The Judge Says . . .

"Why?" is a quite difficult question to answer for most persons who enter the Legal Assistance Office stating their need for a general power of attorney. Many have little knowledge of the serious consequences which may result from signing this instrument which they are requesting.

The power of attorney is a written document in which one person, (the Principal) grants power to another (the Agent) to act for him. The grant of power may be a general power of attorney authorizing the Agent to perform any and all acts which the Principal could perform, or it may be a special power of attorney limiting the authority to one act or a series of acts.

In selecting the Agent, the person considering using a power of attorney should be absolutely sure of the integrity and sound business judgment of the prospective agent. Further, since a general power amounts to handing a "blank check" to the Agent, it should be used with extreme caution and only when a special power will be completely inadequate.

A typical situation in which a power of attorney is quite useful is that of a serviceman receiving overseas orders for an unaccompanied tour. After his departure, he may desire that his wife arrange for shipment of their household goods to their permanent home, close out any accounts in his name at local banks, and dispose of his car if the need should arise. These powers can be easily granted in a special power, completely avoiding the problems which might arise if the uncontrolled powers of buying and selling involved in a general power were given. Many severe marital problems occur through intentional or careless use of a general power of attorney.

If some transaction must be completed in your absence, make sure that you choose the best method of authorizing another to act in your place. See your legal assistance officer or Soldiers Advocate first.

Battle of the 'Bulge'

No man of any intelligence would even attempt to pack 50 pounds of potatoes into a 25 pound sack. But despite this display of common sense there are many who attempt something equally ridiculous and impossible — trying to cram a 40 inch waistline into a size 34 pair of trousers!

The end result (and it shows there too) is not unlike a bag of potatoes—tied tightly around the middle!

There is a continuing battle in the Army against obesity — not only for personal health reasons but for the adverse effect it has on a soldier's ability to perform any given task. Of comparable importance, however, is a uniform that fits properly, regardless of the shape it covers and, it should be noted, whether it is a commissioned or enlisted shape.

Bulging middles, concealed by winter coats and jackets, lose that advantage in the summer and sag for all to see. And as that non-resilient size 34 does double duty trying to contain a fat 40, the trouser length suffers. The resultant foreshortened effect would be fine in high water but is hardly appropriate for a Fort Benning soldier.

Infantry Center and Infantry School military personnel wear the "Follow Me" patch, a distinguished and honored insignia. To wear it on a decrepit or ill-fitting uniform is to wear it without pride or dignity.

All military personnel are urged to maintain the highest health standards, to include a self - regimentation program to attain the proper weight for their particular height, age and frame. Medical help is available if necessary to assist in any required "slimming down." But in the interim, until that spare tire is de-flated, at least put it in the proper casing.

Although enlisted personnel are certainly not alone in the "battle of the bulge" nor in violation of proper uniform standards, they do receive a monthly clothing allowance. This is neither intended nor taxes as additional "income" but allotted solely for replacement, maintenance and any necessary alteration of uniform items. The soldier who consistently presents a sloppy and slovenly appearance is obviously diverting this allotment to other uses.

IV

If I become a prisoner of war, I will keep faith with my fellow prisoners. I will give no information or take part in any action which might be harmful to my comrades. If I am senior, I will take command. If not, I will obey the lawful orders of those appointed over me and will back them up in every way.

Informing, or any other action detrimental to a fellow prisoner, is despicable and expressly forbidden. Prisoners of war must avoid helping the enemy identify fellow prisoners who may have knowledge of particular value to the enemy, and may therefore be made to suffer coercive interrogation.

Strong leadership is essential to discipline. Without discipline, camp organization, resistance and even survival may be impossible. Personal hygiene, camp sanitation and the care of sick and wounded are imperative. Officers and noncommissioned officers of the United States will continue to carry out their responsibilities and exercise their authority subsequent to capture. The senior line officer or noncommissioned officer within the prisoner of war camp or group of prisoners will assume command according to rank (or precedence) without regard to branch of service. This responsibility and accountability may not be evaded. If the senior officer or noncommissioned officer is incapacitated or unable to act for any reason, command will be assumed by the next senior. If the foregoing organization cannot be effected, an organization of elected representatives, as provided for in Articles 79-81 Geneva Convention Relative to Treatment of Prisoners of War, or a covert organization, or both, will be formed. Chaplain's Corner

'Easter Joy'

Some years ago in Moscow, one Easter Day, a large crowd was summoned to listen to a speech by the Red Commissar of Education. The purpose of his remarks was to demonstrate logically that religion, especially Christianity, was the opiate of the people.

Argument piled upon argument as he attacked Christianity as something out of date in this new era of scientific knowledge and Communistic social achievements. Then in a gesture magnanimous for a Communist official, he challenged anyone present to answer his arguments. However, he limited the refutation to five minutes, though he had consumed more than an hour in his harangue against Christianity.

Was there anyone in the crowd willing to speak for Christianity?

A young man stood up. Plainly dressed, almost shy in appearance, he walked calmly to the speaker's platform. Advised again that he must limit his remarks to five minutes, the young man nodded. Then, turning to the crowd and in a strong, joyful voice, he almost shouted the words, "My brothers and sisters" — "Christ is risen". Like an echo, came the response from a manly voice in the crowd. "Christ is risen, indeed". Another voice and still another and another took up the cry, until like bells carillonning riotiously from a chapel tower, a mighty roar from the people repeatedly chanted the eternal words; "Christ is risen indeed."

That ended the meeting. All the flowery eloquence of the lecturer's arguments collapsed before this great fact—Christ is risen.

Easter is a feast of victory, the victory of Christ over sin and death. Not to understand and accept this truth is to miss the reason for our Easter joy.

If Easter means no more than a new fashion outfit, colored eggs, bunny rabbits, an annual visit to a place of worship, then this glorious feastday is empty show.

But if Easter is observed for what it is, a day of inspiration, the cornerstone of our Christian Faith; if Easter is a day of triumph, a promise of our own resurrection, a pledge of the best hopes of all men the words, "Christ is risen" will echo in our hearts and the hearts of millions of Americans.

As that young man in Moscow shouted out, "Christ is risen" to the crowd in Moscow, so our faith shouts and sings the words to us on this Easter Sunday Morning. And as the people answered "Christ is risen, indeed", so all practicing Christians can truly cry back our belief, "Christ is risen, today, indeed."

The Surgeon Says

Back Pains

"I simply turned over in bed and felt a terrible pain in my neck and between my shoulder blades." This is a typical story heard often at Martin Army Hospital.

Such pain can be the result of a sudden jerk or lifting of a heavy object but often it is due to chronic strain caused by our daily activities. For example, poor posture and prolonged tension while driving, reading, doing desk work or watching TV can lead to fatigue of the neck and shoulder blade muscles.

If you get a neck strain there are things you can do at home to relieve it. Instead of throwing away that empty beer or pop can, cut out one end, fill it with water and put it in the freezer. This makes a jumbo-sized ice cube which can be rubbed over the sore area. Sounds chilly, doesn't it? But if you are really hurting the cold will feel good. Apply the ice until the skin is pink and numb and you cannot feel light tapping on the skin.

After the ice massage some simple exercises to relax the muscles often help. First, clasp your hands behind your head. Bring your elbows and head back. Tighten your muscles as hard as you can, then let them relax completely. Next shrug your shoulders hard; then relax. A few repetitions of these exercises should be done often during the day. They can be done while sitting at your desk, watching TV or even while stopping at a red light.

Commander Extends Easter Greeting

With the advent of the Easter Season, I wish to extend greetings to the personnel of Fort Benning and our friends in the civilian community.

May the spiritual lesson that is ever new in the Easter Message bring to us strength and courage in this changing world.

I trust that each of you will enjoy the privilege of attending the services of your choice at this traditional time of hope for a free world where all men may find peace and happiness.

Spring Refreshes Styles

THE ENSEMBLE

Spring '65 may be remembered as the time when people stopped referring to fashion as a dame and started calling her a lady.

For this season heralds a new era in fashion that's as welcome as spring itself. Styles go pretty, soft, and feminine . . . and women begin to look like women again.

Gone are the severe lines and crisp tailoring of the past few years. In their place are softened silhouettes . . . gently curving and flattering to every woman.

Colors are cool but bright. They range from orange and salmon pink to yellow, spring green, and navy. White continues as a favorite and often is combined with other colors as well as the traditional black.

Keynoting the shape of spring is the costume — a well - composed ensemble with fashion the sum of its parts. It's the important look for every hour of the day.

The ensemble may be a carefully - planned suit with two or three parts, often taking a matching hat. Or it may be a coat-with-dress or dress - with - jacket combination. Either way, it adds up to a well-put-together look — ladylike and proper.

Noteworthy style details to watch for in suits are gently fitted jackets with skirts that move subtly from soft waistband gathers or swinging panels. News, too, is at the shoulder line which is small and narrow with high set-in sleeves. Collars are finely shaped and set away from the neck. Jacket closings are often asymmetrical — with buttons set off center for a pleasing curve.

Spring coats reflect the same soft touch in design. They are often executed in the same fabric as their companion dress; sometimes appear in different but complementing colors. Some have wide - open necklines to reveal the draped cowl neckline of the dress.

For late day, the sylph-like silhouette is seen in bare-cut dresses of gossamer-weight cottons that barely brush the body. Ruffles flourish and skirts are on the move with soft fullness or motion from tiers, tunics, and wrap lines.

Summed up, one thing is certain about the fashion forecast for '65: it'll be the prettiest spring in years? (NCC).

Officer Candidate Class Holds Bivouac Cookout

Sizzling steaks and broiled chicken, liberally mixed with the fresh air of piney woods and smoke from a roaring bonfire, were the order of the day for the men of Officer Candidate Class No. 1 (Reserve Component) at their bivouac barbecue.

The barbecue, held at the 5th Student Bn. bivouac area, marked the end of the fifth week of training for the candidates.

OC (RC) Class 1 is one of the two Reserve Component classes to be given at The Infantry School this year. The special nine-week course is designed to train leaders from National Guard and Reserve units throughout the United States.

Appetites were keen after a hard day of pitching tents, preparing for the barbecue, and hours of games and athletic activities. The candidates quickly consumed 350 steaks, 20 chickens, and 250 baked potatoes.

Mr. Newton, the wiley old goat who is the company mascot joined the festivities and feasted on horse pellets, paper, cigarettes and anything else coming within his range.

After the feast, the candidates gathered around a rustic stage of logs and earth to enjoy an evening of songs and skits under the stars.

Bivouac barbeques normally climax a week-long bivouac and herald the entrance of senior status week.

Medical Specialist Corps Celebrates 18th Birthday

Caring for the sick and injured is not all a matter for the doctors and nurses at Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital where nine members of the Army Medical Specialist Corps contribute highly trained skills to the healing art.

This all- officer corps, which celebrates its 18th anniversary today, furnished Army hospitals with auxiliary services made possible by dedicated dietitians, physical therapists and occupational therapists.

As at all other hospitals, the physical therapists at Martin Hospital are there to help the patient re-educate muscles that may have been weakened by an illness or even to help him train new muscles to take their place.

Maj. Marilyn J. Anderson is chief of the Physical Therapy Section. Serving with her are three physical therapists, Capt. Noel G. Whitkey, 1st Lt. Judith A. Vandervort, and 1st Lt. Mary Kolderie.

Treatments utilize heat, light and electricity. With understanding, guidance, skilled instruction and supervision, the therapists help each patient achieve the maximum possible restoration of a lost or impaired function.

The tools of the occupational therapists are creative activities, both educational and recreational. As patients participate in such arts as ceramics, painting, metal work, woodwork or printing, remedial treatment is accomplished under the skilled supervision of the therapists.

Maj. Arvilla L. Dyer is chief of the Occupational Therapy Section at Martin Hospital, with 1st Lt. Margaret J. Baker, a therapist, working with her.

Directing the Food Service at the hospital is Maj. Betty P. Chellman. With two dietitians, 1st Lt. Dorothy L. Wooden and 1st Lt. Devonia R. Cromwell, Maj. Chellman plans and supervises the preparation and service of food for all patients and the hospital staff. The dietitians plan modified diets for individual patients as prescribed by a doctor. They also instruct patients in the principles of diet and nutrition.

Although designated Army Medical Specialist Corps as late as 1955, the corps dates its origin from the establishment of the Women's Medical Specialist Corps April 16, 1947. Before that date, physical therapists, occupational therapists and dietitians were members of the Civil Service. As men began to qualify in these fields, the corps was opened to both men and women.

On the occasion of the 18th anniversary of the Army Medical Specialist Corps, I wish to extend congratulations on behalf of the personnel of the United States Army Infantry Center.

In the fields of occupational and physical therapy and dietetics, your Corps has earned the admiration and gratitude of the American Soldier. By utilizing their professional skill, enthusiasm, and devotion to duty, the members of the Army Medical Specialist Corps have greatly increased the strength and effectiveness of the United States Army.

All members of the United States Army Infantry Center join me in expressing appreciation for your past accomplishments and in wishing you continued success.

PUSH-UPS WERE PART OF THE PT TEST
Required Before Making Jump

Pack's Junior Jump Tower Scout-O-Rama's Top Activity

One of the most popular activities at the Scout - o - Rama held at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium last Saturday was the junior jump tower sponsored by Cub Scout Pack No. 27.

Airborne officers and men of The Infantry School's Airborne Department estimated that more than 4,000 kids made the jump from the 20 foot tower. Qualification for the jump was completion of Pack 27's PT Test consisting of push ups, sit ups, ladder walk and 200 yard run. The test was administered by Cubs, Den Mothers and parents.

Pack 27's jump tower project in the annual event was the idea of Maj. Charles D. W. Canham, Pack 27 committee chairman.

Pack 27 is sponsored by the 229th Assault Helicopter Bn. which furnished a rest and refreshment tent. The jump tower was constructed under direction of 1st Lt. John R. Germann.

Gen. O'Hara Tells OC Graduates To Inspire Minds, Souls of Men

Inspiring the minds and souls of men is part of the roll of a Reserve officer, 183 graduates of an officer candidate (Reserve) class were told Monday at graduation ceremonies.

Maj. Gen. Almerin C. O'Hara, commanding general of the New York National Guard and chief of staff to the governor of New York, named many responsibilities that follow a commission.

Young officers will find themselves concerned with "troop morale, equipment shortages, maintenance, meeting public officials and the press, recruiting, training, and most of all, inspiring the minds and souls of men," he said.

"You must be dedicated to an emergency that we hope will never come," he continued. "Your presence here today presupposes a deep patriotism. When you take the oath of an officer you will not be alone for thousands of men who have taken that oath in the past will sit in silence, watching."

The general told the class that graduation is testimony to their qualifications to accept a commission, to the fact that they have leadership qualities. However, it does not imply that these qualities will develop automatically. "Only you can do that," he said.

Gen. O'Hara presented awards to Ernest L. Childs, honor and distinguished graduate and leadership graduate of the class.

Childs received the Erickson Award, a silver bowl from the National Guard Bureau, an Association of the U. S. Army plaque (AUSA), an Infantryman Statuette for each award from the 5th Student Bn., a letter of achievement from The Infantry School assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, and a one-year membership in AUSA.

Other awards presented by Gen. O'Hara were a bayonet letter opener to George E. Mills Jr. who scored 487 out of a possible 500 on a Physical Combat Proficiency Test, and an inscribed trophy to John Michell, high man in firing and examinations in instruction by the Weapons Department.

Gen. Rapp was accompanied by his wife and three Swedish staff officers.

Maj. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen, deputy chief of staff, operations, U. S. Army Europe, arrived at Fort Benning earlier in the week for a speaking engagement.

Gen. Larsen, a former assistant commandant of The Infantry School, addressed career classes in Marshall Auditorium Monday. His topic was "The Role of the U.S. Army in Europe."

WW II, Korean War Disabled Veterans Are Eligible for Permanent GI Insurance

Many WW II and Korean War veterans with service-connected disabilities may now be eligible to buy up to $10,000 in permanent GI insurance coverage, the Veterans Administration announced recently. A new law providing for insurance reopening goes into effect on May 1, 1965.

In addition, an unknown number of veterans, eligible for a service - connected rating but who have not applied for one, may be added to the list of those to whom the re-opened NSLI policies can be granted.

Another unknown number of veterans whose disabilities are not service - connected may also be able to take advantage of the re-opening, if they cannot obtain insurance at any cost from private companies.

Veterans will have one year, from May 1, 1965, to May 2, 1966, to apply for the insurance. However, applications cannot be accepted before the May 1, 1965 date, according to the law.

To buy this insurance, the veteran must:

1. Have been originally eligible for National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) between Oct. 8, 1940, and Jan. 1, 1957.

2. Have now either no GI insurance or less than the $10,000 in authorized coverage.

3. Be in one of the following three groups:

a. Veterans with service-connected disabilities who meet standards of good health.

b. Veterans whose service - connected disabilities alone do not permit them to meet standards of good health.

c. Veterans whose non-service - connected disabilities as of Oct. 13, 1964, the date the bill was signed into law, prevented them from buying commercial insurance at the highest rates.

Veterans in Georgia may obtain printed information by writing, telephoning, or visiting the Georgia Veterans Administration Regional Office, 449 West Peachtree Street, N.W., Atlanta, 30308; telephone Nrs. 526-4307 or 526-4308. Office hours are from 7:30 a.m. till 4:30 p.m. Veterans residing outside Georgia should apply to the VA Regional Office where their Claims Files are located.

Rhus Family of Plants Has No Known Cure

"Leaves of three leave them be"

Fort Benning houses various jezebel species of the plant kingdom. The Rhus family (poison ivy, oak and sumac) is the most common cause of allergic contact dermatitis in the United States.

To recognize the plant is not enough. A sensitive person to the Rhus family may also cross react to mango rind, cashew nut shell oil (toys), india marking nut (laundry), Japanese lacquer (furniture), various copying papers and other interesting possibilities.

The world is not big enough for a really sensitive person. He must be careful what he eats, handles, wears, breathes, leans on and steps into.

Contact usually occurs 1-2 days before symptoms are noticed. The result is a red, itchy, blister eruption which usually requires 2 to 3 weeks to run its course, barring complications or re-exposure to the source of contact. The most common complication is adverse reactions from various commercial remedies advertised as "cures" for poison ivy.

No Cure Known

No cure exists. Treatment is aimed at making oneself comfortable while the dermatitis resolves spontaneously.

If the eruption is not too severe use cool, face towel soaks (EX: one level tablespoon of table salt to one quart of cool water), or colloidal baths or corn starch-1 cup to 8 inches of lukewarm water, several times daily. If the symptoms are too uncomfortable check your medical facility for stronger medications.

Severe complicated dermatitis is best treated by the physician with various anti - "itch" tablets and shots which reduce the swelling and redness. Avoid salves and ointments until the swelling and blisters have dried.

Non-Volatile Oil

All members of the Rhus family and their relatives contain an allergis oleoresin (non - volatile oil which evaporates very slowly). Re-exposure most commonly accounts for a prolonged siege of dermatitis.

The contents of the blisters do not contain the oils. Thorough washing within the hour after exposure does not prevent a severe dermatitis in highly sensitive persons. It may, however, reduce the reactions in those who are less sensitive. Harsh soaps, organic solvents (turpentine, kerosene etc.) vigorous scrubbing offer no advantage over simple soaking in cool water. The allergen may be transferred to sensitive persons by smoke, children, hairy pets, clothing, furniture and athletic equipment. (The average golfer does spend time in wooded areas.) Barrier creams, tropical detoxicants and the like give inadequate protection.

Temporary Immunity

Temporary "immunity" (hyposensitization) is possible. It is, however, a rigorous procedure demanding strict supervision. The danger of side effects is great. Large amounts of active allergen must be ingested over long periods. When therapy is stopped, sensitivity rapidly returns.

The crude oleoresin is commercially available. Most "over - the - counter" preparations are either entirely inactive or so diluted (20-30 times), that their use is valueless for prophylaxis. In summary the value of an allergy series is limited and in general not recommended.

Unless you're itching to visit the hospital, check your own yard and halls for ivy. Remember when it comes to groups of leaves; two's company, three's a public menace.

Movie Stars Are Found; Play Leads in Army Film

An entire company of movie stars was discovered recently when Co. C, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. was chosen to play the lead in the Army training film, "Rifle Company Operations."

The film, which was scheduled to be completed Thursday, is currently being shot by members of The Army Pictorial Center, Long Island N.Y.

The object of the motion picture is to show planning and implementation of both retrograde and offensive rifle operations at a company level.

First Lt. Stephen M. Heller, Co. C commanding officer, was cast as the commander of the U. S. Army company, played by members of Co. C, in the film.

SSgt. Richard Topham played the role of the aggressor company commander while members of the 29th's Co. D acted as the aggressor company.

Five tanks from Co. B, 4th Bn., 69th Armor also appear in the film which was shot at Fort Benning on location at Buena Hill, Bush Hill and Garsey Road.

Co. C, in addition to making movies and supporting Infantry School demonstrations, is the home of The Infantry Center's Honor Guard.

FORT BENNING, GA. FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1965 Page 15

Gen. Freeman Slated To Lead 23rd Infantry Unit Day Celebration

BY JIM LULL

A visit by the Continental Army commander, a regimental parade and rededication of colors are scheduled for the 23rd Infantry Regiment's 153rd anniversary celebration next week.

Highlighting the two-day event is the Unit Day Review next Friday morning, with Gen. Paul L. Freeman, Continental Army commander, and former commander of the 23rd Infantry Regiment, standing as the reviewing officer.

The gigantic parade will be conducted at Wetherby Field next Friday at 10:00 a.m. with nearly 1,000 troops in attendance. Both the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 23rd Infantry are stationed at Fort Benning.

When Gen. Freeman rededicates the regimental colors midway through the parade Friday he will recall the time he spent in command of that unit.

He took over the regiment, a part of the 2nd Infantry Division at the outbreak of the Koean war in 1950, and was wounded in the fierce battle at Chipyong-Ni.

When Freeman was evacuated from Chipyong-ni with several awards for heroism, it was the present 2nd Division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles who took over the regiment. For Chiles, this was his second turn at the helm of the 23rd. He commanded it in 1945 also.

Participating along with the eight companies that normally comprise the combined regimental forces, will be the provisional adanced individual training company Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

They will officially graduate and become members of the battalion Thursday morning, in ceremonies taking place at Sand Hill Theater Six. This is the first scheduled event in the two - day celebration.

The remainder of the day Thurday, for both battalions, will be spent in athletic and ability contests — labeled organization day field events.

Topping the list of evening social functions Friday will be the Korean Bowl Ceremony held at the main ball room at the main officers open mess. The 7:00 p.m. ceremony will involve all officers of both battalions. Regimental officials look to the Korean Bowl Ceremony as perhaps 'the most meaningful event" of the entire two-day affair.

The non-commissioned officers will have separate social functions Friday evening.

The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry enlisted leaders will meet at the Sand Hill Non-Commissioned officer's Open Mess at 7:00 — and the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry non-commissioned officers will gather at the Kelley Hill Club at the same time.

23rd Infantry Announces Unit Celebration Plans

The 153rd anniversary celebration for the 23rd Infantry Regiment begins next Thursday, as both the 1st and 2nd Battalions engage in varied competitive activities.

The organization day field events range from a mechanic's ability test to a wheel barrow race, and will be conducted at separate locations for each battalion.

The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry will compete at Sherwood Court on 2nd Armored Division Road, and the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry will use various locations in the Kelley Hill area.

The competition will be graded on a company-versus-company basis, within the separate battalion. A final tally.

The 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry — currently attached to the 11th Air Assault Division — will begin their field activities Wednesday with rifle and pistol teams firing at the Kelly Hill indoor range. The remainder of their competitive activities will be carried on Thursday morning and afternoon.

The schedule for the 1st Battalion shows that all field activity will occur Thursday morning and afternoon.

Lt. Col. Strathmore McMurdo's men will compete in driving tests, typing tests, volleyball games, mechanic's ability tests, grenade throw drills, horse shoe contests and rifle and pistol firing in the morning, followed by speed marches, tent pitching, wheel barrow racing; caterpillar racing, chain of command contests and the tug of war, to name a few, after chow.

THE INFAMOUS RIDGE and Chipyong-ni are among the glories to be recalled by the former members of the 23rd Infantry as it rededicates its colors next Friday.

NIGHT FIRING is being stressed as the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor prepares for its all important Army Training Tests at Fort Stewart.

Night Firing Stressed

1st of the 72nd Armor Resumes Firing at Fort Stewart for ATT

By DAN SWEENEY

Tank guns are booming down range at Fort Stewart Georgia day and night this week as the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armour undergoes training which will culminate in an Army Training Test to be held later this month.

The battalion departed for the swampy Georgian post two weeks ago sending its tanks and equipment by rail and personnel by convoy.

The training, to be conducted over a six week period, will include firing of annual qualification gunnery tables, an Army Training Test, and a stint as the "enemy" while its sister battalion, permanently located at Stewart, undergoes its training tests.

The gunnery tables began in late March here at Fort Benning where the first three machine gun exercises were fired. Last Saturday firing was resumed at Fort Stewart for the 90mm gun exercises.

The unit will complete the eight table course at Fort Stewart.

Officials stated that this is the first time all tables fired with the main armament will fire at night. The spokesman said according to a Department of Army manual published in November of last year, the concept of night firing will enable the tanker to better acquaint himself with the problems of night firing which he will be required to do in combat.

By-Gone Days of Nickel Beer III

Veteran Recalls Solemn Days on Atlantic

Editor's Note—The third in a series of exerpts from the memoirs of Herschell Fox, a veteran of World War I and one of the original members of the 2nd Infantry Division, was prepared by News staffer Joe Treaster from Fox's proposed book. — "DOWN MEMORY LANE."

Until Herschell Fox and his fellow recruits from the West and Midwest boarded the S.S. Susquehanna, bound for "over there," they thought nothing could be worse than their cold, damp tent city at Camp Mills, N. Y.

A couple of days at sea, however, and Camp Mills and every other place in memory that was firm and stable underfoot became hallowed ground.

"Our ship wasn't exactly a tub," Fox recalls, "but I doubt if even a tub would swim from side to side as our ship did. It was like the old hammocks at home. The only way I could get to sleep was to imagine I was laying in the old canvas swing."

Judging from the odor that hung in every corner of the ship, Fox said, the ship must have been used for carrying hides before the Army pressed it into service.

The malodorous, rocking, rolling quarters did more than rob the soldiers of their sleep.

"We were all sea sick," Fox said. "We spent most of our time hung over the ship's railings, gagging in agony; feeding the fish."

"To make matters more pleasant, the sailors were always at the rail singing about the glories of the sea and how well the fish were fed every time a troop ship sailed."

The ship had three decks and Fox and his friends were assigned to the bottom one. The bunks were arranged in three tiers, and Fox again got the bottom

"It was not," said Fox, "a very cozy place when one of the boys decided to empty his stomach."

A bit of dialogue captured on deck during the trip climaxed the "fish feeding" for the soldiers.

"I see the sun is coming up," said a sailor.

"Oh, no," choked a soldier bent over the deck rail, "does that have to come up too?"

The men said they found some consolation, however, when they looked up at the bridge and saw their officers bent over the railings.

"They weren't admiring the water either," said Fox, "I could never figure out why soldiers past and present get a sadistic enjoyment out of seeing officers go through some of the discomforts of the regular soldiers."

Boredom plagued the seafaring soldiers, too, but the Navy helped ease that pain by assigning some of the men ship duties.

One of Fox's jobs was to stand lookout in the ship's crow's nest of the ship.

From his tiny box at the end of a mast, high above the ship's deck, Fox swayed back and forth, peering through binoculars, in search of submarines.

For hours he saw nothing. Suddenly he was sure he'd seen a foreign object. Then, there it was again. And again.

"Something off the bow," he cried to the deck below. "Something off the starboard bow."

The "something" was a piece of driftwood and Fox was immediately relieved.

"I wasn't sorry," said Fox. "All that swaying was making me dizzy."

On Christmas morning—15 days after it had left America — the ship eased into the Harbor of St. Nazaire in France. It was the seventh American troopship to enter the port since the U. S. had gotten into the war.

"I got my wish to get to Europe before the war ended," Fox said, "but many a time while at the front I wished I never had had such a wish."

The 2nd Infantry Division's Highland Fox—turned commander of the 3rd Brigade's Headquarters Company — outfoxed his soldiers last week with a series of surprise promotions.

At an informal company party, Capt. Charles Kuder sprang the brigade's commander, Col. John W. Armstrong on six unwitting privates.

Armed with orders and PFC chevrons the colonel promoted Pvts. Noel Fountain, Armando Gonzalez, James Hughett, Henry Lewis, Edmund Shukoski and Thomas Toombs.

Old Trick Teaches New Soldiers

Training instructors at the 1st Battalion 23rd Infantry chose a brisk, rainy morning to give the advanced individual trainees a graphic lesson they will not soon forget.

Shortly after the trainees were seated in the bleachers on Cartner Range for instruction on Squad defensive tactics, instructors spied what seemed to be a sleeping trainee.

They jumped into the stands and started to wake him forcefully. The trainee awoke with a start, jumped from the stand and fled down range.

Fearing injury might come to the soldiers still sitting in the bleachers, with the wild soldier loose on the firing range, instructor, Sgt. Lawrence Blankenship picked up a rifle and drilled a shot at the fleeing private.

Pvt. David Ruben of Brooklyn, N.Y., observed that the "hoax woke the class up and helped to lighten the atmosphere of the class."

Trainee Patrick Glennon said the whole incident had a great deal of reality to it.

Advanced Trainees to Graduate; Ceremony Slated in Theatre Six

The 130 advanced individual trainees engaged during the last eight weeks in constant infantry schooling with the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, will become fully-qualified infantrymen during the battalion's anniversary celebration next Thursday and Friday.

The men officially "graduate" from the infantry training course Thursday morning, the first of the two-day celebration period.

The ceremony due to get underway at 7:30 a.m. will take place in Sand Hill's Theater Six. Division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, will be the guest speaker at the hour long formality.

The graduation exercise will be attended by the 1st Brigade commander and his battalion commanders, as well as representative groups from the various companies in the 23rd Infantry.

The graduation ceremony will "kick off" the battalion's organization day celebration.

The final training week for the infantry students was highlighted by "squad in attack" and "squad in defense" classes, and the final Combat Physical Proficiency Test.

Yesterday, they were given a two-hour graded dismounted drill exercise involving their ability to perform precision movements in the manual of arms.

Survival, escape and evasion training along with techniques of fire, during both periods of darkness and daylight, combined with a final drill tomorrow morning on rifle squad tactical training rounds out the formal schooling for the trainees.

Monday morning the men will be given a brief "familiarization class" in the assembly, sitting and aiming of the 90mm recoilless rifle.

The rest of the week, beginning Monday afternoon, will be devoted primarily to preparation for the organization day festivities starting Thursday morning.

Training and operation officials at the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry have termed the eight - week infantry course "highly successful."

Capt. James Hogan of that office said "we have received many favorable comments on the success of this training — both on the methods of instruction employed — and the constant attentiveness of the men."

"It should be noted also," Hogan continued, "that the company commander for the trainees — Lt. Joseph Beeman — has done an outstanding job with them."

Today marks the first day that the 130 trainees are no longer trainees — but Indianhead soldiers. They will be absorbed into the four companies for regular duty Monday.

Cox Receives Orders To University ROTC

By MARV WOLF

Lt. Col. William H. Cox executive officer of the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade, this week received orders assigning him to the University of Richmond in Richmond, Va. as Professor of Military Science.

The change of assignments, scheduled for June, will end more than two years of duty at Fort Benning.

During his assignment to the division, Cox served as the deputy commander of the 1st Battle Group, 87th Infantry. When the 87th was reorganized into the present division configuration in February, 1963, he took command of the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry.

He later commanded the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry until his present assignment to 3rd Brigade in November, 1963.

This will be Cox's second tour as a ROTC instructor—he served as Associate Professor of Miliary Science at Penn State University in 1949.

His 23 years of service include participation in four World War II campaigns and overseas tours in Italy, Greece and Thailand.

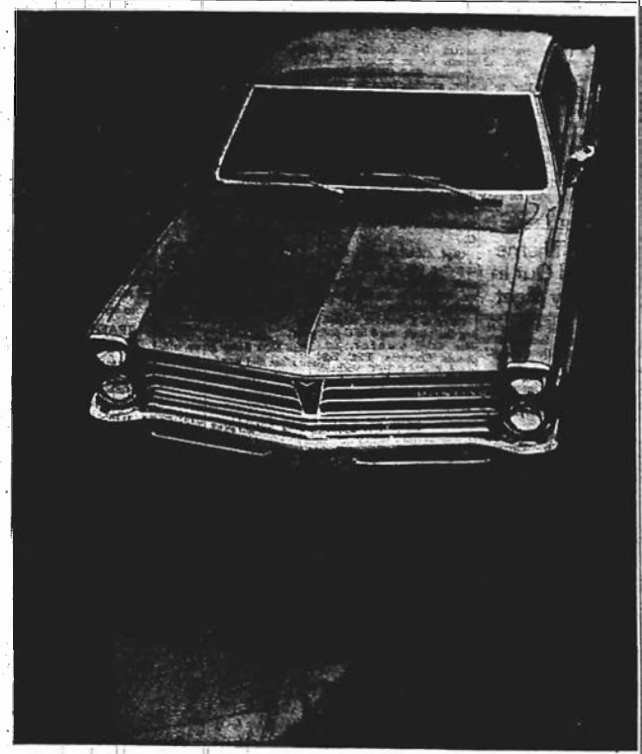
Cox described his new assignment as "most useful and interesting." He said that he considers the post a desirable one and pointed to the fact that the Reserve Officer Training Program provides the vast majority of junior offices for the Army.

He looked back on his two and a half years with the division and described them as "the most rewarding and self-satisfying years" of his 23-year army career.

Engineer Jobs Change Hands

Members of Company C, 2nd Engineer Battalion, recently saw Lt. Roy Robertson step into the commander's seat during a ceremony presided over by Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Alfred E. Griebling.

Lt. Robertson took the job left vacant by Lt. Jere Drummond who is returning to civilian life. Since joining the company a few months ago, Lt. Robertson advanced from Third Platoon Leader to Executive Officer to Commanding Officer.



Who ever heard of an economy tiger?

You did—just now. It's called the Pontiac Tempest. How can a car that's so stingy with gas shoot the works on performance? A zippy six that thrives on regular gas is standard. Feel more tigerish and still want regular-gas economy? Pick the 250-hp V-8. The price? A trifle, as tigers go. The Wide-Track Pontiac Tigers

Bunny Cake Seen At S&T Coffee

The ladies of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion enjoyed an early visit from the Easter bunny at their April coffee.

The table held a whitearabbit made of cake with a coconut frosting. An arrangement of pink azaleas, yellow snapdragons, and white mums added to the festivity. Tiny Easter baskets were given as favors to each lady.

The hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Carl G. Harrison and Mrs. William W. Babb. The coffee was held at the home of Mrs. Carl G. Morrison.

An "X" on the bottom of the basket won the Easter bunny for Mrs. Norman F. Essick.

Mrs. Dean Van Lydegraf has sparked interest in the coffees by promoting lively discussions of interest to all housewives. This week the ladies all traded their own favorite solutions for common household problems.

The ladies were happy to welcome Mrs. William E. Salmon as a new member of the battalion. Mrs. Alfred E. Klemm bid the ladies farewell.

The May coffee will be held pool-side at the Main Officers' Open Mess. The hostesses will be Mrs. Gunter J. Tisson and Mrs. Robert R. Bourne.

Pins, Curls Spotted At Early Hour

Pincurls, rollers, pajamas and robes headed the fashion list recently when the ladies of the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery were feted at a "come-as-you-are" coffee.

Previously notified of the time and date of the monthly meeting, the ladies were brought to a rude awakening on the morning of the coffee when co-hostesses Mrs. Roland Bracewell and Mrs. Raymond Geoffrion told them to arrive dressed just as they were when called.

Consequently, the ladies minus makeup and with glistening arrays of bobby pins, curlers, and rollers, created quite an outlandish group when they arrived for the coffee.

Emerald green and white decorations accentuated the theme.

2 Groups Tour Columbus Area

The ladies of Headquarters, Third Brigade; 1st Battalion, 72nd Arinor; and 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry recently toured the Columbus Heritage.

The affair included a tour of several old Colonial homes in the Columbus area which were scenes of beauty surrounded by azaleas and dogwood blossoms. The tour was highlighted by a visit to the Springer Theater which is in the process of restoration for a formal opening in October.

Mrs. John W. Armstrong, assisted by Mrs. William H. Cox, sponsored the tour.

RETIREMENT ORDERS are presented to 1st Sgt. Robert W. Abell of Company A, 122nd Signal Battalion by Sgt. Maj. J. T. Rhodes. Signal troops passed in review to honor his 25 years of military service. Abell will reside in Columbus.

Driftwood, Eggs Depict Easter Season At NCO Wives Luncheon

Easter rabbits, eggs and other items symbolic of the approaching Sunday last week were seen in several variations at coffees and luncheons.

Mrs. Julius Sumrall and Mrs. Roy Austin, members of the Hospitality Committee for the ladies of the Big Indianhead, used a driftwood branch holding tiny Easter Eggs to present the theme at a luncheon. The arrangement was used on the center table.

The Ladies of the Big Indianhead held their Easter and April luncheon at the Sand Hill NCO Club. Other tables, arranged in banquet style, displayed candles and ornate Easter eggs.

The Indianhead ladies were served baked ham, creamed potatoes, stringed beans and a salad.

Mrs. Marvin Hansen, program chairman, entertained the group with bingo following the luncheon. Four ladies went away with prizes. Mrs. Sam Hart won the door prize.

The NCO wives group will see a hat and jewelry fashion show at their next luncheon on May 13.

G-5 Officers, Wives Fete Group At Outing

Officers of the 2nd Division G-5 Section (civil affairs) last Saturday treated workers of the office to a picnic and social gathering at the USAIC Rest Camp.

The event was a going away farewell for three members who are departing the section in the near future. Maj. David Forsythe, the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-5, is leaving soon for duty in Korea.

Capt. Jerry Mooney, Assistant G-5, departs next month for an assigment in Vietnam. SFC Clifford Prespare, who has been the chief clerk for several months, left this week for a delay enroute to Vietnam.

Attending the picnic were Mrs. Forsythe, Mrs. Mooney and Capt. and Mrs. Stanley S. Sessler. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hammond, relatives of Mrs. Forsythe, were guests. Their home is in Americus, Ga.

Capt. Alfred Grenier, Commanding Officer of the Division Headquarters Company, dropped in on the group during the outing.

Other G-5 workers attending the picnic were SFC and Mrs. Odell Gunter, Sgt. James Cheevers, PFC Edward Wells, PFC Michael O'Neill, PFC Sydney Gordon, and PFC Scott Stone.

Easter Theme Carried Out In Monthly Meet

Easter was the the theme Thursday, April 8, when the ladies of the 2nd Aviation Battalion held their monthly coffee.

A centerpiece of lilies and yellow chrysanthemums, and Easter bunny name tags were used in carrying out the theme.

Mesdames John R. Lloyd and James D. Campbell were hostesses for the occasion.

During the brief business meeting Mesdames Norman Charpentier and James Melvin volunteered to head the newly formed "Sunshine" committee.

Mrs. David Spaulding, mother of Mrs. Reginald Corliss, was a guest.

Headquarters Ladies Hold MOOM Coffee

The ladies of the division headquarters greeted spring with a coffee held on the balcony of the Main Officers Open Mess.

Hostesses for the affair were the ladies of the G-1 section.

Newcomer, Mrs. Beverly C. Snow and guest, Mrs. T. Melvin Leahy, were greeted by the group.

Parachute Mishaps Unveil Facts In Precarious Roles of Generals

Editor's Note—The following is reprinted from the April 4 edition of the New York Herald Tribune. It is felt the article gives the reader an idea of the motivation of the men who occupy the lonely position of leadership.

By LAURENCE BARRETT
Of the Herald Tribune Staff.

WASHINGTON—The unrelated parachute accidents last week in which two generals suffered serious injuries pointed up a fact of military life not widely known: Even in peacetime, generals and admirals do far more strenuous work than shuffle papers, review parades and appear at American Legion conventions.

Star and flag officers jump out of airplanes, pilot complicated new aircraft, go down in untested submarines, take off from and land on carriers, squirm through obstacle courses, travel at treetop level in helicopters, participate in live-ammunition exercises and do many other things their insurance agents might frown upon.

These are middle-aged men. Most of them showed their courage long ago and have the decorations to prove it. It seems unlikely that they do it for money. The extra $110 a month officers get for maintaining their status as parachutists, for instance, appears to be a small incentive for risking one's life.

Why all the dangerous exercise then?

Officers themselves give a variety of reasons, but the one that comes up most frequently is this: Commanders feel they must experience the same activities as their subordinates in order to be most effective as combat leaders.

There are many special circumstances, of course, in individual cases. Brig. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell Jr., who suffered a variety of fractures, contusions and lacerations at Fort Bragg, N.C., on Thursday, is commander of the Army Special Warfare Center. All special forces men must be qualified jumpers. But Gen. Stilwell wore a master parachutist's badge — meaning he had at least 65 jumps behind him — before he came to Fort Bragg. He first qualified 12 years ago, at the age of 41. To remain qualified an officer must jump at least four times a year and undergo rigorous physical examinations annually.

Maj. Gen. John K. Hester, 48, commander of the 17th Air Force in Europe, suffered severe brain injury Friday. It was not immediately clear why he was participating in a qualification jump. However, many high-ranking Air Force officers learn to jump because they either are or may some day be responsible for transporting airborne infantry units. Air Force officers say the only way to understand thoroughly the problems and feelings of the privates you are carrying to battle is for you yourself to jump.

Maintenance Course Takes New Name-Role

Not quite two years old, the Preventive Maintenance Indicator Course (PMIC) has already outgrown it's britches.

The program has now broadened it's course of instruction, and taken a new name; The Second Infantry Division Material Readiness School.

Since it's temporary organization in September of 1963, the program as advanced to a permanent level, with preventive maintenance courses on the various items of equipment in the Division.

It has also developed a mobile course, which travels around the Division area, and as far as Fort Stewart, Georgia, to bring the program to those who can not come to it.

In keeping with new Army expanded it's curriculum to include courses on The Army Equipment Records System (TAERS), Prescribed Load Lists (PLL), Equipment Serviceability Criteria, (ESC), in addition to a courtesy inspection program.

Roadside Honor Role

The roadside inspections during the past week landed some thirty vehicle drivers scalps for the removal of their vehicles in the eyes of the eyes of division maintenance experts.

Former Hydroplane Racer Takes on Ranger School

Hydroplane racing didn't satisfy 2nd Lt. Charles Tombras' quest for adventure, so he joined the army. Commissioned in March of 1964, Tombras decided to "go Airborne" upon the completion of his Infantry Officers Basic Course.

After winning his jump wings, he was assigned to his present position as communi- Third Brigade.

Headquarters platoon leader of Tombras is well known throughout the Hydroplane racing circuit for his racing skills.

Guiding a thousand horsepower boat over the waves at speeds up to a hundred miles an hour wasn't excitement enough for the Knoxville, Tennessee born officer, and jumping out of airplanes just couldn't stimulate him either.

Now he's in Ranger school.

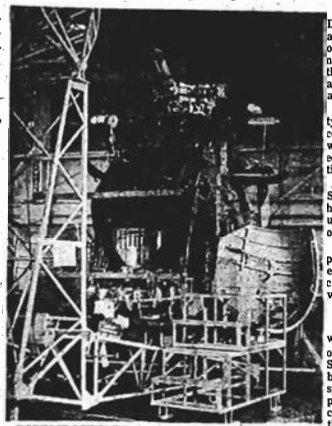
2nd Division's Aircraft Mechanics Feature Mobile Aviation Support

By DAVE BUMAN

The motto of their outfit is "Mend the Broken Sword," but to the men of Company 'E', 702nd Maintenance Battalion, "Mend the Broken Prop" would be more fitting.

Located on Lawson Army Air Field, about six miles from the rest of their outfit, Company 'E' is responsible for providing maintenance for all of the aircraft of the Second Division. The craft range from H-13 Sioux helicopters, to AO-1 Mohawk observation planes.



DISEMBOWELED is the only word to describe the plight of the grounded Choctaw helicopter in the process of being made airworthy by Company E of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

Depend on Company

The 2nd Aviation Battalion, Division Artillery, and the 1st and 3rd Brigades depend upon Company 'E' for maintenance of their aircraft, and this maintenance must be available at any time and anywhere.

To be able to provide this type of maintenance, all the companies equipment and workshops are vehicle mounted and ready to roll at any time.

The men of the Forward Support Platoon, man the vehicles and move out with the units they support to provide on the spot maintenance.

The men of the Main Support Platoon stand ready to evacuate any aircraft that can not be put into the air without major repair.

New Spark Plugs

In "Garrison," the fixed-wing and rotary mechanics of the Forward and Main Support Platoons, strip the big birds and give them new spark plugs and valves; replace pistons or cylinders; clean and repair, and send them back out to fly again.

In support of these "bird-doctors" are the specialists of the Allied Support Platoon. (ASP).

In the ASP's Power Train Section, transmission, clutches and driveshafts are overhauled. In the Prop and Rotor Section, propellers and rotors are taken off the aircraft and tested for balance and torque.

Welding Shop

The ASP also boasts a van-mounted machine and welding shop that turns out everything from bolts to wing struts.

In the Avionics Section, or radio repair shop, all radio equipment, including automatic pilots are tested and repaired when necessary. While all aircraft electronic systems are checked out in yet another shop.

In the company's control office, a log of every one of the division's aircraft is kept, giving it's flying time, maintenance and repairs.

Thus when an aircraft has flown it's maximum hours, a new engine has been ordered and waiting, and the parts necessary to put it in the air again are available.

The Company also has a completely mobile Technical Supply with thousands of aircraft parts and specialized equipment available to "Mend the Broken Prop" wherever they go.

Footlighters Make Plans To Present First Play

A new theatrical group was recently organized in the 2nd Infantry Division and it is already formulating plans to stage a play in the near future.

Fort Benning's newest drama group, The Footlighters, was organized several months ago and has been slowly enlarging its regular membership. It now has around 20 to 25 members, according to Chuck Coker, publicity chairman.

The group expects to present their first play in the later part of May at Service Club Number Two on Sand Hill. They are waiting final approval by the author and Army before they announce the title of the comedy they have selected and begin tryouts for roles.

Coker said that once the Footlighters get their first production underway, it is hoped they can travel to sister installations for repeat performances after the Fort Benning run is completed.

New Mine Detector to Be Phased Into Engineer Unit

A transistorized mine detector, replacing a heavier and less accurate device, has been brought into limited use by the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

The new mine detector is much lighter, more accurate, and a lot simpler to operate, said CWO Albert C. Rushing, Engineer Battalion maintenance officer.

Statistics

The statistics bear him out. It weighs approximately 31 pounds, as compared to 50 pounds for the old detector. It has been proven much more accurate, and gives a reading with a smaller number of gauges and instruments, hence the training of operators has been simplified, according to officials.

Every squad in the battalion is equipped with a mine detector, however just one squad in the battalion's Company A has been given a date.

"The new detectors are being issued as replacements as the old ones become inoperative," Rushing said. We expect to have the entire battalion equipped with the new ones by the end of this calender year."

Drawback

One drawback about the new detector is the cost. According to 2nd Engineer Battalion officials, the transistorized mine detectors cost about triples the older models.

The overall dimensions of the new detector have been considerably reduced, as compared to the battery operated model.

"The detection head and earphones are similiar, but that's about it," Rushing said.

Mine detectors are used in training operations by the 2nd Engineer Battalion throughout the year. "We certainly hope that we never have to use them for the real purpose," Rushing concluded.

Snow Made Assistant To Williams

The leader of the 2nd Infantry Division last week called upon Lt. Col. Beverly C. Snow, Jr.'s nearly two years' experience at Sand Hill, making him assistant to the unit's new brigadier general.

The assignment was clearly temporary.

In June Col. Snow, who only last week officially relinquished command of the 1st Brigade, will take charge of the U.S. Corps of Engineers' Wilmington, N. C., District.

As Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams' right-hand man, Col. Snow will spend the bulk of his time visiting battalions and inspecting them during training sessions.

The general, who joined the division two weeks ago as assistant division commander, has overall responsibility for training and operations.

Col. Snow said he sees the interim post as a wonderful opportunity" to see things from a division point of view and to work closely with a general officer.'

Col. Snow has spent most of his time with the division working at battalion and brigade level. He came to Fort Benning to take command of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, later moved to the position of executive officer of the 1st Brigade and finally became commander of the combat force.

"I view my two years with the 2nd Division as without a shadow of a doubt the most beneficial period of time in the small - bore pistol class my career," Col. Snow said.

Marne Field Review Awards Top Medals

BY JIM LULL

An officer and enlisted man of the division were presented two of the Army's highest decorations last Friday in an awards ceremony at Marne Field.

The fifth highest Army award — the Legion of Merit — was given to Col. Ben H. Ward, who recently took command of the division's 1st Brigade, for duty in Viet Nam.

Col. Ward was cited for "initiating and accomplishing a complete reorganization of intelligence production methods within his area of responsibility which resulted in improved reporting of Viet Cong activities and capabilities."

This was Ward's second Legion of Merit Award.

The bronze star (first oak leaf cluster) — the Army's eighth highest citation — was presented to SFC Reuben Brinley of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Brinley was decorated for heroism last fall in Viet Nam, as he penetrated heavy enemy fire to help his unit capture insurgent positions.

The commanding general, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, complimented the men for their heroic actions and devotion to duty as he pinned the decorations in place.

Also highlighting the monthly ceremony was the presentation of the Second Infantry Division Soldier of the Month Award to Sp4 John Koger, of the 2nd Engineer Battalion. The general presented Koger a wrist watch and certificate of achievement.

The Quarterly Re - Enlistment Award was given to Headquarters Company, 2nd Infantry Division and the Quarterly Safety Award went to the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion.

Marksmanship awards were given to the Company C, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion in the rifle class, and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry in the small - bore pistol class.

2nd of the 9th Announces S-2 Staff Shakeup

The S-2 (Intelligence) section of 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry is losing two of its key men. MSgt Louis Mojica leaves his position as the intelligence non commissioned officer and will go to Fort Rucker, Ala., where he'll be assigned to the 5th Battalion, 9th Infantry. While Mojica was with the battalion, he was active in the Sand Hill Protestant Men of the Chapel organization.

Also departing is Lt. John A. Fesmire. Fesmire was the battalion's intelligence officer and the historical officer. He is being re-assigned to Taiwan as a general's aide.

While with the battalion, he distinguished himself by attaining the highest score in Expert Infantryman Badge testing in early February.

Both men are leaving in April. MSgt. John Hickman will replace Mojica and Capt. Robert Gwaltney will assume Fesmire's duties.

Division Finals

1st of 23rd Nabs Volleyball Title

RECEIVING marksmanship trophies from 2nd Division Commander Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles are winners of the recent Division Small Bore Rifle and Pistol Championships. In the foreground is Capt. Alfred E. Klemm, captain of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion Small-bore Rifle Team. S & T won team firing with a score of 1337. Receiving the trophy from Gen. Chiles is Sgt. George Finecey, representing the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry's Pistol team which had a winning score of 1015.

A vollyball team from the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry last week clinched the division championship in the finale of the three-week event in Kimbro Gym.

The 2nd Division Marksmanship Detachment team, figured a favorite by many, yielded to Company C of the battalion in all four sets of two matches on Wednesday evening of last week. The Marksmen carried a perfect record of play when they met the 23rd Infantry in the finals.

The 23rd Infantry had one mark against them — they were defeated by the Marksmen the week before by scores of 15-11 and 16-14.

In the first set of play on Wednesday night, the 23rd Infantry dumped the Marksmen in 15-12 and 12-9 rounds. Under double elemination play, however, the Marksmen had another change at the winners since they were undefeated up until that point.

The 23rd Infantry held their ground and dropped the Marksmen 14-10 and 15-9 in the final stanza.

Both the champion and the runner up will now face post level competition in the Fort Benning tournament to be played on April 20 through 23. The tournament will be played at the Briant Wells Gym.

A spokesman for the Post Special Services Office said that all entries in the tournament had not been received earlier this week. The 11th Air Assault Tournament was continuing through Thursday night.

2nd Division SPORTS

Baseball, Softball Season Kicks Off Next Month

The 2nd Infantry Division Special Services Office this week announced plans for the approaching baseball and softball seasons.

A major unit baseball league will play from May 10 through September 1 with the first half of play ending on June 25. It will pick up again on June 28.

Plans are being formulated for a double elimination tournament on August 20 through September 1, according to a division letter prepared by the Special Services Office.

Games will be played on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at 6 o'clock. Teams making up the league will come from the 1st Brigade, 3rd Brigade, Support Command and Division Artillery, all of the 2nd Division.

Other units furnishing teams are the Student Brigade, USAIC Troop Command, 197th Infantry Brigade, and the 428th Medical Battalion, MAH, and the Infantry Board and Lawson Army Air Command combined.

Points toward the Commanding General's trophy will be awarded to teams and individual players.

The division softball program will get underway on May 3 and terminate on July 12. Each league will play a single round robin schedule and the team with the best win-lost record in each league will be declared league champion.

First and second place teams in each league will play in a double elimination tournament sometime in the summer to determine a division champion.

Softball team rosters should be submitted to the Division Special Services Officer no later than next Thursday. Rosters should include name, grade, serial number and unit of each individual.

Special Services will publish a schedule of games later.

Riflemen Clinch 11 Slots In Oak Ridge Tournament

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. — Twenty 2nd Infantry Division riflemen of the Marksmanship Detachment last weekend placed in 11 individual events during the annual shooting of the Southern Appalachian Early Bird High Power Rifle Tournament.

A four-man rifle team of place in team competition on the final day of the two-day tournament. They fired against top military teams who came to the tournament from all points in the Southeast.

The Oak Ridge Sportsman's Association sponsored the tournament, their first shoot of the spring, and had invited military teams throughout Third Army area. Riflemen fired on the Association's ranges located in a hilly area outside the city.

PSgt. Fred Snipes and Lt. Clark Weaver set the winning pace for the 2nd Division with Snipes winning the highest individual awards. He won the grand aggregate in the master class and was first master in the 600-yard slow fire. Snipes also was second master in the 300-yard rapid fire even.

Lt. Weaver brought home the winning place for the 600-yard target.

In addition he was first expert in three events — the 200-yard slowfire; 300 - yard rapid fire and the 600-yard slowfire.

Lt. David Wyatt and Sgt. Louis Keeling gave the Indianheads more awards by taking fourth places in master firing. Wyatt won fourth in 300-yard rapid fire. Keeling was fourth winner in slowfire at 200-yard targets.

Second expert in 200-yard slowfire was Lt. Daniel Davis. Sgt. Donnie Gates placed second in expert slowfire at 600 yards.

The Indianhead rifle team, the "Mescalero's," fired a 981 with an 84 in the small v of the bulls eye to follow Third Army for third place in team events Sunday. Third Army teams took both first and second place awards.

Snipes, Sgt. Charles Carlisle, Sgt. Harold Fuller and Sgt. Louis Keeling made up the team of Indianheads.

Team competition required firing 10 rounds each from standing and sitting positions at a 200-yard target; 10 rounds of slowfire from standing to prone at a 300 - yard target; and 20 rounds of slowfire from a prone position at the 600-yard target.

In addition to the Third Army Advanced Marksmenship Unit, 2nd Division marksmen fired against military riflemen from Fort Rucker, Ala., Fort Gordon, Ga., and Fort Monmouth, N. J. Riflemen from the 12th and 4th Corps Reserve units also were in Oak Ridge for the firing.

Sand Hill Pool Opens May 1

The Sand Hill Swimming Pool, this week, was getting the finishing touches of a face lifting project in preparation for opening day on the first of May.

Work on the pool is expected to continue for the next two weeks to enable the facilities to be ready for the opening date.

The swimming pool, located in the heart of the 2nd Division area, will be staffed with 11 life guards and attendants and is under the direction of SSgt. Thomas J. Powell.

"The work is progressing very nicely, there is still some painting and some carpenter work to be done," said a Special Service spokesman.

The pool facilities will be open to all personnel from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday thru Friday and from 1 p.m. to and holidays.

DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS AWARDED
Col. Olney Decorates Capt. Boyle

Heroism Lauded At 10th Brigade

More than 1400 men of the 10th Air Transport Brigade massed on the 197th Brigade parade field to pay tribute to five of their comrades as they received citations for heroism during action in Vietnam.

At the mass review Lt. Col. Gregory L. Olney, present commander of the 10th Brigade, presented the Distinguished Flying Cross to Capt. Willard J. Boyle of the 72nd Air Traffic Company. Capt. Boyle was lauded for heroic action during a night mission. At that time, despite heavy ground fire which damaged his UH-1B helicopter which was carrying supplies and ammunition to the 7th Vietnamese Infantry Division, he effected a safe landing and was able to evacuate seven wounded soldiers.

The Bronze Star medal was presented to Capt. John R. Burden, 187th Airplane Transport Company and Capt. Charles L. Perrone of the 1st Aviation Company. Both men were cited for their participation in ground operations against hostile forces in the Republic of Vietnam. The men were cited for the "energetic application of their extensive knowledge (which) has contributed to the efforts of the United States mission in the Republic of Vietnam".

CWO James A. Bell of the 187th Transport Airplane Company received the Bronze Star medal with 'V' device for his heroic action while serving as co-pilot of a medical evaculation helicopter. While engaged in the evacuation of fourteen seriously wounded soldiers, CWO Bell left the helicopter into an area completely surrounded by communist Viet Cong to assist the crew chief and medical attendant in the loading of the wounded onto stretchers and returning them to the aircraft. The ground fire in the area was so intense that the friendly forces were pinned down and could not disengage from the fire fight to help load the wounded.

The fourth Bronze Star medal was presented to CWO John E. Brazil of Company C, 170th Aircraft Maintenance Battalion. While in Vietnam CWO Brazil served as Maintenance Officer and fixed wing aviator in the Aviation Section, 3rd Radio Research Unit. "By his professional competence, leadership and outstanding ability the successful accomplishment of his unit's missions were completed."

From the General's Desk

Law Day, U.S.A.

By act of Congress and Presidential Proclamation, 1 May 1965 has been established as Law Day, U. S. A. The theme for Law Day, U. S. A. is "Uphold the Law — A Citizen's First Duty".

Since the time of our founding fathers America has been a nation governed by laws, not men. Down through the years since our inception as a sovereignty our nation has thwarted every effort, internal or external, to change our superior form of government by law. Therefore it is fitting and appropriate that we set aside a day each year to reflect on the privileges and responsibilities of our system of government and reaffirm our faith in the rule of law.

During this era of continuing tensions, the rule of law is more important than ever before. It must be our task — yours and mine — to foster a genuine respect for the law by a personal dedication to the ideals of equality and justice under the law. Particular adherence to the law within the military is as old as the Army itself. Therefore I charge each individual to rededicate himself to our national heritage and to "Uphold the Law, A Citizen's First Duty".

Field Training Sets 23rd Inf. For Annual ATT

During the past several weeks, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry commanded by Capt. Walter D. Everhart has been intensifying its field training in anticipating the Army Training Tests which are being held during this period. During this time the company has conducted day and night attack and defense problems, along with a live fire exercise and a "unique free play" exercise at the platoon level.

This training has been conducted with an eye toward reaching an optimum performance level. The kinks that have developed in past operation have been ironed out and the general level of proficiency in the company has been raised.

In this training there has been a high degree of individual enthusiasm and a marked diligence with which small unit leaders have carried out their assignments.

Cavalry Old Timers Recall Assignments

Some of the old timers of 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry got a chance to look back into the past last week when the Cav went to Camp Shelby, Miss., for a week's field training. A few members of the Squadron, including Sgt. Maj. Lawrence E. Kennedy, have served at Camp Shelby in the past on other assignments. The camp is now only used for summer training for National Guard units. However it still showed the signs of the active post it used to be.

During its week at Camp Shelby the Cav accomplished three very important objectives. To further its own training it conducted a very extensive program of guerrilla and counter-guerrilla training and also conducted practice ATT's for its rifle platoons. The third, and most exacting mission was a detailed reconnaissance and terrain study of the De Soto National Forest. The De Soto National Forest covers approximately 300 square miles and extends from Camp Shelby, to Biloxi Miss. The Squadron then returned to Fort Benning on April 9.

A Former Marine Corps Aviator Takes Command at 187th TAC

Maj. Willis B. Anderson assumed command of the 187th Transport Airplane Company in ceremonies held recently in front of Headquarters, 37th Air Transport Battalion. The company guidon was passed to Maj. Anderson by Maj. Teddy G. Holloway, the outgoing unit commander. Maj. Holloway, who has commanded the unit since Sept. 1, 1964, is now serving as S-3, 37th Air Transport Battalion.

Maj. Anderson entered Naval Aviation Cadet Training on May 15, 1942 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps upon completion of his training. After serving nine years in the Marine Corps, Maj. Anderson entered the Army on January 4, 1952.

The first Master Army Aviator to command the 187th Transport Airplane Company, Maj. Anderson has logged over 5,100 hours flying time, including over 500 hours in actual instrument conditions. He is qualified in both fixed wing and rotary wing Army aircraft and other aircraft ranging in size up to the four engine Marine Corps PB4Ys Privateer.

In addition to being a graduate of the Aviation Safety School at the University of Southern California and the Artillery Officer Career Course at Fort Sill, Okla., Maj. Anderson has a Bachelor of Science degree in Education from the University of Southern Illinois. He lacks only three credit hours completing his studies for a Masters degree in Education at the University of Texas.

Maj. Anderson's overseas tours include duty during World War II in Saipan, Guam, Okinawa and Japan. He served in Korea during the conflict there and later served in France and Germany.

Maj. Anderdson makes his home at 303B 1st Division Road, Fort Benning, with his wife, Ruth, and daughters Mary Lou, 13, and Carol, 8.

165th Top Soldier

The 165th Air Equipment Support Detachment has done it again. For the second time this year a parachute rigger has walked off with top honors in the Support Command Soldier of the Month Competition.

This time it was PFC Frank Richardson, a parachute packer in the pack section of the 165th who emerged the winner in tough competition from the best troops in Support Command.

Privates Become Pathfinders With Their First Huey Jump

The 11th Pathfinder Company (Prov.) welcomed seven new privates into their ranks Monday with a parachute jump from a UH1-D Iroquois provided by Company B, 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion. In accordance with their mission and parachuting ability the Pathfinders made their drop onto a small area surrounded by Georgia pines south of Fryar Drop Zone.

The new personnel, all privates E-2, and their hometowns were James Molloy, Rockaway, N. Y.; Robert Ebersbach, Wyckoff, N. J.; Larry Price, Mullinville, Kan.; Danny Hampton, Puyallup, Wash.; Raymond Singleton, San Diego, Calif.; Dennis Thomas, Pleasant Hill, Calif.; and Benjamin DuBose, Oakland, Calif. Each of these new troopers had recently been graduated from the Basic Airborne Course at Ft. Benning, so the jump from a helicopter was a new experience for them all.

"It was a lot easier and a lot more fun than jumping from a C-130," remarked Pvt. DuBose. "I could jump like that all day."

But the jump was not just for fun. After an orientation jump from the Huey, the new Pathfinders were harnassed into a 60-pound rucksack to get them used to jumping with a "payload." Pathfinders carry the equipment necessary in their operations in a rucksack rather than in a parachutist's adustable equipment (PAE) bag because a rucksack can be carried over long distances easier. According to Lt. Robert Fullerton, Pathfinder Company training officer everyone came through in fine shape.

The jump was an important occasion not only for the new personnel but also for some of the more experienced jumpers. Sgt. Charles McKain successfully made his 100th military parachute jump. Sgt. McKain has been a qualified Pathfinder since 1961 and has also made over 200 fee-fall jumps with the Fort Benning Sports Parachute Club.

DR-8 REEL ADAPTED FOR HOWITZER
An Economic Suggestion From 81st Artilleryman

From The IDEA CENTER

'Imaginuity' Corner

An artilleryman's feeling for economy has lead to another imaginative idea processed through the 11th Air Assault's IDEA CENTER.

MSgt. Raymond L. Chadwick of Battery A, 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery saw a way to save equipment, weight and money by making an adaptation of the reel that holds the communications wire that is mounted on each gun of a firing battery.

Before Sgt. Chadwick's adaptation each gun carried one - quarter mile of wire. This was twice as much as was ever used. MSgt Chadwick acquired some salvage DR-8 utility reels and mounted them on each howitzer and shortened the length of wire used to one-eighth mile.

This adaptation has proved to be advantageous in many ways. The first obvious advantage in a savings in wire since less wire used means less wire to wear out. Among the less obvious yet equally important advantages are the fact that DR-8 reel is considerably lighter; it uses less wire, therefore requiring less maintenance. Communications are improved because the principles are now speaking over only half the length of wire. There is also that all important monitary savings. Because of the modification, one mile of wire is saved by each battery, thus a savings of $65, the cost of one mile of wire.

QUESTION OF THE MONTH

"What improvements can be made in aerial rescue and fire fighting equipment and procedures to improve the capability of the division's aviation units. Submit your ideas to the division IDEA CENTER, Building 5265, phone 545-6317.

PROVES ABILITY . . . PFC William J. Adams (right) Company D, 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, proves his ability in manipulating and transversing with the 81mm mortar during the 188th's annual gunners test.

188th Mortarmen Drilled In Annual Gunners Test

Members of Company D, 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, recently completed their annual gunners test with the 81 mm. mortar. The mortarmen were tested by a group of NCOs from the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry headed by 1st Lt. Bernard Gnuyard.

1st Lt. Daniel L. Rock, platoon leader of the 188th Delta Dogs, stated that the three top scores would receive a three day pass as a prize and the highest scorer, in addition to the pass, would receive a plaque or a trophy.

Live Fire Exercise

The past week found Battery B, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery practicing its part in the future battalion test. Battery B spent one afternoon and night in a live fire exercise at Fort Benning. A number of missions were fired including a Hi-Burst Registration and numerous Defensive Contraptions.

The 188th gunners were tested in six stations by NCOs from Company D, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry. The examiners, under the direction of 1st Lt. Bernard Gnuyard, were: SFC Lopez who manned the manipulation and transversing station, SSgt. Heimbree, in charge of the referring and realining station, SSgt. Johnson who tested in small deflection changes, SSgt. Suza in charge of the large deflection changes station, SSgt. Rosarion in the mounting of the mortar and Sgt. Kirkland who manned the reciprocal lining station.

227th Sky Soldier Awarded DFC For Heroic Acts as Crew Chief

In a recent awards ceremony conducted with the weekly retreat, the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion had twelve members receive awards. The awards were presented by Col. George S. Beatty Jr., 11th Aviation Group commander, and Lt. Col. Jack Cranford, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion commander.

In this big event Sp5 Patrick W. Marshall, Charlie Company, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "heroism while participating in aerial flight." Not often enough do you read about the "crew chiefs" performing "heroic acts" in Vietnam and Sp5 Marshall was quite a hero in the eyes of the commander and other personnel involved with the Vietnam combat assault mission. Sp5 Marshall distinguished himself by heroic action on June 16, 1964, in the Republic of Vietnam while serving as a crew chief of an armed helicopter in support of Vietnamese popular forces against the Viet Cong.

While on a firing pass, a smoke grenade exploded within the helicopter, obscuring the vision of the crew. Sp5 Marshall, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, unfastened his safety belt, dropped to the floor, grabbed the grenade with his bare hands, and then crawled to the open door and threw the grenade from the aircraft. Regaining his rifle, he then directed accurate rifle fire at the Viet Cong through hindered by a burned hand and smoke. His prompt and courageous action saved the lives of the entire crew.

Capt. Walter G. Lilley, Delta Company, was awarded the Air Medal with "V" device for heroism in connection with aerial operations against a hostile force. Sp4 Allen G. Lungo, Charlie Company, was awarded the Air Medal, 12th OLC, with "V" device for heroism and was also awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in Vietnam.

Air Medals were presented to 1st Lt. Robert R. Matlick (10th thru 17th OLC); SSgt. Billy D. Mitchell (4th & 5th OLC); SSgt. Norman O. Flory (Basic Air Medal); Sp4 Edward R. Howell Jr., (1st thru 5th OLC); Sp4 Howell was also awarded the Army Commendation Medal for performance of meritorious service in Vietnam; Sp4 Derrell R. Marchman (8th thru 10th OLC); Sp4 Wayne Walkup (7th thru 9th OLC); and Sp4 John R. Boffetti (1st thru 6th OLC). All air medals awarded were for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight in the Republic of Vietnam.

3rd Army Cites 38th's Battery B

During the monthly battalion review Capt. Ollie L. Langford, Commanding Officer, Battery B, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery accepted the Third United States Army Certificate of Proficiency. This certificate was presented to the battery by Lt. Col. Oliver P. Tjossem the Division Artillery executive officer and Lt. Col. Robert W. Short, the battalion commander.

It cited Battery B for its high state of material maintenance and organizational maintenance operation during the Command Management inspection conducted by Third Army. The Certificate was signed by Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general, Third United States Army.

127th Engineer Beavers Build Bridge for Boy Scouts

The Beavers of the 127th Engineer Battalion have left their mark again. At the end of February the first Platoon of Company C was given a job directive to repair a timber trestle bridge and a concrete dam at the Explorer Base of Camp McKenzy Boy Scout Camp, northwest of Columbus. Part of the dam and the bridge over the dam had been washed out when the lake had overflowed due to heavy rainfall this past winter.

After an initial reconnaissance of the work site, 2nd Lt. Thomas E. Easter, Platoon Leader, and SFC Stanley Bristol, platoon sergeant, determined that the existing bridge was not repairable due to rotten understructure and that the whole bridge would have to be torn down and a new one built. On March 2 the Platoon, with supporting equipment from Headquarters Company, moved to the bridge site and set up quarters in the Explorer Lodge overlooking the lake. Construction was begun the following day.

Under supervision of Lt. Easter and Sgt. Bristol, construction was rapid and efficient. Sgt. Culee Sansom, second squad leader, assisted by Sgt. William H. May and his squad of Beavers, was in charge of constructing the superstructure of the bridge. Sgt. William R. Cobea, Jr., First squad leader, assisted by Sgt. Richard L. Humphrey, supervised his squad in the construction of the bridge substructure. The third squad, under the supervision of Sgt. Joseph C. Broadnax, the Squad Leader, and Sgt. William M. Crawford Jr., his assistant, built a highline with a tramway over the construction site to bring the heavy stringers over the bridge. Each stringer weighed in excess of 1000 pounds.

In repairing the dam portion of the project the Beaver Platoon used 200 tons of rock fill and poured 196 cubic yards of concrete. The rock fill was put in the washed out portion of the dam, then a reinforced concrete cap was poured to seal a portion of the face of the dam. A concrete pier was also poured for the bridge.

But it was not all work and no play for the Beavers. Having been given permission from the Boy Scout Council to fish in the lake, a fishing contest was set up after duty hours for the largest fish caught. The contest was won by Sgt. Cohea with a 21.5 inch bass. PFC Alexander Pace who ran a close second with a 20 inch bass.

The work site was visited once by Brig. John M. Wright, Jr., assistant division commander of the 11th Air Assault Division, and several times by high ranking Boy Scout officials. At the end of the project a steak party was given for the platoon members and their dependents by the local Boy Scout Council.

Keniengehaga Battalion Hits Fort Stewart Swamps For ATT Preparation and 377th Maneuver Support

Fort Stewart, Ga., was the scene of action this past week as the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, spent a week there in training for the forthcoming Platoon Army Training Tests.

The Kaniengehaga Battalion left Kelley Hill early Saturday morning April 3rd, arriving by CV-2 at Fort Stewart's Liberty Army Airfield early that afternoon. Upon arrival preparation was started for the week's training. The battalion relaxed over the weekend and on Monday a vigorous training program commenced. The battalion fired familiarization on the night firing range Monday and Wednesday nights and on Friday, familiarization firing was held for selected personnel on the M-60 machinegun, M-79 grenade launcher, M14 E-2 automatic rifle and the 3.5 inch rocket launcher.

Monday through Thursday mornings the rifle companies conducted training on the bayonet assault course and the grenade range. On the bayonet assault course the men had to practice their previous training while negotiating such obstacles as double-apron barbed wire fences, low tunnels of barbed wire, a 5-foot high log wall, various foxholes and trenches and numerous dummies on which they used bayonet thrusts and rifle butt strokes. In the latter part of the morning the men received instruction on grenade techniques after which they threw two live grenades. Periscopes allowed onlookers to view the effects of the grenades.

During the afternoon the men tested their skill with the lensetic compass. From a given starting point, the men had to travel over land that was sometimes flat, occasionally hilly, and covered with dense undergrowth. During this compass course problem, they encountered obstacles such as deep swamps and streams on their trek from one point to another. These points were often located as far as 1700 meters apart. There were four points to locate, the last being the starting point. That night the men again covered the course using only their compass and their knowledge.

The mortar sections of Company D supported Battery A of the 377th Artillery by providing illumination for the rocket - bearing helicopters of the 377th Artillery's Aerial Rocket Attack in the first training of this kind seen at Fort Stewart. The 81mm rounds were set for 24 second delays and were fired at 15 second intervals, after which two choppers swooped in to fire their rockets at targets on the range. The aerial rockets were fired at ranges from 1500 to 2000 meters at the illuminated targets. The air-bursting mortar rounds exploded, releasing a parachute flare. The problem lasted about three hours, during which time over 30 mortar rounds were fired.

Delta's Recon Platoon was assigned the mission of acting as aggressors against the 377th Artillery in their battery ATTs. They moved into position and established an "L" type ambush. Security was placed in both directions to give early warning of the approaching enemy. PFC McRay, security on the left, reported the approach of eight enemy vehicles being led by a ¼ ton truck and the battery commander. The recon platoon had a 2½ ton truck parked by the side of the road. The lead enemy vehicle was about 50 meters from the 2½ ton when it was driven out across the road. Simultaneously a paracanvass on the side of the truck was raised and the machine gunner, PFC McDevitt, started firing. The killer team on the side of the road, under SFC Arroyo, opened fire and threw hand grenades (simulated by smoke grenades). The truck was then pulled out and the recon platoon withdrew into the woods avoiding the security and pursuit sent after them by the 377th. The following day, an ambush of similar type was used against B Battery of the 377th. The front security was allowed to pass through the trap and soon as their main body was in position, logs were thrown across the road, and the recon platoon opened fire providing the battery with a good measure of action to defend against. The recon platoon then pulled out, breaking off contact and avoiding aerial reconnaissance to return to their base of operations.

Saturday was movement and clean up day, and after rising early, the battalion moved to Liberty Army Airfield and came back to Fort Benning by CV-2, with the rear detachment returning by vehicle.

RAKS Launch Rifle Platoon Training Tests With Companies Active in Field Operations

Paratrooper riflemen of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry launched the rifle platoon Army Training Tests for the 1st Brigade Tuesday as Rakkasan Company C swung into action, Tuesday morning.

The rugged Air Assault Infantry ATT, sixteen hours in duration, encompasses twenty-one tactical requirements in line with the air assault doctrine, and is all work, from the issuance of the warning order until the final debriefing.

Being conducted on the western edge of the reservation, the action began when the platoon being tested conducted an air assault operation to attack and establish strongpoints.

As the problem continued, the platoon came under sniper fire on the landing zone, and later is brought under artillery fire, followed by an encounter with anti-personnel minefield, covered by enemy rifle fire.

Also included in the test is CBR warfare, requiring that effective counter-measures be taken after the enweapon, and fallout dictates a radiological survey, and action for radiation sickness.

Other highlights of the training test include an air assault raid, the destruction of an aggressor missile site, and the withdrawal of the platoon under pressure while being pursued by an aggressor platoon.

Prompt reaction is a key to a successful conclusion of the test, and the problem is a good one, providing the Raks with plenty of opportunity to demonstrate their state of training and experience.

Aggressor support for the problem was provided by the Rakkasan recon platoon, commanded by 1st Lt. Samuel J. Watson, III.

Following Company C, under the command of Capt. Robert Lindquist, on Tuesday was Company B under Capt. William C. Roll Wednesday, with Company A commanded by Capt. James L. Allen winding up the series Thursday.

GOLD LEAVES . . . Maj. Nevin Philips, 11th MI Detachment, 11th Air Assault Division receives his gold oak leaves from his wife Beverley during a ceremony conducted in the office of the Division Chief of Staff April 3.

Two Support Command Captains Are Airborne School Honor Grads

Support Command can point with pride to the accomplishment of two of its officers who attended Fort Benning's Airborne Course and were selected as Officer Honor Graduates.

The first award was given to Capt. Joseph L. Spencer, Headquarters Company and Band, who received the Honor Graduate Trophy when he completed the Airborne Course on February 5. Capt. Mark S. Smith, 408th Supply and Service Battalion proved that lightning can strike twice when he received the Honor Graduate Trophy on completing the Airborne Course April 8.

The trophy is a six inch heavy bronze statuette depicting an airborne soldier in complete equipment preparing to "hook up" prior to making a parachute jump. This trophy is presented to both an officer and an enlisted member of the Airborne Class judged to have demonstrated the most outstanding leadership qualities.

Capt. Joseph Spencer, who attended the course in January and February, has been a Support Command member since February 1963. He served as the first commanding officer of the combined Headquarters Company, Support Command and the 11th Administration Company. His other division assignments have included Support Command Adjutant and he has been performing duties as Support Command Second Forward Support Operations Officers since October 1964.

Capt. Mark Smith, assigned as 11th Air Assault Division POL Officer, plans to continue his Airborne career by attending the Quartermaster Parachute Riggers School at Fort Lee, Va., upon completion of a course at the Quartermaster Advance School this coming summer. Smith, who was very favorably impressed with the Airborne Course and the caliber of the instructor personnel, stated that he has been a member of the Fort Benning Sports Parachute Club since February of this year and has made several jumps prior to attending the Airborne Course in March and April.

A&R Becomes 'Netball' Match

The division Headquarters and Headquarters Company has just completed an intra-company, double elimination volleyball tournament in conjunction with the new division policy of A & R on Wednesday afternoons.

The various sections and units within the headquarters fielded five officer and eleven enlisted teams.

After three consecutive Wednesdays of competition the field was narrowed down to two teams, one an officer team from the G-3 section and a team made up from officers of the Command Section. Headquarters Commandant Section, and Headquarters Company with the latter winning the finals two games to nothing.

Cigarette lighters were presented to the winning team at the conclusion of the tournament.

Heroism During Korean Rescue Cited at 26th Artillery Battery

Sp5 Robert D. Stone, Battery E (Aviation) 26th Artillery was presented the Army Commendation Medal at a battery formation held last Saturday morning, April 10.

Maj. David L. Carson, Battery E commander, pinned the medal on Specialist Stone's uniform.

The award was presented to Sp5 Stone for displaying outstanding courage on June 12, 1964 in Korea, while assisting in the aero - medical rescue of a seriously injured South Korean soldier. The unit to which Sp5 Stone was assigned was requested to assist in the rescue of three Republic of Korea soldiers who had wandered into a mine field. One of the soldiers was seriously injured and needed immediate medical attention.

The award citation, read at the formation by battery 1st Sgt. Herbert Eubanks, cited Stone's courage during the entire rescue operation. "As crewchief of the rescue aircraft, Specialist Stone voluntarily risked his life in the performance of his duty. While the aircraft hovered in an extremely small clearing over the active mine field, Sp5 Stone, with disregard for his own safety, placed himself in a hazardous position halfway outside of the cargo door and directed the helicopter over the trapped individuals."

The citation continued, "During the medical evacuation Specialist Stone, administered first aid to the wounded man until a doctor was picked up enroute."

Sp5 Stone has been with the 11th Air Assault Division since August 1964. He is presently a crewchief on the UH-1B helicopter.

A total of seven awards were presented Monday morning, April 12, in the office of Col. William R. Lynch, commanding officer of the 2nd Air Assault Brigade.

Units that received the awards were Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade, commanded by Capt. Richard R. Browning; Company B, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, commanded by Capt. William A. Davies, and Company D, 1st Battalion 511th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Richard C. Morris.

The awards for the Headquarters Company were the 2nd Brigade Soldier of the Month, received by SP4 Robert G. Devault, Best Mess Award, received by Sp5's Robert V. Burns, Horace D. Moore, and William J. Luzader, all cooks in the Headquarters Company mess hall, and last but not the least, 2nd Brigade Crew Chief of the Month went to Sp4 Theodore I. R. Byba.

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, received two awards in the order of the Best Supply Award and the 2nd Brigade Volleyball Championship. Receiving the award for Best Supply was Sgt. Marlin C. Cloud while Capt. Davies and Lt. Robert J. Ross accepted the award for the volleyball champs.

2nd Brigade Driver of the Month and runner-up in the Brigade Volleyball tournament went to Company D, 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry. Accepting the trophy for runner-up honors in the Brigade was Sgt. Stephan Sheban while receiving the award for Driver of the Month was PFC Larry W. Graham.

Group S-2 Officer Promoted to Major

Col. George S. Beatty, Jr. pinned major's leafs on Robert W. Flint, on April 8, in a ceremony attended by Maj. Flint's wife, in the Aviation Group commander's office.

Maj. Flint, a senior Army aviator since Aug. 1962, has served as the S-2 of the 11th Aviation Group since Aug. 1964. Before coming to the 11th Air Assault Division, Maj. Flint served as commanding officer of Company C, 11th Engineer Battalion, in Korea. He has also served four tours at the Presidio of San Francisco. He was graduated May 1964 from the United States Army Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

Maj. Flint received his commission on March 9, 1954 from the Engineer Officers Candidate School, Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Arty Techniques Shown to ROTC

Two OH-13 Sioux helicopters from Battery E, (Aviation) 26th Artillery participated in the Air Assault demonstration held for ROTC students last Friday at Fournier Range, Fort Benning.

The two machine gun equipped helicopters were used to demonstrate the "pop-up" method of firing and then a "reconnaissance by fire" engagement. The latter mission was demonstrated as the two helicopters made a low pass in front of the reviewing stands with all machine guns firing.

42nd Artillery Builds Little John Monument

Headquarters of the 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery has been dressed up by a recently completed masonry monument which displays the Little John Rocket, the division's longest ranged and most lethal artillery weapon.

The project is part of a continuing "self - help" area improvement effort by the 42nd Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, and highlights almost a year of extensive area development which has included battery mess halls, billets, dayrooms, and grounds.

