In keeping with the recent Army safety program at Fort Benning to promote more interest in safety seat belts, Hq. & Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 58th Inf. gave its personnel an opportunity to have safety belts installed without charge. The only thing car owners have to pay for is the cost of the belts themselves.

The first to have the seat belts installed as a promotion kick-off was the battalion commander, Lt. Col. William E. Boyd.

'7-8-9 Club' Is Scheduled to Open

The Infantry Center's "million dollar NCO club" for senior sergeants will open its doors for the first time tomorrow, June 5, at 11 a.m., concluding over 19 months of extensive remodeling and refurnishing.

Located on Ingersoll Street between Gowdy baseball field and Doughboy Stadium, the new "7,8,9 Club" occupies the brick building which formerly housed Service Club No. 1. Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, Third Army commander, called it a "million dollar club," when he toured the facility on a recent visit to the post.

Tomorrow morning, The Center's top three grades of NCOs will attend a command meeting at Theater No. 1 beginning at 10 a.m. and, following its conclusion, will walk over to the club for the informal opening and free refreshments.

The formal opening and dedication ceremony will be held Monday, June 14, to coincide with Army Day and the Infantry's 190th birthday. Time and schedule of events will be announced later.

With the exception of the dining room, the club will be in full operation after 11 a.m. tomorrow with entertainment scheduled for Saturday night. The dining room will open Sunday and follow the same schedule as that offered by Crain Hall from then on.

No "special" nights are being programed by the "7,8,9 Club" during its first month of operation so the management and board of governors can get a better idea of customer demand and desires.

Benning's 187th Demonstrates Tactics At Annual Space Agency Show in N.M.

An estimated crowd of 100,000 people had a detailed look at the mystery of paratrooper mobility and equipment at the Annual Space Agency Show, May 23, at Kirkland Air Force Base, New Mexico, where the 187th Inf. Det. Pathfinders (Airborne) took part in the show.

The 187th Pathfinders, a recent addition to the 197th Inf. Bde., familiarized the local population with the newest Army and Air Force equipment and the techniques of employing it.

Officer-in-charge, 1st Lt. William O. Jones Jr., aided by SSgt. Bernie Pye and eight enlisted men of the unit, demonstrated how to don parachute harnesses, how radios and equipment are dropped from planes and what the distinctive torch on Pathfinder insignia symbolizes.

Due to unfavorable winds the unit was unable to participate in parachute operations. However, a member of the team put on all of the equipment normally carried into a combat jump, which consists of his T-10 backpack parachute, reserve, weapon and the rucksack used by Pathfinders to carry up to 95 pounds of equipment.

Radios were available for children to talk over and people struggled in and out of parachutes to have snapshots taken.

OCU Conference Group Hears Lt. Gen. Harrison

Lt. Gen. (Ret.) William K. Harrison told 95 members of the Officers' Christian Union at Fort Benning recently to "let God take care of their assignments and promotions."

Addressing the opening meeting of a three-day southeast area conference of the Union, Gen. Harrison said, "God is going to put you where he wants you."

"An officer who is a Christian has an object in life," the president of the Union, continued. "This object is to please God. This is your career and you are God's representative in this career.

"I don't expect you to go around preaching to people. To get a chance to tell people what Christ means to you, you will have to live in such a way as to gain respect. Be diligent, dependable, and friendly. Try to make other men successful in their jobs. And remember — promotion comes from God," the speaker said.

DiGirolomu Gets Appointment

Frank DiGirolomo has been appointed concessions supervisor for the Fort Benning Post Exchange.

DiGirolomo retired here March 31 with the rank of major. He was appointed to his new position on May 20. While on active duty, he was assigned to The Infantry Center G4 section.

Four Promoted By 197th Bde.

James H. Popwell of the 197th Infantry Brigade's Hq. & Hq. Co., was promoted to Specialist Five earlier in the week during a brief ceremony at the brigade headquarters. Ronald Hope, Albert Fernandez, and William Limbaugh, all of Co. A, 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. were promoted to sergeant.

Crime Is Our Problem

By David M. Winkler

Editor's note: This article was prepared by a former 2nd Infantry Division military policeman, now a civilian law enforcement officer in California.

Headlines, such as "Killer of Three Gunned Down in New York," make tragic reading — but the tragedy of it all is really ours.

The tremendous responsibility of the suppression and prevention of crime does not only belong to law enforcement agencies.

It is the responsibility of each and every decent citizen to do all that is possible to stem the tide of our ever increasing crime rate.

We can no longer sit back and view with disinterest the plight of a neighbor on our block or a businessman in our community who has become the victim of a criminal act.

For each criminal act perpetrated against an individual is an act against all of society.

Crime might be likened to a cancerous growth which, if allowed to spread, will not only effect a single individual but will affect entire communities.

Webster defines a cancer as "anything bad or harmful that spreads and destroys."

However, one could easily supplant this definition for that of crime.

No one can overlook the possibility of it spreading and destroying the youth of our nation, if we allow it to go unchecked.

In the words of J. Edgar Hoover, "It is a strange fact that many Americans have a detached attitude toward law enforcement officers."

"They are seldom concerned with the plight of their neighbors who have been victimized by vicious criminals or the tremendous responsibility of the local law enforcement officer who is the nation's first line of defense against the predators of our society."

"Too often brutal crimes arouse only the emotions of morbid curiosity or mild sympathy for the victims instead of indignation and concerted action against lawbreakers whose greed for easy living is matched only by their utter contempt for human life and rights."

"How can decent law-abiding citizens overlook the fact that in 1961 a murder was committed every hour; a forcible rape every 33 minutes; an aggravated assault every four minutes; a robbery every six minutes?"

"The tragic statistics of crime go on and on."

"It must be remembered that crime affects the whole public and not just the rights of an individual."

Mr. Hoover summed it up well when he said, "This country's citizens must awaken to the fact that the war on crime is not just the battle of law enforement.

"Every citizen has a stake when hoodlums prowl the streets brazenly committing atrocities which appall even veteran police officers."

"No one is immune to the attacks of depraved murderers, robbers, sex offenders and kidnapers."

"Our local law enforcement officers are a small patrol when compared with the army of lawbreakers roaming America."

"Often the law enforcement officer's battle is a lonely one; too frequently the citizens who should be his allies are indifferent and apathetic."

"When the local policeman, the public's defender, is himself protected by the citizens he serves, then will criminals learn that law and order in this nation will never give way to the gunmen of the underworld."

Strict Safe-Driving Practices Are Required in New Jeep

Service personnel here and at other military installations around the world are getting killed because they do not observe safe-driving practices required of the M151 one-quarter-ton utility truck.

The M151, the Army's new jeep, has certain capabilities and limitations that every driver should know before taking the vehicle out on the road.

Some 600 pounds lighter, the M151 has a greater power - to - weight ratio than the old jeeps (M38 and M38A1). Although about the same length as the M38A1, the M-151 has a five-inch longer wheel base and a two - foot shorter turning radius.

The biggest change, however, is the independent wheel suspension system on the M151; the older vehicles have solid axles. When negotiating a curve too fast in the older vehicles, the operator is warned by "feel" as the vehicle tilts. The solid axle vehicle also tends to push out of the curve, the front inner wheel tends to lift from the road and the driver must correct this by steering into the curve, the Army says.

In the same situation, the vehicle with independent wheel suspension tends to remain more level and the driver is not warned by its tilting. With independent wheel suspension, the rear inside wheel tends to lift from the road, causing the rear of the vehicle to move out of the curve. To correct for this condition, the driver must steer out of the curve — the opposite of corrective action taken with a solid axle vehicle.

Basically a special purpose vehicle, the high-powered M-151 was built primarily for rough terrain movement on tactical missions. It was not designed for highway operation comparable to a passenger car, officials pointed out.

When driven by a disciplined and responsible operator, the vehicle is safe and reliable for its assigned purpose, an official said.

Career Course Students Receive 28 Decorations

In two separate ceremonies, a total of 28 decorations were awarded to student officers enrolled in the Infantry Officer Career Course, Classes No. 1 and 2, by Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe.

The award ceremonies took place in Classroom No. 1 of Building No. 4.

The officers receiving awards from CAR Class No. 1 were: Capt. Earl W. Eubanks Jr., Bronze Star with "V" device; Capt. Alfred H. Paddock Jr., Bronze Star with "V" device; Capt. Norman N. Ferguson, Air Medal with 10th oak leaf cluster; Capt. James L. Osteen, Air Medal; Capt. Paul E. Raetz, Air Medal with 3rd oak leaf cluster; and Capt. Victor A. Weber, Air Medal with 2nd, 6th, 7th, and 8th oak leaf clusters.

Being presented the Army Commendation Medal were, Capt. Henry O. Johnson, Capt. George B. Lee, Capt. David A. Luedtke, Capt. Warren J. McDonald, Capt. Robert W. McNight, Capt. James B. Motley, Capt. Dale W. Pierce, Capt. Ross W. Winne Jr., Capt. Roger B. Woods, and Capt. Burl A. Zorn.

Officers from CAR Class No. 2 receiving awards were Capt. Harold E. Johnson, Bronze Star Medal; Capt. William W. Jones Jr., Bronze Star Medal; Capt. Donald F. Van Eynde, Bronze Star Medal; Capt. Walter A. Hitchcock, Air Medal and ACM.

Receiving ACMs were Capt. Kenneth R. Guillory, 1st oak leaf cluster; Capt. Charles K. Hanson, 1st oak leaf cluster; Capt. Henry G. Holder, Capt. Arthur J. Kinzel, Capt. Richard D. Meriaux, Capt. Darrell D. Presnell, and Capt. Kenneth E. Yoder.

The student officers of CAR Class No. 1 and 2 recently completed 35 weeks of training.

The 35-week long CAR Course is designed to provide officers with a working knowledge of the duties and responsibilities of company and battalion commanders, battalion and brigade staff officers. A general knowledge of division level staff and operations is also presented to the students during their stay here.

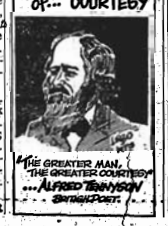
MOWW Hears Gen. Chiles Talk

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commanding general of the 2nd Infantry Division, was principal speaker at a Ladies Night meeting recently of the Military Order of World Wars at Fort Benning's Main Officers' Mess.

His topic was "Our Southern Neighbors and the Latin Study Group."

New officers of the chapter were installed at the meeting.

Gen. Chiles' talk was preceded by a social hour.



Odd Complaints?

They come from all over and in the funniest forms. An Iowa woman complained that a boy ran over her with a bicycle while she was sunbathing in the park. An Illinois restaurant owner told police a man came in for a snack . . . on a horse. Most common complaint is the headache, which aspirin can handle, but aspirin couldn't handle the "headache" of young Colorado couple who returned from honeymoon and found that someone had mixed 30 gallons of cherry-flavored gelatin in the bathtub!

Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction

Think You Have Some Troubles?

Think you have troubles? A Pasadena, Calif., woman complained to the police that someone was breaking into her home every night—and leaving money in her purse!

Brownsville, Tex., lawmen heard the story of a nine-year-old boy who was beset and pummeled by a group of angry little girls — for refusing to kiss them.

In New Britain, Conn., a man charged that someone was picking up his small foreign car from its parking place in front of his house and putting it in the middle of the road!

Even stranger complaints have resounded in the ears of law enforcement officials throughout the nation and around the world.

Bedbugs

In Hanau, Germany, it was alleged that a hotel manager was turning bedbugs loose in a competitor's hotel. A farmer in Lodi, Italy, complained that someone had slipped into his pasture and snipped the tails off his 39 cows. A London woman said that her landlord, who wanted her to move, had seen her wash drying on the line and had sprinkled her undies with itching powder!

Lawmen, of course, aren't the only people who hear odd complaints in the line of duty. Doctors do, too. Valentin Medina, a 61 - year - old Spanish farmhand, presented himself in 1960 at a Madrid hospital with the claim that he never slept. A hometown doctor affirmed that he had never known Medina to catch a wink of sleep in 50 years!

Headache

Commonest health complaint? It seems to be a toss-up between the common cold and the headache; the person who has totally escaped either one is a medical rarity. The average American gets three colds a year and an estimated 85 per cent of Americans suffer from head aches.

With these statistics, it's hardly surprising that aspirin, taken to relieve headache pain and cold discomforts as well as for a variety of other complaints, is the world's most widely - used medication. Americans alone take about 16 billion aspirin tablets a year; recently, an aspirin company produced its 100 billionth aspirin tablet. Small wonder it's been said that the two things which answer more complaints than anything else in the world are the police department and the aspirin tablet!

Bathtub Jello

But even aspirin probably would not have cured the "headache" of the young couple who returned to their Pueblo, Colorado, home after a vacation — and found that someone had entered the house in their absence and mixed about 30 gallons of cherry - flavored gelatin in the bathtub!

On the other hand, a Tokyo man might have done well to gulp a couple of aspirin tablets before he decided that an inefficient telephone operator gave him a pain—and showed his annoyance by setting fire to the phone booth!

Short tempers have spurred other bizarre complaints. In Cleveland, Ohio, a complaint was filed against a painter who grabbed a woman and painted both her arms green. Seems she'd been bothering him with repeated criticisms of the way he was painting her garage.

Light - fingered citizens come in for their share of crazy charges. In Tucson, Ariz., somebody broke into a chicken coop twice in one week, each time stealing a hen and replacing it with a rooster!

But that was nothing compared with the exploit of the unknown thief who filched a 2'x18' strip of asphalt from a Dunstable, Mass. street. Or the burglar in Santiago, Chile, who entered a man's house while he slept, lifted him gently off the bed and put him on the floor without awakening him — then made off with the bed!

It had to happen and it finally did: in Manila, the Philippines, a man complained that his dog had been severely bitten on the neck — by a 17-year old boy!

SPORTS Afterthoughts

BY DAVID N. SCOTT

CHARLES FINLEY

IN 1962 the New York Mets won 40 games and lost 120 to become baseball's losingest team.

This year if they want to stay in the books as baseball's worst team, the Mets had better jump on a losing skein because there is a team in the junior circuit out to snatch that piece of glory away from them.

The Kansas City Athletics, comprised of a mule, 25 individuals who are playing a game resembling baseball and Charles O. Finley, are the losingest team so far this season and have a good chance of copping the laurels from the Mets.

Better Each Year

The Mets have improved every year since their record breaking first one in 1962. In 1963 the Mets won 51 and dropped 111 while last season they won 53 while losing 109.

The Athletics haven't been as consistent. In 1962 they won 70 and lost 90, while in 1963 they experienced their best season with a 73-93 record. But last season they ran the Mets a close race with a 57-105 record.

This season the Mets have already won 18 and dropped 29 while their American League counterpart has won only 10 and lost 30.

If the Athletics keep up this pace they will have accumulated 30 games in their won column and the title of baseball's worst team come September.

Finley made some changes in the off season that almost assures the Athletics of not winning over 40 games. First the outfield fences that were just a stones throw away from the infield were moved back. And Rocky Colovito, who was capable of reaching the fences under any circumstances, was traded for a pitcher and Mike Hershberger and Jim Landis, outfielders who hit .230 and .218 for the White Sox last year. The two of them hit a total of three home runs.

Finley's plans now begin to take shape. Though Hershberger and Landis can't hit, they can field and with the fences moved back the Kansas City pitchers won't suffer nervous breakdowns every time they release the ball.

The second step in Finley's plans for building a "championship team" was the retirement of the sheep that used to graze behind the right-field fence and the installation in their place of a mule named Charlie O. The mule is brought to other American League parks in a trailer equipped with a radio and air conditioning.

Next Finley traded his bat boy for a bat girl and purchased an assortment of animals that he pushes into action whenever they are needed. Obviously Finley is serious about this championship business.

The Athletics were last in the league in fielding last year but the acquisition of Landis and Hershberger plugged some of the holes.

Landis is also hitting at a respectable .316 clip while Hershberger is staying true to form and boasts a .157 average. Centerfielder Nelson Mathews is hitting .308 and Dagoberto Campaneris is hitting the ball at a .298 clip. The team is hitting well enough to hold fourth place in league batting but their pitching has been their downfall. They are dead last in the hurling department.

Fewest Complete Game

Last year K.C. pitchers gave up more walks, more hits, more runs, hit more batters and gave up more home runs than any other team in the majors. They also had the fewest complete games with 18.

Finley didn't count on the hitting support he is getting but he did figure the A's would shine in the field and on the mound. Things have been just the reverse.

The Mets will go on filling Shea Stadium and have a good chance of moving up a notch. The Athletics have a good infield, an impressive mule and a unpredictable owner but none of these will pull them out of the cellar.

The last trade between the Dodgers and the Giants was made on December 13, 1956, when the Dodgers sent Jackie Robinson to the Giants for pitcher Dick Littlefield and $35,000. The deal was nullified a month later when Robinson announced his retirement.

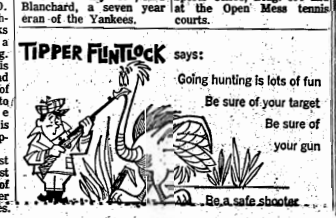
John Blanchard actually broke down and cried after learning that he had been traded to the Kansas City Athletics by the New York Yankees. "This is the greatest shock of my life", said Blanchard, a seven year eran of the Yankees.



League Leading 428th Medics Lose to Last Place 1st Bde., 6-5

By Sp5 MITCH YAMANAKA

Monday and Tuesday were days for upsets at Gowdy Field as the league leading 428th Medical Bn. and the second place Center Troop Command team were dropped by the league's tail enders.

Monday night the 1st Bde. boasting a 1-4 record, jumped on the high flying 428th behind the four-hit pitching of Leo McClendon for their second victory of the season, 6-5. CTC lost to the 3rd Bde. Tuesday, 4-2.

The 1st Bde. nine drew first blood in the contest as they tallied two runs in the bottom of the second inning on Charles Walls long single to left field.

The Medics came back in their half of the third inning to tie up the ball game, 2-2, as Michael Morris blasted a double into deep centerfield to bring Walter Waiss and Arthur Tirrell across the plate.

Wilson Navarro knocked in Albert Julian with a single in the 1st Bde's half of the third to move the Brigade men into the lead again.

The 1st Bde. tallied two more runs in the sixth inning on Aqustus Bank's triple. Clarence Richardson, the 1st Bde. left fielder, drove in what was the winning run with a single in the seventh to give the Brigade squad a 6-2 lead.

McClendon settled down after the second inning and held the Medic batters hitless for four innings before weakening in the eighth.

In the eighth inning, 428th's Morris connected for his second double of the evening and crossed the plate when Rual Guerrero lifted a long two-bagger to left center.

In the top of the ninth McClendon weakened a little more and Joseph Gragg and Joseph Wood, the first two batters to face him, received free passes to first.

Jose Parrilla, the relief pitcher who relieved Waiss in the seventh, advanced the runners with a sacrifice bunt down the third base line.

Morris, the next batter, connected for his third hit of the evening driving in two runs to make the score 6-5. James Wesley went down swinging for the second out and Guerrero received an intentional walk.

The next batter, Albert Hardman, pinch hitting for Fred Wilkens, grounded out to second for the final out and the ball game.

Waiss, the starting pitcher for the 428th, suffered the loss.

Top batter for the losers was Morris with two doubles a single and four runs batted in.

Banks was the big hitter for the 1st Bde. connecting for two singles and a two-run triple.

McClendon, the winning pitcher, struck out 14 batters and issued six bases on balls.

The 428th and CTC faced each other last night but results were not available at BAYONET press time.

Southeastern Rifle and Pistol Championships Copped by Army

By SSGT LEE LA COMBE

The Army wound up the Southeastern High Power Rifle and Pistol Championships here earlier this week with a pair of victories in the handgun team competition and top spot in the rifle team match.

Shooters from the Army Marksmanship Training Unit captured the .22 caliber and Center Fire team events in pistol with scores of 1,185 and 1,180 respectively.

U. S. Army Pacific topped the field Sunday in the four-man rifle team match with a 991-99v, edging the runner-up Air Force by four V-ring shots.

The Navy took the third pistol team match, sparked by PO Donald Hamilton who won the individual crown with an 1,168, in the .45 competition.

Hamilton came from one point behind on the third day to edge national champion SFC William B. Blankenship of the MTU by merely two points, 2, 658 to 2, 656. SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the MTU was third with 2,655.

Interservice champion SSgt. Donice Barlett of the Marines won a close battle from the MTU's Capt. Leon Mayer to take the individual rifle title.

Both dropped only a single point over the 100-shot course to finish with 499s, but Bartlett had 67 of his rounds in the v-ring to 56 for Captain Mayer to take the crown.

The majority of the Army matches are still at Fort Benning for the All - Army Matches which had its opening ceremonies Thursday.

Exercise Director Visits

Units Warm Up for Cherokee Trail

Portions of the 2,500-man 1st Brigade Force which will engage in Exercise Cherokee Trail VI late this month returned from their initial night training mission shortly before midnight Thursday.

Men of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry's A, B and C Companies had been in the woods of the Fort Benning Reservation since 7:30 a.m. and they were scheduled to get an even earlier start today, leaving about 6 a.m. and returning near midnight again.

Night Training

A spokesman for the Brigade said that all the 2nd Division troops set to participate in the U. S. Army Special Warfare Center sponsored maneuver in North Carolina will undergo night training, including map and negotiation of map and compass course, before leaving Fort Benning June 20.

Cherokee Trail VI is scheduled to begin June 24 and run for six days.

"It is not a contest," said Col. Dwight B. Dickson, chief controller of the exercise. "We're making no comparison between opposing forces. The guerrillas must accomplish certain things which should make a more realistic situation for the Counter-Insurgency people to work with."

Col. Dickson and four other field grade officers from the 2nd Infantry Division's 1st Brigade will act as advisors to both groups. Certain of the students, however, will work with both groups in psychological warfare techniques.

In the briefing Wednesday Col. Dickson said that the advance party of participants from the center at Fort Bragg, N. C., will move into the one million acre maneuver area June 7. In the initial group, he said, will be the guerrilla chiefs.

Guerrilla Force

The entire guerrilla force is scheduled to reach the maneuver area by June 16 and begin establishing themselves for the start of the exercise.

"We're particularly delighted that we could have the 2nd Division participating with us," Col. Dickson, a former division member, said. "I'm immensely proud of this outfit. I am especially proud of its past performance in Cherokee Trail."

Third Brigade troops participated in Cherokee Trail IV (4) last fall, winning the praise of center officials.

More Troops Committed For Carolina Training Mission

3rd Brigade Takes Over ROTC Summer Program

BY MARV WOLF

The flexibility of the division brigade was put to a new test when an abrupt change of plans caused the 2nd Division's 3rd Brigade to take over the ROTC summer camp commitments of the 82nd Airborne Division this week.

Reason for the switch was the deployment of the "All-American" 82nd to Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

Initial elements of the brigade left Wednesday for Fort Bragg, N. C. home of the 82nd as well as site of the annual summer training undergone by some 2300 ROTC cadets from colleges all over the Southeast.

Accompanying the 3rd Brigade flag will be the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry which had been scheduled to participate in Exercise Cherokee Trail.

Also included in the more than 800 - man force will be a company of the 1st Battalion, 72nd Armor, a company from the 2nd Engineers and Company D of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion.

The main body of troops is not expected to leave until Monday, June 10, according to brigade officials.

The mission will be to assist the ROTC instructors in training the student - officers. Most of the actual training will be conducted by the commissioned and non - commissioned cadre of the respective institutions sending cadets.

The brigade is expected to give at least three classes entirely on its own as well as provide instructors, training aids, vehicles and other forms of support to the summer camp.

The 9th Infantry, normally a mechanized battalion, will leave its armored personnel carriers at Fort Benning and become a "straight leg" outfit for the duration of the summer camp, which is expected to end July 31.

Cadets will not arrive until June 19th, while actual training begins on June 21st.

Artillery Battery Leaves for N.C.

Twenty - six members of Battery B 1st Battalion, 12th Artillery departed last Thursday for Fort Bragg, N. C., where they will conduct their annual training session with the National Guard.

The group includes both missile launch crewmen for the "Honest John missiles as well as fire direction control members, both under the command of Lt. John P. Lyons Jr.

The nineteen-day-mission will include two live firings of the devestating missiles.

The entire detachment is due to return June 22 according to a spokesman for Battery B.

ARTILLERY PASSES IN REVIEW TO SAY FAREWELL

DivArty Review Says Farewell

Divsion Artillery staged a full-scale parade Saturday morning in honor of their departing commander and retiring sergeant major.

The huge parade was conducted at Wetherby Field, with several top division officials in attendance.

Col. Tony F. Perpich, who commanded the artillery since last July, stood before his troops for the last time prior to assuming the position of division chief of staff. Ironically, the preceeding chief of staff, Col. Burnside E. Huffman, had also commanded DivArty.

Sgt. Maj. Wallace C. Treadwell share the reviewing stand with Col. Perpich in one of the rare instances when an officer and NCO stand together on the same reviewing platform.

Named as Perpich's successor as artillery commander is Col. Robert Stafford, now with Headquarters, 4th United States Army at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Holding the command, on an interim basis until Col. Stafford arrives, is Lt. Col. Glen Smith, who normally heads the 17th Artillery Battalion.

During the ceremony, the retiring sergeant major, Wallace C. Treadwell, was given an Army Commendation Medal by Perpich for his ability to "accomplish many and varied tasks — and to resolve problems through tact and mature judgment."

In his final remarks to the artillery he commanded, Col. Perpich said "This is a job I do not like to leave."

He cited the outstanding mark achieved by the artillerymen during the recent Army Training Tests and thanked them for "an outstanding job over the last 11 months."

"I expect that you will give Col. Stafford the same support you have given me," Col. Perpich concluded.

The entire artillery assembly then passed in review for the outgoing commander and retiring top enlisted man.

247 Stripes Coming For June Handout

June promotion allocations received this week at the division indicate that the allocations are running on a par with those alloted during the past two months.

According to Capt. Billy Holbert, personnel management chief, — whose office handles the enlisted promotion allocations — the 2nd Infantry Division has received authority to promote 136 E-4's, 90 E-5's and 21 E6's during the month of June.

He added that allocations "are running about the same as in the months of April and May."

The division has not as yet received the June allocations for E-7, E-8 and E-9. According to Holbert they don't usually hit the unit until the fifth of the month.

"Allocations are broken down to the individual units about the 10th of each month," he stated.

During the month of May the division received authority to promote 156 E-4's, 89 E-5's and 21 E-6's. April statistics show the division received 131 E-4' allocations, 139 E-5's and 20 E-6's.

Kiss Seals Fate of New 'Top Kick'

By DON DUDICK

A lady's warm smile, a great big hug, a kiss and a set of stripes with a diamond in the center were the lot of the 2nd Infantry Division's newest first sergeant.

The kiss came from the wife of Donald J. Ellis, the stripes from the division commander last Saturday morning.

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles and Mrs. Ellis pinned the new top sergeant rank on Ellis in the presence of the chain - of - command of his losing and gaining units.

Ellis was a platoon sergeant (E-7) for "C" Company, 1-72nd Armor, and is now the new first sergeant of Troop C, 7th Cavalry.

Commenting on the promotion, Gen. Chiles said that perhaps the best assignment for an officer is that of company or battery commander, and the best position for a noncommissioned officer is the first sergeant slot.

"I just wish," the division commander added, "that we could have held this ceremony in front of all the troops to give inspiration to those coming up."

Present for Ellis' promotion were: one major general, one brigadier general, two colonels, one lieutenant colonel, two majors, two captains, two first lieutenants, four sergeants major, and, of course, the new first sergeant's immediate supervisor, Mrs. Ellis.

Company Wins First IG Superior

For what is believed to be the first time in the history of the 2nd Infantry Division's Headquarters Company, the unit won a superior rating from the Inspector General.

"The unit has never looked so good," said Maj. Arnold Collins, the assistant Inspector General.

Capt. Alfred F. Grenier, commander of the unit, placed credit for the accomplishment on "the NCOs who hold key leadership roles in the company.

"Without a tremendous effort by these men — which resulted in real troop interest —we could never have done so well."

The inspecting team singled out Capt. Grenier's mail clerk as "one of the most outstanding in the 2nd Division." His area received a perfect score.

The division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commended Capt. Grenier in a letter:

"A rating such as this can only be attained," the general wrote, "through sound leadership and professional knowledge on your part, and many hours of hard work and attention to detail on the part of every individual in your unit."

Cadets Will See Division

The cadets of the U. S. Military Academy's 1966 graduating class will get the opportunity this month to observe and handle the communications equipment of the 2nd Infantry Division.

The 122nd Signal Battalion has been tapped for the two-day communications demonstration to be held on Deckar Field, June 21 and 22.

The 600 members of West Point's "First Class," as the senior cadets are called, will see the division communications center in operation and will get the opportunity to operate it themselves.

According to demonstration officials at the 122nd Signal Battalion, all the cadets will get a chance to operate every piece of communications equipment found in the division.

Sergeants Major Hold Farewell Luncheon for General, Colonel

"The saddest moment in soldiering, it seems to me, is when you have to say goodbye to someone you highly regard. . ."

Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown's voice tapered off to silence, allowing the significance of his opening remarks about Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams and Col. Burnside E. Huffman Jr., to sink in.

Then he started anew:

"There is something special about a goodby in this organization though. A man may come here belonging to another unit, but when he leaves, he leaves as a member of the 2nd Infantry Division: Second to None!"

At the luncheon last Wednesday in the Sand Hill Noncommissioned Officers Club, the division's senior sergeant major was master of ceremonies for a group of his peers honoring the departing assistant division commander and the chief of staff.

Sgt. Maj. Brown recapped the highlights of the two men's careers with the division, then turned over the speaker's platform to them.

"Among this group of fellows," Gen. Williams said, "I feel like a plebe. I've never felt more junior. . .facing all this experience.

"I want to thank you for providing the finest esprit and tradition of any outfit that I've ever seen. I hope that I again have an opportunity to serve with the 2nd Division."

Col. Huffman told the sergeants major that they are members of a group of NCOs that "is probably the highest caliber ever seen in the U.S. Army. You are the cream of the NCOs."

Then he told them they have a "tremendous" responsibility.

"Your responsibility is not only to conduct yourselves so as to maintain the standards of senior NCOs," he said, "But you are also responsible for getting into every facet of your unit. Just like your unit commander — you can't stop at any one thing. And I know you never will."

Drum Major Adds Three Years to Musical Career

A little man who has marched proudly as the vanguard of Army bands for almost 22 musical years has stacked three more years on to his military career.

MSgt. Conrad D. Oller, who for nearly two years has held the baton as drum major of the 2nd Infantry Division bank, re-enlisted for three more years last Saturday. The assistant band master of the Indianheads took the re-up oath from Lt. Col. John W. Gephart who was filling in as commander of Support Command in the absence of Col. Fred O. Jackson.

Oller's experience as a drum major goes back to 1942 when he was drafted into the Army and joined the First Philippino Band. Prior to entering the Army, he studied music for three years at San Francisco State College.

According to Oller, the Asiatic band was organized in the United States during World War II and served as pyramidal guard for battalions and an escort for prisoners of war. After the war the band was broken up and Oller re-enlisted for another music making group.

In 1954 Oller attended the Naval School of Music in Washington and went to the 36th Army Band at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. He then re-enlisted for the 6th Army Band at the Presidio, San Francisco and from there he went to Germany where he served until he came to the 2nd Division.

MRS. ROBERT A. WITTER — Publicity Chairman, Officers' Wives Club

MRS. SAM HART — Publicity Chairman, Ladies of The Big Indianhead

FAREWELLS to Division Artillery's first lady were said last week in a social attended by wives of the unit. Pictured on the left is Mrs. Tony F. Perpich, wife of the departing commander who is to become Chief of staff, and their daughter, Jeannie. Mrs. Burnside E. Huffman Jr., stands on the right.

Artillery Ladies Honor Departing 'First Lady'

The last Division Artillery luncheon of the season, held May 25 at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club, was a grand farewell to Division Artillery's first lady, Mrs. Tony F. Perpich.

The ladies of Headquarters, Division Artillery, presented Mrs. Perpich with a corsage of white cymbidiums. Col. Perpich will become Chief of Staff of the Second Division early in June.

Attending the luncheon as special guests were Mrs. Burnside E. Huffman and Miss Jeanne Perpich, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Perpich.

Mrs. Perpich introduced the guests and recognized two other ladies who will be leaving Fort Benning soon.

Mrs. Fancis E. Mendenhall, wife of Division Artillery's Executive Officer, will be leaving for Carlisle, Pennsylvania following Lt. Col. Mendenhall's departure for Viet Nam. Mrs. James J. Brenner will soon leave for Libya with her husband and family.

A series of paintings, depicting phases of a carnival, had been hung on the walls of the room and set the theme for the luncheon. Each table was centered with a gay, colorful paper clown.

Coffee Held For Ladies of 38th

The ladies of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, enjoyed a poolside coffee at the Main Officers Open Mess recently.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Larry W. Ayers and Mrs. Bernard Guinyard.

Wives Hula as Aviators Feature Touch of Hawaii

The aviators of the 2nd Aviation Battalion and their wives received a taste of Hawaii last Friday night as they attended a Hawaiian luau party.

Although the patio of Victory lodge is a little distant from the shores of Waikiki, the flaming torches, rustic fishnets and Hawaiian music produced an atmosphere of the islands.

Dressed in traditional Hawaiian garb, the partiers sat crossed legged at the knee high tables and ate the many foods which smothered the top. Barbecued steaks, pork, and chicken topped the menu supplemented with pineapples and fruits. It was feast suited for any gourmet.

A highlight of the evening entertainment were the Hula Dancers made up of some of the more daring wives. The girls swayed to the notes of the "Swinging Strings" combo luring those to the tropic isles.

During the evening, the host, Lt. Col. John G. Cleveland, said farewell to departing members of his command and "aloha" to those who have recently joined.

A spokesman who rated the evening with his hands comforting his stomach said the "party was great success and a good time was had by all."

23rd Infantry NCO Completes Fort Jackson NCO School

Sgt. William I. Perry has just returned to A Company, 1st Battalion 23rd Infantry, after completing a six-week course at the Noncommissioned Officers' Academy at Fort Jackson, S. C.

During his training there, Perry specialized in advanced courses in troop leading procedures. In addition, he participated in special guerrilla warfare training, where he attained the highest score in his class.

Perry is a native of Greensboro, N. C., and before coming to Fort Benning, he was stationed at the Missile Center at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Ladies Stage 'Poor Gal's' Pot-Luck; Half Bathing Suit Sells for $800

By VERGIE HART

The ladies of the Big Indianhead NCO Wives Club wrapped up a busy last week with a "Poor Gal's" pot-luck dinner and dance held at the Sand Hill NCO Open Mess.

From seven to eight cocktails were on the girls, followed by a buffet style dinner brought in by the members of the club and featuring treats for tastes of all kinds.

After dinner entertainment opened with a "crazy auction" conducted by the staff of the Sand Hill Service Club, each member and guest drew a bundle of "phoney money" with which to bid. No pile was equal.

From that point the action was furious, with such prizes as half a bathing suit going for as "little" as $800. The catch was, the prizes were bagged, and the bidders had no idea what they were bidding for.

Following the auction was a contest to pick the most beautiful legs in the house — men only! To the winner went a lovely red garter.

As a finish to the evening, dancing was enjoyed by all.

Earlier in the week, the ladies of the Big Indianhead conducted their monthly luncheon at the Sand Hill NCO Club.

Set to a German motiff, Schnitzel, red cabbage, fried potatoes and green salad were served on a table decorated with beer steins.

A beautiful array of spring and summer hats, from Judy's Hat Shop of Columbus, was presented by Mrs. Melvin Hansen, the club's program Chairman.

Mrs. Bonnie Peyton, a branch manager of Sarah Coventry, Inc., assisted by Mrs. Brenda Scott, unit manager, presented a showing of Conventry jewelry for the ladies.

After the luncheon and fashion show, the ladies played bingo with pieces of Sarah Coventry jewelry being given as prizes. Mrs. Peyton donated the jewelry.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Julius Sumrall and Mrs. Roy Adkins. Models, all members of the Big Indianhead Club, were Myra Kennedy, Claudine Brown, Alice Peyton, Juanita Borden and Edith Adkins.

Door prizes were hats from Judy's Hat Shop.

Intelligence Units Hold Formal

The annual Spring Formal Party for the G-2 Section, the 2nd MI Detachment and Company C, 313th ASA Battalion, was held last Saturday at the Country Club of the Fort Benning Officers Open Mess.

Also attending was the Staff Weather Officer.

Lt. Col. Earl Ingram, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, gave the welcoming remarks in his last social with the group before leaving his section to take command of the 1st battalion, 23rd Infantry. During the program, he presented baby cups to Lt. and Mrs. Jerry Barnes, Lt. and Mrs. Randolph Boswell, and Lt. and Mrs. Kim Rodgers, all of whom are parents of small children.

Ingram also had farewell remarks for officers of the three sections who are departing in June. Following refreshments the group enjoyed a roast beef dinner and then danced to orchestra music.

DID YOU KNOW?

A friendly patrol from Company C, Netherlands Detachment, attached to the 38th Infantry during the Korean War, engaged an estimated ten Chinese on February 21. The Chinese used small arms and automatic weapons in an unsuccessful attempt to overrun the patrol.

Garry Owen Couples Feted at Swim Party

The 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry recently had an informal party and a buffet dinner at the Main Officer's Open Mess Swimming Pool.

Lt. Col. John F. McArdle, Squadron commander, presented Garry Owen mementos to plaques to three couples who are leaving the unit.

Maj. and Mrs. Henry F. Martin are going to Japan; Capt. and Mrs. Richard T. Rushton are going to Germany, and Capt. and Mrs. John P. Fernandez are becoming civilians.

The final event at the after-dinner ceremony was the presentation of the "Contribution to Fatherhood Award" to Lt. James F. Perretta for a son, James Thomas, born May 6.

Colonel McArdle also welcomed Maj. Thomas B. Larkin, a new officer, to his first Garry Owen party.

When the after-dinner ceremony was over, the group danced and swam. A large circle of dancers was formed and Lt. William Jennings attempted to teach everyone his own special interpretation of the latest in dancing.

Those who didn't dance or swim were entertained by the spirited stunts of a group of lieutenants and some of the more exuberant captains as they descended the slide and left the diving board in every way imaginable.

When darkness and quiet finally spread over the pool, everyone had a "Garry Owen" good time.

Mrs. White Is Host At Bridge Play

Mrs. John D. White recently entertained the ladies of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry with a bridge party in her home. Mrs. Reginald L. Zeigler assisted Mrs. White.

The bridge group was treated to a variety of refreshments including strawberry shortcake and cucumber sandwiches.

Prizes were taken by Mrs. Oren R. Brown Jr., and Mrs. Zeigler.

Attending the bridge party were Mesdames Matthews Boulis, Robert Gwaltney, Oren Brown, Michael Kalla, William McClure, John Plant, Harold Rodgers, Elliot Worthington, Carl Divirgi, Frank Moss, and the hostesses.

Dan Sweeney's 'View From the Hill'

The Final View--Why?

In all probability this will be my last column for the Bayonet as I have decided to exchange the olive drab for fine tweeds and cast my lot in civilian life.

I do so with happy regrets, if there is such a phrase. Happy because I am pursuing a field of my choice that appears to be filled with opportunity, yet regretful because I have immensely enjoyed my two years experience in the army both as a combat officer and as an Information officer.

My experiences over the two-year-span will always be remembered as one which enabled me to develop to some degree the poise, confidence and maturity that comes with age and experience.

It has provided me with some sound building blocks which will enable me to pursue the career of my choice.

My last topic was an easy selection because at one time or other everyone in the army is confronted with the question whether to stay in or get out of the army. I am getting out and since I have chosen to, I have decided to list a few reasons why so many other than me do the same.

I have never been an enlisted man therefore I don't really know why they get out. Although there are the usual complaints about poor salary and living conditions, the most valid reason seems to come as a result of misplacement in a military occupation specialty.

I can site many instances in the division where men in line battalions who held professional or tradesmen's positions in civilian life, now dig ditches or flop eggs on a griddle. How did they get there?

There was no critical shortage for a carpenter but there was for a tank driver. . .today, that professional carpenter is driving a tank. This is admittedly hypothetical but it is close to the truth.

Many high ranking NCOs are leaving the army with a discernable bitter taste in their mouth. Anyone with an ear to the ground can hear them say "when my twenty are up, I'm heading down the road!" Why? They tell you the Army isn't what it was five or ten years ago.

What's so different? One very frank statement I think summed it up well, "They've got officers doing the NCO jobs," he said, "and the jobs we once had aren't there any longer. The NCO has lost his prestige."

The story is no different for a young officer. A college trained accountant spends two years in a tank company or an aeronautical engineer supervises a platoon of bridge builders until he gets out of the service in twenty years away from a wife and three children, all at critical ages. Yet it is compulsory. Why couldn't it be made optional with early promotions granted on the willingness of a man to accept hardship?

Acceptance in society is another frustrating experience especially for an enlisted man. No man deserves to swallow his pride or have his personal integrity defaced, but every day it happens in so called "Army Towns." Ours is no exception.

It is nearly impossible for an EM to cash a check more than a week beyond payday without pleading for kindness from the proprietor.

Some of the sophisticated refuse outright to credit to anyone below the grade of E-6. Yet they won't hesitate to extend thousands of dollars in credit to an officer simply because he draws more money.

I won't say that some of this is not the fault of the GI, but the fellow can't live from month to month on his meager salary without being extended some credit. His only recourse then is to borrow from one of the nearly 70 loan companies located in town and pay retribution at an excessive amount.

Unable to meet the commitments he hangs his head in shame, his pride humiliated, his integrity defaced.

I don't like ending a rather pleasant two years on such a sour note because the experience and maturity I feel I have gained will stand me in good stead.

It's the PFC's and 'Spec fours' which make the United States Army the most powerful force in the world that I'm concerned with.

They have that bitter taste in their mouth and rightly so, for they can cite personal and sometimes more disheartening instances where they as members of this force had to swallow their personal pride. . .This is why they and soldiers like myself are getting out of the Army.

Chiles Speaks Of Latin Neighbors

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commander of the 2nd Infantry Division, last Thursday night was the featured speaker at the Military Order of World Wars final meeting until September.

Gen. Chiles, who has served military tours in three Spanish - speaking countries, told of "Our Southern Neighbors and the Latin Study Group."

At the meeting in the Main Officers' Open Mess, Lt. Col. Guy E. Snavely Jr., became commander of the organization, heading a list of nine newly installed officers.

MP Finds World's Fair An Enjoyable Assignment

FLUSHING MEADOW, N. Y. — As inevitable a part of the New York World's Fair for the errant soldier as the open air beer stands is the friendly military policeman.

March your uniformed figure past his sharp plane of vision at anything short of 200 yards and Sgt. Theopria James, or one of his 25 stern-faced counterparts, will engage you in an interesting conversation.

"Let me see your pass, soldier. How long have you been in the Army?" Don't you know how to wear that uniform? You been drinking?"

Your papers in order and a firm promise to never again lose — or seem to lose — your military bearing in public, is likely to win you your freedom and a smile from Sgt. James.

"We're not here to harrass the people," he said, "but we've got to do our job. Actually, we've had very little trouble with soldiers."

One thing about soldiers, Sgt. James said, is that very few of them wear their uniforms to the Fair.

"You might see a recruit every now and then, but most of the guys in uniform are sailors and Coast Guardsmen," he said. "Navy guys on board ship aren't allowed to have civilian clothes."

Since there was "very little" trouble from any armed forces men the first half of the Fair (running for six months from April 1964), Sgt. James said he was able to see most of the exhibits there.

"But there were a few missed," he said, "and there are some I'd like to see again. I'd have to say this is a pretty good assignment.

"Living expenses are high and it could be a little rough for a private or a man not making much money, but I prefer to be here. I'm enjoying it."

Sgt. James said he most enjoyed the Transportation Pavilion and the General Motors and Ford exhibits.

"I liked seeing all the modern cars," he said. "I think the exhibits I mentioned are more educational for grown ups."

Sgt. James had no particular tips to offer soldiers at the Fair, but another MP sergeant stationed in Manhattan's giant bus and train terminal, The Port Authority, rasped a simple message:

"Hey, soldier, straighten that tie. Ain't you ever been in the City? If you know what's good for you you'll get out of that uniform in a hurry."

WWII Leader Retires With 1st of the 23rd

Col. Henry G. Spencer — who commanded the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry during the hottest moments of World II — was retired by that unit in ceremonies conducted at Wetherby Field last Friday.

The entire battalion formed and passed in review for the colonel, who spent over 35 years in the service.

The colonel requested to be retired by the 23rd, and made a trip from his last assignment as director of the Command and General Staff Department of the Kansas City United States Army Reserve School to conclude his Army career.

Spencer won the Silver Star in the waning months of World War II as the result of his gallantry under fire near St. Lo, France.

Reads the citation for the decoration, "He personally crashed a heavy barrage of enemy fire — both mortar and artillery—to direct artillery shelling that silenced enemy batteries."

He was seriously wounded during the fight, and later was evacuated only after the battalion regained momentum and continued the full-scale attack.

Division's Largest

Admin Co. Posts Change Hands; New Leaders Ponder the Problem

In a quiet ceremony last Thursday morning, Capt. Donald R. Edge passed the colors of the 2nd Administration Company to Capt. William Honjiyo, assistant operations officer of Support Command.

As Capt. Edge assumed new duties as personnel and administration officer of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry the first sergeant who had served with him, Willie R. Whitehead, moved to Fort Benning's Main Post to the Student Brigade.

Joining Capt. Honjiyo, in Sgt. Whitehead's place, was 1st Sgt. Leonard Paige, who in recent months had watched the Administration Company from his post as first sergeant of the 2nd Infantry Division's Replacement Center, located within the company area.

A week after Capt. Donald Edge and 1st Sgt. Willie Whitehead left the leadership of the sprawling 2nd Administration Company, its new leaders took time to reflect upon the command of one of the largest company units in the U. S. Army.

The new leaders of the 420-man company—the division's largest — are Capt. William Honjiyo, and 1st Sgt. Leonard Page. Capt. Edge and Sgt. Whitehead were with the company since early last fall.

Honjiyo has spent nearly six years serving with combat infantrymen and Paige is widely experienced in military administrative matters.

"I plan to stress the basics of overall soldering — military discipline, pride and esprit de corps," the captain said.

"I feel that each man in this company is a specialist in his own field. If I can instill in him a greater feeling of unity and pride in his unit, then I will feel I have achieved my goal."

Working together toward the late - June scheduled visit from the Inspector General, and having "very firm and insistent" leadership, the sergeant said, should provide the opportunity.

Sgt. Paige, who 2½ years after being plucked out of business administration classes at Southern University in Louisiana by the draft was a master sergeant doing a first sergeant's job, said he intends to safeguard the welfare of all his men.

"I want to insure that each man gets his fair share of duties and that no one carries more burden than his neighbor," he said. "I don't believe in doing unnecessary work, either. If there is a good reason not to do something, we won't do it."

He said he expects to make certain that formations are attended so that "everyone will know what's expected of them. I want to keep the men informed. They shouldn't be left to wonder what's expected."

Comparing the command of the office worker corps to past experiences as a basic training platoon leader and rifle company commander, Capt. Honjiyo said he expected diplomacy to come into play more.

"In this kind of unit you are dealing with various sections and you can't dictate what the men will do during the day," he said, "You really only have command of the men between reveille and work call and after retreat each night. Conflicts in the use of the men's time could cause a lot of problems."

Training, he said, will necessarily be more limited than in a front-line unit, but "every man should be proficient enough in military skills to convert to the infantryman's role at any time."

Capt. Honjiyo, a native of Hawaii said that in leisure hours he hopes to conduct classes for Administration Company men in the art of judo. The airborne, ranger-trained captain holds the black belt.

Seaman spent two years with the division, during the greater part of his tour he commanded the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry.

Captain Joins Civil Affairs From Civilian Employment

A 30-year-old captain, who returned to the service after five years in an Indiana missile plant, recently joined the 2nd Division's civil affairs (G5) staff.

Capt. Stanley S. Sessler II replaced Capt. Jerry Mooney as the assistant to Maj. David Forsythe, the division civil affairs officer.

For a short period both captains worked in the civil affairs office.

Mooney handled his old duties while Sessler attended the eight-week civil affairs School at Fort Gordon, Ga. Mooney has since received orders to Viet Nam.

Sessler graduated from Indiana University with a major in comic Clum Three.

Farewell to Assistant

Williams Receives Legion of Merit

By JOE TREASTER

Brig. Gen. Robert R. Williams Monday left his post as assistant division commander of the 2nd Infantry Division to take a similar position with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

En route to Korea, Gen. Williams is scheduled to spend a week at the Army's maintenance course for senior officers at Fort Knox, Ky. and several days vacationing in California.

He is to report for duty in Seoul, Korea, June 28.

Final Tribute

Last Friday, 2nd Division soldiers paid a final tribute to the general with a miniature review in Kimbro Gym.

The massing of soldiers had been scheduled for Marine Field but was driven indoors by heavy rain.

In the brief ceremony, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander, praised Williams and pinned to his chest the Legion of Merit medal — one of the Army's highest commendations for meritorious service.

Citation

According to Lt. Col. Thomas Leahy, adjutant general, who read aloud the accompanying citation, Gen. Williams was awarded the medal for his performance as commander of the Test Evaluation and Control (TEC) Group, which played a vital role in development of Army air mobility concepts.

"He was directly responsible for the evaluation of the largest and most comprehensive series of tests ever conducted by the Army of a new division organization," Col. Leahy read.

Gen. Chiles told his assistant: "I am delighted that this richly deserved recognition of your contribution to the Army arrived while you were still at Fort Benning. I join the entire division in wishing your God-speed."

Pleasant Tour

Gen. Williams told the soldiers his tour with the division had "been a short, but pleasant one." He joined the division in April.

"The spirit of the unit in the face of adversity is truly second to none," he said. "I have seen here a standard that will give me a goal to work toward in my future assignments."

Top Soldier Again Named Best of Div

The 2nd Infantry Division's Soldier of the Year came to the fore recently as soldier of the month for May.

Sp4 Gerald M. Clayton was chosen soldier of the year during division organization day celebrations last October.

As soldier of the month Clayton outscored representatives from the other major units in the division before a board which tested his knowledge, military bearing and appearance.

A native of Palmyra, Ill., he graduated from Northwestern High School as class valedictorian in 1959.

As a member of Troop C, 7th Cavalry, Clayton has served as an armored vehicle mechanic and as the troop commander's driver.

Presently he spends his off duty hours working on automobiles used at local speedways. He says that this is his chief hobby.

He recently announced his intention of enrolling at the University of Illinois where he plans to get a degree in Aeronautical Engineering after he is released from active duty.

Face of Sgt Maj Runyon Lives in Giant Menument

By MARV WOLF

Third Brigade soldiers may recognize a familiar face when they pass the giant replica of a combat-laden paratrooper at Fort Bragg, N. C. where they will spend the next 60 days training ROTC cadets.

If anyone takes a good look at the 15-foot colossus of steel, bronze and fiberglass, standing on the main avenue between Fayetteville, N. C. and Bragg, he will notice its marked resemblence to brigade sergeant major, James L. Runyon.

The resemblence is no coincidence.

Runyon spent four hours a day during the months of July and August, 1961, posing as the model for the statue. The sculptor was Mrs. Samuel Hiebert, wife of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Hiebert, the Fort Bragg deputy chaplain.

He recalls that he posed every morning for twenty minutes at a time with a five minute break while Mrs. Hiebert fashioned first a one foot, then a four foot and finally a seven foot model of the statue commemorating the World War II paratrooper.

Runyon, himself a veteran of two combat jumps during that war, remembers that he posed in an old-style jump suit, combat pack and 'Tommy' gun.

The figure, so large it required a base of 2500 pounds of steel for counterbalance, was unveiled at a ceremony on September 23, 1961.

Ironically, Runyon was not present for the unveiling.

Qualified

Although a qualified jumper with more than three hundred jumps to his credit Runyon was transferred from the 82nd Airborne Division to become sergeant major of the 1st Battle Group, 9th Infantry at Fort Benning, thus concluding almost eighteen years on jump status.

He was at Fort Benning at the time of the unveiling.

Ingrams Departs G-2 for 23rd

With a few quips and fun-poking humor, men of the G-2 section last week sent their Assistant Chief on his way to assume command of the 1st battalion, 23rd Infantry.

Lt. Col. Earl Ingram, who has headed G-2 Intelligence since last April, was treated with a coffee and cake farewell in his office as he wrapped up his last day's work there. Maj. William Lam moves into the seat as the G-2 chief.

The colonel who is serving his third assignment with the 2nd Division left the staff section with remarks that he was "happy with the caliber of soldiers. I don't think any staff section chief could ask for more."

Dispensary Handles 1200 a Month

By DAVE BUMAN

Have you had any shots lately? If you have, and if you're in Support Command, you're just one in a thousand who were "stuck" last month in dispensary B. Or maybe you're one of the more than 1200 men who went on sick call last month, or more than 1800 who has perscriptions filled.

Operated by the 2nd Medical Battalion, Dispensary B provides service for all the units of Support Command as well as the 184th Chemical Platoon, Division Headquarters, 3rd Brigade Headquarters, the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, the 1st of the 23rd Infantry, and the marksmanship detachment.

Staffed

Open 24 hours a day, the dispensary is staffed by seven enlisted personnel from 0730 until 1800, and by three doctors until 1200 hours. During normal off duty hours, one medical technician and one ambulance driver is on duty.

In addition, dispensary B also provides service to Martin Army Hospital and aid stations to it's support units while in the field.

The first of eight sections within the dispensary is the screening station. Set up to economize the hours of on-duty doctors, Sp6 Billy Marts, screening chief, interviews patients and determines if their complaint requires the attention of a doctor or if it can be taken care of by the staff.

Operation

Close to the operation of the screening station is the operation of the records section where accurate and up to date medical files are kept on every member of servicing units.

Also maintained in the outer office is the admission and disposition section where patients are screened for admission to hospitals or clinics and are assigned to quarters if necessary.

Daily Runs

Also within the dispensary is an immunization section handling over 1000 shots per month, a minor surgery section, a treatment room, and a pharmacy.

Lastly, there is an ambulance section providing daily runs to Martin Army hospital in addition to on call emergency service night or day.

Sp6 Mitchell Ammons, senior medical technician and pharmacist says "there's very little we do not do, including sanitary inspections of mess halls, and assistance to unit operated aid stations, as well as field support — all with a staff of seven."

OUCH . . . Sp6 Ammons, the dispensary's senior medical specialist stabs an unwilling victim with the Army medics' favorite weapon, the M-45 semi-automatic needle.

Div Representatives See New Anti-Tank Weapon

A cross section of 2nd Infantry Division sergeants and several of the major commanders this week saw the Army's new Light Anti-tank Weapon, the M72, in action at Patton Range.

A team which has been touring U. S. Army posts, told of the weapon's capabilities in an illustrated lecture, then demonstrated how it is fired.

The weapon weighs only four and a half pounds and has a maximum range of 1,000 yards, according to Maj. Donald Bearss, who led the demonstration team.

Discarded

He said launchers and rockets will be issued together and that when the accompanying ammunition supply is depleted, the weapon is discarded.

The major said the LAW is expected to replace heavier anti-tank weapons, and instead of being limited to use by weapons squads only, would go to rifle squads also.

Maj. Bearss said that Advanced Individual Training Classes should begin firing the weapon early next year. He said it is expected that each student will fire two rounds.

"We feel that is enough to make a man a qualified gunner," the Major said, "He needs one shot to get used to the way the weapon fires; then another to get a hit that will give him confidence."

SSgt. Johnny Lindsey and Sgt. Gilbert Archue Archuleta, squad leaders from the 2nd Engineer Battalion, who had never before seen or fired the weapon, volunteered to be "typical students."

9 Aviators Collect Vietnam-Won Medals

Six pilots and three crew chiefs of the 2nd Aviation Battalion last Saturday collected 35 medals for their efforts in Viet Nam at a review on Stilwell Field.

Warrant Officer Jerry F. Irwin topped the list of honorees, winning an Army Commendation Medal and nine oak leaf clusters for a previously earned Air Medal. One of the clusters was awarded with Vee-device for valor.

Reviewing the khaki - clad battalion and awarding the medals was the unit commander, Lt. Col. John G. Cleveland. Maj. Jerry L. Teague the battalion executive officer commanded the troops.

An Air Medal and three oak leaf clusters went to CWO Bobby E. Scott, whose helicopter engine failed, dropping him and his crew into a Viet Cong infested rice paddy where they had to machine gun their way out.

Warrant Officer Lewis Postles received an Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters and Capt. Robert N. Adams got the medal and e four clusters.

Lieutenants Thomas J. Long and Bobby N. Williams and Specialists Four John Clark and Robert R. McCook received Army Commendation Medals. Lt. Long also received an Air Medal with two oak clusters.

Sp4 Danny Danford was awarded the Air Medal. . . . Irwin R. Owens of Bremen, Ga.

AVIATOR PINNED . . . One of the nine aviators who was recently honored with combat decorations won in Vietnam, Lt. Col. John Cleveland, Aviation Battalion commander made the presentation during a review.

Ye Olde Fisherman Sez:

Stripes Run Deep In June

BY CHUCK SILER

With school getting out this week, many servicemen with families will be taking leaves and many will probably do some fishing.

Unless you particularly enjoy drowning worms while the Dixie sun bakes you without so much as tempting a fish, it's a good idea to determine just where we are in the fishing season.

White bass (known locally as stripe bass) completed their spawning run during late March and early April and have now moved into deep water.

The best method of locating the Stripe in June is to troll deep until one takes your plug. Then criss-cross the same area a few times to determine if you have picked up a stray or located a school.

The second fish from the same general area is evidence enough to try the jig routine, which, when working over a school of Stripes can fill a stringer pretty quickly.

Jig Fishing

Jig fishing for stripe bass or crappie requires a little skill and a lot of confidence on the part of the angler. After what is believed to be a school is located by trolling, tie a small jig (number 6 or 8 hook) directly onto your monofilament line. Your line should be six pounds or less. Cast the jig out, letting it sink to the bottom and retrieve slowly one or two cranks of the reel at a time pausing from three to five seconds between turns.

Methodically comb the bottom in a circle completely around the boat or until you hook one. Once the school is pinpointed, it should be good for several fish before they move out of the area. You may be able to return to the same location and find stripe bass for several days running.

When the stripe strikes he hits relatively hard but your set must be quick or he will spit the jig out.

Crappie, on the other hand, takes the jig with a gentle tug resembling the feel of a small sunfish biting a worm. A light setting action will hook the Crappie, known for its tender mouth.

Stripe bass appear to be finicky about the color of the jigs at different times. During the spawning runs, when they move to the headwaters of the lakes, yellow jigs pay off consistently. During June and July white jigs produce better in the deep tailwaters of the lakes although occasionally they take black better than the lighter colors.

Night Stripes

Even when you are catching fish, the Georgia sun limits you to a few hours during June unless you fish at night. Stripe fishing under a lantern is worth fighting the mosquitoes which you must do unless you dress heavily and use insect repellant on the exposed skin.

One lantern hung about 18 inches above the water will attract hundreds of shad minnows. The shad will swim in a circle around the light and Stripe will periodically slash through the minnows taking your line in a fierce striking action.

Two lanterns work best. First hang the two lanterns together until the minnows start their circle. Gradually move one lantern toward the opposite end of the boat until they are about eight feet apart. The minnows increase their circle to go around both lights.

If the two lanterns are separated to start, two small circles of shod will form instead of one large circle. This will accommodate several fishing lines.

A screen dip pulled through the circling shod will provide all the bait needed to catch your limit in stripe bass plus an occasional smallmouth bass which follow the stripe schools around and clean up some of the injured minnows they leave in the wake of their victor's attacks.

Lieutenants Get Silver Bars At G-2 Ceremony

Two 2nd Infantry Division second lieutenants in the intelligence field recently received their silver bars.

Promoted in the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, were Lt. Jerry B. Barnes and Lt. Martin E. Grace. Lt. Col. Earl Ingram, the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, gave Barnes silver bars while Capt. Forest Wood, commander of the 2nd Military Intelligence Detachment, pinned bars on Grace.

Both young officers are assigned to the MI Detachment. Grace works in the counterintelligence section while Barnes is attached to G-2 as an Order of Battle officer.

The two lieutenants were commissioned through ROTC programs. Barnes is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute while Grace is a graduate of William and Mary College.

Medals, Awards Given Soldiers

Four Good Conduct medals and a certificate of achievement were awarded to men from Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade during a ceremony last Friday.

Receiving Good Conduct medals from Col. John Armstrong, brigade commander, were SP4 Howard Dorr, SP4 James Tran, PFC Zane Hendrix and PFC Garry Koodman.

MSgt. Billy G. Frost, communications platoon sergeant received a Certificate of Achievement signed by Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, 2nd Division Commander, as an interim award for the Army Commendation medal.

During the Korean War, Battery A of the 2nd Division's 12th Artillery won its second Distinguished Unit Citation for heroism with the 2nd Battalion, Combat Team in May 1951.

Sergeant's Vocabulary Limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — All right you army drill sergeants, no more telling rookies it's the blankety-blank left foot you start off on and it's the (censored) Army they're in now . . . not mama's kitchen.

All you "knucklehead" GI's who sweated through basic training to the tender words of a considerate platoon corporal, should be advised things have changed.

The Army's number one soldier — Chief of Staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson — fears continued use of off-color language is going to harm the Army's image.

Incomprehensible as it may be to you old timers, the man even seems to be suggesting soft-talking drill sergeants!

Johnson has circulated an order that in effect tells his instructors to clean up their language.

"I do not believe that we need blink at or condone those instances where the impropriety of the actions of our leaders and instructors can be interperted clearly as offensive to many of the individuals who are subordinate to them."

So you see, there are not going to be any more memories of a KP pusher tenderly getting you out of the sack at 3 a.m. for chow.

Support Command Digs 197th; 10-6 Win Breaks Up Losing Streak

197th Rolls To 9-5 Win Over Arty

Main Post teams tightened a clamp on the "Indianhead" nines this week as the 197th Infantry Brigade rolled to a 9-1 victory at the expense of Division Artillery.

Behind strong pitching of Eichorn, the infantrymen kept DivArty at bay until late in the game. Through the first seven innings, Eichorn gave up two runs, scattered five hits, and struck out 12 men. He tired in the eighth and was relieved by Harris who finished up.

DivArty grabbed the lead in the second when Catcher Keith Grauvogl singled a shot to center and drove one man in.

3 Runs

A three-run burst in the third gave the 197th a lead they never relinquished. With one down, Williamson and Farrell singled. Groce brought both of them home with a ringing triple to left center. First baseman Sumter followed with a single to score Groce.

The infantrymen added three more in the top of the fourth inning with a single by winning pitcher Eichorn that drove one man across the plate. A costly error by DivArty's second sacker Jim Moyes on a ball hit by Charlie Farrell led to the other two runs scoring.

Singles

McLean singled a run home in the sixth. Sumter tripled home another run in the ninth and later scored himself in to complete the scoring for the 197th.

In the 8th Div. Arty took advantage of wildness on the part of Eichorn and then later Harris to score three runs.

Odie Davis and Leo Cooper delivered singles sandwiched around a pair of walks and a hit batsmen, but Moyes struck out to end the inning.

Sumter with four hits, including a triple, sparked the 13-hit, attack of the 197th.

First baseman Charles Kelly had a long double for DivArty.

Frank Bumpers took the loss for DivArty. It was his first defeat of the year.

Support Command broke a personal four - game losing streak Friday night on Bennett Field by defeating the 197th Infantry Brigade, 10-6.

It was Ronald Rahr's bat as well as his arm that led the Support Command to victory. He held the infantrymen to two runs until the ninth while fanning 12.

Equally important was his bat. His single in the fourth was the key blow in a three run rally that gave Support Command a 4-2 lead.

Keith Youngs started the rally with a walk and Echedonia followed with another. One run came when McLean fumbled Bob Stringer's grounder. Rahr followed with his single to drive in the other two runs.

The 197th Infantry used a total of four pitchers.

Base on balls proved to be the undoing of the infantrymen. Their pitchers walked a total of 12 men. Five of these later came around to score.

Rahr led the Support Command hitters with three hits. Catcher Bob Stringer scored twice as did third sacker John Grillo for the Support Command.

Center fielder Charlie Farrell had three hits for the infantrymen, while first sacker Sumter had a 1st inning triple.

It was the 2nd win of the season for Rahr.

1st Brigade Follows With Victory Over TSB After Upsetting Medics

TSB loaded the bases in the fifth but Knight struck out to end the threat. They did not threaten seriously again.

Of the four hits garnered by TSB, left fielder Blosser had two of them. Clark and Alkire got the other two.

Ostalaza with two singles and a double sparked 1st Brigade's hitting attack. Jesse Owens, Navarro, and Robinson chipped in with two hits each.

First Brigade used their speed effectively in the game, especially on the base paths. The Brigade stole seven bases during the game, many of them leading to runs.

Clark took the loss for TSB. He was combed for 13 hits and 6 runs.

The win gave 1st Brigade a 3-4 record. TSB is now 1-5.

After upsetting the undefeated first place 428th Medical Battalion Monday night, they charged ahead again the following evening and downed The Student Brigade, 6-0.

Brigade hurler John Robinson hurled a masterful four hitter, striking out ten. All four TSB hits were singles, two of them the scratch variety.

First Brigade jumped off to a two run lead in the first inning and were never headed. With one out, Gus Banks drew a walk and moved to second when Wilson Navarro singled. First sacker Elifia Ostalaza drove both of them home with a double over the centerfielder's head.

By FRED MORROW

On Monday night at Gowdy Field, First Brigade pulled the upset of the baseball season by defeating the previously undefeated 428th Medical Battalion. The Medics were on top in the league standings, while the Brigade was at the bottom.

The same night at Bennett Field Support Command broke a four game losing streak dumping the 197th Infantry Brigade, 10-6.

These two victories seemed to serve as an impetus for more Division victories. The following night First Brigade obviously fired up after their victory over the Medics rode the strong right arm of John Robinson to an easy 6-0 triumph over TSB.

Third Brigade followed the script by upsetting CTC 4-2 at Gowdy Field. Previous to this the Brigade had won only one game, which CTC had a 4-1 record and was only a half game out of first place.

Stronger pitching was the key to the wins. Leo McClendon pitched a strong game in 1st Brigade's win over the Medics Monday. He tired in the late innings, but Moore came on to preserve the victory.

Ronald Rahr and Lu Menter continued their fine pitching. Rahr pitched Support Command to their 10-6 win Monday over the 197th Infantry. Four of the infantrymen' six runs came in the 9th due to errors. Menter limited a strong hitting CTC league race should now be tightening up.

Whether or not the Division teams will continue on the upswing depends heavily on one factor — pitching. Besides that's the name of the game.

Division to Begin Expert Infantry Badge Testing

The 11th Air Assault Division will conduct Expert Infantry Badge testing from June 28 through July 17, for all Infantrymen assigned to the division.

An individual must have fired sharpshooter or better with his individual weapon or have qualified as a first class gunner or his crew-served weapon. The candidate must have at least a score of 225 on the last PT test, he must have completed a prescribed bayonet assault course, and have qualified in field stripping and assembling his individual weapon and one crew-served weapon.

The 11th EIB test Board is headed by Maj. Guy Eberhardt. Other members are Captains George S. Crawford, Robert W. McMahon, and Robert T. Adams.

Individuals taking the test will be tested on knowledge of weapons, map reading, use of a compass, the hand grenade, adjustment of artillery fire, demolitions, mines, military intelligence, patroling, cover and concealment, military courtesy and discipline, first aid, field sanitation, CBR, Communications, army aircraft, and rappelling. A 12 mile road march in three hours is also included.

The test will be given by Infantrymen, artillerymen, engineers, medics, and chemical personnel.

The three highest scoring men in the division will receive trophies, and the company - sized unit with the greatest percentage of successful candidates participating will also receive a trophy.

This test is designed to identify and reward the truly outstanding infantrymen in the division.

Cav Squadron Leaves Today For Fort Knox

More than 60 aircraft and their crews from the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry will leave Fort Benning today for Fort Knox, Ky.

Commanded by Lt. Col. John B. Stockton, the armed helicopter unit is expected to remain there twelve days.

The purpose of the air cavalry's visit is to provide a live fire demonstration during the period June 9-11. The demonstration will be witnessed by the Armor Association and 1st Classmen from the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y. The cadets are making their annual tour of U. S. Army installations, prior to graduation.

Civilian Leaders

Assistant Secretary of Defense Cyrus Vance as well as numerous other high ranking civilian and military leaders are are also expected to view the firepower demonstration.

The cavalry squadron returned May 26th from Fort Campbell, Ky., where they participated in RED CHIP VI, a firepower display put on for the Joint Civilian Orientation Conference (JCOC). Part of the units ground vehicles remained at Fort Campbell and are expected to leave today, for Fort Knox.

Joined Paratroopers

During their stay at Fort Campbell the 17th Cavalrymen joined paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division and tactical Air Force jet fighter support for the joint JCOC live fire demonstration.

During the cavalry's stay at Fort Knox they will be resupplied on a daily basis by the 44th Air Transport Battalion. CV-2 CARIBOU aircraft will leave here this afternoon with some of the squadron's personnel and equipment.

Dominican Aid In Fourth Week

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC—Sky Soldier aviation personnel of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion task force commander by Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan moved into their fourth week of foreign duty in the Dominican Republic Monday, May 31, with a good deal of hard work behind them, but with renewed determination to carry on their mission.

Despite rather adverse conditions, heavy rains and field living problems, morale has remained high, and the Sky Soldiers' performance has been equally high, characterized by a professional approach as they carry out missions of mercy, training assignments, and provide air transport for important military and civilian dignitaries.

One such mercy mission occurred three days ago when one of the battalion's UH-IDs airlifted a seriously ill farmer out of mountainous terrain for an emergency operation at the 15th Field Hospital.

Heavy training has also been conducted by the "Stacked Deck" battalion, conducting night navigational operations, aircraft - carrier qualifications, supporting the

For Heroic Rescue

Crewman Earns Soldiers Medal

The selfless action of a 227th Helicopter Battalion crewchief was acknowledged recently with the presentation of the nation's highest peacetime award for heroism, the Soldiers Medal.

Sp5 Karl E. Liggett was cited this week by Brig. Gen. John M. Wright, assistant division commander.

On May 20, 1964, Sp5 Liggett was crewchief on a Company B helicopter that was part of a four ship formation. Immediately after takeoff the lead aircraft, fully loaded with combat equipped troops, crashed into a wooded area.

The pilot of Sp5 Liggetts' helicopter reacted quickly to the emergency and immediately landed. As soon as the aircraft touched down, Liggett ran to the downed helicopter to assist in the evacuation of the wounded.

Ignoring the impending danger of a fuel explosion and with complete disregard for his own safety, he pulled the injured crew members out of the wreckage despite the ruptured fuel tanks and the running engine of the downed helicopter.

BULLETIN

Thirty-seven members of the 229th Task Force who have been in the Dominican Republic returned to Lawson Field late yesterday.

They return from a short debriefing stay at Pope Air Force Base, N.C.

On hand to greet the returning Sky Soldiers was the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, plus joyful wives and relatives.

Puerto Rico Is Mecca for 229th While Off Duty

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC—Puerto Rico is becoming a mecca for limited numbers of troops comprising the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion Task Force on duty in the Dominican Republic, as small groups are permitted to make two-day trips on a rotating basis.

Initiated by the 229th Commander, Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, two weeks after their arrival in the republic, scheduled flights on USAF aircraft take small groups to Ramey Air Force Base for an overnight stay, where the troops get hot showers and use of the base facilities such as theaters, clubs, and the base exchange.

It is a welcomed respite from duty in the Dominican Republic, and as time goes by, more and more of Col. Buchan's troops will get to take advantage of it, giving the Sky Soldiers something to look forward to during the hard work under rugged conditions currently going on in the field of military engineering in the development of engineer requirements associated with the air mobile concept.

127th Engineers Return From Fort McClellan

The 127th Engineer Battalion has just returned from Fort McClellan, Ala., where they conducted their annual Platoon Army Training Tests.

The operation got under way with the issuance of the operation order from higher headquarters on May 22, 1965.

Aggressor forces had commented a restrograde movement southwest of the Coosa River. Friendly forces had regained control of Maxwell Air Force Base but a force of undertermined size still held Fort McClellan.

The 127th Engineer Battalion was placed in a general support role when the 11th Air Assault Division was committed to seize and hold Fort McClellan.

The battalion deployed to the western sector of Fort McClellan and was to use this area and its landing facilities as a base of operations in support of the division. Letter companies were placed in direct support of their respective brigades after securing the base of operations.

Each day, umpires, acting as brigade commanders, issued operations orders to each company commander for his following day's missions. Nine controlled test exercises were used for evaluating each letter company platoon's ability to operate independently and accomplish assigned engineer missions.

These exercises were hasty helipad construction, abatis construction and removal, hasty road cratering, road crater repair, rigging, aerial minelaying, and timber trestle bridge construction.

Two night exercises were also conducted for evaluating each platoon's night operational capabilities such as minefield breaching and clearing, and bridge reconnaissance and destruction. Chemical warefare was also used in evaluating each platoon's reaction under gas attacks.

Headquarters Company provided general support for the battalion operation and direct support with equipment for platoon tests. Sgt. Edward J. Nemth's light equipment platoon provided the necessary assault engineer equipment to support the platoon tests.

SFC Charles E. Horvell acted as commanding field marshall for the Redland aggressor forces which were composed of personnel from one heavy equipment platoon. Field Marshall Horrell, assisted by commandant (SFC) Gregorio G. Rivera, continually harrassed the company platoons during their tests with sneak gas attacks and infiltration tactics.

Maj. Thomas I. McMurry's Company C, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, provided helicopter support for three platoon tests, two of which envolved rappelling from helicopters with live demolitions. Maj. McMurry's company flew a total of 27 tactical missions for the Beavers.

The Engineers left Fort McClellan on May 28 after having completed 108 hours of continuous tactical operations. The return to Fort Benning was accomplished with 13 CV-2 sorties provided by the 516th Transportation Airplane Company and by ground convoy.

Evaluation of results and debriefing is now underway back in garrison in order that the Beavers may even more effectively accomplish their combat support mission.

Task Force Pilots Make Army-Navy First at Sea

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC—Another "first" was added to the long list of accomplishments of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion Task Force, May 18 as two pilots made both Army and Naval achievements.

It was the mission of Capt. Christian Miller and 1st Lt. George Michel to deliver some necessary equipment by helicopter to the USS Miles C. Fox, a U. S. Navy Destroyer.

What would have perhaps been a routine mission for the men, turned out to be more complicated than expected.

The destroyer was located some 15 miles off the coast of Santo Domingo. The seas were rough and the finding the ship was like looking for a needle in a haystack.

Originally the plan was to lower the equipment while the helicopter hovered above the destroyer which was moving at a speed of 10 knots. However, when they arrived, Lt. Michel noted that the safety barriers were being cleared away and a small 30-foot square area was made available on the rear of the ship. Lt. Michel elected to land the helicopter there.

Unknown to the men at the time, they had accomplished something never before done aboard the USS Fox.

The landing area had never received any aircraft larger than a drone helicopter and the ship's commander complimented the men on their ability to successfully accomplish the difficult landing.

attached pathfinder team and conducting orientation classes and lifts for paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Aircraft maintenance, always somewhat of a problem even under the finest conditions, has been outstanding, and according to Col. Buchan, 229th maintenance crews have demonstrated superior ability in keeping his aircraft flying, having kept over 98 per cent of the aircraft available at all times.

Presently living under canvas in a field bivouac area adjacent to the San Isidro Air Base, approximately 7 miles east of Santo Domingo, 229th troops have made much progress in rendering their living quarters more habitable, and outside of the almost constant daily rains, are now reasonably comfortable.

It was with a sense of pride that the stacked deck battalion observed Memorial Day Monday, paying tribute to America's fallen heroes while carrying out an important assignment for their government.

He is also a graduate of the Engineer Officer Advance Course, and the Command and General Staff College, plus being a Master Parachutist.

He joined the 127th Engineer Battalion (Airborne), in 1948 and became Commander of Company B in 1949. He later served with the 307 Engineer Battalion, 82nd Airborne Division and in 1954 was assigned as Operations Officer of the 76th Engineer Battalion in Korea.

42nd Artillery Battalion Review Honors Retiring Senior Sergeant

Retiring MSgt. Cecil B. Chapman of the 42nd Artillery was lauded for 27 years of meritorious service at a retirement review in his honor recently.

Reviewing officer for the early morning ceremony was Division Artillery Commander, Col. William A. Becker, who presented MSgt Chapman with the Army Commendation Medal, Certificate of Retirement and Certificate of Appreciation from the Army Chief of Staff.

MSgt. Chapman, a native of Georgia, enlisted in the Army in October of 1937. He saw service in World War II with the 41st Division, and in Korea, during the conflict, with the 10th US Corps. During the intervening years, his assignments have carried him to varied location throughout the states and overseas. His duty with the 42nd Artillery was as Battalion Supply Sergeant.

The 42nd Artillery's commander, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, stood on the reviewing stand with Col. Becker. Commander of troops for the battalion review was Maj. James W. Cain. Capt. Richard J. Boehman, Jr. read the citations. Providing music for the colorful ceremony was the 11th Air Assault Division Band under the direction of CWO William J. James.

The Certificate of Appreciation signed by Gen. Harold K. Johnson expressed, in part, personal thanks to MSgt. Chapman for his many years of outstanding service to this country.

On hand for the ceremony, also, were MSgt. Chapman's wife and family. The veteran soldier intends to reside in Columbus following his retirement.

11th Ladies Attend Special Division Program

Over four hundred ladies from the 11th Air Assault Division and the 10th Air Transport Brigade attended a special 'Ladies Day' briefing on the activities of the division in Marshall Auditorium on May 25.

Jack Gibney, news commentator and director of photography for WRBL-TV narrated a special film that he had compiled which showed techniques, tactics and history of the division.

Following the showing of an additional film on the air mobile concept the ladies were led on a tour of the new Infantry Center Headquarters.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commanding general, introduced Mr. Gibney and gave the ladies a few words on recent happenings within the division. He also thanked all of the ladies for their major contributions to the division's welfare and praised them for their spirit and unselfishness during their husband's long periods of absences.

Officers Depart 15th Artillery At Farewell Party

The 15th Artillery held a farewell party in the Headquarters Battery Mess Hall for Lts. Ralph Sturges and Angelo Agliardo, who are departing the Army.

Lt. Col. P. A. Athanason, the battalion commander, expressed his appreciation to the departing officers for a job well done and wished them success in their future occupations.

Lt. Agliardo was the battalion Survey Officer and Headquarters Battery executive officer. His survey team was highly commended recently by the DivArty test team for their speed and accuracy which was demonstrated during the battalion ATT held at Fort Gordon in the middle of May.

Lt. Sturges was a medical services officer who filled the post of battalion surgeon. Lt. Sturges had also previously served as the battalion S-1.

The farewell party was followed by an officers get-together at the Pizzaria.

188th Infantry NCO Review Honors Retiree

With its first NCO review of the year last week the 188th Infantry honored MSgt. Herbert T. Harrell who retired after twenty years of service.

The Eagles were reviewed by their battalion commander, Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar and MSgt. Harrell.

Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook was commander of troops, the S-3 Operations NCO, MSgt. John Allen, acted as adjutant and the first sergeants were the company commanders.

MSgt. Harrell was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service during his twenty years in the Armed Forces. He also received his retirement certificate and a letter of appreciation from the battalion commander, Col. Kellar, for his loyalty and dedication to his job.

MSgt. Harrell joined the 188th in December, 1964 as the battalion Personnel Staff NCO.

BOND DRIVE

Maj. Jack O. Phillabaum recently announced the 99 per cent participation in the buying of U. S. Savings Bonds by personnel of Battery B, 377th (Aerial Rocket) Artillery.

Infantrymen Back Saving Bond Drive

Every man needs to have some sort of safeguard for the future, whether it be the near future or the far, some way of holding on to the money that comes each month for longer than just a few days. A fine way of accomplishing this is to invest in United States Savings Bonds. Not only do you help yourself, but you also help your country.

In keeping with the 1965 Savings Bond Canvass now in effect, these facts were impressed upon the minds of the men of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, 2nd Air Assault Brigade.

The men of Headquarters Company were given talks on the benefits of buying Bonds, and the tempting prospects of a return on their investment. The section leaders of Headquarters Company arranged for those who desired them, to sign up for the Bonds.

After adding the number of men who already were buying Savings Bonds to those newly enrolled, Headquarters Company came up with an enrollment of 99.2 per cent, highest in the battalion.

Night Mercy Mission Aided By Flashlights

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — Battery powered hand held flashlights were turned into aircraft beacons last Wednesday evening to guide in a UH-1D over the Dominican Republic's North Coast during one of the mercy missions conducted by Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan's 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion Task Force.

Called after dark Wednesday night during fierce thunder showers, Capt. Donald R. Hull and 1st Lt. George Michel piloted their ship over the mountains by radar to the small town of Nagua where they picked up a Dominican doctor and a special guide to take them into a remote area to pick up a stricken farmer.

From Nagua, the chopper flew ten miles further north to the village of Lamata, where they landed by flashlights held by native inhabitants of the village and picked up the ill Dominican, flying him back to the 15th Field Hospital for emergency treatment.

A spectacular operation, the entire flight of more than 130 miles was made on instruments and radar assistance in near-zero visibility weather, with the pilots taking direction finding steers from the radar.

Assisting on the flight was Sp6 Floyd Williford, a medical specialist, and Sp5 O'Niel Bonin, the aircraft's crew chief. Specialists Williford and Bonin are from the 11th Medical Battalion, attached to Col. Buchan's "Stacked Deck" 229th Task Force.

511th Infantry ATT's Prove Combat Readiness

Now that the 511th Infantry rifle platoon ATT's are over, one thing is for sure. The Falcons are combat ready. This has been proven to the satisfaction of all and now the 511th moves on to get ready for their rifle company ATT's.

Each rifle platoon of the 511th was administered their ATT over a period of 18 hours. The test began with each rifle platoon in an assembly area awaiting the order to attack a band of guerrillas menacing the Fort Benning area.

When the order came the "Falcons" struck with deadly speed and skill and the aggressor was forced to retreat in disorder.

The victorious infantrymen then went about defending their newly won ground in preparation for an aggressor counter attack. While the dug-in and determined "Falcons" were defending, the enraged guerrillas returned in a die-hard effort to take back their ground.

The 511th infantrymen proved themselves equal to the task however, and the aggressors were beaten back by a murderous volume of fire from well fortified friendly positions.

With the guerrilla forces completely disorganized and nearly destroyed, the 511th platoons moved out under cover of darkness to administer the "coup de grace". Stealing silently through the woods, the 511th forces fell upon the demoralized enemy and in one final blow, killed or captured the already decimated guerrilla force.

During the test, the 511th rifle platoons were given the opportunity to display their skills in a number of situations. Assembly area procedures, fire and maneuver, organization and conduct of the defense and night operations were just a few of the areas tested.

Emphasis was placed on individual skills and the 511th foot soldiers drew the praise of the umpires for their ability in the areas of camouflage, concealment, protective measures, positions and light and noise dicipline.

Everyone who took part in the test excelled. However special commendation was given to Lt. Sidney Cornett, Company A; PSgt Samuel Hunt, Company B and PSgt Nichie Alonzo, Company C for the superior manner in which they and their platoons performed on the test.

Service Club At Kelley Hill Is Ultra-Modern

Tuesday May 18, Kelly Hill was the scene of the opening of a brand new enlisted mans service club, one of the newest and finest in the Army.

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, commanding general of Fort Benning, with the assist of some of the service club personnel, cut the ribbon and opened the doors, allowing the service men and visitors to enter into the more than welcome air-conditioning of the new building.

The club consists of one large ballroom, two game rooms (one ping pong, the other billiards), one reading and writing room, one TV room complete with theater type seats, five music rooms, a large rumpus or game room and a fully equipped snack bar.

Dignitaries on hand to view the opening included, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, Brig. Gen. John M. Wright, assistant division commander of the 11th, and Col. E. B. Roberts, the 11th Air Assault Division chief of staff.

NCO's Take Command During 'Little John' ATT's

Battery A, 42nd Artillery continues to train for a "New Little John Army Training Test."

This week's training found the battery's noncommissioned officers in complete control of the practice ATT. Assigned battery officers were relegated to umpire positions.

1st Sgt. Robert E. Yaddow, following the guidance outlined in Fort Sill's Draft Air Assault Little John ATT, deployed his force to an assembly area selected by the chief umpire.

Area Screened

Prior to occupation the area was screened and secured by the battery advance party. The main body, Acting Executive Officer-Fire Direction Officer, SFC William D. Ramsey, was called forward and occupied the assembly area without incident.

A Brigade Operations Order, attaching Battery A to a Direct Support Artillery Battalion, and outlining the general situation, was issued by the unit commander, Capt. Leroy C. Bell, acting as the Chief Umpire. The concept of operation required 1st Sgt. Yaddow to recon for no less than four firing positions, a primary and an alternate hide position, to support the operation being conducted by the brigade.

Briefing

Having briefed selected personnel, this veteran of 17 yeas active enlisted service departed by OH-13. His instructions were explicit. Tentative locations and check points were selected from available maps and aerial photos. Prearranged messages and codes were reviewed to insure adequate control and flexibility.

Work in the assembly area continued; security and camp maintenance performed, load list and loading plans reviewed. The assembly area, though located in friendly territory, was subject to air attacks, CBR and ground attacks by small resistance troops. The battery remained operational, prepared to move as a unit, infiltrate in small groups, and one, two or all of its firing sections.

The Battery Commander's plan of reconnaissance gave priority to selecting two firing points first. After each selection the coordinates were sent in code to the fire proceeded to select the hide positions and remaining two firing points.

As the battery commander was enroute to the hide area, a fire mission was received by FDC, and one firing section was sent to a selected firing point with a battery FDC computer attached.

They were given a rendezvous point in the vicinity of the new hide position in order to link up with battery after their mission was completed. The remainder of the battery moved out on order the new hide position.

An advance party was sent ahead to secure the area and assist the sections in rapidly locating and occupying their proper positions in the perimeter. The battery moved in, set up, and continued improving their position. An aggressor attack followed shortly after occupation but failed to penetrate the already tightened perimeter.

Forward Observer

The Platoon Leader, SFC Jerry L. Duncan, flew forward by OH-13 and surveyed the firing point. A small security force was sent forward to clear the firing point prior to the firing section's arrival. Upon arrival at the firing point, the firing section immediately oriented their launchers and windsets in the azimuth of fire and awaited the fire order.

Upon receipt of the fire order, the launcher was prepared, rocket armed, lanyard pulled, and "on the way" was given the fire direction center. They quickly march ordered and moved out to preclude detection by aggressors. They moved quickly and directly to the rendezvous point and linked up with a battery representative, who led them to the already occupied hide area.

As the situation continued, new hide positions and firing points were selected to facilitate future operations.

To conclude a successful operation, an authenticated nuclear fire mission was received. The Ammunition and Transportation section, under the control of Sgt. Ralph E. Peeler, was dispatched to the Special Ammunition Supply Pont, receipted for the warhead and motor, and following the proper technical procedures, mated the round and delivered it to the firing section.

The firing section picked for the task had the enormous responsibility of testing, preparing and firing the reliable nuclear round. The problem ended as the battery moved into their base camp.

42nd Picks Years Best

Sp4 Jerome M. Pietras recently has been named Soldier of the Year by the 42nd Artillery.

In winning this coveted distinction, Sp4 Pietras was chosen over a field of the past year's 42nd Artillery's Soldiers of the Month. Selection was made by a panel of the battalion's top grade noncommissioned officers on the basis of appearance, military bearing, and knowledge of his job and general military subjects.

An engraved trophy will be presented Sp4 Pietras in recognition of this honor. He initiated his award collection in June of 1964 when he was named Battalion Soldier of the Month.

Sp4 Pietras again won the Battalion honor in February of this year and went on to win the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery Soldier of the Month competition that month.

The 24 year old native of Chicago entered the service in November 1963 and works as a Survey Recorder in Headquarters and Service Battery of the 42nd Artillery.

Placing second in the tough Soldier of the Year competition was Sp4 Raymony J. Vogel of Battery A. outlage were improved,

Dominican Republic Topic of Speech To Kiwanis Club

Last Wednesday, at their weekly lunch meeting at the Martinique, the Columbus Kiwanis Club heard Capt. Russell W. Ramsey speak on the subject, "Historical Perspective of the Dominican Republic Crisis."

Capt. Ramsey, commanding officer of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, was introduced by Mr. William Scranton. The theme of the speech was how to guide the Dominican Republic into democracy, without communist takeover and in light of the "military interference" background.

Capt. Ramsey holds a Master's degree in Latin American History from the University of Southern Mississippi.

He was a member of the faculty of the School of the Americas in Panama from 1960 to 1963. Presently he teaches Latin American and United States History in the American University branch at Fort Benning.

Heroism Cited At Support Command

Ceremony Pays Tribute To Sixteen Sky Soldiers

Two 11th Medical Battalion aviators, Capt. Patrick H. Brady and Capt. Robert J. Grider, were presened with the Distinguished Flying Cross at a retreat ceremony held on Dickman Field, Thursday, May 2, 1965.

It was a second award for Capt. Brady who received an Oak Leaf Cluster to his DFC. Both officers were cited for heroism and extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flights on previous Viet Nam tours of duty.

The ceremony was held to honor 16 Support Command Officers and enlisted men. Seven individuals who retired from the army received Army Commendation Medals and Department of the Army Certificates of Achievement. Four enlisted men were presented with Air Medals and Clusters to the Air Medal and one enlisted man was presented with the Purple Heart by Brig. Gen. John M. Wright, assistant division commander, who acted as reviewing officer.

11th Medical Battalion Aircraft provided a fly-by in honor of the decorees. Mess Sgt. Robert Byrd, Headquarters Company and Band mess sergeant, served a specially decorated cake and refreshments to decorees and guests of the Support Command following the retreat formation.

