Sgt. Dalton and Todd.

Sgt. Herring Top Soldier at Hq. Following Tour With 1st Cavalry

A recent member of the 1st Cavalry Division, the unit which guards "freedom's frontier" in Korea, has assumed the duties of first sergeant in the 2nd Infantry Division's Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

First Sgt. Robert D. Herring, who was promoted to his present rank on November 27, first entered the Army in June 1947 after his graduation from Natchez High school Natchez, Miss. After completing his basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C., he made his first trip to the "Land of the Morning Calm" and was assigned to XXIV Corps in the capitol city of Seoul.

After a 'long' 12 months, Sgt. Herring returned to Fort Jackson where he served until 1952. His next stop was Fort Benning and the Basic Airborne Course which he successfully completed. This strenuous school was followed by three years of duty with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Sgt. Herring got his first look at Europe in 1955 when he was reassigned to the Seventh U. S. Army in Germany. There he served with the 9th Infantry Division, VII Corps and concluded his three year tour as the enlisted chief of the Seventh Army's Non-Commissioned Officers Academy leadership committee.

Following his return to the states in 1958 he joined the faculty of the Department of Military Science at Northwestern State College, Natchitoches, La., where he served as sergeant major of the unit and taught American military history in addition to coaching the top ROTC college drill team in the U.S.

A second trip to Korea come in June 1961 when he was assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division and duty with the 1st Battle Group, 7th Cavalry.

While there he served as first sergeant of Company E and in September of '61 was awarded the Expert Infantryman's Badge, attaining a higher score than any other enlisted man tested in the division.

He joined the "Indianhead" Division for the first time in July of this year when he became first sergeant of Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry.

He now lives with his wife Mary and their three children at 130 Englander St., Fort Benning.

DID YOU KNOW

That the Quartermaster Corps, set up in 1775, was known during the Revolutionary War as the Quartermaster General's Department, and more briefly, throughout the 19th century, as the Quartermaster's Department?

Fifth Best Mess Award To 72nd's Company 'C'

By 3rd Brigade PIO

It was number five for Company C, 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor as that company's mess hall was recently awarded its fifth Best Mess Hall of the Month award. This last one was given for the month of November.

During a brief ceremony held at Ruth Assault Training Course, where the battalion was completing its ATT's, a plaque was presented to SFC Horace R. King, Company C mess sergeant. The award was presented by Col. John K. Walker, 3rd Brigade commander. This plaque is a permanent award which is to be added to the collection of trophies which are already on display at Company C.

An additional plaque which bears the names of each of the monthly winners of the best mess award was presented to Capt. James C. Shepard, commander of Company C. The plaque is a rotating award with permanent possession determined by the company which has received the most monthly awards.

Commenting on the award, Col. Walker stated that the fact that Company C had just received its fifth award should become a challenge to the other battalions to attempt to wrest the award away from Sgt. King and Company C. He added that such a task may prove to be difficult.

2 Sergeants ReUp At 37th Artillery

Two 37th Artillery sergeants recently reenlisted for six years.

Sgt. Clinton Venisee from Battery C, a section chief on a 155mm Howitzer and Sgt. James T. Griffey, Battery B, is presently training for future assignment as a personnel staff NCO.

In the first basketball clash of the season the "We Servers," coached by Lawry Jordan and Walter Clark, squeezed out a 43-41 triumph over the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry team.

Tops on the scoreboard were Walter Clark, Clint Johnson, Martin Green, and Maurice Ward. Other members of the team are Donald Beachy, William Jackson, Wayne Beales, Eugene Jefferson, and Mitchell Grant.

On the volleyball court the "We Servers" took the series last week from the 122nd Signal Battalion with a total score of 39-30.

A MAD SCRAMBLE

Robert Smith of the 2nd of the 9th scrambles for extra yardage from ground level. A 2nd Engineer player holds a flag he has just removed from Smith to end the play.

'LOOK AT ME GO BOYS'

MOVING OUT

Halfback Lucius Willis of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry begins a long run during last Wednesday's championship game with 2nd Engineer Battalion. The Manchus won the game 20-7 and took the championship.

ROSE IS RESERVE

The National League's Rookie of the Year, second baseman Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds, is now on active duty at Fort Knox, Ky., as an Army Reservist.

Taylor, Willis Paced 2nd of 9th to Title

The twosome of Harold Taylor and Lucius Willis played a big part in the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry's 20-7 victory over 2nd Engineer Battalion last week for the 2nd Division Flag Football Tournament championship.

Quarterback Taylor opened up things in the early moments of the game when he whipped a 19-yard pass to Willis for a touchdown. A similar Taylor to Willis pass play was good for the extra point.