Skills brought from civilian life figured heavily in the erection of the monument. The base, a six foot high edifice of concrete and brick, was laid by mason PFC Robert A. Roosa of Battery C. The inscription was painted by PFC David Carrasco of Battery A, while the battalion's Sgt. Maj. Harold L. Deal, acted as superintendent.

Poised atop the monument is a gleaming, white Little John Rocket. The slender, 15-foot missile is an actual round, made inert for display purposes. Other materials were obtained through donations or salvage. The masonry of the base alone is estimated to weigh more than two tons.

The display may be seen at Biddle and Whitney Streets in Harmony Church.

Cub Scouts Visit Caribou Unit

Cub Scouts of Den 5 Pack 53 visited the 11th Aviation Company Saturday, March 20, 1965 to get a first hand look at helicopters and crash rescue equipment.

Mrs. Darrel Bishop, den mother of Den 5 and the Cubs had many questions about the helicopters which were answered and explained by Capt. Donald Olsen and CWO George Horan. Sgt. Richard A. Henningsen, heliport fire marshall and SP5 Nickey F. McGuire demonstrated several items of equipment used for crash rescue.

The Scout members present were Kim Bishop, John Damren, George Horan Jr., David Hickman, Rhett Martin, Jim O'Shea, Tom Owen, and Tom West Brook.

2nd Brigade CO Has Busy Week

The commanding Officer of the 2nd Air Assault Brigade, Col. William R. Lynch, has been a busy commander during the past week.

In the beginning of the week, Col. Lynch and Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles, assistant division commander of the 11th Air Assault Division, traveled to Washington, D. C., for briefings and discussions on the current status of the air assault concept.

Next came a visit to the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry. The battalion has been undergoing intensive training at Fort Stewart, Ga., for the last week and Col. Lynch and some of his staff made a training visit Thursday, April 8, by helicopter. While down at Fort Stewart, he visited Lt. Col. Robert B. Tulley, commanding officer of the battalion, and observed the training.

Saturday morning Col. Lynch, Maj. Joseph L. Parlas, Brigade S-1 and Sgt. Maj. Joseph Chickini, went to Lawson Army Air Field to meet the 38th Infantry as they came back from Fort Stewart.

Honors Ceremony Set For New CONARC Commanding General

Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., commanding general, U.S. Continental Army Command (CONARC) arrived at Fort Benning last evening for a three-day orientation visit and will be accorded honors at 8 a.m. today on York Field.

Gen. Freeman, who commanded The Infantry Center from May 1, 1958 until April 18, 1960, recently succeeded Gen. Hugh P. Harris as CONARC commander. Gen. Harris, also a former Infantry Center commander retired here on Feb. 27 at a massive review on Sightseeing Field.

Gen. Freeman's visit to Fort Benning, part of an orientation tour of installations throughout CONUS, was timed to coincide with the Organization Day observances being held today and tomorrow by the 2d Inf. Div.'s 23d Inf., a regiment he once commanded.

The CONARC commander and Mrs. Freeman attended the 23d Inf. Officers' Ball last night at the Main Officers' Open Mess and he will attend the Organization Day parade at Weatherby Field later this morning.

The balance of Gen. Freeman's itinerary today will include briefings on The Infantry Center and The Infantry School, a tour of Fort Benning by helicopter and a two-hour visit this afternoon

Inf. Bdg.) and 4 p.m. at Branch No. 7 (8th Div. Rd.) April 29, and at 2 p.m. at Branch No. 4 (58th Inf.) May 1.

Located in areas easily accessible to troops all over the post, the Special Services Libraries are stocked with nearly 75,000 volumes. During the past year, 15,769 persons checked out books.

This does not include a large stock of pocket books, popular with men who are slated for exercises in the field, nor does it include periodicals. The libraries maintain 1,540 subscriptions to magazines and professional journals.

Other popular items are records that are played at the libraries on request and textbooks that accompany U. S. Armed Forces Institute courses.

Miss Virginia Hollowell is chief librarian for Special Services Libraries on the post. Working with her are seven other librarians, one of whom is Capt. (Ret.) Carl Ficker.

Ficker is librarian at the Third U.S. Army and U.S. Army Infantry Center Library Service Center in Bldg. 1761, a clearing house for 31 libraries in Third Army area. The Center selects, orders and catalogs new books. Surplus volumes at one library may be sent to the Center for relocation where there is a need for them.

Mrs. Doris Sheible is extension librarian for the Center, supervising the seven branch libraries. Miss Harriett Pitchford is a cataloger.

The chief librairan at the Main Post Library is Mrs. Mary Jane Galer, while Miss Jeanette Catledge and Mrs. Vivian S. Howard are reference librarians. Miss Josephine Sinciau is librarian at the Kelley Hill Branch.

Miss Hollowell said there are 17 military and 21 civilian personnel, in addition to the seven librarians, making it possible to staff all libraries.

The Special Services Libraries offer circulation privileges to permanent post personnel only, but anyone may visit the libraries, regardless of status.

A full-time reference service maintained at the Main Post Library is actually available throughout the post, through inter - library loan. The service provides standard reference volumes, back issues of magazines and pamphlets, the contents of which are listed in vertical files.

At six of the libraries, timely new books are added each month on a book exchange subscription plan. These books are available at Main Post, Martin Army Hospital, Sand Hill, 58th Inf., Kelley Hill and 8th Div. Rd. libraries.

Plans are under way to build a $140,000 additon to the Main Post Library. The Kelley Hill Library occupies a new building erected within the past year. Other improvements include renovation of the library Center and the current remodeling of the Sand Hill Library.

Still another library on the post, The Infantry School Library acquired complete new facilities within the past year.

Operated by the Office of the Secretary of The Infantry School, the facility is on the first floor of Bldg. 4, west of the lobby.

Miss Ruth Wesley, chief librarian since 1935, said the library is maintained for the use of the students, faculty and staff of The Infantry School.

There are 100,000 items in the library including books, documents, records, microfilm, staff studies prepared by Infantry officer career course students, and tapes of speeches made on the post.

The Infantry School Library has two sound rooms for playback of tapes and a microfilm reading room.

to lead the two battalions of the 23d Inf. in a full military review on the 2d Inf. Div.'s Wetherby Parade Field at 10:30 a.m. this morning.

The 1st Bn., 23d Inf., commanded by Lt. Col. Strathmore K. McMurdo, is assigned to the 2d Inf. Div. and the 2d Bn., commanded by Lt. Col. Harold G. Moore, is presently on loan to the 11th AAD.

Among the former members of the 23d taking part in the unit day activities is Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, 2d Inf. Div. commander.

It was Gen. Chiles who took command of the 23d Inf. Regt. at Chipyong-ni when the unit was surrounded and fighting off the concerted attack of five Chinese Communist divisions.

Gen. Chiles assumed command of the regiment from Gen. Freeman, who was wounded in the Chipyong-ni struggle.

Other special guests for the regiment's official birthday celebration will be Lt. Col. Robert R. Parr and Sgt. Maj. Marvin G. Liller, the commanding officer and sergeant major of the 4th Bn., 23d Inf. presently stationed at Fort Richardson, Alaska.

Liller said he and Parr would attend the unit day celebration today. The 4th Bn. is heavily engaged and plans only a formal retreat formation in honor of the day.

CDCIA Ladies View Fashions

Among the special guests were Mrs. John A. Heintges, Mrs. John Norton and Mrs. Robert M. Williams.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Patrick B. Watson and Mrs. Jerry Lovinggood.

Third Army Shoot Opens

The 1965 Third U.S. Army Rifle - Pistol Championships which opens today are shaping up to be a wide-open affair as only one of last year's three overall match champions is returning for competition.

MSgt. Fred S. Schaser of the Third Army Marksmanship Unit retired recently vacating the pistol grand aggregate title he won in 1964 with a record-setting 2619-103x total.

Also up for grabs this year is the individual rifle grand-aggregate won by Sgt. Willie Jordan of the 2d Inf. Div. Marksmanship Detachment. Jordan has been assigned to Europe.

The only returning champion will be the 2d Div. "Mescalaros" who captured the overall rifle team event last year.

University Staff, Faculty Touring Fort Benning

Nine members from the staff and faculty of the American University, Washington, D.C., headed by vice-president, Dr. Donald Derby are visiting Fort Benning at the invitation of the commanding general, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

In addition to meeting with local officials of Fort Benning and the American University, the visitors will be briefed on the history, organization and administration of The Infantry School, observe various training activities here, and tour the new Infantry School, Bldg. 4.

Mrs. J. Waldrop Will Address Dinner Meeting

Mrs. John L. Waldrop will be guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Evening Protestant Women of the Chapel at 7 o'clock Monday at the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2605.

She will give an inspirational address entitled "Wings."

Mrs. Waldrop is chief of the Religious Education Division of The Infantry Center Chaplain Section.

By Local AUSA Chapter

'Spring Offensive' Planned; Membership Drive Started

A spring "offensive" in the battle to retain its position as the largest group in the national organization was launched at a luncheon Wednesday by the Columbus - Phenix City - Fort Benning Chaper, Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA).

Membership campaign strategy was plotted at the post's NCO Crain Hall by a combined force of the installation's sergeants major, division commanders, executive officers of the local chapter and Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

R. L. Hinson, chairman of the membership committee and first vice president of the chapter, outlined plans to bring his heaviest weapons into action in an effort to obtain a larger civilian membership. At the same time, he called upon the senior sergeants for support in the military sectors.

Oscar L. Betts, Jr., chapter president, James W. Blanchard, second vice president, and J. Robert Nelson, director, were at the luncheon meeting to emphasize the need for increased activity on the membership front.

According to Betts, membership has dropped considerably since it was awarded a plaque in November at the annual meeting in Washington. This decrease is attributed to a large number of transfers, retirements and discharges.

"These losses, coupled with the increases other chapters are making in their drive to overtake the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter, means we either recruit a large number of new members from the civilian and military communities or lose our laurels," Betts said.

Motor Pool Duty Earns Officer Brigade Citation

CODE OF THE U.S. FIGHTING MAN

When questioned, should I become a prisoner of war, I am bound to give only name, rank, service number and date of birth. I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause.

When questioned, a prisoner of war is required by the Geneva Convention and permitted by this Code to disclose his name, rank, service number and date of birth. A prisoner of war may also communicate with the enemy regarding his individual health or welfare as a prisoner of war and, when appropriate, on routine matters of camp administration. Oral or written confessions, true or false, questionnaires, personal history statements, propaganda recordings and broadcasts, appeals to other prisoners of war, signatures to peace or surrender appeals, self criticisms, or any oral or written communication on behalf of the enemy or critical or harmful to the United States, its allies, the Armed Forces or other prisoners are forbidden.

It is a violation of the Geneva Convention to place a prisoner of war under physical or mental torture or any other form of coercion to secure from him information of any kind. If, however, a prisoner is subjected to such treatment, he will endeavor to avoid by every means the disclosure of any information, or making any statement or the performance of any action harmful to the interests of the United States or its allies or which will provide aid or comfort to the enemy.

Under Communist bloc reservations to the Geneva Convention, the signing of a confession or the making of a statement by a prisoner is likely to be used to convict him as a war criminal under the laws of his captors. This conviction has the effect of removing him from the prisoner of war status and according to this Communist bloc device denying him any protection under the terms of the Geneva Convention and repatriation until a prison sentence is served. The Judge Says . . .

The baseball season is just getting under way. It has been said that baseball is traditionally the favorite American pastime. It actually is much more than a pastime, — it is an exemplification of the American system of laws.

Basically, the game is governed by rules which in effect are the laws. It is played by people who are members of a team who could be called the citizens. The team members can do their squawking themselves or do it through the congressman, or make complaints and defend themselves through lawyers.

Disputes are settled by impartial umpires just as a trial judge settles disputes between citizens. A manager can often appeal an umpire's decision just as a citizen may appeal the trial judge's decision to a higher court. Violation of rules results in penalties and so does violation of the law.

Good sportsmanship is expected and rewarded — good citizenship is expected and rewarded. A batter may strike out but he usually gets another chance. Depending on the crime, a convicted criminal usually gets another chance.

All of the rules governing citizens apply to members of the Army with one major exception — a baseball team may lose a game but have a chance to play the same opponents again. The Army may lose a battle and get a chance to fight again, but we can't lose a war and get another chance at freedom.

The Judge Says — Baseball teams are composed of players. The Army is composed of soldiers. For the team to win, all players must play their best in accordance with the rules. For the Army to be a winning team, its soldiers must abide by the laws and regulations.

Justification of Life

By Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker

Each profession and vocation has an organ of speech, a vocabulary, peculiar to its nature, needs and mission. This is true, also, of the military profession of arms which functions under the will of our people and at the direction of our President.

In our Army vocabulary a very important word is justification. This is a brief defense of certain requirements and resources necessary for the accomplishment of an essential project or activity related to our mission.

Those who are motivated by the Judeo-Christian concepts of life have their justification explained in the Holy Scriptures. These, in considerable detail, present a defense of all requirements and resources necessary for a good life, which should be the goal of each of us. Foremost is a faith in God and good works, for men are known by their deeds. The Master admonished his disciples to let their light so shine that men might see their good works and glorify their heavenly Father.

The Holy Bible is the most wonderful book in all the world. Each year since General George Washington accepted the command of the Continental Army, it has been rated as the "World's Best Seller". Should I be required to choose between a college education or an understanding of the Bible, I would choose the latter for I would be prepared more adequately for a happier life.

The Scriptures are inspired by God. In addition they are our greatest literature consisting of anthropology, history, poetry, philosophy, medicine, law, theology, romance, military strategy, geography, architecture, agriculture, music and astronomy.

Children delight in its stories of high adventure, wise men ponder its depths of truth, the defeated find in it courage to try again, scholars search its pages to collaborate their theories, statesmen use its quotations to capture attention and theologians use it to help others find a new meaning in life. Without its instruction our country could not long endure.

A copy should be in every home, classroom, sickroom, and wherever people congregate. It is read for private and public worship and consulted for guidance by all who give serious study concerning the true nature of life; from where they came, their life's mission and their destiny.

Loyalty Day

On July 18, 1958, Congress designated May 1 of each year as Loyalty Day and requested the President to issue a proclamation inviting the people of the United States to observe each such day with appropriate ceremonies.

Of course, most Americans need no special day or occasion to demonstrate their allegiance to the ideals of democracy outlined in the Constitution.

Members of the armed services, by the nature of their assignment, display daily the loyalty and devotion to duty which have helped build a strong country based on democratic and just principles.

In his proclamation of Loyalty Day, 1965, President Johnson states, "Our nation's rise to its unequaled position of prosperity and power was no accident of fate — nor was it achieved without costly struggle. Rather, the United States flourished because her people were so dedicated to free government that they were willing to sacrifice their lives and fortunes, at home or abroad, to preserve our democratic institutions. The roll of our honored dead attests to the courage of our people.

"This loyalty of our people — their unswerving devotion to our nation and its constitution — has rewarded us with a heritage of freedom never before achieved by any civilization. We must cherish that heritage and fulfill our sacred trust to enrich and preserve it for our children, and our children's children."

As Americans and servicemen, Loyalty Day should serve as a reminder of the task we all share — the task of assuring this freedom and equality for future generations. Only through continued belief and support of our democratic system of government can the free peoples of the world hope to prevail over Communism and its enslaving tactics. (AFPS)

National Library Week

From April 25 through May 1, Armed Forces Libraries will join the nation in the annual observance of National Library Week. During this week attention is focused on our nation's libraries in an effort to assess their values, determine their needs and stimulate their use throughout the year.

The ever increasing technical needs of the Armed Forces and the consequent growing emphasis on knowledge and brainpower demand a matching growth in the functions of the libraries serving the military man. Our service librarians are constantly striving to support and keep pace with this expanding pursuit of education. It is in recognition of these efforts to assist the professional soldier to keep abreast with the broadening horizons of learning, culture and techniques that I enjoin each member of this post to support the libraries at Fort Benning.

Win In Viet Nam

Q. How does the Communist campaign in Viet Nam differ from conventional war?

A. Communist aggression in Viet Nam aims at people primarily, not territory or military targets, although there is constant Viet Cong military action against government forces to support the primary aim. The communist weapons are murder, arson, sabotage, bombings, and torture — all aimed at terrorizing the civilian populace and destroying the structure of government. This is backstopped by well - equipped conventional forces capable of regimental-size operation.

The Viet Cong use political and propaganda techniques to pave the way for military action. They concentrate on peasants and rural areas in an effort to undermine morale and loyalty to the government. They also use assassination as a weapon to damage the nation's social structure, killing teachers, health workers, administrators and key officials.

All these methods aim at destroying the South from within, usurping the legitimate government and social institutions and replacing them with the total control on which Hanoi's brand of communism relies.

197th's Sunday Evening Teens Hold Weekend Retreat in Florida

A unique example of teen-age initiative can be found in the Sunday Evening Teens, a group of high school age military dependents who direct their own religious programs.

The teens recently returned from a weekend in Destin, Fla. The retreat was financed by mowing lawns, washing cars and conducting a cake sale.

The retreat which took three months to plan, was a great success, according to Sp4 Dan Roberts, 197th chaplain's assistant, who is a sponsor for the group.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Lester E. Burnette, 197th chaplain, accompanied the group with Mrs. Burnette, and led the Teens in prayer and campfire singing.

In addition to Roberts, sponsors for the group are Sp4 and Mrs. Alwayne Vande Kamp and Sp5 and Mrs. Leonard Wright. Roberts, Vande Kamp and Wright are all members of the 197th Inf. Bde.'s Hq. & Hq. Co.

Teenage military dependents who are interested in joining the Sunday Evening Teens, or who wish to attend one of their meetings, can call 545-4712 for further information.

Japanese Wives Entertain

CTC Ladies' Luncheon Features Oriental Flair

By IDA C. EVANS

Five Army Wives from Japan brought a bit of their homeland to Fort Benning last Tuesday when they presented an artistic program at a luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess staged by the ladies of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Mrs. Kiyo Chevalier and Mrs. Momoyo Burroughs, both of Tokyo, Mrs. Yoko Whigham and Mrs. Yoko Collins, both of Kobe, and Mrs. Kyoko McFadden of Kyoto, entertained the 68 members and guests with a style show, music, dances, brush writing and a tea ceremony.

Mrs. Whigham who narrated the style show, chose for her models kimonos appropriate to various seasons and purposes. From the "Yukata," a hot weather garment made of lightweight washable cotton, to a "Gaishutsu-gi," in heavy lined silk, the kimonos illustrated the dress of the Japanese lady in the home, at tea ceremonies, flower arranging parties, and on formal occasions.

Mrs. Chevalier played the composition "Shin-nai," a classical number, on Shamisen, a three-string instrument. She danced the "Kuroda Bushi" in "Bando" style which originated on Kyushu Island.

Two classical dances were the "Cherry or Plum Blossoms" by Mrs. Whigham and the "Huata," a dance popular in tea houses, by Mrs. Chevalier.

Demonstrations of Japanese brush writing were presented by Mrs. Burroughs, Mrs. Collins and Mrs. McFadden.

A highlight of the program was a tea ceremony, using informal tray serving. Mrs. Whigham was hostess and Mrs. McFadden, the guest.

An Oriental luncheon was served on tables laid with both chop sticks and silver. The centerpiece at the head table featured an arrangement of an emperor and empress doll with a brief description of the annual "Festival of Dolls."

Flanking the display were floral arrangements in Japanese style.

Objects of art from Japan covered a table near the door, including a metal hand mirror, a small boy's kimono, and a "Hotei," one of the Seven Lucky Gods of Japan.

Mrs. Jess W. Walls presided at the luncheon. Hostesses were ladies of the 90th Replacement Bn., with Mrs. Clifford A. Philipsen as chairman. The hostesses wore authentic Japanese kimonos and participated as models in the style show.

Resurrection Sermon by Dr. Lee Highlights Easter Sunrise Service

An estimated 10,000 worshippers attended the Easter Sunrise Services in Doughboy Stadium Sunday. The service was conducted by Dr. R. G. Lee, pastor emeritus of Bellvue Baptist Church in Memphis, Tenn.

Dr. Lee spoke on "Resurrection Realities" at the open air service held before a 30-foot cross erected on an improvised altar at the stadium.

Before dawn, as worshippers silently took their places in tiered seats flanking the altar, The Infantry Center Band played traditional Easter music.

At sunrise, three trumpets sounded "Church Call."

Eddie True, son of MSgt. and Mrs. Walter True, carrying a 16-foot cross, led a processional of 100 robed choir members from The Infantry Center Chapel to a choir loft near the altar.

In addition to Dr. Lee, ministers participating in the service included Dr. Alan B. Comish, pastor of Waldrop Memorial Baptist Church in Columbus, Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. In the background is Capt. Thomas Hines, the general's aide.

Going to Take an MOS Test Soon? If So, Extension Courses Can Help

Going to take a Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) test soon? If so, you may be interested to know that extension courses offered by The Infantry School's Department of Non-resident Instruction have been evaluated for application to MOS preparation.

In announcing the results of a recent study, Col. Ned B. Mabry, department director, pointed out that while The Infantry School does not prepare extension courses for training in a specific MOS, many of the courses, particularly the Army Precommission Course, contain material which is very valuable for training Infantry NCOs and potential NCOs.

For instance, the department's subcourse 102, "Military Leadership," will provide a working knowledge of the subject and help materially in MOS test preparation for MOS 111, 112, 113, and 115. Scope of each of the many subcourses may be found in DA Pamphlet 350-60 or the Extension Course Catalogue of The Infantry School.

Personnel desiring to use subcourses to assist in MOS preparation should review the requirements for their MOS as outlined in DA pamphlets covering the enlisted evaluation system and determine the areas in which they need additional instruction, then select the subcourses which best fill their needs.

ROTC Revitalization Act Opens Commission Door; College Sophomores Can Apply Under New Program

The new two - year ROTC program now makes it possible for college sophomores with no prior military training to obtain an Army commission upon completion of their degree requirements.

The program was announced by Headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command, which is responsible for implementing the new program.

Any college sophomore may apply. It opens the door for two types of students who previously were excluded from opportunities to receive Army ROTC commissions — the two year "junior college" student and the one who attended four-year institutions which have no ROTC detachments.

All that is required is that the sophomore enroll in a four-year college with an ROTC detachment to complete his degree requirements, and attend a preparatory six - week summer encampment before beginning his junior year of study.

The Army will hold two summer camps this year — both at Fort Knox, near Louisville, Ky. The first camp begins June 13 and ends July 24. The second camp runs from June 20-July 31. Each camp is set to handle 1,500 cadets.

The new program was made possible by the ROTC Revitalization Act of 1964, and is aimed at helping the Army stay abreast of its increasing requirements for college trained officers.

Until this year, only students who completed the full four-year college ROTC program at colleges and universities with ROTC detachments were eligible for ROTC commissions. The Army has been obtaining between 12,000 and 14,000 officers annually through the ROTC program, easily the largest single source of commissioned officers.

A sophomore who indicates a desire to participate in the ROTC program can now attend the six-week camp, enroll in a four - year college with an ROTC detachment, complete the advanced two-year ROTC course (MSIII and MSIV) along with his regular degree requirements, and receive a commission upon graduation.

Each cadet in the advanced ROTC program receives a $40 monthly stipend during the college sessions, plus uniforms, textbooks and other necessary supplies.

Prior to attending the summer camp session, each student will be given a medical examination and a personal interview. At camp the cadets will receive some 264 hours of instruction and training, with particular emphasis on physical conditioning, marksmanship and leadership development. Cadets will be paid $78 monthly, or about $117 for the six-week period, plus travel expenses.

The new program is not designed to replace or alter the present four - year ROTC program.

Continental Army Command officials feel that a relatively high percentage of students who enroll in the program will complete the requirements for commissions. Academic and physical disqualifications should pose no problems, since those selected will have already completed two years of college level work and passed a physical examination. Those lacking soldier-like qualities, military bearing and motivation will be weeded out during the summer camp period.

Students interested in more information about this program should contact the professor of military science at the nearest college ROTC detachment before May 1, the deadline for 1965 applications.

Law Day Observance Is Planned; Essay Contest Held for Students

Fort Benning will observe "Law Day USA," May 1, with an essay contest in the dependent schools, editorials, displays, and a billboard at Outpost No. 1.

Members of The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate (SJA) Section have been invited to attend a Law Day banquet at 7:30 p.m. April 30 at the Ralston Hotel, sponsored by the Columbus Lawyers Club.

Wives of the SJA Section officers are invited to a tea at 4 p.m. April 30 at the residence of Judge and Mrs. T. Robert Elliott at 2101 Wells Dr., Columbus. The tea will be sponsored by the Columbus Lawyers Club Auxiliary.

Law Day will be the topic of the "Judge Says" column of the April 30 edition of The Bayonet.

President Lyndon B. Johnson has proclaimed May 1 as Law Day, USA, following a custom established in 1958.

In his proclamation, the President called for a rededication of the American people to our nation's ideals of equality and justice under law.

The proclamation read, in part, "Every American can contribute to an orderly lawful society by personal compliance with the laws, by recognizing the rights of others, by teaching respect for law in the home, by supporting and aiding agencies of law enforcement, and by serving on a jury or giving testimony in court when called."

Infantry Center Volleyball Crown Won by 41st Co. (Airborne) Team

The 41st Co. (Airborne), TSB, coasted into the 1965 Infantry Center Volleyball Championship by downing the 586th Engineer Co., CTC, 15-0 and 15-2, in the finals Saturday night at Briant Wells Field House.

The 41st contingent went undefeated in the tournament with a 4-0 mark while the Engineers took second place with 3-2.

In the first round held last Tuesday, the 183rd Chemical Plt., 197th Inf. Bde., defeated the Infantry Board, while Company C, 1st Bn., 58th Inf. beat the 50th Medical Co., 428th Medical Bn. The 41st posted their first win, downing the 515 Transportation Co., CTC, and the 586th Engineers dumped Headquarters Detachment, LAAC.

The following night saw the 50th Medical Co. lose to the Inf. Board and the 515th Trans. Co. fall before the LAAC, eliminating both clubs, while the 41st topped the 183rd Chem. Plt. and the 586th Engineers dropped one to the 58th Inf.

Thursday night brought the only two remaining unbeaten clubs face-to-face with the 41st victorious over the 58th Inf. Also that night the Engineers eliminated the Inf. Board and LAAC ousted the 183rd Chem. Plt.

The quarter finals on Friday set the stage for Saturday's action when the 586th Engineers eliminated both the LAAC and 58th Inf. teams.

With these wins, the Engineers guaranteed themselves a slot in the post championships held April 20-23.

Marksmen Shoot Four-Stage Test Of New Rifle Competition System

The Competitive Marksmanship Division under the direction of Lt. Col. Edgar S. Burroughs recently conducted tests on a new rifle competiton system, the Combat Rifle Match.

The new system was proposed to increase the ability and readiness of the combat rifleman.

Held at McAndrew Range, there were 60 competitors from the 2nd Inf. Division's Marksmanship Detachment and the 197th Inf. Bde. involved in the four stage test.

Slow Fire

The first stage is a slow fire exercise in the prone position from 400 yards. Shooters have two sighter rounds before firing ten rounds for record with one minute allowed per shot.

In the second stage, movement and fire are brought into focus. Starting from 400 yards out, shooters move to 300 yards, assume the prone and fire ten rounds. All this is done in a 75 second time limit.

Stage three allows the competitor two sighter rounds and ten for record. Targets are raised for six seconds during which two rounds must be fired from 300 yards in the prone position.

Final Stage

The final stage is an assault firing exercise. Each man must move from the 450 yard line to the 100 yard line at intervals, snap shooting ten rounds, all in four minutes. The firer is allowed 45 seconds to rise, move 100 yards, assume a new firing position and fire two rounds.

Capt. Hector Cruz, range officer for the test, pointed out that each competitor, unit commander and members of the support unit were given a questionaire concerning the test. These, along with similar forms from the 4th Inf. Div. at Fort Lewis, Wash., where the same tests are being conducted, will be sent to officials of the Continental Army Command for evaluation.

Should the system be proven acceptable, it will be conducted by major commanders at post-division level for all units equipped with the service rifle. (M-14).

"Finian's Rainbow," to be staged by the Little Theatre May 11-15 and 17-19 in the Playhouse on Main Post, sounds simple enough in its plot: three wishes are made on a crock of gold and everybody dances and sings.

But the nature of a musical being what it is, this final production of the season certainly has its problems.

The set — Rainbow Valley, Missitucky — must be a pine and cypress - girded valley at enough for ensemble dancing yet hilly enough to at least suggest a 20-mile vista. And it must be surrounded by tobacco fields.

The set must also accommodate a change to a colonial mansion with columns that rise to infinity. There must be a functional well on stage, and mushrooms must sprout on cue — mushrooms that can be sat upon. And the heroine Sharon (played by Ella Hearne) must have a 20-foot tree to climb on a stage only 12 feet high.

And how does one make the moon disappear during the duet of "Old Devil Moon," yet keep moonlight all about? "That's the valley legend," says the hero Woody, played by Rick Sonntag.

Trying to solve these problems is the production staff including director Wes Carr, set, designer John Wolanczyl and lighting designer Peter Hajduk.

Costumes are being designed by Gail Carr while Ingo Ortamunder is handling the choreography and Betty Auden the music.

Major characters are played by Lee Hansen, Maty Davis, Phil Ford and Dick Gile.

Tickets for the eight-night run should be reserved by phoning Mrs. Britto at 689-8662, or the Playhouse after 7 p.m. at 545-2992. Admission is 90c. The Playhouse is Bldg. 2519 behind the Quartermaster Laundry.

Blankenship Outshoots Foes To Cop Second Major Title

SFC William B. Blankenship of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit won his second consecutive major pistol title in a row last week as he captured the Pre - Interservice International aggregate over the best competitors in the Armed Forces at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Blankenship, who is the current national pistol champion, slammed out a three-gun total of 5,181 points to easily outdistance runnerup TSgt. Arnold Vitarbo of the Air Force by 41 points.

SFC Laurence Mosely, the only other competitor entered in all three of the individual events from USAMTU, finished third with an aggregate of 5,132.

Blankenship also won the Free Pistol aggregate which consisted of firing once over the 60-shot course for each of three days. He compiled a total of 1,660 points, an 11-point edge over Vitarbo.

Mosely was third in this aggregate also with 1,649, six 10-ring shots behind Vitarbo.

The Army competitors had one of their best days as a group on the third day of the Free Pistol when they took four of the top five positions.

Military Sports Editors' -1965 Baseball Poll-

AFPS — Armed Forces sports editors — 245 of them — predicted the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals will repeat as World Series combatants this fall. Then again, maybe they are not so sure!

The results of the second annual Armed Forces Press Service Baseball Poll, aimed at finding out how military "experts" pick the 20 major league teams to finish this season, named the Yanks to win the American League Pennant and the Cards to take the National flag, but only by narrow margins.

The voting for would-be first divison clubs in both leagues was so close that it seemed to underscore what just about everyone has been saying about the upcoming season. To wit, both leagues show their best over-all balance in years.

Voting on points basis of 10 (for first), 9 (for second), 8 (for third), etc., the service editors who responded to the poll spread their first - place votes around liberally.

For example, in the National League the editors gave the Cards more points (2,008), but three other teams — the Phillies, Giants and Dodgers — each received more first place votes than St. Louis.

The editors placed the teams this way:

AMERICAN — Yanks, Orioles, White Sox, Twins, Tigers, Indians, Angels, Red Sox, Athletics, Senators.

NATIONAL — Cards, Phils, Giants, Dodgers, Reds, Braves, Pirates, Cubs, Astros and Mets.

'G.I. Joe' Stands Tall In TSB Display Case

By Sp4 John Dalton

A soldier stands silent and confident while inspectors check out his uniform and equipment. Only perfection is seen in the soldier and his neatly laid-out display.

The soldier, named "G. I. Joe", stands tall at a full eight inches. The inspectors are some of the 300 men of Hqs. & Hqs. Co., TSB, peering into a display case.

This is the scene of a recent innovation by 1st Sgt. Harry K. Butler, company first sergeant, and SSgt. Joseph N. Hickert, Training NCO.

The glass - encased display has a two-fold purpose. "The G. I. Joe" display not only makes our personnel more aware of supply economy and the cost of equipment," said Butler, "but also provides answers to many questions asked at promotion board and guard mounts."

The display case contains 30 separate items, each marked with its cost and pertinent data.

Among the items displayed are the soldier in fatigue uniform, a mess kit with eating bag, field pack, helmet, pistol belt, combat boots, and a field telephone.

Although many of the articles were purchased commercially, the display contains hand-crafted items as well.

A tiny foot locker and a wall locker straddle a model "bunk". All were hand - made by Butler and built to the same scale as "Joe."

The bunk, adorned with real bed linen and Army blanket material, is made-up for a "white collar" inspection.

The lower right - hand corner of the display case is utilized for providing additional information and answering important questions frequently asked by company personnel. Presently on display is a fact sheet on the purpose and operation of company duty rosters.

Hickert said, "This corner will be changed frequently to help personnel become more informed about the Army and its mission."

Also on display is a model American flag with a card containing facts on the different types and sizes used by the Armed Forces. Another card informs onlookers of the first of Four Combat First Aid Steps.

The display stands in front of the company orderly room. Butler feels that the display is very timely, since the company is due for its Annual General Inspection next month, and hopes the display ". . . will give more incentive to the men for passing the inspection without a hitch."

Library Week

As the Sand Hill Special Services library nears the completion of an interior face lifting and with the onset of National Library week, the settings for division readers have been considerably enhanced. News staffer Joe Treaster and photographer Marv Wolf combined for the feature on page 16 which should be of interest to the bookworms, the potential bookworms and those who just like to read.

3rd Brigade Selects Fort Stewart and May For 'Cinquefoil' Tests

By MARV WOLF

Plans for the 2nd Infantry Division's largest maneuver of 1965 were revealed this week as the 3rd Brigade prepared for movement to Fort Stewart, Ga.

Scheduled

Scheduled to take part in the exercise are the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 72nd Armor, which are already at Fort Stewart undergoing annual tank gunnery firing and testing.

In addition to the armor elements, the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, the 17th Artillery, Troop A, 7th Cavalry, Company A, 2nd Engineer Battalion, Company D, 702nd Maintenance Battalion and detachments from the 22nd Signal Battalion, the 2nd Military Police Company, the 2nd Aviation Battalion, and the 2nd Medical Battalion are scheduled to take part in

The Combat Leader:

Gen Freeman Revisits Past, 23rd

By JOE TREASTER

Continental Army Commander Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., returns to Fort Benning Friday, guest of the unit in which he 36 years ago began his military career; the 2nd Infantry Division.

After an initial tour with the division at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., in 1929 as a second lieutenant, fate twice brought Freeman back to the Indianhead fraternity.

The invitation to be here this week came on the basis of his second tour with the division, which endeared him forever in the hearts of men of the 23rd Regimental Combat Team.

As a colonel in 1950, he took command of the regiment at Fort Lewis, Wash., and in July led the men into battle in Korea.

Masterful

His masterful leadership in the battle of Chipyong-ni, in which the regiment was surrounded by four divisions of North Koreans, has become legend.

The regiment was stranded 20 miles out in front of friendly forces, grappling hand - to - hand with the Reds for three days. As they struggled, Gen. Matthew Ridgeway's 8th Army withdrew behind them to safety.

A sweeping armored plunge finally split the enemy and turned the battle in favor of the 23rd Regiment's men.

Thousands died on both sides but estimates were that three Communists fell for every American soldier. Gen. Freeman was wounded in the first day of the battle and eventually was replaced by the present division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles.

Gen. Freeman was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the regiment won the President's Distinguished Unit Citation.

Shortly after the battle, Harold H. Martin, writing in the Saturday Evening Post, described Gen. Greeman:

". . .a wiry, gray-haired, pessimistic, profane and stubborn tactical genius. . .who turned the men of the 23rd from a bewildered collection of boys, shooting one another in panic each time a twig cracked in the night, into steady soldiers who fought as coldly and savagely as a pack of wolves."

Writer Martin talked about Gen. Freeman with Lt. Col. Frank Mezzar, executive officer of the regiment at Chipyong-Ni.

"He Was God"

"He wasn't just the regiment's Old Man to us," Col. Mezzar recalled. "He was the right hand of the Great White Father. He was God."

In 1955 Gen. Freeman join-

Solemn Korean Bowl Ceremony Honors Regiment's Gallant Dead

The 23rd Infantry's famed Korean Bowl, a sterling silver memory of men of the regiment who fought gallantly during the Korean War, played a prominent role Thursday night at the height of the 23rd's two-day celebration of its anniversary.

The traditional 23rd ceremony which allowed senior officers of the two battalions and special guests to honor the gallant dead was held in the Main Officers Open Mess.

The immense bowl, measuring 36 inches in diameter, and the 19 silver cups which accompany it were wrought from sterling silver combat infantrymen's badges, earned by men who fought with the regiment in the first 18 months of the war.

In the solemn candlelight ceremony Thursday evening, Lt. Col. Strathmore K. McMurdo and Lt. Col. Harold G. Moore, commanders of the 23rd's two battalions, led key officers in drinking a toast of brandy and champagne.

Sand Hill Library Ends Face-Lifting

Photos by MARV WOLF

While learned people throughout the nation next week lift saucer and cup, lean intently forward and nod agreeably that knowledge flows from books, an impatient claw hammer in Sand Hill will be talking horse sense to a pine beam full of 20-penny nails.

The dialogues from different quarters share one characteristic: both deal with books.

Predictably, there will be a lot of talk about books in the span between April 25 and May 1 — National Library Week. Even President Johnson is expected to have something to say.

But except in the white frame building on Sand Hill where the rudiments of carpentry make cacophonous conversation, most of the talking will be social.

In Sand Hill, according to Mrs. Doris Sheible, there isn't time.

"We'll be too busy going ahead with our remodeling to have any kind of formal recognition," she said. "It'll take all we can do just to stay open."

The head of Fort Benning's seven branch libraries exaggerated.

Since the $23,000 renovation of Sand Hill Branch Library No. 2 began in early January not a minute has been shaved off the regular operating hours.

There has been no build-up in the regular staff of branch librarian and three assistants and, except for the weekend they had to move the library's more than 13,000 books from neat stacks on the floor to freshly finished shelves, there has been no overtime work.

Except for the strange new sounds of manual labor, business in the library has been going on as usual.

As the week of the book approached, Miss Virginia Hollowell, chief of Fort Benning's special services' libraries, put the eye of the expert on the project.

"In my 22 years in the business," she said, "I've never seen as much done—such a successful renovation. I'm really proud of the work being done at Sand Hill. When it's finished, the library will be one of the finest in the entire Army."

Her comments came not from the top of her head. By June, when the refurbished bookery is expected to be get its final touches, visitors may question if they are still in Sand Hill.

Here's what has so far taken en place inside the one-time service club:

A room that used to hold the division's historical paraphenalia has been cleared and filled from ceiling to floor with browsing stacks. Most of the librarys books will be kept there.

Removal of the stacks from the library's main reading room created a great expanse of open space. New, green tile promptly hit the exposed floor. A larger circulation desk and a pair of magazine racks — to hold the 165 publications regularly delivered to the library — have been installed.

The once drab walls now say "hello" in bright, but pleasant, orange and chartreuse.

"All the color schemes are the work of a professional decorator," said Mrs. Sheigreen tile promptly hit the colors. But now I'm starting to like them."

Most awesome are the changes that have come in the wings of the building. One wing formerly held a reading-music room wherein was funneled the product of a sometimes operative record player. The wing across the hall originally was partitioned into four cubicles: a tiny reference room, an office, a supply room and a void.

The wing now known as the "art room," holds two walls full of masterpiece prints that will eventually be available for circulation. Scores of books await readers behind glass - doored shelves. Chandeliers hang from the ceiling and an elegant crimson wall-to-wall carpet covers the floor. The walls are darkly stained.

The other wing to be known as the "music room," is only half finished. A green carpet is on the floor and a lighter shade of green has been applied to the walls. Glass supermarket - like bins stand ready for the some 1,000 records that Mrs. Sheible said will be available for circulation in June.

Yet to come are hundreds of finishing touches and, perhaps, most important, a completely new lighting system.

In a formal statement, library officials told of national library week.

"Due to extensive renovations the library is now undergoing," the statement said, "the formal ceremony usually held at this time has been postponed until later this year."

A personal word from the library staff: "look for something big in June."

"SERVICE" is the motto of the library's staff. More and more Fort Benning dependents are welcoming the Sand Hill facility's convenience.

REFERENCE FACILITIES have been improved in the face lifting process.

Librarian Earl Performs Duty in Five Countries

Miss Martha Earl, a librarian in the special services system for 12 years, this week took charge of Sand Hill Library Branch No. 2.

For some weeks Mrs. Doris Sheible, head of Fort Benning's seven branch libraries, has been filling the spot.

Miss Earl, a graduate of the University of California and the University of California School of Library Science, has served in libraries in Japan, Germany, England, Okinawa and on Army posts in the United States.

She said she will carry out Special Services' policy to put heavy emphasis on reference an deducational books.

"We have a good reference section at Sand Hill now," she said, "but I plan to double the size."

Her personal preference in reading, she said, is non-fiction.

Miss Earl said that she would welcome suggestions for books to be added to her library shelves. Some 150 volumes come to the library each month, she said.

Continuing to serve with the branch, as library assistants are Mrs. Dianne Tapley, a graduate of South Carolina State College, and PFC Fred Zimmerman, alumni of the University of Illinois.

Pvt. William Radigan recently joined the assistant's staff after completing basic training.

"Pvt. Radigan had never worked in a library before," said Mrs. Tapley, "but he has been doing fine since the day he arrived. We like him a lot."

IMPROVED LIGHTING is only one of the many improvements made during the months of interior renovation.

MODERN AND ATTRACTIVE decor characterizes the art room of the drastically revised Sand Hill Library.

Div Historical Center Expanding; Construction to Revamp Upstairs

Additional construction is underway to eventually make the 2nd Infantry Division Historical Center one of the most eye-catching features on Sand Hill.

The Center, once housed in a crowded room adjoining the present Sand Hill Library, was dedicated at its present location in the 2nd Administration Company vicinity last October. The dedication came on the division's anniversary.

At that time the center beamed in a newly renovated room that had been under construction for several weeks. Again, the center is bulging with historic items — its expansion is drifting to the upstairs portion of what at one time was a dark barracks.

Entire Building

Initial planning provided that the entire building plus a nearby one story building be remodeled. However, a shortage of funds has held up further construction until now.

Remodeling will brighten the upstairs in the same miracle that astonishes visitors when they step into the present downstairs. The 2nd Engineer Battalion is responsible for the project.

According to Sgt. James Cheevers, center curator, construction is expected to take a month or more before the upstairs will be in tip-top shape. Fluorescent lighting, tile flooring and sheetrock will bring a new face to this portion of the center. Under present plans displays of the three wars and most of the smaller historical items will be housed in the upstairs of the center, Cheevers said.

Heavier Equipment

"We plan to display heavier equipment, including weapons, downstairs."

When present construction is completed, the next immediate objective is to refinish the one-story building adjacent to the center. It has been set aside to provide space for a conference room, an office and a workshop, Cheevers said.

The completed center will consist of the two buildings connected by sidewalks and a courtyard enclosed by a wooden fence. Two tanks, the M-4 Gen. Sherman tank, and the M-48, a tank used in Korea, are now displayed in the court.

According to Cheevers, the new conference room will be used to orient newcomers as they arrive in the division. Replacements already are being sent on tours of the center to grasp a little about division history before assignment to units.

Drab Barracks

In addition to costly construction which transforms the drab barracks into a well lighted, comfortable room, the center soon will be equipped with six 2-ton air conditioners to combat summer heat. Seventeen new display cases also are on the way which will be another step in the drive for beautifying the rooms and preserving cherished relics.

The center is rapidly accumulating many items donated by past and present members of the division. Lt Gen. (Ret.) Edward M. Almond, who visited the division recently, sent a letter shortly after he left indicating that he was donating a bugle to the center.

Bugle

The bugle was presented to the general by a member of his staff during the siege of the 23rd Infantry at Chipyong-ni. Almond commanded the 2nd Division from September 1945 to May 1946.

In the letter, Almond wrote: "This bugle has been kept in my possession because of the sentimental value attached to it as a reminder of the Chinese hordes which so outnumbered the 23rd Infantry at Chipyong-ni in February of 1951 in Korea."

'Best Men of Division' Receive 1-Minute Issue at Supply Point

3rd Brigade's Aviators Find Relic in 'Chopper'

The aviation section of the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade recently discovered it is the proud possessor of an antique.

One of the OH-13 helicopters assigned to the section has the distinction of being the last of approximately 300 manufactured by the Bell Aircraft Corporation. The model is also designated as the "bubble variety."

The two seat "chopper" of the "bubble variety" was manufactured in 1953 and according to its log book, has seen service on practically every Army post in the continental United States.

Used primarily for reconnaissance, observation and command control, the aircraft has been in the air more than 15,000 hours and has required an additional 7000 hours of maintenance.

Capt. Henry J. O'Connor, commander of the aviation section says that records indicate there is only one original part left on the helicopter.

A Sister Pays Easter Homage

Easter passed quietly at the 2nd Infantry Division's huge Kimbro Gym. Half a block away in the chapel with the glass doors there were services for two faiths.

But in the gym there was nothing. A simple roll wrapped crock, bursting with white lilies in triumphant bloom stood alone. The lilies were a sister's way of remembering.

The flowers remembered Medal of Honor winner Truman Kimbro for being Truman Kimbro. In the grand gymnasium named in honor of the slain Army engineer hero the flowers stood proudly beneath his picture and a bronze plaque bearing his name. There was no crowd and there was no noise. A sister was quietly remembering and only the coincidence of names said so. No other mention was made. A florist's card that read simply: "Adele Kimoto Phillips and family, Houston, Tex."

Theatre Presents Biblical Play At Wives' Luncheon

The themes of betrayal and forgiveness, symbols of the Holy week preceding Easter, were the basis of a one-act play presented exclusively for the Second Division Officers' Wives Club last week.

Under the direction of Les Muchmore, members of the Fort Benning Little Theater presented "The Man Who Played Judas," a prize-winning play by Charles William Wright. Members of the cast were Nell Gile, Jim McCullough, Jerry Eubank, and Jim Meares.

The play was the highlight of the April luncheon held in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess on Tuesday, April 13.

Each luncheon table was centered by wide streamers in a vivid color with a monochromatic color scheme in miniature stained-glass windows and candles. Hostess units for the occasion were the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery under Mrs. Glenn W. Smith; and the 6th Battalion, 37th Artillery under Mrs. Herbert Hill.

Mrs. Arne Eliasson, program chairman, arranged the presentation by the Little Theatre group.

Special guests for the occasion were Mrs. Hal B. Jennings, wife of the Medical Chief, Martin Army Hospital; Mrs. Hubert Merchant, wife of the Dental chief; Mrs. Rossie Gilmore, director of the Second Division Dancing School; and Mrs. Hazel Schudder, superintendent of schools at Fort Benning.

Also a guest was Miss Joy Chiles, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. John H. Chiles. Miss Chiles is on vacation from the University of Missouri.

Seated at the head table in addition to the guests and the hostesses were Mrs. John H. Chiles, honorary president; Mrs. Burnside E. Huffman; and the officers of the club, Mrs. William Conger, president; Mrs. Arne Eliasson, first vice-president; Mrs. William Cox, second vice - president; Mrs. Hugh Gracey, secretary; and Mrs. Leon McCall, treasurer.

AG Ladies Feted At Easter Coffee In Hickman Home

Mrs. Lee S. Hickman entertained the ladies of the Adjutant General Section recently with a coffee in her home.

Pouring for the coffee were Mrs. Thomas M. Leahy and Mrs. Richard G. Booth.

Easter was the theme with the colorful egg tree that greeted the ladies as they entered the home.

A delicate lace tablecloth and a graceful arrangement of gladioli, dutch iris and carnations adorned the table.

Ladies were served petits fours decorated for Easter, dainty Viennese tarts, finger sandwiches, fresh strawberries, cranberry punch, coffee and tea.

During the Korean War the 38th Infantry Regiment went 23 miles in one day to capture Kochang, and two days later had moved 73 miles northward to Chonju.

'Mikado' Comes to Life In Authentic Costumes

When the animated characters of Japanese royalty spring to life tonight on the stage of Marshall auditorium in the final production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," this will be crowned by ... craftsmenship of 2nd Infantry Division women.

Since the end of March members of the 2nd Infantry Division's Officers Wives club have been gathering with great spools of thread and humming sewing machines to make authentic looking costumes.

The women, under the direction of Mrs. Jeanne Van Lydegraf, made the garments worn by 46 performers.

On her committee were Mrs. Marge Ingram, Mrs. Mikki Wagoner, Mrs. Ruby Kawasaki, Mrs. Lucy Lam, Mrs. Chieko Becker and Mrs. Michi Galbraith.

Another group of the officers' wives, led by Mrs. John H. Chiles, spent several days making wigs for the 16 chorus members and for four principal characters.

Included the group working with Mrs. Chiles were Mrs. Frances Cox, Mrs. Jane McMurdo, Mrs. Nell White, Mrs. Doris Seaman, Mrs. Gene Terpining, Mrs. Jere Hickman, Mrs. Clydia Chubb, Mrs. Janice Turner.

Also helping in the production of the oriental coiffeurs were Mrs. Jean Perpich, Mrs. Lois Jackson, Mrs. Marka Huffman, Mrs. Betty Conger, Mrs. Lavella Leahy, and Mrs. Mary Ann Kamstra.

The basic material for the wigs, Mrs. Chiles said, was "black tee-shirt material."

"I don't know who makes black tee-shirts," she said. "But, anyway, it worked perfectly for the wigs. We had to make all of the ornaments out of tin-foil or whatever. Ornaments you could buy — no matter how light they seemed — were too heavy."

Sponsors of the play were the Officers' Wives of Fort Benning.

Hat Creations
Lampshade — Egg Beater Wins Show

The ladies of the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, enjoyed a hat show as the feature event of their monthly coffee.

In keeping with the Easter season, the hats were bright and gay. They were the original creations of the ladies who wore them.

The first prize for the most original was won by Mrs. Bruce Jackson. Her hat was a blue and white flowered lampshade covered in foil and topped with an egg beater and a large bow.

Taking second prize was Mrs. Robert E. Grant. Mrs. Grant's creation had a tissue base, which the veil matched, crowned by a paper plate and a large feather duster covered with colored clothes pins.

For their efforts the ladies won baskets filled with candy.

Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Frank B. Ballius, Jr., and Mrs. Irving H. Kline.

Mrs. Bell Hosts G-2 Circle At Monthly Coffee

The home of Mrs. James Bell was the setting for the bi-monthly coffee of the G-2 ladies recently. Mrs. Bell was assisted by Mrs. John Prokopowicz and Mrs. Bruce Matthews.

Coffee and tea were poured by Mrs. Earl Ingram from a table beautifully decorated with a centerpiece of spring flowers. The centerpiece was given as the door prize to Mrs. Robert Boie.

Mrs. Ingram conducted a short business meeting and welcomed newcomers Mrs. James Boone, Mrs. Bruce Beardsley and Mrs. Kim Rogers.

Belleck Home Is Scene For Coffee

The ladies of the 12th Artillery met recently in the home of Mrs. Donald F. Belleck for their monthly coffee.

Farewell was said to Mrs. Edward Reed who was presented a silver dish. Mrs. Joseph L. Pitts was presented with a baby-book for her new son.

Following sherry, the ladies enjoyed cake and ice-cream.

ed the divison for the third time. This time he wore the two stars of major general and this time he was commanding the entire division.

Gen. Freeman commanded the divison for two years at Fort Lewis, Wash., then went to the Pentagon for a year.

He returned to Fort Benning in 1958 to take command of the Infantry Center and the Infantry School.

His visit this week will mark the first time he has been to Fort Benning as chief of the Continental Army.

Bowl

toast to the President of the United States and followed with a toast to the officers and men of the regiment who have given their lives in battle. A third toast to "our honored dead" was accompanied with the playing of taps.

Following the toast each designated officer approached the tray and returned his cup to a specified position. The contents of a lone cup, honoring the dead, was then emptied into the bowl.

Special invited guests at the ceremony were Gen. Paul L. Freeman, U. S. Continental Army Commander who led the regiment and was wounded at the battle of Chipyong-Ni; Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commanding general of the 2nd Division who relieved Freeman when wounded; and Maj. Gen. Harry O. Kinnard, commander of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Col. Ben H. Ward, commander of the 1st Brigade, and Col. William Lynch, commander of the 2nd Brigade, also attended the affair.

The Korean Bowl, which is used frequently throughout the year for 23rd ceremonies, is valued at approximately $25,000.

It took 30 silversmiths over four months to complete construction of the bowl. Engraved on each of the 19 cups circling the bowl are the names of 23rd infantrymen who were winners of the Medal of Honor and Distinguished Service Cross during the war.

the training which will culminate in the five days of exercise "CINQUEFOIL."

The proposed exercise marks the third major training maneuver planned and conducted by the 3rd Brigade in the past year.

Unlike the two previous exercises, Highland Fox and Swamp Fox, which were counter-guerilla maneuvers, CINQUEFOIL is designed to exercise conventional forces under conventional combat conditions.

Brigade planners say they intend to make use of the swampy terrain at Stewart to provide "realistic settings for amphibious and river - crossing problems encountered by a tank-heavy conventional force."

The Aftermath

BY JIM BAKER

With the lull between basketball and baseball seasons in the 2nd Infantry Division's athletic program, reflection on the Army athletic program is in order.

When this column made its debut in the sports pages of the 2nd Infantry Division News last October, the flag football schedule was in full swing. Since that time several columnists have chronicled the prowess of division athletes and the effectiveness of the program.

It would be wise to reflect upon the historical significance of athletics for soldiers.

The great soldiers of the world have come from countries with great athletic traditions. Alexander's Grecian armies were renowned for their athletic prowess. Caesar's legions were again comprised of highly agile and athletic men.

Caesar's accounts of his wars in Gall are filled with examples of the excellent physical condition of his soldiers.

The stirring speeches by which Caesar himself often turned the tide of battle are mute testimony to the fact the soldiers had "something left" after they were seemingly exhausted.

Physical stamina developed through exercise and athletic competition are the only way a soldier can be sure that he may overcome what seem to be insurmountable obstacles.

The North American Indian is known in history, song and legend for some of the greatest light cavalry units the world has ever known. We are all aware of the athletic achievements of the Indian.

One would cite examples of the great athletes comprising great armies all day and half way into the night.

MP Keglers Grab Early Lead in Division Bowling

A 2nd MP Company bowling team held the high series Wednesday in the early stages of the Division Bowling Championships at the Sand Hill Lanes.

The MPs led the keglers with a 2760. Following second with a 2704 were bowlers from Company C, 313th ASA Battalion.

PFC Samuel M. Davis, also of Company C, held the highest marks in individual bowling at midweek with a high game of 246 and high series of 630.

A spokesman at the Special Services Office said the results at this point of the tournament are sketchy because many of the bowlers have not completed their second and third rounds. The tournament will continue through Monday or Tuesday.

The 2nd Administration Company bowling team follows close behind the leaders in team competition, according to Special Services.

The tournament is a nine game scratch roll-off with the highest total pinfall determining the winners. Six-man teams are bowling three games each with the five highest scores in each game counting for total pinfall.

A one-game rolloff will be held in the event there is a tie for first or second place.

Civil Affairs Class Held For Officers

By Marv Wolf

A selected group of officers from the Second Division received an eight hour orientation course on Civil Affairs last Thursday. Also present were representatives from the 11th Air Assault Division and the Infantry School.

The orientation was led by Maj. David Forsythe, 2nd Division G-5. The division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, gave an introduction by reminiscing about his experiences with the problems of civil affairs while a field-grade officer in North Korea during the war.

Chiles was followed by the guest speaker, Col. John J. Duffey, Director of Civil Affairs of Civil Defense Directorate, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations.

Duffy emphasized the importance of civil affairs by pointing to the difficulties of the commander when the local populace is uncooperative and unfriendly.

ENGINEERS having a log rolling contest??? With the task of clearing land of giant pine trees for construction of an enlisted men's Club on Sand Hill, they have little time for a sports event of this kind. Sounds of humming tractors and cracking timber can be heard almost any day at the site near the Sand Hill Golf Course. (Photo by Pierre Beaule)

Snipes Stands Out for Marksmen In Collecting 3rd Army Hardware

Riflemen of the 2nd Infantry Division Marksmanship Detachment this week collected more trophies as they prepared for Third Army rifle-pistol championships beginning today.

Two rifle teams scored in a Pre-Third Army Match at Main Post on Monday and Tuesday. Firing with 13 other teams, the Indianheads won first in the expert class and fourth place in the master.

PSgt. Fred Snipes stood out among 2nd Division marksmen, winning the 1st master grand prize and second place in the same class for 600-yard slowfire.

Topping expert firing was PFC Harold A. Edgar — first in both 200-yard rapidfire and slowfire. He was second expert in the 600-yard slowfire and the grand aggregate.

Another rifleman, Lt. Clark Weaver, was first among experts in the 600-yard slowfire. Lt. David Wyatt was winner of the 300-yard rapid fire and the second master in the 600-yard slowfire master class.

In 300-yard rapid firing of the masters, Sgt. Louis Keeling was first. Taking second places in expert 600-yard slowfire were SFC Leroy Pope and PFC Richard Parrish.

The Indianheads Wednesday took part in ceremonies which officially opened the Third Army Matches with two days of practice. Firing will continue through next Thursday.

Capt. Donald A. Schwab left Company B, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry recently after serving for 14 months as commanding officer. He is now assigned to the 3rd Brigade.

Prior to serving in the "Manchu" Battalion, he served in Viet Nam where he earned the Bronze Star and Combat Infantryman's Badge. Other awards include the Expert Infantryman's Badge and the Senior Parachutist Badge.

'Uphold the Law'

Division SJA Prepares Observance of Law Day

May 1, will not be "just another day" if the lawyers in the 11th Air Assault Division have anything to do about it. May 1 has been designated Law Day, U.S.A., by act of Congress and Presidential Proclamation with the theme for this year's observance of Law Day, "Uphold the Law — A Citizen's First Duty".

The office of the Staff Judge Advocate feels that each American citizen, particularly those citizens serving their country in the Armed Forces owe it to their country and themselves to give serious thought to the American way of Government — rule by law. In an attempt to foster partiticpation in Law Day, U.S. A., the office of the Staff Judge Advocate with co-operation from the Headquarters Commandant has constructed a sign proclaiming Law Day which is placed at the intersection of Highway 27 and 1st Division Road. The Division Chaplain will aid understanding in "Uphold the Law — A Citizen's First Duty", by directing services on May 2 to that subject. Other programs for making Law Day more meaningful to members of the Division are also being planned.

Lt. Col. M. Douglas Hodges, the Division Staff Judge Advocate, when interviewed regarding Law Day, U.S.A., said, "For several years, it has been the practice of the USSR to celebrate May 1 of each year by flexing its totalitarian muscles by parading before the world its military might. This is in direct contrast to May 1 activities in our democracy. We as free men feel it much more fitting to observe May 1 by reflecting on the advantages of our system of Government, rule by law, not rule by men. Therefore, in my opinion, it is only proper that while the missiles are paraded through Red Square, Americans take time to reverently consider the great advantages of the American way of life, and for each of us to dedicate ourselves to a fundamental principle of our form of Government, beginning with "Uphold the Law — A Citizen's First Duty".

For New Bridge

Area Boy Scout Council Thanks 127th Engineers

This week in the office of Brig. Gen. John M. Wright, assistant division commander of the 11th Air Assault Division, the chief executives of the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America expressed thanks from the scouts of their council to the members of Company C, 127th Engineer Battalion, 11th Air Assault Division for the construction of a plank bridge at the Boy Scout summer camp, Camp McKenzie.

At the presentation in Gen. Wright's office Mr. Russel McLean, district commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America, and Felix Patrick, council camping chairman presented a plaque in appreciation to Lt. Col. Robert J. Malley, the 127th Engineer battalion commander and to representatives of Company C, Capt. Clarence Richardson, company commander; Lt. Thomas Easer, project officer and SFC Stanley Bristol, platoon sergeant of Company C's 1st platoon.

The Boy Scout executives stated that without the efforts of Company C it might not have been possible for the council to conduct a summer camp.

The platoon of Company C aided the Boy Scouts by rebuilding a timber trestle bridge and a concrete dam at the Explorer base of Camp McKenzie northwest of Columbus. A portion of the bridge and the dam had been washed out when the lake overflowed due to heavy rainfall this past winter.

The construction which began March 3 was supervised by Lt. Easter and Sgt. Bristol. The companies second squad led by Sgt. Cubee Sansom, assisted by Sgt. William H. May and his squad were in charge of construction of the bridge's superstructure. The substructure was built by the first squad under the supervision of Sgt. Richard L. Humphrey and Sgt. William R. Cohea, Jr. The third squad, led by Sgt. Joseph C. Broadnax and Sgt. William M. Crawford, built a highline with a tramway over the construction site to bring stringers over the bridge. Each stringer weighed in excess of 1000 pounds.

Blood Drive Results Great!

Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Division once again showed their willingness to aid others by donating blood to the Red Cross Bloodmobile April 15.

The units turned out in force at the Kelley Hill Field House to donate an overwhelming 751 pints of much needed blood.

According to the Project Officer, Capt. Glenn Stephens of division G-1, this is a record donation for a one day visit.

AN IMPROVEMENT OF A GOOD IDEA
The New Lightweight 105mm Round Carrier

From the IDEA CENTER

'Imaginuity' Corner

Often even good ideas are rapidly improved to make them even better. In the early phase of the air assault concept an imaginative warrant officer from the 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery produced a piece of equipment to improve the transportation of the 105-mm Howitzer shells to his battalion's weapons.

His original idea consisted of adapting a 50 gallon fuel drum with wooden partitions built in it to carry six 105mm rounds.

As soon as this idea was put to use throughout the battalion, CWO Truman E. Diamond, the inventive artilleryman, improved his idea by making it much lighter and more easily transportable.

The new 105mm round carrier is made of aluminum. The rounds are placed around an aluminum cylinder and held in place by two inflated aircraft tires. To mount the rounds in the carrier the handles of the carrier are removed and the tires inflated. The rounds are then slid into place, the handles replaced and the tires inflated with a hand pump that is included with the carrier.

This improved version of the artillery round carrier is now being tested for the Department of the Army in the firing batteries of the 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery.

QUESTION OF THE MONTH

What improvements can be made in aerial rescue and fire fighting equipment and procedures to improve the capability of the division's aviation units. Submit your suggestions to the division IDEA CENTER, Building 5205, phone 545-6317 or see your unit's Idea Center NCO.

Greek Army Sergeant Appointed to Warrant

In a ceremony on the evening of April 9, 1965, Sgt. Nicholas Collatos of the Greek Army, and presently on temporary duty with the 11th Air Assault Division, was appointed as a warrant officer in the Greek Army.

Since the end of March 1965, WO Collatos has been serving with Company D, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion, observing U. S. Army and Project Team aircraft maintenance and supply techniques on OH-13 and UH-1 type helicopters.

Upon notification that Sgt. Collatos had been appointed to warrant officer, he was flown to Atlanta, Ga., for the swearing in ceremony which was held in the Greek Orthodox Church in that city.

Accompanying Sgt. Collatos to Atlanta were CWO Patrick Farrell, Company D, 611th, and Capt. Dimopoulos, Capt. Davos, and Capt. Drakakakis, who are Greek Army officers presently attending the Infantry School at Fort Benning.

It is interesting to note that in order for the appointment to be official, it was necessary for Sgt. Collatos to take his oath as an officer in a Greek Orthodox Church. In this respect, it was also necessary that there be witnesses from the Greek Army.

Prior to his coming to Fort Benning, WO Collatos successfully completed a course of instruction on Fixed Wing tecnnical inspection procedures at Fort Eustis, Va. He will soon be leaving Fort Benning and the 11th Air Assault Division to return to his duty station in Greece.

187th Rak Paratroopers Fly to Fort Stewart To Refresh Basic Skills and Make Air Drop

More than 700 paratroopers of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry, under the command of Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark moved out for Fort Stewart Ga. and a week of heavy training Monday.

Flying out of Lawson Army Airfield, the battalion made their deployment in thirteen shuttling Caribous from the 10th Air Transport Brigade, and by noon were in the process of establishing their cantonement area on Fort Stewart.

Basic subjects during the week of training call for weapons familiarization, bayonet course and compass course training, squad and platoon live fire problems, practice Army Training Tests for the mortar platoon, and independent company training.

Utilizing three of Fort Stewart's special ranges for the familiarization firing, this training also covered the M-60 Machinegun, the 90mm Recoilless Rifle, the M-79 Grenade Launcher, and the M-72 LAW (Light Anti-tank Weapon).

The paratroopers will spend most of today policing the ranges and training areas, and will clear the cantonement area late this afternoon, moving into a marshalling area tonight to prepare for a scheduled airborne assault tomorrow morning on Lee Drop Zone.

These aviators pioneered the flight of Army CV-2B's across the Pacific without escort from Air Force aircraft. During the entire flight the aviators depended strictly upon their own navigation.

During the flight rest stops were made at the end of each leg to give the crews time to sleep and to do necessary maintenance on the aircraft.

'SIMON THE LEPER'
Chap. Nichols As Simon, Judy Nichols as Judith

'Simon The Leper'

DivArty Chapel 5 Theater Group Presents Powerful Christian Drama

From the living death of leprosy to health, and from the death of selfish living to full dedication, all through Christ's miraculous authority. This was the powerful theme of "Simon The Leper," a drama centering around events in the life of Christ, presented Sunday night in Harmony Church Chapel No. 5 by the Chapel Five Thespians. As far as is known, this is the first time a full-scale dramatic production has been presented in a cantonement-type chapel.

The large and enthusiastic audience was impressed not only by the well-presented and timely message of the play, but also by the ingenious and effective use of the limited space available for staging. The curtains were drawn on a cable suspended between two roof beams at the front of the chapel. A temporary stage raised the play's action to the level of the communion rail. The beautifully designed sets were fitted around the corners of the chancel and altar area; and lighting was furnished from above and from the balcony. Curtains, sectionalized stage, settings, and lighting were all installed Sunday afternoon a few hours before the performance.

The production was headed by Chap. (Maj.) C. R. Nichols, 11th DivArty Chaplain, who also played the title role of Simon in the play. Under Chap. Nichols' direction, soldiers and dependents of the Chapel No. 5 congregation built the sets and stage, made the authentic-appearing costumes, assembled lights and other needed equipment, and acted in the drama. Explorer Post No. 54, which is sponsored by Chapel Five, provided ushering details.

Acting in the cast were Judy Nichols as Judith, sister of Simon; PFC Ric Davidge as Amon, brother of Simon; Jeri Hartman as Susanna, betrothed to Simon; PFC Dick Russell as Lazarus; Cammie Sanford as Mary, sister of Lazarus; Joan Hartman as Martha, sister of Lazarus; Paul Braun as Jalon a leper; and Chap. Nichols as Simon the Leper.

Pvt. John Rosenberger served as Stage Manager and designed both the sets and the posters used in advertising. PFC Bob Dean assisted Rosenberger in constructing the sets. Recollector was PFC Leo Sensabaugh.

Sgt. Frank Patterson directed the building of the sectionalized stage and Sp4 Dennis Schnell supervised its installation. Sgt. Vernol Cartwright supervised the curtain installation.

Lighting chores were handled by Sp4 Paul Harmon, assisted by PFC Jim Adolph and PFC Curtis Larsen.

Mrs. Sylvia Rogers and Mrs. Irmgard Cartwright designed and sewed the costumes worn by the actors.

In addition to the units of the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery, other units represented in the production were the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion, 711th Maintenance Battalion, 11th Administrative Company, 11th Military Police Company, and the TEC Group.

187th Inf. Husbands Join Wives For Spring Lunch At Supper Club

Instead of their usual April coffee, the officers' wives of the 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry held a luncheon in the Supper Club on April 15 and invited their husbands.

Mrs. William C. Roll, Mrs. George Quigley, Mrs. Jimmie R. Smith, and Mrs. Glen W. Buzwell of Company B were hostesses. They decorated eggs to look like rabbits and ladies in their Easter bonnets, and placed them on green net down the center of the tables. On the head table was a centerpiece of multi-colored spring flowers.

Sherry was served before lunch. In an attempt to prove that men carry as many unusual items in their pockets as women do in their purses, the door prize was given to the first man carrying one of the items Mrs. Roll mentioned. It was not until she mentioned a pocket knife that anyone would speak up and then they were reluctant. Capt. Leon D. Bieri and Capt. Donald F. Warren both won handy travel kits, containing many of the items Mrs. Roll had mentioned.

Mrs. Quigley was given the centerpiece since she was sitting in front of a winking egg.

After lunch Mrs. Harlow G. Clark, Jr., the commanding officer's wife, thanked those girls who had worked on the luncheon and the sets for "The Mikado." She explained that the division's welfare fund was depleted and part of the money collected for the luncheon would be donated to that. Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark then thanked the ladies on behalf of the men.

Eggs and Bunnies Hidden For Kids By NCO Wives

A beautiful sunny day and Victory Pond formed the background for an Easter egg hunt held by the Division NCO Wives Club at Victory Lodge, Sunday, April 18.

Approximately 500 children scrambled about the area collecting gaily colored eggs, some worth valuable prizes.

The NCO Wives Club members who assisted in the hunt and awarded the prizes were: Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy, Mrs. Paul Beckburger, Mrs. Alfred Gerstenschlager, Mrs. Joseph Baron, Mrs. William Bartholomew, Mrs. Joseph McKeon and Mrs. Robert Powers.

Self Expression Theme For 'Crazy Hat' Lunch

Ladies of the 10th Air Transport Brigade! Have you a special hobby, a secret desire, or a unique hometown? Tell something about YOU when you make your "crazy" hat for the 10th Air Transport Brigade luncheon. The luncheon will be held Wednesday, April 28, 1965, in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Sherry will be served at 12:00 noon, and the luncheon will be served at 12:30.

The program will consist of judging the crazy hats — with prizes to be awarded for the Most Original, Prettiest, and Funniest — and models will show the latest hats for sport and vacation wear.

Flyers with information about the luncheon have been sent through all units of the brigade, but should you have failed to receive one, reservations should be made to ore of the following numbers before noon Monday, April 26: Peggy Dennis 545-3516; Connie Blackmore 689-6486; Marrie Mathena 689-7938; Velerie McDonald 689-1228; Shirley Callaway 322-2349; Getta Hunt 689-2563; Jessie Powers 324-1965.

These brigade luncheons are held only once each three months, and all ladies of the Brigade and their guests are invited to attend. Hostesses for this luncheon are ladies of the 170th Aircraft Maintenance Battalion.

Survival Training Test Proven Rugged for Platoon

Lessons learned in previous classes and instruction became a reality recently for 27 men from the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, 2nd Air Assault Brigade.

The platoon leaders were given full control of their men for a two-day period, and the right to choose the type of training which their men would undergo in that period. Lt. Walter W. Steele, 1st platoon, Bravo Company, chose to have his men tackle survival training. He selected the swampy area around Schley Pond as an ideal training site.

The platoon left Kelley Hill April 13 at 7:30 a.m. and arrived at the training area at 8:30 a.m. Upon arrival the men erected various types of shelters, and made sleeping mats from leaves and twigs since no bedrolls were allowed on the problem. Platoon Sergeant, SSgt. John W. Hough, split the men into groups of three or four and sent them on a hunt for something to eat. Except for 28 potatoes and some carrots, no food was taken and the men had to live off the land. The only other gear taken were pistol belts, canteens, first aid packets and ponchos. When the groups returned from their hunts, they had a total of one four inch fish. After a briefing on edible roots and plants, and on snares and traps, the men were turned loose again. The results of this hunt were better as they came back with a turtle, various roots and a Cottonmouth Moccasin that SSgt. Hough had killed. A stew of carrots, potatoes and turtle was prepared. The snake was skinned and cooked, and most of the men tried some. They were pleasantly surprised to find the meat not only edible but tasty as well. A hunt that evening for frogs and such met with no success, so the men returned to camp and bedded down for the night. The next morning the men discovered that the CH-54 Flying Crane, carrying a 16,000 pound dozer and operator Sp5 Peter E. Hayes, to a landing 200 feet from the on looking Cadets.

The demonstration ended with the narrator, Lt. Riordan remaining the Cadets that engineer construction time is short, engineer equipment and material are air transportable, and Air Assault Engineers are explosive, to the echo of exploding TNT.

Engineer Demolitions

ROTC Cadets Hold Hats During "Explosive" Show

Company A of the 127th Engineer Battalion put on an explosive 20 minute demonstration for 250 ROTC Cadets on Friday April 9 at Fornier Range.

The demonstration, which was part of a four hour orientation on the Air Assault Division, conducted by the 1st Brigade, consisted of hasty helipad construction, the assault strip construction team, and a demonstration of delivery methods for heavy engineer equipment used to construct assault air strips.

Sp5 Gerald Cooper's demolition team demonstrated the use of explosives for hasty helipad construction by blowing four trees in a brilliant display of flame and smoke that had the Cadets gripping their seats.

SSgt. Maxwell E. Robinson and Sgt. Jerry Dequasie of Company A with the aid of Sp4 Donald Corriveau, PFC Paul F. Riedel, and PFC Ellis G. Stewart from Headquarters Company Equipment Platoon illustrated the composition of the assault strip construction team.

Sgt. Dequasie then directed

Ralph Wright, control NCO of the 3rd Forward Support Platoon; Sp5 Lurenzo Cortez as chief warehouseman of the II and IV Section of the 408th Supply and Service Battalion.

611th Maintenance Unit Plays Host To Troop of Local Brownie Scouts

Company "A" 611th, Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion played host to a very fine group of young citizens this past Thursday. Brownie Troop 65 of Benning Hills, Columbus, Ga. under the leadership of Mrs. Dalton J. Romero and assistant Troop Leader Mrs. Jack McKeever toured the maintenance and administrative facilities of the company. Also assisting in the tour were Mrs. Clifton H. Manning and Mrs. Carl J. Jones, mothers of two of the Brownies.

Upon arriving at the maintenance area the troop members were met by CWO Dwight Glessner and Sp5 Richard Arnold where they were given a tour of one of the Army's latest helicopters; the CH - 47 "Chinook" with each member given an opportunity to sit in the pilot and co-pilot seat. The troop members were amazed at the number of instruments and flight controls in the aircraft and witnessed the removal operation of the rotor blades.

After completing the tour of the aircraft the troop was given a complete tour of the various allied shops and technical supply facilities.

From the maintenance area the troop journeyed to the administrative area of the company where, in the unit's mess hall, they were officially welcomed by its Commanding Officer, Maj. Harold T. Campbell, 1st Sgt. David E. Kerzee and the company's mess sergeant, SSgt. Raymond E. Pierce who had baked a beautiful cake decorated in brown, green and orange for the troop. Inscribed on the cake was "Welcome Troop No. 65 to Co. A 611th Acft. M&S Bn." Immediately following the welcoming ceremony the troop was treated to cake, ice cream, milk and tea. Brownies participating in the tour were: Miss Linda Kanode, Melonie McKeever, Lou Ann O'Neal, Robin Strater, Vicky Jones, Yvette Romero, Gail Caulder, Karen Kennedy, Linda Winstead, Loree Hearnee, Patty Stewart, Elizibeth Godwin, Regina Cannon, Elizibeth Manning and Janice Moore.

Division Crowns Volleyball Champs After Final Game

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry representing the 2nd Brigade is the new Division Volleyball Champion having bested Battery C, 15th Artillery representing Division Artillery in the final game of this year's Tournament.

Both teams won their opening games in the Tournament. Battery C, 15th Artillery then worked their way into the finals by defeating the 3rd Brigade representative Company B, 188th Infantry and Company B, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, the eventual winners. Company B's loss put thme into the loser's bracket where they had to stave off a strong bid by Company B, 187th Airborne Infantry representing the 1st Brigade, to earn their way into the finals and another crack at Battery C.

Under double elimination rules, the Infantrymen had to defeat the Artillerymen twice to win the Championship. They won the first game handily but had to fight tooth and nail to win the second game against a fired up Artillery team, as the game wasn't determined until the final set.

Brig. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., assistant division commander, was on hand for the deciding game to congratulate the winners and runners-up on their fine play and sportsmanship and present both squads with team and individual trophies.

Hueys Are Pitted Against Tankers At Fort Stewart

Last week Battery C, 3rd Battalion (Aerial Rocket), 377th Artillery tested anti-tank tactics in exercises at Fort Stewart, Ga. The battery pitted two UH-1B helicopters against two M48A1 tanks of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, 2nd Infantry Division. The UH-1B's were armed with 2.75 inch rockets on one and SS-11 antitank missiles on the other.

The tactics used called for the rocket firing aircraft to strike first to force the tanks to button up and to disperse and neutralize any ground troops. This gave protection to the SS-11 helicopter as it came in on its straight slow run toward the target steering its missile into the tank. The rocket firing ship can make more firing runs as necessary to allow the other aircraft to make its kill.

Initial evaluation indicates that this method of attack will allow helicopter-borne weapons to be used successfully against armored forces while incurring only an acceptable degree of risk to the attacking aircraft.

Kelley Hill Area Retreat Termed Very Successful

The Kelley Hill Retreat slated for Friday, April 16, exceeded all expectations. A record number of soldiers turned out for the all day religious retreat. The Protestant sect had 350 people turn out while the Catholic program had about 250 people.

Services were conducted in the chapel for the Catholic personnel while the Kelly Hill gymnasium was packed with protestant personnel.

Guest speakers were on tap for both devotional services as well as sermons by each of the chaplains. Dr. Robert G. Lee, Pastor Emeritus, Bellevue-Baptist Church, Memphis, Tenn., spoke to the protestant congregation. Dr. Lee holds an A.B. degree from Furman University and a Ph. D. in International Law at the Chicago Law School. He has been active in Bible Conference work and revivals, Southern Baptist Convention, and is the author of 35 books.

No Horses or Steers In 229th's 'Rodeo'

PFC Dale E. Martin, Company C, 229th Assault Helicopeter Battalion, was the overall winner in a Drivers' Rodeo conducted recently by the "Stacked Deck" battalion. Prior to being judged the best driver in all classes, Martin won the championship in the 2½-ton truck class against representative drivers from other companies in the battalion.

Sgt. Roy D. Smith, Company D, 229th, was the battalion champ in the ¼-ton truck class and SP5 Harold D. Maxwell also of Company D, won the honor for the ¾-ton truck class.

During the week prior the rodeo, all companies of the battalion held elimination contests all their assigned drivers to, determine which driver would represent the company in each class.

The morning of the drivers rodeo the winners in each class from all companies assembled at the 229th motor pool for the first event of the battalion drive-off — a written exam. The exam included questions on maintenance, driving rules and regulations and safety. At the conclusion of the written exam, administered by CWO Charles B. Webb, battalion motor maintenance officer, the test to determine actual driving skill was conducted. Each competing driver was required to demonstrate his skill in five events; the off-set alley, backing into an alley dock, a serpentive course, parallel parking and a course with diminishing clearance.

The drivers were graded on each event and their total score added up to determine the winner in each class. PFC Martin was then declared winner of the rodeo for obtaining the highest score among all the class winners. Martin was presented a three day pass and a plaque by Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, commanding officer, 229th, for his achievement. Sgt. Smith and SP5 Maxwell each received a Letter of Commendation from the Battalion Commander for winning their class.

Former Marneman Cited for Heroism Against Viet Cong

SFC. Cleo F. Stevens, a former Platoon Sergeant of Bravo Company, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, recently received the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device from Lt. Gen. John L. Throckmorton, deputy U. S. commander in Viet Nam.

Sgt. Stevens, whose wife Opal, and four children reside in Columbus, was cited for heroism in directing a Vietnamese operation against the communist Viet Cong. He unjammed a machine gun in the heat of battle and exposed himself to fire while evacuating wounded personnel.

SFC Stevens served in Bravo Company from January 1961 to May 1964, before departing Company B for duty in Vietnam.

New Sports Spot Built by Beavers

The artillery units of the 11th Air Assault Division can point with pride to a new concrete basketball court provided through the efforts of Company B, 127th Engineer Battalion.

The first platoon was assigned the project and upon arrival of good weather completed this 5000 square foot court in less than ten days. The job was especially difficult because of the muddy conditions at the worksite but this did not deter the Bravo Beavers who have overcome similar obstacles before.

Drainage ditches were cut and forms installed under the able direction of Plt. Sgt. J. T. Brown. Sixty-seven cubic yards of concrete were poured on four separate days with PFC Jimmy Silvers and SP5 Frank Waits working long hours with cement trowels to insure a smooth finish. PFC Ronald Davis and PFC Donald Marler helped place the concrete work.

Backboards of galvanized pipe were installed by Sgt. Earl Ross and Pvt. Norman Carpenter.

Airborne Grads Return to Battalion

Lt. Col. Robert W. Short, commanding officer, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery recently congratulated three of his officers upon their return after successful completion of Airborne training. Captains Joe Price, Dudley Tadeny and Lt. Larry Sheridan were members of class number 32 which began on March 28 and terminated on April 16. Captains Price and Tadeny are assigned as Liaison Officers and Lt. Sheridan is the Battalion Recon and Survey Officer. With their return to duty, the Battalion announced that over 50% of its officers are now airborne qualified.

Weapons Training Tops 42nd Agenda

Units of the 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery have recently been engaged in extensive special weapons training in their quest to come up to stringent Technical Proficiency Inspection standards.

Included on the special weapons agenda has been training in pre-fire operations, pre-mate operations, convoy procedures and night operations.

The 42nd Artillery special weapons program is being monitored by the battalion S3 section. Maj. James W. Cain is the 42nd Artillery S3 while Capt. Bob W. Garner and Cap.t Richard J. Boehman, Jr. serve as Asst S3 and Special Weapons Officer, respectively.

Soft waxes are as obsolute as "Billy Goat" carts

Custom Gloss Cream Polish gives you a diamond hard finish that has the appearance of liquid glass. You can pour gasoline on it and burn it and this finish cannot be penetrated. It forms a micro-shield against moisture, dirt, oxidation and corrosion. One easy operation . . . spread on — wipe off! No back-breaking application or elbow-grease polishing. One polish-job is enough for the whole year. To keep this finish for extra months between polish jobs, add 4 tablespoons to a gallon of water and with a soft cloth wipe off your car with this solution. Once again we emphasize . . . never wax your car again!

Savings Bond Drive Rally Held

Joint Crusade Contributions Set Record

Final contribution figures for the recently concluded 1965 Federal Service Joint Crusade indicate that this was the most successful drive for this fund campaign in recent years.