Honored were Sp6 John J. Justice, 611th Aircraft Maintenance Bn., 1st and 5th Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal; Sp 4 Francis K. Mahelona, Company A, 611th Aircraft Maintenance Bn., the Air Medal for Meritorious Achievement in Viet Nam and Sp4 Charles M. Livensparger, Company A, 611th Aircraft Maintenance Bn who received the Air Medal and the Army Commendation Medal for his Viet Nam services.

The Army Commendation Medal, Department of the Army Certificate of Retirement and the Certificate of Achievment were presented to Maj. Eldon R. Perkins, 11th Medical Bn.; CWO Richard N. Cullen, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Bn.; SFC Nelson W. Vogel, 408th Supply and Service Bn., who retired as a major in the US Army Reserve; SSgt. WETLEX System Tested By Brigade's 516th TAC

The 516th Transport Airplane Company has just completed a series of tests to determine the feasibility of dropping POL onto water target delivery areas. Dubbed "Project WETLEX" the five phase testing was conducted during the period February through April.

Members of the test group were all aviators from the 516th; the testing was accomplished at Kings Pond, Weems Pond, and Heards Lake as "Wet" drop zones.

Phase I was preparation for things to come, ground and aircheck of procedures and equipment, rigging of loads, ground reconnaissance of test sites and the procurement of 55 gallon containers were steel drums and collapsable fuel bladders (seal bin containers) were utilized for the 500 gallon loads.

Phase II was conduced at Kings Pond to determine the floatability of the containers which were filled with water equal to weight to a full load of JP-4 fuel. Also, test drops of single drums were made from an HU-1B and drops of bladders were conducted utilizing CH-54's as the load vehicle.

Phase III constituted the initial testing of loads dropped from CV-2B "Caribou" and lead to the development of free fall drop techniques and the designing of a special pallet for the loads. Test drops were conducted utilizing both drums and sealbin containers; the drops were conducted using different airspeeds and drop attitudes to determine survivability of the loads. This phase was conducted at Weems Pond.

Phase IV and V were conducted at Heards Lake and constituted the final tests with actual use of fuel in the dropped drums and bladders.

The overall tests were conducted to determine the feasibility of delivering POL loads utilizing a water target utilizing both freefall and LOLEX techniques. In the conduct of these tests procedures were established for loading and rigging the CV-2B, pallet design, flight procedures, drop techniques, and recovery procedures. After action reports are to be forwarded to higher commands for consideration of the test results.

WITH A SPLASH . . . A CV-2 Caribou from the 516th Transport Airplane Company, 10th Air Transport Brigade drops its cargo of water filled fuel containers on a pallet into Weem's Pond. Several tests covering a 3-month period were made to test the feasibility of WETLEX.

3rd Army Award Presented Brigade Caribou Company

"In recognition of the high state of material readiness and organizational maintenance operations", the 17th Aviation Company was awarded the Third United States Army Certificate of Proficiency during ceremonies on May 29. Brig. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., assistant division commander, 11th Air Assault Division made the presentation to Maj. Ted N. Phillips, commanding officer of the 17th Aviation Company.

This award was based on the outstanding rating achieved during the annual Command Maintenance Management Inspection conducted by the Third US Army on 11 and 12 March 1965. The overall rating of 96 per cent was one of the highest ever received by an Army Aviation unit.

The 17th Aviation Company has been attached to the 10th Air Transport Brigade since July, 1964 and has supported units of the 11th Air Assault Division since that time. During AIR ASSAULT II, the 17th Aviation Company logged more than 5,000 flying hours, carried 7,628 passengers and transported 4,299 tons of cargo.

During the Northern California disaster in December, 1964 and January, 1965, the 17th Aviation Company supported the residents of that area, flying 270 hours, evacuating 347 passengers and transporting 312 tons of much needed supplies to remote and isolated areas.

511th Open House

Dependents and Guests See Air Assault Infantry

The Bravo "Falcons" of the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry recently threw their doors open and invited dependents and guests to take a close look at an A ir Assault Rifle Company.

The "Open House" idea was conceived by the Bravo commanding officer Capt. John Richardson, as a means of getting dependents better acquainted with the place their husbands and fathers go to each morning. The idea was met with much enthusiasm by the members of the company and their dependents as evidenced by the large turnout of guests for the occasion.

The entire day was organized to give visiting persons a look at many of the activities in which the "Falcons" might participate while training or in garrison.

Demonstrations were staged in rappelling and rifle squads in the attack. In addition, static displays were set up to give the visitors a look at the weapons and communication means of Company B.

The visitors were further treated to a tour of the entire company area for a look at the "Bravo" orderly room, day room, supply room, barracks and mess hall. The tour ended at a field kitchen where refreshments were served.

At the end of the day, the "Open House" was termed a success and the visitors departed with a new understanding of hte life of an air assault infantryman.

Combined Mess Takes DivArty Inspection Prize

The combined mess of "Alpha" and "Charlie" Batteries, 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery was recently selected as the best mess in the 11th Division Artillery.

The two mess sergeants of the combined mess hall, SSgt. Billie Pitts and Sgt. Hunter Clark, were commended for their outstanding work.

Three men from Battery "A" received letters of appreciation from their battery commander, Capt. Aaron O. Crocker, for the work they accomplished in preparing the Battery A and C combined mess for the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery best mess inspection. The three men honored were Sp5 James Webster, Sp4 Billy Carter, and Sp4 Paul Curry.

In brief, the letters of appreciation stated, "Your diligence and hard work have resulted in the exemplary mess for this battery. Your work has caused the Battery A and C mess to be recognized as the best mess in Division Artillery and has served as an example for all to follow."

ARTILLERY SOM

Pvt. Johnnie R. Holloway of Battery B, 38th Artillery has been selected Battalion Soldier for May.

Pvt. Holloway was elected to represent the battalion in Division Artillery Competition for his knowledge of both military and current events.

511th Executive Officer Finales 20-Year Career

COL LYNCH DECORATES MAJ. DYER
At Conclusion of Service Career

At a retirement ceremony held on Dickman Field, Maj. Dyer of the 511th Infantry ended 20 years of service that took him from "Farmer to Falcon."

The towering Executives officer of the 511th began his Army career in 1945 as a lad of 17 fresh off of the farm in Indiana. The succeeding 20 years brought him across many oceans, to many continents and into many units. The 511th Infantry had the good fortune of being one of these units.

Maj. Dyer began his tenure as XO of the 511th Infantry on Sept. 8 1963 while the unit was still an infant. He proved himself a master at all of the things an infantryman should know and do. Weapons, tactics, administration, supply — you name it and he knew it. The Falcons will tell you that he's one of the very few men in the Army who can walk into an arms room full of M-14's and find the only one with a loose gas cylinder plug.

Perhaps Maj. Dyer performed his greatest service for the 511th Infantry by just being in its ranks. Some people can, by their bearing and appearance, bring success without opening their mouth. In a manner of speaking, they stare fortune into place.

Upon his retirement Maj. Dyer returns to the home of his youth. He plans to go to work for the government in the Washington, D. C. area. That's about six months off though and for the present, he'll just take time off to catalog his memories for later recall.

Artilleryman Selected Division Top Soldier

An Artillery Fire Direction Computer has received division laurels as the top Sky Soldier for May.

Sp4 Robert J. McNamara of Battery B, 42nd Artillery took top honors after a hard climb through battalion and DivArty best soldier competition.

The 24 year old artilleryman with the famous namesake was awarded an engraved watch from the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

Sp4 McNamara became the first member of the 42nd Artillery to go the distance to the division title. In three preceding months, the battalion best soldier had represented Division Artillery in the competition, placing high on each occasion.

The May Soldier of the Month is a native of Shrewsbury, Mass. and entered service in March, 1963. He received his basic training at Fort Dix, N. J.

Previously, for posting the 42nd Artillery and 11th Division Artillery Soldier of the Month victories, Sp4 McNamara received three day pass authorizations, an engraved lighter from his Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, and a plaque from DivArty Commander, Col. William A. Becker.

SP4 MCNAMARA

38th Artillery IG Successfully Ended

Last week, Headquarters & Service Battery, 38th Artillery, successfully passed its annual General Inspection with an overall rating of superior. The three firing batteries within the battalion also received "superiors" on the respective insepctions.

The annual general inspection covered all aspects of the unit's operation, including personnel, training, administration, unit fund, supply, security and numerous other areas.

Headquarters and Service Battery received a superior in nearly every area covered on this inspection.

Capt. Dimmick was well pleased with his battery's performance. He had high praise for his officers, noncommissioned officers, and enlisted personnel within his unit.

127th Beavers Say They're Top Team

The Beavers of the 127th Engineer Battalion are establishing themselves as the softball team to beat in the Iroquois League.

The team, coached by Sp5 Ralph McClair and captained by Maj. Viril Haas has made a clean sweep of its first three games on its march toward the League Championship.

After a lay off of a week for field exercises the Beavers will take on the 187th Infantry Battalion on Tuesday, June 1, 1965.

188th's Medical Platoon Gives Humorous Class

Last week the Medical Platoon of the 188th Infantry, presented a series of lectures in a light and humorous vein to members of the battalion.

The subject of the instruction was a 16 hour block of classes on "Emergency Medical Treatment" given in several three and four-hour sessions at Theater 11.

The instruction was done by medical personnel of Headquarters Company under the direction of the medical platoon leader Lt. Irving C. Slaton, and it included skits, costumes and other unusual training aids.

Instructors were: Capt. Russell W. Ramsey, commanding officer of Headquarters Company, who introduced the series with a lecture on "Area Damage Control", After the instruction ended the battalion members were tested in their proficiency by the medical platoon; Sp5 Jerry T. Bowman, Sp5 James T. Farris, Sp5 Howard C. Moore, Sp5 Robert C. Olson, Sp5 Alfred E. Smith and Sp4 Nathaniel Lindsey.

You and the Community

'How to Win Friends And Influence People'

Editors Note: The following is reprinted from a 1964 Troop Topic pamphlet. It is intended to make strong in the minds of all Sky Soldiers their responsibility to the local community.

Members of the public are naturally influenced in their opinion about the Army by their observance of soldiers and their conversations with them.

The public gets much of its information about the Army from newspapers, magazines, books, the movies and radio and television programs. However, the actions of individual soldiers are likely to "speak louder than words."

You, as a member of the military, are regarded by most civilians as an authority on Army matters. You help to form their opinions of the Army by your explanation of its activities. You are automatically looked upon as a representative of the Army so that your conduct tends to be accepted as typical — whether it really is or not.

Some years ago a best-selling book explained "How to Win Friends and Influence People". Every soldier influences people's ideas about the Army — for better or worse — even when he isn't consciously trying to influence anyone.

His influence "wins friends" for the Army only when his conduct and appearance fit people's notion of what kind of men they want United States soldiers to be. It goes without saying that people are also influenced in their ideas by an arrogant, ill - mannered, slovenly soldier, but this is definitely not the kind of influence that wins friends.

If you affect public opinion, public opinion also affects you — for better or worse. You've heard soldiers refer to certain cities and communities as "good Army towns." Maybe you have also used that description.

What is a "good Army town?" What do you think of when you hear that expression? Chances are you think of friendly people, who seem to like soldiers and want to do things for them, make them feel at home.

You can be pretty sure that in any "good Army town" something has been done to make it so. The command has cooperated with local officials and organizations, and the soldiers of that command have done their part by being well-behaved and friendly. Otherwise it would not be a "good Army town." It might be neutral in its attitude toward soldiers, or even downright hostile — as has sometimes happened.

But good Army towns are made — not born. They are made by soldiers and civilians who want to get along with each other and who have taken positive action toward doing so.

The very least any soldier can contribute to community relations is to stay out of trouble. But this purely negative contribution is never enough; in community relations you have to accentuate the positive.

Dual-War Veteran Takes Three More

With twenty-one years and two wars of Army experience behind him, MSgt. Raymond L. Wills, S-2 Intelligence sergeant for the 2nd Battalion, 22rd Infantry, has just reenlisted for three more years.

After completing eighteen weeks of Infantry Basic Training at Camp Blanding, Fla., MSgt. Wills was sent as a replacement to Europe where he served with the 94th Infantry Division until the end of the war, rising rapidly through the ranks to the grade of sergeant.

During the Korean War he again saw action, first as Reconnaissance Sergeant, then as Intelligence Sergeant with the 70th Tank Battalion of the 1st Cavalry Division.

229th Pilot Credited With 'Another First'

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — On May 18 Capt. Val Panzitta from the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion Task Force started out on a routine administrative mission to deliver a passenger aboard the USS La Salle. (Landing Platform Deck) capable of landing two helicopters on the rear deck.

His job was made difficult due to the extremely bad weather. It was raining and the flight conditions were listed as IFR (Instrument Flying).

The La Salle was not equipped for such flight landing and the electronics men aboard the ship has to improvise with their "combat radar".

Flying at an altitude of a mere 100 feet above the ocean in heavy rains and turbulant winds, he was guided strictly by radar to within one-eighth of a mile of the ship.

Once within this distance he could just make out the outline of the La Salle. The landing was safely executed and the pilot and passenger were greeted by the ship's commander.

Navy authorities on board the ship informed Capt. Panzitta that this was the first IFR approach ever made to the La Salle which is not normally equipped to handle that type operation.

This is another instance of the professional ability and high degree of competance evident in the every day life of the pilots of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion Task Force.

Started as Platoon

Division MP's Mark Birthday

Last month marked the first anniversary of the 11th Military Police Company as a full strength operational unit.

When first organized in October of 1963 the company existed as only one platoon. This platoon however was instrumental as a test unit in forming the concept for employment of the Air Assault Military Police Company.

In May of 1964 the company began to fill out and grew from 30 men and two officers to 244 men, eight officers and one warrant officers.

Most new men were fresh out of the Provost Marshal General School and required intensive additional training in Air Assault tactics such as rappelling, weapons qualification and driver training.

By the end of August, 1964, the Military Police Company was ready to support the division during Exercise AIR ASSAULT II.

During the exercise the company, based near Ridgeway, S. C., providing traffic control, prisoner processing, command post security and normal police coverage of the division area.

Incidental to these functions, MP vehicles travelled over 246,000 miles with no accidents and no deadline.

Several new items were tested by adoption including a light weight, quickly erected portable POW enclosure; three types of motor scooters and portable traffic control lights.

Few new companies have the benefit of a two month field exercise for a "shakedown cruise". Few rough sports can go unnoticed.

On return to Fort Benning renewed emphasis was placed on refinement of techniques and further individual and unit training.

Today the 11th MP Company feels itself ready for any mission. Although primarily occupied with garrison police duty the company executes a full time training schedule and supports continuous field exercises and convoy movements.

Officer Gains Field Promotion At San Isidro

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — Maj. William R. Critton, assistant S-3 Officer of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion Task Force, celebrated two occasions May 13 when he was promoted to his present grade on his birthday.

The Gold Leaves were pinned on by Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan during the Task Force's reveille formation.

Maj. Critton has previously served as operations officer in Company B of the 229th and attended the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan. before coming to Ft. Benning in May of 1964.

He has served in Viet Nam with the 18th Aviation Company where he accumulated 800 flying hours — 712 of which were combat missions.

For his actions in Viet Nam he was awarded the Air Medal with seven oak leaf clusters.

Maj. Critton, his wife Wanda and their four children — Michael, Vicki, Daniel, and Toni reside at 1024 Ray Court at Ft. Benning.

Arty Battalion To Wrap-Up Its Inspection

The 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery is presently undergoing its Annual General Inspection. This inspection will be completed today.

Every man in the battalion has been quite busy since the return of the 15th Artillery from Fort Gordon with the ultimate goal of a superior rating in their respective field.

Courtesy inspections were provided by a battalion test team led by Maj. Fisher, the battalion executive officer, and by a Division Artillery test team.

Both inspections revealed that progress for the AGI is very satisfactory.

Recon Platoon Joins Rangers For Patrolling

Members of the Recon Platoon of Company D, 1st Battalion, 188th Inf., last week joined students of the Infantry Officer Basic Course in their Ranger patrolling training.

The IOBC students were undergoing a 58-hour block of instruction by the Ranger Patrolling Committee at Sanden Station. The 188th "Eagles", desiring to improve their patrolling techniques, obtained permission from the committee to join them and integrated groups of six Sky Soldiers into each student patrol of 30 men.

The training included four days of classroom instruction and patrols, often lasting early into the next day's morning. During these four days the "Eagles" practiced two different types of patrols, reconnaisance and combat and carried out raids and ambushes.

The training was coordinated by the Recon platoon leader, 1st Lt. Billy Onstoxt and the committee's training officer, Capt. Blight.

'Beaver' Leader Earns Wings Of Master Jumper

Lt. Col. Robert J. Malley, commanding officer of the 127th Engineer Battalion, has just been awarded the Master Parachutist's Badge.

The requirements for this Badge are 65 jumps, 25 of which must be simulated combat, and four of which must be night jumps. Also the recipient must be a graduate of a jumpmaster's school.

Lt. Col. Malley made his first jump in May 1947, and has had several airborne assignments since then. He has been commander of the "Beavers" Battalion for two years.

81st Artillery S-3 Now Field Grade

Maj. Paul V. Powers, S3 of the 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery, received the gold oak leaves signifying his promotion to major during ceremonies at battalion headquarters.

Mrs. Betty Powers and Lt. Col. Francis J. Bush, the battalion commander, pinned the insignia as the battalion officers looked on.

A 1954 graduate of West Point, Maj. Powers joined the 81st Artillery in June, 1964, upon returning from Germany.

Following attendance at the Artillery Officers Orientation Course and Basic Airborne School, Maj. Powers was assigned as a 90mm anti-aircraft battery commander in the Pittsburgh Air Defense.

Assignments in Korea, XVIII Airborne Corps Arty at Fort Bragg, N. C., and Germany preceeded his assignment to the 11th Air Assault Division.

NEW SPECIALIST

Sp4 Gerald D. Craven, a computer of the fire direction center of Battery A, 38th Artillery, was recently promoted to his present rank by Lt. William L. Rotch Jr., the acting battery commander.

42nd 'Little John' Artillery Plans Organization Day

The 11th Air Assault Division's 42nd Artillery is to celebrate its first annual Organization Day tomorrow, June 5.

The date chosen for the event marks the 21st anniversary of the Normandy Invasion in which the 42nd Artillery took part.

According to Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, the 42nd Artillery commanding officer, the day's activities will begin with a review at which Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general, will be the reviewing officer.

Gen. Kinnard will present two awards to Battery A which it earned by scoring victories in battalion competition in the semi-annual physical combat proficiency test and by posting the fastest time in the Annual Launcher Crew Competition.

Also receiving awards will be Sp4 Jerome M. Pietras and PFC John E. McNally, both of Headquarters and Service Battery. Pietras will be honored for coping 42nd Artillery Soldier of the Year laurels while McNally's awards will be given for winning Battalion and Division Artillery Soldier of the Month for May. Another award will go to the Battalion Driver of the Month.

Little John Rockets and associated equipment will be on display at Stroup Field, Harmony Church, at the site of the review, from 8:30 a.m. The review will begin at 9 o'clock.

'Disregard for Human Beings and Contempt for Death. . .'

RUSSIAN SOLDIER IMPOSSIBLE TO PREDICT

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part series on the "Peculiarties of the Russian Soldier," excerpted from DA Pamphlet 28-230.

"It is possible to predict from experience how virtually every soldier of the western world will behave in a given situation — but not the Russian."

With this intriguing generalization, the anonymous author of a Department of the Army booklet opens his chapter on "Peculiarties of the Russian Soldier." Although published in 1950, this particular chapter is almost timeless due to the subject it assays.

Unconscious Comparison

Second Division readers may unconsciously compare themselves to this portrait of their Soviet counterparts.

The writer continues:

"The characteristics of this semi-Asiatic, like those of his vast country, are strange and contradictory. During the last war (World War II) there were units which one day repulsed a strong German attack with exemplary bravery, and on the next folded up completely. There were others which one day lost their nerve when the first shell exploded, and on the next allowed themselves, man by man, literally to be cut to pieces. The Russian is generally impervious to crises, but he can also be very sensitive to them. Generally, he has no fear of a threat to his flanks but at times he can be most touchy about flanks. He disregards many of the old established rules of tactics, but clings obstinately to his own methods.

Key to Behavior

"The key to this odd behavior can be found in the native character of the Russian soldier who, as a fighter, possesses neither the judgment nor the ability to think independently. He is subject to moods which to a Westerner are incomprehensible; he acts by instinct. As a soldier, the Russian is primitive and unassuming, innately brave but morosely passive when in a group. These traits make him in many respects an adversary superior to the self-confident and more demanding soldiers of other armies. Such opponents, however, can and must, by their physical and mental qualities, achieve not only equality, but also the superiority necessary to defeat the Russian soldier.

Contempt for Death

"Disregard for human beings and contempt for death are other characteristics of the Russian soldier. He will climb with complete indifference and coldbloodedness over the bodies of hundreds of fallen comrades, in order to take up the attack on the same spot. With the same apathy he will work all day burying his dead comrades after a battle. He looks toward his own death with the same resignation. Even severe wounds impress him comparatively little. For instance, a Russian, sitting upright at the side of the street, in spite of the fact that both lower legs were shot away asked with a friendly smile for a cigarette. He endures cold and heat, hunger and thirst, dampness and mud, sickness and vermin, with equanimity. Because of his simple and primitive nature, all sorts of hardships bring him but few emotional reactions. His emotions run the gamut from animal ferocity to the utmost kindliness; odious and cruel in a group, he can be friendly and ready to help as an individual.

Disregards Losses

"In the attack the Russian fought unto death. Despite most thorough German defensive measures he would completely disregarding losses. He was generally not subject to panic. For example, in the break-through of the fortifications before Bryansk in October 1941, Russian bunkers, which had long since been bypassed and which for days lay far behind the front, continued to be held when every hope of relief had vanished. Following the Germans crossing of the Bug in July 1941, the fortications which had origin-cal zealot.

He is not an active Communist, not a politially been cleared of the nemy by the 167th Infantry Division were reoccupied a few days later by groups of Russian stragglers, and painstakingly retaken by a division which followed in the rear. An underground room in the heart of the citadel of Brest Litovsk held out for many days against a German division in spite of the employment of the heaviest fire power.

The Russian is a superior soldier who, under the direction of outstanding leadership, becomes a dangerous opponent. It would be a serious error to underestimate the Russian soldier, even though he does not quite fit the pattern of modern warfare and the educated fighting man. The strength of the Western soldier is conscious action controlled by his own mind. Neither this action on his own, nor the consciousness which accompanies the action, is part of the mental make-up of the Russian. But the fact must not be ignored that a change is taking place also in this respect.

The Russian Masses

"The difference between the Russian units in World War I and those in World War II is considerable. Whereas in the earlier war the Russian Army was a more or less amorphous mass immovable and without individuality, the spiritual awakening through communism showed itself clearly in the last war. In contrast to the situation at the time of World War I, the number of illiterates was small. The Russian masses had acquired individuality, or at least were well on the way to acquiring it. The Russians is beginning to become a perceptive human being, and hence a soldier who is able to stand on his own feet. The number of good noncommissioned officers was still not large in World War II and the Russian masses had not yet overcome their sluggishness. But the awakening of the Russian people cannot be far off. Whether this will work to the advantage or disadvantage of their soldierly qualities cannot yet be determined. For along with awareness flourish criticism and obstinacy. The arbitrary employment of masses resigned to their fate may become more difficult, and the basis of the typically Russian method of waging war may be lost. The force bringing about this change is communism, or more precisely, a spiritual awakening of the people directed by a rigidly centralized state. The Russian is fundamentally nonpolitical; at least that is true for the rural population, here one notes a decisive change — a conscious Russian who fights only in rare instances for political ideals, but always for his Fatherland."

Know Your Career Counselor

SFC James M. Gibson, a veteran of 18 years service, is a career counselor assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division. He has an office in and is in charge of the Kelley Hill area.

Sgt. Gibson entered the Army in January 1945 from Welch, Va. During the last few months of World War II, he was in North Manila with the 1303rd Combat Engineers. He went on into Tokyo, with the first combat unit to land in Japan.

In November 1945 he returned to the States for 30 days leave. The following January he went to Germany where he was assigned to the first Constabulatory Squadron. That August, due to his father's illness, he was called back to the States and given a hardship discharge.

He reenlisted again in January 1948 and was sent overseas.

In December 1959 he was assigned to U. S. Army recruiting station in his home town. After his first year there he took first place honors in the 2nd Army's seven-state area for the highest percentage of enlistments of all U. S. Army Recruiters in his category for the fiscal year ending June 1961.

The next year found him in Vietnam, where he was assigned to the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Saigon. After a 14-month tour he was assigned to the Division Support Headquarters Company, S & T Battalion. In November 1963 he was assigned to the Reenlistment Section as a 2nd Division Career Counselor.

Included among Sgt. Gibson's decorations are the Army Commendation Medal and the Good Conduct Medal (four loops).

Special Services NCO Promoted

SSgt. Clarence R. Stapleton, division recreation supervisor in the Special Services Office, was promoted to his present grade on May 24, 1965.

SSgt. Stapleton has had a long and varied career in Army sports both as a player and official. A former All-Army football player, and member of the CISM Volleyball team, he has also played minor league baseball in the Cincinnati farm system.

In addition he is a respected football, softball, baseball and basketball official

Artillery Promotes Four to Specialist

Four members of the 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery have advanced to Sp4 in recent informal promotion ceremonies here. They are Sp4's David Carrasco, Ronald V. Dinga, Charlie Govan and Jerome M. Pietras.

Members of Headquarters and Service Battery of the 42nd Artillery, Sp4's Govan and Pietras serve their unit as a Radio Mechanic and Survey Recorder, respectively. They were handed their new stripes by Battery Commander, Capt. James R. Adams.

Building 81 Contest Winners Named

Whitley Takes School's Top NCO Position

Sgt. Maj. John F. Whitley, former chief instructor with the Weapons Department, has been named sergeant major of The Infantry School to succeed Sgt. Maj. Joseph J. Bettin who leaves this week for an assignment in Viet Nam.

Born and raised in neighboring Columbus, Whitley took his first oath of enlistment in August 1936 here at Fort Benning in what was then a tent city area. He was 17 years old at the time.

Initially assigned to the 29th Inf., he switched over to airborne in 1941 and was assigned to the 501st Parachute Bn. when it was first organized.

He went to the southwest Pacific with the 501st in Nov. 1942 and, later, when it merged with the 503rd Regimental Combat Team, made his first combat jump into New Guinea.

Sgt. Maj. Whitley returned to the United States and Fort Benning in July 1944. He was assigned to the Airborne School here until 1951. He then went to Fort Lee, Va. when the Quartermaster School there had responsibility for parachute maintenance, rigging and allied courses.

Returning to Fort Benning, Sgt. Maj. Whitley was assigned to the Airborne Dept. and stayed there until 1953 when he was reassigned to

Three to Share Honors; Each Will Receive A $25 Savings Bond

The "Building 81 Contest" has been resolved with three winners being named to share equally in the honors and awards.

Capt. William F. Rickett Jr., CO, Hq. Co., 2nd Bn., 38th Inf., 2nd Inf. Div.; Mrs. Virginia Luellman, Dept. of Nonresident Instruction, TIS; and SSgt. Allen F. Schlieper, ISB, suggested the building be razen and the plot beautified.

Each justified their suggestion by citing the traffic hazard the building presented and went into such detail on measures to beautify the area that it was impossible to select one over the other two.

A $25 U. S. Savings Bond will be presented each of the winners. Whenever the building is removed and the area landscaped, a small plaque will bear the names of all three winners.

As part of his suggestion, Sgt. Schlieper recommended the Doughboy statue in front of Building 35 be relocated at the Building 81 site and the area dedicated to all Infantrymen killed in action.

Mrs. Luellman advocated moving the Infantryman statue or erecting a replica of it. She also diagrammed a circular floral plot of red and white azaleas and white candytuft to surround the statue.

Capt. Rickett's landscaping ideas included evergreens or flowering shrubs in the center to be surrounded by a circular flower bed of perrenials and annuals programmed to have blooms all during the year.

Although it probably will not be possible to use all of the ideas contained in each suggestion, the best parts of each will be combined for the

Army to Mark 190th Anniversary; First Units Were Raised in 1775

By Samuel E. Rash

June 14 will mark the 190th year of the U. S. Army's founding as the Continental Army. It was on this date in 1775 that the Second Continental Congress authorized the raising of ten companies of expert riflemen, six from Pennsylvania and two each from Maryland and Virginia.

Traditionally, a birthday is a time for looking backward as well as thinking ahead. Observance of the Army's 190th anniversary on June 14 evokes such an awareness of our historic beginnings.

Being observed the same day as the Infantry (for the first troops were Infantry) and the Army birthday is Flag Day, which has been an annual observance in New York City since 1889.

Fort Benning, one of the largest military installations in the world with a force of approximately 46,600 soldiers, will observe this historic day. The flags of all 50 of our United States will fly in front of the headquarters, Bldg. 4.

Own Militia

The Army's heritage starts with the English colonists who settled in North America. They brought with them their civil and military institutions. Each colony raised its own militia to maintain domestic order and to defend its frontiers against unfriendly Indians and Europeans.

When the Second Continental Congress voted on June 14, 1775 to adopt the colonial militia in operation around Boston, Mass., the United States Army was born. Although it was still more than a year before the Declaration of Independence, the event marked the union of the forc-

Military Academy Cadets Schedule Post Training

About 600 Military Academy cadets will descend on Fort Benning June 18 to join soldiers in training at The Infantry School.

During their six-day stay, the members of the Class of 1966 are scheduled to participate in training problems and to see demonstrations and be briefed on other phases of instruction which go into the molding of the U.S. fighting man.

For most of the active participation, they will be divided into three groups, each receiving similar training, but will be together for Problem 1010, Weapons of the Infantry, at Hook Range and for the impressive night demonstration, Rifle Company Team in Defense, on Ruth Range.

In addition to Problem 1010, the cadets are slated to participate in a Signal Corps command post exercise at Dekkar Strip, airborne orientation training at Eubanks Field and the leader's reaction course at Dixie Village.

Also on their agenda is a film, "Tactical Air Mobility-Air Assault Concept," to be shown in Marshall Audi-

Joint Fund Drive Ends 4th Week Of Collections

As of Monday, June 7, more than $5,800 had been collected in the annual Joint Army Emergency Relief (AER) and Army Relief Society Fund Drive.

The campaign was kicked off May 17 by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges and will end July 10.

In his opening remarks at the kick - off rally, Gen. Heintges stated that the agencies receiving the funds collected are "the Army's own agencies" to provide help for its own personnel.

Golfers Beware; 'Gator Is Hazard At Polk Links

FORT POLK, La. (ANF) — Golfers who thrive on the challenge of a difficult course will want to play a few holes at the Post Course here.

The sixth fairway boasts what is perhaps the most dangerous hazard on any course in the world.

It looks like an ordinary water obstacle, but players are advised not to wade in after stray balls. The pool is occupied by a bad-tempered alligator.

The 'gator is used to keep snakes, frogs, and turtles under control. But a wary golfer might well ask, "Who's to keep the alligator in check?"

Whitley

Japan with the 187th Inf. Div.

He came back to The Infantry School in 1955 and was assigned to the Weapons Department until 1960 when he received his promotion to E-9 and subsequent transfer to the 4th Armored Div. in Europe. He returned here in 1963 and has been with the Weapons Department until last week when he was tapped for the School's top enlisted job.

Whitley is a master parachutist with 208 jumps to his credit and has the Combat Infantryman's Badge. He attended schools in Columbus and Eufaula, Ala., and married a Meigs, Ga. girl. He and his wife, Margaret, have two children, Brenda, aged 19 and John Jr., aged nine. They make their home at 4009 Cody Road in Columbus.

Cadets

torium, Bldg. 4. On the closing schedule are panel discussions with all participating.

Social highlight of the visit will be a reception and hop at the Main Officers' Open Mess the night of their arrival.

In addition to Fort Benning, the cadets' summer tour includes Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Sill, Okla.; Fort Bliss Texas; and Fort Belvoir, Va.

Joint

Society provide Army personnel and their dependents with financial assistance when they are faced with emergencies they cannot meet.

All funds used are collected locally and used locally.

"Our personnel have given outstanding support to previous fund drives but this is one in which our efforts and our contributions should exceed anything we have done in the past," Gen. Heintges said.

First USAIC units to turn in their collections were Hq. and Hq. Co., 4th Bn., 69th Armor and Co. A, 4th Bn., 69th Armor.

Col. Milton G. Schneider, The Infantry Center adjutant general and fund drive chairman, explained that the objective of the fund drive was to provide immediate cash for military personnel when an emergency arises.

Three

final landscaping plan.

A total of five suggestions were received saying the building should be removed but the other two lacked detail as to what should be done with the plot later.

Over a hundred entries were received at The BAYONET office. Most of them suggested something along the line of a visitor's bureau, information station, reception center or a combination of these services.

Representatives from the Provost Marshall's office, engineers and other offices made numerous trips to the Building 81 site to explore the possibility of constructing parking lots, diverting traffic and even erecting a pedestrian bridge.

Costs for this additional construction and the ever-present traffic problem which would be compounded by such a facility finally eliminated these suggestions even though they indicated that such a facility, someplace on post, was needed.

Also taken into consideration was the fact that Outpost No. 1, now in a new building with pulloff lanes, could easily handle information queries. Looking to the future, there is a good possibility that the entire traffic flow onto the post will change if new access roads are built.

es of the 13 separate colonies under one head.

When George Washington formally took command of the colonial troops on July 3, he found that they were largely militia and minute-men of local communities, given to going home whenever a particular danger was past.

In January, 1776, the Continental Congress wisely decided that the troops it had directly raised and equipped should be separate in organization from those of local communities.

Continentals

These "Continentals" were enlisted for longer terms, were trained more thoroughly and thereafter provided Gen. Washington with a small but comparatively more stable nucleus with which to work, and they proved his chief reliance in the dark hours of the war. They were the beginning of a Regular Army.

Washington's force varied from 8,000 troops in the operations around New York to as low as 4,000 after the winter at Valley Forge and to as high as 26,000 in November 1779.

When peace was declared, Congress ordered the disbandment of the entire Army except for "twenty-five privates to guard the stores at Fort Pitt and fifty - five to guard the stores at West Point."

When Washington was inaugurated President, the number of men in service was 595. Until 1812 the Army passed through swift periods ofrise and fall, an index of national fear.

Strength Varies

From a single regiment when the constitution went into force, it changed to three regiments in 1791, six in 1796, nine in 1798, six in 1800, three in 1802, and 11 in 1808. During the war of 1812, possibly 60,000 men at most served during the war.

Before the Mexican War, the Army had shrunk to an actual strength of 5,300 men occupying more than 100 military posts. When war was declared, the Regular Army was recruited to war strength and about 20,000 troops took part in the campaign.

Troop strength in the Federal Army during the Civil War was probably a little more than 1,500,000. Estimates of the men in Confederate service varied from 700,000 to 885,000.

The act of 1866 provided for a Regular Army of 54,000 men. The actual strength was 38,540 men which decreased until in 1878 the effective strength was less than 20,000 men.

Calls for volunteers in the Spanish - American War increased the Army to 216,029 men on Aug. 31, 1898.

Following the Spanish-American War, the Army launched upon a slow but increasingly accelerated struggle to bring itself up to the forefront as a military organization.

Increased Strength

On June 3, 1916 Congress passed a national defense act which raised the authorized strength of the Regular Army to 287,846 officers and enlisted men, and provided for a reorganized military establishment which included the national guard, the organized reserve corps and a volunteer, or emergency Army.

During World War I the Army grew from 100,000 officers and men to 4,000,000, up until then a high-water mark of U. S. military manpower.

With the advent of World War II, the Army again went through the process of expanding from a force of about 200,000 to an organization of more than 8,000,000 at peak strength.

Today on the 190th anniversary of the Army's founding, approximately 960,000 troops wear the Army uniform and serve its flag.

Flag Day

Traditionally, the President of the United States proclaims June 14 as Flag Day. Flags are almost as old as civilization itself. Archeological records abound with these symbols and devices of mankind.

Imperial Egypt flaunted military standards charged with sacred devices and the Armies of Babylon, Chaldea and Assyria followed the colors of their kings.

The romance of the Middle Ages brought a universal love for the display of personal and family coats of arms and the colors of knightly and religious orders.

Until comparatively recent years, the flags which identified nations usually were based upon the personal or family heraldry of the reigning monarch or ruling nobleman.

Annual Observance

Our annual Flag Day observance had its beginning with George Boch, principal of a free school for children of immigrant families on New York's East Side. He throught the anniversary of Congress's adoption of the Stars and Stripes was an appropriate occasion for staging inspiring and instructive patriotic exercises.

It was not until June 14, 1916, however, that the holiday was recognized as a national observance, following a proclamation by President Woodrow Wilson.

Our present Army flag was dedicated and unfurled to the general public on June 14, 1956 at Independence Hall, Philadelphia, on the 181st anniversary of the establishment of the U. S. Army by the Continental Congress in 1775.

The Infantry Center and School will join other U. S. installations throughout the world on June 14 in observance of Flag Day and the Army's 190th anniversary.

THE ARMY BIRTHDAY—JUNE 14

STEPHEN AILES
Secretary Of The Army

HAROLD K. JOHNSON
Chief of Staff

On this, the 190th year of Army service to the nation, I extend personal greetings and best wishes to the men and women of the United States Army who uphold the proud traditions begun during the American Revolution in 1775.

The resolution of the Continental Congress of 14 June 1775 established the Army and ordered it to Boston to confront the enemy. In the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Indian Wars, the Civil War, in Cuba and the Philippines, in two World Wars, in Korea and in countless other actions the Army has served our country well against every kind of foe. Army troops have fought all over the world in every climate from rain forest to ice cap, from desert to vineyard, from plains to rice paddy. Today, our Army continues to stand against oppression and the threat to freedom wherever it occurs.

The United States Army takes justifiable pride in its accomplishments of the past and its ability to cope with any mission in the future. History shows clearly that the Army has been indispensable to our nation's defense.

ANF

On the observance of the 190th anniversary of the United States Army, it is my honor to extend heartiest congratulations to its members and to express my pride and the thanks of a grateful Nation for the outstanding dedicated service you are performing throughout the world.

Since 1775, our Army has been called upon to undertake difficult and dangerous tasks in both peace and war, and has responded to every requirement with courage, proficiency, ingenuity, and speed. History is replete with the brilliant accomplishments of American soldiers, covering operations against hostile forces in all corners of the globe and peacetime attainments in scientific development and civil works to benefit all mankind.

Today, the Nation and free men everywhere are facing challenges more complex than ever before, and our citizens look to the Army as a source of strength during these trying times. Each member of the Army team is responding magnificently in strengthening and defending our country's freedom and security and in meeting the threats to peace and freedom wherever they occur.

I am confident that your future performance will be in the finest traditions of the Army and that you will add to its heritage and record of achievements.

Defend This Heritage

It is with pleasure and pride that I extend congratulations and best wishes to all members of the United States Army on its 190th anniversary.

Throughout its long history the Army has demonstrated its ability to cope with any challenge and has successfully countered every threat to our Nation's freedom. Today, we are more determined than ever to preserve our cherished heritage. I am confident that the men and women of the United States Army will defend this heritage and continue to uphold its tradition of outstanding service to the Nation and the free world.

ROBERT S. McNAMARA
Secretary of Defense

Infantry Birthday

On behalf of the United States Army Infantry Center, I extend congratulations and best wishes to the officers and men of the Infantry on the occasion of its 190th anniversary.

Since its establishment on June 14, 1775, the Infantry has come to symbolize the qualities of proficiency, courage, ingenuity, and leadership which characterize the American fighting man. The Infantry has proven its readiness by the mastery of modern weapons and equipment and by adaptation to primitive battlefields. It is only fitting that the Infantryman with his will to win determines the final results of battle.

I am confident that the feats of the Infantry in the past will serve as guideposts to be surpassed in the future.

Flag Day

The flag which flies over our nation and over Americans everywhere is 188 years old on June 14. The high ideals which it represents when it was first raised are as much revered today as they were then.

The United States Army, as always, stands ready to defend both nation and flag.

We of the Army owe a special debt to the flag for it served as a symbol of the ideals for which American soldiers have fought and died. It remains an inspiration and a constant reminder that we must be prepared to protect the nation for which it stands.

PAUL L. FREEMAN JR.
General, USA

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seemeth to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."
Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

'Be Proud'

On June 14, 1965, the United States Army completes its 190th year of dedicated service to the nation. This day also marks the 188th anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the official flag of the thirteen colonies.

This occasion affords me a welcome opportunity to express my appreciation to all members of Third Army for their contributions during the past year toward the growth and security of our nation, which now proudly displays a 50-star flag.

In the course of the past 190 years, the Army has experienced many changes. Yet there has never been a break in the life line of devotion to duty, and love of country that runs through the Army's history.

Each of us can be proud of his membership in the United States Army as it continues to perpetuate the trusts and beliefs upon which our national emblem stands.

Superhighway Driving

This is the time of year when servicemen and their families plan a spring, summer, or fall automobile trip which leads to the nation's superhighways and a new set of safe driving rules.

Calling them what you will — turnpikes, freeways, tollways, expressways, thruways — new highways are criss-crossing the country with a growth designed to bring cities and states closer together. The fact they are different immediately dawns on the serviceman — particularly if he has not travelled upon them before.

Old hazards are gone. There are no crossings. Grades are gentle. Sight distance is almost unlimited. Lanes are divided. There are no pedestrians. Speeds are higher. Rules are different.

Automobiles must be in top condition to venture on these new highways. There are no gasoline stations at every corner—no stopping for photographs or scenery — no turning back when you miss an exit ramp. Tickets are issued for driving too slow. The pace set by the majority is the safe speed, even if it is faster or slower than you like. The slowpoke is as dangerous as the speeder. He breeds risky passing.

Yes, the serviceman's automobile must be ready to meet the high test of excellence demanded by these super roads. So must the serviceman and his family. Signs must be read—exit lanes known well in advance. Speed must be maintained until the deceleration lane is reached. Then it must be slowed quickly — very quickly — because even 45 m.p.h. is too much for the ramps.

So for the serviceman who wants his planned trip to end happily, there is little choice if superhighways are involved. The family car must be in excellent condition — and the driver also (AFPS).

Student Wives Hear Orientation On Airborne and Ranger Training

By Marianne Whitlock and Emilie Dacunto

Wives of officers undergoing the airborne or ranger training program met for an orientation coffee in the Parachute Officers Lounge, 4th Stu. Bn., TSB recently.

Lt. Col. John J. Lissner welcomed the wives and then spoke to them about their responsibilities in regard to their husbands successfully completing the training.

Col. Lissner then introduced Capt. Dean Potter who conducted an orientation of airborne history and a demonstration of the jump preparations of an airborne soldier.

Lt. Richard Jones continued the program with a historical lecture about the Rangers.

Films depicting all phases of airborne and ranger training were shown at the conclusion of each lecture.

Mrs. John J. Lissner and Mrs. Joseph Alutius were the hostesses for the 30 ladies that attended.

The wives group of the 5th Stu. Bn., TSB held their monthly coffee at the Gold Bar Club recently.

Mrs. Robert B. Nett conducted a brief business meeting and introduced the newcomers. They are Mrs. David Gunnels, Mrs. James Bragg, Mrs. Bob Whan and Mrs. Everett Light.

Farewells were bid to Mrs. Richard Black, Mrs. Robert West, Mrs. John Dyer, Mrs. Kenneth Johnston and Mrs. Richard Conrad. An engraved tray was presented to each of the wives who are leaving the battalion.

The hostesses were Mrs. Kenneth Johnston, Mrs. George Cody and Mrs. Linwood Knight.

The serving table centerpiece was a tall white basket filled with yellow and white flowers.

The wives of candidates of the 82nd Co., 5th Stu. Bn., TSB held their third coffee June 1st.

"Customs and Courtesies" and "Calls and Calling Cards" were the topics discussed by Mrs. Charles L. Wuerpel, Mrs. James Graham and Mrs. John Crittenden.

Guests were Mrs. Fred O. Jackson, Mrs. Earl Buchanan, Mrs. Robert Nett, Mrs. Stanley Scott and Mrs. Charles Wuerpel.

The hostesses were Mrs. David Hockett, Mrs. James Houdson, Mrs. David Howard and Mrs. Nelson Wagner.

Mrs. Paul Davis held the monthly coffee for the wives group of the 4th Student Airborne Bn., TSB at her home recently.

Mrs. Edwin Frazier assisted Mrs. Davis while Mrs. John Lissner conducted group activities.

For Teens

Bridge Registration Slated for June 14th

Registration for teenage bridge lessons, open to all dependent teens on post, will be held June 14 at 10 a.m. at Brat Barracks.

The lessons will take place twice weekly for beginners and twice weekly for advanced players. However, registration is for both advanced and beginners lessons.

Classes in ceramics, modeling and sewing are also open to all dependent teens on Post.

Registration for the second session of typing courses is also being held in Brat Barracks. This session will begin July 21 and end August 31. The session will be divided into two classes, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Registration fee is three dollars. The classes are open to students who will enter the ninth, tenth, eleventh or twelfth grades or who will become college freshmen this fall.

The Officers' Wives Club has underwritten expenses for these courses, up to the amount of $1200. This money is allocated from the OWC Welfare Fund and is a portion of the money which was earned from the OWC Spring Welfare Event, "The Mikado". The After - Theater Party, The Monte Carlo Room and the Spring Welfare Donation receipts.

There will be live band dances, sponsored by the OWC, during the summer at Brat Barracks. Announcement of the first dance will be made in The Bayonet.

Award Presentation

Mrs. Colin Campbell (R) is presented a shoulder patch and a card certifying successful completion of an advanced Red Cross emergency first aid course. She was one of nine members of the Fort Benning Registered Nurses Club who took the course. Mrs. Anthony J. Ortner, who taught the class, makes the presentation.

Mary Sue Clark Becomes Wife Of Lt. Bill Pfeifer

Miss Mary Sue Clark, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. James Daniel Clark of Fort Benning, became the bride of Lt. Bill Pfeifer, also of Fort Benning, at 5:30 p.m., June 4 at the Main Post Catholic Chapel.

Chap. (Maj.) Michael A. Rusnock officiated. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Pfeifer of Maryville, Mo.

Tall baskets of yellow and white gladioli banked the altar. Seven-branched candelabra held cathedral tapers.

Lt. Charles Soltes was best man.

Ushers were Lt. Tyler Tugwell and Capt. Kenneth Teel.

Mrs. James Burke was matron of honor. She wore a yellow taffeta and white cluny lace dress and carnations.

Col. Clark gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore a light blue chantilly lace street-length sheath dress.

Mrs. Lee Reginer Cops Golf Honors

Mrs. Lee Reginer captured top honors recently in the annual Ladies Handicap Golf Tournament held at the Fort Benning Country Club course.

She defeated Mrs. Lou Kearns, seven and six in the third and final round of play to win the Club Trophy. Mrs. Sequel Wood won the consolation flight.

In the nine-hole division, Mrs. Nell Jones defeated Mrs. Lyra Crown and Mrs. Babs Hesterly won the consolation division.

In the losers' bracket, Mrs. Ylra Crown and Mrs. Sylvia Rogers tied for top honors.

Mrs. Trudy Mendenhall won the 18-hole division in the losers' bracket.

Catholic Group To Meet Sunday

The June 13 Communion Sunday and breakfast meeting of the Main Post Holy Name Society will be highlighted with an address by Father George James, the Administrator of Pacelli High School of Columbus.

Father James' topic will be "The Catholic Church in Columbus." He will discuss such points as the number of Catholics involved, the facilities available to them and the most amazing growth of Catholics in this area.

At the meeting itself, the parish picnic of July and the retreat of October will be discussed.

The Corporate Communion will be at the 10 a.m. Mass at the 197th Bde. Chapel and the breakfast meeting will follow immediately at the Student Officers' (Okinawa) Mess, Bldg. 2754A. All Catholic men as well as all present Holy Name members are urged to attend this meeting.

Bridge Tourney Set by OWC

The OWC Duplicate Bridge Tournament has been set for Monday, June 21 at 9:30 a.m. in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Silver trophies will be awarded the winners of each session and to overall tournament winners. Luncheon will be served in the Anzio Room during the tournament which will be held in two sessions during the day.

Officers' Wives Club members and their guests are eligible to enter. Reservations must be made by Wednesday, June 16 by calling Mrs. John Dale, chairman, at 689-3925 or Mrs. Paul Serff at 689-6087. Any person who wishes to play in the tournament but who doesn't have a partner may call either reservation number to make arrangements for a partner.

Master points will be awarded in the tournament.

Developing Post's Teen Club Is Teen-Agers' Responsibility

Dependent teen-agers were told last Saturday morning that they were to have the major responsibility for operation of their club (Brat Barracks), for the formulation of a constitution and by-laws and for development of a program featuring the type of activities they particularly desire.

The meeting, held in the Teen Club, was conducted by Capt. Stephen McIntyre, custodian of the Youth Activities Club and was the result of a staff study on methods to improve facilities for the teens and to stimulate their interest and participation.

Col. R. J. O'Neill, president of the YAC board of governors, cited a number of areas in which improvements are planned, both in facilities and organization.

Included in these are plans to move the YAC administrative offices, supply room and athletic equipment storage to another building. Architects are already studying the building to determine how this extra space can best be utilized to the benefit of the teen-agers.

Also included in structural changes being planned are landscaping, painting, lowering of the ceiling and installation of a Post Exchange concession snack bar.

To implement reorganization plans, a panel of teens has been appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws, after which members of the club will elect their own board of governors. This panel has already swung into action with their first meeting held earlier this week. Members are: Bob Hight, Columbus College; Theresa Liggett, Carver; Kay Anderson, Spencer; Sally Hennessy, Pacelli; Jeff Krauskoff, Columbus, and Bill O'Dell, Baker.

An example of immediate action in the revitalization program is a new juke box which has been procured and was installed in Brat Barracks prior to last Saturday's meeting.

To assist the youths in their reorganization and to help them get their programs moving, an advisory board has been designated and includes representatives from the Adjutant General's Section, G-1 and G-4, Provost Marshal and Staff Judge Advocate's offices, the 428th Med. Bn., Officers and NCO Wives' Clubs and an enlisted representative.

Mrs. R. D. Beard, president of the Officers' Wives' Club also spoke to the group at the meeting and told the teens present that the OWC was extremely interested in seeing the club brought up to a standard complimentary to a post such as Fort Benning and a program of activities that would appeal to everyone. She offered the full support of the OWC in sponsoring activities or in an advisory capacity.

Infantry Board Display

The evolution of the Infantryman's load is depicted in a display being shown in the lobby of The Infantry School until June 18. The exhibit was organized and arranged by the U.S. Army Infantry Board to depict the result of approved studies to reduce the weight carried by the combat Infantryman and conserve his energy. It effectively portrays items under development which will make the soldier faster and more effective. The Infantry Board is headed by Col. R. C. Williams.

Seven Brothers at One Time Not New to Military Service

NEW YORK (AFPS) — When Mr. Ingvald Kjera — one of seven brothers who served in World War II — asked the Veterans Administration (VA) for information on other large service families, it brought a flood of mail to his home and the VA.

One thing immediately became apparent: seven members of one family in the military service was not at all unusual.

More than 90 families reported having seven members in the service. In some cases this service was spread over three wartime periods while others included those who had served in peacetime. But there were many instances where seven had served on active duty during World War II.

More than 70 familes reported eight members with military service. There were 29 families with nine members and 18 families with 10 members in the service.

Two families, according to World War II era newspaper clippings sent to the VA, had 11 members serving in that war — the 11 sons, seven in the European Theatre and four in the Pacific, of Mrs. Frances Evans Dyke of Chicago and the eight sons and three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Van Courten of Long Beach, Calif.

However, all these families would seem to fall short of marks established in this nation's earlier wars if the following instances that have been called to the VA's attenion are correct.

The Rippeto family of Cedar Township, Va., had 12 sons who served in the American Revolution. Only one survived.

Thirteen boys of the Cossity family of Linn County, Mo., served in the Union Army during the Civil War and one died in Andersonville prison.

The Brown family of West Virginia had 16 sons in the Union Army, two of whom were killed.

Another West Virginian, Napoleon Norris of Red Star, had 17 sons in World War I.

But the "service family" of large service families appears to be that of Jacob Brawler. When some of his 22 sons were conscripted into the South Carolina militia to fight the British, the father announced that they would all go and he would accompany them. The father, 22 sons and a son-in-law left together. Only one son returned. The other 23 lost their lives during the Revolution.

LAW Briefing Team to Tour Europe To Demonstrate M72 Capabilities

The first team was scheduled to return to Fort Benning the same day after completing a 45-day tour of posts in the United States.

The European group will visit five areas overseas while the U. S. team presented demonstrations in 17 states.

Personnel from The Infantry School's Weapons Department who comprise the European team are 1st Lt. Francis G. Blackburn, SFC Roy R. Youngblood and SSgt. Willie C. Brammer.

On the U. S. team are SFC Gordon L. Rozell, SFC Arthur T. Bazzell and SSgt. Joe E. Dodds.

Purpose of the briefing program is to provide the soldier in the field with the best possible equipment and to give him first hand information on this equipment.

It is anticipated that other teams will be sent out with other new weapons in the future.

Post CG Will Cut Ribbon For '7, 8, 9 Club' Monday

More than 500 of the Infantry Center's senor sergeants got their first glimpse of the new "7, 8, 9 Club" last Saturday morning at an informal opening which followed almost 19 months of planning, construction and renovation.

Their complete approval was evident by the number who stayed for the balance of the day or who went home only to return with their wives.

Monday, at 4 p.m., an official opening ceremony will be held at the "million dollar club" with the post commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, wielding the scissors for the traditional ribbon snipping rite. Major unit commanders and staff officers have been invited as special guests.

All senior sergeants are urged to attend the ceremony which will be followed by a "walk-through" inspection tour.

The club went into full operation on Sunday, June 6, with bar and dining room schedules following those in effect at Crain Hall.

No "special" events are planned during June or until the board of governors is better able to determine the wishes of its membership.

Regular ($1) membership cards will admit E-7s, 8s and 9s to the new club during the current month but, beginning in July, patrons must have a $3 membership card which will also admit them to other clubs in the Central NCO Open Mess system.

Top three enlisted grades of the 2nd Inf. and 11th Air Assault divisions may patronize the new club by purchasing a $3 membership card or, if members of their own clubs for the current month, by paying an additional two dollars.

Workshop Is Planned For 'Middle Managers'

A workshop to help managers "take stock of themselves and plan for self-development" will be conducted at Fort Benning June 14-18.

Participants will be 24 civilian and military personnel in the middle manager or second line supervisor category.

Sessions of the Middle Managers Workshop will be conducted in Room 133-A, Bldg. 35 from 9 a.m. to 4 Thursday and Friday and from 8:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Speakers for the workshop are Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe; Hammond B. Smith, director of the Atlanta Region, U. S. Civil Service Commission; George Gingell, director of Public Affairs, WRBL-TV and Radio Station, Columbus, Ga.; and J. Ellis Swint, secretary-treasurer of a food concern in Columbus.

Also slated to speak are Col. R. M. Williams, Infantry Center chief of staff; Col. Milton G. Schneider, adjutant general of The Infantry Center; and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ray M. Rowland, Maj. Phillip E. Teague, 1st Lt. Timothy W. Sicker and 1st Lt. F. D. Leone.

Also slated to be speakers are Dr. Joseph A. Olmstead, senior scientist, U. S. Army Infantry Human Research Unit; C. O. Crowder, Maintenance Section; Mrs. Pearce Alford, Data Processing Section; S. Paul Watson, Civilian Personnel Section; T. J. Brown Jr., Engineer Section; V. C. Abrams, Finance and Accounting; and L. S. Mixon, Safety Section.

The program will include tape recordings by authorities in human relations and mental hygiene as well as films related to management.

Lemuel E. Johnson, employee development officer, Civilian Personnel Section and director of the workshop, said the program has been planned to help meet a need for "progressive manager training."

"Middle managers are often 'forgotten' men in an organization although they are the hub of coordination activities and include our future top executives," he continued. "It is a public duty for military and civilian managers in the Department of the Army to develop within themselves those attributes which will engender in others the willingness to put forth their best efforts."

Infantry Agency Cites Employees

Col. Kenneth E. Eckland, commanding officer of the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, recently presented certificates and monetary awards to two civilian employees and a certificate to one employee for outstanding performance of duty while members of the Infantry Agency.

Receiving monetary awards in addition to certificates were Mrs. Betty Butler for duty performed while secretary to the Chief of the Operations and Administration Division and Mrs. Sandra Green for duty performed while secretary in the Doctrine and Organization Division.

Receiving a certificate for performance while acting as secretary in the Advanced Studies and Plans Division was Mrs. Dorothy Jackson.

Distinctive Campaign Hat Identifies Drill Sergeant

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The distinctive campaign hat identifies a man as an Army Drill Sergeant. What is under the hat qualifies him as a trainer of men.

Almost a year has passed since the Army injected new concepts into its Basic Combat Training. Along with the new ideas came a new face—the Army Drill Sergeant.

What breed of man is this?

First, he is a soldier. He may be a combat veteran with 20 years service and a chest bedecked with ribbons, or he could have only six or seven years service in the peacetime Army. In any case, he is a man whose chosen profession is the defense of his country.

Second, he is a noncommissioned officer — a title conferred only upon soldiers who have demonstrated leadership ability — guiding others by example as well as by knowledge.

Third, he is a graduate of one of the Army's six Drill Sergeant Schools—five weeks of training even more rigorous than that through which he will lead his trainees.

Fourth, and most important, he is a human being—proud of the uniform he wears and the soldiers he trains.

Proud 'Parents'

The "million dollar" 7,8,9 Club opened its doors for the first time last Saturday, June 5, and none were happier than this quintet composed of (L to R) SSgt. Loyd C. Gregg, assistant secretary, Central NCO Open Mess system; Sgt. Maj. Cecil Bedford, president, NCO Club board of governors; Col. Robert M. Williams, chief of staff, USAIC; Sgt. Maj. W. A. Callahan, post sergeant major; and SFC Homer Montgomery, secretary, NCO Open Mess system.

100-Pint Mark Reached By Blood Donor

WASHINGTON (ANF) — One hundred pints of his blood have netted Mr. Arleigh Hauser, a Department of the Army employee, the gratitude of unknown beneficiaries, a Department of Defense Blood Donor Certificate of Commendation, a Letter of Commendation, and an American National Red Cross Certificate of Honor.

Mr. Hauser, Administrative Officer, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Department of the Army, was one of the first donors to contribute to the Army Blood Bank in the Pentagon during World War II.

'The Kind Have Long Life'

Air Force Leads In Married Men

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—Defense figures reveal that 63.3 per cent of all active-duty Air Force males are married, as compared with Army 46.7, Navy 43.1 and Marine Corps 37.7.

Figures show that service members have an average of more than one dependent. Again, the Air Force leads with 1.96, Army, 1.4, Navy 1.18 and Marine Corps 1.03.

Over Hand Brushing

Study Favors Electric Toothbrush

Can the average person practice better oral hygiene if he uses an electric toothbrush?

A recent study by Rear Admiral C. M. Fraleigh, DC, USN (Ret.) has answered this question of electric versus hand toothbrushes.

Admiral Fraleigh has found that by using an electric toothbrush accepted by the American Dental Association, one can thoroughly clean his teeth and massage his gums in three minutes. It requires eight minutes to clean the teeth and massage the gums properly with a hand toothbrush.

Admiral Fraleigh has taught thousands of patients specific methods of toothbrushing using many ingenious approaches developed by himself and other dental practitioners. He has found that the number who really learned and practiced a technique so that they could clean all the surfaces of their teeth, as well as stimulate the gums, was small. He reached the conclusion that no matter what methods were used, the time required to thoroughly clean teeth and to massage the gums was considerably longer than all but the most highly motivated persons were willing to devote to their oral health.

Research and treatment of patients have convinced Admiral Fraleigh that a carefully planned and practiced routine of oral hygiene is mandatory for the health of the teeth and gums. One can clean the teeth and massage the gums equally well with either a hand or an electric toothbrush, but because of the difference in time required, the average person can practice better oral hygiene if he uses an electric toothbrush.

Metress Cited for Work; Receives Legion of Merit

First Lt. Patrick A. Metress of IOBC Class No. 10, Det. 22, was awarded the Legion of Merit on June 7 in Marshall Auditorium for his development of a program to computerize Army Movement Schedules while stationed at the United States Army Terminal Command, Atlantic, Brooklyn, New York.

The award, presented by Col. T. W. Long, deputy assistant commandant of USAIS, cited Lt. Metress for "exceptionally meritorious service," praising his "extraordinary personal qualities of intellect, imagination, preception, diplomacy and tenacity" in overcoming the problems and obstacles he encountered.

What Lt. Metress actually did was computerize the who, what, when, where and why of transportation requirements for the movement of men, materiel and resupply during times of national disaster.

Lt. Metress, a 1960 graduate of John Carroll University with an ROTC commission, spent 3½ years at the Atlantic Terminal Command and has been reassigned to the Canal Zone. While a member of IOBC Class No. 10, he served as a student company commander.

The Legion of Merit is the Army's fifth highest award and is rarely awarded to company grade officers.

THE L. A. DODGERS have been leading the National League since the opening of the season. If their pitching can hold their injury ridden team together, they will more than likely have the pennant in their pocket this September.

"That Dodger mound staff is going to get awful tired around August," said Leo Durocher recently, "and their bats aren't going to keep them on top of the heap."

When and if the Dodger hurlers start to wilt, put your money on the boys from Milwaukee because they have the big bats and their pitching is beginning to jell.

The powerhouse of the senior circuit crept into the second place slot earlier this week and added three wins to their record during a recent four game series with the league leaders.

Last week the Braves sent Lee Maye, a .301 hitter, to the Houston club in exchange for Ken (no-hit) Johnson. Last year Johnson pitched nine innings of no-hit ball only to lose the game on an error. He had posted a 3-2 record this season with the Astros before going to Milwaukee. Teamed up with Cloninger, Sadowski, Blasingame and Lemaster, the Braves have one of the youngest hurling staffs in the majors.

Mack Jones, who has had five previous tryouts with the Braves, moved into Maye's centerfield position and immediately proved he wanted to stay with the team this time. He blasted the first grandslam homer of his major league career in a game against the Dodgers last Saturday. He has boosted his batting average from a puny .206 to a presentable .274 in the past week.

The Braves' infield is set for the year with the majors' best catcher, Joe Torre (.340), behind the plate; Gene Oliver (.253) at first; Frank Bolling (.306) at second; Sandy Alomar (.220) filling in for the injured Denny Menke (.274) at short; and Eddie Mathews (.283) at third.

The outfield boasts Hank Aaron (.341) in right, Felipe Alou (.277) in left and Jones in center. The bench is one of the best in the league. Rico Carty, a rookie sensation last year who has been hampered with a leg injury this season, is warming the Milwaukee bench until his leg heals.

As soon as Carty's leg mends, he will probably move into the left field position sending Alou to first. This will put Gene Oliver on the bench and give Torre the rest he needs as Oliver has also proven himself as a top notch catcher. Another utility fielder is Mike de la Hoz who batted .296 for the Braves last year and played every infield position.

Woody Woodard can also fill in at shortstop. He has a slick glove but a weak bat.

The first four Milwaukee batters that opposing pitchers have to face are Alou, Mathews, Aaron and Torre. That's enough to make any hurler nervous. The four of them had 77 homers between them last year and are already way ahead of last year's pace.

The rest of the Brave lineup boasts a batting average well over .270. This is also no pitcher's dream.

When a team can afford to swap a .301 batter, then you can figure they have ample power to spare.

Last year the Braves led the majors in hitting (.272) and runs scored (803) and were second in the league in home runs with 159. Milwaukee players finished second, third and fourth in the batting race and tied a National League record by having five men with 20 or more homers. Carty hit 22, Aaron 24, Torre 20, Mathews 23 and Menke 20.

Ty Cline, who has an arm like a "cannon," can cover the centerfield position and is developing a good batting eye.

The Braves have the power and are getting the runs. All they need now is the pitching. Johnson filled a big gap but he can't win it by himself. Cloninger is showing good form and Lemaster has started winning again after three straight defeats. One more big hurler in the Brave rotation could very well have the

Eichorn Tosses Two-Hit Shutout As 197th Inf. Clips Medics, 11-0

By Sp5 Mitch Yamanaka

The 197th Inf. Bde. was "out for blood" Monday night at Gowdy Field and came away with a few pints of the league leading 428th Med. Bn.'s as they rolled over the Medics 11-0 behind the two-hit shut-out pitching of Duane Eichorn.

The game ran only 6⅓ innings in accordance with league rules. The rule states that a game is over if any team is leading by 10 runs or more at the end of 6⅓ innings.

The 197th batters jumped all over starting pitcher Walter Waiss for five big runs in the second inning. In the third, Waiss was ejected from the game for illegal tactics and Bill Andrews came in to relieve and allowed two more runs.

Top batters for the 197th were Charles Farrell, Billy Williamson and Al Sumter. Farrell connected for two hits in three times at bat and two runs-batted-in. Williamson and Sumter each had two hits in four times at bat and two runs-batted-in.

Sumter had the big blow for the 197th with a triple in the second inning.

Andrews and Waiss were credited with the only hits allowed by Eichorn.

Last Friday, June 4, the 197th lost a hotly contested battle with The Student Brigade nine, 3-2, in what was perhaps one of the best played ball games of the season.

In that game, Jimmy Knight, TSB's 1st baseman-pitcher, relieved Jimmy Alkire in the 9th inning and put a story book finish to the game.

Alkire gave up a triple to Al Sumter before being lifted. Upon coming into the game, Knight struck out Eddie McLean. Then with the tying run on third and the winning run at the plate, Eichorn hit a short fly and Knight made a flying leap catch for the out. Quickly scrambling to his feet, Knight caught Sumter off the bag for the third out and TSB's third victory of the season.

Inf. Agency Officer To Head Columbus Bowling Commission

Maj. Gordon C. Conklin, Adjutant of the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, was elected President of the Columbus American Junior Bowling Commission at a meeting held at Victory Lanes recently.

The American Junior Bowling Congress, supported by the American Bowling Congress, chartered the Columbus district, to include Fort Benning, in October 1964.

With the organization of the local commission, junior bowling is expected to flourish in this area.

Meeks Cops Rifle Meet; Breaks Existing Record

By SSgt. Lee LaCombe

SSgt. Robert Meeks of Sixth Army smashed the existing record to capture the All-Army individual rifle championship Monday with a score of 993-97v.

It was the first title to be claimed in this world series of Army shooting which opened a week ago and continues through today.

The nearly 700 rifle and pistol marksmen from commands world-wide were welcomed to Fort Benning Thursday, June 3, by Maj. Gen.

SFC William B. Blankenship Jr. of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit blasted out a three-day total of 2,645 points to capture his fifth All-Army pistol championship Wednesday.

William Gray, deputy chief of staff for Unit Training and Readiness, CONARC, at opening ceremonies on McAndrews Range.

Thursday and Friday were devoted to practice and conduct of coaching clinics by the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit and on Saturday the riflemen began competition in earnest.

A tight battle developed between Meeks, SFC James Mcquien of the MTU, former All-Army champ Sgt. Willie Jordan of USAREUR, Sp4 Allan Ewing (winner of the Interservice High Power championship in 1963) and M-Sgt. Justino Cerenio of Sixth Army.

Jordan and Ewing fell off the pace Sunday as McQuien and Cerenio grabbed a one-point led over Meeks prior to the final 50-shot match Monday.

But Meeks dropped only one point in the final event to emerge the champion. McQuien finished second with 991-102v and third place went to fast-finishing SFC Norman Sharpness of Third Army with 991-100v.

Pistol Competition

Pistol competition began Monday with four matches with the .22 caliber pistol. At the end of four events, SSgt. Hershel Anderson of USAREUR held a slim two point margin over SSgt. Emil Heugatter of the MTU.

Anderson pounded out an 891 out of 900 in the quartet of matches and Heugatter was hot on his heels with 889.

All four fired events went to MTU shooters. National champion SFC William Blankenship, who holds the Army record for the All-Army matches with 2,657 points, took a pair in the Timed Fire and National Match Course and MSgt. Richard Stineman topped the field in the Rapid Fire with a record - tying score of 200-16x.

Heugatter took the Slow Fire match with 197.

The individual pistol championship was to be decided Wednesday after four matches with Center Fire pistols (.38 caliber or larger) and then four more with the service .45 handgun.

A major awards ceremony has been scheduled at McAndrews Range for tomorrow morning at 9:30 a.m. Principal speaker will be Maj. Gen. Hart Caughey, deputy chief of staff for Personnel for Individual Training, CONARC.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremonies will be held at Theater 1.

Results of the individual rifle matches follow:

Match 1: 300 yds., off hand—Winner: Sgt. William Lee, Sixth Army; 100-12v (new record-old record was 100-09v); High Old Shooter: Lt. Michael Denia, U. S. pennant flying in County Stadium for the last time.

Minnesota had the power in the American League last year but lacked strength on the mound. This year their mound staff is coming through and their bats are still booming. They presently hold a 2½ game lead over the second place White Sox. If the Braves nab the National League flag and the Twins the American League banner, the series will be a test of power ad plenty of baseballs will be flying out of the park.

Would the people of Milwaukee show up for the World Series if the Braves were to grab the flag? They have been coming out to the park only two and three thousand at a time and not many people blame them.

But a World Series is different. If these two power houses do meet in the series, it should be one where records will go flying over the fences.

Golf Tourney Date Changed

The father and son (daughter) golf tourney originally scheduled for June 27 at the Officers Country Club course will be held on June 20, one week earlier than previously announced.

All members of the country club are invited to compete.

Members of winning teams will receive trophies.

Interested participants may sign up in advance at the pro shop.

THE GOOD CONDUCT MEDAL. In 1782 General George Washington ordered "Honorary Badges of Distinction" for enlisted men "who have served more than three years with bravery, fidelity and good conduct."

For all practical purposes, the Good Conduct Medal is the same decoration as the "Honorary Badge of Distinction" ordered by General Washington.

The present form of the Good Conduct Medal was established by Presidential Executive Order in 1941 and is restricted to soldiers who have distinguished themselves by exemplary conduct, efficiency and fidelity while in an enlisted status.

Former Vietnam Tactician Discusses Cherokee Trail

BY JIM LULL

Three months ago Col. Ben H. Ward — 1st Brigade commander — was directing counter - insurgency tactics in the Republic of Viet Nam.

This month the colonel will lead a 3,000 man counter - guerrilla force into mock battle in the hills of North Carolina during Exercise Cherokee Trial VI.

"The concepts to be employed during Cherokee Trail are virtually identical to the methods of operation used against the guerrilla forces we face in Viet Nam.

"In combatting a guerrilla force, whether in Viet Nam or North Carolina, we have to establish a good relationship with the surrounding civilian public," Col. Ward stressed.

"Anyone who is not convinced of the value, or prime importance of civic action in combat surroundings should spend a tour in Viet Nam to become convinced."

The colonel continued, "the civilian public reads and hears a lot about military operations and counter - guerrilla actions in the areas involved — but it's the day to day actions of the military forces from which they draw their opinions."

He further emphasized "it's this civic relationship with the local communities that keys notes the success of counter - guerrilla operations."

The colonel related the problem of locating, distinguishing and capturing the small guerrilla force that will confront the counterinsurgency team in North Carolina to the situation present in Viet Nam.

"During the Cherokee Trail exercise last year, many men came away with a sense of frustration over their inability to catch the guerrillas," he said. "As in Viet Nam, the biggest problem we face is actually telling the guerrilla from the civilian public. They blend right into the local population, because they wear no distinguishing uniform."

Col. Ward cited the importance of developing reliable intelligence and information sources among the local population in their effort to seek out the guerrilla bands. "Once again, this civic action — or good citizenship — plays such an important role in our operation," he said.

The men of the counter-guerrilla team face a major problem during the upcoming manuever due to the Training during the past week has intensified as the units scheduled to depart soon for Exercise Cherokee Trail VI undergo annual counter - guerrilla training in preparation for the North Carolina maneuver.

In addition to the manuever, original tactics are being devised to aid in the two-week guerrilla chase.

Unusual Twist

The 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry has added an unusual twist to their preparations for the exercise.

They have broken the battalion into the configuration to be utilized in North Carolina," said Maj. Richard Morley, battalion training and operations chief.

Companies A and C have been combined during the Phase One Operation, with Headquarters Company providing the second major headquarters.

Company B, combined with the other various allocated support, both infantry and artillery, have been dispersed among the two lead elements to provide maximum counter - guerrilla effectiveness.

"This way we are fully able to establish proper chain of command procedure and most important develop vital teamwork so we can furnish a team effort," said Morley.

Much Time

The 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, has spent much of their time in the field preparing for the upcoming manuever.

"As our battalion draws closer to the departure date June 20th, much of the time will be devoted to the actual preparation for long distance movement," commented Maj. Barney Gill of the 9th Infantry.

"This will be integrated with counter - ambush and immediate action training, as well as river crossing expediency work, and counter-guerrilla instruction," he said.

Information

Both battalions will also concern themselves with special command information topics familiarizing the men with counter - insurgency and civil affairs, as conducted by division G-5, and the division

Mini-Review Bids Huffman Adieu

The 2nd Infantry Division last Friday said farewell to its Columbus - born Chief of Staff, Col. Burnside E. Huffman.

At a miniature review on Marne Field, Col. Huffman told the assembled troops and spectators "it has been a great honor to have served with this wonderful division."

Native

Huffman, a native of Columbus, Ga. served with the division for the past two years. He first commanded the division artillery until named Chief of Staff last summer.

Col. Tony F. Perpich, division artillery commander has been named to succeed Huffman in the chief of staff post. Perpich assumed the artillery post when Huffman vacated it last year.

On hand for the ceremonies was Col. Huffman's mother, Mrs. Samuel W. Smithers of Columbus.

In early July Col. Huffman will become the director of the gunnery department at the U. S. Army Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.

At a brief presentation ceremony in the office of division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, he was given a shield with the crests of all the units assigned to the division. He was also presented with other mementos of his stay with the division.

During the presentation ceremony, Gen. Chiles described his association with Col. Huffman as "one of the most delightful in my career in the Army."

First Time

This is the first time in Col. Huffman's military career that he has been stationed in the town in which he and his wife, Margeret, also a native of Columbus, were born.

He is a 1936 graduate of Columbus High School.

Of the time he has been stationed here, Huffman said "I feel fortunate having been assigned here two years. It was wonderful to come back and see old friends I had not seen since high school days."

Col. Huffman is a 1941 graduate of the US Military Academy at West Point.

British Engineer Major Views 2nd's Operations

A British engineer officer — Maj. J. D. Isaac — was a guest of the 2nd Engineer Battalion last Thursday morning as he viewed much of the 2nd Division's engineering activity.

Currently assigned to Fort Belvoir's Engineer Reactor Group, where he is studying land mobile nuclear power plants, the foreign major was visiting Fort Benning's engineer outfits to observe various combat engineering methods.

He first met with division commander, Maj. Gen. John E. Chiles at division headquarters and then headed directly to the 2nd Engineer Battalion to meet with bat-

12th Artillery Observes 48th Anniversary

A review staged by the non Commissioned officers of the 12th Artillery was the highlight of Tuesday's commemoration of the unit's 48th anniversary.

Athletic competition between batteries and a picnic style lunch at the Infantry Center's rest camp topped the remainder of the day devoted to kiddie rides and weapons displays.

Since its inception the 12th Artillery has been a member of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Founded in 1917, the unit was originally equipped with horse-drawn three inch guns. Today it is armed with the deadly, nuclear - capable "Honest John" rocket.

Since that time it has participated in both World War II and Korea as a unit of the division. Such names as Normandy, Elsenborn Ridge, "Heartbreak" and "Pork Chop" live in the annals of the Unit's 48-year history.

What It Takes To Innovate

By JIM BAKER

Little children grow to be big children and then they become adults. They leave a mark on the world, however small, and then they leave it.

In the course of their life they constantly receive advice on how they should live it. The news media chronicles the daily efforts of man, they report, analyze and advise. The 2nd Infantry Division news is no different — it too occupies a position of responsibility to it's readership.

To merely report the news would be to leave the Indianhead soldier without an arena in which to exercise his thoughts.

At no time will the space devoted of this column be considered as the last word. It will present an opinion, good or bad, right or wrong but always it is to be hoped, the product of thought.

Stimulate

Hopefully it will stimulate thought, conversation and in some cases — action.

Enough for the apology and now to the meat of this week's installment — the Army's suggestion program.

A contemporary novelist was trying to prove a point about innovations in an educational system.

One of his characters told a parable about the man who owned a chain of supermarkets in a large city.

The man decided one day to install an innovation. He decided to put shopping carts in his stores for customer ease. This was the first time it had ever been tried in the country.

He called his store managers into a conference and asked them what they thought about the idea. Ten of them were enthusiastic about it and the other ten were not.

Weeks Later

Several weeks later he made a tour of his stores. In the ten stores operated by the enthusiastic managers, the innovation of the shopping cart was adding considerably to the store's profits. In the other ten, business was as usual.

The point the author was trying to make is simple. Innovations can only work when those who must exploit and use them are enthusiastic about them.

This is the case with the Army suggestion program. Many valuable suggestions are either stifled or lost because enthusiasm is lost.

Efficiency, and cost reduction go hand in hand, and the Army is eager to find ways of solving its waste and inefficiency problems.

Regardless of how eager the Army is to solve these problems, it will never accomplish this objective if the individual does not have an enthusiasm for his job that will prompt and promote innovations.

Each Indianhead

The success of the program rests then with each individual Indianhead soldier. Not just with the man who does the job but with his supervisor and his associates.

Each of us must develop interest in our jobs and in the jobs of those around us. Most definitely we have to forget the old adage, "The right way, the wrong way and the Army way."

When we talk about efficiency, job performance and cost cutting there is only one way — the best way.

length of the actual problem. The Colonel explains that "much of the responsibility for establishing good civilian - military relationship is placed in the hands of the squad leaders and platoon leaders. They must be aware of the impact the image of their men carry."

One problem the fictitious Pineland Army will not face during the Cherokee Trail maneuver is the language barrier.

"However, the way this problem is constructed we would not face the language problem anyway," Col. Ward remarked. "The Pineland Army is the area's native force so naturally, we would be speaking their tongue."

The colonel said that in Viet Nam the military has a larger role than could possibly be portrayed in a maneuver no matter how long here in the United States.

"The military is largely responsible for the scholastic advancement of the local populus in Viet Nam, for instance. In many small Vietnamese hamlets, they never have had schools."

In addition the brigade commander pointed to the importance medics play in a counter - guerrilla operation with their treatment of the locals.

"To sum it up," the colonel said "The day-to - day treatment the soldiers give the surrounding public is vital, in my mind perhaps the most important element of counter - guerrilla operations."

talion commander, Lt. Col. Alfred L. Griebling.

Following the extended briefing by the engineer commander, Maj. Isaac quickly toured the "bridge park" and battalion motor pool, and proceeded to the division's largest construction job of the year at the Patton House enlisted man's club near the Sand Hill golf course.

He was met by Company C's commander, Lt. Roy Robertson, whose men are building the new club.

The British major termed the construction work being done "tremendous" and expressed interest in the project.

Later, Maj. Isaac toured training of the remaining engineer companies.

The British major is due to return to his home unit in England in late June or early July, officials said.

He is assigned to the Engineer Corps of the British Strategic Reserve.

World's Fair Part IV

Interest High in Army Exhibition

By JOE TREASTER

FLUSHING MEADOW, N.Y. — Some 25 Army people have been going to the New York World's Fair every day since it opened in April.

Each morning they roll out of their temporary quarters at Fort Slocum — on an island in Long Island Sound — climb into olive drab limousines and drive to the Fair.

For them, the greatest free festival of the year is a job.

Six hours a day, six days a week they stand beside the Army's exhibits in the Transportation and Travel Pavilion.

How fast will that helicopter go? What is that truck used for? What's the difference between the M-14 rifle and the M-1 I used in Korea . . . and say, tell me about that M-16 Armalite.

The soldiers and a trio of WACs field questions like that all day, every day.

"I was surprised at the interest shown by the general public," said Capt. Frederick Schroeder, officer in charge of the exhibit. He recently returned from Viet Nam.

Traffic through the exhibit, he said, has been brisk. He estimated some 55,000 people passed through the area, the second day the fair was open this spring.

"A great many people don't get any closer than the helicopter out in front of the building," he said, "but at least they see that and we have a soldier standing there who can answer questions."

Central attraction of the exhibit has been a pair of M-16 rifles mounted on a miniature target firing range. Youngsters firing the rifles hurl an electronic impulse toward the targets and can see the results when they zero in a hit.

Glass cases contain a progression of weapons and wheeled vehicles showing the evolution of modern war equipment.

And every 10 minutes a super-large, open-end closet lights up with the beginning of a color film, showing the Army's role in the nation's space program.

According to Capt. Schroeder, 20 of the soldiers were levied for the Fair duty from Fort Campbell, Ky., — 19 are 101st Airborne Division men and one is regularly assigned to the Third U.S. Army detachment there.

The WACs came from Fort Meade, Md., Fort Belvoir, Va., the Edgewood Arsonal near Baltimore, Md.

In addition, the captain said, two men from the Army's special exhibit detachment at Cameron Station, Va., are working at the Fair.

Second Infantry Division news photographer Marv Wolf got the rare opportunity to photograph the making of the modern young woman earlier this week when Mickey Sue Leahy went to the beauty parlor for the first time. The occasion was her sixteenth birthday and the time when she could have her hair cut. Scene of the scissoring was the main post beauty shop and the cost of the new hairdo—18 dollars.

Wives' Clubs Contribute To Finish Nursery

The ladies organizations of the 2nd Infantry Division got behind the renovation of the chapel nursery with their pocket books.

Last week the Ladies of the Big Indianhead, the wives of the division's noncommissioned officers handed over a check for $100 as their part in the nursery renovation.

Previously, the Officer's Wives Club came to the financial rescue of the nearly completed nursery with a check for $150.

In the presentation last week, division chaplain, Lt. Col. James C. Carroll accepted the Big Indianhead ladies' donation from club president, Mrs. Cardell Kaney. Attending Mrs. Kaney at the presentation was the second vice president of the club, Mrs. Vera Lee.

Revamping of the Sand Hill Chapel nursery began almost a year ago when the late Col. C. C. DeReus and his wife undertook the project.

Now according to Chaplain Carroll the renovation is nearly complete. "It even has air conditioning," he concluded.

TOP SOLDIER PROMOTED

The 2nd Infantry Division's Soldier of the Year for 1965 added a stripe to his sleeve last week when he was promoted to Specialist 5.

Gerald M. Clayton of Troop C, 7th Cavalry, has distinguished himself numerous times by being selected as the squadron's soldier of the month twice, the 1st Brigade's soldier of the year, the division's soldier of the month twice and as the division's soldier of the year.

Clayton entered the Army in December 1963 taking basic training at Ft. Knox, Ky. He has served as Troop C's commander's driver and as an armored vehicle mechanic.

He plans to return to college upon completion of his active duty.

Engineer Ladies Elect New Officers

The officers' wives of the 2nd engineer battalion elected officers for the coming year during a coffee held at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Mrs. George Tadler was chosen president at the poolside affair. Mrs. Harold Matheney was chosen vice president; Mrs. Jack De Hanas, secretary; Mrs. Allan Tobiason, publicity; Mrs. Lon Denison, treasurer; and Mrs. Richard Baier, Mrs. Robert Close and Mrs. Nolan Lee hospitality chairmen.

In addition to the election of officers, presentation of a silver farewell tray was made to Mrs. Herbert Lever, and plans were made for a bridge party to be held June 16th at the home of Mrs. Lee.

New members welcomed into the group were: Mrs. Edward Draper, Mrs. Fred Burton and Mrs. Robert Caroll.

Thailand Officers Visit; Made Honorary 'Indians'

By Marv Wolf

Three high ranking officers of Thailand toured the 2nd Infantry Division last week and collected honorary memberships in both the division and the 9th Infantry.

Maj. Gen. Chaeleow Pechryoti, the Thai army's inspector general, and Colonels Siha Thanadchang and Sa-Ard were presented miniature Indianhead pins by Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, division commander.

Afterwards the three representatives of our staunchest allies in troubled Southeast Asia were briefed on the ROAD division.

Since a Thai battalion had fought alongside members of the 2nd Division's 9th Infantry Regiment during the Korean War, the visiting general expressed an interest in visiting the 9th.

Lt. Col. John D. White, representing both the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 9th, greeted the Thai officers warmly and after first conducting them on a tour of the unit's museum, made all three honorary members of the "Manchu" unit, pinning them with miniature unit crests.

Appropriately, the ceremony was conducted in front of a plaque presented the 9th by the 21st Thailand Battalion, dubbed "Little Tigers" by the men of the 2nd Division.

The plaque commemorates the bond of friendship existing between the two units.

Gen. Pechryotin, when asked what had impressed him the most on his visit to Fort Benning, broke into a wide smile, held up his right thumb and exclaimed: "Everything good! Number one!"

Mrs. McLain Gains Praise For Engineer Needlework

While Sgt. William E. McLain fights the war of the peace time soldier with the tools of a combat engineer, his attractive wife battles shabbiness with a needle and thread.

Her victories are apparent in the 2nd Engineer Battalion area.

She improved upon the engineer flag which flies over the battalion's memorial at the entrance to headquarters and, starting with a bare scrap of material she produced the colorful arm bands that distinguish the battalion soldier of the day.

The campaign pennants that remind review spectators of the battalion's combat heritage are her work, too.

And recently, when the engineers paid tribute to departing chief of staff Col. Burnside E. Huffman, she stitched together the "Goodby Col. and Mrs. Huffman" banner that exploded into view, climaxing a morning review.

Mrs. McLain did the work without pay and without promise of reward.

Lt. Col. Alfred L. Griebling, the battalion commander, watched with interest Mrs. McLain's achievement.

After the ceremony for Col. Huffman, the engineer leader invited Mrs. McLain and her husband into his office for coffee and accolades.

They talked pleasantly for some minutes before Col. Griebling grew formal, presenting Mrs. McLain a letter of appreciation.

Grounding firmly the praise he had earlier heaped upon Mrs. McLain, Col. Griebling said:

"On behalf of the officers and men of the 2nd Engineers, I extend to you a "well done," for your dedicated help. Your interest in your husband's unit is "second to none" and a fine example of the Army way of life."

13 Soldiers Off to 2nd Ranger Class

The 2nd Infantry Division sent its second largest contingent of the year to Ranger School recently.

And Capt. Harold T. Fields, the officer-in-charge of the division's newly established Ranger preparation program, said he expects a high percentage of the group to graduate from the nine-week course.

Of the 13 men who Saturday passed a qualifying test for the school, 11 are specialists fours, one is a lieutenant and one is a captain. Capt. Fields said 15 men took the test.

"In the past only about 20 per cent of the men taking the test passed," he said. "So many men passed this time because they were prepared. For the past two weeks the candidates have been taking physical training before going to their military jobs."

Next class, he said, is scheduled to begin July 11. Preparatory classes will begin in mid-June.

Ingram Takes Over 23rd Infantry During Review

BY JIM LULL

A change of command ceremony recently in the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry placed Col. Earl Ingram in command of the unit formerly held by Lt. Col. Strathmore K. McMurdo.

Ingram arrives at the 23rd following a position as 2nd Division G-2, and McMurdo moves to an interim position of assistant to the assistant division commander, Col. John Armstrong.

McMurdo will travel to the Far East mid-way through July to become a senior advisor to Thailand in the Bangkok area.

The entire battalion formed on Wetherby Field for the formal review marking the command change.

NEW CAPTAIN

The former commander of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry's Company B was promoted and handed the new job of battalion motor officer last week.

Now Capt. Harold L. Rodgers, who commanded the company for one year, takes a position he "looks forward to very much."

McMurdo, in his final words to the men of his command, said "I will always be a true We Server," and as he gave the command to Col. Ingram said "I pass a part of myself with these colors to the new commander."

The former battalion commander pointed to the fact that the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry had won the Commanding General's Trophy for the past two years and that more than one-half of the division's total number of men awarded the Expert Infantrymen's Badge were from the "We Serve" battalion.

Col. Ingram, expressing extreme gratitude assuming the new position, said "This is the happiest moment of my military career. I'll do my best to uphold the reputation of this battalion."

With that the men of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, led by their new commander, passed in review for the former commander.

3rd Brigade's Commanders Changed

"I took three magnificent battalions, down to Fort Stewart, and I returned with a magnificent brigade."

With these words Col. John W. Armstrong turned over command of the 3rd Brigade to his successor, Col. Fred O. Jackson in a ceremony highlighted by the symbolic passing of the colors at Wetherby Field Thursday morning.

Following the color passing ritual Sgt. Maj. James L. Runyon assisted in the transfer of the brigade neck scarf and the brigade commander's shoulder holster from the out going commander to the incoming.

After delivering a brief message to the assembled brigade, Col. Armstrong ordered the brigade to pass in review.

Ordered to duty at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., Armstrong will assume the duties of assistant division commander until his departure in July.

Col. Jackson comes to the Third brigade from the 2nd Division Support Command.

Request Prompts Memory

"I had been on several fronts and in five major engagements, and was being discharged after processing through a series of twelve hospitals, and I was not yet 18 years old."

"With this introduction, an "old Indianhead" from the 1st World War, M. M. McClure, now retired in Schereville, Ind., wandered back into the lime light after seeing a plea from the 2nd Division Support Command for information concerning their 1917 Studebaker Wagon.

Putting his memories in letter form, McClure addressed them to the historical officer, Support Command, "for anyone who might be interested."

"I volunteered on April 7th, 1917, the day following the Declaration of War on Germany," recalls McClure. "I was just 15 years old at the time, and had to have special approval of the Adjutant General.

"My first assignment was with the Boston Coast Defense, but I was shortly reassigned to Battery C, 12th Field Artillery, at Camp Fort Meyer, Virginia. This assignment led to my first connection with the 2nd Division when the 12th became one of the three Artillery regiments of the division.

"It was also with the 12th that I first came in contact with your Studebaker Wagon" remembered McClure. "Every battery had these wagons, pulled by six mules and driven by a man we call a "mule skinner. They were used mostly to haul forage for our horses, but we also used them to carry supplies and tools. They were called Escort Wagons in those days."