STATISTICS

	2-9th	2-Engrs
First Downs	7	7
Rushing yardage	52	115
PASSES yardage	38	56
Passes attempted	7	8
Passes completed	2	4
Passes intercepted by	1	0
Punts	1-20	2-35
Yards penalized	65	35

Taylor was also responsible for his team's second score. This time he galloped 49 yards to pay dirt. He threw another pass to Willis for the point after touchdown.

Robert Smith tallied the final touchdown for the victors. He gained the six-pointer by intercepting a 2nd Engineer Battalion pass and running 30 yards into the end zone. The attempt for the extra point was unsuccessful.

Leroy Anderson scored the 2nd Engineers only touchdown of the fray when he ran 21 yards. Tony Berry passed to Chester Lewis for the extra point.

Ironically, the losers outplayed the champion Manchus in most areas. The Engineers gathered in 116 yards rushing to 2nd of the 9th's 56 and 48 yards passing to the Manchu's 32.

A major factor was the 2nd of the 9th's four timely interceptions of Engineer passes.

The 2nd of the 9th finished up the season with an 11-3 won-lost record while 2nd Engineers ended up 8-3.

College Cage Squads Closing Rating Gaps

By Dave Braun

Right now the nation's top collegiate cage squads are as close in the ratings as bees in a beehive and if you look close enough you'll see they're also getting closer geographically.

Devout basketball fans who get the thrill of it all from watching the best might just as well pack up and visit the midwest where one can watch any of the top four by driving eight hours in any direction.

We can just as well start our motoring trip in the Windy City where we find Loyola still clinging to the No. 1 position. Grabbing a bit of its air of prestige from 1962, the Ramblers ran their 1963 unbeaten string to five over the weekend by ripping apart little Ohio Wesley, 91-47.

I'm almost without words at the early season play of my No. 2 team, New York University. Considered the best in the east and by many the best in the U.S. before the season began, NYU bowed to tiny Wagner, 77-76, in overtime last week, their second defeat in six contests.

Number 3 Cincinnati dumped Colorado, 82-64, and Denver, 64-48, last weekend, for its fifth victory against one setback, but fell to the number four slot behind Kentucky and Michigan who for the moment, just can't seem to do anything wrong.

Kentucky has vaulted all the way from the No. 4 spot into the second position behind Loyola. The Wildcats may not be as good as Cincinnati, Michigan or possibly even NYU, but you can't prove it by their record.

With All-America Charles "Cotton" Nash and Louisville product Ted Deeken showing the way, the Wildcats copped their own Christmas Invitational Tourney in Lexington for the third straight year. Opening up by crushing Wisconsin, 108-85, on Friday, they then bumped off surprising Wake Forest, 98-75, in the finals.

Look out for Michigan. The sophomore laden Wolverines, who three years ago had to borrow football players to fill out their lineup, proved their 6-9 record was no farce last weekend by slapping powerful Duke, Jeff Mullins and all, 83-67.

Cazzie Russell contributed 21 points for the Ann Arbor crew and Larry Tregoning added 17 more as the No. 6 team of last week advanced to the No. 3 slot on the totem pole.

Next on the list of powerhouses is unbeaten Vanderbilt, who behind 6-9 sophomore Clyde Lee, earned a hard fought 91-82 win over Louisville.

Davidson is next in line. The little North Carolina outfit racked up its sixth straight win last Saturday night by bombing East Carolina, 105-77.

Then there's UCLA, with whom I guess I'd better quit going against the experts and give a spot in my top ten after three weeks of picking.

Oregon State may have dropped a couple of notches in my top ten, but they're still to be reckoned with. The West Coast gang put down Indiana, 70-57 last weekend, their sixth win in seven outings.

So here's the way it stacks up this week:

1. Loyola (6-0)
2. Kentucky (7-0)
3. Michigan (6-0)
4. Cincinnati (5-1)
5. Vanderbilt (7-0)
6. Davidson (7-0)
7. New York University (4-2)
8. Duke (6-2)
9. UCLA (6-0)
10. Oregon State (6-1)

3 Cage Leagues Being Organized For YAC Youths

The Youth Activities Club is now organizing three leagues for competition during the 1964 basketball season which is slated to begin in January and end during March.

The teams will be organized in the following leagues: Biddy League, for boys 8 to 10 years old; Doughboy League, for youngsters 11 to 13 years-old, and the Intermediate League, for 13 to 15 years old.

YAC officials stated that volunteers are badly needed to serve as coaches, instructors, referees and score keepers.

Interested personnel are urged to telephone the YAC sports office, 545-4947, or contact their unit YAC representative.

Cuartel Quarterback

Cotton Laurels Slated for Texas; Illini Will Run Away in the Roses

After a three week layoff, the Cuartel Quarterback is back in business. Most football fans will be glued to their television sets New Year's Day, when some of the nation's top gridiron elevens settle their differences.