The post achieved 98.7 per cent participation, a 34 per cent increase over 1964 contributions. A total of $39,684.77 was collected.

The fund drive was conducted during March and April to raise money for national health agencies as well as CARE, Radio Free Europe, the American Korean Foundatioon and Project HOPE.

Money collected for national health agencies amounted to $23,419.99. Contributions for CARE, Radio Free Europe, American Korean Foundation and Project totaled $16,264.78.

Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, was chairman of the drive.

Div.'s 23d Inf. during the unit's Organization Day review and the rededication of its colors. Gen. Freeman commanded the 23d Inf. Regt. during the Korean War and relinquished his command to Maj. Gen. Minuteman Flags Given To Two Post Units For '64 Participation

Fort Benning's commanding general, Maj. Gen. John A Heintges, addressed a "kick-off" rally for the 1965 "Star Spangled Savings Bond Drive" in Marshall Auditorium Monday.

The drive will be conducted May 1-31.

Other speakers at the meeting were Marvin L. Summers of Atlanta, area manager for the Treasury Department's U. S. Savings Bond Division, and Lt. Col. W. S. Mattox, Infantry Center Bond Drive chairman.

A highlight of the event was the presentation of Minuteman Flags to the 39th Trans. Bn. and the 557th Engr. Bn. for their participation in the Savings Bond Plan.

Gen. Heintges advised the 75 unit field chairmen and canvassers at the rally to tell the people they contact that "this is not a donation."

"You are benefiting yourself when you invest in savings bonds," he said. "Really, this is an investment in our profession, whether you are in uniform or are a civilian. If you were in the business world, you would not hesitate to buy shares and stocks. Everyone finds it hard to save money, but you just sign the slip for the payroll deduction plan, you'll be surprised at the end of a year to see how much you have saved."

The general commended the two battalions that received Minuteman Flags, the highest award the Treasury Department presents. Col. N. E. Taylor accepted the flag for the 39th Bn., which he commands. The battalion, which was awarded the first Minuteman Flag a year ago, has 97.8 per cent participation in the Savings Bond Plan.

An average of 90 per cent is required to earn the flag. This percentage must be maintained in order to fly the flag.

Lt. Col. J. E. Halloran Jr. accepted the flag for his battalion, the 577th, which has 92.6 per cent participation.

Open House Will Highlight Observance

Plans are being formed at Fort Benning for the 1965 observance of Armed Forces Day, May 15, highlighted by an open house at Lawson Army Airfield.

The day is set aside to pay tribute to the nation's servicemen and women, to acquaint the public with the power of the Armed Forces and with the necessity of that power.

"Power for Peace" is the theme for Armed Forces Week, May 8-16. In accordance with the theme various units at Fort Benning will display for the public demonstrations of their strength and capabilities.

Nine Retirees Receive Awards At Chapel Field

Five Army Commendation Medals, three first oak leaf clusters and one second oak leaf cluster to the ACM were presented to nine Fort Benning officers and enlisted men during a mass retirement ceremony on Chapel Field Tuesday.

Maj. George R. Henderson received the second oak leaf cluster to the ACM and retired with over 20 years of active service.

Results Still Delayed In Building 81 Contest

Judges in the "Building 81 Contest" have not yet made a decision as to the winner.

Areas of consideration in judging the entries are: (1) How best it would augment post facilities and (2) practicality, clarity and detail of the submitted suggestion.

Applying this yardstick to the more than one hundred entries sent in is what is delaying the decision. Practicality, for instance, involves cost estimates, terrain study, traffic congestion, safety and other factors.

The BAYONET will announce the winner as soon as a decision has been made; hopefully, next week.

Law Day U. S. A.

Tomorrow we will celebrate the eighth annual observance of Law Day U.S.A. It is a period when all of us are called upon to reconsider the blessing of a system founded upon the Rule of Law and to rededicate ourselves to the task of preserving this system by obeying the law. For it is obedience to law which enables order to prevail. It is therefore, every citizen's duty and to every citizen's advantage to insure that both he and his fellow Americans keep the faith of our forefathers who believed in justice under the law.

Although the duties of citizenship are many, the theme of this year's Law Day U.S.A., "Obey the Law—A Citizen's First Duty," emphasizes this single greatest responsibility of citizenship.

Cites ARMY Magazine

Post CG Calls for All-Out Drive To Increase AUSA Membership

More than 100 Fort Benning sergeants major gathered for a luncheon - meeting at Crain Hall last week and heard Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, post commander, call for an all-out drive to increase membership in the local chapter at the Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA.)

Citing ARMY magazine, the AUSA publication, as one of the prime selling points for membership in the organization and describing it as an "immediate benefit" for all members, he said the magazine is the "trade journal of our profession."

He told the ranking sergeants that, "it (ARMY) is the best known source for keeping career officers and non - commissioned officers informed of the overall current thinking and trends."

(ARMY magazine is published monthly by the AUSA and mailed to all members of the organization.)

Referring to the plaque the Columbus - Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter was awarded last year for having the largest membership in AUSA, Gen. Heintges said. "We are proud of that distinction. . . but. . . our title of 'largest' becomes somewhat clouded when viewed in relation to our population. Percentagewise, we are certainly not outstanding."

He pointed out that the chapter membership was in excess of 4,500 (roughly only about 10 per cent participation) and that it had dropped to less than 3,000. In asking for support from the senior sergeants in recruiting new members, he said he would be happy if the local chapter retained its title in the process but his immediate concern was a "greater percentage joining AUSA. . . a greater percentage displaying tangible evidence that their interest in their profession goes beyond routine. . . a greater percentage showing their concern for the Army as a whole, its present and its future."

Joining Gen. Heintges at the membership campaign kickoff luncheon were Maj. Gen. H. W. O. Kinnard, 11th AAD and Brig. Gen. Robert W. Williams, representing the 2d Inf. Div. Both pledged support of their division personnel in the campaign.

Gen. Heintges was followed at the speaker's podium by R. L. Hinson, chapter first vice - president and membership committee chairman. Hinson outlined plans for the campaign among civilian industries, business establishments and professional men and pledged one new civilian member for every new military member. "You get one, you got two," Hinson said.

Following the luncheon-meeting, the group saw a 20-minute film of footage taken during the annual meeting last November in Washington.

Receiving the first award of the Army Commendation Medal were MSgt Charlie J. Watson, with over 27 years of service, Maj. Phillips Melzer, who retired with the rank of colonel, MSgt. David K. Mulholland, 1st Sgt. John B. Copeland and SFC William M. Wiggins, all with over 20 years of service.

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges was the reviewing officer at the ceremony.

"You stand here in the last hour of your active duty, rich in the knowledge that your country and free men throughout the world are deeply in your debt and grateful for your personal sacrifices," the general said.

AUSA Slates Semi-Annual Dinner Meeting

The semi-annual dinner meeting of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U.S. Army (AUSA), will be held at the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess, Wednesday night, May 5.

The dinner will begin at 8 p.m. and will be preceded by a social hour on the patio starting at 7 p.m.

Because of a family emergency the speaker scheduled for the dinner meeting was forced to cancel, but the AUSA national headquarters has promised to provide another, to be announced later.

Tickets are $3.50 to include the dinner and social hour and may be procured through AUSA members or the AUSA office, Building 35, room 136, telephone 545-3444. All members and prospective members are urged to attend.

Chaplain's Corner

'An Evaluation'

By Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker

In each administrative vocation of which I have some knowledge, by reading or association, standards of performance are established to encourage a high type of efficiency. This is also true of the professions. Each has a code of ethics for each member to follow, that the highest type of professional accomplishment may be achieved.

To determine the degree of effectiveness, of personnel concerned, evaluations are essential.

For military personnel efficiency reports are made by commanders and senior staff officers. This report has great value in determining present and future potential of a person to the military service. If the human element were a constant factor in the personality of raters and indorsers, everyone in the military establishment would demonstrate a higher degree of morale by having more confidence in themselves and healthier work habits.

Nevertheless, evaluators are necessary and they usually endeavor to be honest and objective.

A Greek philosopher is credited with having said, "Know thyself", and an Englishman wrote, "To thine own self be true."

A frequent evaluation of ourselves should be made by each of us. If we can be truly honest, this should be a soul searching experience. By our very nature, we are usually most hesitant to undertake this chore for we know too much about ourselves and are not inclined to confess our own faults.

In the areas of religious faith and morality, certain standards have been established by the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the Sermon on the Mount. Here none of us are perfect, but each should be honest and sincere in evaluating ourselves. What is your opinion of yourself?

The Judge Says . . .

Law Day U. S. A. is observed each year on May 1 as a tribute to the American system of justice under law. Law Day is also America's answer to the Communist May Day demonstrations, instituted by the Communists as a time to parade their weapons and flex their muscles.

Americans observe May 1 by rededicating themselves to the rule of law rather than rule of men, force, and violence. The theme of this year's Law Day U.S.A. is "Obey the Law — A Citizen's First Duty."

In a real sense servicemen have a special interest in observing this day, for members of the Armed Forces are looked to as exemplars in discipline, self - restraint, and patriotism. Moreover, they are looked to as guardians of our system, as Americans having a personal commitment to preservation of freedom and the American system. Thus, when a civilian breaks the law the incident is but another disturbing statistic; when a soldier breaks the law, he not only contributes to statistics, but he also shakes the faith of the American people in the quality of their military establishment.

Therefore, let us pledge ourselves on May 1, 1965, and every day, to uphold the trust of our public office by upholding the law. Specifically, we can make a special effort to cooperate with and assist local, state, national, and military law enforcement officers in administering the law by, for example, providing information to aid them in apprehending violators.

But more important is our duty to restrain ourselves from violation of the law—both civil and military. For, by doing this, we have contributed to the order and justice of our society; we have reaffirmed our faith in the American system; we have fulfilled the first duty of citizenship.

Quote of the Week

"The Long Gray Line has never failed us. Were you to do so, a million ghosts in olive drab, in brown khaki, in blue and gray would rise from their white crosses thundering those magic words: Duty, Honor, Country."—General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, at the U.S. Military Academy, May 12, 1962.

CODE OF THE U.S. FIGHTING MAN

VI

I will never forget that I am an American fighting man, responsible for my actions, and dedicated to the principles which made my country free. I will trust in my God and in the United States of America.

The provisions of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, whenever appropriate, continue to apply to members of the armed forces while prisoners of war. Upon repatriation, the conduct of prisoners will be examined as to the circumstances of capture and through the period of detention with due regard for the rights of the individual and consideration for the conditions of captivity.

A member of the armed forces who becomes a prisoner of war has a continuing obligation to remain loyal to his country, his service and his unit.

The life of a prisoner of war is hard. He must never give up hope. He must resist enemy indoctrination. Prisoners of war who stand firm and united against the enemy will aid one another in surviving this ordeal. (AFPS)

Arts & Crafts Week

On behalf of the Department of the Army, I have designated the week of May 2-8, 1965 as Army Arts and Crafts Week at Fort Benning.

To stimulate interest in the field of arts and crafts, I invite all personnel of this command to visit the various craft facilities of Fort Benning and become familiar with the many recreational opportunities that are offered.

The crafts program provides a variety of activities, such as: woodworking, assorted; automotive repair; ceramics; photography; boat construction; leather work; and model airplanes.

If you have not developed a skill in any of these areas, the crafts program has capable instructors to assist you in learning a new craft.

Again, I urge each of you to visit one of your craft facilities during this special week.

Law Day U.S.A.

Four years ago, Congress designated May 1 of each year as "A special day of celebration by the American people . . . for the cultivation of that respect for law that is so vital to the democratic way of life." That day is known as Law Day, U. S. A.

Law Day, U. S. A., is America's answer to communism's martial May Day demonstrations. The Communists have adopted the first day of May as a time to flex their muscles and rattle their missiles. Americans celebrate the day in a dignified and significant manner by reaffirming their dedication to the rule of law and reason rather than force and violence.

Under our constitutional form of government, which limits governmental powers, it is essential that individual Americans assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

The American serviceman is in a position to demonstrate, both at home and abroad, his dedication to the rule of law. Because he is under closer scrutiny than other citizens of the United States, he is under a greater obligation to abide by the law and exemplify democracy.

This is especially true in overseas assignments. The people of other countries base their impressions of the United States in part or entirely on the Americans in their midst. Any disregard of the accepted standards of fairness or willful infraction of the law injures the reputation of the armed forces and the United States. It also casts doubt on the value of our democratic ideals and weakens the free world's ability to resist communism.

Every American citizen — especially the serviceman - citizens — should make every day of the calendar Law Day by doing whatever he can, each day, to strengthen and foster respect for law and order. This is a small price to pay for the blessings of liberty we enjoy under the rule of law. (AFPS)

Most Prevalent Disease

Your Dental Health

By Lt. Col. R. Y. Whittmore Jr., DC

Have you had your immunization against tooth decay? Immunization is the act of making one immune; in this case, resistant to disease.

Our immunization is not a "shot," however it is not beyond the realm of possibility that we may have a vaccine to immunize against dental cavities some day.

The immunization we use presently is the fluoride treatment to make teeth more resistant to dental cavities. Our dental clinics are devoting one day a week to immunization, using their entire staff in an effort to give this service to as many of our personnel as possible.

During these immunization days the patients also receive instruction in proper self care of the mouth. By having this immunization day we can immunize 268 additional patients each week. While this does not seem to be a large number, when we figure on the basis o fone year, we find we can increase our capability in this service by 13,936 treatments a year.

Dental disease is the most prevalent disease known to mankind; it affects 95 per cent of our population. Over the years, in spite of the advances in dentistry, we have been unable to make any improvement in the overall dental health of the population. This is shown by the services having to lower the dental standards for induction to the point where now the only persons rejected are those with gross deficiencies which cannot be corrected.

As a result of this, the dental profession, particularly the Army Dental Corps, has devoted much study and research to means of preventing dental disease. Since we are unable to cope with the ravages of this disease, the logical solution is to prevent as much dental disease as possible.

That portion of dental disease which is preventable is divided into two gum diseases. Of the dental disease that is preventable, 90 per cent can be prevented by patient. By streeing immunization and oral hygiene instruction, we hope to greatly reduce the amount of dentistry which needs to be done, and thereby, over a period of time, raise the level of dental health.

Prevention is our weapon against dental disease, and the ammunition is immunization and proper oral hygiene. Arm yourself for the battle against dental disease.

Mission Study Session Stresses Latin America

Latin America will be featured at a mission study session at the post's Religious Education Center May 5.

Scheduled for 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in Bldg. 2605, the event will include a Latin lunch with ladies of the Spanish Speaking Congregation as hostesses.

Principal speaker will be Mrs. Ervin L. Northcutt, a missionary to Peru. She will use slides to illustrate her talk.

Throughout the day, there will be talks by members of various women's religious organizations on the post on missions of the church from the time of Christ to the present, with special emphasis on Latin America, officials said.

The mission study is sponsored by the Protestant Women-of-the-Chapel Council.

Free nursery care will be available at Tot Town Nursery for the children of ladies attending the study. There will be the cost of the noon meal at the nursery, however.

Veterinarian Views Cat Show In Montgomery

Col. Clinton Gould, post veterinarian, and his wife attended a cat show held at the armory in Montgomery, Ala., along with Col. Douglas Nettles, veterinarian of Maxwell AF Base, and his wife.

Mrs. Gould and Mrs. Nettles served as judges at the show which exhibited cats from all over the eastern United States. Local exhibitors included Col. and Mrs. Frederick Krauskopf, Capt. and Mrs. Jack Williams, Sgt. and Mrs. Don Nohlburg, Capt. and Mrs. Peter Miles, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bode.

Mrs. Williams Receives Ovation For Superb 'Mikado' Production

Before the curtain rose last Friday night on the first of two performances of "The Mikado", presented by the OWC, the requirement of being objective in this review seemed paramount.

But the need for objectivity was dispelled before the first act was half over and had disappeared completely by the end of the last act when the chorus reached its rafter - ringing crescendo in the grand finale.

The production was superb!

Mrs. Bonnie T. Williams, OWC president and director, wielded her baton like an artist, blending the Gilbert and Sullivan music on her palette into a smooth, colorful masterpiece devoid of a single black or grey tone.

The audience ovation and bouquet of roses she received at the operetta's conclusion were well - deserved tributes to her artistry.

Outstanding Mikado

An outstanding performance was turned in by the Mikado himself. Regal of bearing as well as voice, Dean Matheny made devoted subjects of his audience.

Hart Armstrong as Nanki-Poo, the Mikado's son disguised as a wandering minstrel and Vicki Morales, the beautiful Yum-Yum gave delightful performances as they shared the load of musical chores with Jerome Wildershien, as Ko-Ko the conniving but chicken - hearted Lord High Executioner.

Convincing Lovers

Miss Morales and Armstrong were convincing and appealing as they portrayed the lovers beset by trials and tribulations. The comical Ko-Ko would have delighted the composers as he swaggered through the production, amusing the audience but never arousing its empathy for his pursuit of Yum-Yum's dainty hand.

If there was any miscasting at all in the production it would be in the case of Katisha, described in the playbill as "hideous" and an "elderly" lady of the court.

But Gretchen Vandenbout was certainly neither 'hideous" nor did she appear too "elderly" to be attractive as she made her unsuccessful bid to marry Nanki-Poo and then succumbed to the wiles of the crafty Ko-Ko.

Though few would dare to tamper with the works of Gilbert and Sullivan, recognized masters of musical comedy and the absolute rhyme, the OWC had no such temerity. The few references to Fort Benning personalities and places, surreptitiously "planted" in the original verses added a dash of spice to an already zestful dish.

The supporting players and the talent - laden chorus were no less worthy of accolades than those cited in the preceding comments, but newspaper space is restrictive.

Suffice it to say that "The Mikado", the first production of its kind to be presented in the Marshall Auditorium, may well have established a standard of excellence and professionalism which will be hard to surpass. — SMAJ. AL SPRATLEY

A Helping Hand Is Given To Sergeant and Family

The American soldier is taught to meet and close with the enemy and he also knows how to meet and help a friend.

This was seen recently at Fort Benning when the officers and enlisted men of The Infantry School Battalion came to the unsolicited aid of one of their members, Sgt. James M. Rogers, who has had his share of hard luck.

Sgt. Rogers' wife died in December 1963, a victim of cancer leaving him two small children to care for. His daughter, Mary Anne, is nine and attends school during the day. William M., his seven-year-old son is afflicted with muscular dystrophy and requires constant attention.

The sergeant had to pay someone to stay with the child during the day while he was on duty at his unit. Soon what little savings he had were used up in an effort to obtain care for his children.

Sgt. Rogers decided to retire from the Army in March and move to a farm near Warm Springs, Ga., where he hoped he could devote more of his time to the children.

When news of his problems and decisions spread among the men of the unit, they decided to do something about it. They did, and still are.

According to Capt. Richard O. Maddox, executive officer of TSB, $700 was collected and given to Sgt. Rogers when he retired to assist him in getting started on his new career as a farmer.

Also, several of the men offered their personal assistance in helping Rogers get his farm in operation. Capt. Maddox stated the spirit in which the men of the unit donated money and offered their assistance was most gratifying.

They not only know how to dig a foxhole but how to dig into their pockets to lend a helping hand.

Fort Benning Playing Host

Fort Benning is hosting several hundred visitors during an extensive three-day training demonstration period which began Wednesday.

Impressive demonstrations are being held for students from the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.; Armor carrer class, Fort Knox, Ky.; Military Police School, Fort Gordon, Ga.; The Infantry School; and members of the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

Thirty-eight members of the Lockheed Corp., headed by President Dan J. Haughton, arrived Wednesday and in addition to seeing the demonstrations attended briefings by The Infantry Center, U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, 2d Inf. Div., and the Test, Evaluation and Control Group.

Gen. Rich Tells OCS Graduates 'You Have Big Shoes to Step Into'

New second lieutenants graduating from Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning were told last week by the commanding general of the Third U. S. Army that they "have some big shoes to step into."

Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, former commandant of The Infantry School, was guest speaker at the commencement exercises in Marshall Auditorium.

To the 146 graduates, Gen. Rich said, "You represent 67 per cent of the men who entered this 600th Infantry OCS class. The fact that you are here proves that you have character, stamina, and ability to lead men. You are proof positive that leadership does not come easy. It is not the product of some gimmick but only of good hard work, God-given talent and good instruction from the school.

"Only your performance in the future will determine how well prepared you are," he added.

Gen. Rich recalled the stringent tests used to select the soldiers who would attend the first OCS class during World War II. He told of the high quality of leadership developed in that class and down through the years.

The three-star general introduced a member of Infantry Officer Candidate School class No. 1, Col. Jess W. Walls, who commands The Infantry Center Troop Command; Col. D. T. Kellett, commander of the Student Brigade, Class No. 6; Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, commander of the 5th Student Bn., and a Medal of Honor recipient, Class No. 136; and Capt. Roger H. C. Donlon of 7th Special Forces, Fort Bragg, N. C., also a Medal of Honor recipient, Class No. 555, who graduated in 1959.

Gen. Rich also mentioned Brig. Gen. Keith Ware, the first OCS graduate to attain the rank of brigadier general.

"Gentlemen, if you don't think you have some big shoes to step into, take a look at these men," Gen. Rich said.

"By your acceptance of a commission, you accept not only the rights and privileges but the hazards and responsibilities of an officer. Find out what it was that made you "follow." Then take it with you and instill it into the men you will lead," the speaker said.

Gen. Rich presented awards to the honor and distinguished graduate, 2nd Lt. Douglas Foster, who received a letter of academic achievement signed by Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, an Association of the U. S. Army plaque, and a silver bowl from the 5th Student Bn.

Lt. Foster's grade average was 94.7 per cent.

Gen. Rich and 1st Lt. James P. McGrail pinned the gold bars of the new rank on Lt. Foster.

The top leadership graduate was 2nd Lt. Thomas Murden, who received a one-year membership in the Association of the U. S. Army and a "Follow Me" Statuette from the 5th Student Bn.

A Weapons Department trophy went to 2nd Lt. Robert S. Hookeness.

Duplicate awards were given to two men who tied in physical Combat Proficiency Tests with scores of 487 points out of a posible 500. They were 2nd Lt. Charles M. Johnson and 2nd Lt. Larry L. Hess.

Gen. Rich presented diplomas to all graduates.

After the graduation ceremony, the students took the oath of an officer in a mass swearing-in ceremony.

Gen. Rich was introduced by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

KNOW YOUR SENIOR NCOs

Highlighted this week in The BAYONET's "KNOW YOUR SENIOR NCOs" column is MSgt. Edward A. Proffitt, senior instructor of the Airborne Department's training committee.

Sgt. Proffitt first entered the ranks of the military service as a Marine and served with the 2nd Marine Div. during World War II. Following his WWII service, Sgt. Proffitt left the military for two years.

He enlisted in the Army in September 1947 to attend Airborne School.

Following his graduation from Airborne School, Sgt. Proffitt was assigned to the 511th Airborne Inf. Regt., where he served in every enlisted rank from a private to first sergeant of Co. E of the regiment.

He has been senior instructor of the Airborne Department's three committees since 1961 and is presently the senior instructor of the training committee.

Sgt. Proffitt has attended the Seventh Army NCO Academy in Germany, Instructor Training Course at Fort Benning, and the Third Army NCO Academy at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Among his awards and decorations are the Expert Infantryman's Badge, Army Commendation Medal, Master Parachutist Badge, and the Asiatic Pacific Ribbon with four campaign stars.

New Target Gives 'Fighting' Experience

By PFC M. F. Grogan

The Infantry School's Ranger bayonet instructors, with the help of training centers throughout the country, have come up with a device that will give trainees improved "fighting" experience with the bayonet.

The training aid created to take the brunt of bayonet lunges, vertical and horizontal butt strokes and parries is a new dummy constructed by the Third Army Training Aids Center at Fort Benning.

Because bayonet instructors found a certain lacking in the techniques used in past training, they realized that one way to improve it was to provide a target for the soldier to "fight" as soon as he had learned the basic movements.

Targets had been designed and built before but found impractical because they were easily damaged or too expensive. Also, the older models did not allow the student to practice the offensive moves such as the parry and the butt strokes. Therefore, the instructors sent out a request for designs to the training centers throughout the country and received seven.

None of these ideas, however, included all of the traits needed for a training dummy so the instructors began taking components of each one and finally came up with what they call the all-purpose bayonet training target.

The new target is made of 4 - by - 4 pieces of lumber, stands 56 inches high and is anchored by 42 inches of foundation below the ground. It has an arm for practicing the parry, a vertical butt stroke pad, a padded "head" for horizontal butt stroke practice, and a three-quarter inch deep laminated rubber pad for bayonet thrusts.

The target, which is still in the test phase, can be used by four men simultaneously. It is being tested by a special student platoon of 60 soldiers of the 197th Inf. Bde. Their job is to see if the dummies can take the rough punishment of thousands of bayonet thrusts and blows with rifle butts.

Capt. Stanley C. Pore, bayonet project officer, outlined the over - all schedule for study.

"We intend to build a new training program from what we have learned from the experimental platoon, from trips to Army training centers and other installations," he added.

Capt. Pore said 58 of the new targets can train a full company of trainees at the same time.

Designs of the new dummy are being sent to the U.S. Continental Army Command at Fort Monroe, Va., for approval to be used in training centers throughout the Army.

Bronze Star

SFC Chester F. Eaton (R) is congratulated after being presented a Bronze Star Medal. He was cited for meritorious service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force in the Republic of Viet Nam from May, 1964, to February, 1965. Col. J. L. Gueymard, operations officer, The Infantry School, makes the presentation.

Do You Go Strictly By The Book?

School's Weapons Dept. Writes Manuals On Variety of Complex Military Subjects

How often have you heard the expression, "There's a soldier who goes strictly by the book"? This term isn't always complimentary when applied to an individual, but, it is an absolute necessity to follow the "book" to get maximum performance from weapons.

Have you wondered who wrote the "book"? If it's a field manual, training circular, or a USAIS Instructional Pamphlet about a weapon, the odds are that it was born in the Weapons Department of The Infantry School.

The Weapons Department has, as a primary task, the mission of instructing Infantry School students in the characteristics, capabilities, and employment of Infantry weapons. Skilled instructors present classes covering all of the weapons, from grenades and flame throwers to tank guns.

Write Textbooks

Newly assigned instructors to the Weapons Department are often surprised to find that in addition to presenting classes, they are required to write the textbooks from which they teach. In this regard, the instructor finds that besides the 8,000 students he meets annually in the classroom, he reaches many times that number through the material he writes.

In Training Centers, the "book" is used in the training of new soldiers. The "citizen soldiers" of the National Guard and Army Reserve follow the "book" in the armory at at summer camp.

To carry out its missions, the Weapons Department is organized into three instructional committees and a headquarters group. Col. Bob E. Edwards, department director is assisted by Lt. Col. Donald F. Barraclough, Lt. Col. Neil A. McLean and Lt. Col. Edward C. Radcliff, chairmen of the small arms mortar and anti-tank missile committees, respectively. To support the committees, the headquarters group includes the director and sections for operations, administration, training literature, new developments and supply.

Instructional Teams

The committees are divided into instructional teams. Each team specializes in a family of weapons or weapons systems. The officers and men of these teams are the "front line troops" of the department. Through them, the many technical skills required of the Infantrymen are passed on to resident students.

These officers and men also prepare the weapons training literature for use throughout the Army and by many of our allies. The term, "training literature" describes a myriad of different materials. Included are field manuals, training circulars, training films, subject schedules, proficiency tests, and a variety of booklets and special texts for use within The Infantry School and as informational material to troops in the field.

In numbers, this breaks down to approximately 25 field manuals, eight training circulars, 28 subject schedules, 35 training films, questions for a dozen proficiency tests, and 12 instructional pamphlets. At any one time, one third of these are under preparation or revision.

Large Task

How is this large and never ending task accomplished? As a simple illustration, let's follow the preparation of literature for the M-79 Grenade Launcher from its introduction to the present.

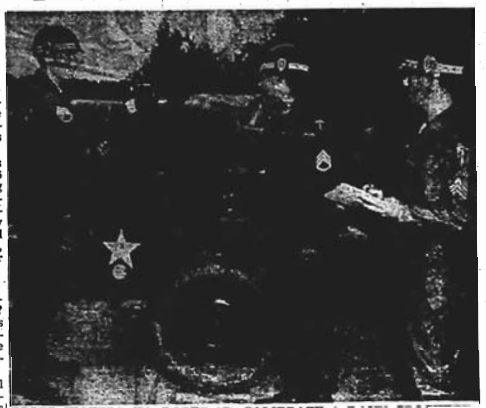
A few years ago, personnel of the special purpose weapons team of the small arms committee began monitoring the development and production of the grenade launcher and its possible configuration, employment, and desirable characteristics.

As the weapon progressed through its early test and evaluation phases, team members were on hand to collect more material in order to work out training programs and to gain a more thorough knowledge of the weapon's operation. When it became apparent that the weapon would be adopted for use by the Army, a project officer, Capt. John N. Meloy, was directed to begin the preparation of a Training Circular for issue to the field in conjunction with the weapon.

Not A One Man Job

Although Meloy was responsible for assembling the publication, it was not a one man job. The officers and men of the team pitched in to assist in conducting firing tests, studying the design and construction of instructional firing ranges, and in determining the best techniques to use for training troops in the mechanics of maintaining and firing the grenade launcher.

These activities were carried on along with their other duties of presenting instruction and in preparing similar instructional material. In August 1963, Training Circular 23-3, 40-mm Grenade Launcher, M79, was published for Army-wide distribution.



SSGTS. WATERS (L), LOPEZ (C) CALIBRATE A DAVY CROCKETT
Sgt. Dupre Records the Technical Data Required

The publication of the TC did not mean that the job was completed. Training circulars are classed as interim publications and are normally replaced by a field manual and subject schedules as soon as possible. By the time the TC was published, Meloy had departed on a new assignment and Capt. James T. Nolen took over the responsibilities for M-79 publications.

Review

Nolen, assisted by Lt. Michael Haynes, began an immediate review of the training circular, conducted additional search into training requirements, and improved and expanded the material for use in the field manual. Capt. Richard A. Robinson, team chief, supervised the two officers' efforts and coordinated the contributions provided by other team members such as Lts. William Bennet, Gilbert Zamora, and MSgt. Delbert W. Wilson, each an expert in the field of hand grenades.

Nolen supervised the taking of pictures, preparation of art work, conduct of field tests and range firing, and coordination of ammunition allocations for Army-wide training; cross-checked technical data with Army Weapons Command representatives; conducted formal and informal reviews of portions of the text; and edited portions of all of the ext.

Recently, the completed field manual was forwarded through channels to Department of the Army for final approval and printing. Nolen and his team associates have not completed their task as there are subject schedules to be finalized, graphic training aids to be considered and, when these tasks are finished, it will doubtlessly be time to begin a review and revision of the field manual.

Not Always Authors

Project officers, such as Nolen, aren't always authors. For example, 1st Lt. Peter Reinhart of the recoilless rifle team in the anti-tank missile committee discovered that after preparing a field manual for the 66-mm Anti-tank Rocket M-72, he was required to become a combination writer, director, producer, technical advisor, and editor during the preparation of a training film about the same weapon.

During the shooting of the training film by Army Pictorial Center cameramen and supervisors, it was Reinhart who made sure that the Signalmen and Army actors were putting down on film all the fine points the film is designed to emphasize. After the filming was completed, Reinhart spent approximately two weeks at the Army Pictorial Center assisting in its final editing and assembly.

This article has mentioned only a few of the officers and men of the department engaged in the production of training literature. Every member of each of the committees is involved in the writing, reviewing or editing of material, be it for mortars, the M14 Automatic Rifle or another of the many weapons which fall under the Weapons Department's responsibility.

The Infantryman must know his weapons to survive. Teaching him is a duty shared by the Weapons Department world-wide. It's a big and important job.

Hail Storm Doesn't Stop Rangers From Demonstrating Their Skills

CAPT. VEGVARY POINTS OUT TO CROWD
How To Recognize Poisonous Snakes

RAPELLING TECHNIQUES DEMONSTRATED
On 60-Foot Cliff by Ranger Instructors

By PFC Frank Lombardi

A Ranger must accomplish any assigned mission in spite of obstacles presented by the enemy, climate or terrain. The truth of this statement was demonstrated Saturday afternoon, April 24 at the Mountain Ranger Camp at Dahlonega, Ga.

An open house scheduled by the Mountain Ranger Committee of The Infantry School's Ranger Department was conducted despite the muddy conditions caused by a two-hour rain and hail storm that swept down suddenly from the Chattahoochee National Forest.

Equally as determined as the Rangers conducting the affair were some 500 persons who turned out to see the demonstrations and exhibits.

One of the chief attractions was a reptile handling demonstration conducted by Capt. Robert Vegvary of the Patrolling Committee.

Capt. Vegvary discussed fact and fiction about snakes, how to recognize poisonous reptiles and how to care for snake bites.

A hand-to hand combat demonstration conducted by the Combat Conditioning Committee also drew large crowds. Spectators found it hard to believe that the demonstrators, Sgt. Frank Mobley and Sgt. Camet C. Hawthorne, weren't actually trying to kill each other.

Another demonstration consisted of mountaineering techniques practiced on a 60-foot cliff. Ranger instructors scaled the sheer cliff, rapelled down it once with full equipment and once while carrying wounded men and emphasized the high degree of self confidence that such training instills.

Ranger trainees are taught basic mountaineering and patrolling skills during a three week stay at the mountain camp as part of their nine week course.

According to Lt. Col. George Tassey, Mountain Ranger Camp commander, some 1,200 Rangers are trained yearly at the camp.

The trainees come to the camp after three weeks of preparatory training at Fort Benning. Classes average 120 students each with the majority consisting of officers.

Upon completion of the mountain training phase the students are sent to the Florida Ranger Camp, located on the Eglin Air Force Base reservation, for jungle and swamp operations.

The training area at the camp covers more than 396,000 acres where over 10,000 Rangers, among them some of the finest professional soldiers in the U.S. Army, have undergone training.

The majority of the instruction consists of patrolling techniques. Small groups of students are taught the proper methods of conducting raids, ambushes and reconnaissance.

The purpose of the training is to enable the Ranger student to successfully accomplish any mission and remain alive. The instruction is given under simulated combat conditions and is designed to produce a tough and well trained fighting man.

German Military Relics Collection Appraised at More Than $15,000

DISPLAY OF DAGGERS AND SWORDS
One of Best In U. S.

By Samuel Rush

One of the best collections of World War II German military relics, outside of a museum, is owned by a Fort Benning captain who values his items at more than $15,000.

Capt. John R. Angolia, a student in the Infantry officer career class, has his collection divided into three categories.

The first consists of daggers and swords and holds the most interest for the captain.

The second category is that of SS (Schutzstaffel - Hitler's Elite Guard) uniforms, decorations and medals, and the third category is a general collection of medals, badges, and miscellaneous insignia.

The daggers are a cross representation of three major divisions, that is, military, political and governmental.

Those items classified as military are further sub-divided into Army, Navy and Air Force.

The political sub - division is of much broader scope and includes the SS, Sturm Abteilung (SA-Storm Troops), Hitler Youth (HJ), National Socialistic Flying Corps (NSFK), Nationalistic Motor Corps (NSKK), National Political Institute (NPEA), Labor Corps (RAD), and other similar organizations.

The third and last sub-division is governmental and includes diplomatic, government official, customs, police, and other comparative groups of government officials.

The dagger collection numbers 135 items and is estimated to be the third best of this type in the U. S., not in a museum. There are also 64 swords in the collection covering the same three divisions as the daggers.

Represented in the SS collection is a cross section of uniforms, equipment, insignia and documents. A large portion of the insignia demonstrates the major particiipation by legions in countries outside Germany, the captain said.

A portion of the documents consists of original orders published bi-monthly to the SS in the field, covering the last chaotic months of the war. These orders vividly show the confusion of forces during this period.

The decorations consist of military and political, with greatest emphasis on those in the original presentation case. Two examples are a Spanish Cross awarded to a German "volunteer" Condor Legion in the 1936-1939 Spanish revolution and a Silver Medal from the 1936 Olympics.

There are four types of daggers from the presentations of Ernest Rohm, (head of the SA about 1921 to 1934), awarded to SA and SS men. After his purge in 1934 Rohm's name was ordered ground from the blade of all the daggers he had presented.

From the dagger presentations made by Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo (1936-1945), is one with serial No. 2. Himmler presented daggers, in part, to a select few of those participants in the Rohm "blood purge" of 1934.

Capt. Angolia got his start collecting German relics when at the age of eight he was given a German war helmet by a friend. As the interest of other children in war souvenirs declined, Angolia found it increasingly easy to talk his associates out of their "war booty."

Throughout his years in high school and college, he added to his growing collection, and now trades or barters for choice items all over the world. He has received German war trophies from as far away as Australia.

Special Retiree Corner Established by Library

A special corner for Army retirees has been created at the 197th Inf. Bde. Library (Post Branch No. 5) by assistant librarian Sp5 Raymond Stringfellow.

"So many men come into the library seeking information about the many facets of retirement," Stringfellow said, "that it occurred to me to devote a special section to retirement literature."

Situated in a prominent corner of the library, the "Retirement Corner" is composed of a desk, chairs, posters and folders issued by the Department of the Army, and a collection of 15 books.

The books, which are replaced monthly from the large collection of retirement literature the library has on hand, contain such subject matter as career opportunities, legal assistance, educational opportunities and recreation.

Another feature of the 197th's library, which has caused a circulation increase, is the collection of paperback books.

Recently added to the library's 6,200 book collection, these paperbacks — which range from mysteries to scientific studies — have upped circulation by at least 10 per cent, according to Stringfellow.

"Paperbacks are less expensive than cloth - bound books," he said "and many people seem to prefer them because they are easy to handle."

New paperback books are constantly being received by the library in addition to the 40 new cloth-bound books received each month.

Use of Safety Device When Riding Is Not New; Knight in Armor Was Anchored to His Mount

The idea of anchoring a age, gave it much thought. human to whatever he is riding to help his body resist the force of an impact is not new. Although the origin of this form of protection has been lost in obscurity, the knight in armor was literally anchored to his horse. The warrior of medieval times was made more secure in his saddle by a deep seat surrounded by projections which curved around him, and by the weight of his armor.

Far less cumbersome was the idea of an airplane pilot, a half century ago, who came in from a rough flight to a bumpy landing. Control of the plane was difficult. "Rig some straps to hold me down," the pilot ordered. According to the Smithsonian Institution, this was the first known instance of the use of the airplane seat belt. Its use gradually increased as a device to hold the pilot steady so he could better control the plane.

Most people do not know what the force of an auto crash can do to a human body. They read about it in the newspapers, but they rarely see it. But men who saw such injuries daily, and had to try to repair the damage, gave it much thought. They suggested that the devices which were helping to reduce the toll among pilots who crashed might be used in passenger cars to save the occupants from death and injury. But which device should be used — and would it work?

The Cornell Medical School undertook to study injuries to crash victims, fatal or non-fatal and to determine how they came about — what objects the body struck.

They found that the chance of being killed was five times greater if the passenger was thrown out of the car than if he stayed inside — seat belts would keep passengers from being hurled out of the auto.

But were belts really safe? Wouldn't the belt itself hurt you as much as the dashboard? From the laboratories came the answer. Through scientific experiments, it was determined that man could take up to 4,870 pounds of force through a simple lap seat belt without injury. The belts were safe.

And then the final question: "Would they really do the job, out on the road, in people's cars?" Studies conducted at Cornell of over 10,000 injury producing accidents involving over 24,000 people show that seat belts will save lives.

The seat belt has been definitely proven to be the most effective means available to bring about an immediate, dramatic decrease in traffic accident casualties. Careful scientific analysis of automobile accidents by crash research experts shows that seat belts could have prevented 25 per cent of the fatalities just by keeping passengers from being thrown out of the car during accidents.

The Infantry Center safety officer says that seat belts won't stop accidents nor prevent all injuries or deaths, but your chances are much better if you use a belt. Remember that the best of excuses won't save your life—but a seat belt may.

Dr. Gross Is Given Post Tour

Dr. S. W. Gross, senior editorial writer for The Nation, Tel Aviv, Israel, was at Fort Benning last week for a look at how the U.S. Army works.

Dr. Gross expressed a desire to visit Fort Benning to learn "how an Army lives and behaves in a democracy." He was interested in the soldier's image of himself and wanted to know "the style of Army life."

During his visit Dr. Gross was briefed on the history, organization and administration of The Infantry School. He toured Bldg. 4, the Main Post, and then was taken by helicopter for a trip around the range area.

He also observed various training activities, weapons employment and firing, and visited local units, including the 11th AAD, before leaving.

29th Inf. Defeats 'Castromania' During Field Training Exercise

By SP4 Dave Kaufelt

Troops from the fictitious country of "Castromania" were repulsed in an invasion attempt of the United States by men of the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. to complete a field training exercise last weekend.

Conducted under realistic combat conditions, "Exercise Stop Gap I" concluded two months of basic unit training. It tested the battalion staff, commanders and subordinate units under varying tactical situations; practiced command post operations and displacement; and tested communications and field procedures.

More than 800 officers and men took part in the "war" held in the Hourglass Rd. area. The exercise was supported by other units of the 197th Inf. Bde.

To give the exercise a realistic atmosphere, pre-exercise play was initiated in April by circulating news sheets among members of the 29th headlining the deteriorating relations between the United States and Castromania.

The news sheets, released daily prior to the start of the exercise, told of an island country off the coast of Florida which was building a vast arms supply under the protection of Upper Slobania, an anti-U. S. power.

Castromania invented crimes of aggression by the U. S. to prevent a revolution in its own country following an economic crisis which followed the power build-up.

On April 16th, Castromania forces played by the 1st Bn., 58th Inf., attacked the U. S., and three days later the entire Florida peninsula was under Castromanian control.

The 29th Inf., commanded by Lt. Col. William C. Hacker, was called into action to halt the aggressor's movements, and on April 23, lacking supplies and reinforcements, the Castromanian forces consolidated for a decisive battle with the 29th.

Interest in Exercise Stop Gap I was well generated by pre-exercise intelligence and members of the 29th said that they began feeling that the situation was a real one.

"There were times," said Sp4 Joe Longwell of the 29th's Hq. Co., "when I actually believed in Castromania and had to stop myself from writing home to tell the folks that I was all right."

Before the decisive battle the 29th was placed on 100 per cent alert and moved out to predesignated defensive positions.

Co. A and B acted as front line units while Co. D was held in reserve. Hq. Co. manned the battalion field headquarters.

Members of Co. C were used as replacements for men "injured" during the fighting. Scout dogs and their handlers from the 26th Inf. Plt. (Scout Dog) patrolled the front lines and rear areas as security.

Extensive patrolling and probing action was initiated by both forces during the night and on Saturday (April 24), the 29th launched an offensive with artillery and air support. Resistance by the aggressors was stubborn but scattered and the 29th was able to capture its objectives.

The aggressors consolidated and launched a counter-attack, forcing the 29th to withdraw from its vantage points.

After falling back and regrouping, the 29th's ground forces, assisted by air power, moved forward again and completely annihilated the enemy on Sunday to end the field training exercise.

The exercise provided the 29th's fighting forces with realistic combat training, and exercised support units who would handle mass casualty evacuations, channeling and interrogation of prisoners - of-war, and the vast communications systems required of war.

Controller for the exercise was Maj. D. C. R. Ward, 58th Inf. (S3). Maj. Ward, a member of the British Army, directed incidents and the umpire teams during Stop Gap I.

Members of the exercise planning staff were Maj. Vincent P. Reinstein, Capt. Harvey W. Foster, Capt. Larry E. Joyce and Capt. Paul E. Preskitt. MSgt. Raymond Anderson was NCOIC of Stop Gap I.

Supporting units for the exercise were the 58th Inf.; 4th Bn., 69th Armor; 2d Bn. (Composite), 10th Arty.; and the 183d Chemical Pl.

41st Co. Spikers Win 5th Post Volleyball Title

The spikers from the 41st Co. (Airborne), TSB, dropped Co. B, 2d Bn., 38th Inf., two games straight in a best two-out-of-three contest Friday night to win their fifth consecutive Post Volleyball Championship.

The Airborne squad had and easy time of it in the first game and rolled over the 38th, 15-5. The 38th jumped out into an early lead, 3-0, but the 41st Co. team roared back on its serve to an 8-3 advantage, then held the Infantrymen to two more points for the victory.

The second game was a nip and tuck affair with the outcome uncertain until the final serve.

The 38th moved into a 2-0 edge at the start, when the Airborne men came alive to tie it up. With the score deadlocked at 6-6, the Airborne spikers kept control of the serve to move into a commanding 10 - 6 lead.

The Infantrymen rallied for five straight points to lead 11-10, but then lost the serve. The 41st Co. squad slammed five straight points right back at the Infantrymen to take the championship 15-11.

The Airborne team racked up a 4 - 0 tournament mark, posting victories over Co. A, 1st Bn., 23d Inf., 2d Inf. Div.; Co. B, 2d Bn., 38th Inf., 11th AAD (twice); and Battery C, 1st Bn., 15th Arty., 11th AAD.

The 38th's only two losses in five outings came at the hands of the Airborne men.

Members of the championship squad were Daniel Danguilan, John Ford, Carl Bryan, Samuel Mayfield, Jimmie Davis, John Carr, William Carter, Harold Rowland and coach William McClean.

All games were played at Briant Wells Field House.

Co. B's squad, under the direction of coach Bob Ross, included Lorenzo Galiza, Harold Spencer, Marlin Cloud, Lemanuel Jones, Freddy King, Patrick Lynch, Eduardo Ramirez and Phil McClure.

Sgt. Garrido Slams Out Service Rifle Record

By PFC Russ Havourd

Shooters representing The Infantry Center slammed out two big victories in the 1965 Third Army Rifle-Pistol Championships held here this week.

Sgt. Roy Garrido of Co. D, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. became the individual service rifle champion with a brilliant 886-69v Grand Aggregate out of a possible 900. Garrido's total set a Third Army record, breaking that held since 1963 by Sgt. William Stallings from the 82nd Airborne Div., Fort Bragg, N. C.

On his way to the championship, Garrido topped the 200 - 600 yard combination slow fire event with 149-v.

The team of PFCs Ken Kennedy and Roger McCurley, both of Co. B, 1st Bn., 29th Inf., blasted their way into the Automatic Rifle championship with a Grand Aggregate of 1601 - 92v of 1800.

Kennedy and McCurley dominated the AR events and topped all competition in three of four matches held. Besides the Grand Aggregate, they won the 500 yard rapid fire with 508-23v and the 300 yard rapid fire with 556-44v.

In the only AR match conceded by the sharp shooting duo, the team of PFC Ronald Kong and Sp4 John Cabrera from Fort Bragg's 82nd Airborne took top honors. They combined for 552-38v in the mid-range rapid fire.

Another Grand Aggregate match decided by press time saw CWO Lucius Frye of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Fort Bragg emerge the winner among individual pistol shooters, tallying 2597-102x of a perfect 2700.

Trophy presentations were made by Lt. Gen. W. C. G. Heath, Third Army commanding general, during Thursday's closing ceremonies at McAndrew Range.

Altar Boys Given Picnic By Chaplain Russnock

The Knights of the Altar (altar boys of the Catholic Church) of Fort Benning and their fathers were hosted to a picnic at King's Pond recently by Maj. Michael A. Russnock, post Catholic chaplain.

The picnic was given by Father Russnock in appreciation of the altar boys' cooperation and enthusiasm in church affairs.

The boys range in age from nine to sixteen years-old. The post chapter numbers better than 50 members.

The national organization was formed in 1932 in response to requests from priests and nuns throughout the United States for assistance in developing altar boys and directing an altar society.

ARMED FORCES DAY

In peace and war the United States Army is a Progressive Army, steeped in tradition, modern in form, ready and standing with its sister services in preserving peace.

To be selected a Knight of the Altar is considered an honor for it represents many hours of study and devoted duty. Advancement in the society is on the basis of points received by successfully completing oral and written exams, diligence at the altar and knowledge of the Bible and American history.

The organization has served to help boys by molding their characters.

23rd Units In Unit Day

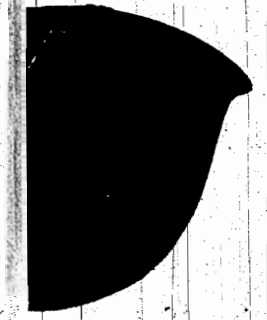
Gen. Paul L. Freeman, Continental Army Commander, last week returned to the unit he led in during the dark hours of the Korean War and was treated as a royal guest of the 23rd Infantry Regiment during its two - day observance of Unit Day.

Hundreds of troops representing the 1st and 2nd battalions of the 23rd Friday massed on Wetherby Field to honor the general, at the climax of celebrations.

As Gen. Freeman stepped to the speaker's podium, he said, "It is indeed a great thrill for me to return to Fort Benning on this Unit

The Glor

ious Past



Their tents are in tatters, torn by mortar and artillery fire. The windshields of their jeeps and trucks are holed and spiderwebbed by chunks of flying steel. Their dead lie in dust and mud and frozen earth from the Naktong to the Yellow Sea. And out of those who are left, one man out of three bears on his body the scars of old wounds, now healed. Their faces are all bone and hairy and they look like a rabble in arms, but the dead they have counted in front of their foxholes number nearly 10,000, and their killed are less than a tenth of that. In seven months of almost constant combat, the men of the 23rd Infantry Regiment have learned how to fight this war. Harold H. Martin in "The Saturday Evening Post," May 19, 1951.

Recall Past Glory Parade, Contests

Day of the 23rd Infantry Regiment.

"While it is true that our past two infantry division organizations have not carried the regiment as such in its order of battle, at least we can take great pride that we represent here today the regiment and spirit.

"And as I look at you officers and men out on the field in front of me, and the colors, I am sure that you do full justice to the traditions of your forebearers in the regiment.

The general concluded his brief remarks with best wishes for the regiment.

"The Good Things"

"To those of you who are new in the regiment, and oldtimers as well, I wish you every success and all the good things of life."

Following Gen. Freeman's remarks, and rededication and memorial ceremonies, the two battalions of the 23rd marched in review. Leading the troops representing two - thirds of the active command here were Lt. Col. Strathmore K. McMurdo, commander of the 1st battalion, and Lt. Col. Harold G. Moore Jr., commander of the 2nd.

Both Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, 2nd Division Commander, and Maj. Gen. Harry O. Kinnard, commander of the 11th Air Assault Division, were on hand for the hour - long event. Another 23rd well-wisher was Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Fort Benning commander.

Displays of equipment and uniforms worn by 23rd infantrymen in three wars were displayed following the ceremonies.

During his visit to Fort Benning for an orientation, Gen. Freeman attended several 23rd functions in connection with unit 158th birthday.

Gen. Freeman toured the division historical center where a special display case greeted him with pictures, histories and other relics of the 23rd when he commanded it.

One of the first events of Unit Day celebrations came on Thursday morning when 130 advanced individual trainees graduated from their eight weeks of infantry schooling in the regiment's 1st battalion.

Indications are that the FBLT's final production of the season, "Finian's Rainbow", will draw capacity crowds to its eight-night run on May 11-15 and 17-19.

The two-act musical play, which mixes Irish fantasy and Southern U. S. cornball, will be staged in the Playhouse, Bldg. 2519, on Main Post behind the Quartermaster Laundry.

Tickets, at 90c each, should be reserved by phoning 689-8622, 545-5641, or the Playhouse, 545-2992. Curtain time for each performance will be at 8:30 p.m.

The musical concludes the theater group's ninth consecutive season, a season which has included "The Tempest", "The Seven Year Itch", and "The Visit." An added attraction was "The Caretaker", FBLT's entry last fall in the Third Army Annual Play Competition and winner of 13 separate awards.

Immediately following "Finian's Rainbow", the group will begin the annual summer workshop with classes scheduled in all aspects of stage productions.

The workshop will include avant - garde theater productions as well as conventional plays. Membership in FBLT is open to all post personnel and their dependents who are interested in community theater. No dues or fees are asked.

"Rainbow" is directed by Wes Carr with chorus and music direction by Betty Auten and choreography by Ingo Orlamunder.

Industry Visits Field Operations

Resources Could Help Army Needs

By JIM BAKER
The Editor, 2nd Infantry Division News

Yesterday some 20 high ranking members of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation got a first hand look at how the 2nd Infantry Division operates in the field.

They were here as the result of the efforts of Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Harry W. Johnson, a representative of the Lockheed Corporation.

In a letter to Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander, Johnson explained the purpose of the trip was to familiarize the members of the corporation with the operations of the army so that they could better understand its particular problems.

Johnson is Lockheed's Senior Military Advisor in Army affairs.

Spokesman

A representative of the Lockheed of Georgia Corporation in Marietta, Ga. and a spokesman for the group of executives said the visit was basically an attempt on the part of industry to become "updated on army procedure and Army needs."

He added "Lockheed would like to work with the Army" in the development of new equipment.

He pointed to the experimental VTOL (Vertical take-off and landing) aircraft nicknamed the "Hummingbird" being developed by the Marietta plant as an example of how Lockheed was working with the Army.

Field Mess Example

A representative for Gen. Chiles said the general had expressed the desire to see a commercially manufactured field mess truck as an item of Army equipment rather than expedients presently constructed by individual units.

He used this example to show how large industry in general could come to the aid of the army in manufacturing light, mobile equipment.

"It is generally speaking true," said the Lockheed spokesman, "that we are expanding our operation to include the development of all types of Army equipment."

The Lockheed group got a first-hand look at the present division tactical operations center, army weapons and our ground surveillance equipment.

Operations Center

Lt. Col. William E. Conger, assistant chief of Staff, G-3, showed the visiting executives through the division's combat operations center and explained the function of all its components.

The G-3, intelligence section had the responsibility for giving the Lockheed representatives a look at the radar and surveillance equipment inherent to the modern day division.

2700 Indianheads Leave For Largest Maneuver in 2 Years

"CAMP SWAMPY" is the nickname tankers have for Fort Stewart where the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor is presently undergoing readiness testing. Next week it will combine with its sister battalion to take part in the armor-heavy CINQUEFOIL exercise of the 3rd Brigade. (Photo by Marv Wolf)

'Camp Swampy' Figured In Plans for Maneuver

The statement "It is possible to operate at Fort Stewart off the roads and we aim to prove it" is no idle boast among planners at the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade.

Nicknamed "Camp Swampy," by most soldiers who have ever maneuvered there, the site figured heavily as plans at the 3rd Brigade this week went ahead for the division's heaviest maneuver of the year, Exercise CINQUEFOIL.

The largest maneuver since the counterguerrilla exercises, "Swamp Fox" and "Highland Fox," the maneuver will employ 2,700 soldiers, 230 tanks and tracked vehicles, 570 wheeled vehicles and 13 aircraft.

Swift Strike

Sources close to planning officials said this is the largest maneuver employing forces of the division in a conventional battle order since the Swift Strike exercise in the summer of 1963. The main body of troops will leave for Fort Stewart tomorrow, May 1.

Monday some thirty members of the brigade departed the Fort Benning reservation to prepare the way. The main body of troops is scheduled to leave the 2nd Infantry Division tomorrow morning.

Tank Gunnery

The 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor has been at Fort Stewart for the past three weeks participating in annual tank gunnery exercises. The other armored participant in the exercise, the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor is permanently garrisoned at Fort Stewart.

The actual CINQUEFOIL exercise will take places during a period of five days from May 6 to May 12.

It will employ an advance by an armor - heavy conventional force supported by artillery. The unique feature of the CINQUEFOIL maneuver is that it will be positioned so that tanks, and

Readiness Tests Warm Up 72nd Armor for Exercise

Realism was the keynote of the Operational Readiness Tests (ORT) conducted this week by the companies of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Units of the battalion have been at Stewart for the past three weeks undergoing gunnery tests as a part of its annual field testing which will be climaxed later next month with Exercise CINQUEFOIL, scheduled for May 7-12.

CINQUEFOIL

CINQUEFOIL is an exercise designed to test the armor-heavy 3rd brigade of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Also scheduled to take part in the exercise are the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, which is permanently garrisoned at Fort Stewart and the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, a mechanized infantry battalion.

Playing the aggressor role for the company-size ORTS is the 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor.

Scenario

The scenario for the test problem saw the friendly forces advance against the stiffening aggressor resistence. The wiley aggressor played by Company B of the 72nd impersonated military policemen and even went so far as to join chowlines in order to provide a true test of friendly reactions.

The problem was characterized by strategically placed mine fields and booby traps as well as "suicide bombers" disguised as laborers to retard the conventional armor advance.

Throughout the 2-day tests snipers kept the company's reactions to combat simu-

Col. Armstrong to Leave Division In July for Washington Position

BY MARV WOLF

Col. John W. Armstrong, 3rd Brigade Commander has received orders assigning him as Chief of Enlisted assignments Branch in Washington, D.C.

Armstrong is due to depart July 26, terminating a span of some eleven months in his present assignment.

Armstrong received his first taste of the military at an early age, entering the Staunton (Va.) Military Academy at the age of 14. In 1937 he enlisted as a private in the 16th Inf. at Fort Jay (Governors Island) New York.

In 1939 he received a congressional appointment to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point.

He was graduated and commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in 1943, completing his Infantry Officers Basic Course in time to join the 9th Infantry Division as it raced across France toward the Rhine.

Armstrong, then a captain, never made it to Germany. A bullet in the leg put him in an English hospital for 19 months.

After World War II he served as a recruiting officer for a year, then returned to Europe to serve with the 27th Constabulary Squadron. When he left Europe in 1950 he returned to Ft. Benning and attended the Advanced Officers Course, after which he became a member of the Infantry Board where he was instrumental in the development of the 106mm Recoilless Rifle.

ARMSTRONG

Armstrong then returned to troop duty as commander of the 3rd Battalion of the 23rd Infantry, then stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington.

He was one of the first American officers to go to Viet Nam (1955) where he was Senior U. S. Advisor to the Vietnamese Military Academy. Here he had a hand in changing the basic concept of the institution from a purely military curriculum to an academic - engineering one.

Following this he returned to the United States Military Academy as a company Tactical Officer and later the Commandant's S-3. After three years at West Point he attended the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. From there he went

G-2 Officer Awarded Medals for Vietnam

A 2nd Infantry Division captain and a qualified Mohawk pilot Saturday was awarded seven oak clusters to the Air Medal and the Army Commendation Medal for his service in the Republic of Viet Nam.

Capt. James M. Boone, a plans, operation and training officer in the division's intelligence office, G - 2, was awarded the oak leaf clusters for flying and taking part in operational and reconnaissance missions in support of the Vietnamese government from October of 1963 to July of 1964.

He also received the Commendation Medal for his "counter insurgency effort" in Viet Nam during a period from September 1963 to August 1964.

Pinned

Lt. Col. Earl Ingram, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2 pinned the medals on Boone in a ceremony Saturday morning attended by officers and enlisted men of the section.

"It's a pleasure for me to present you this award," Ingram said. "Awards of this type don't come very often."

While serving with the 23rd Special Warfare Aviation Detachment in Viet Nam, Boone flew a OVI Mohawk on missions in a combat zone or "over hostile territory." "On various occasions his aircraft was the target of hostile small arms and automatic weapons fire," the air medal citation stated.

With the seven clusters, Boone now has a total of 305 combat hours of flying time in Viet Nam. He was awarded the Air Medal with one cluster before returning to the States.

Capt. Boone, who has 14 years in the Army, served in the enlisted ranks from the time he was activated with a Phenix City, Ala., National Guard unit in 1950 until 1957 when he was commissioned upon graduation from Officers Candidate School at Fort Benning.

He has attended airborne school, jump master's school and the Jungle Warfare School in the Canal Zone in 1959. From 1960 to 1963 he was an instructor in the department of tactics in the Aviation School at Fort Rucker, Ala.

While in Viet Nam, Capt. Boone was assigned to an OVI Mohawk Surveillance Company that supported the Vietnamese ground forces.

artillery can use live ammunition in the final stages of the exercise.

According to exercise planners and coordinators, headed by assistant division commander, Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, the maneuver is planned so troops will be arranged in the final days to permit live fire of the tank and artillery guns.

Also participating in the exercise is the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry and the 17th Artillery.

The transportaton office of the 2nd Infantry Division spent the week arranging for transportation for the men and equipment.

Maj. Richard J. Ellis, division transportation officer said that more than 50 commercial flat bed trucks will be used to move the equipment to Fort Stewart. It is also planned that some 20 chartered buses will be needed to move the men to Fort Stewart.

Unofficial sources estimated the cost of the move at $48,500.

abroad again, this time to Greece where he served in an advisory capacity. It was in Greece that Col. Armstrong became well acquainted with his present executive officer, Lt. Col. William E. Cox.

Armstrong returned to Fort Benning where he took over the 2nd Infantry Division's Support Command and then his present position, at the 3rd Brigade.

Industry

Andrew as their guide they saw the Mohawk Reconnaissance aircraft put through its paces as well as the camera-laden drone which flies out over enemy territory bringing back pictures of enemy positions and strengths.

Said the group's representative, "we have to know the army's needs before we can begin to help them."

Included in the group of visitors was Lockheed's chairman of the board, C. S. Gross, the corporation's president, D. J. Houghton, and A. C. Kotchian, executive vice - president.

Times Square USO—

Soldier's Sanctuary Off Broadway

BY JOE TREASTER

NEW YORK CITY—Less than a block off Broadway in the part of the world where the lights are perhaps the brightest, lies a sanctuary for soldiers.

The double glass doors at 132 West 43rd Street, could, it is conceivable, open into a night club, a restaurant, or a bar. The street is lined with places like that.

Where the doors darken, there might be the gateway to a posh theatre. 43rd Street has its share of places like that, too.

But when all the other double doors along the street are closed—because its late or because its Sunday — the doors at the times square USO will be open.

"We're open 365 days out of the year," said Miss Elizabeth Woodell program director. "We never close."

Well, almost never.

Working with Miss Wooddell and under the leadership of Robert L. Riddell, the executive director, are 60 volunteers — girls from 18 to 72.

They keep the Times Square USO alive from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays and from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays.

Miss Wooddell has been there ten years.

"One thing I always pride myself on," she said, "is that the USO is a place where servicemen can come right away when they have a problem.

"We've helped men with family problems, fellows who have been robbed or who have lost their money, even some fellows running away from the service have come in.

Always Someone

"There is always someone here for them to talk to."

One of the USO's latest jobs, she said, is providing a home base for servicemen in the City.

In addition, however, the Times Square USO offers military men a wide range of entertainment services.

Free tickets are available to Broadway shows, live television network programs, first run movie houses and sports events.

The USO is stocked with brochures, charts and graphs for tours around the City. Miss Wooddell said that some sight - seeing firms offer discounts.

The USO is also the place to find lodging. A number of hotels in the Times Square area offer discounts through the organization. Especially low rates are available at the Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmen's Club Inc., 283 Lexington Ave., ($1.25 a night) and at the Sloane House YMCA, 356 West 34th St., ($2.40 a night).

"We don't have anything for sale here — even soft drinks are free," Miss Wooddell said, "our job is referral. We find the services and point the service men toward them."

For most USO services, men may appear in either uniform or civilian clothes she said, "but in order to get tickets to movies you must wear your uniform," she said, "and for sight-seeing, its best to go in uniform. Many attractions are open to men in military attire at half price."

Men in uniform also may attend any baseball game at Shea Stadium simply by appearing at the press gate. The World Series, however, is an exception. Only dollars will talk then.

With the Worlds Fair in progress, Miss Wooddell said military visitors should contact the USO at least a month in advance for lodging assistance and other special services.

"We can help everyone who comes to us — last year we served nearly half a million," she said. "All we need is a little time."

Red Cross Mission Opens Door for Good Sumaritan

BY JIM LULL

"World War II was going on and my family was not involved — my brother was studying for the ministry — and I felt our family somehow needed to be a part and help."

Dorothy "Kitty" Ward, the lovely wife of Col. Ben. H. Ward, commander of the 1st Brigade, then joined the American Red Cross for overseas service. It was June of 1944.

Preferring the nickname "Kitty," Mrs. Ward spent 18 months as a Red Cross volunteer in Europe. Recalled by the Red Cross in fall of 1946, she was off to Korea, where she was to later meet her husband.

"Kitty" Ward was born in Kingsley, Iowa, a "thriving metropolis" of 1,072 persons, many of whom are "soil tenders." Her father was in the dairy business in the heart of the country's dairy belt.

The tall, attractive Mrs. Ward attended grade school and high school in Kingsley, and later continued her education by gaining a degree at Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa.

Prior to her service with the Red Cross, she taught kindergarden at a school in Nebraska.

Being a good samaritan often pays off in ways other than self - satisfaction. "Kitty" Ward is a perfect example. It was during her service with the Red Cross in fall of 1946 that she met an Army officer named Ben H. Ward — the man she was to marry two years later.

"How could I forget him?" Mrs. Ward asked. "As I served him coffee he kept emphasizing how much he couldn't stand coffee with cream and sugar!"

Following their marriage in 1948 at Denver, Colorado, Ben and Kitty were assigned to Fort Riley, Kansas.

Their first overseas tour together was in Japan from 1950 to 1953.

"It was truly a beautiful country," "Kitty" Ward explained, "however the Korean war was in progress and social life was held to a minimum."

Not a person to be idle despite existing conditions, Mrs. Ward took a position teaching with American dependents.

Two stateside assignments followed for the Ward's once again at Fort Riley and later Fort Carson, Colorado.

A call to Europe in 1956 gave "Kitty" Ward an opportunity to more fully develop her interest in the Army's protestant women of the chapel program.

She lists the highlight of her affiliation with the organization as being named the president of the European Council.

The Wards spent several months in Oberamergau Germany — and Kitty describes the time there as "wonderful."

"It was thrilling to be in Oberamergau during the time when the famous Passion Play was prepared and presented."

Carlisle Barracks and the Army War College was the next stop for the Wards, followed by an assignment to the Pentagon in 1963.

Col. Ward left for Viet Nam in 1964, and "Kitty" used the time to visit relatives in several states.

The Ward's have two sons. Don is attending the University of Tennessee in Knoxville where he is studying to be a lawyer. Harry is a commissioned lieutenant presently assigned to the 10th Infantry in the Canal Zone.

"Both my husband and I are very happy to be stationed at Fort Benning, and especially the division's 1st Brigade," "Kitty" said.

The Wards resided at 4037 Baltzell Avenue on post.

Flower Arrangements

Spring Blooms In 'Chickens, Hens'

An abundance of flowers filled the home of Mrs. Fred O. Jackson with a spring atmosphere recently at a coffee for ladies of Support Command.

The ladies of headquarters sponsored the social and Mrs. John J. Bilon, Mrs. Ross E. Leety, and Mrs. James F. Bray were hostesses.

Mrs. John H. Chiles was a guest of the ladies.

Mrs. Jackson's center table was decorated with an arrangement of pink tulips and quince blossoms while the living room glowed with an arrangement of bird of paradise and "chickens and hens."

Keeping with the spring theme, Mrs. John C. Walsh, of the 2nd Medical Battalion, demonstrated various methods of arranging flowers. Her arrangements included Fuji mums, bamboo and eucalyptus leaves; lavender mums, carnations, candy tuft and pussy willow; and a third bouquet of iris, daisies, stock and pussy willow.

Mrs. Walsh gave the ladies useful hints on the various types of containers used in displaying modern flower arrangements, the types of bases to hold the flowers and the correct method for cutting the stems.

Flowers and containers were furnished by Betty Bass Flower Shop of Columbus.

Mrs. Arthur M. Heath drew the lucky number and won a flower arrangement. The two other arrangements were presented to Mrs. Chiles and Mrs. Jackson.

Mrs. John A. Hemphill and Mrs. Robert L. Lawrence are new members of Support Command's headquarters. Mrs. John Tucker is the newest member of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

Division Grabs Army Quarterly Re-Up Prize

The Second Division's re-enlistment office was presented a Third Army award for "outstanding achievement" by Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander, early this week.

The award presented for the fiscal quarter of January to March 1965 was for the highest percentage of reenlistments in the Third Army area.

Over the cited period the division amassed a total of 23.5 per cent of the total number of eligible personnel for reenlistment. This figure was up nearly 14 per cent from the same period last year.

In presenting the award to Maj. Geatano DiCarlo, division reenlistment officer, Gen. Chiles stated that it was one of the "most gratifying accomplishments since I've been with the division to present this award for being tops in the Third Army."

Maj. DiCarlo pointed to statistics reflecting 85 of 359 eligible candidates which have extended their period of service with the U.S. Army.

"This number is significant" stated DiCarlo, "when you look at last year's statistics where we were next to the bottom in reenlistments.

He pointed to two factors which have bolstered the program in the division, command support and major unit counselors.

He said commanders are giving people opportunities to get with counselors and discuss the advantages to reenlisting." The counselors are presenting classes to units about once a month," the spokesman said "and this enables closer association with the soldiers."

The system which placed reenlistment counselors at Major Unit levels began about a year ago and has become progressively effective.

Koger Named Top Soldier At Engineers' Retreat

The Soldier of the Month Award, to the man that proved to be the division's best last month, topped the list of awards given at the 2nd Engineer Battalion's monthly review and awards ceremony held last week at Marshall Bowl Field.

Sp4 John E. Koger was credited for his "high standards of personal appearance military courtesy and knowledge of various military subjects as soldier of the month.

Certificates of achievement were handed to SFC James N. Cox and SFC Spurgeon Stanford for their engineer support in training the advanced individual trainees of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Engineer commander, Lt. Col. Alfred L. Griebling presented a letter of commendation for "outstanding assistance" in presenting the recent river crossing training to the division's infantrymen to MSgt. Calvin Lewis.

Named Driver of the Month for the battalion, and also given a letter of commendation from the engineer commander, was PFC Bobby J. Rauhuff, of Company B.

The Equipment operator of the month award was next given to PFC Charles W. Woodward of Company C for his "ability to operate and maintain various pieces of engineer equipment."

A Life of Service

Laymen Finish DeReus Project, Provide Modern, Bright Nursery

The last service in the life of a man who devoted much of his time to the service of others was recently completed.

After six months of hard work by the many friends of the late Col. Clarence C. De Reus, commanding officer of the 1st Brigade, and his wife, Alma, the "new" 2nd Division nursery has been refinished.

While serving here, Col. De Reus and his wife noticed the poor atmosphere and the sad condition of the nursery. They undertook a program to redecorate and refurnish it themselves.

After the sudden illness which struck De Reus and eventually led to his death, his many friends, along with the protestant men of the chapel, offered their time and skills to see through his design.

The nursery now gleams with a white exterior—only a clue to the work that's been done. Inside, dancing clowns and bright colored pennants brighten the air. New toys and cribs await the youngsters of the division while their parents attend church services.

Another nursery in the division is being renovated by protestant and Catholic men to serve as a Sunday nursery in building 3195.

The inside of the nursery has been completed and is open on Sunday mornings from 8:30 to 1 p.m. and on Thursdays from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

A NEW COAT OF PAINT

CERTAINLY the army never painted walls like this! But this is the eye appealing surroundings in which division youngsters will be entertained while their parents pray.

Dan Sweeney's 'View From the Hill'

An Overlooked Proposition

A rarely emphasized Army educational program which has been in existence for some five years is the enlisted man's college training program in civilian educational institutions.

This training program is designed for career-motivated soldiers who have the desire to complete college and utilize their education in their Army careers.

The government will pay for this training provided the soldier meets the following standards:

— the willingness to accept a three-year service obligation for each calendar year of college training; — be recommended by the unit commander;

— pass a National agency security check prior to final selection;

— possess minimum physical standards with a mental aptitude equivalent to a General Test (GT) score of 120. Of course the candidate must be a high school graduate or its equal.

This program seemed to ideally suit the ROTC bill passed last fall which provided that college students may now enroll in a two-year program and receive a commission as an officer in the Army.

The two pieces of legislation, the college reenlistment bill and the ROTC bill, seem like a natural together but unfortunaely they are not.

The only apparent reason proffered by education officials seems to be that an individual may not receive pay from two federal agencies as appears in this case where the EM would receive his regular active duty salary and an ROTC allotment for enrolling in the program. Actually, it would be quite simple to solve any finance problems emanating from such a situation.

A fully qualified candidate for the college reenlistment program would have complete one year of active Army service before entering college. This one year in itself is the equivalent of two years credit at any ROTC institution. Yet it is ironic, an enlisted man with seemingly all the requirements cannot become an officer via the ROTC route.

The Army stipulates that the college training must be along lines prescribed which will benefit the individual and the U. S. Army. These lines are quite liberal and varied. By merging the two bills, the Army could enhance its college program by enlisting an intelligent PFC or SPECLIAIST and if the individual so desired, give him two years of college and a commission in exchange for six years of retainability.

CBR Testing

'Indianheads' Drenched By Shots of Chemical Spray

Photos and Story by DAVE BUMAN

The men of Support Command's Headquarters Company and Band "went under the gun" this week, and they all came out wet!

The gun was a portable flame-thrower loaded with water and compressed air, and the situation was a simulated spray of unknown chemical agents.

The men were briefed on the situation, and then given 12 seconds to don protective masks and ponchos before the "attack" commenced. Very few got beyond the donning of the mask before they became "soaked" with the chemical agent.

11 Stations

The flame - thrower was just one of 11 stations in Support Command's annual Chemical, Biological, and Radiological (CBR) Proficiency Test, operated by the 184th Chemical Platoon, attached to Support Command.

Lt. Walter L. Jones, commanding officer of the 184th, explained "the stations are set up to resemble as closely as possible actual combat situations in which the individual soldier will have to call upon his knowledge of CBR to carry out his mission and save his own life."

Warning Often Heard

"GAS!" was a warning the men heard often as they walked from station to station through the woods. During all these exercizes they were being graded on the swiftness actions by score - keepers hidden in the brush.

At one station they were made to crawl under barbed wire, and then given the familiar warning, "GAS"! For most, donning the protective mask under the restriction of the wire was a real test.

Another station presented the "testee" with a fellow soldier, unconscious, and showing signs of having been inflicted with a nerve agent.

"It's not enough to be able to look after yourself" says Jones, "A soldier must know how to help the next man too."

At still other stations, the men were tested on their knowledge of the protective mask itself, the decontamination of themselves as well as food and equipment, and on the recognition of CBR agents.

"We feel," says Jones, "that if a man can complete our test with a satisfactory score, he is prepared for any CBR situation he may encounter in an actual combat situation."

THROUGH THE WASH goes a member of Support Command. The water is designed to simulate a chemical agent which the soldier must fight. Here it is sprayed from an unseen flame thrower to simulate actual conditions.

Maj. Ensley Awarded Commendation Medal

The vast job of supporting the 2nd Infantry Division headquarters as the commandant was recognized for its full worth Saturday in a short ceremony at the Indianhead Lodge.

Key officers of the division and close friends of Maj. Sherman Ensley, who has been the commandant for two years, honored him at the lodge with a cake and coffee farewell. Ensley is retiring this week after 20 years in the Army.

Maj. Ensley was awarded the Army Commendation Medal and the first oak leaf cluster for his efforts in the division from April of 1963 to the present.

As Col. Burnside E. Huffman Jr., Division Chief of Staff, pinned the medal on Ensley, he remarked, "Its a pleasure and honor for me to present this honor for a distinguished a soldier as Maj. Ensley has been for the last 20 years. We all have called on Maj. Ensley for support from time to time, and we've had very little to give in return.

"I'm certainly glad to be giving instead of taking on this occasion."

In the citation accompanying the medal, singled out was Ensley's "initiative" for instituting "reforms and practices within his area of operations which have substantially increased the division's operational efficency and combat readiness."

After his retirement, Ensley will undergo a short training course with the American Red Cross. He will live in Columbus and be a Red Cross representative in this area.

Sand Hill Pool Opens Up For 'Long, Hot Summer'

WITH a "long hot summer" just around the corner, the Sand Hill swimming pool will be the place for members of the 2nd Division to cool off when the mercury climbs to 90. The pool officially opens tomorrow at 10 a.m. Pictured here is someone getting an early start. Photo by William Smith.

As the annual plague of summer heat and humidity creeped nearer the 2nd Infantry Division this week, the final touches were put on the Sand Hill swimming pool for its May 1 opening tomorrow.

For soldiers who fail to find an air conditioned office or a shady oak for cooling off, the swimming pool across from Service Club No. 2 is swinging open its gates for the summer season tomorrow at 10 a.m.

The pool is available for soldiers, their guests and dependents — all free of charge.

As soldiers dive into the pool this year, they will find the entire basin and dressing rooms newly painted in a blue and white combination. SSgt. Thomas Powell, the non-commissioned officer in charge of the pool, said much painting, cleaning and steps for additional safety had gone into the facility this spring.

Construction which began late last season has expanded the patio area on the street side of the pool by several feet — all covered with a blanket of asphalt. Tables and chairs have been provided for relaxation.

"A snack bar will be installed on the patio in a few days — probably around May 16," Powell said.

In addition to Powell, the pool is being manned this year by a team of 11 life guards who recently underwent Red Cross life saving training on main post. "They will receive refresher training once a week to keep them qualified," Powell said.

The group of lifeguards who are attached to Headquarters Company, 2nd Medical Battalion, are Sp4 Alexander Fabris, Sp4 John W. Wallenius, Sp4 James G. Dolivo Jr., Sp4 Forest W. Snipes, Sp4 Steven E. Chapel, PFC David A. Moore, PFC Robert Brown, PFC Lyal M. Deshazo, PFC Douglas L. Laster, Pvt. Calvin K. Denham and Pvt. Iras Thompson.

The pool will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays and from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday through Friday.

Wildlife Seen At Stewart

BY MARV WOLF

A visit to nearby Fort Stewart, Georgia, reveals that Fort Benning soldiers have a "fabulous" hunting area in their own back yard.

The small contained area is surrounded by a vast forest, abounding in deer, boar, pheasant, quail and several species of fish.

The several areas of wildlife management include bow and arrow, shotgun and rifle. Last year more than 500 deer were killed and registered. Fish and wildlife officials estimated that perhaps four times that number were poached.

Season permits are available at $10 while one day permits may be obtained for $1.

Hunters interested in taking advantage of Fort Stewart's unparalleled hunting opportunities are urged to contact the Fish and Wild life Commission at Fort Stewart.

Davis Holds Top Bowling Scores As Tourney Nears Final Stages

As final bowling scores were being posted Wednesday on a chart in the Sand Hill Lanes, it appeared that Samuel Davis, a bowler from Company C, 313th ASA Battalion, would be the winner for individual effort.

Davis held the winning mark in both single and three-game and nine - game series this week as the division bowling championships neared the final stages.

Davis, who bowled early in the tournament, last week turned in a 246 single and a 630 series that have not been topped thus far. He heads the nine-game series with a 1721. Final games of the tournament were to be bowled Thursday.

In team bowling, a team from the 2nd MP Company also held onto the top score they had turned in last week — a 8088. A 313th ASA team is second in team competition with a 7903. In third and fourth places, respectively, are teams from Company B, Supply and Transport Battalion (7705), and the 2nd Administration Company (7670).

The only mark that approached Davis' high single game this week was a 240 turned in by Joseph Smith, of Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry. Other high singles were bowled by Richard Cahanaugh, 2nd MP Company (234), Joseph Maracio, Headquarters, Support Command (226), and Jerry Williams, Battery C, 17th Artillery (225).

In the three-game series, John Raaum, of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, follows Davis with a 604. John Weber, Headquarters, Support Command, has a 599 followed by Jerry Thomas, an MP, with a 597.

Next in line to Davis in the nine-game series is Henry Daniels, of the engineer battalion, with a 1648. Charles Shaffer, also of 313th ASA, fell one pin behind Daniels — a 1647. Weber totaled 1634 for nine games.

Three more teams were to try for stakes in the tournament Thursday — Headquarters, 1st Brigade; Headquarters, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry; and B Company, 2nd of the 9th.

Games are being bowled on the Sand Hill Lanes.

Shatters Three Standing World Lift Records

Giant Flying Crane Shatters Records

The Army's giant CH-54A Flying Crane from the 478th Flying Crane Company, 44th Air Transport Battalion has recently shattered three standing world records for heavy lift helicopters during a series of flights at the Sikorsky Helicopter plant in Stratford, Conn.

The massive Army helicopter broke two records that were formerly held by the Russians and one held by the U.S. Air Force.

There are various categories in the heavy lift competition. The records that were assaulted were the 1,000, 2,000 and 5,000 kilogram weight divisions.

The 5,000 kilogram (11,025 pounds) record was lifted to a height of 18,915 feet by the Russian Mi-6 on April 16, 1959. That record was broken by the Flying Crane when it lifted its load to an altitude of 21,250 feet.

The huge helicopter then climbed to 27,550 feet carrying a 2,000 kilogram (4,410 pounds) load to break the existing record of 19,744 feet originally held by a Russian Mi-4.

On May 25, 1961 the Air Force established the 1,000 kilogram (2,205 pounds) record by flying their H-43B Husky to 26,369 feet. The Army overtook this record when the Flying Crane flew to an altitude of 29,250 feet with its 2,205 pound passenger van slung beneath the helicopter's fuselage.

An official of the National Aeronautic Association, the U. S. member of the Federation Aeronautique International, was present to direct the flights in accordance with the international rules.

It would appear that the 478th was not content to establish these records but while they were being established in Connecticut two other cranes from the company were at Fort Bragg, N.C. makaing an unofficial assault on a free world record for the number of personnel carried aloft on one flight in a rotary winged aircraft. The Flying Crane carried 72 combat equipped troops in its detachable personnel van.

Division Elements Plunge Into Non-Test Maneuver

BY JOE TREASTER

CAMP DRUM, N. Y. — With the start of exercise ONEIDA BEAR II tomorrow elements of the 11th Air Assault Division plunge into the first non-test maneuver in the unit's history.

The twenty-one aircraft of Maj. Robert Mills' Company A, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion are scheduled to support both friendly and aggressor forces in the five-day maneuver.

The mock war — an official said, is designed to provide realistic field training to regular Army soldiers from Fort Deveins, Mass. and to reserve National Guard units form New Jersey and New Work.

"We expect to utilize our entire range of capabilities—including air assault, troop transport, and supply and resupply — in assisting both sides," Maj. Mills said.

The division, which was established by the Army to test and evaluate the air mobile concept, completed its "final exam" field problem late last fall.

Division soldiers began arriving at Camp Drum — some 20 miles from the Canadian border — last week.

Among the first to arrive were men of the 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion Detachment — seventeen senior maintenance specialists with their equipment came in fourteen CARIBOUS—and the 408th Supply and Service Battalion.