"Occasionally the wagons were used for purposes other than military" recalled McClure. "My section sergeant once loaded a German telephone switchboard into an old escort to take back as a souvenir."

"After the war was over almost a year, I decided to come back into the service. I went to the recruiter in Indianapolis, Indiana, and was told I would need my parents permission to enter the Army, as I was just 18 years old. I asked the sergeant, "will this do as well?" and showed him my honorable discharge, which listed my engagements during the war. I was immediately assigned to the 49th Infantry."

"I visited Fort Revere, the old location of the Boston Coast Defense, a few years ago" said McClure. "The guns have long since been removed, and all that remain are the blocks on which they were mounted. The barracks are still there, but are being used as apartment houses. A lot of time has passed.

"I wrote my grandfather of parading down Pennsylvania Avenue in review for President Wilson," says McClure, "and he wrote back and told me how he paraded down that same avenue in review for President Lincoln. I think I had better sign off after that; that's about as far back as I can go."

'Genuine Imitation'

Support Commands Wagon Gets Overhaul

BY DAVE BUMAN

A "genuine imitation" 1917 Studebaker Wagon may soon be seen rolling around Sand Hill.

Support Command's symbol and pride, a 48 year old supply wagon that was a part of the Second Division as far back as World War I, has been showing her age lately. Her running boards are dry-rotted, her timber creaks and her wheels don't roll true, but soon she'll be better than new.

After much debate within Support Command Headquarters as to the fate of "Old 233," a plan for her re-construction was settled upon.

Monetary Help

With the monetary help of the Indianhead Association, 233's wheels were sent to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, to be restored. Sgt. Raymond Avisata from Headquarters Division Artillery was brought to the Support Command area to estimate the work involved in the restoration of the wagon itself. A former carpenter who has had years of experience in the restoration of antique furniture, Avisata determined that a complete job was necessary to put the old Studebaker back on the road.

Piece by piece the wagon was taken apart, each piece measured, and an exact duplicate hand made of good strong lumber.

Three Week's Work

After three weeks of work by Avisata, assisted by Support Command's sergeant major, Joe R. Camp, a "genuine imitation" 1917 supply wagon is about to replace old 233.

"The old wagon was so fragile it couldn't be moved," said Camp, "and we were afraid of it falling apart on us."

According to Avisata, "an antique does not loose, but rather gains value after restoration. We've rebuilt the wagon to the exact detail and although it is not the same wood, or bolts, or screws, it's still a 1917 model Studebaker Wagon."

Antique to some, "genuine imitation" to others, the "old new" wagon will once again take it's place as symbol around Support Command.

New Manchu Foo

9th's AWOL Alligator Replaced

BY MARV WOLF

Remember ol' Foo the Manchu? — the four foot alligator the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry kept briefly as a mascot?

If you recall, he escaped, was captured before it could get the 23rd Infantry's goat, and then escaped again. He was also shedding his Georgia drawl so he could inflect Mandarin properly, as all Chinese Imperial five toed dragons do, whether the real mccoy or just carried in a duty slot.

Ol' Foo has been dropped from the rolls as a deserter, but in response to our request for applicants for the vacancy, a young Columbus alligator has been accepted for the position.

Although the 9th's new mascot, formerly named Robert E. Beauregard Elvis Lincoln, or REBEL for short, isn't quite half the size of his predecessor, he is a good bit younger.

His detractors may point to the fact he doesn't, at present, breathe fire, or at least not so's you would notice it. Sgt. Maj. Alcus Stokes of the 9th is personally devoting several hours a week of his own time to teach him.

Because of the cloudy circumstances surrounding Foo's unheralded departure, unusual security measures are being invoked to protect his successor. Strangers walking within a hundred yards of the now wire-screened enclosure are being questioned suspiciously.

Sgt. Raymond Thielen, the alligator's keeper, has been overheard marking remarks like "My alligator is hungry" or "You there, be careful how you speak about my alligator." Furthermore, he's due to return to civilian life and Sacramento, Calif. Which is uncomfortably close to a number of medical schools that use small reptiles in their research. Besides Sacramento is known to have a large Chinese-American population, and even synthetic dragons are hard to come by out there, what with the movies and all.

Oh yes, the name of the new mascot. Foo Too. Or is it Foo Two? or Foo II?

Anybody speak Chinese?

Coaching the Competition

indianheads shoot in tennessee

While hundreds of riflemen and pistol slingers were at Fort Benning for the annual All-Army matches, a team of 2nd Infantry Division marksmen last weekend was competing in Tullahoma, Tenn.

They had been favored to win in competition against 12 other teams Sunday, but by a five-point margin, the home team upset the Indianhead men.

SFC Joe Moreno made no excuses for the team he coached:

"We knew if we were going to beat them it would have to be at the short distances — 200 and 300 yards. But we didn't. And our semi-automatic service rifles won't beat the bolt action guns at long distances."

The captain of the winning team acknowledged the 2nd Division marksmen's prowess and said a major factor for his victory was that he was firing on home ground.

In individual matches Saturday, the second division collected eight awards.

Sgt. Alan Cochran won the 300-yard rapid fire, prone-position contest for experts and Lt. David C. Wyatt won the match for masters.

Sgt. Cochran was the overall winner in the day's expert competition and Lt. Wyatt later finished third in the 500-yard master's match. SFC Ben H. Benoist won the 500-yard match and also placed second in rapid fire competition at 200 yards.

Lt. Clark Weaver scored a third in the 200-yard slow fire match for masters.

Commander of the marksmanship detachment, Capt. John T. Burke said the unit is next likely to see competition at the Georgia State Pistol Championship in early July.

Plans for Indianhead Reunion Set; Soldiers Can Get Free Leave to Go

With only a month remaining before 2nd Infantry Division soldiers and friends gather for their annual reunion at the Diplomat Hotel in Miami, active Army officials began making final preparations.

Tentatively, officials said, all 2nd Division soldiers will be eligible for an administrative leave for the purpose of attending the Florida gathering. Final decision on the leave, however, will rest with unit commanders.

Soldiers would be allotted the three days of the reunion —July 15, 16 and 17—and a day for travel in each direction.

Leaders of the 2nd Brigade which has been on loan to the 11th Air Assault Division since last June, indicated that their men would also be allowed time off from duty.

According to the division sergeant major, Robert L. Brown, two sessions at the reunion are mandatory: a traditional memorial service honoring 2nd Division losses in the three great wars of the century and the grand banquet scheduled for Saturday night.

Lt. Paul J. Myers, project officer for the active Army members of the 2nd (Indianhead) Division Association, said a prime matter to be considered at the executive business meeting will be a proposed scholarship fund.

A committee has been working on the scholarship program for some months, he said, and the question is expected to come to a vote in Miami.

Indications are that active Army members will unanimously endorse the plan.

During the three days that the division is in the hotel, historic mementos will be on display. Both the Korean and the Liscum Bowl are expected to be shown.

Fishingline

By Chuck Siler

Georgia Waters abound with bass and many of them qualify as lunkers.

While many large mouth bass that go well over ten pounds, are caught totally, I think for most of us anything over five pounds will loosely fit the lunker category.

If you fish for fun, go when you please. If you expect to take a trophy bass, then go when he's feeding.

Have you ever been asked the ridiculous question, "What were you doing beteen three and five this morning?" Imagine the surprise when you reply—"fishing."

My latest lunker, which measured 21½ inches, was caught at 4:20 a. m. in Weems Pond on the Fort Benning Reservation. He was feeding in about 30 inches of water around the edge of some bull rushes and fell sucker to my surface plug.

Boats Available

Although boats were available through the Fish and Game Association, I chose to slip on waders and quietly ease into the waist deep water. By the time most people were stirring, I had taken four bass, including the lunker, and was back home.

Earlier in the season, I took a limit of five bass from King's pond on the servation. Two of them were over 19 inches long. They were taken in about 45 minutes just about 7:00 p.m.

During mid-May, I took three lunkers within a stone's throw of the special services marina on the Chattahoochee, using a silver spoon in mid-afternoon.

On each of these occasions bass were feeding; at King's Pond and on the river I saw minnows skipping out of the water fleeing from bass. I simply offered a hungry fish a lure at the right time.

If you plan to land a lunker be equipped for a fight.

Good Angler

A good angler can handle a big fish on light monofilament line with a clutch - equipped reel during daylight in open water.

Change the rules a little making it frog or weed infested water on a dark night and the bass have all the odds.

I enjoy the long casts permitted by a light line during the day. When darkness closes in, I put on a second spool containing 10-pound - test line or I switch to my casting reel with 12½ pound braided line. The braided line is less likely to tangle causing fewer interuptions after dark.

Large Plugs

I grew up using a casting reel before the spinning and spin casting reels became popular in this country. Consequently I had a tackle box filled with large plugs.

With my spinning outfit I acquired a wide selection of the light and ultra - light lures. I have taken hundreds of fish of many species on these small lures but only rarely has any of them qualified as lunkers. I am firmly convinced that big fish go for big plugs.

Refuse Rushing

Big bass refuse to be rushed, so when working your lure, particularly surface plugs, moved them as slow as possible to get action from them. A surface plug should be left for several seconds after the cast before twitching it. Pause and twitch it three or four times, pausing each time, then retrieve it with a jerky motion.

At night plugs with a continuous noise such as a jitterbug or injured minnow produce the best for me. The strike may occur anywhere in the course of retrieving the lure but it normally happens after the plug has been in motion about ten seconds.

Mounting

If you wish to mount your trophy bass — plan ahead. Know where to find a taxidermist and find out how to preserve your fish until you can get it to him.

Discoloration is the most serious problem. Taxidermists perfer to receive the fish alive. If this is impractical wrap it in wet newspaper or keep it on ice before it loses its natural green color and turns white.

Sgt Snipes Grabs Laurels In All-Army Rifle Shoot

PSgt. Fred Snipes, a member of the 2nd Infantry Division Marksmanship Detachment, this week racked up honors during the annual firing of the All-Army Rifle Championships on Fort Benning's McAndrew Range.

Snipes, who has won a host of trophies for the 2nd Division in the past, is firing with the Third Army team throughout the matches. He picked up his first win Sunday when he fired 100 with 10 shots in the v-ring to win the individual 300-yard rapid fire.

On Monday Snipes came back to win the individual firing a 250 with a 28 in the v-ring. He missed matching the national record by one shot in the v-ring. Sgt. Howard H. Stevens, of the USAMTU holds a 1961 record of 250-29vees.

Snipes' biggest win came later in the week when he won the individual rapid fire championship in the open class with a score of 400 with 39 vees.

Snipes' win for the National Match Courses topped the 249-28v scored last year by SSgt. Norman L. Skarpness of Third Army. His win in the 300-yard rapid fire also surpassed the 100-09v fired last year by Sgt. Noah I. Bailey, also of USAMTU.

"I'm real proud for one of our men to come in like that," said Capt. John T. Burke, commander of the 2nd Division Marksmanship Detachment. "Snipes did real well."

Second Division marksmen were not firing in the matches as a unit. However, several were firing as members of other groups.

Nealy 700 of the Army's most skilled shooters, representing installations from all parts of the world converged on McAndrew Field for the opening of the matches last week. Final firing comes this afternoon to be followed tomorrow with an awards ceremony.

DID YOU KNOW

The 23rd Infantry Regiment has seen service in all its country's wars for the past 154 years.

Chaplain Attends Church Conference

Chap. (Capt.) Edward E. Flowers Jr., battalion chaplain for the 2nd Battalion 9th Infantry left Fort Benning early this week to attend the New Jersey Annual Conference of the Methodist Church, at Ocean City, N. J.

The chaplain will present a display depicting the "duties of an administrative military chaplain" during the conference that's due to last ten days.

"Over 500 ministers and lay delegates will attend the conference — representing well over 200,000 members of various congregations," said Flower.

Mech. Infantry To Get New Equipment

Mechanized infantry units of the 2nd Division my be putting "tigers in their tanks" within the next few years.

The tiger is a 425 horsepower Mechanized Infantry Combat Vehicle (MICV). According to a recent Army Times article, the MICV, the first of five prototypes, is designed to supplement present armored personnel carriers.

Utilizing parts already in Army supply systems, such as engine, transmission, and suspension system, the MICV will provide the infantry with more firepower, speed, range, and swimming capabilities than present vehicles. It is not intended to replace current vehicles according to the article.

Unlike the M-113—the infantryman's present mechanical horse — which the MCIV resembles to a great extent, ports are built along side of the vehicle to enable the 11-men inside to fire weapons.

In addition to thick armor plating, the MICV provides its occupants and crew with a 20mm gun and a 7.62 coaxial-light machinegun for protection.

Intended for possible troop use by 1970, the MICV has a top speed of 37 mph and a maximum range of 400 miles, and is expected to aid the infantry's mobility.

CAVALRY ROCKET SHIPS PRACTICE FORMATION FLYING
In Preparation for Aerial Firepower Display at Fort Knox

17th Cav at Fort Knox

Preparation Terminates For Firepower Display

BY CHUCK LOWENHAGEN

Today will terminate a week long period of preparation, coordination and timing as the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry demonstrates its aerial fire - power at Fort Knox, Ky.

Deputy Secretary of Defense, Cyrus R. Vance, will join 300 members of the Armor Association, 600 first classmen from West Point and 1800 invited guests in viewing the gigantic fire power display.

The days events will be devided into two phases, a demonstration phase and a tactical phase.

During the demonstration phase all of the cavalrys five weapons systems will be fired, first individually then in various combinations.

These systems are all mounted on either UH-1 Iroquois or OH-13 Sioux helicopters. Their capabilities range from the ability to destroy small groups of personnel to destroying a 52 ton M-60 battle tank.

Air assault rappelling will be shown to the approximately 2700 invited guests. Eight men from Troop A will rappel from two Iroquois.

To show the practicality of an air cavalry squadron in a combat situation during the tactical phase a hypothetical enemy force will be destroyed. First, light observation helicopters will conduct an aerial recon of the designated area. After spotting a concentration of enemy troops they will call for an air strike from tactical jet fighters.

The scout ships will then refly over the area and make an assessment of the damage. During the refly they will spot a second enemy force.

As a ground armor unit eight rocket ships will lay down a supporting fire. As the ground column approaches the aggressor they will be threatened by still a third concentration of enemy troops.

Eight rifle squads will conduct an air assault on the new enemy threat and then be picked up to join the main assault.

The demonstration will end

Army Brothers Donate Blood To Save Shelia

Miss Shelia Polk, 12 years old, of Atlanta can rightly claim the honor of having more "brothers" in the U. S. Army than any other little girl on record—49 to be exact.

Shelia's real brother, Sp4 James A. Polk, is a former member of the 187th Transport Airplane Company and is currently on leave visiting his family prior to departing for service in the Republic of Vietnam.

Recently it was determined that Shelia would have to undergo open heart surgery at the Emory University Hospital in Atlanta, and that the operation would require from 20 to 40 pints of whole blood.

When word was received that this much blood would be required, the men of the 187th Transport Airplane Company volunteered to donate blood through the

Pathfinders Jump Near San Isidro

Special To Sky Soldier News

11th Air Assault Pathfinders, attached to Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan's 229th Task Force as part of the Inter-American peace organization in the Dominican Republic, conducted their first Airborne Operation in the zone at 3:00 a.m. Friday morning near San Isidro airfield.

The special team, led by 2nd Lt. Robert Fullerton and SSGt. Edward B. Turner is composed of one officer and five enlisted men, and have really been kept busy since their arrival here early in May, conducting a night aerial - pathfinder operations for pilots of the 229th.

Utilizing their steerable parachutes, peculiar to pathfinder operations, the six-man team made Friday's jump from a 229th UH-1D Iroquois helicopter, and the operation went off with an enviable degree of smoothness and precision.

With teamwork as a byword between the special team and the 229th pilots, the nightly pathfinder activities have involved finding and lighting a suitable landing zone for the choppers, after which communications are established between the ground team and the airborne choppers to guide them in for a landing.

Preceeding the actual helicopter landing by only fifteen minutes as a rule, and never longer than thirty minutes, the pathfinders were required to lay out the LZ, set up the lighting system, and then communicate with the pilots to provide landing instructions.

According to Col. Buchan, the experience gained in this team effort, which has been continuing for the past month, is of great value to both the pathfinders and the pilots, enabling them to iron out wrinkles as the problems continued.

The fact that these nightly operations have continued without incident throughout the task force's stay in the Dominican Republic reflects favorably upon both the Team and the pilots, who have an exemplary safety record.

Sergeant Turner, a platoon sergeant who is acting as the Team's 1st Sergeant said that the training here was particularly beneficial to his men, as the lack of roads and trails, combined with the

229th Troops Move Into Santo Domingo

Sky Soldiers of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion's Dominican Task Force, under the command of Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, moved into the city of Santo Domingo shortly after dawn Sunday May 30, and established their headquarters at Anti-Jana Brewery on the city's south side, three miles from city-center.

After three weeks in the field at the nearby San Isidro airfield, the move into Santo Domingo was a real break for the task force, and enabled the troops to sleep under a roof for the first time since leaving Fort Benning on April 2nd!

Quartered in concrete grain storage sheds which formerly served the brewery, the Sky Soldiers are now out of the rain and ankle-deep mud which were so familiar at San Isidro, so living conditions are immensely improved.

All flight operations are being conducted out of Santo Domingo's famed Polo Grounds close by, with operations and maintenance personnel quartered on the edge of the grounds.

The move, which began at approximately 6:00 a.m., went off like clockwork, and by noon Sunday, had been accomplished, only slightly interrupting the normal daily schedule.

Late Sunday afternoon, all was in order, with all personnel and equipment squared away. A hot meal was served on time Sunday night.

Gen. Palmer Commends Task Force

Lt. Gen. Bruce Palmer Jr. commanding general of XVIII Airborne Corps and senior U. S. Officer in the Dominican Republic had high praise for aircraft maintenance practices in the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion.

The general's commendation and comments were made May 29 at his headquarters in the Trujillo Palace after visiting San Isidro airfield where the 229th Task Force was then located, conducting all operations until the move into Santo Domingo Sunday.

General Palmer was particularly impressed with the aircraft availability rate, which has been above 98 percent since the task force arrived in the Dominican Re-

Aviator Rescues Soldiers

Heroism Earns Soldiers Medal

An 11th Air Assault aviator who risked his life to save several of his fellow Sky Soldiers from a burning helicopter has been awarded the Soldiers Medal for his heroic action.

WO James J. DiRienzo, of the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn. received the highest peacetime award for heroism this week from Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles, assistant division commander.

On May 20, 1964, WO DiRienzo was flying as co-pilot in a four helicopter formation at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The lead helicopter in the formation, fully loaded with combat equipped troops, crashed into a wooded area immediately after takeoff.

As soon as WO DiRienzo's helicopter was landed he ran to the downed helicopter to assist in the evacuation of the wounded.

Ignoring the impending danger of a fuel explosion and with disregard for his personal safety, he pulled the injured crew members out of the wreckage.

Despite the ruptured fuel tanks and the running engine of the downed aircraft WO DiRienzo worked throughout this hazardous emergency mission until all of the passengers and crew were evacuated.

At the same ceremony Gen. Knowles presented Army Commendation Medals for service in Vietnam to Sp 5 Lester M. Blaxton, Sp4 Robert L. Hundley and Sp4 Walter E. Trocki.

Also presented was a certificate of achievement to Sgt. Willard J. Mills for meritorious service performed with the 28th Transport Bn., Mannheim, Germany.

Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, acting 11th Aviation Group commander, presented the Group Soldier of the Month award to PFC Michael E. Steinhilper. The Aviation Group volleyball trophy was presented to Headquarters Company, 227th Assault Helicopter Bn.

Pilots Log 800 Hours In Dominican Republic

Pilots of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion's special Dominican Task Force, commanded by Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, have logged more than 800 flying hours as of May 30, it was announced by the Task Force Maintenance Officer, Capt. James C. Soupene Jr.

This impressive record, established in less than a month, has been set by the four flying platoons comprising the Task Force, in the execution of mercy missions, transporting important dignitaries, supporting training activities of attached personnel, and regular navigational proficiency training for the battalion's pilots.

Leading the flying units for number of flights was the 3rd Platoon with 400 flights, which covered 740 landings, followed by the 2nd Platoon with 213 flights and 440 landings.

The Task Force's 1st Platoon has completed 195 missions which covered 351 landings, and the 4th Platoon with 150 flights and 301 landings.

Not only does this extremely high figure for flying time reflect the highest degree of professional competence upon the flying crews, but is equally indicative of the high standards and proficiency of the maintenance crews.

The essential deadline on aircraft awaiting parts has not exceeded 9 per cent since the organization's arrival in the Dominican Republic, nor has the deadline for maintenance exceeded 1.1 per cent.

Nearly all of the "Down Time" for aircraft maintenance has been due to the periodical inspection requirements which cannot be avoided.

38th Arty Marks 'Late' Unit Day

The Department of the Army designated May 2, 1965 as "Unit Day" for the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery however due to training requirements and the conduct of the Annual Inspector General's visit to the battalion Lt. Col. Robert W. Short battalion commander proclaimed June 4, 1965 as "Unit Day" for the 38th Artillery.

The festivities began at 1:00 p.m. with movement of personnel and dependents to USAIC Rest Camp. Intra-battery competitions in organized games was conducted to determine the winner of the "Best Battery Award, Unit Day—Activities 65".

Feelings were extremely high and even a flash thunder shower did not dampen the spirit of the afternoon. At 5:00 p.m. the 2nd Infantry Division Soldiers Chorus made an appearance and was generously applauded for their renditions. The meal was served at 5:30 p.m. and received nothing but praise.

Col. William A. Becker, commanding officer, Division Artillery and Col. Thomas Brown, 3rd Brigade commanding officer were among the honored guests.

Seven Promoted

Seven members of Company C, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion climbed a grade this month, as Maj. Merle E. Bounds awarded them their new rank.

Now holding their new rank are SP5's David Levine, Leon Williams and Charles Wilson, and SP4s David Watts, John Prevendar, Ray Stewart and Steven Bornstein.

229th Drills 82nd In Air Assault

Sky Soldiers of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion's Task Force, under the command of Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, stepped up their training of 82nd Airborne Division paratroopers this week, conducting actual air assault problems June 2nd and 3rd.

Earlier this week, the 82nd troopers underwent loading and unloading drills, take-offs and landings, handling of equipment, and classes on air assault techniques, stressing the teamwork required to successfully conduct air assault operations.

Wednesday, "Stacked Deck" choppers picked up a group of troopers at the San Isidro Airfield, and after instructing the troopers on the sling loading of vehicles, heavy weapons and equipment, proceeded to fly them into an actual small - scale air assault problem.

Making a tactical air assault landing for a simulated attack, the choppers landed the troops near their objective, after which the attack operation was launched.

Upon conclusion of the problem, the troopers proceeded to a pre-designated pickup zone, boarded the waiting helicopters, and returned to San Isidro.

These highly realistic problems which provided both the Infantry and aerial personnel to gain experience in working together as a team, were even more effective, being conducted in unfamiliar terrain on foreign soil.

Flying this week's special operations were task force personnel attached to the 229th from the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, operating under the direction of Capt. James E. Stone.

82nd personnel involved were very favorably impressed with this new capability, and has been trying for some time to get an opportunity to participate in actual air assault operations, putting into effect the Air - Infantry tactics practiced in the 11th Air Assault Division.

Maj. Strickland Assumes Duties In Division G-1

Maj. Sidney L. Strickland will soon assume the position of Assistant Division G-1 (personnel) to be in charge of officer assignments.

Maj. Strickland moves to his new responsibilities from his previous position as Adjutant of the 11th Air Assault Division Aviation Group, a position he has held for the past fourteen months.

A rated aviator, Maj. Strickland's first assignment in the 11th Air Assault Division was as a platoon leader in the 226th Aerial Surveillance and Escort Battalion.

The major's most previous overseas assignment was in Europe with the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment.

with the squadron conducting a mass flyby over the viewers stands, Maj. Gen. H. W. O. Kinnard is expected to arrive at 8:30 this morning to witness his air cavalry at work.

Tomorrow morning the complete squadron will put on a static display, 68 aircraft, 102 vehicles and 750 men will line up a brook field at 7:00 a.m. Secretary Vance, the Armor Association and the West Point cadets will then be allowed to walk through the area inspecting the cavalry equipment.

Palmer

public in early April. The general's compliments were extended through the 229th Commander, Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, who talked with the general at length Saturday.

The availability of aircraft means that the task force was able to utilize over 98 per cent of its aircraft for flight operations at any given time, without being hampered by maintenance requirements, a truly remarkable feat for the ground crews.

Jump

unfamiliar terrain, and the special inky darkness of the Dominican nights, presented a real challenge to all personnel participating.

Normally, the pathfinders would jump into the region where the landing zone was to be established to save time, however, when this is impractical, such as in the Dominican Republic, either an overland infiltration or an air-land operation near the objective must be accomplished.

Turner also discussed the possibility of rappelling into an objective, stating that this could well be done as an alternate method.

A master - parachutist with over 400 jumps, Sgt. Turner is a real believer in large scale air-mobile operations, and says it is certainly clear to stay. He pointed out that in his opinion, AIR ASSAULT II in the Carolinas last fall, more than justified the air assault effort.

Turner went on to add that any lingering doubt had definitely been removed by their assignment and training here in the Dominican Republic, where these unique operations have won the respect of all involved, including members of the 82nd Airborne Division, who were agressors against the Sky Soldiers during AIR ASSAULT II.

'Crazy' Millinery Line Is Shown At Brunch

The ladies of the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn. met recently on the lawn of the Custer Terrace Officers Club for a "Crazy Hat Brunch".

The morning bruch, hosted by the wives of the staff and Headquarters Company, featured crazy fashions along the milinary line.

The "creations" sported by the ladies were divided into three categories for the judging.

The first category — "craziest" — was won by Mrs. Robert Mills with her creation entitled "Monster Alley."

The second category — "most original" — saw Mrs. Richard McKay take home the prize for her hat called "Shutterbug".

The "prettiest" hat fashion was designed and worn by Mrs. Phillip Courts and was self explanitory from its title "Basket of Flowers".

Special guests for the ladies "fashion" brunch were Mrs. John M. Wright, Mrs. Nelson A. Mahone, Mrs. Edward L. Fuchs, and Mrs. Spalding.

Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Mahone served as judges for the unique showing of new spring fashions. They awarded prizes of cakes baked in the shape of hats.

Following brunch, Mrs. Jack Cranford, wife of the battalion commander, presented announcements concerning activities and business of interest to the ladies.

17th Cavalry Wives Have Fun in the Sun

The ladies of the 17th Cavalry met recently for a "Fun in the Sun" swim party at the Officers Club pool.

The combined morning coffee-swim party was the final social function for the 17th Cavalry ladies.

The "Fun in the Sun" theme was carried out in the decorations around the pool. Maps depicting the recreation areas and facilities of Georgia's State and National parks were on prominent display. A smaller board displayed a calendar of events and photographs of points of interest for short trips throughout Georgia.

As a feature to the outdoor party the latest in summer sportswear fashions were modeled by some of the cavalry wives.

Casual ensembles ranging from swim suits to afternoon suits were modeled by Mrs. Russell Bronson, Mrs. Guy Beardsley, Mrs. Ronald Piche, Mrs. Loel Ewart, Mrs. John Kearney, Mrs. William Laidlaw, Mrs. John Hatcher, Mrs. Douglas Pritchett and Mrs. Claude Gilyard.

Some of the special guests this final summer social meet were Mrs. John B. Stockton, wife of the 17th Cavalry commander, Mrs. Don Radcliff and Mrs. Guy Beardsley.

Colorful Flowers Decorate 38th

A centerpiece of blue hydrangeas decorated the serving table at an informal coffee for the ladies of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry.

The ladies enjoyed coffee, punch and fruit tortes under the shade trees at the home of Mrs. Billy L. Whorton.

Mrs. Arne Eliasson poured the coffee while Mrs. Donald Adams served the punch. Mrs. Adams was co-hostess for the event.

Artillery Coffee

The ladies of Battery E (Aviation), 26th Artillery held their monthly coffee last Wednesday June 2, in the home of Mrs. Charles W. Weber.

Mrs. David L. Carson presided at a brief business meeting where plans were formulated for next month's coffee.

Luncheon and Buffet Highlight Social Week

The ladies of the 408th Supply and Service Bn. met for luncheon recently at the home of the battalion commander, George L. Freeman.

They were hosted by Mrs. Freeman at the luncheon which followed the special "Ladies Day" movie and tour of the Infantry Center.

Following the luncheon Mrs. Freeman presided over a brief business meeting.

Last Friday the officers and wives of the battalion held an informal farewell cocktail and buffet dinner for departing members of the battalion.

CWO and Mrs. William P. Alexander are one of the departing couples. CWO Alexander will retire June 30. The Alexanders plan a home in Memphis, Tenn.

Lt. and Mrs. Richard A. Brown leave the Army this week to return to civilian life.

Lt. Col. George L. Freeman presented each couple an engraved silver bowl as a farewell gift.

Special guests for the evening were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Thomas W. Buchanan, and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Clifford C. Wilson.

Capt. and Mrs. Ronald C. Harmon were in charge of arrangements for the evening social get-together.

Task Force Pilots Become Aircraft Carrier Qualified

BY MIKE GERSHON

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — Ever since the aviators in the 229th Task Force left Ft. Benning over a month ago for the Douinican Republic they have found themselves taxing their skills past normal duties. The most interesting and difficult of these has becoming qualified for aircraft carrier landings.

On the 20th of May, pilots from the Task Force attended a series of briefings conducted by the Navy Flight Operations Officer aboard the USS BOXER, an aircraft carrier expecially designed for helicopter assault operations.

Each man was instructed on the proper procedures for approach and landing and familiarized with the Navy arm and hand signals given by the LSE (landing instructor enlisted).

Practical Application

Practical application came in the following three day period as the helicopters left their home base at San Isidro in groups of four and circled the carrier. Specific radio signals had been established to inform the pilots of their position to land aboard the pitching, rolling ship.

Upon obtaining radio contact with shipboard flight operations and receiving permission to land, the pilot is given a radar vector and a controlled approach to the vessel is started. Upon reaching a distance of three miles from the ship, radar contact is cut off and a visual radio procedure begins.

The pilot is given a "Fox Corpen" or the ship's heading, such as the ship is into the wind, and relative wind velocity.

Next the aircraft is given "Delta-8" which is the holding pattern and altitude preceeding final approach. This "Delta" pattern is best described as a sort of "race track", counter clockwise orbit around the ship, with the upwind portion at least 400 meters forward of the ship's bow.

At this time the pilot descends or ascends to the given altitude and reduces his air speed to within 60 to 80 knots. The ship's flight operations officer upon stating that the landing deck is clear and ready for the landing relays a "Charlie", the command to make the final approach and land to a prescribed spot.

Final Approach

He makes his approach at a given speed and angle to the ship's deck and turns his full attention to the LSE who will be his sole guide to touch-down.

This highly trained man gives the pilot necessary signals such as too high, too low, come ahead, approach O.K., incline right or left and finally, set down and hold. The two mandatory signals that must be immediately responded to are hold your position and the "wave-off" where some unsafe action by the pilot or other dangerous situation forces the pilot to abort landing and resume the holding or "Delta" pattern.

Deck Hands

Once on the deck, the aircraft is secured with four chains which are attached by fast moving deck hands. Their job is not complete until they have assured the pilot that his craft is secured and upon take-off that the chains have been removed.

This entire operation takes but a few minutes, but is worth much more in effort. Each pilot must have confidence in the Navy personnel directing him on board and the deck hands must be able to judge the ship's movements and the pilots reactions.

Qualification requires six daylight landings and six night landings initially. Requalification is two daylight and three night landings every six months. The job of landing on a moving landing area is not an easy one. If the pilot is not careful he may experience "vertigo" and endanger the whole operation.

The highly skilled pilots of the 229th Task Force demonstrated they were capable of performing such difficult operations by successfully completing the prescribed training with ease.

They can be proud of the fact that they are part of the first Army Air Assault Task Force ever to undertake such training, and under tight surrounding conditions.

They received high commendations from the Navy and Marine personnel on board the USS BOXER and were personally congratulated by the Task Force Commander, Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan who was chiefly responsible for bringing about of the unique training.

The pilots in the Task Force serving the cause of freedom in the Dominican Republic, and the crews which they carry are now one step ahead in heliborne operations — just another example of the "will to do" and the professional ability of the pilots from the 11th Air Assault Division.

ARTILLERYMEN STAND IN REVIEW DURING ORGANIZATION DAY
Gen. Kinnard Addresses 42nd, Recalls Units Glory at Normandy

42nd Artillery Holds Its Annual Organization Day

The 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery recently celebrated its Annual Organization Day by conducting a review and sponsoring open house and games for members of the 42nd Artillery and their guests.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnad, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division, was reviewing officer. He commended the 42nd Artillery for its outstanding contributions to the Division, and spoke of the 42nd Artillery's participation in the Normandy Invasion in 1944. He then proceeded to present awards to SP4 Jeromy M. Pietras, 42nd Artillery Soldier of the Year; PFC John E. McNally, 42nd Artillery and Division Artillery Soldier of the Month for May; Sp4 Michael Savich Jr., Driver of the Month for May; and Battery A for winning the semi-annual Combat Proficiency Test and the quarterly Launcher Crew Drill competition.

Following the review various contests were held in which the four batteries of the battalion competed for trophies. Leading the way by receiving a total of five awards was Headquarters and Service Battery, commanded by Capt. James R. Adams. Batters A, B, and C, commanded respectively by Capt's. Leroy C. Bell, Richard W. Brown and Gilbert L. Muchmore were well represented in the games.

Climaxing the events of the morning was the presentation to Headquarters and Service Battery of the award for the highest total score. Presenting the award was Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, Battalion commander.

187th Aviator Is Promoted To Field Grade

Maj. Jack D. Kincaid, operations officer of the 187th Transport Airplane Company was presented his gold leaves this week by Col. J. Elmore Swenson, 10th Air Transport Brigade commander. Mrs. Kincaid performed the traditional pinning on of the gold leaf.

Also on hand to offer congratulations were Lt. Col. Gregory L. Olney, executive officer of the 10th, Lt. Col. Frank L. Shaw, Maj. Thomas G. Ziek, 37th Air Transport Battalion commander and Maj. Dale W. Hurst, executive officer of the 187th Transport Airplane Company.

A graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, Class of 1954, Maj. Kincaid began his active duty military career at Fort Benning.

He attended the Infantry Basic Officer Orientation Course, Airborne School and Ranger School in 1954 and 1955.

Task Force Operations Officer Devises Safe Flight System

Special To
Sky Soldier News

Capt. Val Panzitta, Operations Officer for the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion currently on duty in the Dominican Republic was responsible for effecting a safe and highly efficient system for handling the extremely heavy air traffic of the 229th Task Force operating in the San Isidro - Santo Domingo area.

At the beginning of the Dominican operations, Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines were utilizing San Isidro airfield, for bringing in troops, supplies and equipment as well as evacuating personnel, which resulted in a hazzardous and highly congested air traffic situation.

Accordingly, the 229th Task Force Commander, Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, instructed Capt. Panzitta to devise a flight system for the 229th which would alleviate the situation while at the same time provide the highest degree of safety and efficiency but which would not interfere with the operations of fixed-wing aircraft.

After careful study, Capt. Panzitta set up traffic patterns to the west of the main San Isidro Airfield below 500 feet, and to complete the solution, established air corridors over two routes to permit the smooth flow of aircraft through the Santo Domingo area, which covered a northern route and a southern route.

The most commonly used southern route enabled aircraft to fly in over the ocean from a point two miles south of the city at 2,000 feet, with passengers carrying life preservers and survival equipment, offering a fine degree of safety.

Many missions, often as many as 200 to 300 a day were made over this route as the "Stacked Deck" battalion transported officials to and from the American Embassy, and carried out evacuees. This route also enabled pilots to stay reasonably clear of a pocket in the southeastern section of Santo Domingo which was controlled by the rebels, and from which heavy fire came prior to the cease fire.

The northern route, was less frequently used as it called for flying west of the international zone, and although it was a known "safe" area, was slightly more time consuming.

The system required a lot of hard work on the part of Capt. Panzitta, close coordination with all agencies conducting flight operations in the zone, and a day and a half of conferences to sew the deal up.

Capt. Panzitta also inaugurated the initial Army - Navy air operations, coordinating Army flying missions to naval vessels standing off Santo Domingo, flying the first IFR (Instrument Flight Rules) mission to Admiral McCain's Flagship.

81st Arty Picks May Top Soldier

Sp4 George Andrews, Battery A, 81st Artillery, was recently chosen Soldier of the Month for this battalion.

Criteria for selection as Soldier of the Month are appearance, knowledge of military subjects, current events, and a knowledge of the history and functions of the 11th Air Assault Division. SP4 SP4 Andrews was selected by a board of senior noncommissioned officers of the battalion.

Sp4 Andrews will now represent the battalion in the Division Artillery competition and if selected as Division Artillery Soldier of the Month will go on to the Division competition.

He will receive an engraved cigarette lighter and a letter of commendation from the battalion commander.

'Boat-Fever Bug Bites' Bolster Backyard Building

An industrious maintenance sergeant with a memory of salt air strong in his nostrils has undertaken an ambitious backyard building project.

1st Sgt. Robert C. Carroll of the 170th Aircraft Maintenance Bn., contracted a bad case of 'boat fever' several months ago as the winter temperatures began to give way to the coming spring.

Yielding to his mysterious malady, Sgt. Carroll has undertaken the construction of a twenty foot inboard cabin cruiser.

On checking with the post Special Service Craft Shop Sgt. Carroll found that boat building fever had already reached epidemic proportions and all available space for boat building projects was taken.

But first sergeants are not a breed known for succumbing easily to defeat. A trip to southern Tennessee netted a staggering station wagon load of good straight grained, knot free white oak which disappeared into the basement of Sgt. Carroll's post quarters.

Above the howl of March winds could be heard the whine of a power saw biting into tough oak, as the advanced stages of the boat building fever took hold.

An April visit to Sgt. Carroll's basement set many a neighbor back as they viewed the twenty foot long skeleton of a boat taking shape on the concrete floor, it's uprights reaching almost to the ceiling.

The framework of the cruiser's hull dominated the basement and it appeared to be much larger than its actual size. Each visitor's eye roved from the impressive structure of the cruiser's framework to the unimpressive dimensions of the basement door, and each in his own manner asked, "How the h— are you gonna get that monster out of here?"

There have been many amusing stories told about people who build large boats in small basements and their often unorthodox solutions for freeing their labor of love from its prison.

Realizing that the Post Engineer would take a dim view of a work request to enlarge the basement door to the necessary nine feet width, Sgt. Carroll had fabricated what the prefab boat kit manufacturers call a knockdown frame kit.

He completely assembled all cross framing with screws and glue as called for in the plans, however, all fore and aft framing was temporarily fastened.

Five days of after supper labor was required to dismantle and reassemble the framework in the Carroll's backyard. Some two weeks and two thousand screws later, the ¾ inch marine plywood skin was attached and then made ready for its protective coating of fiberglass.

After the fiberglassing is completed the hull will be righted, the cabin constructed and the powerplant, a 265 cubic inch V-8 engine will be installed.

The engine has now taken the former place of the boat on the basement floor and its innards cover about as much space as the boat did. The engine rebuilding project has been placed on the inclement weather schedule until the bare hull has received its fiberglass coat.

While the Fort Benning community eyes water starved lawns and prays for rain, Sgt. Carroll casts a suspicious eye at every cumulus cloud that appears in the sky as he goes about the slow job of filling in the holes left by 2,000 countersunk screws.

When a few drops of rain come splattering down, Sgt. Carroll calls all sidewalk superintendents, onlookers, neighbors and children to active duty until the boat is safely under canvas.

H&S Battery Receives Two Distinctive Awards

Headquarters and Service Battery of the 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery was the recent recipient of two distinctive honors.

The Battery, commanded by Capt. James R. Adams, was named Honor Battery for the Month of May 1965. This honor was gained by topping the other batteries in the battalion through scoring the highest number of points during inspections in all areas by the Battalion Staff.

The second award was presented as a result of achieving the highest total score in competition among batteries of the battalion during contests held on the 42nd Artillery's Annual Organization Day. Headquarters and Service Battery was the victor in the tug-of-war, egg throw, tree climbing event, fieldstripping the M—60 Machine Gun blindfolded; and scored high in the other events.

For winning the latter competition, the battery was presented a trophy by Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, 42d Artillery Battalion commander.

Sky Soldiers of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's 1st Battalion of the 38th Infantry got a break in training last week for the first time in two months, with most of the weeks training confined to the classroom.

With a National Holiday Monday, pay day activities Tuesday, the remainder of the week was devoted to medical instruction, field sanitation classes, and communication, which were conducted in the garrison area.

Bravo Company conducted Rappel tower training on the Kelly Hill tower, Wednesday and Charlie Company conducted river crossing operations using field expedient techniques Thursday, but otherwise all was quite.

It was a much deserved break for the 1st Brigade Rocks, who only recently went through the complete training cycle of squad, platoon, and company - level Army Training Test.

Unit Gets New 1st Sgt.

Headquarters Company of the 1st Air Assault Brigade received a new first sergeant a week ago last Monday when 1st Sgt. Charles Skira, a veteran of over ten years foreign service, reported for duty.

A highly decorated and distinguished combat veteran of World War II, Sergeant Skira served with the 83rd Infantry Division in the European Theater of Operation, where he was awarded the Silver Star Medal, Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart with one Oak Leaf Cluster, and numerous other awards.

A native of Monessen, Penn., Spira is a graduate of Monessen High School, and has also attended Wayne University of Detroit. His career spans over 22 years.

Enlisting in the Army shortly after the United States entered WWII, Sgt. Skira received his initial military training at Camp Atterbury, Ind. and shortly after completion, was assigned to Europe.

Raks Conduct Bayonet Drills

Sky Soldiers of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's Rakkasan Company C received some realistic and valuable instruction on the use of the bayonet last Friday under the guidance of Sgt. Sherman Gully, assisted by SSgt. Joseph L. Norman and Sgt. Masao Oguma Jr.

Utilizing a public address system to give the five basic steps and following it up with those fine points not included in the book made this class an unusually good one, and held the attention of all, improving the performance of most.

A real expert in this type of combat, Gully is the holder of the Silver Star, Purple Hearts, 3rd Combat Infantry Badge, and other decorations which he earned in the Korean Conflict.

BRONZE STAR WITH 'V' DEVICE
Gen. Kinnard Cites SSgt. Mitchell

At NCO Review

Bronze Star Presented For Vietnam Heroics

The heroic Viet Nam action of a 227th Assault Helicopter Bn. sergeant was cited with the Bronze Star Medal with "V" device at a recent battalion NCO review.

SSgt. Billy D. Mitchell of Company A was honored for distinguishing himself by heroic achievement while engaged in military operations against an armed force on June 21, 1964 in the Republic of Viet Nam.

As a crew chief, Sgt. Mitchell participated in a medical mission to evacuate several wounded Vietnamese troops from the scene of a vicious battle with the Viet Cong.

Sgt. Mitchell dashed into the midst of the battle to aid the wounded as soon as the aircraft landed. While exposing himself to heavy ground fire, he remained on the ground to treat the wounded and carry them to the helicopter.

Through the day and into the night Sgt. Mitchell displayed complete disregard for his own safety while rescueing the wounded, administering treatment and loading the evacuation aircraft.

He remained in the combat zone and continued his courageous efforts until all of the known wounded were evacuated.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, acted as reviewing officer for the NCO ceremony and presented the Bronze Star to Sgt. Mitchell.

An additional award presented was the Army Commendation Medal with "V" device to Sp5 William R. Newton for heroism shown in connection with operations near Duc Woa, Republic of Viet Nam on July 10 and 11, 1964.

81st Bids Adieu To Exec Officer

Adieu and farewells were voiced today for the 81st Artillery's Executive Officer, Maj. William R. Hendrickson, who is scheduled for reassignment to Division Headquarters.

At a luncheon given by the officers of the battalion at the Main Officer's Open Mess, Lt. Col. Francis Bush, the battalion commander paid tribute to the major for his outstanding accomplishments during his tour of duty with the 81st.

Maj. Hendrickson came to the 81st in July 1963 from Greece as Battalion S3 and guided the original air assault howitzer battalion through vigorous training leading up to Air Assault II.

Mid-way thru the giant exercise, the man of many talents assumed the duties of Executive Officer.

1st Brigade Adjutant Becomes Lt. Colonel

Lt. Col. Samuel J. Merrill, original Adjutant for the 1st Brigade since the early days of the Air Assault, received his present rank at ceremonies held at the office of the Brigade Commanding Officer Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, June 9. Present for the ceremonies were the newly promoted colonel's wife Mrs. Patricia Merrill, and all principle staff officers of the 1st Brigade.

Col. Merrill interuped his civilian education during WW II to serve in the Pacific Theater. Following the war, the colonel resumed his studies. After deciding on a military career, he entered the Army, receiving his commision in January, 1949.

Col. Merrill has a host of command and staff assignments. Serving in the Korean War, he participated in the United Nations Offensive, Chinese Communist Intervention, 1st United Nations Counter Offensive, and the Chinese Communist Forces Spring Offensive Campaigns. He is a graduate of Command and General Staff College. Prior to joining the 1st Brigade, he served as Military Advisor to 5th Infantry Div. III Corps, Army of the Republic of Viet Nam near Bien Hoa. Returning to the states in October 1962, the Col. served briefly with the 2nd Infantry Div., assuming the duties of Adjutant in the 1st Brigade, 11th Air Assault Div. in February 1963.

Among his numerous decorations are the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Army Commendation Medal, and the Army Aviator's Badge.

188th Eagles Feel They're Ready For Their Company Level ATT's

When the Company Army Training Tests come this month, the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, will be ready. The "Eagle" battalion commanded by Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar, is undergoing intensive training at company level.

A typical day in the field for one of the line companies was last Thursday, when Charlie Company's "Red Runners" left for a two day problem in counterguerrilla training.

At 7:00 a.m. the company moved out of the battalion area. The 1st Platoon, led by 1st Lt. Jimmie H. Nickels, acting as aggressors, moved in trucks, while the second and third platoons, as friendly forces, followed them at 7:30 in helicopters.

After occupying a landing zone that was withing the aggressors reach, the two platoons spread out. The second platoon, led by Lt. John E. Cater, moved to set up roadblocks in the north end of the field and within minutes they had captured the enemies truck and two personnel.

Proof of the hard training the companies are undergoing will come in the second when the battalion starts its company ATTs.

From The IDEA CENTER

'Imaginuity' Corner

During Air Assault II, the Fire Direction Center and Operations Section of the 15th Artillery were consolidated into one shelter.

This FDC-OPNS complex had to operate in up to six nets at one time and occasions arose, such as during an assault, when all the nets were used simultaneously.

Six radio sets, RT-524, were required to provide this capability. It took three ¼ ton vehicles to move and operate the six radio sets. When the FDC and Operations Sectionc complete with the MRC-95 AM radio vehicle was moved by helicopter, three CH-47's were required.

This posed the problem of how to operate in all six nets with heavy helicopter support was limited and all four vehicles could not be transported.

One solution to the problem would have been to use the VRC-47, which is composed of a RT-524 receiver transmitter and the R-442 auxiliary receiver. Use of the VRC-47 could have reduced the number of radio sets and vehicles required by merely monitoring some nets.

However, the 15th found it was impractical to change frequencies each time it was necessary to transmit on the monitored net, especially when receiving fire missions.

The solution was a portable radio rack that holds two RT-524 radio sets complete with antenna matching units. By allowing the radios to be operated independently of the vehicles, the racks reduced the number of CH-47's required to lift the FDC and Operations Sections from three to two.

When the radios are operated independently of the vehicles, power is supplied by a 3KW generator and two 24 volt batteries. The batteries are mounted securely in a box for ease in transporting. Power cables run from the generator and radio sets to a terminal board mounted on the battery box. Use of the batteries eliminate any power surges created by the generator.

The design of a radio rack was first introduced to the battalion by Lt. Col. Lloyd J. Picou, who commanded the 15th Artillery at that time.

The radio rack is constructed of perforated angle iron with four uprights and 13 cross pieces welded together to form a solid box like structure. The width of the unit is sufficient to allow insertion of radio mount MT-1029.

Airborne Engineers Drop Far Behind Enemy Lines To Use Demolitions Against Critical Bridge Targets

Inside the tent an officer stood before the select group of men and said, "Your target today will be this critical bridge shown on your aerial photos. Notice the clearing about 600 meters to the Northeast of the target. That is your drop-zone. At least 65 meters of the bridge must be destroyed. You will be picked up by helicopter at the landing zone shown on your photo or, on your signal at the alternate landing zone. Notice you will be 37 miles behind enemy lines."

Sound like a commando raid — it isn't. That's a portion of the "graduation jump" briefing given to parachute demolition teams.

Each team is composed of four engineers of Company A, (Airborne), 127th Engineer Battalion and one pathfinder of the 11th Pathfinder Company. The airborne engineer company is commanded by Capt. Robert L. Manning and the Pathfinder Company is commanded by Capt. R. D. Gillem.

Before reaching their "graduation jump", these men underwent training designed to make them an extremely valuable asset on the tactical commander's list of resources.

Their training included 11 hours in the operation of the maneuverable parachute (T-10M) which was begun by SFC Henry of the 165th AES Detachment on Saturday, June 5.

Fifteen hours of demolition training was the next thing on schedule. During these classes the pathfinder and engineer paratroopers reviewed the fundamentals and went on to learn the "tricks of the demolition trade".

Such things as fabricating diamond charges and linear shaped charges from M-118 explosives — a thin strip plastic — and where to place the minimum amount of explosive to derive the maximum destructive effect on buildings and bridges were learned.

The training to this point along with the instruction in spotting techniques had prepared the team to jump from helicopters or fixed wing aircraft into an unmarked opening near a target to destroy the target.

Now the job of getting out of enemy territory had to be taught. This was done with three hours of instruction on Long Range Patrol and Escape and Evasion by experts of the airborne engineer company.

Several interesting features should be noted about this extensive week of training culminated by the practical exercise on Saturday, June 12. One of these has been the blending of the separate specialties of the pathfinders and the engineers.

This cross training marks a first for any tactical unit and, as stated before, provides the tactical commanders of the 11th Air Assault Division from battalion to division level with a new and valuable fighting tool.

188th Infantrymen Fire Claymore Mine

In their continuing preparation for the coming Division Expert Infantryman Badge Tests, the 188th Infantry is reviewing all the infantry weapons and tactics.

Recently personnel of the "Eagle" battalion attended a special class at Dianda Range on the Claymore mine.

The Claymore mine is an electrically detonated antipersonnel mine that can throw hundreds of steel fragments over a distance of 50 meters. They were provided by the Infantry School's Small Arms Committee.

The classes were taught by two NCOs; SSgt. David R. Dunn of Company B, and SSgt. Norman W. Soltow of Company A, under the direction of SFC Mahogany Brewer, the liaison NCO from the Special Purposes Weapons Section of the Infantry School.

During their training the "Eagles" observed the fusing and defusing of the mine, installation of the electrical system, and finally set up and exploded a few mines in front of a group of targets which were literally blown full of holes.

511th Infantry Presents Awards

At a miniature ceremony conducted in the 511th Infantry area, Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles presented awards to members of the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry for outstanding achievements during the month of May.

Foremost among the many awards presented by Gen. Knowles were the savings awards received by Company C and Company D. Company C, commanded by Capt. Warren T. Lillie, was the recipient of the 3rd Army Commanders Savings Award and the 3rd Army Gold Citation. Both awards recognize the outstanding support given by the men of Company C to the Savings Bond program. Capt. Richard C. Morris, received the Minuteman Savings Award for the superior manner in which his troops have supported the Savings Bond Program.

In addition to the Savings Awards, Gen. Knowles presented letters of commendation to Lt. Sidney Cornett, PSgt. Samuel Hunt and PSgt. Nichie Alonzo for the superior manner in which they and their platoons performed on the recently conducted rifle platoon ATT's.

An engraved plaque was presented by Gen. Knowles to the Company D Mess Sergeant, SSgt. Donald Talbert. The Delta mess hall was selected the best in the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry for the money of May. Another plaque was presented to the Company A Supply Sergeant, SSgt. Paul Link. The Alpha Company supply room was selected the best in the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry for the second consecutive month.

The 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry Soldier of the month for May, SP4 Dominic Beran, also received an engraved plaque from Gen. Knowles. SP4 Beran was selected as the "Falcon" Soldier of the Month on the basis of his outstanding performance of duty, military bearing, appearance and job knowledge. SP4 Beran is a member of Company A and has won the Soldier of the Month title on two occasions.

Reduce Cost--Suggest

Army Cost Reduction Is Everyone's Business

Cost reduction is everybody's business. This year the Army will try to reduce its costs by $1 billion through the suggestions of both Army and civilian employees working with its equipment.

Two films have been produced for world-wide showings — the 10-minute film entitled "Reduce Cost—Suggest" and a three-minute film clip presenting a message from the Secretary of the Army.

Billions of dollars have been saved through the ingenuity of Army employees. Some suggestions have saved the Army manpower and oversupply of mechanical parts.

This is evident in the 11th Air Assault Division as well as anywhere. One leading example is the Idea Center. Through this center have come numerous ideas useful in re-designing or eliminating equipment for use in the air mobility concept.

For example, a large tool set required a 5-ton truck with trailer to transport the equipment. It was redesigned and now is enclosed in a fiberglass container which can be hauled by a three quarter - ton truck.

Though money was needed to develop this, in the long run it will save the Army thousands of dollars. The same is true with numerous other revamped items in the division.

It is the responsibility of every member of the Army to suggest means of helping to reduce the tremendous costs involved in the material we use.

If you have an idea on how to save the Army money, don't just think about it. HELP REDUCE COST — SUGGEST!

15th Artillery Receives 'Excellent' From Team

Lt. Col. Frank A. Athanason, commanding officer, 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery has announced that the 15th Artillery has been awarded an overall grade of EXCELLENT by the 11th Air Assault Test Team for its performance of duty during the Battalion ATT conducted at Fort Gordon on May 11 and 12.

In making the announcement, Col. Athanason stated that he was particularly pleased since the primary emphasis during the training period was placed not on preparing for the test, but in preparing the battalion to assume its role in combat situations. He continued by stating that the results of the test indicated that the unit could not only pass a test, but could accomplish its mission in a combat situation.

Singled out for special praise by the commander were the Battalion Survey Team, headed by Lt. Angelo E. Agliardo, Battery Survey Officer and SSgt. Adrian C. Bargeron, Survey Chief for the speed and exceptional results attained by the survey team; the Fire Direction Centers, coordinated by Capt. Robert J. Gabrielli, the Battalion Fire Direction Officer, for excellence in computing firing date, with special praise given to Lt's. Thomas P. McDavid, Arturo Rodriquez, and Larry E. Jones for their outstanding Battery Fire Direction Centers; not to be outdone were the Firing Batteries commanded by Capt's. Aaron O. Crocker, Battery A; Jack M. McKnight; Battery B, and George H. Thompson, Battery C; who placed the "Steel on the Target," and the Headquarters Battery commander, Capt. Alden Hatch who managed and supervised the Battalion Headquarters complex.

Additional priase was given to Maj. Jesse O. Bickmore, Battalion S-3, who has the staff of responsibility for training the battalion as well as being responsible for the specialized training in rapid adaptation and the use of vehicles.

Compliments were also given to the battalion test team formed by Maj. Samuel Fisher, the Battalion XO, for the assistance rendered in preparing the battalion for the test. Members of the Communications, Survey and Liaison sections made up the major portion of the Battalion Test Team.

In commenting on the vehicles Col. Athanason stated "The 15th has shown that no matter what prime mover we are to work with, we have shown that we are ready and able to accomplish our mission of delivering timely and accurate artillery fires in support of ground gaining forces.

Battalion Conducts Rigorous Training At Ft. Stewart, Ga.

The 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Harold G. Moore, conducted a week of rigorous field exercises at Fort Stewart, Ga., beginning May 24, in preparation for the Company Army Training Tests which the battalion will undergo later this month. A unique feature of this field problem was the use of equal helicopter power by both friendly and aggressor forces.

After the battalion arrived by Caribou from Fort Benning, the area west of Highway 67 was divided into three equal sectors to be alternately defended against aggressor attacks by Alpha, Bravo and Charlie Companies. Each day a different company became the aggressor force and conducted operations against the two friendly sectors. All companies were equally equipped with four Huey helicopters, one 5½ ton truck, and one 2½ ton truck. Each day's problem terminated at six p.m. at which time Headquarters Company defended against a night attack by the aggressor company.

LeVernier's Custom GLOSS CREAM POLISH
Soft waxes are as obsolete as "Billy Goat" carts
Custom Gloss Cream Polish gives you a diamond hard finish that has the appearance of liquid glass. You can pour gasoline on it and burn it and this finish cannot be penetrated. It forms a micro-shield against moisture, dirt, oxidation and corrosion. One easy operation . . . spread on — wipe off! No back-breaking application or elbow-grease polishing. One polish-job is enough for the whole year. To keep this finish for extra months between polish jobs, add 4 tablespoons to a gallon of water and with a soft cloth wipe off your car with this solution. Once again we emphasize . . . never wax your car again!

Secretary of Defense Announcement

11th AAD Is Redesignated '1st Cav. Div. Air Mobile'

Rumors and speculation which have run rampant the last few months regarding the "fate" of Fort Benning's 11th Air Assault Div. were laid to rest Wednesday when Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamaa announced it would be redesignated the 1st Cav. Div. (Air Mobile.)

At a Pentagon press conference, Secretary McNamara said the Army has been authorized to organize the radically new unit as part of its currently authorized 16 division force structure. It will be formed with personnel and equipment from the 11th AAD and the 2nd Inf. Div. The 1st Cav. Div., now in Korea, will be redesignated the 2nd Inf. Div.

The Defense Secretary said the new division would be organized and made combat ready "as expeditiously as possible" at Fort Benning. He said further that the introduction of this new kind of division into the Army "will greatly increase our growing capability to meet all kinds of threats."

Worst in Benning History

Post and Nation Mourn Dead In Tragic Copter Accident

Fort Benning and the Nation were still in mourning today for 18 soldiers who lost their lives here Tuesday in a tragic helicopter accident.

It was the worst single air accident in the history of Fort Benning.

Fourteen soldiers, from B and C Companies, 1st Bn., 38th Inf., 11th Air Assault Div., together with two pilots and two co-pilots from the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn., were killed instantly when the two HU1-D copters in which they were riding collided in mid-air and crashed into a heavily wooded, swampy area near King's Pond. One copter burst into flames s it plummeted down through the tall pines.

A board of investigators was on the scene shortly after the crash but no definite cause of the accident has been announced.

The two craft were part of a formation on routine training mission. They had departed McKenna airfield

AER Assisted 31,000 During '64, Provides 'Sympathetic Shoulder'

During 1964 the Army Emergency Relief (AER) provided emergency financial assistance to over 31,000 active and retired members of the Army and their families in the form of loans or grants.

The Fort Benning AER office provided $316,477.88 to 3,147 cases in the form of loans and grants last year. Multiply this figure by 10 and you have approximately the amount of financial assistance rendered Army-wide during the year.

Complementing the AER's efforts is the Army Relief Society (ARS). The ARS gives financial assistance to needy widows and orphans of Regular Army personnel and creates scholarships and supervises educational opportunities for such orphans.

The ARS makes no appeals for funds, but it can accept unsolicited gifts and legacies and it receives one-tenth of the proceeds from the annual joint AER-ARS campaigns.

During a two month period in 1964 the ARS provided 41 scholarships totaling $29,253.

The primary function of these organizations is to provide loans or grants. But the money is only a symbol of a more meaningful function — offering a helping hand in time of need.

Money is a symbol of their help and it does remove an element of worry in time of grief or crisis.

As General Harold K. John-

Public Invited to Carnival, July 4th Fireworks Show

The public is cordially invited to join in the fun at the 1965 edition of the Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival scheduled for Eubanks Field July 3.

The carnival, an annual affair, is sponsored by YAC to provide funds for the operations of the club during the next year.

This year the carnival will begin at 12 noon and end at 5 p.m.

There will be entertainment for all age groups. Rides, games of chance and skill and both millitary and nonmilitary competitive athletic events.

This year as an added incentive in the military games portion, the competition will be divided into two categories, unit and individual.

In the unit phase of competition six events will be conducted. Cross - Country run and confidence course; platoon drill, physical combat son, Army chief of staff, said in a recent letter, "The true value of the help is many times the actual dollar amount. They provide a sympathetic shoulder for the Army family to lean on in time of trouble."

Also in his letter the general stated that the "basic integrity of the Army family is illustrated by the fact that the majority of the loans are repaid."

In stating this the general included an extract from a letter to the AER from a retired noncommissioned officer who had borrowed $104 in March 1965 for emergency transportation of his dependents.

The letter read:

"Thank you very much for the loan which you forwarded to my mailing address in Colfax, La. . . . the Army Emergency Relief has been and is still to me a true Army organization. I am very anxious to replace this money so that I may be able to help some soldier in need. Since I am employed as a substitute mail handler I now ask that you let me begin mailing payments on the $98 still due you. I will mail you money about June 30, 1965."

General Johnson closed his letter by saying "these organizations are an extension of the long established custom that the Army takes care of its own."

The Fort Benning AER-ARS joint fund drive began May 17 and will end July 10.

proficiency test; pistol and rifle firing; and drivers proficiency test are the events that will be held.

The best overall unit will receive the Commanding General's trophy. Awards will also be presented to the winners of each event.

In the individual phase competition will be held in the physical combat proficiency test; pistol and rifle firing; military appearance; manuel of arms; and general military knowledge.

Monetary awards for first, second and third place overall will be presented. The amount of the awards will be announced in the June 25 issue of The BAYONET.

The rifle and pistol firing will be conducted on July 2.

All awards will be presented on July 4 prior to the fireworks show slated for Sightseeing Field.

Post

around 9:30 a.m., proceeded to the Kelly Hill area where they picked up the soldiers and were on their way to a training area at the road junction of Christopher and Box Springs Roads when the two craft collided. All aboard perished.

Rescue and fire fighting personnel were hampered in their operations by the densely wooded terrain. A bulldozer from the 127th Engr. Bn., of the 11th AAD had to be trucked in to open a road for ambulances, medical personnel and fire fighters.

Only one man was still alive when rescue personnel reached the wreckage. He was air evacuated but died before reaching Martin Army Hospital.

Post Commander Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, expressed his sorrow in a public statement Tuesday afternoon. He stated his "personal regrets over the tragedy" and that he "joined with all personnel of The Infantry Center in sorrow for those who lost their lives, as well as for their bereaved parents and families."

The soldiers who were killed were part of the assigned personnel of the 2nd Inf. Div. on "loan" to the 11th Air Assault Div.

session following the Secretary's opening statement, one reporter asked how long it would take to get the 1st Cav. Div., (Air Mobile), combat ready. McNamara said he thought it could be accomplished inside of eight weeks.

Another reporter queried the Defense Secretary on the possibility of the new division being organized for duty in Viet Nam but he declined to speculate on this possibility.

The development of the air mobile division is the result of three years of study, test and evaluation by the Army, the Air Force and the U.S. Strike Command since April 1962 when Secretary McNamara asked the Army to take a new look at its tactical mobility including the greater use of aviation.

The basic concept of the new designed division evolved from a comprehensive program of studies and tests conducted by the Army's Tactical Mobility Requirements Board also known as the Howze Board which was formed in response to the Secretary's request.

The concept was subsequently evaluated by the Joint Chiefs of Staff after which the Army organized the experimental 11th Air Assault Div. and supporting 10th Air Transport Bde. in February 1963 at Fort Benning to further test and develop it.

The new 1st Cav. Div. Air Mobile will have a strength of 15,787 personnel and will be equipped with 434 aircraft almost all of which will be helicopters. One-third of the division's combat elements will be able to move simultaneously in the division's own aircraft while the remainder can be moved on a shuttle basis or by supporting Army or Air Force aircraft.

One of the division's brigades will be capable of parachute operations. The division will be equipped with approximately 1,600 ground vehicles. By comparison the present Army ROAD Infantry division has about 15,900 personnel, 101 aircraft, and 3,200 ground vehicles.

Class of '66 USMA Cadets Scheduled to Arrive Today

About 600 members of the U. S. Military Academy Class of 1966 are scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning today to participate in Infantry training.

The cadets will begin arriving at 3:30 p.m. with the last plane slated to land at Lawson Army Airfield at 5:15 p.m. Bringing the students to Fort Benning will be four Super Constellation aircraft, two DO's and one L88.

Their visit will begin with a reception and hop Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Training begins Saturday morning, June 19, on Hook Range with the cadets firing the Infantry's weapons followed by a Signal Corps orientation in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4.

Monday and Tuesday, June 21-22, the cadets will divide into three groups and participate in a Signal Corps command post exercise at Dekkar Strip, airborne orientation training at Eubanks Field and the leaders' reaction course at Dixie Village.

Tuesday afternoon the cadets are scheduled to see a film, "Tactical Air Mobility-Air Assault Concept," in Marshall Auditorium and at 8:40 p.m. will see the "Combined Arms Team in Defense" problem at Ruth Range.

The Combined Arms problem demonstrates a forward mechanized rifle company's night defense, including the planning and coordination of fires of organic, attached and supporting weapons, such as tanks, flame tanks, artillery, mortars, Army aircraft and nuclear weapons.

Wednesday, June 23, will be devoted to panel discussions and closing remarks.

The cadets are slated to begin leaving the post 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, with the last plane leaving at 1:15 p.m.

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."
Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

The Surgeon Says

Keep Cool

June is the vanguard of hot summer days. Now is the time to store knowledge for keeping cool.

You body constantly produces heat through oxidation of foods. Heat production increases with physical activity but it also is dissipated through radiation — conduction and convection — and evaporation of sweat. Heat loss by convection occurs when the body warms the adjacent air

Heat always is radiated from warmer to cooler objects. If the surroundings of the body are all above body temperature, we cannot lose heat by radiation. We may absorb heat from the outside. When the body temperature rises above about 106 degrees Fahrenheit because of heat, serious injury occurs. There have been recoveries reported when temperatures of the body rose to almost 115 degrees, but 110 degrees is about the limit and this temperature can be tolerated only briefly.

Listed below are some of the things we can do to keep our bodies cool on hot summer days:

a. Increase your drinking of water. This is necessary to compensate for sweat loss at high temperatures. The evaporation of a quart of sweat requires about 550 calories of heat, which is taken from immediate surroundings such as skin and clothing.

b. Large amounts of salt are lost as sweating increases and must be replaced. In the average person, this can be done by slightly increasing salt intake. Under normal conditions, the body itself can compensate well and extra salt is unnecessary.

c. Vigorous exercise greatly increases heat production and this heat must be dissipated lest body temperature rise dangerously. Sweating becomes profuse, but when humidity is high evaporation occurs more slowly. If dissipation does not occur through normal channels, stop all physical activities, get into an air conditioned room, or sponge the body with cool water.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Gray G. Johnson

A daily devotion pamphlet used the following story: "The subway train was crowded at the rush hour. Passengers with the strain and stress of the day's work in their faces moved toward the exits and the station platform. There wasn't a smile on a single face until they reached the elevator .

"Then something took place far down below the surface of the busy street. The elevator operator was quietly singing an old gospel hymn, 'My Faith Looks Up to Thee.' The strangeness of the hymn at that place and time startled the tired homewardbound workers.

"They looked at one another, then their faces lighted up as they moved into the car. Smiles began to appear. When the elevator reached the street level, a different group of people stepped out of it. Their day's work had ended on the right note.

"A hymn did it. It is a fine thing to know the great hymns of the church. Singing them helps us and helps others. Ours is a singing religion. The use of the hymnbook can be made a Means of Grace."

Freedom's Frontier

Fifteen years ago, citizens of the United States were reading and talking about the Brinks robbery, the arrest of Robert A. Vogler on a spying charge and Great Britain's recognition of Communist China when a news story flashed around the world, Sunday, June 25, 1,150, that more than 60,000 North Korean troops had invaded the Republic of Korea.

Two days later President Harry S. Truman ordered General of the Army Douglas MacArthur to aid South Korea and the U. S. Seventh Fleet to protect Formosa (Taiwan) against possible aggression and keep the Chinese Nationalist forces from attacking the mainland.

By the end of the Korean War more than 600,000 South Korean homes were destroyed leaving some 2,500,000 persons homeless. This was part of the price the Korean people paid to live in a free country.

After the truce agreement was signed July 27, 1953, at Panmunjom, the people of South Korea rebuilt their homes, cities and villages. They re-established a democratic government, improved their agricultural and industrial methods and now live in a free land that U.S. and allied forces helped to rid of communist aggression.

Since the cessation of hostilities, the United States has kept a watchful eye on North Korea. There have been a few incidents, but the uneasy truce has remained in effect.

Even today U. S. and ROK forces stand watch over the 2½ mile buffer zone at the 38th parallel to stop any renewal of communist aggression that might endanger free Korea again. (AFPS)

The Judge Says . . .

"We hold these truths to be self-evident . . ."

These words, familiar to every American, are the basis upon which we fought our "War for Independence" and upon which our government was founded.

The Declaration of Independence, which set forth the abuses which a freedom-loving people could no longer endure and our Constitution which set forth the basic freedoms which our government could not violate, have become symbols for free and liberty-loving people throughout the world. However, many in our own country take this freedom and liberty for granted and are no longer watchful lest our rights be whittled away by our own indifference.

Let us remember how important these basic rights were to the people of the thirteen colonies; let us remember the wars fought since the 12th century to establish these rights.

When our Constitution was framed, the authors considered their fight for freedom so basic that they failed to forbid a breach of these personal freedoms. But, the people remembered the struggle and abuses of government through history. They demanded assurance that these wrongs would not reoccur. The Constitution was then amended to include the first ten amendments, commonly known as the "Bill of Rights." Here were stated many of our greatest heritages in freedom—freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of worship, the right of the people to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure, and the right of trial by jury.

Our forefathers provided these and many other safeguards for us in our Constitution. Thus, we have a government based upon rights under law, rather than government at the whim of people in power. This is our greatest heritage. We must stand watch lest it be snatched from us because of our own lethargy.

'The Defense Rests'

"As an automobile, I resent some of the things people have been saying about me. Take for example, the headline in the paper which read, 'Automobiles Killed 43,600 in 1964.' And there's a legislator who is introducing a bill to outlaw me because of all the destruction I cause.

"Know what I'm going to do? Plead not guilty, that's what. And I'm asking you to be my judge.

"Here's my case.

"I am the pride of my parents because I'm so much safer than they were. I have the safest tires ever made, safety padding on my dashboard and power breaks. I respond to my accelerator to avoid danger quicker than my parents could; I come equipped with safety seat belts and have directional signals to guide others. My windshield wipers are the best ever made and my headlights are 'the most'; I travel on highways that are the safest ever built because the best engineering brains in the nation planned and constructed them that way.

"But take a look at the fellow who controls me. He has a lovely wife and three kids. He's an upstanding citizen, good to his family, polite and spends a lot of time keeping me clean and glossy. I guess you'd have to say he's one swell fellow-that is until he gets behind my wheel. I don't know what my wheel is made of but touching it suddenly transforms him.

"You know what I mean. He begins to abuse all my safety features by taking reckless chances and relying on my extra power to get him out of jams he himself creates.

"So on he goes — breaking rules — speeding up to beat traffic lights, following too close and overdriving his headlights until some day my shiny fenders may be marred and twisted and my slick paint stained with red.

"Will it be my fault? That's for you to judge.

"Before you do I wish to say that there's only one thing wrong with automobiles. It's people.

"The defense rests."

One Who Knows

SSgt. Robert B. Latham, a cook assigned to Co. B, 1st Bn., Center Troop Command, is one who knows about the assistance that the Army Emergency Relief (AER) gives. His daughter was killed last Halloween while trick or treating and the AER came to the assistance of his family following this tragedy. When the current fund drive began Latham was one of the first in his company to donate. Why not follow his example? You can never know when you will need financial assistance from AER. Brig. Gen. Forsythe Addresses Basics; Tells Officers That 'Leaders Are Scarce'

"Leaders are scarce," said Brig. Gen. George L. Forsythe, to 203 junior officers at the recent opening of Infantry Officer Basic Course Class No. 12.

Gen. Forsythe then went on to characterize the good leader as "studious, confident, active, responsible, courageous and effective."

He said a good leader is studious because there is always something else to learn about his job. "We must devote all our brain power to the task at hand and move forward to its accomplishment.

"Leaders must be confident," the general added, "because confidence is infectious. A leader's confidence will make his men confident in their abliity to accomplish the mission.

"Confidence comes from knowing your job and from experience.

"A leader is active because only through activity can we exercise responsible leadership," Gen. Forsythe noted. He told the junior officers that the best platoon would be that of the most active platoon leader.

He also pointed out that the good leader is also responsible. "You are given a job to be done and you must sense, feel and shoulder the responsibility to get it done," he said.

"Moral and intellectual courage is also an essential characteristic of the good leader," Gen. Forsythe said, "and the way to have courage is to have faith in yourself, in God and in your fellow man. Then you can control fear through this faith and through knowledge and self-discipline."

"The Course That Was" Presented By Student Wives At Luncheon

BY Marianne Whitlock
Emilie Dacunto

Custer Terrace Officers' Club was the setting for a skit, "The Course That Was", presented by the wives of the 1st platoon and directed by Mr. Donald Drouin for a luncheon held recently by the wives of officers graduating from the Associate Career Course, Class No. 3.

The cast included Mrs. Donald Drouin as Maj. McCaul, (the battalion commander); Mrs. Robert E. Allen, Mrs. Lloyd K. Avers, Mrs. William R. Daknis and Mrs. William O. Cadion as Army Wives; Mrs. Hugh L. Rider as the card girl; Mrs. Edward C. Kay, piano accompanist; Mrs. Anthony W. LaCapruccia and Mrs. Ronald Summers, costume and set assistants.

Mrs. Robert E. Allen, social chairman, welcomed the guests; they were Mrs. Talton W. Long, Mrs. Jess W. Walls, Mrs. Arthur J. Estes, Mrs. Ronald S. McCaul and Mrs. Gordon D. DeRoos.

Mrs. Allen also presented a gift of appreciation to Mrs. DeRoos, the detachment commander's wife.

The decorations and the coordination of luncheon details were handled by Mrs. William O. Cadion.

The centerpiece was a scooped-out watermelon filled with cantaloupe balls and watermelon and banana slices covered with coconut.

Father's Day Services Slated for 197th Chapel

Father's Day will receive unique attention at the 197th Inf. Bde. Chapel on June 20th as fathers of the congregation lead the 11 a.m. worship service with speeches, prayer, Bible reading and music, according to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Lester E. Burnette, brigade chaplain.

Col. Jacob L. Riley, commander of the 197th Inf. Bde. Maj. Charles A. Bullock, of the 611th Maintenance & Supply Battalion, Capt. John Gridley of Martin Army Hospital, and SFC Allen Barker of the USA CDCIA will bring the messages of the morning.

Subjects to be discussed by the laymen of the congregation are: "God, the Father of us All" by Maj. Bullock, "The Son Obeys the Father" by SFC Allen Barker, "The Father As A Provider For the Family" by Capt. Gridley, and "The Father As the Spiritual Leader in the Home" by Col. Riley.

Lt. Col. Jeremiah McKenzie, USAMTU, will read the Scripture. Prayers will be said by Sp7 Loren Crowder, MAH. In addition to a solo by Capt. Tony Robinson, TEC Group, a choral group made up of fathers will sing one of the old hymns of the church.

The public is invited to hear this unusual religious emphasis on Father's Day.

'Revitalization Program'

Teen Club to Hold Dance; Will Elect New Officers

The "revitalization program" for Teen Club activities takes a giant step forward this weekend with a dance planned for tonight and an important teen meeting Saturday morning.

The dance, with live music to be provided by "The Caravans," is being sponsored by the Officers Wives' Club and will be held at the clubhouse (Brat Barracks) from 8 p.m. until midnight. It will be a "drag or stag" affair open to ALL dependent teens and not just those who belong to the club. A small admission charge of 50 cents per person will be charged.

Free bus service will be provided teens in the outlying housing areas with pickup points and times as follows: O'Brien and Custer Roads, 7:10 p.m.; McGill and Custer Roads, 7:20 p.m.; Custer Terrace Shopping Center, 7:30 p.m. and Arrowhead and Craig Drive, 7:40 p.m. Busses will return the teen-agers after the dance.

On Saturday, teens have been invited to a meeting at the Brat Barracks to begin at 10 a.m. At that time they will have a chance to select a new name for the club, ratify the newly drafted constitution and by-laws and elect new officers.

A slate of nominees will be presented by the nominating committee appointed at the last meeting but teens attending the meeting will also be asked for nominations from the floor.

All dependent teen-agers are encouraged to attend this important meeting and to. . . Bring a Buddy!

Law Enforcers Elect Officers For New Year

New officers for the coming year were elected by the Valley Law Enforcement Association at a recent meeting at the Black Angus Restaurant in Columbus.

Those elected were B. F. McGuffey, chief of detectives, Columbus Police Department, president; Lt. Col. Bertram T. Weiner, deputy provost marshal, Infantry Center, first vice president; and Chief Deputy C. H. Jones, Muscogee County Sheriff's Office, second vice president.

Also, Capt. Marcus Humble, Infantry Center Provost Marshal's Office, secretary; Lt. R. H. Matthews, Identification Division, Columbus Police Department, treasurer; and Charlie Rose, special agent in charge, FBI and Maj. John Riley, deputy provost marshal, 2d Inf. Div., members-at-large.

Col. Howard B. Wells, Infantry Center provost marshal, is the outgoing president.

OWC School Registration Set For August 23-24

Registration for the OWC Pre-Kindergarten School will take place August 23-24 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Building 322 (located in the old two-story hospital area).

All dependent military children, ages three and four, are eligible to attend. Tuition rates are $12 per month for one child and $20 per month for two children in the same family.

Those who pre-registered their children in May must pay between August 1 and August 15 in order to confirm the reservation of a space. Payment may be made at the Pre-Kindergarten School or sent to Box 1852, Fort Benning.

Ranger Camp Plays Host To Boy Scouts

The Mountain Ranger Camp in Dahlonega, Ga. played host recently to 108 Boy Scouts and their advisors from the Cherokee Area Council of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Troop 175 from Atlanta, Ga.

During their encampment the Scouts received instruction, viewed demonstrations and participated in practical work in patrolling, communications, land navigation, weapons firing, demolitions, knot tying, rope bridges and rappelling from the 30 foot log ramp.

All instruction was presented by the Mountain Ranger Camp's patrolling and mountaineering subcommittees.

Finance Corps Observes Birthday; First Troops Were Paid in 1775

The U. S. Army Finance Corps personnel at Fort Benning observed the 190th anniversary of the corps Wednesday, June 16.

Lt. Col. W. M. Clark, chief of the Infantry Center Finance and Accounting Section, is one of 15 Finance Corps officers on the post.

In addition to Capt. W. H. McKay, executive officer, and 2d Lt. W. E. Love, deputy finance and accounting officer, the remaining corps members at Fort Benning are assigned to The Infantry Center Comptroller's Office, 15th Finance Disbursing Section, and the 11th Air Assault and 2d Inf. Div. Finance and Accounting Offices.

Col. Clark's office handles the pay of 12,500 military personnel, not counting Reservists and ROTC cadets who come to the post for summer training.

The Finance Corps dates from June 16, 1775, when the Continental Congress established a Pay Department for the American Army.

Paying the troops was only part of the job of the early Army paymasters. They had to buy forage for the horses and mules and food and clothing for the troops as well as handling the payroll.

The present Finance Corps was created by the Army Organization Act of 1950 and is concerned with the financial policies and plans, finance service to military personnel and installations and the payment of troops.

Medal of Honor Winner Speaks At Co. Reunion

Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, commanding officer, 5th Stu. Bn., TSB, recently spoke at a reunion of Co. C, 102d Inf., 43rd Inf. Div. in West Haven, Conn.

Col. Nett, a holder of the Medal of Honor, joined Co. C as a private shortly before the unit was ordered to active duty in February, 1941.

The subject of his talk at the reunion reception and dinner was Viet Nam.

MTU To Conduct SAFS At Perry

Army's Best Shots Give Rifle, Pistol Instruction

BY SSGT. LEE LA COMBE

The first major activity at Camp Perry, Ohio, site of the National Rifle and Pistol Championships, this year will be the pistol phase of the Small Arms Firing School.

But, this year, for the first time since the School was restarted in 1954, responsibility for conduct of SAFS will rest with the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit. Until now it had been the responsibility of The Infantry School.

Last fall Lt. Col. Jeremiah M. McKenzie was assigned to the MTU and appointed as director of SAFS. In the interim he has gathered about him a small, competent staff of experts in supply, management and instruction and in the middleof July they will journey to Camp Perry to make final preparations for the two phases of SAFS.

The pistol instruction is slated for July 30 through August 1 and the rifle phase Aug. 16-18.

Courses of instruction will include mechanical training with service Cal. 45 pistol and the M-14 rifle; fundamentals of stance, position, grip, breath control, sight alignment, technique of establishing a firing system, physical fitness and methods of coaching teams.

The highly compact course will have as instructors the very finest rifle and pistol marksmen in the United States Army. They will come from the Rifle and Pistol Division of the MTU.

Included on the roster of military professors are SFC William B. Blankenship, a five-time winner of the national pistol champion and a Distinguished Rifle and Pistol Shot; Sgt. Barbara Hile, perennial winner of the Women's Service Rifle Championship since 1960 and a Distinguished Rifle Shot.

They will be bolstered by more than two dozen other members of the Unit, highly skilled in the art of transmitting marksmanship information to tyros and experts alike.

From the opening ceremony to the graduation exercise of each phase of the Small Arms Firing School, students, who will number nearly 10,000 strong for the two phases, will receive thorough instruction in the use of small arms in the competitive program.

They will receive practical experience in coaching and less experienced shooters will have an opportunity to improve his or her skill.

The Small Arms Firing School was started in 1918 as a means of making shooters into good instructors. Current correct methods of instruction employed by the United States Army are stressed in the school.

Any competitor, military or civilian, whose transportation or other travel expenses are paid either partially or completely from government funds or quasi-public funds is required to attend the appropriate phase of SAFS and enter and complete firing in the appropriate National Trophy Individual Match, unless previously eliminated.

The school is open to individuals, military and civilian, 16 years of age and older.

Equipment to be used during the school may be drawn at Camp Perry, although youths under 19 must be accompanied by an adult member of the National Rifle Association who will sign for their equipment. Rifles, pistols, ammunition and instructional material will be issued.

No fee is charged for any part of the Small Arms Firing School.

"It is the goal of the MTU to make this year's Small Arms Firing School as interesting and beneficial to the student as possible," Col. McKenzie said.

At Graduation Exercise

Author Recalls Rangers' Exploits

Exploits of the six U. S. Ranger battalions of World War II were recently recalled at Fort Benning by a member of the first Ranger battalion formed by Brig. Gen. William O. Darby.

Speaking at graduation exercises for 115 new Rangers at The Infantry School, James Altieri of Los Angeles and Philadelphia, president of the Ranger Battalions Association, said the training was rigorous, requiring the men to undergo forced marches of 35 to 50 miles and to live off the land for four or five days at a time, but it proved essential to survival later during the war.

Altieri, author of the books "Darby's Rangers" and "The Spearheaders," was among the first 2,000 men to volunteer for the Rangers when they were organized in Ireland in the early part of the war. Of the original men, only 500 (including Altieri) were sent to Scotland to train.

On the coast of France, 45 Rangers were with the British on the raid on Dieppe, he said. In North Africa, Rangers captured and destroyed vital gun emplacements protecting an important seaport, thus paving the way for a landing of Allied troops, the speaker added. On Omaha Beach in Normandy, Rangers also played a vital part in the invasion.

In the Far East, when volunteers were called to go behind the Japanese lines and free some 530 American prisoners of war, the entire 6th Ranger Bn, volunteered, he said. It was necessary for the commander to pick 100 men by lot for the mission.

Once again, the Rangers moved far behind enemy lines and waited until dark to strike, he said. Over 230 Japanese soldiers were killed, only one American officer died and all the prisoners were freed and returned to American lines.

Into this proud heritage, "you can look back on today as a highpoint in your life," he told the new Rangers.

On behalf of the Ranger Battalions Association, Altieri presented a William O. Darby award to The Infantry School.

Distinguished honor graduates of the class were Capt. Ronald R. Grega, a tactics instructor, Marine Corps School, Quantico, Va., and Marine Corps Sgt. Dillon L. Tate.

Viet Cong's Tricks Termed 'Dirty Pool'

Chu Lai, RVN (AFPS) — "It's dirty pool but that's the way the game is played here," say members of the 4th Regiment, III Marine Amphibious Force, regarding new but unsuccessful tricks being employed by Viet Cong forces.

One trick involves freezing glass slivers in contaminated water and selling the ice to sun-parched Marines. It failed when the first buyer suffered minor cuts on his hands while handling a block.

Another trick which never succeeded was "spiking" soda pop with acid; the mixture ate through the cap before the thirsty men could open the bottle.

SPORTS Afterthoughts by DAVID N. SCOTT

(This week's column was written by 2nd Lt. Louis V. Priebe, Radio and Television Officer, USAIC.)

WELL, THE WEEK-END'S almost here again! Many folks will be taking off for Callaway Gardens, Atlanta or Panama City.

For the fortunate ones of us who plan to stay in the Columbus - Fort Benning area for the next three days, there is a sparkling glimmer of hope for some real lively entertainment. The New York Yankees are at home against Minnesota. This means that our 'ole podners, Dizzy Dean and Pee Wee Reese will be back on the tube calling the shots from Yankee Stadium.

It's Saturday afternoon and I can hear it now. It's a tie ballgame, two men out and the bases are loaded. A Yankee batter steps up to the plate.

Diz is dilligently trying to call the ballgame when Pee Wee decides that he is getting hungry and is going down to get something to eat. Politely he offers to bring his fellow toiler a tasty morsel.

"Diz, how 'bout a hamburger?"

"Thank ya Pee Wee, Podner. Don't mind if I do."

"What all would you like on it Diz?"

"How about some mustard, onions, a little relish, and let see now — oh yea, some good 'ole pickles. Boy, Pee Wee, do I ever like pickles. The ones they have up here in New York are OK, but let me tell you 'bout the best pickles I ever ate. Mrs. Glutz back in Squeedunk, Mississippi, turns out the best pickles you ever sunk your 'ole whops into. She takes these big sweet cucumbers and then—."

It's about now that an unidentified player (whom our 'ole podners have somehow failed to recognize during their informative conversation) hits a grandslam homerun.

"Hey Diz, somebody just hit a homer with the bases loaded. Who was it?"

"Don't know Pee Wee. But he sure pole-axed the 'ole apple though. I can't see who it was. He's running around the bases too fast. Bases were loaded, huh?

By now, of course, the only thing the fans are fully aware of is what Diz wants on his hamburger and Mrs. Glutz's pickles.

As the game progresses it develops into a rather lopsided contest. Pee Wee is still out getting hamburgers. Diz has returned to calling the game with all the fervor of a Red Grange, Mell Allen, Leo Durocher and Hubert Humphry (who helped Durocher with the announcing chores back in Washington a few weeks ago) all rolled into one. However, the game is dragging and, if you can believe it, Diz has run out of things to say.

After several moments of silence we hear singing in a voice which hardly rivals Robert Goulet's "Listen to the jingle, the rumble and the roar, as she travels through the woodlands, 'or the hills and by the shore. She's mighty tall and handsome, and known quite well by all. She's a combination called the Wabash Cannonball."

About midway through the last chorus of the "Wabash Cannonball" Pee Wee returns with the hamburgers which they promptly begin to devour.

Pee Wee reminds Diz that the winning pitcher is having a very good year. This turns the conversation to a familiar subject which is delved into at least once a weekend — the fact that Diz was the last pitcher in the major to win 30 games in one season.

"You know Diz, if he keeps this up he may break your record."

"Well Pee Wee, I hope he does (we note, however, a lack of sincerity with this remark.) but you know podner, it was a lot tougher back in the 'ole days. They didn't use relief pitchers as much and we really had to work to win a game."

The conversation continues along this vein for at least five minutes, occasionally interrupted by a few words of wisdom from the old Pro and his faithful companions, Elwood and Searchlight.

The only thing which could possibly terminate this informative discussion inevitably comes. The end of the ball game. If it was not for the far sighted people who scheduled the TV broadcast, we might have a solid weekend discussion of what an epic hero it takes to win 30 baseball games

3rd Bde. Cops Extra Inning Tilt From 428th Med. Bn. Nine, 7-2

In the season's first extra inning ball game at Gowdy Field, the 3rd Bde. pushed across five runs in the top of the 10th inning to beat the league leading 428th Med. Bn. nine, 7-2.

The 428th jumped into an early lead with a run in their half of the second inning. Raul Guerrero drove a high fly into deep centerfield and stretched it into a triple when the centerfielder lost the ball in the lights. James Westly brought Guerrero home with a single to right field.

The 3rd Bde. tied it up in the top of the 3rd inning when John Hundley's single scored Edward Irving.

In the 7th inning the 3rd Bde. moved into the lead, 2-1, only to have the Medics tie it up again in the 8th.

Neither team scored in the 9th inning and the game went into extra innings.

Mike Morris, the 428th's starting pitcher, weakened in the 10th allowing two runs to score before being relieved by Jose Parrallia.

All-Army Shooters Set 7 Records

Seven new records in service competition were set in the final four days of the All-Army Rifle and Pistol Championships which ended at Fort Benning June 11.

Four of these came in the pistol events and three were set in high power rifle.

SFC William B. Blankenship chalked up his fifth All-Army individual pistol championship with a three-day aggregate of 2,645 points, coming from behind on the final day with the service pistol to overhaul SSgt. Hershel Anderson of U. S. Army Europe.

Anderson had a bad day with the .45 caliber weapon and fell to sixth place with 2,627. SFC Robert Whitacre of Sixth Army, who also won the Excellence - in - Competition match with 294-11x, finished behind Blankenship with 2,633.