Certainly it's more fun to watch football games when you know who the winners will be. That's what I intend to reveal.

The national championship, a quite nebulous and unofficial title which was invented by the press, has already gone to the Texas Longhorns, but after their Cotton Bowl battle with Navy, it's conceivable that they will be a dethroned champ.

Roger Staubach was everyone's All America quarterback. He can move Navy's offensive machine against any collegiate defense in the world and he'll move it well against Texas. It will be an interesting afternoon in Dallas.

Cotton Bowl

TEXAS OVER NAVY. . . Duke scored at will on the Middies. They would have won had they been able to stop the Navy attack. Texas will slow Staubach down enough to outscore the Cotton Bowl visitors and take a 32-19 victory.

Rose Bowl

ILLINOIS OVER WASHINGTON. . .The Illini have a great aggregation led by All America Dick Butkus. They should reveal a mis-match in the Rose Bowl. Washington always seems to come up with the "great effort" when it counts most and might stay within two touchdowns.

Orange Bowl

NEBRASKA OVER AUBURN. . .This Orange Bowl bout is the premier battle of the day. It pits teams that didn't get their just share of the spotlight during the season. Possibly the best two teams in action, Auburn and Nebraska will provide plenty of excitement. Look for Nebraska's depth to wear down the Plainsmen. Nebraska will win 14-9.

Sugar Bowl

OLE MISS OVER ALABAMA. . .The Tide is good, but Johnny Vaught's Rebels are a great team. They will stymie the quarterback starved Alabama offense and will take all the "Sugar" by a 28-6 score.

Gator Bowl

NORTH CAROLINA OVER AIR FORCE. . .The Falcons could surprise, but they don't have the strength, "on paper," to cope with the high-powered Tarheel offense. Ken Willard and his Tarheel Teammates will teach the flyboys what it's like on the ground. I predict a 21-0 Gator Bowl contest.

Monthly Tournament Won by MTU Firers

SFC WILLIAM B. BLANKENSHIP JR.
Handgun Tournament Winner

National pistol champion Bill Blankenship of the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit zoomed from behind last Sunday to win the individual title in the Post Rifle and Pistol Club's monthly pistol tournament, and then paced the MTU's Blue team to victory in the Center Fire match.

Blankenship won only three of Sunday's eight fired matches but placed high enough in the rest to accumulate his winning total of 2,645 out of a possible 2,700 points.

He had a 10-point margin over runnerup Fred Schaser, also from MTU.

The Army Blue squad, composed of Hershel Anderson, George Snavely, Schaser and Blakenship, compiled a total of 1,172 points. Their victory gave the Army's top shooting outfit a sweep of the team events.

MTU's Grey squad took the .45 caliber team event and the .22 caliber match which was shot Saturday. Army Green topped all entries in the Service pistol match.

Merriweather Jones, James McNally, James Cook and Schaser fired a total of 1,163 points in the .45 caliber match. Firers on the winning .22 caliber team were Sam Hunter, Jones, McNally and Schaser. Their total was 1,178.

The Green squad, which had an aggregate of 1,147 points, had as its members Loyd Burchett, Robert Wilford, Barry Slack and Hunter.

The Second Infantry Division swept all of the team events in the Expert Class.

Three different MTU shooters won the three fired aggregates. Blakenship took the .45 events with an 886; Ralph Thompson topped the field in the .38 caliber matches with an 884 and Snavely led the first day by winning the .22 caliber competition with an 888.

All 12 of the fired matches were won by MTU firers.

FINAL TABULATIONS

The four service academies finished the '63 football season with a combined record of 32 victories and just seven losses, two of the setbacks coming from service opponents. Navy beat Army and Army beat Air Force. Final records: Coast Guard, 9-0; Navy, 9-1; Air Force, 7-3; Army, 7-3.

Loss of President, Loss of Sportsman

Sportsmen will long remember 1963 as the year the United States lost a President who was, besides a fighter for peace, a fellow sportsman.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy took an avid interest in sports in his country. In sports he left several indelible marks. As a busy president with mountainous responsibilities, he could find time to champion physical fitness, realizing the need for every American to be sound of body as well as mind.

Although hampered by a painful back, a carry-over of a World War II injury, President Kennedy kept in shape with swimming, sailing, an occasional round of golf, and, yes, touch football.

The President was known to keep up with college and professional sports by scanning the sports pages daily. When he could, he would see a baseball or football game. His itinerary for Nov. 30, 1963, called for him to flip the coin and sit on each side of the field at the Army-Navy game.

President Kennedy was also honorary chairman of the U. S. Olympic Committee, and he kept a keen eye out for his country's Olympic fortunes.

As an American, and as a sportsman, President Kennedy would have liked nothing better than to see the United States return home victoriously from the 1964 Olympic Games scheduled in Tokyo next summer.