The service battalion men set up a helicopter refueling point at the edge of Camp Drums Wheeler - Sack Airfield, using two 10,000 - gallon neoprene gasoline tanks.

When Maj. Mills' company reached the camp Tuesday evening the first stop was at the field gas station.

Bell Engineer

Like 'Mary's Lamb' He's Following Hueys

CAMP DRUM, New York—When the helicopters of the 11th Air Assault Division dive into exercise ONEIDA BEAR II tomorrow (Saturday — May 1, 1965, a quiet, pensive man in civilian clothes will be watching with more than casual interest.

It's something Walter McKeown, an engineer for Bell Helicopter Company, has been doing since last June.

Like Mary's little lamb, everywhere the men and machines of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, go, McKeown is sure to go.

As a part of the aircraft firm's customer service division, McKeown must keep a constant eye on the battalion's UH-1D HUEY helicopters. His job is to find flaws in the aircraft, then recommend changes in design.

"The object of our work is to give the Army a better aircraft", he said. "With someone constantly there, watching, observing, the company can improve the aircraft's real requirements while it is still in production".

McKoven said he is one of four Bell representatives who have been with the air assault units since their inception, as part of a program labeled RAISE — Relyability Accelerated In Service Echelon.

Improvements he and others have recommended include a rotor with four foot greater span which gives bet-

Chinook to Be Shown In Europe Air Shows

A CH-47A Chinook helicopter from the 11th Air Assault's Provisional Helicopter Company will leave post early next month to be transported to Europe where it will represent U. S. Army aviation at the French and German air shows.

The Chinook will be used in static displays and flight demonstrations at the European air shows during the months of May and June.

The crew which will demonstrate the CH-47 helicopter throughout Europe will be Captains John R. Telfer, and Joe Breedlove while the flight engineers are Sp6 James R. Mooney and Sp5 James L. Shirley.

The aircraft is scheduled to depart via ship from the Philadelphia Navy Yard on May 6. It is scheduled to reach the port of Bremerhaven, Germany on May 24.

The proposed itinerary for the trip calls for the aircraft to be used in demonstrations and flights at the German Annual Helicopter Forum in Buckeburg, Germany on June 2-3. Then on to Bonn, the capital of Germany and next to Heidelberg, Germany on June 5-6.

Following the demonstrations in Germany the Chinook will be flown to Paris, France for the world famous Paris Air Show. The crews will have the mission of demonstrating the numerous cargo and troop carrying capabilities of the Chinook during the air show which will take place June 11 and 12.

Following the air show in Paris the aircraft will retrace its path back through Heilelberg, Bonn, Buckeburg and again to the port of Bremerhaven.

The crew and their aircraft are scheduled to return by ship on July 1, but according to Capt. Telfer who is in charge of arrangements for the trip there is a possibility the aircraft and men will remain in Europe beyond that date to give aerial demonstrations to U. S. Army installations throughout western Europe.

Maintenance Team Off to Camp Drum For Onieda Bear II

On Sunday, April 25, twenty - one maintenance men from Company C, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion left for Camp Drum, N.Y. The group is participating in the ONEIDA BEAR II maneuvers, providing field maintenance support for elements of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion.

Led by CWO Carl Carrier and SP6 Jack Roberts, the men departed via Caribou transport Sunday after weeks of careful planning to assure mission completion.

Blood Donors Bring Thanks From CG

I wish to express my appreciation to all Sky Soldiers for the exceptional response during the recent American Red Cross Blood Donor Drive. Once again Sky Soldiers have displayed outstanding spirit by donating 758 pints of blood, more than has ever been donated by the Division during any previous drive. My thanks again for your support of this important endeavor.

Division's Volleyball Champs 2nd in Post-Wide Tourney

Bravo Company, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, the 11th Air Assault Division Volleyball Champions took second place in the Fort Benning Volleyball Tournament behind the winning 41st Airborne Company. Battery "C", 15th Artillery, runners-up in the Division Tournament finished third in the Post Tournament.

The team from the "KANIENGAHAGA" battalion lost their opener to the 41st Airborne Company, the eventual winners, and then went on to eliminate teams from the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry and the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry who were representing the 2nd Infantry Division. They also eliminated the Center Troop Command team representing the Infantry Center and their old arch-rivals from the Division Tournament the 15th Artillery as they fought their way into the finals against the Airborne Company.

Bravo Company played their best but couldn't contain the 41st who have now won the Post Tournament for five consecutive years.

The "KANIENGAHAGA" team was composed of SSgt's. Lorenzo C. Galiza, Harold N. Spencer; Sergeants Martin C. Cloud, Lemanuel Jones, Freddy E. King, Patrick M. Lynch, Eduardo G. Ramirez and PFC Phillip R. McClure.

ter lift potential and better weapons support, and communications systems.

On the basis of experience with the helicopter, McKeown said, "Bell has begun testing a 1400 horse-power engine which could eventually replace the 1100 horse-power one now in use."

He described the UH - 1D — the largest form of the HUEY, designed as a troop carrier — as a "growth" helicopter. "The HUEY, he said, is one of the few aircraft built originally to the Army's specifications which has been adopted, with some modification, by the Marines and Air Force."

"Germany, Japan and Australia are also using the helicopter", McKeown said.

1st Brigaders Train Ranger Cadremen

Sky Soldiers of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry served as instructors last week for cadremen from the Army Ranger Department, and qualified eight of the Ranger instructors.

The Marnemen, who have successfully qualified more than 700 soldiers as qualified rappellers, paced the rangers through a modified course which consisted of basic rappelling concepts, tower qualification and required helicopter descents.

Although rappelling in general is nothing new to the Ranger School personnel, descending from a hovering chopper was a refreshing and novel experience, and all of the rangers seemed to enjoy it.

Led by Lt. Col. Hugh A. Ross, commander of the Florida Ranger Camp, the class received their initial orientation and tower training Tuesday, followed by the three qualifying helicopter descents Thursday.

Good Conduct Cited By Little John Unit

Six personnel of the 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery have been awarded the Good Conduct Medal.

Receiving the Good Conduct Medal for the second time were SP6 William I. Gregoire, Sgt. Nathaniel E. Guydon and PFC Frank Bell, all of Headquarters and Service Battery.

First time winners of the award are SP5 Lawrence G. Fields and SP4 Michael E. Collins of Headquarters and Service Battery and SP4 Robert W. Jones of Battery B.

went off smoothly", said Maj. Mills. "It took about 15 minutes—a little longer than usual — but that was because there were only ten refueling points set up here. Usually we have sixteen," he said.

Scores of curious Camp Drum soldiers cranked their eyes skyward late Tuesday as the Company A fleet transformed from what seemed in the distance to be a great flock of Canadian - bound geese to a four-abreast formation of air-pounding helicopters.

Directly over Wheeler - Sack Airfield the helicopters peeled off singlefile, circled behind the principal hangar and control tower and — at lower than tree-top level, angled toward refueling points. "It must be a show", said one sergeant. "Those smart guys are trying to impress us".

It was no show as Maj. Mills made clear later; simply routine operation for an air assault company: "Except for the bad weather the trip from Fort Benning was a complete success," said Maj. Mills.

Although the fliers left Fort Benning Saturday and did not arrive until Tuesday, Maj. Mills said total time in the air was only thirteen hours. They were weathered in for two days in Fort Bevoir, Va.

"We would have made it in one and one-half hours less time", he said, "but the weather forced us to take a circuitous route, up the Hudson River over the Mohawk Valley".

Along the way, they made seven stops for either fuel or over-night accommodations.

"We received outstanding service at every airport," Maj. Mills said. "We were really treated right".

One of the helicopters, piloted by Capt. Richard Weeks, the company's maintenance officer, incurred minor difficulties in its hydraulic system and arrived some ten minutes behind the main group.

Earlier Tuesday, Lt. Col. Jack Cranford, commanding officer of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, arrived at Camp Drum in his personal helicopter. He said he would remain until the exercise was completed May 5, "strictly" as an observer.

Col. Cranford and Maj. Mills spent Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning in briefing sessions with maneuver officials.

Late Wednesday morning they flew over the mock battlefield with the Assistant Deputy Director of the exercise ONEIDA BEAR II, Col. Henry L. Walton.

Vast Firepower, Shock Action Shown at Concord OP

BY MIKE GERSHON

The vast firepower, mobility, flexibility and shock action of the 11th Air Assault Division was demonstrated this week at the Concord OP. Thousands of spectators turned out to observe first hand the Sky Soldiers in action.

Every facit of air assault operations was shown to include live firing from the division's aircraft and howitzers.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th opened the 75 minute program with a brief welcoming speech in which he explained the mission of the division.

He then turned the program over to Lt. Col. Harold G. Moore, commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, who explained the techniques of an air assault rifle squad.

The remainder of the demonstration was narrated by Col. Thomas W. Brown, commanding officer, 2nd Air Assault Brigade. He used charts to show the enemy positions.

Aerial reconnaisance was performed by the OV-1 Mohawk and reported enemy concentrations on hill "C".

Air cavalry scouts in OH-13 helicopters began observation of the forward area and used evasive movement and fire to draw the enemy's attention.

A tank was spotted in area "C" and a UH-1 helicopter equipped with the SS-11 wire guided rocket fired a direct hit on the armored vehicle.

Area "A" was secured by an infantry rifle platoon and an artillery battery of four M102 howitzers was stationed to their left.

A new threat arose to the ground troops and TAC AIR strikes pounded the ground target. Smoke screens were laid down by Mohawks.

A heavy base of artillery fire from outlying howitzers was centered on area "C" followed by armed escort ships equipped with machine guns and 2.75 aerial rockets.

Sixteen troop carrying helicopters landed in area "B" and began their ground attack.

A medical evacuation helicopter sped in to air lift the wounded.

One of the most important phases in any combat operation is the re-supply of the field troops. This was accomplished by a UH-1 helicopter sling loading in a 250 gallon fuel bag and CV - 2 Caribous dropping ammunition.

Prior to the LOLEX by the Caribous, four Pathfinders parachuted into the area from helicopter.

They immediately established radio contact with the aircraft and set ground markers in the drop zone.

The Caribous, directed by the Pathfinders, dropped two pallets of ammunition directly within the marked area.

A fire broke out near the refueling area and the crash rescue-fire fighting team was brought in. The fire was extinguished by the use of the fire suppression kit called the "SPUTNIK".

Cavalry troops rappelled into a wooded area to the left front of the spectators.

The people in the bleachers were pitted as the enemy for the final phase of the demonstration. Two UH-1B helicopters armed with machine guns attacked the spectators. The guns contained blanks, but to add realism to the attack, charges were placed in the ground and were detinated simultaneously with the machinegun firing.

A complete company of helicopters landed in front of the bleachers and the troops, screaming and yelling, attacked the spectators.

The entire demonstration came to an end the way it had started with the infantrymen on guard with fixed bayonets.

The air assault demonstrations, though mainly encompased the use of aircraft, pointed out that the foot soldier is still the most important part of the Army. The fact is that they are able to get to their objective faster and fresher.

Sky Soldiers of the division plus thousands of guests went away perhaps a little more informed of what the division has accomplished in over two years of testing and how proficient its personnel are.

1st Brigade Rakkasans Jump In After Big Week at Fort Stewart

Rakkasan paratroopers of the 1st Air Assault Brigade dropped in Saturday afternoon, and that is literally "dropped in" on Fort Benning's Lee Drop Zone at 3:05 p.m., following an outstanding week of solid training at Stewart, Ga.

The airborne assault Saturday climaxed what was probably the most beneficial week of training since AIR ASSAULT II for troopers of the 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry, who worked without letup throughout the six day period.

Commenting on the trip following the drop, Rak Commander, Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark outlined the various aspects of the training covered, "Just what we needed, I wouldn't take anything for what we have achieved this week."

The hard work began last Monday after the Raks had flown to Stewart and began setting up their living accomodations in the cantonement area and main base of operations.

Heavy training commenced before dawn Tuesday as the troops departed for the ranges, bayonet assault courses and the various training areas which saw constant action through the week.

The smooth and efficient manner in which the troops were galvanized into action to meet the tight and demanding schedule was impressive as the small units progressed through each of the required stages, attaining a requisite state of proficiency at each stage before moving on to the next.

It was the Raks first opportunity in ages to really work out on their assigned weapons with live ammunition, and they made the most of it, firing incredible amounts of ammo, with marked progress in all categories.

While M-79 Grenade Launchers and M-72 LAW Rocket Launchers were being fired on Range D, the M-60 Machineguns were getting a workout on Range G. Elsewhere, Rakkasans were running an exhaustive dual-bayonet assault course while still others were negotiating a difficult map and compass course.

The three sections of the 187th Mortar Platoon fired continuously during the week, acquiring an almost unbelievable degree of speed and accuracy in such a brief period.

Col. Clark had particularly high praise for Sgt. Kenneth L. Watson's 81mm Mortar Section, which achieved record speed in a displacement, moving the gun between positions and firing in slightly less than two minutes and thirty seconds.

The squad and platoon live fire problems, like the rugged bayonet course, provided a realistic and exhaustive training vehicle, which improved an already high state of familiarization, but also lent itself to physical conditioning, demanding the utmost in physical endurance.

On Thursday the Raks were host to the Brigade Commander, Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, who paid an informal inspection visit and viewed every phase of the training program, and in one instance, participated.

Accompanied by Col. Clark, the two colonels observed qualification firing of the M-72 and the M79 on Range D, and in the final firing order, both fired the two weapons.

Dead shots, both of them, all rounds including the practice rounds for both the grenade launcher and rocket launcher scored direct hits on a track retreiver which was being used as a target.

Following the bout on Range D, Col. Hennessey inspected the M-60 Machinegun firing, the bayonet assault courses, a platoon live-firing problem and the 81mm Mortar Range, observing first hand the operations, and talking with the troops.

Housed on the reservation in Quonset huts during their stay at Stewart, the troops had access to most of the installation's facilities, including the theater, service club and post exchange.

After a thorough cleaning up period and police of the area Friday afternoon, the Raks moved into a marshalling phase for the parachute operation Saturday.

Utilizing 11 C-119 air transports, the troopers flew out of Liberty Army Airfield Saturday noon, on their last mission of the week. Right on time, at 3:05 p.m., the sky over Lee DZ filled with blossoming parachutes, marking an end to the roughest week of training this year.

10TH ATB RE-UP TROPHY . . . Lt. Col. Gregory Olney (right), commanding officer, 10th Air Transport Brigade presents the Reenlistment Trophy for the month of March to Capt. William E. 187th Airplanes Complete Intensive Field Training

The 187th Transport Airplane Company, commanded by Maj. Willis B. Anderson, recently concluded a week of intensive field training at Plains, Ga.

Deployed with minimum essential equipment, the 187th conducted tactical training in all phases of Air Assault transport operations. To add to the realism of the exercise, CBR agents were used extensively, and the 187th frequently gave the appearance that a force from outer space had landed in their unimproved cow pasture near Plains, as they continued normal operations with their eerie-looking protective masks on.

Although the small unit defensive tactics employed by the 187th were impressive, the flight training conducted during the exercise was even more impressive. Emphasis was placed on day and night STOL approaches to a 1400 foot unprepared field strip both under VFR and simulated IFR conditions in addition to LOLEX aerial delivery of cargo.

Due to the outstanding efforts of the airfield control section, the aircraft maintenance section, airfield operations and flight crews, the 187th logged over 560 takeoffs and landings, 104 ground controlled approaches, and 103 LOLEX approaches.

During the hours of airfield operation, the 187th averaged one take-off or approach every two minutes and forty seconds, which means according to best available figures, for the period of April 19 thru 23, 1965, a cow pasture near Plains, Ga. was the seventh busiest airfield in the United States.

The recently concluded exercise was one of the most rewarding exercises conducted by the 187th, and a tremendous amount of experience was gained by all involved.

Thrifty 42nd Artillery Earns 3rd Army Praise

Battery C, 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery was presented three coveted Third Army savings awards here recently.

The awards are the Third Army Commander's Savings Bond Citation, Silver Citation and Special Citation. They were presented to Battery C by the 42nd Artillery Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber."

Two of the awards (the Commander's Savings Bond Citation and the Silver Citation) were in recognition of 82.95 per cent participation by personnel of Battery C in the Army's Savings Bond Program. The third (the Special Savings Citation) was for the unit's 84.07 per cent participation figure in the Army's overall savings program (to include Soldier's Deposits).

The citations on the awards lauded Battery C for "outstanding partiotic service to the nation through participation in the US Army savings program." All three certificates were signed by Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, the Third Army commander.

Accepting the savings awards on behalf of Battery C were Capt. Loyal G. Hightower, Jr. and 1st Sgt. Leroy Smith.

Formation Light Tested at 229th

Bravo Company of the 229th "Stacked Deck Battalion" is testing a new type of formation light which is completely invisible from the ground. Under the direction of Capt. Eugene S. Emmer, the testing was intensified last week.

The whole idea is to keep anyone on the ground from seeing the formation, but also allowing the pilots to see other helicopters in the formation. With this system, the light bulbs are recessed in short tubes which are pointed so as to direct light from the bulb to only those areas where light is desired.

Jump Qualified

1st Lt. John J. Danner of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, who just completed jump school, returned to his duties as Platoon Leader in the 1st Platoon of Company B last week.

Pathfinders Join 229th Aviators In Joint Tests

Bravo Company of the 229th "Stacked Deck" Assault Helicopter Battalion spent a night recently practicing night landings into a field site. The unusual part about this is that the majority of the Pathfinders used were new and inexperienced, guided by one "older" Pathfinder. It was good training for the pilots and Pathfinders alike, both getting practice in radio procedures, air to ground navigation, ground to air navigation, the art of "talking" aircraft into an area from the ground by correctly interpreting visual and audio contact with the aircraft, a system which has been developed by the 229th and the 11th Air Assault Aviation Group Pathfinders. Single and formation landings were practiced.

This is the second time in recent weeks the two units have made full use of time for joint training. Earlier this week, Bravo Company Aviators took the "black hats", ("Pathfinders"), out for parachute training.

188th Infantry Platoons End Army Training Test

Last week the "Eagles" of the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, completed the Platoon Army Training Tests. The ATT, prepared and directed by the battalion intelligence officer, Capt. Charles B. Stone, was designed to test the conduct and reactions of the platoon leaders and their rifle platoon during a night raid.

The test proved to be a rigorous one, involving long night marches through the swamps and under the rain but according to Capt. Stone the "Eagles" performed in an outstanding manner.

The platoons left the battalion area in the late afternoon and upon arrival at an assembly area were briefed in their mission: to conduct a night raid on an enemy location and to move immediately after the raid into a blocking position to stop enemy reinforcements. During the problem the platoons met with different obstacles such as observation posts, ambushes and artillery fire and their reaction to the specific situation was graded by the accompanying controllers. Major emphasis was placed on accomplishment of the assigned mission.

After executing the blocking mission the platoons moved to a helicopter pick-up zone or, if the initial zone was endangered by the aggressors, to an alternate point. The problem ended when the platoons were picked up and returned to garrison, usually about dawn.

The platoons were supported during the ATT by medical and communication personnel from Headquarters Company.

The graders, under the direction of SFC Ross Spangler of Headquarters Company, were NCO's of Delta Company, were NCO's of Delta Company. The aggressors were members of the Mortar Platoon, also part of Delta Company.

Operations Sergeant Praised By 228th

At retreat formation on April 16, 1965, Maj. Bobbie E. Bogard, commanding officer of Company B, of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, presented to SP6 John L. Haycox, operations sergeant, a letter of appreciation for his accomplishments in the operations section since his assignment to the unit in January, 1965.

The letter read in part, "It is felt that your personnel outstanding display of pride and interest in your assignment as operations sergeant and the conscientious performance of all assignments and tasks materially contributed to the high state of maintenance in Company B, as evidence by a rating of superior for the Third United States Army Command Maintenance Material Inspection in February, 1965 and again for the Division Annual General Inspection conducted in April 1965."

Sp6 Haycox entered the Army at Camp Beckenridge, Ky. in September, 1948. From this time through March, 1956 he had various assignments in CONUS and the Far East including a tour with the United Nations Headquarters.

In 1956 Haycox entered the field of Army Aviation as a CH-21 helicopter crew chief with the VIF flight at Fort Belvoir, Va.; In February, 1961 he transferred to Alaska and for the next three years served as a crew chief on CH-21 helicopters.

Upon returning to the States in 1964 he attended courses at Fort Eustis, Va., enroute to the 11th Air Assault Division. Specialist Haycox joined the 228th during the Air Assault Test in the Carolina's and served as a crew chief on a CH-47 in Tiger company. In January, 1965 he joined Company B, as operations sergeant and is presently serving in that capacity.

Rakkasan 'Jones Boys' Compete for Top Honors

Rakkasan Jones boys, Sp4 Thomas R. Jones of Company C, and Sp4 Edward R. Jones of Company B in the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry are in keen competition these days, with both boys trying for top achievements within the battalion.

Tom Jones first came to attention three weeks ago after he was taken off Company C's Guard Duty Roster for having been selected Colonel's Orderly thirteen times for being the most outstanding soldier at Guard Mount-ing.

Ed Jones, upon hearing this, came up with figures to support the fact that he had been selected Colonel's Orderly thirty times, which gave him the individual record in the 187th.

In retaliation, Tom Jones bounced back two weeks ago to outclass all competition in the 187th to become Rakkasan Soldier of the Month, and was narrowly beaten out for the 1st Brigade SOM title.

An automatic rifleman in Rakkasan Company B, Ed Jones enlisted in the Army in 1959, and took his basic Infantry training here at Fort Benning.

Tom Jones is a radio-telephone operator with Rak Company C, and enlisted in the Army in May 1963, taking his basic training at Fort Ord, California, and upon completion of his initial training, joined the 187th.

11th Aviation Group Cites New CWO for Heroism

WO James S. Neal recently received the dual honor of promotion to Chief Warrant Officer and the Army Commendation Medal for heroism. Making the awards was his Commanding Officer, Maj. Paul E. Carpenter, in charge of the 11th Aviation Company (General Support), 11th Air Assault Division.

CWO Neal was involved in the rescue of the crew and passengers of a crashed Army helicopter in a recent Air Assault field exercise. The lead troop carrying (UH-1D) helicopter in a flight of four, in which CWO Neal was flying, crashed into trees on a formation take-off.

After immediately landing his own aircraft, WO Neal dashed over to the crash with fire extinguisher and first aid kit and began removing the occupants from the crash. The engine was still running and fuel was spewing from ruptured lines which at any moment could explode to add to the dangers involved. Upon removal of all personnel, WO Neal administered aid to severely bleeding wounds.

Through this act of bravery he was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for valor. CWO Neal is a recently returned Army helicopter pilot from Vietnam, where he flew combat support missions in the Delta south of Saigon.

Before entering the military, James Neal, was a motion picture and television actor of some promise. He played in such movies as "Come September", with Rock Hudson and Bobby Darrin, and also some parts in the television program "Father Knows Best".

In 1962, he entered the Army, applied for Warrant Office Candidate School after basic training, and held the distinction at the time of the youngest Army Aviator at 21-yeas of age.

511th Chaplain Pulls KP For Top Bible Scholar

"I'll pull one day for KP for the winner," said Chap. La Vern Gardai of the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry. This statement was made by Chap. Gardai as he was describing the benefits that would accrue the winner of the battalion "Open Bible Contest."

A unique approach to teaching religion, Chap. Gardai conceived and implemented the idea of a Bible contest to stimulate the interest of the 511th Infantry troops in the Bible.

The contest was open to all members of the battalion and was given command support throughout the unit. The test consisted of 36 questions, taken from the Old Testament. Approximately 500 members of the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry were administered the test.

Chap. Gardai appeared to be rescued from the KP detail when the contest was won by MSgt. Duke Cranford, who hasn't pulled KP in quite a while. However, conscience overtook the good chaplain and he decided to perform KP for the second place winner, PFC Wallace Tomkins.

The contest produced three winners. First prize went to MSgt. Duke Cranford, the battalion S-2 sergeant, who missed only one question out of 36. Second place was a tangle. Three men were tied for the runner-up spot with two misses out of 36. The names were placed in a hat and the winner of five dollars and the chaplain's services on KP was, PFC Wallace Tomkins. The two who remained went to the hat again to decide the third place winner. When the names came out, the victor was PFC Paul Harper and the third place prize of three dollars went in his pocket.

Chaplain Gardai plans another Bible contest soon. It will be harder, he says, but one of the prizes will not be his services as K.P.

42nd Men Dominate DivArty SOM Title

The 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery continues to dominate the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery Soldier of the Month competition, as SP4 Robert J. McNamara of Battery B brought home the honors for the month of April, making it four straight in 1965 for the 42nd Artillery.

In winning the Division Artillery title, SP4 McNamara will now go on to compete for the 11th Air Assault Division Soldier of the Month award, as have three 42nd Artillerymen in the preceding three months. In addition, he will receive an engraved plaque and a three day pass from the Division Artillery Commander.

Previously, SP4 McNamara, a Fire Direction Computer for Battery B, received a three day pass authorization and an engraved lighter from his Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, for capturing the 42nd Artillery Soldier of the Month laurels for April.

SP4 McNamara followed the example of fellow Battery B Fire Direction Computer, SP5 Donald C. Fleming who was named DivArty Soldier of the Month in January.

Marnemen Show Infantry's Punch

1st Brigade Marnemen from Company C of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry demonstrated the Air Assault Infantry's punch last Thursday afternoon for Maj. Gen. Otto Blixenkrone-Moller of Denmark during the Danish General's visit to Fort Benning and the 11th Air Assault Division.

Staged in front of Division headquarters, the demonstration consisted of a "lean and mean" briefing by a rifle squad and a weapons squad which performed with weapons and equipment while Capt. Billy L. Whorton simultaneously explained the makeup and role of the air assault Infantry battalion.

Following the briefing Capt. Whorton escorted the 2-star Danish general through a static display of sky soldier equipment, after which a special 38th Rappelling Team raced into the area in helicopters, descending in front of the General. All of the Marnemen were from Company C.

'Doughboys' Laid to Rest By Army's Sports Policy

By PFC Russ Havourd

The Fort Benning "Doughboys," 1964 Interservice Football Champions and Missile Bowl winners, have been officially "laid to rest" in compliance with the Department of the Army's new sports policy.

According to the directive, morale benefits gained from installation-level sports does not justify the time expended by athletes and management personnel required to support such teams (except for those sports involving international participation).

Last year's season was very successful for the "Doughboys."

Playing the toughest schedule in interservice football, they rode to a 10 - 1 record and two championships. The "Big Blue" marched over powers like Fort Campbell's (Ky.) "Screaming Eagles", Fort Bragg's (N. C.) "Dragons", and the "Goshawks," of Lackland Air Force Base, Tex.

Stumbling only once late in the year, they fell before the Fort Eustis, Va., "Wheels", 7-6, only to avenge the loss in the Missile Bowl at Orlando, Fla.

Pride ran high in Doughboy Stadium on Saturday nights as names like Billy Williamson, George Walstad, Dave Sarette, Roger Reynolds and Pat Dye, Army Times' Most Valuable Player, took the field for Fort Benning.

Special Services officials announced that with the "Doughboys" gone, football, along with other major sports, will be conducted at unit level.

Steps are already underway to provide an extensive flag-football tournament to meet requirements of the new policy calling for wide-spread participation at all levels.

Training Conference Planned For Adult Boy Scout Leaders

Continuing its adult education program, the Fort Benning District, Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America will conduct a Boy Scout Leaders' Training Conference at Bldg. 4, USAIC from 1 to 9:30 p.m. on Saturday, May 29.

The Leadership Training Conference follows another highly successful adult training session held at Fort Benning May 1st. This was the SHOWANDO (Show and Do) event which attracted more than 100 adults from the 12 districts of the Chattahoochee Council.

Open to all adult scouting leaders (military and civilian) as well as interested adults not previously in the scouting program, the Leadership Conference will offer courses in a variety of scouting subjects.

These include basic training, leadership, advancement, troop committee and training of junior leaders in the patrol method. Each course in the training session will last approximately two hours.

Highlighting the training conference will be an address by Brig. Gen. J. M. Wright Jr. during the dinner hour.

Gen. Wright is an assistant division commander of the 11th AAD and chairman of the Fort Benning District Committee.

Additional details about the Adult Leaders' Training Conference can be obtained by contacting Chaplain (Capt.) C. R. Gibbs at 545-6809 during duty hours and 689-8573 during evenings and weekends.

General Heintges Invites Residents To Open House

Armed Forces Day open house at Fort Benning May 15 will give residents of the civilian community an opportunity to see "the fighting man's power for peace."

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, post commander, is utilizing all news media to invite residents to return this year for a bigger and better program and to urge those who did not come in 1964 to take advantage of this opportunity to closely inspect the soldier, his training and his equipment.

Last year, more than 10,000 visitors from the Chattahoochee Valley area took advantage of the first open house to be held at Fort Benning in over 10 years. During previous years, Armed Forces Week observance here had been concentrated in the downtown Columbus area with static displays of equipment.

Open House activities will begin at 9 a.m. at Lawson Army Airfield and will continue until 5 p.m.

There will be two main shows at 10:30 a.m. and 3 p.m., static displays of aircraft, weapons and equipment, rides for children and a junior jump tower.

The main show will feature an artillery fire demonstra-

Medal of Honor, DSC Winners

Five Buildings Named to Honor War Heroes

Four men who were posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor and one who received the Distinguished Service Cross will have buildings named for them at Fort Benning.

Officer candidate barracks, Bldg. 2760-A, 2762-A and 2762-B, will be named for 1st Lt. Jimmie W. Monteith Jr., 1st Lt. Bernard J. Ray and 2nd Lt. Paul F. Riordan, each awarded the Medal of Honor. They were graduates of the officer candidate program.

Branch Library No. 6 on Kelley Hill will be named for 1st Lt. Lee R. Hartell, also a Medal of Honor holder.

Airborne classroom, Bldg. 4402, will be known as McCarthy Hall, honoring the late Capt. Thomas W. McCarthy, posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

It is the policy of the post to memorialize deceased Medal of Honor and Distinguished Service Cross recipients by naming buildings or natural topographical features for them. Roads, trails and permanent heliports are named for famous battles, division designations or division nicknames.

Lt. Monteith, who entered the service at Richmond, Va., distinguished himself in action June 6, 1944, near Colleville-sur-Mer, France, with the 16th Inf., 1st Inf. Div.

After landing on the coast with an assault wave, he personally led two tanks, on foot, through a mine field and into a firing position, and continuously crossed and recrossed open terrain under fire to strengthen links in the defensive chain of his company, according to reports.

He was finally surrounded and killed while attempting to lead his unit out of the situation.

Lt. Ray was cited for an act of supreme sacrifice in which he deliberately armed himself as a demolition unit to open a way for his men. He was a member of Co. F, 7th Inf., 4th Inf. Div., near Schevenhutte, Germany, Nov. 17, 1944.

A platoon leader during a drive through Hurtgen Forest, he carried out a self-imposed mission of blasting a path through a wire barrier, reports said. He placed explosive caps in his pockets, wrapped primer cord about his body, approached the barrier, and pressed the handle of a charger, convinced there was no time to place the explosives and get to safety.

Another World War II hero, Lt. Riordan received the Medal of Honor for bravery Feb. 3-8, 1944, near Cassino, Italy. He led an assault platoon in the advance on that city, committing numerous acts of valiancy, culminating in a singlehanded approach to an enemy stronghold where he was finally

Lt. Hartell was awarded the Medal of Honor for his action in Korea Aug. 27, 1951. A member of Battery A, 15th Field Arty. Bn., 2nd Inf. Div., he was attached to Co. B, 9th Inf. Regt., as a forward observer. He stemmed the onslaught of the enemy by directing fire, although wounded, contributing significantly to his company maintaining a strategic, strongpoint, according to reports.

Capt. McCarthy, senior adviser to a Vietnamese airborne battalion, earned the Distinguished Service Cross March 3, 1964, in military operations in the Republic of Viet Nam. He organized troops and established an effective base of operations under an inferno of hostile fire, continuing to rally and encourage the troops until he was mortally wounded.

Rangers Honor Gen. Darby

During the war, Gen. Darby was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and Silver Star twice, Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit, Purple Heart and many foreign decorations.

He was killed while leading a combat team of the 10th Mountain Division, known as the Task Force Darby, April 30, 1945, just two days before the final surrender of German troops in Italy.

A troopship, the General William O. Darby, and an Army post, Camp Darby near Leghorn, Italy, are named in his honor.

Enrollment Slips To Be Distributed For Bible School

Enrollment information and blanks are included in a letter to the parents.

Each child will take the letter home to be completed and returned to the Religious Education Center's headquarters, Bldg. 2806, or to the Sunday School teacher.

Safe Investment

Many servicemen find that saving money is a difficult task.

No matter how much they promise themselves to put something aside on payday, it usually turns out that the month's wages are spent before anything gets saved.

One proven way of assured savings and investment is the purchase of U. S. Savings Bonds. Buying bonds on the payroll deduction plan offers three distinct advantages to the serviceman.

First, it's a planned program, assuring that a certain amount of money will be invested each month in savings with no trouble or worry incurred by the buyer.

Second, savings bonds offer a chance to earn interest if held to maturity. They pay back $4 for every $3 invested at maturity. A typical example of interest earned is that one bond, at $37.50, will bring back $50.00 at maturity.

Third, savings bonds are a safe and practical form of saving that helps the government keep its economic stability. They are a non-inflationary method of financing the public debt that benefits every American by protecting the value of the dollar.

President Johnson expressed confidence in the savings bond program when he said, "We are determined that this investment shall continue to be the safest, and the soundest and the most successful in all the world."

Servicemen have an added opportunity in May to join a savings bond program. An all-service, person-to-person U. S. Savings Bond drive is underway, marking the 24th year that savings bonds have been issued by the Treasury Department.

This annual campaign strives to stimulate interest in the payroll deduction method of bond savings available to all service personnel.

Last year, more than $210 million was invested by servicemen through the payroll bond deduction program. During the past six years the number of payroll investors has increased from 606,400 to 1,146,125, according to service reports.

Such a savings program — one that not only helps the person saving but the government as well — should get careful consideration from all servicemen looking for a good, sound investment for their money. (AFPS)

Safe Driving

Alibis Won't Help

No one objects to using seat belts in an airplane these days, but the question is posed as to why people refuse to buy and use them in their automobiles. The American Medical Association has called the seat belt "the most effective single item of protective equipment available to reduce traffic injuries and deaths."

According to the USAIC Safety Officer, here are the alibis most often given by motorists for not using the seat belt — and the reasons why their excuses are wrong.

Fear of being trapped in a burning or submerged car. Fire is involved in only 0.2 per cent of vehicle accidents; submersion in only 0.3 per cent. Even when such an accident occurs, you are much safer with a seat belt because it can prevent you from being knocked unconscious or injured, leaving you unable to save yourself. And the seat belt is designed for easy and prompt release by the user or rescuer.

Fear of confinement in a crash. Your chances of fatal injury are five times greater if you are ejected, than if you remain in the vehicle. Preventing ejections is considered by experts to be the seat belt's prime function.

They are useless in a high speed accident. Although the seat belt is designed primarily for survivable accidents, there are many cases on record where seat belts have saved lives in what are considered non-survivable accidents, like head-on collisions at 70 miles per hour. The California State Highway Patrol reports accidents in which patrol cars, during pursuits at from 90 to 100 miles per hour, left the road and turned over. In each case the patrolman was able to walk away from the demolished vehicle because of his seat belt.

Belts are not needed in low speed traffic. The National Safety Council says that nearly half the fatalities occur at speeds of 40 miles per hour or less; that 65 per cent of all fatalities and 80 per cent of all accidents occur within 25 miles of home. The use of seat belts in local, low speed driving is as important as on the high speed highway.

They cost too much. Purchase and installation of a seat belt for one person can be accomplished for approximately six dollars. The cost is less if you have a late model car that is already equipped with anchor nuts or bolts. Even if the cost was a hundred dollars per person, this would be a small price to pay for saving the life of yourself or a loved one.

As thousands of actual case histories demonstrate, and extensive scientific studies have proven, all the puny alibis for avoiding seat belts are obscured by the positive reasons for installing seat belts and using them. The USAIC Safety Officer urges everyone to "BUCKLE UP FOR SAFETY" and "KEEP THE INJURIES DOWN"

Chaplain's Corner

Mother's Day--1965

By Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker

In humanity's gallery of great mothers, Mary of Nazareth is the world's greatest contribution to Motherhood. She was chosen by God for the holy purpose of giving His only begotten Son to all his children. She has a unique place in history by virtue of the choice of God and became one of the central personalities of the New Testament and the Church.

This wonderful Mother has been the object of veneration on one hand and the victim of extreme neglect on the other. While one division of the Church gives her veneration there is the other which neglects her. She was singularly honored by God, this humble Hebrew maiden who mothered "The Saviour of Men". We have the opportunity of honoring Mary on this "Mother's Day".

We are obligated to the Gospel record of Saints Matthew and Luke for the intimate insight they give to the time between the Angelic Annunciation and the Birth at Bethlehem. Related in a simple narrative of great beauty, the Holy Ghost inspired a written record of those days when a temple of flesh was prepared for God's Son, the Redeemer of mankind.

Gabriel's message to Mary is one of the greatest to be heard by mortal ears. To the young maiden he said, "Hail, thou that are highly favored, the Lord is with thee". Mary was troubled but immediately responded with great eloquence and grace, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word".

In the seclusion of the home of her kinswoman, Elizabeth, she found security and great wisdom. There she spoke the "Magnificat", a link between Old Testament prophecy and New Testament fulfillment. "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Saviour...for behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." This submissive maiden of Nazareth admits that she is the recipient of God's grace in full measure.

Mary knew great pleasure in those miracle filled days and later knew the full extent of mental anguish and physical pain. Between the Manger of Bethlehem and the Cross of Calvary, a sword frequently pierced her spirit. She beheld her son die upon a lonely hill. Then she knew that he was also uniquely "The Son of God".

The incarnation is a Divine mystery beyond the understanding of mortal men. The dogma that Jesus was conceived by the Holy Ghost remains the only intelligent explanation of the Incarnation. This truth has been included in the ancient creeds from the beginning of the Christian Church. In our worship we testify to our faith each time we repeat, "conceived by the Holy Ghost; born of the Virgin Mary."

The glory of Mary rests upon the nobility of her faith and her happy submission to God's divine will. We have the duty of honoring her, without detracting from the reverence and worship we give to her "Divine Son".

Mary has received the Eternal reward of everlasting life in her duty nobly performed. She has her glory in the "Supreme Character" and "Service of Her Son". This is her Coronation.

On this Mother's Day, the women of the world have the lofty example of the young Jewish maiden who submitted so perfectly to the will of God that all generations will call her Blessed.

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."

Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

Moore's Painting Flair Aids Company's Program

PFC Thomas A. Moore, a member of Co. A, ISB, has a flair for art and the Army is taking advantage of his talent.

Moore, who is assigned to The Infantry School's newly established television section, is responsible for painting background scenery, flip charts, drops, title cards, or any other illustrations pertinent to the section's mission.

One of his most recent accomplishments was a "TV character". "This is similar to the CBS eye," explained Moore. "As soon as you see the eye you associate it with CBS. It works the same way with our symbol." The character is dressed in fatiques and has a TV camera for a head.

Moore's talents aren't limited to the TV section though. In an effort to support The Infantry School's "Win In Viet Nam" program Moore was called upon to paint a mural depicting the Special Forces in action in Viet Nam.

The mural, an original composition, was completed in three days. This is his second mural for the company. He has done murals for the 197th Inf. Bde.

"My father first developed my interest in art," continued Moore. "I picked up most of the basic fundamentals from him and hope to someday be as good as he is. I send several of my paintings home for his comments." Moore's father studied art in Paris and is the past head of the art department of a Detroit advertising firm.

After graduating from high school Moore attended Oakland University in Michigan where he studied art for three years. He then worked as an illustrator for three advertising firms in Detroit.

Before entering the service he worked in New York painting murals and doing portraits.

"I began to do portraits in basic training in my spare time and eventually it turned into a profitable part time occupation," stated Moore. He just completed a job for a Columbus radio station in his off-duty time and has almost more commitments than he can fill.

Upon receiving his discharge Moore plans to follow in the footsteps of his father and study art in Paris.

Touch and -- No Go

Two Columbus High School boys, one of them the son of a Fort Benning officer, were frustrated again last Saturday as they tried vainly to launch their 9 foot one inch rocket at Galloway Range. (L photo) Fred Callahan, 2808 Macon Road, gingerly loads a squid into the powder-packed business end of the Zeuss II as (R photo) Ron Jennings, son of Col. and Mrs. H. B. Jennings Jr. (MAH chief surgeon) checks the telemetry system which he designed and installed. The budding young scientists plan another attempt when a range is available. (U.S. Army Photos by Sp5 Gus Muni)

Will Try Again

Launching Fails

A Fort Benning officer's son and a Columbus youth met with disappointment for the second time in less than a month when their 9 foot one inch "Zeuss II" rocket failed to fire last Saturday on Galloway Range.

Ron Jennings, son of Col. and Mrs. H. B. Jennings Jr. (MAH chief surgeon) and Fred Callahan, 2808 Macon Road, had test fired their ignition system 10 times during the past few weeks with success each time. But on the towering launch pad Saturday it failed to ignite. The boys inserted a new "squid" for detonation but it too failed when the countdown reached zero.

The Zeuss II, which they are attempting to launch now, is a sophisticated rocket with an ingenious telemetry system designed and installed by Ron Jennings.

Included in the telemetry instruments are a camera, a device to send back information on the rocket's temperature, parachutes and other electronic gear. The Jennings boy is no stranger to scientific instrumentation, having constructed model satellites, an electric organ and radio equipment. He is also a "ham" radio operator.

The attempted launch last Saturday and the initial try a month ago were made under the supervision of Range Control Office personnel who were as keenly interested in the rocket as were the boys, and equally disappointed at its failure.

The young rocketeers plan a revision in their ignition system using a blasting cap instead of the squid, but must wait until the range is again available before making their third try which they hope will be "the charm."

Survey Determines Course Effectiveness

"If you want to find out how you're doing, just ask the customer," said Capt. David P. Vanhooser, records officer for the Army extension course committee of The Infantry School's Department of Nonresident Instruction.

Vanhooser was commenting on the student survey he initiated recently to determine the effectiveness of extension course administration.

"It's just like being successful in business," he added. "We've got to provide the best possible service to our customers who, in this case, are our students."

To see how well his section was doing from the student point of view, Vanhooser formulated a questionnaire that attempted to pinpoint possible trouble areas. The survey forms were mailed to carefully selected representative groups from each type of extension course offered and from several geographic areas throughout the United States and foreign countries.

Specifically, the survey was aimed at determining the time lag in processing extension course material but more general student views were also solicited. "The results were quite encouraging," said Vanhooser, "and the student comments we received will help us to better our program."

Vanhooser was assigned to his present duties last year after a tour as a Special Forces commander at Fort Bragg.

Chattanooga High School Cadets Viewing Training

Army Ranger activities, weapons firing techniques, wire communications and airborne training are being shown to 45 Junior ROTC cadets from the Chattanooga High School.

Accompanied by two regular Army non-commissioned officers assigned to the school, the students arrived Wednesday and observed ambush and counterambush tactics at Walter Hill upon their arrival.

Thursday morning the cadets observed a Ranger hand-to-hand combat demonstration and Physical Combat Proficiency Tests at Watson Field.

The Chattanooga Drill Team performed at Baker High School Thursday afternoon. The cadets' activities for the day closed with a scout dog demonstration at Bolling Bowl.

Today's agenda includes a visit to the Infantry Museum, seeing mortar fire at Hook Range, machine gun firing on Red Cloud Range, a platoon wire communication problem at Davis Hill and airborne training on Eubanks Field.

The Tennessee group is scheduled to depart Saturday after a tour of the Main Post, Kelley and Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas.

How Is Your Army DS IQ?

(ANFP) — A common experience of all Army personnel is Basic Combat Training. Though today's program is better and tougher than ever, the rudiments of soldiering have seen little change over the years.

The Drill Sergeant is the Army authority on these fundamentals. How's your Drill Sergeant I. Q.? See how well you'd do if you were in his campaign hat.

(1) During his first weeks in the Army, the recruit masters the M-14. What is its maximum effective range and maximum rate of fire (in the semiautomatic position)?

(3) First aid skill requires a knowledge of the three types of bleeding. What are they and how can a soldier recognize them?

(4) The Uniform Code of Military Justice insures impartial discipline in the Army. Why is Article 31 important to the soldier?

(5) Drill and formations build esprit in training units. Every recruit knows the five rests at the halt. Do you?

Physical Fitness Is Battle-Orientated

By SP4 DAVID N. SCOTT

Keeping pace with rapid developments in weapons, concepts of modern warfare, and changes in Army organization is an assignment for every soldier in today's modern Army.

But recognizing and fulfilling the need for a physically fit body is also an intricate part of being a combat-ready soldier.

Just as the Army, through the use of the trainfire techniques, has made marksmanship training a realistic test of combat readiness, so physical fitness is now becoming more battle - orientated.

Department's Mission

It is the mission of the Ranger Department's combat conditioning committee of The Infantry School to oversee and develop better methods of physical training, hand-to-hand combat and bayonet training for the individual soldier as well as the unit.

"As a soldier you have a special obligation to stay fit throughout your career," explained Capt. Arthur W. Garrett, chairman of the combat conditioning committee. "You are obligated to forge a strong physical fitness state just as you work toward maintaining proficiency in other areas where your overall efficiency is judged."

The responsibilities of Garrett's committee are not limited to The Infantry School but affect the entire Army.

"We are responsible for monitoring the Army Training Centers' programs in physical fitness and combatives as well as research, development and dissemination of doctrine in physical training and combatives," continued Garrett.

An example of one of the committee's projects is the new method of bayonet training presently being developed and tested by the committee's staff of six officers and 17 enlisted men.

Army Training Centers requested that bayonet instruction be reviewed to insure that the best possible benefit is being derived from the time devoted to it. As a result of this request Garrett's staff was assigned the task of improving the techniques and training aids used in bayonet drill.

Visited Marine Camps

In order to complete their mission, personnel paid liaison visits to the Marine Corps Training Camp at Paris Island, N. C., and as a result the pugil stick became a part of the Army's bayonet training. The committee also designed a more rugged and durable bayonet target. Throughout the studies the committee made sure that the new methods were adaptable to the new M16 rifle as well as the M14. After further testing this summer the committee will compile all of its practical material for a new manual to be published this August.

Other programs presently being tested, reviewed, and developed by the committee include a revised physical fitness test for Basic Combat Trainees, a Special Forces hand-to-hand combat course, a physical fitness award, and an Infantry School Health Club for field grade officers.

Garrett's committee also conducts remedial physical fitness programs for the CAR'ACAR and Basic courses.

"We instruct over 7,000 students a year, are responsible for writing seven POI's, and conduct 31 problems annually," stated Garrett.

In addition to the already heavy load, they are often called upon by local civic groups to put on demonstrations in hand-to-hand combat. "We will encourage anyone who is interested in keeping in shape to do so. The members of our staff often sacrifice their off-duty time to instruct those who request extra help."

One of the committee's latest projects was the establishment of the "500 Club" at Benning. Membership is restricted to those personnel scoring the maximum of 500 on the Combat Proficiency Test. At the present time there are 25 members.

Before coming to The Infantry School Garrett was assigned as an executive officer with a combat support company of the 22rd Inf. in Alaska. He has also served as a training officer with the 60th Inf. at Fort Carson, Colo. He enlisted in the Army as a private in 1952 at the age of 15 and was awarded the Combat Infantryman's Badge and promoted to sergeant when he was 16. During the Korean War he saw combat with the 17th Inf. Reg. of the 7th Inf. Div.

He received his commission upon his graduation from OCS in 1957.

Integrity Expected From Officers Col. O'Neill Says at Graduation

"The most essential characteristic that people expect from an Army officer is personal and professional integrity", said Col. Richard J. O'Neill, director, Company Tactics Department, The Infantry School, to the 183 graduates of Infantry Officers Basic Course Class No. 9 at Marshall Auditorium Monday.

"Each officer must be vigilant to maintain the standards of honor and integrity that have made the profession of arms an honored one," he added.

Col. O'Neill said the most critical test of an officer's integrity will be on the battlefield where his word must be accepted without challenge.

Continuing, he said an effective leader must convince his men that they are playing an important part in a worthy cause, must make his first concern the individual soldiers who do the job, and should be ready to challenge old ideas and go forward with new concepts.

Singling out the six allied officers among the graduates for special commendation, Col. O'Neill said, "Your task has been made doubly difficult by a strange environment and the language barrier."

Col. O'Neill presented a Letter of Academic Achievement to 2d Lt. Larry L. Crutsinger, the Distinguished Honor Graduate of the class who attained an academic average of 96 per cent and superior grades on ten of 15 examinations.

Lt. Crutsinger was also the winner of the Military Stakes which tests the officer's ability to apply the knowledge gained during his course of study in areas such as map reading, first aid, weapons, communications and chemical, biological and radiological warfare.

197th Baseball Team Practices for Opener

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

The 197th Inf. Bde. baseball team is undergoing steady workouts in preparation for its opening game of the season at 8 p.m. Tuesday against TSB at Gowdy Field.

During an exhibition game, the 197th defeated TSB 9 to 7.

According to coach Jim Martin, the 197th is looking forward to a fine season primarily because of a strong pitching staff.

Three right - handers and one southpaw make up the staff. They are Duane Eichorn, Gerald Burgess, Charles Harris and Sylvan Tate.

Eichorn, a gunner with the 10th Artillery's Battery A, struck 20 men out in an exhibition game played against the 2d Div.'s 3d Bde. team last week.

The catching staff is anchored by Vinny Zuccarro (catcher for last year's 197th team) and Emmet Glee.

The infield is sparked by last year's standout, shortstop, Billy Williamson. Al Sumter is at first base, Charlie Milner at second while Bobby Coe and Eddie McLean share third base duties.

Assisting Martin with the coaching duties is B. W. (Hoot) Gibson.

Division's Top Positions Emptied; Senior Officers Receive Orders

11 Colonels Reassigned By Army

Changes of command in the 2nd Infantry Division will be felt at almost every level during the months of June and July.

In addition to Col. John W. Armstrong, 3rd Brigade Commander, who is leaving in July, 11 lieutenant colonels have been notified that they will depart the division, it was learned this week.

Armstrong is departing in July to become Chief of Enlisted Assignments Branch in Washington, D. C.

An assignment in June as district engineer for the Army Corps of Engineers at Wilmington, N. C., will take Lt. Col. Beverly C. Snow away from his job as assistant to Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, Assistant Division Commander.

The post that Snow is moving into was once held

Rocket Firing Kicks Off Test for 12th Artillery

By DAN SWEENEY

The 2nd Infantry Division's 12th Artillery left its Sand Hill garrison area this morning to undergo its annual Army Training Test (ATT).

For the past three weeks the division's only Honest John Rocket battalion has been firing its nuclear capable rockets preparing for the all important field testing to be carried out today and tomorrow.

The testing tonight and tomorrow will see the battalion fire four rockets into Fort Benning's Area K impact area. According to the battalion's S-3 planning officer, Maj. Don H. Noakley, most of the maneuvering will take place along Fort Benning's 10th Armored Division Road.

As the members of the battalion go through their paces the hard eyes of evaluators supplied by the division artillery headquarters will evaluate the battalion's ability to survey, its gunnery techniques and even its camouflaging techniques. Also to be tested will be communications systems and tactics.

Added to the test will be the introduction of a "live" aggressor force to harass

Assistant Commander Receives Orders to Korea

Shakeups in the key positions of the 2nd Infantry Division became apparent this week with orders reassigning Assistant Commander Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams and other high ranking officers.

Gen. Williams, who came to the division only a month ago, is headed for an eventual assignment in Korea. Unlike his present job of directing maneuvers, the general will become the Assistant Division Commander for Support Operations of the 1st Cavalry Division.

He will leave the division sometime in June for Fort Knox, Ky., for a preventive maintenance course before going to Korea. He reports to the 1st Cavalry on July 1.

Williams' family will remain in Los Angeles, Calif., during this overseas tour.

The general is currently at Fort Stewart, Ga., where he is the overall director of Exercise CINQUEFOI the division's largest ma ver in two years. The ex se, involving some 2,70 nen of the 3rd Brigade, w ermin-ate Wednesday.

Prior to his a nment with the division early April, Gen. Willia commanded the Test, ation and Control Grou for 19 months.

Aviation Accomp ments

He is well known throughout the Army for hi ccomplishments in the field of aviation. He graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in 1940. In 1942 he was appointed Chief of the Flight Division when the Department of Air Training was formed in the Field Artillery School.

While he was the aviation officer of the U. S. Constabulary in Europe in 1947, he

Div Ration Point Handles Food for 1 Million Meals

By DAVE BUMAN

Have you ever wondered where the chow you take for granted every day comes from, or how it gets to your mess hall? Have you ever wondered how many potatoes you've eaten since you've been in the Army?

"I can't tell you how many potatoes you've eaten, only that the whole 2nd Infantry Division eats over 100,000 pounds a month," says SFC Glenn Fischer, section chief of the Division Ration Point.

There are an average of 50 mess halls operating every month within the division, serving over 15,000 meals a day. All of these mess halls take a head-count determining the average number of men going through the chow line for each meal. This figure is then sent to the Class I supply office, or the ration point as most people know it.

Consolidate Figures

Operated by Support Command's 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion, the Class I office consolidates the figures given them by the individual mess halls, and determines on a master menu, the bulk food necessary to feed that particular number of men. And this is where the work begins.

Once a figure has been calculated, it is sent to the central ration point where it is consolidated with all the other orders on Fort Benning.

From here messages and orders call in all the meats and produces, cans and fruits, to fill the needs of the mess halls.

Distribution

Once the bulk food has arrived it is picked up by the Division Ration Point for further distribution.

Once at the division, the over 45,000 loaves of bread, 110,000 pounds of potatoes, and 30,000 dozen eggs, to give but a few samples, used each month within the Division, are broken down by pound, according to the number of men in the unit, for distribution to the mess halls.

Fischer, section chief of the ration point, says, "For the third quarter of this year alone, we handled over one-and-a-half million meals; and that's a lot of chow".

Average Cost

"The average cost of a meal runs pretty close to a dollar," says Capt. Billy Wolfe, Class I Supply Officer, "including meats and milk, which are not handled by our ration point. We handle sensitive items such as frozen foods and ice-cream, but meats and milk are delivered to the mess halls directly".

Div Chorus Schedules Busy Week

From Folk Ballads and spirituals to rock and roll, is the theme of the 2nd Infantry Division's Soldiers Chorus' "Americana".

The new program by the Chorus was presented for the first time this week at the Crippled Childrens Home, in Warm Springs, Georgia, to the delight of the children.

To the delight of the chorus, the second presentation of the new program will be to the WACs at Fort McClellan, Alabama, tomorrow night. Following the program will be a musical presentation toward the "Modern" end in the scale of American Music; A "rocking and Rolling" dance.

The chorus will also be on local television again on the "Miss Patsy" show, Monday morning.

Maj. Bell to Head G-5; Forsythe Leaves Today

By LANNY THOMAS

The shakeup of several key positions in the 2nd Infantry Division already were evident this week with the beginning and end of long assignments for two officers at the general staff level.

Maj. James R. Bell, who for nearly two years headed the Operations Intelligence Branch of the G-2 Section, this week prepared to take over the division's civil affairs operations.

Bell officially will become the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-5, on Monday, while his predecessor, Maj. David Forsythe, leaves today for an assignment in Korea.

Forsythe departs the division after almost exactly two years of duty here. He was assigned to the division in May of 1963 as the S-2 officer of the 1st Brigade. For the past 18 months, he has directed and expanded the division's civil affairs program.

"I've been talking, meeting and visiting people around the division this week," Bell said. He moved into the office Monday and was working closely with Forsythe.

Test

the battalion operations.

Batteries A and B, the batteries A and B, the battalion's two firing batteries, have hit the mark with astonishing accuracy with the eight rockets fired to date. The firing batteries have dropped all the missiles within 200 yards of the target, well inside the probable error factor which is the distance allowed for maximum casualty effect.

Best Shot

The best shot was fired by the battalion's Battery A which lifted a missle ten miles and dropped it into an area within thirty yards of the center bullseye.

A spokesman stated that the battalion is firing two types of rockets to prepare for the test. The M-31 or short range missile is capable of ranging out to nearly fifteen miles while the shorter and faster M-50 rocket can reach targets up to 25 miles from point of take-off.

Huffman

first and only assignment when he became commander of the Division Artillery in July of 1963. He held that position up until he became Chief of Staff.

"I'm very proud to have commanded the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery and have been Chief of Staff of the division," Huffman said. "It has been one of the real honors in my career.

My association with the officers, noncommissioned officers and enlisted men in this division has been one of the most rewarding experiences during my 24 years in the Army."

Huffman's past two years in his hometown has been the longest period he has stayed in Columbus since he went away to the Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. and graduated in 1941.

Immediately after West Point graduation, duty brought him back home for only a few weeks with the 4th Infantry Division which at that time was located in the Harmony Church area.

Huffman was assigned to Fort Benning again in 1947 to attend jump school.

'Fortunate'

"I feel real fortunate having been assigned here two years," he said. "It was wonderful to come back and see old friends I had not seen since high school days."

Huffman's approaching tour at Fort Sill will be his first time for a lengthy assignment at that station. Early in his career he was located at Fort Sill as a student in the Officer Basic and Advanced Artillery Courses.

During his career, Huffman completed the regular course at the Command and General Staff College in 1956 and the U. S. Army War College in 1960.

He has been assigned to Washington on two occasions — with the GI War Department General Staff in 1945 and a staff officer in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations in 1960.

Orders

organized the first ground force operational aviation unit.

Gen. Williams organized and was the initial president of the U. S. Army Aviation Board at Fort Rucker, Ala. He was the first chief of the Army Aviation Branch, G-3, Department of the Army in Washington.

Army War College

After the general attended the Army War College in 1958, he became chief of the Air Mobility Division in the office of Research and Development. In 1961 he received the Alexander Klemin Award for "notable achievement in the advancement of Rotary Wing aeronautics."

Before Gen. Williams commanded the TEC group here, he was commanding general of the U. S. Army Aviation Center and Commandant of the U. S. Army Aviation School at Fort Rucker, Ala.

1st Brigade Units Given Combat Readiness Tests

FULL COMBAT PACKS and loads are an indication of the readiness posture of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry as they went through readiness tests this week. Next week the 1st Brigade's other infantry battalion, the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry will undergo operational readiness testing.

Editor's Note: No Guns sounded, no bells rang and no bands played as the companies of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry this week went through the hard business of proving they were combat ready. All week long the 9th's companies have been undergoing the rigid operational readiness test administered by the 1st Brigade. 2nd Infantry Division News staff member, Jim Lall went along with Company A as they underwent the 32 - hour test. This is his account.

The testing kicked off Monday morning at the crack of dawn. The battalion's Company A was given the alert notice early, and immediately prepared for evacuation to the testing area, located on the Fort Benning reservation near Darby Range.

All men and vehicles had departed the company area before 7:00 a.m.

Umpires

The test umpires — all 1st Brigade training and operational officials — were the first to arrive at the testing area, led by Maj. Gerald Sola, brigade S-3.

The individual companies are first given an administrative briefing by the brigade assistant training and operations officer, Capt. Fitzhugh Chandler, Jr., and introduced to the company and platoon umpires.

The assembly of troops were reminded of the importance of the testing, especially "with the current hostilities still up in the air."

The Monday morning administrative briefing for Company A was attended by Col. Ben H. Ward, 1st Brigade commander as well as Lt. Col. John D. White, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Final Words

The final words prior to the actual testing, are given by the individual company commanders.

The men next prepare to move to the assembly area, where a brigade maintenance inspection team evaluates the condition of all equipment. While in the assembly location, the men assume sheltered positions and camouflage all equipment, as well as establish defensive firing positions.

Emplaced at both ends of the major artery into the assembly area are 106mm recoilless rifles with a firing team.

After various supplies, ammunition and equipment have been issued at the company assembly area, the men move out once again to assume a defensive posture at another area.

Aggressors

Here the men are subject to chemical, biological and radiological warfare attacks as well as concentrated aggressor missions. The aggressors were supplied by the various companies that were not involved in the testing itself that particular day.

A final evaluation of the companies tested is simple. The report shows one of two things: either the company "is" operationally ready or it "is not."

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry will finish its operational ready test requirements tomorrow with the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry due to begin its company evaluation period Monday morning.

32 Hours

Testing for each company lasts a total of 32 hours.

The object of the test, an annual requirement, is to determine the degree of operational readiness each company possesses, as well as evaluate individual training standards and point up areas that need improvement.

Condensing the many facets of infantry readiness, 1st brigade training and operations officials have tabbed the abbreviated maneuvers "an effective means of testing the overall combat condition of a relatively small amount of men."

Gen. Almond Coming Back to His Division

By DAVE BUMAN

"Indianhead" Commander during the 2nd World War Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Edward M. Almond, is returning to visit the unit he commanded from Sept. 1945 to May 1946.

Foremost on the General's list of activities will be attendance at a demonstration firing of the Honest John rocket. This will be the first time Almond has seen an actual firing of the rocket.

A highlight of Gen. Almond's visit to the division, will be his contribution to the historical center.

In February, 1951, as the Korean War ran red, Almond was the commander of X Corps to which the 2nd Infantry Division was attached.

The 23rd Infantry Regiment was committed to a "do-or die" struggle at Chipyong-ni. The unit was surrounded by four communist divisions.

The man in command at the time was John H. Chiles, a former Corps staff officer of Almond's and who presently commands the 2nd Infantry Division.

When the fighting broke, and the US Forces were in command, a Chinese bugle was captured by one of the men, and presented to Gen. Almond.

It is this bugle, very much a part of the history of the 2nd Division, that Gen. Almond is presenting to the Museum.

"This bugle has been kept in my possession," says Almond, "because of the sentimental value attached to it as a reminder of the Chinese hordes which so outnumbered the 23rd Infantry at Chipyong-Ni."

MRS. ROBERT A. WITTER — Publicity Chairman, Officers' Wives Club

Publicity Chairman, Ladies of The Big Indianhead

FLOWER arrangements turned the home of Mrs. Fred O. Jackson into a floral paradise recently when ladies of Support Command met for their monthly coffee. Mrs. John C. Walsh, of the 2nd Medical Battalion, gave a demonstration of methods for arranging flowers. She holds one of the bouquets here as Mrs. John H. Chiles, a guest, and Mrs. Jackson, look on. Wife of Newest General Devoted to 'Good Causes'

By ALICE WITTER

Jean Blair Williams, although new to the 2nd Infantry Division, is an "old-timer" at Fort Benning. The wife of the new assistant division commander, Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, she was active with the ladies of the TEC Group, which her husband had commanded since August of 1963.

Jean Blair was born in Canada, but met her husband-to-be in California, where her family had settled.

They were married in 1941 in the Post Chapel at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Their first child, Blair, was born at Fort Sill and is now a second classman at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

A daughter, Kathleen, who was born while her father was overseas during World War II, is now married. Their son, Keith, now 12 was born in Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Williams has been very active in the past in P. T. A., Cub Scouts and Brownies, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. She has devoted herself chiefly to Red Cross work while at Fort Benning, having served as chairman of Red Cross volunteers here.

A soft-spoken, unassuming and an extremely warm, friendly person, she enjoys meeting people. It is for this reason, particularly, that she has loved Army life. Having met so many wonderful people and being kept so busy, she wouldn't change her life if she could.

Her favorite hobbies are sewing, gardening and reading — although she claims she never has sufficient time for the latter.

She also says she has been "kind of" bowling with the TEC Group ladies' bowling league and has enjoyed it "tremendously."

One hobby she has enjoyed in the past, but has had to forego since being here, is ceramics. The living - room of the Williams' quarters reveals this interest with several lovely pieces she has crafted. It also reveals her favorite color, purple — extending even to her purple bowling ball.

A very petite lady, Mrs. Williams will be a pleasant and welcome addition to the Second Division Officers' Wives Club in her position as honorary vice - president.

Jewelry Attracts Eyes During 702nd Coffee

A beautifully decorated Easter egg tree centerpiece immediately attracted the attention of the ladies of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion as they arrived for their monthly coffee at the Second Division Family Service Center recently.

Following the business portion of the meeting, the ladies were entertained by representatives of Sarah Coventry jewelry. The representatives were Mrs. Harry E. Peyton, Jr., Branch Manager; Mrs. Mason Martin, Fashion Show Director; and Mrs. Harry E. Peyton, Sr.

The representatives discussed the various versatile uses of the jewelry which was displayed on several tables.

Ladies who modeled some of the jewelry were Mrs. John R. Thrailkill, Mrs. John Tucker, Mrs. Daniel G. White, Mrs. Alfred H. Clow and Mrs. John W. Gephart.

The door prize was won by Mrs. John W. Hallam. The group bid farewell to Mrs. Charles J. Moore.

Co-hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Charles H. Morgan and Mrs. John R. Thrailkill.

Stottle Home Is Scene For Coffee

Mrs. Leslie J. Stottle and Mrs. Robert J. Casto were co-hostesses for the coffee of the ladies of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry.

The coffee was held in Mrs. Stottle's home.

Mrs. Robert B. Tully held a brief business discussion.

S&T Couples Meet At King's Pond Lodge

King's Pond Lodge was the scene of an informal buffet for the officers and ladies of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion Wednesday, April 28, 1965.

Hosts for the evening were the officers of B Company, who provided a lively session of trick games and humorous awards.

Lt. Col. Dean Van Lydegraf presided over the farewells to five couples of the battalion.

Those honored were Capt. and Mrs. Alfred E. Klemm, Capt. and Mrs. Herbert V. Altman, Lt. and Mrs. William F. Beane, Lt. and Mrs. Richard W. Truran, and CWO and Mrs. Earl Butterfield.

New arrivals welcomed were Lt. David A. Barry and Lt. and Mrs. William E. Salmon.

Officers' Wives Set Luncheon

The May luncheon of the Second Division Officers' Wives Club will be held Tuesday, May 11, at the Main Officers' Open Mess, with a sherry hour beginning at 12:30.

Mrs. Arne Eliasson, program chairman, has made arrangements for a special presentation of selections from Camelot, by members of the Baker High School cast.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by contacting individual unit reservations chairmen.

Div Museum Acquires Mementos of Past Leader; Memory of Heartbreak, Gen Young Return to Roost

Led Division When 23rd Broke 'Heartbreak Ridge'

By JOE TREASTER

The battle of "Heartbreak Ridge," the longest of the Korean War and one of the 23rd Infantry Regiment's most famous engagements, broke into the news a few months ago on a tragic note.

Papers in New York City and Washington were carrying the obituary of Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young. It was impossible to write of Gen. Young and not mention the battle that raged 30 days and 29 nights.

He was the man, the papers reported, "who directed the victorious assault . . one of the toughest battles of the war . . ."

Took Command

Young took command of the 2nd Infantry Division as the regiment was hacking its way up the stoney ridge. The Indianheads were facing elements of four Korean divisions and before victory was attained, all three infantry regiments got into the fight.

Three days before Young's arrival on Sept. 20, 1951, PFC Herbert K. Pililaau won the Congressional Medal of Honor for his efforts on the ridge.

There was little time for welcoming ceremonies, but as he took the division colors, he said: "The greatest honor to come to me in 29 years of Army service is to command the 2nd Infantry Division."

He told the men there would be no "abrupt policy changes until I get my feet on the ground," and for a week he studied the problem posed by the communist infested ridge.

"Touchdown"

Then, in the start of "Operation Touchdown," he sent a division - size feint against communist positions in the mountains surrounding the Mundung Valley, west of the ridge.

Tank thrusts into the Sutae Valley, east of Heartbreak and movements toward the Mundung Valley gave the Reds the impression that the Allies were interrupting their 24-day assault. So they split their forces.

When the communists had made their move, Gen. Young sent the 23rd up the ridge again. This time it was dark. Billowing flame throwers blazed a path for the storm of infantrymen charging with fixed bayonets. And this time they made it. For every American casualty, three Chinese fell.

The next day the Stars and Stripes newspaper reported in its main front-page news story:

"Bayonet - charging infantrymen of the 2d Division captured the center and highest peak of "Heartbreak" ridge at 6:10 a.m. Saturday after a six-hour fight.

"United Nations troops used flame throwers, bayonets and dynamite charges attached to long poles to root the fanatical Reds out of their bunkers and deep entrenchments.

Eastern Front

". . . PFC Marvin Brodsky reported from the eastern front Saturday morning that the 2d Division, 23rd Infantry Regiment, with elements of the French Battalion, secured the key hill, 931, of "Heartbreak."

Eleven days earlier in the seige, the Associated Press had reported:

"The 23rd Regiment of the U. S. 2nd Infantry Division was identified today (Sept. 26, 1951) as the allied unit fighting elements of three North Korean divisions on "Heartbreak Ridge," in one of the bitterest battles of the Korean War.

"The gallantry of the men and officers — their individual gallantry — has been outstanding," said Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young of Washington, D. C., 2nd Division commander.

"The 23rd Regiment, veteran of heavy fighting in Korea, occupies a part of Heartbreak Ridge with a French volunteer battalion.

"The 9th Infantry Regiment has been assaulting communist positions in the area west of Heartbreak Ridge while the 23rd fought for control of the strategic north-south ridgeline.

72 Days

"The 23rd Regiment has been on the line for 72 days."

The regiment, according to historians, remained on Heartbreak until December 20 when it was shifted to just east of what is known as "the Iron Triangle."

Gen. Young sent the men a personal message on that cheerless Christmas:

"At this time we are engaged in a bitter struggle to repulse a force that is inspired by Satan and seeking to override the Church of Christ."

MRS. ROBERT YOUNG, wife of the former division commander, and son show the general's flag stand to Capt. Jerry Mooney of the Civil Affairs office.

DID YOU KNOW

Combat duty in Korea for the 38th Infantry began soon after docking in Pusan on 19 August 1950. The 38th took up positions along the Naktong River defense line.

Mrs. Young Leaves Relics to Museum

As the 23rd Infantry Regiment prepared to celebrate its 158th anniversary last month, the widow of Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, who commanded the 2nd Division during the capture of "Heartbreak Ridge," faced the problem of what to do with a lifetime of military mementos.

Since her husband's death last October Mrs. Young had decided that their red brick home in Asheville, N. C. must be sold. It was too big for a lone woman.

At a bargain price the home overlooking the fourth fairway of the Beaver Lake Golf Club quickly became the property of another family.

Mrs. Young made plans to move to Washington, D. C., "where I can be close to lots of old friends." Space would be limited there and she could take only a few of her husband's possessions, which filled a down-stairs den.

So she penned a letter to Gen. Young's old friend, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, present commander of the division:

"I have a set of china bearing the 2nd Division crest, Gen. Young's old flag stand and several photographs that might be valuable to your unit's historical center. Would you like them?"

Pocket Guide Depicts Scenes From Korean Life

Perhaps one of the most common foreign countries in which an American soldier can spend a tour of duty is the Republic of Korea. Almost every soldier with more than five years in service has spent at least one tour in Korea. Many recruits are sent there after training.

The Department of Defense has published a small guide for the soldier entitled "A Pocket Guide to Korea." It describes the history, the customs and the sights of the country.

A most interesting feature of the Guide are the script-like passages which break up the monotony of the otherwise dull travelog.

The first describes the radiant heating that has warmed Korean homes for 1,500 years.

"Flues are cut beneath the house and covered with large flat ondol stones," says the guide. "A layer of clay and covering of oiled paper are put on. The flues may form a network throughout the house, or each room may have its own heating system.

"A fire pot is built on one end of the flue and a chimney on the other. Fumes and hot smoke travelling under the floors to the chimney warm the rooms."

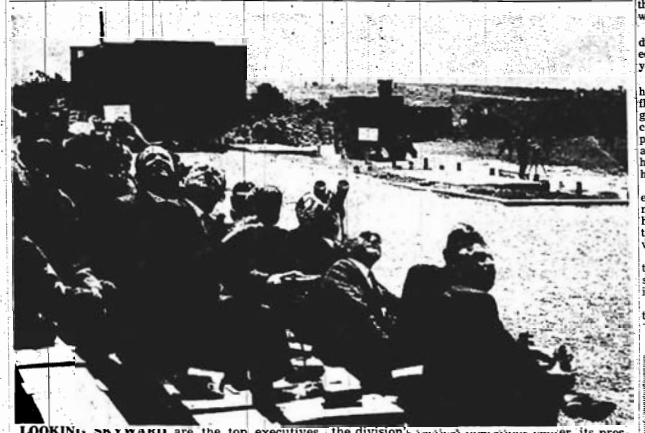
Another passage describes the Korean girls' pastime of seesawing. It is not played as it is here in America.

"It is often done," we are told, "standing up.

"The seesaws consists of a board placed over a bundle of straw. Jumping is done on the ends. Practice makes the girls expert in bouncing gracefully without falling off.

The Republic of Korea flag gets similar artistic treatment from the editors of the guide.

On the page facing a painting of the flag we are told in script letters the "flag is unique among national emblems."



LOOKING SKYWARD are the top executives of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation. They are watching an aerial surveillance demonstration by Mohawk Reconnaissance Aircraft and the smaller ground controlled drone. The Lockheed officials last Friday saw the 2nd Infantry Division in its combat posture. They looked at the division's tactical operations center, its present weapons and its communications equipment. The corporation which already deals heavily with the Air Force and Navy is seeking to expand its operations into supplying the Army with new equipment. Said one official "we have to know their needs before we can help them."

ARMOR IN THE ATTACK AT FORT STEWART

Maneuver Kicks-Off Today

CINQUEFOIL Units Use Entire Stewart Reserve

By MARV WOLF

FORT STEWART, Ga. — Attacking along a broad axis near the eastern edge of this huge reservation the 2700 2nd Division troops comprising the Third Brigade met with only passive resistance in the form of chemical minefields and scattered aerial bombardment as Exercise CINQUEFOIL commenced at 6:00 a.m. this morning.

CINQUEFOIL is named for the five-sided figure within a circle that is so named in French.

The figure represents the five combat arms that will be working in close harmony — on this, the largest field maneuver for the 2nd Division this year — Infantry, Armor, Artillery, Engineers and Signal.

Commander of troops is the venerable commander of the third brigade, Colonel John Armstrong, while overall responsibility for the Exercise rests with Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, assistant division commander and exercise director.

CINQUEFOIL will require the entire military reservation for maneuver area since the maneuver elements of the brigade are composed of tanks and mechanized infantry — the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 72nd Armor and the 1st Battalion of the 9th Infantry.

Leading elements of the brigade are expected to reach the banks of the Ogeechee River tomorrow where they will attempt a hasty crossing.

Lt. Col. Donald Funk, deputy director and chief among some 21 officer controllers which will accompany all the units involved explained the exercise will be of the controlled reaction type. Only the aggressor forces are controlled by the exercise director, the friendly forces react to aggressor action at the order of the brigade commander.

Funk went on to say that the emphasis will be on safety and tactical proficiency. Controllers will grade on the execution of all phases of small unit tactics.

Overseen From Skies

Gen. Williams is expected to oversee all phases of the maneuver from the skies. The general, a highly rated pilot, flew at the controls of the aircraft which brought him here to Fort Stewart last Monday.

The third brigade arrived here at Stewart in a massive convoy last Saturday, having departed early that morning climaxing several weeks of preparation.

Questions Answered About

Why Merge National Guard, Reserves?

By FRED MORROW

The topic — the merging of the National Guard and the Army Reserve. The question — why merge? The answers — many and varied.

A pamphlet prepared by the Chief of Information in Washington, D. C. poses many questions concerning the merger and gives answers arguing for the merger.

The pamphlet is broken down into three segments; present organization, new concept of organization, and effects on individuals.

The first concerns itself with present organization. The pamphlet familiarizes the reader with present conditions ad argues there are weaknesses in the system.

According to the pamphlet, one of the chief weaknesses in the present system is the imbalance between manpower and equipment. The article says that of the total authorized reserve unit strength of men are in units that are adequately manned and equipped for a quick action role. The article points out that to equip the understrengthened units would cost some $10 billion.

Another weakness, the article says, is with the Army Reserve and National Guard we now have, a dual management system exists with separate chains of control for Guard and Reserve units. According to the pamphlets this duality makes for difficulty in establishing the same standards, rules and procedures.

"Principles of sound management call for elimination of one of these parallel chains of control," the article states.

Part two considers the new concept of the organization. The pamphlet argues that the National Guard and Army Reserve are being reorganized and the result will get rid of weaknesses in the present system and produce a combat ready force which will have the strength to meet emergency plans.

The pamphlet further argues that costs will be reduced aproximately $150 million. These savings will result largely from the reduction in strength from about 700,000 to 550,000 men.

The third part answers questions involving individuals. It gives answers to such questions as, will future draftees be put into National Guard units when they complete their two years of active duty? What will happen to National Guardsmen assigned to units that are to be eliminated? Will the 6-month Reserve Enlistment Program be continued?

The article explains that future draftees getting out of the active army with a remaining military obligation will have the option of serving in the National Guard on a voluntary basis or in the Army Reserve as a nonunit member of the ready reserve.

The article explains that guardsmen assigned to a unit to be eliminated may transfer to a retained Guard unit or if they do not wish to or cannot transfer to a retained unit, they may join the ready reserve in a nonunit status.

The article also explains the 6-month Reserve Enlistrealignment plan is put into effect all individuals enlistinued. "When the reserve ment Program will be coning under the Reserve Enlistment Program of 1963 must enlist for service in the National Guard," the article says.

KOREA BOWL CHRISTENING

Korea Bowl Becomes Giant Baptismal Font

A giant sterling silver bowl recently became a baptismal font in the 2nd Infantry Division for the christening of five infant children.

The children were dependents of officers serving with one of the Army's most famous combat units — the 23rd Infantry Regiment.

The Korea Bowl, a permanent memory of gallant men of the 23rd who fought and died during the Korean War, for the first time known became a baptismal basin — and during the unit's celebration of its 158th anniversary.

As a small number of officers of the 23rd and their wives sat in silence and watched a Roman Catholic Priest stepped forward, read the scriptures and said: "And I now baptize you in the name of the father, the son and the holy spirit."

Godparents held the infants in their arms and hovered near the bowl which had been brought to the division 1st brigade chapel for the ceremony. Colors of the regiment draped the altar.

With these words the priest dipped his hand in the water and christened the two children as arms held them over one of the most precious trophies found in the Army.

In a separate service that followed the Catholic baptism, a protestant ritual baptized three more children. The same colors, the same people, were there.

Christened by Father Joseph Austin the Roman Catholic ritual were John William Wise, five - month old son of Lt. and Mrs. Jon Wise, and William Joseph Mullen III, nine-week old son of Capt. and Mrs. William Mullen.

Pre-season Game

197th Drops Support Command, 5-1

By DAVE BUMAN

The 2nd Infantry Division Support Command and the 197th Brigade Tuesday night tangled under the lights in a pre - season baseball game with the 197th coming out on top, 5 to 1.

The newly formed Support Command team went into their second pre - season game against the 13 to 2 record of the already strong 197th.

The first inning set the pattern of the game as a contest of pitchers. The 197th's Duane Dechorn, who struck out 19 men in a row against the 3rd Brigade, threw against Support Command's Hays Moody, and Ron Rahr, a former pro-ball pitcher with the Pittsburg Pirates.

A triple in the 3rd by the 197th's Billy Williamson, an All Army Football star, and Georgia Tech All American, broke the ice for the 197th. Following Williamson's triple was a single by 2nd basemen Charlie Millner, allowing Williamson to run in for the score.

The break for Support Command came in the 8th and last inning when a drive by Everett Youngs brought in their only score.

Charlie Wynder, Support Command coach, said after the game, "We feel that we played a fine ballgame, even though we lost." The 197th already has a strong team with a good record in the Division, while this was only our 2nd game in the two weeks we've been together."

Wynder went on to say, "I think with a little more experience as a team and with more practice, we'll have a strong team this season."

Coach Robert Stringer of Support Command says "We credit all that we've been able to do in the short time we've had to work with Col. Jackson. He's given us the support and backing it takes to turn out a winning team." Col. Fred O. Jackson is the commander of Support Command.

Coach Jim Martin of the 197th had this to say: "We feel that we've got what it takes to be a winning ball club, and we'll see what the season brings."

"KNOWING YOUR EQUIPMENT is the first step in maintenance!" says Mr. J. P. Mealing of the division's preventive maintenance indicator (PMIC). Mealing is a weapons maintenance specialist by trade and a Department of Army Civilian from the Rock Island Arsenal, Ill. He is assigned to the course to instruct "Indianheads" in weapons maintenance.

The Joyous Summer Season, a Time for Safety

By JIM GRAHAM

Those murkey days of winter have finally gone their way and Spring is here. Everywhere bright colors flash into the open in the form of those brightly decorated summer sport shirts, pretty girls bathing suits and the early traces of sun burned noses.

It's spring, when a young man's fancy turns lightly to thoughts of — who knows what? Spring, time to come alive, time for fun. But also this warm time of the year is a time for safety.

In a circular distributed by the division Chief of Staff some of the common hazzards of summer work and play are listed to make all division personnel more summer safety concious.

WATER SAFETY

Swimming and boating have always been among the most popular warm weather recreational activies. But as fun as they are there are still certain hazards involved and special safety precautions that must be taken.

For safety's sake don't swim in unfamiliar areas, particularly in pounds and swift streams, without proper supervision or lifeguard personnel. Know the area where you swim to avoid diving in shallow water or areas with submerged obstacles. Most of all, don't over - estimate your own swimming ability.

The popularity of boating grows by leaps and bounds each year. And so does the number of boating accidents. Some of the common errors in boating safety include boating and water skiing without approved life preservers and conducting boating activities in inadequate boats.

Never forget this important rule of water safety: Do Not Drink while participating in water sports.

HEAT CONDITIONS

'Old Man Sun' can be a most welcome friend this time of year but as we know he can surely cause a great deal of discomfort if taken in to large a dose.

That friendly sun can be a fiend if a person becomes over exposed. Another common fault of those who enjoy fun in the sun is the failure to drink sufficient water while participating in strenuous activities and also the failure to take salt tablets when needed.

Along with all the fun that warm weather brings comes an increase in field training activities. With these outdoor activities come the safety hazards and inconveniences that are a part of nature.

FIRST AID

In the event of a serious accident, in the summer time or any time, the ability of bystanders to apply the appropriate first aid becomes a critical life-saving feature. Every person should refresh themselves in First Aid Training with special emphasis on the proper procedures for administering artificial resuscitation in cases of drowning or electrocution.