The Center Fire aggregate went to SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit with an 885-51x. Fourth Army's SFC Elgin Carter took the Service Pistol aggregate with an 876-32x.

U. S. Army Europe swept the team matches, setting a record in the .22 caliber competition.

The four-man squad of Anderson, Sgt. S. Machua, Sgt. Bonnie Harmon and Sgt. Donald Jaynes, slammed out 1,185 out of 1,200 with the .22 for the new mark. They came back with a 1,168 in the Center Fire and an 1,138 in the .45 to top all entires.

A steady rain fell through most of the team day reducing most of the scores below the level of past years.

In rifle Sixth Army chalked up victories in both the long range and short - range matches with record - setting scores in both events. They took the former with a six-man total of 596-82v and the latter with an 892-69v.

Third Army took the two remaining team matches. They won the National Match Course with a 1,487-138v, a new record, and took the Infantry Trophy event with a 3,744 total. The Infantry Trophy was fired three times over the course.

Afterthoughts

Before we turn the magic knob which will bring such dubious excitement as live wrestling, let's pause for a minute to recall what a variety of entertainment we have enjoyed for the last two and a half hours.

There was the fine culinary discussion which would rival any effort by a home economics and domestic expert. We heard a beautiful country and western rendition which would be enthusiastically welcomed on the Grand 'ole Opry." And we received a most informative lecture on the history of baseball since the 1930's. And, oh yes, we also saw part of the Minnesota - New York game.

With such a wide variety of entertainment as this, who could resist tuning in Sunday for more of the same.

2,000 Troops to 'Hit the Road' Sunday for Carolina Mock War

Ft. Gordon First Stop In 450-Mile Journey

By JOE TREASTER

Tuned to fighting trim with a week of special training, a 2,000-man 2nd Infantry Division force Sunday heads for North Carolina for Exercise Cherokee Trail VI.

The 450-mile trek to Exercise Headquarters in Candor, N.C., in the center of the Uwharrie National Forest, is scheduled to take two days with an overnight stop at Fort Gordon, Ga. Some 450 vehicles will be in the convoy.

During the seven-day exercise, beginning next Thursday, the 2nd Division soldiers will furnish the manpower for officer students of the U.S. Army Special Warfare Center to implement techniques currently in use in Southeast Asia.

Leaving Sunday

The soldiers leaving Sunday — members of the 1st Brigade, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 23 Infantry — will form the fictitious "Pineland Army."

Guided by the students, the 1st Brigade soldiers will seek to drive some 276 guerrillas from one million acres of national forest, to be known during the exercise as the nation of Pineland.

The guerrillas, also 2nd Division men, (the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry) moved into the forest last Wednesday clad in civilian clothes and carried the materials of survival in rucksacks. Students in irregular warfare were again advising them.

Single Day

Riding in eight chartered buses, the cavalrymen made the journey in a single day. They arrived Wednesday afternoon shortly before an advanced party, under the command of Capt. Walter G. Robertson.

Rain pelted Capt. Robertson's 32 - vehicle convoy from early Tuesday morning when it left Fort Benning, until late that afternoon when it reached Fort Gordon — midway point for convoys to the Carolinas.

Former Advisor

Maj. Arthur J. Rafferty, operations officer of the 1st Brigade and a former advisor in South Viet Nam, said Cherokee Trail will be "a tremendous training vehicle for us.

"Individual soldiers will find out first hand the frustration, the need for patience and the necessity for keeping in good physical condition in-

Meets 'Mr. Baggy Pants'

Sgt. Maj. James Runyon of the 3rd Brigade got a chance last week to see the statue he posed for when he was a member of the 82nd Airborne Division. Shortly before the unveiling, Runyon was transferred to the 2nd Infantry Division and he has never seen the statue which bears his likeness. (See story Page 19)

NCO School Opens Class In September

The Third Army Noncommissioned Officers Academy has announced the quota of candidates allocated in the 2nd Infantry Division to attend the school during the fiscal year 1966.

The school, designed for NCOs in the grades of E5 through E7, opens the first of five classes on September 13 and the last one will begin on May 9, 1966.

In a recent letter to all units of the 2nd Division are outlined the quotas for each unit. As stated in the letter, the mission of the academy at Fort Jackson, S.C., is to "raise the standards and quality of performance of noncommissioned officers with regard to MOS assignment, emphasizing the basic fundamental role, leader-trainer-supervisor."

According to the division letter, all quotas will be filled and an alternate candidate will be selected in the event the first person chosen is unable to attend.

Some of the requirements for attending the academy are that NCOs be less than 40-years-old, have less than 18 years of service and have a minimum of nine months in the Army remaining upon completion of the course.

All students who are selected will be notified 30 days prior to reporting date. The reporting date for the first class is September 10. Students in this class will graduates on October 22.

3rd Brigade in Readiness For ROTC Summer Rush

By MARV WOLF

FORT BRAGG, N. C.

Preparations drew to a close here at Fort Bragg as the 3rd Brigade geared up for the invasion of some 2300 ROTC cadet who will undergo their annual summer camp training.

The Cadets from institutions all over the southeast will report June 21 and after a day filled with inspections and the mechanics of in-processing, will commence their training on the 22nd.

Highlight of the month-long session will be the combined arms demonstration scheduled for June 25, which will feature an infantry company in the defense supported by armor, artillery and signal.

According to Mj. Edwin G. Davis, brigade operations officer, the demonstration will be capped by the "mad minute" where the awesome fire power available to the infantry company will be unleashed in a frantic 60-second barrage which will include firing of every weapon from heavy artillery to M-14 rifles.

The balance of the training schedule will include the less dramatic but equally important weapons training including train-fire qualifiring of M-60 machine guns, 45 caliber pistols and the intricacies of the 81 mm mortar.

The balance of the training will resemble the familiar basic individual training that hundreds of thousands of recruits have received with the noteworthy exception of a vastly speeded up cycle.

Covered in depth will be map reading, patrolling, use of the bayonet, mine and grenades, field fortifications and the inescapable physical training program.

Merger Brings 'Cav' to Benning

By JIM BAKER

The colors of the 2nd Infantry Division which flew throughout the bloody Korean War will, as the result of Wednesday's announcement by Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, once more move to the scene of some of their proudest moments.

The Wednesday announcement outlined the plan for the organization of the new air-mobile division.

The 1st Cavalry Division's colors, now in Korea, will be brought to Fort Benning to give the new division its name—1st Cavalry Division, Air-Mobile.

Chipyong-ni, Old Baldy, the Naktong River Line, and Pork Chop are all names that live in the proud heritage of the 2nd Infantry Division. It is to this land, the scene of some of the bloodiest struggles in the annals of war, that the 2nd Infantry Division will return.

Plans as they were announced by Mr. McNamara call for the new air cavalry division to be constructed out of the men and equipment of the 2nd Infantry Division and the experimental 11th Air Assault Division.

Official Department of Army releases contained no mention of which units of the second would become a part of the new division. No word has been received as to how the merger would be accomplished or whether or not the merger would involve the transfer of whole units.

The new air cavalry division arose out of the successful testing of the experimental 11th Air Assault Division during the last three years.

For the past year the 2nd Infantry Division's 2nd Brigade has been a part of the 11th, on loan for test purposes.

According to Army officials the new air cavalry division will have the capability of moving one-third of its strength simultaneously with its own aircraft.

"The new division will have roughly four times more aircraft than the present infantry division," the Secretary of Defense said during his news conference when the merger was announced.

The Secretary said in his announcement that he expected the new division to be combat-ready within eight weeks. This puts announcement of the actual mechanics of the merger within the next few weeks, one official speculated.

House Approves Pay Raise for Servicemen

Indianhead soldiers can expect more money in the future when the pay bill which passed its first hurdle—the House Armed Services Committee — becomes law sometime in the future.

The Committee, headed by Rep. Mendel Rivers, voted a 10.8 percent pay raise for the Armed Forces Tuesday.

The bulk of the pay raise will go to the soldier with less than two years in the Army. Under the terms of the bill as approved, the private first class with less than two years will have his pay raised from $85.30 to $97.50.

The specialist four with more than two years now gets $184.50, if the bill is passed as approved he will get $200.70.

The staff sergeant with more than four years in the Army would have his pay raised from $266.40 to $299.40.

One of the biggest jumps in pay for any single rank is that of the second lieutenant with less than two years in the Army. His pay will go from $244.20 to $294.60.

Also incorporated into the bill as it came from the Armed Services Committee was a variable re-enlistment bonus which could give some valuable technicians as much as four times the reenlistment bonus now authorized.

No dates have been announced as to when the bill will go before the House or when it will become law.

Museum Gets Extra Space, More Planned

The 2nd Infantry Division's commander Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles officially opened another section of the division's Historical Center Monday morning in a ribbon cutting ceremony.

The general was escorted through the lower part of the building, where he looked once again at the relics from the past. Many were captured in battles in which he was personally involved.

After the snipping, Gen. Chiles went upstairs to ob-

WWI 'Vet' Recalls Cold French Arty. School

Editor's Note: From time to time the 2nd Infantry Division news has been bringing you summaries of the memories of Herschell Fox, member of the division during the first world war. The latest installments of his book "Down Memory Lane" have arrived and will be brought to you this week and in succeeding weeks.

After landing in France on Christmas Day, 1917, Herschell Fox and his 39 compatriots of the 2nd Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop moved into the central part of the country.

They spent a week in a warehouse in Nevers, waiting for orders which would send them to a French artillery school near the town of Besancon, some 40 miles from the Swiss border.

Snow covered the ground and the men were bitterly cold.

"We were told that due to the scarcity of fuel, fires were not to be made until after 5 p.m.," Fox recalled, "Of course the rule was supposed to apply to officers too so it couldn't have been smoke that we saw billowing from their quarters in the early afternoon. We were told simply to work or freeze. And no one froze."

Fox and the others spent some five weeks at the school near Besancon, one of 35 run by the French for incoming Americans. Their assignment was to learn to repair, equip and fire the French 75 and 150 mm pieces.

"A funny thing about the training was that although we were shown most of the mechanics of the guns, the most important part, the thing that made the 75's famous, its recoiling system, was only slightly gone over," he said. "We attributed this to the fact that it was the Frenchman's secret and he was going to keep it."

After classes there was plenty of spare time, Fox said, and he and the others had a chance to play the role of American tourists.

Besancon, standing on a high plateau and with a medieval fortress guarding its main entrance, remains most vivid in Fox' mind. The home of 19th century French writer Victor Hugo is on the list of places he visited.

After the five weeks the squad was split. Some of the men went on to further artillery training while others including Fox, were sent some 40 miles further north to Langres for small arms instructions.

Indian Summer

"The weather when we got there was like our Indian summer, just a bit more chilly," Fox said. "It wasn't bad there. We had fairly good meals and, considering that this was WAR, our sleeping quarters weren't bad."

The one bad feature Fox remembers was the guardhouse. That story next week in chapter V of "Down Memory Lane."

7th Cavalry Spends 40 Hours on ORT

The rumble of the big "iron horses" woke the men of the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, before dawn last Wednesday to start a 40 hour test of both men and machines.

As the men of the "Garry Owen" Squadron scrambled atop their mechanized "horses", the "enemy" was preparing a line of attack along 10th Division Road in the opening of the Cav's Operational Readiness Test (ORT)."

Assembling south of Darby Range, the Squadron, after reconaissance of the area, staged a delaying action West of 10th Division Road to allow it's Troops time to "dig in" and prepare to meet the enemy.

herent in counter insurgency actions.

"Many of the same conditions and feelings that Vietnamese and American troops in Asia know will become apparent to our soldiers."

Preparation

Training and preparation for the exercise centered on escape and evasion, ambush and counter - ambush techniques, patrolling and civil actions, Major Rafferty said.

Brigade commander, Col. Ben H. Ward, also a Viet Nam veteran, has stressed the importance of civic action.

"In combatting a guerrilla force, whether in Viet Nam or North Carolina, we have to establish a good relationship with the surrounding civilian public," he said.

"Anyone who is not convinced of the value, or prime importance of civic action in combat surroundings should spend a tour in Viet Nam," he added.

Museum

serve the newest addition. After a brief tour, a cup of coffee and a piece of cake the general departed, but not before he commented on the construction.

"I was pleasantly surprised," he said. "I didn't think it would be so professional. It's amazing to think this was done by our very own people."

Among the people present for the ceremony was the assistant division commander Col. John W. Armstrong and the Chief of Staff, Col. Tony F. Perpich.

Plans for even more construction are being formulated.

They include an adjoining building to be converted to a conference room, a fence surrounding the complex and a walk way connecting the two buildings.

ROTC

support the entire summer camp program with assistant instructors, training aid vehicle and demonstrations, the emphasis will be on assisting the ROTC instructors.

The brigade will give both bayonet and mess casualty treatment classes in addition to the combined arms demonstration.

Climax of the intense training will be a Field Problem Test where the Army's future leaders will be expected to demonstrate a coordinating use of their newly learned skills.

Introduced to 'Mr. Baggy Pants'

Sergeant Meets Likeness for First Time

BY MARV WOLF

James Runyon, whose 15 foot steel, bronze and epoxy likeness guards the Bragg Boulevard entrance to Fort Bragg, has returned, if only temporarily, to the scene of his first and, he hopes, last tour of duty as a sculptors model.

Runyon, who in 1960 spent the better part of two months posing for the statue is presently the sergeant major of the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade, which arrived at Fort Bragg in force last Tuesday. The Brigade will participate in the ROTC summer training activities.

Actual Posing

Runyon recalls that the actual posing for the "Airborne Trooper," now known as "Mr. Baggy Pants," took four hours a morning, five days a week for two months, and that he posed for twenty-minutes at a time, followed by a five minute break. This is the first time he has actually seen the finished product.

The sculptor, Mrs. Samuel L. Hiebert, wife of the then Deputy Post Chaplain of Fort Bragg, is now a resident of Fayetteville, N. C.

Mrs. Hiebert, who spent more than a year in the actual construction of the monument to World War II airborne soldiers, recalls the modeling sessions gleefully: "I used to have to lug that machine gun (the Thompson Sub-Machine Gun that is part of the statue) home, and if I stopped on the way at the supermarket with my artists tam and black jacket, people gave me the strangest looks."

"Not Easy"

Recalling the sessions with Runyon posing in the sweltering heat, outfitted in the gear that was worn by the combat paratrooper of World War II, Mrs. Hiebert remembers that "He sweated it out — It's always hard to stand still and the temperature didn't make it any easier."

Commenting on the similarity of the statue to that of Runyon, the sculptress brought out the fact that since Sgt. Maj. Runyon is not a tall man, she had to lengthen the legs of the statue.

The face of the figure, she points out, is not Runyons' face, although there is a similarity about the check bones but a face "that everybody could picture as himself or somebody he knew.

"People are always saying to me 'It reminds me of so and so' and that is what I intended."

Two Combat Jumps

The model, whose more than 300 jumps include two under combat conditions, terminated almost eighteen years of airborne status shortly after completion of the statue but before it was unveiled, and since he had been assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning, Georgia, he was unable to attend the ceremonies connected with the unveiling.

His return to Bragg is the first time he has had the opportunity to see his former taskmistress since he posed for the colossus which has become Fort Bragg' best known symbol.

SMaj. Hopkins Re-Ups for 3

The 1st Brigade sergeant major, Harry Hopkins, re-enlisted Monday morning for three years.

Hopkins, who has served for 20 years, first arrived at Fort Benning in 1955 and stayed until 1962 when he was sent to Korea.

He returned in 1963, and assumed his present position.

A native of Concord, N.C., Sgt. Maj. Hopkins was promoted to his current rank in the fall of 1961.

Hopkins is married with three children.

'Indianhead' Ladies Name Mrs. Lee To Lead Club

A banquet style luncheon featuring roast beef, carrots and peas, creamed potatoes with gravy and a green salad was the setting for the recent election of officers for the Big Indianhead NCO Wives Club.

Elected president for the new year was Mrs. Henry Lee. Other officers are Mrs. Smith Hersman, first vice president; Mrs. Willie Battles, second vice president; Mrs. Sam D. Hart, secretary; and Mrs. Harold Rampey, treasurer.

Installation ceremonies for the in-coming officers will be held on June 24th at 1 p.m. at the Sand Hill NCO Club during the regularly scheduled business meeting. Installation officer will be Mrs. Lawrence Berger.

Following the election of officers, Mrs. Gardell Kaney, president of the Ladies Club, presented gifts of silver to her fellow officers and committee chairman who will make way for the new officers.

Recepients of the silver were: Mrs. James Norman, first vice president; Mrs. Henry Lee, Second vice president; Mrs. Smith Hersman, secretary; Mrs. Jack Brown, treasurer; Mrs. Hulius Sumrall and Mrs. Roy Austin, hospitality chairman. Others were Mrs. Lawrence Berger and Mrs. John Deba, entertainment chairman; Mrs. Willie Battles, membership; Mrs. Terrell Skelton, hospital; Mrs. LeRoy Arnold, ways and means; Mrs. Melvin Hansen and Mrs. Burley Adkins, program; and Mrs. Jesse Freeman, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Ingram Introduced

The June coffee for the wives' of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry was recently held at the home of Mrs. Arthur J. Rafferty. She was assisted by Mrs. Richard H. Morley and Mrs. Robert Macia.

Mrs. Earl Ingram, wife of the new battalion commander, was introduced to the group by the departing Mrs. S. K. McMurdo, and was presented her 23rd Infantry crest pin. Newcomers, Mrs. George F. Powers and Mrs. Vincent M. Eitler II, were also welcomed.

Departing gifts were given to Mrs. S. K. McMurdo, Mrs. Richard H. Morley, Mrs. Arthur J. Rafferty, and Mrs. Walter G. Robertson.

Engineers Tap 4 to Compete

Four outstanding soldiers of the 2nd Engineer Battalion have been selected to represent the battalion in the upcoming division soldier of the month competition to be held early in July.

Chosen for superiority in their occupational positions, knowledge of military subjects, physical fitness and military courtesy were Sp5 Edward Moore of Company C; Sp4 Phillip Kirksey of Company E; Sp5 James Tomey of Headquarters Company and Sgt. Robert Richardson of Company A.

Competition for the highly coveted 2nd Division Soldier of the Year award will be held July 3rd.

God's Sunday Punch Aided by 'Choppers'

By JIM LULL

"Francis — it's time to go or you'll miss your next service."

At that moment Francis Asbury, the first bishop of the American Methodist church mounted a horse and rode off to a small village in the Wyoming Valley of Pennsylvania to preach his third sermon that Sunday morning. Thus began circuit preaching.

During the upcoming Cherokee Trail VI manuever three Methodist ministers will carry on the Asbury tradition. And, like Francis Asbury, the circuit preaching concept is a product of necessity.

Improvements are noted however.

Horses Junked

First, horses have been junked in favor of large, green animals, known affectionately in the Army as "choppers."

The three flying preachers will be Chap. (Capt.) Edward E. Flower, Jr. for the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry; Chap. (Capt.) Robert Blasingame for the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry and Chap. (Capt.) Jerry M. Woodbury for the various artillery elements located throughout the manuever area.

The task force chaplain, Capt. Duie Jernigan of the 1st Brigade points out that "there will be complete religious coverage while the troops are there."

The chaplains will all move with the men and be available at any time.

Agressor Chaplain

Even the aggressor force, though spread out and constantly on the move will be accompanied by a chaplain, (Capt.) Jack Banton of the 4th Squadron, 7th Calvary.

"Regular Sunday morning services will be conducted, and the chaplains move from company to company" Chap. Jernigan said.

As in all other phases of this counter-guerilla action, the various chaplains plan to take maximum advantage of civilian-military relations in order to conduct special services.

Local Arrangements

"Through arrangements with the local preachers we hope to be able to conduct services in the civilian churches as our mission dictates," Jernigan said.

"In the event we are forced to conduct the services outside — there is no better church than a large oak tree," Jernigan added.

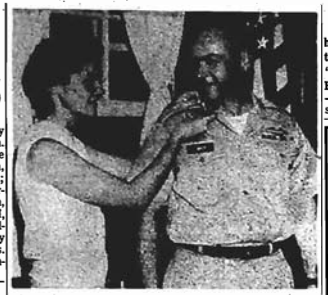
All chaplains will be equipped with portable altars and portable organs.

The task force chaplain assures all personnel that services will be available regardles of faith. "Catholic priests from Fort Bragg will accomodate the Catholic men on the manuever.

Big Plans

The times and places of the services will be revealed to the men in every unit by their commanders as the manuever progresses.

"Finally, we are attempting to get time on the local radio stations to present devotional messages daily while we are there," Chap. Jernigan said.



CAPTAIN'S BARS STRIPPED . . . The ruse of a cancelled leave was used so Marion O'Brien could pin the leaves of a major on husband George. He is a member of the 37th Artillery Battalion and slated to take over the job as S-3 operations officer in the near future.

BUY BONDS

Small enough to become habit-forming; large enough to add up quickly, the $25 "Series E" U. S. Savings Bond—purchase price, $18.75—is a big beginner for the steady saver.

1st Brigade Ladies Say Goodbye to 4 Members

The ladies of the 1st Brigade held their monthly coffee on June 3 at the home of Mrs. Charles W. Verlander. Assisting Mrs. Verlander as hostess was Mrs. Teddy E. Hobbs.

A pink and white theme was carried out with a lovely white linen tablecloth, pink tapers and a centerpiece of white and pink gladiolas. Mrs. Hobbs poured.

The ladies welcome Mrs. W. G. Robertson, wife of Capt. W. G. Robertson, who has just come to the brigade from the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

As the group welcomed Mrs. Robertson, they said goodbye to four members and presented the ladies with silver trays as going-away gifts.

Mrs. Tommy Trexler's husband, Lt. Col. T. P. Trexler, will be going to Division Headquarters. Mrs. Gerald Sola's husband, Maj. G. C. Sola, and Mrs. Nathaniel Keeling's husband, Capt. N. L. Keeling, also will be going to Division Headquarters. Mrs. George Powers' husband, Maj. G. F. Powers, will be going to the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry.

'Athletics Are My Life'

Major Goes From Gridiron to 'Indy' Pit

By LANNY THOMAS

If a soldier just happens by the S-3 office of the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry these days, he may overhear the excited chatter of tales of auto racing — the Indianapolis "500," the Sebring, the Daytona or any other of the nation's classics.

However, the "tales" are authentic and the experiences are vividly related by perhaps the 2nd Infantry Division's number one racing enthusiast, Maj. Barney Gill, fresh from the tracks of this year's Indianapolis "500."

"The Racing Kick"

Gill, more prominent in the Army for his football coaching, "got on the racing kick" about five years ago while stationed in Europe where he coached the SHAPE football team in Paris.

This year he operated the pits at Indianapolis for an old friend he met in Europe, Masten Gregory, who ran two cars in the races. During Duane Carter's visit to the division this week, Gill scurried to the Safety Program at Theatre 6 where he exChanged "racer's talk" with the pro of the Indianapolis course.

"Barney" Gill

Gill's primary interest in racing has been in the field of the grand prix and international sports car races. Grand prix races, which are held in every major country, deal with the small sports cars, Gill explained. "This is where you get the worlds champion drivers. Indianapolis racing is a different breed."

Grand Prix

Gill has been behind the wheel of a Ferrari in only a few of the small races, he said, but has seen the grand prix in every country except the United States and Mexico.

Like Carter who is safety conscious as a result of racing, Gill too has his own theories about the causes of the frightening number of accidents on today's highways.

One of the causes, Gill says, is that "manufacturers have outdone the drivers. The drivers have not kept pace with the capability of the cars. You can easily get today's cars up to 120 mph but you sure can't stop them that easy.

Death Trap

"The capability of cars far overshadows the capability of the driver. Any car is a death trap if you don't know how to use it."

To stay alive on the road, Gill recommends more emphasis on driving — learning how to manipulate the car in given situations — understanding what the car can and cannot do.

He cited an instance on the race tracks where a car goes into a spin and approaches a wall. "A good race driver never hits anything head on. He knows that his chances of injury are less likely if the impact of a collision comes from the rear.

"Seat belts are a must in the standard American car," he added.

"My Life"

"Athletics are my life," says the major who has devoted most of his Army career to football and more recently became interested in racing.

Gill, a college football star (All America '49) at the University of Virginia in the late 40's and early 1950's, became an Army coach in 1952. He coached the 82nd Airborne Division to the Airborne Championship in 1953.

In 1955 he was called to West Point where he remained for five years coaching the Army. His 1958 team defeated Navy and went undefeated for the year — the last year in which the Army has carried a perfect record.

If he has any philosophy for winning, it's "don't lose — just the same as in car racing."

Three Championships

During his four seasons of coaching SHAPE, Gill's team won three championships and was second during the fourth year in games with Germany, England, France and Spain. SHAPE won the Air Force league two years in a row while under Gill's coaching.

Gill gave all the pit signals for Gregory's two cars, however, neither auto finished the races. "When they dropped out I just stood by and soaked up the races," Gill said.

Why Not a Five-Day Work Week?

By JIM BAKER

Let us dream then, you and I—of the five-day work week when soldiers can devote Saturdays and Sundays to leisure.

If you'll excuse the poor paraphrasing of Elliott, let us examine the possibility of the not having to work Saturday.

This is not a radical proposal — wherever one goes one hears the complaint that some soldiers on this post have Saturday off. "Why can't we?"

First Reason

The first reason is there is a Department of Army requirement that this division train 44 hours a week.

Several years ago the 82nd Airborne Division with the same requirement changed to the five day week. They found it to have both benefits and drawbacks.

Traffic accidents were reduced because the necessity for rushing was reduced. Soldiers were allowed to leave Saturday morning, thus giving them as much as a six hour jump on weekend and beach traffic.

"The accidents were reduced noticeably," one official associated with the Fort Bragg experiment said.

Night Training

In order to take care of the extra four hours of training requirement, airborne commanders found a session a week of night training was beneficial.

Headquarters and service companies as well as administration companies welcomed the evening session to get their troops together in order to fulfill training requirements.

"Nobody seemed to mind the night session since everyone knew they were going to have Saturday off," one official observed.

A drawback to the five day work week was the fact that Saturday mornings are generally ideal for taking care of inspections and parades. Commanders found that switching them to a week day usually ruined at least half a training day.

This is far outweighed by the morale and safety advantages which accrue.

Special services could plan wider cultural and educational tours if they have Saturday to utilize. Many of the tours now organized by the division's Service Club Two take place on Sunday when highways are more heavily travelled and many interesting places are closed.

Final Analysis

In the final analysis community relations would be improved, the merchant would have more opportunity to sell to the soldier and the soldier would have more time to buy carefully.

The biggest pay-off would come from the soldier himself who would come to work Monday morning with two full days of rest and relaxation under his belt. This is especially true in a unit with requirements which permit only a certain percentage to be on leave at one time.

The five day work-week —dream or reality? — who knows?

THE 46TH FOR THE COLLECTION — FROM HAWAII
Collector Wheeler (L) and Gen. Forsythe

State Flag Collection Close to Completion

A collection of state flags started last November came closer to completion last week when the flags of Hawaii became the 46th in the 2nd Infantry Division's possession.

Brig. Gen. George Forsythe, assistant commandant of the Infantry School handed over the Hawaiian emblem to Lt. Jack Wheeler, aide to division commander Maj. Gen. John Chiles and originator of the state flag collection.

It began last November when Wheeler wrote to all 50 states requesting a flag to be flown from the flag poles which mark the bounds of the Marne parade field adjoining division headquarters.

Recently the State of West Virginia found its way onto a flag pole outside headquarters as a result of the West Virginia American Legion's generosity.

World's Fair Part V

The Fair Done Cheaply

Flushing Meadow, N.Y.—As was said at the outset of this series, "next to money the most important thing in a trip to the World's Fair is time."

Money is an extremely important consideration.

If money is the only thing that's holding you back, then put in your leave papers tomorrow.

The fair can be "done" with a small amount of money. The problem is waiting.

You Get Taken

If you are a hot dog and soda or beer addict and the first requirement is that bill of fare — then forget the whole thing — that's where you get taken.

Most of the sensational attractions at the fair are free, but they're mobbed and generally impersonal and all fairs are noted for their pie eating contests.

The World's Fair is no exception. Wait and find the inexpensive displays and food.

$40 Dollars For Two

There is a restaurant at the fair where you can pay $40 dollars for dinner for two. That's the Spanish pavillion. At the upstairs bar lounge in the same pavilion, paella (chicken and prawns with rice) is just $1.50, wine punch is just a dollar and sandwiches are 70 to 90 cents — as much as a hot dog.

In the Belgian Village, steak, marinated in champagne before broiling, is $1.50 and at the Irish pavilion the old "standby" — Irish Coffee — is delicious at $1.

Pork and Beer

The Lowenbrau beer garden sells a platter of pork tenderloin, knockwurst, smoked pork chop, potatoes and sauerkraut for $1.95 — ideal for the soldier with a budget that prescribes "only one 'square' a day."

To get away from food, it takes only ten cents to get a helicopter ride over the city of New York — a bargain at twice the price. The folk dances at the Korean pavilion are free and you can buy a Yugoslavian whistle for 35 cents.

Wisconsin Cheese

At the Wisconsin pavilion a pound of delicious cheddar cheese is just 99 cents and you can model Kaftan robes at the Moroccan pavilion for nothing.

You don't really have to make like Diamond Jim Brady to have fun at the fair as a matter of fact, it's more fun the other way.

Class Repeated At CG's Order

Classroom preparations for Exercise Cherokee Trail last week drew an invitation for a command performance from the 2nd Infantry division's commanding general.

Lt. James T. Lawrence, a reconaissance platoon leader for the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry was giving a mandatory training class on "ambush and counter-ambush tactics."

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles was observing the instruction and was so impressed with the content of the lecture, and the way it was presented that he personally ordered rescheduling of the preparation training so that everyone to take part in the Cherokee Trail maneuver would attend it.

The general complimented Lawrence on the effectiveness of his instruction noting that it was "authentic and unique."

Lawrence, a native of Troy, Ala., and graduate of The Citadel, credits the support troops from his platoon for much of the success of the training period.

Indianapolis 500 Driver Urges Safety to Soldiers

By LANNY THOMAS

Riding on the ragged edge of danger during the Indianapolis "500" Race on Memorial Day is safer than driving on the nation's highways during the same period.

Briefly, that's the story as told to 2nd Infantry Division soldiers this week by one of the nation's foremost racing drivers, Duane Carter, who has felt the thrills of 13 Memorial Day Classics.

Safety alone, in all its aspects, is the clue to the low accident rate on the Indianapolis Speedway, Carter stressed as he urged soldiers to adopt the racers' rules of safety.

Two Lectures

Carter, who just returned from this year's Indianapolis "500," gave two lectures Monday at Theatre 6 accompanied with a colorful film showing the 1964 races. He is a representative of the Champion Sparkplug Company who is currently sponsoring a Highway Safety Program.

Carter is touring the country, giving safety talks to 24 military installations.

The 24-year veteran of speedways retired from active racing in 1956 to become the Director of Competition for the U. S. Auto Club. He returned to the Indianapolis tracks in 1959 and finished 7th in the "500."

While a field of 37 drivers (starters) zoomed around the 500-mile track this year at speeds more than 140 mph, not one fatality nor serious injury occurred. At the same time more than 500 persons perished on the nation's highways — supposedly driving at a maximum speed of 65 to 70 mph.

'Way of Life'

It all boils down to safety, Carter stressed.

"Safe driving is a way of life for drivers of the Indianapolis 500," Carter said. "A race driver is often thought of as not being a safe driver because of speed. You must remember that he is driving on a speedway designed especially for racing. It has a surface that is always kept smooth — and we never race on a wet pavement.

"Our facilities are much safer," Carter said as he contrasted the speedway to the hazards of highways and thoroughfares—nameby humps, cracks, soft shoulders on the road and inclement weather.

Another major difference in driving the Indianapolis "500" and driving on the nation's highways is "the people you compete against," he said. The bulk of the people you meet on the highway have never had an opportunity to take driver education.

Screened

"They're not as safety conscious as the ones who are schooled. Our men have to show an aptitude for staying out of trouble."

Drivers in the "500" are screened carefully before they become the selected few, according to Carter. They undergo a rigid physical test and then a "rookie drivers test."

During this two - day test, the hopeful racers become familiar with their vehicle and the speedway after driving more than 100 miles. "About one third of these pros are washed out — simply because they have not learned how to handle themselves safely," Carter explained.

As Carter urged safety among 2nd Division soldiers, he said "all of you have talents to be a real fine driver — your youth, your mental alertness, your depth perception."

3 Rules

Carter's three rules necessary for the operation of a car on today's highways are "common courtesy, attitude and good car care."

"Show common courtesy. Yield here and there. The bulk of accidents — over 75 per cent — are caused by failure to yield right of way.

"Have a good attitude about your driving. Each and everyone of you utilize the vehicle offensively—not defensively. Don't become a victim of someone else's error.

"You should always maintain good car care. Keep it in a condition where you can drive it well, steer it well and stop it well. How well your vehicle serves you depends on how well you use it."

'Human Element'

Everything is in the driver's favor during the Indianapolis 500, Carter explained, except "the human element." Despite all the safety precautions, they still encounter the drivers' error.

This was shown in 1964 when one driver erred, costing his and another's life. According to Carter, all drivers are cautioned of the many factors that affect the handling of their auto such as low pressures and wind currents caused by the number of autos.

The driver who had the mishap in the 1964 races had come to the speedway with a minimum amount of experience. However, he proved highly capable in the qualifying tests, Carter explained.

As he raced around the tracks in 8th place, his car spun and hit the inside rail, rupturing the gas tank. The car burst into flames and continued to careen into the path of other cars. Six autos piled up.

Pleas

The human element came out in this instance. "We apparently did not reach this individual and he did not understand the hazards involved."

The 25-year veteran of racing departed Theatre 6 with a plea for Indianhead soldiers to avoid situations inviting accidents — hurried trips of driving without sleep, tailgating other cars, laying objects on the deck behind the back seat and driving with a chip on the shoulder.

Engineers Get New Role For Exercise

Unlike the Cherokee Trail maneuver last year, the 2nd Engineer Battalion representatives this year will befriend the civilian public as a native force rather than playing the role of the unpredictable guerrilla band.

Their prime goal during the upcoming large - scale maneuver will be improving several civilian public areas.

According to Capt. Frank D. Holly, commander of Company E that is involved in total during Exercise Cherokee Trail "chiefly we will utilize our engineer capabilities with no specific mission. Mainly it's civic action—doing a lot of work as it is needed by the surrounding civilian communities."

The engineer's part in the exercise is designed to enhance the position of the friendly Pineland Force that will be attempting to befriend the public in their quest to find the guerrilla force.

Engineer officials anticipate working on various roads and schools and other public buildings in the area.

Their first job will be to improve the airfield at Candor, N. C. where the 1st Brigade headquarters will be located.

Supporting elements will be under the control of the engineers to more effectively do their job.

"Of course we aren't overlooking our secondary mission during this maneuver," Capt. Holly said. "That is assisting in infantry operations — to include patrolling and counter-guerrilla tactics."

1st Brigade Sneaks By 197th, 5-4; Artillery Gives Way to TSB, 5-3

By LANNY THOMAS

Lopsided victories and the 1st Brigade plowing ahead of the 2nd Infantry Division baseball teams molded the sports picture last week as league play crept deeper into the summer months.

The brigade nine, now matching the 428th Infantry with a total of seven wins—but four to three losses—escaped a tangle Wednesday night with the 197th Infantry with a 5-4 mark for their winning column.

But in games played last week, the Brigade lowered the boom on Support Command and surged ahead with a 17-8 victory. On Thursday of last week, both 1st and 3rd Brigade met face to face on Bennett Field and 1st Brigade took a 4-2 win. In their last encounter with Division Artillery, 1st Brigade just made it with a 11-10 game.

In other action this week, TSB dropped DivArty, 5-3, despite a threat by the losers in the bottom of the ninth inning. The two powers were deadlocked 1-1 going into the eighth inning when TSB racked up four runs.

DivArty followed with a similar surge, but not quite enough. With the bottom of the eighth tightening up, Reuben Cavaco and Jim Russin singled. When Keith Grauvogl got hit by the pitcher the stage was set for a rally with bases loaded.

Leo Cooper stepped up to bat and knocked out a single for two runs.

As new hopes popped up in the bottom of the ninth, two of the artillerymen clicked with singles and walked on 1st and 3rd bases for the hit to drive them in. But it never came — TSB brought in their relief pitcher who retired the next two men at bat.

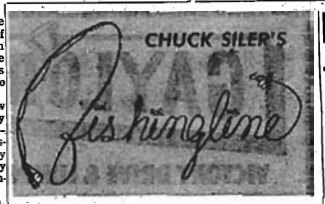
The 197th baseballers appeared to have the 1st Brigade cornered Wednesday night as they took an early start, turning in three runs in the first stanza and one in the top of the fourth. All runs came before the Brigade started.

Gus Banks got the Brigade nine in action in the bottom of the fourth when he stepped up and slammed a two-base hit, driving in two runners and then stealing two bases himself.

Two more runs came Brigade's way in the bottom of the fifth as Jessie Owns singled. With men on first and third, John Robinson got in the game and hit a fly to centerfield that upped the score by two.

Harvey Cooper and Elifa Ostalaza singled, for Brigade as the restless baseballers went into the bottom of the ninth inning. The winning run came when Wilson Navarro, Brigade's right fielder, rapped a line drive to the shortstop, enabling Ostalaza to score.

The 428th (7-3) and 1st Brigade (7-4) now lead the loop in the league with 197th (5-5) and CTC (5-4) in contention. Other standings are: DivArty (4-5), Support Command (3-6) and 3rd Brigade (4-7).



WATTS BAR, TENN. — Watts Bar Lake, some 250 miles from Fort Benning in East Tennessee, just north of the Civil War battleground of Chickamauga on U.S. Route 27, is my choice of vast lakes in this country.

Unlike most of the TVA chain, Watts Bar is a tail water lake that remains at a constant water level throughout the year. Consequently, heavy foliage overhangs the water ledge.

Vacationers from the post would do well to plan to stop at this fisherman's paradise on routes north, both from the standpoint of safety and recreation. I think most would find a few hours on the lake worthwhile.

Motel accommodations are available at reasonable rates. While fishing this week with my brother, I learned of a new plug that is a real fish killer on Watts Bar. The plug is commercially known as the "gay blade."

It's so simple that on inspection I wouldn't seriously consider it until it proved its worth. The "gay blade" is put out by Pleuger and was first put on sale in Ohio before proving their fish getting ability in Tennessee.

In Watts Bar one of these plugs produced seven bass in an hour while other plugs fished along side took only three. Other species such as crappie and stripes also took the plug rapidly.

I intend to try one in Georgia.

After fishing Watts Bar, I moved on up to Ohio. I arrived in Ohio at the same time an arctic spawned cold snap dropped temperatures into the fifties.

Normally poor fishing has been my experience with only crappie and some fish providing any throw.

The Army Corps of Engineers is working on what should prove to be good news for fishermen with a new flood control project.

The first phase of the plan involves the Ohio River.

While the principal reason for the Army Engineers' effort is navigation and flood control, the byproduct is recreational water which will be a good experience.

During my fishing tour in Ohio I saw thousands of people shoulder to shoulder at various fishing lakes. All were trying to escape the automated atmosphere of the city.

Time and again I was reminded by local sportsman, all tired of facing the wind and crowded waters. "You don't know how lucky you are to be in Georgia."

At present most of the fishing thrills to be found in Ohio — especially for the youngsters is in the so-called "pay lakes."

In recent years operators have been netting fish out of the great lakes and stocking the private lakes. Most of them cost $1.50 a day with an extra charge for each fish in some of the better stocked lakes.

The chief yield of the pay lakes is catfish and brim or perch.

MP Bowling Team Wins League Prize

Support Command's Winter Bowling League wound up the season recently with the presentation of trophies by Support Command commander, Lt. Col. Dean Van Lydegraf.

Accepting the number one spot for the 2nd Military Police company was Frank E. Hern, Jr., Provost Marshal. Taking the number two trophy for the season was the 2nd Administration Company. The third place winner was the 2nd Medical Battalion.

Individual trophies went to: Henry Daniels, 2nd MP Company, high average with a 183; Lance Goddard, Headquarters Company, high game scratch with a 257; Lawrence Schwartz, 2nd Medical Battalion, high game with handicap with a 268; Richard Cavanaugh, 2nd MP Company with a 652; and Joe Sotack, Headquarters Company, high series with handicap taking a 672.

The most improved bowler of the season, Steve Schulz, 2nd Medical Battalion, received a gold belt buckle presented by the American Bowling Congress (ABC). Schulz ended the league with a 155, an 18 pin advance.

In addition to team and individual trophies for the top three spots, members of the MP team received patches from the ABC to wear in next years bowling competition.

2ND DIVISION marksman, PSgt. Fred Snipes, was called upon for a friendly chat last week by the division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, during the All Army Rifle and Pistol Championships on McAndrew Range. Snipes, who fired with the Third Army team, turned in three winning scores to make himself a standout among 2nd Division marksmen. He is assigned to the Marksmanship Detachment.

11th AIR ASSAULT DIVISION

FORT BENNING, GA. FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1965 Page 25

Air Assault Earns Place In Army

EM to Get New MOS's, DA Form 20

A new enlisted qualification record for all division enlisted men is now being implimented by 11th Air Assault Record Management Section.

The new form combines the information now contained in the old form DA Form 20 and DA Form 24.

A new regulation, AR 600-200 has been written to cover the new form. This regulation combines the contents of 26 previous regulations, all of which are now used with personnel sections.

Provides Uniformity

The new DA Form 20 will maintain on a continuing basis all records of individuals with prior Army service who enlist or reenlist with a break in service.

In effect what this means is that the new enlisted man's record will stay with the man while he is on active duty. When the enlisted man is released from active duty and is required to fulfill a reserve obligation this same record will go with him to his reserve componet.

According to CWO Nelson J. Tetrault, chief of records unit, the new form will contain several pieces of information on the man which is not contained on the old Form 20. For example a continuing record of court martial conviction will be kept on the new form. Another feature will be that each enlisted man will now sign his individual record.

Continuing Record

The implimentation of this new form is geared with the eventual use of mechanization within all Army records management. It provides the Army with a uniformity in records maintenence, both active and reserve.

The new Form 20 goes hand in hand with the introduction of the new Army MOS structure which goes into effect July 1, 1965.

Your new MOS (Military Occupational Speciality) will provide a wealth of information about you and your job. The new system will combine two numbers, a letter, another number and a final letter. It works like FUTURE CAVALRYMEN? . . . These youngsters, Mike and Casey Shelton, may not be quite ready for active duty but they give toothless smiles of approval as they take a close look at 17th Cavalry equipment. For the complete story of the Cav's visit to Fort Knox, Ky., please see page 26.

At Fort Stewart Reservation

Brigade Troops Embark On 'Hawk Dart' Exercise

Sky Soldiers of the 1st Brigade will begin leaving today for Fort Stewart, Ga. and Exercise Hawk Dart.

The free-play brigade sized exercise will cover the majority of the rugged Fort Stewart Reservation and will run through June 26th.

An advance party will depart in convoy today followed by the 1st Brigade Headquarters and the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry who will be moved tomorrow and Sunday by CV-2 Caribou to Camp Oliver.

The 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry are scheduled to make their debut into the free - play problem Monday with an airborne assault launched from Warner Robbins Air Force Base.

The week-long training exercise will be unhampered by many restrictions common to field operations. It will be a sort of climax to the heavy tactical training which has been conducted by the 1st Brigade units during the current training cycle.

Attached to the 1st Brigade will be support elements of the 127th Engineer Batalion; 4th Battalion, 81st Artillery; 7th Cavalry, 511th Signal and B-3, a combined logistical support team.

Aircraft support will come from units of the 11th Aviation Group with helicopters from the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion; Company S, 226th Aerial Surveillance and Escort Battalion and Battery A, 377th Artillery.

Providing aggressors for the maneuver will be Company B, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry and Company B, 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry. The aggressors will be supported by elements of the 277th Assault Helicopter Battalion, 228th Support Helicopter Battalion and the 6th Battalion,

General Salutes

To All Sky Soldiers: Recognition came to all of us with the announcement by the Secretary of Defense that we are to become a permanent Division of the Army. This recognition is a direct outcome of your magnificent efforts ever since our activation.

Your imagination, intelligence, enthusiasm and dedicated hard work produced a unit which demanded that it be made a part of our future Army. You are true military pioneers. I salute you and say from the heart, WELL DONE!

New Division to Inherite 1st Cavalry's Tradition

BY JIM GRAHAM
Editor
Sky Soldier News

The Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Division have earned themselves a place as a permanent Army Division.

Secretary of the Defense McNamara's long awaited announcement on the merger of the 11th Air Assault and the 2nd Infantry Division is seen by most Sky Soldiers as the successful culmination of nearly three arduous years of blood, sweat and tears' preparation.

For several months prior to the announcement it appeared that a favorite pastime of most Army personnel and local news media was to speculate on the future of the division.

Rumors ranged from total failure and disbandment of the division and the air assault concept to the addition of the 11th as the seventeenth division in the Army's structure.

Secretary McNamara in his nationally broadcasted news conference said that "the initiative and imagination of the officers who pioneered this concept are especially to be commended."

The Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, praised all of the division's men as "true military pioneers."

As a test division the 11th Air Assault has steadily progressed from its conception, when it inherited the proud traditions of the 11th Airborne Division, through its three years of preparation until today when it is about to acquire the proud and colorful traditions of the 1st Cavalry Division.

The 'First Team' is one of the first Cavalry units established in the Army. Its oldest regiment, the Fifth, dates back to the days of America's early pioneers and was at one time commanded by then Lt. Col. Robert E. Lee who resigned his commission at the opening of the Civil War.

In most recent history the 'First Team' has proudly held the front line in Korea.

Now after nearly 22 years away from home the colorful and proud division returns to Fort Benning and again in the tradition of the 'First Team' becomes the first air mobile division in the Army's structure, lending its proud and colorful Cavalry past to the newest of concepts in the modern Army, the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile).

Memorial Services Held To Honor Crash Victims

Memorial services were held Thursday for the 18 men who were killed in Tuesdays tragic helicopter accident.

A special memorial service was conducted for the members of the 11th Aviation Group at 1:00 p.m. in the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Chap. (Maj.) Dwight C. Jarvis and Chap. (Capt.) Charles R. Gibbs conducted the solemn ceremony held in honor of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion pilots and crewmen who perished in the crash.

A Catholic Mass was said by Chap. (Capt.) Michael K. Rogers for all members of that faith from the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry.

Following the Mass a Protestant Memorial Service was conducted for the 38th Infantrymen by Chap. (Maj.) Weldon F. Wright.

The Division Comm[illegible]

O. Kinnard returned to the division from Pennsylvania for the memorial services.

A final list of those who perished has been confirmed and all next of kin have been notified. Those who were victimes of the training flight accident are: Lt. Donald E. Spencer, CWO Dewey C. Little, WO Ronald E. Medlin, WO James L. Mersman, Sp5 Charles A. Rusk and PFC Charles R. Kaiser all of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion.

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantrymen who were victims of the accident are: Pvt. John W. Harris, Sgt. Constancio Nacua, Sgt. Charles E. Lewis, PFC Ralph A. Cooper, Sp4 Eugene J. Villa, PFC Terrance P. Klein, PFC James E. Cullen, PFC Dennis J. Disselhorst, PFC Homer Dawson, PFC Daniel O. Hil[illegible] PFC William E. Switzer and PFC Joseph B. Garcia.

DOING HIS PART . . . Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, presents his check to AER and a savings bond allotment form to Maj. Zachary Whaley, division headquarters company commander. The general's share is added to the $4,114 collected to date by AER and the 80.5 per cent participation reached in the Star Spangled Saving Drive.

Rak Is Selected 11th Top Soldier

Sp4 Thomas R. Jones of the 1st Air Assault Brigade's Rakkasan Company C was named the number one soldier in the 11th Air Assault Division after romping all over other candidates from other major units to be named 11th Soldier of the Month.

On leave at the time of the announcement last Tuesday, Jones has made Soldier of the Month in his company, the 187th Airborne Infantry, the 1st Air Assault Brigade, and finally the Division last Tuesday.

A sharp soldier with a knack for the Infantry, Jones first came to attention two months ago after he had made Colonel's Orderly thirteen times in a row as a result, was excused from the duty roster.

A radio-telephone operator in Company C, Jones has won the 187th Battalion title three times since being assigned, and has copped the company title five times.

New MOS

this; the first number in your new MOS will designate the occupational area. The second number corresponds to the career group. The third digit will be a letter which will be the MOS speciality identification. The fourth number will be the individual skill level. The final digit will be a letter which will show any special qualifiation, for example, parachutist (P), Special Forces (S), Instructor (H) and Linguists (L).

So now, if you are, for example, an airborne qualified Combat Engineer Squad Leader your new MOS will look like this come July: 12B4P.

The Department of the Army has established a graduated time schedule for the implimentation of the new Form 20. At this time the division has completed 100 per cent of all E-7 E-8 and E-9 records and has forwarded them to DA for review. The new records for all division enlisted men in all grades will be completed by Oct. 31, 1965.

Flare Illumination Tests Conducted at Ft. Stewart

Flare illumination as an aid to aerial rocket firing at night was tested during May by Battery C, 377th Artillery.

The project was instigated by Maj. William F. Koehler commanding officer of Battery C who had previous experience dropping illuminating flares out of helicopters in Viet Nam.

The flare used during this test was the Mark VI, a parachute flare which may be pre-set to freefall 300 to 12,000 feet prior to igniting. Once ignited it falls at the rate of 500 feet per minute with a burning time of three minutes. The Mark VI produces one million candlepower.

Preliminary testing was accomplished on both moonless and moonlit nights with the rocket ships simulating the firing runs. Experimentation showed the most desirable altitude for the flare drop to be 2100 feet actual with 500 feet of freefall.

Several Runs

Considering 1500 feet of burning time, this allowed the flare to burn out 100 feet above the terrain. The last 600 feet of flare drop were found to provide the best illumination for rocket runs.

Experimentation also showed that a rocket ship could make several firing runs on a target utilizing the long burning time of this flare.

Another variation successfully tried was to utilize the helicopter dropping the flare in the attack on the target illuminated by this flare. The pilots on several occasions had to resort to the use of aircraft instruments for reference due to the blinding effects of the flare.

Former '500' Champ Will Speak on Safety

Former Indianapolis 500 driver, Mr. Duane Carter, will present a program on Highway Safety to members of the 11th Air Assault Division.

The talk will feature a color motion picture, an illustrated demonstration of safe driving principles, and a discussion on motor vehicle accident prevention. The program is of particular importance to personnel who operate privately owned vehicles.

The program will be held for the 10th Air Transport Brigade and the 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Bn. at Theater 1 on June 15 at 9:00 a.m. At 3:00 p.m. the 3rd Brigade, Support Command, 127th Engineer Bn., 511th Signal Bn., Headquarters Company, 11th MI Detachment and the 11th MP Company may attend at Theater 11.

June 17 at 9:00 a.m. personnel from Division Artillery and the Aviation Group are invited to attend.

The final program will be given at 3:00 p.m. in Theater 11 for the 1st Brigade, 2nd Brigade, 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry and 11th Admin Company.

Mr. Carter's visit is sponsored by the Champion Spark Plug Company and is being coordinated by the Safety Director, United States Army Infantry Center.

Group CO Attends Course

Col. George S. Beatty Jr., 11th Aviation Group Commanding officer, will depart for California on June 13. The nature of this trip will be to attend a one week Aviation Safety Course at the University of Southern California. The course should prove interesting.

17th Cav Demonstrates Punch at Armor Center

More than 2,700 spectators, watched with Deputy Secretary of Defense Cyrus R. Vance Friday, June 11th as the Army's armor weapons systems went through their paces at Ft. Knox, Ky. Highlighting the afternoon and providing the major punch for the demonstration was the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry.

Commanded by Lt. Col. John B. Stockton, the unit provided more than 65 aircraft for the 2-hour show and the afternoon was divided into two phases. Phase I was a demonstration and Phase II was a tactical sequence.

In Phase I the various types of weapons systems used by the squadron were demonstrated. Also shown was the capability for transporting both men and vehicles by a CH-47 Chinook, quick delivery of supplies to forward area units by LOLEX (low level extraction) techniques and a demonstration of rappelling by eight Sky Soldiers. Later, a portable, air-mobile re-fueling system was flown in, set up, and used to re-fuel a helicopter.

During the tactical phase, the Cavalry squadron supported an armor attack by personnel of the Armor Center. This support included aerial lift of squads to block aggressor attacks, aerial fire support to soften up an objective, using both machine-gun and rocket carrying helicopters and the aerial reconnaissance and surveillance by light observation helicopters.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard flew in from Ft. Benning to observe the demonstration.

The next day saw the Cavalry Sky Soldiers setting up a mass static display at Brooke Field, adjacent to the Headquarters of the U. S. Armor Center at Ft. Knox.

More than 65 aircraft, 120 vehicles and 750 enlisted personnel and officers lined up for the local military and civilian public to see.

Among the spectators to view the display were the members of the 1966 class of cadets from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, 300 members of the Armor Association, 18 members of the Military Affairs Committee from Louisville, Ky. and more than 400 local citizens.

The spectators were taken on a four - hour tour of the squadron elements and were allowed to ask questions about the unique air cavalry functions.

Maj. Gen. Andrew J. Boyle commanding general of Ft. Knox was personally escorted through the static display by Lt. Col. Stockton.

For June Coffee

Aviation Group Ladies Meet At Anzio Room

The monthly coffee of the ladies of the 11th Aviation Company (General Support) was held June 3, 1965 at the home of Mrs. Richard L. Cox, Jr. Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Roby M. Mauk.

A Hawaiian theme was carried out. The centerpiece on the table was made of fresh fruit. The ladies were given pineapple shaped nametags.

Mrs. Snyder, aunt of Mrs. George D. Oxenreider, was a special guest and newcomers to the company, Mrs. John F. Moody and Mrs. Norbert W. Moczygemba, were introduced.

After the presentations, officers were elected for the fall bowling season. Mrs. Billy McRill was chosen president, Mrs. Thomas Spence, vice president, Mrs. Duane Bouza, secretary, Mrs. Howard Eubanks, treasurer, and Mrs. John Bond, Sgt-at-Arms.

By NCO Wives Club

Creative Arts Displayed At 'Crazy Hat' Luncheon

Can you make a crazy hat? Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy can and did. She took first prize at the 11th Air Assault Division NCO Wives Club Luncheon June 9th, at Victory Lodge. The members made hats ranging from space rockets to old fashioned "pots".

The hat show provided a humorous atmosphere for the guests, Mrs. Donald Hoag and Mrs. W. Adams of Harlington, Tex.

The hostess, Mrs. Joe Barron and Mrs. Crede Adams welcomed the members to the luncheon. The tables were set with summer flowers.

The Ways and Means chairman Mrs. Joseph Jarosz had an attractive display of "Salute to Sooking" cook books, which the club members are offering to finance their welfare plans.

The cookbooks are recipes from military wives from around the world and can be obtained only from club members. Recipes from Mrs. Wm. Batholome Mrs. Wm. Craig and Mrs. Crede Adams all club members, are printed in the book.

The next meeting will be a membership coffee, June 28th at 10:00 a.m.

Four 711th Wives Attend Final Fete

Four wives of the 711th Maintenance Battalion attended their last monthly coffee at Fort Benning on June 8th.

Mrs. Charles Yoder, Mrs. Joseph Overstreet, Mrs. Daryl Novak, and Mrs. Alfred Tolson, the depating wives, were presented lovely pink carnation corsages by the two co-hostesses, Mrs. David Stallings and Mrs. Darryl Novak.

A water sprinkler filled with summer flowers was used as the centerpiece for the refreshment table. This attractive "warm weather" theme was further carried out in the name tags and cool, delicious refreshments.

17th Calvary Fete Bids Troop B's First Lady Adieu

Farewell coffee for Mrs. Pat Stoverink was given by the ladies of Troop B, 17th Cavalry at the home of Mrs. Sue Oliver with Mrs. Rose Meeker and Mrs. Oliver as hostesses.

Mrs. Stoverink, wife of the troop commander was presented a charm bracelet by Mrs. Linda Andros on behalf of the ladies of the troop.

Five new members were welcomed to the troop. They are Mrs. Helen Rose, Mrs. Ann Arnold, Mrs. Sue Burge, Mrs. Anna Lane and Mrs. Peggy Woodward.

Guests present at the coffee were Mrs. Maggie Stockton, wife of the squadron commander and Maj. Harry Treude, squadron chaplain.

June Coffee Has Hawaiian Theme

Ladies of the Aviation Group Headquarters held their monthly coffee Tuesday, June 8, in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers Mess.

511th Infantry Wives Meet At Officer's Club

The balcony of the Main Officer's Club was the scene of the monthly coffee for the ladies of the 1st Battalion 511th Infantry on May 28.

Hostesses for the coffee were Glenelle Halpin and Kathy McMicken. They pinned daisy nametags on each arrival.

The hostesses served tea, coffee, finger sandwiches and assorted rolls from a beautifully decorated table. The centerpiece was an arrangement of various summer flowers in pink and lavender hues.

Ginny Carroll was the lucky recipient of the centerpiece after a raffle with the numbered nametags.

The battalion commander's wife, Mrs. James Nix, conducted a short business meetings. Volunteers for the Thrift Shop and Brigade Chapel Nursery signed up for the month of June.

Peggy Batts and Nancy Bachman were introduced and welcomed as new members of the group. Ginny Carroll was welcomed back after an absence of several months. Her husband has returned to the 511th after attending Command Staff College.

188th Infantry Chaplain Pulls KP in Mess Hall

Last Saturday members of Company D, 188th Infantry, were surprised to see their Chaplain working as a K.P. in their mess hall.

Chap. (Capt.) Ralph S. Spear, the battalion chaplain was pulling K.P. for PFC Robert E. Rutledge of Company D, one of the winners of the recent battalion's Bible contest. Chap. Spear, the sponsor of the contest, offered to pull K.P. for the winner of the second place.

Other winners were; PFC Robert Sasser of Headquarters Company, who received a three day pass as the winner of the first prize and PFC James A. Ware, also of Headquarters Company who received ten dollars cash as the third prize.

The contest consisted of 80 questions on general knowledge about the Bible and the Chaplain's program and was designed, according to Chap. Spear, to stimulate more interest in the Chaplain's program.

Chap. Spear seemed to be enjoying his duty, moving between the tables to refill empty cups, serving in the food line, cleaning silverware and trays, and in general making himself a very useful K.P.

2nd Brigaders Honored For Meritorious Service

A brief ceremony conducted at the 2nd Air Assault Brigade, saw two men rewarded for their outstanding service rendered to the 2nd Brigade as well as the 11th Air Assault Division.

The first man, MSgt. Ernest Cottrill, who is retiring after 20 years of dedicated service to his country, received an Army Commendation Medal plus a Certificate of Achievement from the 2nd Brigade and the 11th Air Assault Division. Present with MSgt. Cottrill was his wife, Gertrude, and his mother, Jennie Tonge.

MSgt. Cottrill was the Chief Supply NCO in the Brigade S-4 Section. He entered the Army on April 20, 1945, and received basic training at Fort Knox, Ky. His last duty station was the U. S. Army Carribean Signal Agency at Fort Allen, P. R.

The second man, Spc4 Ronald M. Felton, who received his discharge after three years of service, was honored with a Certificate of Achievement. Felton performed the duties of 2nd Brigade Headquarters and Headquarters Company Clerk in such a manner that he was deserving of this honor bestowed on him. Present with Felton was his wife, Judy.

Felton entered the Army on August 28, 1962 and received basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga. His last duty assignment was the AG Section, 1st Cavalry Division, Camp Howze, Korea.

Felton plans to continue his education at Atlantic Christian College, in Wilson, N.C.

Battalion SOM

Spc4 Apolonio Rodriguez, a member of Battery A, 3rd Battalion, 377th Artillery was recently chosen the Battalion Soldier of the Month for May. He was chosen on the basis of appearance, job knowledge, military subjects, current events, and the history and function of the 11th Air Assault Division. The selection board consisted of senior non-commissioned officers in the battalion.

Task Force Conducts Minimum Light Landings

Special To Sky Soldier News

Special night flying training, which has been conducted the past month by aircrews of the 229th Task Force in the Dominican Republic, is expected to end landings as the highlight of all air training.

As part of the Inter-American peace force, the 229th has taken advantage of every available moment to conduct air training when not involved in peace force operations, and the training has been highly beneficial to the pilots. For some weeks now, night instrument flying and new aerial techniques have been interjected into normal training.

There have been numerous operations involving the minimum-light landings, flying dispersed on several different routes making a rendezvous just prior to arrival at the landing zone, and exact night navigation using only swamps, cleared areas, etc., as check points since there are few cities and no railroads available to be used as check points.

Probably the best training occurred during the minimum-light operations, which offer the greatest degree of safety for both the aircrews and soldiers being transported during a tactical situation, as it is impossible to detect the exact location or altitude of the unlighted helicopter from the ground.

During this operation, pilots of the troop - carrying helicopters extinguish all lights at a specific reference point, and then travel on a definite flight path in total darkness to their objective.

Just prior to their arrival at the landing zone, pathfinders on the ground illuminate four flashlights which are spread out in a "V" fashion and aimed in the direction of the approaching aircraft, giving the pilots two minutes to land their aircraft.

This operation requires the utmost in precision timing, and if for any reason, an unsafe operation exists on the ground, the flashlights are turned out and the landing is aborted.

Particularly good for bringing in recon patrols, combat patrols or an anti-guerrilla strike force behind enemy lines, the result of this system is a minimum exposure time to which the troops and air-crews are likely to be under fire.

Its used for picking up soldiers as well as landing them, and again affords maximum safety, as the troops waiting to be picked are in total darkness except for the few moments the flashlights are lighted to bring the choppers in and out.

During normal landings at night, pilots use a glide slope indicator to keep them aware of the aircraft's position in relation to the ground, so during the first few minimum - light landings, they made their approach very cautiously in step - ladder fashion until reaching the point of contact.

After a few of these landings the pilots were able to approach directly to the landing point on the ground, discharge or pick up their passengers very rapidly and leave the area, thus being exposed for a minimum period of time.

Tremendous teamwork between the pathfinders and pilots was exhibited constantly throughout these operations, enabling both to gain beneficial experience while enjoying a great mutual respect.

Lt. Col. Earl K. Buchan, commander of the 229th, who has taken a particular interest in these minimum light landings, especially stressed the added safety that this system provides for the Infantry personnel.

The minimum - light landing system was devised and pioneered by the Army Special Warfare Center at Fort Bragg, N. C., and holds great promise for tactical operations at night.

Following the ATTs this week, the pilots will begin low level navigational link-up training, starting out just prior to darkness, and completing their landings and dispersal problems after dark.

At the end of June, this training cycle will begin all over again for the benefit of newly arrived replacement pilots, and according to Col. Buchan, this is one of the most comprehensive air-training programs in effect, providing invaluable flying experience.

Former Artillerymen Earn Commendations

Capt. Roy N. Moore (Ret.), formerly of the 81st Artillery was honored today at a Battalion Review with the presentation of the Army Commendation Medal by Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, the 11th Air Assault Division Commander.

Capt. Moore, who was critically injured in a helicopter crash during Air Assault II and subsequently retired from the service, was cited for his outstanding contributions to the 81st Artillery as Headquarters Battery Commander from May 1, 1964 to November 1964.

Capt. Moore and his family plan to make their home in Columbus, and his plans call for furthering his education toward a Masters' Degree in Business Administration.

In a like ceremony on May 25, in Memphis, Tenn., Maj. James A. Flanagan (Ret) who was also critically injured wth Capt. Moore, was presented the Army Commendation Medal for his work in development of the Air Assault Artillery concept.

Maj. Flanagan is currently a patient at Kennedy Veteran's Hospital, Memphis.

RETURNS FOR HONORS . . . Retired Capt. Roy N. Moore stands with Gen. Kinnard and Lt. Col. Francis J. Bush, commander of the 81st Artillery, during a recent ceremony in his honor. The captain was seriously injured in an Air Assault II accident and returned to his former unit to receive the honors he had earned.

Aviation Group XO Cops Springfield Glider Trophy

Lt. Col. Robert F. Litle recently returned drom the Mid-Atlantic Soaring Championship held in Cumberland, Md. bringing with him the Kelly Springfield Trophy, symbol of second place.

The events were broken down into three days of competition with the daily winner receiving 1000 points.

The first event found Col. Litle trying to outdue 23 other sailplanes in the Free Distance event. Col. Litle placed second in this event falling six miles short of the winner. He soared 161 miles which took him to Wilmington, Del.

The second day found Col. Litle taking eighth place and he was forced to land on the second leg of the 140 Mile Triangle. The combination of his points put him in third place in the overall standings. The finale to this championship was a 65 mile round trip from Cumberland, Md. to Bedford, Penn. Col. Litle finished first in this event averaging 45 miles per hour for the trip. Litle's total point accumulation was 2550 points which put him in second place at the end of the competition.

Among Col. Litle's laurels in his Soaring career are the International Diamond C. Award for soaring accomplishment of which less than 300 have been presented world wide. May 8, 1965 found Col. Litle setting an unofficial Georgia State record by flying the 100 kilometer triangle in 1 hour and 19 minutes at a speed of 76 kilometers per hour and attaining an altitude of 6000 feet.

Col. Litle also plans to attend the National Soaring championship at Adrian, Michigan which begins on the 29th of June.

188th Changes Top NCO Jobs

Last week there were a number of changes among the top NCO spots in the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry.

1st Sgt. Nathan Hover became the acting battalion sergeant major when Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook moved to the job of 1st Brigade sergeant major.

Replacing Sgt. Hoover at the 188th Headquarters Company is 1st Sgt. John C. Allen, previously the battalion's training operation sergeant.

1st Sgt. Hoover is a highly decorated combat veteran of Korea who has served in the Army since 1945. He holds the Silver Star, Bronze Star, Army Commendation Medal and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

Some of the first sergeants assignments include Korean Service with the 7th Division, American troops in Trieste and as a skiing and mountain climbing instructor at the Mountain Cold Weather Training Command at Fort Greely, Alaska.

He is one of the first NCO's assigned to the newly reactivated 188th Infantry when it became a part of the 11th Air Assault Division.

May Was 'Tops' For Col. Mead

The month of May will long be remembered by Lt. Col. Chester R. Mead of the 11th Aviation Group.

Possibly the highpoint of the month was the promotion that raised him to his present grade.

With a long list of exciting events taking place in May it is difficult to place one in greater importance than another.

The month began with the birthday of his oldest son followed by the colonel's presentation of a paper he had prepared on "All Weather Aircraft Capability in the Forward Battle Area." The paper was presented to the American Helicopter Society in Washington, D. C.

As his personal joys mounted, along came the birthday of his two youngest children, the twins Katherine and Kristan.

To wrap-up a real top month the colonel and his wife, Dorothy, celebrated their 18th wedding anniversary.

127th Beavers Hold Platoon Competition

The 127th Engineer Battalion took to the field again on the 22nd of May for their annual platoon test competition.

This exercise tests the proficiency of platoon leaders, platoon sergeants, squad leaders and every man in every squad.

During this years tests, the platoons were required to build Timber Trestle bridges across a flowing stream, locate and destroy bridges at night, rappel into a wooded area to prepare a landing site for helicopters, destroy a road or airfield using demolitions, repair a road or airfield which had holes blown in it, lay mines from helicopters, and block a road by blowing down trees across it.

All of these tasks had to be accomplished in areas where live guerrillas (aggressors) were active, and tear gas bombs were used frequently.

The third Platoon of Company A, (Airborne) led by Lt. Thomas D. Easter and SFC Russell E. Hammond was judged "Best by Test".

Battery Recalls Past As CO Assumes Command

June 2nd marked another important event for Charlie Battery Little John Rocketeers of the 2d Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery.

In changing of command ceremonies conducted that morning by the Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Chares F. Farber, Capt. Gilbert L. Muchmore was presented with the battery guidon.

Commanded by Capt. Loyal G. Hightower Jr. for the past thirteen months, Battery C made a very impressionable name for itself. First came a CMMI in which the unit scored a 95 and received a Third Army Certificate of Proficiency.

Following the CMMI came on-post live firing exercises. The battery made a very impressing name for itself by scoring high in both accurancy and speed.

An overall rating of SUPERIOR was attained on the Annual General Inspection which was given in February. It is evident that this same high standard of proficiency has been maintained since the IG, for the unit has been selected as 2d Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery Honor Battery of the month for the months January through April.

Like all the 11th Air Assault Division units, Battery C went to the Carolinas during AIR ASSAULT II maneuvers were many demonstrations were exhibited for top Division and Defense Department officials. Battery C can proudly say that it participated in nearly all of these demonstrations with recognized approval from all who observed.

While working in the Carolinas with the Little John equipment, new ideas were brought to light on how to modify the equipment to increase the speed of fire missions. The result upon return to Fort Benning was the construction of a jeep-mounted, compressor - operated wind measuring set. Already it has appeared in numerous demonstrations on post, has appeared in the ARTILLERY TRENDS magazine, and is being constructed for all the launcher sections within the battalion.

One new idea seemed to spark another in this highly spirited unit. This was proven following the development of the new windset system when the Battery Fire Direction Center personnel, led by 1st Lt. Kenneth P. McDonald Jr. and SSgt. Jerry P. Griffin, designed and constructed an FDC trailer. The new trailer, which houses radio remotes, situation maps, a computer's table, and an electronic computer, saves valuable time by setting up a fully operational FDC in just a matter of a few minutes.

According to 1st Sgt. Leroy Smith, "The battery will feel the loss of Capt. Hightower, but under the capable command of Capt. Muchmore will certainly continue to be the best at everything it undertakes."

Company Colors Passed at 511th 'Charlie Tigers'

The early morning hours of June 9, 1965 brought a new commander to the Charlie Company "Tigers", of the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry.

At a reveille change of command, Capt. Manley J. Morrison, the new "Charlie Boss", accepted the guidon from the outgoing Charlie Company Commander, Capt. Warren T. Lillie.

For Capt. Lillie, the ceremony marked the end of more than 14 months as Charlie Company Commander. Under his direction, the troops of Company C established quite a reputation for themselves as field and garrison soldiers.

Tactical exercises found them at the front of the attack, while in garrison their trademark was spit-polish and shine.

The past 14 months brought many awards to Charlie Company. Probably their most prized is the trophy given them for winning the 1964 Rifle Company ATT competition in the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry.

In the area of maintenance, their outstanding performance on the 3rd Army CMMRI brought them the 3rd Army Maintenance Proficiency Certificate. In the field of Savings, their achievement was recognized by Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles on June 1, 1965 when he awarded Company C the 3rd Army Commander's Savings Bond Award and the 3rd Army Gold citation for the outstanding support given the Army Savings Program by the men of Company C.

INFANTRYMAN HITS BAYONET COURSE
In Preparation for Division EIB Testing

Bayonet Assault Course Prepares 188th for EIB

Last Wednesday the 188th Infantry went through the Ranger Bayonet Assault course thus successfully completing the last requirement for the coming Division Expert Infantryman Badge tests.

According to Lt. Robert E. Weary, the officer in charge of the course, almost 60 per cent of the tested personnel qualified on the difficult course. Those who passed will now be able to take the EIB tests that will be administered by Division to the 188th on the seventh, eighth and ninth of July.

The course was run on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday under the supervision of battalion NCOs who had either the Expert Infantry or the Combat Infantry Badge.

Before testing the troops were given a brief orientation on the course and the grading system by Lt. Weary, the OIC, and a demonstration of bayonet movements by SSgt. Edmund W. Boyd of Charlie Company.

The highest score in the battalion was that of SSgt. Ronald Scott who made an almost perfect score of 190 points out of a possible 200. SSgt. Scott, a squad leader in Company A, is airborne and Ranger qualified and is the bayonet instructor in his company.

Along with their companies many officers and staff personnel went through the course in order to qualify for the EIB tests.

Division Chinook Participates In Paris Air Show

A CH-47 Chinook helicopter from the Provisional Helicopter Company has been engaged in a demonstration tour throughout Europe.

The aircraft, piloted by Captains Jon Telfer and Joe Breedlove, was primarily selected as an American representative to the Paris Air Show and is now engaged in a series of flight demonstrations throughout Europe.

The Provisional Helicopter Company crewmen who are manning the Chinook are Sp6 James R. Mooney and Sp5 James L. Shirley.

The aircraft arrived at Bremerhaven, Germany after being transported by ship. It first departed for Genemunden, Netherlands for a show before various civilian and military observers. From there the aircraft proceeded to Manston, England and later on to Odilan, England.

After completing the mission in England, the aircraft departed for Brussels, Belgium and then on to Cologne-Boon, Germany to begin a series of flying and static shows prior to its participation in the recent Paris Air Show.

Two Promoted

This week two men of the 2nd Platoon of Company C, 2d Battalion, 22d Infantry, were promoted to Specialist Fourth. The two men were Nathaniel Byrd and James C. Comer. These men were promoted on the merit of leadership, discipline record, and performance of their jobs.

By Chemical Section

Gas Attack Is Added To 2nd Brigade ATT

During the recent ATT's conducted by the 2nd Air Assault Brigade, the Chemical Section of the 2nd Brigade Headquarters has been called on to disperse Riot Control Gas on many occasions.

When this section, composed of Capt. Harlan Brady, SSgt. Benny Johnson, Sp5 Dennis Jackson, and PFC Ronald Austiff, learned of its commitments, they were backed "into a corner." The brigade wanted to use Chlorine Sustained Gas (CS), but Capt. Brady discovered their supply was all but exhausted.

Talcum Powder was then substituted for the CS until the section could replenish their supply. Soon their request was filled and the actual CS Gas was initiated.

SSgt. Johnson, Sp5 Jackson and PFC Austiff tackled the task of the handling and the securing of the Gas Dispersor to the UH-1D helicopter, and soon the "choppers" were on their way.

The 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry and the end Battalion, 38th Infantry were the recipients of this barrage and were forced to don their masks. Many missions were flown and each ensuing time, th dispersors became more and more effective.

Both the men who handled the gas and the soldiers on the ground who received the full force of the gas if they were too slow, learned to respect this riot control agency.

Sp5 Jackson, who handled the gas quite regularly looked like an outer spaceman whenever he filled the dispersor. With his rainsuit taped around him and tape placed wherever the gas might creep into, Jackson created quite an awesome image.

Cavalrymen Now 'Tote' Saddle-bags

Fourteen Sky Soldiers can now be seen walking around the Harmony Church area, with saddlebags slung over their shoulders.

In line with the squadrons policy of following their historical anscestry, the 3rd Squadron, 17th Cavalry's staff officers and troop commanders are now carrying hand - stitched, brown, saddle - bags, in lieu of dispatch cases.

The idea was first formulated by Lt. Col. John B. Stockton, commanding officer of the cavalry squadron. After conferring with his troop commanders and staff officers, a firm was contacted in Nashville, Tenn., to make the leather goods.

Sgt. Maj. Lawrence Kennedy picked up the finished products, a scant ten days after the order was placed.

While picking up the fourteen pairs of saddlebags, Cowboy Layne, well known Nashville citizen and race horse raiser, presented the sergeant major with two pairs of original saddle - bags, once carried by the 7th U. S. Cavalry.

228th Battalion's S-4 Officer Receives Gold Leaves of Major

MAJ. LEWENDOWSKI GETS NEW INSIGNIA
His Wife Pins on the Gold Major Leaves

The S4 Officer of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, Maj. William Lewandowski, received his Gold Oak Leaves from Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver, commanding officer, in an impressive ceremony in the commanders office. Mrs. Lewandowski was also on hond to aid in pinning on the new rank.

Maj. Lewandowski started his Army career in June of 1953 when he was drafted into the service. He underwent basic training and advanced individual training in Armor at Fort Knox, Ky. While in AIT, then Pvt. Lewandowski was awarded the Superior Tank Driver award for his driving proficiency and maintenance knowledge.

Upon completion of AIT he was made an acting corporal and remained a member of the cadre at the Armor Training Center until entering the Infantry Officers Training School at Fort Benning in January 1954.

In June 1954 Maj. Lewandowski was commissioned in the Ordnance Corps and was assigned to Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland for his Officers Basic Course.

He entered Army Aviation in September 1954 when he reported to Gary Air Force Base, San Marcus, Tex. to attend the Army Aviation Training program. He received his wings at Camp Rucker, Ala. in April 1955 and was assigned to aviation duty at Fort Sill, Okla.

Lewandowski took part in operation Sage Brush in Louisiana in the fall of 1955 and immediately after reported to Gary Air Force Base to undergo primary helicopter training from the Air Force and advanced training from the Army at Camp Rucker, Ala.

After completion of this course he returned to Fort Sill to his old Artillery unit. The battalion commander, said all officers in the battalion would be Artillerymen and would attend the Artillery Officers Training School which he completed in June 1956.

Once again Lewandowski was sent to Fort Rucker but this time to be an instructor instead of student. For two years Lt. Lewandowski instructed in the Rotary Wing Department covering the H-13, H-25, H-21, H-19, and H-34.

In November 1958 Lt. Lewandowski was officially transferred to the Artillery Corps and at the same time was transferred to a 280 mm Gun Battalion in Baumholder, Germany. In October 1959 Lt. Lewandowski was sent to the Aviation Department Headquarters at Heidelberg, Germany where he received his check ride in an L-23.

227th Holds Services For Former Aviators

Services were held over the weekend for two warrant officers that were killed in a helicopter crash in Vietnam. Both were members of Company A, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion before going to Viet Nam.

CWO Edward R. Piper belonged to Company A until August 19, 1964. He was reassigned on that date to the 62nd Aviation Company, Air Mobile Light, in Viet Nam. CWO Piper is survived by his Mother of Thornsby, Alabama.

CWO Myron M. "Sandy" Pfoutz joined Company A of the 227th on July 14, 1964 and was reassigned on April 9, 1964 to the 82nd Aviation Battalion just prior to his departure for Viet Nam. He is survived by his wife, Patricia, of New Cumberland, Penn.

The accident occurred at the Bien Hoa Airbase in Viet Nam.

Full military funerals with full honors were conducted for the two warrant officers. Members of Company A and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion, attended the funerals.

38th Batteries Are Practicing Direct Firing

This past week Batteries B and C, 5th Battalion 38th Artillery have been practicing direct fire of its 105mm Howitzers. They have completed their Battery Test and the annual Battalion Test.

Now with this direct firing capability training the batteries are ready to fulfill their mission of delivering indirect or direct fire with speed and accuracy.

This training, held at Bann Range is of particular interest in that the Artillery prides itself on the defense of its own guns. Many targets were taken under fire and first round hits were achieved.

All of the personnel practiced firing even though they normally would not have occasion to engage a target. With todays all around battlefield this training could be especially beneficial in position area defense.

Battery C Is Best During Inspection

For the second consecutive month the Honor Battery Award has gone to Battery C 3rd Battalion, 377th Artillery. The battery, commanded by Maj. William F. Koehler, again managed to edge out the competition in a series of inspections covering every facet of the unit from aircraft and motors to training, security, and administration.

Chapel Field Ceremony Will Honor 22 Retirees

When 22 officers and enlisted men retire on Fort Benning's Chapel Field June 29, the Army will say farewell to men whose combined service represents 478 years.

Heading the list of retirees are Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker, who retires after more than 29 years of service and Col. Kenneth E. Eckland, 25 years. Both officers will be decorated at the ceremony.

Chaplain Decker's career of 29 years of military duty date back to May 14, 1936, when he was post chaplain and welfare and recreation officer at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. He has served on battlefields in Europe and Korea and, during times of peace, in the U. S. and the Canal Zone in Panama.

Chaplain Decker came to Fort Benning as post chaplain in August, 1961. In addition to his responsibilities in connection with the religious program of the post, he has been active in the Ministerial Alliance, Citizens Military Council, Armed Forces YMCA, USO and Rotary Club of Columbus, Ga., He was also organizer and president of the Baker High School Band Auxiliary. The chaplain was an active participant in professional and welfare organizations on the post.

Chaplain and Mrs. Decker will make their home in Gainesville, Fla., where he will serve as pastor of a parish church.

Col. Eckland's military service dates back almost 34 years when he enlisted in December 1931 at Scottsbluff, Neb., in the 134th Inf., Regt. of the 35th Inf. Div. (National Guard). He was commissioned an Infantry second lieutenant in March 1937 and, after going on active duty, completed schooling here at The Infantry Center in 1941.

Slated to receive an Army Commendation Medal, first oak leaf cluster, in the retirement ceremony are Maj. John E. Ahern, 20 years; Maj. Frank Y. Bowland Jr., 20 years; and SFC John R.

Legion of Merit

Lt. Col. Paul C. Emley, Infantry Center deputy chief of staff, receives a Legion of Merit from Fort Benning commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges while son, David L., stands proudly alongside. Col. Emley was cited for exceptionally meritorious service from July 1961 to July 1965 in successive assignments as exec officer, 1st Inf. Bde.; secretary, general staff and deputy chief of staff. He has been reassigned to Heidelber, Germany

Stanley R. Resor Nominated To Replace Secretary Ailes

President Johnson, in a recent White House statement, accepted the resignation of Secretary of the Army Stephen Ailes effective July 1, 1965 and later nominated Sanley R. Resor, current Under Secretary of the Army, to replace him.

In his statement, the President said, "I have today accepted the resignation of Secretary of the Army Stephen Ailes effective July 1, 1965. I will nominate Stanley R. Resor, currently Under Secretary of the Army, to replace Mr. Ailes as Secretary of the Army. David E. McGiffert, currently assistant to the Secretary of Defense, Legislative Affairs, will replace Mr. Resor as Under Secretary of the Army.

"Secretary Ailes served as Under Secretary of the Army from Feb. 9, 1961 until Jan. 28, 1964 when he succeeded

During 3rd Anniversary

Gen. Harrell Will Visit With Infantry Agency

Lt. Gen. Ben Harrell, one time commandant of The Infantry School and presently commanding general of the Combat Developments Command, will head the list of visitors on Thursday, July 1, when the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency here observes its third anniversary.

The Agency will also meet its new commander for the first time with the arrival of Col. Phillip H. Hooper, named to succeed Col. K. E. Eckland who retires next Tuesday.

In the afternoon on July 1 from 3 until 5 p.m., the Agency will hold an open house for its personnel, their families, and invited guests. For most of the wives and children, it will be the first time to get any further than the closely secured front door. A movie, "The USACDG Story," will be shown the visitors and refreshments will be served.

Col. Hooper, presently chief of staff of the 1st Inf. Div. at Fort Riley, Kansas, assumes command of the Agency on July 1 and will be here for the anniversary activities but must return to Fort Riley until July 15. Col. M. L. Powell Jr. will be acting commander until that time.

General Harrell, who was TIS commandant and Fort Benning commander from August 1961 until February 1963, was only recently named to head the Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va. He will attend briefings at the Agency during the first part of the morning and, later, meet with other members of the Infantry "team." He will leave Fort Benning around noon.

Scout Leaders Slate Outdoor Training Course

As part of its continuing adult leadership training program, the Fort Benning District, Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America will sponsor "The Outdoor Program - Leaders' Training Series" from 5 p.m., Friday, July 9 through 11:30 a.m., Sunday, July 11 at Fort Benning's Camp Pine Knot (located at intersection of Buena Vista and Hour Glass Roads).

"The Outdoor Program - Leaders' Training Series" course is designed to bring adult leaders up-to-date on latest scouting camping techniques. It is required for the Scouter's Key and accepted

$250 Will Be Awarded to Top Competitor During YAC Carnival's Military Competition

A $250 prize will be given to the winner of the overall soldier competition at this year's Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival. The winner will be announced prior to a massive 30-minute display of fireworks at Sightseeing Field on July 4.

The Carnival, sponsored annually by YAC to provide funds for its operations, will be held on Eubanks Field from 12 noon to 5 p.m. on July 3.

Directing all activities will be the Carnival Chairman, Col. Lon D. Marlowe, commanding officer of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Military competition at the Carnival will be held in two categories, individual and unit. In addition to the $250 prize for the most outstanding soldier, prizes of $100 and $50 will be awarded to the second and third top contenders in the individual competition.

Plaques and trophies will be given to the winners of individual events which include the Physical Combat Proficiency Test, military appearance, manual of arms, pistol and rifle firing, and general military knowledge.

Unit competition will be divided into six events: The PCPT, the cross - country run and confidence course, platoon drill, pistol and rifle firing and driver's proficiency test.

The Commanding General's Trophy will be presented to the best over - all unit with other awards going to the winner of each event.

Rifle and pistol firing events will be held on July 2 at Lower Shelton and McAndrews Ranges. All other contests will take place on July 3 at Sightseeing Field.

Information on participation in the military games may be obtained from unit bulletin boards.

All awards and prizes will be presented at 8:30 p.m. on July 4 at Sightseeing Field by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges and Guy E. Snavely, commander of the Military Order of World Wars, Columbus Chapter.

At 7:30 p.m. The Infantry Center Band will give a half hour concert.

Winding up the evening and closing this year's YAC festivities will be a 30-minute fireworks display handled by the 197th Inf. Bde. Grandstand seating and ample parking will be available.

In case of inclement weather, the concert and award ceremony will be held in Marshall Auditorium, Bldg. 4 beginning at 7:30 p.m.

All non-military competition will take place on July 3 at Sightseeing Field. The contests including archery golf chipping and a football and baseball throw, will be divided into a junior and senior division to allow youngsters to participate.

The 428th Med. Bn. will supervise the non-military competition.

Carnival entertainment at Eubanks Field will include rides and games of skill and chance under the direction of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

Lawson Army Aviation Command will handle the refreshments along with The Student Brigade which will serve specially concocted barbeque luncheons in an air conditioned mess.

Traffic will be controlled by the 139th Military Police Co., who will also provide a lost and found service. Parking for the Carnival will be available in the two large lots near Bldg. 4.

Signs will lead traffic from Outpost No. 1 to the Carnival area.

Resor

Cyrus Vance as Secretary of the Army. He has served in the post continuously since that time. Secretary Alles is returning to his Washington law practice."

Mr. Resor entered the military service in February 1942 at Fort Bragg, N. C., when World War II interrupted 2½ years at Yale Law School.

Following this, he was assigned to the 420th Armored Field Arty Bn., 10th Armored Div. at Fort Benning and later commanded C Battery.

He was promoted to captain in February 1944 and attended the Officers' Advanced Course at the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla.

With the 10th Armored Division, he went to Europe in September 1944 and during the next six months served in the Ardennes, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns, achieving the rank of major. He was awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star and the Purple Heart. His unit received the Distinguished Unit Citation for the defense of Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge.

Resor returned to the United States in October 1945 and, on separation from the service in January 1946, was promoted to lieutenant colonel. He accepted a commission in the Organized Reserve and returned to Yale Law School, from which he graduated with an LL.B. degree.

Scout

as a major training experience for Scouter's Award requirements.

As has been the case with all Fort Benning sponsored adult leadership training programs, the event is open to all Chattahoochee Valley adults (military and civilian) presently involved in scouting as well as non-participants interested in becoming active in the program.

Official registration will take place at Camp Pine Knot at 5 p.m., July 9. However, for planning purposes, interested personnel are requested to make reservations for the event by calling Chaplain (Capt.) C. R. Gibbs at Tel: 545-6809 or 545-6868 prior to 11:30 a.m., July 3.

Registration fee for "The Outdoor Program - Leaders' Training Series" will be $4.00 per person. This fee covers all meals on Saturday and breakfast on Sunday; refreshments throughout the program; literature; and incidental expenses.

The training exercise will be officially opened on July 9 by Brig. Gen. J. M. Wright Jr., chairman of the Fort Benning District, BSA. After the official opening, the two day program will feature instruction and practical application of a wide range of Boy Scout camping subjects.

Among the subjects to be covered are formation of patrols, camp making, first aid, campfires, health, safety, food, menus, storage, refrigeration, trail sanitation, fire building, cooking of meals, hiking, selection of campsites and many others.

Additional information about this event can be obtained by calling Chaplain Gibbs.

Panther Tower Is Now Open; Constructed by 51st OC Company

Near the new concrete and steel frame of The Student Brigade's future headquarters stands "Panther Tower". Supported by two slender ropes, officer candidates of TSB's 5th Stu. Bn. bound down its sheer 28-foot face with a shout of "On rappel!".

Consisting of a wooden platform and frame embedded in concrete, the rappeling tower was built in two weeks by "Johnston's Panthers" of the 51st Co.

First Lt. Lee R. Reid, project officer for the tower, said, "Its purpose is to build confidence in the candidates and to give them more training in the techniques of the modern Infantry soldier."

Rappeling is a technique of descending heights long practiced by the Army's Ranger units. It is a simple but tricky operation which consists of sliding along a rope with hands free to brake the descent. It has also been used by the Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Div. in descending from hovering helicopters.

Rappeling is a French word which means roping down or on a double rope when applied to mountaineering.

Officer candidates have long been taught rappeling techniques but no facility was readily available to them for practice. Prior to the construction of Panther Tower, candidates had done their rappeling off the sides of buildings, down cliffs on the Fort Benning reservation or on the 11th Air Assault rappeling tower.

Now candidates have this training facility in their own battalion area.

In Time of Need

Preparation for tomorrow is a difficult task, and one that's often postponed. But the wise husband and father will have an up-to-date file of important papers and personal information tucked away in a safe yet accessible place.

Be sure your file includes the name and address of your local Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society representatives. Dedicated to helping Army families, they can give comfort and assistance in difficult times.

Army Emergency Relief

Most people are familiar with Army Emergency Relief. Since 1942, it has dispensed millions of dollars in grants and loans, at no expense to the government.

Whenever a need exists, AER comes to the aid of active duty soldiers and their dependents, as well as many retired and disabled personnel and their families.

Army Relief Society

The Army Relief Society is not as well known as AER, yet its humanitarian work dates back to 1900. A bustling and efficient organization, the ARS is devoted to the widows and orphans of Regular Army officers and men.

Designed to aid the widow until regular benefits are established through various government and insurance prgrams, ARS grants and loans offset basic living costs, dental and medical care, and other emergency expenses.

If necessary the ARS representative will help the widow and her family prepare a long-range budget program so that the Society can provide financial aid for periods up to six months. At that time the case is reviewed to determine continued need.