He urged all Americans to prepare for the Olympic games, to take part in the effort as athletes, as contributors to the U. S. Olympic Fund and, just as important, as cheering spectators.

A United States victory in the 1964 Olympics would indeed be a tribute to John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the President and the sportsman.

Atom Shell Increases Fire Power

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The field commander's big punch has been wrapped up in the smallest package yet.

A nuclear projectile that can be fired from any 155 millimeter artillery piece has been developed by the Army and the Atomic Energy Commission.

The Pentagon says that this will greatly increase the nuclear firepower of the Army and Marine combat units. The atomic shell has a range of about eight miles or about the same as a conventional 155-mm high explosive round.

Army and Marine Corps units have received training devices to assist in teaching artillerymen the techniques of assembling and firing the nuclear round.

DOD says the actual nuclear ammunition will be available in the near future.

The 155-mm howitzer is used in direct and general support roles in armored and mechanized divisions, armored cavalry regiments, separate battalions and as a general support weapon in infantry divisions.

46-Year-Old Vet Goes 'Airborne' After 23 Years

A former Marine combat veteran with four Purple Hearts and seven major campaigns to his credit, SSgt. Harold M. Hambrick was 46-years-old when he volunteered for parachute training last month. He works as a squad leader with Company C, 3rd Battalion, 187th Infantry, 11th Air Assault Division.

It took SSgt. Hambrick five weeks to complete the rugged airborne course. The delay was due to injuries. He made all five qualifying parachute jumps in spite of a plastic bandage on his leg.

SSgt. Hambrick entered the Marine Corps in January, 1940, and received his boot training at Parris Island, S. C. During World War II he served with the 1st and 3rd Marine Divisions in the Pacific Theater and participated in seven major campaigns.

He returned to the United States in December, 1945, and was honorably discharged from the Corps at Camp Pendleton, Calif. in January, 1947, he enlisted in the Army and received his training at Ford Ord, Calif.

During the contest each member pledged to lose from four to 12 pounds or suffer a small fine of 25 cents for each pound not lost.

The purpose of Tops is to aid the over-weight person in taking off pounds sensibly.

New Barter Contract Signed With Holland

HEIDELBERG (ANF)—A barter agreement for the transport of U.S. military supplies and equipment in Europe in exchange for surplus American agricultural commodities has been concluded here between Headquarters, U.S. Army, Europe and the Damco Barge Lines of Rotterdam, Holland. According to Brig. Gen. W. N. Redling, USAREUR Transportation Officer, the initial arrangement represents $700,000 in gold flow savings.

In effect through June 30, 1964, the contract calls for the transportation services of Damco barges from Rotterdam and Antwerp up the Rhine River to ports in Germany. Some cargo will also be shipped over the return route.

"We expect to conclude further arrangements beginning next fiscal year which will run between one and two million dollars annually," General Redling stated.

Gen. Redling further pointed out that this was the first transport barter arrangement since implementation of the reduction of gold flow program.

History of Communism

Facism Gives Tough Opposition

(Eighth of a series of 20 articles entitled The History of Communism, by MSgt. Walter Stewart, USMC. Reprinted by AFPS from the San Diego Chevron, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.)

Fascism had reared its head in Europe with the rise of Hitler and Mussolini. Communists fought the movement, primarily because of fascism's nationalistic identification, which conflicts with communism's international character. (Otherwise the socialistic aims of the two ideologies have much in common.) Too, the lower being amassed by fascists threatened the communist movement throughout Europe.

When Stalin learned his earlier opinion of Hitler and fascism (as temporary and inconsequential) to be in error, he began to marshal his European followers for the conflict.

At the seventh Congress of the Communist International (1935), European party members were told that democracies no longer were enemies of the party. In fact, democratic legislators were to be wooed — as were all who would unite against fascism. At home, he reorganized his military forces from a system of militias into a standing army.

The memory of the German onslaught across Russia in World War I was still fresh on the Russian mind. Hitler's remarks, at the 1936 Nuremberg rally, about Siberia and the Ukraine belonging to the German Lebensraum (environment) drove a stake of fear into Stalin's heart.

He feverishly set about trying to form an alliance with Britain and France. His efforts got nowhere.

The Munich give - away show, viewed in the light of Western refusals to ally, convinced Russia (and remember Stalin was Russia) that Britain's Chamberlain and France's Deladier were encouraging Hitler to undertake the Russian bear on the field of battle. Consequently, Stalin attempted an alliance with Germany. This too was unfruitful — at the moment.

By April 1939, the Russian felt his position as desperate. He wanted an alliance with somebody — anybody. He sent out two alliance secretaries on the same date: one to Germany; the other to the West. The West was again hesitant; the Nazis were not.