Being aware of and avoiding these common threats to personal safety during your working time and leasure time can make this welcome summer weather a time of pleasure for you and the ones near to you. MAKE SUMMER SAFETY YOUR BUSINESS.

ONEIDA BEAR II In New York

Sky Soldier Units Due to Return From Eastern Exercise Tomorrow

CAMP DRUM, N.Y.—The 24 11th Air Assault helicopters that participated in Exercise ONEIDA BEAR II are expected to reach Lawson Army Airfield Saturday afternoon.

Maj. Robert Mills, commander of Company A, 227th Assault Helicopter Bn., said that his ships were to leave Camp Drum Thursday.

"The trip should take us three days," he said, "but we might make it in two."

If the ships shave a day off their expected arrival time they would reach Fort Benning late today.

Elements of the 408th Supply and Service Bn., the 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Bn. and other troops began leaving the upper New York state military reservation Thursday.

In the last days of mock battle, Wednesday, 11th Air Assault helicopters ignited the fuse for the massive attack that swung the 'war' in favor of the 'friendly' forces.

At 1:15 a.m., 15 UH-1D Hueys led by Maj. Mills lifted three platoons of 'friendly' soldiers behind aggressor lines.

The infantry men worked for nearly four hours, knocking out a bridge and supply dump, but failing to penetrate into 'aggressor' headquarters.

Then the helicopters lifted the troops back to their camp for the march forward with the main body.

At dawn, live artillery began hammering simulated aggressor positions. Hours

Aerial Rocket System Tried On 'D' Hueys

A development and testing program is being conducted by division aerial rocket artillerymen to improve their fire power capabilities.

Battery B of the 377th Artillery has been given the project of mounting the XM-3 rocket system on the UH-1D Iroquois helicopter. This weapon system is usually mounted on the UH-1B model 'Huey'.

The battery, under the command of Maj. Jack O. Phillabaum, has mounted four Aero 7-0 cannister rocket pods on the UH-1D using the XM-3 mounts thus increasing the armament load from 48 to 76 2.75 inch rockets.

A greater engagement range has been achieved by mounting the M-3 system on the UH-1D due to the increased fuel load over the smaller 'B' model.

Capt. Richard K. Queeney, the unit project officer has stated that the new weapons system cuts the reload time

SKY SOLDIER-CORRESPONDENT BLACK
Col. Kellar Presents Air Assault Wings

Honorary Award

Writer Charles Black Is Now Sky Soldier

Last week Charles Black, military writer for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, became an honorary member of the 11th Air Assault Division.

In a ceremony at the 188th Infantry Battalion, in the Harmony Church area, Mr. Black was presented by Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar, commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, an honorary Sky Soldier Certificate and an Air Assault Badge on behalf of Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Mr. Black qualified for the Sky Soldier Badge after mastering the basic and advanced rappelling techniques and accompanying a patrol of Company B "Bull Eagles", of the 188th, on a raiding mission as a rifleman.

The patrol began by rappelling into pine woods from a height of 60 feet, then walk-

In Fort Bliss Show

11th Helicopters Show Armament

Three armed helicopters from the 11th Air Assault Division showed the vast fire power available through aircraft armament during a demonstration staged April 19 and 20 at Fort Bliss, Tex.

All aircraft personnel of the Fourth Army area had gathered at Fort Bliss for the annual Fourth U. S. Army Aviation Conference.

The Air Assault team was headed by the division assistant aviation officer, Lt. Col. Kenneth Mertell who led the air assault portion of the aviation conference.

The three aircraft, one from the 377th Artillery, one from the 11th Aviation Group and one from the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry, displayed different facets of aerial armament used in the air mobile concept.

A UH-1B helicopter from the 3rd Battalion, 377th Artillery proved the devastating destructive power available with the XM-3 rocket system. One full load of 48 2.75 inch rockets was salvoed, showing the great firepower of one aerial rocket helicopter.

This rocket ship was commanded by CWO Virl D. Martin of the 377th's Battery C.

The equally devastating but slightly more refined M-16 rocket system was displayed in a firing run by a UH-1B helicopter flown by Lt. Emmett W. Millhaller of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion.

The XM-16 system employes the standard 2.75 inch rocket pods but has 7.62 mm machineguns mounted above the pods.

The classy wire - guided SS-11 armor piercing guided missile was fired for the Fourth Army demonstration by a Huey flown by Capt. John Hatcher of Troop D, 17th Cavalry.

In addition to the air assault armed helicopters, ships from the Fourth Army area showed other aircraft and weapons systems used by aerial armament.

Four H-34 Choctaw helicopters showed another application of artillery firepower from an aerial platform by mounting and firing 4.5 inch aerial rockets.

In addition, OH - 13 helicopter's showed the shoot-look-move technique of reconnaissance used by the air cavalry units.

The entire aerial armament display was narrated by Capt. William E. Rahn of the operations section of Company D, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion.

During the second day of the aviation conference the methods, of operations and technique application of the Air Assault Division were explained to the Fourth Army aviators by Col. Mertell and Maj. Donald G. Curry, 11th Aviation operations officer.

At Kelley Hill

Library Rededicated; Honors CMH Holder

The new multi-million dollar library on Kelley Hill recently became a memorial to Congressional Medal of Honor holder Lt. Lee R. Hartell when the building was renamed in his honor.

The rededication ceremony was the highlight of Library Week and was held on Wednesday afternoon, April 28.

Col. William R. Lynch, commanding officer of the 2nd Brigade, opened the library under its new name with a ribbon cutting ceremony.

The colonel gave a resume of the heroic exploits of Lt. Hartell which earned him the Medal of Honor. Hartell received the nations highest award for action during combat in Korea.

The history of the Hartell Library is short. The new modern facility was opened on Feb. 25, 1965. It was officially open when Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Fort Benning commander, cut the traditional red ribbon with a pair of gold scissors. Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard was first in line to take advantage of the new library when he checked out its first book.

There has actually been a library present on Kelley Hill since Oct. 25, 1958. The new building is the third home since that date.

One lady in blue has been with the Kelley Hill library since its inception. Miss Josephine Zinceau has stayed with the library through all three of its homes. She is now head librarian at the new Hartell Library. She is assisted by SSgt. C. H. Harris, Cpl. Richard M. Singer and PFC Gary R. Rorter.

ing silently towards the objective, a clandestine radio relay station, and escaping after the mission had been accomplished, through 3000 meters of swamps and hills. It was also pointed out in the certificate that Mr. Black has covered the activities of the 11th Air Assault Division, since its creation in 1963, in a timely and interesting manner.

Following the award of the Sky Soldiers badge, Capt. Oliver W. Dillon, company commander of the "Bull Eagles" read a company letter citing Mr. Black as an honorary member of that unit.

BUY BONDS

Millions of Americans have found Bonds a dependable way of providing for financial emergencies.

From The IDEA CENTER

'Imaginuity' Corner

By Lt. John Kramer

A certain amount of extra equipment called section equipment is required for the maintenance and firing of the 105mm howitzer in the field. Since the prime mover of the howitzer is the helicopter, this extra equipment is usually tied and strapped onto the gun itself to make the load as compact as possible.

Up until now, this has been a clumsy and time-consuming operation. After landing, the equipment must be untied from the howitzer before firing can commence. Before pick-up when changing position, it must again be collected and retied to the piece.

SSgt. Billy A. Talkington of Battery A, 15th Artillery has designed a method of attaching his section equipment to his howitzer in such a manner that the handling of this equipment is no longer a factor in the time it takes him to prepare his piece for action.

COMPACT PACKAGE

SSgt. Talkington began by taking all the various pieces of equipment and fabricating them into one compact package. On either side of his section chest, which holds all the small pieces of equipment, he attached a gas can and brackets to hold his two water cans. Bolted onto the face of the chest are his sight box and commo wire reel. On top of the chest and strapped between the two water cans are his canvas and if required camouflage netting. On top of the canvas are affixed the shovels, picks, and axes.

All of his equipment is now organized into one compact package that can be easily handled, moved, and stored as if were one.

This package is set into steel brackets. With the section equipment placed on the brackets, the tube is depressed into the traveling position, automatically locking the equipment in place.

To remove the equipment, the tube is merely elevated part way, and the package is lifted out and carried away.

SPEEDY FIRING

The most important advantage of this arrangement is the speed with which the howitzer is ready to fire. Once out of the helicopter, the gun is ready to fire immediately, leaving all the section equipment still affixed.

If the gun, directly upon unloading is to be engaged in direct fire at extremely low elevations, only one or two pieces of canvas need be slipped off.

With the section equipment stored in front of the axle, the weight of the equipment counterbalance the weight of the trails, moving the center of gravity forward. This new distribution of weight offers a better balance of the piece, allowing two men to handle it easily. This increased maneuverability of the heavy howitzer is especially useful for the more efficient and rapid loading and unloading from the CH-47 helicopter.

Jump Sergeant Retires In an Appropriate Style

1st Sgt. Raymond F. Seith of the 1st Bn., 187th Inf. retired in appropriate style last week, with a special airborne retirement ceremony following a drop on Dekkar Air Strip last Tuesday.

A master-parachutist well known in airborne circles for the past twenty years, Sgt. Seith requested the rather unique parachute operation in lieu of a normal ceremony, and was accordingly accomodated by the battalion, who arranged Tuesday's operation.

Jumping from four UH-1Ds provided by the 11th Aviation Group, the longtime trooper-non - com was accompanied by Col. Harlow G. Clark; his Company Commander, Capt. John G. Gergulis; his close friend and replacement, PSgt Richard Tucker, and 29 friends from the battalion.

A beautiful day and expert flying loaned color to the occasion, and the 32 paratroopers were put right on the drop zone close to the assembly area, where the ceremony was conducted and refreshments served.

Immediately following the drop was a flyby of troop-carrying helicopters from the 227th after which 1st Lt. Danny Byard led four expert sky-divers in a high altitude jump, executed with precision and accuracy, with the five jumpers landing in the area fronting the refreshment stand.

For Support Command Ladies

Spring Blossoms Theme At Tri-Monthly Luncheon

Spring, with its blossoms, bunnies and Easter baskets was the theme of the tri-monthly luncheon held by the ladies of Support Command at the Custer Terrace Officers Club on April 13.

The officers wives of the 711th Maintenance Battalion were hostesses.

Hair stylest, Mr. Bernie was the guest speaker. He presented a program of helpful hints on hair care. His models were Mrs. Alfred Tolson, and Mrs. Deryl Novak. Both ladies are recent brides and newcomers to the 711th Battalion.

At the meeting farewell and bon voyage were wished to Mrs. Robert C. Shaw, wife of the former Support Commander commanding officer. The Shaws will depart in the near future for a new assignment in India.

Mrs. Shaw was presented with a gift of silver as a token of esteem and affection by the ladies of Support Command.

Organization and planning for the luncheon was handled by Mrs. Granville Stagg, wife of the 711th commander, and by Mrs. C. D. Yoder. They were assisted by Mrs. N. Perry. Decorations Chairman was Mrs. P. Jones while the reservation committee was headed by Mrs. R. Graham.

Door prizes included the lovely centerpiece of spring flowers, two hair styling gift certificates and a Japanese doll which was donated by Mrs. Y. Nagamine.

Chapeaus Crazy Indeed At 10th ATB Luncheon

Crazy indeed were the fancy homemade chapeaus styled and modeled by the ladies of the 10th ATB at their 'Crazy Hat' luncheon.

The whimsical luncheon with its witty millinary masterpieces was held Wednesday, April 28, in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers Open Mess.

Entertainment which followed the luncheon — in addition to the fun provided by the wild and wonderful home-made hats — was a showing of styles on a more serious side. Fashions and hats for sports wear were shown by fashion representatives, Mrs. Beverly.

Mrs. Gregory Olney, wife of the 10th ATB commander, presided over a brief business meeting and welcomed newcomers and guests. Prizes were then awarded by Mrs. Beverly for the best (or was it the worst?) self styled hats.

The prize for the prettiest hat went to Mrs. Leroy Jones. The craziest hat was fashioned by Mrs. Lester Robertson. Possibly the biggest threat to the Paris designers was made by Mrs. Kenneth Blake who received the award for most original hat in the show.

Hostesses for this monthly 10th Brigade social affair were Mrs. Robert McCoy and the ladies of the 170th Aircraft Maintenance Bn.

Words of special praise went to the decorations committee, headed by Mrs. Boswell, for the immaginative way they created wearable hats to serve as centerpieces for each of the luncheon tables and miniature hats that were used at each place at the head table.

Signs of Spring Seen By 187th

Signs of spring were numerous in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess when ladies of the 187th Transport Airplane Co. met recently for their April coffee.

Spring flowers in a large blue watering pot centered the coffee table, and guests plucked their nametags, decorated with fresh flowers from the top of a green and white patio umbrella.

Highlighting the coffee were the presentation of a farewell gift to Mrs. Ted Holloway, wife of a departing company commander, and the welcoming of Mrs. Willis Anderson, wife of the new commanding officer.

Special guests at the affair were Mrs. Carolyn Shroeder from Greensburg, Ind., and Patti Cullen from New Zealand. Hostesses were Mrs. Ralph Weber, Mrs. Charles Hardy, and Mrs. James Davis.

Battalion Ladies Meet For Bridge

The ladies of the 3rd Battalion (Aerial Rocket), 377th Artillery met for their monthly bridge party April 28 on the balcony of MOOM. Mrs. Warren T. Trent was hostess for the 20 ladies present.

High score was won by Mrs. Jack O. Phillabaum, second high by Mrs. William L. Anderson, low by Mrs. Dewey M. King, and deuce prize by Mrs. Morris J. Brady.

226th Ladies Hold Come As You Are Morning Coffee

Ladies of Company C, 226th Aerial Surveillance and Escort Bn. held a come as you are coffee on April 23 at the home of Mrs. James Issac.

Co-hostesses for the affair were Mrs. Frank Kerble and Mrs. John Keefer. Fines were imposed on all ladies who decided to wear their finery for the occasion.

Following a delightful variety of morning snacks, a raffle was held and a beautiful cosmetic case was won by Mrs. James Gates.

Mrs. W. B. Hudson, mother-in-law of Mrs. Samuel Hudson was a special guest for the morning affair.

The ladies will hold their next coffee on May 25 at the home of Mrs. Samuel Hudson. Mrs. Ronald Vaughn and Mrs. Theodore Manolas will be co-hostesses for the occasion.

Battery Gathers For Spring Coffee

The ladies of Battery C, 377th Artillery met last Thursday for their April coffee in the Mirror Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The hostesses for the affair were Mrs. Paul R. Riley Jr. and Mrs. Charley R. White.

The guests included Mrs. Nelson A. Mahone Jr., wife of the battalion commander and Mrs. Koehler, mother of the battery commander.

G-2 and M1 Bid Farewell To Departing Callihans

'Au revoir' and best wishes were recently expressed to Maj. and Mrs. Charles Callihan. The major is retiring as commander of the 11th MI Detachment.

The Callihans were the special guest at a social given in their honor by the officers and wives of the division G-2 Section and the MI Detachment.

The cocktail buffet was held in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers Open Mess. All arrangements were made by Maj. and Mrs. Charles Gibson.

Following the cocktail hour Lt. Col. Frederick Ackerson and Maj. Nevin Phillips bid farewell to the Callihans and presented them with a signed inscription and the floral centerpiece.

Maj. Callihan has been with the division since his return from Germany in August of 1964.

Further celebrations were in order with the recent promotion of Maj. Phillips being observed. A baby cup was presented to Capt. and Mrs. George Sullivan.

Guests for the evening were Dr. and Mrs. Davis and Miss Chittick. The Davis' are the parents of Lt. and Mrs. Lawrence Davis. Miss Chittick is the sister of Lt. William Chittick.

Tower Training

The First Step In Being a Pro

Rappelling has become a trademark of Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Infantrymen and engineers have used the rappelling techniques developed in the division during tactical situations and have thrilled spectators during air assault demonstrations on various occasions at points spread about the continent.

This rather exciting method of exiting a flying helicopter requires continued training to develop skills and varied techniques.

Tower training is the primary move toward learning to rappel tactically.

After an initial course of instruction on techniques and equipment, the new rappeller moves to the rappelling tower.

For the newcomer, the 30 foot climb to the top of the tower is a long way up.

Once there he is met by a safety NCO. The long nylon rope that will be the route to the ground is attached to the same type rig that is in the UH-1D helicopter, the ship used for a tactical rappell.

There are two basic types of rigs that are used by rappellers. The basic technique used by most of the 'pros' in rappelling is the Swiss Seat. The other rig is known as the 'chest sling'. This rig is placed around the chest and between the legs to give an increased form of balance to the rappeller who is carrying a mm recoiless rifle.

But, the Swiss Seat is 'in' for rappellers. This rig is attached around the waist with a 'snap link' at the front. The rope on which the rappeller rides is twisted through the link to control the speed of descent. The 'pros' use two loops. Newcomers use three.

When you're all hooked up, it's over the side of the tower and on to a cross bar which stimulates the landing strut of the helicopter.

On the cross bar you assume the 'L' position. In the 'L' the legs are straight out from the tower, the trunk of the body facing heaven.

With a word from the safety NCO and a push with your legs, down the rope you go, controlling the speed of your descent with the right hand which is extended below the body.

The ride down is not nearly as long as the climb up and once on the ground the newcomer is ready to have at it again.

Five times on the tower and you're ready for the real action, a rappel from a helicopter.

In the words of a real 'old pro' in the 'art' of rappelling, 'It's great sport. They ought to make you pay to do it.'

GEN. KINNARD CONGRATULATES CAPT. ANDERSON
Sgt. Maj. Boyle Reads Orders As Col. Buchanan Observes

Men of Support Command Are Cited During Review

A retreat ceremony staged this week at Dickman Field honored officers and enlisted men of Support Command units.

During the ceremony the Bronze Star medal with 'V' device, the Air Medals, nine Army Commendation Medals plus certificates of retirement were presented by Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander who acted as reviewing officer.

The Bronze Star medal with 'V' device was presented to Capt. Richard K. Anderson of Headquarters Company, 11th Med. Bn. He received the award for heroism shown during an aerial medical evacuation mission while under heavy fire when attacked by the Viet Cong. Gun fire struck the commander of the helicopter ambulance in which Capt. Anderson was flying.

When the helicopter crashed, Capt. Anderson pulled the wounded aircraft commander from the air ambulance and across open terrain to a nearby tree line where he administered first aid.

He then reorganized the remaining crew and joined a contingent of friendly ground forces, established a perimiter defense and directed rescue helicopters to a landing zone. His actions were responsible for keeping casualties to a minimum and securing the crash site.

Three members of the 611th Maintenance Bn. were presented clusters to the Air Medal. Capt. Harold L. Jones received the third through the seventh cluster. The second, third and fourth cluster went to Sp6 John L. Justice while the first award of the Air Medal was earned by Sp4 William Culhane. The Air Medal is presented for meritorious achievement while engaged in aerial combat in support of ground forces.

The Army Commendation Medal was presented to Chap. (Maj.) David L. Wilson for meritorious achievement while assigned to the US Army Research Support Group at Fort Belvoir, Va. and Thule, Greenland from January, 1963 to June, 1964.

Gen. Kinnard also presented the Army Commendation Medal to Capt. Patrick H. Brady, 11th Med. Bn.; Lt. Michael A. Killen, 611th Maintenance Battalion; SFC Martin T. McCay, 611th; Sp6 Carlton J. Bledscoe and Sp6 James White, both of the 611th Battalion.

Three men of Support Command concluded their careers and were cited during this review.

The Army Commendation Medal and certificate of retirement were presented to WO James B. Cook, 1st Sgt. Prentice L. Murray and SFC William R. Overby.

The commanding General complimented the Support Command for outstanding performance in providing combat service support to the 11th Air Assault Division throughout the divisions entire existence.

The general particularly noted the high caliber of combat service support given by Support Command during the AIR ASSAULT II exercise.

Two Army Caribous Lift Air Force Group

Easter Sunday, while the residents of Columbus, Ga. prepared for church, the crews of two Army CV-2B "Caribou" aircraft stationed at Fort Benning began a different mission. The United States Army was airlifting a United States Air Force unit.

Two Army aircraft from the 17th Aviation Company supported the United States Air Force by ferrying the Ninth Air Force Band from McEntire Air National Guard Base at Columbia, S. C. to MacDill Air Force Base at Tampa, Fla. The two Army CV-2B's, commanded by Capt. Fernando Fragoso, flew the 31 member band and all of their instruments to their destination.

Upon boarding the shining Army Caribous at McEntire A.N.G. Base, the Air Force band was delighted to discover the factory - fresh condition existing throughout both aircraft. The flight suits that the band members regularly carry to wear over their parade uniforms were quickly laid aside when they saw the spotless red nylon seats and the "spit and polish" inspection condition of the Army planes.

At MacDill Air Force Base, after generously thanking the Army crews for a most interesting and helpful flight, the Ninth Air Force Band left to give the premier performance of a tour that is to include most of the bases in Florida.

later the helicopters made their largest air assault of the five day maneuver when they lifted a battalion of "friendly" soldiers to confront the aggerssors.

Late Tuesday afternoon in anticipation of the live firing, 11th Air Assault Helicopters swept clean of men and machines the Camp Drum impact area.

When the firing began Wednesday all troops were clear of the danger zone.

The weapons system utilizes a universal mount which allows added flexibility in the choice of armament and is more streamlined than the XM-3 system. The air speed capabilities of the UH-1D are not adversely affected.

Eighteen members of the Kaniengehaga Battalion recently completed NCO school. The purpose of this school was to provide guidance and orient newly promoted and potential NCO's in the duties, responsibilities and conduct of non-commissioned officers.

The personnel who attend this course are E-5's who have not previously attended an NCO school, and E-4's serving in E-5 positions being considered for promotions.

The classes consisted mainly of Methods of Instruction, Leadership, Military Justice, Guard, Inspections and Dismounted Drill. The school was presented under the supervision of the Battalion S-3 Officer, Capt. Ronald W. Crooks, and the instructors are the Battalion Sgt. Maj. Frank Trujillo, the First Sergeant, and selected Platoon Sergeants.

The students best expressed the success of the school by their own comments: "I think the whole course was very good and necessary"; Sgt. Alfonse Simmons of Company A. Sp4 Karl Dickert of Company D said: "The subjects taught are most important." Sgt. Joe Phelps of Company C commented: "The course should be extended for more than six days".

On the last day of the course, a critique was given along with the Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Robert B. Tulley's remarks.

Top Airborne Platoon Chosen From 187th Infantry

The 11th Air Assault Division's best paratrooper rifle platoon was named last week after the point grades for all airborne platoons were broken down and totaled.

Announcing the results was Capt. David O. Lamb, Rakkasan Operations and Training Officer, who stated that the 3rd Platoon of Company A 187th Inf. beat the 3rd Platoon of Company B by one twenty-fifth of a point to claim the title.

Leading the 3rd Platoon through the rugged test was 1st Lt. Emmette Y. Burton and PSgt. Katsumi Hirata, with SFC Charles Ellis, SSgt. Matthew Hough, SSgt. Tommy N. Robinson and Sgt. Marvin C. Finnin as squad leaders.

Sixteen hours in duration, the rugged rifle platoon Army Training Test covered twenty one, different tactical situations requiring action on which the platoons were graded. Competition was keen as the nine Rak rifle platoons went through each phase with high grades.

Characterized by this aggressive determination, the nine platoons took on the generalized appearance of being about equal in tactical proficiency, making a final determination difficult and requiring the judges to delve into the more minor areas of grading, making the decision on fine points.

NIGHT RAID

Most members of Company A's 3rd Platoon were agreed that the most outstanding area for them occurred during a night raid, which was near-perfect from beginning to end.

A briefing by Lt. Burton upon issuance of the order enabled every man to know exactly what was expected of him, and the raid accordingly went off like clockwork.

The platoon moved to within fifteen meters of their objective undetected, and was then only discovered when they encountered concertina wire. From this position, they launched the attack, overwhelming their aggressor by surprise and speed of movement.

Sgt. Hirata singled out S-Sgt. Hough and his 1st Squad, which served as the Platoon's point during the raid, for a particularly outstanding job of putting the platoon right on their objective without incident.

The 3rd Platoon of Company B, led by 1st Lt. Jimmie Smith and SFC Ramon T. Mansapi, really gave the Rak Alphas a run for their money, as evidenced by the 1-25th of a point margin.

Highlight of the test for the Bravo's 3rd Platoon came during a daylight attack on an independent mission when the platoon encountered an aggressor squad well dug in on high ground having all avenues of approach covered.

Utilizing fire and maneuver to maximum advantage, with the support of their own organic heavy weapons (two M-60s and two 90mm RRs), the platoon rapidly disposed of the defending squad, rapidly seizing their objective which was Hill 263 in the vicinity of Cyclone Road and Highway 26.

Next on the schedule for the 1st Brigade paratroopers during this current training cycle is the company Army Training Tests which will be conducted this month.

1st Brigade 'Ops' Officer Receives Lt. Col. Promotion

Lt. Col. Harold G. Keebaugh, director of operation for the 1st Air Assault Brigade attained the highest rank yet awarded within the brigade when he received the silver leaves of a lieutenant colonel last Monday afternoon.

Present for the ceremony, which was held in the office of Brigade Commander, Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, was Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles who did the honors. Also on hand was the newly promoted colonel's wife, Mrs. Joan Keebaugh, Rak Commander, Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark, and all principle command and staff officers of the 1st Brigade.

A real credit to the Army's reserve officer training program, Col. Keebaugh interrupted his civilian education to serve as an enlisted man in World War II, distinguishing himself in combat with the 70th Infantry Division.

Following the war, the colonel resumed his studies and obtained his commission through the ROTC program at Syracuse University in May of 1948.

Col. Keebaugh has a host of experience in command and staff assignments, and in addition to being a qualified Army aviator and a qualified military parachutist, is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College. He also did post-graduate work at the University of Connecticut from 1952 until 1954.

Prior to joining the 1st Brigade in 1963, Col. Keebaugh was commander of the 82nd Airborne Division's Aviation Battalion at Fort Bragg, N. C. and prior to that, served with the aviation center at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Among his numerous decorations are the Bronze Star Medal, the Combat Infantryman Badge, three campaign stars, the Army Commendation Medal, pilots wings and the parachutist badge.

Marne Medic Makes SSgt.

SSgt. Glen J. Cosby, an assistant platoon sergeant in the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Rock Medical Platoon was promoted to his present grade last week, with the 1st 38th Commander, Lt. Col. Arne H. Eliasson presenting Cosby his rocker.

A native of Harrogate, Tenn., he enlisted in the Army in April, 1953, and has served as a "medic" ever since in several Infantry battalions, prior to coming to the 38th Infantry.

Captain Earns Rotary Ticket

Capt. Don E. Moore, Company A, 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion, was awarded his rotary wing instrument rating last week at the completion of an intensive training program conducted within his unit. All noninstrument pilots within the battalion are undergoing training to qualify for their ticket and Capt. Moore is the most recent graduate of the program.

Capt. Moore joined the Stacked Deck Battalion and Alpha Company in May of 1964, having completed an aviation assignment in Viet Nam. He is a Section Leader and unit communications officer for Alpha Company.

Capt. Moore's instrument ticket brings Alpha Company's total to fifteen; 50 per cent of the assigned aviators. Additional aviators are expected to complete the training program soon and be given their final check ride, adding to Alpha Company's instrument flying capability.

ARMED FORCES DAY

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The Army and its sister services are on guard around the Free World to prevent aggression.

Service Awards Given At Artillery Ceremony

Driver of the Month of the 42nd Artillery was the award featured at a recent battalion retreat ceremony here. In all, eight awards were presented to personnel and units by the 42nd Artillery's commander, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber.

Recipients of the engraved trophies for the Driver honors were PFC Robert A. Yax of Headquarters and Service Battery and PFC Harold A. Wright of Battery C, for March and April respectively.

The award is conferred upon the driver who, in monthly competition, demonstrates superior knowledge of driving practices and maintenance procedures, hold a clear safety record, and whose assigned vehicle passes a rigorous maintenance inspection.

Also receiving individual awards were SP4 Joseph K. Peterfeso of Headquarters and Service Battery and SP4 Robert J. McNamara of Battery B, each receiving, for March and April respectively, the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery Soldier of the Month plaque. In addition, Col. Farber presented SP4 McNamara an engraved cigarette lighter for garnering the 42nd Artillery Soldier of the Month honors for April.

Battery C received three 3rd Army Savings Awards for its achievements in the Army Savings Program. Representing Battery C for the presentation were Battery Commander, Capt. Loyal G. Hightower Jr., 1st Sgt. Leroy Smith and 2nd Lt. William L. Lund, Battery savings officer.

Two Earn Silver Bars

Lieutenants Thomas McDavid and Fred Abel, A Battery, 1st Battalion 15th Artillery, received their orders promoting them from 2d Lieutenant to First Lieutenant recently.

Lt. Col. Frank A. Athanason, commanding officer of the 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery and Capt. Crocker, Battery A commander, pinned 1st Lt. bars on the two Battery A officers in a ceremony held in the mess hall this Tuesday. Assisting the two commanders in the exchange of bars was the wife of one of the Lt's Mrs. Sally McDavid.

New Paratroopers Learn Rappelling From 1st Brigade

Some 120 newly assigned paratroopers to the 1st Brigade are undergoing rappelling training this week, and will graduate this afternoon on Dickman Field.

The exceptionally large class, probably the biggest since the early days of air assault, is being handled by Company B of the 187th Infantry, who voluntarily assumed responsibilty for training and qualifying all of the battalion's new personnel at one crack to prevent an interruption of the normal training schedule.

Under the direction of Company B's Commander, Capt. William C. Roll, a special committee was formed under the supervision of 1st Lt. George Quigley and SSgt. James C. Morris to conduct the three stage training which consists of initial orientation and use of equipment, tower rappelling and helicopter descents.

The first two stages were conducted yesterday in the 1st Brigade rappelling tower area.

Former NCO Becomes Commissioned Officer

A long, hard grind recently came to a close for a former member of the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Air Assault Brigade.

George E. Cassady was assigned to the Brigade Headquarters as the Administration Sergeant in the S-1 section prior to the attachment of this unit to the 11th Air Assault Division. When the Headquarters moved to the area last September, Cassady stayed behind. His reason: Officer Candidate School. He was accepted for the 60th class beginning Oct. 12. Monday April 19, completed six months of hard work and long hours for him. He received his commission on Monday as the 2nd Brigade Adjutant, Maj. Joseph L. Parlas, and Lt. Cassady's wife pinned the gold bars on his shoulders.

Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general of the Third United States Army, was the guest speaker. He spoke of the responsibilities and duties the new officer would have and some of the accomplishments that would be expected of the new officer.

Lt. Cassady has six years of service behind him and such assignments as Fort Jackson, Fort McClellan, Fort Sill, Redstone Arsenal, Korea, and Hawaii as an enlisted man.

His new assignment will be here at Fort Benning.

Tops Pastry School

Sp4 Roger E. May, a cook from Company D, 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, recently graduated as honor student from the Pastry Baking School at Fort Benning.

He received a letter of commendation from Col. Edward Foxworth, Chief of Service Sections, citing him for his outstanding performance as a student. In addition, Capt. Theodore S. Danielsen, commanding officer of Company D, presented Sp4 May with a three day pass for his application at school.

Sp4 May, from Glenford, New York, joined the Army in 1962.

Mess Hall Gets Big Facelifting

The cooks of the 478th Flying Crane Company asked permission to lay a new tile floor in the mess hall, construct a fence and plant grass around the building.

Working on their own time, after duty hours. Mess personnel completed the installation of the green asphalt tile, and constructed a corral fence around the freshly turned soil. Though the mess steward insists that only grass will be planted after further preparation of the ground, several packages of beans, corn, onions and watermelon seeds were seen on the sergeant's desk.

228th Flipper-Fin Fan Longs for The Briny Deep and A Sandy Beach

It's too bad the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion isn't stationed adjacent to a good sandy beach somewhere on the cost of Florida. If such were the case the battalion would immediately sprout a skin and scuba diving club. The battalion is fortunate to have among the ranks of Company B, Sp4 Thomas Tsamisis, who would assume the position of instructor in the art of viewing the fishes for long periods of time.

Sp4 Tsamisis is indeed fortunate to be school trained in the use of the aqualung, short suit and spear gun to view the wonderful sights of the underwater world.

To be able to enter the Central Skin Divers Skin and Scuba School in Brooklyn, New York, Sp4 Tsamisis was required to swim a total of 400 feet on the surface of the water and 80 feet underwater, and go a complete and comprehensive physical examination. The course lasts nine weeks, one night each week, and three hours per night result in a very comprehensive course of instruction as the classes are divided into half classroom study and half practical exercises in the pool.

Old and New Engineers Refresh Skills for ATT's

New combat engineers as well as the old timers in the trade have begun two weeks of rugged training to refresh their skills in preparation for forthcoming Army Training Tests.

The airborne engineers of Company A, 127th Engineer Bn. are refreshing the skills of their men with a series of classes and exercises which are planned to make sure the company is prepared for its company and battalion Army Training Test.

The test is designed to test various facets of the unit's ability to perform its mission of direct support.

Some of the areas of interest that the engineers are stressing are construction, demolitions, roads and airstrikes, bridges, laying mine fields, blowing craters, communications, maintenance of equipment and the technical knowledge of personnel and their jobs.

Last year these same efforts proved profitable as the 2nd Platoon of Company A was selected the best platoon in the battalion.

NEW ENGINEER LEARNS BASIC SKILLS

127th Executive Officer Honored at Retirement

Maj. Everett E. Oleson, former executive officer of the 127th Engineer Bn. was honored upon his recent retirement by a review staged by the men of his battalion.

The major a veteran combat engineer who has seen combat in Europe and Korea, was presented the Army Commendation Medal, a certificate of appreciation and certificate of retirement from the reviewing officer, Brig. Gen. John M. Wright, assistant division commander.

Maj. Oleson is a former enlisted man who began his military career with the Illinois National Guard in 1939. He was commissioned after attending Armor OCS in 1942.

He received the Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters for his service as a tank platoon commander during the Normandy, North France, Central Europe and Rhineland campaigns.

Returning to civilian life after WWII, he worked in the construction field, then reenlisted in 1949, rising to the grade of master sergeant.

He was recalled to active duty as a first lieutenant at Fort Belvoir, Va..

In his career as an officer the major has seen combat as a construction platoon leader and company commander. He has served National Guard units and in various Engineer battalions from Alaska to Korea and Japan.

A highlight of the retirement review was the debut of the "Beaver-mobile", a multi-purpose lightweight engineer vehicle constructed by the men of the 127's Company A.

Company's Exec Attends Courses

The executive officer of the Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade, Lt. Don H. St. John, recently participated in the Special Air Transportation class given by the United States Army Transportation School, Fort Eustis, Va.

Given this mission by the former Headquarters Company commanding officer, Capt. Alfred F. Fiumano Jr., Lt. St. John was sent on this mission to take part in training involving the loading of all major aircraft to include Air Force airplanes.

The first phase was conducted at Fort Eustis for four days while the second part took place at Lawson Army Air Field, terminating with static loading of the largest and most widely used of the United States Transport - type aircraft, C-124's.

Lt. St. John, a graduate of Middle Tennessee State College, came to the 2nd Brigade from Germany. His first job in the 2nd Brigade was to be commanding officer of one of the AIT companies on Kelley Hill. When the AIT companies were discontinued Lt. St. John became a Liaison Officer for the S-3 Office of the 2nd Brigade Headquarters. His next assignment was his present duty assignment, 2nd Brigade Headquarters Company executive officer.

Chaplain Announces Tops in Bible Contest

Last week Chap. (Capt.) Ralph S. Spear, of the 1st Bn., 188th Inf., announced the winners of the Battalion's Bible Contest.

The contest, sponsored by Chap. Spear, ran through March and April and consisted of 30 questions about the Bible and general information topics dealing with religion and the Army.

First prize winner was PFC Robert R. Sasser of Headquarters Company who received a three day pass. Second prize went to PFC Robert E. Rutledge of Company D who received a certificate good for one day's duty on KP or CQ, to be performed by the chaplain in his place. Third prize was won by PFC James A. Ware of Headquarters Company who received ten dollars in cash.

The purpose of the contest, according to Chap. Spear, was to stimulate reading of the Bible and raise greater interest in the Chapel program. The chaplain helped to solve some of the hardest questions by publishing hints during the contest.

A typical comment by those taking part in the contest was, "It has promoted more interest in the Chapel program than any other program I have ever seen."

81st Preparing For Annual ATT

The ability of Air Assault artillerymen to move and shoot under simulated combat conditions was evaluated this week as the 81st Artillery practiced for its annual Army Training Test.

The test, to be given later this month, requires the battalion to fire both day and night missions. It is conducted in three phases.

Phase I begins when the alert is received. The battalion commander studies the tactical situation and issues his instructions and begins his reconnaissance. Phase I is completed after the first battery in position completes two area fire missions.

Phase II features ten night missions, one of which is fired under illumination.

At dawn of the second day two batteries are attached to infantry battalion task forces to initiate Phase III. After they are airlifted to new positions the test terminates with the battery remaining in position firing two targets of opportunity missions.

Leaves of Gold To 228th Pilot

The commanding officer of Company B, 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, Bobbie E. Bogard, received his gold oak leaves from Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver, commanding officer of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, in a ceremony in Col. Silver's office.

Maj. Bogard started his commissioned career by being graduated from Engineer Officers Candidate School in 1954. The major entered the Army aviation in 1954 with fixed wing qualification and became qualified in 1955. The major finished instrument school in 1957.

The Bogards have traveled to Alaska and the Panama Canal Zone. Maj. Bogard received his CH-21 check out at Fort Rucker and proceeded to South Viet Nam where he served with the 118th Aviation Company. He returned to the states and was assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division, arriving at Fort Benning in May, 1964. His first assignment was as Executive Officer of Tiger company and later took over Company B as the commanding officer.

Best Mess Award

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Air Assault Brigade, commanded by Capt. Richard B. Browning, received the Best Mess Award of the 2nd Brigade. Competition among the eleven mess halls in the brigade was keen, but under the direction of the company mess steward, SSgt. Mershel Williams, and his mess team, the company won the award.

Capt. Browning commended the mess team for its hard work and the fine results that it achieved. WO Paul A. Bows, 2nd Brigade Food Service Advisor, announced that the criteria for the award were based on sanitation of the messing facilities, food preparation, and general appearance of the premises. In addition to the latter, was how well the team knew mess procedures.

Women Are Small-Boned With Almond-Shaped Eyes

Vietnamese People Friendly--if They Like You

Editor's Note: From time to time, The Sky Soldier News will briefly explore various aspects of Vietnam because of that country's particularly current aptness for the American soldier. This issue concentrates on geography, climate and people.

According to press reports, the United States in the past months bolstered its forces in Vietnam.

Heavy Levy

At the same time, an unusually heavy levy hit serveal post units. Many men had barracks bags packed and travel orders stamped almost before the full realization set in.

With the administration presumably undergoing a thorough soul - searching as it ponders ways to recoup the Vietnam situation, there hangs the spectre of additional increase of U. S. strength in that country.

Units at Fort Benning have already contributed substantially to the inventory of forces in Vietnam. There is no indication that they will not continue to do so.

In this light, it might not be remiss to examine some of the particular aspects of Vietnam—its climate, geography, customs, history and attitudes — as compiled by the Department of Defense.

The information is contained in one of the familiar "pocket guide" series. This particular one is DOD PG-21, otherwise known as DA Pam 20-198, NAVPERS 93135, etc.

Although the pamphlet's year of publication is not given in the back is a letter signed by Secretary of Defense McNamara and dated December 1963.

Since that time, Vietnam has undergone myriad overt and subtle changes, not the least of which has been its rapid succession of governments.

Optimism Fades

Since then, also, the early optimism with the war has dissipated. The population is booming. But most of the facts of the booklet are constants.

"When you reach south Vietnam," the booklet says, "you will be in a country with a civilization that predates the birth of Christ but which, since 1954, has been a divided nation, like Korea."

"North of the 17th parallel and Ben Hai River lies Communist - controlled North Vietnam and south is the free Republic of Vietnam."

"The Republic of Vietnam is somewhat less than half the size of California and long and narrow like that state."

South China Sea

"It occupies the southern-eastern section of the Indo-Chinese Peninsula in Southeast Asia, and borders the South China Sea and the Gulf of Siam."

"Near neighbors to the west are Laos, Cambodia and Thailand. Beyond Communist Vietnam to the north looms the vast territory of Red China."

"The southern section of the rugged Annamite mountains forms a spine down to the Mekong Delta region around Saigon. In places, mountain spurs jut out to the sea, dividing the coastal plain into sections. Sand dunes 10 to 60 feet high are common along the long coastline."

Narrow in Places

"The country is narrow up near Hue — so narrow that only a 30- to 50-mile strip lies between Laos and the South China Sea."

"Here the coastal rice fields very quickly give way to the uncultivated foothills of the mountains. In the past, lowland Vietnamese preferred to leave the mountains to tribespeople, wild animals and evil spirits."

"South Vietnam has a typically tropic climate of two seasons: hot and dry and hot and rainy."

"In the southern delta region, the rains usually begin in late May and continue through September. April and early May are the hottest and most humid months of the year."

Rainy Season

"Along the central coast, the rainy season begins in October causes periodic floods through December, and continues with drizzles from January to March. July and August are the months when heat and humidity reach their peak."

"In pleasant contrast, the highlands are usually cool at night regardless of the season."

"Like other tropical countries, Vitnam has the usual variety of bugs, flies, mosquitos and other insects. It's S. O. P. to sleep under a mosquito net."

"The population of the Republic of Vietnam is about 14 million, four-fifths of them farmers. (North Vietnam has an estimated 15 million people.) The majority of the people of South Vietnam are ethnic Vietnamese."

Small-Boned Women

"The Vietnamese are small and well - proportioned people, with dark, almond-shaped eyes and black hair. The slender, small-boned women move gracefully in their national dress of long trousers under a long-sleeved tunic slit from hem to waist."

"Most non-laboring Vietnamese men wear Western clothing on the street, but you will see an occasional Chinese in traditional Mandarin dress."

"Workmen and peasants dress in loose black trousers and short black or white jackets. Often a black turban tops the male costume."

"Somewhat reserved and very polite, the Vietnamese are warm and friendly with people they like, and they are very cooperative and helpful."

"They have great respect for virtue and knowledge and honor older people. Many of their customs are conditioned by religious beliefs."

"In the urban areas, French and English are second languages. Children study one or the other in school and increasingly English is their choice."

"But when you leave the cities, you may encounter even telephone operators who speak only Vietnamese."

Officers Study Missile System

Three aerial rocket artillery officers have recently returned from Fort Rucker, Ala. where they attended the M-22 Missile course.

The three aviators who attended this special course were Captains Lawrence O. Zitterain, James R. Foreman and WO Neil P. Stribling, all of Battery B, 377th Artillery.

The M-22 missile is an improved version of the SS-11 and is fired from the UH-1 Iriquois helicopter. It is an anti-tank weapon and is designed to destroy any known armor vehicle.

It is anticipated that an M-22 platoon or section will be included as part of the pattern's organization. Having the M-22 missile would give the 377th Artillery an anti-tank capability.

SFC Soto Tops Bowling League

The first three teams of the 81st Artillery Bowling League are still closely grouped but in a different order this week, The Headquarters Battery "breakers" took over the lead on the strength of a four point win over the Staff Officer "Tigers", and now have a 15-5 record. The Trolley Troopers of Battery B slipped to second place when the Firing Battery Officers won a point and now sport a 14½-5½ record. The Battery A "Alibis" remained in third place with a 14-6 standing.

SFC Albert Soto led the "Bakers" into first place with a 631 series including games of 234 and 221. This series was enough to raise his average to 203. The Breakers also lead the league in total pins with a team average of 867 through the first five weeks of the fifteen week league.

CG's Armed Forces Day Message

On this Armed Forces Day 1965, we live in an era beset by power struggles, political upheavals and threats of war in the world around us.

With emphasis on our theme, "Power for Peace," we at Fort Benning will present an Open House program on Saturday, May 15. We hope that many citizens of the Chattahoochee Valley will accept our invitation to see for themselves how their Army is prepared to defend this nation.

I feel certain that all will take great pride in the military might of their country and gain renewed confidence in the U. S. fighting man from this visit to the "Home of the Infantry."

"Women's Army Auxiliary Corps." A year later, it was made a regular component of the Army and redesignated the "Women's Army Corps."

During World War II, more than 17,000 WAC's served in oversea theaters to include Europe, Africa, the Middle East, China - Burma - India, the Mediterranean and the Pacific. At its peak in April 1945, the Corps had a strength of 100,000 including 6,000 officers.

Since the Corps had no permanent status, many women left the service after the war. Congress remedied this situation by an act dated June 12, 1948 which made the WAC a permanent part of the Regular Army and U. S. Army Reserves.

Standards for enlistment in the Corps are high with emphasis on quality rather than numbers. Applicants for appointment as officers must meet high mental, physical, educational and moral standards. Training is conducted at the WAC Center, Fort McClellan, Ala. Both officer and enlisted personnel attend advanced Army Schools.

The Infantry Museum will set up a tent to display mementos from other countries.

Each exhibit will be manned by personnel to describe the activity or equipment and to answer questions.

Parking areas have been provided at Lawson Field to accommodate post personnel and visitors from the civilian community.

Drivers who enter the Lawson Field area by crossing Eddy Bridge are requested to park at the intersection of 82nd Airborne Division Rd. and Dixie Rd. near the bridge side of the Chattahoochee River. Those who reach Lawson Field through the Main Post should park in an area between 82d Airborne Div. Rd. and the runways.

The Chaplain Section will operate a rest tent with chairs and ice water.

In addition to the informational and educational features of the day, project officers are working to insure the comfort and safety of both participants and visitors.

There is no charge for admission to the side shows or for the rides. The Youth Activities Club (YAC) will sell refreshments at conveniently located stands on the midway.

The public is invited and encouraged to attend.

Army Chorus Will Present Post Concert

The U.S. Army Chorus will present a concert at 8 p.m. May 27 in Marshall Auditorium.

There will be no admission charge.

Visitors will find directional signs from Outpost No. 1 to the School. Parking lots on both the east and west sides of the building will be available.

The Army Chorus was established in 1956 by the secretary of the Army and the Army chief of staff.

For nearly 10 years prior, the group had been singing as members of the Army Band. As the chorus became popular, the need for a group of Army singers capable of independent scheduling brought about the establishment of the Army Chorus.

In addition to many appearances in Washington, the chorus has sung in every major city in the nation, at many colleges and universities, and has presented two concerts at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

Monthly List of Instructional Material Keeps Commanders Up on Changes

Ever wonder how the Infantry commander in the field keeps current with latest doctrine, tactics and techniques from The Infantry School?

Well, one of the ways is through the School's "Monthly List of Instructional Material," a responsibility of the Reserve Components Committee of the School's Department of Nonresident Instruction.

Each month, the committee (under the guidance of Lt. Col. C. O. Nunley) prepares and distributes the list to 920 addresses throughout the world.

This includes 17 active Army division commanders and 185 of their unit commanders; 45 National Guard and Reserve division commanders and 103 of their unit commanders; 58 separate brigade and battalion commanders, both active Army and Reserve components; 44 senior Infantry instructors at other schools and related activities; 52 senior Army advisors to the National Guard; and 184 other units and agencies to include other service schools, training centers, U. S. Army Corps, MAAGs and Missions, and Special Forces units.

Typical items on the list are advance sheets and practical exercises from resident classes, handbooks and special texts. Of the 920 addresses, 141 receive one copy of each item on the list. The remaining 779 addresses receive only the list but are offered one free copy of any item upon request.

Additional copies may be ordered from the USAIS Book Store.

Prominent Visitors To Fort Benning

A 17-gun salute welcomed Gen. Howell M. Estes Jr., commander, Military Air Transport Service, Scott Air Force Base, Ill., to Fort Benning Monday.

The honor ceremony was held at Lawson Army Airfield as the general arrived for a speaking engagement.

Local commander for the ceremony was Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

Participating units included an honor guard of troops from Co. C, 29th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde. commanded by 1st Lt. Stephen M. Heller and the gun salute was fired by Battery A, 2nd Bn., 10th Arty.

Gen. Estes was accompanied by his wife and three other Air Force officers.

He discussed the Military Air Transport Service Command in Marshall Auditorium.

Following an official luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess, Gen. Estes and his party departed from Lawson Airfield.

Infantry School mobility training facilities and equipment was highlighted during a tour here May 11-12 of Brig. Gen. David W. Heister, commanding general, Army Ordnance Center, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md.

Gen. Hiester and his wife were guests of Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, and Mrs. Heintges, at dinner Tuesday evening.

Before Gen. and Mrs. Hiester departed Wednesday, they visited The Infantry Center Maintenance Section.

Fourteen senior Army officers from Belgium, Denmark, Germany, Italy, Spain, Netherlands, and Norway visited Fort Benning May 9-11 as part of a Multi-Country Logistics Orientation tour of U. S. military installations.

The Allied officers were accompanied by three U. S. officers with European Command assignments, on a tour arranged by the deputy chief of staff for logistics in Washington.

Primary purpose of the tour was to familiarize the Allied officers with U. S. military equipment, encourage expansion of cooperative logistics arrangements, and to orient senior Allied logisticians on the U.S. Army logistics support system.

Briefings on the origin and administration of The Infantry Center, and on Fort Benning field maintenance, and organization and mission of supply control and storage were heard by the visitors.

They toured supply and maintenance facilities, including the automotive field maintenance shop, supply and storage activities, warehouse area, and the aircraft maintenance shop.

Armed Forces Day 1965

Our country today is stronger militarily than at any other time in our peacetime history. Our strength of arms is greater than that ever assembled by any other nation.

The successful execution of all our policies depends upon the ability to retain the talent and fitness of the outstanding men and women in the military services. Those who serve their country in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, from whom we ask so much, are the cornerstone of our military might. Their contribution to our freedom and security is beyond measure.

As Commander-in-Chief, I join all of my fellow Americans in high tribute to our servicemen and women on Armed Forces Day, 1965.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON

Power for Peace

Armed Forces Day 1965 finds the people to whom the day is dedicated standing guard over freedom's frontiers around the world. They are demonstrating "Power for Peace" by showing the high degree of military preparedness needed to defend our independence in the fight against Communist aggression.

Armed Forces Day was established by a Presidential proclamation in 1947. It is a reminder of the establishment of our Department of Defense. Since 1953 the keynote of its observance has been expressed by the slogan "Power for Peace."

This day illustrates the close working relationship of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, the Reserve forces and the National Guard — forces necessary to the security of the Nation.

May 8-16, Armed Forces Week, is an annual opportunity for the public to see its defense team in operation by attending parades, exhibits and open houses on military installations both in the United States and overseas. It gives all Americans an opportunity to see and learn more about their military forces.

Although service members around the world will celebrate Armed Forces Week, their daily missions will continue. Some American servicemen in the Republic of Viet Nam, for example, will probably spend Armed Forces Day accompanying a reconnaissance patrol or carrying out a flying mission. This dedication to duty is a current, living illustration of "Power for Peace," as we join our allies in the fight against Communism and in defense of freedom.

In a past Armed Forces Day proclamation, former President Eisenhower declared that this time is to be "devoted to paying special tribute to those whose constancy and courage constitute one of the bulwarks guarding the freedom of the nation and the peace of the free world."

Each of us in uniform contributes to America's "Power for Peace," whether we are military advisors in the Republic of Viet Nam or clerks or auto mechanics at a stateside base. Therefore each of us is a recipient of the nation's esteem on Armed Forces Day. So let us make sure that we are deserving of this tribute by performing our missions diligently and proudly. (AFPS)

The Judge Says . . .

Suppose the mailman delivers you a package containing a magazine, a set of books, key-ring tags, or phonograph records that you didn't order. Either with it, or by later mail, is a bill or request to remit the price.

Do you know your obligations, assuming you don't want the merchandise? Must you return it? Can you use it and not pay for it? Must you keep it or can you throw it away?

Generally speaking, recipients of unordered merchandise are under no obligation (1) to return it (2) to acknowledge its receipt (3) to pay for it unless used (4) to give it particular care or (5) to keep it beyond a reasonable time.

It should be noted that if you mail the item back at your own expense, you very likely will stay on the sender's mailing list and will receive other shipments in the future. To avoid such a situation you have the right to mark the parcel "refused" and hand it back to the mailman. No further explanation is required. You are under no requirement to accept any class of mail and your refusal will probably result in the sender having to pay return postage.

A good rule to keep in mind when dealing with unordered merchandise is that an innocent recipient is under no obligation to pay for or return such merchandise. Hence, if you don't use the merchandise, you are within your rights in refusing to pay for it.

Messages

On the anniversary of the 16th observance of Armed Forces Day, the U.S. Army joins the Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard in an annual report to the American people.

We of the Third Army occupy a position of extraordinary importance. With highly-trained specialists in all fields, we have the greatest concentration of troops and the most varied number of activities to be found in any of the continental armies. We, therefore, should welcome our civilian neighbors to our open house programs so that they may see for themselves Third Army's role in national defense.

I call on all members of the Third Army team to dedicate yourselves anew to the tasks remaining before us so that we shall continue to be a "Power for Peace".

C. W. G. RICH
LIEUTENANT GENERAL
THIRD U. S. ARMY

Strength and unity typify our nation's position in the face of threats to our freedom and security. This week the United States Army joins the other military services in displaying our combined "Power for Peace" at open houses throughout the country.

Armed Forces Day provides American citizens the opportunity to see the manpower and machines which make up our defense against aggression. At this time let us all, military and civilian, rededicate ourselves to continued vigilance and defense of the cherished freedom of our Democracy.

Surgeon Says

Keep Feet Clean

"Walk and be Healthy" is this year's theme of Foot Health Week sponsored by the American Foot Health Foundation.

You are as young as your feet feel is probably nearer the truth than you think. Foot problems may seem trivial except for those suffering from them, and best estimates available indicate that 70 per cent of Americans suffer or will suffer from some sort of foot ailment.

The human foot is a "structural masterpiece of 20 bones unexcelled in design and durability", and a good thing it is too, because the average American walks about 65,000 miles in his lifetime.

Foot ills develop from a variety of causes—from ignorance, neglect, and faulty footwear, or from weak muscles and defects in the bone structure.

When foot problems become evident in the child, early professional care should be sought. This is important in order to keep the disorders from developing into lasting, painful deformities by the time the child becomes an adult. Parents are urged to check their children's feet on a regular basis, looking for cracks in the skin (especially between the toes), blisters, ingrown nails and warts, and watching how your child walks, after the first sign of foot trouble.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR FOOT COMFORT

1. Bathe your feet daily and dry your feet thoroughly.
2. Wear properly fitted, comfortable shoes.
3. Walking is the best exercise for your feet.
4. Inspect your feet daily.
5. Trim or file your toe nails straight across so that they are even with the skin on the ends of your toes.
6. Refrain from "bathroom surgery" for corns, callouses, and ingrown toe nails.
7. Seek professional care when indicated.

Chaplain's Corner

Temptations

By Chaplain (1st Lt.) Billy R. Lord

"The temptation was just too great, Chaplain," someone once said to me.

How often have you heard this? How often have you said it? But the Christian has the power to overcome even those temptations which are "too great." He can even avoid falling into sin when the passionate heat of anger, jealousy, lust and desire threatens him.

As a matter of fact, one great Christian wrote, "Count it all joy when you fall into diverse temptations" (James 1:2).

What was his secret? It is based on the promises of Jesus — "Whatsoever ye ask in my name, that will I do" (John 14:13). The Epistle writer James indicates that you can face temptation and have the victory by asking God for wisdom to overcome (James 1:6).

The writer of the letter to the Hebrews goes a step further. He reminds us that Jesus was tempted — yet did not sin. "Let us therefore come boldly" he says, to "the throne of grace"—where God will provide "help in the time of need."

When you feel that a temptation can not be overcome, when you surrender to the many desirable appearing lures set to draw you into trouble and sin without counting on God's help, His strength, His "grace to help", you cannot say truthfully "the temptation was too strong." You must admit guilt not only of surrendering to the temptation, but also of the sin of refusing God's help and the "way of escape" that He has provided (1 Cor. 10:13).

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."
Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

'Hail and Farewell' Is Theme Of Student Wives' Luncheons

By Marianne Whitlock
And Emilie Dacunto

A farewell tea was held last Wednesday in the Custer Terrace Officers Club by the wives of officers graduating from The Infantry Officer Career Course.

The honored guests were Mrs. John A Heingtes, Mrs. Donald T. Kellett, Mrs. Joseph E. McCluskey, Mrs. Ronald S. McCaul and Mrs. Edward E. Rusk. They were introduced by Mrs. Thomas H. Ulvenes, the student wife social chairman.

Mrs. Rusk spoke to the wives and congratulated them on the perserverance they displayed in assisting their husbands through the duration of the course.

Mrs. Heingtes then presented diplomas to Mrs. Ulvenes and Mrs. Raymond Trouve. Approximately 125 other wives received their "PHT Degree" (Pushing Hubby Through).

A nosegay of blue and white chrysanthemums and blue floor length table linen set the decor for the serving table from which coffee, tea and punch were served. Miniature flags from many countries, travel posters and "farewells" written in several different languages were symbolic of the fact that these people would now be departing for many places throughout the world.

Mrs. Rudolph W. Fromm and the wives of the fourth platoon were the student wife hostesses.

The head table centerpiece was an arrangement of white chrysanthemums and coral gladiolas. Other table decorations were costumed dolls emplaced in circlets of matching flowers.

The student wife hostesses were Mrs. Lewis C. Anderson, Mrs. Richard Claybaugh, Mrs. Burton Lusenhop, Mrs. Thomas Schumpert, Mrs. Jimmy Smotherman, Mrs. Charles Andrews, Mrs. L. B. Graham, Mrs. Kenneth Jones, Mrs. Norman Salesman, and Mrs. Monto Haynes.

Mrs. Donald T. Kellett, who will be leaving TSB soon, was presented a serving tray as a token of farewell at a coffee at the home of Mrs. Robert B. Nett recently.

Preventive Maintenance

Prescription for Survival; Prerequisite of Victory

By Sp4 David N. Scott

"Maintenance is more than a prescription for survival—it is a requisite to victory", explained Capt. William H. Perkins, chairman of the Infantry School Mobility Department's track vehicle committee.

It is the job of Perkins and his staff of 15 officers and 36 enlisted men to instruct over 1200 mechanics and 1,000 Career and Associate Career Course students a year in preventive maintenance and mechanical aptitude.

"The battlefield of tomorrow is likely to present more obstacles to movement than anything previously experienced," continued Perkins. "In order for the ground soldier to move to the combat zone and in the combat zone, he must have well maintained vehicles. It is our job to train qualified mechanics who will efficiently keep the ground soldiers' vehicles on the move."

During a mechanic's training period, he is instructed on everything from suspension systems to transmissions. The M113 Armored Personnel Carrier, the M108 Self Propelled Howitzer and the M48A3 Tank are the three main teaching vehicles.

"With such tremendous improvements in firepower, especially nuclear arms, units may have to disperse their men and equipment to a much greater extent than ever before. Since this will require numerous vehicles, it is extremely important that these vehicles are kept in perfect running order," stated Perkins.

The mechanic trainees are run through a rigorous eight-week course that includes 104 hours of classroom instruction, five hours of conference and 96 hours of practical experience. At the end of the training program, the student is required to pass a rough preventive maintenance service examination before he becomes a full fledged track vehicle mechanic.

Throughout the course, the novice mechanic is constantly being graded by NCO faculty advisors. The student is evaluated in four main areas — proper use of forms and records, overall attitude, proper use of tools and equipment, and the achievement of his assigned job.

"A poor mechanic is a dangerous weapon," explained Perkins. "If he disregards even the slightest detail, it may cost another person his life."

Besides the instruction duties of the committee, Perkins' staff has the responsibility of preparing, reviewing and revising training publications relating to matters within its sphere of responsibility and of supervising the training and instruction of enlisted and officer instructors in subjects relating to track vehicles.

The block of instruction presented to the CAR and ACAR students enables them to effectively detect deficiencies in vehicles during motor pool inspections. They are also instructed on problems which may arise during quarterly service checks.

"A company commander can't be expected to do the actual repair work on a vehicle but he must know what must be done to correct a deficiency. The purpose of our leadership instruction is to show the student officers what to look for and emphasize the importance of preventive maintenance," stated Perkins. "To be ready and stay ready at all times is the key to an effective unit."

Prior to coming to the Infantry School, Perkins was assigned to the 1st Bde., 29th Inf. as Battle Group Motor Officer.

Ready to fire the Army's light anti-tank weapon is SFC Roy R. Youngblood (L), a weapons instructor at The Infantry School, as Lt. Francis Blackburn, also of The Infantry School, checks position and aiming technique. Blackburn and Youngblood are part of a team on loan to Picatinny Arsenal, U.S. Army Munitions Command, that will tour Army bases around the world to introduce the weapon and brief Army soldiers on its proper use.

2 Briefing-Demonstration Teams Touring U. S. Army Installations

Special to The Bayonet

Dover, N. J. — Under a new Army Materiel Command sponsored equipment training and utilization program, two briefing - demonstration teams from Picatinny Arsenal will tour Army bases in the United States and overseas to introduce the light - but - lethal anti-tank weapon known briefly as the LAW, M72.

Picatinny Arsenal, an element of the U. S. Army Munitions Command, was given commodity management responsibility for the LAW system in 1964 and has successfully fielded considerable quantities of the one - man weapon to many Army bases.

This is the first time in the history of Picatinny Arsenal that specific weapons training teams have been organized for a system demonstration program of this scope.

The teams, comprising officers and enlisted men from Fort Benning as well as Picatinny Arsenal, will train with the LAW and conduct a series of field firings at Picatinny prior to departure for their worldwide scheduled briefings.

During their tours, the teams will introduce and demonstrate to Army soldiers the effectiveness of the weapon and its proper use. Utilizing a lightweight, disposable, plastic and aluminum shoulder-fired launcher with a rocket-boosted warhead, the LAW is designed for use against enemy armor, vehicles, fortifications and other strong points.

Lt. Col. Paul A. Pencola, now on duty in Oslo, Norway, as the U. S. M72 Liaison Officer, has been designated to head the team scheduled for the European theater. A second team led by Maj. Donald G. Bears, executive officer for the Ammunition Engineering Directorate of Picatinny Arsenal, will tour Army bases in the United States and Alaska.

The program is designed to have two basic purposes: first, to make certain AMC is doing everything possible to provide the Army's field soldier with the best equipment obtainable; second, to furnish the AMC commander with current first-hand information on AMC equipment and weapons being delivered to Army troops.

Welfare Fund Receives MPA Golf Day Funds

The non-commissioned officers' Wives Club welfare fund received a financial boost last week when proceeds from the Military Police Annual International Golf Day Tournament were added to it.

Fort Benning's provost marshal, Col. Howard B. Wells, presented a check for $331 to Mrs. Robert E. Lamb, president of the NCO Wives Club.

Each year the Military Police Association sponsors an International Golf Day Tournament. For $1 the aspiring golfer with his handicap can compete for prizes against the first day score of last year's Masters Golf Tournament champion.

Those who played in the tournament this year competed against Arnold Palmer.

According to officials, a concerted drive by the Fort Benning military police, in conjunction with those of the 11th AAD and 2nd Inf. Div. resulted in a sale of 708 tickets. Fifty-two Benning golfers were able to better Arnold Palmer's first day score.

Twenty-five cents of each $1 ticket sold goes to the Military Police Association to defray expenses of printing tickets and buying prizes. The remaining 75 per cent of the proceeds are given to worthwhile charitable organizations in each local community.

1965 Major Unit League Opens As 428th Medics Nip CTC 8-7

By Sp5 Mitch Yamanaka

The 428th Medical Bn's. leftfielder Joe Gragg pulled in a towering fly to deep left for the final out to cut the Center Troop Command's 8th inning rally short and give the Medical Bn. nine a narrow 8-7 victory in the opening game of the 1965 Major Unit Baseball League.

In pre-game ceremonies, Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, threw in the first ball to open the season.

Bill Andrews, Medical Bn. pitcher, kept the CTC hitters in check during the first seven innings, allowing only two runs on four hits but tired over the final two stanzas as the CTC men connected for five runs on six hits.

Draw First Blood

The 428th crew drew first blood in the game as they got to CTC moundsman James Mundy for four runs on three hits in the 1st inning.

Paul Guerrero was the big man with the bat in the first stanza as he blasted Mundy's second pitch over the left field fence for a two-run homer.

Walt Waiss was credited with two runs batted in on a hard single through the box.

All runs were scored after two outs.

CTC battled back in the top half of the 2nd scoring one run but Andrews settled down and the last two men went down swinging.

In their half of the 2d, the 428th tallied another run when Mundy's attempted pickoff at second base went wild and Ulysses Davis scored from third.

One Run Each

Over the next five innings, both teams were able to score only one run each as the pitchers settled down into a pitching duel.

It was three up and three down for the 428th over four innings as Mundy pitched shut out ball. CTC scored a lone run in the top half of the 5th inning when Floyd Wicker brought Carter Copelin home with a single.

In their half of the 8th, the Medical Bn. scored two runs—one on an error and the final and game winning run on a fielder's choice.

Eli Amaro started CTC's rally in the 9th with a single to right field. Joe Carrino, who came in for Carson Wittman in the 8th, popped out to the first baseman.

Wicker made it to first on an error and Amaro advanced to third. Vandersea kept things alive for CTC with a run scoring single to right field and Wicker came home on a throwing error by the 428th's shortstop.

Spence, trying to bring Vandersea home with the tying run went down swinging for the second out.

Nordan was the next batter and he teed off on the first pitch driving it over the left field fence, foul. He took another strike and then connected for a high fly to left which Gragg pulled in at the fence for the final out and a 428th victory.

from the playhouse

Mark "Finian's Rainbow," being staged this week by FBLT, as cheap Irish music, arthritic dancing and tacky, rick-racky costumes. Also mark it at the top of your must-see list.

The music under the direction of Betty Auten, the dancing choreographed by Ingo Orlamunder, the costuming by Gail Carr, and the set by John Wolanczyk and effectively lighted by Peter Hajduk all help conjure up a fanciful, magical show.

Despite the flaws of the dress rehearsal (when the play was reviewed), FBLT's "Finian's Rainbow" is a totally noteworthy production. Under the direction of Wes Carr, the 18-year-old musical has no odor of mothballs well maybe a whiff now and then); it is mostly magnolias and jasmine.

As for plot, never mind. It has to be seen to be believed. There is a crock of gold and some irresponsible wishes made on the crock, and it takes place, not in Ireland but in Rainbow Valley, Missitucky.

Muchmore Tops

Les Muchmore as the moon-tipped Finian McLonergan is tops. The show is his by a couple of leagues (as playwrights Harbourg and Saidy obviously intended it to be). But what would Finian have done without his daughter, Sharon, pertly played and gloriously sung by Ella Hearne?

Rick Sonntag as Woody was an excellent complement to Mrs. Hearne in duel, and Sonntag's singing in the glory-filled production number, "Great Come - and - Get - It Day," was rafter raising.

Whatever the wee folk are really like in Glocca Morra, they must be very similar to Phil Ford's creation of the mortalish leprechaun, Og. His song, "Something Sort of Grandish" with Sharon, and his scene with a couple of kids were especially effective.

The repartee between Finian and Og provided the best laughs of the night.

Dick Gile, as Senator Billboard Rawkins, was uncomfortably accurate in his interpretation of a difficult character part. He may be sued by a member or two of the U.S. Senate.

Debbie Foy Sings

Also noteworthy was Debbie Foy as Verbena and her song, "Necessity," well supported by Gail Carr, Connie Gilbert, Susan Gingrich, Barbara Gonzales and Ann McKenney. Georgia Creveling's graceful Susan the Silent was a joy throughout the show.

One of the best surprises occurs very late in the show with the entrance of the Passion Pilgrim Gospeleers sung by Bill Ballentine, Dave Lindeman, and Ron Quattrocchi.

Except for a few moments which were perhaps caused by last-minute fill-ins, the supporting cast served the principals well. Jim McCullough as the sheriff and Jay Ronneberg as Buzz Collins both added to their scenes.

The dancing ensemble — totally misnamed as the Clodhoppers — kept pace in the show from curtain to curtain. In addition to Orlamunder and Miss Creveling, they included Bobby Brannon, Liz Swain, Tony Lochetto, Jan McCullough, Gary Wallace and Robbie Gingrich.

The viewer's mood at final curtain was a heavenly, all-overish sensation, as Sharon would say. As Woody might say, "It's a better world since FBLT's 'Rainbow' passed this way."

The show plays through the 19th with curtain at 8:30 each night. Tickets may be reserved by phoning 689-8668.

Dan Sweeney's View Of Santo Domingo -- Part I

Anxious Families

Pope Air Force Base located some five miles from the heart of the Fort Bragg military reservation was a hub of activity just two weeks ago. Huge cargo-carrying planes whirred down the runway pausing for seconds to make last minute instrument checks or to allow another "bird" to touch down. The scene was not unlike what you might find at Kennedy International where the landing and take - off sequence averages thirty seconds. For seventy - two hours the story was the same, one would land as another two circled the horizon.

Apprehension was reflected on the faces of the passengers as each group of sixty, outfitted in uniformly drab combat gear awaited their turn to board the aircraft. Soldiers talked about the current situation as if they had already been there.

It was difficult to realize that in just six hours these planes would land on the perimeter of what had to be considered a combat zone called San Isidro. Most weren't sure whether they were landing there or in Puerto Rico. . .most in fact didn't care.

They were headed

Soldiers Draw Praise As Exercise Terminates

By MARV WOLF

FORT STEWART, Ga. — Troops of the 3rd Brigade prepared to return to garrison Wednesday following more than a week of field maneuvers here as Exercise CINQUEFOIL finished with a bang.

The bang was provided by the live fire of all the brigade weapons on ranges located on the eastern edge of this gigantic reservation, and the live fire portion was tactically integrated into the realistic mock war in an authentic manner.

Troops and vehicle-mounted weapons, principally tanks, moved into position from their individual foxholes and field fortifications dug the preceding day, the following instructions of safety officers, put on an impressive demonstration of the firepower they can muster as a brigade.

The brigade commander, Col. Jack Armstrong, enthused about the overall success of the operation which involved some 27000 men and lasted 6 days.

"Performed Better"

"This brigade performed better than any commander has the right to expect. I came across hundreds of men in the field from commanders to privates and not one I saw shirked his duties.

"I came across an engineer filling a hole with his bulldozer about two in the morning. I knew he had been driving since early the day before and he was exhausted, but when I asked him if the bridge was going to be built, he grinned and assured me it would be the best bridge I had ever seen."

"There were cases of men exercising their initiative and finding fords across the river (the Ogeechee) that no one knew existed. Why, knowing what I know about this brigade I could take it anywhere and do anything with it. They behaved in a truly magnificant fashion."

Sentiments Echoed

Col. Armstrong's sentiments were echoed at great lengths by the exercise director, Brig. Gen. Robert R.

3,000 Tapped For 'Cherokee Trail'

By JOE TREASTER

A 2nd Infantry Division force of more than 3,000 men will engage in Exercise Cherokee Trail VI in North Carlina in the latter part of June, a spokesman said this week.

Designers of Cherokee Trail emphasized that it is not a maneuver, but a series of controlled problems which serve as a graduation exercise for officer students of the John F. Kennedy Special War Center at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Most of the 2nd Division's force will come from the 1st Brigade with three attached battalions — the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 9th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Students

In the Uwharrie National Forest — where most of the action is set to take place — some 550 Special Warfare Center students will be working with and directing the 2nd Division soldiers.

Some 400 2nd Division soldiers will be designated "guerrillas" and will work as citizens of fictional Satilla to overthrow the American supported but equally fictional Pineland government. The remaining 2nd Division men, with the 1st Brigade headquarters in charge, will comprise the Pineland Army.

Unconventional Warfare students will work with the Satilla soldiers and Counter-Insurgency students will work with the Pineland Army. Students in Psychological Operations are scheduled to work with both sides.

Maj. Richard W. Wood of division operations said that 1st Brigade soldiers will complete two weeks of guerrilla and counter - insurgency training at Fort Benning before going to North Carolina.

He said the guerrilla force will probably move into the national forest about June 16

2nd Division Announces Perpich as Chief of Staff

Col. Tony F. Perpich, who last year took over command of 2nd Infantry Division Artillery from Col. Burnside E. Huffman Jr., again is following in the latter colonel's path.

Perpich will become the division's Chief of Staff when Huffman leaves that position in early June to go to Fort Sill, Okla.

The announcement that Perpich would again succeed Huffman, this time as the commanding general's right hand man, was one of several assignments that have been filled due to the upcoming departure of a number of senior ranking officers.

Six officers already have been assigned positions in the division to partly fill the vacancies that will be left with the coming of summer officers are being considered for positions, but no definite assignments have been made, according to a spokesman

To All Indianheads:

'Finest Division'

On this Armed Forces Day of 1965, you the officer and soldier of the 2d Infantry Division can be justly proud of the contribution you have made to the freedom and security of the United States and the free world. As a member of the finest trained division in the United States Army, you are an integral part of America's "POWER FOR PEACE" arsenal.

Let us pause this day to pledge anew our loyalty to our country, and resolve to keep our division "SECOND TO NONE".

Warrant Officer Departs Division After 30 Months as Food Adviser

CWO BUTTERFIELD

A warrant officer who had the longest known current tour among officers of the 2nd Infantry Division this week departed after 30 months as the Division Special Staff Adviser for all mess hall operations.

CWO Earl Butterfield, a familiar face among mess sergeants and cooks throughout the division's kitchens, said that to the best of his knowledge he had been here longer than any other officer.

"I've certainly seen a host of commanders at all levels come and go," he said.

Butterfield was assigned to the division from U.S. Army, Hawaii, in June, 1962 and became a physical part of the division in the following November.

The "ol timer" said, that his period of service goes back to the time when the ROAD (Reorganized Objectives Army Division) concept had not yet been put into effect.

"When I first joined the division, the old coal cooking stoves had just been replaced with gas stoves," he said. "This was the departure point that I used to launch a mess improvement program."

During his first year here, Butterfield began a program that resulted in ice machines being installed in practically every mess hall. At that time there were 52 messes on Sand Hill, 16 on Kelly Hill and one on Main Post, all under his supervision.

Butterfield also has been largely responsible for the changeover of all equipment to propane or natural gas use. All old electrical equipment was discarded.

According to Butterfield, nearly all the new gas equipment that was needed by units was issued during 1963. In addition to new gas facilities, he also saw that every mess hall in the division was equipped with new refrigeration, frozen food cabinets, ice machines and drinking fountains.

At the start of the program to revamp mess hall operations, the division was given a budget of $210,000. An additional $72,000 was authorized in the 1965 budget, according to Butterfield.

so as to establish itself before Cherokee Trail begins June 24. It is scheduled to end June 30.

June 20 Likely

Maj. Wood said it is likely the 1st Brigade convoy — with most of the participating 2nd Division men — will leave Fort Benning June 20.

Last fall the division's 3rd Brigade participated in Cherokee Trail IV, also held in the national Forest.

Units which will be attached to the 1st Brigade for Cherokee Trail are elements of the 7th Battalion, 17th Artillery; 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry; 2nd Engineer Battalion, 2nd Aviation Battalion, 122nd Signal Battalion, 2nd Military Police Company, 2nd Military Intelligence Detachment and Support Command.

View

for the Dominican Republic with a job to do.

The 82nd Airborne division established a collection point in a storage area in a remote portion at Pope. Tired men do their jobs with the automatic-reflex action that comes from three days with no sleep. The business of checking manifests bearing the names of every passenger as well as accounting for each item of equipment to be loaded on the planes continued as in another section, crates of ammunition were broken open and distributed to anyone with a weapon.

The scene was interesting. Young troops who although dragging from lack of sleep still showed a look of anxiety as they collected packets of ammunition.

On each side of the access road into the airfield slumbering bodies with clutched rifles draped across the hoods of jeeps, "deuce - and - a - halves," or whatever afforded a suitable resting place. Web gear — canteens, medical kits, bayonets etc. — was strewn over seats ready to be thrown on when the three-minute alert to move to the aircraft was given.

For some, the warning was a long time in coming. The military colloquilism of "hurry up and wait" echoed along the line of stacked Army vehicles after four hours had passed.

Another scene took place back in the billeting area. Troops mustered in company areas waiting for the next phase to take place which would move them to the airstrip. Bullhorns blared out the pickup time for such items as gas masks, ammo magazines, and the standard three-day supply of C-rations. Trailers were loaded up and moved into position for the anticipated move to Pope.

Automobiles were scattered throughtout the area with families bidding goodbye to the dads who leaned on the car door fully clad in the combat gear.

Other scenes were evident. One automobile pulled up along the curb and the woman driver carrying her brood in both the front and back seats hailed a passing officer. "Could you tell me if Sergeant So-and-So is still here?"

The officer courteously but disinterestedly replied "No he isn't." "Is he gone? she returned." "I'm sorry ma'am, I can't say." Tears streamed down the face of the young mother. The children looked at mom in bewilderment.

Another officer told me that he had received a steady stream of telephone calls for the past three days from women wondering if their husbands were still around. They hadn't heard from them. Again the reply "I'm sorry ma'am." There was no way to answer their questions with the crisis being what it was. The confusion of units moving out one after another prevented it. Again the outbrust of tears could be heard on the other end.

The drone of prop-driven C-130s could be heard overhead banking sharply over the Fort Bragg area heading south. Maybe he was on it. . .

Praise

Williams, who spoke of the fine job turned in by 3rd Brigade troopers.

"They did an outstanding job out here. I'm particularly pleased with the aggressiveness of commanders. I was quite impressed with the amount of interest taken by everyone down to the lowest private.

"The NCO's obviously were putting forth a great deal of effort to find out what the situation was and pass it along to the troops.

"They exercised a great deal of professional knowledge in confronting the toughest obstacles and problems we could put in front of them. Sometimes finding ways or routes which we (the Controllers) believed impossible".

Praise

Asked if he felt that any one unit had particularly distinguished itself in the exercise, Gen. Williams lavished praise on the aggressor force, Company A 2nd Battalion, 72nd Armor, commanded by Capt. Frank M. Alley Jr.

"They had one of the most difficult tasks of the exercise. They had to be alert for extended periods of time. . .move rapidly and often over extended distances. . .They responded vigorously to every command of the controller system and showed a great deal of initiative."

Perpich

that handles officer assignments.

Perpich took the reins of Division Artillery last July after Huffman had commanded the unit for about a year. Perpich came to the division from the Pentagon where he was a member of the armed forces joint staff. He was an operations and plans director (J-3) in the strategic operations division.

Prior to the Pentagon assignment, Perpich attended the War College and then held a position in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff of Operations at Army headquarters in Washington.

He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota. He was drafted in 1942 while working on a Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship at an Arizona Indian reservation.

After completing Officers Candidate School, he saw action in the Pacific during World War II and again in the Korean War.

Perpich's successor at DivArty has not been named.

In other changes in the division, present plans indicate that Col. Fred O. Jackson will be shifted to 3rd Brigade to succeed Col. Jack Armstrong as commander. Armstrong will go to Washington.

Col. George Rehkoph will be assigned to Support Command after completing studies at the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks.

Lt. Col. Robert M. Lathrop, currently assigned in Washington, will become the new Staff Judge Advocate in July when Lt. Col. Willard D. Young leaves for Fort Monmouth, N. J.

Chiles Observes Shooting Matches at Training Unit

The commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, last Wednesday took a morning to visit the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit here at Fort Benning.

A guest of the unit's commander, Col. Joseph Pest, Chiles visited the unit shops, ranges and observed the unit competing in the Interservice, International Shooting Championships.

He was shown how the marksmen use "Glass-Bedded" weapons to obtain the precision required of competition marksmanship. The glass bedding, according to a unit spokesman, allows closer fitting of the metal part of the weapon to the wooden stock.

The spokesman added that the general saw "everything there is to see, with the exception of training classes which are not in operation at this time."

Engineer's Company B Praised By General as 'Division's Best'

In a ceremony held recently in the Second Infantry Division eadquarters, Company B of the Second Engineers was presented the Third Army Certificate of Merit for attaining the highest April scores for Command Maintenance Management Inspections.

Lt. James A. Ward, Jr., commanding officer received the presentation from Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander, after being commended for having the "best company in the division during the month of April."

With combined scores of 93 per cent in organizational maintenance and 90 per cent in materiel readiness, the engineers compiled the highest scores of the ten units which received the Third Army inspection during the month.

The team of professionals which circulates the Third Army area inspected the equipment, records, and evaluated the overall combat readiness of the unit.

A spokesman said much of the credit had to go to the unit's motor sergeant Carl Kessell who was primarily responsible for getting the thirty vehicles which ranged from bulldozers to jeeps ready for the inspection. "Of course it could not have been successful without the cooperation of the entire company who worked payday to meet spokesman.

In order to receive the Third Army award a unit must attain a score of 90 per cent in both phases of the inspection, and be approved by the commanding general of Third Army.

Roadside Honor Role

The Roadside inspections during the past week landed praise for some 25 drivers for the condition of their vehicles in the eyes of maintenance experts.

Readiness Test Ends For Brigade Units

By JIM LULL

The 1st Brigade will have an opportunity to test the combat readiness of its entire force this week, as they conduct a battalion operational readiness test scheduled for next Wednesday.

Both the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, and the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry will be involved.

The units are tested and scored separately, however both units operate simultaneously.

The battalions will oppose each other during the large scale maneuver for three days, ending next Friday.

The test wraps up a month-long 1st Brigade evaluation system that has checked each company and both battalions.

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry or "leg infantry" has a small advantage going into the testing as they completed of the work covered on their company operational readiness tests early and had an opportunity to hit the field for a three-day check of men and equipment, where as the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry doesn't finish their company level testing until tomorrow.

To their advantage, the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry utilized the battalion headquarters and training and operations sections to control much of the work covered on their company level examination, much the same as will be required during battalion maneuver.

Army Fulfills Dream of Adjutant General's Lady; Accompanies Husband in Every Overseas Assignment

BY LANNY THOMAS

Climb a mountain in Japan, turn her humble Korean home into a Sunday School class, or don herself in the native costume of her environment — Mrs. Lovella Leahy as the wife of an Army officer has her own recipe for "never a dull moment."