With elderly widows and large families, the Society gives vital help for indefinite periods.

A scholarship program makes it possible for many dependent children to attend colleges and vocational schools.

Army Emergency Relief depends on its annual fund drive for basic financial support. Although the Army Relief Society receives ten percent of the money donted in this campaign, the bulk of its assets comes from endowments and gifts. (ANF)

During Vacation

Learn to Relax

June, July and August are the months most used for vacations because of the weather, the children being out of school and college, the opening of resorts, etc.

With the approach of these months, many vacations plans are either in the making or soon to be made. Thus, it seems appropriate to consider such plans and to examine the wisdom of making a vacation truly a time of relaxation.

Relaxation helps ease tensions. The person who follows a healthy routine of work and relaxation, of exercise and rest is more apt to remain composed even in time of stress.

Work and relaxation need to balance. As the old saying goes "Work while you work and play while you play". Thus, when the work hours are over, close your door on it until the next working day. Learn to set down your work loads and responsibilities at the end of each day as well as each holiday and vacation. Then when you return, you can pick them up again with renewed strength and clearness of mind.

When you plan a vacation, include time for both rest and recreation. Don't make a vacation too strenuous for yourself physically. Why not consider using part of your holiday or vacation to do something totally unrelated to your work that you can enjoy, and do it in an easy and relaxing fashion?

Everyone has an idea as to what a relaxing holiday or vacation means to him. No matter what the activity or where you go, try to make it as restful, restful and relaxing as possible. It has been said that "lucky is the man who can have activity without tension and relaxation without guilt".

So Are Poison Plants

Fruits Are Ripe

The grass is green, the trees and flowers are in full bloom and the fruit on trees and wild berry bushes are ready to be picked.

Also ready to be picked, picked up that is, are poison oak, poison sumac and particularly poison ivy.

These plants are quite common in this area and poison ivy may be found in all parts of the reservation, including troop and quarters areas.

The oil from these plants will cause a painful skin rash and will spread to other parts of the body if not treated promptly.

There will be many children and adults picking wild berries to eat and can during the summer months and it is important that they are able to recognize and avoid these poison plants.

When out picking berries or just going for a walk in grassy areas, be sure to avoid or bypass heavily infested areas and keep as much of the skin surface covered with clothing as possible.

If exposed, take baths using plenty of soap, and launder clothing. If a rash develops, get immediate medical attention to prevent spreading.

Some people are very sensitive to the oils from these plants and no person is completely immune despite claims to the contrary.

The oils from these plants may get on the skin from direct contact with the plant or may be transferred from plant to clothing, tools or weapons and later to the skin.

So, during the summer months ahead, as a poster put out by the National Safety Council and displayed throughout the post says, "Know 'em, Avoid 'em."

Represented Nationally by the Branham Company

The Judge Says . . .

Is joint ownership by a husband and wife advisable for your home or car? Joint ownership of a home is usually advantageous but it may not be in the case of the family automobile.

There are at least two advantages of joint ownership of a home. If the husband or wife should die, the surviving spouse gets more or less automatic ownership of the entire property. This benefit can avoid costly or long legal arguments over the question of ownership. Also, if the husband runs into a severe financial set back, his creditors cannot take the home because it is not his alone, but belongs jointly to the couple.

As for the family car, it is a safe practice to have ownership in the name of the person with the fewest assets — usually the wife. If the car is involved in an accident, the owner may be held liable for any excess damages not covered by automobile insurance. If the wife is sole owner and she has few other assets, little could be collected in such a suit. If the car is jointly owned by husband and wife, the assets of both would be subject to such a claim.

REMEMBER: Joint ownership is no substitute for proper estate planning. In particular, it should not lead a husband and wife to delay making professionally drawn wills. See your Soldiers Advocate or Legal Assistance Officer for guidance.

Safety Editorial

Rules for Summer

In France, in Germany, in Japan, in the United States — wherever our servicemen are stationed — it's vacation time.

Summertime activities are approaching full swing. Many servicemen and their families will be loading the family car with all sorts of recreational equipment, hampers of food, and anxious, pleasure-seeking passengers. One item many will leave behind when heading for the beach, pool, mountain resort, lake area or favorite picnic site is a sense of safety.

Safety is an important summer companion no matter how near or how far the vacation trip. Everyone is more relaxed and many tend to be off guard. Even the simple basic safety rules necessary to enjoy summer activities are ignored.

Most summer safety regulations are just plain common sense rules, which if followed, assure an enjoyable and rewarding experience.

Some basic "safety sense" rules for summer include:

WATER SAFETY: All swimming and boating rules posted at the recreation area are for your benefit and should always be observed. Swimming should never be done alone or immediately after a meal. Never dive into unfamiliar water. There may be hidden obstacles in the water. Never venture out too far—it's a two-way trip and the one back can be too much for a tired swimmer.

SAFETY IN THE SUN: The summer sun helps make your vacation enjoyable. It can also make it miserable. Many vacationers are fooled by clouds, unaware the sun's most harmful rays filter through a cloud cover.

FIRE SAFETY: Summer brings out the backyard chef and his barbecue grill and sometimes brings out the fire department. Cooking equipment on camping trips in the woods, and carelessness, can cause untold damage to forest and field.

Including summer "safety sense" as a companion on your vacation this year might prove the wisest thing you ever did. It's fun to enjoy summertime and all the pleasures that go with it, but unless you're careful and conscious of safety while enjoying such pleasures, they may turn into tragedies. (AFPS)

ISB Ladies Hold Farewell Brunch; OC Wives Hear Talk On Viet Nam

By Marianne Whitlock and Emilie Dacunto

The ladies of the ISB held a farewell brunch recently for Mrs. L. G. Simmons, wife of Lt. Col. Simmons, commander of ISB, at the home of Mrs. Frederick W. Smullon.

The table was decorated with a centerpiece of summer glads and mums. Mrs. Simmons was presented farewell gifts, including a scrapbook. The group was led in games by Mrs. Clayton Scott and Mrs. Dale Freed.

The ladies also bade farewell to Mrs. Freed and Mrs. Donald Drouin. Mrs. Jerry Schultz was welcomed to ISB.

Guests for the affair were Mrs. William Camper, formerly of ISB and Miss Donna Turner from Maine. A special guest was Mrs. S. E. Andrews, wife of Lt. Col. S. E. Andrews, who will replace Col. Simmons as commander of ISB. Col. Simmons will retire in the near future.

A luncheon was held by the wives of officer candidates of the 51st Co., 5th Stu. Bn., at the Custer Terrace Branch of the Main Officers Open Mess. The theme, "A Visit to Viet Nam," was emphasized by Vietnamese flags and maps of the country decorating each table.

A talk on Viet Nam, accompanied by slides, was given by Capt. Kenneth R. Johnston, 51st commander.

Guests were Mrs. John A. Heintges, Mrs. Jess W. Walls, Mrs. Earl W. Buchanan, Mrs. Robert B. Nett, Mrs. Stanley S. Scott, and Mrs. Kenneth R. Johnston.

Diplomas signifying honorary degrees of "Pushing Hubby Through" were given the students' wives.

Mrs. William L. Bollinger Jr. was menu chairman; Mrs. Edward G. Talpas, decorations; Mrs. Glenn V. West Jr., program; Mrs. Ronald D. Torbert, invitations and reservations; and Mrs. William B. Dempster, finance.

Forty-nine ladies attended the affair.

A coffee was held in the 54th Co., 5th Stu. Bn., dayroom for the wives of the 54th Co. officer candidates.

Mrs. Lewis Forrest gave a talk on calls and calling cards. Mrs. John Ionoff briefed the ladies on the procedures for coffees and teas and Mrs. Glenn H. Wilson gave a talk on customs and courtesies.

Guests were Mrs. Robert B. Nett, Mrs. Stanley S. Scott, Miss Paula Lyles and Miss Ann Reese.

Cadre hostesses were Mrs. Glenn H. Wilson, Mrs. Ionoff and Mrs. Forrest. Student wife hostesses were Mrs. Leonard Suminski, Mrs. James Forsythe, Mrs. Fred Creapeau and Mrs. Daley Farley.

Coffee was served round a centerpiece of red, white and blue flowers containing the 54th Co. flag, the OCS flag and the American flag.

An orientation coffee was held in the dayroom of Det. No. 21, 2d Stu. Bn. for the wives of officers attending Infantry Officers' Basic Course Class No. 12.

Welcoming speeches were given by Maj. Ronald S. McCaul, Chaplain Arthur J. Estes, Capt. Michael H. McCormick, Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. McCaul.

The ladies were served coffee around a bright yellow centerpiece of summer flowers.

Cadre hostesses were Mrs. Michael H. McCormick, Mrs. Oscar C. Williams, Mrs. John C. Wilson and Mrs. John D'Errico. Guests were Mrs. Jess W. Walls, Mrs. Ronald S. McCaul and Mrs. Dale E. Johnson. Thirty-two ladies attended the affair.

Sergeants Major's Wives

Mrs. Welborn Callahan (R), wife of the post sergeant major, welcomes Mrs. Thomas Mingey (C), whose husband is with the U. S. Army Infantry Board, to the monthly coffee for sergeant major wives at the 7-8-9 Club on Monday, June 21. Mrs. Callahan was co-hostess for the event with Mrs. Othon Valent (left) whose husband is with the 197th Inf. Bde. The monthly coffees provide an opportunity for the ladies to become better acquainted as well as a social break in their home-keeping activities. (Photo by PFC Leo Zagoric)

Katy Hennessey Named President; Teens Ratify New Constitution

With the reins in their own hands, Fort Benning's dependent teens have renamed their club, ratified a new constitution and by-laws, and elected a slate of officers.

The teens met Saturday morning, June 19, at the clubhouse, "Brat Barracks," but when the meeting broke up it had been renamed, "Teen Square" and Katy Hennessey had been elected president.

Other officers elected were: Bill O'Dell, vice - president; Mary O'Neal, secretary; Sally Hennessey, treasurer; and Ronnie Shaddix, program chairman. The new officers held their first meeting the following Monday, June 21.

The teens started their busy weekend on Friday night, June 18, with a dance at the Club. Music was furnished by the Caravans and buses provided free transportation from outlying post housing areas to the club and return. Another dance was held last night with the Caravans again furnishing live music.

Capt. Stephen McIntyre, custodian of the Youth Activities Club and Mrs. R. D. Beard, president of the Officers' Wives' Club, are assisting the teens and their new council in formulating operational plans and activities under the command-motivated revitalization program.

Brunch Is Held By Dept. Ladies

The ladies of Company Tactics Dept. recently honored Mrs. Quinten L. Gates with a farewell brunch-bridge at the Cotton Palace.

The theme of flowers and cards was carried out by presenting Mrs. Gates with red roses and name tags and bridge tallys formed of flowers and cards.

A silver bread tray was presented to Mrs. Gates from the ladies of the department.

Hostesses were Mrs. Charles C. Robertson Jr., Mrs. Robert C. Baily, Mrs. Edward R. Vaughn, Mrs. Allen R. Anderson and Mrs. Paul E. Johnson.

Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. Gates and Mrs. Vaughn.

Put 'Snap' In Summer Wardrobe

Summer's soaring temperatures and stepped-up tempo of activities present special wardrobe problems. Many girls find that no matter how carefully they try to plan, they never seem to have enough summer outfits on hand.

One way to beat the problem without breaking the bank: sew your own! A few carefully chosen fabrics and patterns can be multipled into a seemingly endless parade of costumes for day time or dress-up wear.

Coordination is the key but this sensible - sounding word can produce wardrobe results that are as bright and gay as you please. For example, start with a bold, many-colored Madras plaid for a dashingly casual summer suit. Make two blouses: one in crisp white, another in a solid color "borrowed" from the plaid. Fashion a skirt from the same solid, slacks or Jamaica shorts from the Madras and you're on your way to a dazzling array of mix-match informal outfits.

Black and white is a classic summer duo. A stunning costume look could combine several coordinated pieces in solid black or solid white with several others of small black and white checks. Add a dash of brilliant color, in the form of a scarlet red or lemon yellow blouse or jacket, and you'll rate fashion raves.

Coordination is the keynote in patterns, too, with pattern designers seemingly determined to help you plan an entire summer wardrobe.

With this kind of coordination, you can keep in the current fashion swim without half trying. For example, you can team jacket and slacks to form the newest fashion entity: the pants suit. In sleeveless form, it looks especially crisp and up-to-date for summer.

But patterning yourself after the current mode takes more than a knowledge of silhouettes: you must also know which fabrics are favored for summer '65. Sleek corded fabrics have special fashion significance right now: arnel whipcord, new and new-looking, combines well with the recently developed non-wilt piques of dacron, cotton or nylon.

Poplin is popular especially in a crease - resistant cotton and polyester combination. Linens and linen-look fabrics take on brighter, truer tones: blazing orange, grass-green and enamel-blue are a few of the exciting new possibilities. Paisley, in bigger bolder patterns that team daring combinations of pink or blue with brown, looks fresh in summery fabrics. A pink cotton coat with a paisely shift is a stunning possibility.

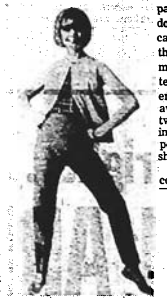
Don't overlook the importance of accessories in bringing freshness and versatility to a summer wardrobe. Long ropy necklaces, reminiscent of the '20's, are favored for the "zing" they bring to simple shifts and A-line dresses. Combine several, in different colors, for a personal touch of pure fashion.

Shoes have a bare, cut-out look that's sheer delight in summer weather; a two-tone pair, chosen to match predominating wardrobe colors, can look right with most of the outfits you own. But even more in summer than in winter, it pays to have several pairs of shoes and to avoid wearing the same pair two days in a row; for maximum foot comfort, many people advocate changing shoes twice a day.

Summer comfort is, of course, half the battle for summer fashion. Whether you make your own clothes or buy them off the rack, favor easy-fitting styles that will help you look and feel better as the temperature mounts (for one thing, they won't crease as fast as tighter garments).

If you pattern yourself after the newest style trends and mix-match clothing and accessories for unlimited chic, you're bound to breeze through summer in style.

A sleeveless summer sports coat and matching slim skirt in madras plaid with contrasting blouse is a chic summer eye-catcher.



A pair of denim slacks with a madras blouse and a sleeveless jacket a la chanel makes a pleasing contrast for summer wear.

Human Dignity Is Source of U.S. Strength Says Gen. Forsythe to Managers' Group

Telling 24 members of a recent Middle Managers Workshop at Fort Benning that it is "far better to lead than to command," Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe emphasized the difference between the communist and the free world attitude towards workers.

"In this country," he said, "the central root of our strength is the high value we place on human dignity. We believe that man is a creature of God and as such has a basic human dignity no man can take from him."

Comparing human values in our society with those controlling the communist individual is the "keystone," the speaker said.

Gen. Forsythe gave three fundamental laws of communism as the belief that there is no God, that man is worth as much or as little as he can produce, and that man's outlook on life is completely determined by his economic well-being.

The general demonstrated the communist technique of attempting to undermine our belief in the principles underlying our society.

As he gave a presentation of the communist reasoning that their theories will solve all problems of mankind, Gen. Forsythe called attention to fallacies in their doctrine.

A commander or supervisor has the authority to issue orders, and troops and workers are to follow those orders, but "there is a great difference between pure command and leadership," he said. "I don't run The Infantry School for Gen. Heintges — I'm just a member of a team."

"I believe in proper recognition of people who are producing the best they can. The recognition I have in mind goes all the way from a kind word to suggestion and performance awards," he continued.

"The man working for you may not have a very important job but if he does it well, he needs recognition. It is so easy to ignore him but it is just human courtesy to say 'thank you.' That is easy, too, with a word, a note, or a letter," he said. "Remember everyone thirsts for this kind of recognition."

Gen. Forsythe advocated full cooperation with the Army's Incentive Award Program as a means of emphasizing the value we place on the individual in accomplishing the task to be done at Fort Benning.

The general was introduced by T. A. Barefoot, civilian personnel officer for The Infantry Center.

The workshop, which opened June 14 and ended June 18, was directed by Lemuel Johnson.

Mother Praises Jump Training Sons Received

It's not very often that the 4th Stu. Bn. receives a word of praise from the anxious and oftentimes frightened parents whose sons are learning the art of "jumping from an iron bird."

However, such was the case with Mrs. Olga Ware of Wheatland, Calif., whose two sons recently completed airborne training and who wrote in praising the training which they received.

"I am proud of my sons for their achievement and also proud to admit the U.S. Army does a fine job in the building of young men," she stated in a letter addressed to Lt. Col. John J. Lissner, commanding officer of the 4th Stu. Bn.

As a token of appreciation, Mrs. Ware wrote a poem entitled "Airborne" which interprets her understanding of what the two men felt physically, mentally and emotionally throughout the course and, in particular, during their first jump.

Jeep Runs Fine After One Year 'In the Bag'

Stuttgart, Germany (ANF) — After being "in the bag" for exactly one year, an Army jeep instantly sparked to life and chugged off on a 200 mile road test.

On March 10, 1964, the Seventh Army Ordnance Section in Stuttgart sealed the vehicle in a nitrogen-filled plastic bag. It went untouched for 12 months.

Then the bag was sliced open, fluid added to the jeep's battery, and an inspection revealed no deterioration of any kind. The vehicle was ready for the highway.

The test may pave the way for storing large quantities of military equipment —ready for immediate use —without building costly controlled - humidity warehouses.

The technique was devised by a Seventh Army Ordnance Officer who reports that a radio which shared the jeep's hibernation is operating perfectly. An M-14 rifle, M-60 machinegun and a .45 pistol are nearing the end of their year-long period in similar bags.

To Escape Viet Cong

Letter Describes How Training Saved Men's Lives; Used Techniques Learned From The Infantry School

"Win in Viet Nam" is more than an academic slogan at The Infantry School where expert instruction in irregular warfare is paying off where it counts — on the irregular battlefields of Viet Nam.

How the School's training is put to life - saving use was demonstrated recently in Viet Nam by two former students. In a letter to the Commandant, the men described in detail how their training had permitted them to perform their mission and save their lives when they were surrounded and cut off by the Viet Cong.

Authors of the letter are Capt. Francis D. Lynch and 1st Lt. Alison A. Bartholomew, both serving with the 21st VN Ranger Bn.

In the letter, they say:

"We are writing this letter to you to express our thanks to The Infantry School for the fine training given us. This training not only permitted us to do our jobs but also saved our lives and lives of six other Americans.

"The event occurred on March 30-31, 1965 in northwestern Kontum Province, South Viet Nam. At that time, we were members of the advisory team to the 21st VN Ranger Bn. The team consisted of four Americans (one captain, one lieutenant and two sergeants). We were accompanying the ranger battalion on a six-day search and destroy operation in the mountains between the Laotian Border and National Highway 14. For three days the unit had no contact and moved to the north through dense jungle and mountainous terrain covering approximately four kilometers a day.

Group Surrounded

"On the fourth day (March 29) the ranger battalion unknowingly entered into a main VC battle position and was surrounded. The position was assaulted five times but could not be penetrated. ARVN infantry battalions attempts to break into the area and relieve the Rangers were unsuccessful and the ranger battalion remained surrounded and in heavy contact for approximately 40 hours without resupply of food, water or ammunition. Resupply by helicopter was attempted at 3 p.m., March 30 and was unsuccessful as the ship was shot down. The four Americans crew members joined the encircled ranger battalion.

"At approximately 11 p.m. March 30, the battalion was ordered to fight its way out through the VC encirclement. Due to these circumstances, the Americans became separated from the Vietnamese Rangers and were forced to resort to escape and evasion techniques. We successfully escaped and evaded through the VC lines.

Searched Area

"The trip to safety was not without its experiences. At approximately 1 a.m., March 31, the VC attacked the eight Americans, surrounded us and began to search the area. Here the discipline and lessons of our training came to the forefront while we waited silently for approximately two hours with VC closing to within five meters without detecting us. It soon became apparent that the VC were going to wait until dawn to finish their search, so it was decided to leave the area.

"The eight of us (one sergeant wounded twice in the foot) crawled through the VC lines and continued well into the morning, moving continously and picking the most difficult terrain possible. At one point, we passed about 20 meters from a VC bivouac site without detection. All in all, we crawled or laid silently for about 15 hours prior to coming to a clearing which we secured and then signaled search helicopters which evacuated us out of the area at 3:15 p.m., March 31.

Ranger Type Patrol

"The U. S. personnel were organized into a good Ranger type patrol for the move, consisting of a point, point security, the main body (including the wounded sergeant), and rear security. During the hours of darkness, the distance between men was one to three meters and during daylight we occupied space approximately 50 meters in length. Security was maintained during all breaks and when crossing all streams and trails. We did not use any trails but broke our own, concealing it after passing near any well used terrain features.

"The success of our escape and evasion can be attributed to two main factors. First, the self - discipline instilled in the American soldier in his training and second the expert training we had received. Of the eight Americans, three of us attended the Basic Infantry Officers Course, which included an escape and evasion exercise, and two were graduates of the Ranger Course. All others except one Artillery officer attended basic training conducted by graduates of The Infantry School. A point of interest, the ranger battalion extracted itself, except for its dead, carrying out 19 wounded.

"Please accept our thanks to you and the staff and faculty of The Infantry School for the expert job you do in training the finest soldiers in the world."

Cadets Finish Mission

Twenty one ROTC cadets accompanied by four advisors from the Georgia Institute of Technology of Atlanta, Ga., recently participated in a training exercise at the Mountain Ranger Camp in Dahlonega, Ga.

On their arrival at the Camp the cadets received a patrol briefing from Lt. David F. Tambling giving them a mission of raiding and destroying a missile site behind simulated aggressor lines. During the day the cadets prepared and issued orders for the night raid on the missile site.

The cadets went on patrol completed their mission and returned prior to daybreak.

Says Army Is a 'Snap'

Sergeant's Youngest Son Joins Service

SFC Joseph Ray, building maintenance N C O, Hq., Center Troop Command, talked recently with the last of his four children to volunteer for active duty with the Armed Forces.

His youngest son, James, called his dad from Fort Jackson, S. C. where he is taking his basic training to let him know that the Army is a "snap" for him after being brought up in a home where all the members with the exception of the mother and one married sister are on active duty.

Ray's oldest son, Joseph Jr., who trailed his father by only a few months in being promoted to E-7, is assigned with the 5th Missile Bn., 1st Arty., in Germany and another son, Sgt. Roy Ray, is with the 19th Arty, 2nd Inf. Div.

Not to be outdone by her brothers, daughter Edna joined the WAFs, and is stationed at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Ray says that other than to point out his contentment in the service to his children, he did not try to influence them in any way, however his pride in his children and their choice of careers is most evident.

Fort Benning Will Implement Youth Opportunity Program

Fort Benning has hired 26 of an expected 275 trainees who will participate in the President's Task Force on Youth Opportunity during the summer months.

Officials said the goal is to hire and orient 20 youths per day until the post's quota of 275 trainees has been filled.

T. A. Barefoot, chief of the Civilian Personnel Section has briefed The Infantry Center staff of the President's program to provide meaningful summer work for youths between 16 and 21 years old.

Trainees will be used as typists, clerks, photo laboratory helpers, warehouse workers and in other activities that will not only provide educational employment but contribute to the accomplishment of the over - all mission of the post.

Fort Benning's participation in the Task Force on Youth Opportunity is in keeping with a nation - wide campaign including all sectors of the economy such as state and local governments, private employers, labor unions, trade associations, churches, colleges, Federal offices and installations, officials said.

President Johnson launched the campaign May 23 to provide work and training experience for the 16-21 age group referred to as the "post-war baby crop."

The President's plan proposed hiring one extra trainee for every 100 persons now employed with Federal agencies, with a comparable cooperation on the part of local and state governments, private firms and others who may assist in the effort.

President Johnson said, "A boy or girl who wants a chance to work and who is denied it costs this country what it cannot afford. This is only one part of the broader attempt to assure full employment opportunity in America."

'Follow Me' March Original Score Added to Post's Infantry Museum

Another item that will one day be part of The Infantry School's history, the original score of the School's official march, "Follow Me," has been added to the collection at the Fort Benning Infantry Museum.

Col. Donald T. Kellett, composer of the march and eight other compositions, presented the score to Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander who accepted it on behalf of the musuem.

Col. Holton said "this document (is) so valuable to the history of the school. . .(and) will be preserved as part of the traditional lore of the Infantry."

The march was named the official music of the School by verbal order of Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges and dedicated at a change of command ceremony when Col. Kellett relinquished command of The Student Brigade to Col. Jess W. Walls. Col. Kellett has been assigned to the U. S. Military Mission in Chile.

Although The Infantry School dates its origin from the founding of the School of Musketry at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., in 1907, Col. Kellet's research revealed no official field music had been written especially for ceremonial occasions.

Gen. Heintges said at the dedication of "The Follow Me March", "Such materials are enduring and remain with a unit long after the composer has retired from active service."

The march was written as a "contribution to the prestige and traditions of this institution" and as a "sincere personal tribute to The Infantry School," Col. Kellett said.

The colonel added that music seems to have been neglected in the U. S. Army.

"We've never been a singing Army like the Germans," he said. "Most units have traditions, mementos and coats of arms but not their own special music."

Since many bands now use a singing group, Col. Kellett added lyrics for "Follow Me."

Of Col. Kellett's nine compositions, eight have been written since he entered the Army in 1941. While a student at Westminser (Pa.) College, he wrote "The Titan Marching Song."

54th QM Bn. Celebrates Organization Day With Picnic at Infantry Center Rest Camp

The 54th QM Bn., Center Troop Command, recently celebrated the organization day of the unit with a picnic at The Infantry Center Rest Camp.

The unit was first activated in March 1944 at Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo. In 1948, it was inactivated and was not reactivated until December 1950 in Korea.

Following the Korean War, the unit was placed on the inactive list again. It was not until 1963 that the unit was placed on the Army's active list again, this time as a subordinate unit of The Infantry Center Troop Command.

During World War II, the 54th participated in the Rhineland and Ardennes - Alsace campaigns. In the Korean conflict, the unit took part in eight campaigns as follows: The Chinese Communist Intervention, First UN Counteroffensive, Chinese Communist Spring Offensive, UN Summer-Fall Offensive, Second Korean Winter, Korea Summer - Fall 1952, Third Korean Winter and Korea Summer 1953 campaigns.

The mission of the 54th QM Bn. at Fort Benning is to provide command control staff planning, supervision of operations and training and administration for four attached companies and three detachments.

The units it supports are the 54th QM Co. (Equip. Maint.); 534th Signal Co. (Fwd) S&M); 98th Ord Co. (DAS); 147th Ord. Co. (GS); 389th Signal Det.; 31st Ord. Det.; and 35th Ord. Det.

At the unit's organization day celebration, games were provided for the children and competitive games were held for the adults.

Guests at the picnic were Col. Lon D. Mariwee Jr., CTC commander, and Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles R. King.

Unit Observes 48th Birthday; Was Activated in July 1917

The 1st Bn. (Mech), 58th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde., celebrated its 48th birthday recently with a small informal ceremony due to inclement weather.

The 58th was organized in June 1917 at Gettysburg National Park, Pa., from personnel of the 4th Inf. The unit joined the 4th Inf. Div. enroute to France in 1918 and served with the division during World War I.

The unit saw its first combat action in July 1918 when elements of the 58th took part in the Aisne - Marne Campaign with the French 13th Chasseures.

Upon return of the 4th Inf. Div. to the United States in June 1922, the 58th was inactivated along with the division at Fort George Wright, Wash.

Activated again shortly after the start of World War II, the unit was divided into three separate battalions which served in Europe and the Aelutian Islands.

In May, 1960, the 1st Armored Rifle Bn., 58th Inf. was activated at Fort Benning as an organic unit of the 1st Inf. Bde. and was later redesignated the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf.

The mission of the 1st Bn., 58th Inf. is troop support of The Infantry School and The Infantry Center.

Its major responsibility is the presentation of approximately 50 demonstrations for students at The Infantry School covering almost every combat situation encountered on today's battlefields.

Commanding officer of the 1st Bn. (Mech.), 58th Inf. is Lt. Col. William E. Boyd.

SPORTS Afterthoughts

By DAVID N. SCOTT

(This week's column was written by an 'Ole Duffer.)

A 19-YEAR-OLD amateur posted a 65 in the local Southeastern Invitational Golf Tournament at the Columbus Country Club a week ago on the same day that established professionals like Palmer and Nicklaus soared to 76 and 78, respectively, in the first round of the U. S. Open.

Another lesser-known pro disgusted himself with a duffer's 93. "It was a nightmare," he was quoted as saying. "I'm going out and get loaded."

There must be a lesson here somewhere for the average weekend hacker.

Matter of fact, the lesson is a simple one. Golf is one game in which the contestant always has a formidable opponent — himself. It's more obvious in golf than in any other sport. Palmer's skill couldn't overcome this adversary and neither could Nicklaus'. They whipped themselves mentally in spite of their long hours on the practice tee and their vocal expressions of confidence.

The Open was the one that Arnie needed most. He had to win the big one in order to regroup his "army" and bolster his confidence for the rest of the tour. He predicted optimistically that he was right for the competition. His double bogey on the fifth hole stopped him dead and he was never the same, failing to make the cut-off the second day.

As for Nicklaus, he blamed a defect in his swing. A prohibitive 6-1 favorite from the start, it was more likely that pressure from within had mounted to such proportions that it had pinched his swing.

The pros can't entirely escape the pyschological enemy but their experience, poise and skill make them less susceptible than the high handicapper for whom the psychological gun is deadliest.

Confidence means everything. When a person has it, he can kill you on the greens after sinking the first unbelievable putt, simply because he feels he can sink them all, and often does.

And the reverse is true. The same golfer, after missing an easy putt from three feet out, will often miss them all.

Unfortunately for the high handicappers the psychological enemy within each of us can be too readily influenced. Lacking the grooved swing that the pros have, the average duffer needs supreme confidence. Positive comments from other players such as, "I certainly hope you don't duff this shot," are most 'helpful.'

Or better, the sympathetic response such as, "It's really tough to miss such an easy putt. How did you ever slice a putt anyway?", can be devastating to the duffer's morale.

The pros play for money, so it's unheard of in those circles to suggest anything that would awaken the hidden enemy. In duffer circles, however, it's standard chicanery.

And I suppose this is alright since weekend golfers play just for the fun of it. Better yet, a 93 presents no excuse to go out and get loaded—else we would all be drunks.

Los Angeles Dodger ace Claude Osteen came close to becoming the fourth National League pitcher to hurl two one-hitters in a row. As it turned out, however, he won only one game. Osteen beat San Francisco on one hit last Thursday. Against the New York Mets Tuesday night, the 25-year-old southpaw had a no-hitter going for six innings. In the seventh, Joe Christopher led off with a bunt single. The Mets got one other hit. Billy Cowan led off the ninth with a home run and that was the only run of the game as the Mets took the contest, 1-0, behind Al Jackson.

Single in Tenth Gives 197th Victory Over DivArty in Extra Inning Play

By PFC Richard Minnig

The 197th Inf. Bde. beat 2d Div. Arty Monday night on Tom Groce's game-winning single in the bottom of the tenth. Both teams fought a see-saw battle throughout the game.

The 197th took a two run lead in the third inning on a DivArty throwing error which brought a runner home from third, with a single by Bill Rich driving in the second run.

DivArty snapped back in the third with four runs on 197th errors and the solid singles of James Russin, Ruben Cacazos and Charlie Kelley.

The 197th scored a run in the sixth on a double by Groce but DivArty still maintained a one run lead until the seventh inning when pitcher Duane Eichorn doubled to bring in the tying run.

Al Sumer followed with a long sacrifice fly to center field, bringing Billy Williamson in from third and putting 197th out in front.

But 197th's lead was short lived. DivArty's John West and Keith Grauvogl both singled to center. West scored on a "Texas Leaguer" to short center. Grauvogl scored on a bunt by Jim Moyes to put DivArty ahead, 6-5.

In the eight, the 197th managed to even the score once again. Eddie McLean singled to right field and this was followed by a Bobby Coe single to left. While Cole was trying to stretch his hit into a double, McLean dashed home to score the tying run.

Both teams went scoreless in the ninth inning and the game was forced into extra innings.

DivArty failed to score in their half of the tenth and the 197th seized the opportunity to end the game.

McLean moved into scoring position following his single to right when the DivArty right fielder missed the ball for a fielding error.

Groce put the final touches to the ball game with two out when he drove a single to deep leftfield to bring McLean home with the winning run.

Groce took the 197th batting honors with three hits for five at bats. Grauvogl was the evening's top slugger for DivArty with three hits.

The winning pitcher was Eichorn, the loser Bumpers.

The 428th Med. Bn., and The Infantry Center Troop Command will face each other at Gowdy Field tonight in the first half playoffs of the 1965 Infantry Center baseball season. The game will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Both teams have a ten win, four loss record. CTC got its last win from the 197th Inf. Bde. at Gowdy Field Wednesday night.

CTC's Rosy Spence drove two long homers over the left field fence to lead CTC over the 197th, 7-6.

The season's second half will be abbreviated because of the withdrawal of all 2nd Div. teams.

John McGill Top-Seeded In Playoffs

John McGill was named top-seeded player for The Infantry Center tennis playoffs which got under way at the Main Officers Open Mess courts on June 22.

John Bradley was second-seeded, Scott Allen third and Allen Mathews fourth.

McGill was runner-up in last year's tournament, losing to Dick Landenberger who is now a student at the University of Chicago.

The four semifinalists will go to the Third Army Tourney which will be held at Fort Stewart in Savannah. The two finalists of this meet compete in the all Army Tournament at San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston.

Lt. Col. Lester Burnett is first-seeded in the senior men's category. Burnett was the Fourth Army champ last year before coming to Fort Benning.

Football Officials Are Needed

There will be a meeting to organize a Fort Benning football officials organization Sunday, June 27, at 6 p.m. at Briant Wells Field House.

All personnel who are interested in officiating, or have had experience in football officiating are urged to attend the meeting.

Fort Benning is in need of football officials for youth, touch and flag football.

For further information call SFC Joe Smith, CTC A&R section at 545-3689 or 545-3976.

CLUB SLATES PISTOL SHOOT

The Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club will stage its monthly three-gun pistol shoot this weekend according to Tom Kirkman, club secretary.

Competition will be held in individual and team events. In addition to Army participants, entries are expected from the Marines, Air Force, police and civilian categories, Kirkman said.

Young Scrapers' Spirit Outshines Lack of Form

A few years ago, every Friday night, one could turn on the TV set and hear "Look Sharp, Feel Sharp, Be Sharp" as the Friday Night Fights got under way to the sounds of the crowds' cheers (and jeers), the clanging bell and the announcer's commentary.

Although not as good as the professionals who appeared on the "tube", the men of the 4th Stu. Bn., TSB, bring the excitement of the Friday Night Fights to life in the form of the 4th Stu. Bn. Boxing Matches held every Friday night at the Beane Street "Arena."

What these young fighters lack in form and experience, they make up in spirit and determination. The ticket is comprised of ten bouts, each bout lasting three rounds, three minutes each. Usually, there is an extra attraction or two thrown in for the enjoyment of the crowd.

During last Friday night's fights, there were three TKOs scored by Alex Edwards, 42nd Co.; Daniel R. Johnson, 47th Co.; and John Rockwell, 46th Co.

Four of the bouts were won on decisions by Donald F. Anderson, 43rd Co.; Richard Pearson, 46th Co.; Edward Cruz Jr., 43rd Co., and Carl Tate, 47th Co.

Of the three remaining bouts, one was declared a mismatch, one was stopped by the referee and the other was declared a forfeit.

One of the added attractions of the evening consisted of an exhibition bout by two professional fighters, Eddy Brown and Larry Henson. Brown has had 12 fights, winning all 12 by knock-outs while Henson has had nine fights, winning five by knock-outs.

Because of a draw between the 43rd Co. nd 46th Co., the boxing trophy was not presented. Each company won three of the ten bouts.

Troopin' The Line At Fort Benning

The fourth highest decoration for heroism that can be given to Army personnel, the Distinguished Flying Cross, was presented recently to a Fort Benning officer in a mass awards ceremony on York Field.

Capt. Michael F. Field, who also was presented an Army Commendation Medal, received the DFC for action in Viet Nam on July 10, 1964 while piloting an aircraft on an aerial surveillance and radio relay mission for the Vietnamese 30th Ranger Bn.

The citation accompanying the medal said Field not only fulfilled his mission but; after being wounded by enemy fire, supported the battalion until forced to return to his base for fuel. He went back to the combat scene and directed armed helicopter strikes and flare ships, the citation added.

"It is such response to the needs of our fellow man," Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges said in presenting the medal, "that makes us proud to be a part of a military team that has on it men like you."

In addition to Capt. Field, men honored in the ceremony included Captains John J. Anderson, J. Buford Johnson, Thomas F. Schatzman who received Bronze Star Medals; Capt. Daniel G. O. Murray, Bronze Star Medal, first oak leaf cluster; Capt. Fred A. Dilkes, Bronze Star Medal, first oak leaf cluster and Air Medal; and Capt. Terry P. Eymard, Air Medal. All were cited for service in Viet Nam.

KNOW YOUR SENIOR NCOs

Highlighted this week in The BAYONET's "Know Your Senior NCOs" column is MSgt. Thomas W. Hopkins, chief Signal NCO for the 197th Inf. Bde.

A native of Columbia, S. C., Hopkins first entered the service at Fort Benning in 1942. During World War II, he saw action in the South Pacific.

After the war, he took over half-back and full-back slots on Army football teams for almost ten years, playing at both Fort Jackson, S. C. and Fort (Camp) Rucker, Ala.

Following the Korean conflict Hopkins again packed a football, this time for Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Finally returning to Fort Benning after 23 years, Hopkins has brought with him the nickname "Smoke and Fire" for his efficient administration, first as Security NCO and later as first sergeant of the 275th Signal Co. (Svc.), Paris and Orleans, France.

Hopkins has been active in the Masons and Masonic activities and as an assistant deputy Grand Master, he formed several Masonic fraternities during his stay in France.

Along with a recently-awarded Army Commendation Medal, he wears the Asiatic Pacific Defense Ribbon with one bronze star, the Good Conduct Medal and both Korean and German Occupation Ribbons.

Benning Theatre Begins Summer With Albee Play

The Fort Benning Little Theater has begun its second summer of theater workshops.

As part of the Little Theater program the short play, Ablee was presented at the Little Theater on Tuesday, June 22, under the direction of Jay Ronnberg. The cast included Phil Ford, Nell Gile, Barbie Gonzales, Van McCulloch and Dick Gil.

Peter Hadjuk will direct Louis John Carlino's "Snow Angel" to be staged at 8:30 p.m., June 29.

Admission is free and audience critiques after the closing curtains is part of the program.

The theater workshop is an exercise in experimental theater in which those who wish to express any theatrical talents are invited to do so.

Future workshop plans include lighting classes in July, make-up classes in August, several readings, two major productions and lectures on the theatrical arts.

Just as floating food particles in a spacecraft are avoided by special packaging, so must astronauts avoid the nuisance and possible danger of bubbles and volatile oils in conventional toothpaste if they want to brush their teeth after every meal. Particles not swallowed or carefully disposed of might drift weightlessly in the space cabin and contaminate the atmosphere or disrupt delicate electronic instruments.
To overcome this difficulty, an Air Force dental research team has come up with a toothpaste that may be swallowed. The digestible discovery, named Astro-9, was developed by Lieutenant Colonel Ira L. Shannon, chief of the experimental dentistry department of the USAF School of Aerospace Medicine. The new toothpaste looks like the ordinary kind and is packaged in the familiar squeeze tube, but it does not contain detergents or volatile oils. The abrasive that must be included to clean teeth properly is free of calcium. Glycerine gives the toothpaste a sweet flavor.

Gen Chiles Named to 3rd Army Post

By JOE TREASTER

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, who through more than one-fourth of his 35-year-long military career has worn the Indianhead patch on his right shoulder, will leave the 2nd Infantry Division again next month.

He has commanded the division since last October.

Army officials say Gen. Chiles' next assignment will be as chief of staff of the Third U. S. Army with headquarters in Atlanta. He is scheduled to report for duty there August 1.

The new assignment came about as the result of a Department of Defense decision to merge the 2nd Division and the experimental 11th Air Assault Division to form the 1st Cavalry Division (air mobile).

No Successor

By late Thursday, no one had been designated to lead the division through its final days of transition from infantry to cavalry unit.

It is known that the general for weeks argued against the merger, once even appealing to his long-time friend, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Army Chief of Staff.

But when the move became inevitable, an aide said, he accepted it soberly. And he reportedly is looking forward to the new duty, according to Lt. Jack Wheeler, one of the general's aides.

Five Staff Members

The general hopes to take five members of his 2nd Division staff with him to Atlanta, including:

Lt. Wheeler;

Sp6 Cecil Copley, personal secretary and steno;

Sp5 Gerald Welles, driver;

SSgt. Buford Reed, family chef;

And SSgt. Luis Quiles, general's orderly.

"We're all very happy to be going," Lt. Wheeler said.

Gen. Chiles began his military in 1930 as a private in the Missouri National Guard, won an appointment to West Point, and was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in 1936.

First Assigned

He was first assigned to the division while it was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. When conflict in Europe called the division to service, Gen. Chiles went with the unit, fighting in some of the bloodiest battles of World War II, including the Battle of the Bulge.

He returned to the division again during the Korean War. It was Gen. Chiles, then a lieutanant colonel, who took command of the 23rd Infantry

Soldiers, Units Shifted For Air Mobile Division

By LANNY THOMAS

Midnight oil burned this week as the 2nd Infantry Division started to crumble from its seven-year home on Sand Hill and lend its support in building the Army's first air mobile division.

Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara's announcement of plans to build a first Calvalry Division (Air Mobile) prompted almost immediate action in the 2nd this week to transfer units and equipment to the 11th Air Assault Division.

July 1 Designation

The 11th Air Assault will officially be designated the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) on July 1 while that division, now in Korea, will hoist the "Indianhead's" proud banners.

As the shakeup of units and personnel in the 2nd Division moved rapidly this week, a hazy picture hung over the division to the future jobs of several thousand soldiers who will be left behind in a provisional division.

Only two units, in addition to the 2nd Brigade already serving in the Air Assault division, the 1st Battalion, 22rd Infantry and the 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry, have been tapped for a role in the air mobile concept.

However, soldiers with combat infantry MOS's from units throughout the division were being ordered to the two cavalry bound battalions to bring them up to adequate strength.

No Physical Transfer

The transfer of the two battalions will not mean a physical move from their present site on Sand Hill.

So far the only direct transfer of 2nd Division soldiers is on a limited basis to fill up specific vacancies in the Air Assault Division ac-

Marne Field Ceremony This Afternoon To Be Division's Official Send-Off

In a brief, rather routinely staged miniature review at 2:00 p.m. today, the colors of the 2nd Infantry Division Saturday will begin their nearly 10,000 mile trip to Korea.

Tonight at 7, Sgt. Maj. Robert L. Brown, three other volunteer sergeants major and the division's living symbol, Sgt. (Chief) Marland Tahboneman, plan to leave Lawson Army Air Field aboard an Air Force transport, escorting the colors of the 1st Cavalry Division and unit representatives for a presentation ceremony next Saturday (July 3) here.

The men offered to make the transition and to serve a regular 13 - month "hardship tour" in Korea, away from their families, "because of loyalty, dedication and love of our unit," Sgt. Maj. Brown said.

According to Army officials, their plane will return from Korea carrying the colors of the 1st Cavalry Division and unit representatives for a presentation ceremony next Saturday (July 3) here.

With that ceremony, the 1st Cavalry Division (air mobile) will be officially born, merging troops of both the former 2nd Division and the 11th Air Assault Division continuing to fill its ranks.

The 2nd Divison's review today will be its last on Fort Benning soil, ending seven years of encampment here. Adjutant's call is scheduled for 2:55 p.m.

Chief of Staff Col. Tony F. Perpich, as commander of Marne Field, organizing representatives from every unit in the division for the final massing.

On the reviewing stand, quietly surveying the troops, will be the commanding general, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles.

When the review is formed, Col. Perpich will hand the staff laden with unit streamers to Gen. Chiles who, in turn, will pass them on to Sgt. Maj. Brown. And the trek begins.

Going with Sgt. Maj. Brown, in addition to the chief, will be sergeants major: Edward Leavitt, 2nd Engineer Battalion; James L. Runyon, 3rd Brigade Headquarters, and Alcus, Stokes, 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry Headquarters.

For Sgt. Maj. Brown, the trip will be his first return

Our Last Issue

This will be the last issue of the 2nd Infantry Division News.

The merger of the 11th Air Assault Division with the 2nd Infantry Division will bring about the debut next week of a new Bayonet section which will chronicle the happenings in the new 1st Cavalry Division.

For the past seven years the 2nd Infantry Division News has heralded everything from Swift Strike Exercises, involving thousands of troops, to the promotions of PFCs.

The only regret in the years of service to 'Indianhead' readers is that space did not permit coverage of all the promotions and reenlistments of the men who truly made the division news possible.

The idea toward which the paper worked was to keep the soldier informed.

News can be channeled to the soldier through lectures from his commander or his platoon sergeant but a newspaper is an attempt to make the process of information more palatable.

It is to this end that the reporters, photographers and editors of the 2nd Division News scrambled and badgered — an attempt to bring the 'Indianhead' news when it was timely.

An editor is only as good as the reporters who submit the copy to him. The 2nd Infantry Division News would not have been a reality without the talents of Lanny Thomas, assistant editor, Joe Treaster, reporter, Art Chieppa, press chief, Marv Wolfe, photog-to Korea since winning a bronze star and his second purple heart as a 2nd Division soldier there.

"We volunteered for the assignment out of loyalty to the division," Sgt. Maj. Brown said, "We feel with our esprit de corps and with the help of the 'Second to None' soldiers already in Korea, due to normal reassignment, that in a short period of times we will have the same kind of fine organization we have here at Benning.

"We have in mind that there are two division in Korea. They'll be the 2nd and 7th. And we're going to make certain the 2nd is the best.

One let down involved in the move to Korea, Sgt. Maj. Brown said, is that it will force him and several others to miss the 2nd (Indianhead) Division Association's annual reunion in Hollywood, Fla., in mid-July.

"I will miss seeing my many good friends at the reunion," he said, "But I'll be looking forward to seeing them next year. It's rumored the reunion will be held in California then, and we should be ending our Korean tour just in time."

Shifted

cording to division planning officials.

Personnel sections who have practically worked around the clock since last week could not give an estimate of how many soldiers from the 2nd Division would be used in the 1st Cavalry.

The status of the 2nd Division's 72nd Armor, one battalion stationed at Fort Stewart and the other here at Benning, has not been announced.

According to division training officials, operations involving the 3rd Brigade and other units of the division supporting ROTC training in North Carolina will continue as planned until about August 1.

As the colors of the 2nd Division leave here next week, a provisional unit with a divisional command structure will remain on Sand Hill under Main Post operations. Officials do not anticipate anyone in the provisional division moving out of their present location in the next few days.

Everthing will be provisional in the division and everyone will stay in their present organization until it starts to shrink and is no longer needed.

However, beginning on July 1 a phasing out period will begin which will break down the division, starting at the bottom with companies of a battalion. The phasing will move up through the brigades and general's staff will be the last to go, officials speculate.

Phasing out is expected to take at least 120 days.

One of the numerous unsolved questions as the result of the "merger" is "Where will the left over soldiers go from here?"

Soldiers of the 2nd Division, ranking from the private to the lieutenant colonels, all are in the dark about their next job or assignment.

Only orders within the next few weeks can tell this tale.

Gen. Chiles took command of the division from Maj. Gen. Charles Billingslea in ceremonies last October after a stint as military attache to Mexico City.

We thank the readers of the 2nd Infantry Division News for allowing us to serve them.

To those who receive the News through the mail let this official notice the service will cease.

Former Indianheads who are interested in the division wherever the proud colors fly, may write to the Information Officer of the 2nd Infantry Division, APO 96224, San Francisco and ask to be placed on their mailing list.

Those interested in the "doings" of the new cavalry division may request the Bayonet be mailed to them by sending a note or a post card to the Information Office of the 1st Cavalry Division, Air-Mobile, Fort Benning, Ga.

To the people who remain in the provisional unit created by the reorganization, news should still be submitted to the information office of the former 2nd Infantry Division. The Infantry Center section of the Bayonet will assume the duties for the remaining troops.

Once again, to our readers, thank you. JIM BAKER, THE EDITOR

World's Fair Concluded

'Nighttime' Creates New Images

By JOE TREASTER

FLUSHING MEADOW, N. Y. — Nightfall brings to the New York World's Fair a veil of mysteriousness, splendor and fascination unimaginable to a daytime visitor.

The brightly painted angular pavilions stretching into the evening darkness lose their daytime shapes.

Mr. Citizens's psyche, the unreal neons and the colored spotlights that spray the 646 - acre create new images, new shapes—a special, personal nighttime Fair.

Heat And Sweat

Afternoon heat, sweat and fatigue give way to evening cool, sweater inviting chill and a sudden freshness.

Nighttime at the fair is play time. Dancing and dining are big. For doers and for watchers, there's plenty. And some of the fun goes on until 2 a.m.

Some people have been able to amuse themgleves with a quiet, all-by-themselves, hands - stuffed - in - pockets, bright - eyes - wandering - stroll around the grounds. The other people, without being conscious of it, can put on a great free show. . . the arms - entwined lovers, the bickering family of 12, the scrambling gangs of street urchins, bored security guards, gum chewing waitresses. It's a cast of thousands.

Entertainment

If you like your entertainment more formalized, but still feel a reluctance to part with coin, saunter over to the Underbere and the Promenade Fountains at by any night; free fireworks display and sometimes a free concert.

The music could be coming from any of several bandstands on the grounds, or it might be following you. Paul Lavealle and his Cities Services band roam the Fair playing from an open - topped pavement following train.

For "doers," discotheque is plentiful, and live dance music ranges from a seven-piece German brass band, through jazz and violin strings.

"Watchers" at the Carnival area can see native dances performed by lovelies of the Near East, stroll to the Belgian Village and see a street band at work or sit inside an authentic thatched community hut and study the girations of Michael Olatunji's Nigerian drummers and dancers, plus the Watusi Dancers and Rwanda Drummers.

Trembling Stomach

What you put in your trembling stomach in the after hours can range from a champagne-broiled steak sandwich ($1.50 at the Belgian Village) to a multi-course feast in the Top of the Fair Restaurant in the Port Authority Heliport (price: commensurate with the structure's more than four stories).

Most of the attractions that pull big crowds during the day do a big business at night, too. But some people have found difficulty in absorbing the offerings of the more serious exhibits after sundown.

Perhaps at the Fair, other man-made fanstasy, it's true that, nighttime is for the lovers and the wide-eyed dreamers.

2nd Infantry Division Society

Wives Meet For Final Farewells, Coffees

Editor's note: For the past seven years while the 2nd Infantry Division has been on Sand Hill, the wives of officers assigned here have built warm friendships through coffees, luncheons and business meetings.

The Officers' Wives Club has been active in many projects in the community and has maintained an active organization. The wife of a new officer assigned to the division always received a warm welcome from the club as well as from the wives of individual units.

On the same note, the wives always had a sad goodbye for the Army wife whose husband was reassigned to other posts and units.

While their husbands continued in their normal busy role in the 2nd Division during the last few weeks, the wives went about their usual role — coffees, goodbyes and welcomes. Sometimes they even visited their husbands at work.

Unaware of the future of the 2nd Division here during the past two weeks, farewell coffees were held for several ladies leaving. For many of these ladies, it was their final goodbye with the club — goodbye until she finds a new home with the wives of her husband's new unit.

The Wives Club will have a final luncheon Tuesday before colors of the division are officially transferred to Korea.

The Club has invited all past and present members of the club to attend the last meeting. It will be held at 12:15 p.m. at the main ballroom and fountain of the Main Officers Open Mess.

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commander of the 2nd Division, will be the guest speaker.

Reservations for the luncheon must be made to the respective chairman of the groups or through Mrs. Leonard Trost, phone 545-1106.

Typical accounts of 2nd Division Wives Club activities follow in the paragraphs below and elsewhere on today's society page.

A farewell coffee was held June 3 for Mrs. Fred O. Jackson by the ladies of the Support Command at the home of Mrs. Dean Van Lydegraf.

Mrs. Jackson, wife of the past Support Commander, wore a white orchid corsage and received an engraved silver ice bucket and tongs.

Mrs. Jackson will join the ladies of the 3rd Brigade in North Carolina where her husband has been assigned.

The table of refreshments was centered with an arrangement of huge magnolia blooms. Mrs. Van Lydegraf poured coffee and Mrs. Norman F. Essick served an ice cream punch.

The group also said goodbye to Mrs. Jack C. Wallace, wife of the Medical Battalion commander and hello to newcomer, Mrs. Ellsworth R. Merrick of the 2nd S&T Battalion.

Farewells were also said to other ladies.

702nd

The ladies of the 702nd Maintenance Battalion held their monthly coffee at the home of Mrs. Robert Taylor. Co-hostess for the coffee was Mrs. Thomas Smith.

Mrs. John Gephart, presiding over the meeting, welcomed as newcomers, Mrs. Thomas Castro, Mrs. John Particelli, Mrs. Donald Strange and Mrs. Armor Brown. The ladies said farewell to Mrs. Gene Keighbaum and Mrs. William Johnston.

The door prize was won by Mrs. Donald Strange.

2nd Aviation

The ladies of the 2nd Aviation Battalion held their monthly coffee Thursday (June 9) in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Hostesses for the event, which featured a centerpiece of summer flowers, were Mrs. James Maher and Mrs. Roy Murakami.

Following a short business meeting a drawing was held. The centerpiece was won by Mrs. Gerald Krisik and the doorprize by Mrs. Dick Roach.

Summer Flowers Set Pace For 2nd Bde Coffee

A summertime center piece set the pace at the June 2nd Officers' Wives' coffee hosted by Mrs. W. R. Lynch and Mrs. M. E. Bennett at the home of Mrs. Lynch.

The table was highlighted by pink carnations and polished ivy entwining a cut watermelon filled with cantaloupe and honeydew melon balls.

During the short business meeting, plans were made for an August brunch and Mrs. George Forrest, Mrs. Donald McMahon and Mrs. Jerry Mitchell were introduced and a farewell was said to Mrs. Richard Winn.

Founder Finally Arrives at Division

Herschell Fox went to Langres, France to become a specialist in small arms repair, but what he remembers most about the place is the guard house.

Fox and other mechanics of the 2nd Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop nicknamed the prison "Rattlesnake's Hotel," in honor, he said, of the lieutenant in charge.

"It wasn't the guard house we objected to," he said, "but the way it was run.

"It wasn't exactly like the infamous prison of a certain Lt. Smith in Paris, where dozens of atrocities were committed against American soldiers, but it was bad.

"One of Rattlesnake's favorite forms of aggitation was to wake the prisoners at four a.m. and force them into a freezing shower.

"After they had attained a sufficient chill the lieutenant would order them to dress, strap on heavy packs and take a few laps around the camp."

The foul treatment should have, it seems, reduced the population of the guard house. But according to Fox, his comrades' penchant for Vin Rouge, Vin Blanc, Champagne, Cognac and a forgetfulness to return on time kept it full.

"One of those now extinct birds, a 30-day wonder lieutenant, was in charge of getting us to the small arms school at Langres," Fox said, "But some how he took us to Vesoul and it was several hours before he discovered we were in the wrong place."

When the men finally reached Langres, the last cable car of the day was bobbing up the steep hill to the school.

"We had to drag ourselves and our bags up the hill," Fox said, "But it wasn't so bad. Before the lieutenant started us marching he had to go off and get some more information from someone. We used our native instincts to locate the usual French Cafe. By the time he returned, most of us could have flown up the hill."

The long climb had sobering effects on the man and at the top they got a sobering lecture.

"We were threatened with all kinds of dire punishments such as being sent to the front, getting court martials, etc," Fox said, "But we knew that there was little chance of experienced mechanics being transferred. Damaged weapons and equipment were piling up."

During the five weeks at Langres, Herschell Fox and his fellow students in small arms classes lived at Fort De Peigny, a former French dungeon, so unbearable that attempted suicides among the inmates had been common.

The fort was made up of numerous small rooms, connected by a series of tunnels.

"Rat holes would be better designations for those 'rooms,'" Fox recalled, "In these rooms, we were told, the prisoners of old were kept and tortured. So were we!"

Soldier's Medal Awarded WO for Vietnam Heroism

The Soldiers Medal, the highest award given by the Army for heroism outside combat was awarded a member of the 2nd Infantry Division during an honor guard ceremony Friday afternoon.

A total of 12 members of the 2nd Infantry Division gathered on Marne field to receive awards from division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles. Second on the list of awards were two Bronze Star decorations awarded for Meritorious Service in Vietnam.

The Soldiers Medal was awarded to WO Lewis J. Postles of Company A, 2nd Aviation Battalion for heroic action in the Republic of Vietnam on February 14, 1965.

The citation praised the young warrant officer for saving four Vietnamese who were being washed out to sea. "Without regard to his own personal safety," read the citation, "He rushed into the rough sea and despite a strong undercurrent, swam to one of the victims.

"Although he was extremely fatigued," continued the statement, "he immediately administered mouth to mouth resuscitation and continued for approximately one and a half hours."

Capt. Richard T. Rushton of Headquarters Troop, 7th Cavalry and SFC Ruben Brinley of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 9th Infantry were the two Indianhead soldiers awarded service in Vietnam.

Also receiving recognition at the honor guard ceremony were PFC Kenneth Stammen of the 12th Artillery and Sp5 Gerald M. Clayton of the 7th Cavalry. They were named as the division's soldiers of the month for April and May respectively.

Best Mess awards for Company A, 702nd Maintenance Battalion and Battery B 37th Artillery rounded out the awards ceremony.

INTO THE BAG . . . The 2nd Infantry Division is collecting the discarded patches of Indianhead soldiers. The patches are being taken to Korea with the colors so the new 2nd Division soldiers will be able to complete their uniforms without paying black-market-like prices for patches. Officials estimate that it will take PX and Army supply channels several months to get patches to Korea in sufficient supply to keep the prices low. PFC Henry J. Sullivan and SFC Philip Liparato of Company A, 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion are joining in the campaign to send patches to Korean Indianheads. Officials say collection boxes will be placed in all division units to gather the discarded patches.

Service Bar Authorized For Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army personnel who have served in the Republic of Viet Nam subsequent to July 1, 1958 have been authorized to wear one overseas service bar for each six month's active duty there.

Wearing of the service bar, a gold stripe sewn on the lower right uniform sleeve, was previously authorized for World War II and Korean Conflict service.

Authorization is contained in Army Regulation 670-5, change 5, dated March 10, 1965.

Why Not 'Medic Alert' For Soldiers

By JIM BAKER

Medic Alert, what is it? how does it work? and why should the soldier concern himself with it?

It is a non-profit, international organization based in Turlock, Calif. Members wear an identification emblem to identify their particular medical problem.

The identification worn by members of the Medic Alert Foundation tells law enforcement and medical officials the bearer suffers from some kind of medical problem.

Badges

The identification badges are worn by Diabetics, Epileptics, Hemophilac, Laryngectomees, (neck breathers), persons with Myasthenia Gravis, Multiple Sclerosis, severe allergies to horse serum, antibiotics, bee stings, persons taking anticoagulants, cortisone and antabuse.

Skin divers, commercial deep sea divers and persons wearing contact lenses are also registered with the alert foundation.

Medic Alert maintains a central reference file of all people who register with them. A collect phone call to the number on the back of the identification disc will give the inquirer the sufferer's particular medical history.

Here in the army one is not likely to run into some one who breathes through the neck or one who is taking an anticoagulant or even a diabetic. However there are plenty of amateur skin divers and people who are allergic to penicillin and bee stings. Again it has been my experience to run into many soldiers who wear contact lenses.

There are many times when a soldier may be involved in an accident away from his army base or when his medical records are not immediately available such as in combat.

Some sort of a system of medical alert for these soldiers would be beneficial and of course extremely helpful.

In the case of dependents of military personnel, the Medic Alert Foundation is well worth looking into. Free insurance against inadvertant ignorance or medication of the wrong sort could save your life or some member of your family.

Harmful

There are many times when first aid can be harmful if the improper treatment is used.

One reads all the time of soldiers on leave or pass coming to the aid of accident victims. Each soldier should always take the precaution of checking the injured person's wrists and neck for some kind of medical alert information.

Most certainly the soldier who could die from the wrong kind of medication deserves to be identified by an extra means. Perhaps the pertinent information regarding his medical problem could be contained on his dog tags.

Regardless of how it is done, Medic Alert is well worth-while for both victim and medical man.

Readiness Girl Serving in 2nd

Catching the eye of drivers around the Sand Hill area is a life size, and very realistic looking, Connie Rodd, the maintenance girl of PS magazine.

Helping to solve maintenance problems in PS magazine, "The Preventive Maintenance Monthly" Connie is now working on maintenance problems within the 2nd division.

Decked out in olive green and sporting a division patch and PFC stripes, Connie is now working for Support Command's Maintenance Assistance Team, and can be seen directing military vehicles into roadside barrier inspection areas.

Operating for some time now, the team has reorganized it's structure, adopted a new scoring technique, and is now providing more coverage than it has in the past.

Composed of experts from the 702nd Maintenance Battalion, the team has increased it's capabilities to operate three inspection areas two days per week. With a goal of fifty vehicles a month, the team selects equipment at random to insure an even distribution throughout the division.

Dogs Ferret Out VCs

Republic of Viet Nam (AFPS)—Scout dogs are being recruited in the United States for training here to ferret out hidden Viet Cong (VC) guerrillas.

Dogs of the German Shepherd and Doberman Pinscher breed are procured by the U.S. Air Force and shipped here where U.S. Army advisers help train the dogs to work with RVN troops.

Scout dogs are taught to "flush" a hidden enemy and are trained for sentry duty, guarding troops and installations.

The dogs follow airborne scent, officials said, rather than ground scent which is often lost through evasive action such as the enemy crossing a stream.

2nd Soldiers Play Being Sailors

By MARV WOLF

FORT BRAGG, N. C. — A group of soldiers from the 2nd Infantry Division played at being sailors for the day as they toured the battleship USS North Carolina, which is bearthed at Wilmington, N. C. as a permanent shrine to the service men of North Carolina.

The four "Indianheads" took advantage of the week-end break in the ROTC camp activities that their unit — the 3rd Brigade — is supporting, to drive down to the port city of Wilmington, N. C. and do some sight-seeing.

SOLDIERS GET THE SWABBIES VIEW POINT

As the group approached the gigantic grey - painted vessel, Sp4 Lee Harrington, a motor pool dispatcher, was heard to remark "I'd sure hate to have to paint that thing."

Life at Sea

Later, the group met Mr. Joseph Wells, a man who spent most of his life at sea and is now the maintenance supervisor for the ship, and without prompting he revealed that actually the painting of the ship is a never-ending task: as soon as the vessel is painted, his crew of ten men go back to the other end and start all over again.

"Sort of like painting a bridge," said Wells, adding that more than a thousand gallons of paint had been used this year on the monstrous ship. "Mostly battle-grey," he hurried to put in, lest the public get the wrong idea about what kind of ship he ran.

Wells also mentioned, in reference to the location of the ship's bearth, in the Cape Fear River, that he is sure he has the largest boat in the world tied up to a cypress tree in a swamp.

Powder Room

While inspecting the innards of the vessel, SSgt. Raymond Banks, of the 2nd Administration Company was stopped by a passing civilian who noted his uniform, especially his service cap it would appear, for he had asked about the location of the powder room. Sgt. Banks whose well - fed appearance is not unnatural directed the man to a latrine he had recently passed.

Later, Banks discovered the rather cramped compartment under the monstrous 16 - inch gun turrent where the bags of propellant powder are stored. This is another type of powder room.

History

After touring the vessel from stem to tern, all 729 feet of her, Mr. Wells invited the group to the ship's office and told about the history of the ship in a first hand manner.

He never served aboard while the ship was commissioned. On a number of occasions he was confronted by the thought of the 20 mile range of the mighty 16-inch guns of the North Carolina.

Wells told of a mission on Okinawa where his LST (Landing Ship Tank) was required to rescue some stranded marines from a point on the island. It was only the pin-point firing from the battleship that allowed them to brave the five inch mortar fire that the enemy was pouring in on them he said. He recalls one incident particularly.

Awaiting Marines

"We had beached the ship and were waiting for the marines to get there but every time one of us got tired and crawled into the rack, (bed) the 16 inch rounds falling nearby would blow us out of the rack onto the deck. It was discouraging and encouraging at the same time."

Wells went on to describe the nightly sound and noise spectacular that was recently added to the North Carolina attraction. This is a demonstration, using a 10 track tape recorder and lighting effects, of what it would actually be like to see the great vessel under full steam firing all its weapons at night.

So realistic is this demonstration, which is authentic even to the sound of sailors' footfalls running down the ladders of the 15 story ship, that one lady came back the morning after just to make sure it was still there.

Advance Party for N.C. Exercise Returns to Post

By Jim Lull

The role of the 2nd Infantry Division during Exercise Cherokee Trail VI was cancelled Saturday morning and the advance elements already in the North Carolina maneuver area returned to Fort Benning.

"The brigade command post was completely set up and functional when we got the order to return to Benning," said Capt. Walter Robertson, project officer.

The exercise, designed to serve as a graduation test for students of Fort Bragg's Special Warfare Center, has not been called off completely.

Substitute

"About all they can do to substitute for the 2nd Division men is scrape up what is available at Fort Bragg in the special warfare section.

"There is a good chance that they will simply try to find enough men to fill the guerrilla positions and then set up a modified brigade command post," Robertson said.

The general feeling is that the time used on the abbreviated maneuver was not ill-spent.

"Of course we are disappointed that the exercise didn't go through as planned," Robertson remarked.

Area Torn Down

After notification that the 2nd Division men were to return to Fort Benning, the entire tenting area, which had been completely assembled only Friday, had to be torn down. Along with the tents, came the communications arrangements that had been established.

Before the Indianhead division troops could be removed from the area several "amends" had to be made.

Engineer Work

The 2nd Division's engineers that were among the lead elements to arrive had promised to perform several public service construction jobs.

"They had offered to clear an area for a city park at Ellerbe, N. C." Robertson said. "There was also some engineer work to be done at Candor."

Signal Role Stressed To West Point Cadets

By DAVE BUMAN

"If you ain't got commo, you ain't got nothing." An old expression around "signal people," and one that the 122nd Signal Battalion attempted to instill in the minds of some 600 West Point cadets visiting the 2nd Infantry Division Monday and Tuesday.

Visiting active Army units after their third year is common practice for men of "The Long Gray Line". It gives them a chance to see and work with the men and equipment they will be a part of in the near future.

The cadets have an opportunity to see the Infantry, Armor, Signal, and various other branches in action, prior to choosing their particular branch assignment.

To give September's First Classmen a chance to see and know the operations of a signal outfit and perhaps guide these future officers into a future career, the 122nd Signal Battalion set up a demonstration of signal equipment and it's capabilities.

Dekkar Strip

In a preview showing of the demonstration at Dekkar Strip, south of Lawson Army Airfield, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, 2nd Infantry Division Commander, along with numerous other high ranking division officers, voiced approval and satisfaction at the work done by the 122nd for the cadets.

"This may be the only chance these cadets will have to see and know signal operations before making up their minds as to branch assignment," said Chiles, "and what they see here may determine that choice."

After an orientation briefing by Lt. Bert Wolfe, a signal platoon leader, the cadets were broken down into 20 110-man groups and visited four stations for 25 minutes of instruction at each.

Division Sports Program Ended

S & T Wins Softball Title Over Signal

The 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion emerged as champions of the Division of the Softball League this week after beating out 122nd Signal Battalion in the playoffs.

The S & T Battalion winners of the Cherokee League with seven wins and one loss, won over signal with a 5 - 0 shutout.

The signal softballers were champions of the Apache League, finishing the season with a perfect record of seven wins and no losses.

Second in the Apache League was the 2nd MP Company (6-2) while second in the Cherokee League was the 2nd Admin Company (6-2).

During the playoff Sunday, each team got five hits. Capt. Harrison, pitching for the S & T, had six strikouts for the game. During the first inning, he had a hit that drove one man in for the first run. Harrison slammed a home run in the fourth inning, giving the winners a 2-0 lead.

Lt. Bourne hit a three run home run in the seventh inning to wrap up the scoring for the game.

Black Buckle Search Fails; Brass Is 'Go'

Months ago the Department of Defense held out some hope for soldiers who were tired of polishing brass belt buckles. They announced they were seeking a cheap, dark colored, standard buckle for all the Armed Forces.

Recently the Defense Department confessed they had failed in finding a satisfactory belt buckle for less than 20 cents.

According to a recent United Press International story, the Armed Forces have been trying for as much as three years to find a satisfactory substitute for the brass buckle presently in use.

According to the report, the search has been for a standard black buckle which will be acceptable to all the services. It was felt that $24,000 a year could be saved by buying only the one type.

Thirty-five companies were contracted to do the job in the course of the search. Said the story, "all failed."

"The black chipped off — it wouldn't stand up under the wear and tear."

The defense supply agency, whose spokesman was quoted in the story, didn't really know what the belt buckle would cost but it was aiming for something less than 20 cents.

Support Command Upsets 428th in Final Game

The 2nd Infantry Division's softball and baseball programs came to an abrupt halt Wednesday as changes in personnel and units got underway for the formation of the new 1st Cavalry Division (air mobile).

"The division sports program will no longer continue," said Lt. Gary Taylor, Special Services Officer. Some units may continue a sports policy at their own level, he indicated, but the division sponsored program is over.

Taylor also said that the Commanding General's sports trophy would not be awarded this year due to the early cutoff of sports. The trophy is awarded annually for the unit collecting the most points in all sports events.

Contenders

According to Taylor, the 2nd Supply and Transport Battalion and the 1st Battalion, 3rd Infantry were the top contenders for this year's trophy. "These two units were the most likely winners," he said. "It was real tight down to the wire."

The remaining softball games for the summr would have determined a definite winner for the coveted trophy. Officials decided the trophy would not be awarded in order to keep a fair play in the sports policy.

"There were several other reasons for the decision to not award the trophy," Taylor said. There were no awards ceremony scheduled this month and no unit could have retained the trophy for six months in keeping with the tradition.

428th Leads

As the baseball season was cut off in the division, the 428th Medical Battalion headed the loop with eight wins and four losses. In the 2nd Division, 1st Brigade had a 7-5 record for the season.

The highlight of the final few games was Support Command's upset over the 428th Medical Battalion Monday night.

Other standings: CTC (7-4), 197 Infantry (6-6), DivArty (5-7), 3rd Brigade (5-7) and Support Command (4-9).

The baseball picture for the 2nd Division was laid on the shelf with 3rd Brigade squeezing a 2-1 win out of the 197th on Thursday of last week. On Friday, TSB defeated Support Command, 5-4.

Division Artillery played a final winning game, dropping Support Command, 7-4 Saturday.

Goes Wild

Support Command went wild in the top of the first inning with five runs. With the bases loaded because of errors, Keith Young stepped to the plate and drove in two runs on a single.

Mike Nichol doubled to right field in the top of the 13th inning and advanced to 3rd. Two unearned runs followed.

The 428th got their first unearned run in the 5th inning and added three more in the seventh. They tied the game up 5-5 in the ninth. The losers loaded the bases in the 10th, 11th and 12th innings but were never able to score.

DeLucas Grabs Tennis Tourney

Hector DeLucas, a PFC from Company C of the 1st Battalion, 23rd Infantry, Monday won the singles title of the 2nd Infantry Division Tennis Tournament.

DeLucas gained the championship after repelling threats from Maj. Richard Morley, Headquarters, of the same battalion. He turned back Morley in three consecutive sets.

The doubles championship of the six-day tournament went to Lt. Forrest Spooner, Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Division Artillery, and Lt. Alan Schiffman, Battery D, 37th Artillery.

The winners grabbed the doubles title after batting 6-0, 6-0 and 6-1 sets over Lt. John Piedrofesa and Lt. Charles Britton, both of the 2nd MP Company.

Deucas began his march for the championship by winning over Capt. Gene Rush, Headquarters, 2nd S & T Battalion, in the first rounds with 6-3 and 6-3 sets. He then faced Lt. Donald Coon, Company A, 2nd S & T, and won with 6-1 and 6-1 sets to Coon's 6-4.

Prior to meeting Morley in the finals, DeLucas picked up 6-3, 6-1 and 6-3 sets over Lt. Peter Chemyn, also of the S & T Battalion.

Morley and DeLucas teamed up for the doubles play, but lost out to Schiffma and Spooner in their second round. The winners received a bye for their first game and turned in sets of 6-4 and 6-3 to Morley and DeLucas' 6-4.

In the finals of the doubles Spooner and Schiffman won three straight sets with scores of 6-0, 6-0 and 6-1.

DID YOU KNOW

That the 2nd Infantry Division has had 54 separate commanders, beginning with Brig. Gen. C. A. Doyen of the US Marine Corps, to the present Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, who served with the division also in World War II and Korea.

Third Army's Best Shooters Train ROTC

BY MARY WOLF

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — They may not realize it, but the ROTC cadets who started their marksmanship training here this week at their annual summer training are getting the best the entire 3rd Army has to offer.

While the principal instructors will be the Associated Professors of Military Science, from the respective colleges and universities. Mingled among the assistant instructors from the 3rd Brigade, will be an odd-looking bunch, wearing old style campaign hats.

While their head gear may be funny looking, these 14 men represent the finest marksmanship instructors available in the 3rd United States Army. They are the 2nd Division marksmanship detachment, proven best through test, the champion shooters for the entire army area.

Operating under the theory that in order to be a good shooting instructor, one must be a good shot, the one officer and 13 enlisted men comprising the unit will be split up among the different committees and allowed to roam the firing line, assisting wherever they are needed the most.

According to Capt. Dillard E. Medford, an ROTC instructor from the Georgia Military Academy at College Park, Ga., "the infusion of such a unique unit will enhance our instruction tremendously."

Major Command Shifts Announced for Division

Some of the details of the command structure of the new 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) have been announced by Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Four important shifts in the major command and staff structure involve three pioneers of air mobile division along with a new addition to the official family.

Col. E. B. Roberts, chief of staff since Feb. 15, 1963, assumes command of the 1st Brigade which is slated to be an all airborne unit.

The position of Chief of Staff will be taken by Col. George S. Beatty, Jr., who will leave his position as commanding officer of the 11th Aviation Group.

Lt. Col. John Hennessey, who commanded the air assault division's 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry from its activation until becoming the deputy commander of the 1st Brigade in July 1964 and brigade commander in March 1965, will become commander of Division Support Command, replacing Lt. Col. Thomas W. Buchanan who has received orders assigning him to Korea in July.

The command of the division's Aviation Group will be assumed by Col. Allen M. Burdett, Jr., who comes to Fort Benning from Washington, D. C., where he served as executive officer in the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Research and Development).

Col. Roberts is an airborne veteran of over 20 years, and was commanding officer of the 506th Airborne Battle Group, 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., when he came to the experimental air assault division on its activation. He is a 1943 graduate of West Point.

Col. Beatty, who is also a pioneer of the air assault concept, served with the Infantry School as a tactics instructor before the Korean War. He came to the 11th Air Assault after serving as operations officer at the U.S. Army Aviation Center and School at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Col. Beatty served on the now famous Howze Board which recommended the Army's air mobility tests leading to the formation of the new division here.

Col. Burdette, another 1943 graduate of West Point, was assistant professor of military Science at Georgia Tech in 1947. He attended the Infantry Officers Career Course

1st Cavalry Units Predate Civil War; Oldest Regiment Once Headed By Lee

BY JIM GRAHAM

For the first time in 22 years, since June, 1943, the famed 1st Cavalry Division returns to the confines of the continental United States with its move to Fort Benning.

This proud division traces its, background to pre-Civil War days. Its oldest Regiment is the 8th, organized as the 2nd Cavalry Regiment in 1855 and commanded by then Lt. Col. Robert E. Lee, who resigned his command when the Civil War began.

The 7th Regiment, organized in 1866 and commanded by Gen. George Custer, fought at the little Big Horn in the famous 'Custers Last Stand', and is still called Custers Regiment. The 8th Regiment, also organized in 1866, fought against Sitting Bull and the Sioux Indians and in the Mexican Punitive Expedition.

Originally organized as a horse unit, the 1st Cavalry Division was activated August 31, 1921 at Fort Bliss, Tex. The division was reorganized in Australia on July 11, 1943. The changes included the addition of weapons troops to each squadron and the replacement of the reconnaissance squadron by a reconnaissance troop and a light tank company.

The 1st Cavalry entered World War II combat in 1944. On Sept. 2, 1945, as a part of the 8th Army occupational force, the first division troops landed in Yokohama and at eight o'clock on the morning of September 8th the 'First Team' accompanied the Supreme Commander into Tokyo. From that date until it sailed for Korea, the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) performed occupation duty in Japan.

The division landed in Pohang-Dong, Korea on July 18, 1950. In December, 1951, the division was transferred to Hokkaido, Japan.

In October, 1957 the 1st Cavalry Division was withdrawn from Japan and the 24th Division in Korea was redesignated as the 1st Cavalry Division. Personnel and equipment of the 24th were absorbed in the newly designated 1st Cav. The 1st Cavalry Division completed reorganizing into an atomic-age Pentomic unit in December, 1957.

Now, after 22 years of Far Eastern combat and occupational duty, the designation of the proud 1st Cavalry Divisjon comes to Fort Benning as the Army's newest and most modern division adopting the air assault concept as the new 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile).

Next Week, The CAVALIER

SKY SOLDIER NEWS RETIRES

BY MIKE GERSHON

This week brings to a close the short history of the SKY SOLDIER NEWS, but only the name will be retired.

Yes, the SKY SOLDIER will be laid to rest, but another proud tradition will be picked up and a new name for the section, but certainly not for the Army, will be installed.

For now the 11th Air Assault Division is to assume the proud name and colors of the 1st Cavalry Division.

From here on in this section will carry the banner of THE CAVALIER, a name carried proudly for many years by the division in Korea.

The NEWS first began publication in March of 1963 as a daily mimeograph paper consisting of one page.

As the division progressed, the need arose for more news space. A two - page paper was produced and after one year expanded to a four page publication.

Numerous field exercises developed, and the 11th Air Assault Division Information Office went along toting their portable mimeograph machine and cases of paper.

The troops in the field were kept up to date on world and local events supplemented by cartoons and pictures.

During AIR ASSAULT I the SKY SOLDIER NEWS was published in the home location and sent to the field.

The summer of 1964 went along in preparation for the big test — AIR ASSAULT II.

In July a big break came for the editor and staff as space was secured in Fort Benning's BAYONET newspaper.

PFC Hal Moore assumed duties as editor and the first publication consisted of six pages.

Events were numerous in the first few issues and some included the HAWK FLASH Exercises, rank of Brig. Gen. presented to Gen. Knowles and several awards presentations.

September saw the change of editors as Morse left the Army to work for a civilian newspaper.

Spt James Graham assumed editorship and he and his staff prepared themselves for the news coverage of the Army's longest peace time maneuver, AIR ASSAULT II.

Most of the PIO went to the field, but two staffmen of the SKY SOLDIERS NEWS stayed behind to edit and compose the section.

The other members of the office carried the ball in the field and upheld the past traditions by publishing a field

Brigade at Fort Stewart For Hawk Dart Exercise

The mock war of Exercise Hawk Dart exploded early Monday morning on the southern edge of Fort Stewart as Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey's 1st Air Assault Brigade swung into their first large scale field maneuver since Hawk Arrow II.

Fighting broke out at approximately 6:00 a.m. after aggressor forces from the Brigade's two Bravo Companies crossed an established border to clash with Sky Soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Arne H. Eliasson.

Defending forces of the 38th Infantry, which had been in defensive positions all Sunday night in anticipation of the limited invasion were ready and waiting, and by 6:30 a.m., the war was on.

Maintaining their own independent air support, enemy elements were able to strike in several areas simultaneously, and withdraw before getting into serious trouble, causing considerable harrassment to the defenders.

During the morning, Col. Eliasson's Sky Soldiers put mobil-defense operations into practice, and in one bold operation, launched an air attack on Fort Stewart's mock village region at 9:30 a.m., driving back aggressor forces.

While the fighting continued at Fort Stewart, the brigade's parachute battalion, the 1st 187th was flown from Benning's McKenna Air Strip to Warner - Robbins Air Force Base to prepare for an airborne assault into the objective area.

Led by Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark, Rakkasan commander, the main portion of the 187th began stepping out of C-119 air transports at 2:29 p.m. over St. Lo Drop Zone with all weapons and combat equipment to add a powerful punch to the 1st Brigade effort.

The mass personnel drop was preceded by some four hours by a heavy drop of weapons and equipment which awaited the paratroopers.

In the meantime, aggressors were continuing their hit and run operations as brigade forces were spread thinner and thinner, and in spite of a numerical superiority enjoyed by the occupiers, the enemy made substantial gains.

The airborne assault, aimed at off-setting the aggressors, was a complete success, and as men shed parachutes and raced for assembly areas, others were deploying tactically for objectives in the immediate area, taking over positions formerly occupied by the Marnemen.

The entire deployment of the 187th into the objective area was completed at 6:00 final personnel drop of Company A, and as the paratroop units fanned out, plans were underway for counter-offensive to destroy the aggressor units.

During the night, the 38th and 187th held key positions while small enemy units continued to probe. Under cover of darkness early Tuesday morning, aggressor units launched a heliborne attack to the Brigade's rear, but with only limited success before the attack was beaten off.

As the war wore on Tuesday, the 1st Brigade mission was changed to one of effecting maximum delay, and at the time of this writing, units were conducting mobile - defense operations to stem the flow of aggressors while gaining time for their own ends.

11th MP's Participate In Brigade Field Exercise

Shortly before dawn on June 18 at 4:30 a.m., the 2nd Platoon of the 11th Military Police Company, left their home station, in a small convoy of seven jeeps. The platoon was enroute to establish Traffic Control Posts along the planned route of march for the movement of the 1st Brigade of the 11th Air Assault Division to Fort Stewart, Ga., for a Brigade Field Training Exercise. The platoon of Sky Soldier Military Policemen are a supporting unit for the 1st Brigade field exercise.

The Military Police platoon was notified on June 10 of the support mission of the FTX, in which they would direct the 1st Brigade's convoys from Ft. Benning to Ft. Stewart.

Upon notification of the support mission, SSgt. Beaudrot, the Platoon Sergeant, dispatched a two man reconnaissance party (Sgt. Lewis Ahlberg and PFC Carlton Summers) to determine where the Military Police should be posted along the route from Ft. Benning to Ft. Stewart. When the two man reconnaissance party returned to Ft. Benning the platoon escort and traffic control plan was drawn up and submitted to Division Provost Marshal for approval. The platoon then went into high gear, getting personal equipment and vehicles inspected and prepared for the move.

The duties of the Military Police platoon during the Brigade FTX will be many and varied. They will include: establishment and operation of a forward PW Collecting Point, security for the Brigade CP (Tactical Operations Center, dismount point, and VIPs) traffic control in and around the Brigade CP, roving patrols in the vicinity and nearby towns and to provide any other Military Police support that may be required by the Brigade commander. The Military Police will also support the personnel and equipment drop at St. Lo Drop Zone on June 21.

The Military Police platoon will provide traffic control for the return movement of the Brigade to Ft. Benning upon the completion of the FTX, and portions of the platoon will be the last to return to their home station.

Sergeant Devises Water System For Appari Helipad

SSgt. Eric C. Walker Jr., a member of Battery A, 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery recently installed a dust eliminating and washing system for his battery's helicopters at Apparri Heliport. The constant problem of dust, which increases safety hazards, maintenance, and dirty aircraft, has been an ever present harassment, particularly in the summer. In order to partially eliminate these problems, the sergeant obtained piping to transport water to convenient locations around the helicopters' parking area. He then rigged faucet outlets to be used for a sprinkling system or for washing aircraft.

Maj. Joseph J. Lahnstein, his commanding officer, said, "This system should save many man hours and definitely reduce dust as a safety hazard." the problem of constantly moving helicopters to washing areas with resulting loss of man hours and increase of safety hazards has already been reduced.

Promoted to E-4

Five members of the 2d Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery have been promoted to grade E4 in recent informal ceremonies here. They are Cpls Donald J. Minto of Battery A and Cleo Smith of Battery B, and SPs Arnold J. Kuchynka and Raymond St. John of Headquarters and Service Battery and James P. Harmon of Battery C.

Cpls. Smith and Minto serve their respective units as Little John Assistant Gunners. Kuchynka performs duties as a cook, Harmon as a First Cook, and St. John as a Survey Recorder.

German General Visits 'A', 611th

Recently the 11th Air Assault Division was host to Brig. Gen. Anton Lorch of the German Army Combat Troop School I.

Gen. Lorch made a tour of a huge display at Dickman Field where the 11th Division had displayed items from aircraft to earth moving equipment to Avionics Equipment.

One of the highlights of the day was when Gen. Lorch and his staff reviewed the Avionics H-T Shelter of Company A, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion which was on display.

Maj. Dodge of Support Command S-4 introduced Gen. Lorch to Sp4 William Ewers an Avionics Specialist of Company A. Sp4 Ewers entered the US Army about three years ago and is from Hasum, Germany. He spoke German to Gen. Lorch and answered several questions which the General asked.

When Gen. Lorch moved onto another display Lt. Col. Johannes Fischer of the Generals Staff stayed to chat with Sp4 Ewers and survey the HT Shelter thoroughly. Lt. Col. Fischer, Chief Instructor, Signal School in the German Army asked several questions about Avionics and the H-T Shelters. He also asked Sp4 Ewers where he was from in Germany and questioned him on how he liked the U. S. and the U. S. Army.

Both General Lorch and his staff were very impressed on the performance of Specialist Ewers and the H-T Shelter as well as other items of equipment display.

Promoted to E-5

Sgt. George W. Annis of Battery A, 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery was presented with a new set of stripes signifying his promotion to Communications Sergeant at a recent battery ceremony. The stripes were presented by Maj. Joseph J. Lahnstein, his commanding officer.

Sgt. Annis replaces Sgt. George F. Marncheck who retired on May 31, 1963.

edition of the paper to keep the 11th troops informed.

Copy began to flow in from the field and hundreds of phographs taken by the section photographers were made into plates for newspaper publication.

A lot of time and hard work was put into the weekly publication, but it was not all sweat and strain.

Many enjoyable moments were shared in the reporting of the unique training conducted by the Sky Soldiers.

We sincerely hope you have enjoyed reading the SKY SOLDIER NEWS and that you will continue to turn to the new section, THE CAVALIER in the forthcoming editions.

and is a graduate of the Command and General Staff College and the Air Force Staff College. His long interest in aircraft led him to the Aviation School at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Lt. Col. Hennessy was the first infantry commander assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division when he came with the 3rd Battalion (later redesignated as 1st Battalion), 187th Airborne Infantry to the new unit.

The colonel is a 1944 graduate of West Point and completed the Command and General Staff College in 1955 and the Army War College in 1960.

Officers Wives Donate Clothing To Dominicans

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — When Maj. Bruce P. Crandell, S-1 of the 229th "Stacked Deck" Battalion left Fort Benning early last month for the Dominican Republic, he found that he was loaded down with baggage.

The reason for this was that his wife had packed a lot of childrens' clothes in with his personal gear. This clothing had been donated by the officers wives of the 229th for distribution to needy children.

Maj. Crandall had received specific instructions from his wife as to what to do with the clothing. It was to be distributed to the most needy children.

For the first few weeks in the Dominican Republic, because of the around the clock operations that were in effect, he was unable to make any arrangements for the distribution.

Early in June, however, he was at last able to begin looking around for an effective means of distributing the clothing. Several charity organizations were contacted but were not in this type of charity work. The CARE organization however when contacted said that they would be most happy to collect the clothing and distribute it to the most needy. When the CARE representative picked up the clothing at the Anita Jana Brewery he expressed amazement at the excellent nearly new condition of the apparel.

A Salute from Santo Domingo to the gracious ladies of the 229th.

Mrs. Eldreth Hosts 377th Ladies Meet

The ladies of Battery A, 377th Artillery held their monthly coffee the morning of June 16th at the home of Mrs. Charles Eldreth, Jr. The hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Eldreth and Mrs. Robert L. Roth, Jr.

A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Joseph J. Lahnstein, wife of the battery commander. A welcome was extended to Mrs. Nelson A. Mahone, Jr., wife of the battalion commander, and the ladies were reminded of the future Div-Arty and battalion functions.

A lunch of coffee, punch, cupcakes, and rolls was served by the hostesses.

Those in attendance were Mrs. William P. Wolfe, Mrs. John T. Bradish, Mrs. Lahnstein, Mrs. Mahone, Mrs. Jesse L. Hobby, Mrs. Wayne E. Krahn, Mrs. Robert W. Naatjes, Mrs. Roth, and Mrs. Eldreth.

The July coffee will be held at the home of Mrs. Bradish.

Flags, Cannon Decorate 81st Artillery Fete

Tables, gaily decorated with miniature American flags and cannons greeted the officers and wives of 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery on Saturday evening as they gathered at the Main Officers' Open Mess for cocktails and dinner.

Lt. Col. Francis J. Bush, the battalion commander, presented silver water pitchers to Maj. and Mrs. William R. Hendrickson, Capt. and Mrs. Patrick Kirwin, and Lt. and Mrs. William Durand. Map. Hendrickson and Capt. Kirwin have been reassigned within the division, Lt. Durand departs for Texas and flight school.

Capt. and Mrs. Arthur Huber and Capt. and Mrs. Jack Sterne were presented silver baby cups.

Special guests of the evening were the division artillery commander and his wife, Col. and Mrs. William A. Becker, and Capt. and Mrs. Roy N. Moore.

Air Assault Charms Given To Bde Ladies

Charms were presented during an officers party for the 2nd Brigade at the Main Officers Open Mess.

At this dinner - dance, Col. William R. Lynch, commanding officer of the 2nd Air Assault Brigade, officially presented the wives of the 2nd Brigade officers with an engraved air assault charm.