An alliance with Russia had become most desirable to Hitler, who wanted to safeguard his eastern front for his impending attack to the west. A non-aggression pact was signed on Aug. 23. It provided for the division of Poland and ceded Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania to the Russians.

Germany averred herself to be "politically disinterested" in the Balkans, while Russia was extremely interested and, when the Nazis roamed across France, Stalin moved into those states. (Stalin — it may be seen — had thus formed southern, central and northern buffer zones between the Germans and his country.

Hesitant to appear territorially aggressive in the Baltics, Russia staged plebiscites in Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Through falsification of ballots, that tiny trio was made to appear to be clamoring for the Red protection. With the Finns, it was a different matter: it took three months of war to subdue the hardy and fiercely nationalistic people of Finland. And Germany soon pressured Russia out of the Balkans.

It can be fairly stated that Hitler did have territorial designs on Russia, but had no intention of moving in until he had subdued the western powers.

However, the vision of Russian oil in Russian hands, together with what seemed to be Russia's encirclement of Germany, changed his mind.

Season's Greetings!

As Nineteen-sixty-three draws to a close, and people throughout the world look forward to their various holiday celebrations, all of us at McDonald's feel doubly blessed. First, that we live in a country such as ours, where there is room for all of us to build our lives in freedom and peace. Secondly, that we have been fortunate enough to live and work in a community such as this, where so very, very many of you have honored us with your patronage. May we take this opportunity to extend the greetings of the season and to say thank you, while we wish you the very best for the future.

230 Receive Awards for Suggestions During 1963

BY IDA C. EVANS

Ideas paid off for 230 Fort Benning civilians who devised work improvements during fiscal year 1963.

Heading the list is Rudolph L. Cook who received $300 for proposing a new bulk system of buying, storing and dispensing oil products on the post.

The system will save the government an estimated $21,338 the first year alone, officials said.

Cook's contribution to economy of post operation was just part of an over all $174,941 savings expected to result from suggestions made by the 230 civilians last year. Including Cook's $300, which was the highest award made during the 12 months, the civilians, whose suggestions were approved, received awards amounting to $4,455.

Ingenuity Applied

"Post civilians applied their ingenuity to a variety of work problems in the past year," according to J. Frank Spear, executive secretary of the Incentive Award Committee of The Infantry Center Civilian Personnel Section.

"Of course we know," he continued, "that many improvements in work procedures and techniques are never formally presented for the consideration of our committee. We encourage employees to put their suggestions in writing."

"Among those who did take time to let us know what he had worked out to improve his job was Cook," Spear said.

Cook had a problem in dispensing solvents to units. He inspects petroleum, oil and lubricant (POL) operations for The Infantry Center's Supply Control and Storage Section.

"We were buying solvent in the drums," Cook said. "When a unit needed solvent, we issued it in the drums. The drums had to be returned to us because we had to pay a deposit on them."

Cook suggested that an underground tank be built so he could buy solvent in bulk. That improvement alone saved the government $14,112 a year, because solvent is almost eight and half cents cheaper per gallon in bulk than in 55 gallon drums.

Other savings such as manhours formerly required for keeping records and loading and unloading brought the estimate up to an over all savings of $29,338. Subtracting $8,000 for the cost of installation, the first year saving is expected to be $21,338.

Another valuable suggestion came from an electronics equipment installer and repairer in The Infantry Center Maintenance Section, Thomas M. Rainey.

Rainey and an aircraft mechanic make adjustments to a helicopter while a third man sits in the cockpit working a switch for their benefits.

"With at least one helicopter per day coming in for this type of adjustment," Rainey said, "working that switch was taking up too much time."

Need Only Two

Rainey devised a portable switch no larger than a pocket transistor radio, that can be operated by one of the repairmen, eliminating the need for a third man on the job, Spear said.

For this suggestion that will save the government $1,857.60 a year, Rainey was given an award of $95.

Milton F. Gallops made an award - winning suggestion that grew out of his concern for guards at the stockade gates.

"Padlocks on the gates were locked and unlocked at least 250 times a day," he continued. "We were having to spend about $136 a year to replace worn out padlocks for the stockade gates. I investigated and found out that for only $91 we could install electrical locking devices on the gates."

Officials estimated that Gallops' suggestion would save the government approximately $5,148 a year, primarily by eliminating the necessity for posting a 12-hour guard at the rear gate of the stockade.

Gallops received an award of $150 for his suggestion.

Mrs. R. H. Major received $100 for a suggestion she made last year which made it possible for the government to save $4,918 by spending $435.

"Change the Door"

The disbursement of $435 was for a new door for a classified documents vault with a locking system that meets new requirements for storage of confidential, secret and top secret documents. The new requirements, which appeared in Army regulations in March, 1962, necessitated changes in the storage system then in use in The Infantry Center Adjutant General Section where Mrs. Major works.