"I guess I was really born to be an Army wife," says the lady who has been married nearly 19 years to Lt. Col. Thomas Leahy, the 2nd Infantry Division Adjutant General.

"Even when I was a little girl, I was always a wanderer — and a dreamer of places to go."

From the day Lovella Schoolcraft, a Oklahoma girl who ventured to California to study voice, married Leahy in a Hollywood Lutheran Church, her dreams of going places escaped slumber.

She has been at Leahy's side on every assignment, twice overseas — Korea and Turkey — and has found these places "just like home." "We throw up our curtains and start living quick," she said.

In all her travels, it's the two overseas assignments that Mrs. Leahy has found most fascinating. Both she and the colonel are ardent church workers wherever they go. Where there was a church overseas, they took part. Where there was no church, they improvised one.

Mrs. Leahy's first overseas adventure came in 1954 when the colonel was assigned to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters at Ismar, Turkey. During their two-year stay there, they sang in the choir, she taught nursery school and the colonel taught Sunday School.

"It was a very small American Community," she said, "but we make a point of finding a church wherever we go."

Going hand in hand with their interest in religion was the couple's visit to all seven churches of Asia while stationed in Turkey.

When Leahy finished the Adjutant General's career course at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana in 1960, he was ordered to Korea. "I was humbled by the fact that I wouldn't be left alone when I learned that I was going with him on this one too," said Mrs. Leahy.

As the Leahy's melted in with the Korean way of life, they helped build a church, visited orphanages and "just kept busy." "We dived right into the church group. We had so much to do and so little to do with. Our house became a church many times when we couldn't get off post."

Many of the children called the Leahy home "the school."

One of the Leahy's most memorable adventures during their foreign travels was a trip to Japan to join the yearly pilgrimage up famed Mount Fuji. With packs on backs, the entire family, including three children, joined ranks with the Buddhist for the climb aloft.

"We started at sea level," Mrs. Leahy recalls, "and climbed up and down. It took about 24 hours — rained the entire time we were on the mountain — never been so miserable, but I wouldn't trade the experience for the world."

The Leahy's youngest son, Robert Marcus, then a five-year-old toddler, stayed with the family and he too overcame the obstacle course. "We had to help him over the boulders and rocks. They said he was the youngest person to have gone up."

Probably the understatement of the year for Mrs. Leahy is "I like to be busy. I don't think I've ever been bored in my entire life." She lends her hand where needed and is ready to accept challenge in any project—even if it's just a hobby like Korean dancing.

The little brunette lady of 1st Division Road still has the elaborate dress that turned her into an oriental when she took up Korean dancing. "I was terrible," she says modestly, "but I wasn't discouraged." Mrs. Leahy grasped the technique however, and enlightened many of her friends with an exhibition of the Korean scarf and fan ritual.

The Leahy's met in the summer of 1946 while both were students in the same speech class at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles. Leahy had just been discharged from the Army after World War II. Mrs. Leahy had attended the Oklahoma College for Women for two years and decided to go west. She graduated from Andarko High School, near Fort Sill, in 1944.

Mrs. Leahy admits that her marriage wouldn't have been okayed by a marriage counselor. "You should never marry a person in a hurry, but it worked for us," she said. The two met in October.

Iowa was their home until 1950 when the Korean War broke out and he was called back into the service. During World War II he had served with MAG Headquarters in the Philippines. He had been commissioned after attending Officers Candidate School in Australia.

From 1950 to 1954 Camp Breckenridge, Ky., was their home and the birthplace of a son in 1952, Thomas Melvin III. Their 16 - year - old daughter, Michal Suzanne, was born back at Spencer, Iowa in 1949.

The Leahys went to Fort Ritchie, Maryland in 1954 for nine months and then to Turkey.

An assignment in 1956 to the Sandia Base, Albuquerque, N. M. allowed Leahy to finish his studies in English and economics at the University of New Mexico. "He got his degree one night and we were off the next day," Mrs. Leahy said.

While in Albuquerque the third child, Robert Marcus, was born.

The Leahys came to Fort Benning in July, 1963. Mrs. Leahy has been active in the Officers Wives Club and also substitutes at the nursery school. She likes to sew and cook and recently has taken up the hobby of ceramics.

For the Army—"I've enjoyed it very much. I'm very happy."

CONCENTRATION is the only word to describe the feeling of this candid photo by photographer Don Borders. Borders was at a recent officers wives club party at the division's Family Service Center.

IF THEY were only that busy at home seemed to be the general feeling among wives of officers of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion after they visited the unit last week. Pictured here are the ladies as Capt. Horace G. Taylor explains the operations of his shop.

At 702nd Maintenance

Wives Observe Husbands At Work

"It's hard to believe he keeps his shop so clean the way he throws things around the house."

This seemed to be an observation noted by many of the ladies of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion as they were escorted through the battalion's shop areas.

After holding their monthly coffee and business meeting in Headquarters and Company A mess hall, with appropriate remarks for Army cakes and coffee, the ladies boarded a convoy of jeeps, and were driven by groups to the various shop offices throughout the battalion.

At the work areas, the ladies were given a brief outline of the missions and operations within the 702nd, and given a change to see what their husbands do all day.

For most, it was the first opportunity to see first hand their husbands "home away from home," and for most, it was a surprise. One of the ladies said "if you can keep your shop so neat, you can just start at home too."

Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Patrick Sheley and Mrs. Fred Hoxie. Refreshments were provided by Headquarters and Company A and Company B.

23rd Coffee Held Recently

The ladies of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry held their May coffee at the home of Mrs. Joseph R. Beeman, recently. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Edmund J. Dennehy, Jr., and Mrs. Calvin P. Lockwood.

The ladies welcomed Mrs. Glenn T. Broach to the group.

Mrs. K. R. Popham of Winter Haven, Florida, was a special guest.

Mrs. S. K. McMurdo and Mrs. Richard H. Morley poured coffee and tea.

The door prize was won by Mrs. Roger E. Popham.

The next coffee will be held at the home of Mrs. Arthur J. Rafferty.

Informal Coffee On 'MOOM' Patio

The ladies of the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion held an informal coffee on the patio overlooking the pool of the Main Officer's Open Mess Thursday, May 6.

Mrs. Robert Bourne and Mrs. Guenter Tisson, hostesses, displayed an arrangement of yellow gladioli and chrysanthemums on the refreshment table.

Those serving were Mrs. Dean Van Lydegraf and Mrs. Walter Berry.

Mrs. Oscar Condron and Mrs. Walter Berry were special guests.

Sereval Officers Homes Are Settings for Coffee

The home of Mrs. Warren M. Schaub was the setting recently for the monthly coffee of the ladies of the 12th Artillery.

Mrs. John Kean conducted a short business meeting and welcomed Mrs. Foster Brown, mother of Mrs. Don H. Noakley.

The group bid farewell to Mrs. Jack Carter and presented her with a silver dish.

Mrs. Schaub served the ladies punch, coffee and cream puffs.

The Mirror Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess recently was the scene of the monthly coffee for the ladies of the 2nd Engineer Battalion.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Alan Bryant and Mrs. Gary Hagge.

A colorful May-pole formed the centerpiece for the table.

Mrs. Alfred Griebling welcomed special guests, Mrs. John H. Chiles and Mrs. Rushing, mother of Warrant Officer Albert Rushing.

A new member of the group, Mrs. Francis E. Mead, was also welcomed.

The ladies of Headquarters, Division Artillery, met recently at the home of Mrs. Francis E. Mendenhall on Rainbow Avenue.

Mrs. Mendenhall and Mrs. Richard Andrews were hostesses.

Refreshments were served the ladies by their hostesses.

Mrs. Francis P. Mulvey poured from the silver service.

Among those who attended was a newcomer, Mrs. Billy Butterfield.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Wendell P. Rayfiele who was presented a silver tray.

The ladies welcomed one visitor, Miss Jo Benson, of Leominster, Massachusetts who is the sister of Mrs. Joseph F. Cobis.

By ALICE WITTER

The Fort Benning Ballet School, sponsored by the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club, is rehearsing its forthcoming spring program, a ballet entitled "Pretty Is As Pretty Does." The three-part program will be presented at the Fort Benning Little Theater on May 23 at 8 p.m.

Rossie Gilmore, director of the school, wrote the original ballet which is designed to show each child on the level of his or her ability in an interesting and colorful setting. The delightful tale of a princess and her royal cortege is directed to capture the imagination and delight of all with the performance of the dancers.

The Columbus Ballet Guild will present "El Amor Brujo" by Manuel de Falla. Vickie Morales, well-known dancer of the Chattahoochee Valley, will who has recently won a scholarship for the summer with the Atlanta Civic Ballet, will dance the spectre.

The role of Carmelo will be danced by Inge Orlamunder, who is not only a dancer but a cheoreographer as well. The part of the young, vivacious girl will be danced by Glynne Gilmore, daughter of the director of the Fort Benning Ballet School.

The Tap Department, under the direction of Jean Smith, will present "Jazz Accent." Donna Black opens the musical selection of show business songs with her sophisticated style of tap and jazz. An adult couple, Frank and Julia McDonald, will entertain with a soft-shoe dance and their rendition of "Me and My Shadow."

The younger set led by high - stepping boys will do a fast-stepping routine to "Everything's Coming Up Roses." The finale brings the entire tap group together again in "There's No Business Like Show Business."

Costumes have been artfully constructed by Mrs. W. W. Hoyle.

This Sunday evening's production is open to all and there will be no admission charge.

BRIDGING THE OGEECHEE RIVER
The men and equipment of the 2nd Engineer Battalion

Old Infantryman Speaks

Engineers Save Day in River Crossing

By MARV WOLF

FORT STEWART, Ga.—"Without the help of the 2nd Engineer Battalion, the 3rd Brigade would still be armpit deep in mud on the wrong side of the river. . ." so said a very senior member of the 9th Infantry, the only "leg" component of the armor heavy brigade.

The statement holds true for the tankers as well and it was with a great deal of respect and admiration that this reporter observed the engineers assisted by the units they supported cross the Ogeechee River here during exercise CINQUEFOIL.

During the entire river crossing operation, no less than five methods for crossing the water were observed at different points along the river.

First, and probably most obvious, mixed groups of engineers and infantrymen swam across, taking small arms on air mattresses or twig rafts constructed from ponchos.

At some point along the meandering stream rubber rafts were employed with groups of two and three men taking lines across to the other side.

Later the same means moved heavier weapons such as 106 mm recoilless rifles to help protect the lightly armed screening forces on the far bank.

In some locations metal assault boats carried doughboys to dry landings in the teeth of aggressor resistance.

Once the far bank had been cleared of live enemy, the bridge builders moved up a fantastic array of equipment, everything from huge trucks to portable crains. Gigantic pneumatic pontoons were inflated dwarfing the life-jacketed troops astride them as they assembled the bridge in the water.

In less time than it takes to swim the river and return, a multitude of pontoons had accordioned out more than half way and in the distance one could hear the whine of approaching armored personel carriers for whose use the bridge was intended.

The last span was pushed into place only seconds before the lead vehicle approached; so precise was the timing that the first driver did little more than slow down.

This reporter has spent more than three years as an infantryman and crossed a goodly number of watery obstacles in a dry fashion, but he never gave pause to consider how or who made this possible.

"Essayons" (We'll try) is the engineers' motto. They surely do.

1st Brigade Work Opens Company Day Room

In accordance with a division program to improve the existing buildings in the Sand Hill area, the headquarters company of the 1st Brigade recently opened for use a remodeled day room.

The renovation plan was not dreamed up and completed overnight.

Company officials said, "Lots of hard work went into the project."

The final product was a dayroom — completely air conditioned with pool tables, ping-pong tables, a separate television room, and a reading room — all furnished with wood trim, papered walls, and tiled floors.

The company first sergeant, Loransia Bowen, was in charge of the operation. With assistance from Sgt. Homer Bell and SSgt. Ray Banner, the room was completed in slightly less than three months.

Several men donated much time to the actual carpentry and decorating work.

They were identified as PFC George Myers and PFC George Mason.

Many of the recreational facilities were in the day room when the work began, and the major accomplishment was a complete change in the room's inner structure.

First job on the list when the renovation plan went into effect was to dismantle the walls and the tile the areas left open.

Papering of the walls and wiring, along with the woodwork followed.

The actual "grand opening" occurred last Saturday.

All Guns Silent as 12th Artillery Returns From Final Training Test

By DAVE BUMAN

Better than three months continual work "roars" to a halt as the units of the 2nd Infantry Division Artillery wind up their annual Army Training Tests (ATTs).

The "Honest John" rocketeers of the 12th Artillery concluded their ATT last Saturday. They were the last division Artillery unit to undergo the annual testing.

The work began in early February when a 15-man survey team from division artillery headquarters under survey officer Lt. Clinton Watson departed for Fort Gordon, Ga., to ready the area.

Combat Tests

What the team found didn't look anything like an artillery range, according to Watson, and they found themselves with a real combat test.

More than 600 trees had to be cut and moved, and underbrush cleared. Then there were the targets; or the lack of targets.

The surveyors had to "scrounge around" Augusta, Ga., for old car bodies, stoves, refrigerators, or anything that could be used as a target.

The targets had to be hauled to Fort Gordon and placed in the impact area and their exact location surveyed and located for the gunners.

Ammunition

Tons of ammunition had to be shipped by rail to the testing sight and over 50 miles of wire laid for communication. Some 300 safety diagrams had to be drawn up to pinpoint the area of fire for the guns and determine a margin of safety should a round fall short or extend the target.

With the use of microwave equipment, which acts like radar, bouncing a signal back to the transmitter, over 200 miles were surveyed for plotting the locations of guns and targets within the confines of the reservation and the restrictions of the safety margin.

Then an advance party had to move into Gordon to set up the mess halls and tents that were to be the Artillerymen's homes for the next month.

Umpires

"As well as conducting the tests," said Maj. John Behneman, assistant S-3 officer, "DivArty was responsible for furnishing all the umpires used throughout the problem, which amounted to some 30 vehicles and 50 men."

Enroute to the testing area, the "big guns" were given a surprise mission, the first in their testing. They were ordered to pull off the road, then given an enemy position and required to set up the guns and have them ready to fire within six minutes.

Second in the testing missions was a will adjust. While in position, a forward observer (FO) calls in aiming adjustments as the guns fire, and within six minutes all rounds from all sections must be in the target area.

Graded

Throughout the firing and during the test period, the men were being graded in other areas such as camouflage, defensive precautions, the manner in which they occupied an area, as well as the missions themselves.

"One of the hardest and most interesting tests given the battalions," said Behneman, "was the time on target. All guns of the battalion are required to mass fire on a given target within 5 seconds of a predesignated round," said Behneman, "many things have to be considered; the temperature of the powder and the air, the wind direction and velocity and the density of the air, and even the rotation of the earth in the cases of large pieces such as the 8 inch gun."

"To accomplish this, the time of flight of the round has to be considered as some guns are closer to the target than others."

"In figuring the flight of the round, the following things have to be continually surveyed.

2nd of the 9th Prepares For Battalion-Size Tests

By Jim Lall

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry underwent a three-day field maneuver early this week, as it "stepped" into the final preparation phase for the battalion operational readiness test next week.

The unit moved out early Monday morning in full force to an area in the northern section of the reservation and didn't arrive back to their garrison location until Wednesday.

According to battalion training and operation officials, the entire maneuver was designed to improve coordination between the various companies through the battalion headquarters so they would be fully prepared for the upcoming examination.

DivArty Nails Brigade In Opener

Chiles Hurls Ball to Kick Off Action

The 2nd Infantry Division Artillery rallied in the top of the 9th inning Monday night in a season baseball opener on Bennett Field and broke away for 16-10 conquest of the 1st Brigade.

The 1965 baseball season officially got underway with the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, tossing the ball to set the game in motion. DivArty's John West, a left fielder, grabbed the pitch, got the general's autograph and a three - hour and 35 - minute game followed.

The artillerymen launched a lead on brigade with three runs in the first inning. However, a three-base hit for brigade in the second inning put them in the running by a 6 to 5 margin.

The picture again was reversed in the top of the third when Artillery came up with four more runs to brigade's single.

Rudolph Hills, a 3rd baseman for brigade, singled himself out with the best play of the evening when he rapped a homer in the bottom of the fourth with two men on base. The play again put brigade in the race for a victory in the opener with a 10-9 favor.

Artillery's three runs in the fifth inning put them in the lead to stay and both teams were deadlocked until the 9th. Four runs in the top of the ninth made it a 16-10 victory for the artillerymen.

Brigade's Elifa Ostalaza, a first baseman, connected on four out of five times at bat. The winners had 19 hits for their scorebook while brigade had 16. Pitching the winning game was Frank Bumpers. Norman Key twirled for brigade.

In addition to Gen. and Mrs. Chiles who were on hand to kick off the summer of baseball play on Sand Hill, Col. Tony F. Perpich, commander of Division Artillery, and Col. Ben Ward, the new commander of 1st Brigade, were on hand to lend their support.

Both teams surrounded the diamond as Gen. Chiles stepped forward and tossed the baseball.

Spectators from both sides filled the bleachers on Bennett Field as the teams went to bat.

New bleachers are expected to be installed on the field around May 18.

2 Officers Leave 37th Artillery

Orders calling two officers of the 6th Battalion, 37th Artillery to Viet Nam has resulted in two new faces for each position.

Capt. Michael F. Davis, Battery A Commander, and Lt. Robert H. Stryjewski, Executive Officer of Battery B, recently departed for tours of duty in Viet Nam.

702nd Grabs Softball Win

BY JIM LULL

Two softball games, one a nip-and-tuck affair and the other a one sided slugfest kicked off the 1965 2nd Division Softball Season Monday night on the Division Softball Field.

The first win of the year went to the 702nd Maintenance Battalion as they nipped the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry in a hard 4-3 battle.

A team of hitters, pitchers and runners of the 2nd Administration Company stormed off to an early lead early in the second game of the opening evening and crushed Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade, 15-0. It was a five inning ball game.

While the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles started baseball season rolling by tossing the ball on Bennett Field, the Chief of Staff, Col. Burnside E. Huffman, dropped by the softball diamond and hurled a ball to officially get that season rolling.

During the opener all runs were scored in the first two innings. Pitchers from both the 702nd and the 23rd locked up in a duel during the last five frames of seven inning contest.

Stone was the outstanding hitter for the 702nd with two hits in three trips to the plate. He also knocked in the winning run in the second inning.

The 23rd threatened heavily in both of the first innings.

Dave Howe supplied the big blow for the 23rd in the second inning, but the tally fell short and the fantrymen were unable to score again in the game.

The two runs the 702nd scored in their half of the 2nd inning proved to be the margin for victory.

As 2nd Admin Company marched to their lopsided victory in the second half of the twinbill, Wayne Comer and John Pave combined on the hill to throw an abbreviated no-hitter over the brigade team.

Headquarters company, 1st Brigade only managed to send a total of 20 men to the plate in the five inning game. Four men walked and one was hit by a pitch.

Joe Chambers, on the mound for headquarters company, checked the Admin hitters with one hit until they exploded for nine runs on six hits in the third inning and ran away with the game.

Admin company came up with five runs on four more hits in the next two innings to wrap it up.

Tom Balcius and Benny Blowers each hit solo round trippers for Admin Company.

Contributing heavily to the Admin company hit total of twelve was John Rafalko, who went 3 for 3 at the plate, and Doug Callison who banged out two safeties in three trips to bat.

Tom Balcius and Don Smith each connected twice for the Admin nine.

ACTION such as this has been seen all week long since the kick-off of softball and baseball seasons in the 2nd Division Monday night. Games are being played nightly on Bennett Field and the Division Softball Field.

Engineers Sail Past Medics, Win 24-11

The 2nd Engineer Battalion and the 122d Signal Battalion emerged with victories in games played Tuesday night at the Division Softball Field.

The first game saw the engineers spot the medics ten runs in the first inning, then roar from behind to win 24-11.

The Engineers wrapped the game up by scoring 19 runs in the final two frames.

The high scoring affair was marred with errors. The engineers scored their 24 runs with the aid of only 13 hits while the Medics scored 11 times on four hits.

Wilson and Harrington homered for the Engineers in the high scoring affair. Rentie was the winning pitcher.

In the nightcap the 122nd Signal jumped off to an early lead and held off the MP Company, 6-4. Although outhit in the game 10-9, the signal nine took advantage of MP miscues to move to a 5-0 advantage after three innings. The MPs rallied but could not overcome Signal's early lead.

Emerson was the winning pitcher. MP hurler Womble suffered the loss.

Support Command Turns Back 3rd Brigade, 9-6

By DAVE BUMAN

As lights lit up Bennett Field on the second evening of baseball season, the men of Support Command plunged into their first battle and defeated the 3rd Brigade in a 9-6 ballgame.

Although brigade launched the first run of the game in the top of the second inning, Support Command followed suit and started their march for an opening victory in the same inning. The first inning left Support Command with no hits, no runs and one error.

Ramon Castro of the brigade team doubled in the second off a pitch by Support Command's Ron Rahr and set the stage for the first run of the game. Charlie Bolen slammed a drive into left field.

Rahr Doubles

Rahr's double in the bottom of the second ran in Support Command's first score, followed by Ira Chesterfield's single that ran the score to 2-1 in Support Command's favor.

Singles by Chesterfield and Everett Youngs in the fourth sent in another run for Support Command while a single by brigade's Glendall Ellis drove in Fred Crittenden and cut Support Command's lead, 4-3.

A high pop-up into deep center field by Ted Skonezny put men on second and third for Support Command. A follow-up by Dick Bennett drove in another score, giving Support Command a comfortable lead at the top of the fifth.

Squeeze Play

A beautiful squeeze play by catcher Mike Nicol on an attempt by brigade's Bolen, followed by an out with the bases loaded, left brigade scoreless at the bottom of the 5th.

Replacing Milligan on the mound in the sixth inning was Al Freeman, a former semi-pro player with seven years of experience. He fanned his first three stickmen.

Dennis O'Keefe singled and brought in another run for the 3rd Brigade going into the 7th.

The eighth inning slipped by with both sides idle.

Motta Triples

With men on first and third Anthony Motta slammed in a triple and brought home two more for Support Command. A combination of singles in the bottom of the ninth sent in another run for the 3rd Brigade, closing out the 9-6 game for support Command.

Winning pitcher was Ron Rahr, with 20 strike-outs for the game. Losing pitchers were Edwin Milligan and Al Freeman.

COL. J. ELMORE SWENSON
Takes Command At 10th ATB

10th Air Brigade Colors Passed

Col. J. Elmore Swenson, new commanding officer of the 10th Air Transport Brigade assumed command during a review staged last Saturday on Fort Benning's 197th Brigade parade field.

Col. Swenson arrived at Fort Benning from his previous assignement at Fort Monroe, Va.

A native of Salt Lake City, Utah, he was graduated in economics from the University of Utah in 1940. Both an ROTC graduate and a member of the National Guard, he entered active service in 1941 as an artillery officer with the 40th Infantry Division.

In 1942 he attended the first Army flight class at Fort Sill and was later assigned as aviation officer of the 29th Infantry Division in Europe. He served with the 29th throughout the campaigns of France, Holland, Belgium and Germany.

In 1946, as aviation officer of the Fifth Army, this pioneer of Army aviation became one of the first to qualify as a helicopter pilot in the Army.

During an assignment in 1947 as Aviation Officer, Career Management Division, Department of the Army he prepared and staffed the career program for aviators and

11th In Island Republic; Letter Tells of Voyage

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is an excerpt of a letter written by Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, commander of the 229th Assault Helicopter Bn., who has led a task force of 11th Air Assault Division personnel to the Dominican Republic. The letter was written on May 5 to the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

Dear General Kinnard,

This letter is being written aboard the USS Guadalcanal at the time when we are turning South around the East end of the Dominican Republic. It is 4:00 p.m. and we debark at 5:30 a.m. tomorrow morning.

Our flight from Fort Benning to Mayport (Jacksonville, Fla.) was uneventful. The UH-1D's made the trip non-stop in two hours and twenty minutes, however, the UH-1B's stopped at Moody Air Force Base to refuel, where the reception was most cordial. Moody rolled out four 5,000 gallon tankers upon landing to refuel us and the Commanding Officer of the base met the lead ship.

The wheeled vehicle convoy came through without accident. There was, however, one incident which I shall describe shortly. At the Florida state line a trailer wheel locked, dragging the tire which caught fire. Unfortunately the trailer was loaded with ammunition. The quick action of Capt. James Lee, the S-4, and Sp4 Reidel, driver, saved the trailer by applying the contents of six fire extinguishers and avoided what might have been a very serious incident.

Lieutenant Colonels Robert Kampe (division G-4) and Raymond Shoemaker (division G-3) had effectively prepared the Navy for our arrival. The 229th advance party and main body were well taken care of by the Navy at Mayport. The continued efforts of Colonels Kampe and Shoemaker at Mayport Sunday and Monday morning contributed immeasurably to our tasks. The men and I are deeply moved by their unselfish actions.

Captain Taylor, skipper, and Commander Cooley, executive officer of the USS Guadalcanal have been very friendly and most helpful as has the entire crew. They tell us that our loading activity thus far has made this the smoothest operation they have experienced on board this vessel.

We had coordinated with Captain Taylor and Commander Wilkins, the operation officer, to qualify our aviators for carrier operations enroute. The aircraft were spotted, pilots briefed and enthused; however, the training did not come off because of a rough sea and 45 knots across the deck.

We have published two newsletters, a background information sheet and a "Why We Are Here" paper. The soldiers are enthused and anxious to get on with the mission.

Fourth Highest Citation

Silver Star Presented To Heroic 11th Aviator

The Silver Star, our nations fourth highest citation, was presented this week to an 11th Air Assault Division helicopter pilot.

1st Lt. John N. Dailey of the 11th Aviation Company (General Support) received the award from the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

The Silver Star was presented to Lt. Dailey for gallantry in action to Viet Nam on Nov. 1, 1964.

The lieutenant was a standby pilot at the Bien Hoa airbase. While on duty the airfield came under heavy mortar fire from communist Viet Cong.

Although he was wounded during the early stage of the attack Lt. Dailey made his way to his helicopter and began airlifting pilots to the flight line, making armed helicopters available for airfield defense. The pilots had been pinned down by fire in their barracks.

During the first airlift to the nearby flight line Lt. Dailey saw a fighter aircraft crash on takeoff. He immediately landed his helicopter and rescued the Vietnamese pilot.

After rescuing the injured pilot the lieutenant continued his mission of shuttling pilots to their aircraft and made numerous medical evacuations.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO GEN. KINNARD
From All 11th Sky Soldiers

11th Celebrates Special Birthday

A very special birthday was celebrated this week in the 11th Air Assault Division.

A party, with cake, balloons and all the little extras was given to celebrate the birthday of the division's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

All of the officers and wives of the general's staff plus those of the division major unit commands were on hand at the general's mess last Friday, May 7, to join in a chorus of "Happy Birthday" and to extend their personal best wishes.

A special guest on hand to add her congratulations was the mother of Lt. Col. John B. Stockton, commander of the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry.

At a birthday party it's traditional to present gifts and a birthday card. This tradition was followed in a rather unusual manner by Col. E. B. Roberts, division chief of staff, who presented the general with a card signed by all the staff officers. The card must have been about three feet square. The special gift was something to help the general on the golf links, a giant club and a ball of proportionate size, a little something to shave down the score.

This is the third birthday that Gen. Kinnard has celebrated with the division.

11th Aviation Group Exec Sets Glider Soaring Mark

Lt. Col. Robert F. Litle Jr., executive officer of the 11th Aviation Group, added one more laurel to his extensive list of flying credits when he set an unofficial Georgia state record for soaring with his glider Saturday.

Col. Litle's record flight was a 100 kilometer triangular flight from Kings Airfield in Columbus, to Salem, Ala., to Hatchechubee, Ala., and back to Kings Airfield. The glider flight lasted one hour 19 minutes at a speed of 76 kilometers per hour and reached a height of 6000 feet.

Although this record set Saturday is unofficial Col. Litle presently holds the official Georgia record which he established last fall.

The tall aviator best known around Fort Benning as "Saber Hawk 6" was the first commander of the pioneer 226th Aerial Surveillance and Escort Bn. (The Mohawks). He has been a member of the Soaring Society of America since 1940.

He tells about learning to fly the gliders back in 1940 when the only type craft available were single seaters and the instructions received on the ground before the first flight had better have sunk in.

He is the 17th american to receive the International Diamond C award for soaring accomplishments. Less than 300 of these awards have been presented worldwide.

Although a member of the International Soaring Society since 1940 he did not actively participate in competitions until he was assigned to France in 1948. Since then he has flown in competition against some of the best glider pilots in Europe and the United States placing 3rd in a field of 33 in the Victor Boin Trophy race 1961, 3rd in a field of 17 in the Eastern Open 1962, and 2nd in a field of 20 at Western Gateway 1963.

Bronze Star, Air Medal With V Awarded to Aerial Rocket Pilot

The Bronze Star and the Air Medal with "V" device for heroism were recently awarded to 1st Lt. Kent G. Averett of the 377th Artillery.

Lt. Averett, of Battery A, received the awards for participating in aerial flights in connection with ground operations against hostile forces in Vietnam.

The Bronze Star was awarded for outstanding service during his entire Vietnam tour.

The lieutenant earned the Air Medal with "V" device while acting as co-pilot gunner aboard an armed UB-1B helicopter while flying an emergency mission in support of a Republic of Vietnam Army ranger battalion which was ambushed and pinned down.

Lt. Averett's aircraft was hit by Viet Cong small arms and machinegun fire on its first pass over suspected enemy positions. However he continued and made a frontal attack against these positions and neutralized them.

Throughout the mission he directed accurate fire on enemy positions and marked machinegun emplacements with smoke.

The helicopter then landed and the crew evacuated wounded. At this time they were under fire while less than 100 meters from an enemy strong point.

After evacuating the wounded, refueling and rearming his ship, Lt. Averett returned to the action to render further aid. His leadership and initiative enabled the ranger battalion to withdraw while suffering minimum loss.

Lt. Averett has also received 16 clusters to the Air Medal while serving with the Utility Tactical Transport Company, Vietnam.

377th Driver Now U.S. Citizen

Sp4 Erich Radakovitz, a native of Guttenbach, Austria, has recently been sworn in as a citizen of the United States.

Radakovitz, a driver in Headquarters Battery, 377th Artillery, worked as a truck driver hauling cargo throughout Germany prior to coming to the United States in 1960.

In his adopted home of Chicago, Ill., he held civilian jobs as a driving instructor and a television repairman prior to entering the Army.

511th Infantry Falcons Complete Rough and Tough Evasion Course

The 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry "Falcons" recently completed a rigorous week of escape and evasion training.

Designed to test the members of the 511th Infantry in survival skills, the escape and evasion course was conducted over some 15,000 meters of terrain characterized by swamp and thick undergrowth.

Each member of the "Falcon" battalion was required to negotiate the course during the hours of darkness and, if possible, without being captured by the aggressor forces. This was not an easy task, though, and would be evaders often found themselves subjected to the hostilities of the "Stockade."

No effort was spared to insure that the "Falcons" were subjected to all of the unfriendly forces which they might encounter in the real situation. Aggressor troops, armed with vicious police dogs, pursued the fleeing men of the 511th as they attempted to run the gamut of dangers and obstacles without falling into the clutches of their adversary.

A visit to the stockade would quickly explain why the men of the "Falcon" battalion tried so desperately to avoid capture.

Once inside as a prisoner, he troops might be exposed to a multitude of medieval tortures or brain washing techniques.

188th 'Delta' Infantrymen Learn of 'Davy Crockett'

In preparation for their proficiency pay tests, a group of 188th Infantrymen became the first unit in the division to receive training with the Davy Crockett systems.

The Davy Crockett is a system capable of delivering a nuclear warhead for distances of 1½ to two and a half miles.

Since the Davy Crockett is not a weapon normally assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division, special arrangements were made by Capt. Theodore S. Danielsen, commanding officer of Company D, with the Davy Crockett section of the USAIS Mortar Committee. Capt. Danielsen stated that he wanted his men to acquire a well rounded knowledge of all infantry weapons.

All members of the company, mortarmen and members of the Recon Platoon, attended the training at Broomfield Range. The instruction lasted all day and was directed by Capt. Henry E. McCracken Jr.

In the morning session Capt. Thomas A. Romano Jr., SFC Cecil Harmon, and Sgt. Thomas E. Tillery, an ex-member of the 188th presented the instruction on the two systems of the Davy Crockett, the M28 or light system with a range of 2000 meters and the heavier M29 with a range of 4000 meters.

Further training include aligning, sighting and firing of systems, handling of nuclear and non-nuclear ammunition and the assembly and disassembly of the weapons.

In the afternoon the members of the 188th had four hours of crew drill. five men to a crew, under the supervision of Capt. Ira Kohnr and SFC Willey Brown of USAIC.

Though the Delta Dogs did not have the opportunity to fire the Davy Crockett, they finished with great enthusiasm. Most of them had never seen the weapon before.

Artillerymen Race Clock During Launching Drill

The three top Little John firing sections of the 42nd Artillery were recently pitted against the clock and each other as the battalion conducted the first quarterly "Best Launcher Section Competition." Winner by a narrow margin was Battery A's 3rd Section.

The battalion competition, which highlights the training quarter for the 42nd Artillerymen, features a firing section drill conducted under simulated combat conditions.

From receipt of the "mission" to "fire," the competing sections are closely graded by a team of umpires on speed, accuracy, team work and knowledge of the individual crew members.

In addition, the launcher crews must move from the road march into position and simulate firing all within 15 minutes.

The winning section in this quarter's test, the 3rd Launcher Section of Battery A, is led by Sgt. James H. West. His platoon leader, who is also graded during the test is 2nd Lt. Henry L. Dunn, III, Battery A's commander is Capt. Leroy C. Bell.

For its show of training proficiency in garnering this victory, Battery A will receive a permanent trophy from the 42nd Artillery's Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber.

The competition was planned and supervised by the Battalion Operations Section and the team of umpires was headed by Maj. Herbert H. Martin, battalion executive officer.

Beard Earns Silver Leaves Of Lt. Colonel

Lt. Col. Rutland D. Beard, 11th Air Assault Division Assistant Chief of Staff, was promoted to his present rank in ceremonies at division headquarters Thursday, May 6.

Prior to his present assignment he was executive officer of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 187th Infantry, 1st Air Assault Brigade.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commanding general, and Mrs. Lucille Beard pinned the new silver oak leaves on his collar.

During World War II, Col. Beard was assigned to the 102nd Infantry Division. He was with the 32nd Regiment, 7th Infantry Division during the Korean Conflict. In 1957 he graduated from the Infantry Career Course and completed the course at Fort Leavenworth's Command and General Staff College in 1961.

A problem that has been pressing to the aerial rocket artillerymen of the 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery has been solved by a senior sergeant with an eye to the future and thoughts of the past.

SFC Robert C. Howland of Battery A saw the problem of moving the sensitive 2.75 inch aerial rockets to and from the helicopters while in garrison.

His thoughts of the past brought memories of the World War II Air Force bomb trailers. These trailers combined with discarded styrafoam containers provided a safe and flexible system for transporting the 2.75 inch rockets.

The discarded styrafoam containers were originally designed for carrying forty-eight 2.75 inch rockets in a UH - IB helicopter. The containers were tested and found to be unsafe.

Sgt. Howland found that three of these discarded containers could be mounted on one bomb trailer, to carry a total of 144 rockets per load.

Previously rockets had been loaded in the rear of a three - quarter ton truck. During movement rockets were subject to damage since there was no method of adequately securing them.

The overall result of SFC Howland's imaginative invention has been more efficient loading precedures in a reduced amount of time.

38th Infantry Marnemen Open Company-Size ATT

Sky Soldier Marnemen of the 1st Brigade launched the company Army Training Test series for the 1st Brigade Tuesday, in what appears to be a most spectacular and realistic test of the tactical proficiency of a rifle company.

Kicking it off Tuesday was Company C of the 1st Bn, 38th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Billy L. Whorton, running it Tuesday and Wednesday, while Company A under Capt. Jack B. Glenn, is going through it yesterday and today.

Thirty hours in duration, the air assault rifle company test is being conducted under 1st Brigade control, directed by Lt. Col. Harold G. Keebaugh, Operations Officer for the 1st Brigade.

A three - phase problem, encompassing all aspects of the normal mission of a rifle company, many special requirements have been added to cover the tactics and techniques peculiar to air assault operations.

The three major portions of the test include a twelve-hour movement and defense phase, six hours for retrograde operations, and 12-hour long company in the attack phase.

Utilizing Essbagger Field as a pickup point, Company C deployed early yesterday morning with all normal attachments and all field tactical equipment into the combat zone where they set up a base of operations and began defensive measures.

Among the company's attachments were a light 81mm Mortar Section from the combat support company, a fire - marker team, ten umpires and normal attached medical aid.

Plenty of fireworks and intense realism existed throughout the first problem, which saw more than 27 thousand rounds of small arms blank ammunition fired, while the sounds of battle blanketed the area, created by artillery, mine and booby-trap simulators.

One outstanding feature during the problem was an actual gas attack, launched from a helicopter, and conducted by chemical personnel who integrated this action into the test.

Artillery Doles Awards At Battalion Ceremony

The 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery honored members of the battalion and their honor battery at an awards ceremony on Tuesday, May 11 at the Division Artillery Softball Field.

A certificate of completion of the Chief of Firing Battery extension course of the U.S. Army Artillery and Missile School was presented to SSgt. Robert A. Shute, Battery A.

Third United States Army Certificates of Training for completion of the post Explosive Ordnance Reconnaissance course were presented to Lt. Richard L. Arnold, Lt. Richard A. Lavoie, and Sgt. Raymond L. Jackson.

Receiving the battalion volleyball competition trophy was SSgt. Ramon Torres, the team coach. Headquarters Battery was the winner.

Honor Battery streamer and "young tiger" award went to Battery C, accepted by Capt. Donald Price. Superior performance on staff inspections earned the awards for Battery C.

228th Sgt. Maj. Earns Stripes For the Job

A veteran senior sergeant who has been with army aviation since its earliest days was awarded the stripes and star of a sergeant major this week.

Former MSgt. Rolland Tennihill of the 228th Assault Helicopter Bn., received his new stripes from Maj. Joseph Rutkowski, executive officer of the 228th.

The new sergeant major entered the army in 1942 and served in the Army Air Corps. His service with Army aviation has taken him to assignments here in the U.S. as well as in Europe and the Orient.

In 1962 Sgt. Tennihill became the first sergeant with the 202nd Transportation Company, the first Chinook helicopter company in the army.

In February of 1963, with the formation of the 11th Air Assault Division the 202nd was inactivated and Company A of the 228th Assault Helicopter Battalion was formed.

Sgt. Tennihill served with Company A as its line chief until April, 1964 when Company C was activated. He served as First Sergeant until November of 1964 when he took over the duties of battalion sergeant major.

New Captains

Three aviators from the 1st Aviation Company recently received the twin silver bars raising them to the rank of captain.

The new captains are Richard R. Fishel, Norman L. Alley and William B. Johnson.

Each promotion was made in a separate ceremony held in the office of the 1st Aviation Company Commander, Maj. Charles R. Jones.

MOHAWK LEADER LEAVES FOR TEST
(R to L) Maj. Crawford, Maj. Wirthlin, Sgt. Maj. Ross

Mohawks Take Part In Intra-Service Test

Elements of the 11th Air Assault's Mohawk aircraft battalion left McKenna airfield Monday, May 3, for Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Fifty-six men and 12 aircraft of the 226th Aerial Surveillance and Escort Battalion are at Fort Huachuca in a training phase for the Army's participation in the Joint Service Low Altitude Evaluation.

These evaluations will include aviators and various types of fixed wing aircraft from the Army, Navy and Air Force.

They have been planned to determine how accurately a pre-selected absolute altitude can be maintained over various types of terrain. The terrain of the Arizona and Nevada area has been specifically selected as typical of terrain which is likely to be encountered in combat zones throughout the world.

The flight now at Fort Huachuca is led by Maj. James C. Crawford, commander of the 226th Battalion.

The provisional detachment is now in a two week training phase. They will proceed to Fallon Naval Air Station in Nevada for the intra-service evaluation exercise.

127th Bridges Span Victory Pond

"Lay Hold," "Heave!" is a command familiar to all members of Company "B", 127th Engineer Battalion after completion of four days of intensive float bridge training.

Victory Pond was the site of the four day practical exercise in which the platoons constructed four float normal and five float reinforced M4T6 rafts, four ponton three bay reinforced light tactical rafts, and aluminum floating footbridges.

Bridging equipment was provided by the 586th Float Bridge Company from Main Post. Under normal crossing conditions, the four float normal M4T6 raft can carry wheeled vehicles, such as a 2½ ton truck, or tracked vehicles, such as an armored personnel carrier, in current velocities up to and including 7 feet per second.

The five float reinforced tactical raft and the aluminum footbridge for record. The race to span Victory Pond with footbridge was won by 2nd Lt. Salvucci's 1st Platoon which constructed 250 feet of footbridge in 6 minutes and 10 seconds.

Honors for construction of the four pontoon three bay reinforced light tactical raft went to the 2nd Platoon, commanded by 2nd Lt. Richard Stansfield, which assembled their rafts in 10 minutes and 10 seconds.

In true engineer fashion, the Bravo Beavers, on completion of training were quick to provide each bridge commander with a chance to demonstrate his swimming ability.

M4T6 raft can carry even heavier wheeled tracked vehicles in current velocities up to and including 8 feet per second. During daylight crossings, the 472 foot aluminum footbridge can cross 75 men per minute in currents of 8 feet per second.

At various times during the training, each platoon was required to build the light

'The Army Takes Care Of Its Own'

I wish to give my personal indorsement to the forthcoming 1965 Joint Annual Fund Campaign of the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society, and to ask each of you to contribute the maximum amount of your pay commensurate with the least possible burden or hardship for you or your family.

I consider the Army Emergency Relief an essential instrument to sustain morale. Soldiers are ever subject to various types of emergency situations or conditions. Many of these are a result of the requirements of the Service and create hardship or distress beyond the financial resources immediately available to the soldier or his family.

Your voluntary contributions make you active partners of the Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society which serves members of the Army Family during financial emergencies. The fact that Army Emergency Relief could make immediately available over three hundred and twenty three thousand dollars in aid to over three thousand members of this Post during the past year is directly attributed to the personal interest shown by each of you and the support you have given Campaigns in the past.

Your continued support, your service and interest will assist me in upholding one of the finest traditions of the Service:

MAJ. GEN. HEINTGES PRESENTS FIRST DONATION
To Col. Schneider, Fund Drive Chairman

1965 AER-ARS Fund Drive Kick-Off Rally Conducted

Kicking off the 1965 Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society Fund Drive at Fort Benning Monday, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges said these are "the Army's own agencies" to provide help for its own personnel.

Referring to other fund drives the general said, "There is no doubt that all the agencies which our contributions help to support are deserving and of great benefit in aiding those in distress; providing needed services and helping to combat disease. Ultimately, all of us derive some benefit from their activities. But the fund drive we are here to launch this morning is in an entirely different category."

"In the first place," Gen. Heintges continued, "Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society are the Army's own agencies to provide our own personnel and their dependents with financial assistance when they are faced with emergencies they cannot meet. In addition, the funds are collected locally and used locally."

Attending the meeting were representatives of all units of Thousands View Show At Lawson Air Field

By Sgt. Maj. Al Spratley

Thousands trekked to Fort Benning's Lawson Army Airfield last Saturday to find out for themselves if the Armed Forces Day Open House was going to be — as promised — bigger and better than the one held a year ago.

They came away convinced — it was.

Several thousand were already on the field before the scheduled 9 a.m. opening. By 10:30, time for the first presentation of the "main show," the 7,000 capacity bleachers

Horses Will Return to Post Polo Field; Hunt Club to Hold Annual Spring Show

By Samuel Rush

For the first time in 18 years, horses will return to the polo field at Fort Benning as the annual spring horse show sponsored by the Fort Benning Hunt Club moves to French Polo Field, Main Post, The Infantry Center on May 30.

There was a time when Fort Benning relied on the horse as a major means of transportation and The Infantry Center had as many as four polo teams organized. But with the transfer of units to other stations, mechanization of the Army, and the sale of Army horses, the polo field activities came to a close.

By the winter of 1949-1950, the 400 stalls in The Infantry Center stables were shared by one respectable horse and one Army mule. The horse seems to have been unemployed but the mule was used by the Communications section for demonstrating the laying of wire from mule back.

An attempt to organize a Hunt Club was initiated just before the Korean war broke out. But with the advent of hostilities, nothing came of the attempt although 122 individuals showed interest in the undertaking.

It was not until 1957 that the present Hunt Club was organized. For many years the horse shows were held

Funeral Hour Is Changed

The funeral of 2nd Lt. George P. Samples will be conducted at 12:30 p.m. Saturday (May 22) at The Infantry Center Chapel instead of 11 a.m. as previously announced.

Samples, the son of MSgt. and Mrs. Patrick Samples, died of wounds received in military operations in the Dominican Republic. He was a graduate of Infantry Officer Candidate School.

Gen. Harold K. Johnson Slated to Arrive Today

Gen. Harold K. Johnson, chief of staff, U.S. Army is scheduled to arrive today to participate in graduation ceremonies of the Infantry Officers Career Course Classes (CAR).

Gen. Johnson is the guest speaker and will present diplomas to graduating members of the class at the annual event to be held in Marshall Auditorium at 10 a.m.

On arrival Gen. Johnson will visit with Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges. Following the graduation exercise, he plans to take part in the noon devotions service also to be held in Marshall Auditorium.

An official luncheon will be held at the Main Officers' Open Mess where the general will meet with brigade and battalion commanders and the top graduates of each CAR class.

Gen. Johnson plans to depart at 2:30 p.m. for a visit to Fort Jackson, S.C.

The CAR students will have completed 35 weeks of concentrated instruction in what may be considered the most important course of instruction of The Infantry School.

The classes are composed of 405 officers, mainly Regular Army captains with six to eight years of service. The classes also include six U.S. Marine Corps officers and 24 Army officers from our Allied nations.

were completely filled with many more spectators spilling over into standing room areas.

Even during the hour-long presentation of artillery, aircraft, air assault and sky diving demonstrations, exhibits along the midway continued to host a steady stream of "customers."

By noon, the exhibit area, more compact than in 1964 but with every bit as many displays and demonstrations, was seething with children and adults, listening attentively to personnel on duty, asking questions, operating equipment and climbing over vehicles.

The afternoon was a carbon copy of the morning's activities with the bleachers again jammed for the second main show and the line of cars coming into the area matching the line of those who had come, seen and were now attempting to escape the blistering sun that made Lawson Army Airfield's 93 degree temperature the "hottest point in the Nation."

The Infantry Center who will serve as fund drive chairmen and keymen. The commanding general told the unit representatives that "you and every man you approach for a contribution is a potential beneficiary of the fund, no matter how well your affairs may be in order or how adequate your financial reserve may seem to be at the moment.

"Our personnel have given outstanding support to previous fund drives but this is one in which our efforts and our contributions should exceed anything we have done in the past," Gen. Heintges said.

"This will depend pretty much on the people here today — how well versed you are on Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society operations and the degree of your personal conviction that these agencies must be supported to carry on their work so the Army can 'take care of its own'."

Gen. Heintges made the first donation to the drive, presenting his contribution to Col. Milton G. Schneider, the Infantry Center adjutant general and fund drive chairman.

Col. Schneider explained the objectives of the fund drive, one of which is to provide immediate cash when an emergency arises.

"Funds due from the Veterans Administration or Social Security will arrive, but that takes time," he said. "AER steps in with the needed money and most of it is paid back. In some cases, however, the money is a direct grant and does not have to be repaid."

Presiding at the meeting was Lt. Col. M. W. Kendall, G-1 of The Infantry Center.

To Curtail Holiday Holocaust

National Safety Council Plans Unique TV Show

As a long Memorial Day weekend approaches, the National Safety Council in cooperation with the Columbia Broadcasting System has scheduled a unique television program designed to curtail as much as possible the customary holiday holocaust.

See test form on Page 37

Sponsored by a national gasoline producer, the program, "The National Drivers Test" will be shown locally over WRBL-TV (Ch. 3) Monday, May 24 at 10-11 p.m. EST.

The show will use spectacular photography to test driving judgment. Viewers will be able to grade themselves, in comparison with typical drivers throughout the nation, by marking their answers on the form reproduced in this issue of The Bayonet or on one of those being distributed on a limited basis by The Infantry Center Safety Director.

According to information received, viewers will see high speed, head-on collisions staged by experienced stunt drivers, as they develop and occur.

In another dramatic part of the test, the viewer is in the driver's seat and encounters a number of potentially serious driving hazards and asked, "How many did you spot?"

Numerous other questions will be asked to test driving ability. The score sheet will allow viewers to compare their results with other members of their family as well as with friends and neighbors.

The National Safety Council hopes the show will point up weaknesses in the viewer's reaction and ability, thereby instilling him to greater caution in his everyday driving, but especially during the forthcoming hazardous holiday.

Top Killer

Even a strong, hard man may have to blink away tears as he stands before neat rows of white crosses while the bugler plays the haunting strains of "Taps" on Memorial Day.

The visitor knows those crosses represent men who fought, bled and died on blackened battlefields to protect our way of life. Perhaps he is moved by the speeches read that day, or by the wreaths and bouquets of flowers adorning the many graves.

Yet, more than likely, it is the sheer number of those crosses which causes him to feel a lump in his throat. More than 35,000 veterans are buried at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia, site of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Meuse-Argonne Cemetery in France is the burial place for more than 14,000 Doughboys of World War I. Another 17,000 Americans, who fell in World War II, lie beneath the tropical soil of Manila in the Philippines. Every year thousands of people visit the beautiful memorial of the Pacific at Honolulu, Hawaii, where simple stone markers tell the final story of thousands of American fighting men of World War II and Korea. More than 120 American military cemeteries and memorials throughout the world tell the same story.

Seeing those rows of crosses, the visitor may say sadly, "What a shame. What a tragedy."

Certainly he would be moved in much the same way if all the Americans who died on our nation's highways were buried together in special cemeteries. Again, the very size of such burial places and the very number of graves, would stagger his imagination.

Since the turn of the century, more Americans have died in motor vehicle accidents than in all our nation's wars, including the Revolution. Beginning with the Civil War, approximately 1,077,000 Americans have died in wartime military service. But since 1913, half a century after the Civil War, more than 1,511,000 Americans have died in motor vehicle accidents.

In a manner of speaking, deaths on the highway are even more tragic than deaths in battle. Americans who died in war died for a cause — to keep our nation and other nations free. Those who died in traffic accidents had no such cause. They died while in a hurry, or drinking, or careless — or because someone else was.

Looking upon a cemetery filled with those who died in traffic accidents, that same visitor would probably sadly repeat:

"What a shame. What a tragedy." And perhaps when he left the cemetery, he would think about those rows of crosses, as he does when he leaves the cemetery on Memorial Day. (AFPS)

Could Be Better

Service Vote Good

The Department of Defense has recently released a report on the record of absentee voting by service men and women in the 1964 Presidential election.

At first glance, the statistics are impressive. A little better than one out of two eligible uniformed voters — 51.3 per cent, to be exact — cast a ballot in last year's election. This was an increase of 11.8 per cent over the service vote total in 1960.

A jump of 10 per cent in four years is certainly nothing to be ashamed of, but there are, we feel, good reasons why the total should always be up in the 80 to 90 per cent range.

How simple can it get for a person to cast a ballot? Certainly the services did everything possible to be sure each of us was aware of the election, of how important it was for us to vote, and how to do it once we had made up our minds.

We feel it is obvious that no one in uniform can sit back feeling smug and satisfied about that 11.8 per cent increase. We should do better! We should set an example for the rest of the voting populace in every election—Presidential, state or local!

Surgeon Says

The Pill 'Problem'

By Maj. Stanton P. Fischer

Sir William Osler, one of the world's leading physicians during the first two decades of the century, once remarked, "It is one of the first duties of the physician to educate the masses, not to take medicine."

Sometimes it seems that the reverse has happened. Billions of aspirin tablets are consumed yearly by Americans. Last year, thousands of dollars were spent for reducing pills and tranquilizers.

What have these thousands purchased in our community? Better health? The population remains overweight. The well motivated obese patients have reduced. The poorly motivated have tried, half-heartedly, failed and gained a few more pounds. In neither case have the popular reducing pills substantially contributed anything to the outcome.

We must furthermore ask ourselves what our tranquillizing dollars have bought. Emotional stability? Reliability? Proper motivation? Requests for compassionate assignment and emergency leave continue, increasing as more troops are ordered to the field, as the world situation darkens, as things become "too much to cope with."

Sick call still doubles before field problems and P. T. tests. New cases of parental irresponsibility, juvenile delinquency and emotional maladjustment are identified daily. Tranquillizers have not statistically altered these situations.

Just as penicillin is specific treatment for a few infections, so weight reducing tablets and tranquillizers are indispensable in specific patients under certain circumstances. But medicine will not heal sick marriages, bolster inadequate personalities, substitute for paying one's bills, salve a guilty conscience, supply moral courage or take off pounds.

There are simply some things that modern medicine cannot induce. One is motivation. Another is individual responsibility. A third is integrity. There are others. Osler's advice is even more applicable today than 50 years ago.

Chaplain's Corner

A Christian's Job

By Chaplain (Capt.) Emmitt T. Carroll Jr.

Many employed people seem to believe that there is no relation between religious faith and an everyday job. "Business and religion are things to keep separate", a salesman explained to me. "It doesn't do any good to mix them up."

Our Christian faith says we are called to be Christian workmen. We receive this concept from the words of Jesus who said, "The great commandment is to love the Lord your God with all your hearts, with all your soul, with all your mind. And second unto this is to love your neighbor as yourself."

Applied to our own situation, these familiar and beloved words mean something like this: the main job of a businessman or salesman or architect or carpenter is to love God with all your heart and soul and mind, and your neighbor as yourself. The profession of law or the trade of plumbing are only instruments through which we may express our true calling or vocation.

Each of us therefore may be considered as a minister, called to love God and serve our fellow-man. As a bond broker, as a plumber, as a carpenter, whatever it is that you do everyday, your job is only incidental to your true calling as such a minister of God.

A dentist is a dentist only secondarily. In this work he uses abilities with which he has been endowed and skills which he has learned. His real aim in life is to love God by using his talents as a good steward.

The parable of the talents sharply illustrates Jesus' view on the values inherent in good workmanship. Those who use their talents productively were praised and the timid man who hid his talent was censured. The underlying truth here is that men demonstrate their love of God by giving a good account of their time, their abilities and their possesions.

The command to love our neighbor finds a close application in our daily work. The dentist lets God's love flow through him to the patient, so, too, the carpenter, the tradesman, and the business man.

Loving a neighbor means having concern for people. Thus we shall hold all persons to be of infinite worth regardless of race to which they belong, their skin color, or their creed. To think and act accordingly is our calling. That is why we are here.

It is good to know, too, that every one of us is such a minister, and that it is our common vocation to serve God and love man. And it is high time that we moved forward from talking about our religion, to living our religion.

The Judge Says . . .

Are you aware that when you hire a contractor to build a house or alter a building, you are responsible to see that bills for the construction, alteration, or repair are paid, even though you may have paid the contractor in full?

The law gives to sub-contractors, laborers and persons furnishing materials a lien on the property on which the work is done or for which the materials are furnished to secure the payment of their account.

If the owner of property hires his own labor or buys his own material, he can be sure that the bills are paid. However, if he employs a contractor, the problem becomes more difficult because the contractor will often hire sub-contractors (plumbers, painters, etc.) and buy the necessary materials. Those sub-contractors and material men have the right to a lien on the property if they are not paid by the contractor. Thus, if upon completion of the work he is not paid by the contractor, the sub-contractor or material man will file his lien. If the lien is not satisfied, a lawsuit may be brought to foreclose the lien—much in the same manner as the foreclosure of a mortgage.

To protect himself against liens not yet filed, the purchaser should require a clause in the contract of sale wherein the seller agrees to satisfy any mechanic's liens arising from work done during the seller's ownership of the property. If the house is a new one, the purchaser may request the seller to obtain lien waivers from the contractor, sub-contractors and material men.

YOU OWE $35,000.00

Statistics show each person eats $10.00 in food weekly. If averaged for a lifetime, with life expectancy of 66 years, this amounts to approximately $35,000.00.
This is by far the largest single expense to be met by any individual. It is especially difficult for the head of the family. If your average food expenditure is $25.00 per week, in 15 years it will amount to $20,000.00.
CONCLUSION: Have Money . . . Quit eating????
This is ridiculous, but what are you doing to reduce your cost of eating?

Open to all adult scouting leaders as well as interested adults not presently involved in the Boy Scout program, the Leadership Training Conference will offer courses in a variety of basic scouting subjects.

These include basic training, leadership, advancement, troop committee and training of junior leaders in the patrol method. Each course during the training session is slated to last about two hours.

Brig. Gen. J. M. Wright Jr., assistant commander of the 11th AAD and chairman of the Fort Benning District Committee, will address those attending the Leadership Conference at approximately 6:30 p.m.

Special arrangements have been made with the Bldg. 4 cafeteria manager for sandwich type meals during the supper hour. The purchase of the supper meal (for those desiring to avail themselves of the cafeteria food) and a 50 cents registration fee will be the only expense attendant to the conference. Coffee and light refreshments will be provided free during the day.

Additional details about the Adult Leaders' Training Conference can be obtained by contacting Chaplain (Capt.) C. R. Gibbs at 545-6809 during duty hours and 689-8573 during evenings and weekends. Registration forms can be gotten either from Chaplain Gibbs or at Bldg. 4 on the day of the conference.

The Leadership Training Conference is part of a continuing adult education program being conducted by the Fort Benning District, Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Bill Andrews Tosses Three-Hitter As 428th Med. Beats TSB, 5-2

By SP5 MITCH YAMANAKA

Bill Andrews pitched a sparkling 3 - hitter Monday night at Gowdy Field to lead the undefeated 428th Medical Bn. nine to victory over The Student Bde. squad, 5-2.

Andrews held the TSB hitters in check during the first six innings, facing only 18 batters. He weakened a little in the top of the 7th when the lead - off batter, Robert Blosser, drove a single into short centerfield and advanced to third on a fielding error. Blosser scored on a passed ball for TSB's first run.

The game was a tight pitching duel between Andrews and Arlen Clark for the first five innings with the only score coming in the bottom of the 4th when James Wesley scored on a sacrifice fly to deep right by the 428th's second baseman, Juan Gaston.

The 428th batters got to Clark in the bottom of the 6th with Mike Morris hitting a deep drive to center field for a triple. Wesley brought Morris home with a sacrifice fly to left and Dave Sarrette came in to relieve Clark when the next man received a free pass to first.

Two singles in a row were hit off Sarrette and two more runs scored on Glen Kelly's error at shortstop on a ground ball hit by Joe Gragg. Andrews, the runner on second base on the play, waited until the last second before jumping over the ball causing Kelly to lose the ball and allowing the two runs to score.

The 428th other run scored on a wild pitch.

TSB started a rally in their half of the 9th inning with two out. Mickey Carmack drew a base on balls and beat the throw to second on a fielder's choice.

The next batter, Thurman Woody, slammed a double into deep center to bring in Carmack.

Jimmy Knight, TSB's first baseman, then worked the count up to three balls and 2 out and the ball game.

SPORTS Afterthoughts by DAVID M. SCOTT

THE NEW YORK YANKEES may be having their troubles mired deep in the second division of the American League but their AA Southern League affiliate, the Columbus Yankees, are presently enjoying their best season since 1947.

The C-Yanks are holding down the number one slot in their league while their major league papa is floundering 10 games behind the league leading Chicago White Sox in eighth place as of Thursday, May 20.

The decline and fall of the mighty Yankees is attributed in a large part to the loss of their M&M boys, Maris and Mantle. Maris is out of the lineup for at least six weeks with a pulled leg muscle, while Mantle makes an occasional appearance when his ailing legs feel up to it. Elston Howard, the league's most valuable player in 1963 and a consistent hitter last year, has also been scratched from the lineup because of a bone chip in his elbow.

Not only is the Yankee power of old gone but the New Yorker hurlers are having trouble getting past the first few innings. Mound ace Whitey Ford has a soaring ERA and has been hit hard by opposing batters in the early innings. The only ray of light on the Yankee mound staff has been Mel Stottlemyre who boasts a 2.61 ERA and a 3-2 won and lost record. There isn't another Bomber hurler with an ERA under 3.50.

Johnny Keane is the first manager the Yankees have had from the senior circuit in over a decade and he might be wishing he was back with his fifth place Cardinals.

It is doubtful if Yogi Berra has any regrets. His new teammates are off to the best start in their history. The Mets are playing better than .400 ball while the Bombers have dropped under the .400 mark twice. If the Yankees keep up their pace and the Mets theirs, New York baseball fans may switch their allegience from Shea Stadium to the Yankee park. It seems that New Yorkers do not like winners.

Whatever goes wrong for the Bronx Bombers seems to be working just the opposite for the Columbus Yankees. The C-Yanks' M&M boys, John Miller and Bill Madden, have been providing the valuable clutch hits while the Confederate mound staff has been consistently whiffing the ball past opposition batters. The C-Yanks second sacker, Roy White, is presently leading the team in hitting with a solid .343 average.

Barring an injury to White, Madden, Miller or other key performers, and if the Columbus pitching staff can hold up, the C-Yanks might well have the Southern League pennant flapping in their outfield come September.

Meanwhile, the faltering New Yorkers are going to have to come up with some mighty hot bats and a strong armed pitching staff to get out of the second division.

Would the Bombers sacrifice Columbus' pennant chances by snatching some of the C-Yank talent? After all, Columbus is a Yankee farm club and the talent belongs to them. It seems as if all the ice water in the South wouldn't cool off the blazing bat of Roy White, and the Yankees desperately need a big bat in their weak lineup. Local baseball fans will just have to wait and see, because without White the Columbus club would obviously be hurting in the pennant race.

It seems rather ironic that 100 years after the Civil War, the Confederates are winning and the Yankees are on the losing end.

Ken Hunt, the Cincinnati hurler who was chosen National League rookie of the year in 1961, is now doing pitching chores for the Knoxville Smokies of the Southern League. He tossed one - third of an inning against the C-Yanks Saturday.

Meyer Captures Two First Places At Sports Car Club Regional Meet

Richard R. Meyer Jr., 197th Inf. Bde. S-2 Officer, took two first places in the recently held Sports' Car Club of America Regional Races in Selma, Alabama.

Driving a 1961 Austin Healey Sprite, Meyer averaged 66 miles per hour on the 2.68 mile road course to take first place trophies in his class on both Saturday and Sunday.

After recording the fastest qualifying lap, the race on Saturday was an easy win for Meyer. However, a poor start on Sunday forced Meyer to work his way through the 20 car field before he finally reached first place position only three laps from the checkered flag.

A devoted sports car enthusiast, Meyer performs his own maintenance and has managed to get his car up to 105 miles per hour.

Having begun competitive racing in 1960 while stationed at Fort Rucker, Ala., Meyer has participated in some 20 races and has placed in many of them.

Inf. Agency Nabs Post Pin Tourney

A four-year ambition was achieved Monday night at the Fort Benning Bowling Center when the Infantry Agency defeated Pizza-on-Call in a rolloff to decide the USAIS Officers' League championship.

The Agency took the tournament by scores of 911 to 852 and 912 to 908.

Despite games of 224 and 231 by James Miles, leadoff man for Pizza-on-Call, the Infantry Agency, led by Gordon Cockin, Jim Lovinggood and Kermit Blaney, came through with a consistent performance to win the championship.

Probably the happiest individual witnessing the triumph was Colonel K. E. Eckland, commanding officer of the US Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, who since 1961, has actively participated with Infantry Agency teams seeking the coveted trophy which was finally captured Monday night.

George Richards Wins Post Golf Tournament

A 36-inch putt and a forfeited hole spelled the difference Saturday afternoon as George A. Richards overcame a two-hole deficit to win over William J. McNally in match play for the 1965 Fort Benning Spring Handicap Golf Championship.

The crucial putt came on the 18th hole, with McNally needing the tricky tap-in for a half which would have sent the match into extra holes. Playing with a 15 handicap, McNally would have enjoyed a stroke advantage on the first extra hole.

Richards had trouble getting his tee shots under control on the first three holes and found himself two down at the turn. Pars on holes 11 and 12, however, squared things temporarily until a handicap stroke on the 13th returned the advantage to McNally.

On the par three 14th, both men missed the green. It was at this point that McNally played the wrong ball and suffered automatic loss of the hole, setting up the dramatic win by Richards on the final hole. Richards was playing with a 12 handicap.

Both men failed to capitalize on early opportunities for a breakthrough.

After a booming drive on the par four sixth, Richards was in trouble on his second shot and had to settle with a triple bogie. Meanwhile, McNally failed to clear a trap and lost a stroke getting to the green. He also triple bogied.

On the 18th, Richards rallied when it meant the difference. After hooking his tee shot into a difficult downhill lie near the 17th fairway, Richards scrambled for a match-winning bogie in the tightly contested match.

Armed Forces Day '65--Pride and Tired Feet

By JIM BAKER
Editor, The 2nd Infantry Division News

A small boy who said he was four years old, looked more than apprehensive as he eyed one of the Army's latest machine guns on Armed Forces Day '65.

Gentle coaxing by a sergeant from the 7th Cavalry finally convinced him to hunker down behind the gun and sight along the barrel.

The child was on the verge of tears. He looked back over his shoulder for the smiling approval of his parents and then squeezed the trigger of the M-60 machine-gun.

The ensuing clatter of blank ammunition firing and flying out the side of the weapon produced a wide grin of accomplishment that made the following-firing and the award of a marksmanship diploma anticlimatic.

Diagonally across from the machine gun range, on the other side of the large 2nd Infantry Division Armed Forces Day display, a medical battalion was staging a jungle patrol.

Visitors rode through the woods on the outskirts of Fort Benning's Lawson Airfield and were treated to tanks firing, dummies being shot out of trees, and open conflict between guerillas and troops in a realistic Vietnamese village.

The waiting tent the medics set up with chairs was almost as large an attraction as the ride itself.

Chairs were hard to come by throughout the Armed Forces Day display unless you wanted to sit in the sun on the bleachers and stare across an empty field that waited silently for the next big show to tumble onto it from the air and from the trees on the other side.

1st Brigade Readiness Test Pits Battalions; Designed to Ready Units for 'Cherokee Trail'

By JIM LULL

Operational readiness testing — for the entire 1st Brigade — is now being conducted as a "readiness evaluation" maneuver and early preparation for exercise Cherokee Trail VI.

The test was handled in an unusual fashion, in that the headquarters for both the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry and 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry took orders from the same brigade command post.

"This unorthodox means of channeling orders added considerable realism to the problem, "operations officials" commented.

Practice Alert

The 1st Brigade control headquarters was set up in the field Tuesday afternoon, but the actual three-day maneuver didn't kick off until Wednesday morning when a practice alert exercise was given both battalions.

At 5:30 a.m. Wednesday, the respective battalion commanders were given their first operational order to proceed from garrison on a road march to the general assembly area.

The units then parted, the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry as the "blue" force and the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry as the "red force".

The battalion commanders had received the order to organize and form a "defensive posture" or position.

Wednesday Night

Wednesday night, extensive patrolling and probing missions were carried on by each force, with the 23rd Infantry receiving an order Wednesday night to launch a full-scale attack against their opponents at 7:00 a.m. the following morning.

The 23rd benefited during their mock attack Thursday morning by untilizing simulated nuclear warfare combined with their mechanized infantry capability.

Four hours later, the "blue" team was unable to withstand the pressure and were required to fall back across the mythical international border.

At noon yesterday, the ailing 9th Infantry met with the brigade commander who ordered him to apply a counter-attack two hours later.

Reinforced with nuclear capability and artillery support, the 9th Infantry managed to successfully counter-attack and push the 23rd to the maneuver area.

A neat blocking maneuver was initiated by the 23rd late Thursday afternoon containing the aggression to the south.

The maneuver is due to be terminated this morning with both units moving back to garrison today around noon.

Ingenuity

During the brigade - sized battle, both battalion commanders were given ample opportunity to use their ingenuity to provide for themselves additional support through the brigade control headquarters.

Expandable bridges and other engineer support, as well as use of helicopters from the 1st Brigade aviation section for reconnaissance and "gas - spraying" maneuvers were available.

"This certainly was a rare and challenging test — a truly realistic field problem," explained Maj. Gerald C. Sola, training and operations chief of the 1st Brigade.

The evaluation system has proven most effective throughout the manuever, as 44 combination "umpire-evaluators" remained with the companies and platoons during the entire test.

"There has been constant evaluation control," Maj. Sola said, "brigade headquarters has been in constant communiction with the umpires since the problem began Wednesday."

Tomorrow morning the brigade commander and chief umpires will hold a detailed critique of the entire maneuver to describe the

Gen Freeman Sends Thanks To Division

A note of thanks from the Continental Army Commander, Gen. Paul L. Freeman to division commander Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles recalled the days when Freeman was a member of the division.

On his memories of the 2nd Infantry Division he general wrote: "There is nothing that I enjoyed more in all my service from my days as a new shavetail in the 9th Infantry at Fort Sam Houston through my privilege to command the division at Fort Lewis in 1955-57."

Freeman commanded the 23rd Infantry when it was involved in heavy fighting during the Korean War. When he was wounded in the battle at Chipyong-ni it was John [illegible]

Freeman

Chiles, then a colonel, who flew into the surrounded regiment to replace the injured Freeman.

During a recent visit to Fort Benning, Freeman took part in the organization celebration of the 23rd Infantry on April 23rd.

He spoke of the celebration as "another highlight of my attachment to this magnificient organization."

Day

Medical Battalion who took part in the Jungle Patrol ride, sat around in their exaggerated uniforms eating a noon meal and glowing with the success of their mock guerrilla war.

One officer remarked that "there is nothing a soldier won't do when he puts on a show for kids."

The medics pride and self-satisfaction as they ate their meal bore him out.

Three hundred vehicles and 3000 men of the 3rd Brigade stood tall and proud as they rode past the reviewing stand on Anzio Range at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The mounted review there was one of the largest gathering of troops since the mobilization for the Berlin Crisis in 1961.

Standing on the reviewing stand was Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander and with him was Col. Walter Bare Jr. Fort Stewart commander.

SFC Caron Accepts 9th Best Mess Award

"We satisfy the troops first," said SFC Laurier Caron of Headquarters and Company A, 702nd Maintenance Battalion, as Col. Fred O. Jackson, Support Command commander, presented him with his ninth Best Mess of the Month award, and another for Division Best Mess of the Month.

"I don't try to get awards for my mess," said Caron, "I just try to give the troops good food, and make them feel at ease in a clean mess hall. But if the awards come, I'm happy about that too."

The award is won by achieving the highest rating of all the Support Command mess halls for preparation of food, sanitation, economy, overall supervision and administration.

Of the last 12 awards given by Support Command, Caron's mess has won nine.

For this outstanding record, Caron was surprised with the presentation of another plaque.

"When a man puts much of himself into his work so as to come out on top consistently," said Jackson, "he merits an appreciation of some sort, above the routine. So Sgt. Caron, we present you with this plaque with our thanks, not for your outstanding mess hall, but for your devotion to duty."

Shuttle Service

The drone of prop-driven C-130s could be heard banking sharply over the Fort Bragg reservation heading south. The tiresome wait of some four hours had ended for its passengers.

The way planes were taking off every thirty seconds to a minute it seemed unbelievable that there was such a long waiting period, but the business of moving over ten thousand men and the equipment necessary to sustain them through combat was a tedious process.

As I sat uncomfortably strapped to one of the fold-away sections which converted to seats for human cargo, the thoughts of the operations at the airfield amused me.

The thirty-six men and an engineer fork - lift lay motionless under each wing of the aircraft. It was nightfall now and the men were trying to catch up on sleep they had missed since the alert was called three days earlier.

When the pilots arrived by the shuttle bus along with the crew chiefs the activity began. The fork-lift after two unsuccessful attempts finally made it up the ramp; meanwhile the propellers turned over and our combat troops boarded the plane, quickly strapping themselves into the seats.

The crew chiefs busily tied down duffel bags with a precision that comes with much experience. Once that was accomplished, the men scrambled over, around and under the fork lift tightening chains that streamed from each corner of the four-wheel hoist to the deck.

The dull monotonous sound of the propellers took little time putting its human cargo to sleep. It was approaching midnight and the plane had another four hours of flight time before touchdown at San Isidro airfield.

The hours passed quickly however, and as the plane descended and ears popped, the men who had sprawled across the metal floor or had stretched out on the fold-away seats awakened to brace themselves for the landing.

San Isidro was warm, and soldiers were cracking open packs of C-rations. The bright sunlight that helped raise the temperature to well over 80 degrees concealed the fact that it was only 5:15 a.m. The temperature rose to nearly 100 degrees that day.

The thirty-six troops with bags in tow jumped off the aircraft, their weapons slung over their shoulders with ammo magazines fitted in place ready for any eventuality. The awareness of being in a combat zone reflected on each soldier's face. The thoughts of another Pleiqu, where a murderous barrage of mortar shells caused heavy losses in Viet Nam to men and airplanes, stuck ominously in the minds of each soldier. A similar attack on San Isidro airfield could have taked a monstrous toll in American soldiers . . . it was the headquarters for the Army's heavily committed airborne division.

Planes did not linger at San Isidro. They unloaded and moved out swiftly to complete the last leg of the journey to Fort Bragg. Wind direction necessitated taking off and then circling over the northern section of Santo Domingo where heavy ground fire at helicopters had been reported.

Later, I had the occasion to speak to a crew chief of one of the C-120s and asked if they had received any hits from ground fire. He replied, "I guess we've been fired at. I don't know, you can't tell unless you get hit and we haven't gotten hit yet."

The story was different for the Navy and Marine H-34 helicopters. They had the mission of delivering supplies into Santo Domingo. There was no question they had experienced a taste of combat.

Each soldier processed through the personnel section which operated from a makeshift office of a field telephone, two tables and a map of Santo Domingo, simply as a matter of keeping personnel strength current. Once accomplished, the troops went to the winds matching up with the sections to which they were attached, most of which had already readied themselves to meet the challenges awaiting them in the rebel-torn city of Santo Domingo.

(Next Week: Civil Affairs, an important combat ingredient)

Cross-Attachment of Units Works Wonders For Armstrong

BY MARV WOLF

FORT STEWART, Ga. — The enormous flexibility of the armored brigade was put to a severe test by its commander, Col. John Armstrong during the 3rd Brigade's huge maneuver Exercise CINQUEFOIL.

Armstrong placed nearly unlimited authority to cross-attach units with very junior commanders, sometimes even as low as a platoon. Normally the authority is left with the brigade commander.

Cross - attachment consists of borrowing a subordinate unit with a particular combat skill from another major unit in order to accomplish a particular mission.

MAXIMUM LATITUDE TO COMMANDERS
Col. Armstrong
(Photo by Marv Wolf)

The Reason

The reason Armstrong gave was the obvious one: in combat, with a fast moving unit engaging a similar foe there just isn't time to get formal about the matter. The system works particularly well with the tank-infantry composition of the brigade, and the soggy terrain over which most of the exercise was conducted lent an air of necessity to the scheme.

In at least one case, the fantastic versatility gained by on-the-spot attachment, coupled with the determination to move through what was termed by controllers as "impassable swamp" led to some amazing combinations of units.

A tank company which was attached to the infantry battalion and next a platoon of infantry, became a task force and roared to its objective.

Here a company commander from another infantry company attached the platoons of tanks, ploughed off through the bush to another objective were he encountered a tank company from another battalion.

Entire Unit

He immediately attached the entire unit and sprang off in an entirely new production, met the tank company it had originally borrowed the infantry - tank platoons from and attached back one of each.

Sound confusing?

It is, but it works, and proof was apparent with the speed with which the brigade dispatched its aggressor in terrain which has been loosely described as "horrendous, confusing, and impassable."

Queried about other aspects of the maneuver, Col. Armstrong confessed a need for organic cavalry as a screening force, working in conjunction with the armored unit. Presently the only such units available to the brigade are from the division air cav troop and these are needed by the division commander as badly as brigade commander.

Effective Usage"

"I maintain that I must have my own reconnaissance unit," emphasized Armstrong, "and that the most effective usage should be in conjunction with surface elements. At present the only recon force I have is what I can borrow in the cavalry squadron or from the individual battalions, and beaven knows they need the units themselves."

Speaking about the replacement of leadership at lower unit level due to the death of a commander, Armstrong gravely pronounced, "I know from experience when a company commander gets killed, the war stops for that company."

Armstrong mentioned that he had asked the controllers to "knock off" each and every commander at sometime during the exercise to test the effect of a suddenly replaced commander on unit efficiency.

World's Fair Is the Place to Go--But It Takes Time

By JOE TREASTER

FLUSHING MEADOW, N. Y.—Despite the financial and political difficulties which have befallen the New York World's Fair, it should still be regarded as a prime vacation target this summer.

The Fair is only a few hours away from Fort Benning and, although there are no special rates for men in uniform, 85 percent of the attractions are free.

Most Fair goers will be little affected by the continuing squabbles over money the gandiose festival is supposed to be losing or the charges that a number of New York state public servants have been drafted from their regular jobs to support the Fair.

Perhaps a smaller-than-expected attendance will force some of the smaller exhibits to close, but regardless of cash losses, fair backers are not likely to accept the embarrassment that would accompany a complete shutdown.

The Fair's money problems could help the little man. There is increasing talk of shaving the admission price of $2.50 for adults to $2 or possibly even $1.50.

The single most important element in a Fair visit is time.

For instance, if you can't get to New York before October 17, forget it. The Fair won't be there. Preachers, panhandlers, pizza pie makers and everyone else who helped open the second half of the Fair April 21 will be packing. The show is over then.

And if you intend to see the whole 646-acre layout in a day, you can forget that too.

Good Feeling

In two or three days you can get a good feeling for the Fair and in a week you should be able to visit nearly all the exhibits. But you'll have to step lively.

People who really wanted to savor the juices of the Fair—like several New York City newspapermen — set-up offices on the grounds so that they could be there until the gates close in the fall.

Something that will save time is a visit to the American Express Pavilion just inside the Fair's main gate. There, at no charge, you can listen to a lecture "tour" of a scale model of the fair.

Arriving at the Fair grounds — and you can get there by subway, train, bus, car or boat — the tangle of people, ultral modern structures and exotic this and that can throw the most sophisticated person into a spasm of awe that could last all day. You could spend half the afternoon wandering around the same building without any difficulty at all. So take the American Express tour and establish a plan of travel.

A good place to plot your inter-fair route is in the branch of the Times Square USO set-up adjacent to the Coca Cola pavilion, on the Avenue of Commerce, two blocks from American Express.

The USO is a military oasis. You can't spend any money there. There's nothing for sale. Soft drinks are free. Chairs — often a scarce item at the fair — are plentiful and if you tire of the fair you can watch a color television or have a turn at the player piano.

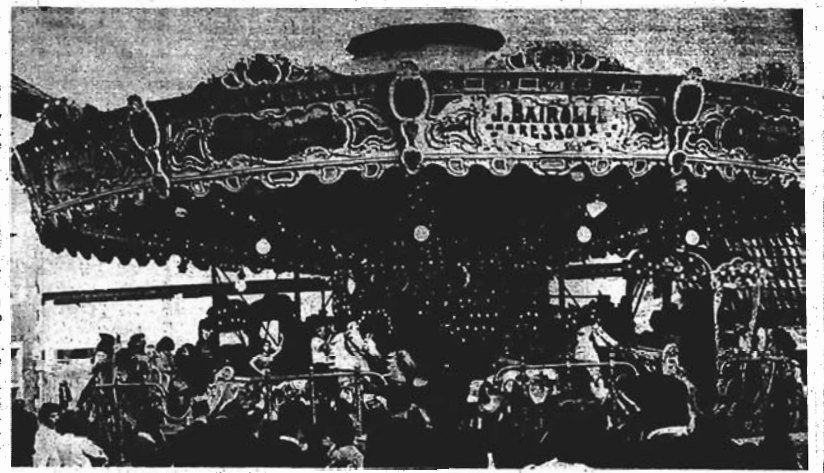
If you're not tired of the fair, just tired of walking, you can plop down in one of the USO chairs and goggle the festive highlights on closed circuit television.

The USO has printed its own maps of the Fair and, according to Marie Duffey, a staff worker, there are always three or four girl volunteers around who can help you plan an excursion.

"The girls keep a check on the length of lines and can tell you about the most interesting exhibits," Miss Duffey said. "They're loaded with general Fair information and they can tell you about the special events scheduled every day."

Miss Duffey said a lot of military people have made the USO their meeting place at the Fair.

"Especially families," she said. "It's a place everyone can easily find and it's a place to relax while you're waiting."



WHAT'S A FAIR WITHOUT A MERRY-GO-ROUND?

THE PIETA . . . Michelangelo's famous sculpture is one of the Fair's attractions. It is the first time that a masterpiece has left the Vatican in Rome to be displayed elsewhere.

HONORING the grave of a former 'Indianhead' who fought with the division during World War I. The Grave was discovered on the Fort Stewart Reservation by a member of the 3rd Brigade During Exercise CINQUEFOIL. (Photo by Marv Wolf)

Reporter Finds Coincidence

Old Grave Yields Story of WWI Indianhead

By MARV WOLF

A chance discovery in a tiny, out of the way Ft. Stewart cemetery led to an interesting coincidence when the grave of Roan Lightfoot, who served as a private in the 6th Infantry regiment, 2nd Division, during World War I was found.

The grave was discovered by Capt. Max Newman, third brigade Chemical officer, and later decorated by a representative member of the third brigade.

The third brigade had moved up to Fort Stewart for two weeks of field training and on the day of the discovery was headquartered at Little Creek Cemetery, participating in Exercise Cinquefoil.

Inquiries made in the Pembroke, Ga. area, adjacent to the reservation, revealed that Lightfoot's widow remarried after his death and was living in the hamlet of Ellabell, a few miles away.

Events

The former Mrs. Lightfoot, now Mrs. Charlie Strickland, told of the events which led to her husband's interment at Little Creek:

"We'd lived in that vicinity, before it was a military reservation, for quite a while, and when Roan lost a leg in an automobile accident in 1932, he insisted that his amputated leg be buried at Little Creek Cemetery, which in those days was next to a very large church.

"When he contracted double pneumonia following a stroke in 1946, he asked me to see to it that he would be buried next to his leg.

"He knew he was going to die and he was very sure that he wanted to be buried altogether."