The charms are circular in size with a small pair of air assault wings on it. The engraved portion had the wife's initials plus "2D BDE 11 AAD" on the back of the charm.

For the purpose of the presentation, the charms were pinned on the women by their husband's.

The guests of the 2nd Brigade who also received a charm were Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles and Col. E. B. Roberts.

The officers and their wives of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry were recipients of the charm.

15th Arty Couples Enjoy Picnic Fun

The men of Battery B, 15th Artillery, held a party Friday night at Victory Lodge.

The party, attended by all the men of the Battery and their ladies, kicked off at 4:30 p.m. A picnic supper of chicken, baked beans and cole slaw was served at sundown. Later dancing and general good times were the order of the evening.

At TIC Rest Camp

Col. Clark Acts as 'Chef Supreme' At Informal 187th Inf. Steak Fry

The officers and wives of the 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry held their battalion party on the 15th of June at the Infantry Center Rest Camp.

An informal "steak fry" was the main attraction with Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark Jr. effectuating as 'Chef Supreme".

During the course of the evening baby cups were given to Capt. and Mrs. David O. Lamb, Capt. and Mrs. Roger E. Boyd and Capt. and Mrs. Donald F. Warren.

Silver tankards, engraved with jump wings the name of the recipient and a battalion crest, was presented as a farewell gift to Chap. (Capt.) and Mrs. Nevin D. Snyder.

At the conclusion of dinner a birthday cake was presented to Capt. William C. Roll.

Guests of the evening were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Rutland D. Beard Jr., Capt. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Mills, Capt. and Mrs. Gordon Eells, Mr. and Mrs. Garland W. Lamb (brother and sister-in-law of Capt. David O. Lamb), and Miss Gail Knight (sister of Mrs. Jack L. Bennett.)

Project officers for the party were 1st Lt.'s Danny R. Byard and Jimmie R. Smith.

New Jobs Earn Gifts For 42nd Artillerymen

Gifts and awards were the order of the day at a recent party held by the officers and wives of the 42nd Artillery.

Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, battalion commander, and Maj. Herbert H. Martin, executive officer, presented plaques to two officers of the battalion who have recently undertaken duties elsewhere. The recipients were Capt. Morton S. Lindner, 42nd Artillery Adjutant from May 1964 to April 1965 and who is presently serving USAIC as CI Officer; and Capt. Richard J. Boehman Jr., Assistant S3 (Special Weapons) from December 1964 to June 1965, who has been reassigned as Commander of Battery A, 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery.

Baby cups were given to the baby girls of Capt. and Mrs. Bob W. Garner and 2nd Lt. and Mrs. William D. Jones, and to the baby boys of Capt. and Mrs. John T. Hayes, Capt. and Mrs. Marvin H. Meisner, and 2nd Lt. and Mrs. Raymond Maly.

2nd Lt. and Mrs. Gregory R. McSwain were presented with a silver tray in honor of their recent marriage.

The "Pool Party" was held at the Main Officers Open Mess and consisted of a barbecue, swimming and dancing.

511th 'Delta' Company Selected 'Best' During 2nd Brigade ATT's

"Delta" Company, 511th Infantry, commanded by Capt. Warren T. Lillie, has been selected as the best company during the 2nd Air Assault Brigade Army Training Tests.

Aslo receiving honors along with Delta Company was the 3rd 81 MM Mortar Section of Charlie Company. This mortar section was attached to D Company for the test.

The ATT's were conducted during the first half of June. They were administered to rifle companies of the battalions of the 2nd Brigade.

The objective of the tests was to test the rifle company and its elements on the performance of its combat mission, to prepare the company for further progressive training and testing, and to help the company in certain areas of deficiency that would be uncovered by this testing.

The complete testing of one rifle company encompassed 30 hours. This 30 hour block was broken down into three phases; movement to the initial contact and defense, the retreat and the regrouping, and finally the attack with the possible counter - attack by the enemy forces.

"The day in combat" started to the assembly area. Once they arrived, the company planted mine fields and established a combat outpost. When night fell a recon platoon was sent out to secure the withdrawal routes and the night pick-up zone.

After this was accomplished silence befell the company in the assembly area. It was broken when their equipment picked up an enemy nuclear detonation.

Soon the enemy was attacking the company and caused the rifle company to retreat to the rear assembly area with the exception of a small band of men left behind to "hold the enemy". The word was given to proceed to the objective and the small detachment of men left behind received the 'codeword' to retreat.

The company moved to the night pick-up zone and proceeded to the objective, here they attacked the objective and fought off a counter-attack by the guerrilla forces.

The umpires considered such things as intelligence information, chemical and nuclear warfare, communication, night operations, land mine warfare, simulated casualties from conventional, nuclear, and chemical weapons, camouflage and concealment, day and night operations, patrolling and local security, resupply procedures and troop leadership abilities.

Making the presentation to Capt. Lillie was the 2nd Brigade Commanding Officer, Col. William R. Lynch.

Battery Colors Change Hands At 38th Arty

The command of Battery A, 38th Artillery was changed recently when Capt. Donald R. Davis was presented the battery colors by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Robert W. Short.

Capt. Davis is a 1959 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Following his graduation he was assigned to a Nike Universal Battery, 6th Artillery in Germany.

Returning from Europe in 1963, the captain attended the Artillery Officers Career Course at Fort Sill, Okla. and Fort Bliss, Tex.

His most previous assignment in the 38th Artillery was Battalion S-4.

Company Adds Pet to Ranks

There has been a recent addition to the animal family that is used as nicknames for the companies of the 188th Infantry. Company A recently introduced the name "Alfagator" as its very own to represent them. The Alfagator is that goofy looking alligator that appears in the Sunday paper in Walt Kelly's "Pogo" comic strip, but now he is dressed up in full combat gear.

Other animals representing companies in the 188th are the "Bull Dog" of Delta, the Road Runners of Charlie Company and the Mythical "Bull Eagle" of Company B: a winged bull's body with an eagle's head and forelegs, and of course the battalion's insignia. the "Eagles".

The Alfagator has been chosen because, "the company," according to Capt. Charles T. Ostick, the commanding officer "has spent more time in the swamps than any other company in the battalion."

One of the members of the company, PFC James A. Downs, brought as company mascot a live baby alligator which he had purchased in Charleston, S. C. The airlines would not allow him to carry his "pet", a snappy 12-incher, in the plane with him, but PFC Downs, a true Sky Soldier, would not let a small bit mobility problem bother him. Changing containers, he brought his alligator in a cake box.

Battery Supports First Brigade In Stewart Exercise

Battery A, 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery departed for Fort Stewart early Sunday morning for one week to render support to the 1st Brigade in their exercise Hawk Dart.

The battery is commanded by Capt. John T. Bradish, the executive officer, while the battery commander is on leave.

The battery will be attached to the 6th Battalion, 81st Artillery who will be acting in direct support of the Brigade.

Expert Shooters 'Duel It Out' With Hot 45's

Kearin range was the scene of a dramatic duel fought Monday morning the 14th, between Maj. Samuel H. Fisher, Jr., Capt. Robert J. Gabrielli, and SSgt. Charles F. Tipps, Jr., of the 15th Artillery. The duel developed during the record fire exercises for the .45 cal pistol.

All three firers qualified expert with Maj. Fisher leading the way with a red hot 386, Capt. Gabrielli was second with a 374, and Sgt. Tipps came in a close third with a 364, out of a possible 400.

Headquarters Battery was responsible for the conduct of qualification and familiarization firing of the .45 cal pistol for the battalion. Many members of the 15th discovered that the .45 cal pistol is indeed an accurate weapon at close ranges, however, the accuracy is greatly dependent upon the individual, as was proven by the experts from the 15th Artillery.

188th Chinooks Join 37th ATB For Field Test

During the period June 7-11, the 188th Transport Helicopter Company participated in a field training exercise conducted by the 37th Air Transport Battalion.

While the primary purpose of the exercise was to increase the tactical proficiency of the unit emphasis was placed on air crew training. Nine CH-47 Chinooks were taken to the field and during the five day period a total of 171 flying hours were logged. Two pilots were transitioned in the Chinook while seven other pilots became qualified during the exercise.

According to Major Gerald D. Dyer, commanding officer, "The 188th while being the youngest CH-47 unit, learned many valuable lessons during this exercise that will rapidly permit us to rank with the best of the Chinook companies."

Artilleryman Gets Major Promotion

Maj. Harry W. Chambers, S-2 Officer of the 15th Artillery, received his gold Oak Leaves from Col. William A. Becker, commanding officer of the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery, in a ceremony in the commander's office. Mrs. Chambers was also on hand for the pinning on of the new rank.

In 1963, Maj. Chambers left the United States, this time to fly Caribous for the 1st Aviation Company in Viet Nam. For his outstanding service during this period he was awarded an Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters and a second cluster to his Commendation Medal.

Upon completing his tour in Viet Nam, he returned to Fort Sill, Oka. for the Artillery Officer Career Course.

He assumed his present duties with the 15th Artillery in July, 1964. Maj. Chambers resides with his wife and three children on Gladys Drive in Columbus.

CITED AT REVIEW . . . 1st Lt. Raymond T. Holmes (right), 3rd Brigade Aviation Section, is awarded the 11th through the 18th Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal at a recent 3rd Brigade review. The lieutenant has participated in more than 200 aerial missions in the Republic of South Vietnam.

Original Sky Soldier Retires in 1st Brigade

Sgt. Maj. Joe Haluski, the first Infantry air assault brigade sergeant major in the United State Army who joined the 1st Brigade upon its activation, is scheduled to retire here this coming Tuesday with ceremonies held on French Field at 3:00 p.m.

Guests of honor for the ceremony will include Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, Col. George S. Beatty Jr., 11th Aviation Group commander and former 1st Brigade Commander, and Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, commander of the 1st Brigade.

With military career spanning thirty years, Sgt. Maj. Haluski is a combat veteran of both World War II and the Korean Conflict, serving with the 1st Infantry Division's 26th Infantry throughout World War II, and the 160th Infantry in Korea.

Enlisting in the Army in Elkhorn, West Virginia in September 1935, Haluski was assigned to Company G of the 14th Infantry and remained with the unit until 1940, serving in the Panama Canal Zone.

In September 1940, he was assigned to the 26th, and served with the unit in the European Theater of Operations until the end of the war.

After the war, Haluski received his first assignment to Fort Benning, being assigned to the Weapons Department of the Infantry School where he served from 1946 until November of 1950, after which he served in Korea with the 160th Inf.

With the activation of the 11th Assault Division on February 15, 1963, Sergeant Haluski was appointed the number one enlisted man in the 1st Air Assault Brigade. Replacing Sgt. Maj. Haluski will be Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook, formerly with the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry.

First Sergeant Receives Letter of Appreciation

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC—1st Sgt. Richard J. Sawatsky, Company A 229th Task Force received a letter of appreciation from the Chief Petty Officers of the USS GUADALCANAL this week.

The USS GUADALCANAL was the ship which transported the 229th Task Force to the troubled Dominican Republic.

To show their appreciation for the fine treatment and cooperation received while aboard ship, the "Stacked Deck" Battalion presented the officers and Chief Petty Officers with a plaque for the mess walls.

The letter of appreciation sent to Sgt. Sawatsky reads:

We the Chief Petty Officers of the USS GUADALCANAL (LPH-7) are indeed honored to accept the plaque you forwarded on May 12, 1965. It will be placed on the bulkhead in our Mess as a memento of the guests we carried on board from the U.S. Army.

Although our missions are parallel, our methods of accomplishment are different and to host members of the U.S. Army on board a U.S. Navy fighting ship is a rare honor bestowed upon us.

May your goals all be reached without misfortune.

The letter was signed by Chief Petty Officer Leon C. Newell, mess president aboard the USS GUADALCANAL.

Dominicans Facinated By Task Force Helicopters

Pilots and air-crews of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion's special Dominican Task Force have quite inadvertantly fostered their own "Little League People to People" program with Dominican children in Santo Domingo.

Talk about kids, just imagine having twenty-seven helicopters conducting around-the-clock operations right in your back yard, and you can probably get the picture.

Highly impressed by the show, Dominican youngsters flock to the Polo Grounds to observe the operations, wave to the helicopters, and some of them have even learned to salute officers.

The children have learned to stand clear of the helicopters during takeoffs and landings, and during those brief moments when there isn't a ship moving, pester the good-natured pilots and soldiers.

Although operating under some strain as a result of the continuous night and day operations, the pilots have responded in kind, giving the kids candy and attempting to talk with them.

The remarkable thing about this unofficial and rather spontaneous program is the smiles which are so prevalent as the kids attempt to conduct their usually one-sided conversation.

In the final anlysis, the pleasant response between the kids and the pilots has been mutual, and there can be no doubt that much good will has come out of this business as a side effort.

Battery A Fires For Infantry School

Battery A, 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery, participated in an artillery live firepower demonstration held at Concord range last week for the Infantry School. The battery, furnishing one platoon of four aircraft headed by Capt. John S. Utz, demonstrated the new aerial rocket artillery techniques lending great flexibility and mobility to the battlefield. Each platoon is capable of delivering 192 rounds of accurate fire on targets miles away within minutes.

The battery, commanded by Maj. Joseph L. Lahnstein, was highly complimented for a very successful mission, resulting from extremely accurate and timely fires on the target.

15th Artillery Fires 3.5 Rocket Launcher

On June 15 the 15th Artillery conducted a familiarization firing on Warner Range with the 3.5 rocket launcher in order to insure that all personnel would be capable of using this weapon if the need arose.

The familiarization was conducted by 2nd Lt. Obram M. Schuler, Jr, and the NCO's of Battery C, 1st Bn. 15th Artillery.

Task Force Welcomes New Arrivals

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — Maj. Bernard Quedens, commanding officer of Company A, 229th Task Force, was on hand at the San Isidro airport Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. to welcome 16 Sky Soldiers to the "Stacked Deck" Task Force in the Dominican Republic.

As soon as the huge C-130 had stopped and the doors opened the Sky Soldiers off loaded and were briefly welcomed by Maj. Quedens. They were then taken to four waiting UH 1-D helicopters for a quick flight to Santo Domingo.

Because of the late hour the only other order of business was to get everyone billeted for the night. Prearranged living quarters had been set up and they merely had to move in.

An in-processing program has been established for new arrivals to assure that they are completely "read-in" on the local ground rules. This is done by having the man the new arrival is going to replace act as his sponsor for one full day.

The first item on the program is billeting, this is followed by a detailed comprehensive briefing by Capt. Harry R. Spitz on the policies and procedures of the unit.

This is followed by a trip through supply to draw the new lightweight fatigues and a records check. After this the new arrival spends the rest of the day with his sponsor becoming thoroughly familiar with his duties in the Dominican Republic.

New arrivals were Capt. Edward L. Burkhalter, Co C, 229th A-H Bn, Sgt. Billy W. Moore, 11th Pathfinder Co., WO Jerry N. Duke, Co C 229th, Capt. Leslie Cayness, Co C, 229th, PFC Edward V. Tallon, Co A 229th.

Also Sp4 Henry T. Sheldon Jr., Co C 229th, PFC James A. Laderoot, HHC 238th A-S Hel Bn., PFC Thomas R. Henkeymyer, Co B 611 Aeft Maint Bn, Sp6 Robert T. Green, 11th Med Bn, Sp4 John B. Hayes, Co 229th.

And PFC William W. Thornton, Co B, 611 Maint Bn, 1st Lt. Richard C. Hedgkins, Co C 229th, CWO Hollis K. Scoggins Co C 229th, Capt. Patrick J. Brady, HHC 11th Med Bn, Capt. Robert L. Stinnett, Co B, 229th, Capt. Paul P. Winkle Jr, Co D 229th.

Company D Scores Well During Recent CMMI

Conducting their 400th inspection of the current fiscal year, 200 more than usual, the Third Army Command Maintenance Management Team visited Company D, 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, Thursday, June 17, on the last day of Capt. J. D. Coleman's command, and awarded the company an aggregate score of 97.5 percent.

The second inspection in nine months, a score of 100 per cent was awarded on maintenance records, and 95 per cent on actual maintenance. This score should be sufficient for a Third Army Certificate of Achievement and the company is anxiously awaiting notification of will be received.

An earlier inspection in August resulted in a 90 per cent aggregate score with scores of 86 per cent and 94 per cent respectively being awarded for maintenance records and maintenance.

Kaniengahagas Stumped In Three Straight Games

Going into a temporary slump Tuesday, June 15, on the 11th Infantry Square diamond, the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, 2nd Air Assault Brigade softball team dropped two in a row to Special Troops and the 127th Airborne Engineers.

Special Troops blanked the Kaninegahagas five to zero with pitching by Sp4 James R. Brown. The only hit of the game came when Emmit Beard, Company A, singled in the fifth. Sgt. Joe Freeman, Company B, allowed the opponents only two hits, but walked eight.

The second game found the battalion team losing again as the 127th Airborne Engineers beat them with fine defensive play. Pitcher Ellis, Charlie Company, allowed one home run, but Beard, Thornton, Watson, Sivertsen and Working compensated by all managing hits for the Kaniengahagas. Although there were not any strikeouts for the Kaniengahagas, they appeared to be having a battin slump, as they hit the ball well but always within reach of the opponents.

At Essenbagger Field for a Chinook League game Thursday, June 17, the 38th Infantry nine found themsleves beaten and continuing their losing streak to three as the 15th Artillery rolled to a three to two victory.

The team had little difficulty holding their opponents to four runs with their alert defense, but their weakness prevailed at the plate.

The last four innings witnessed only four hits by the Kaniengahagas. The two sole runs came in the sixth as third baseman, Emmit Beard, A Company, slammed a homer and drove in James Thornton, Company C, centerfielder, who had singled previously.

Artillery's pitching performance was accomplished by Hardimen, and Robert Ellis, Charlie Company, managed the mound work for the other nine.

To justify their contention that the difficulty is only temporary, the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantrymen are anxiously awaiting the June 24 encounter with the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery to demonstrate their winning style.

Earns Commandants Trophy

Squad Leader 'Tops' at School

A 26-year-old rifle squad leader from the 2nd Bn., 38th Infantry has recently returned from the 3rd Army NCO Academy with highest possible honors.

Sgt. Roy M. Nilson was selected as the honor graduate at the Fort Jackson, S. C. school.

In addition to his top class standing Sgt. Nilson was awarded the Commandants Trophy which is significant of his show of leadership ability and for having accumulated the lowest number of demerites during his six week stay at the academy.

In landing the top graduate honors, Sgt. Nilson accumulated an acadamic average of 94.6.

The sergeant lauded the school as one of the most valuable experiences available to an Army careerist. He mentioned the constant activity which characterized the academy, the numerous hours of study an preparation and the efforts that went into keeping ones appearance and that of the billets spotless.

The Battalion Executive Officer, Maj. Leslie, traveled to the commencement exercise and praised Sgt. Nilsen by saying that his showing was the best in the last six NCO School classes.

Sgt. Nislen is a native of Huntington, N. Y.

Aviation Couples Meet For Buffet

Officers of the 11th Aviation Company (General Support) and their wives met at the Chickasaw Club on June 11, 1965, for a sea food buffet.

The group gathered to say farewell to Capt. and Mrs. John J. Todd and Maj. and Mrs. Donald J. Rosato. Maj. Rosato was flight surgeon of the 11th Aviation Group.

Maj. Paul E. Carpenter, company commander, presented a plaque to Capt. Todd and a silver mug to Maj. Rosato.

New 1st Sgt.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, of the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry, 2nd Air Assault Brigade announces the recent promotion of their first sergeant.

1st Sgt. Lavelle W. Wallace was awarded his new stripes last Saturday by Col. William R. Lynch, 2nd Brigade commanding officer.

The new first sergeant entered the army in 1948 and has had several assignments here in the United States and in Europe. In November of 1963 he was assigned to the 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry as the battalion supply sergeant. While serving as battalion supply sergeant, 1st sergeant Wallace was commended on many occasions for his outstanding performance of duty.

In December 1964 he was Company as first sergeant.

Colors to Change Tomorrow At Post's Doughboy Stadium

The 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) came into official existence yesterday, July 1, but its colors will not arrive at Fort Benning until tomorrow morning.

At 10:00 a.m., July 3 in Fort Benning's Doughboy Stadium, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard will accept the colors of the Army's only cavalry division.

This is the first time in 22 years that the colors of the "1st Cav" have returned to the United States.

The new unit, to be commanded by Gen. Kinnard, was formed out of the troops and equipment of the 2nd Infantry Division and the 11th Air Assault Division. The colors of the experimental 11th will be retired at the same ceremony.

Cavalry division spokesmen estimated that some 7,500 soldiers will be seated in the stadium to witness the handing over of the colors of the Army's first air mobile division.

Heintges Nominated For Third Star--I Corps

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Fort Benning commander and Commandant of The Infantry School since August 1, 1964, has been nominated for his third star and reassigned as commanding general of I Corps, Korea, the Department of the Army announced Tuesday.

The announcement did not include the name of his successor here or the effective date of his new assignment.

Gen. Heintges, who will replace Lt. Gen. Edgar C. Doleman in Korea, came to Fort Benning last summer from Fort Carson, Colo., where he was commanding general of the 5th Infantry Division.

YAC Carnival Activities Set for Noon Tomorrow

Biggest in the plans for Fort Benning's observation of the July 4th weekend is the YAC (Youth Activities Club) Carnival.

According to Carnival organizers, the affair has a dual purpose, to raise funds for the Youth Club and to keep people off the highways.

The Carnival is set for noon on Saturday, July 3 at Eubanks Field. The general public is invited to attend. It will feature rides, games and athletic events for military and non-military participants.

In the military games portion, divided into two categories — unit and individual —there will be competition in a cross-country run, a confidence course, platoon drill, a physical combat proficiency test, rifle and pistol firing and a driver's proficiency test.

In addition to the best overall unit receiving the commanding general's trophy, substantial monetary awards will be made for over-all first, second and third place individual winners.

The small arms firing will be conducted July 2 at 9 a.m. with the rifle competition at McAndrews Range and pistol at lower Shelton Range. The presentation of awards will be held July 4 at 8 p.m. at Sightseeing Field before the fireworks show.

Carnival officials said the awards ceremony at the conclusion of the YAC festivities will be held in Marshall Auditorium if weather is inclement.

An Independence Day ceremony will be conducted in

Col. Williams Retires With High Award

The Legion of Merit was awarded to Col. Robert C. Williams of New City, N. Y., president of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning, upon his retirement June 30 after 32 years of military service.

Cited for exceptionally meritorious service, Col. Williams was presented the medal by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

Col. Williams distinguished himself while serving in successive positions of responsibility as director of the Small Arms Department, as deputy president, and then president of the Infantry Board from May 1960 to June 1965.

The citation accompanying the medal read in part:

'GI Home Loans' Available From VA

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Another popular form of home - buying for former and present members of the armed forces is the "GI Home Loan," obtained from lending firms with a guarantee from the Veterans Administration (VA).

The maximum entitlement (entitlement means the guaranty or insurance benefits available from the VA) a veteran may receive is $7,500 for home loans; $4,000 for other real estate loans; and $2,000 for non - real estate loans.

To be eligible for a GI loan, veterans must have been on active duty on or after Sept. 16, 1940 and prior to July 26, 1947 (WW II); on or after June 27, 1950 and prior to Feb. 1, 1955 (Korea); received a discharge or separation under other than dishonorable conditions and have at least 90-days total service unless discharged earlier for service-connected disabilities.

An eligible WWII or Korean veteran's entitlement expires 10 years from the date of discharge or release from last period of active duty, any part of which occurred in WWII or the Korean conflict, plus an additional period equal to one year for each three months of active duty in the two conflicts. However, in no case will the entitlement of an eligible WWII veteran extend beyond July 25, 1967. The cut - off date for Korean veterans is Jan. 31, 1975.

Some veterans who have had their entitlement recomputed or were discharged for service - connected disabilities, and unremarried widows of servicemen, are eligible for entitlement until the 1975 date.

Entitlement derived from service during the Korean conflict cancels any unused entitlement derived from service during WWII.

Veterans of both conflicts who have sold homes, farms or business properties they purchased with loans for which WWII entitlement was used, will have full entitlement. For Korean service provided the VA has been repaid in full for any liability incurred or loss suffered on the loans.

A VA guaranty covers 60 per cent of a GI loan with a maximum guarantee of $7,500 on a dwelling the veteran occupies as his home. On other loans, the VA guarantees the lender against loss up to 50 per cent of the loan. Interest rates on VA - guaranteed loans may not exceed 5½ per cent per year on the unpaid balance. Fees and charges may not exceed those allowed by the VA.

Instead of a VA-guaranty, some lenders prefer to use the VA-insured loan program. The interest rate may not exceed 5¼ per cent per year. The interest rate on insured non - realty loans (generally for farm or business purposes) may not exceed a 3 per cent discount rate or an equivalent simple interest rate of 5.7 per cent per year.

The certificate of eligibility (VA Form 26 - 1870) is the medium by which the VA certifies as to the eligibility of the veteran. This form and other pertinent data concerning a veteran's eligibility can be obtained at any VA office.

Awarded Legion of Merit

The president of the Infantry Board, Col. Robert C. Williams, was honored Monday, June 28 during his retirement ceremony in the office of Fort Benning's commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges. Chief item of business on the agenda was the presentation of the Legion of Merit to Williams.

Soldier Blood Saves People

WASHINGTON (ANF) — A Basic Combat Training Center recent crisis at the District of Columbia General Hospital highlighted the important role played by the Army and other Armed Forces in producing a life-saving medicine.

When a woman suffering from smallpox arrived at the hospital, it was necessary to protect other patients who had come in contact with her. The special drug that was used is derived from the blood donations of Armed Forces' recruits.

Called Vaccinia Immune Globulin, or V-I-G, it is used to combat rare and deadly diseases, especially smallpox, in emergency situations where it is necessary to immunize people who are too ill to be vaccinated in the normal manner.

The Red Cross is the only producer of V-I-G in this country. It's derived from the blood of humans who have recently been vaccinated against smallpox. Thus Armed Forces' recruits are an ideal source and, in fact, the Red Cross relies on their donations for its entire V-I-G production.

The last blood collection for the medicine was at the Army's Fort Knox, Ky. Plans are underway for collections at Fort Jackson, S.C., and Fort Dix, N.J., both Army and Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Prominent Visitors To Fort Benning

Thirteen prominent business and civic leaders of the Fort Lauderdale, Fla. area, members of the Third Army Advisory Council, were given an insight into Army techniques while at Fort Benning June 29-30.

The group, which included attorneys, stock brokers, Chamber of Commerce and Junior Chamber of Commerce members, arrived at Lawson Army Airfield Tuesday.

They were welcomed by Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, on Gordon Field.

Program Cancelled

Fort Benning Boy Scout officials today announced that "The Outdoor Program — Leaders Training Series," originally scheduled to take place from 5:00 p.m. July 9 to 11:30 a.m. July 11 at Fort Benning's Camp Pine Knot has been postponed indefinitely.

The outdoor program will be held but at a later date, boy scout leaders added.

Carnival

front of Bldg. 4 on Monday, July 5. The program will start at 11:45 a.m. with The Infantry Center Band playing appropriate selections. At 12 noon, a 50 - gun salute will be fired by the 197th Infantry Brigade in honor of each state of the union. The ceremony will end with the band playing the national anthem.

Col. and Mrs. Williams plan to make their home in Columbus, Ga.

Red Cross Course Set for July 20

A Red Cross spokesman this week announced the volunteer basic course scheduled for July.

The course is scheduled for Martin Army Hospital July 20 through July 22.

The announcement said interested persons should call the Red Cross office. Applications are made through personal interviews only, the statement said.

General's Message

For The Fourth

I extend to all members of this command and their families my best wishes for a pleasant and safe Fourth of July.

Although this national holiday is traditionally a period for relaxation, family activities and respite from normal duties, we should not lose sight of the fact that it marks the birth of our Nation.

Together, the thirteen American colonies raised the voice of independence 189 years ago. Today, the united voice of 50 states proclaims its message of hope and encouragement for the oppressed and enslaved throughout the world.

I enjoin you to reflect on the significace of this day and be proud of your part in perpetrating our wonderful heritage of freedom.

JOHN A. HEINTGES
Major General, USA
Commanding

The Judge Says . . .

During a man's lifetime, he will assume many obligations. One of the foremost of these is the obligation to support his wife and children. Many servicemen are today finding themselves in a great deal of trouble because they have shirked their duty of support.

Let's take a look at the possible legal consequences that may result from nonsupport. First of all, your wife may notify your unit commander through channels of your failure to provide support for your family. At the least, this will cause great embarrassment to you and possibly it will lead to disciplinary or adverse administrative action.

Secondly, there are many civil consequences that may result from shirking your responsibility. All states provide for civil proceedings for nonsupport. In these proceedings the husband is brought into court and either pays up or he can go to jail. Also, as a few men can testify, you can't escape this civil proceeding by being stationed in a state other than that in which your family resides.

By means of the "Uniform Reciprocal Act," the long arms of the law can reach you in any state. Some states even make nonsupport a criminal offense with a prison term as punishment. As you can see, it is best to meet your obligation of support and to meet it promptly.

Now, a word to those who are divorced. It is the infrequent case where divorce terminates the obligation of support, often divorce increases this obligation. Failure to obey the provisions of a divorce decree as to alimony and child support payments can lead to the same kind of trouble as the failure of a married man to provide support. Even if you remarry, you are still bound to pay the amount provided for in the divorce decree.

If you can't afford to pay, because of the burden of supporting two families, it may be possible for you to have the decree amended. Don't just sit around without paying. You may find that the payments due will accumulate to the point that you are suddenly way over your head and you could wind up in jail for failing to obey the decree.

If you are having difficulties in supporting your dependents, do something about it. Personnel of the Soldiers Advocate Division of the Staff Judge Advocate's Office (Building 1679, phone 545-4893) are ready and willing to help you with this or any other legal problem.

Can Be Dangerous

Watch Your Credit

We, as members of the armed forces, should know all the aspects of credit and how to use it. Credit can be of great value if handled properly. It can also cause serious trouble if used incorrectly.

As members of the military service we have a special or preferred status in our use of credit, since we enjoy a steady income and have a reputation for paying our debts. A lender knows that he will have little trouble collecting. He knows that we are under military regulations which require us to meet our just and legal obligations. And if the debt is not paid, he can contact our commanding officer.

Before going out and pruchasing goods on credit, we should stop and define its meaning. Credit is an individual's ability to obtain goods, services or money, on a promise to repay at a future date. It implies that the user is reliable and trustworthy and that the merchant or lending agency expects repayment, usually with interest, within a specified time.

Credit is a valuable asset, but if used unwisely it can also be the source of financial hardship and personal embarrassment. Credit is too often a means of easy money without the understanding that it can also be a source of sorrow for the user. This can be proven in many bankruptcy courts. Don't let it be said about you, "He is a bad credit risk."

Financial trouble in the armed services can be avoided if its members consult their commanders before making commitments.

First of all, we should prepare a budget for ourselves and planned expenditures must be carefully considered before any other obligation is assumed. Living within our means should become a habit. The point is that it is the service member's responsibility to avoid incurring debts unless he has the capability to meet required payments on time.

The greatest single cause of financial difficulty is failure to have a savings account which is available for unexpected expenses. Financial counselors advise clients to maintain a savings account and make regular deposits as a part of their planned budget.

Credit can be like fire. It can be most useful when used wisely, but it can be very destructive when used carelessly. The cost of mismanagement is high, but it can be avoided by using good judgment and common sense. Use credit wisely to avoid financial pitfalls. (AFPS)

Last Appeal

Dig Deep for AER

The AER-ARS fund campaign will officially end July 10. There is no immediate report as to the amount of money contributed so far. However, with payday only two days past, the average soldier's pockets still jingle. All money contributed here to these worthy organizations stays here to benefit Fort Benning personnel and their dependents in time of need.

Gen. Heintges made an appeal at the start of the campaign and the BAYONET makes this appeal as it nears its close. Additional contributions are needed! Make sure local funds are adequate by making an "insurance" contribution of any amount, even though you may have given before.

You, or your family, could be the beneficiary of your own contribution.

When the Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society fund campaign started this past May, Fort Benning commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges addressed a "kickoff" meeting of keymen.

He reminded those present that despite the worthiness of similar campaigns held during the year for local and national agencies, the AER-ARS was "in a different category."

He cited the AER and ARS as the "Army's 'OWN' agencies to provide our 'OWN' personnel and their dependents with financial assistance when they are faced with emergencies they cannot meet!"

The general also pointed out that every man in the service was "a potential beneficiary of Army Emergency Relief no matter how in order his affairs may be at the moment."

Chaplain's Corner

We Are All Teachers

By Chaplain Thomas K. Lightcap

A ruler once wanted to honor the most important person in his kingdom. He sent out messengers and told them to bring to him the one that they thought to be the most worthy.

On the appointed day, the messengers returned; one with a doctor who had solved the riddle of a dreaded disease; another with a lawyer who had unified the country's laws and made them respected by all; and another with a soldier who had made the plans that had saved the land from invasion.

The king was about to choose one of these when another of the messengers arrived with an old lady. "Your Majesty," he said, "this lady is your most important citizen. She has contributed more to your kingdom than any one of these men for she was their teacher."

Teachers are very important people. Usually we think of them only in relation to school and the classroom. However, when we stop to think just what a teacher is — one who instructs — we realize that there are many who do just this and who never enter into a classroom and have no connection with schools. In fact, we can truthfully say that we are all teachers.

Throughout our every waking hour we go about teaching and instructing one another and we do this chiefly by the example that we give. Others learn by what they see us do and hear us say.

Example is the strongest influence that we can have over another person. We can tell a man that a thing should or should not be done; we can argue long hours and prove our point but unless we have been accustomed to actually doing or not doing the thing ourselves, our arguments have been in vain and we will never be convincing.

With everything that we say or do we give example either for the good or for the bad. WE NEVER KNOW WHAT HARM OUR BAD EXAMPLE MIGHT DO — WE NEVER KNOW WHAT GOOD OUR GOOD EXAMPLE MIGHT DO.

Quote of the Week

"Our glory is peace, not war; our greatness is in people, not power. The history of America is a history of outstanding achievements by individuals." — President Johnson at ceremony awarding 30 Presidential Medals of Freedom, Sept. 14, 1964.

NCO Wives Install New Officers

Newly elected officers of the Main Post NCO Wives Club were installed recently at a luncheon at Crain Hall.

Floral arrangements of gladioli and mums decorated the tables along with a cake inscribed, "Congratulations 1965-1966 NCO Wives Club."

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Robert Lamb, Mrs. Charles Whitlock, Mrs. Henry Rosiak and Mrs. Robert Simms.

Mrs. Lamb, outgoing president, issued certificates of appreciation to her Executive Board members & chairmen. Mrs. Floyd Hightower, a past president of the Club, installed the following officers: Mrs. Charles Root, president; Mrs. Herman Mayo, first vice president; Mrs. Raymond Field, second vice president; Mrs. Harley Turner, recording secretary; Mrs. Clifford Curliss, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Henry Barbian, treasurer; and Mrs. Robert Wright, assistant treasurer.

Mrs. Lamb presented the gavel to the new president. Mrs. Root spoke to the Club members about the purpose of the Club, pointing out its three objectives and explaining how each objective could be developed and promoted. She also outlined a plan to triple the membership by the end of 1965.

Mrs. Root then introduced the chairmen of committees: Mrs. Arthur Purser, parliamentarian; Mrs. Steve Zagorac, membership; Mrs. Vincent Difilippo, program; Mrs. Allen Fischer, publicity; Mrs. George Cox, hospitality; Mrs. Stephen Graziano, ceramics; Mrs. Leroy Walsh, mimeograph; Mrs. Emerich Baksi, Red Cross coffee; Mrs. George Snavely, sunshine; Mrs. John Downey, welfare; Mrs. Henry Speech, ways and means; Mrs. Bobby Hight, bridge; Mrs. Donald McDewell, lending wagon; Mrs. Charles Greenwell, telephone; and Mrs. Robert Edwards, bingo.

Self-Governing

Dependent teens at Fort Benning are taking an active part in revitalizing their club. So far they have drawn up and ratified a new constitution, renamed their clubhouse as "Teen Square" and elected their own council shown here in session. From left to right are Bill O'Dell, vice president; Mary O'Neill, secretary; Katy Hennessey, president; Sally Hennessey, treasurer; and Ronnie Shaddix, program chairman. (Photo by SSgt. Dance to be Given Air Force Cadets

A formal reception and dance for the U. S. Air Force Academy Class of 1968 will be held in the Supper Club of Fort Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess on July 14 at 8 p.m.

The reception and dance will be hosted by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges and Mrs. Heintges.

Young ladies between the ages of 17 and 22 living in the Columbus area who desire their names placed on a tentative guest list for the reception and dance are asked to telephone 545-1811, the Protocol Office at Fort Benning.

Infantry School Group Says Hello and Goodbye

The officers and ladies of the Staff Group, Brigade and Battalion Operations Department recently met at the Corregidor Room, Main Officers Open Mess to welcome newcomers and bid farewell to departing members.

Lt. Col. Hollis C. Lawrence, Staff Group chief presented plaques to five departing officers. They are: Maj. Ralph L. Comer and Capt. Eugene R. Cocke, who are scheduled to attend the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; Maj. Donald F. Hanson, who will complete work for his baccalaureate degree at the University of Omaha; Capt. George R. Stotser, who will attend the Naval Command and Staff College at Newport, R.I.; and 1st Lt. Brooks Von Arx who is returning to civilian legal practice.

Capt. and Mrs. Cocke and Capt. and Mrs. Stephan R. Pawlik were presented silver baby cups.

Welcomed to the Staff Group, were: Lt. Col. and Mrs. Robert A. Cronk, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Madison C. Wright II, Capt. and Mrs. H. T. Eubanks; Capt. and Mrs. Victor A. Weber, Capt. and Mrs. Joe D. Berry, Capt. Roy L. Allison, Lt. and Mrs. William A. Claerhout and Lt. and Mrs. Donald R. Whidden.

Special guests for the evening were: Col. James O. Jones, Department director, and Mrs. Jones; Mrs. Henrietta M. Hanson, mother of Maj. Hanson; Mrs. William R. Lee, wife of Capt. Lee, a former instructor in the Department; and Miss Barbara Miller, guest of Capt. Allison.

E, H Savings Bonds Up During May

Washington (AFPS) — Public holdings of Series E and H United States Savings Bonds gained $64 million in May, the Treasury Department reported recently.

Cash sales of E and H bonds during May totaled $356 million, while redemptions, at cost price, were $340 million, leaving a net increase, at cost price of $16 million.

The total of E and H bonds outstanding topped the $48,733 million mark for a new all-time high. A year ago the figure was $47,637 million.

Posthumous Silver Star

The daughter of the late Capt. Royal Isaacs reaches out to touch the posthumously awarded decoration for valor earned by her father as a result of the heroism in Viet Nam which claimed his life. Mrs. Isaacs, who lives in Phenix City, accepted her husband's Silver Star from Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

Gen. Heintges Presents Silver Star To Widow of Viet Nam Hero

Mrs. Royal G. Isaacs Jr. of Phenix City, Ala., in ceremonies Friday (June 25) in the office of Fort Benning's commanding general, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, accepted a Silver Star awarded posthumously to her husband, Capt. Isaacs, who died April 23 in Vietnam.

Holding her nine-month-old daughter, Sherry, in her arms, Mrs. Isaacs heard the citation for gallantry in action read before Gen. Heintges presented the medal.

Isaacs was serving as an advisor to a Vietnamese strike force company that was engaged in a fierce encounter with a "hard - core Viet Cong unit," the citation said.

"Capt. Isaacs immediately estimated the situation, formulated plans, and recommended appropriate action to his counterpart to consolidate friendly forces into more favorable positions.

"During the course of the battle, two U. S. Advisors were wounded. With complete disregard for his own safety, Capt. Isaacs rushed to their aid and administered medical aid while under intense enemy fire.

"Capt. Isaacs remained with the wounded soldiers giving them medical attention at a location exposed to the Viet Cong guns until he was mortally wounded.

"Capt. Isaacs' gallantry was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service."

The Silver Star is the third highest award given for heroism in combat.

The ceremony in Gen. Heintges' office was attended by close relatives and friends of Capt. and Mrs. Isaacs.

Isaacs was stationed at Fort Benning in 1961 when he was an enlisted man. He graduated from OCS at Fort Sill, Okla., and returned here for Airborne training.

Two Benning Dependents Join 'Point' Plebes

Two sons of Fort Benning soldiers have won appointments to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Joseph E. Halloran III and Walter W. Mischler joined the class of West Point "plebes" which reported July 1.

Halloran is the son of Lt. Col. Joseph Halloran Jr., commander of the 577th Engineer Battalion, Center Troop Command. Mischler is the 18-year-old son of Capt. Paul Mischler, personnel officer of The Student Brigade.

Both youths had outstanding athletic and academic records in high school.

Mischler graduated from Pacelli High School in Columbus where he lettered in football and track. He had already been accepted by the University of Notre Dame where he was to study aeronautical engineering when notification of West Point acceptance arrived.

Halloran graduated from Baker High School where he played end on the varsity football team and won the Honorary Merit Scholarship to prove his scholastic prowess. He also holds letters as a track man.

Study Group Examines Credit Practices Affecting Servicemen

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Proposals are being examined by an inter-service study group concerning present consumer credit practices affecting military personnel.

The group was established by Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower), Norman S. Paul. Heading the group is Mr. Stephen S. Jackson, a senior staff member in Secretary Paul's office.

One proposal being considered is the requirement of certification as a DOD approved financial company for guidance of servicemen.

Secretary Paul said some of these possible requirements include: compliance with a code of ethics and standards of business conduct to be developed after research and coordination with other Federal agencies including the President's Committee on Consumer Interests; clear concise disclosure of all costs, interest or otherwise, included in the financing transaction; and the use of standard forms for the financing contract or instrument, which must not provide a penalty for prepayment of principal or interest, a waiver of rights or benefits under the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act, or any similar provision prejudicial to the borrower.

Another proposal mentioned by Secretary Paul would require the lender and the borrower to execute a DOD form which would require an accurate annual interest rate and other pertinent data to spell out truth in lending.

Secretary Paul said that opposite each such entry on the form would be comparable information pertaining to a loan from a Federal Credit Union.

"If the creditor refuses to execute such a form," the secretary explained, "he would be advised that the military service would not render him any assistance with respect to recovering a default of payment on the part of the serviceman."

The matter of denying the serviceman an allotment unless this form is executed is also under consideration, Secretary Paul said.

It was pointed out by the secretary that any proposals of the study group would have to be coordinated within the Dpfense Department as well as with other executive agencies involved in development of administration policy.

Set for Florida, Mid-July

Reunion Loses Official Backing But Admin Leave Still Available

With word of the 2nd Infantry Division — 11th Air Assault Division merger official, leaders of the infantry unit recently announced withdrawal of their support from the annual 2nd (Indianhead) Division Association reunion.

The gathering is set for July 14, 15 and 16 at the Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla.

The leaders said, however, that an earlier decision to allow individual soldiers seven days of administrative (non-accountable) leave-time, in which to attend the reunion, would remain in effect.

"The final decision on administrative leave is up to the unit commander," one spokesman said, "but we expect a number of soldiers to apply for and receive it.

"The meeting site is the closest the Association has been to Fort Benning in years and despite the turmoil inherent in the merger, a large group of active Army men is expected."

General Will Speak

Although Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles will have officially left the division when the reunion is held, he has agreed to fulfill his personal commitment as the featured speaker of the climaxing banquet Saturday evening, July 17.

Originally, according to Lt. Paul J. Meyer, the project officer, the divsion had figured to provide transportation to Florida and to send public information and civil affairs teams as a vanguard.

The Liscum and Korean Bowls were to be displayed along with dozens of other 2nd Division treasures and relics.

But when the reunion occurs, the 2nd Division will be established in Korea and and most of the men who formerly wore Indianhead patches will be members of the new 1st Cavalry Division Air Mobile. Also, many of the new division members will be from the 11th Air Assault Division with no ties whatever with the Indianhead Association.

"It could be very confusing," Lt. Meyer said, "So we've decided that the active men who go will be strictly on their own. They will not be going as members of the division, but as members of the association."

The same rates which have been continuously published in The Bayonet will be in effect during the reunion, Lt. Meyer said.

Entertainment Planned

Don Cuddy, a representative of the hotel, said a guest star comedian has been booked as an added-attraction for the reunion opening, Thursday evening, July 15.

"Entertainment in the Tack Room is now Diplomat Tiger a Go Go," he said. "There are three blasts nightly with The Legends, a wild horn blown by Andy Dio and some skat singing by Ric Tyson.

"Main attraction is our Tiger girls, billed as "The Nuts," who perform (in circus cages) the watusi, frug, swim and however the spirit moves 'em."

The hotel, with banquet and entertaining facilities for 1,500 and eight separate dining areas, is 10 miles from Miami Beach to the south and Fort Lauderdale to the north.

Horse and dog racing and a Jai Alai fronton are nearby. Sport fishing is available.

And the hotel has two 18-hole golf courses and six tournament - caliber tennis courts.

The Diplomat West—where special rates of $6 for single and $8 for double rooms will be in effect — is set on the bank of the Intercoastal Waterway, adjacent to the main hotel structure.

Diplomat West can accommodate 150 persons, has two pools, a dining room, terrace and lounge.

According to hotel officials, reservations should be made now.

Infantry Agency Represents Needs of Future Soldiers

NEW CHIEF
Col. Hooper

Col. Hooper To Command Inf. Agency

Col. Philip L. Hooper, formerly chief of staff of the 1st Inf. Div. at Fort Riley, Kan., yesterday (July 1) assumed command of the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency (CDCIA) at Fort Benning.

Hooper arrived yesterday to meet the Agency staff and attend anniversary activities, but later returned to Fort Riley where he will remain until the 15th of July.

The new CDCIA chief was commissioned a reserve second lieutenant in 1936 and served with the 112th Cavalry (Horse) of the Texas National Guard. He competed each year from 1937 until 1941 in the National Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio and was commandant of cadets at Woodrow Wilson High School in Dallas, Texas.

During World War II, Hooper went to the Pacific theater with the 112th Cavalry Regiment and served 48 months there.

He later served as a member of the general staff in the Office of the Chief of Staff and then was assigned to Joint Task Force Three as a member of the operations staff for atomic test operations at the Pacific Eniwetok Atoll. This was followed, in 1951, with assignment to the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico where he was operations officer of the Atomic Test Division. During this period, he participated in Operations IVY and CASTLE in the Eniwetok-Bikini area.

Following this duty in the Pacific, Hooper went to Europe where he attended, and graduated from, the NATO Defense College in Paris. This resulted in an assignment, of four years' duration, as Chief of Atomic Plans at SHAPE under General Lauris Norstad.

After returning to the United States, Hooper attended the Army War College in 1959 and, after graduation, was assigned as military assistant to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Atomic Energy.

Yesterday Marked Agency's Third Year in Present Role of Service

Yesterday was the third anniversary of the US Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency (CDCIA) as a separate organization at Fort Benning.

The Agency was activated July 1, 1962 under the command of the Combat Developments Command at Fort Belvoir, Va.

The mission of the Agency is to determine how the Infantry will be organized and equipped and how it will fight, now and in the future.

Infantry combat developments functions were previously shared by the Infantry School and the Infantry Board at Fort Benning.

The Infantry School's share of the job was centralized in the Combat Developments Office, which was the forerunner of the Infantry Agency. The Infantry Board was then under USCONARC, like the Infantry School.

Developer

Under the present setup, the AMC is the developer of new material items to meet the operational requirements of the Army. The Infantry Agency represents the "user," that is, the Combat Infantry soldier, the squad platoon, company, battalion and brigade, by establishing requirements for the developer (AMC and industry) to meet.

No less important is the job of developing doctrine and organizations based on new and changing concepts of combat operations and the state-of-the-art of development in industry, also a function of the Agency.

The Agency can point with pride to many achievements considered to be of critical and lasting importance to the Infantry. Perhaps one of the most valuable overall projects is the development of a Study to Conserve the Energy of the Combat Infantryman. Another project is Top Priority Infantry Materiel Items.

250 Projects

The Infantry Agency also monitors over 250 materiel developments projects, and has completed approximately 30 Qualitative Materiel Development Objectives (QMDO), Qualitative Materiel Requirements (QMR), and Small Development Requirements (SDR).

Recent significant QMRs include Adverse Weather Air Drop System (approved by Department of the Army), Universal Ground Proximity Aerial Unloading System, Tactical Individual Transporter and Tactical Assault Cargo Transporter.

The first two will improve Infantry mobility by delivering airborne forces in any weather and unloading aircraft without landing. The last two will enable soldiers to fly without aircraft and provide aircraft that fly without being manned.

Another materiel development project of special significance is the Lightweight Radio Transmitter and Receiver, or "Squad Radio." Currently, the means of communication at the squad level is visual (hand and arm signals) and sound (shouting). The new radio will provide a new means of communication for the squad leader to issue orders to key members of the squad (fire team leaders and machine gunners) without shouting or leaving a vantage point or covered position.

Receiver

The lightweight (18 ounces) radio receiver may be mounted on the standard steel helmet, carried in the uniform pocket or hand held. The lightweight transmitter (18 ounces) may be hand held, clipped on the uniform or carried in the pocket.

Two additional significant materiel projects include the lightweight, very short range radar, and LASER (Light Amplification by Stimulated Emission of Radiation) range finder. The requirment for a small radar has been recognized within the Infantry for approximately 23 years. The technological state-of-the-art will not permit a 10 pound device providing a nearly all-weather capability to detect, locate and define moving personnel and vehicles in the forward battle area.

Future projects also are planned to include a concept study of the Infantry for 1975, and Organization Studies to develop new mechanized Infantry Concepts and to combine the best features of Airborne Infantry, Air Assault Infantry and Airmobile Infantry, and a study of the successor vehicle to the M113 Armored Personnel Carrier.

To accomplish these varied and comprehensive tasks, the Agency is organized into three functional division, each under an experienced Infantry Colonel.

The advanced studies and plans division and the small arms weapons systems study group are headed by Col. Marcus L. Powell.

The doctrine and organization division is headed by Col. William T. Gordon.

The combat materiel division is headed by Col. Kermit B. Blaney.

Off-Duty Hours Filled By Infantry Agency

The Infantry Agency, which yesterday celebrated its third anniversary, conducts a program of social, entertainment, recreational and community support activities.

What it lacks in size (39 officers, 9 enlisted men and 22 civilian personnel), it makes up in support of Fort Benning community activities.

The off-duty program is designed to stimulate interest and participation by the families of members of the Agency, and includes a post chapel usher team, a monthly bridge social, weekly bowling and a quarterly social function such as a dinner dance or informal picnic type get-together.

From time to time, Open House is held for families and friends at the Agency office in Building 241 on Baltzell Avenue.

This is in the old post hospital area and was the residence of the hospital nurses before being remodeled as an office building in 1963.

The Agency has been cited by the Columbus - Phenix City - Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) for outstanding support.

Members of the Agency also have served in key positions on the Officers' Club Board of Governors and committees, the Post Conservation and Fish and Game Boards, the Youth Activities program, Swimming Teams, Little League Baseball, Boys Football Coaching, Boy Scout District Committee and Girl Scouting, NCO Club, Chapel Choirs, Jewish Center, Woman's Club activities and have assisted in management of the Parent-Teachers' Association and as School Teachers.

A committee of representatives from the various functional divisions of the Infantry Agency manages each of its off-duty programs.

The bowling committee is headed by Colonel Kermit B. Blaney.

The Agency bowling team recently won the Infantry School Officers' League 1964-65 championship. The Agency team won the fall series, was runner-up in the spring bowling series and won the playoff for the year.

The entertainment committee is headed by Colonel William T. Gordon, Chief of the Doctrine and Organization Division and the bridge committee is headed by Colonel Eugene A. Watts, chief Operations and Administration Division. One Saturday night each month, approximately 40 members and their wives who enjoy party bridge get together at the quarters of a member for a covered dish supper and an evening of progressive bridge.

The Infantry Agency has furnished the leadership for the Main Post Protestant Chapel Usher Program for the past year by scheduling ushers for the 11 o'clock service. The Agency has also provided Usher Term Number 2, headed by Colonel Marcus L. Powell Jr.

Col. Eckland New Retiree

Col. Kenneth E. Eckland, commanding officer, US Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency since December 1961, retired from active duty on June 30, bringing to a close more than 34 years of military service.

A native of Nebraska, Eckland enlisted in Company E, 134th Infantry Regiment, 35th Infantry Division (National Guard), at Scottsbluff, Nebraska on December 21, 1931 and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant of Infantry on March 14, 1937. Completing schooling at the United States Army Infantry School in 1941, he graduated from the US Army Command and General Staff College in 1943.

Eckland served with the 100th Infantry Division during four campaigns in the European Theater of Operations as assistant chief of staff G-3 (Operations) for 33 months during World War II.

For outstanding service during this period, Eckland was awarded the French Croix de Guerre, Bronze Star Medal and the Africa and Middle East Campaign Medal with three battle stars.

Upon his return to the United States in 1946 from World War II service, he commanded the Colorado Springs Military Sub-District for Organized Reserves, Colorado; served in the Philippines as battalion commander with the 57th Infantry Regiment (PS) from 1947 through 1949; and in 1950 graduated from the Armed Forces Staff College.

During 1952 and 1953, he again saw overseas service, this time with Headquarters, VII Corps in Germany, serving as assistant chief of staff, G-1. Returning from Germany in late 1953, he attended and was graduated from the US Army War College in 1954.

An Airborne trooper, Col. Eckland served as commanding officer of the 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 82d Airborne Division from July 1954 to June 1958.

Devine Doughboy

Miss Columbus 1965, Kathi Devine, brightened the day early this week for post commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, when she dropped in for an "unofficial" visit. The appreciative CG commented that she ought to be an "Honorary Doughboy." Miss Devine, who will compete next week in the Miss Georgia Pageant, is the daughter of CWO and Mrs. David Devine, 1st Cav. Girls' Names Limit Storm Confusion During Hurricane Seasons—Society Says

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — When the Weather Bureau gives a hurricane a girl's name it is not playing games. The names have a definite purpose, officials of the National Geographic Society say.

The use of short, easily remembered names helps to avoid errors in the transmission of vital information between widely scattered stations, ships at sea and hurricane - hunting planes that fly into the center of the storms. The names also reduce confusion when two or more storms occur at the same time.

In 1960, a semi-permanent roster of four sets of names was introduced. A separate set is used each year, beginning with the first name in the group. After four years the rotation of sets begins again. When a major hurricane affects the United States, its name is retired for 10 years and another substituted.

For the 1965 hurricane season the names are: Anna, Betsy, Carol, Debbie, Elena, Frances, Gerda, Holly, Inga, Jenny, Kara, Laurie, Martha, Netty, Orva, Peggy, Rhoda, Sadie, Tanya, Virgy and Wenda.

2nd Conducts Review

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, in the final hours of his command of the 2nd Infantry Division, Tuesday afternoon gave his best wishes to 18 retiring soldiers in a miniature review on Marne Field.

Chiles spoke briefly to the retirees and a group of spectators who gathered on the field for the division's last review. It has been a tradition in the 2nd Division to honor retiring soldiers near the end of each month with a review.

"My family and I are proud to have served with the 2nd Infantry Division for the third time," Chiles said. He wished them godspeed and goodbye.

Although the division's colors and its living symbol, Sgt. Marland "Chief" Tahbonemah, were missing from the review, it was conducted in the traditional fashion with the 2nd Division band playing.

The colors of the division and Tahbonemah have gone to Korea for the new 2nd Division designated there this week.

NCOs, Colors Arrive At Station in Korea

As 2nd Infantry Division soldiers were wearing their patch for the final day on Sand Hill, the Army received word that the Indianhead colors and escorts had received royal greetings on arrival at the division's new home in Korea.

An Army message received early Wednesday stated that sergeants major Robert L. Brown and Edward Leavitt, and the division's living symbol, Sgt. Marland Tahbonemah, arrived at Kimpo Air Force Base, Korea, at 9:40 a.m. Monday.

The three escorts, who will serve with the new 2nd Division, were met by three generals when they arrived. Meeting and greeting the Indianheads at the airport were the commanding generals of the Eighth U. S. Army, the 1st Corps and the 1st Cavalry Division.

The generals then escorted the party to Camp Howze, the new home of the 2nd Division.

The message also stated that SMaj. James L. Runyon arrived with cargo at 10:30 p.m. Monday.

Col. Tony F. Perpich, the 2nd Division Chief of Staff here, said he was happy to learn that the party had arrived in Korea. "I am really impressed by the welcome they are getting," he said.

Following a solemn change of colors ceremony Friday on Marne Field, the key NCOs departed Fort Benning Saturday morning by plane for Korea.

At Fort Benning the famed Indianhead patch that has been a familiar symbol in this area for seven years was coming off the sleeves of soldiers Wednesday as the new 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) was about to be designated.

Soldiers here are sending the patches to fellow 2nd Division soldiers in Korea.

The merger of the experimental 11th Air Assault Division and the Second officially became the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) Thursday. The giant yellow cavalry patch already is appearing on the untforms.

Service Medal Authorized For Dominican Duty

Fort Benning soldiers who served in the Dominican Republic crisis will soon be authorized to wear the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

According to an Armed Forces Press Service release, the medal is being authorized from April 28, 1965 to cutoff date, yet to be announced.

The release said changes will be made to existing Department of Defense regulations to include Dominican service.

There was no report as to when the changes would be made and the wearing of the medal authorized.

MATS to Become MAC in January

Scott AFB, Ill. (AFPS) — Beginning Jan. 1, 1966, the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) will officially be known as the Military Air Command (MAC), according to a MATS news release.

Representative L. Mendel Rivers D-S.C., Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, who introduced the bill calling for the name change, said it is more descriptive of the true function performed by MATS and provides recognition of its vital mission.

"The Congress," Rep. Rivers said, "and the public are aware of the magnificent performance in Operation Big Lift and other similar operations in recent years." Operation Big Lift was the 1963 exercise when MATS airlifted 15,000 Army personnel from Texas to Europe in just over 63 hours.

In its report to Congress, the committee praised MATS as an "essential arm of national defense" and added that ". . . virtually every element of the military services are in one way or another dependent on MATS."

Benning to Host AF Class of '68

The U.S. Air Force Academy Class of 1968 is scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning July 13 for summer training with the Infantry.

On July 14, the cadets will attend a formal reception and dance at which Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, commandant, The Infantry School, and Mrs. Heintges will be hosts.

Among the training and orientations in which the Air Force cadets will participate during their five-day stay will be Army aviation demonstrations, airborne orientations and training, and familiarization with the M-14 rifle and the 90-mm recoilless rifle.

'Point' Cadets See Benning Defense Show

Members of the U. S. Military Academy's Class of 1966 ended four days of training and orientations recently at Fort Benning.

Leaving shortly before the approximately 600 cadets was Maj. Gen. James B. Lampert, superintendent of the academy who had been on the post to see the West Pointers undergo Infantry training.

Each year the senior USMA class tours Army posts to become familiar with Army life and its training. Before coming to Fort Benning, they visited Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Sill, Okla.; and Fort Bliss, Texas.

While at the Infantry School, the cadets fired Infantry weapons, participated in a Signal Corps command post exercise, airborne orientation training and the leaders' reaction course.

One of the highlights of the visit was seeing the "Combined Arms Team in Defense" problem at Ruth Range, which demonstrated a forward mechanized rifle company's night defense, including the planning and coordination of fires or organic, attached and supporting weapons.

More to Get $55 Viet Nam Combat Pay

Department of Defense's new "hostile fire" pay directive opens the door for payment of $55 monthly to some 54,000 U. S. service personnel in the Republic of Viet Nam.

About one-fourth of this total was covered in an earlier directive. Now, all personnel not specifically excluded by the unified or specified commander concerned are entitled to the special pay.

This means that some 27,000 Navy personnel aboard Seventh Fleet vessels may qualify, although policy has been to award it only to certain personnel such as aircraft pilots flying missions and small boat operators and crewmen operating in coastal areas.

No change is noted in provisions for Dominican Republic service, where pay entitlements are earned by those killed or wounded in hostile fire.

Chiles Donates Combat Ribbons to Div Museum

The commanding general of the 2nd Division recently allowed himself a nostalgic moment or two when he turned over the original set of ribbons and combat decorations awarded him while he served with the division.

"There is a great sentiment to these ribbons," said Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, veteran of nearly 10 years of duty with the 2nd Infantry Division. His decorations were gained as a result of service with the division which covers a period of 24 years of military duty according to the general.

Maj. James R. Bell, assistant Chief of Staff, G-5 accepted the general's medals for the division museum. He described Chiles as "a man who has probably done more than any other for our division."

Among the ribbons donated were the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star with 1st Oak Leaf Cluster and the Legion of Merit with one Oak Leaf Cluster.

Fort Benning Visited By CENTO Members

The Permanent Military Deputies Group (PMDG) and other senior officers of the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO) visited Fort Benning June 29-30 as part of an orientation tour of Department of Defense facilities in the United States.

The Iranian PMD, Lt. Gen. Nader Batmanglidj, was accompanied by three others from Iran.

They were Air Force Brig. Gen. Manouchehr Pajuh-Afsar, Army Brig. Gen. Abdolmjid Massumi-Naini and Army Col. Morteza Gharavi.

The Turkish group included Lt. Gen. Resit Pasin (PMD), Army Major Gen. Zeki Ilter, Air Force Col. Orhan Germiyanoglu and Navy Capt. Erdogan Yanzici.

Air Marshal Sir Charles Broughton, Royal Air Force, PMD, Army Brigadier Edward Maitland-Makgill-Crichton, Air Force Group Capt. Norman Poole and Navy Capt. Barnaby Frederick Palmer Samborne comprised the United Kingdom group.

An honors ceremony for the visitors was conducted at York Field Tuesday, June 29.

Local commander for the ceremony was Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

The honor guard was provided by Company C, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by 1st Lt. Stephen M. Heller and a 15-gun salute fired by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery.

During the honors, The Infantry Center Band sounded three "Ruffles and Flourishes" and "The General's March" while the salute was fired.

The visitors were briefed on the origin and development of The Infantry School, toured Bldg. 4, and observed airborne training at Eubanks Field.

An official reception and dinner at the Main Officers' Open Mess rounded out the day.

The Allied group departed from Lawson Army Airfield.

1,000 Reserve 'Troopers' Finish Summer Training

Annual summer training at Fort Benning is in full swing as nearly 1,000 Reserve troops ended their second week of active duty at The Infantry Center recently.

Eight units, representing Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and Maine were at work on projects or in training exercises throughout the Fort Benning reservation.

Base camp for the units was a "Tent City," supervised and administered in part by a cadre of active Army personnel, from which they moved to their training areas or project sites.

Two-Week Phase

Reserve control unit for two-week phase was Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, the 926th Engineer Group (Construction) of Montgomery, Ala., commanded by Col. Roy F. Moon.

Under the supervision of the 926th Group and Fort Benning personnel, projects for improvement of Buena Vista and Hourglass Roads and construction of a Dixie Road bypass near Lawson Army Airfield were two of the tasks undertaken by the 72nd Engineer Company (Dump Truck) from Greenwood, Miss., the 323d Engineer Company (Light Equipment) of Tupelo, Miss., and the 376th Engineer Company (Construction Support) of Troy, Ala.

Units not on specific projects for Fort Benning were busy with on-the-job training or with field training exercises, planned by the Group and unit operations and training sections.

Other Units

Other units at Fort Benning were the 841st Engineer Battalion (Combat) from Miami, Fla.; 683rd Engineer Platoon (Fire Fighting) from Pascagoula, Miss.; 277th Ordnance Company (Field Supply) from Pensacola, Fla.; and Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 173rd Medical Battalion from Portland, Maine.

The next large group of Reserve units will be at Fort Benning from July 4 to July 18. Eleven units from throughout the Third U. S. Army area will be at The Infantry Center for two weeks of training.

Civilians Cited; Praised for Saving Telephone Line

A Special Act award for saving a telephone cable at Fort Benning when the flooding Upatoi Creek washed out a bridge last December was among incentive awards presented to 38 post personnel last Friday.

Using a rod and reel, the men put a line across the flood waters. They first pulled a rope and then a strand (strong cable) across. The cable was attached to a pole on either side.

Then, using an automatic machine attached to the strand, the loose telephone cable was lashed to the improvised support. Their work prevented an interruption of telephone service on the post.

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Fort Benning commander, presented the Special Act award to James R. Boswell, who received $25, Douglas J. Thomas $25, Thomas S. Minor $50 and William M. Freeman, $50, all of Columbus, Ga.; and Frank C. Howard $25 and Robert V. Head Sr., $50, both of Phenix City, Ala.

Willis C. Smith, another Columbusite, who could not be present at the ceremony, was given his award, $100, later in the day.

The seven employees are members of the Signal Services Division of the Services Section.

Appreciation

Gen. Heintges, expressed appreciation to "my civilians" for their "loyalty to duty."

"At a large installation of this kind there is nothing more important than our civilian employes. When something goes wrong, the military personnel can issue the orders that the matter be corrected but it is the skilled civilian employe who actually repairs the water main or whatever the emergency may be," he said.

"In fact," he continued, "we could just fall flat on our faces without your support. Furthermore, we frequently lose key military personnel by transfer or retirement. When a new officer comes in, it takes time for him to become oriented. During the interim, we are dependent upon you civilians to furnish the continuity that keeps us operating smoothly."

Suggestions

The general presented awards for work improvement suggestions to S4 Warren Hickman of Colorado Springs, Colo. and to Joseph J. Dowling, Heyward T. Risher, J. V. Hall, Heyward F. Bush, Robert L. Helle and Howard C. Moore, all of Columbus.

Receiving performance ratings were Moore, Mrs. Marguerite Ledbetter, James S. Dawson, Mrs. Diane Benton, Arthur F. Blair, Miss Jeanette Zuback, Mrs. E. J. Arel, Mrs. Paul L. Tefft, Mrs. William D. Key, Cassius L. Thomas, Mrs. C. R. Davis, William J. Pippin, Clarence A. Auger, Ben Render, David H. Buckner Jr., Simeon B. Cox, Thomas J. Brown Jr., George E. White Jr., James G. Hardy and Ronald L. Companion, all of Columbus.

Also, Stanford O. Slayton and Mrs. B. E. Dunn, both of Hamilton, Ga., Frank T. Hyles of Phenix City, and H. C. Baxter of Smiths, Ala.

Nelson Cliatt Jr. of Columbus, who was absent, was presented a rating by his unit commander.

Gen Sparrow Speaks To OCS Graduates

It takes a good man to get a commission through the Officer Candidate School, Maj. Gen. H. G. Sparrow, commanding general of XX Corps, Fort Hayes, Ohio, recently told 157 OCS graduates at Fort Benning.

"The OCS man is respected and expected to be good," the general said as he outlined some of the crucial qualities needed by an officer, such as honor, discipline and application of knowledge.

Develop Ability

Sparrow said that an officer must develop the ability to express his ideas. He must be able to instruct, explain and to motivate his men.

The general also said that as far as the officer's immediate family was concerned, a wife's task is to "recognize and accept her husband's profession." The officer's task is to be considerate to his wife and to realize that her task as an Army wife is no less demanding than his own.

He said the role of the officer is leadership, a lifetime of observation, effort, results obtained through trial and error and a firm development of character.

Top Student

Sparrow presented awards to 2nd Lt. Wolfgang Gartner of Berlin, Germany who was the top honor, distinguished and leadership student in the graduating class.

Gartner received an engraved silver bowl from the 5th Student Battalion, an Association of the U. S. Army Plaque, an Infantryman statuette and a letter of achievement from Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Gen. Sparrow also presented the other graduates with their diplomas.

Excise Tax Cut Aids Soldiers Returning Home

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The new excise tax bill signed by President Johnson contains a clause designed to financially assist servicemen returning from overseas on leave.

The tax exemption will relieve servicemen from paying five per cent on the domestic portion of their international travel, whether the purchase is for a "stand-by" one-half or full price ticket.

Under the old law, for example, a serviceman on leave traveling from the Far East would leave Tokyo by Military Air Transport Service (MATS) for Travis AFB, Calif. Prior to leaving, he could purchase his ticket in Tokyo for a San Francisco-to-Chicago commercial flight without paying the tax. If he waited to buy the ticket at Travis, he would have to pay tax on the stateside portion of his trip.

Under the new law, a serviceman may now wait until he arrives at Travis and purchase his ticket from a ticket agency within six hours after arrival and take the next available flight without paying the tax.

Stamp Collectors May Get 'Frozen' Navy Postmarks

Washington (AFPS) — Stamp collectors may receive postmarks from South Pole Station, Byrd Station and various Deep Freeze ships, the Navy has announced.

Two covers may be obtained, one for South Pole and one for Byrd, by sending them to Deep Freeze Philatelic Mail, U.S. Naval Construction Battalion Center, Davisville, R.I. 02852.

Up to three cancellations per ship may be obtained by sending covers to Deep Freeze Philatelic Mail, with name and address of ship.

Ships participating include the USS Atka, USS Glacier, USCGC Eastwind, USS Calcaterra, all addressed to FPO New York 09501, and USS Burton Island, FPO San Francisco 96601.

Scouting Activity High at Benning

The Boy Scout's activity during the past quarter, according to one spokesman, "has really been flourishing" at Fort Benning.

PFC W. E. Taylor, post scouting coordinator, reports that the Boy Scouts participated in 18 outpost encampments, five guided tours, six marksmanship events and 13 instructional periods during the past three months.

Attendance was estimated at more than 1,000 boys and leaders.

SPORTS Afterthoughts

by DAVID N. SCOTT

BRUCE SVIHUS IS a "peddler."

He does his peddling on a 10-speed special racing bicycle that can attain the astounding speed of 35 miles per hour.

Bruce is also a PFC in the Army assigned to a special services unit in Italy. Before entering the service, Bruce was a highly successful cyclist in the States and enjoys US Olympic Association and Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) endorsement.

How does a young cyclist from the States make good in a foreign country? Easy! Cycling is one of the most popular sports in Europe and Bruce couldn't feel more at home.

He peddled his way to a berth on the Italian bike racing team known as the Societa Sportiva Andrea del Sarto, the only American ever to accomplish this feat. He also holds the distinction of being the first American pedal-pumper to race in the renowned Tour Hamainte in Paris.

Although a relative newcomer to the sport of international bike racing, the young cyclist has carried the US colors against Canada Mexico, the USSR, France, Switzerland, England, Denmark, Belgium, Spain, Austria, Germany and his new teammates the Italians.

His most recent triumph came last month when, at Wuerzburg, Germany, he captured first seat in the sprints and placed fourth in the overall competition in the International Road and Town race.

Just where he gets his enthusiasm for the sport may best be explained in his own words. "Thousands of spectators line the road to watch the race. They arrive the night before the race reaches town and camp out to get a good viewing position of the next day's action. They treat their top cyclists as we treat Willie Mays or Mickey Mantle. Every major race here is like the World Series in the States."

According to Bruce, the fans like to get into the action even though there are usually police lining the streets to keep them out of the racers' way. "They'll cool off their favorite racers with pails of cold water", claimed Bruce. "That feels mighty good when you are in the middle of a 150-mile long race."

Keeping in shape is one of the most important aspects of bicycle racing and Bruce accomplishes this by pumping out a startling 75 miles per day during his off-duty time. He trains seven days a week and averages anywhere from 20-30 miles per hour during his early training periods.

Why is bicycling so popular in Italy? "Simple," claims Bruce, "the government subsidizes the sport."

CTC 2-1 Win Over 428th Medics Clinches First Half Championship

By PFC Richard Minnig

The Infantry Center Troop Command beat the 428th Med. Bn. by a slim one-run margin at Gowdy Field last week to become first half champs of the 1965 Infantry Center baseball season.

Much of the credit for the CTC 2-1 victory over the Medics went to CTC starting pitcher Doug Talmadge and reliefer Bernie Hankinson whose combined mound work held the 428th scoreless until the ninth inning.

Both teams were shut out of the scoring column until the sixth frame with CTC drawing only two singles from Medic starter Bill Andrews and the 428th collecting just three hits from Talmadge.

Sixth Inning

The sixth inning began uneventfully with the first two CTC batters falling quickly under Andrews' arm. With two away, third baseman Floyd Wicker doubled to center.

With Wicker at second, the Medics decided to give an intentional pass to catcher Rosy Spence who blasted two homers against the 197th Inf. Bde. last week.

Jim Munday, batting for right fielder Roger Reynolds, then hit a slow Texas Leaguer to short right and Wicker scooted home with the first run of the game.

CTC's lead looked short-lived when Raul Guerrero, lead-off batter in the Medic sixth, blasted a double into deep center field. When first baseman Mike Morris drew a walk, CTC decided to bring in reliefer Hankinson.

Right fielder Joe Parilla, first man to face Hankinson, hit a dribbler past the mound for a single and Guerrero headed for home. Quick action by CTC squelched his scoring attempt but Parilla got to second during the put-out at the plate.

With runners on second and third, CTC decided to try for the double play and issued Walter Waiss an intentional pass to load the bases.

Under pressure, Hankinson bore down to strike out third baseman Jim Wesley. Then Andrews followed with a pop to third and the Medics' scoring threat was ended.

CTC Scores Again

CTC's single run remained the only mark in the scoring column until the eighth inning when the Troop Command collected another tally. With two away, Wicker singled and then stole second. Spence followed with a single to center to bring Wicker home with what later proved to be the winning run.

The game was 2-0 in favor of the Troop Command when the Medics came to bat in the bottom of the ninth. Part of the crowd began heading for the exits but a double by leadoff batter Wesley held them to the park.

Medics Only Run

Tom Jackson, sent in to hit for Andrews, flied out to center but catcher Ulysses Davis drew a walk. Al Hardman followed with a ground-er that forced Davis at sec-ond, but on a bad throw to first base which miscarried the double play, Wesley scored with Medics' only run of the game.

Then, amid yells from Medics' fans and the clanking of cowbells, Hankinson worked shortstop Joe Wood to a three and two count. He ended the game with a fast ball which struck out Wood and gave CTC the first half championship.

Women's Golf Tourney Won By Mary Barrow

Taking the lead from barefooted Laura MacIvor on the last day of play, Mrs. Mary Barrow went on to win the Military Dependents Championship Golf Tournament recently held at Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Mrs. Barrow, wife of Lt. Cmdr. William Barrow, scored 78 on the final round to capture the trophy in the all service tournament. Miss MacIvor, playing barefoot because of blisters throughout the tourney, slipped to 84 and 82 after a record breaking 75 on the first day.

Miss MacIvor, daughter of retired TSgt. Neil H. MacIvor, lost her one stroke lead on the second hole of play during the final round, taking a double bogie to Mrs. Barrow's par four. She lost another stroke to the Army-Navy Club champion's four on the third hole.

Mrs. Barrow held the two stroke lead through nine holes. Miss MacIvor regained a stroke with a par on the eleventh hole and took a one stroke lead over Mrs. Barrow with a birdie three on the twelfth. Mrs. Barrow bogied.

But the new champion picked up a stroke on each of the next two holes with pars. This gave her a three stroke advantage which she kept through the final hole.

In third and fourth places were 18-year old Miss Janeen Keil and Mrs. Pat Sell, both of Andrews Air Force Base. Kathy Muse was declared low net champion with a 206.

Next year, Fort Meade will host the tournament which is open to all female dependents of the military services.

Hunt Club Nabs Honors At Southern Horse Rally

Five young ladies, comprising the Fort Benning Hunt Club team, took top honors at the Southern Regional Horse Rally in Atlanta last week, compiling 89.8 points out of a perfect 1,000.

In the competition, riders were judged by written tests on horsemanship, stable management, cross-country and stadium jumping, as well as dressage (ring training) tests.

The Fort Benning team included team captain Ellen Eliasson, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Arne Eliasson, riding "Angelo;" Nancy Cleveland, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. John Cleveland, riding "Grey Fox," Lydia Preston, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Preston, riding "Sinjohn;" Kristan Vassar, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ellsworth Vassar, riding "Champion;" and Deborah Roush, daughter of Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Galvin Roush, as stable manager.

Lamar Anthony, a former "A" Pony Clubber was the adult supervisor.

The team's two-week preparation and practice before the event was supervised by Mrs. Marny Simons, wife of Maj. G. S. Simons.

Two teams from Midland (Ga.) Pony Club of Hardaway's Stables tied for second place with 874 points.

Other teams represented Birmingham and Montgomery, Ala.; Clearwater, Fla. and Atlanta.

Playoffs Fill Post Team's Tennis Slots

As a result of last week's Infantry Center tennis playoffs at the Main Officers Open Mess courts, six top Fort Benning players have been selected to represent the post in the Third Army Tennis Tournament to be held at Fort Stewart, Ga. from July 12 to 15.

John McGill, named top-seeded player in the playoffs, was the victor in the open, defeating second-seeded John Bradley by scores of 6-1 and 6-2.

McGill claimed first berth on the Infantry Center open division team going to Fort Stewart.

Other members of the four-man open team are Jay Scott Allen, Donald Gunther and David L. Rainy.

Winner in the senior men's category was Lt. Col. Lester Burnette. Burnette, Fourth Army champ before coming to Fort Benning last year, will captain the Infantry Center team at Fort Stewart. He will be joined in the senior men's division by Mial D. Stafford.

The two finalists in the Third Army Tourney will compete in the All-Army Tournament at San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston.

Army Marksmen Set Six Records

BY SSGT LEE LA COMBE

Six new national records were set this past weekend in the monthly pistol matches sponsored by the Post Rifle and Pistol Club.

Four were established by national woman's handgun champ, Capt. Sallie Carroll, in the Service Pistol competition. The Army Blue squad established one in the Service Pistol team match and SSgt. Ralph O. Thompson of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit got his name in the record book with a 298-15x in the Service Pistol National Match Course.

Capt. Carroll's quartet of marks fell in the Service Pistol aggregate with an 853-24x, the Slow Fire with 185-4x, the National Match Course with 285-7x and the Rapid Fire with 192-3x.

The four-man Army Blue squad blasted out an 1,168-51x to give them their second national record in the past six months. In March, they set a new mark in the Center Fire match with an 1,184.

Firing on the Blue team were SFC William Blankenship, SFC Ralph O. Thompson, SSgt. Emil Heugatter and SSgt. Herschel Anderson.

Blankenship was the individual champion of the monthly match with a two day total of 2,653 points, two points higher than runnerup Sgt. Anderson.

The U.S. Army National Trophy Pistol Group takes to the road this weekend in preparation for the National Championships at Camp Perry, Ohio, in late July and August, under the direction of Maj. Joseph Watson.

5TH CAVALRY

The 5th Cavalry had its colorful beginning more than a century ago on May 28, 1855, when it was organized as the 2nd U.S. Cavalry Regiment at Louisville, Ky. Authorized by an act of Congress on March 1855, the regiment was organized under the command of Col. Albert Sidney Johnston. The second commander of the regiment was Lt. Col. Robert E. Lee, who later resigned from the U.S. Army to lead the southern states as General of the Confederate Armies.

During WWII, the 5th Cavalry fought the bloody battles as a member of the First Team. The 5th won campaign streamers for action in New Guinea, Bismark Archipelago, Leyte and Luzon.

During the Korean Conflict, the 5th Cavalry received two Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citations and a Bravery Gold Medal of Greece Streamer.

7TH CAVALRY

The 7th Cavalry was organized in the autumn of 1866 at Ft. Riley, Kan., its ranks filled with a hardbitten crew of trappers, frontiersmen, and veterans of the Civil War.

Shortly after its organization the 7th was commissioned to protect the settlers against Indian raids as the pioneers moved westward.

One of the early leaders of the 7th was Brevet Maj. Gen. George A. Custer whose favorite song, "Garry Owen", became the theme song of the troopers and eventually the 7ths byword and nickname.

From 1878 to 1915 the men of the 7th served two tours of duty in the Philippine Islands, and took part in the organization of the Archipelago.

Serving with the 1st Cavalry in WW II, the 7th garnered campaign streamers for New Guinea, Bismard Archipelago, Luzon and Leyte and the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation.

The 7th holds eight campaign streamers for its Korean service, two Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citations and a Bravery Gold Medal of Greece streamer.

8TH CAVALRY

The 8th Cavalry was organized from Sept. 19 to Nov. 17, 1866, on Angel Island Calif. In the early days of the regiment, troops were located in California, Nevada, Washington, Idaho and Oregon with Regimental Headquarters at Camp Whipple, Ariz.

Throughout its early years, the 8th Cavalry participated in many engagements with the Indians, served as escorts for the settlers and furnished guard details throughout the West. In 1875, the regiment was assigned the mission of patrolling the Mexican border.

The troopers of the 8th Cavalry were assigned to occupation duties in Japan at the end of WW II. The men of the 8th were carrying out this mission when hostilities broke out in Korea. The unit received two Republic of Korea Presidential Citations and a Bravery Gold Medal of Greece streamer.

9TH CAVALRY

The 9th Cavalry was constituted on July 28, 1866, as the 9th Cavalry Regiment. It was organized on Sept. 21, 1866, and established headquarters at Greenville, La.

The 9th Cavalry established an enviable record in the Indian Wars and earned campaign streamers in New Mexico and Montana.

It was on Oct. 15, 1957 Troop A was reorganized and resdesignated Hq. and Hq. Troop, 1st Reconaissance Squadron, 9th Cavalry. On the same day it was activated and assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

In April, 1960, the Squadron assumed the responsibility of patrolling and observation of the Demilitarized Zone in Korea.

12TH CAVALRY

The 12th Cavalry, youngest of the groups of the division, was constituted Feb. 2, 1901, as the 12th Cavalry Regiment, and was organized from February to June of that year at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Shortly after its organization, the 12th carried out a strenuous training program that earned it wide recognition as one of the crack Cavalry units of the Southwest. It performed two tours of duty in the Philippines — from 1903 to 1905 and from 1909 to 1911.

The 12th Cavalry proudly boasts of the fact that one of its members had the honor of being the first enlisted man to enter Tokyo officially. The enlisted man was PFC Paul Davis, who followed Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, 1st Cav. CG, as the general stepped across the line at the Tokyo City Limits, thereby adding another "first" to the First Team by placing the American forces officially in Tokyo.

DIVISION ARTILLERY

Division Artillery Headquarters was constituted on Nov. 1, 1940, and activated on Jan. 3, 1941, at Ft. Bliss, Tex. At the time, the 82nd Field Artillery Regiment was the only artillery unit assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division.

Division Artillery Headquarters and Headquarters Battery earned battle honors for New Guinea, Bismark Archipelago, Leyte and Luzon. It also proudly displays seven campaign stars for Korean service, and Republic of Korea and Philippine Presidential Unit Citations.

On Oct. 5, 1957, the colors of Division Artillery were brought to Korea, and the unit was assigned to replace the inactivated and redesignated 24th Infantry Division Artillery.

19TH ARTILLERY

The 19th Artillery Battalion was originally the 19th Field Artilery Regiment. Constituted in 1916, this regiment was organized on June 1, 1917, at Camp Wilson, Tex. On Dec. 12, 1917, it was assigned to the 5th Division and later transported to the battlefields of Europe, where it earned campaign streamers for actions at Lorraine and St. Mihiel.

Returning to the U.S. after the Armistice, the 19th Field Artillery Regiment (less 1st Battalion), was activated at Ft. Knox, Ky. It was reorganized and redesignated the 19th Field Artillery Battalion on Oct. 1, 1940.

The 19th underwent rigorous training to prepare for the fighting it would soon see in Europe. This outstanding artillery unit distinguished itself in combat and earned campaign streamers for Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes - Alsace and Central Europe.

MAJ. GEN. HARRY W. O. KINNARD
Division Commanding General

20TH ARTILLERY

The 20th Artillery was constituted in the Regular Army on June 3, 1916, and was organized on June 1, 1917, at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., as an element of the 5th Division. Unit Day is anunally observed on June 3.

It came out of combat in WWI with campaign streamers for participation in action at St. Mihiel and Lorraine, and returned to the U.S. to be inactivated on Sept. 5, 1921, at Camp Bragg, N.C.

The 20th Artillery was assigned to the 4th Division and activated on June 1, 1940, at Ft. Benning, Ga. In October of that year it was reorganized and redesignated the 20th Field Artillery Battalion.

It served with distinction during the bloody battles in the European Theater, and proudly wears campaign streamers for Normandy, Northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes - Alsace and Central Europe.

BRIG. GEN. RICHARD T. KNOWLES
Assistant Division Commander

21ST ARTILLARY

This unit was constituted on June 3, 1916, and organized as Battery A, 21st Artillery Regiment on June 1, 1917, at Camp Wilson, Tex.

The battalion was assigned to the 5th Infantry Division on Dec. 12, 1917 relieved from assignment on Nov. 4, 1920, and inactivated at Camp Bragg, N. C. on Sept. 23, 1921.

Reactivated on Oct. 6, 1939 at Ft. Knox, Ky., the battalion was redesignated as Battery C, 21st Artillery on Oct. 1, 1940 and inactivated on Sept. 20, 1946 at Ladd Field, Alaska, as part of the 5th Infantry Division.

77TH ARTILLERY

The 1st Battalion, 77th Artillery, was activated at Camp Strathpine, Australia, as the 271st Artillery Regiment and made organic to the 1st Cavalry Division in the fall of 1945.

It fought through Los Archipelago, Leyte and Negros, Admiralty Islands, New Guinea, Bismarck Manila Campaigns.

The Battalion was redesignated the 1st Howitzer Battalion 21st Artillery, on July 1, 1960, as assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea.

The unit went on occupation duty at Camp Drew, Japan in 1945, and remained there until the Po-Hang-Dong landing of July 1950, in Korea. During the reorganization, March 25, 1949, the 271st was redesignated the 77th Field Artillery Battalion.

Additional general staff officers are shown on Page 33.

AVIATION GROUP

Three battalions from the former 11th Air Assault Division will carry their original designations in the new 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile).

The 227th and 228th Assault Helicopter Battalions and the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion are to keep their titles because of no cavalry designation available.

Since they are strictly aviation units and provide the major portion of the division's aircraft, it was deemed suitable to have them carry forth the familiar names.

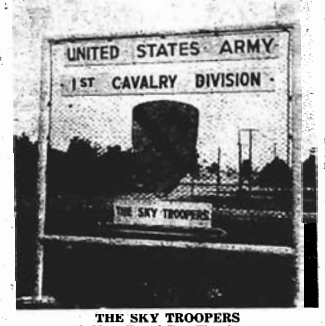
Cavalry Colors Arrive



THE SKY TROOPERS
A New Breed For The Army

BY JOE TREASTER

In a special ceremony at 10 tomorrow morning at Dough Boy Stadium, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard will take possession of the colors of the 1st Cavalry Division which this week returned to the U. S. for the first time in 22 years.

Army chief of staff Gen. Harold K. Johnson heads the list of invited dignitaries, that includes leaders of the local civilian and military communities.

Some 7,500 soldiers are expected to view the ceremony from the grandstands. Unless supply channels fail, the left shoulders of the khaki-clad military spectators will bear the golden, horsehead embellished 1st Cavalry Division patch.

As a contingent of soldiers from the 1st Cavalry's former headquarters at Camp Howze, Korea was arriving at Fort Benning Thursday with the colors, a Department of the Army order tagged the parenthetical words "Air Mobile" to the unit's name.

Earlier, Gen. Kinnard, was designated commander of the new unit formed by the merger of units from the 2nd Infantry and the 11th Air Assault divisions. He commanded the Sky Soldier force since its inception in February, 1963.

Before accepting the cavalry colors, Gen. Kinnard will step onto the parade field and effect the official act of retiring the 11th Air Assault Division from the Army's active unit roster.

An honor guard carrying the Sky Soldier colors will march before the general, and, at his command, encase them. Then the guard will execute a sharp left turn and march out of the stadium.

A second honor guard will then march to the center of the field with the 1st Cavalry Division colors. There the guard commander will present them to the ranking military official at the ceremony who, in turn, will pass them to Gen. Kinnard.

Spirited marching music, speeches from the commanding general and distinguished guests will follow. More music; then an aerial salute from 16 U-H1 (Huey) helicopters, a trio of CH-47 Chinook helicopters and three OV-1 twin-engine Mohawks.

With the ceremony concluded, the composition of men from two divisions will be amalgamated into one new power — an Army prototype unit with historically rich colors flying overhead and a limitless future.

Sky Trooper Battalions Commence Paratrooper Qualification Training

Approximately two battalions of Sky Troopers of the 1st Calvary Division (Airmobile) reported Monday to Eubanks Field at Fort Benning where they began a training program designed to qualify them as paratroopers.

The 850 personnel are now or soon will be assigned to the two maneuver battalions that will comprise the division's airborne brigade, along with the normal supporting elements.

The airborne trainees all have completed physical examinations and received the proper mental stimulus Monday afternoon at Eubanks Field when Col. E. B. Roberts, 1st Brigade commander, addressed the group.

The training will encompass all phases of airborne training and will culminate with graduation ceremonies on the drop zone on Wednesday, July 14.

The Airborne Department, Army Infantry School, will operate the airborne course, and is responsible for the program of instruction.

According to Maj. Robert G. Custer, the division's project officer, unit integrity will be maintained to the maximum extent possible during all phases of the training.

Personnel taking the training will be transported daily to the airborne training areas from their battalion or unit areas and will return each evening at the conclusion of training.

The mass airborne training of tactical units is the first since the 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry qualified its personnel when it received its air-

1st Cavalry Retains Traditional Patch

The traditional and colorful yellow and black patch that identifies the 1st Cavalry Division will be worn without changes by members of the newly organized division at Fort Benning.

There are no plans to either change the exterior or interior of the patch, and neither are there any pending proposals to place any type of tab over the top of the patch, the spokesman said.

The supply channels will be able to provide two patches initially, but it is anticipated that many personnel, officers and enlisted alike, will obtain patches on their own. The two initial issue patches will be worn on a long sleeve khaki shirt and on a fatigue jacket.

The speculation that a tab would be worn over the patch to denote its air mobile characteristic has been discontinued. Many apparently thought that a tab bearing this title would be utilized along with the regular shoulder patch to indicate the complete designation of the division.

New 1st Cavalry Unit Designation

When an entirely new division is formed, utilizing units from more than one previous unit, there's apt to be a bit of confusion concerning the designations of the subordinate commands. Seems like one can't tell the players without a scorecard, so for the edification of our readers, this list of units is furnished as a public service.