By providing a new door for the outdated security vault, it would meet the new requirements. Without the change to the vault, it would have been necessary to buy a number of steel cabinets with individual locks meeting the regulation.

Mrs. Richard W. Jenkins was awarded $75 for suggesting the use of conductive shoes instead of conductive slip-ons in the operating rooms at Martin Army Hospital.

"Operating room personnel wear conductive foot-gear to constantly ground static electricity as they work," Mrs. Jenkins said. "This prevents a possible spark that might ignite flammable gases."

As purchasing clerk for the hospital's Medical Supply Office, Mrs. Jenkins found that temporary conductive footwear was costing $1,620 per year, whereas fitted conductive shoes would cost $495.75 a year.

During the past fiscal year, the Incentive Award Committee received 483 suggestions from civilians. Of 230 approved, 110 could be evaluated in dollars and cents savings, while 120 involved benefits of an intangible nature such as health, safety and morale factors.

The Incentive Award program is open to military personnel as well as civilians, and provides cash and honorary awards.

During Christmas Season

Colors Red, Green Play Big Part

The colors red and green are an integral part of the Christmas story.

The red is explained by the Rust Craft Greeting Cards in its Christmas card entitled the "Legend of the Christmas Rose." According to this ancient story, a little shepherdess, watching from afar as the Three Wise Men presented their gifts to the Christ Child, wept because she had no gift to offer.

Flowers Produced

Flowers sprang up where her tears fell, says the legend. She gathered them and hastened to present them to the Infant Jesus. While she was kneeling at the crib, His hand touched the petals and they turned a beautiful red.

A similar legend from Mexico tells how the flaming red poinsettia came to be connected with Christmas.

Poinsettia Plant

A poor Mexican boy went to church on Christmas Eve in great sadness because he did not have a gift to lay before the crib of the Holy Child. He knelt humbly on the cold ground outside the church and prayed. When he rose, a green plant with dazzling red blooms sprang up at his feet.

The poinsettia was named for America's first ambassador to Mexico — Joel R. Poinsett who brought the flame-hued plant from Mexico in 1829.

Evergreens Important

Over the centuries, evergreens have played an important part in the Christmas celebration and the color green is symbolic of them and everlasting life.

The early French and English settlers hung pieces of evergreens over their doors to indicate that Christ was present.

Holly is believed to have sprung up where the Infant Jesus took his first baby steps.

Trimming Trees

Numerous tales are told of how the Christmas tree came to be associated with Christmas. Historians believe, however, that it was Martin Luther in Germany who trimmed the first tree with candles to show his family the splendor of the night on which Christ was born. Later, apples, candy, and colored papers were added to the decorations.

Christmas Decorations

According to the Rust Craft Institute, red and green are the popular choices for ribbon at Christmastime, yet rank last — 16th and 17th — in sales during the rest of the year.

Army Helicopter Sets 6 Records In Speed Test

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AFPS) — A U.S. helicopter pilot who served in the Republic of Viet Nam has flown the Army's OH-2SG light observation helicopter for what is believed to be six new world records for rotocraft.

Army Capt. Bertram G. Leach sped across desert sands at this California air base flying the OH-23G nearly 124 mph to shatter two previous records and establish four new ones.

Certification of the records must be made by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

Those pending are for world records in two weight classes on three courses for speed over a straight course and speed over a closed circuit.

ORAL VACCINE

The Defense Medical Supply Center, Brooklyn, N.Y., bought 30,149,480 doses of oral polio vaccine last year, enough to administer one dose to every person in the Western United States plus the city of Philadelphia.

2nd Lt. Boice Is Top Grad

Second Lt. William M. Boice Dec. 19 was recognized as honor graudate of the 151 - member Ranger No. 4 class at exercises conducted at Theater No. 1.

Lt. Boice, who is assigned to the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment, Germany, had his Ranger tab pinned on by Brig. Gen John Norton, assistant commandant of The Infantry School who was guest speaker.

Gen. Norton told the graduates that the period of trial they had just completed would enable them to meet the additional challenges which lie ahead in their careers.

Air Assault Test 'Most Important' Says Army's Vice Chief of Staff

One of the Army's top leaders, Gen. Barksdale Hamlett, vice chief of staff, last Thursday night said officers and enlisted men of the 11th Air Assault Division are engaged in one of the Army's most important assignments.

Speaking to members of the Columbus Chapter, Military Order of the World Wars, Gen. Hamlett said Army aircraft have a role in land operations from counterinsurgency to general war. He added that this role must be soundly conceived to be within capabilities of men and machines for each type of operation.