Lightfoot first entered service at Ft. Screven, Ga. (now abandoned), and later served at Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga. in 1917.

After his discharge he worked for the railroad briefly and later learned the grocery business. Shortly before his marriage he opened his own business, a package liquor store with a gas pump.

Lightfoot had three sons by his marriage to his widow and one by a previous marriage. Of the former, all three are presently in the service, one serving as a sailor at Pearl Harbor, one as an airman in Bermuda, and one in Germany as a sergeant in the Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol Company of the 82nd Airborne Division. This young airborne sergeant was selected to represent the U. S. Army last year during the services commemorating D Day during the European Invasion of 1944.

Coincidence

Rufus Lightfoot, the airborne sergeant now serving in Germany, was known to this reporter as Recruit Lightfoot in 1962 at Fort Jackson, S. C. when he took basic training. The acquaintance was slight, since he was a trainee in a different company of the same battalion while this reporter was a cadreman.

Division Begins AER Fund Drive

BY DON DUDICK

In keeping with the tradition of "taking care of its own" the Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society fund raising campaign began last Monday and will continue until the tenth of July.

The annual support of these organizations by the men of the 2nd Division has helped to provide aid and assistance for their fellowsoldiers and dependents.

According to records, over $338,000 in outright grants and loans were made during 1964 to soldiers at Fort Benning, with more than $91,000 of that sum used for assisting members of the 2nd Division.

Campaign officials said $15,559 is the amount needed for 1965, and everyone is expected to contribute a just amount without an individual goal.

Recognizing the need for emergency financial assistance, the Secretary of War authorized the Army Emergency Relief in 1942. For more than two decades the AER has provided financial assistance to members of the Army and their families.

Not Charity

AER aid is not considered charity in the normal sense of the word because funds are contributed by the members and used by themselves.

Normally, assistance is in the form of an interest free loan, with repayment usually made through payroll allotments.

A phamplet published by the AER shows that most hardship cases result from nonreceipt of pay or allowances, loss of pay, acute illness when government facilities are not available, funeral expenses or dependents, payments of initial rent, or privation of dependents due to any cause.

Agreements

The Army Relief Society is closely affiliated with the AER through agreements, renewed every three years. It was founded in 1900 to assist needy widows and orphans of regular Army personnel.

Aid usually comes in the form of financial assistance or scholarships.

Major Forsythe Given Citation

A certificate of Achievement was awarded to Major David A. Forsythe in a short ceremony at the 2nd Infantry Division's commanding general's office last week.

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander, presented the award for Maj. Forsythe's service to the division as 1st Brigade S-2 and Assistant Chief of Staff, (G-5) Civil Affairs, for a period covering May 10, 1963 to May 7, 1965.

The certificate commended Forsythe for his high caliber of performance and mentioned specifically his outstanding work during the Birmingham crisis and Swift Strike III.

Major Forsythe is leaving the "Indianhead" division for a new assignment with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

702nd 'Maintenance Crew' Fixes 'Everything From Telephones to Radar'

By DAVE BUMAN

Mobile Maintenance — the key word around the Electronics Maintenance Platoon of Company A, 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

Supporting the entire 2nd Infantry Division, the electronics platoon, or "radio platoon" as the men know it, services everything from telephones to radar.

"We're divided into two shops within the platoon," says CWO Sam Meagher, the platoon leader, "one shop handles all the radio, telephone, test equipment and what have you, while the other deals strictly with radar."

"We're equipped with nine mobile vans," says Sp5 Terry Carpenter, repairman and team chief, "all rigged to do the same thing; provide on the spot repair wherever it's needed.

"Each van carries two field radio repairman, one teletype repairman, and a wireman to handle the switchboards and telephones. Whenever a major unit in the division goes to the field, one or more of our vans goes along in support.

"In addition," Carpenter went on," our vans provide on the spot mobile maintenance while in garrison. We conduct periodic inspections and when deficiences are found, one of the vans goes to the unit, cutting out the handling of equipment to and from our shop as well as a lot of the paper work."

Thes section also boasts a rig equipped to handle signal generators and all types of signal test equipment.

All experts in their fields, the average man in the section has over seven months of school training, and over two years expeience in his job as well as cross-training in related fields. "I'm a school trained field radio repairman," says Carpenter, "but since then I've worked with everything from telephones to avionics (aviation electronics)."

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry represented the 2nd Division Armed Forces Day at two locations aside from Fort Benning.

The battalion sent two 106mm recoilless rifle teams to Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., and to the Armed Forces Day display in Gainesville, Ga.

The weapons were transported while mounted on the "jeep" vehicles, with minimum crews of men.

Sgt. William H. Guyer of Company was in charge of the three-man team that set up in Gainesville and Sgt. Thomas A. White of Company led his group to Maxwell Air Force Base near Montgomery, Ala.

Artillery Dumps Support Command

1st Brigade Takes 3rd 9-6 Behind McLendon

First Brigade won their first game of the year Monday night defeating 3rd Brigade 9-6.

Tied 6-6, 1st Brigade pushed across two runs in the bottom of the 7th.

Wilson Navarro opened the inning with a walk and Rudy Hills followed with a single. Navarro scored when Harvey Cooper was safe on a fielders choice. Elifa Ostalaza's sacrifice fly drove in Hills with the second run of the inning.

Navarro drove in three runs with two singles to spark the 1st Brigade attack. Hills and Albert Julian chipped in with two safeties.

Leo McClendon was the winning pitcher. McClendon not overpoweringly fast, mixed his pitches effectively. With the exception of a five run outburst in the third, he had little trouble checking the 3rd Brigade.

Bill Rutledge was the losing pitcher. He was relieved by Alfred Freeman in the 8th.

Lu Menter and Charlie Bolen with two hits apiece led the 3rd Brigade attack.

Lu Menter pitched and batted 3rd Brigade to a 13-5 win over Div Arty Friday night.

It was the first win for the brigade, while Div Arty suffered their first loss.

Menter stroked four hits, including a triple, and drove in three runs. Fred Crittenden, Brigade backstop, also drove in three runs with three safeties, including a triple.

Menter although touched for five runs was in command throughout the game. He fanned 14 men.

Odie Davis continued his hot hitting for Div Arty. He drove in three runs in the seventh with a bases loaded double just inside the first base bag.

Third Brigade banged out 18 hits in the game. Charles Bolen, Ron Johnston, Ramon Castro, and Wilfred Lingo banged out two hits apiece in sparking the brigade attack.

Division Artillery exploded for eight runs in the first two innings, and went on to swamp previously undefeated Support Command, 17-1 Tuesday night.

Div Arty's one-two punch of Odie Davis and Charles Kelly led the attack.

Davis had three hits and drove in four runs. Kelly with two hits, a double and home run, also drove home four runs.

A five run second all but wrapped the game up for Div Arty. With one run already in, Davis slashed a two run single and Kelly followed with a long two run homer.

Kieth Grauvogl, Div Arty catcher, had four hits and scored three times, and second sacker Jim Moyes slammed three hits and drove in three runs to back up the lusty hitting of Davis and Kelly.

Frank Bumpers pitched a strong game. He limited Support Command to four hits and one run. Support Command had scored 10 runs in their first two games.

The game was shortened to seven innings due to the ten run rule.

Reliefer Rhar Saves Support Command 10-9

On the strength of a three run eighth inning and Ronald Rahr's tight relief pitching, Support Command won their second straight game edging 1st Brigade, 10-9.

Trailing 8-7 going into the eighth, Support Command bunched two hits to go with a walk and costly two - base error to forge ahead.

Rahr, pinch hitting for winning hurler Hayes Moody, opened the frame with a walk. Second sacker John Grillo followed with a hit. Then with one away, third baseman Earnest Talbert rifled a shot to center which got by the center fielder.

The tying and leading runs scored and Talbot ended up on third. Moments later Talbert scored, his run proving to be the decisive margin.

Rahr, who had pitched nine innings two nights earlier, relieved Moody in the eighth. After a shaky start, he settled down to check the Brigade. Rahr finished up with a flourish by striking out the side in the ninth.

Grillo and Talbert with three hits apiece sparked Support Command's attack.

Navarro and Cooper had two hits apiece for the Brigade, while Clarence Richardson slammed a home run.

John Robinson, fastballing right hander for the brigade took the loss, despite the fact he fanned nineteen men.

'ENTAC Boomerangs

FORT STEWART, Ga.— An ENTAC anti - missile fired during a portion of the 1st Battalion 9th Infantry's Operational Readiness Test (ORT) went out of control, made a 180 degree turn and came back at its launch crew this morning.

The erratic missile landed within five yards of its launch position, scattering the crew and some fifteen observing officers, including Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, 2d Division assistant commander, and Col. John Armstrong, commander of the 3rd Brigade, both at Fort Stewart to take part in Exercise CINQUEFOIL.

Although no one was hurt there were some white faces and some red ones as well, particularly among the crew of the ENTAC. It is a wire guided missile found in infantry rifle companies and used primarily as an anti-tank and gun emplacement weapon.

The Aftermath

BY FRED MORROW

Last weekend was a busy one for Father Jim Carroll, 2nd Infantry Division Chaplain. In addition to conducting chapel services, he was also conducting bowling lessons for observers at Victory Lanes.

Sunday Fr. Carroll teamed with Capt. Verle Wright to win the Doubles championship in the 10th annual Columbus Men's City Bowling Association tournament Sunday at Victory Lanes with a combined total of 1,306 pins. Fr. Carroll bowled a 541 series to go with Wright's 642 scratch series as they copped the title.

The previous night Fr. Carroll, a member of the Gotchas bowling team, helped bowl the team to the championship in the 10th annual Columbus Men's Bowling Association tournament.

Asked how the Gotchas happened to be organized, Fr. Carroll said, "Verle Wright and myself were bowling and picked up the other three to form a team."

"We were all 170-to 180 bowlers and we thought if we could get hot we might win it."

"With our handicap, the 190-bowlers would have to bowl much better than us in order to win," he added.

Win — indeed they did in a closely contested set. They defeated Home Federal Savings by only five pins. Fr. Carroll posted a 514 series.

Father Carroll says he has only been bowling ten-pins for the past ten years. He is a native of Connecticut and there most of the bowling done then was "either duck-pin or candle-pin," he said.

Undoubtedly he will continue his bowling and some weekend if you frequent bowling alleys, you may see him deliver a bowling ball with the same smoothness he does a sermon.

Maneuvering Costs Dearly

The cost of training gets higher and higher according to reports from Support Command.

As the big guns of the 3rd Brigade and its supporting units move to Fort Stewart, Ga. for testing and training, truckloads of ammunition from as far away as Fort Knox, Ky. are being marshalled to support them.

From now until the end of May, elements of the 2nd Infantry Division undergoing training at Fort Stewart, are expected to fire over 2 million dollars worth of ammunition.

Over 12,000 rounds of 90-mm tank ammunition are on hand, as well as 1,200 rounds of 105mm artillery ammunition; 350,000 rounds of 7.62 mm blanks; 140,000 rounds of 7.62 mm ball; 160,000 rounds of .30 caliber; over 50,000 rounds of .50 caliber; and well over 1,000 rounds of 4.2 inch and 81 mm mortar ammunition.

11th Continues Dominican Aid

Division Asks AER Support

The Joint Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society Fund Campaign will be conducted in the 11th Air Assault from May 17 to July 10.

All division personnel and their families have a vital interest and share in this fund.

No "fair share" has been established, however all are urged to support AER and ARS by giving generously and fully within their means.

Task Force Return Date Still Remains Uncertain

SPECIAL TO THE SKY SOLDIER NEWS

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC . . . An 11th Air Assault Division helicopter task force from the 229th Helicopter Bn. continues to fly medical and food supplies to natives and American troops on this strife-torn island.

So far no wounds have been suffered by any of the nearly 250 Air Assault Division men here.

"In addition to the 'mercy missions'," an Air Assault Division officer said, "seven or eight ships a day are performing missions which are highly classified.

Last week in their initial days on the island, the group's Pathfinder team was called out in the night to establish an emergency landing zone for 27 helicopters some four miles from the base camp.

The mission was accomplished in 30 minutes and the Pathfinders, led by Lt. Robert Fullerton, stood by with radio equipment to direct the landing of the aircraps of other units.

Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, commander of the task force, said that each night two groups of four helicopters fly a training mission.

"We send out 4 team of Pathfinders first to mark a spot for a night assault," Col. Buchan said, "then the helicopter platoons go out and simulate dropping troops in the area. This sort of thing keeps the men ready."

When the division men reached the island May 1, aboard the aircraft carrier USS Guadalcanal, all the pilots made orientation flights over the sector where action has been most intense.

For the first eight days of their stay on the island the men of the 229th were without laundry facilities and they, even now, are living

229th Returns From Fort Hood's Joint Armor-Air Assault Exercise

By JIM GRAHAM

A task force of 20 helicopters and approximately 60 men from Company B, 229th Helicopter Bn. returned Sunday from Fort Hood, Tex. and Exercise SILVER HAND.

The joint exercise employed armored - infantrymen of the 1st and 2nd Armored Divisions, air assault helicopters and Air Force tactical air support.

The 229th took with them support elements from the 11th Aviation Group Pathfinders and Company B of the 611th Aircraft Maintenance Bn.

The mission of the 229th was to train the men of the 1st and 2nd Armored Divisions in the techniques unique to the air assault division. The armor-infantrymen then employed this training during the two week long exercise.

Static and action displays familiarized the tankers and their commanders with the UH-1D helicopters that would carry them to and from their day and night skirmishes with an elusive aggressor force.

This exercise offered an unique experience for the pilots of the 229th as it was the first large scale exercise in which the air assault helicopters flew in support of the heavy armored divisions.

It was also unique for the armor - infantrymen as this was their initial introduction to helicopter - borne tactics. In the words of one of the helicopter pilots that was on the scene, "We were impressed with the way that the tankers quickly picked up the air assault techniques."

As the exercise was terminated, Maj. Donis E. Rice commander of Company B, along with 1st Sgt. Thomas Moriarty presented a model of the UH-1D helicopter to Maj. Gen. George R. Mather. This was the 229th's way of offering thanks to the 2nd Armored Division Commander for the full cooperation received from him and the men of his division.

During the action of SILVER HAND one incident was reported while the helicopters were flying in support of the 2nd Armored Division.

17th Cavalry Troops Aid 'RED CHIP VI'

BY CHUCK LOWENHAGEN

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky.— The eyes of everyone here at Fort Campbell turned skyward Sunday afternoon as 60 11th Air Assault Division helicopters swept overhead toward their landing sites.

More than 700 Sky Soldiers and their aircraft from the 2nd Squadron, 17th Cavalry are at Fort Campbell in support of Red Chip VI, a joint Army, Air Force live fire exercise.

The exercise will begin May 22. Until that time the squadron, under the command of Lt. Col. John B. Stockton, will practice firing all of their aerial weapons systems and small arms for annual qualifications.

When the exercise begins, the Cav, in coordination with the US Strike Command, Army and Air Force units will demonstrate the mobility, rapid reaction and fire power capabilities of joint operations in fulfilling the [illegible] Division. Operational conference personnel with the effectiveness of the practical application of [illegible] doctrine and concepts.

Since Sunday the 17th Cavalrymen have been residing in a small headquarters complex located about three miles from Fort Campbell.

This small complex has been 'tagged' the 'Huey Hotel'. The men eat, sleep and work in their aircraft. Except for the close proximity of permanent installations the scene could be likened to any one of a hundred that took place in North and South Carolina during AIR ASSAULT II.

Monday afternoon the pilots began practice runs over the firing ranges, dry firing their weapons and listing the their routes of approach.

The squadrons aircraft are located less than 100 yards from the headquarters complex, all down the [illegible]

Road March and All-Night Patrols Prepare 188th Eagles for EIB Test

Last Friday the Eagles of the 188th Infantry ended another week of hard work in their preparation for the coming division Expert Infantryman Badge tests that will be administered during June and July.

The "Eagles" began the week with a 12 mile march as conditioning for the march prescribed by the EIB tests. The companies left at different times, on different days, and went along different routes, but all returned to the battalion area in less than the required three hours and in a high state of morale.

Alpha Company, led by its company commander, Capt. Charles T. Ostick, moved out on Tuesday at 6:30 a.m. and went down Jamestown Road past the 17th Cavalry area.

Bravo Company, commanded by Capt. Oliver W. Dillon, and Charlie Company, led by Capt. William H. Smith, went out on Wednesday. The Bulleagles left at 6:30 a.m. and moved down Cusseta Road while Charlie Company followed Capt. Smith at 7:30 a.m. down Hourglass Road and across Highway 27.

On Thursday the rifle companies moved to the field to undergo different aspects of the field until Friday to carry out night attacks and defenses.

Company A practiced squad attacks with the mission to destroy a bridge during the day and that night one platoon acting as aggressor attacked the rest of the company which formed a perimeter defense and later effected a night withdrawal. At 6:00 a.m. the tired Alphagators assaulted a hill and suffered an ambush on the way back but at 7:30 they returned back to the battalion area.

Bravo Company was the host of a number of visiting Infantry Officer Career Course students that observed the conduct of long range patrols with the help of helicopters and then learned hte principles of rappelling, executing three rappells from a helicopter.

During the night Company B was divided into several small raiding patrols with the mission to destroy an ammunition dump in an enemy held area.

The Road Runners of Charlie Company also stayed overnight in the field and carried out several patrols and platoon attacks on fortified objectives. During the night, with one platoon opposing the other two, the company, moving down the road, encountered a number of short ambushes which in the opinion of MSgt. Ashbey Perkins who has just come back from Viet Nam, "were beautifully executed. They reminded me of the ones the Viet Cong used to pull on us . . ." (he had been caught in five of them while serving as an advisor with a Vietnamese Infantry battalion.)

Next week, Headquarters Company, commanded by Capt. Russell W. Ramsey, will go through the 12 mile course.

on a steady diet of "C" rations — the Army's pre-cooked, ready to serve field provisions.

Col. Buchan said the men are working a seven - day week, with around-the-clock sentry duty for most of them.

The men are given daily briefings from the battalion intelligence officer and a rugged "PT" session (physical training) each morning before the blazing sun makes most movement a real discomfort.

At odd moments during the day, said a 229th spokesman, some of the men have taken up hammers and nails in an effort to improve their rough campsite on the outskirts of Santo Domingo, the capital city.

Col. Buchan said there was no indication when he and his men would be able to leave the island.

and Leland C. Komich, while flying in formation with sixteen other helicopters experienced a head-on collision with a massive Texas buzzard.

The ships were moving at approximately 100 knots. The bird was trapped in the slip stream of the helicopter and slammed into the windshield, shattering it and smashing the sunvisor and helmet of WO Sweazy, the pilot.

Being temporarily blinded with the huge bird in his face, WO Sweazy quickly banked the helicopter out of the formation.

When the ship lurched into a steep dive, WO Komich, the co-pilot and an instructor pilot in Company B, took control of the aircraft and brought it to a safe landing, avoiding further damage and injury to the crew.

The Texans say, "It was a good thing the bird wasn't full grown, he would have swollowed the helicopter with ease."

Troops

chiefs ready the aircraft and armorers begin loading rockets and machinegun ammunition into the weapons systems. Live firing began Wednesday afternoon.

Wednesday morning men of the 101st Airborne division at Fort Campbell were given an orientation on air assault equipment and its employment by instructors from the 17th Cavalry.

The "Screaming Eagles" were shown the capabilities of the UH-1D Iroquois as a troop lift ship and then were shown the varied machine-gun and rocket systems employed by the Cavalry on the 'Huey' and the OH-13 Sioux helicopters. One of the paratroopers, Sp4 William Jones expressed the opinion that "Your infantrymen must feel mighty secure with this much fire power to protect them."

In addition to cavalry equipment, the 101st men were shown the Iroquios put to use as a medical evacuation ship.

Yesterday the Cav began small arms and crew served weapons training. 'Jeeps' carrying M-60 machineguns were run through a special course to determine the gunners ability to locate, evaluate and destroy given targets.

The targets range from silhouettes of individual soldiers, squad and platoon sized formations to machine-gun nests, tanks and armored personnel carriers.

Point Total High During PT Test At 'Little John'

Battery A of the 42nd Artillery has monopolized the battalion semi-annual Combat Proficiency Test competition by posting the high battery average score for the second consecutive time.

Also repeating his last year's performance by posting the high individual score was Battery A's PFC Samuel Whitehead who recorded a near perfect 497 out of 500 possible points. The battery's average score for the physical training test was 423.

Fort his feat, PFC Whitehead was awarded a three day pass. Battery A will be awarded a permanent trophy tured last December.

Setting the pace for Battery A was Battery Commander, Capt. Leroy C. Bell, who himself scored 474 in to stand beside the one capthe rigorous test.

Use of Chemical Warfare Promotes 'Love' of Mask

Chemical Warfare training realistically introduced into the 1st Air Assault Brigades Company Army Training Tests, is fast becoming an all-important highlight of the company field problems, as Sky Soldiers learn to appreciate their protective masks.

The 11th Division Chemical Section, under the supervision of Capt. James P. Lewis, assistant division chemical officer, Capt. Paul E. Kuntz, 3rd Brigade chemical officer, and MSgt. Donald F. Quash, division chemical operations sergeant acted as observers (in regards to safety precautions and policies of the division) as the 184th Chemical Direct Support Platoon, attached to the 2nd Inf. Div., installed and tested the M-5 Disperser in the UH-1B and D helicopters. Although this is a tried and tested method proven to be extremely effective in riot control, this is the first time it has been used in the 11th.

Prior tests were made utilizing a harmless talcum powder, to insure the safe operation and efficiency of the disperser itself and also, to insure the safety of the helicopter crew against Riot Control Agent contamination.

At 3:30 p.m., a UH-D Iroquois came in at about 100 feet, spraying CS-1 (Riot Control Agent) in powder form, and saturated over 90 percent of the area being held, forcing the defending 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Rocks to mask, and remain masked for twenty minutes or more.

Supervising the effective chemical portion of the exercise is Maj. Willis S. Rossing, 1st Brigade, Chemical Officer, assisted by Sp5 George Williams.

Tough aggressor forces provided by the Brigade's two battalions are giving the rifle companies an opportunity to earn their money with their hit and run tactics, and they are not completely tied down by the play of the problem, having only minor limitations commensurate with applicable portions of the test.

The enemy force provided for each company taking the test consists of two ten man rifle squads, a seven-man weapons squad, and an aggressor platoon headquarters, equipped with all TO&E weapons, and seven thousand rounds of blank small arms ammunition.

Directly supporting the company test series from the 1st Brigade are Capt. Paul G. Cerjan, chief controller, 1st Lt. Marcus W. Muth, battalion controller 1st Lt. Harry V. Smith, mortar umpire, two non-coms from the Communications Section and the 1st Brigade Scout Section.

The next phase saw the ground elements move to a new field location while maintaining communications and remaining operational.

611th Company C Marks Units First Active Year

On May 6th, Company C of the 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion observed its first full year as an active unit in the 11th Air Assault Division.

The last company of the 611th to be activated, Charlie Company was born in a temporary wooden billet on main post. When the first morning report went in there were two officers and twenty-six men present for duty, commanded by Capt. Charles Bradshaw, who remains with the unit today as Supply Officer.

After gaining in strength a move was made to permanent quarters at Kelley Hill in the summer of 1964. Intentions were to bring the company close to full strength for AIR ASSAULT II, but eventually only a nucleus was left behind in Support Command rear, commanded at this time by Maj. William Clay.

When AIR ASSAULT II ended, Charlie Company got a change in location and command. Now in the Lawson Command area, they came under Maj. Merle E. Bounds. Also, the decision was made to bring the unit to mission readiness by January 4th of this year.

The target date of January 4th was met easily by the rapidly growing unit, in fact work had been in progress since November on special inspections and modifications of aircraft which had been in the fall maneuvers. After becoming officially operational the annual IG and weapons qualifications were met and hurdled, then Charlie Company settled down to some normal working hours.

Since accepting its mission the unit has set a precedent in quick, high quality work. The maintenance department has handled 213 separate aircraft plus work orders on over 400 different components. The outstanding Tech Supply has handled over 9,000 parts requests from supported units, apart from the units own requirements.

Skills Unlimited At Company C

Qualification seems to be word in Company C, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, 2nd Air Assault Brigade. Company C has an exceptional number of men who are qualified in skills additional to those of being a line company soldier.

The Company Commander and the Company XO are both Airborne and Ranger qualified. Airborne qualification seems to be the rage as 20 others, an exceptional number for a non-airborne outfit, are parachutists, including two officers and 18 enlisted men.

Two of these men, 1st Sgt. Leecoe G. Loper and SSgt. Raymond F. Gomez are combat jumpers, making their jumps in Korea.

Sgt. Loper also holds the Combat Infantryman Badge, two awards, along with eight other sergeants who have the single CIB award.

Seven more of the company's men wear the Expert Infantryman Badge, and a total of five display the coveted Ranger tab.

Besides these men, 100 per cent of the company is rappel qualified.

Receives Warrant

A former staff sergeant has been appointed the rank of warrant officer at the 711th Maintenance Bn.

WO John C. Idell of Headquarters and Company A was administered the oath as a warrant by Cap. David W. Stallings, company commander.

A veteran of twelve years army service, Idell served for the past 19 months as Section Chief of the Armament Section, Headquarters and Company A.

School Bells Ring For 611th Grads

Four men of Company A, 611th Maintenance Bn., have paid heed to the Army Education Center's motto, 'Study While Serving'.

The certificate of completion for the high school GED tests were presented last week to Sp5 Donald R. Sinkler, Sp4 Curtis R. Smith, PFC James M. Brooks and PFC Jose G. Calzada.

The certificates were presented by Maj. Harold T. Campbell, commanding officer of Company A.

The men have said that completion of the high school courses has inspired them to further their education. In addition, many other individuals in Company A are presently enrolled in various courses offered through the Army Educational Centers on post as well as non-resident courses offered through service schools.

377th Training For Annual ATT

This week Battery B, 377th Artillery has trained intensively for the annual Army Training Test to be administered by Division Artillery.

Even though the training has only simulated the actual test, the Battery has maintained a realistic atmosphere. A rigid schedule designed to promote quick thinking and quick reaction was adhered to throughout the tests.

The day started with a briefing by the Assistant Operations Officer, Lt. George Jones, and quickly jumped into two pre - planned missions designed to test the aerial rocket platoons.

Real 'Model Soldier' Re-enlists at 227th

A real 'model soldier' reenlisted recently at Headquarters Company, 227th Assault Helicopter Bn.

First Sgt. Calvin C. Dykes repeated the oath of reenlistment for an additional three years.

A model soldier in the literal sence, Sgt. Dykes' extra sharp appearance has carried him in to some memorable and noteworthy events.

When Lt. Gen. A. R. Bolling, then commanding general of 3rd Army, retired, Sgt. Dykes was chosen as one of a group from Fort Jackson who participated in the retirement parade.

Sgt. Dykes was the standard bearer for the 101st Airborne division colors when the 101st left Fort Jackson.

His 'modeling career', was accented by being chosen to model proper uniform wear and proper wear of the blocked cap for posters at Fort Jackson.

While in Germany Sgt. Dykes was chosen as a member of a group from his battalion to parade for President (then General) Eisenhower at Frankfort, Germany when Eisenhower left Europe to begin his political career.

First Sgt. Dykes, who attained his rank at the age of 23, came to the 227th Headquarters Company in September, 1963.

Signal 'Cuts the Mustard' By Training and Ingenuity

The 11th Aviation Groups Communications section, headed by Maj. Egon J. Arndt has proven once again that intensive training coupled with imagination and ingenuity really "cut the mustard".

During the recent exercise "Oneida Bear II" conducted at Camp Drum, N. Y., the 11th Aviation Group dispatched a Radio Teletype team to Watertown, N. Y. to operate a relay site between Camp Drum and Fort Benning.

The team arrived on site and immediately went into operation using the new radio-teletype set MRC 95 and a 170 foot directional antenna of their own design. They were able to provide 100 per cent voice and teletype communications between Camp Drum and Fort Benning a distance of 850 air miles.

During the same period another team was set up to provide communications between here and an exercise at Fort Hood, Tex. This team also used the MRC-95 RTT set but a different antenna system, one designed by our own division Signal section, called an "Inverted L". Once again 100 per cent voice and teletype communication was provided with a distance of over 650 air miles being spanned.

Probably the most outstanding recent achievement of the signalmen was the impressive communications facilities set up for the air mobility demonstration conducted at Concord Observation Post. Everything worked like a charm. The roar of approval in the form of thunderous applause by the thousands of spectators when they heard the voices of pilots flying high in the sky, come clearly over the speakers in front of the stands was all that was needed to prove that these communicators are the best.

10th Best Mess Award Hard Prize to Win

Best Mess awards for the months of January, February, March and April, were presented recently at the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Sgt. Gailard Roggow, Company B, 170th Aircraft Maintenance Bn., took the honors for the month of January. The Best Mess award for February was taken by SFC Jack Parsley, mess steward for the 188th Air Transport Bn. Accepting the March award for the 17th Aviation Co., was SFC Kenneth Miles. The most recent winner was SFC Raymond Scarbrough, mess steward of Company D 170th Aircraft Maintenance Bn., his mess won for the month of April.

The man responsible for deciding whether a mess hall deserves an award or not is CWO Thomas E. Jones. Over a period of years CWO Jones has compiled an inspection book which contains a total of 500 points on which a mess hall can win or lose. The inspection covers everything from the kitchen sink to the shine on the cooks boots and consumes approximately four hours.

Lt. Col. Gregory L. Olney, Acting Brigade Commander made the presentations during a ceremony held at the Brigade Headquarters.

Now High Winds Don't Threaten RAK Rappellers

Sgt. Floyd M. Horton, an honor graduate of the 3rd Army NCO Academy in February, devised a new technique for rappelling in high winds on April 30, while conducting a demonstration at Camp Drum, N. Y.

Horton, who served as NCOIC of a special 187th Infantry rappelling team, came up with the idea after high winds threatened to cancel out the Rak portion of the demonstration.

Although simple when analyzed, Horton decided to put the two after rappelling lines out first, and then immediately upon throwing out the forward lines the two forwards rappellers rapidly made their descent, followed by the two after rappellers, making an entanglement almost impossible.

The Rak rappelling demonstration was one of thehighlights of the 11th Air Assault Division's demonstration at Camp Drum's Wheeler - Sack Airfield.

An Aerial Rocket Platoon; Self Sufficient and Lethal

The basic fire team of the aerial rocket battalion is the aerial rocket platoon. Composed of four UH-1 type, aircraft with XM-3 rocket systems, the platoon is designed to extend the range and capability of artillery support beyond that of the conventional field artillery.

The platoon is composed of a platoon leader (captain), two section leaders (lieutenants), eight pilots (warrant officers), one platoon sergeant, four crew chiefs, and one armorer. At first glance it would seem that the platoon would be incapable of sustaining itself as compared to a similar platoon of an infantry or artillery unit; however, with the aircraft as the means of transportation for personnel and equipment as well as being the basic weapon of the unit, lightness and compactness have become imperative.

Battery B, commanded by Maj. Jack O. Phillabaum, has trained its platoons in the art of being self sufficient and independent. The 1st, 2nd, and 3nd Platoons are commanded by Captains Jerry T. Steele, Lawrence O. Zittrain, and James R. Rogers respectively. At present, the platoons are responsible for their organizational maintenance as well as pilot training and crew drill.

Operating with the small number of personnel has meant that each individual has become critical to the success of the unit. Crew chiefs, always key personnel, have had much more demanded of them.

The lone privates in the platoons, the armorers, have the responsibility of maintaining the XM-3 systems. The systems are capable of firing 48 - 2.75 rockets in multiples of two.

38th Infantry's Sister Battalions Find New Homes

Moving day for personnel entails quite a bit of hard work, but usually is not an all day job. For a battalion headquarters to move, the work is not only hard and difficult, but time consuming as well.

On Thursday, May 13th, such a job was performed when the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, 2nd Air Assault Brigade relocated it's headquarters. The old headquarters building has been taken over by the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, whose staff were pleased to acquire a new building, especially one which has air-conditioning.

The 2nd Battalion moved to the building which had housed the facilities of Service Club No. 4 on Kelley Hill. The Service Club's facilities are now located in the new EM Service Club.

The job of moving desks and files, plus the installation of telephones and the other equipment enabling a battalion to function, proved to be an all day job as the men started early and finished late. The telephone numbers remain the same.

227th Retreat Ceremony

Eight Sky Soldiers of the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn. received awards at this weeks battalion retreat ceremony.

Two men were awarded the Air Medal with 'V' device, six received Air Medals with oak leaf clusters and one man was awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

1st Lt. Robert R. Matlick of Company D was awarded the Air Medal (twenty first oak leaf cluster) with 'V' device for heroism while flying in Vietnam.

He was serving as pilot of a UH-1B helicopter from the UTT Helicopter Company engaged in a combat operation against the Communist Viet Cong.

At 6:00 p.m. his unit was called upon to conduct an aerial strike mission in support of the 30th Ranger Battalion of the Vietnamese Army. The battalion was pinned against a river under attack from three directions by a vastly superior Viet Cong force.

From 6:30 until 11:00 p.m., Lt. Matlick's ship made continuous firing passes at the insurgent positions interrupted only by necessary refueling and re-arming of the aircraft at the departure airfield.

During the lieutenant's flights an overwhelming amount of communist ground fire was directed at his ship, including that of at least two .50 caliber maching guns. Lt. Matlick, throughout his operation, placed himself in positions of grave danger as the aircraft was skillfully maneuvered to bring the greatest possible fire power to bear on the insurgent positions.

Sp4 Jack H. List of Company B was awarded the Air Medal with 'V' device for heroism while flying as a crew chief on an armed helicopter engaged in support operations in the vicinity of Ca Mau, Republic of Vietnam.

Upon arrival in the vicinity of that area hostile heavy ground fire was received from several positions. Sp4 List immediately took the hostile positions under fire with his automatic weapon as his aircraft made several low-level passes over the area.

In the six hours that his aircraft was in contact with the Viet Cong, he was constantly at his position giving fire support wherever needed. During refueling and rearming stops he quickly prepared his aircraft to re-engage the enemy.

SSgt. Billy D. Mitchell, Company A, was awarded the Air Medal and the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service while in Vietnam.

Sp4 Darrel R. Marchman, Company A; Sp5 Robert Heitger, Sp4 Charles A. Figlar and PFC David M. Lockwood, all of Company B and Ap4 Robert L. Hundley of Company C were all awarded the Air Medal.

Win Streak Toppled With 10-Inning Upset

The 23rd Infantry Totems' toppled a two year no-loss record Tuesday, May 4, when they outran the composite USAIC baseball team for a ten inning victory of 4-3 in what may be the upset of the Fort Benning season.

Though pre-game odds ran high against 1st Sgt. Lorenzo Santiago's Totems, it soon became apparent that two teams were pited equally against each other.

At the bottom of the eighth, it looked like a sure win for 1st Sgt. Gilberto S. Viera's USAIC team who had two on and no outs. A line drive to center field was picked up by Sp4 Neil J. Murray who returned the ball to third base where it was again fired to second for a quick triple play.

Sp4 Murray was again the Totem hero when, at the top of the tenth with two out, be hit a looping single past third and turned it into a home run. This gave the Totems their 4-3 lead, and pitcher Sp4 Robert J. Knowles held that lead through the bottom of the tenth by retiring three pinch hitters in a row.

With only five hits for the entire game, winning manager 1st Sgt. Santiago admitted that the teams were almost perfectly matched, but attributed the edge needed to win to the superior speed of the Totems.

26th Arty Helicopters Support DivArty ATT's

Men and helicopters from Battery E, (Aviation) 26th Artillery have been supporting the division's artillery battalions the past two weeks during conduct of the battalions Annual Training Tests at Fort Gordon, Ga.,

Two OH-13 observation helicopters from Battery E were attached to each unit, the 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery, and the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery for the duration of the training period. The aircraft were used extensively by both units, primarily for reconnaissance and observation purposes.

During the actual ATT, seven aerial missions were fired from the OH-13. One UH-1 helicopter from Battery E was also attached to each tested battalion during the actual test period for use as an additional reconnaissance vehicle, limited resupply missions, and as a standby craft.

Helicopters from Battery E also provided support for the Division Artillery test team during the exercise at Fort Gordon. This consisted of air-lifting and positioning targets in the impact area, assistance in survey support and other administrative flights connected with the test.

This week, aircraft from the Aviation Battery are supporting another division artillery unit, the 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery while the battalion prepares for their ATT at Fort Stewart, Ga.

'Falcons' Play Host To CAR Course Grads

The 511th Infantry "Falcons" recently played host to eight members of the graduating Advance Infantry Officers Career Course.

Visiting the 511th primarily to reacquaint themselves with the activities of a troop unit, the career course grads were treated to a variety of sights and events.

The first day's activities began with a briefing by Lt. Col. James H. Nix, battalion commander on the mission and organization of the Air Assault Infantry Battalion. Subsequently, the visiting officers were briefed by the 511th Infantry staff on Air Assault operations and techniques.

The remainder of the first day was spent touring the battalion area for a first hand look at the "Falcon's nest."

During the next two days, the visiting "grads" were guests of the rifle companies for a view of training, activities. The "Falcons" were especially "sharp" for their guests and put on a display of their proficiency in rappeling, tactics and range firing.

The highlight of the three day tour came when the visitors were made "Lifetime Members" of the 511th Infantry. A certificate, attesting to this fact, was presented to each of the guests at a "so long" party in their honor in the Company A mess hall.

Rak Paratrooper-Boxers Have Site for Matches

Paratrooper - fighters from 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry had a new and elaborate boxing ring added to their equipment inventory last week.

Construction began during the third week in April under the supervision of Capt. Donald F. Warren, Rak S-4 Officer with special volunteer details providing the labor.

Utilizing a five-man detail under the direction of SSgt William Phelps, and available materials, no stone was left unturned to do a first class job, and the results were apparent Monday when probably the plushest ring in the division was unveiled.

A regulation 18' by 18' ring on a 24' by 24' platform, most of the material used was furnished by the Special Services Section, with spectator bleachers placed around it in arena fashion.

Located in the area adjacent to the Rakkasan's Battalion Dayroom, the outdoor arena is suitable for accomodating the entire battalion, and special elimination matches are expected to begin in the near future.

Third Army Featherweight Champ, PFC Jose Rivera, who made a valiant attempt for the all-Army title returned to his Rakkasan home in Company C last week, after being stopped on a decision in his final bout at Fort Campbell, Ky. two weeks ago.

Battery C Cops 377th Honors As Top Unit

The Honor Battery Award for the month of April was recently presented to Battery C, 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery by Lt. Col. Nelson A. Mahone, the battalion commander.

The plaque was accepted by commanding officer of Battery C.

The Honor Battery is selected from the results of a series of inspections administered monthly by each battalion staff section. Some of the items evaluated during these inspections are unit training, aircraft and motor maintenance and records, battery administrative procedures, and overall security.

The monthly selection of an honor battery fulfills a dual purpose within the battalion. First and most obvious is the increase in prestige, esprit, and morale within the chosen battery. The second and equally important function achieved is the drive in the batteries to excel. The end result is the modling of a more effective and better trained unit thoroughly capable of performing its assigned mission.

Two Cav Officers Earn Gold Leaves

At unique ceremonies recently held by the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry, Clayton J. Bachman Jr. and Dick D. Grube were presented the gold leaves of major.

The entire squadron was called on an early morning alert which was then changed to a reveille formation. While the squadron looked on, Mrs. Bachman pinned on the new leaves.

Maj. Bachman joined the squadron in May 1964 and served as commanding officer of Troop A from June 1964 until April 1965. Prior to joining the squadron he served for three years in Nurnberg, Germany.

Maj. Grube's promotion was announced at the squadron western party. The division commanding general, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard assisted Mrs. Grube in pinning on the new rank.

Maj. Grube has served both in Korea and South America prior to joining the squadron as its S-1.

Battery Honors It's Commander

Capt. Robert D. Offer, Jr., commanding officer of Battery A, 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery was honored by the officers and noncommissioned officers of his unit with a surprise birthday party in the battery mess hall on Saturday, April 3rd.

GOLD LEAVES FOR EXEC . . . Maj. Raymond D. Franklin, executive officer of the 17th Aviation Company, receives the gold leaves of his new rank from Lt. Col. Gregory L. Onley, executive officer of the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

188th Infantry 'Eagle' Takes City Pin Crown

An ex-member of the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, took a first place in the All Events Scratch championship in the recent 10th annual Columbus Men's Bowling Association tournament at Victory Lanes.

Sp4 Dan Babinski, a clerk at Company A, of the "Eagle" battalion, shot a high 1,845 pins, an average of 205 per game, in a nine-game series which carried him over, defending champion Harold Reynolds, who struck down 1813.

The tournament had four categories; All Events Handicap, All Events Scratch, Singles, and Doubles. Babinski ran the whole gamut of placings. Besides his first place in the All Events Scratch he emerged second in the Singles division with the highest three game scratch series of 693 pins followed by Ralph Muir's 684. However, Muir's high handicap shot him past Babinski's handicap by 732 to 720.

Finally in the All Events Handicap, Babinski came out third with a score of 1,926 pins.

But the 25 year old Babinski won't be around to collect his honors. He was discharged from the Army last Friday and left immediately for St. Paul, Minn., to participate in the American Bowling Congress tournament.

After the tournament he plans to return to his home town, Kankakee, Ill., where a job as assistant manager of a bowling alley awaits him.

Pathfinder Drop Is Top Event At Dobbins AFB

Members of the Pathfinder Company (Prov.) were among the top events and displays featured in the Armed Forces Day activities at Dobbins Air Force Base, Marietta, Ga.

Eight of the famed Pathfinders, led by Capt. Richard D. Gillem, the company commander, thrilled the crowd of spectators with a precision parachute drop from a UH-D Iroquois helicopter from Company B, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion. The Pathfinders used the Army's steerable T-10M parachute for the demonstration.

The weekend activities began for the Pathfinder team when they were flown to Dobbins by "Huey" and billeted at the American Hotel in Atlanta on Friday. The Armed Forces Day festivities began the following morning with an open-house at the Lockheed aircraft plantand static displays of the various aircraft from the 11th Air Assault Division.

At 1:00 p.m. the Pathfinders took off in their specially rigged helicopter. The doors and seats had been removed to allow the jumpers to sit on the floor of the aircraft with their feet hanging over the sides.

When the UH1-D reached the proper altitude of 1500 feet, the jumpmaster, Capt. Gillem, directed the pilot to fly to a point which would allow the jumpers to drift down in front of the spectator area. Then it was "GO," and a few seconds later four Pathfinders were floating to the ground. A second pass over the area saw four more jumpers exit.

Each jumper was in complete combat dress including a weapon and a rucksack in which the Pathfinders carry the equipment necessary in their operations. The rucksack is released from the jumper and lowered on a 15-foot line when he is approximately 200 feet above the ground.

Riders Ready For Hunt Club Horse Show

Horse enthusiasts are putting the final touches on their riding form in anticipation of the annual Hunt Club show planned for 9 a.m. Sunday, May 30 at Fort Benning's French Polo Field.

There is an added incentive this spring as the annual event will return to the Main Post for the first time in 18 years. Since the present Hunt Club was organized in 1957, the annual affair has been held at the Marne Road Hunt Club location.

Now with more interest, membership and activity in the Hunt Club, the annual spring event has outgrown the limited facilities on Marne Road. It was decided to move the event back to French Polo Field, the center of activity for the equestrian set during the "hay day" of horses at Fort Benning.

A large crowd is anticipated at the holiday event. Sponsors of the event are hoping that many entries will be listed from horse enthusiasts in the Chattahoochee Valley.

Last year the event was a closed affair for members only. This year the annual spring horse show is open to all who wish to enter.

Help Avoid 12 Deaths; One Could Be Yours

A command sponsored campaign to save 12 Fort Benning lives was launched this week by the installation commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

In a letter directed to all military and civilian personnel, Gen. Heintges called the 110 day period extending from May 20 to September 27 the "hazardous summer season" and said the goal of the concerted safety program is "to avoid the 12 fatalities that could normally be expected" during this period.

His reference to 12 deaths was occasioned by Safety Section records which indicate statistically that this amount of fatalities could be predicted.

These figures can be further broken down to predict, again statistically, that nine of the deaths will be military personnel and the remaining three dependents or civilian employees. Eight of the 12 will involve operation of privately-owned vehicles; the remaining four, drownings.

These are gruesome figures and it is the intent of the safety campaign to disprove them.

Gen. Heintges cited in his letter the maximum effort which will be exerted nationwide and by local law enforcement agencies to develop a safety awarness for proper behavior on the public highways and in recreational activities.

"Emphasis will be placed," Gen. Heintges said, "on apprehending the speeder and the drinking driver on the highways and the violators of safe boating regulations."

Gen. Heintges said the first

500 Americans Will Die During Next 72 Hours

By Sgt. Maj. Al Spratley

Will you be dead within the next 72 hours? Over 500 Americans will be!

Today, like you, they are living, breathing human beings enthusiastic with plans for the long Memorial Day weekend ahead. By Tuesday, you, perhaps, and an estimated 500 or more other persons will be twisted and misshapen masses of bone and muscle. . . victims of mayhem on the macadam.

What is the answer?

The National Safety Council, law enforcement agencies, school, industrial and military safety sections have tried educational programs, "scare" pictures and articles but the slaughter still continues . . . and worsens.

Millions of citizens across the Nation tested their defensive driving ability last Monday night on a unique hour - long television show devised by the National Safety Council and carried over a major network.

Some regarded it as a "game," while others were thoughtful and will take steps to rectify the weaknesses they discovered. If it is instrumental in saving only one life, in sparing one family the major test of this safety campaign would be the upcoming Memorial Day weekend, and noted that the national death toll resulting from congested highways and crowded beaches would "probably exceed 500."

(The 110-day period over which the concerted safety effort will extend also includes "long weekend" holidays on Independence Day, July 4 and Labor Day, Sept. 6.)

Gen. Heintges concluded his letter by saying, "I am confident that through recognition and acceptance of our individual responsibilities and the development of a strong determination to protect our own lives and those of our families and neighbors, this Memorial Day weekend will be a pleasant one and not marred by the occurrence of a fatal accident."

Mayor

(Maj.) Michael A. Rusnock and Chaplain (Capt.) Alan M. Greenspan.

At 11:45 a.m., Memorial Day observance will continue at the flagstaff in front of Bldg. 4.

The band will play from 11:45 until 12 noon, when a 21-gun salute will be fired by Battery A, 2nd Bn., 10th Arty.

The flag, which will be displayed at half-mast throughout the morning, will, at the sound of the last shot, be hoisted to full staff as the band plays the national anthem.

Transportation for scouts attending the ceremonies will be provided. Buses will begin loading at 9:50 a.m. at the Custer Terrace Shopping Center and Infantry Center Chapel parking lot. Vehicles will depart for the cemetery at 10:20 a.m.

At the conclusion of the graveside service, buses will reload and take the scouts to Bldg. 4. At the end of the flag ceremony, the vehicles will return the scouts to Custer Terrace Shopping Center and The Infantry Center Chapel parking lot.

Monday will be a holiday on the post for all except essential personnel.

Col. Marlowe Assumes Post At CTC Review

Col. Lon D. Marlowe Jr. became the new commander of The Infantry Center Troop Command (CTC) recently in a special retreat review on the unit's parade field.

He succeeded Col. Jess W. Walls who assumed command of The Student Brigade May 25.

Col. Marlowe, former director of plans for the Test, Evaluation and Control Group, was presented the CTC colors by Col. Walls as men representing each of CTC's four battalions stood on the field ready to pass in review for their new commander.

tragic aftermath, the time, effort and expense involved in presenting the program was well spent.

Some who took the test were elated at their comparatively high score. But they should realize that anything short of perfect is deadly. A SINGLE question missed represents the potential for a screeching, metal rending collision if the driver is suddenly confronted with a situation in which he has been tested and adjudged deficient.

The question remains: "What is the answer?"

Perhaps it is not in educational programs about the personal consequences of unsafe driving or irresponsible actions that lead to drownings, scarring burns or maiming injuries.

Perhaps you, or any one of this weekend's 500 plus victims, should be told that it's not your demise that is particularly important. But the grief and tragedy you leave behind is important.

Parents that have nurtured, guided, loved, comforted and sacrificed for you these many years . . . the wife, suddenly cast into the millstream to fend for herself . . . the children who deserve both father and mother to love and look to for understanding and all the joys of family life that remain as warm memories when they in turn reach maturity . . . these are the real victims of the carelessness, irresponsibility and mental immaturity you display when you take chances behind the wheel or in any other way you "celebrate" the holiday.

Will you have a name on Tuesday or be just an insignificant part of the National Safety Council's statistics?

Onka Takes Skeet Title In Colorado

PFC Kevin Onka of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit cut down 99 birds out of 100 to capture the 12 gauge title in the Fifth Armed Forces Skeet Championships at Colorado Springs, Colo., Monday, May 24.

By virtue of winning the championship, Onka, a former national junior champion, was assured of a berth on the United States Skeet Team according to Maj. Thomas Gillmore, OIC of the Army team which will compete in the World Moving Target Championships in Chile in November.

The runnerup spot went to Billy Hicks of the Marine Corps with 96. The Air Force's Dave Bywater was third with 95.

The 22-year-old native of Sugar Creek, Mo., has been with the MTU since August 1963. He came to Fort Benning three months after he entered the Army.

He captured the North American Clay Target championship in 1959 and 1960 and took the Vandalia Handicap in 1959 in the Class AA Junior Division.

Chaplain (Capt.) Claude E. Moorfield Jr. was awarded the first Oak Leaf Cluster to the Army Commendation Medal last week.

Chaplain Moorefield also received a framed citation from the Jewish Welfare Board and one from the Fort Benning District, Boy Scouts of America.

The citation that accompanied the medal commended Chaplin Moorefield for "outstanding service and support of the total chaplain program conducted for Jewish personnel in the armed Forces and for hospitalized veterans in U.S. hospitals."

The Boy Scout certificate expressed appreciation for the chaplain's cooperation in furthering the organization's program on the post.

Don't Mar Weekend

The real significance of this Memorial Day will be lost in part by the casualty count in vehicle and water sports accidents.

During the three-day weekend, news media will be concerned in reporting the ever-mounting accident toll. The identity of the victims will be lost in the numbers. They will simply become the 16th or 316th victims.

It is ironic that as we pause in honor of the nation's heroic war dead on May 30, we will use the three-day weekend to kill over 500 Americans on our roads.

During a similar three-day holiday period in a past year, traffic crashes claimed the lives of over 440 motorists. An investigation of all these fatal accidents revealed that not a single victim was wearing a seat belt.

It was definitely determined that 186 would have survived the accident had they been wearing one. Another 88 would probably have survived. The safety seat belt in these cases would have been a "dry land life preserver."

The record of Fort Benning drivers is also indicative of the value of safety seat belts. In the numerous accidents recorded last year involving Fort Benning personnel on post and off post, not one of the victims was using a seat belt. Some were actually sitting on the seat belt that could have saved their lives.

It is estimated that about 5,000 of the 25,000 vehicles operated by post personnel are equipped with seat belts. Unfortunately, only about half of them are used all the time.

No other safety concept in the history of the automobile has been backed up by such careful statistical validation and scientific investigation.

This year when you're out driving your family to a picnic, going to the cemetery to pay tribute to a deceased loved one, or taking a long trip home to visit the family, USE YOUR SEAT BELT.

If you don't, others may be mourning the loss of your life next Memorial Day.

The Judge Says . . .

If you served in Viet Nam during the year 1964 you may be entitled to a refund from the United States government for federal income taxes paid for 1964.

On April 24, 1965, President Johnson signed Executive Order Number 11216 designating Viet Nam as a combat zone effective Jan. 1, 1964. This declaration triggers a tax relief provision of the Internal Revenue Code providing an exemption for pay received for active service as a member of the Armed Forces for any month during any part (even one day) of which such member served in a combat zone or was hospitalized anywhere as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while serving in a combat zone.

For enlisted personnel and warrant officers, W-1 through W-4, the monthly exclusion is unlimited; however, commissioned officers are limited to an exclusion of $200 per month.

If you are entitled to relief for 1964 and you have already filed your 1964 tax return, you may obtain a refund by filing an amended tax return or an Internal Revenue Form 843.

If you choose the amended return method you must use a Form 1040 Long Form marked "AMENDED — COMBAT ZONE" and it should be returned to the district office where you sent your original 1964 return. The amount of the combat zone exclusion should be entered in the "adjustments" section, part III (p. 2) with the notation "Combat Zone Exclusion (Certificate Attached)."

The certificate is a statement signed by the member certifying that he served in the Combat Zone or was hospitalized as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while so serving. This certificate is also required if the Form 843 is used to claim the refund.

A GREATER ENEMY....

Hitchhikers Beware

With the long Memorial Day holiday coming up this weekend, the staff of The BAYONET felt that an editorial on the perils of hitchhiking would be appropriate because of the number of Fort Benning personnel that will be attempting to "hitch" a ride home.

Hitchhiking is unlawful! More important the hitchhiker flirts with death.

The Army prohibits this practice as do many states, including the State of Georgia.

Violators are subject to punishment by Military Court-Martial or prosecution by state authorities.

Besides it is regarded as dangerous. A number of persons are injured and some are killed while standing on the roadways trying to "hitch" a ride.

Another inherent danger is the chance of being picked up by a criminal, which could put the hitchhiker in a precarious and possibly a hazardous position.

Fort Benning encourages its personnel to refrain from exposing themselves to this risky and unsafe act.

Military personnel are reminded that free of charge bus service is available to many points on the Main Post, Harmony Church, and Sand Hill.

Commercial bus service is also available to and from Fort Benning to various points in the city of Columbus.

Personnel who find it absolutely necessary to try to obtain a ride other than bus service, are encouraged to use the "Soldier Pick-Up Points," however, this does not remove the inherent dangers connected with hitchhiking.

Chaplain's Corner

What Is America?

Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker

Sunday we will observe Memorial Day in our chapel and on Monday in the Post Cemetery and at the Post Flagpole.

This important National Day is a time for serious thought. Why have men and women died for America? What is America? Is it entirely bounded only by seas and friendly nations who are our close neighbors? Is it only the ground from whch we obtain materials for our daily existence, the air we breathe, the skies which cover us, cities towns and countryside? Can we say America is composed of our institutions of worship, education, healing and government?

Certainly America is all this but it is much more for other nations also enjoy similar physical resources and institutions of religion, education, welfare and government.

America is a belief akin to a deep religious faith. The belief is liberty and the exercise of liberty promotes morality in government and economics.

Liberty provides room for citizens to stand upright as children of a Creator who has endowed them with certain human rights; to live life, enjoy blessings of freedom and pursue happiness. America is liberty in a way of life peculiar to our country!

Surgeon Says

'Crash' Program

If weight reduction is (or should be) your goal, keep in mind that "crash" programs provide only a temporary solution to a continuing problem. In most instances, weight gain is the result of habitual consumption of more calories than are required.

Permanent solution to this difficulty comes about when a balance is achieved between calories consumed daily and those required. Since habit plays a large part in most of our eating, it is necessary to become accustomed to a new and lower level of consumption. Therefore, a sensible program for weight reduction is based on normal dietary patterns; provides fewer calories each day than are actually required for maintenance; and is designed to be continued over a relatively long period of time.

Once the desired goal has been reached, some additions to the calorie restricted dietary pattern usually provide a satisfying amount of food and permits maintenance of the optimum weight. Note, however, that new habits must be formed - hence diets prescribed are deliberately planned to avoid any drastic and rapid loss of weight.

Army hospitals generally favor a calorie restricted diet pattern which is based on six food lists of comparable caloric and nutritional value. Within each list, any food may be substituted for any other. When the prescribed pattern is followed it is possible to assure provision of a diet which is adequate in protein, vitamins and minerals and within the caloric limitation.

Planning family meals when one member is following a weight reduction program is simplified by use of this exchange system. The variety possible within the framework of the diet can be applied to regular meals with very little modification. In fact, with the addition of some highly desirable (and high calorie) items such as milk, desserts, salad dressings and fats, the reduction diet pattern can be used profitably to assure adequate nutrition for the entire family.

A final word with regard to reduction diets — no program involving a major loss in weight should be undertaken without the advice of a physician.

Buy Bonds

Bob Hope, world traveler and comedian, holds one of the new $75 savings bonds being sold along with other better known denominations ($25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000) during the "Star Spangled Banner Savings Bond Month" drive. Bob joins with savings bond officials in urging personnel to purchase bonds from their banks or through the payroll savings plan.

'Sally' Brainwashes 69th; Urges Men to Buy Bonds

Tokyo Rose, Seoul City Sue and other shady ladies from the past were evoked recently when members of the 197th Inf. Bde. heard a very female voice "from nowhere" asking them to buy United States Savings Bonds. Sally.

The voice was that of Miss Kathleen Brunette, Service Club No. 1 program director, who volunteered her time and talent to launch the 197th's Spring Savings Bond Campaign as Star Spangled Sally.

Members of the 4th Bn., 69th Armor were the first to hear "Sally" as she asked them in a sultry voice to "buy bonds—not only for me, boys, but for you and your future."

Miss Brunette then went on tc list the advantages of investing in U.S. Savings Bonds.

The "broadcast" ended with Sally asking the men to see their unit canvasser for complete details.

After visiting the 69th, Miss Brunette stopped at the 1st Bn., 58th Inf., Hq. Co., 197th, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. and the 2nd Bn., 10th Arty.

51st Company Turns 'Blue'

After 18 weeks of grueling training, the officer candidates of the 51st Co., 5th Student Bn. (OC), The Student Brigade, attained Senior Status at a review held at Chapel Field recently.

Reviewing officer for the "Blue Day" ceremony was Brig. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., assistant division commander, 11th AAD.

"Blue Day" is so named because the candidates are now authorized to wear Infantry blue shoulder tabs and helmet liners. At this stage of their training, while they do not as yet have officer privileges, they do command the same respect from junior candidates as is due a commissioned officer.

A general order which proclaimed the 51st a senior company highlyighted the ceremony as Gen. Wright attached a nInfantry blue senior status ribbon to the company guidon.

The ceremony marks the beginning of the final phase of the 23-week course.

The Army's chief of staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, was the principal speaker last week when 401 officers graduated from the Infantry Officers Career Course (CAR) in ceremonies in Marshall Auditorium.

Gen. Johnson spoke of the satisfaction an officer may expect from a military career. He discussed what the future might hold for the career officer in the way of security, advancement and recognition. He said, "No one's future is over his shoulder. It is right out in front of you.

"Seeking recognition for what you do is a tough proposition," he continued. "Never hang your head when you say you are a soldier. Our country must be free and you are the people that make it so . . . we are masters of the land."

Finally the general said you must have what I refer to as "the four I's": Intelligence, Imagination, Initiative and Integrity.

Assisting Gen. Johnson in presenting the diplomas were Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, commanding general, Third U.S. Army and Maj. Gen. John A Heintges, commandant, Infantry School.

The CAR classes were composed of Regular Army captains with six to eight years of service. They also include six Marine Corps and 24 Army officers from Allied nations.

Distinguished honor graduate for the two CAR classes were Capt. James J. Kernan, career class No. 1 and Capt. Robert A. McDonald, career class No. 2.

'To Wear With Pride'

In the following issues of The BAYONET, the Third U.S. Army Command information Topic "To Wear With Pride" will be covered.

This topic is intended to outline the Awards Program under which the Army honors its soldiers for exceptional service, heroism, outstanding achievement, participation in campaigns, expeditions, emergency operations and other meritorious services and to show how a decoration is symbolic of courage, sacrifice and devotion to duty.

A soldier's duty often tests his courage, his skill and his endurance. He may be assigned to remote places, required to live under difficult conditions and perform arduous jobs. Sometimes he is inclined to feel that he has a thankless job.

The soldier does not go unrecognized. Look around you at the ribbons, badges and unit emblems worn by your fellow soldiers in recognition of their service.

Awards and decorations are visible signs of a soldier's career. They tell the campaigns in which he has participated, some of the skills he has acquired and above all, the manner in which he has done his job. They have been presented to him to wear — with pride.

In Viet Nam

Infantryman Statue's Model Is Carrying Out Its Legend

The man who was the model for Fort Benning's Infantryman Statue is bearing out the legend under the sculpture, "Wherever brave men fight . . . you will find me."

Capt. Eugene Wyles, who as an Infantry officer candidate here in 1959 was selected to typify an Infantry leader, is a military adviser in Viet Nam.

In the May 24, 1965 edition of Newsweek magazine, Capt. Wyles is one of several Americans featured in an article titled "U.S. Advisers: The Knife's Edge."

The article reads, in part, "In spite of the increasing impressive concentration of U.S. combat units in Viet Nam, the brunt of battle there so far as the U.S. is concerned will continue to be borne by a relative handful of men—the 5,000 American advisers to the South Vietnamese Army who are poised on the very knife edge of the war."

The Infantryman Statue, which stands before The Infantry School, is flanked by the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the 50 states.

Larger than life, the sculpture depicts an Infantryman in the typical pose of leader—rifle in left hand, right arm lifted in signal to his platoon, and mouth open as though issuing the cry "Follow Me."

A bronze plaque attached to the base of the statue quotes from the poem, "Wherever brave men fight and die for freedom, you will find me. I am always ready . . . Now and forever . . . I am the Infantry. Queen of battle—Follow Me."

While in OCS, Wyles was a member of 52nd Co., 5th Bn., TSB.

Col. Walls Is New TSB Commander; Col. Kellett Assigned to Chile Mission

Command of The Student Brigade changed hands on the wooden gymnasium floor of Briant Wells Field House on May 28, as Col. Donald T. Kellett passed the Brigade colors to new TSB commander Col. Jess W. Walls.

Highlighting the change of command ceremony was the dedication of "Follow Me," the official march of the U.S. Army Infantry School, written by Col. Kellett.

The march, approved by verbal order of Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, was dedicated "to enhance the prestige and traditions of the U. S. Army Infantry School".

In his remarks after the march's first public performance, Gen. Heintges said, "This is something which will be permanent at Fort Benning. It will still be at The Infantry School after we are all gone."

Col. Kellett, who has commanded the Brigade since May 1964, is leaving soon for Washington, D. C., where he will attend the Foreign Service Institute prior to assuming command of the U.S. Army mission in Chile.

In his departing remarks to the men of his command and assembled guests Col. Kellett paid tribute to the Brigade by saying that there was probably no unit in the U. S. Army which has more illustrious names on its roles. He gave George C. Marshall, Joseph Stilwell, Mark Clark, Omar Bradley, Matthew B. Ridgway and John Gavin as examples.

"But more important than they", Col. Kellett added, "are the thousands of junior officers who learned their jobs here and performed them well on the field of battle".

He concluded his remarks by saying that the Army is once again committed to keeping the peace of the free world.

Prior to the ceremony, Col. Kellett was awarded the Legion of Merit.

Col. Walls is the former commanding officer of Center Troop Command. A veteran of 29 years of active duty, Col. Walls has seen combat in World War II and Korea.

New Bridge Is Now Open

After being detoured for three months, traffic this week began flowing over the Santa Fe Road bridge crossing the Upatoi Creek.

Branching off Custer Terrace Road, the Santa Fe Road offers the swiftest, most direct route to Martin Army Hospital from the Sand Hill area.

The bridge had been knocked out early this year by debris and swirling, flood-level water, according to Lt. Col. George Hutchings, of Fort Benning's engineer section.

A temporary bridge was installed by 2nd Infantry Division engineers and allowed one-way traffic until work on the damaged span began March 8. Then the route was closed to all traffic.

Col. Hutchings said civilian contractors had set June 6 as their completion target date, but were able to finish the work Tuesday, 10 days ahead of schedule.

Col. Short Assigned to Paraguay

Change of Command Ceremony Held; Col. Riley Is New 197th Commander

The 197th Inf. Bde., the first separate brigade in the Army to be organized under the ROAD (Reorganization Objective Army Division) concept, changed commands last week.

In special ceremonies, Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr. assumed command of the unit from Col. Walter D. Short.

Col. Short has been assigned as chief of the Military Missiop in Paraguay.

Col. Riley, former chief of the Staff Group, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department of The Infantry School, told the men he was proud to assume command of the 197th, the only unit of its kind in the Army.

The 197th was organized under the ROAD concept Sept. 24, 1962. It has Artillery, Armor, mechanized Infantry and Infantry battalions and attached to it are a pathfinder detachment, chemical platoon and the Army's only scout dog platoon.

In relinquishing his command, Col. Short thanked the 197th officers and enlisted men, especially the NCOs whom he said were the "backbone of the Army."

Before the troops passed in review in tribute to their new and old commanders, Col. Short officially presented the unit's colors to Col. Riley.

SPORTS Afterthoughts

By DAVID N. SCOTT

SIX MEMBERS of the House of Representatives have written to baseball commissioner Ford Frick calling on him to support a plan that would lead to a third major league by 1966.

The main issue was to find a replacement for the Milwaukee fans when the Braves move to Atlanta next season. This is all fine and good. Milwaukee fans will probably support another team, providing they are winners and Atlanta is capable of supporting the Braves because they have the entire Southeast to cater to.

However, in my opinion, the representatives may have gone one step too far by asking that major league ball be provided to Miami, San Diego, Oakland, and Denver. Other teams mentioned in the suggestion were Montreal, Toronto, Buffalo and Dallas-Fort Worth.

The latter four have the population to support a major league team but Denver, San Diego, Oakland, and Miami are not ready yet and probably won't be for another decade.

California has three big league teams already. Sending two more teams to the "Surfin' State" would saturate the population and more than likely send the Dodgers' O'Mally and the Giants' Stoneham packing once again. Surely Mr. Charles Finley wouldn't sit back in Kansas City and watch as franchise after franchise goes whizzing by.

Miami hasn't got the population to support a team. Besides, the baseball season opens at the end of the tourist season and winds up when the "Yankees" begin their migration South. Denver is in the same boat with Miami as far as population is concerned.

Seattle, which would be the most likely city for the next big league move, wasn't mentioned.

If the nine proposed cities were to receive major league teams, where would the franchises get the talent? There isn't enough to go around now. An example of this is the latest expansion. The L.A. Angels are the only team to offer any major league competition to date. The other three are fighting for the cellar slot in their respective leagues.

Additional baseball franchise changes would look like a game of "musical cities". Many people have already said that baseball is on the decline. The new proposal, if accepted, which is highly unlikely, might bear that statement out.

The majors are still trying to build up their farm clubs. After a move like this, they would probably end up grabbing talent from the little leagues.

"Nobody outside baseball knows what is involved in expansion," was Ford Frick's only comment.

A softball pitcher has been timed at over 100 miles per hour — 2.4 miles per hour faster than the fastest baseball twirler.

When a softball player hits over .350, he is burning up the league. But when a team as a whole compiles better than a .350 average, then softball world — look out.

Florida's Clearwater Bombers are presently burning up the softball world with their blazing bats.

As of last week the Bombers, seven times world softball champions, had 11 members hitting better than .300 out of a squad of 16 men.

If the last 15 games the Bombers have played are any indication of things to come, the Bombers of 1965 might well be on their way to championship number eight.

Brannock Credited With Win

197th Inf. Records Third Victory In 13-7 Triumph Over 3rd Bde.

By Sp5 Mitch Yamasaka

Bill Brannock and Wendell Tate teamed up Monday night at Gowdy Field to wrap up the 197th Inf. Bde's third victory in five outings as the 197th defeated the 3rd Bde., 13-7 in major unit baseball league action.

Brannock, the starting and winning pitcher, pitched seven and two-thirds innings and Tate finished up.

The 197th drew first blood in the contest as Eddie McLean drew a double down center field in the first inning bringing home Charles Farrell. They added two more runs in the bottom of the third inning.

In the fifth inning, the 197th batters went wild and, before the smoke cleared, seven runs had scored making the score 10-2.

In their half of the sixth inning, the 3rd Bde. hitters started a rally which netted them three runs. The big batter for the 3rd in the sixth frame was relief pitcher William Armstrong who connected for a single to short center knocking in two runs.

The 197th came back with three runs in the seventh on a double by Tom Groce and Duane Eichorn's third hit of the evening, a run scoring single to right field.

The 3rd Bde. started a rally in the ninth with two out but it fell short and the final score stood at 13-7.

Trick Golf Show Held by Hahn At Sand Hill

One of the world's foremost golf personalities, Paul Hahn, combined a repertoier of trick shots, comedy routine and instruction in his one hour performance at the Special Services Sand Hill Golf Course on May 21.

The audience watched in amazement as he hit tee shots 200 to 300 yards down the fairway with clubs varying from six feet long to a triple jointed swivel shaft. He also hit shots from positions such as standing on one leg and kneeling on both knees.

Along with his "impossible" trick shots and comedy routine, Hahn provided a very informative golf lecture. He emphasized stance, address and swing as being three vital factors in playing good golf.

Hahn has traveled over 500,000 miles, visited all six continents and performed exhibitions in 37 countries.

His exhibition here was sponsored by Third Army Special Services. The project officer was 2nd Lt. Roger D. Reynolds of Main Post Special Services.

MTU Takes Six Events In International Shoot

BY LEE LA COMBE

Rifle and pistol shooters from the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit took first place honors in every one of the six events of the U. S. International Shooting Championships which ended at Fort Benning Wednesday.

SFC Lloyd Burchett and MSgt. William Krilling got the Army off to a winning start by capturing the first two matches, the Free Pistol and the Free Rifle.

Burchett slammed out a three-day total of 1,659 to easily outdistance runnerup Sgt. Frank Wigmore of the Marines who had a 1,638 in the Free Pistol competition.

Krilling came from behind on the last day to edge out two of his MTU teammates. He fired a three-day aggregate of 3,424 which was six points higher than Capt. Tommy Pool and Sgt. Martin Gunnarssen, who each finished with 3,418.

Five-time national pistol champion SFC William Blankenship kept the string going by leading from start to finish in the Center Fire Pistol match, ending with a total of 1,780 points.

In this event SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the MTU made a fast finish with a record-setting 598 out of 600 on the final day to take second place with 1,772.

Capt. Pool led all the way as he took first place in the Three - Position Smallbore Rifle event with a 3,452 total. Capt. Lones Wigger, hero of the U. S. Olympic Shooting team in Tokyo last fall, came in second with 3,434.

SFC Aubrey Smith gave the Army its fifth straight victory by winning the Rapid Fire Pistol match with a 1,740 total, barely edging teammate SFC Laurence Mosely who finished with 1,739.

Tournament Victor

A silver tea set is presented to Capt. George Richards (R) for winning the Spring Golf Championship at Fort Benning recently. Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe makes the presentation while Mrs. Richards looks on.

Fred Andrews hurled both games for the victors and now boasts a 2-0 record.

Gabby Naples sent Co. A ahead in the first inning of the first game with a three run homer. He collected four more RBI's during the game.

Roy DePhilips took the loss for Co. B.

A homer by Tom Hughes in the bottom of the 7th gave Andrews his second win of the season as Co. A edged Co. E, 9-8. Naples collected two hits and drove home four runs to lead the Co. A batters.

Francis Irace suffered the loss for Co. E.

Winning pitcher was Brannock and the losing pitcher was Alfred Freeman.

The game at Bennett Field between the league leading 428th Medical Bn. and Div Arty was cancelled due to wet field conditions and the game was rescheduled for Wednesday (May 26).

At Pensacola

Army Shooters Take 3 Matches

By Lee La Combe

Army shooters won three out of four team events and two of the individual aggregates in the Fiesta of Five Flags Pistol Championships fired at Pensacola, Fla., last weekend.

The Army Blue squad of SFC William Blankenship, SFC Ralph Thompson, SSgt. Emil Heugatter and SSgt. Merriweather Jones swept to victory in the .22 caliber, Center Fire and .45 caliber team matches and lost the service pistol team competition by only two points. MSgt Mack Salmon was the team coach.

Blankenship also won the .22 caliber individual aggregate with an 893-56x and finished second to the Navy's PO Donald Hamilton in the grand aggregate.

SSgt. Hershel Anderson, a former member of the MTU and now shooting with the U. S. Army Europe team, took the Center Fire Aggregate with an 886-45x.

Hamilton, who set a new national record with 300-30x in the .45 caliber Timed Fire competition, finished with an aggregate of 2,662-144x out of 2,700 points.

Blankenship was next with 2,659-145x and Thompson was third with the same point total and 142 x-ring shots.

The .22 caliber and center fire team matches were close contests with the Army getting the nod over the Air Force Gold entry in both cases.

In the .22 caliber event, the soldiers and airmen each finished with identical 1175-60x totals and the tie was broken on the basis of scores fired in the rapid fire portion of the match. In the center fire contest, the Army and Air Force again had the same point totals — 1,172 — but the MTU shooters had 65 x-ring shots to 58 for the airmen.

The Army team took the .45 match with an 1,171-47x, and the Army Gray squad was runnerup with 1,166-47x. The sweep also gave Army Blue the aggregate team championship with 3,513-182x. The Air Force finished second with 3,505-158x.

The only team match to escape the Army was the service pistol event taken by the Air Force with an 1,161-47x total. The Blue squad finished second with 1,158-33.

The Army team has begun competing in the Southeastern Regional Pistol Championships which have drawn nearly 400 of the best shooters in this area of the United States as well as the best in the major Army commands.

Capt. Wigger Leads Sweep With Victory

Capt. Lones Wigger completed the sweep of the International events for MTU shooters by capturing the Smallbore Rifle Prone match Wednesday with a two-day total of 1,782.

He led throughout the competition. The runnerup spot went to SSG Donice Bartlett of the Marine Corps with 1,780 and T-Sgt Allen Hannon of the Air Force was third with 1,779.

Marne Miniature Review To Bid Williams Goodbye

The 2nd Infantry Division this afternoon will say good-by to its only brigadier general in a miniature review at Marne Field.

Later, Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, the assistant division commander, will be guest of honor at an Indianhead Lodge reception.

It was only two months ago that the general was welcomed to the division in a similar ceremony on the same field adjacent to headquarters.

Then, as will happen at 4:15 p.m. today, troops bearing the colors of every unit in the division bunched in neat squares on the parade field, stood firm as the general inspected, then marched past the reviewing platform. The division band played and a battery of artillerymen blasted an 11-gun salute.

Everything will be the same today — except that the general will be going instead of coming.

Gen. Williams' next assignment is as assistant division commander of the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea. He will be replaced at the 2nd Division by Col. John Armstrong, commander of the 3rd Brigade.

Gen. Williams is scheduled to leave Fort Benning Monday, spend a week at an officer's maintenance course at Fort Knox, Ky., then return here for one day.

He has indicated that he will take a leave before going to work in Korea. His reporting date Seoul is June 28.

While the general is in Korea, his wife and family will live in Los Angeles, Calif.

ling massed his entire battalion—the largest in the division—in honor of the colonel who in early June will take a position at the Army's artillery school at Fort Sill, Okla.

Both the division's generals, the colonels in charge of the division's major commands and three former engineer battalion commanders were among the guests at the review.

As reviewing officer, Col. Huffman made his inspection pass through the troops with Col. Griebling, riding in the front scoop of a diesel bucket loader.

Climaxing the morning program, Col. Huffman presented awards to 10 engineers cited for excellence in their jobs.

3rd Brigade's Armstrong Tops Assignments List

The selection of Col. John W. Armstrong as interim assistant division commander, to succeed Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, topped the high-level shuffle of senior division officers.

Col. Burnside E. Huffman, chief of staff, this week announced the selection of the new assistant along with the new assignments in three of the division's five "G" sections.

Lt. Col. Tommy P. Trexler was named to take over the assistant chief of staff, G-1 duties on the 1st of June.

Ingram Moves

Lt. Col. Earl Ingram, the assistant chief of staff, G-2 was named in the announcement as the commander of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry. June 2 was named as the date when Ingram would assume command and Lt. Col. S. K. McMurdo, present commander of the 22nd will become assistant to Armstrong in charge of training.

Maj. Clarence C. Mann, presently in Europe, will join the division July 15 and take over Ingram's G-2 post. Maj. William L. Lam, deputy G-2, will hold the post in the interim.

New G-3

The assistant chief of staff, G-3 post, presently being held by Lt. Col. William E. Conger who has received orders assigning him to Washington, D. C., will be filled by Lt. Col. John A. Hemphill, presently the executive officer of the division's support command.

The new G-3 will take over on June 10 according to the announcement.

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams, who Col. Armstrong replaces as assistant commander on June 5, is scheduled for a similar position in Korea with the 1st Cavalry Division.

Plans presently call for Col. Fred O. Jackson to take command of the 22nd will which is left open by Ar-

Soldiers Attend Religious Retreat

Division - wide religious retreat ceremonies held Tuesday, featured guest retreat leaders for both Protestant and Catholic men.

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) M. H. Silverthorn, a former member of the 2nd Division during World War I, was the guest leader for the Protestant soldiers attending, and Chap. (Maj.) Xavier Gigliotti led the Catholic men during the day's religious activities.

Opening exercises for both groups took place at Sand Hill Theater Six.

Chap. (Capt.) Duie R [illegible]nigan, 1st Brigade chaplain, was the project officer.

Division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles addressed the gathering briefly and introduced Gen. Silverthorn.

Following the early meeting, the men went their respective ways Protestants to the USAIC Rest Center and Catholics to Chapel Two.

The Protestant retreat session began shortly thereafter with Gen. Silverthorn speaking and leading discussion "buzz" groups that lasted the entire day.

The retired general, a current president of the International Christian Leadership Group, also addressed the Sand Hill Protestant [illegible]

A Tale of Foo:

9th's Magic Alligator Goes AWOL

By MARV WOLF

The five - toed imperial Chinese dragon Foo, mascot of the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, has absented himself without leave again from his pen outside battalion headquarters.

Foo, who until his recent adoption by the 9th was just an ordinary four foot Georgia swamp alligator, was captured at Fort Stewart during the recent exercise held at the swampy southeast Georgia installation.

A mixed force of 9th Infantrymen consisting of medics from Headquarters Company and line soldiers from Company A captured the scaly reptile and transported it back to Fort Benning in an ammunition trailer on May 16th.

Since the 9th Infantry's official nickname is "Manchu", a team referring to that unit's outstanding service during the Boxer Rebellion in China in 1900, and the official unit belt buckle and crest both contain a fierce looking chinese dragon, the unit has for some time been interested in obtaining a suitable mascot.

The world situation being what it is, and with China no longer so friendly, Chinese dragons, especially the five toed type, are in rather short supply, according to Sgt. Maj. Alkcus Stokes, of the 9th.

This being the case, Stokes figured, four toes are better than none, and with a little gold paint and a few lessons in Chinese to get rid of that unmistakably Georgian accent an alligator might do after all.

Care of the ugly saurian was entrusted to Sgt. Raymond Thielen of Headquarters Company, who does four or five interesting jobs up there, including tending to the Manchu museum.

Thielen had a pit dug, lined it with cement, filled it with some homey-looking black muddy water, surrounded it with a chicken wire fence to ensure privacy and installed the dragon, now named Foo.

Really, it was quite cozy, by reptile standards, but Foo seemed to resent being confined, and the fact that his bog down at Stewart wasn't half as lucurious or surrounded with ardent admirers didn't detract from the fact that he had not even been consulted before being hired for the job. Besides, his language lessons were going poorly; have you ever tried to study Mandarin while somebody poked a stick at you and fed you live frogs?

So on Thursday, May 20th, Foo fled.

He was recaptured the next day, after he was found hiding under a building belonging to the 1st battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Foo was returned to his quarters and the study of Mandarin, but somehow word leaked out that this business of going off without official sanction would not be tolerated by an old, proud outfit like the 9th. It was most unmascot - like, and disciplinary action would be forthcoming.

That tore it as far as Foo was concerned.

Last Monday he took off again leading to some speculation regarding his entry in the Olympics as a high jumper, should he be recaptured.

At last report he was still missing and if he does not return by June 24th will be dropped from the rolls as a deserter, thus leaving a permanent vacancy in the mascot slot.

Applicants for the position will be interviewed on an appropriate date, to be named after June 24th officials here noted.

The successful candidate will have at least four but preferably five toes, speak fluent Mandarin (literacy is not a requirement) weigh between forty and two hundred pounds, breath flames. . . . . .

NEW SILVER LEAVES
Col. Voet

Eugene O. Voet, who served for nearly a year as the 1st Brigade adjutant was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel and given the 1st Brigade executive officer's position this week.

He was promoted Friday afternoon in ceremonies in the office of the brigade commander, Col. Ben H. Ward. His wife and brigade staff officers were present.

Monday, he officially stepped into the executive officer's position vacated by the departure of Lt. Col. Tommy P. Trexler who becomes Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1.

"This is the first time I have been promoted in the United States," Col. Voet said.

"I made first lieutenant in Korea, captain in Germany, and major in the Canal Zone," he remarked.

Prior to his arrival at Fort Benning last spring, Voet held a position in the U. S. Army Southern Command, Fort Amador, Canal Zone.

of the Chapel meeting that was held in the rest area Tuesday noon.

Officials estimated attendance at over 300 men. Said one chapel spokesman, it was an "improved attendance figure over the last retreat."

Gen. Silverthorn termed his visit to the 2nd Division a "tremendous occasion that I will never forget."

"Remember," he said "I was a member of this division before most of you were born."

The general noted that his last visit to the 2nd Division was in the fall of 1941 during field maneuvers in Arkansas.

"My role here today is to impress upon you the importance of professional living — as well as soldiering — on a Christian basis."

World's Fair Part II:

Army Privates See 'The Fair' on Two Dollars Each

By JOE TREASTER

FLUSHING MEADOW, N.Y. — Shortly after the New York World's Fair reopened this spring, a couple of privates from Fort Monmouth, N. J., proved that money isn't essential to having a good time there.

They had come to the Fair in early afternoon and by 10 p.m., sipping beers and munching hot dogs, neither had spent $2 above the initial $2.50 admission fee.

"I guess we spent most of our money on eats," said Pvt. Jerry Henderson, 18. "We've been walking all day. I'm dead tired. But I've seen a lot of the fair and I hardly spent anything."

Henderson said he had spent $1.85. His buddy, Pvt. Ronald Newman, also 18, said he had spent $1.50.

Off To Paris

"We had to see the Fair today," Newman said, "We just finished radio school at Fort Monmouth and tomorrow we're going to Paris. We've both got NATO assignments. I don't know, but a lot of guys say we got a good deal."

Of the scores of attractions the two trooped through, they said the General Electric and General Motors pavilions were their favorites. Admission to both is free.

In both shows the Fair tourist slides into a rocketship seat drawn along a conveyor belt and adjusts a set of individual ear phones.