RETURNS TO FIELD COMMAND . . . Col. E. B. Roberts (right) new commander of the 1st Air Cavalry Brigade, is shown with Gen. Herbert B. Powell, former CONARC commander, in 1962 when the colonel commanded the 506th Airborne Infantry.

Veteran Paratroop Commander Assumes Top Brigade Position

Col. Elvy B. Roberts, veteran paratrooper - commander in WWII, and Chief of Staff of the 11th Air Assault Division since its activation in February, 1963, officially assumed command of the 1st Brigade last Friday morning during a special ceremony in the office of Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles.

A senior military commander with an impressive record of top command and staff assignments, Col. Roberts was named for the position ten days ago when it was announced that the entire 1st Brigade would become airborne qualified.

Col. Roberts began his career in June, 1939, joining the Corps of Cadets at West Point immediately following his graduation from Eastern Kentucky State College where he received his Bachelor of Arts Degree.

Graduating from West Point in the Class of 43, he was sent to Fort Benning for parachute training, and was assigned to 101st Airborne Division's 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment, serving with the unit throughout the war, making both of the two combat jumps.

A year after his West Point graduation, he was a seasoned combat commander. Assigned to the 3rd Battalion's Company G, the colonel assumed command of the company during the Normandy parachute assault after his company commander was fatally wounded.

Two days later, the colonel was himself cut down by machine - gun fire at a deadly road junction near the coast, which came to be known to many American soldiers as "Dead Man's Corner".

Evacuated to England for treatment, the colonel rejoined his unit in time for their second great airborne operation in Holland three months later, which resulted in the liberation of Eindhoven and Nijmegen, and the seizure of several critical crossing points on the Zon River and Wilhelmina Canal.

During the highly successful Holland operation, Col. Roberts had served as battalion operations officer, and shortly thereafter, was reassigned to the regiment's S-3 Section, where he served throughout the bitter fighting at Bastogne during the winter of 44-45.

Reassigned upon deactivation of the 101st following the war, Col. Roberts held many key positions in the Army during the post - war years, and rejoined the 101st in July 1961 when he assumed command of the 506th Airborne Infantry at Fort Campbell, Ky.

During the period in which he commanded the 506th, Col. Roberts led the battle group in Swift Strike I in the fall of 1961 and Swift Strike II in August of 1962.

In February of 1963, Col. Roberts and General Kinnard, who was then serving as assistant CG of the 101st, were ordered to Fort Benning to form the experimental 11th Air Assault Division.

Group Commander Visits 228th

Col. Allen M. Burdette Jr., commander of the 11th Aviation Group visited the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, Thursday, June 25.

Upon his arrival, Col. Burdette was greeted by the Commanding Officer of the 228th, Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver, his staff officers and the unit commanders.

Immediately after the greeting, Col. Burdette was presented with a plaque making him an honorary WINGED WARRIOR.

He was then shown the battalion movie "WINGED WARRIOR," which was made by Boeing Vertol Company, showing the 228th in all phases of operations during AIR ASSAULT II in the Carolinas last fall. After the film he was briefed on the statistics of the 228th and its future role in army aviation.

The afternoon was completed by a tour around Munsan Heliport and the surrounding areas of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion.

borne mission in late 1963.

The bulk of the personnel come from the 1st Battalions of the 188th and 511th Infantry. All, of course, are volunteers, and nearly every unit in the division had provided potential paratroopers. In fact, a division spokesman noted, the call for volunteers was substantially over subscribed. Some of the volunteers came from the 2nd Division units on Sand Hill, as well as from the battalions on Kelley Hill.

When the training is completed on July 14th, the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) will have a fully qualified air borne brigade with all necessary supporting elements.

To Avoid Confusion

Due to the fact that many of the stories appearing in this weeks issue of the Cavalair were written before many of the units had received their new designations you will notice many old unit names are used. To avoid confusion be sure to read and clip the complete list of new names on page 25.

Meet Mother Dorcy. . .

Cavalry Patch Designer

Every Mother's Day soldiers of the 1st Cavalry Division honor two mothers, their own and Mrs. Ben H. Dorcy.

Mrs. Dorcy is the "Honorary Mother" of the division. She designed the patch; her husband was once a member of one of the division's battle groups; she is a part of the division and a part of the men who serve in it.

Mrs. Dorcy has been given a personal invitation to attend the activation of the new 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile).

Born Gladys Fitch in Santa Cruz, Calif., Aug. 12, 1885, Mrs. Dorcy met Capt. Ben H. Dorcy, U. S. Cavalry, at a party in St. Louis in 1914. Two years later they were married.

Mrs. Dorcy began the life of an Army wife moving with her husband from assignment to assignment until in June 1919, they arrived at Ft. Bliss, Tex. where Lt. Col. Dorcy became commander of the 7th Cavalry Regiment.

In 1921 the Department of the Army combined Col. Dorcy's 7th Cavalry with the 1st, 5th, and 8th Regiments into the 1st Cavalry Division and solicited designs for a division shoulder patch.

Patches, introduced by the 81st Division in 1918, had been required by the Army since 1920 as an aid to morale and easy identification. For the new 1st Cavalry the Army wanted a simple, two-color silhouette design, easily recognized at a distance.

Our tiny quarters," writes Mrs. Dorcy, "had a screened porch across the rear where we sometime studied when sand storms permitted freedom of thought. As we watched a beautiful sunset from this spot a trooper passed with a fine thoroughbred horse silhouetted against a golden sun." There was an idea.

Mrs. Dorcy had been ripping the yellow felt lining from her husband's old blue dress cape. He sketched a Norman shield outline on the yellow ground; she added a blue cloth diagonal stripe and the horse's head in silhouette. The design was complete; at first subordinate units used different colors for the stripe and horse's head, but in 1934, black and gold were made standard.

"The gold was to symbolize the setting sun of the Texas prairie," explained Mrs. Dorcy, "and the blue represented the hue of the distant mountains." Gold and blue are traditional cavalry colors; black, now used, "is the color of headquarters and top generals, and so each man is tops!" The shield symbolizes chivalry; the horse—courage and swiftness.

For the stripe, called a "bend" in heraldry, "we envisaged what servicemen would understand as the service or wound stripes that were part of their life; the heraldic meaning was the leaning ladder used to scale castle walls and on to victory." The largest patch in the Army, it was made, "big, to be seen across the wide parade grounds at Ft. Bliss, and to be worn by big men who go places and do big things."

Designed and submitted 1921, the Dorcys' patch won the Quartermaster-General's competition and was approved Jan. 5, 1922. Six months later, Col. Dorcy—a full colonel now—retired after 40 years service and moved with his wife to the West Coast. In 1926 he died and was buried at the Presidio of San Francisco.

Following her husband's death Mrs. Dorcy kept up a close connection with her 1st division and its commanders. When World War II came, she followed her beloved "first Team's progress in every newspaper and radio announcement, and spent three years with the U.S.O., "hoping to help servicemen's weariness and perhaps talk with a soldier wearing a 1st Cavalry Division patch."

In 1950, when her friend Maj. Gen. H. R. Gay commanded the First Team, Mrs. Dorcy was officially named Honorary Mother of the 1st Cavalry; in 1959, Maj. Gen. George E. Bush awarded her a Certificate of Achievement. "The contributions, Mrs. Dorcy has made to the esprit de corps and morale of 1st Cavalry Division members cannot be measured," Gen. Bush's citation read. "She has been the symbol of the division —truly a real mother to the tens of thousands of enlisted men who have worn her patch."

Divarty Coffee Held For June

The Corregidor Room of the Main Officers Open Mess was the scene Friday, June 18th, of the Division Artillery coffee. Ladies of the 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery were hostesses.

Yellow was the color of the day with the serving table being decorated with a yellow umbrella enhanced with yellow carnations. Yellow lawn chairs were given as door prizes.

Battery Hosts Couples Bridge

Capt. and Mrs. James R. Spears were hosts for the monthly couples bridge party held for members of Battery "C", 3rd Battalion (Aerial Rocket, 377th Artillery on June 26th.

There were eight couples present including guest couples, Capt. and Mrs. Gene D. Kleese of Headquarters Battery and Lt. and Mrs. Robert W. Naatjes of Battery A.

High score was won by Mrs. Wilbur R. Pierce Jr., second by Capt. Edward J. Balda Jr., and law by Mrs. William F. Koehler.

Shape Your Own Career

What Does Re-enlistment Offer?

A soldier may say to himself, I'm a good man and I want to get ahead, but what does re-enlistment have to offer me?"

An important consideration is that re-enlistment offers him a chance to shape his own career, provided he has less than 4 years service for pay purposes. He can ask for a specific assignment or career field in the United States. His career counselor will check to be sure that a vacancy exists and that he is qualified for the duty he has requested.

This is done before he signs up. If none exists, or if for some reason he does not qualify for the career he has chosen, he can make another choice. The same checking process will take place.

If, however, he waits until the last moment to investigate his opportunities it may be difficult to get the information in time.

What about choice of overseas areas? On first enlistment the soldier gets a real opportunity. He can choose Europe, USARPAC (Hawaii, Ryukyus, Japan), Alaska, the Caribbean, or Korea for his first regular tour. Acceptance, of course, is subject to quota requirements of the area.

The career soldier gets an opportunity for world travel provided by few other professions. In addition to this, the government offers a bonus for the re-enlistment contract.

This makes a fine start for a savings account. Any way it's viewed, the re-up bonus is a nest egg. It's money in the bank.

Keep this in mind: since Uncle Sam is willing to put up this bonus, it means a lot to him to keep a soldier in service. The soldier is an investment and the Army wants quality soldiers to stay in the service.

The re-enlistee also has the option to select any one of the many stabilized tours available in the United States.

French Cuisine Tempts 15th Artillery Ladies

Ladies of the 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery held their monthly coffee at the home of the hostess, Mrs. Fred Glasscock. Co-hostess for the affair was Mrs. Arturo Rodrequiz.

Mrs. Jackie Barker, demonstrator for the Gas Light Company, showed the ladies a film on French cuisine. After the film each lady was given a pamphlet containing all the receipts shown in the film.

Farewells were said to Mrs. Donald Harmon and Mrs. Gary Kaylor. Capt. Harmon has been assigned to Division Artillery Headquarters, and Lt. Kaylor is returning to civilian status.

Plans were also announced for a pool-side party with Mrs. Frank Athanason in charge of arrangements.

Refreshments were served. Mrs. Jesse Bickmore poured coffee and Mrs. Rodriquez poured wassail.

Hosted By 228th Afternoon Coffee

On June 17th the officers wives of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion enjoyed an "Afternoon Coffee" at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club.

Original 1st Brigade Becomes Spearhead

The original 1st Air Assault Brigade, first such tactical organization in the history of the Army, was back in being yesterday when the first three air assault battalions rejoined to become the 1st Air Cavalry Division's spearhead brigade.

Superbly qualified in all air assault techniques having been in business since 1963, the 1st Brigade, now commanded by Col. Elvy B. Roberts, will soon have the dual strike capabilities long enjoyed by the 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry, as the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry and 1st Battalion, 511th become airborne qualified.

Highly experienced in the smash and fade away tactics of the air assault company, and the mass offensives of the air assault battalion and brigade, nearly all personnel are qualified rappellers, and most members of the 188th and 511th are looking forward to their new and additional means of transportation.

With approximately six weeks to become a combat-qualified airborne brigade, all training is being conducted on an accelerated basis, and the normal 3-week airborne course has been shaved down to two weeks, or nine duty days.

During this period, the Brigade's 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry, which became parachute qualified in the fall of 1963, will set the pace for normal combat training.

The 188th Infantry, and the 511th Infantry were activated in 1963 following the initial air assault training and testing of the 187th, and these three battalions comprised the 1st Brigade.

Rakkasans Begin Combat Drills

Paratrooper-Sky Troopers of the 1st Brigade's Rakkasan Battalion began their first week of the current buildup in combat training Monday, which was appropriately kicked off with Hand-to-Hand Combat.

While the troops were engaged in hand-to-hand training, all company commanders and unit first sergeants of the 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry were taking classes on cargo net training which will soon be given to the Sky Troopers.

In addition to the unarmed combat training was a rugged physical fitness program, interlaced with mechanical training and maintenance of the newly issued M-16 Rifle.

Escape and evasion, and jungle survival training was also incorporated into the schedule, with maintenance and inspections of all TO&E equipment and individual combat gear.

The Raks will get a break on the physical end tomorrow morning when they attend classes on the history and traditions of the 1st Cavalry Division followed by a scheduled reorganization and review ceremony.

Promoted to SP5

In a brief ceremony, Capt. Robert E. Holman Jr., Battery commander of Battery B, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, promoted SP4 Hugh A. Latta to SP5. SP5 Latta has been with Bravo over a year working in the Battery Fire Direction Center. He assumed the duties of Chief Computer prior to the Battalion Test last April.

Former Cavalryman

1st Sergeant Retires; Ends Colorful Career

With twenty years Army service behind him, including World War II, Korea and Vietnam, 1st Sgt. Watson A. Drane of Company C, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion retires at the end of this month, ending a varied and colorful military career.

Sgt. Drane entered the Army during World War II, serving with the 346th Infantry Regiment during the Central European campaign. He was awarded the Bronze Star during this period for action in the Ardennes area.

After a brief break in service following the war, Sgt. Drane reentered the Army and in 1952 was assigned to the 1st Cavalary Division. Here, Sgt. Drane served through 1952, during the Korean conflict.

Sgt. Drane entered the Army Aviation field in 1957, and after a tour in Europe was promoted to first sergeant at Ft. Rucker in February of 1963. In August of the same year he was assigned to Vietnam and the 611th Transportation Company (Direct Support). This was his last assignment before joining the 11th Air Assault Division.

Besides two Bronze Stars, Sgt. Drane has been the recipient of the Combat Infantrymans Badge, Korean service awards and the Army Commendation Medal for outstanding service in Vietnam.

After retirement Sgt. Drane plans to settle with his family in Mt. Pleasant, Tenn.

Profession, Rifleman; Mission, Sniper

For the past few weeks some of the division's finest marksmen have been actively engaged in learning to employ the techniques of a 'sniper'.

These shooters, who have already been judged as 'expert' shots, have been learning to overcome the basic problem of anyone firing a rifle, 'hit where you aim'.

Through the combined efforts of the 3rd Brigade and the Army Marksmanship Training Unit, selected expert riflemen have been instructed in the art of detecting and consistantly killing enemy personnel or hitting targets under field conditions at ranges up to 1000 yards.

The training was broken down into three phases. The first portion involved the selection of the best qualified riflemen to undergo this accelerated marksmanship training.

The prerequisites called for expert riflemen within the ranks of PFC to sergeant. Units conducted a competitive shoot to discover their finest riflemen for these men were to represent an elite group.

These trained snipers could, if required, be formed into a detchment to be employed at the discretion of the commanding general.

As the second phase of the training began the selected riflemen were placed under the guidance of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

These men of the MTU are regarded as the finest of the Army's shooters. Their mission was to instruct fundamental marksmanship training and sniping techniques.

The sniper trainees were equipped with the standard M-14 rifle. These weapons had been given 'accuracy modifications' by members of the 711th Maintenance Battalion.

At the range the MTU taught the proper positions for firing, plus points that improve overall accuracy.

One important aspect to long range shooting, as explained by SFC Tolani Telesco of the MTU, is the "mirage'. When the firer spots his target through the spotter scope this mirage causes the target to seem to move.

According to Sgt. Teleso, the brief period of training the members of the MTU presented did not give the sniper candidates sufficient time to become experts at long range firing but, 'we showed them that there is more to good shooting than just squeezing the trigger'.

Regardless of the length of formal marksmanship training, some outstanding results were achieved and some admirable scores recorded in the final qualification record shooting. Sgt. Freddy King, Company B, 2nd Battalion 38th Infantry was the top shooter with a score of 194 out of a possible 200 points.

In the final phase of the training the sniper trainees moved to field locations to learn sniper techniques and to put to practical application what they had learned.

Here they were instructed in concealment, camouflage, field of fire, and movement to and from firing positions.

An interesting aspect to the sniper training was the familiarization with newly developed night firing instruments such as the image metrascope and infra-red weapon sight.

At the conclusion of the sniper training, Lt. Col. David B. Buie, executive officer of the 3rd Brigade had praise for the officers who lead his instruction team. In this group from the 188th Infantry were Capt. Russel W. Ramsey, Capt. David M. Best, Capt. Charles T. Ostick. From the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry came Lt. Bobby G. Hadaway and Lt. James L. Litton.

They'll Be Some Changes Made

When Infantry Turns Cavalry . . .

OLD AND NEW IN CAV WEAPONS
Sgt. Kennedy With M-16, Sp4 Billingsley, M-14

BY MARV WOLF

What happens when an Infantry unit suddenly becomes a Cavalry unit, air mobile type?

To paraphrase the old song, there'll be some changes made, and in the case of a line company, there are a multitude of them and they are all fundamental.

For a worms-eye view of the situation, lets look at Company C, 2nd Battalion 9th Infantry, a unit who's history goes way back, and a unit that typified the best of the straight-leg infantry outfits of the division.

In addition to changing their shoulder patches, the men of Company C received a new commander, Capt. Kenneth Schreiber, who replaces Capt. Michael Fletcher and a new 1st Sergeant, Egbert E. Kennedy.

With the colors of the Ninth gone to Korea, the unit receives a new regimental designation, the 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry, and since the new designation carries with it a new Table of Organization and Equipment, many items common to the company are absent, with new goods taking their place.

Probably most obvious is a lack of vehicles for ground transportation.

Whereas the company used to have seven ¼ ton (jeeps) vehicles, four ¾ ton and two 2½ ton, these eleven trucks are replaced by just to Mechanical Mules.

The Mortar Platoon leader of Company C, Lt. Robert J. Jeanette is the man who's mission will be most affected by the change. While in combat, the entire company would be air-transported by part of the more than 400 aircraft organic to the division. Jeanette felt that "Personally, I'd say the loss of our wheeled vehicles will mean more walking, and particularly during training, walking for longer distances. But it will make the training much more realisitic, since in combat there are many places that a ¾ ton truck just can't get into, where men would either have to pack the mortars in on their backs or be dropped in by helicopters."

Another big change will be in the basic arm carried by the new Sky Troopers, their rifles. The M-14 rifle that the units formerly carried is considered to be too heavy and too slow a weapon for troops who will fly in and out of battle at more than a hundred miles an hour, or who must chase an elusive enemy thru difficult terrain.

Last Friday, the company received more than a hundred of the M-16 E-1 rifles, the so-called Armalite weapon which has been standard issue for the last two years only in the Airborne 82nd and 101st Division, and some of the airborne Special Forces groups.

The new weapon, which weighs only half as much as an M-14, also fires ammunition which is considerably lighter and the heliborne trooper can carry a much greater quantity than ever before, yet the small round (5.56 mm) is propelled at a fantastic velocity, giving the weapon a stopping power as great as its older, heavier counterpart, at the shorter ranges that the Sky Troopers will be using.

While very few of the NCO's or officers of Company C are presently expert with their new equipment, a course for representatives of each company has been set up, and at its conclusion the returning instructors will pass on to the rest of the company their newly learned skills.

Members of Company C have expressed confidence in their ability to meet the combat - readiness deadline.

Operation Officer Promoted to Major At 72nd ATC Unit

A 72nd Air traffic Control operations officer was promoted to major recently.

Maj. James R. Mellish received his gold oak leaves from Col. J. Elmore Swenson, commanding officer of the 10th Air Transport Brigade, in a ceremony held at the brigade's headquarters.

Maj. Mellish will take over as executive officer of his unit.

Maj. Mellish has been stationed at Ft. Benning since July, 1963. He was commissioned in June of 1954 after graduation from Penn State where he took ROTC training.

Maj. Mellish's last assignment was the Lawson Army Aviation Command here, at Ft. Benning.

New S-4 Officer

Lt. Col. Robert W. Short, the battalion commander of the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, 11th Air Assault Division, recently welcomed Capt. Harold M. Hamilton to take over the duties of Battalion S4.

15th Artillery Hosts Two Indian Army Majors

The 15th Artillery was host to Maj. Shailendra Bahuguna and Maj. Yoginder Sharma of the Indian Army recently at Young Range.

Maj. Bahuguna of the 3rd Border Scouts and Maj. Sharma of the 8th Battalion were given an introduction on the operation of the M-79 40mm Grenade Launcher by Sgt. Sheddil Nordan of Battery B, 1st Battalion, 15th Artillery, after which the two officers went through a live fire exercise intended to familiarize them with the Weapons.

The two officers have been in this country since June 1 and intend to stay approximately ten more weeks.

They are both range control officers and have spent approximately three days touring the Fort Benning range area. They were very impressed with the size of the Post's range areas and the operational procedures used to control them.

Lt. Jack Schachte was the Officer in Charge of the range.

Brigaders Hit Nylon Express In Jump Training

Sky Troopers of the dual-role 1st Brigade commanded by Col. Elvy B. Roberts, began heading for that means of transportation called the "Nylon express" Monday morning, reporting to Fort Benning's Airborne School for an accelerated two - week jump training course.

Wasting no time, line and staff personnel of the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry, 1st Battalion, 511th Infantry, and members of the 1st Brigade Headquarters underwent preliminary training last week, completed physical fitness tests, and were ready for the rugged course Sunday when they reported in for a four-hour orientation.

In this first class which began Monday are 474 potential paratroopers, 228 from the 188th, 197 from the 511th, and 49 from the 1st Brigade Headquarters. In addition, many already qualified personnel of these units, not on jump status, underwent refresher training Monday.

Lieutenant Takes Executive Duties

Last week, 1st Lt. Arthur McWilliams, executive officer of Battery B, 15th Artillery, passed his green tabs to Lt. Larry E. Jones.

Lt. McWilliams has served as the Bravo executive officer since February of this year. During this period he guided the Battery to a satisfactory on the Battery Test and a rating of Superior on the Annual IG Inspection.

Lt. McWilliams is leaving active duty to accept a position with an engineering firm in Opelika, Ala.

Lt. Jones has served with Battery B since June of 1964. He moves up to executive after serving as FDO during the Battery Test FO during the Carolina maneuver.

188th Men Pursuing Education During Off-Duty Study Program

Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 188th Infantry is establishing a high mark in the field of education. Out of 92 men assigned, 43 are enrolled in some kind of educational program.

Twenty men are pursuing extension courses. Most popular are the Infantry School's pre - commissioning courses and the Intelligence School's courses on Communism and foreign area studies.

Two men are enrolled in civilian correspondence courses. SSgt. Edward Brunair, platoon sergeant of the Medical Platoon, is well along with his law degree from LaSalle Extension University.

Eight men have completed high school GED tests since the start of the year. All men who are not high school graduates are taking USAFI or other correspondence courses to obtain their diplomas.

Sp4 Ronald Irwin, a property book clerk in the battalion S-4 Section, is taking college biology with American University. PFC Julio Revollo takes U. S. and Latin American history.

The education program for the company began in earnest back in January. Having just completed a long series of field maneuvers, the men were now able, for the first time since the Eagle battalion was activated, to pursue courses of study.

The Headquarters Company commander, Capt. Russell W. Ramsey, instructs off-duty at the American University in history. He is a veteran of off duty education, and took twelve courses with Florida State in the Canal Zone and a Master of Arts degree in Latin American History at the University of Southern Mississippi on the "Bootstrap" Program.

In pushing his company's education program, Capt. Ramsey said, "The men have to perform their jobs first. They study on their own time. But by so doing, they are more useful to the Army, broaden themselves, and increase both their promotion and earning potential."

Medal of Honor Holders Included in Past Ranks

The 1st Air Cavalry Division accepts the history and traditions of a proud combat unit. Also we can proudly claim the distinction of having the names of two Congressional Medal of Honor holders in its past ranks.

Sgt. Troy A. McGill of Ada, Okla., a member of Troop C, 5th Cavalry, was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for heroic action at Momote Airstrip on Los Negros Island on March 4, 1944.

Early in the morning the Japanese attacked and all of Sgt. McGill's eight men, with one exception, were killed or wounded. Sgt. McGill fired his weapon until it ceased to function, then with disregard of safety, knowing he faced certain death, he left his foxhole and using his rifle as a club, engaged in hand-to-hand combat until killed by the enemy.

PFC William J. Grabiarz of Buffalo, N. Y. was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for the supreme heroism he displayed in Manila, Philippine Islands on Feb. 23, 1945. He left his place of safety behind a tank to absorb deliberately a hail of enemy bullets and thus saved the life of his troov commander. He met his death when he threw his body over the injured form of his commanding officer

Net Training Begins For Infantrymen

Silently, but confidently the intrepid troops of the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry faced their initial assault on rope ladders.

Both sides of the Kelley Hill rappelling tower were draped Monday, June 28, with rope ladders for the first net cargo training conducted on the hill.

Working in 90 minute shifts, the battalion's companies were divided into two groups, alternating use of the ladders. After an initial demonstration of ascent and descent of the tower via rope ladder and a safety orientation, the troops were permitted to attempt their luck on the ropes.

Subsequent to their initial climb, unencumbered by combat gear, the men donned life preservers and their web gear for a second trip up and

Inf. Battalion Command Passed to Col. Mertel

The 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry this week changed commanding officers in a ceremony held at Harmony Church.

The new commander is Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Mertel, who replaces Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar, who has commanded the 188th since its reactivation in 1963.

Col. Mertel comes to the 188th from his most recent position as Assistant Division Aviation Officer for the 11th Air Assault Division.

Col. Kellar leaves the battalion to assume the command of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion.

A native of Bennett, Colo., Col. Mertel entered the Army in 1942 and for three years served as an enlisted man in the Army Air Corps, the Artillery and the Infantry until he received his commission through the Infantry Officer Candidate School.

As an officer he served with the 86th Infantry Division in the Pacific Theater. After the war he had a series of assignments that included the 2nd Infantry Division and the 82nd Airborne Division.

During the Korean War he was a company commander and a battalion S-3 in the 25th Infantry Division.

In the years following the Korean War Col. Mertel went to Europe where he served first with the 24th Infantry Division and then with the headquarters of USAREUR as Aviation Officer.

In 1962 Col. Mertel went to Viet Nam as Inspector General of the Headquarters US Army Support command and then in 1963 as commanding officer of the 145th Aviation Battalion.

In 1964 the colonel returned from Viet Nam and was assigned as 11th Air Assault Division Assistant Aviation Officer. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia where he received a Bachelor of Science degree.

The colonel is a Ranger, a Senior Parachutist and an Army Aviator with rotary wing, fixed wing, instrument and multi-engine ratings.

His decorations include the Bronze Star Medal with oak leaf clusters, the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, and the Combat Infantryman Badge.

15th Artillery Battery Learns Direct Firing

"Target, troops in open, fuze, time, range, 400 meters."

This command was given to members of Battery C, 15th Artillery during a direct fire exercise with a 105mm howitzer.

Upon hearing the command the reaction of most personnel present was one of surprise. No one present had ever fired a time fuze in direct fire, much less heard of it. The general feeling was that the fuze setting would be unsafe.

However, upon further investigation it was discovered that a very low fuze setting could be set on a time fuze which would be safe and which could be used to accurately adjust the detonation of the round.

The direct fire committee headed by Lt. Donald P. Quinn conducted this experiment to determine if personnel could effectively be brought under direct fire by a howitzer with time fuze.

The success of this experiment was outstanding. It was discovered that the fuzes would detonate approximately 15 meters above the target and that the effect on the ground was very substantial.

Furthermore, the committee developed and put into use a table which aids the chief of section in adjusting the time round accurately and quickly.

The committee concluded that time fuze could be used in direct fire and the personnel could effectively be brought under direct fire with it.

Promotion Came Right on Time

Robert P. Starcher of Headquarters Battery, 3rd Battalion (Aerial Rocket), 377th Artillery was promoted from PFC to Sp4 this week at a most opportune time.

On May 11, 1965 Specialist Starcher's wife, Carole, gave birth to a daughter, Ann Jenee, in Louisville, Ky.

Sp4 Starcher, the son of Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Leroy Starcher of Valley Station, Ky., completed AIT at Fort Sill, Okla.

Departing Colors Honored

Former CO Bids Battalion Adieu

The 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. Harold G. Moore, paid honor to the departing colors of the battalion and bid farewell to a long-standing friend in ceremonies conducted at Kelley Hill Wednesday, June 23.

Leaving Fort Benning for a Washington assignment is Lt. Col. William E. Conger, who commanded the 'Totem' battalion for thirteen active months until May 1964, through the change-over from battle group to battalion, the Swift Strike III maneuvers and the early preparations for the attachment of the battalion from the 2nd Infantry Division to the 11th Air Assault Division.

Speaking briefly, Lt. Col. Conger asserted that "the thirteen months spent with the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry were the most rewarding and enjoyable of my Army career".

Col. Conger's service began at West Point in 1947. He served in the Korean War where he earned the Silver Star, Bronze Star and Purple Heart. From there he went back to West Point as a factical officer, then to Viet Nam, and finally to Fort Benning.

After serving as Executive Officer for the 1st Battle Group during its phasing out period, he became commander of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry upon its reactivation. His most recent assignment has been as G-3 of the 2nd Infantry Division.

As well as honoring a former commander, the review was the last in which the proud colors of the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry were paraded with the battalion. The unit will assume a new name and traditions soon after becoming a part of the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile).

In a special part of the ceremony, the flag of the United States and the Battalion colors "trooped the line" with the inspecting party. As the colors approached each company, the unit was brought to "present arms" and the men saluted as the colors of the nation and the battalion were marched in front of them.

The 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry is one of the most highly decorated units in the Army, having won 58 campaign and battle honors. Some of it's most recent honors were won in the Battle of the Bulge, Chipyongni, Heartbreak Ridge, and "Old Baldy".

377th Battery Gets New XO

Headquarters Battery, 3rd Battalion (Aerial Rocket), 377th Artillery has a new Executive Officer.

He is Capt. Charles S. Howell who reported to the unit on June 11 1965 after completing the Associate Field Artillery Officer Career Course at Fort Sill, Okla.

Capt. Howell's last duty assignment was with Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 37th Artillery at Fort Richardson, Alaska. He is succeeding Capt. William H. Goodspeed who recently assumed duties as Battery Commander.

Capt. Howell, a 1959 graduate of Jacksonville State University, Jacksonville, Ala., is currently residing with his family at 620 Goodson Drive, Columbus, Ga. His home is Oxford, Alabama.

Warrants Swell Ranks Of Brigade Aviation Team

The "Flying Indians" of the 2nd Brigade has had two warrant officers promoted and has received five new warrants during the past week.

Promoted to CWO-2 was Mathew B. Bennett and Leslie D. Wylie.

CWO Bennett is the property book officer for the Headquarters and Headquarters Company. Bennett has been with this company since the brigade became attached to the 11th Division in June of 1964.

CWO Wylie is an aviator with the 2nd Brigade Aviation section. When he received his promotion he was given the job of 2nd Brigade Aviation Maintenance Officer. He came to this brigade from the 2nd Aviation Battalion.

Of the five new warrants, all aviators, two are Viet Nam veterans and three were assigned directly from flight school.

Jerry S. Mitchell, Eugene B. Phillips, and Douglas C. Taylor are the new warrents from flight school. WO Mitchell is from Laurel, Miss., WO Phillips comes from Evergreen Park, Ill., and WO Taylor calls Stapleton, Ala., his home. All three served from 12 to 15 months as enlisted men and from one to three months as an officer.

The Viet Nam veterans are WO's Joseph O'Byrne and Peter C. Sweers, III.

WO O'Byrne served with the 120th Aviation Company in Viet Nam and prior to this with the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash. He is originally from New Brunswick, N.J.

WO Sweers was assigned to this unit from USARYS, VIET NAM. He was an engineer mechanic before entering flight school in 1964. He is from El Paso, Texas.

During Dual Role Ceremony

Honors and Awards to Seven at Support Command

Seven Sky Soldiers of the 11th Air Assault Division's Support Command were honored at a colorful retreat and change of command ceremony held on Dickman Field, Monday.

A Distinguished Flying Cross, an Air Medal, four Army Commendation Medals and a promotion from the rank of captain to major were presented to recipients by Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles, assistant division commander.

The occasion marked the formal assumption of command of Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey, newly designated Support Command commanding officer. Colonel Hennessey, in a few brief remarks to Support Command men prior to the ceremony, prased members of the command for past performance of duty and told them he was sure they would do even better in the future.

Gen. Knowles presented the Distinguished Flying Cross to CWO Harold T. Johnson, Company C, 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion. CWO Johnson received the nation's fourth highest award for heroism as the result of an action during his recent assignment to the Republic of Vietnam.

Maj. Jerome J. Sullivan, presently a member of the 611th's Company B was presented with the 7th Oak Leaf Cluster to his Air Medal resultant from his performance of over 200 combat flying missions in the Republic of Viet Nam.

CWO William P. Alexander, 498th Supply and Service Battalion was presented with the Army Commendation Medal, Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement and Certificate of Retirement. Alexander, who is retiring from the Army after more than 20 years of service is one of the Air Assault Division's original Sky Soldiers. He was the first division Supply Officer and has been performing as S-4 of the 498th Supply and Service Battalion since late 1963.

Sp6 Eugene Todd, Company B, 11th Medical Battalion, received the Army Commendation Medal, Department of the Army Certificate of Achievement and Certificate of Retirement on the occasion of his retirement from the Army.

Other decorations presented by Gen. Knowles were Army Commendation Medals to Capt. Richard K. Anderson, 11th Medical Battalion and Sp4 Larry G. Woods, Company D, 611th.

Maj. Alvin C. Ellis, a member of Support Command and the Division Transportation Office was presented with the gold oak leaf of his new rank at the ceremony.

Trophies were presented to representatives of the 11th Administration Company and Headquarters, 711th Maintenance Battalion for 1st and 2nd place finishes in the recent Support Command volley ball tournament.

A feature of the ceremony was the Sky Soldier Band's rendition of Bank Leader CWO James overnight arrangement of the Cavalry Regiment's traditional march "Garry Owen". The band, once again, demonstrated its superior professional ability by practicing and performing this march during the course of a very busy day.

In a few short remarks terminating the ceremony, Brig. Gen. Knowles commended the Support Command for what he termed its "Can Do" attitude in relation to its missions. He expressed hope that the high morale exemplified by Support Command personnel would be a characteristic of the new division vision.

1st Brigade Trio Hosts Youth Sports Program

A trio of civic minded generous non-coms from the 1st Brigade have been pursuing an unusual hobby for the past year, supporting an athletics and sports program for more than 30 dependent children, many of them the sons of overseas servicemen.

Heading up the three - man committee is SSgt. Louis L. F. Prolago, ably assisted by SSgt. Warren J. Clark of the 1st Brigade Headquarters Company and Sgt. Damon Horn of Company C, 187th Airborne Infantry.

A comprehensive program, the schedule includes instruction nearly all sports, and competition in football, softball, tennis, boxing, volleyball and soccer, with a monthly overnight camping trip on the Fort Benning reservation as a sort of highlight.

Ranging in age from nine to fourteen, the kids now have their own sporting and camping equipment, most of it salvaged and put in a serviceable state by the youngsters themselves, with certain equipment purchased out of funds raised from community projects.

The majority of the children live in the area surrounding Baker Village and Benning Hills, and most of the sporting events are scheduled with teams from other Columbus neighborhoods and dependent teams on Fort Benning.

Operating like a "little league" Army, the boys even have a duty roster by which they cut grass, wash automobiles, sort out trash cans etc., and accept part time jobs running errands. Most of the boys voluntarily take close order drill, participate in road-march hikes, and get a kick out of functioning as a unit.

Well qualified to supervise the youth program, Prolago was an all-around athlete in his early military career, and served as an athletic instructor for several years, supervising military teams and coaching boxers.

Needless to say, the youngest member of the big dependent youth team is Gregory Prolago, son of the boss, who functions as waterboy for football, batboy for baseball, and all-around helper on the camping trips.

One-Time EM Receives Senior Aviators Wings

1st Lt. James A. Crabtree, of Company A 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion, was presented with his Senior Aviator's Wings on June 28, 1965. The ceremony was held in the office of the Company Commander, Maj. Harold T. Campbell.

Lt. Crabtree who has traveled the ranks from an enlisted man to Warrant Officer to his present rank has logged more than 2450 flying hours since the completion of rotor wing flight training in 1961. Over 2,000 of these hours have been logged in Army helicopters and the 450-odd hours were logged in Army fixed wing aircraft.

Lt. Crabtree has held various assignments in Company A since his arrival in November, 1963. These include such positions as Tech Supply Officer, Direct Support Section Leader and currently, Direct Support Platoon Leader.

Battery Returns From Ft. Stewart

Battery A, 3rd Battalion 377th Artillery, commanded by Maj. Joseph J. Lahnstein, recently returned from Fort Stewart, Ga., after completing the first annual Army Training Test ever administered to an aerial rocket battery. The test was administered by the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery.

Prior to the ATT, battalion level tests were conducted to determine the unit best prepared to receive the first ATT; Battery A was selected. Many weeks of extensive training designed to promote quick thinking and reactions by simulating the actual ATT proved a deciding factor. By winning the number one spot in the battalion, Battery A also earned the privilege of being the first unit to return to Fort Benning.

Battery Takes Division ATT's

At 4:00 a.m. on June 3, the personnel of Battery B, 3rd Battalion 377th Artillery commanded by Maj. Jack O. Phillabaum, began the preparations for their annual training test administered by Division Artillery. At 7:30 a. m. the battery became operational and started the test. Ground elements were checked on their ability to operate in combat conditions such as attacks from guerrillas forces, gas and air attacks.

The aerial rocket platoons were given fire missions and tested on their ability to navigate to a target, successfully fire at it (simulating rockets) and leave employing tactics that exposed the aircraft to anti-aircraft fire the least.

The last phase of the test was a live fire exercise that determined the battery's ability to put rockets on the targets.

At 3:00 a.m. the test was over and the general feeling was that the battery had successfully completed its mission.

Tower Qualified

The past week the remainder of the Forward Observer personnel of Battery B, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, became Rappel Tower qualified. The personnel involved received the make up training at the Kelly Hill Rappel Tower.

In Chinook League

38th Takes 38th; Infantry vs Arty

Pitching by Sp4's Kenneth C. Risley, Company D, and Robert F. Ellis, Company C, strong hitting and considerable team "chatter" gave the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry Kaniengahagas victory at Essebagger Field Thursday, June 24, as they defeated the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery 10-6 in a Chinook League game.

Because of rain, the regulation game was called in the bottom of the fifth, but not before the Kaniengahagas had secured their first victory margin in four starts.

The Kaniengahaga nine scored in the first as PFC Angel Colon, Company C, drove in PFC William R. Harris, Company B, who had singled previously. In the second, PFC Ronald Towe, Company B, given a base on balls, stole home for the second score as the Artillery remained scoreless.

The third through the fifth innings found Ellis, Sgt. Lemanuel Jones, and PFCs Howard Sivertsen, James Thornton and Colon accumulating runs and boosting the 38th Infantry's score to ten while the Artillerymen picked up their six run total on third and fourth inning scores.

Sp4 Gerald Craven went the entire five innings as the Artillery's pitcher, allowing ten hits.

New Sergeant Major Takes Reins at Brigade

Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook, an original air assault soldier became the number one enlisted man in the 1st Brigade last Tuesday following the retirement of Sgt. Maj. Joe Haluski.

An original member of the 1st Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry, Sgt. Maj. Cook transferred to the 1st Battalion, 188th Infantry shortly after the unit was formed in 1963.

A combat veteran of World War II, Cook enlisted in the Army in February of 1943, and served in the Asiatic-Pacific throughout the war with the 534th Amphibious Engineers.

After the war, he served on special duty with the war crimes group in Germany, and upon completion of this duty, returned to the States for a brief period.

His next overseas tour was again in Germany, where he served with the 5th Infantry Division from 1952 until 1956. His last assignment prior to coming to Fort Benning where he joined the 2nd Division was in Korea with the 7th Cavalry of the 1st Cavalry Division, a patch he is wearing again.

Already a qualified parachutist and jumpmaster, Cook is well qualified for his new job, and is well known throughout the 1st Brigade.

Pilot's Son Crowned King of the Hill

BY JOE TREASTER

When Columbus' annual Soap Box Derby ended last Sunday, three sons of helicopter pilots stood in the winner's circle.

Eleven-year-old Ralph Fitch III had been crowned champion of the derby and Sherwood and Brigham Denison, 13 and 11, had scored semi-final elimination winds.

Both the Denison boys, sons of WO Bryant Denison, now in Viet Nam, met defeat in the final runs in their respective classes — ahead of all other contenders.

For his performance in the bright afternoon sun, Fitch was awarded a $500 savings bond and the right to represent the city at the Nationals at Akron, Ohio, Aug. 7.

And last year's Columbus champion, Hal Maloof, 16, said the young racer "should do well up there. The car's built for Akron — it hasn't got any suspension. The track up there is smooth and the car should really go."

The past champion of the Columbus Jaycees — Bill Heard Chevrolet sponsored event traditionally opens the day of racing with a solo spin down the course.

But the glory ride was spoiled this year when Maloof's steering cables fouled some 25 yards off the starting block and twisted him into the curb. He was not hurt—"just disappointed," he said.

Course officials hustled the disabled car off the course and two minutes later dropped the green flag on racers driven by Ricky Koon and Tommy Wages, to begin the official competition.

Both were eventually eliminated, but Koon went on to win the consolation race with a time identical to the champion's: 35.9.

Fitch's father said he "never expected the boy to get this far. It was his first try at the derby."

But his mother said young Fitch had a premonition that he would do well, sparked by the silver number "7" painted on his racer.

"Everything started happening in 7's. The number just kept popping up," she "First he was assigned the number. Then he was seventh to register and seventh to weigh-in.

"Last Saturday he bumped into three movie titles with 7's in them. Then today, well . . . there's another 7. Today's the 27th." I'm not a superstitious person but . . ."

The champion said he worked six months and spent $24.70 — 30 cents under the limit — to build his plywood racer.

Moments before wedging into his racer for a winning heat race, Brigham, the younger Denison said he was only a "little" nervous and that he thought his chances of victory were good.

"My only trouble," he said, "is getting in the car. My shoes are too wide."

Company Softball Competition Continues for 38th Infantry Teams

Suffering their first loss of the season, Delta Company 2nd Battalion 38th Infantry, was defeated by Headquarters, Headquarters Company, 2nd Brigade.

Considerable spirit and alert ball accounted for the company's second consecutive win against power teams, and Company's D first season defeat in the battalion's slow-pitch company level softball competion.

Sp4 Burt C. Micklon went all the way as Delta's pitcher and allowed 11 hits. PFC Allen P. Watson handled Headquarters Company's pitching duties, allowing eight hits.

Delta's first inning 2-1 lead was agumented by a third inning score while the 38th remained scoreless for two innings. However they tallied three runs in the fourth to assume the lead. A four run rally in the fifth resulted in HHC's achievement of their final victory margin.

Headquarters Company squared off with Company B for the afternoon's second game and romped to a 16-8 victory. PFC Robert Dangerfield allowed only two hits during his five inning stay on the mount for Headquarters Company. He was relieved by PFC Harry McDonald. Company B Pvt. Larry R. Stewart and Sp4 James H. Davis handled their team's pitching and between them allowed 14 hits.

Headquarter's decisive inning came in the third when they scored eight runs on eight hits. This is their fourth consecutive win.

Company B's PFC Wallace White, PFC Darrell G. Howard, Sp4 David H. Sexton, PFC Charles E. Marques and PFC James R. Davis scored in the fifth to account for their most successful inning.

The afternoon's final game had Companies C and A pair triumphant on a seven to three score.

Sgt. Jesus Hernandez went all the way on the mound for Alpha, allowing eight hits. PFC Vernon L. Cottman, Company's C pitcher, allowed ten hits.

Alpha pulled ahead early with three runs in the first inning and held their opponents scoreless for three innings.

Action Seen By Bowlers

The two bowling teams of Headquarters Battery, 3rd Battalion (Aerial Rocket), 377th Artillery are in a nip and tuck struggle for first and second places in the Battalion Bowling League.

Currently team number 1, The Operators, is in second place with 54½ points, while Team Number 2 is in third place with 54 points.

The lead team, Charley's Charging Captains with 56 points faces Team 2 in the final game of the season this week. Previous encounters between the two teams have gone 3-1 in favor of CCC and 4-0 in favor of team Number 2. It shapes up as a close, tense match.

Army in Peace Prepares for War

Top Results in Medicine Achieved By Army Surgeons

During peacetime years the Army constantly prepares for war. This preparation encompasses many fields of endeavor and often results in achievements of far-reaching importance.

Perhaps because it has always been a fact that sickness produces casualties as surely as enemy action, many of the most noteworthy results have been achieved in the field of medicine.

As early as 1800 a significant contribution to the country as a whole was made when Dr. Benjamin Waterhouse, a Regular Army surgeon, introduced smallpox vaccination into the Army.

Two years later, another Army doctor, Benjamin Rush, wrote the first American textbook on psychiatry. But it was in 1822 that an Army surgeon first achieved world - wide recognition for detailed research.

Doctor William Beaumont, the Army surgeon at a frontier post, saved the life of a young French Canadian who had been accidentally shot in the stomach. The wound did not close, however, and through the opening Dr. Beaumont was able to observe the processes of digestion. The reports on his observation prompted Sir William Osler, the great medical historian, to call Dr. Beaumont the "pioneer physiologist of the United States and the first to make a contribution of enduring value."

Medical research in the Army has continued on an ever-increasing scale. It was an Army surgeon, for example, who discovered the organism that causes pneumonia, and important findings have been made by the Medical Corps on dengue fever, hookworm, amoebic dysentery, and malaria. But the Army's conquest of yellow fever remains its most widely publicized accomplishment in the field of medicine.

In June of 1900 four Army doctors — Majors Reed and Carroll and contract surgeons Lazear and Agramonte — were assigned to Cuba with the mission of investigating this dread disease which had plagued mankind for centuries.

All four were skilled pathologists, and they attacked their jobs with enthusiasm. They became convinced that the disease could be transmitted only by the bite of a particular mosquito, and set up laboratory experiments to prove their hypotheses.

Soldier volunteers stepped forth and allowed the doctors to try to infect them; some slept in the bedding of previous patients, some were inoculated with blood drawn from these patients, and some were bitten by the suspect mosquito.

Sixteen men caught the disease and two died; all had been bitten by the mosquito or inoculated with the diseased blood, and none became infected in any other way. For all practical purposes, the original theory was proved.

The dedicated doctors and the brave volunteers saved countless lives and paved the way for the building of the Panama Canal.

Many other medical advances have come about through the Army's desire to protect the health of its soldiers. Army medical personnel isolated and identified the Asian flu virus under Army contract, the anti - malaria drug, primaquine, was developed and adopted.

Improved uses of prosthetics, treatment of shock and burns, a better method of artificial respiration — these and contributions by Army medical research, and important peacetime activity.

Thinking of Career Opportunities?

Ability, Experience Count For Army Advancement

To most soldiers thinking of "career opportunities," promotion and proficiency pay are important considerations.

Those soldiers who show improvement in ability and who profit by experience are given an opportunity to compete with one another to advance in grade, responsibility, and pay.

The Army - Wide Enlisted Evaluation System uses two separate rating elements which are designed to assist the unit commander in determining the best qualified individual for promotion or other personnel actions.

First, the MOS evaluation test is a written test covering technical items, and where appropriate, leadership and supervision items. The evaluation test measures the specialized knowledge a soldier posses for the skill level of his particular MOS.

A unit commander, however, is also interested in how well a soldier performs. The second rating element used in the Enlisted Evaluation System, the Commander's Evaluation Report, provides an indication of the soldier's performance on the job.

The score made by the soldier on his MOS evaluation test is combined with the commanders evaluation report rating which he receives. The resultant composite score is known as his MOS evaluation score and provides an objective rating of his qualifications against an Army-Wide standard.

Headquarters, Department of the Army, periodically announces a minimum or cut-off evaluation score as the eligibility requirement for specific personnel actions.

The Enlisted Evaluation System however, does not replace the commanders authority and responsibility. It simply gives him a standard guide to help him select the best qualified persons for promotion, proficiency pay, and other important personnel actions.

Split Second Response

Todays Army Reacts At Freedom Frontier

In the past, the United States Army's overall battle effectiveness usually developed under the stress of combat and was more apparent at the end of a war than at its beginning.

The Army emerged from World Wars I and II, for example, as the best in the world, but in these conflicts our valiant allies and our isolated frontiers had provided the time for our nation to prepare for war.

The flood of scientific and technical advances since World War II have telescoped time and space factors so completely that we must be ready to defend ourselves at a moment's notice. We are no longer isolated and insulated from our enemies.

The surprise attack in Korea in 1950, the crisis in Berlin in 1961, and the confrontation in Cuba in 1962 — all abetted by global communist pressures — underscore this fact. Split second response is required for survival.

Today, our widely deployed Army can react quickly. Commitment to combat can come to most of our troops within 24 hours and to many within a moment.

In Berlin, West Germany, South Korea and Viet Nam, American soldiers are face to face with our enemies on the edge of freedoms frontier.

In these distant lands the Army stands as the first line of defense of the United States. Seven of its 16 combat divisions are abroad; five in Germany, and two in Korea. One additional division is in Hawaii. Backing up this forward deployment are eight other hard-hitting, highly mobile divisions of the Strategic Army Corps.

Columbus College Slates Typing Class

Officials at Columbus College recently announced that there are still a few openings in the non-credit adult course, "Typewriting for Personal Use."

According to the announcement, the course is scheduled to begin July 6 and will meet daily for five weeks from 7 to 9 p.m.

Applications for the course should be made through the college.

July Draft Call Announced

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Selective Service System will call 17,100 men to Army duty during July. It is expected that enlistments will make up the balance of July's 27,400 overall procurement objective for enlisted men with no prior service.

Thes other services do not intend to place calls with elective Service during July.

SENIOR JUMPER . . . Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe (right), assistant commandant of The Infantry School is awarded his Senior Parachute Badge after completing his 30th jump which qualified him for senior jump status. Col. Lamar A. Welch, director of the School's Airborne Department, pins on the badge at the Fryar Field drop zone. Gen. Forsythe took his basic airborne training in 1955 with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C. He became assistant commandant of The Infantry School in March.

Gen Heintges Departs Tuesday
82nd's York Named Successor

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Former Chief of Staff Returns to Command Post

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, who was last week named as the new Fort Benning commander and commandant of The Infantry School, is scheduled to arrive here Thursday, July 15.

According to Infantry Center officials, his orders call for him to assume command on that date but they said his duties at Fort Bragg, N. C. might delay his assumption of the Benning command.

Gen. York presently commands the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

He led the 82nd when it went to the Dominican Republic in May.

Born in Birmingham, Ala., the 52-year-old general was assigned to Fort Benning in August 1956 and served successively as director of the Tactics Department of The Infantry School; assistant chief of staff G3, Infantry Center; director of instruction and deputy assistant commandant, TIS; and Infantry Center chief of staff.

Gen. York first entered the military service in April 1933 when he enlisted in the Alabama National Guard.

He was admitted to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, and graduated in 1938. His first assignment was at Fort Wadsworth, N. Y., as a second lieutenant with the 18th Infantry Regiment of the 1st Infantry Division.

In 1942, Gen. York went overseas with the 18th Infantry and served with that unit during the Africa and Sicily campaigns and the Normandy invasion. He was transferred to the 82nd Infantry Division in July 1944 to become regimental commander of the 331st Infantry Regiment, a position he held until the unit was inactivated in April 1946.

Upon returning to the United States, Gen. York was assigned as instructor of tactics at the U. S. Military Academy until the outbreak of war in Korea when he was

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges

2,500 Troops to March At Final Farewell Honors

More than 2,500 Fort Benning troops will mass on York Field, Monday, July 12, for farewell honors to Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, commander of the Infantry Center and The Infantry School since August 1, 1964.

Gen. Heintges has been nominated by President Johnson for promotion to lieutenant general and reassigned to command the I Corps (Group) in Korea.

Troops will be on line for the review at 5 p.m., Monday, with Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, as commander of troops.

Four Brigades

Four provisional brigades, composed of three battalions each, will participate in the parade along with the Infantry Center band. The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, will furnish the honor guard and salute battery. The departing commander will receive a 13-gun salute.

Forty sets of bleachers are being erected at York Field to accommodate some 4,000 spectators. An additional 400 chairs will be in place for special guests.

Commanders

In the event of inclement weather, the review will be held on York Field at 9 a.m. the following day, Tuesday, July 13.

Brigades to participate in the review and their commanders are: Center Troop Command, Col. Lon D. Marlowe Jr.; 197th Inf. Bde., Col. Jacob L. Rikey; The Student Brigade, Col. Jess W. Walls; and the 2nd Control Command (Provisional) to be led by Col. J. W. Armstrong. An additional unit will be composed of the massed colors.

The farewell review will close out a weekend of activities honoring Gen. and Mrs. Heintges. Among the official functions scheduled is a reception tonight, sponsored by the command's sergeants major and their wives at the new 7, 8, 9 NCO Club and, tomorrow night at the Main Officers' Open Mess, a "family" dinner and reception sponsored by the assistant commandant, Gen. Forsythe. The School's Academic staff and the Center's general staff officers will attend.

Leaves Tuesday

Gen. and Mrs. Heintges will leave the post Tuesday morning, July 13. Their route of departure, from Marshall House to Outpost 1, will be lined with a cordon of 74 unit guidons as a final farewell gesture.

Gen. Heintges is scheduled to assume his new duties in Korea on Aug. 1.

Lawson Field Building Named for RVN Hero

A Fort Benning building was dedicated in a special ceremony Thursday, July 8, to honor an airborne officer who was killed in action in Viet Nam and posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Known as L-11 and located at Lawson Army Airfield where The Infantry School's student paratroopers check out and load on aircraft for their actual jumps, the building is now named McCarthy Hall for Capt. Thomas W. McCarthy.

In addition to the DSC, Capt. McCarthy, who was killed March 3, 1964, was awarded the Vietnamese Medal of Honor, First Class.

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, commandant of The Infantry School, dedicated the building while more than 400 members of the school's airborne class No. 43 stood at attention in honor of a fellow paratrooper.

Four airborne instructors assisted in the unveiling of the sign with the building's new name on it.

Among those attending the ceremony were Capt. McCarthy's widow and three children and his parents, Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Charles W. McCarthy.

Capt. McCarthy, a 1955 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, was a senior adviser to a Vietnamese airborne battalion at the time of his death.

Thousands Attend YAC Carnival; OCs Triumph in Military Games

The long July 4 weekend at Fort Benning featured a series of events and ceremonies which was highlighted by the Youth Activities Club (YAC) Carnival Saturday, July 3, at Eubanks Field.

Carnival officials estimated the crowd in attendance at several thousand people.

The carnival featured rides, games, athletic events, unit and individual competition.

Winner of the Commanding General's Trophy for being the outstanding unit at the Carnival was the 54th Officer Candidate Company. The 54th was awarded the trophy at an awards ceremony Sunday, July 4, at Marshall Auditorium.

Winner of the Outstanding Soldier competition was Officer Candidate Milton R. Trahan of the 54th Company. Besides receiving a trophy, Trahan also was presented $250 from the Youth Activities Club.

The Carnival is one of the chief means the Youth Activities Club has to raise funds to support their many programs for Fort Benning dependents.

One official said the Club also raises funds through a program of parent membership. "Of which there are never enough," he added.

The 54th Company racked up the largest number of victories in the unit competition by winning the physical combat proficiency test, cross - country run and rifle firing contests.

In the platoon drill, the candidates tied with Company C, achutist and Ranger was on a mission into an assault area when he and the Republic of Viet Nam troops had to move through open territory at daybreak toward their objective, according to reports.

They were attacked by the enemy from three directions and subjected to a barrage of concentrated fire. Capt. McCarthy moved into "the inferno of hostile gunfire to organize the troops and establish an effective base of operations," the reports continued.

He then joined his counterpart with the lead element and continued his effort to rally and encourage the troops until he was mortally wounded, they added.

Command

reassigned to G-3, Department of the Army as a staff officer in the operations division.

In 1951 Gen. York was selected to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and upon graduation, was assigned to G-2, Department of the Army, as U. S. Liaison Officer, Singapore. He held that position for three and a half years before being assigned to Fort Benning.

Gen. York left Fort Benning in June 1959 for assignment as deputy chief of staff, United Nations Command, Korea. He returned to the United States in July 1960 and was assigned as chief, International Division, Office of the Chief of Research and Development.

Promoted

He was promoted to brigadier general in September 1961 and, a year later, in May 1962, assigned as military advisor to the deputy director, Tactical Warfare Program, Office of the Director of Defense, Research and Engineering. This was followed, in October, by his appointment as director, Advanced Research Program Agency, Research Development Field Unit and Joint Operation Evaluation Group, Viet Nam.

Gen. York assumed command of the 82nd Airborne Division in February 1964.

His decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infantry man and Parachute Badge, and French Croix de Guerre.

Gen. York is married to the former Grace Buckland of Queens Village, N.Y. They have two married daughters, Elizabeth Ann and Barbara Allison, and two other daughters, Gail Andrea, 18, and also have four grandchildren.

Carnival

29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade which also won the drivers' proficiency and pistol firing competition.

Company C nabbed second place in the overall unit competition with the 147th Ordnance Company taking third.

Individual Competition

In the individual competition, QC Trahan won the PCPT, the manual of arms and military appearance events. PFC Wayne E. Proctor, who took second place in the overall Outstanding Soldier competition, was first in rifle firing.

The pistol competition was won by Sp5 David J. Hurst of the 54th Quartermaster Company, Center Troop Command. Sgt. Howard Johnson of Battery C, 10th Artillery, 197th Inf. Bde. placed first in general military knowledge.

Sgt. Walter R. Pollack, Troop D, 17th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division took third place in the overall individual competition.

Non-Military Events

In the non-military events, the senior division winner in the archery contest was Victor Pena. Runner ups were Mike Guajardo and Harold McCoy.

The junior division archery winner was Bob Schaefer. Mark Brannon and Rocky Kuhn were second and third, respectively.

The senior division basketball thrown was won by Walt Donaldson with Pat Fagan and Randy Scott in second and third places.

In the junior division Tye Fields was first with Robert Bugh and Stanley Bristol in the second and third slots.

The golf event was won by A. Belmares in the senior division. Runners-up were Doug Barraclough and Mike Haag. In the junior category, John Lansing was first with Craig Hunter and Bill Quinn second and third.

Mark Sterzenback won the senior division football throw. Paul Ferguson was in second place and Sene Mann was third.

In the junior division, Robert Santalis was first with Rocky Kuhn and Skip Davis the runners up.

The close of weekend activities was an Independence Day ceremony at the flagpole at Bldg. 4, The Infantry School on Monday, July 5. A 50-gun salute was fired in honor of all the states of the union. The ceremony ended with The Infantry Center Band playing the national anthem.

Big Job of Red Cross: Fight Against Suffering

Washington (AFPS) — The president of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) said here recently that the Red Cross now has the dual role of preventing as well as lessening human suffering.

Mr. Samuel Gonard, Swiss president of the ICRC, said the work of the neutral International Committee is to ensure the application of the provisions of the Geneva Conventions in time of war or armed conflict and to work as a neutral intermediary to aid victims of armed conflict.

Before coming here, Mr. Gonard met with U.N. Secretary General U Thant in New York to discuss the need for instructing United Nations troops in their responsibilities and privileges under the Geneva Conventions.

The four Geneva Conventions, which have been accepted by most nations, including all of the major powers, provide for the protection of civil and military victims of war, sick and wounded on the battlefield, prisoners of war in enemy hands and the civilian populations in enemy occupied territory.

Mr. Gonard explained that ICRC delegates are currently at work in major trouble spots around the world visiting prisoners, aiding the wounded, removing the dead and acting as intermediaries between waring factions. He described the task of the committee as a "most difficult one, though very rewarding."

Honest John Fired At Range Show

The 2nd Division's 12th Artillery demonstrated the firing of an Honest John rocket recently during a demonstration on Ruth Range.

More than 6,000 persons, including students, VIPS and Army dependents were on the range to see the demonstration. The demonstration was held to show the public what support the infantryman has.

The 12th fired at the point of enemy troop concentration. As the rocket passed over the target a simulated nuclear burst was detonated.

Post Scouts Learn Skills In Wild West

Four Fort Benning Boy Scouts are presently at the Philmont Scout Ranch in the historic Santa Fe country of New Mexico.

Scouts John H. Chiles, Michael T. Anders and Brice Warren, accompanied by PFC W. E. Taylor, Post scouting coordinator, are among 11 from the local Chattahoochee Council at Philmont.

Philmont is the national camping ranch for the Boy Scouts of America.

The boys and their leaders began training at the "university of the great outdoors" last week and are expected to end their 12-day stay July 11.

The boys train in the techniques of open fire cooking, backpacking, burro packing, use of a compass and map, wilderness sanitation and setting up trail camps.

On Philmont's 137,000 acres of rugged terrain, the scouts are participating in such activities as conservation, rifle practice, gold panning, archeology, horseback riding and training in other scouting skills.

The Surgeon Says

Watch Out for Cuts

Everyone gets cut from time to time — some people more often than others. For the most part these injuries are passed off as being among the hazards of enjoying life to the fullest.

But what about the next cut? Will it be just another small nick that requires only a little do-it-yourself first aid? Or will it be one that causes severe pain, costs you time away from work and play, and perhaps leads to blood poisoning, tetanus (lockjaw), or a severe infection requiring removal of a finger, hand, or leg?

Perhaps there will be partial crippling because of a cut tendon or too much loss of blood. These things don't always happen to the other fellow.

It is possible to avoid that bad cut or avoid cuts altogether by following a few simple general safety rules.

Keep tools sharp because dull tools usually require more force to do the same amount of work, hands using them tire more quickly and slip more easily.

Use tools as they were intended to be used. Generally cut away from the body or use a cutting block or board. Don't use knives as hatchets or razor blades as knives (except with proper holders).

Broken pieces of glass, porcelain and ceramic should be swept up and wrapped in several thicknesses of newspaper before discarding. If broken glass falls into water, the container should be first drained and the pieces removed using several pieces of cloth to protect the hands.

Despite the well-known hazards of razor blades, people still get cut by them. A special container should be provided for their disposal, preferably with a slot in the top which can be sealed over when the container is discarded.

Tin can lids should be accorded the same respect as broken glass. Older can openers should be replaced with modern, safer implements.

The improper use of steel wool has caused many a deep gash. It should never be separated into smaller portions by tearing, but should be cut with shears. Better yet, buy it in the single-portion "pads."

"Coffee, tea or milk"

Hevins in the 4th AD's "Rolling Review"

"Duty — Honor — Country. Those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying points: to build courage when courage seems to fail; to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith; to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."
Douglas MacArthur
General of the Army, May 12, 1962.

Commentator Speaks

American Soldiers

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following essay on the American fighting man was CBS News Analysist, Eric Sevareid's tribute to Armed Forces Week on his May 14 broadcast. Rarely has any soldier been so eloquently eulogized.

"This is a proper time to consider those young Americans who fight in heat and slime in alien places like Viet Nam, in the kind of undeclared war of limited aim that is alien to our tradition.

"They fight, as did their elder brothers in Korea—not for loot because there is none; not for glory, for there is little of that around; their homeland is not threatened, their fellow countrymen at home make no companion sacrifices and no crusader's zeal drives them on. The question remains: what makes them do it and do it so well, beyond the minimum requirements that the uniform ordains.

"In answer it has been said that they are professional soldiers; but boys of nineteen and twenty are professional at nothing, certainly not at managing the meeting of life with death.

"They fight, they endure, even though they may not understand the geopolitics of this distant war; even though thousands of their countrymen tell them every day, in protest and parade, that the war they fight is a senseless war. They keep on, as they did in Korea, when these circumstances were much the same.

"The real answer must lie deep in the tissues of whatever is the substance that keeps America from becoming unstuck; it must have something to do with their parents and teachers and pastors, with their 4-H clubs and scout troops and neighborhood centers or gangs. It has to do with the sense of belonging to a team, with the dishonor of letting it down. But it also has to do with their implicit, unreasoned belief in their country and their natural belief in themselves as persons.

"Whatever the full answer, it is a considerable thing that they are doing, when they stick at this kind of war, fighting without universal support and fighting for results obscured in the mist of the future.

"Official weeks and days are impersonal symbols to take note of something intensely personal. But they provide an opportunity for the rest of us who are not covered with mud and weariness and nightly fear to pay a measure of respect." —ERIC SEVAREID.

Chaplain's Corner

Being Conscientious

By Chaplain David L. Wilson

"I always take pains to have a clear conscience toward God and toward men." — Acts 24:16.

The directions for a pain-relieving medicine contain the warning: "If pain persists, see a physician." To ignore pain may be dangerous. The human body has a marvelous "built-in" defense system, the most important item of which is pain. Pain is a physical report from an outpost to "headquarters" in the brain, telling it that something is wrong.

When the pain report comes in, orders automatically go out for counter measures. Blood and lymph are rushed to the scene of the bump or wound. By coagulation, a temporary dam is built where there is a bleeding place and fighter corpuscles are mobilized against disease germs.

Pain isn't pleasant, but to ignore it or become insensible to it can be fatal.

What we call conscience is to man's moral nature what pain is to the physical. It is a warning system that enables us to keep morally healthy.

To be conscientious takes attention and effort. St. Paul says he took pains about it. He writes of having a boxing match with himself. If conscience is ignored or masked with easy excuses it can become dormant, and that can be morally fatal.

PRAYER: Lord, God, who knowest me, without, within I pray for clarity of mind to see the true distinctions 'twixt the good and sin, and will to choose the good when I should. In the Spirit of Jesus, Amen.

Survivors' Benefits

One important obligation a serviceman owes to his wife, his children, or his parents is to have his personal affairs in order and up-to-date, so that his family will know what to do and what to expect, if it becomes necessary.

A serviceman's family may be entitled to one or more of the following benefits when he dies, whether on active duty, in retirement, or as a veteran: six months' pay gratuity, dependency and indemnity compensation, VA pension, social security payments, burial expense payments, medical care, final transportation of household goods, war orphan education assistance, and business, farm or home loans for widows.

No man deliberately sets out to leave his family unprepared and completely in the dark about rights and benefits as survivors of a serviceman or a veteran. However, by not keeping an up-to-date personal affairs record and by not informing families that such records exist, many servicemen jeopardize the rights and benefits to which loved ones are entitled.

A serviceman's personal affairs record should be a complete file of all personal and military data and contain his will, insurance policies and other necessary legal documents.

Survivors should know where this personal affairs record is kept and what it contains. Such things as service records, birth certificates, marriage licenses, tax and social security information, real estate holdings, bank books and other personal property should all be together in a safe place.

A serviceman who keeps his personal affairs record up-to-date and makes sure his family is aware of its contents and the benefits they may receive is providing the best possible security for his survivors.

And there's no better time than right now to get these things in order and keep them that way. Everyone expects to be around for a long time, but it's too much of a burden to leave your family with the task of searching out records and documents that you should have assembled for them. (AFPS)

Oliver Tops Associates; Keen Competition Praised

Capt. Eugene L. Oliver was recently named the distinguished and honor student of The Infantry School's associate officer career class No. 3 at graduation exercises in Fort Benning's Marshall Auditorium.

The guest speaker was Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, former commander of the 2nd Infantry Division.

Gen. Chiles told the 154 graduates that if they aren't the competitive type, maybe they shouldn't be in the Army. When you compete be sure to win, "be second to none," he said.

He added, "You have got to know your limitations. Just be yourself and capitalize on the talents you have."

Gen. Chiles said that he could recall years ago when the present Army chief of staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, was a fellow company commander and was a fierce competitor who would be second to no one.

Gen. Chiles also emphasized that competition, however keen, should never need to make enemies.

Introducing Gen. Chiles was Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Among the graduates were officers from Denmark, Greece, Honduras, Iran, Jordan, Laos, Lebanon, Liberia, Saudi Arabia and Viet Nam.

Capt. Oliver will return to his home station at the U.S. Army Tank Automotive Center in Warren, Mich.

August Draft Call Set at 16,500

The Department of Defense has requested the Selective Service to provide armed forces induction stations with 16,500 men in August for assignment to the Army.

The August call, in accordance with established policies, has been computed by the Army to cover losses, thereby maintaining the approved active army strength.

Student Officers Smash Records For PT Testing

Members of the 54th Officer Candidate Company recently broke the Fort Benning record for the Physical Combat Proficiency Test.

They scored an average of 459.3 to break the post record.

Other records fell as the 54th Company assaulted the test. Ninety-seven percent of the candidates scored above the minimum passing standard for all events taken and four of the student officers carded the maximum of 500 points.

The perfect scores were turned in by candidates Edward Meszaros, Robert Meager, James Mueller and Nicholas Leopoldus.

In addition to the three company records, two individual records were tied. Ronald Petitt and James Owens swept through the low crawl in 16 seconds, and 25 men scored over 490.

Wins CMMI Commendation

A Fort Benning unit has been presented a Certificate of Merit for attaining a superior rating on a June Third Army Command Maintenance Management Inspection.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, was presented the certificate recently by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Infantry Center commanding general, at a Commander's Conference.

First Lt. Brent J. Artley, company commander, accepted the certificate for his unit.

An annual event, the Command Maintenance Management Inspection includes the condition of equipment as well as the unit's facilities for its maintenance.

NEW CARRIERS . . . John B. Merritt (L), postmaster at Fort Benning, takes a look at one of the post office's new mail delivery vehicles with Oscar L. Robinson (center), mail carrier, and Ronald L. Companion, administrative officer in the Adjutant General Section, Infantry Center. The Fort Benning post office recently received seven new three-wheel vehicles which can carry both parcel post and letters, eliminating separate deliveries.

2nd Division Officers and Wives Have 'Commencement Exercise'

BY LANNY THOMAS

One of the biggest social events ever staged at Fort Benning was termed the commencement exercise" for the 2nd Infantry Division as it officially "faded away" last week after seven years on the post.

It was the largest sit-down dinner ever held at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commander of the division, spoke to more than 600 officers and their wives after dinner and compared the sadness and joy of the final division party with a solemn June graduation.

"If Luci (Mrs. Chiles) and I, as professors of this school can go out and preach to the world our experiences here, we will be richly rewarded," Chiles said.

Chiles, who has served with the division a total of seven years in his career, said "it is always a part of my heart." He was with the division in two wars.

"I was amazed at the spirit of this division when I joined it," he said. "I didn't start it, nor did you. And this spirit will go on a long time after we leave."

Officers presented the general a swagger stick, a scrapbook portraying his experiences in the division and a small table with all the crests of division units attached to the top.

Mrs. Tony F. Perpich, speaking for the Officers' Wives Club, praised Mrs. Chiles for "the many things she has done for us" and presented her a piece of silver.

Prior to dinner, Gen. and Mrs. Chiles and Col. Perpich, the General's Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Perpich stood in a receiving line that lasted nearly two hours.

Perpich, toastmaster for the affair, spoke briefly on the general as known by officers who worked with him closely.

"Gen. Chiles always strived to teach us the right way to do things," Perpich said.

"He wanted to train us to be the best division in the world. In every outfit we go to, we can carry this experience with us."

Following dinner and speeches, officers and their wives danced until midnight with music by the 2nd Division Band.

577th Engineers Unveil New Incentive Award

A new incentive trophy was unveiled at Center Troop Command's 577th Engineer Battalion recently.

According to a battalion spokesman, "the unveiling was an event looked forward to by the whole battalion." The occasion was its initial presentation to Company A—judged to be the best in the battalion for the month of June.

Known as "The Diligent Workers' Award," the trophy was donated to the battalion by its present commander, Lt. Col. Joseph E. Hallorin. The trophy stands four feet high and employs the transit of a surveyor as its central theme.

A transit is the standard instrument of the engineer and is used on all types of construction work to make precise measurements.

According to a spokesman, the precision instrument symbolizes the qualities necessary to win the "diligent worker" trophy.

The best Company of the Month is judged on the appearance of company areas, barracks, grounds, motor pools, maintenance of equipment, mess halls, military courtesy and appearance, savings bond percentages, and the number of delinquency reports.

Lt. Thomas A. Shepard and 1st Sgt. Charles R. Hodge accepted the first award of the new trophy.

Company C of Troop Command Provides 'Heartbeat'

LEGAL LIBRARIAN
Sp4 Curnel

Story and Photos
BY BETTY FARMER

The men of Company C, Center Troop Command provide the heartbeat of Fort Benning. If you don't believe it, ask the man who knows where they all are.

Lt. Gary W. Vance, commander of Company C, 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command is the man responsible for knowing where the 300 men of his command are at all times.

He'll tell you they belong to the Adjutant General's Section, the Legal Section, the Education Center, Supply Center, the Post Information office and Fort Benning's Range Control Office.

When they're all spread out, they're pretty hard to find. Some 160 of his men work for the post Adjutant General. Their responsibilities include assignment and transfer of personnel, message control, overseas levys and separation of personnel from the service.

In the Legal Section, members of Company C support the myraid operation of post legal operations.

Among them is Sp4 Alton Curnel, legal librarian, responsible for maintaining and cataloguing the thousands of legal reference texts needed in the process of counseling some 3000 soldiers per month.

Court Recorder

One of Curnel's associates is Sp6 Dwaine Roberts, the Legal Section's court recorder. He is the one responsible for all the verbatim records of general courts-martial.

He also handles all incoming and outgoing claims against the government.

At the Education Center, Jose Coalla is a language instructor. He spends all his daytime hours getting ready for the nighttime rush of students in the pursuit of knowledge.

PFC David Hedburg is another one of the many who teach at the Center.

Forty members of Company C are the backbone of the Post Supply Center. Their responsibility — all airborne issue, messhall distribution, self - service supply and reserve component issue.

At the Control Division, Range Control, Sgt. R. B. Wofford and his assistants schedule all ranges and training areas for all units based at Fort Benning. Also at the Range Control Office is a well trained group of demolitions men under the leadership of Sgt. Carl Weaver.

His team has the responsibility for disposing of all "duds" on the ranges.

Soldier Cash Awards to Increase If Proposed Bill Passes Congress

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Cash awards up to $25,000 may be paid to service personnel for suggestions, inventions or scientific achievements which benefit the government, if a proposed bill becomes law.

The bill, H. R. 8333, would add a section to Chapter 57, Title 10, U. S. Code, dealing with decorations and awards. The amendment was introduced by Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., and has been referred to the House Armed Services Committee.

Proposed legislation calls for a cash awards program similar to that granted civil servants, an official said. Presently, some service members receive cash awards in lesser amounts than the amendment calls for, through non-appropriated funds such as post and base exchange profits.

Regulation authority, as provided by the bill, would go to the Secretary of Defense with the Secretary of the Treasury receiving similar authority for Coast Guard personnel.

Additionally the President could authorize the two secretaries to grant monetary awards for service personnel contributing to "efficiency, economy, or other improvement of operations of the Government of the United States."

This means an individual could receive an award for a "service" contribution, then be given a "presidential" award. The total payment, however, could not exceed $25,000.

Awards would be granted for active-service contribution, although a person could receive the money after service separation. Should the member die before getting the award, it would go to his beneficiary.

Persons receiving a cash award would be required to sign away rights for future legal action against the government involving such claims as patent or royalty rights.

Members of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service also are considered service members under the bill's provisions.

First MP Brigade Formed in Army

Frankfurt (AFPS) — The 15th Military Police Brigade, first Military Police (MP) brigade in the history of the U.S. Army, has been activated here.

The brigade was organized as an Area Command unit under the Combat Service to the Army (CO-STAR) headquartered here. Major elements will be the 2nd MP Group, which will move to Nuremburg and the 14th MP Group being activated at Mannheim.

The brigade, commanded by Colonel Robert L. Staver, USA, will provide support for more than 25,000 persons in Area Command. The groups are divided into subordinate commands from battalions down to MP stations and substations.

The brigade will have district provost marshals whose areas of responsibility will coincide with the districts of Area Command. Criminal investigative support is also to be on a district basis.

A Test Report

THE NEW SEATING ARRANGEMENT

By SAMUEL E. RUSH

"Why can't the Armored Personnel Carrier's (APC) combat effectiveness be increased by modifying it to permit troops riding inside to return enemy fire from the protection of its armor?"

In late 1964, Major Gen. John A. Heintges, commanding general, The Infantry Center, posed this question to the Infantry Team.

The team is a collective name applied to the U. S. Army Infantry School (USAIS), U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency (USCDCIA) and the U. S. Army Infantry Board (USAIB) here at Fort Benning.

His question was a valid one as the present APC in use since 1959 was not designed with a "fighting from within" capability.

Written approval for a test of the idea came from the U. S. Army Material Command (USAMC).

Test Conducted

The test was conducted at Fort Benning from March 2 to May 17, 1965.

Throughout the testing, Gen. Heintges took a personal interest in the proceedings, and made frequent visits to the test area. Project officer for the testing was Capt. Thomas P. Kehoe.

The vehicle used came from the 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade and was the standard Armored Personnel Carrier designed to transport troops and cargo.

It can accommodate a driver, troop commander and 11 soldiers. For the purpose of this test, the M113 APC was modified.

Make Cuts

The Maintenance Section of The Infantry Center arranged with the Anniston Ordnance Depot, Anniston, Ala., to make the cutouts in the sides of the vehicle.

Several plywood panels, each having a different type of firing and observation port, were fabricated for insertion into the sides of the vehicle.

The ramp door was removed and replaced with a wooden door of the same thickness and containing a dual - purpose firing and observation port. Later the entire ramp of the vehicle was removed and replaced with a wooden ramp.

Two plywood inserts, each with a different type of firing and observation port, were designed to be fitted into the wooden ramp.

The side seating was changed to a centered arrangement.

Three Squads

Three mechanized Infantry rifle squads and three M-60 machine gun crews were used in various phases of the testing.

In all operational tests, the soldiers wore or carried a combat load.

Except for preliminary safety firings, all firings from the test vehicle were conducted with doors and hatches closed.

To determine if effective fire could be delivered from the firing and observation ports in the sides and rear of the test vehicle, a four - phase test was conducted featuring preliminary firing, level terrain firing, rolling and rough terrain firing, and confirmatory firing.

Analysis

Analysis of firing tests indicated effective fire could be delivered from firing observation ports in the side and rear of the vehicle. Accuracy of the fire diminished with increased range and speed and as the terrain became rougher.

Under the conditions tested, the fire delivered would have been sufficiently accurate to have achieved a suppressive fire effect from opposing personnel.

The M-60 machine gun's ejection pattern was such that expended rounds caused a hazard to other firers. A deflector was constructed which eliminated this problem.

Seating

The most practical troop seating arrangement decided upon, from several tested, included two benches, one along each side wall in the standard location, upon which four soldiers could be seated. The jump seat was removed and folding benches positioned down the center of the test vehicle upon which six men could sit, three on each side.

The most suitable configuration of firing and observation ports used or considered were a series of asymmetrical, covered, one man firing ports designed to accept several different Infantry weapons.

Gruesome Reminders Keep Drivers 'Safe'

During last weekend's July 4th holiday, members of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade were presented with a grim picture of what can happen to the motorist who allows carelessness to rule his good driving sense.

Under the direction of Capt. Paul E. Preskitt, S-3 officer of the 29th, a vivid display of the possible destruction facing those involved in highway accidents was constructed on the lawn of Battalion Headquarters.

Mangled Cars

Using cars mangled and torn beyond recognition in past accidents, a coffin complete with a manikin dressed in Army uniform, a burial tent, and a few simple but message-laden signs, Preskitt succeeded in driving home his message of safety.

Preskitt, who claimed he was operating on the philosophy that, "A picture is worth a thousand words," said that by actually showing the members of the 29th Infantry the dangerous results of careless driving he had hoped to curb all types of accidents, thereby naturally cutting down on the number of fatalities.

Motorists Greeted

Motorists driving past battalion headquarters during the weekend were greeted by a number of accident-riddled autos strewn across the grounds emphasizing what happens in the impact of a crash.

A coffin, the exact replica of the type used in military funerals, encasing a department store dummy dressed in the khaki uniform of the U. S. Army, was set up underneath a funeral tent directly beside the Headquarters to warn passing motorists of the price they might have to pay for a few seconds of driving recklessness.

A sign reading, "A Word To The Wise" stood by the coffin to add a final touch to the funeral scene. Other signs were used to stress the safety message; however, Preskitt pointed out that, "The display speaks for itself."

He added that the scene was designed so passing motorists would get the message quickly without having to pour through reams of written material.

"We would just be creating another safety hazard with too many signs," the captain remarked.

German Civilian Receives Citaton

FRANKFURT, Germany (AFPS) — A German civilian employee, Wilhelm V. Neumann, of the U. S. Army's Frankfurt Procurement Center received a citation signed by President Johnson for saving American taxpayers more than one half million dollars.

In his study of the German turnover tax law, Mr. Neumann found that amphibious river crossing equipment being procured by the U. S. Army through a German contractor would have qualified for a more favorable export compensation than was being received.

Mr. Neumann personally achieved clarification of the commodity category in the law and was able to have the equipment reclassified into a tax commodity group most advantageous to the U. S. Government.

The citation was presented for his "expert knowledge of tax laws" and his ability to negotiate with tax officials which resulted in a tangible savings totaling $500,596.96.

SAFETY TIP

Red flares can prevent accidents when engine trouble or flat tires force a stop on the highway at night. The bright red flame warns oncoming traffic to slow down, so it would be wise to carry flares at all times and be prepared.

Troopin' the Line at Fort Benning

Col. Earl R. Holton, deputy post commander, was presented an Award of Appreciation recently from the International Service Agencies for his work as chairman of the Fort Benning Federal Services Joint Crusade. Bee H. Brown, field director for the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE), made the presentation. Fort Benning personnel contributed $39,686 to the fund drive. Col. Holton also accepted an award for Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, post commander, and Maj. Cyrus L. Williams, Fort Benning Project officer for the drive who is now in Viet Nam.

Cadet Robert B. Williams of the U. S. Military Academy, Class of 1966, recently trained on Fort Benning's Dekkar Strip. He is the son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Robert R. Williams, formerly of Fort Benning. Gen. Williams has been reassigned to the Eighth U. S. Army in Korea. The USMA class took orientation training at The Infantry School June 18-23.

Col. Stevens Cadet Williams

Col. Kenneth T. Stevens, was recently awarded an Army Commendation Medal (third Oak Leaf Cluster) for meritorious service as chief of the Personnel Policy Division, G-1 (Personnel) Section of The Infantry Center from June 8, 1964, to June 24, 1965. Major Gen. John A. Heintges, commanding general of The Infantry Center, made the presentation at ceremonies in his office before Col. Stevens left to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

• • •

Pvt. Patrick M. Stanton, a meat cutter in Fort Benning's Quartermaster Services Division, was recently presented $15 and a letter of appreciation for a safety suggestion. He proposed that a steam hose used to wash down the cutting room be hung on metal hooks when not in use rather than letting it lie on the floor. Col. C. W. Youngman, Infantry Center G-4 (logistics officer), presented the award.

• • •

The Student Brigade recently reported a change in junior officers. Newly assigned were 2nd Lt. Albert Sabitsch and 2nd Lt. Tyler Tugwell while 1st Lts. Richard A. Conrad and Lee R. Reid Jr. and 2nd Lt. Dale Y. Freed were released from active duty.

Lt. Cygan came to the post from Madigan General Hospital in Tacoma, Wash.

SFC Loyd G. Crow received the Army Commendation Medal for his "outstanding professional competence and devotion to duty" in the Republic of Viet Nam from February 1964 to December 1964.

He was commended for working long and arduous hours, setting an 'example that inspired associates to strive for maximum achievement and their loyalty, initiative and will to succeed.

The medal was presented to the MTU soldier by Col. Joseph J. Peot, unit commander, at ceremonies in his office.

The 173rd Reserve Medical Bn. of Portland, Me. recently terminated its active duty training at Fort Benning.

Highlighting training for the 23-man headquarters unit was an overnight problem which was held during their final days of training. The training involved mass evacuation techniques.

The unit started its two-week summer training at Fort Benning June 14 with the 428th Medical Bn. This is the first time the 173rd has trained with a comparable unit. In the past, its active duty has been with general and field hospitals.

• • •

Sgt. Maj. Thornley T. Gladden Jr., sergeant major of the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, recently reenlisted for three additional years.

Sgt. Maj. Gladden was assigned to Hq., TSB prior to his assignment to The Infantry Agency in September 1964.

MSgt. Maxie Fields, a member of the U. S. Army National Trophy Rifle Group, was presented the Army Commendation Medal last week by Col. Joseph J. Peot, commanding officer of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

Fields, who is in training with the Group for the National High Power Rifle championships at Camp Perry, Ohio in August, won the National Trophy Individual rifle match two years ago at Perry with a score that still stands as a record for the event.

Benning Dentists Win Recognition

The U.S. Army Dental Laboratory at Fort Benning has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Dental Laboratories.

The commission is under the auspices of the American Dental Association and the Dental Laboratory Association.

The laboratory was recommended for accreditation after inspection of each of five phases of its operation, including ceramics, orthodontics, fixed prosthodontics removable partial dentures and complete dentures.

Rated equal to or above the commission's requirements in equipment and trained personnel, the laboratory was given an official certificate of accreditation.

SSgt. Tom L. Davis was awarded $25 and a letter of appreciation recently for proposing a preprinted form letter to be used in connection with the promotion of U. S. Army and U. S. Army Reserve officers, with blank spaces for personal data and dates. The suggestion is expected to save time, reduce the possibility of error and result in an estimated savings of $900. Davis is a member of the G-1 (Personnel) Section of The Infantry Center. Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, presented the award.

New Board Commander

Col. James I. Muir Jr. offiically took over as President of the US Army Infantry Board last week. Muir replaces the retiring Board President, Col. Robert C. Williams. He comes to the Infantry Board from Washington D.C. where he was deputy director of Strategic Plans and Policy for the Army.

Gen Kinnard Bids Farewell To 42nd Arty

The final battalion formation for the 42nd Artillery as a member of the 11th Air Assault Division was the occasion for Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, to deliver a farewell address.

The 42nd Artillery was the 11th Air Assault Division's Little John Rocket battalion. It was not included in the newly created air mobile division.

In his delivery, Gen. Kinnard praised the accomplishments of the battalion and expressed his regret that the 42nd Artillery would not remain with the 1st Cavalry Division. The 42nd has recently been attached to the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Before concluding, Gen. Kinnard emphasized that he would be proud to have the 42nd Artillery a part of his command if the 1st Cav would ever go into combat.

By IDA EVANS

Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker was presented a Legion of Merit, first Oak Leaf Cluster, in retirement ceremonies on Chapel Field at Fort Benning recently, which ended a military career of more than 29 years.

The award, made by Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Infantry Center commander commended the chaplain for his work from August, 1961, to June 30, 1965, as post chaplain.

The citation read, in part, "The assiduous manner in which Chaplain Decker approached his multiplicity of responsibilities as post chaplain, his dedication to duty, and his personal interest in every problem, large or small, and in every member of The Infantry Center, were reflected in the smooth, efficient and effective organization which the 54 member Chaplain Section became under his able direction and in the pride of achievement, esprit and morale of its personnel.

"In serving in successive important assignments over more than a 29-year period as a Regular Army chaplain, he has displayed the rare qualities of leadership, perspicacity, intelligence and omnipresent devotion to duty which have unquestionably been responsible for the continuing success and devotion to our church, our Army and our nation.

"Chaplain Decker culminated his uniquely brilliant career at Fort Benning. . . directing the work of 54 chaplains and 70 chaplains' assistants in providing an effective program of religious worship, religious education, and moral training to a military population in excess of 100,000 personnel and their dependents."

Chaplain Decker began his military career May 14, 1936, when he was post chaplain and welfare and recreation officer at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

He has served in the Canal Zone and on the battlefields of Europe and Korea.

In addition to his responsibilities for the religious program at Fort Benning he has been active in the Ministerial Alliance, Citizens-Military Council, Armed Forces YMCA, USO and Rotary Club of Columbus, Ga. He was organizer and president of the Baker High School Band Auxiliary. The chaplain also participated in professional and welfare organizations on the post.

Chaplain and Mrs. Decker will make their home in Gainesville, Fla., where he will be pastor of Centenary Methodist Church.

The daughter, Kathleen, 13, will attend Howard Bishop Junior High School and son, Steven, 16, Gainesville High School.

'B' Average Requirements

College Available for Talented Soldiers

The Army has plenty of vacancies for officers and enlisted men to attend civilian schools.

According to an article in a recent issue of Army Times, there are plenty of volunteers for the college education program but because of civilian college requirements for 'B' average students, especially for advanced degrees, the Army is having problems placing its volunteers.

Need Qualifications

"Competition for the program is not keen because of the increasingly stringent requirements and the lack of applications from the exceptionally qualified," the article said. "The Army's problem is less a lack of volunteers than a lack of qualified ones."

The Army has apparently identified about 3400 positions in the officer field where advanced degrees are fully and clearly justified.

General Openings

According to the 'Times' article the positions have not been as clearly identified for enlisted men but states there is a crying need for enlisted men with degrees in electrical, electronic, mechanical, automotive, and chemical engineering.

Other areas for enlisted men with degrees include automatic data processing, business administration, criminology, nuclear engineering, language and meteorology.

The regulation which covers civil school requirements for soldiers is AR 350-200. It is newly published and represents a combination of the previous regulation which dealt with the subject.

2300 Positions

"In the commissioned officer field, the Army can justify positions for about 2300 in the grades of lieutenant colonel and below which it will fill directly from school in a three - year utilization program," the article states.

"Officer volunteers are especially needed from the combat arms. The 2300 positions have been distributed among the various career branches, first according to branch requirements and then on a weighted basis, among all branches," the article continues.

Hq. Company Building Morale By Remodeling

Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, has set out to build morale through improved living conditions.

The project began simply with the construction of a Polynesian-style patio adjoining the mess hall. It even features palm leaves imported from Florida in the thatched roof and a central fish pond.

Next came the installation of two-air conditioning units at each end of the company day room.