"To misjudge this role can be as critical an error as was the Allies' misjudgment of the use of armor early in World War II" he said. "In seeking to determine the best use of air mobility, we have no predetermined conclusions."

Open End Test

"The tests being conducted from Fort Benning are open end in nature; their purpose is to learn and to develop. The officers and men taking part have a mission as important as any in the Army today."

A companion requirement for air mobility on the battlefield, Gen. Hamlett said, is strategic mobility, the ability to shift major forces strategically to fulfill global missions.

He cited the recent operation "Big Lift" as an example of advancements being made in strategic mobility. (The mammoth exercise, which was accomplished in October, moved more than 14,000 men of the 2nd Armored Division, Fort Hood, Texas, and supporting unit; from the United States to a state of combat readiness in Germany.)

Gen. Hamlett said strategic air mobility permits the United States to deploy a major landpower force rapidly to a potential crisis area in support of the national political purpose.

"Such a deployment can forestall the further development of the crisis, or provide additional power on the spot should it erupt into open conflict," he stated.

Notes Limitations

There are, however, distinct limitations to strategic mobility, he pointed out.

"Hostilities already under way in a theater obviously impose a limiting factor on the use of strategic airlift," the general added. "The airfield installations necessary to receive strategic troop carrier planes are relatively few in number and they represent large, fixed and well-known targets.

"Heavy weapons and equipment that must be prestocked overseas for airlifted forces are another limiting factor. Tanks, artillery pieces and vehicles that are prestocked result in a loss of flexibility in logistic support, and this is a serious problem in items that are in short supply," Gen. Hamlett said.

A further disadvantage, he said, is that prestocked equipment requires a large outlay for maintenance; if dispersed for safety, the problem of maintenance and the time required to join the equipment and the airlifted forces are increased.

Despite these disadvantages, the general indicated, the Army still must maintain this capability.

Global Mission

"The U. S. Army will have a global mission as long as the free world is under attack," Gen. Hamlett continued. "To meet contingences which may arise at any time in any part of the world requires strategic mobility that enables the conduct of prompt and sustained combat wherever the interests of the United States demand it; but speed of deployment must not be attained at a disproportionate expense to staying power.

"There are not enough resources to fill every need completely, therefore we cannot increase one capability without a corresponding decrease in another. Obviously there is a point of diminishing return from resources allocated to strategic air lift and to prestockage, but there are decisive advantages to be gained before this point is reached. We intend to achieve these advantages in cooperation with the Air Force."

In summary, Gen. Hamlett said, the Army sees strategic air mobility for major Army combat units as a necessary asset whose full potential can be achieved only in balance with forward deployed forces in critical areas, and with a strong capability in sea lift.

Gen. Hamlett digressed from his discussion of battlefield and strategic air mobility to touch on the Army's need to somehow maintain its capable young officers, the ones who command platoons and companies.

"I feel that this is a pertinent topic in this area where officers of these years and duties predominate," he said. "The decision of these young men to continue on active service is pertinent to Army interests today, and even more pertinent to our future.

"I believe that it is at this stage of their service that most of these officers face and decide the question of whether to stay in the Army for a full career, or to resign and apply their energy and talents in another field," the speaker added. "For some, this question is not difficult to answer. They and their families find the rewards of active Army life outweigh its disadvantages."

"For others, the answer is not so simple and the decision is not easily reached. For many in this group the question hinges upon the attitude of the family toward the separations and periodic uprooting and moving that are required by duty," Gen. Hamlett stated.

He said the Army does all within its power to compensate with tangible benefits for these disruptive aspects of family life. We come, however, finally to the fact that tangible benefits cannot answer the disadvantages completely, and that the resources that do answer them must come from within the family itself, the general added.

Post Branch

Adjutant General Is Second AU Graduate

Col. Milton G. Schneider, Infantry Center adjutant general, last Monday was presented a certificate of completion for a bachelor of science degree in general studies from The American University.

Maj. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, Infantry Center commanding general, presented the certificate, which was given in lieu of a diploma to be awarded during the university's annual formal graduation next June.

Attending the simple ceremonies besides Col. Schneider and Gen. Rich, were Mrs. Schneider; John A. Timour, assistant dean, Division of General and Special Studies, American University; John B. Edge, resident director of the Fort Benning branch of the university; Col. Samuel W. Koster, Infantry Center chief of staff; Col. J. O. Jones, Infantry Center G-1 and Leonard S. Ozley, chief of The Infantry Center's Educational Development Section.

The presentation marked the completion of 15 years of off-campus, night class work for Col. Schneider.

Col. Schneider, who began his studies at the Fort Benning branch in January, 1962, is only the second person ever to complete all the requirements at the local center.

Although the university has no provisions for honor graduates of off - campus centers, Timour said Col. Schneider, if compared to campus students, would be a cum laude graduate.