The ride through General Electric's "Progressland," lasts 45 minutes and takes the passenger through a series of separate theaters, each depicting American home life in the late 19th Century, the 1920s, the '40s and the present.

By Walt Disney

The characters on the stage, according to GE officials, are mechanical imitations of humans, produced by Walt Disney. But they are strikingly life-like. Tune in on this overheard conversation:

"Well, how do you like that. They've made up these people to look like dummies. Yeah, that's what they did. I saw it on Broadway once. I don't know why they do it."

"Don't be silly. Those are just mechanical manikins."

"Yeah, that's not a dummy. I'd stake my life on it. That guy's as real as you and me."

Some people never questioned the authenticity of the actors. They just wandered away from the show believing they'd seen living beings performing.

As the show ends and the crowd leaves its space seats, they move into a giant sky drome where a narrator describes man's historic search to harness energy. Then, with a resounding crack, a nearby atom smasher does its job and the people are led to a close-up look at it.

Exiting the GE pavilion takes a person through a maze of what the Army likes to call static displays.

"Creepy"

One woman who may have enjoyed the show, was annoyed when she couldn't find a fast way out of the pavilion.

"How the hell do you get outa this creepy place," she wanted to know. If anything was creepy it was the woman, not the place.

Undersea Village

At the General Motors pavilion the spectator dips and climbs through a wonderland called "Futurama."

The detailed, look at the technological developments awaiting mankind is a much updated version of the show presented by GM at the 1939 New York World's Fair.

The GM ride starts with a "trip to the moon," where the passenger sees a scale model moon, its craters and canyons dotted with "lunar - crawlers," bulky machines that somewhat resemble Florida swampbuggies, and commuter space ships.

Undersea Village

Then the tourist glides past an all-weather port cut into an Antarctic ice shelf and an aquarium filled with aqua-lung equipped suburbanites enjoying a weekend in an undersea village.

How the desert and jungle may be transformed into liveable places precede the climatic ride past the ultra - modern city of the future.

The GE and GM exhibits are good, but they are only two among more than 150 at the Fair. You could easily spend half a day just seeing these two shows. As has been mentioned before, don't plan to see the Fair in a single day.

Mrs. Sam Hart — Publicity Chairman, Ladies of The Big Indianhead

Backgrounds, Interests Vary in Wives Club Officers

Editor's Note: For the past year the society pages of the 2nd Infantry Division News have carried the constant flow of reportage from the typewriter of Mrs. Alice Witter, publicity chairman for the Officer's Wives Club. Hers was neither an easy nor an enviable position. She was sandwiched between demanding editors and difficult deadlines. The publicity she gained for her organization stands as testimony to her capabilities as a reporter. Over the year we of the 2nd Division News came to regard her as a member of the staff rather than a press agent for the Wives' Club. THANK YOU Alice Witter. With the installation of new officers, she relinquishes her post.

PRESIDENT

Mrs. John W. Gephart, president, is the wife of the commander of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

T. A. Conference.

She counts as her major interests sports, journalism, music, and meeting people.

VICE PRESIDENT

Mrs. Robert H. Kamstra, first vice president, is the wife of Major Kamstra, headquarters commandant of the Second Division; and the mother of a seven-year - old son, Jeff.

7th Cav. Ladies Hold 'Come as You Are' Klatch

The ladies of the 7th Cavalry, proved once more that an army wife isn't always "dressed" for unexpected guests or telephone calls.

Examples of this were seen at a "come as you are" coffee given by Mrs. Henry F. Martin and Mrs. John F. McArdle.

Mrs. Vaden K. Watson won four guest towels for being elected the best sport. Mrs. Watson was wearing a bathrobe and wool socks.

June 8 Set For First Wives Club Summer Coffee

On Tuesday, June 8, the Second Division Officers' Wives Club will hold the first of its summer coffees in the Main Ball Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Assistant hostess, Mrs. Harold J. Cloutier, welcomed the guests with refreshing orange and tomato juices and pineapple and strawberry fruit sticks arrayed on a blossoming table of yellow gladioli and dainty pastries.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Irvin Njus, who will be leaving shortly for Germany. Appropriately enough, Mrs. Njus won the door prize, an attractive curler cap covered with posies.

Mrs. Alfred J. Millard served the coffee and then conducted a brief business meeting. Mrs. Ronald M. Kuhn was announced as the new treasurer and Mrs. William W. Wilson as the new publicity chairman.

Former Indianhead Leads Eleven Into Retirement on Marne Field

A colonel who last served with the 2nd Infantry Division in 1963 Friday led 12 Indianhead men into retirement in ceremonies at Marne Field.

It was the first time in memory that a man assigned elsewhere had retired from service with soldiers of the 2nd Division.

Col. Maurice Holden, 46, director of instruction at the United States Infantry Center, at Fort Benning was granted special permission from the division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, to partitipate.

"Closest Friends"

"Many of my closest friends died serving the 2nd Division," Col. Holden told spectators at the review. "And I gained the greatest personal satisfaction of my Army career during tours with the division. I wanted to retire with the unit I think is the greatest in the United States Army."

Col. Holden served with the division in both World War II and Korea and, before going to the Infantry Center in 1963, was the unit's chief of staff.

When bombs fell on Pearl Harbor the present division commander, Gen. Chiles, was operations officer of a 2nd Division battalion. Col. Holden was his assistant.

300 Years

The 13 retiring men represented more than 300 years of service to the United States.

Of the 12 others retiring, Wallace C. Treadwell, the sergeant major of the division's artillery, was the senior man.

Sgt. Maj. Treadwell, 45, left the service after more than 23 years to become a salesman for Joe Jones Mobile Homes in Columbus.

Friday evening Sgt. Maj. Treadwell was guest of honor at a banquet at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

More than 225 persons were present including his two former military bosses, the past and present division artillery commanders, Col. Burnside E. Huffman Jr., and Col. Tony F. Perpich, and his future boss, Jim Tyra, general manager of the trailer firm.

Retirees

Also retiring were 1st Sgt. Marshall H. Kelly of Headquarters Company, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; 1st. Sgt. Joseph D. Chambers, of Headquarters Company, 1st Brigade; SFC William E. Cannon, Headquarters Company, 2nd Infantry Division; SFC Harold J. Sims, Battery B, 12th Artillery; SSgt. Odell Drum, Company A, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion; SSgt. Loran O. Irvin, Troop A, 7th Cavalry; SSgt. Robert L. Rowe, Battery B, 17th Artillery; Sp6 William C. Montgomery, 2nd Administration Company, and Cpl. Calvin Jackson, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry.

23rd Infantry Now Promotes Wife to SSgt.

"You certainly deserve these staff sergeant's stripes Mrs. Murphy," said the commander of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry during a rather unique promotion ceremony recently.

"You probably have worked just as hard as he has over the past months," added Lt. Col. Strathmore K. McMurdo.

Cora Murphy is the wife of now SSgt. Burke Murphy, a rifle platoon leader in the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry's Company B. She accepted the stripes in place of her recently promoted husband who is currently serving a temporary duty tour and was unable to return to Fort Benning for the promotion.

With those remarks, Col. McMurdo and battalion sergeant major Jesse Easterwood held the gold stripes up to the arms of Mrs. Murphy and passed on the appropriate congratulations.

The ceremony took place in the colonel's office Tuesday.

CO, 1st Sgt. New at 72nd

Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 72d Armor, recently welcomed a new Company Commander, and First Sergeant.

Captain John M. Hayes took over the job of company commander from Captain Michael R. Fortini who is departing for Korea. Captain Hayes was the Bn S-3 Air Officer prior to the new assignment.

1st Sgt. Eugent J. Duncan reported in and to take over from 1st. Sgt. Warren H. Crissman who is being assigned to Company B 1st Battalion 72d Armor. 1st Sgt. Duncan came from U.S. Army, Europe, where he was assigned to Company "C" 2nd Battalion 33rd Armor, 3rd Armor Division.

A Typewriter Portrait:

Leader's Motto Lives for 'Medics'

By DAVE BUMAN

"The Mission And More," is the personal motto of the leather - faced, purposeful man who has made it live in the unit he commands, the 2nd Medical Battalion.

Lt. Col. Jack D. Wallace is scheduled to leave the battalion he has commanded for three years on July 1. He has been assigned to the 9th Hospital Center in Heidelberg, Germany.

Eight Commanders

He has served under eight different commanders of Support Command and three Division Commanders.

Since his arrival in July of 1962, Wallace has served as a Support Command staff officer in addition to his position as battalion commander and it was in this capacity that he devised the FLAG (Forward Logistical Area Group) concept.

Under the direction of Col. John W. Armstrong he served as the first FLAG commander in support of a brigade action during an exercise in November and December, 1963.

It was also under Wallace that the medical battalion was reorganized under the ROAD (Reorganization Of the Army Division) concept, and initiated the first battalion level ART (Advanced Individual Training) program within the Army in four years.

Own Game

In addition to providing medical support, the medical battalion has competed with other units within the division at their own game on their own ground.

The medical battalion under Wallace has had winning teams in almost all sporting events, the latest being the post basketball championship and has taken firsts in marksmanship, marching contests, and numerous other non-medical events.

Under Wallace, the medical battalion has earned the reputation as the most highly trained unit within the division in counter-guerrilla operations riot-control, and civil disturbance actions. They have also had training in river crossing and mountain operations, all of which are far from routine for a medical battalion.

Wallace also initiated integrated officer and non-commissioned officer training programs within his unit to develop an understanding and harmony of operation between his leaders.

The battalion has tested new equipment for the Department of the Army. It also arms the only separate technical supply within Support Command, and boasts 100 per cent supply and maintenance completed.

Latest in firsts for the "Medics" under Col. Wallace was an infantry demonstration, in addition to medical demonstrations and medical support, for the Armed Forces Day activities last week.

"I attribute the success of the battalion to a high esprit-de-corp and a desire to be first in anything they do" said Wallace.

The men of the battalion say differently. They attribute their success as a unit to the leadership of their commander and his active participation in anything the battalion does.

Dan Sweeney's View From Santo Domingo--Concluded

The Imortant Civil Affairs Mission

Editor's Note: This installment concludes Dan Sweeney's account of his brief tour in the strife-torn Dominican Republic. He concludes with his observations of the civil affairs teams operating behind the scenes. Readers will recall that last week's installment covered Sweeney's impressions of the flight to the edge of the battle area, San Isidro.

San Isidro airport saw the huge cargo planes disgorge their cargo of battle-clad troops who immediately joined their units which were already meeting the challenges awaiting them in Santo Domingo.

The sweltering sun beat heavily on the two hangars and made working conditions nearly unbearable.

A member of the 42nd Civil Affairs Company, to which I became attached, met me at the command post headquarters.

He didn't have to say there was a job to be done in the rebel-held capital. The manner in which each team pursued their tasks showed the importance of the Civil Affairs mission.

Functional teams of different sizes were already organized to deal with every facet of social, economic and political life in the civilian community. The organization was flexible in nearly every form.

The teams which dealt with informing, providing and assisting the populace were in full operation. Other teams organized to satisfy requirements in legal matters, governmental affairs and public works projects were either in motion or were working for higher level units in an effort to make the job of the Organization of American States (OAS) easier.

The soldiers of the Civil Affairs company seemed to realize they were United States ambassadors of good-will. It was a trademark they never once forgot.

They couldn't. . It could seemed to go a long way with the people of San Isidro. Despite their friendliness you couldn't help but wonder if they were sympathetic toward our being there. Their faces seemed to reflect the wish that everyone would leave them alone and go home. They knew their government was unstable.

Their people were getting killed in town fighting for a cause, any cause that would give them food to eat and put clothes on their back.

None of them knew the difference between communism or capitalism. They didn't care what they were. The ideologies of each government had no meaning to these underprivileged people.

Most were devout Catholics who practiced their faith daily. In theory, communism denounced every precept of their faith but it had little effect on these poor people.

The devious methods of commmism were at work. There were known Communists in the rebel camp.

They didn't preach how religion would or would not be practiced, but rather spread propaganda against the United States and capitalism by broadcasting equality for all and not just for some. The hope of being elevated from squalor and depravity to a decent standard of living was the only thing anyone cared about.

The Dominican soldiers were seemingly no better off than the people of the town itself. Their uniforms were tattered or torn and any variety of military dress seemed to be acceptable.

There was no uniformity to speak of within the ranks. . .there couldn't be because the soldiers had no money for their uniforms.

Their pathetic story became increasingly evident when the Civil Affairs company moved with the airborne division to a command post area located within the confines of a Dominican Republic military school.

After learning we were to be quartered in an abandoned mess - hall at the school we drove the three light trucks to the building where about ten young Dominican soldiers helped carry the duffel bags and other equipment into the messhall.

The Spanish translators in the company directed the operation to its completion and at the finish the men stood waiting for the scant reward of c-ration candy, cigarettes and gum promised them by the linguists.

Smiles broke out on their faces expressing their thanks for such a charitable offering. I was grateful to be a privileged American.

Elsewhere in the community beyond the gates of the school little children clustered in the streets clad only in a pair of shorts. Smaller children wore nothing.

That day the Civil Affairs people had accomplished many missions: a hospital was scrubbed down, a radio station was established and ten tons of rice and navy peas were distributed to thousands of Dominicans who gathered at distribution points in Santo Domingo.

At the close of the day I reaffirmed my earlier convictions. There was a job to be done in the rebel-held capital and I knew the importance of a Civil Affairs mission.

Sola Picked As Headquarters Commandant

Maj. Gerald C. Sola—former training and operations chief for the 1st Brigade — will assume the position of 2nd Division Headquarters commandant it was announced last week.

Sola, who arrived at Fort Benning in early August last year, spent two months of his chief controller in the division operations center for the 11th Air Assault Division during the Air Assault II maneuver last fall.

"This has to be considered the most rewarding position I have ever held," Sola said commenting on his tour of duty with the 1st Brigade, "I have learned a tremendous amount of valuable information — and it has been thoroughly enjoyable."

Maj. Sola entered the Army as an enlisted man in 1943, and was given a battlefield commission while in Italy during World War II to become the youngest lieutenant in his division at age 19.

He attended Georgia Tech in 1947, and returned to active duty in 1951.

In 1960, Maj. Sola was the information officer for V Corps in Frankfurt, Germany. He also served a tour with the Armed Forces Radio Network in Germany prior to his arrival at Fort Benning.

Sola's successor as the brigade S-3 officer has not as yet been named.

12th Artillery Undergoes Air--Rail Loading

The work of remaining a combat ready unit goes on in the 2nd Infantry Division.

Last week the 12th Artillery Battalion, underwent rail and air loading exercises.

According to battalion planning officials the purpose of the exercise is to familiarize the men of the unit with the techniques of loading and lashing vehicles and equipment prior to "moving out."

The men loaded everything from the one-quarter ton jeep to the huge Honest John Rocket launcer truck.

Capt. James A. Westmoreland was the air loading instructor while Capt. Joseph L. Pitts handled the rail loading instruction.

Sites for the two-day training was Wilson Field near Lawson Air Field where mockups of actual cargo aircraft are provided for training. The Division railhead was the scene for the rail loading portion.

ARTY PROMOTES

Twelve members of the 12th Artillery were recently promoted.

Promoted to Specialist 5 was John A. Horner of A Battery. Those raised to Specialist 4 are John F. Weir, Frederick A. Ziehmer, and James A. Helton of Headquarters Battery; Thomas J. Cacaci, Thomas J. McCarthy Jr., Samuel L. Puryear Jr. and William Prendergast of Battery A; William Vertalino, David A. Passmore, Pat A. Penna, and Eugene H. Shelton of Battery B.

FROM the cement pad which was all that was left of the Patton Officers Club destroyed by fire some five years ago, has arisen this white frame building to occupy the enlisted men of the division in their off-duty moments. It is nestled in the pine trees just off the 4th tee of the Sand Hill Golf course. Company C, 2nd Engineer Battalion is doing the principal construction on the new club.

New Enlisted Club-- A Progress Report

AND this is where the new bar will be when the new Patton House Enlisted Men's Club is completed. Target date for completion is the middle of July.

New Maintenance Team Disowns Inspection Name--Spots Problems

A new inovation in the division is a Maintenance Management Assistance Team under the direction of the Material Readiness Officer, Col. Fred O. Jackson, and under the control of CWO Henry Galloway.

"We shy away from the word inspection," says Galloway, "but that's what we are set up to do; only for information purposes however. The purpose of our team is to spot check areas in the division for automotive, armament, engineer and signal maintenance, and to make the unit commander aware of possible problem areas."

Galloway went on to say "Our only mission is to maintain the division in a state of combat readiness, not to prepare units for further inspections."

"Once the surprise inspection has been conducted, the equipment is scored on a point basis similar to the system used by the Third Army Command Material Maintenance Inspection Team," he said, "and the unit is advised as to the state of it's readiness.

"If the unit should need assistance in correcting deficiences or short - comings, we are prepared to provide on the spot maintenance, or set a time when help can be provided.

"We're not going to do the work for them, but we realize that they may need help, and that's what we're in business for," said Galloway.

"If we can't help them, we can at least point the units to the people who can.

Only in operation a little more than a week, the MMAT has already inspected six units throughout the division, and expects to visit every unit and back again.

1st of the 23rd Set to Retire WW II Vet

A retirement ceremony for Col. Henry G. Spencer, former commander of the division's 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, will be held at 10:00 o'clock this morning at Wetherby Field.

The colonel, who's last assignment was as director of the Command and General Staff Department of the Kansas City United States Army Reserve School, had specifically asked to be retired by the unit with which he served during World War II. This is the second such unusual request for retirement in the past two weeks.

While serving with the Indianhead Division during World War II, as battalion commander, Col. Spencer earned the coveted Silver Star near St. Lo, France by personally "crashing a heavy barrage of enemy fire —both mortar and artillery— to direct artillery shelling that silenced enemy batteries."

He was seriously wounded during the fight.

After recovering from the wounds he was given command of the 1st Battalion, 406th Infantry in 1947.

Division Trounced in Lop-Sided Loses

Center Troop Command rode the big bat of Howard Vandersea to a 13-3 win over 1st Brigade Tuesday night at Bennett Field.

Vandersea slammed a home run, triple, and double, driving in six runs. His two run homer in the third broke a 2-2 tie and gave CTC a lead they never relinquished.

The win moved CTC to within a half game of the first place 528th Medical Battalion.

CTC scored twice in the first inning. Joe Carrino reached first on an error and went to second on a single by Elio Amaro. Floyd Wicker drove both runners home with a single to left.

Bounced Back

First Brigade bounced back to tie it in the bottom half of the inning. With the bases loaded and two out, center fielder Gus Banks beat out a hit over the pitchers head, two runs scoring.

After Vandersea's homer, CTC padded their lead with a five run outburst in the 5th. With one out, Bill Nordan walked, Wicker was hit by a pitch, and Vandersea drove Nordan home with a ground rule double. Bill Penny drove two more runs across with a single. The two runs of the inning came across as a result of an error and wild pitch.

Four more runs in the 7th gave CTC a ten run lead and shortened the game to seven innings. A three run triple by Vandersea highlighted the inning.

Jim Mundy was the winning hurler. After a shaky start he settled down to breeze to victory. Mundy fanned eight and allowed only three hits.

FRIDAY NIGHT

Center Troop Command exploded for six runs in the 5th inning to break up a scoreless pitching duel and go on to defeat Support Command 9-0, Friday night.

For four and two-thirds innings Support Command right hander, Ronald Rahr, was near perfect. He had given up but one hit and had fanned nine men.

With two out in the 5th, Rahr walked CTC hurler Art Hankinson. An error on a ball hit by Joe Carrino put two men on. Elio Amaro and Bill Norden followed with safeties driving two runs home. Floyd Wicker walked loading the bases. Howard Vandersea followed with the key hit of the inning, a three run double to right field. Vandersea scored the sixth and final run of the inning a moment later when Doug Gasher singled.

Run in 7th

CTC added a run in the 7th, when Amaro walked and came around to score. Two more came across in the 9th on hits by Carrino and Nordan.

Support Command could do nothing with CTC hurler Hankinson. He fanned six, walked only two and was never in trouble.

Earle Smith singled in the first. Ted Skonenzy was safe on an error and got as far as third in the 7th and catcher Robert Stringer singled in the 8th, as Hankinson's slants checked Support Command all night.

Rahr, except for the disastrous 5th, pitched creditably. He fanned 17 batters.

It was the second straight loss for Support Command after they had opened the season by winning their first two games.

CTC improved their record to 3-1 to remain close on the heels of the 428th Medical Battalion.

MEDICS WIN

The undefeated 428th Medical Battalion inched from behind to defeat a surprised 3rd Brigade team last week.

Fighting to protect an unblemished record and top spot in league play, the Medics moved from an early 3-1 deficit to forge ahead with a run in the 7th. They added another run in the 8th and two more in the 9th to ice the game.

The Medics jumped into a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Davis opened the inning with a walk and Joe Gragg promptly drove him home with a long double.

Third Brigade bounced back to tie it in the 3rd on singles by John Hundley and Charles Bolen, coupled with a force out.

Double

A double by Dick Lipps, a walk to Wilfred Lindo and a single by Hundley accounted for two runs in the 4th, giving the Brigade the lead.

It was short lived though. A throwing error by Lipps in the 5th gave the Medics a run, and they tied it in the 6th on a single by winning hurler Waiss.

Hundley Hits

Hundley with three hits led the Brigade. Bolen and Ramon Castro had two hits.

Waiss, seemingly getting stronger as the game progressed, was the winning pitcher. He scattered 11 hits, shutting the Brigade out over the last five innings.

The Aftermath

Second Division's baseball season opened with 1st Brigade hosting Division Artillery.

In the nearly four hours it took to play the game, the two teams scored 26 runs and pounded out 38 hits.

Events have changed only slightly since then. Scores of 16-10, 10-9, 13-5, and 9-6 attest to this.

The majority of the fault lies with the pitching staffs. They have been sub-par. Sub-par to Main Post pitching staffs, and sub-par to the Division hitters.

Only two Division pitchers have shown any signs of consistency. Ronald Rahr, former property of the Pittsburgh Pirates, of Support Command, and Lu Menter, 3rd Brigade right hander.

A third pitcher, DivArty's Frank Bumpers, pitched a strong game in beating Support Command 17-1.

These have been exceptions, though. In general the games have been high scoring, long ball hitting affairs.

Pitching seems to be the department where Main Post teams have the edge over division teams. Their staffs are deeper and more consistant.

Unless the division teams come up with more consistant pitching they will have trouble competing with such teams as, the 428th Medical Battalion and Center Troop Command in league play.

Although the pitching has been bad, numerous errors haven't helped. Easy ground balls have been booted and pop flies have dropped for hits. In recent games the fielding has improved considerably.

Hitting is a different story. Odie Davis and Charles Kelley of DivArty; Lu Menter, Fred Crittenden, and Charlie Bolen of 3rd Brigade; Elifa Ostalaza and Rudy Hills of 1st Brigade, and Ted Skonenzy of Support Command are just a few of the hitters who swing a good bat in the Division.

Davis and Menter are hitting over 500. Davis batted in four runs in one game and five in another. His counter part Kelly drove home four in one game.

Unless things change — the hurlers improve or new faces appear on the mound — it's going to be a summer for hitters in the "Indianhead" Division.

Attendance Slight

With the exception of opening night, attendance at Bennett Field for Division baseball games has been skimpy.

It increased some when Main Post teams began playing here, but not appreciably.

The undefeated 148th Medical Battalion from Main Post brought a large and noisy cheering section when they played. However, it was doubtful if the enthusiasm was for the team or because a PX truck was there selling beer.

Support Command is assured of at least three spectaters when they play, Col. Fred Jackson, Support Commander, his wife and daughter have been there for all Support Command games.

GEN. KINNARD DECORATES CWO ROOP With Soldiers Medal For Heroism

Highest Peacetime Award

Pilot Presented Soldiers Medal

A helicopter pilot who risked his life to save several soldiers from a burning helicopter was awarded the Soldiers Medal for heroic action at Fort Benning this week.

CWO Frank Roop of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion was presented the nations highest peacetime award by Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general, 11th Air Assault Division.

CWO Roop was the pilot of a helicopter in a flight of four aircraft when the lead aircraft, fully loaded with troops, crashed into a wooded area immediately after takeoff. CWO Roop immediately landed his aircraft, and with a fire extinguisher, ran to the downed aircraft to assist with the evacuation of wounded personnel.

Ignoring the impending danger of a fuel explosion and with complete disregard for his own safety, he pulled injured crew members out of the wreckage dispite a ruptured fuel cell (Tank) and the still running engine of the downed aircraft.

CWO Roop worked throughout this entire hazardous situation until all passengers and crew members had been evacuated and out of danger.

Other awards made at the ceremony include the Bronze Star presented to Sgt. Leonard F. Shaw for his services in the Republic of Viet Nam.

The citation read in part:

17th's Caribous Transport LOH

Another Army aviation first was scored recently by the 10th Air Transport Brigade's 17th Aviation Company.

Two caribous transported a partially dismounted OH-4A helicopter from Fort Rucker, Ala. to Deer Vally Airport in Phoenix, Ariz.

The OH-4A is Bell Helicopter's entry in the LOH race. It was transported to Arizona for the U.S. Army Board for Aviation Accident Research.

The caribous made the 1550 mile trip in 11 hours and 40 minutes. The crews were headed by Capt. Harold J. Lansing, company operations officer. They also included CWO Frederick Cullen, WO Phillip Byrnes, WO Henry Swan and crewchiefs Spc Jose Cargia and Sp4 James Longlee.

Heavy Tropical Rains Flood Dominican Base

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC (Delayed) . . . Extremely heavy tropical rains beat down on the men of the 229th Task Force, flooding their San Isidro Air Base headquarters.

At about 2:00 p.m. Sunday (May 16) the skys literally opened on the Sky Soldiers causing them to take emergency action to prevent extensive damage to their equipment and personal property.

The rains fell steadily for approximately two hours bringing the height of the water to as much as a foot or more in some areas.

Despite the preparations taken by the men nearly all of their tents became flooded. They were victims of the deluge due to the flat and unbroken nature of the land on which their air base headquarters is located.

As the rain began to fall the men saw it only as a welcome change from the extremely humid heat which had been their constant companion since arriving in the island republic.

As the storm continued it soon became apparent that the situation was rapidly developing into flood proportions. By unspoken command the men's attitude toward the cooling rain abruptly changed and rapid action and thoughtfulness saved valuable task force equipment from becoming badly water damaged.

The men quickly placed all equipment and personal gear upon hastely assembled racks up out of the foot-deep water and covered these caches with ponchos.

Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, task force commaner, made a rapid inspection of the bivouac area and immediately assessed the possible dangers of the flood waters to the health of his men and the safeguarding of supplies and equipment.

Men were rapidly organized into teams to relocate all flooded tents to an area above the flooding. Every man available, both officers and enlisted men, pitched in a combined effort and before nightfall some one dozen water sodden and brutally heavy tents were broken down, moved and reerected.

The next morning beamed clearer and the camp was cleaned up, tents aligned and more securely pegged down. Once again life returned to the orderly business of assisting the people of the revolt torn Republic toward peace and order.

ON THE SCENE

For a story in pictures from the Air Assault task force in the Dominican Republic please see page 38.

TAKING TO HIGH GROUND . . . As tropical storms push him from his tent, a 229th lieutenant floats his equipment to some higher and dryer location.

Cavalry Returns For Brief Stay

By Chuck Lowenhagen

The 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry returned Wednesday afternoon from Fort Campbell, Ky., and exercise RED CHIP VI.

Tuesday afternoon the cavalrymen joined paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division and tactical Air Force jet support for a live fire demonstration for the Joint Civilian Orientation Conference (JCOC).

Tuesday morning, twelve of the helicopters were used to transport high ranking civilian and military personnel to the live fire show. Among those on hand were Gen. Paul D. Addams, commanding general of the U.S. Strike Command; Third Army Commander, Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich and Maj. Gen. Beverly E. Powell, 101st Airborne and Fort Campbell commander. Also on hand was Columbus Mayor B. Ed Johnson.

Earlier in the week the pilots of the air cavalry continued their practice seasions prior to the live fire demonstration.

The pilots spent most of the day Monday practicing auto-rotations, the method of safely landing a stalled aircraft. Crewchiefs spent their hours by painting and cleaning their aircraft for Tuesdays event.

Monday night the 17th Cavalry played host to civilian dignitaries from the local communities. Clarksville, Tenn. was represented by their Mayor, Charles Crow and Mr. Coy Baggett, chairman of the Clarksville military affairs committee. Luther Cowheard, mayor protem of Hopkinsville, Ky. and Mr. Jess Hammond, chairman of the Hopkinsville military affairs committee represented their city. They were hosted by the Cavalry's Sgt. Maj. Lawrence Kennedy and were shown all 11th Air Assault Division elements on the scene at Fort Campbell.

On Sunday about 40 of the cavalry enlisted men were given a day off and were flown to the Cherokee State Park on the west side of Kentucky Lake for a day of swimming and sunshine. They were "chaperoned" by Chap. (Maj.) Harry Truss, the 17th Cavalry chaplain.

Following a brief stay at Fort Benning the Cavalrymen will return to Kentucky, this time to Fort Knox for an aircraft armament display to be viewed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and students of the Armor School.

KIWANIANS LOOK WITH INTEREST
As Air Assault Infantrymen Show Their Stuff

Local Kiwanis Club Views Infantry Action

Members of the Columbus Chapter of the Kiwanis Club were given an inside look at the 11th Air Assault Division this week.

They were hosted by Brig. Gen. John M. Wright, a member of the local organization, and Col. William R. Lynch and his men of the 2nd Air Assault Brigade.

The Kiwanians' first hand look at air assault began at the Kelley Hill theater where the men were welcomed and shown a 30 minute film on air assault operations.

Having seen the film version of the air assault story the Kiwanians were then transported to Essenbagger Field where they could see the real thing.

First they examined a static display of unique air assault equipment. They saw the giant CH-54 Flying Crane, UH-1B and D helicopters, the small OH-13 Sioux helicopter and the muscular little MULE, a light weapons carrier.

From that point the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry took charge of the show with a rousing demonstration of the air assault infantry platoon.

The makeup of the platoon was explained and then the Sky Soldiers went to work making an all out assault of an objective to their guests front.

After an initial softening up by 81mm mortars, 90mm recoilless rifles and machine gun fire, the infantrymen began their fire and maneuver.

Included in the infantry assault was a demonstration of rapelling using various methods and rappelling rigs.

Following the demonstration the Kiwanis Club members were invited to chow at the 2nd Brigade Headquarters Company.

In all the club members were given an enlightened view of the Air Assault and its vital role of putting the Sky Soldier infantryman into action.

This was the first time that any LOH has been transported by Army Caribou.

Memphis Gets Unexpected Treat During Armed Forces Day Show

The people of Memphis, Tenn. got an unexpected treat on Armed Forces Day with the display of a UH-1B helicopter mounting the XM-3 rocket system.

This marked the first time that Memphians had had the opportunity to view an armed helicopter. Being primarily Navy oriented due to the location of a Naval Air Station there, and because they rarely have the opportunity to see any Army aircraft.

The people of Memphis enthusiastically received the helicopter and its crew. The helicopter is assigned to Battery C, 3rd Battalion, 377th Artillery commanded by Maj. William F. Koehler. It was piloted to Memphis by Captains Richard B. Washburn and Francisco Trevino Jr. and crewed by Sp5 Robert S. Whitlock.

The Armed Forces Day activities centered around a static display featuring the aircraft currently employed in Vietnam. At 4 p.m. a fly-by of Army aircraft was conducted from the Naval Air Station to the Downtown Airport. Participating in this fly-by were an 01 Bird Dog, a U6 Beaver a CV2 Caribou, an OH-13 Sioux, and the UH-1B Iroquois.

An impromptu air show was subsequently held at the airport with each aircraft demonstrating its short take-off and landing characteristics. The "Huey" was then taken to Jeff Davis Park in downtown Memphis where it was again viewed by hundreds of interested and curious people.

The Air Force Reserve conducted an open house and static display the following day, Sunday, at the Metropolitan Airport. Once again the crowds came out to see the various aircraft on display, especially the UH-1B helicopter which they've heard so much about lately in the role it plays in South Vietnam. They were pleased to be able to get a close look at the helicopter and question its crew as to its capabilities and advantages, thereby ascertaining for themselves that the UH-1B especially with the XM-3 rocket system installed is a very useful and effective weapon.

Atlanta Depot Maintenance Tour Division

Monday and Tuesday, the 11th played host to approximately fifty NCO's from the 14th Aircraft Depot Battalion, Atlanta Army Depot.

The visitors were given a tour of the Division helipads and also visited the separate maintenance units in the 11th.

On hand to welcome the visiting NCO's, were Brig. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., assistant division commander and Sgt. Maj. Chester R. Westerveldt, division sergeant major.

Gen. Wright gave a short briefing and stressed that while on this tour, the men should always be ready to compare ideas and make any suggestions on improvements that might be made.

In 1964 the Air Assault maintenance battalions were guests of the 14th in Atlanta, and were given approximately the same type tour.

Through his untiring efforts and professional ability, he consistantly obtained outstanding results. He was quick to grasp the implications of new problems with which he was faced as a result of the ever changing situation inherent in a counterinsurgency operation and to find ways and means to solve these problems.

Other decorations presented were Army Commendation Medals to Sp4 Raymond Saucier and Sp4 Reginald London. The Purple Heart was awarded to Sp5 Terry Bisbee for wounds suffered in Viet Nam.

During Escape and Evasion

A Compass, Map and Password; Only Tools for Avoiding Capture

The "Eagles" of the 188th Infantry have started their annual Escape and Evasion refreshing training.

This week Company C and Company D faced each other in the course. The Delta Dogs, members of the mortar platoon, led by their Company Commander, Capt. Theodore S. Danielsen, crossed enemy territory and after evading capture in one of the roughest areas in the reservation reassembled behind the aggressor lines. Charlie Company's "Road-runners" acted as aggressors and prison guards.

The mortarmen traveled in small groups with a compass, a map, and a password that, if given to a partisan in civilian clothes, would be a passport to safety, but if the group arrived by mistake at the wrong outpost and gave the wrong password, it was captured and taken to the compound.

Helping the "Roadrunners" were members of the Scout Section of Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, directed by SSgt. Donald C. Vaughn, who acted as mobile patrols running their two jeeps along the roads crossing the area.

Of those that ended in the compound, the prison guards tried to extract information other than that covered in the Military Code of Conduct. In spite of the harassment none gave anything more than name, rank, serial number and date of birth.

The methods used by the interrogators were psychological, similar to those used by the Communists in their attempts to brainwash prisoners; the shock of cold water, the bright light shining in the eyes, the exhaustion after innumerable repetitions of hazardous exercise, and over all the persistent and persuasive voice of the questioner.

The most exciting part of the night happened at 2:45 a.m. when the first sergeant of Delta Company was captured. The commander of the compound and the aggressor forces, Capt. William H. Smith, having learned that the company commander of the Delta Dogs was running the course with his First Sergeant, ordered his outposts and roving patrols in that area to close into the area where 1Sgt. Gilberto Viera had been captured, but to no avail. Capt. Danielsen had slipped out of the noose.

At 7:30 a.m. the problem was declared finished and the troops returned to garrison.

On Monday night the situation was reversed and Charlie Company ran the course while the Delta Dogs manned the compound and attempted to capture the Road Runners but with little success.

Mrs. Hennessey thanked the hostesses for their work on the luncheon. Hostesses were Mrs. Samuel J. Merrill, wife of the Brigade S-1 officer, Mrs. Weldon F. Wright, wife of the Brigade Chaplain, and Mrs. John G. Coombs, wife of the assistant S-1 officer.

The luncheon menu consisted of roast beef sandwiches, German potato salad, assorted pickles and strawberry cream pie.

Mrs. Hennessey also announced that hostesses for the June coffee will be Mrs. Guy A. Eberhardt, Mrs. Stephen Klein and Mrs. Harry V. Smith.

Attending the Tuesday affair were Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Alfred C. Smith, Mrs. Gilford, Mrs. Klein, Mrs. Eberhardt, Mrs. Merrill, Mrs. Lord, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Hennessey, Mrs. Herbert R. Seidl, Mrs. Adolphus Hinton, Mrs. Harold G. Keebaugh, Mrs. Paul G. Cerjan, Mrs. Robert D. Merkle, Mrs. Wilmot A. Hall, Mrs. Kuiper and Mrs. John L. Pope.

187th TAC Has 'Daisy' Decoration

"Please Don't Eat the Daisies" was the theme used for the May coffee for ladies of the 187th Transport Airplane Company.

Centerpiece for the coffee table in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess was a Maypole surrounded by an arrangement of large white daisies, and nametags were decorated with small daisy cutouts to further carry out the theme.

After coffee had been served, Mrs. W. B. Anderson, wife of the company commander, held a brief business meeting and welcomed the many newcomers to the company. Attending a 187th TAC coffee for the first time were: Mrs. James Yandell, Mrs. Donald Brewer, Mrs. Terry Hamby, Mrs. Carl Carlson, Mrs. Joe Pope, and Mrs. Robert Caron.

Hostesses for the coffee were: Mrs. John Burden, Mrs. Gilbert Roesler, and Mrs. Leroy Jones.

2nd Bde Coffee Has May Theme

A Maypole on the dining table created the theme for the 2nd Brigade headquarters' wives' coffee at the home of Mrs. R. A. Brown.

May flowers of ribbon decorated the name tags and large arrangements of May flowers were displayed through out the house and the patio.

Co-hostesses with Mrs. Brown were Mrs. F. C. Walsh and Mrs. H. J. Brady.

Mrs. W. R. Lynch presided at a short business meeting. Mrs. R. L. Kuiper and Mrs. W. F. Lundberg were introduced as new members and farewells were said to Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. C. Christie.

New arrivals Mrs. Richard K. Anderson and Mrs. Jack L. Martin were welcomed. Farewells were said to Mrs. Edwin L. Adair, Mrs. Louis H. Guernsey, Mrs. Arnold Heller, Mrs. Grady L. Jeter, Mrs. Richard J. Snyder, Mrs. Victor I. Spear and Mrs. Jay Fish.

Election of officers for the coming year was held and the following ladies were selected: president, Mrs. Reginald C. Thomas; vice-president, Mrs. John M. Haas; recording secretary, Mrs. Leslie A. Arneson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Donald M. Callahan; treasurer, Mrs. Edgar B. Smith; and assistant treasurer, Mrs. Ronald Hinds.

It was announced that the next meeting will be a coffee on June 11 at the Custer Terrace Club.

Ideal Location Found For Group's Coffee

The balcony of the Main Officers' Open Mess was the ideal location for the latest coffee held by the ladies of the Headquarters 11th Aviation Group. It was cool and quiet which is very pleasant during the hot summer months.

Mrs. Strickland and Mrs. Parrish, hostesses for the coffee, added to this mood by selecting cool mint hues for the Carnation nametags. The floral arrangement on the serving table was in pastel colors with a vivid accent of chinese red Gladiolas.

The business portion of the meeting was conducted by Mrs. George Beatty, wife of the Group commander. Announcements of special interest to the wives were made.

Welcomed was Mrs. James C. Peck, who is a new member of the ladies "Coffee Calls." She is not a true newcomer since her husband was previously with the 229th Helicopter Bn. and they are both known to many members of the Aviation Group.

Plans were made at this time for the next coffee to be held in June.

711th Coffee Held

Mrs. G. M. Stagg and Mrs. Nathan Perry were co-hostesses for the 711th Maintenance coffee held in the Normandy Room at the Main Officer's Open Mess.

A lovely spring theme was carried out in a beautiful floral display and refreshments.

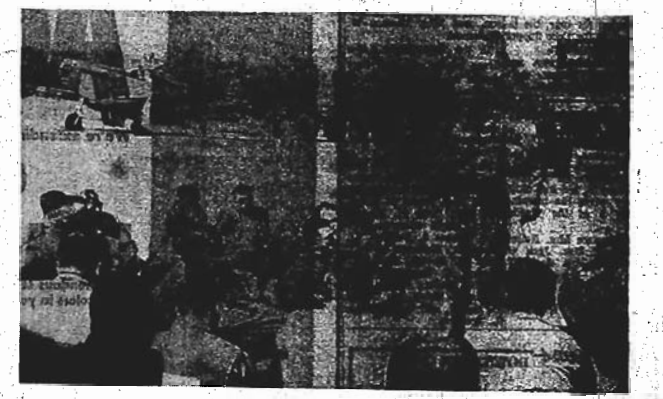
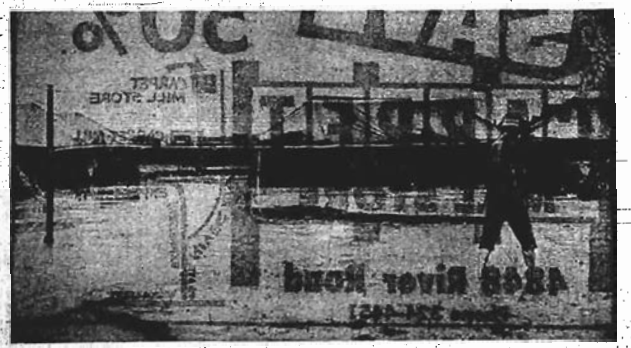
Sky Soldiers learn a "Swabby's" trade while enroute to their mission in the strife torn Dominican Republic aboard the aircraft carrier USS Guadalcanal. The sailors instructed the 229th task force in the necessary emergency fire fighting skills.



At their San Isidro air base headquarters the men of the "Stacked Deck" are kept abreast of the situation by their commander, Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan. Their mission is to help return peace and order to the people of the island republic.



Without warning the South American sky burst forth with torrents of rain, flooding the Sky Soldier's camp. This volleyball court was quickly transformed into a swampy "wading pool" by the merciless tropical storm.

An Aviator Asks, "Where Are All the Dash-Tens?"

BY CAPT.
JOE SMITHERMAN
Platoon Leader
228th Assault Helicopter

Ever since my first association with Army Aviation, I've heard, "Every Army aviator is authorized an operations manual for each aircraft in which he is qualified."

Not only is he authorized this manual but his life and others depend upon it.

Precious few aviators have in their hands that most important manual.

Where, then, have all the Dash-Tens gone?

Some lie dusting on the shelves of the publication center in St. Louis, just aching to be requested. Some lie in desk drawers of those that haven't the slightest use for the information but admire the pretty pictures.

The worst fate of all belongs to the books that lie lost and forgotten in the bottom of an aviators locker of professional books still unpacked from his change of station.

Those forgotten manuals belong to the aviators of the 'Lazy Set'. You can spot them with a most casual observation.

The 'Lazy Set' includes those aviators that have a large stack of Jepp changes to be posted, those that have to rely on Joe Alwaysready for a flashlight for the nocturnal adventure, those that have to spend precious time searching the dark neglected corners of their minds for procedures when an emergency rears its ugly head.

Repent!! The day of reckoning may be nearer than you think.

Yea, for within those musty pages are many things that can save your neck. Not only can you find performance data, limitations, discriptions of equipment and normal operation procedures, but those all important red - bordered pages of emergency procedures.

In a situation such an ours (228th's) with all the aircraft grounded and aviators gaining time in borrowed aircraft for proficiency and minimums, we find ourselves in an aircraft that normal and emergency procedures are not fresh in our minds.

Pause, if you will, and dig out that dash ten. Dust it off and read it. It could be the best time investment you've ever made.

Mohawks Pitting Skill With Mountain Areas

Army Mohawk pilots continues to pit their skill with their highly versatile aircraft against a course laid out in some of the roughest country in the Rocky Mountains.

The pilots of the 228th Aerial Surveillance and Escort Battalion are now engaged in a tri-service test being conducted at Fallon Naval Air Station, Nev.

Scientists and military observers tabulated performance data taken from electronic apparatus on the aircraft, airborne tracking stations, and from pilot debriefing interviews. This information, gathered from the best aviation efforts of the Army, Navy and Air Force in this and subsequent tests will provide planning data for the Department of Defense in deployment of future tactics, training and air platform for the complex battle fields of the future.

"A highly professional aviation unit . . . men go about their tasks in a traditionally professional manner of a seasoned, well coordinated unit," said Navy Capt. J. D. Ramage of the Fallon Naval Air Station. He was speaking to Col. George S. Beaty, commanding officer of the 11th Aviation Group who was on an inspection trip from Fort Benning.

The idea of the test is to determine, "How Low Is Low." The rugged Mohawks have proved themselves equal to the task of steep climbs and descent only a few feet from the surface of the mountainous tracts.

The pilots have found the basic problem of flying the nap of the earth in the mountains no less demanding than the tree top level helicopter escort and surveillance support they have been giving the 11th Air Assault Division for the past two years.

First Army Fixed Wing Transport Aviation Company Marks Completion of Its 10th Active Year Tomorrow

The Army's first fixed wing transport aviation company will mark its tenth anniversary tomorrow.

The history of the 1st Aviation Company is filled with numerous outstanding events, many of them firsts for Army aviation.

First formed at Fort Riley, Kan., as the 14th Aviation Company, the unit's mission was to provide combat support through tactical air supply with the well known U-1A Otter.

The youthful company participated in exercise SAGEBRUSH in Louisiana and the Army Electronics Systems Test I in Arizona prior to receiving it organic aircraft.

One distinguished Flying Cross and four commandation ribbons were awarded to members of the company for their part in an air rescue operation that took place in early July, 1956, while the unit was in Arizona.

Two commercial airliners, carrying a total of 128 passengers, were overdue. The company sent nine of its aircraft to join the search. The Secretary of the Army, then the Honorable Mr. Brucker, cited the pilots during a ceremony held at the White House.

The 14th Aviation Company was reaching maturity and in August of 1956 it was officially redesignated the 1st Aviation Company. With the new name came a new home Fort Benning's Infantry Center. Many flights were made for Airborne, Pathfinder and Ranger Schools.

On May 15, 1958 ceremonys were held at Lawson Army Airfield to commend the unit for flying 10,000 accident free hours from Sept., 1956 to May, 1958.

In 1962, now nearly seven years old, the unit prepared for operation Big Moose. In the company's own words, "This was it." The 1st Aviation Company now under the command of Maj. William G. Hooks, would flight deliver their eighteen Caribous to Korat, Thailand via the North Atlantic route and Europe. The 11,000 mile flight marked the first fly away deployment of an Army Aviation unit to an overseas destination. The flight would take approximately 90 flying hours.

On Jan. 1, 1963 the company moved oer to Vung Tau, South Vietnam in support of the US and South Vietnamese forces.

Some of their more unusual missions were the carrying of 5,000 pounds of sweet potato vines for for planting loads of cows, pigs, chickens and ducks to locations where food was critically short. In one instance the people of an entire village and their personal possessions were moved to a new location to preclude being over run by Viet Cong forces.

In late 1963, the 1st now under the command of Maj. Kenneth N. Blake received orders to return to their home here at Fort Benning to be assigned to the 37th Air Transport Battalion of the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Although the 1st Aviation Company brought back only nine Caribous (the remaining were transferred to other units in Vietnam) this was indeed another first in the annals of Army aviation. Not only was the company the first to flight deliver their aircraft from the U. S. to an overseas destination as a unit, but now they were the first to undertake the reverse procedure.

Under the command of Maj. William M. Jenkins, Jr., the 1st participated in the Army's largest peacetime manuever, Air Assault II, in North and South Carolina.

During this period the unit lived in tents under tactical conditions. It provided a continuous 24 hour line of communications in all weather conditions while operating out of 50 or 60 different unimproved field sites.

During this period the unit aircraft maintenance personnel attained an enviable record by averaging 89.9 percent flyable aircraft.

Upon its return from Air Assault II, the company came under command of Maj. Paul L. Stansel, a fomer memer of the Company, in Vietnam.

His aviators were praised for having accumulated their second 10,000 hours of accident free flying.

Maj. Stansel lead a unit mission of ferrying three Caribous to Vietnam via the Pacific route. The major was joined by Capt. Henry H. Smith and Capt. Marvin E. Childers.

On April 26, 1965 the company was reorganized, incorporated a new TO&E which reduced the unit strength from 265 to 158 personnel with 38 aviators. The company's former executive officer, Maj. Charles R. Jones was placed in command.

This is where the unit stands on its tenth anniversary. Tomorrow the day will be marked with a special party that will begin at 10:00 a.m.

38th Marnemen Are Hosts To CAR Course Students

Sky Soldier Marnemen of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry acted as hosts for three days to six student officers from the Infantry Officer Career Course.

Following a briefing by Maj. Elwood W. Brown, concerning the battalion's mission, structure and training procedures, the group was flown to the field to engage in air assault tactical training.

Making a helicopter flight into the K Training Area, the student officers observed field tactical training by Company A, under the command of Capt. Jack B. Glenn.

After an explanation of the problem by Capt. Glenn, the six visitors joined the company for an attack operation, and participated in the subsequent organization and consolidation of the objective.

On the second day, they were briefed by Maj. Cecil M. Henry on the functions of an air assault operations center, and were then introduced to Capt. Walter B. Tully of Company D, who discussed the mission and structure of the combat support company, covering in detail the activities of the mortar platoon and the reconnaissance platoon.

The group was then introduced to the peculiarities and diversified roles of the air assault Infantry headquarters company as described by Capt. Milton L. Baker.

On the final day of their visit, they accompanied Capt. Julian B. Turner and Company B during the defensive phase of a tactical operation and participated in the occupation or a combat outpost line.

During this particular phase of the problem, they were able to observe the digging-in of weapons and personnel, camouflage procedures, and extensive daylight patrolling.

Upon their return, the student officers engaged in a special conference with members of the battalion staff and the company commanders regarding problems in personnel, logistics, administration and standard operating procedures while addressing questions to appropriate officers.

First Such Trial

Aerial 'Rocketeers' Primed for ATT's

The aerial rocket artillerymen of the 377th Artillery have recently arrived at Fort Stewart, Ga. to undergo their Army Training Tests.

The tests, to be given during the first week in June, will be the first such test given to aerial rocket batteries and will be used to develop and set standards for future testing.

The battalion's aircraft and men have established a base of operations at Fort Stewart's Liberty Army Airfield and preparations have begun for practice training tests.

The pre-test training will include familiarization firing of the 2.75 inch M-3 rocket system and both day and night low level navigation with emphasis placed on battery and platoon tactics.

In addition to normal training, the batteries will participate in tests to determine fragmentation effects of the 2.75 inch rockets fired at area targets containing simulated personnel in various patterns and environments.

The 377th's Headquarters Battery will support the other firing batteries during the pre - test practice sessions. Various members of the battery will act as both controllers and umpires during their stay.

The 377th will complete its first annual Training Test on June 3 and the first battalion elements will return to Fort Benning on June 4.

Top Card Shark Defys Hoyle For 187's Men

Men of the 187th Transport Airplane Company recently attended a very interesting and enlightening class presented by Mr. William S. Wright, prominent Columbus businessman.

His class was presented to demonstrate various methods used by card cheats and to explain the odds involved in games of chance.

Lectures of this nature are merely an extension of Mr. Wrights work begun a few years ago at Fort Richardson, Alaska where he spoke to troop units and appeared weekly at the Military Hospital there.

A retired military man, Mr. Wright is no stranger to the Columbus-Fort Benning area where he entered the Army in 1941. He has many vivid memories of life at Fort Benning in a tent city. "The $21.00 per month a soldier received then did not leave much for entertainment and outside activities," he remembers.

In addition to being well versed in games of chance, Mr. Wright is also rated a Master Bridge Player.

228th's Ladies Meet for Coffee

The Normandy Room of the Main Officer's Open Mess was the scene of the May 20th battalion coffee for the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion.

Mrs. Benjamin S. Silver, wife of the battalion comcander, introduced and welcomed Mrs. Jack Phillips to the battalion.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Dwight Lorenz and Mrs. Richard Smith.

Rugged Three Week Grind for Rifle Companys Ends As Brigade Wraps Up Company-Level ATT's Today

A rugged three-week grind for rifle companies of the 1st Air Assault Brigade is scheduled to end this afternoon as the last of the six combat units finish up their company ATTs this noon.

The tough company - level tactical tests, which began on May 11th, were the first air assault company tests to be given, and really kept the riflemen busy. Realism in the problems was complete, and even the integrated CBR portions went off like clockwork.

Each of the standardized problems began with a tactical aerial deployment from Essbagger Field for the 38th, and Clark Field for the 187th. After conducting assembly area requirements, which included a graded inspection, the action began.

Moving out of the company position southeast of Kings Pond, the troops deployed into the defensive phase and established positions west of the pond and extending one mile southwest of the pond, laying minefields and putting security measures into effect.

It was during the defensive phase that the first of the CBR problems was brought into play with the highly effective gas attack being conducted at 3:30 p.m. in the afternoon.

Other CBR activities included simulated nuclear explosions with a special device which provides all of the ostensible effects of an actual atomic blast, right down to the mushrooming cloud of simulated radioactive fallout.

Other factors adding interest to the problem were a radio control jamming of the command net, a night helicopter pickup, night patrolling, a night withdrawal, a company - size attack in conjunction with a friendly nuclear attack, followed by a counter - attack which ends the tactical portion of the test.

Probably the toughest portion of the test is the night withdrawal operation, which was lengthy, taxing the navigational abilities of leadership personnel, and requiring the defensive platoons to be right on their toes during the displacement of the withdrawing platoon.

Another important aspect of the tests was in the inspection area, which included a pre-combat inspection and a post-combat inspection, particularly the latter which gauged equipment maintenance performed during the conduct of the problem.

Finishing up the series today is Company A of the 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry, commanded by Capt. James L. Allen.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL . . . Newly promoted lieutenant colonel Carlos E. Urruta, commanding officer of the 44th Air Transport Battalion, receives the crest of his new rank from his boss Col. J. Elmore Swenson, commander of the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Earn Superior Rating

38th Infantry Cited For High IG Results

Sky Soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry won a superior rating and high praise from the commanding general last week, after the results of their annual IG inspection were made public.

The announcement came in a letter from Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, who revealed that the overall results gave the 1st Rocks a clear-cut superior rating, and praised the battalion for their achievement.

The general pointed out that the high levels of leadership being practiced in the 38th were obvious when going over the inspection report, and noted the attention to detail and high profesional standards that were evidenced by the report.

Gen. Kinnard singled out Company C, commanded by Capt. Billy L. Whorton, for the particularly remarkable feat of getting a superior rating in each of the twenty six areas of inspection to give the company a perfect record.

Adding his congratulations and appreciation to those of Gen. Kinnard, was 1st Brigade Commander, Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, who dispatched a letter to the battalion, and personally extended his appreciation to the 1st Rock Commander, Lt. Col. Arne H. Eliasson.

11th Softball Competition Still Strong

Division softball competition continued going strong this past week as the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry "Kaniengahagas" won their fourth consecutive game after an opening day loss and have roared to a 4-1 start. The 15th Artillery has left them with a 2-0 record.

The 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion and the "BEAVERS" of the 127th Engineers Battalion also had a good week as they knocked off the 42nd Artillery and the 408th "PROVIDERS". Both teams are undefeated so far in the Iroquois League along with the 187 Airborne Infantry.

In the Caribou League, Headquarters Special Troops ran their record to 3-1 with a victory over the 188th Infantry "EAGLES", while the 511th Infantry broke into the win column by inflicting a third loss on the Aviation Group Troops team.

NEW ASSIGNMENTS

Recently assigned to the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency from the Test, Evaluation and Control Group were Maj. Norman Smith and Maj. Henry E. Simpson. The two majors have been assigned as project officers in the small arms weapons systems (SAWS) study program currently in progress at the Infantry Agency.

81st Artillery Ranks Thinned By Students

The month of May has been marked by the departure of two officers from the 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery.

Capt. Robert A. Flory, former commanding officer of Battery C, has been reassigned to Tulane University, New Orleans, La., where he will study for a Masters degree in nuclear physics.

1st Lt. Bernard J. M. Kelley, forward observer and supply officer for Battery B (Abn), will begin post graduate studies in biology at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., following his departure from the unit and military service on Sunday, May 23rd.

Capt. Flory commanded Battery C for eighteen months following his assignment to the 81st in September, 1963. The battery earned the battalion honor unit citation for the years 1963 and 1964.

An original air assault-airborne forward observer, Lt. Kelley assisted in the development of the many techniques now standarized as Air Assault procedures.

Both officers and their wives were presented with engraved silver pitchers upon their departure.

15th Artillery Sluggers Leading Chinook League

The 15th Artillery Battalion's softball team is off to a fast start in the division's Chinook League with a record of 2-0.

Paced by the pitching of Jim Hardimon and the hitting of Tom Foster, Les Garrett, and Jim Kelley the team has rolled over the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry 12-2 and the 39th Artillery 9-0.

Hardimon and Kelley led Battery B last season when the battery won the 11th Air Assault Division's company level softball championship. Hardimon's impressive pitching record; 2 wins 0 losses, 16 strike outs in 9 innings, and a 0.00 ERA is an indication of the 15th Artillery opponents must contend with.

Foster, who plays 1st base has a .833 batting average; Garret, the center fielder is batting .600; and Kelley, the catcher, leads the team in RBI's with four and is batting .750. The teams batting average is .362 and fielding percentage .945 (2 errors in 14 innings of play).

In preseason games the battalion defeated the 1st Battalion 23rd Infantry (last year's 2nd Infantry Division Champions), 2nd MP Company, 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, and the 38th Artillery games this season.

Pitching and catching depth is the teams strongest asset. Hal Walker and Bobby Thompson are the other members of a tough mound corps. Lynn Whittaker and EdLowr y provide competent back-up for Kelley at the catcher's post.

Commendation Pinned On Former Company CO

The former Commanding Officer of Headquarters Company, 2nd Air Assault Brigade, has recently been awarded the Army Commendation Medal.

Capt. Alfred F. Fiumano Jr., who is currently studying At Omaha University, Omaha, Nev., through the Army "bootstrap" program, received this medal for "performance of meritorious service as Company Commander during the period May 15, 1964 to January 15, 1965."

The citation goes on to say, "During this period due to Capt. Fiumao's unusual talent, no loss of momentum or operational capability was experienced and because of his management of the command post, its locations, and movement with the maneuver area, displayed his uncanny ability to perform any mission assigned to him with imagination and vigor.

Capt. Fiumano began his Army career on June 25, 1956 as a draftee and took his basic training at Fort Knox, Ky. After serving as an enlisted man for one year he applied for and was accepted at the Infantry Officers Candidate School. He received his commission in the early part of 1958.

Flying 187th CWO Gains Senior Wings

CWO Franklin D. Baldwin of the 187th Transport Airplane Company received his Senior Aviator Wings recently in ceremonies conducted in the Commander's Office of the 187th Transport Airplane Co. Maj. Teddy G. Holloway, Commander of the 187th performed the traditional pinning on of the wings and congratulations.

Mr. Baldwin has served with the 8th Transportation Company at Ft. Bragg, N.C., the 13th Transportation Company in Korea, the 31st Artillery Brigade at Ft. Niagara, N. Y., and the 121st Aviation Company in Vietnam, prior to joining the 187th in Nov. 1963.

CWO Completes 'Fixin' Study

CWO Donald W. Parenti, assigned to Battery E. (Aviation), 26th Artillery, has recently returned to Fort Benning after completing the Organizational Maintenance Officers Course at Fort Knox, Ky.

The 10-week course of instruction included practical work in the engine laboratory, maintenance on weapons systems, vehicular and tank recovery methods, tactics, elecricity, and proper posting of all maintenance records.

Following Field Problem Test

38th Infantry Selects Top Three Rifle Platoons

The three top rifle platoons in the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry were named last week, and the high scoring platoon from each company was awarded a wall plaque-type trophy.

Claiming the best platoon in the battalion was Company B's 3rd Platoon led by PSgt. George W. Lawless, with the platoon's performance described as "superior" throughout the 16-hour field problem test.

The other two top scoring platoons to win high awards within their companies were the 3rd Platoon of Compny A, led by PSgt Clayton Rogers, and the 2nd Platoon of Company C, under 2nd Lt. Donald Z. Hall.

Each platoon test began with a warning order for the occupation of a company reserve position, with an addition "be prepared" mission to occupy a portion of the R&S line around the battalion airhead.

Upon arriving at the platoon landing zone, they were fired upon by a small aggressor force. After eliminating the enemy elements, the platoons were required to move into strong points on the R&S lines where their mission was to deceive the aggressor as to the true location of the friendly lines, provide intelligence information to higher headquarters, and to delay enemy penetrations.

After several small sized probes had been repulsed, the R&S line was forced to delay a large enemy force while withdrawing to friendly lines. Concluding the withdrawal, the platoons assumed their company reserve positions to the rear of the company line.

While occupying this position, the platoon came under attack from a small guerilla band that had infiltrated the battalion airhead. During this attack, the enemy was supported by a gas attack on the platoon's defensive position.

After repelling the guerillas, the platoon received an order to conduct a night attack to retake one of the positions formerly occupied on the R&S line, and after they secured their objective and reorganized the defense of the position, the problem was terminated.

Command Colors Pass At 44th Air Battalion

At ceremonies conducted last week Maj. Carlos E. Urrutia assumed command of the 44th Air Transport Battalion from Maj. Paul E. Clark.

Maj. Urrutia was born in Puerto Rico. He attended Newport News High School, Newport News, Va., and the University of Puerto Rico, where in 1944 he obtained a BS in Civil Engineering. He was licenced as a professional engineer for the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and practiced for three and a half years with the Land Authority of Puerto Rico and the Department of the Interior.

He enlisted in the military service during World War II, and was commissioned a second lieuteant in the Infantry in 1948.

During his Army career he has served in command staff assignments with the 295th Infantry, 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 40th Infantry Division (Korea), X Corp (Korea), the Infantry Center, Headquarters Third U S Army, 78th Engineer Battalion, 555th Engineer Group, 2nd Observation Battalion, The Army Aviation Center, 37th Air Transport Battalion and the 10th Air Transport Brigade.

Prior to assuming command, Maj. Urrutia attended the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth. In addition he has attended the Infantry School (Basic Airborne and Advanced Officers Course); The Engineer School (Advanced Officers Course); Air Force Liaison Pilot School and Helicopter Pilot Course; Artillery School (Light Aviation Officers Course) and the Army Aviation School (Twin Engine Pilot Transition and Helicopter Pilot Tactics Course).

Maj. Urrutia has been a rated pilot since 1948 and a Senior Army aviator since 1955. He is both fixed and rotary wing rated, instrument qualified and has logged over 3,400 hours. His decorations include the Bronze Star, Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and the Army Commendation Medal.

Artillerymen Fire SS-10 Missile

Three officers of Battery B, 3d Bn. (Aerial Rocket), 377th Artillery went to Fort Rucker, Ala. and participated in the aerial firing of the SS-10 antitank missile.

Captains Lawrence O. Zittrain, James R. Foreman and WO Neil O. Stribling flew down to Rucker Monday morning and fired the missiles at Matson Range.

The missiles were launched from a UH-1B helicopter and the percentage of target hits was considered high by the instructor Capt. Robert Webster of the gunnery section of the tactics Department.

The SS-10, 11 and its most recent version, the M-22, is a most effective weapon against the tank and is expected to enable the aerial artillery to successfully counter any tank opposition. Troopin the line Bayonet

228th Chinooks Slowly Returning To Flyable State

The Army's first and only Chinook helicopter battalion is slowly returning to normal operation as more and more of its aircraft become flyable.

The medium cargo and troop transport helicopters of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion have all been grounded since March due to a defect in the rotor blade assembly. This defect caused the blades of all the Chinooks to be removed and sent to the Vertol Corporation to have the necessary modifications.

On May 18 the first of the re-machined propeller assemblies were returned to the 228th and was replaced on an aircraft by maintenance personnel.

The first aircraft to be returned to operation belonged to Company B and was flown by CW0 Desmon Burnette, of Company B, and CWO Lindsy McTier of the 611th Maintenance Batallion. The flight engineer was Sp4 Melvin Babb and the crew chief was PFC James Bray.

According to 228th reports the initial flight was very successful. Only one incident dampened the spirits of the crew. When the flight was completed the aircraft immediately was flown to Fort Eustis, Va., to be used by the transportation school.

'Won't You Sit Down, Ma'am?'

Men in Uniform on Constant Public Display

Editors Note: The following hypothetical anecdote, extracted from a 1952 troop topic pamphlet, is reprinted without embellishment. Its moral is crystal clear to Fort Benning soldiers who work and live in such close proximity to their civilian neighbors in Columbus.

"Two young men were sitting near the frent of the bus just behind the driver. All the other seats in the bus were taken. The driver pulled into a stop and a woman got on the bus. After she paid her fare, she looked around hesitantly and saw that all the seats were occupied. Immediately, one of the young men got up, tipped his hat, and said 'Won't you sit down, ma'am?' She smiled, thanked him and took the seat.

Passengers Take Notice

"All the other passengers in the bus looked at the young man who was now standing. He wasn't tall, and his rugged, square - cut features certainly weren't handsome. Yet there was something alert and clean and healthy looking about him. His cloethes weren't greatly different than those worn today by many other American men, but they were spotless and neatly pressed. He stood erect, as if he had pride in himself. All the passengers noticed it. Looking at him, their faces seemed to say, 'Now there's a well-mannered young man. He must have had good training.'

Second Man

"The bus rolled along for a mile or two more, then stopped. Another woman got on, paid her fare, and the second young man rose, and offered his seat. He was an 'average' looking American too, clean and well-dressed.

"A few of the passengers toward the front of the bus glanced at him and their faces seemed to say, 'Polite man.' But the rest of the passengers apparently didn't notice him. They continued to read their newspapers or stared out the windows.

Same Backgrounds

"Why did the passengers act differently in these two cases? Here are two men who looked as if they might have come from the same backgrounds. They could have been neighbors on the same street in Anytown. Each had performed the same act of everyday courtesy, yet all the passengers noticed what the first man did and they seemed to appreciate it. But only a few passengers saw what the second man did and they seemed to dismiss it as routine.

"If you had been a passenger on that bus, you would have seen the difference immediately, because the first man was a soldier — he wore the uniform of a private in the United States Army. The second man was a civilian."

Dependent Teens To Hold Meeting

Fort Benning's teen - age dependents and their welfare have been the object of an extensive staff study the past few months. They will learn some of the results of that study tomorrow morning at a mass meeting to be held in "Brat Barracks," Building 1054.

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Fort Benning commander, directed the staff study be made to seek ways of improving Brat Barracks facilities and "regularizing" the teen club organization and activities.

At the meeting tomorrow, scheduled to start at 10 a.m., those attending will be briefed on projected plans for the club and will be invited to participate in the discussion with constructive suggestions and exchange of ideas.

Teen - agers will be the "prime movers" in the club's operation, with adult representatives of officer and non-commissioned officer wives clubs from all the major commands in an advisory capacity only, according to recommendations contained in the staff study.

Committees, advisory boards, councils and boards of directors will be set up to assure a business-like type of organization designed to give the teen - agers the type of program, and facility, they should have as dependents of Fort Benning military personnel.

Parents are urged to bring this announcement to the attention of their children and to encourage their attendance at tomorrow's meeting.

They are also reminded that the reorganization and "rejuvenation" program being formulated is an ambitious one that will succeed only if they are able to generate additional interest on the part of their teen sons and daughters through their own support of all Youth Activities Club programs.

Need Help?

Want your car washed? Windows washed? Any kind of cleaning, even to shampooing the family dog, interests these two representatives of the Youth Employment Bureau at Fort Benning, Tom Sweet, foreground, and John Johnston III demonstrate one of many types of work the Bureau hopes to provide for summer employment of military dependents from eight to 21 years old. The bureau is sponsored by the Youth Activities Club. For information, telephone 545-1627.

Youth Employment Bureau Open, Will Perform Almost Any Job

If you are a Fort Benning military dependent under 21 looking for work or an adult looking for a worker, the place to go is the Youth Employment Bureau.

Operated by young people of the post, with advice from their elders, the bureau gets into full swing with the close of school each year.

Babysitting, grass cutting, car washing, house cleaning, pet care, almost anything that needs to be done about the home, the employment bureau is ready to arrange to send you "diligent, enthusiastic, dependable" young people to do the job.

Maj. V. L. O'Dell said the bureau is operated for the benefit of military dependents living on the post.

"We have a large number of young people getting ready to start college in the fall. They are looking for an opportunity to earn spending money, to ease the strain on their parents' pocketbook," he continued. "We are trying to get gainful employment, but with the remuneration, however entirely in keeping with the job they do. We want to offer a variety of jobs so these young people can spend their free time profitably, and in something that will benefit others."

Maj. O'Dell suggests that personnel with a job to be

AFMA Elects New Officers; Gen. Forsythe Is Speaker

Col. Joel W. Lawson of Eddyville, Ky., was elected president of Fort Benning Chapter of the Armed Forces Management Association at a dinner meeting last week, May 27, at the Holiday Inn in Columbus, Ga.

Officers who will serve with Col. Lawson are Leonard Ozley and Dan Reed, vice presidents; V. C. Abrams, treasurer; and Mrs. Austin Nicewarner, secretary.

Executive council members are Col. James W. Cochran Jr., Lt. Col. W. S. Mattox and Gene Medlock.

Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, guest speaker at the meeting, discussed the changes in high Army and governmental management techniques since World War II.

The general gave his audience a look at "the way things get done."

He said that military accomplishment requires the same steps as a simple act such as sawing a piece of wood into two sections. The steps are planning, applying the force and successful accomplishment.

During World War II, high level management got into the picture primarily at the planning stage, whereas now management is involved in decisions at the application level, he said.

This change has been brought about by the fact that in this day of rapid transportation, we live "just around the clock from the rest of the world," the general added: "Speed of communications takes the impact to faraway places."

He also stated that great powers maintain a "very tight inner face" with very high stakes since the introduction of nuclear weapons.

Gen. Forsythe said war has changed, adding that there are no nice neat front lines, no clear cut declared war with a banner headlined armistice and victory parade. The transition to warfare with no front lines and hostiles that are hard to lo-

Prominent Visitors To Fort Benning

The Royal Thai Army's inspector general was at Fort Benning May 31-June 3 to see how his counterparts at The Infantry Center and 2d Inf. Div. operate.

Major Gen. Chaleow Pechryotin, accompanied by Col. Siha Thanadchang and Col. Sa-ard Prasertsom, both of the Thai Inspector General Department, visited with Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges Tuesday morning, June 1.

'Above and Beyond'

By Chaplain (Maj.) Edwin R. Andrews

"Above and beyond the call of duty." These words signify, to the military, a risk which has been taken or a death died by one willing to do more than orders or regulations demand. We highly respect those about whom we can speak these words.

But there are ways men go beyond the call of duty which have nothing to do with combat action. Take, for instance, those willing to lend a hand to the replacement in the company. Many are content to let him find his way alone. But there are others who take this extra trouble for no reason other than good will, and we respect them for it.

Another example of "above and beyond" is in how we do a job. The fact that there are things we must do is obvious to all; the fact that we can help ourselves and everyone around us by doing them with the right attitude has not occurred to enough people. This is one of the most important ways we can act "above and beyond the call of duty"—for no one can govern our attitudes but us. And if you think this way of going beyond the bare minimum won't help you—try it!

But the most important way we can rise above minimum duty is in our religious life. One's whole duty to God is not done when he attends services—but many think this is true. And so, men notice the person who carries that duty beyond the minimum in everyday word and action. There is a real challenge here for every man—the challenge of proving to God, himself, and everyone his loyalty to the faith he holds.

Even though we never can really go above our actual duty to God, we can at least go beyond the usual standards. And the reward, this time, is much more than just "personal satisfaction."

The question to answer is this: Are you living "above and beyond" the call of duty?

The Surgeon Says

Chest Pains

The majority of chest pains are vague, transient and of little or no significance. These arise from minor trauma to the superficial structures of the chest wall, such as muscles and ligaments of the rib cage.

Pain of a sharp, transient, "catching" nature, or a constant aching in the front of the chest frequently arise from the upper spine, reflected to the chest and are often caused by pressure on nerves as they emerge through small openings in the vertebral column. Minor structural changes, curvatures of the spine (scoliosis), degenerative arthritis of aging, or various inflammations can cause this kind of pain and should not be confused with the pain of heart disease.

Another cause of chest pain frequently misinterpreted as arising from the heart, originates from a herniation of a small portion of the stomach through the diaphragm.

Sharp, stabbing pains of the chest intensified with each deep breath (pleurisy) arise from the sensitive membranes surrounding the lungs, and are frequently associated with a "flu-like" illness, and represent an inflammation of the lung coverings. This is usually associated with pneumonia and requires medical attention.

Deep, drawing, pressure-like, or vice-like gripping pain over the front of the chest which occasionally radiates to the left shoulder or down the left arm is related to or precipitated by exertion or exercise is most likely due to coronary artery disease of the heart and should be evaluated promptly by a physician.

The severe, crushing, chest pain of a true heart attack, associated with pallor, sweating, nausea and vomiting, is usually a catastrophic, previously unexperienced event for the patient and represents a medical emergency necessitating prompt hospitalization and treatment.

There are many causes of chest pain or discomfort, many of which should be looked into, particularly if persistent or recurrent.

Editorial

'I Pledge Allegiance'

Those of us in the armed forces take great pride in our country and our flag and nearly everyone knows the legend about Betsy Ross. At one time or another, almost all of us have taken part in a reveille or retreat ceremony and watched with pride as the color was raised or lowered.

But how many know where the eight sites in the United States are that the Stars and Stripes are continuously flown in honor of brave men and their deeds?

The sites — four by tradition and four by presidential proclamation — are: The grave of Francis Scott Key; the War Memorial in Worcester, Mass.; the plaza in Taos, N. M.; a civilian cemetery in Deadwood, S.D.; Ft. McHenry, Md.; Flaghouse Square, Baltimore, Md.; the Capitol in Washington, D. C.; and the Marine Corps Memorial in Arlington, Va.

June 14 is a special day set aside to honor the world-renowned Stars and Stripes by the people of the United States.

The Stars and Stripes was established June 14, 1777. However, the Continental Congress, in adopting the resolution, did not specify the arrangement of the 13-stars in the blue field — except to require that they represent a new constellation. The first flag based on the idea that no colony should take precedence, had the stars appear in a circle.

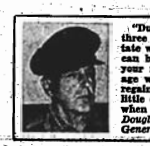
So that the flag would not become unwieldy with the addition of a stripe for each new state, it was suggested that the 13 stripes be retained to represent the colonies which had struggled so hard to establish this nation, and that a star be added to the blue field for each additional state admitted to the union. This suggestion was incorporated into a resolution passed by Congress which became effective July 4, 1818.

Thus the Stars and Stripes came into being—born amid strife of battle, to become the standard around which free people rallied to establish our nation.

In 1892, Francis Bellamy wrote a sentence which has become one of the most sincere pledges of homage in the world. Many of us have not recited its words since grammar school days. Now we are older and its words have a deep meaning we can understand. That sentence as later amended is:

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation (under God), indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

(AFPS)



"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."

Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

The Judge Says . . .

Nearly every serviceman is vitally concerned with his family's welfare both during and after his lifetime. Reflecting that concern by making adequate provisions for dependents may require more planning than is at first realized.

Estate planning is nothing more than systematic protection of both personal assets (including real estate, insurance, savings and other investments) and earning power. As each person's desires and needs vary, plans should be tailored to fit the individual situation in question. Even such factors as the personalities of the separate beneficiaries should be considered. Any plan involving either great detail or substantial sums or both should be prepared with the aid of an attorney, an insurance underwriter and an investment counselor.

Factors to be taken into consideration by anyone contemplating an estate plan include the following: Funeral and other final expenses incident to death; the income anticipated as necessary for the subsistence of his survivors; the expected cost of educating his children; a reasonable contingent fund for unexpected emergencies; and augmentation of expected retirement income. Intricate tax problems should be avoided. Property should be controlled no longer than necessary, as few persons are so fortunate as to foresee all future requirements of their dependents.

Active duty and retired service personnel should, in addition, take into account as applicable the following factors: The amount of death gratuity and who will receive it; burial or burial allowances; the amount of dependency compensation for survivors; social security benefits (including retirement survivor and death benefits); and the war orphans education assistance program.

Once drawn up, an estate plan should not be considered as a finished product which may not be changed. On the contrary, periodic review is recommended, and should always take place upon a substantial change in original position.

For instance, a change of permanent residence to a new state may well affect the property which is exempt from probate. Marital difficulties, death, disabling mental or physical diseases, substantial changes in income or property, and the possible tax advantages from carefully planned gifts are other considerations which may well require revision of an estate plan.

How complex an estate plan one should have will depend upon his assets, personal wishes and the anticipated needs of his beneficiaries. It may be that a will, an investment program and an insurance program will suffice. To find out, consult your private attorney, your local legal assistance officer or your Soldiers' Advocate.

'Follow Me March' Added to List; Col. Kellett's Eighth Composition

By Sp4 Duncan Pierce

The words "Follow Me" are common words around the home of the Infantry. Wherever one looks, there are "Follow Me" crests, emblems, patches and signs. These two words contain the history and the heritage of the Infantryman, it is his slogan, his battle cry.

On May 25 another "Follow Me" was added to the list, this time a march designated the official march of The Infantry School by verbal order of Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

Col. Donald T. Kellett, former commanding officer of The Student Brigade, composed the march, his eighth composition.

Col. Kellett was born and raised in Freeport, N. Y., a vaudeville summer colony where such greats as George M. Cohan, Victor Moore and others appeared. It was here that the colonel got his introduction to music and taught himself to play the piano. Out of books that he picked up, he also learned composition, harmony and orchestration.

Later on he worked his way through Wesminster College, Pa., by playing in a dance band. In 1933 he wrote his first real composition, the college football song entitled, "The Titan Marching Song".

After graduating from college with an English major, Col. Kellett worked for 3 years as a reporter for the New York Daily News, taught English and History at Freeport High School and in 1941 entered the Army. He received his commission the following year when he graduated from Officer Candidate Class No. 6.

His first military march was written in 1942 after the Allied landings in North Africa. Entitled "Subway Soldier," it was written for personnel of the 16th Inf who were to be decorated by Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt Jr.

"69th Salute" came next, written for the 69th Inf. Div. at Fort Dix, N. J. in 1955. The occasion was the first Community Chest Fund Drive. The march was retired when the division was deactivated in 1956.

The 9th Inf. Regt. was stationed in Alaska during 1957 in what is now Fort Wainwright, when Col. Kellett wrote its official march, "March Manchu." It was written at the request of the regimental commanding officer, Col. Kenneth G. Pavey and is characterized by the oriental themes depicting the service of the "Manchu" Regt. in China.

The fourth march composed by the colonel was written for the 26th Inf., 1st Inf. Div. at Fort Riley, Kan. in 1958. Written at the request of the commanding officer, Col. George MacCaffrey, the march, entitled "Spader Parader," derived its title from the regimental crest of the 26th, a blue spade.

"The Big Red One," was written in 1958 for the retirement ceremony of Gen. Willard Wyman, commanding general, Army Field Forces (now known as CONARC), held at Fort Monroe, Va. The march derives its title from the patch of the 1st Inf. Div., which is a red one on a green field.

The "Congressional Honors" march was written by Col. Kellett and presented to members of Congress on June 14, 1959, the 184th anniversary of the establishment of the Army. The march was presented at a ceremony conducted by the Honorable Wilber N. Brucker, then Secretary of the Army.

On March 27, 1959, the "Secretary of the Army" march was dedicated to Secretary of the Army, Wilber N. Brucker, and is now the official march of all men holding that position.

The eighth and most recent march written by Col. Kellett is the "Follow Me" march, the official march of The Infantry School.

As to why he chose composing marches, Col. Kellett answered, "Marches have a habitual association with the military, they contribute to the conditions and morale of various organizations." He went on to state, "Marches, by virtue of their simplicity are suited to military bands and can be effectively performed by such units."

Gen. Heintges remarked that such materials are enduring and remain with the units long after the composer has either retired from active service or passed away. They constitute long lasting contributions.

Col. Kellett is now in the process of gathering material for a new record, his second, entitled "Music of the Infantry," which will include marches of famous Infantry units, officer candidate chants, a folk song entitled "Roger Young" and others.

Col. Kellett, who recently turned command of The Student Brigade over to Col. Jess W. Walls, will leave for Santiago, Chile, to assume command of the Military Mission there, following a four month temporary duty assignment in Washington, D. C.

Ranger Battalion Formed Under Student Brigade

With Ranger training increasing in scope and intensity each year, The Student Brigade has organized a 1st Bn. to provide more efficient administrative and logistical support for nearly 1,500 Ranger graduates annually.

The battalion, composed of three student Ranger companies, is commanded by Lt. Col. Joseph E. McCluskey, former commanding officer of TSB's 2nd Student Bn.

Prior to the 1st Bn's organization, the 1st and 2nd Ranger Co. were assigned directly to the brigade. The 44th Ranger Co., now designated the 3rd Ranger Co., was assigned to the 4th Student Bn. which handles some 22,000 airborne trainees each year.

The organization of the three companies under the 1st Bn. assures better control and supervision and is the latest organizational step in the history of Ranger training.

The 1st Bn. has always been organic to the brigade but was carried at zero strength.

In order to eliminate financial and personnel requirements, battalion staff duties are being handled by the staff officers and personnel of Bde. Hq.

The 1st Bn's area of responsibility will reach 217 miles north to the Mountain Ranger Camp near Dahlonega, Ga. and 242 miles south to the Florida camp on Eglin Air Force Base.

It will have under its command officer and enlisted students from all branches of the Army, the Marine Corps and many allied nations.

At present there are 25 allied soldiers and 242 U. S. servicemen undergoing Ranger training.

Third Launching Attempt Of Nine Foot Rocket Fails

The theory that "the third time is the charm" was discounted in billows of smoke and bright yellow flame Sunday as two Columbus High School students, one a military dependent, again failed to launch their nine foot rocket.

Fred Callahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Callahan, Columbus and Ron Jennings, son of Colonel and Mrs. H. B. Jennings, Martin Army Hospital commanding officer, had made two previous attemps at Calloway Range, but failed each time to ignite the solid propellant fuel system.

The last attempt, although a failure, was at least spectacular. The complicated relay system detonated the blasting cap and squid, but the fuel did not ignite in the sudden surge needed to lift the rocket from its pad. Smoke and flame was emitted from the tail in spurts, causing speculation that the 25 pounds of fuel was not packed tightly enough, or that some form of oxidizer needed to be rigged into the system.

An intricate telemetry system, built and installed by the Jennings youth, is designed to track the vehicle, take pictures, send back temperature readings and loose parachutes whenever the determined youth get it off the pad. They plan to try again when they have worked out their problem and a range is available.