Col. Schneider started his work at Trinity University, San Antonio, Texas, in 1948, and during the past 15 years has attended off - campus classes of Kansas State University, University of Kansas, University of Maryland, University of Georgia, University of Florida and the University of California.

Gen. Rich commended Col. Schneider for his accomplishment, noting that "there were many times when his regular duties made his studies more difficult.

The general also referred to Mrs. Schneider as the "unrecognized graduate" behind Col. Schneider.

New Window Dedicated

A stained glass window, presented to The Infantry Center Protestant Chapel by the Non-Commissioned Officers Wives Club, was unveiled at the 11 a.m. service at the Chapel Sunday.

Mrs. Robert E. Lamb, president of the club, unveiled the window, assisted by Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, Infantry Center chaplain.

The theme of the window is "Jesus, The Good Shepherd."

'AWOL' Feted After 10 Years

NUREMBERG, West Germany (AFPS) — An Army "AWOL" is being retired, but not for the reason you may think.

This AWOL is being retired with honors. For AWOL is the name given the world's first atomic cannon, which was fired May 25, 1953.

An Army spokesman said the 42-ton cannon's nickname came from the rumor that its roar and destructive fury frightened some members of its crew so much that they went "absent without leave."

LT. CSULAK INITIATES POST'S NEW INDOOR PISTOL RANGE
Behind Assistant Range Control Officer Is SSgt. Marvin H. Tawney, NCOIC

Indoor Pistol Range Open to All Shooters

A new indoor smallbore rifle and pistol range is being readied for availability to post personnel interested in learning, improving or keeping up with a sport rapidly becoming one of the most popular in the United States, marksmanship.

This new range, which will be available to all post personnel during duty hours and if the need arises, during off-duty hours, was thought of and fostered by Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs, The Infantry Center's Range Control officer, and his assistant, 1st Lt. Emery B. Csulak.

Boasting six points of fire on both rifle and pistol course, the new range (Bldg. 2601, across the street from Range Control) will provide the targets for firers. If enough interest is shown, Col. Burroughs mentioned opening an arms room for storage of firers' weapons.

Utilizing personnel from Match Headquarters, Range Control and the Small Arms Committee of The Infantry School's Weapons Department, the building which houses the ranges, an old temporary-type, two story wooden structure, was completely enclosed. Salvaged mattresses were used to line the walls of the ranges, and the post Pistol Club provided the lighting fixtures, bullet catches and metal splash boards.

Personnel from the 510th Engineer Maintenance Company welded the bullet catches and the attached splash boards.

Groups already announcing prospective utilization of the new ranges are Junior National Rifle Association, the Third Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, and the post Pistol Club, which will conduct high school ROTC matches.

Range reservations can be made by calling Range Control, 545-7172.

Mrs. Earl F. Holton Pins on the Emblem, Col. Burchfield Looks On

In recent capping ceremonies, 72 American Red Cross volunteers were officially recognized as qualified Staff Aides, Nurse's aides and Gray Ladies.

The volunteers were capped by Lt. Col. Muriel Burchfield, chief nurse at Martin Army Hospital.

Mrs. Earl F. Holton, wife of Col. Holton, deputy post commander, pinned on service emblems, while certificates were presented to Mrs. William Summers, chairman of volunteer services for the post.

The graduation address was presented by Col. Holton.

Holiday Treat 'Not Good' If Overdone

By Capt. Robert E. Cross

To begin the column this week, I want to wish you a happy holiday. I hope and pray that you will continue to celebrate in the true spirit of the season.

Christmas is a festive occasion as it well should be. Christmas candy has come to play an important part in the food customs which we observe. Fruit, nuts and candy are so frequently given by Santa Claus and his representatives that they have become traditional.

This column is going to deviate just a little from its usual stand. We don't recommend that the candy or other treats be eliminated. We recognize that this is a very special occasion. We will ask you to be careful in how much you let your children have.

Candy as a treat is probably harmless. If this sounds like an unusual statement for us to make, stop and think. My dictionary says a treat is "anything that gives great or unusual pleasure; a delight." Now, candy is a daily or even a frequent gift it then gives neither great nor unusual pleasure, does it?

If, on the other hand, you let your child have candy only on rare occasions, such as Christmas, Easter and birthdays, then it becomes a real treat. However, no matter whether his Christmas candy is a real treat or just another part of his regular diet, make sure he does what he should to avoid a dental treatment.

As far as tooth decay is concerned, a pound of candy at once will do less harm than an ounce every hour, without brushing after each time a piece is eaten.

I want to make a point that continuous or frequent eating of small amounts of candy is much more harmful to your teeth than eating the same total amount at one time. Whether you eat large or small amounts, frequently or infrequently, brushing your teeth immediately after each time you eat it will help greatly to prevent tooth decay.