Prominent Visitors To Fort Benning

Briefings on the mission, structure and functions of The Infantry School, with special emphasis on training and instruction, were given Brig. Gen. Yeshayahu Gavish, chief of training, General Staff, Israel Defense Forces, at Fort Benning recently.

Gen. Gavish was accompanied by Lt. Col. Moshe Amir, assistant military, naval and air attache, Embassy of Israel, Washington.

After meeting with Major Gen. John A. Heintges, commandant of The Infantry School, Gen. Gavish was briefed on Fort Benning's origin and development.

Following the background briefing, Gen. Gavish received orientation from departments of the school and observed training and operations throughout the post.

Before departing Friday (July 2), the general was the honored guest at an official luncheon in the Main Officers' Open Mess.

Army Reserve Brig. Gen. Felix A. Davis, commanding general, 75th Maneuver Area Command, Houston, Texas, was at Fort Benning last week for a two-day consultation with The Infantry School's Brigade and Battalion Operations Department personnel.

Gen. Davis's command has as part of its duty the responsibility of preparing map maneuvers and problems for units in its region of support.

In addition to conferences with the Brigade and Battalion Operations Deparment officials, Gen. Davis visited with Major Gen. John A. Heintges, commandant of the school, and Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant.

Gen. Davis departed Friday, July 2.

Signal Plays Training Role

FORT BRAGG, N. C. — ROTC cadets here for summer training are learning how the Army communicates.

Lt. Henry Weeks is the signal officer of the 2nd Infantry Division's 3rd Brigade. He and 20 men of the brigade have the task of supporting the ten classes in communications the cadets are expected to receive.

Weeks and his crew provide the training aids, radios, batteries, bleachers and assistant instructors.

Vaccine Proven 100% Effective

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new oral vaccine has proven 100 percent effective in protecting recruits from acute respiratory ailments, Rear Admiral Robert B. Brown, Navy Surgeon General, has announced.

The capsule vaccine was successfully field tested on 135 volunteers at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C. and Camp Lejeune, N.C. during an epidemic.

By contrast, almost 25 percent of the 132-Marine control group, whose members were fed a capsule without the vaccine, were hospitalized with resiratory trouble.

Congressmen's Terms: Framers of U.S. Govt Achieved Double Aim of Control, Stability

Editor's Note: It is The BAYONET'S intention to print from time, to time excerpts from DA Pamphlet 360-204 on American government.

"Most of us know some basic facts about our Congress. We know that members of our House of Representatives are elected within a Congressional District or from a state at large to represent a certain number of people. We know that there are two Senators from each state, that Representatives are elected for two year terms while Senators are elected for six years. Few of us stop to think what these facts mean to us.

Short Term

"The Representatives have such short terms because they are the most direct voice of the people. In ancient times, all of the citizens of the Greek city-states gathered to vote on important issues. That was a more direct form of democracy. But even back in the Eighteenth Century our country was so large that all the people could not meet in a single place to discuss and vote on every governmental issue. Spokesmen for the people would have to meet instead. So it was decided that each Representative would speak for a number of citizens, the number to be based on the most recent census.

Gives People Control

"The shorter the terms served by these spokesmen, the more control the people have over them. If the spokesman served only a month, he could be voted out of office almost immediately if he failed to represent the people properly. When our Constitution was being adopted, some Americans wanted Representatives to get only one year terms. Others pointed out that this would force the Representatives to campaign each year and give them little chance to do any law-making. The term was finally set at two years. This was one more compromise to get a government that would function and still give the maximum control by the people.

The Senate, unlike the House, was not created as a direct voice of the people. Senators were to represent the states, and originally the Constitution called for their election by the state legislatures. Since 1913, as a result of the Seventeenth Amendment to the Constitution, Senators have been elected directly by the people of their states.

"Senators were given six year terms because it was felt this would give stability to our Government. It was assumed that this would not only enable a Senator to get more experience in government, it would also permit him to act without constant worry about the immediate reaction of the voters. To lend still more experience and stability to the Senate as a whole, the terms were arranged so that only one out of every three Senators faces election at a given time. Every two years only one-third of the Senators are up for election, while every Representative faces the decision of the voters."

GI's in Korea Have No Trouble Spending Free Time

An American soldier in Korea spends his free time in many varied ways. Some use the fact that there is so little to do in some areas of command that they adopt hobbies. Nearly every post is equipped with some sort of craft shop. Some are very well equipped with model kits and photographic facilities. Fees are nominal.

First run movies plus old favorites are shown nightly and some theater jobs are available for men stationed there.

Each post of any size sports a service club. It is the mission of the dedicated service club workers to help the men pass their 13 months of duty there the most enjoyable way possible. Nightly game sessions and contests are run. Most offer prizes and a refreshment break is held mid-way in the evening.

Other activities include pool, ping pong, table games, reading rooms and one or two rooms equipped with stereophonic phonographs. Records can be checked out on an hourly basis.

Once or twice weekly, depending on the club, floor shows are presented by different Korean groups. They include a band, comedy routines and a floor show. USO shows highlight the schedule about once a month. These include a variety of entertainment ranging from dance bands, choral groups and comedy skits to educational demonstrations.

"Hail and Farewell" parties are conducted monthly for the newcomers and those returning to the States. Games are played, refreshments are served and "good luck" tokens are presented.

Tours are scheduled in connection with the Korean government to the historical sites and other places of interest.

Libraries are provided and offer a complete supply of the latest novels, biographies, magazines, periodicals and records.

Soldiers working on high school or college General Educational Development testing need not worry about not being able to continue their studies due to the fact they are overseas. Education centers provide a complete file of material for the major courses and correspondence is available for the University of Maryland studies.

Many have the desire to learn a foreign language, usually Korean, while stationed there. Records and printed material may be checked out in the language or nearly any other language desired.

Classes are conducted nightly according to the subject and a course in Korean is held weekly by a professor from a local university. The course is easy to learn and extremely interesting.

PX facilities are usually good and sometimes even exceed those found in the States. Prices are low and items not available in the concession may be ordered from catalogues.

Ration cards are issued and must be followed. Each person is allowed a selected number of the "hard to get" items (cigarettes, soap, hand lotion and so on) which runs on a monthly or quarterly basis.

Souvenirs ranging from brass tableware to hand made dolls and jewelry are sold and a packaging store provides wrapping for overseas shipment. Shipping time is generally six weeks.

Athletics are not eliminated by any means. Even some of the smaller posts provide a gymnasium complete with equipment. Outdoor swimming pools are open in the afternoons and early evenings. Company and post intramural sports are conducted according to season.

Snack bars provide lunch time and off duty serving of snacks and full dinners. They feature the latest in cooking equipment including infrared broiled steaks and chicken.

Officers and enlisted men's clubs provide off duty personnel with entertainment on the social side. Floor shows are presented weekly by the Korean Musicians' Union from Seoul and are usually very entertaining. The soldier can obtain a variety of beverages and the club usually has a kitchen.

SUMMARY

The American soldier stationed in Korea need not worry about finding things to do in his spare time. These previously mentioned activities provide a well-rounded schedule of off duty activities.

All that is needed is the will to invest a little time into the many possibilities. The activities are there to help pass the 13 months away. If you are assigned there, take advantage of them.

12th's TOP SOLDIER

Pfc Keith M. Brown is Battalion soldier of the month for the 12th Artillery.

Brown, a member of Headquarters Company, is a native of Richmond, Me. and an honor high school graduate. He attended the New England Institute of Technology and was employed by the Maine highway department as a surveyor. He is now assigned to the Battalion Survey Section as an instrument operator.

SPORTS Afterthoughts

by DAVID N. SCOTT

IN THE HISTORY of baseball, there have been only nine triple crown winners which means claiming the title in home runs, runs batted-in and batting.

The last big leaguer to cop the grand slam of baseball was Mickey Mantle in 1956. Mantle took home the honors with 52 homers, 130 runs batted in and a .353 percentage.

When will baseball have another? It could be a long long time.

After Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and Mickey Mantle call it quits, there will be no superstars left in baseball. By a superstar, I mean a player who can hit for percentage, for power and in the clutch.

The home run and the RBI seem to go together but when you are swinging for the fences, the batting average generally drops. When Roger Maris smacked his record breaking 61 homers in 1961, he also led the league in RBIs but his average was an embarrassing .269.

Harmon Killebrew, the new major league home run king, led the junior circuit in homers in 1962 with 48 and RBIs with 126. His batting average was a puny .243. In 1963 he walloped 45 homers and hit .258 while in 1964 he blasted 49 round tripers and brought his average up to .270.

Hank Aaron, the Milwaukee Braves' right fielder, came close to the triple crown in 1963 when he blasted 44 homers, drove in 130 runs and boasted a batting average of .319. The Dodgers' Tommy Davis copped the batting title that year with a .326 average.

Guys like Davis and Clemente who don't have the power to swing for the fences have kept the "superstars" a few percentage points away from the coveted triple crown. There is no desire here to detract from the superb singles and doubles hitters of today. A manager could ask no more of a man who can get on base and hit well over .300 year after year.

The point is that after Mays, Aaron, Mantle and Ernie Banks call it quits, who is going to replace them? There is no one in the Yankee system to replace Mantle who claims he will retire this year if he doesn't hit .300, and there is no one in the Cub system to fill in for the aging Banks. What about Mays and Aaron, the two best ball players in baseball today? Who is going to step into the spotlight after they depart?

In my opinion, there isn't a player in the majors today who can compare with these four men. That is another reason why I think there won't be a triple crown winner in the majors for a long time to come (if there is ever one again).

All four of these men have had a shot at the triple crown and all except Mantle have missed by just a few percentage points. If it is any consolation, Babe Ruth and Stan Musial never won the triple crown either.

CTC Beats 'Best Bilt Fence,' 6-5 On Five Hits Bolstered by Errors

By DICK MINNIG

Fresh from its win over the 428th Medical Battalion in the USAIC First Half Championship Playoff, the Infantry Center Troop Command nine beat Best Bilt Fence of Columbus, 6-5, last week on five hits magnified by errors.

After the Best Bilt team scored one run in the top of the first on a passed ball, CTC bounced back with three runs in their half of the inning and held the lead for the remainder of the game.

Doug Talmadge, who got credit for the championship win over the Medics on June 25, was starting pitcher for CTC. On the mound for Best Bilt Fence was Ronnie MacLemore.

CTC Takes Lead

CTC's first three runs rolled in on two hits and three Best Bilt errors. After reaching second base on an error, center fielder Eli Amaro moved into scoring position at third through a sacrifice fly by Roger Terry. George Wright followed with a single that brought Amaro bolting home with the tying run.

First baseman Rosey Spence pushed Wright to second with a single to right field. Bill Penny then slammed a grounder that forced Wright at third. Trying for a double play at first, the Best Bilt third baseman threw the ball away, allowing Spence to score from second and sending Penny to third.

In the attempt to nab Penny, the Best Bilt first baseman threw wild and the CTC catcher followed Spence home with the Troop Command's third run.

In the third inning CTC scored twice more to go out in front 5-1. With two away, Spence made first on an error and was followed by Penny who singled to center. Left fielder Billy Fox drew a walk from McLemore to load the bases.

On a looping single to left by Ron Hodges, Spence and Penny scored giving the Troop Command a four run lead.

CTC scored again in the fourth on Best Bilt errors. Amaro smashed a double to center and scooted to third on a fielding error. The throw from center field got past the Best Bilt third baseman giving Amaro a free ticket home with CTC's sixth and final run.

Best Bilt Closes Gap

With the score 6-1 in favor of the Troop Command, Best Bilt Fence grabbed three runs in the fifth inning to close the scoring gap.

Leadoff batter Ricky Edwards walked and moved to second on a McLemore single to right. After Larry Pickarn struck out, short stop Mike Malone blasted a single to center driving in Edwards.

With two away, Ray Cook lined a single to center, moving McLemore and Malone home to make the score, 6-4.

Best Bilt Fence moved within one run of CTC in the sixth inning when doubles by relief pitcher Steve Johnson and left fielder Cook gave them another tally. But Cook proved to be the last man to cross the plate for either team.

In the seventh, CTC brought in Jim Munday to relieve winning pitcher Talmadge and Best Bilt was shut out of the scoring column for the final three innings, giving CTC the win.

Best Bilt Fence	100	001	000—5
CTC	302	100	000—6

Batteries: Best Bilt, Ferguson, McLemore, Johnson and Brooks. CTC, Talmadge, Munday and Penny.

SPORTS

The Second Half opener between the 197th Infantry Brigade and the Center Troop Command, which was rained out on July 6, has been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at Gowdy Field.

Tonight, the Student Brigade faces the 428th Medical Battalion at Gowdy.

Playoffs to Pick Team For Army Golf Tourney

A USAIC Golf Playoff will be held at the Main Officers' Golf Course from July 20-23 to select members of the Fort Benning team to be sent to this year's Third U. S. Army Golf Tournament at Fort Bragg, N. C., next month.

All male military personnel on active duty at Fort Benning are invited to participate.

The playoff will be divided into an open and a senior division. Competition will be governed by the rules of the 1965 U. S. Golf Association as modified by the Benning Golf Committee.

Competition will include 72 holes of elimination play. After competion of the first 36 holes, the 20 lowest scores in the open and the nine lowest in the senior division will finish the remaining 36 holes. All others will be eliminated.

Four finalists in the open division and two from the senior division will make up the Fort Benning team in the Third Army Tourney from August 9-13.

All applicants in the senior division must be at least 45 years old.

Further information and entry material is available at the USAIC Sports Office, Bldg. 394, the Main Officers' Golf Pro Shop or the Special Services Golf Course at Sand Hill.

Army Wins Pistol Meet

BY LEE LA COMBE

The Army's National Trophy Pistol Group ran head-on into the big Air Force and Marine Corps teams in the Georgia State Pistol Championships at Norcross last weekend and when firing was completed the soldiers had emerged as clear - cut victors.

They took three of the four team matches, all of the individual aggregates and 10 of the 16 fired events.

In addition, Army Marksmanship Training Unit personnel slammed out a 1-2-3 finish in the individual grand aggregate.

Blankenship Leads Victory

National champion SFC William B. Blankenship Jr. who will be seeking an unprecedented sixth straight title at Camp Perry this year, led the victory parade by taking the individual championship with a 2,664. This was one of his best efforts since setting the national record of 2,674 a little over a year ago.

He also topped the field in the Center Fire aggregate with an 889 and fired on the Army's winning teams in the .22 caliber and Center Fire events.

Sp5 Richard L. Jones of Army Eastern was individual runnerup with a superb 2,658 and SFC Robert Whitacre finished third with 2,656.

SSgt. Emil Heugatter gave the Army its first major victory when he captured the .22 aggregate with an 892; Whitacre grabbed the .45 title with an 883; and Sp4 Harland Rennolds capped the victory parade by winning the Service Pistol crown with an 878.

Blue Squad Victory

The All - Army Blue squad, composed of Blankenship, Heugatter, SSgt. Hershel Anderson and SFC Ralph O. Thompson, swept to victory in the .22-team match with 1,184 and the Center Fire with 1,174. It also placed third in the .45 caliber with 1,173.

Their pair of first place finishes and a third gave them a runaway victory in the team aggregate with a 3,531 which was 19 points higher than the runnerup Air Force team and 21 more than the Marines who finished third.

The Air Force took the .45 match with a 1,175.

Thompson and Anderson joined forces with SSgt. John Lawson and SFC Howard Parker, a pair of newcomers to romp home in front in the Service Pistol team competition with an 1,158.

The soldiers also grabbed a pair of second place finishes when Army Western was runnerup in the match with 1,174 and All Army placed in the Service Pistol with an 1,156.

The National Trophy Group journeys to Charlotte, N. C., this weekend for another tuneup match. During the next two weeks they will fire at Fort Knox and South Bend, Ind., before moving into Camp Perry for the National Championships.

Newest Army Concept

1st Cavalry Now Winged

By HANK ALLISON

Air mobility became an integral part of the Army's combat capability Saturday as the colors of the 1st Cavalry Division were accepted by Division Commander Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, and re-designated 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

In a ceremony which drew more than 10,000 civilian and military guests, the colors which had not been on duty in the United States for 22 years were accepted by the Fort Benning unit.

The colors were passed by sergeants major from the division's former headquarters in central Korea to Mrs. Ben Dorcy, "Mother of the 1st Cavalry Division". Mrs. Dorcy then passed the colors to Gen. Paul L. Freeman, commander of the Continental Army Command, who handed them to the new commander Gen. Kinnard.

Earlier in the ceremony, the colors of the 11th Air Assault Division had been retired.

Among the special guests at the ceremony was Gen. Hamilton Howze, only recently retired from active duty. It was Gen. Howze, who led the board of officers who recommended the incorporation of airmobile units into the army combat force. His father, Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze was the commander of the 1st Cavalry Division at its birth on Sept. 13, 1921 in El Paso, Texas.

Specially invited delegations from the El Paso and Washington, D. C. Chapters of the Division Association flew to the ceremony.

The transfer of the 1st Cavalry Division colors to Fort Benning marked the first time they had entered the continental United States since 1943 when they left for the then war-torn South Pacific. Duty in the Phillipines, Japan and Korea followed as the division carved a name for itself in Army history.

The new unit formed of soldiers from the 2nd Infantry Division and the 11th Air Assault Division, will begin training immediately to become combat ready.

Cav Wings Through First Week As Units Push Air Mobile Training

By Joe Treaster and Nick Palladino

As the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) wheeled through its first week at Fort Benning, major command units reported an intensive push in air mobility training.

Almost division wide were instructions in the use of the new, light M-16 rifle, how to escape and evade the enemy, and in methods of scaling down the side of a ship—cargo net training.

The airborne 1st Brigade Tuesday began a series of drops over Friar Drop Zone in Alabama aimed at refreshing veterans, and familiarizing new paratroopers.

500 Jumpers

Tuesday and Wednesday three C-130 Air Force transport planes carried nearly 500 jumpers into the air.

Meanwhile, some 450 men of the brigade were working through their second week of a compressed course at the Airborne School on Main Post.

"The men going through the training at the airborne school are doing very well," said Maj. Otto Cantrell, brigade operations officer. "They're all in pretty good shape."

Three-Week Program

Tuesday four officers and three enlisted men led by Capt. Robert E. Lindquist, began a three-week program aimed at qualifying some 13,250 division men with the M-16 rifle.

Second Brigade soldiers were shuffling through tactical training with helicopters. Some new men were getting their introduction to warfare in the agile crafts; sling loading and rappelling demonstrations were presented. And there was scrambling in and out of the birds in brief, platoon-size problems.

The 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry completed its escape and evasion training and the 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry today ends four days of tactical training centered around the helicopter. Tomorrow the brigade begins work in qualification with the M-16 rifle.

Suppressive Fire

Troops of the 3rd Brigade were preparing for a "suppressive fire" program scheduled to begin July 19 on an especially prepared range in the Kilo impact area east of Moore Road.

Capt. William D. Taylor, said the "suppressive fire training is available now where else in the continental United States. The Army's nearest suppressive fire training is offered in Hawaii" he said.

"Purpose of the training," said Capt. Taylor, "is to familiarize machine gunners, automatic riflemen and crew chiefs in the techniques of placing suppressive fire."

Units of Division Artillery were at various stages in Air mobility tests, which included live firing of assigned weapons. The airborne 1st Battalion, 19th Artillery was getting additional jump training.

Night Show

Tuesday night artillerymen presented a demonstration of how a spotlight carrying helicopter can be used in conjunction with a 2.75 rocket firing aircraft for night missions. The division's three general officers and a number of other senior men saw the demonstration.

Capt. Calvin Carr of the 2nd Battalion, 20th Artillery said the program showed that the spotlight technique could be used and that he expected further tests would be conducted.

Some 100 pilots joined the 11th Aviation Group and were scheduled for assignment to the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion and the 227th and 229th Assault Helicopter Battalions. The men were slated to receive special aircraft transition training in their new units.

The division band got orders to expand from 32 to 48 men and the "majority" of Company A of the 15th Medical Battalion went to jump school.

A New Look

This week something new comes to our pages in the form of Cavalair Commentary.

In his column Capt. J. D. Coleman, a new face to the 1st Cavalry PIO but an old pro in the journalism field, takes a look around the division and the world and gives his views on what he sees.

Be sure to look for Cavalair Commentary each week. In this issue you'll find it on page 23.

Water Proficiency Program

Troops Begin Courses In Cargo Net Training

Officers and men of the 1st Cavalry Division are currently participating in cargo net training classes.

The course of instruction is intended to teach the Sky Troopers the proper method of exiting from a ship. The training is an integral part of the accelerated program to get the division combat-ready.

The uniform for the training is full combat gear, to include the individual weapon, which adds a touch of reality to the training for the soldiers.

Cargo net training is part of the Basic Water Proficiency Program that is being given to the men of the 1st Cavalry Division.

The men are trained in groups of one hundred at one and one-half hour intervals.

It is just a small part of the varied and tough training the Sky Troopers are receiving to get them ready to face any situation that may confront them.

WE GET LETTERS

In Korea

2nd Colors Received

The ceremony changing the 1st Cavalry to the 2nd Infantry Division was held today, July 1.

The 1st Cavalry colors left Kimpo today for Benning escorted by Sergeants Major Young, Fagan and Driggers.

The soldiers, both commissioned and enlisted, of the Eighth United States Army welcome the famed 2nd Infantry Division and are proud of your inheritance of the colors of the distinguished 1st Cavalry Division on July 3.

I know the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) will gallantly carry on its proud and historic Cavalry role of overwatching the battle field and in the manner already established by the 11th Air Assault Division.

DWIGHT E. BEACH
Commanding General
Eighth U.S. Army

Welcome 1st [illegible]

The members of this command welcome the 1st Cavalry Division back to the United States as part of USCONARC's combat-ready forces.

"The First Team" distinguished itself in world War II, the Korean War and more recently as protectors of the hard-won peace in Korea.

The Division will now assume another important mission as it contributes to the Army's air mobility role.

From a Former Trooper

'Modern Rededication'

It is a personal honor as President of the 1st Cavalry Division Association and as a former trooper, who spent four years wearing that big yellow and black patch, to be present at this occasion.

I can recall making '42 maneuvers in Louisiana as horse cavalry; then being redesignated as jeep troopers. Today it's helicopters. In the business world we term such changes as due to technological obsolesence.

Rather than redesignation I would like to carry back to our 1st Cavalry Division Association 18th Annual Reunion at Kansas City this August a feeling that a fine U. S. fighting group has undergone a modern rededication to the concepts established by former members of the 1st Cavalry Division.

To quote General Douglas MacArthur — "No greater record has emerged from the War than that of the 1st Cavalry Division — swift and sure in attack, tenacious and durable in defense, and loyal and cheerful under hardship. It has written its own noble history. My personal connection with it in many moments of crisis has especially endeared it to me."

Troopers you are now the "First Team". Carry on with God's Speed — And keep our escutcheon clean.

John J. O'Connell, Jr., President
1st Cavalry Division Association

From CONARC

11th Commended

Congratulations to the officers and men of the 11th Air Assault Division for their outstanding contributions during the development of the Army's new air mobility concept.

The division has performed a unique service for the United States Army. Through its efforts during the past two years the division, functioning as an air assault test unit, has developed and proved the feasibility of tactical air mobility.

As the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) assumes the responsibilities of its new role, all members of the 11th Air Assault Division should take great pride in having played a part in this significant achievement.

PAUL L. FREEMAN
Commanding General
CONARC

Praise From Chief of Staff

'Milestone in History'

This date marks a significant milestone in the history and continued progress of the United States Army.

Those members of the 11th Air Assault Division, whose colors are being retired, and those members of the 2nd Infantry Division, whose colors are once again moving to a far frontier of freedom, can take great pride in the knowledge that their combined pioneering activities have resulted in the creation of an organization that has combined the technological might of the United States with the classic fighting qualities of the American ground soldier to move the United States Army into a new dimension of land warfare.

To the members of the 11th Air Assault Division, Godspeed as your colors return once again to a scene that added a significant chapter of distinguished performance to the history of your division.

To the new 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) the expectations of all of the Army rest upon your broad shoulders as you carry forward your glorious and illustrious traditions into the future.

HAROLD K. JOHNSON

With Receptions Following Colorful Ceremony

Social Life Bubbles Into New 1st Airmobile Cavalry

Social life bubbled into the newly designated 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) last Friday evening at a private residence and in the Main Officers Open Mess.

Dozens of veterans of the division, active in the unit association, poured into the home of division artillery commander Col. William A. Becker at 205 Lumpkin Rd.

And some 195 officers and wives of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion gathered at the main officers club.

It was the battalion's annual formal dinner - dance. But it came at a time when a farewell to one unit and a hello to another was appropriate.

The new division's commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard and one of his assistant's Brig. Gen. John M. Wright attended both parties.

The general's made no staged remarks at Col. Becker's party. But at The MOOM, Gen. Kinnard told the group he was "very proud of you all."

And reminded them that as member of the cavalry division he was sure they would carry on the same "fine traditions that you established as members of the 11th Air Assault Division."

Plaques were presented to 36 pilots departing the battalion for assignments elsewhere in the division and the commander, Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Silver received a silver tray from the battalion's officers.

Col. Silver also was given a 30 by 40 inch mural painted by PFC Earl Acey. In the painting Col. Silver is shown astride a broken down Chinook helicopter being towed by a three-quarter ton truck driven by Capt. Church Oram, the battalion maintenance officer. Maj. Rodney Spotts, the battalion executive officer, is under the helicopter waving.

Two former division commanders were among the guests at Col. Becker's party; Maj. Gen. William G. Chase, who, mounted on a white stallion led the division into Manilla at the vanguard of allied forces and Maj. Gen. William A. Harris, now deputy commanding general of the 4th U. S. Army. While the division's leader in Korea, Gen. Harris had a horse's saddle mounted in his jeep.

Also at the party was the division's "mother," Mrs. Ben H. Dorey; the president of the 1st Cavalry association, John O'Connell of Chicago and several other association members.

The guests talked of personal experiences they'd had while wearing the Army's largest patch and some spoke of the association's reunion in mid-August in Kansas City, Kans. With the unit stationed in the U. S. for the first time in 22 years, one veteran said, a record attendance is possible.

Aviation Group 1st Lady Greeted at Informal Tea

Mrs. J. Elmore Swenson was welcomed by ladies of the 10th Aviation Group (formerly the 10th Air Transport Brigade) at a tea held in her honor Wednesday, June 30.

Tea tables in the Custer Terrace Officers' Club were decorated simply with spring flowers and ivy garlands. Silver punch bowls and serving trays completed the decor.

Although the afternoon was hot and many officers from the Group had just been transferred to the 1st Cavalry Division, a large number of ladies were present to meet Mrs. Swenson and welcome her to her first tour at Fort Benning. Mrs. H. W. O. Kinnard, wife of the Commanding General of the 1st Cavalry Division, was also a special guest at the tea.

Col. Swenson recently took command of the 10th Aviation Group (then the 10th Air Transport Brigade), and his family arrive here from Fort Monroe, Va., late in June.

The Swensons have two children. Their daughter is married and lives at Fort Sill, Okla.; and their son, Steve (a recent high school graduate), is here at Fort Benning and anxious to get busy with activities on the Post.

Mrs. Swenson professes to be an enthusiastic bowler and hopes to participate in the sport in the near future.

Many "thank-yous" go to Mrs. Gregory Olney, Mrs. Frank Shaw, and the committee members who worked so hard on preparations for a lovely tea.

Cav. Supply Officer Promoted to Lt. Col.

The Supply Officer of the 1st Cavalry Division was promoted to lieutenant-colonel in an informal ceremony at Support Command Headquarters recently.

Lt. Col. Fred A. Osterhout Jr. received his Silver Oak Leaves from Lt. Col. Clifford C. Wilson, assistant Support Command commander.

The colonel has been stationed at Fort Benning since April 1964. He was assigned for three months to the 711th Maintenance Battalion as the battalion S-4.

Subsequently he was reassigned to the division supply office, 11th Air Assault Division where he continues in the same position with the 1st Cav.

The colonel spent three years in the U. S. Navy before enlisting in the U. S. Army in 1949.

He has served tours of duty in Japan, Korea, and two hours of duty in Germany and Hawaii.

Col. Osterhout is from Seattle, Wash. He is a 1947 graduate of the University of Washington.

1st Brigade Unit Takes Third Army Citation

Headquarters Company of the 1st Airborne Brigade's 1st Bn, 12th Cav, (former Rakkasans) have earned a special citation from the Third U. S. Army as a result of last year's Army voting program, it was learned early this week.

The citation, signed by Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich was awarded to the company for the outstanding support given the 1964 Army Voting Program which was evidenced by the more than 97 per cent participation figure in last fall's election.

This showing was the direct result of combined efforts by Capt. Michael W. Maxwell, company commander, and 1st Sgt. Alred E. Daniels who conducted a company sized program to encourage participation.

Much of the work in this area was accomplished during Air Assault II in the Carolinas, when the company mail bags contained absentee ballots which continued to go out during September and October.

A top company in supporting such programs, this unit was cited for a 99 per cent participation figure in the recent Joint Federal Services Crusade fund drive, and was cited in May for having the best company sized reenlistment program in the 1st Brigade.

Mrs. Tjossem Honored Guest At DivArty Fete

Mrs. Oliver P. Tjossem was guest of honor at a farewell coffee Friday, July 2, in the home of Mrs. William A. Becker on Lumpkin Road.

Those attending were ladies of Headquarters Battery, 1st Air Cavalry Division Artillery. The special guests were Mrs. Frank A. Athanson, Mrs. Francis J. Bush, Mrs. Charles F. Farber, Lt. Col. Farber's mother, Mrs. Nelson A. Mahone, Jr., and Mrs. Robert F. Short.

The serving table was centered with an arrangement of yellow and white flowers and yellow candles. An assortment of sandwiches and rolls were served. Mrs. Tjossem presided at the coffee service.

On behalf of the ladies, Mrs. Becker presented Mrs. Tjossem with an engraved silver bowl as a farewell gift.

Farewells Said At 77th Arty June Coffee

Ladies of the 1st Battalion, 77th Artillery bade farewell to two first ladies at a coffee, June 28th.

The hostess was Mrs. Jesse Bickmore. The honorees were Mrs. Frank Athanason and Mrs. Samuel H. Fisher, Jr. Both ladies were presented with corsages of yellow roses.

Mrs. Athanasan was also presented with a silver sient butler and Mrs. Fisher received a copper fondue dish.

Also on hand for the farewells were Mrs. Tony Perplch and Mrs. Robert Short.

Refreshments were served and Mrs. George Thompson poured coffee.

Cavalry Colors Received

These pictures of the change of colors ceremony represent a milestone in the history of the Army, as the Cavalry moves from horses to helicopters.

They depict the formal organization of a unit whose hopes have become reality and whose ambitious have become incorporated into the newest and most spirited fighting force in the Army structure.

Now the men of the former 11th Air Assault Division carry the proud name of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), ready to accept any and all missions assigned to them.

CAVALAIR COMMENTARY

BY J. D. COLEMAN

There perhaps is no office or staff section so misunderstood as to purpose or mission than the public information office. This is not "misunderstood" in the sense of "poor us," but to the extent that elements throughout the division are convinced that this office exercises a capricious control over what unit publicity is used or discarded.

Nearly everyone in this office, present company included, has been accused from time to time of having wielded an arbitrary pencil on copy from some unit. The comments generally run like this: "It seems that such-and-such battalion (brigade) (company) always has stories in the paper. Some blankety-blank up there must be playing favorites."

To those so persuaded it may come as a substantial shock to learn that we "up here" have something more to do with our time than apply whimsical control over who or who does not get publicity.

More often than not, much of the time of the Information Office staffers is spent cajoling unit publicity types to get something, anything in, so that it can be used.

This is all a somewhat oblique introduction to the subject at hand — the purpose of the Information Section. We have three tasks: command information, public information and community relations. All three are tied together, because, generally, what affects one area also affects the other two to some extent.

The Cavalair portion of the Bayonet essentially is a command or troop information vehicle. When properly oriented and operated, it utilizes the information already made available to the section for the other phases of the information program. For example, a meritorious story about training or personal achievement should first be given to the local news media, then a copy made available for inclusion in the Cavalair. In this manner, this office can achieve its command information and public information objectives simultaneously and the unit gets the benefit of double-barrelled coverage.

But, of course, this will require some degree of work on the part of the unit correspondents. No one at this office has had spells of clairvoyance lately and we must rely on the individual at unit level to supply us with the basic tools of our trade — timely information about people and events.

It is a curious paradox that those who are the most vocal about lack of publicity are those who cooperate the least with the people who are trying to obtain this coverage for them.

We exist to tell your story. There are a scant half-dozen of us here in Information. We could tell our story in a single issue of the Cavalair, perhaps even in the space of this column. So we need you to help us. And, needless to say, those who help us the most, will be those who receive the most publicity.

Although we will strive for balanced coverage of units, it should be remembered that most all units have about the same training. And, since our coverage is aimed at the training mission primarily, it goes without saying that, given a choice of sending a staffer to one unit to dig out a story that another organization already has written up, the lean toward the obvious is inevitable.

The potential for publicity in this current divisional organization is limitless. We would like to see all units get their share of the cake. But the ingredients must come from "down there," so that we "up here" can do a proper job of mixing and baking.

Ackerson Assumes Command of Marners

In a change of command ceremony conducted June 30 on Essebagger Field, Lt. Col. Frederic Ackerson took over command of the 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry from Lt. Col. Arne H. Eliasson.

Reviewing officer for the ceremony was Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles who passed the "Rock of the Marne colors from Lt. Col. Eliasson to Lt. Col. Ackerson.

Following the traditional passing of the colors, Col. Ackerson's green "combat commanders" tabs were pinned on by Gen. Knowles aided by Sgt. Maj. D. V. Wright. Then Col. Ackerson led the "Marnemen" past the reviewing stand in their final pass in review as members of the 38th Infantry. The following day, this battalion became the 1st Battalion 5th Cavalry.

Present for the ceremony were Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, Col. E. B. Roberts, 1st Brigade commander; Col. William R. Lynch, 2nd Brigade commander and Col. Thomas W. Brown, 3rd Brigade commander.

Lt. Col. Ackerson, who as the son of an Army officer "has been in the army all of his life" obtained his commission through OCS in 1946. Since then he has held a wide variety of positions ranging from duty with the Army of Occupation in Europe following WWII, duty as an instructor at the Army General School at Ft. Riley, Kan., service with the 25th Infantry Division during the Korean Conflict and recently a liasion function with the French Forces in Germany.

Col. Ackerson has attended both the Ecole d'Etat-Major in France and the Armed Forces Staff College.

Colors Seen Everywhere When Vets Visit Division

The 1st Cavalry Division's distinctive insignia was everywhere Saturday.

On ties worn by 1st Cavalry Association members from far flung cities, on them and on the shoulders of thousands of infantrymen who are now adapting themselves to the idea of being cavalrymen.

During a reception held following the formal ceremony, one of the division's distinguished former commanders, Maj. Gen. (ret.) William G. Chase, was heard to say, "I have one suggestion. We were first in Manila. We were first in Tokyo. We were first in Pyongyang. Now let's be first on the move."

The general, who led the 1st Cavalry Division into Tokyo, continued, "I feel the division is in good hands. It's got the men to get it on the move."

Another former 1st Cavalry commander, Brig. (ret.) William J. Bradley of Falls Church, Va., said: 'I know you'll hold the colors high."

Many of the veterans attending the division redesignation ceremonies were from Texas — big burly veterans of World War II and Korea.

When Gen. Paul L. Freeman and Gen. Hamilton Howze — the father of the Air Assault concept which has now become a reality —referred to the wartime exploits of the 1st Cav., the assembly from Texas was seen to grin proudly.

When Texas was mentioned they grinned with pride again.

"When you meet a Texan who's a 1st Cavalry man, that's a double eagle," said one of the veterans.

"It is the finest," said El Paso veteran Capt. (ret.) Lonnie Black, "Yes sir, the finest outfit in the Army."

And so the colors are home for the first time since May 1943 when the division left the United States to fight the Japanese in the Pacific.

More than 20,000 men who wore the yellow and black shoulder patch of the division were killed or wounded in 10 campaigns of World War II and Korea.

Now Sky Troopers of the Army's first airmobile division are added to the Cavalry roster that has changed many times in the more than two decades of service in hot and cold war.

Original Design 44 Years Old

1st Cavalry's 'Mother' Hopes to Restyle Patch

After a visit to Fort Benning last weekend, the "Mother" of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) said she hopes to restyle the unit's shoulder patch which she designed 44 years ago.

Mrs. Ben H. Dorcy had come to the post to see the colors of the unit officially transferred here from Korea.

I couldn't see in 1921 that the division would be flying," she said. "They were riding horses then. Some changes are in order now."

The 80-year-old wife of a former 7th Cavalry commander said she planned to do research in mythology and heraldry in finding a suitable modification.

In an interview during her stay at Fort Benning, Mrs. Dorcy told a reporter she had come to the post hoping "to see my men with the patch on. I had 15,000 sons before (in Korea) and now I'm going to have 15,000 more. And I glory in them."

Mrs. Dorcy, who has no living relatives, said she years ago devoted herself to the men of the 1st Cavalry Division.

"They started calling me 'mother' because of my motherly qualities," she said, "It is my way of serving my country."

Mrs. Dorcy recounted the evolution of the cavalry from horse to jeep to helicopter and described the new air mobile concept as "wonderful."

"I think I was a little bit shocked that things weren't going to be as they were, but I've seen the progress and the necessary changes," she said. "We have got into a new era—the air era. So we've got to go forward. And the 1st Cavalry Division has got to be the best division in the world that knows more about the concept than anyone else."

Mrs. Dorcy said she had her first helicopter ride while the unit still had its headquarters in Korea and "I loved it. The fun was when we left the ground and just hopped right up into the sky."

Comparing the cavalrymen of today with those she knew in the 20's Mrs. Dorcy said the new breed is "very snappy; forward looking."

She said she initially designed the patch "to be worn by big men who go places and do things. And they have done it."

Col. Swenson to Command

Aviation Group Activated With New Designations

Fort Benning saw another milestone in Army Aviation history being recorded with the activation of the 10th Aviation Group.

The 10th Air Transport Brigade, a test vehicle, gave way to the new group as Col. J. Elmore Swenson, formerly commanding officer of the Brigade, assumed command July 1, 1965.

The 10th Aviation Group will be attached to the 1st Cavalary Division to provide fixed and rotary wing logistical and troop airlift support to augment the airlift capability within the forward area.

The 1st and 17th Aviation Companies (CV2-B Caribou aircraft), formerly within the brigade structure, join several newly designated or activated units to make up the Aviation Group.

The 478th Flying Crane outfit was redesignated the 478th Aviation Company (Heavy Helicopter) while the 187th and 516th Transport Airplane Companies, CV-2B aircraft) were redesignated 147th Avivation Comany while the 72nd was renamed the 72nd Air Traffic Company.

Six new maintenance detachments, organized from the resources of the 170th Aircraft Maintenance Battalion complete the structure of the 10th Aviation Group. They are the 254th, 258th, 260th and 383rd Transportation Detachments which will support the Caribou aircraft plus the 271st and 382nd who will support the two helicopter companies.

1st 'Sky Trooper' Re-Ups Sworn in by Gen. Kinnard

The first Sky Troopers to re-enlist in the new 1st Air Cavalry Division were sworn in by Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, in a ceremony in the general's office Friday, July 2.

SFC Carl C. Cantress, 1st Bn., 8th Cavalry, re-enlisted for three years. Sgt. Cantrell is a veteran of over twenty-one years service.

Sgt. Roy A. Kaufman signed for six more years. He has been in the Army 14 years.

Spt's Alfred G. Lafluer, 1st Bn., 7th Cavalry, and David Rodriguez, 15th Transportation Bn., re-enlisted for six years.

PFC Russell L. Ross, 2nd Bn., 8th Cavalry signed for three more years service.

The commanding officers of the men's units were present at the ceremony to offer their congratulations.

Gen. Kinnard stated before the ceremony that this was the second time in three years that he had headed a re-enlistment ceremony. He went on to say "We're always pleased to have a man who knows what he's doing re-enlisted in the Army."

CAV VETERAN SEES NEW CONCEPT
Retired Lt. Catania Meets Col. Roberts

'Helicopters Are In' Says Former Trooper

Helicopters are in, said retired 1st Lt. Daniel Catania who traveled from El Paso, Tex., to be with the new 1st Air Cavalary Division, after a ride with the 1st Airborne Brigade's Deputy Commander, Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark Saturday morning.

Lt. Catania, who spent 22 years with the 1st Cavalry Division in what would have been the 1st Brigade, met and talked with the Brigade Commander, Col. E. B. Roberts, after which Col. Clark, an Army aviator, took the retired officer for a ride.

Catania entered the Army in 1926 as an enlisted man, and served in an enlisted capacity until 1943, at which time he attended OCS, and after being commissioned, rejoined the 1st Cavalry Division's Troop F of the 8th Cavalry.

Lt. Catania told Col. Clark that helicopters would make even further history for the 1st Cavalry Division, and added that he would like to have one himself for his fishing excursions.

8th Cavalry Trooper Is Top 'Sniper' Grad

Last Friday, at the end of the 1st Cavalry Division's 3rd Brigade's Sniper School, PFC James A. Thompson, of Company A, 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry, was selected as the honor graduate of the three week course.

The Sniper School was directed by Lt. Col. David M. Buie, the executive officer of 3rd Brigade, and the instruction was provided by battalion officers and NCOs of the brigade.

The course, according to Capt. Charles B. Stone, project officer from 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry, "is one of the most complete taught in the U.S. Army today."

It covered marksmanship on the K.D. range with targets up to 1,000 meters away; stalking; night and day reconnaissance; use of the compass and the map overlays; route selection; camouflaging; use of the infrared or long range scope and the shorter range metascope for night firing.

At the end of three weeks the students were given a series of practical tests in which PFC Thompson made almost maximum scores.

Support Command Stands Ready To Provide Combat Service Support

COL. HENNESSEY
Support Command

By MSGT. RAY PAQUETTE

Forged and tempered into a mighty tool during the Air Assault Test, Support Command now stands ready to serve the first of the Air Cavalry Divisions. The mission is vastly complicated but simply stated, "Provide Combat Service Support."

During the almost 2½ years of the 11th Air Assault Division's existence and testing the Support Command devised and refined numerous concepts for providing an air mobile division with combat service support.

The Support Command became an A to Z organization. By A to Z we mean that the outfit has everything from aviators and aircraft mechanics to a genuine zoo of mechanical animals and the mechanics to keep the animals healthy.

The command is composed of the 15th Medical Bn., the 15th Supply and Service Bn., two maintance battalions, the 15th TC Bn., for aircraft and the 27th Maint. Bn., for ground vehicles and equipment, and numerous related service elements to include a band and an attached 18th Chemical Platoon.

The infantry, cavalry, and artillery are the muscles, bones, senses, and punch of the division but the Support Command is its very life's blood!

Everything from the food consumed by the troops, the ammunition they need to the water they drink is obtained, packaged and furnished by some element of the support command. Their health and well being is looked after by the medics and all of the tools of their trade kept in working order all by Support Command personnel.

In a recent address to the troops Support Command Commander Lt. Col. John J. Hennessey complimented his command on its past performance and 100 per cent effort.

EM Praised At Retirement

Two retiring enlisted men received the Army Commendation Medal and a Certificate of Achievement in a ceremony held at the 1st Air Cavalry Division's Conference Room recently.

MSgt. Ralph F. Freeman and SFC Charles C. Robinson Jr. received the honors from Brig Gen. Richard T. Knowles, assistant division commander, who reaped praise on the two men in a short speech.

Gen. Knowles said, "It's NCO's like these that make this Army tick".

Sgt. Freeman has been in the Army 25 years. He has been stationed here since Oct. 1963. He was awarded the Purple Heart while serving with the 106th Division during World War II in Europe.

Sgt. Freeman and his wife, Margaret, plan to live in Barnesville, Ga.

Sgt. Robinson, a 20-year veteran, has been stationed here about a year.

He served with the 29th Infantry Division during World War II.

When asked about how he felt about retiring the sergeant replied, "It's going to feel strange leaving the Army after all these years."

Overnight Workout

Escape-Evasion Course First Test for 12th Cav

Dual - role sky troopers of the 1st Airborne Brigade's 1st Bn, 12th Airborne Cavalry began their first day in the newly reorganized brigade with a night - long battalion sized escape and evasion problem.

Involving all units of the former Rakkasan battalion, the comprehensive 13 - hour course really gave the troops a workout Friday night and Saturday morning, and increased the troopers' mental and physical conditioning.

Acting as aggressors for the problem were the battalion NCOs, who operated a full - scale POW compound for those captured, and attempted to gather up the evaders before they could infiltrate the lengthy course, which was over 8,000 meters.

The evading forces were dropped off along the starting point which began at Liberty Road at approximately 6:00 p.m., and were then broken down into four and five man groups.

With flank boundaries extending from Reservation Road to Jamestown Road, the small groups began their overland infiltration to Yankee Road, hoping to make the course without detection by the NCO patrols.

Although many were able to negotiate the entire course, many more were captured, and after interrogation at the NCO - managed compound, were taken back to the starting point at Liberty Road.

Preceding the overnight problem was a land navigation class conducted by Company C of the 1st Bn, 12th Airborne Cavalry, which stressed proper use of map and compass.

3rd Army Cites Men in 5th Cav

Presiding at a Battalion Command Reveille Wednesday, June 30, Maj. Leslie J. Stottle, executive officer, 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry presented Headquarters and C Companies with Third United States Army Special Citations for their participation in the Army voting program.

The citation was awarded "in recognition of outstanding accomplishment in achieving participation in the Army voting program."

Lt. Anthony Pattarozzi accepted Company C's Third Army Award for 60% voting participation.

Capt. Thomas E. Carney's Headquarters Company received the award for 86% participation.

The executive officer lauded the men for their exceptional voting participation

8th Cav NCO Raised to E-6

SSgt. Max R. Glascock, personnel staff NCO of the 1st Bn., 8th Cavalry, was recently promoted to that rank by Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar, the battalion commander.

Division Colors Met By Sergeants Major

By Marv Wolf

A group of nine senior NCO's from the new 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) met the division's colors as they arrived at the Atlanta International Airport from Korea July 2nd and escorted them back to Ft. Benning.

The colors, which included regimental colors as well as company guidons were accompanied on their 9,000 mile trip by sergeants major from the division in Korea.

The group, composed of Sgt. Maj. Rexford Young, Thomas Fagan and Charles Driggers, was met at the airport by Sgt. Maj. Chester Westervelt of the former 11th Air Assault Division, Sgt. Maj. Bell of 3rd Army Headquarters and eight of the sergeants major from the old unit.

An interesting side - light to the event was the fact that Mrs. Ben H. Dorcy, the original designer of the 1st Cavalry Patch and "Mother" of the division was enroute to Atlanta on her way to Columbus for the change of colors ceremony.

Sgts Maj.'s Bell and Westervel trushed through the terminal to the gate where Mrs. Dorcy was to arrive. As she stepped off the plane she was presented with a new unit crest which Sgt. Maj. Westervelt graciously removed from his cap.

Mrs. Dorcy, who misses little despite her advanced years, noted that the crest she received was of a different hue than the ones she remembered.

COLORS CARRIED FROM KOREA
By Cav Sergeants Major

On the five minute trip across the terminal to where her flight to Columbus waited, Mrs. Dorcy spotted the division patch on the right shoulder of SFC Carl Cobb, a soldier who had fought in the Korean War with the Division's 7th Cavalry Regiment, and stopped to chat with the surprised soldier who was on his way to Ft. Gordon, Ga.

When Mrs. Dorcy boarded the plane, the group of senior enlisted men went to greet the arrivals from Korea. After their greetings they loaded the 2000 pounds of colors and historical properties on the CV-2 Caribou from the 10th Aviation Group and departed for Ft. Benning on another aircraft.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, Brig. Gen. John M. Wright met the group at Lawson Field and the 1st Cavalry Division Band played a medley of Cavalry tunes.

The sergeants major from Korea were guests of honor at a luncheon held in the new 789 Club on Main Post.

During Accelerated Program

1st Cav Battalions Qualify With Lightweight M-16

Another battalion - sized group today was scheduled to move through the condensed, five-hour M-16 rifle firing course designed to qualify some 13,250 1st Cavalry Division soldiers by month's end.

Scheduled to fire today and tomorrow on Brinson, Meartens and Martin ranges were elements of the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 8th Cavalry; the 8th Engineer Battalion and the 19th Artillery.

Since Monday a 1st Battalion, 12th Cavalry cadre of four officers and some 40 enlisted men has been operating the special course.

Necessary Requirement

"It is a necessary requirement for every man in a combat unit to be qualified with his weapon," said Capt. Robert E. Lindquist, officer in charge of the program. "With the switch from the 11th Air Assault to the 1st Cavalry Division designation, almost every man was assigned the M-16. Now we've got to teach him how to use it, immediately."

Tentative deadline for the qualification program has been set for July 23 with the 24th and 25th reserved as make-up days, Capt. Lindquist said.

The firing is scheduled for six days a week using a variety of ranges, he said.

"It rained the first day we fired," Capt. Lindquist said. "The 2nd Battalion, 19th Artillery was out that day. But it didn't bother them. And it's not going to bother anyone else. We'll fire rain or shine."

In the condensed program that normally would take several days, each man visits three separate ranges and may fire up to 88 rounds, Capt. Lindquist said.

Zeroing Range

The soldier is allotted 12 rounds on the zeroing range, 36 on the field firing range and 40 on the qualification range.

On the qualification range, Capt. Lindquist said, the soldier faces 28 pop-up targets in a combat situation. He carries 12 more bullets than the number of targets and may fire his entire load.

Expert Score

Capt. Lindquist said an expert score ranges from 28 to 38 hits, sharpshooter is 17 to 14 hits and marksman is nine to 13 hits.

During the five-hour program the weapon is fired semi-automatically. But Capt. Lindquist said the weapon is quickly adustable to automatic fire and in combat may be fired either way, at the soldier's discretion.

Capt. Lindquist said no problems developed in the early days of the program and he could foresee none in the final last two weeks.

"One of the most important factors in making this program work," he said, "Is adequate pre - firing instruction. Correct preliminary marksmanship instruction is always a prerequisite to effective firing.

Division Aviators Begin Training With Aircraft Protective Mask

Aviation units of the 1st Air Cavalry Division and the 10th Aviation Group have begun training in the use of the M-24 Aircraft Protective Mask

The new mask is intended to replace the now used modified M-14 Tank Mask.

The M-24 mask has a polaroid outset glare filter that snaps on to the eye piece, and a microphone that works with standard flight communications.

M-24 protective masks can be used by aircraft personnel in flight or on the ground.

The head harness straps have been improved by thinning the harness attachments and eliminating the rectangular head pad.

The main problems that are expected to be encountered are the familiarization and proficiency training that must be accomplished in order that aircraft crew members will be prepared to execute training or operational missions that require the use of the mask with a minimum loss of effectiveness or increased safety hazard.

This training is essential in that there are some pilot adjustments due to some loss of peripheral vision and a certain degree of distortion due to equipment characteristics.

The training in the use of the mask will begin with a one hour orientation in the use, functioning, and maintenance of the mask.

Pilots will then be required to fly a thirty minute day and night familiarization flight involving normal take -offs, landings, and local area flying.

The semi-annual requirements for the aircraft personnel include a one hour daylight flight and a one half hour of night flying involving the wearing of the mask during a simulated air assault operation.

The units involved in the training hope to have all their flight personnel qualified in the use of the mask.

When asked what he thought about the M-24 protective mask, one pilot stated, "The aircraft protective mask as currently designed provides adequate CBR protection. He went on to say, "when it is worn by properly trained personnel it materially increases the division's state of preparedness for operations in a CBR environment."

Capt. Receives Senior Aviator's Silver Wings

At an officers call held recently at the Custer Terrace Officers' Club Capt. Charles R. Palmer was awarded the designation of Senior Army Aviator.

Capt. Palmer is the Service Platoon Commander of Battery C, 2nd Bn., (Aerial Rocket) 20th Artillery and has been with the battalion almost since its inception.

The announcement of the award was made by Maj. Morris J, Brady, acting battalion commander. Maj. William F. Koehler, the Battery C commander presented the senior Army aviator wings to Mrs. Palmer who pinned them on her husband.

Capt. Palmer began flight training in October 1957 and received his Army aviator wings in June 1958.

He joined the 11th Air Assault Division in March 1963 as maintenance officer in what was then Battery C, 2nd Bn., 42nd Artillery which became Battery A, 3rd Bn., 377th Artillery.

First Unit to Unveil New Sign

2nd Brigade Races Morning Sun to Greet 1st Cavalry

2ND BRIGADE IS FIRST OUT FOR 1ST CAVALRY
New Unit Sign Is Unveiled At Reveille Formation

When the sun came up on Kelley Hill last Thursday it shone for the first time on troops of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Effective the midnight before June 30-July 1, the air cavalry unit had become an active part of the Army's 16 division structure. And men of Col. William R. Lynch's 2nd Brigade were the first to react.

At 5:50, three minutes before the sun was scheduled to appear, the men of the brigade's headquarters were standing at a reville formation. The division commander, one of his assistants and other senior officers of the air cavalry were there too.

They had collected at headquarters, Col. Lynch said, to unveil the first sign bearing the heraldic crest of the air cavalry and "to bring together for the first time the officers and senior noncommissioned officers of the newly organized unit."

A parachute had kept the sign covered during the night. As the shroud came down, the division band played Brig. Gen. George Custer's theme song "Carry Owen" and a medley of other cavalier marches.

"This sign stands as a small monument to the 2nd Brigade's capacity for rapid reaction," said the division commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard. "It is something all the men here can be proud of."

The general talked of how the 2nd Brigade had been loaned by its parent 2nd Infantry Division to the 11th Air Assault Division for test purposes in June 1963, served through the entire air mobility tests, then became redesignated as a part of the air cavalry.

As part of the ceremonies, Gen. Kinnard, Brig. Gen. John M. Wright and Col. Lynch pinned the green tabs symbolizing combat command to the shoulder of Lt. Col. Hyrum Dallinga.

With the unit's changeover, Col. Dallinga's title in the brigade switched from executive officer to deputy commander, qualifying him for the tabs.

Among the invited guests to the ceremony were Col. William A. Becker, commander of division artillery, and Col. Allen M. Burdett Jr., commander of the 11th Aviation Group.

"I wanted all the men of the new organization to come together and get acquainted," Col. Lynch said. "In the past we had the task of coordinating infantry and artillery elements. Our role in the future — with the addition of aviation — will be three dimensional. If we're going to work together, we've got to know each other.

"We recognize and are most proud of the traditions which are a part of the heritage of the 1st Cavalry Division — particularly of the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 5th Cavalry and the 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry which represent the main power of our newly structured brigade.

"Our purpose in life now is to look to the future as a team and to make our own mark as the 'second to none' brigade of the 1st Air Cavalry."

Charlie Battery Bowlers Grab 'Kegler' Trophy

The Battery C, 2nd Bn., 20th Artillery bowling team recently won the battalion bowling championship in the final match of a six-month long series.

Eight teams participated in this series with Charlie's Chuckling Captains driving their way upward from a seventh place standing midway through the first round to the final victory.

The CCC team went into the final match with Headquarters Battery Team Number Two which was two games behind them. The Battery C team won three and lost one placing them in first place and Headquarters Battery Team Number Two in third place.

Headquarters Battery Team Number One entered the final match one and one half games behind CCC. They won four by forfeit placing them in second place one half game behind the Battery C Team.

CCC team members are Captains James R. Spears (team captain), Richard B. Washburn, Charlie D. Hooks, Donald L. Becker, Joseph A. Drew, Ira E. Greeley, CWO Charley R. Wilhite and Maj. William F. Koehler, Battery C commander.

The team will receive their trophies at a Bowlers Dinner later this month.

Delta Company Edges Alpha 7-4 in Competition

Company level slow - pitch competition had Delta and Alpha Companies, 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry, paired off in the afternoon's opener Wednesday, June 30, on 11th Infantry Square with Delta edging Alpha in a seven to four win.

Delta pulled ahead in the second inning on scores by Weldon A. Beck, Roy L. Davis, William McDevitt and Bernard A. Guinyard. Donald L. Mennella's second inning score was Alpha's sole score in six innings. In the seventh, Mennella, and John W. Marshall and John P. Barker successfully crossed the plat eto give Alpha their four run finish score.

Company D's second rally came in the sixth when Charles V. Ratley's homer drove in Samuel Sallins and Beck who had singled earlier.

Key Men at 1st Brigade Join For First Paradrop

Key command and staff personnel of the newly formed 1st Airborne Brigade, led by Col. E. B. Roberts and his deputy, Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark, made their first parachute jump together last Thursday morning on Lee Drop Zone.

Participating in the drop was Lt. Col. Robert M. Shoemaker, commander of the 1st Bn., 12th Airborne Cavalry, Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Mertel, commander of the 1st Bn., 8th Airborne Cavalry and key staff personnel from the 1st Brigade Headquarters.

It was the first in a long time for the brigade's two new battalion commanders. Col. Shoemaker having made his last jump thirteen years ago, and Col. Mertel last jumped in 1951.

A rather novel and uninitended race occurred between Col. Shoemaker and Col. Mertel when Col. Mertel, who had jumped after first to land on the ground.

All four of the top commanders are combat veterans with wide experience in airborne operations.

Col. Roberts, who served with the crack 101st Airborne Division throughout World War II, participated in both of the division's combat jumps at Normandy and Holland.

Col. Clark, recent 187th commander, and Col. Shoemaker both served in combat with the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team in the Korean conflict and Col. Mertel served with the 25th Division in Korea.

Battery Receives New Command

Headquarters Battery, 2nd Bn. (Aerial Rocket), 20th Artillery recently obtained a new Battery Commander, Capt. William H. Goodspeed.

He moved up for his duties as Executive Officer to replace Capt. Donald P. Bennett, who was transferred to Battery B.

Prior to coming to Headquarters Battery, Capt. Goodspeed was the first S2 when the battalion was organized in May 1964, and was responsible for the organization of a security program for the 377th.

Capt. Goodspeed, a Missourian whose home town is St. Louis, is a 1955 grad of the University of Missouri.

Lieutenant Gets Letter of Praise

1st Lt. George L. Long Reconnaissance Platoon Leader, Delta Company, 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry has been awarded a Letter of Commendation for his outstanding contribution to the recent 2nd Brigade sponsored Company ATTs.

The Brigade Commander, Col. William P. Lynch, praised Lt. Long for his leadership and initiative, and commented that the "spirit, stamina, and knowledge of tactics" of the lieutenant's platoon contributed significantly to the success of the tests.

Lt. Long currently is attending Jungle Warfare School in Panama.

1st Brigade Swings Into Varied Training Program

Dual-role Sky Troopers of the 1st Airborne Brigade, commanded by Col. E. B. Roberts swung into their second week of accelerated training Tuesday, meeting the challenge with determination and enthusiasm, confident that they will reach the desired state of combat-readiness in record time.

Last week, the stepped-up training program included classes on the new M-16 Rifle week, cargo net training for selected personnel, land navigation, survival training, and that first tough week in jump school for volunteers of the 1st and 2nd battalions of the Brigade's 8th Airborne Cavalry.

Among other subjects were patrolling, counter - guerilla photo interpretation, g a s chamber exercises, escape & evasion, hand grenade training, adjustment of artillery & mortar fire, cover & concealment, demolitions, basic communications, bayonet training, hand-to - hand combat, and rugged daily physical conditioning.

The tempo was further increased this week as refinement began on some of last week's subjects while several new subjects were added to the schedule, which included a special parachute operation scheduled for Wednesday night with the troopers jumping from giant C-124 Globemaster Air Transports.

Also included this week in the way of new subjects is water - proficiency training which is being conducted in the Harmony Church pool, convoy security and counter-ambush training, observing and reporting military intelligence information, CBR, and a host of routine subjects.

One-Time Cavalryman Holds the Coveted CMH

By Mike Gershon

The only living Medal of Honor recipient who served with the 1st Cavalry Division currently is the commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, 16th Infantry in Viet Nam.

He is Lt. Col. Lloyd L. Burke who, as a first lieutenant in the Korean War, performed acts of extreme heroism which earned him the nation's highest honor.

Col. Burke was invited to last week's change of colors ceremony at the Doughboy Stadium, but was unable to attend because of his current assignment in the Viet Nam crisis.

Col. Burke was with the 5th Cavalry Regiment's Company G at the time of his achievement.

On 28 October 1951, northwest of Yongchon, Korea, during the latter stages of the assault on Hill Mass 200, Col. Burke led an informal striking force of thirty-five men against enemy positions that threatened to halt and throw back the battalion.

At about 11:00 a.m., when Col. Burke undertook his remarkable exploit, the attackers were receiving heavy fire and hesitated to press the attack.

Thirty - five men followed him into a shallow trench leading toward several bunkers that were offering particularly effective resistance. He threw grenades from the trench, then moved to an exposed knoll and continued his assault on the enemy bunkers with an armful of grenades.

Returning, he obtained a light machine gun, carried it back to his former exposed position and opened fire. Others of the thirty - five followed him, and all fired at the enemy emplacements.

They were momentarily driven back by increasing enemy counterfire, but Col. Burke rallied his men and again moved out. This time he moved to a position where his machine gun could deliver cross fire.

He continued to exhibit superb leadership and amazing courage until the objective was entirely secure and defenses set up.

All in all, Col. Burke personally accounted for some one hundred enemy dead. At one time, he and SFC Arthur L. Foster were surrounded by five Red soldiers, of which Col. Burke accounted for three with his pistol, while supporting fire eliminated the other two.

He destroyed three machine gun positions and two mortar positions. Miraculously enough, Col. Burke escaped with minor wounds, and only two slight casualties were sustained by his thirty-five man force.

Col. Burke was the sixth member of the 1st Cavalry Division during the Korean Campaign to be awarded the Medal of Honor.

Brigade Conducts Extensive Training

During the past week a hectic training schedule has been followed at the 2nd Brigade Headquarters.

The Headquarters Company, commanded by Capt. Richard R. Browning, received cargo net training in the early part of the week. This training consisted of scaling up and down a cargo net hooked to a 35 foot tower. The troops made this trip two time; once with field and once without the field gear.

Later on in the week the company turned out for the proverbial "gassing". The men went through the 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry's gas chamber. To accomplish this feat, the men went through the tear gas chamber and the chlorine chamber.

Scheduled for the forthcoming week is the escape and evasion course and familiarization firing of the new M-16 rifle. Leading the two courses will be Capt. Browning, Lt. Larry B. Berrong, Security Platoon Leader, and SFC Charles Bradley, Security Platoon Sergeant.

At the close of that week a party will be staged by the company. Dependents, and friends, are all invited for this gala event. A show for the benefit of the visitors is being planned as well as games, prizes, and contests.

Cav Promotions

Recent days have witnessed several promotions within the 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry.

Delta Company promoted Sgts. Gregory W. Woods and Michael Spainhour from their previous rank of SP4.

Alpha and Charlie Companies promoted Sgt. Wilbur H. Johnson and Sgt. Thomas R. Jones respectively from their rank of Corporal and Sp4.

SSgt. Thomas E. Ward was promoted by Headquarters Company from SP5.

Delta Company's John O. Whitmore, Jr. and Alpha Company's Preston Osborne were promoted to SP4.

It's Like Charity. . .

Good Will Starts at Home

Good community relations — like charity — begins at home. The home in this case is your Army unit.

The reputation of your unit in the community always partly determines what your personal reputation will be in that community. If the unit has an excellent reputation, you reap some of the benefits when you display its insignia on your uniform; some of its reputation is transferred to you.

If the unit has a poor reputation, people will tend to regard you as a poor soldier until you prove otherwise. This means that you have a very real stake in helping create or maintain a high reputation for your unit.

It means getting along with your fellow soldiers; it means being proud of the unit; it means doing your share of all its tasks; it means avoiding any act that will harm its reputation.

Let's say you belong to a unit with high morale and good reputation in the community. What are some of the things you can do — or should not do — in your association with the civilian part of the community? Here are a few important DON'Ts which will suggest many others:

Members of the Army are "temporary" residents of the community. The permanent residents tend to regard them as "outsiders" in matters of local politics, customs, and traditions.

This feeling is unnecessarily aggravated when military personnel criticize or make light of matters that are considered to be "none of their business."

As we will see later, this certainly does not rule out genuinely serious discussion aimed at solving community problems. Nor does it rule out all good natured "rib-bing" about local conditions. What it does mean is that tact and judgment are essential at all times.

The PX and commissary facilities available to soldiers are sometimes a source of friction between the Army and local merchants. It's entirely proper for you to compare prices in local stores with the prices on similar items at the PX — but keep the comparisons to yourself.

Buy where you get the best deal, but never tell the storekeeper, "I can get it cheaper at the PX."

This may surprise you, but civilians really don't like to hear soldiers criticizing the Army. The Army is close to the people.

People are very much concerned with the cost of their military forces. They don't resent supporting their Army — so long as they feel that the Army is making good use of the money. Your own attitudes about Army supplies and equipment are reflected in the way you use them.

The way you drive an Army vehicle, for example, also tells a lot about your attitude toward the people whose taxes help to buy that vehicle. Drive it "by the manual" regardless of whether your Commanding Officer — or a taxpayer — is watching. The same rule applies to all Army property.

Right to Bear Arms; Once Sign of Freedom

Some Americans perform the military service required of them by law and leave the service to find careers in business, the professions, and other walks of life. Others consider it their patriotic duty to remain in the Service and devote their lives to the defense and protection of their country. Such men are acting in the finest traditions of free men.

For, traditionally, only free men could have the right to bear arms in fact, the privilege so clearly defined the difference between slavery and freedom that the earliest patriots insisted that the right to bear arms be incorporated in the Bill of Rights to the United States Constitution.

The man who takes up arms as a member of the Regular United States Army is identifying himself with far more than a group of patriotic men and women. He is choosing a career which rewards and elevates men who have leadership qualities and skill.

Just as devotion to high ideals can motivate a man to become a doctor or a teacher, so devotion to the preservation of one's country and the freedoms for which it stands can inspire a man to strive for a career in the Army.

1st Brigade Starts M-16 Qualification

Paratroopers of the 1st Airborne Brigade began a crash program Wednesday to qualify all personnel with the Army's newest and most versatile rifle, the M - 16 which will be the individual weapon for Sky Troopers of the 1st Calvalry Division.

Fast becoming popular with the 1st Brigade troopers who received mechanical training and preliminary rifle instruction last week, the M-16 is expected to win even more supporters this week during actual firing.

Weighing only 7½ pounds fully loaded, the rifle is equipped with a flash suppressor which also serves as a stationary piston to permit the launching of grenades without the need for supplementary attachments.

Col. E. B. Roberts, commander of the 1st Brigade described the M-16 as one of the finest shoulder weapons ever made, and predicted that it would win instant favor with the majority of the troops.

School Graduate Receives Honors

Finishing the two week Quartermaster Small Quantity Cooking School, Sp5 Norman R. Barrón, 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry, walked away with top billing as honor graduate Friday, June 25.

The Chief, Quartermaster Services Division, presented Barron with a letter of commendation in which he praised the student's devotion to duty, initiative and skillful performance. He expressed hope that Barron's accomplishment would motivate his unit colleagues to strive for similar achievement.

The 23-year-old cook attended the Pastry Baking School at Fort Benning in 1964.

Completing his basic training at Fort Hood, Texas, following his 1960 induction into the Army, Barron served with the 15th Infantry, Wildflecken, Germany and the 511th Infantry, Fort Benning prior to his present assignment.

A 1960 graduate of John Foster Dulles High School, Missouri City, Tex., Barron was an oil field "roughneck" prior to Army service.

Gen York Takes Over Today

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, who replaces Gen Heintges as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of The Infantry School, will receive honors and officially assume command today at 8 a.m. on York Field.

Participating in the welcoming ceremony will be the Infantry Center band and honor guard and salute battery from the 197th Inf. Bde. Gen. York will receive a 13-gun salute.

To mark the change of command, The Infantry School Colors will be passed by assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, to Gen. York who will in turn hand them to Sgt. Maj. W. A. Callahan, post sergeant major.

Last Assignment

Gen. York, whose last assignment was as commanding general of the 82nd Airborne Division, was chief of staff here at The Infantry Center from May 1958 until June 1959.

In other Fort Benning assignments he was successively director, Tactics Department of The Infantry School; G-3 (Plans and Operations officer) of the Infantry Center; Director of Instruction and deputy assistant commandant.

The 52-year old general was born in Birmingham, Ala. He graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1938. During World War II he served with the 18th Infantry of the 1st Infantry Division and with the 331st Infantry Regiment of the 83rd Infantry Division in the European theater.

In other overseas service he was U. S. Army Liaison Officer in Singapore from August 1952 until May 1956; deputy chief of staff, U. S. Forces, Korea, July 1959 to June 1960 and from October 1962 until January 1964, in Vietnam as director, Advanced Research Projects Agency, Research and Development Field Unit, and Joint Operation Evaluation Group. He assumed command of the 82nd Airborne on Feb. 24, 1964.

Gen. York and his wife, Grace, will make their home at Riverside, the ante bellum mansion on Vibbert Ave., the traditional residence of Fort Benning commanders. They have four daughters, two of whom are married. Their other two girls are, Gail Andrea, 17, and Carol, 14.

California Cadets Visit For Infantry Orientation

AIR FORCE INVADES . . . Air Force Academy cadets are presently on post for infantry orientation. They will stage one of their colorful "Wing Reviews" this morning at 9:30 on Sightseeing Field.

Fort Benning, accustomed to the annual invasions of West Point and Air Force Academy cadets, will play host to a different "breed" next week with the arrival of the California (National Guard) Military Academy senior class.

Some 160 cadets and 17 officers, headed by the California Adjutant General, Lt. Gen. Roderic L. Hill, and his deputy, Brig. Gen. Bernard J. Kitt, will arrive here Monday night, July 19.

Being Flown

The guardsman are being flown from Vandenberg (Calif) AFB to Warner Robbins AFB at Macon, Georgia, by aircraft of the California Air National Guard's 146th Air Transport Wing. The Georgia National Guard will provide transportation to Fort Benning.

The Californians will begin their crowded, two - day schedule early Tuesday morning, by journeying to Underwood Road where they will observe Problem 2321 (Employment of the Weapons Platoon).

Training Exercises

Before being airlifted back to Vandenberg on Thursday, July 22, the cadets will witness a number of training exercises conducted by The Infantry School to include airborne and Ranger training plus combat leadership and tactical Infantry problems.

'Follow Me' Insignia Limited By New Ruling

A new regulation has been released by headquarters, The Infantry Center, revising present policies on wearing the U. S. Army Infantry School shoulder sleeve insignia, the "Follow Me" metal crest, and the Third U. S. Army shoulder sleeve insignia by Fort Benning units and personnel.

The new regulation, number 670-3, dated July 6, 1965, published to clarify present policies, goes into effect immediately for the wearing of The Infantry School shoulder patch and the "Follow Me" metal crest, and is effective October 18, 1965 for those units authorized to wear the Third U. S. Army shoulder sleeve insignia.

Those units authorized to wear the shoulder sleeve insignia of The Infantry School are: Headquarters, U. S. Army Garrison, Fort Benning; U. S. Army Infantry School; The Student Brigade; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, and 1st Battalion, USAIC Troop Command. Cadets Academy program involves a year of study to include field training, and is the prime source of junior officers for the California Army Guard. The junior class will spend its entire two - week field training period at Camp San Luis Obispo, the academy's home station, and at Camp Roberts.

Commissioning

Graduation and commissioning exercises will be held July 24, after the senior cadets return from their stint at Fort Benning. They will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the California National Guard and, concurrently, in the United States Army Reserve.

In addition to the Fort Benning trip, the California National Guard marked another "first" this year with the appointment of Gen. Kitli as commanding general of the academy during its two-week active duty period, July 20-24.

Insignia

for the commandant, The Infantry School and his aide; personnel assigned to The dent Brigade, and elements of the 197th Infantry Brigade who are not currently authorized unit crests.

Shoulder sleeve insignia of the Third U. S. Army will be authorized for the following Fort Benning units effective October 18, 1965.

Martin Army Hospital; Hospital Company, Medical Holding Company, and the Dental Detachment; 552nd Military Police Company; 39th Transportation Battalion; 54th Quartermaster Battalion; 90th Replacement Battalion (Construction); 15th Finance Disbursing Section, and the 92d Signal Detachment (Aircraft and Electronic Maintenance).

War College Creates Three Faculty Chairs

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa. (ANF) — General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, General of the Armies John J. Pershing, and former Secretary of War Elihu Root have been honored by the establishment of faculty "chairs" in their names at the U.S. Army War College.

The chairs will go to the newly created Departments of Strategy, Strategic Appraisal, and Military Planning. Maj. Gen. Eugene A. Salet, War College Commandant, announced the addition of the three departments during an internal reorganization last March.

Department Director

The senior military officer of each department designated as Department Director, will fill the chair.

The first occupant of the Elihu Root Chair of Strategy is Col. William R. Desobry who has been a member of the faculty since 1962. Secretary of War Root founded the Army War College, the Army's senior educational institution:

Navy Captain

Col. Paul L. Bogen fills the Eisenhower Chair for Strategic Appraisal and Capt. Charles E. Pond, USN; sits in the Pershing Chair of Military Planning.

In addition to honoring three outstanding military leaders, the new faculty chairs recognize the professional skills of the War College teaching staff.

New Anti-Tank Weapon Tested

The Army has successfully fired two versions of a new Medium Anti-tank Weapon (MAW) at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., says a Department of Defense message.

Designed as a shoulder-fired missile system for use against tanks and other armored vehicles, the MAW will be light and portable enough to be carried by one soldier and would be used by infantrymen at the platoon level both as a defensive and an assault weapon.

According to the message, one version, known as the Directional Control Medium Anti-tank Weapon (DC-MAW), will feature a self-contained guidance system which will permit it to fly swiftly along the line-of-sight established by the gunner. The DC-MAW is being developed by the Research and Development Directorate of the Army Missile Comand at Redstone.

Another concept of MAW, being developed by McDonnell Aircraft Corporation, uses fine connecting wires between the launcher and the missile guidance.

The Army will select one of the two versions for further development sometime in the near future. Management of the MAW project for the Army is carried out by the U.S. Army Missile Command.

Gen Forsythe Welcomes New Students

"I welcome you as partners and teammates in the work to be done," said Brig. Gen. George L. Forsythe, assistant commandant of the United States Army Infantry School, as he recently welcomed members of the Associate Officers' Career Course No. 1.

In his orientation Gen. Forsythe pointed to the vast and widely varying backgrounds of the 112 Army officers and 29 Allied officers which would motivate them during the 19 weeks of study.

In explaining the course, he noted the superb contributions that the military and civilian populace have made available to the students in the form of highly talented instructors and modern facilities, concluding that "we have an unbeatable mixture to work with."

Viet Nam was also touched upon by the assistant commandant as he stated that with the growing crisis abroad, a new sense of urgency has developed which must inspire the student to improve his knowledge and capabilities.

More Realistic Training With Bayonet Under Test

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A new program to produce better bayonet fighters may begin at all Army training centers this fall if field tests at Ft. Gordon, Ga., prove successful.

The program introduces trainees to a more realistic approach at an earlier training stage and does not change the approved thrust, parry and smash movements now used.

A soldier's proficiency, in the time available for this training, should be improved, an official said, adding that the Army is now dealing with young men of higher intelligence who will probably become better bayonet fighters than their predecessors.

During already established basic training, recruits receive their indoctrination by making movements "into the breeze" against an imaginary target. In the new program, the recruits will "fight" a dummy from the beginning of training.

The tests were developed from recommendations by the Army's seven basic combat centers. Results will be forwarded to the Infantry Training Center, Ft. Benning, Ga., for final evaluation.

Tests are also being made of certain materials that will withstand abusive treatment with little or no maintenance. Those materials include metal, rubber and plastics as opposed to wooden figures now in use. One such material, vinyl, has been shaped into the form of a person's head for testing against smashing vertical and horizontal butt strokes.

from the playhouse

All military personnel, dependents, and civilian employees of Fort Benning are invited to be guests of Fort Benning Little Theatre at an Open House next Wednesday evening, July 21, at the Playhouse, Building 2519.

The FBLT group is taking time out from its busy summer schedule to entertain on the occasion of the anniversary of U. S. Army Special Services. The active amateur dramatic organization is sponsored by Special Services.

The Open House program promises to be an interesting one, according to Mrs. Robert J. Swain, FBLT Secretary - membership director. Members are preparing a variety show featuring examples of just about every facet of the group's endeavors, ranging from burlesque comedy to show music to the deeply dramatic.

The theatre plans to serve free refreshments for all.

Guests will also be invited to remain for a general business meeting. Urgent business slated for the session includes selection of the first major theater production, due to play the first week in October. The group will also discuss the workshop features which will highlight the remainder of the summer.

The theatre invites all, new faces, old friends and anyone else who is interested to come out and help them celebrate the 25th anniversary of Special Services.

Officials said the open house would get under way at 7:30 p.m. and that casual dress was in order.

Services Rescheduled

Due to the fire last Saturday night which destroyed 75 per cent of St. Michael's Episcopal Chapel, services beginning this Sunday, and until further notice, will be held at Chapel No. 5 adjacent to the old 2nd Inf. Div. Headquarters in Sand Hill.

A change in time is also to be noted. Services will begin at 8:30 a.m. and 10 a.m.

AIRCRAFT UNVEILED

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AFPS) —Rollout ceremonies for the first OV10A light armed reconnaissance aircraft were held at the North American Aviation plant here July 7.

The OV-10A is being developed as a counterinsurgency and limited war aircraft

2nd Division Reunion Under Way; Chiles Slated to Speak Tomorrow

BY JOE TREASTER

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — A collection of old warriors who helped write the history of the 2nd Infantry Division through the century's three major wars, tonight will pay tribute to the unit's dead.

Though the memories of slain buddies have doubtless fostered untold silent prayers, the ceremony at the Diplomot Hotel will be the 44th offered by a formal congregation of Second Division men and their wives.

As is traditional, the solemn hour will provide a peak in the Second (Indianhead) Division Association's annual reunion, bringing to crescendo two days of business sessions.

Benediction

The invocation and benediction will come from Chaplain (Maj) Louis M. Jackson, National President Bill Creech will deliver the memorial address — recalling sacrifices made since the division's birth at Bourmont, France in 1917, and retired Marine Brig. Ge. Louis B. Rock will talk of patriotism.

Certain to be deeply involved in the ritual is Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, a man who wore the "Indianhead" patch in the two most recent wars and until earlier this month, commanded the division at Fort Begning. When the units colors were transferred to Korea, he was named Chief of Staff of the Third U. S. Army.

Stand Alone

Largely due to the division's colors' shift to Korea, Gen. Chiles and his aide, Lt. Jack Wheeler, will, except for a handful of special staff and headquarters men, be standing as the lone Regular Army representative tonight. night.

Joseph H. Neuman, the reunion chairman, estimated the Army's redesignation slashed by more than half, the attendance figure that he had expected.

Cruise

After an early-bird party Wednesday night — a moonlight cruise down the Inland Waterway aboard the "Jungle Queen," with a Barbeque feast and a spiffy vaudeville show—the host Florida Chapter Thursday got the reunion into action.

Business sessions yesterday centered around a scholarship program for sons and daughters of association members and two by - law changes. Discussions were expected to conclude this morning.

Creech said dangers sought in organization's governing rules would guarantee that the active division's commander, assistant chief of staff for personnel and sergent major would be permanent members of the executive committee and they would make mandatory payments of membership fees within 60 days of the due date.

Tomorrow, original units of the division will host breakfasts and the officers for the coming year will be elected.

Gen. Chiles will bring the reunion to conclusion with a recollecton of his experience during seven years of service with the division. The Mayor of Hollywood, the state attorney for the Miami area and retired Marine General Clifton B. Cates are among the invited guests.

FATHER AND SON . . . James L. K. Baker, right, a Distinguished Military Graduate from Michigan State University, is sworn into the Army by his father, Lt. Col. Claude W. Baker, deputy secretary of The Infantry School. Second Lt. Baker has been assigned to the 1st Infantry Division, Ft. Riley, Kan.

Who Am I?

I am a little thing with a big meaning.
I help everyone.
I unlock doors, open hearts, dispel prejudices.
I create friendship and good will.
I inspire respect and admiration.
I bore nobody.

The New Program

Pending revision of pertinent regulations, DA Message 712364 tells of procedures which are being instituted to obtain more accurate Army personnel losses associated with reenlistment actions.

The new program, known as the Interview and reporting system, will involve an advanced determination of intent on the part of all personnel who are eligible and recommended for reenlistment.

Unit commanders will be required to interview eligible enlisted personnel — a preliminary screen 12 months prior to scheduled separation and a final interview eight months prior to separation. The results of this final interview will be used as a basis for reporting projected losses.

According to the message, the first interview, soldiers will be informed of the decisions they will be required to make in four months time.

At the second interview eight months before separation, enlisted personnel will be requested to sign a statement of intent to reenlist, they may choose to sign a statement of intent not to reenlist, they may also choose to take a short discharge and immediately reenlist.

The message goes on to say that soldiers who decline to reenlist will not be able to come back into the service for a period of 30 or 93 days, whichever is appropriate. (Those with less than four years in service may reenlist after 30 days, while those with more than four years must wait 93 days before reenlistment.)

Reports will be required by month of ETS for the number of personnel who elected to sign a declination of reenlistment.

These reports will be used to provide loss projections. In order to implement this program and provide loss projections beginning for the month of September, it will be necessary for commanders to adjust Phase I and II interview procedures to provide loss projections for this period.

The Surgeon Says

Prevent Eye Injury

Outdoor activities are at their peak in the summer months, and it's a dangerous time for foreign particles to lodge on the eye's surface.

They can be removed safely, under certain limited conditions, if precautions are observed. As an eye infection begins, a person frequently believes his trouble is caused by a particle in the eye.

Despite irritation and watering of the eye, a foreign body cannot always be located. It may have been carried away in the tears, but the irritation continues for a time.

Dangers from particles on the eye surface are infection and the development of corneal ulcers. The greatest danger comes from the object lodging on the surface of the pupil.

An infected eye should not be rubbed, lest the foreign body penetrate the eyeball surface, and become even more deeply embedded.

If there is a foreign body in the eye, here are a few pointers:

● Wash your hands thoroughly. Then grasp the upper eyelid and elevate it. Have the victim look up, down, and to the right and left while you check each part of the eye. If you see the speck, touch it with the corner of a clean, damp cloth. In many instances, the foreign body will adhere to the cloth. Do not use a fluff of cotton in place of the cloth.

● If you cannot see the speck, likely it is under the surface of the upper lid. Grasp the eyelashes of the upper lid, and draw the lid downward gently several times over the eye surface. Often this will dislodge the foreign body so it will wash away or can be removedd with a damp cloth.

● If the speck does not come away with the cloth, do not persist. Seek medical care at [illegible] foreign body, such as a splinter, [illegible] penetrate the eyeball, [illegible] make no attempt to remove it. Take the patient to a physician.

The Judge Says . . .

The states of Alabama and Georgia have followed the lead of the Federal Government in granting income tax advantage to soldiers who are residents of these states because of hostilities in Viet Nam.

On May 31, 1965, the Governor of Georgia issued an executive order providing that Georgia residents who are serving in the Viet Nam combat zone as on January 1, 1965, are entitled to tax relief. The Georgia order provides that compensation received for active duty as a member of the Armed Forces for any month during any part of which the Georgia resident served in Viet Nam shall be excluded from the member's gross income on his Georgia tax return.

For enlisted personnel and warrant officers the monthly exclusion is unlimited; however, commissioned officers are limited to an exclusion of $200.00 per month. The Georgia exclusion is equal to that granted by Executive Order No. 11216, dated April 24, 1965, signed by the President of the United States.

Thus, a Georgia resident serving in Viet Nam who is either an enlisted man or warrant officer is entitled to exclude all compensation received for service in Viet Nam from his Federal income tax return and Georgia income tax return.

An officer can exclude only $200.00 for each month served on the returns.

The Attorney General of Alabama has issued an opinion that compensation for full time military service has been exempt from the Alabama state income tax since January 1, 1964 because the United States is engaged in hostilities in Viet Nam.

The exemption applies regardless of where the serviceman is stationed and is applicable to the total income of both enlisted men and commissioned officer. An Alabama resident who filed his Alabama return for 1964 may recover the Alabama income taxes paid in that year by filing an Amended Alabama tax return.

For the tax year of 1965, an Alabama resident serving on active duty with the Armed Forces will be entitled to exclude all military pay from his Alabama tax return.

Editorial

'I Am an American'

With a purpose dedicated to preserving freedom and maintaining peace, the United States has invested its military might and know-how in a team of more than two and one-half million individuals.

Since this nation's beginning, uniformed members of the armed forces have played a major role in retaining the freedoms and heritage envisioned by writers of the Constitution of the United States.

In peacetime as in war, millions of United States military personnel abide by a Code of Conduct. Daily they go about their chores, as a team positioned around the globe ready to react to orders established by the Commander-in-Chief, the President of the United States.

One of the most widely repeated statements made by the late President John F. Kennedy was in his 1961 inaugural address, "Ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country." This challenge is being answered by every American serviceman and woman around the world performing as a "Guardian of the Nation."

Regardless of service, the uniform worn by members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps or Coast Guard proudly reflects the image of "I Am An American."

The image is further portrayed by Americans giving their lives to preserve freedom for people in Southeast Asia and other areas of uneasiness, plus those dedicated to preserving the American way of life at home and abroad.

In 1905, Theodore Roosevelt exclaimed "We have duties to others and duties to ourselves; and we can shirk neither," a message fulfilled by every American in uniform as a "Protector of Liberty."

Times have changed in this world of crisis.

No longer will a bow and arrow forestall an aggressor. No longer will a propeller-driven plane or steamship match the jet-age aircraft, missile-might, or nuclear-powered naval fleet.

But today, as in the past, man can match man, even with the advancements of a technological age.

Today's American in uniform is an ambassador abroad and a "Defender of Freedom," as described by Abraham Lincoln in 1858. "Our defense is in the spirit which prized liberty as the heritage of all men, in all lands everywhere."

The 20th Century American in uniform is "An Enemy of Tyranny," fulfilling today what Thomas Jefferson defined in 1800. "I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."

The message, "I Am An American" is echoed by every United States soldier, sailor, marine and airman wherever assigned as an "Enemy of Tyranny;" "Defender of Freedom;" "Protector of Liberty" and "Guardian of the Nation."

This is the heritage of the Armed Forces of the United States! (AFPS)

Target Tanks Retire After Years of Service

A quiet ceremony in the motor pool of the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor recently marked the passing from service of the last known "target tanks" in the Army.

Originally a part of the inventory of The Infantry School the tanks were used by students as a part of their training. They fired small arms and inert anti-tank weapons at them.

Work Horses

As is the case with most old work horses, the tanks were left behind by the more sophisticated weapons of the modern infantryman and by the high cost of upkeep compared with their limited value.

Physically the five tanks which composed the 69th's "Target Tank Platoon" were M-48 tanks with all armament and fire control equipment removed.

Some additional modification was necessary before they could go into The Infantry School's battles and the pounding of live fire.

One Periscope

All the openings on the tanks were welded shut except for one periscope opening in the driver's compartment. On the sides of these moving targets, were mounted protective "skirts" of cast iron that prevented the suspension system from being damaged.

The target tanks' operators were volunteers from B Company of the 69th. They went forth to do daily battle with the Infantry Center Weapons Committee dressed in crash helmets, goggles, heavy duty gloves and asbestos suits.

"Mighty Hot"

According to SFC John H. Frame, platoon sergeant, "it was mighty hot" on occasions when the temperature inside the tanks rose to 120 degrees.

Over the years the tanks lived on daily servings of rifle fire, machine gun fire, 3.5 inch and 90mm anti-tank fire with inert amunition.

When more lethal weapons joined the infantryman's arsenal, the tanks were assigned the less glamorous but slightly safer duty as "guinea pigs" in the tank recovery instruction of the Center's mobility committee. Student mechanics practiced recovering the tanks after they had been mired in deep mud.

Decision to Retire

A month ago, the decision was made to retire the tanks as operation and maintenance was too costly.

Sgt. Frame and his crew took the tanks on their last ride down the Fort Benning tank trails to the motor pool of the ground Mobility Committee.

Frame has been reassigned as section sergeant of the Army's only flame tank section — also a part of the 69th Armor's inventory of tanks.

TARGET IN IRON SKIRTS RETIRES

More Men Wanted In Critical MOS's

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Enlisted men in 35 overstrength MOS are being encouraged by the Department of the Army to cross-train in one of 25 high aptitude MOS now critically understrength.

The understrength MOS are also troubled by a low percentage of career RA personnel as compared to first-term RA and AUS personnel. The high turnover in these MOS shots results in increased expenses for training and reassignment of new personnel.

Unit commanders and personnel officers have been urged to review the records of enlisted men who have one of the overstrength MOS to determine if they meet the prerequisites for cross-training in one of the understrength specialties.

Opportunity

The Department of the Army has pointed out that a change to the new MOS may not only provide the enlisted man with "an interesting and challenging experience, but will enhance his military career and his value to the Army."

As added incentives, most of the understrength MOS are authorized more proficiency pay and, in general, promotion opportunities are better than in the overstrength MOS.

Unit personnel officers have the complete list of MOS involved, as well as details on the schools for cross-training.

YAC Newspaper In Circulation

With little fanfare, a new publication was born at Fort Benning last week with distribution of a Youth Activities Club and Teen Square news sheet.

The mimeographed paper is being distributed weekly to officer and NCO housing areas on main post and Custer Terrace as part of the command-sponsored program to "revitalize" youth activities.

Also as part of the program to increase teen interest in their clubhouse, Teen Square, dances are being held there each Friday night with "live" music.

They are "drag or stag" affairs beginning at 8 p.m. and lasting until 11:30. Cost of admission is 50 cents "drag" and 75 cents "stag." Free bus transportation has been suspended temporarily, according to the latest edition of the Teen Square - YAC news sheet.

Capt. Stephen McIntrye, YAC custodian, has announced that membership cards for Teen Square are now available. Applications for membership may be obtained at Teen Square but must be turned in with $1 club dues to Mary Williams, membership chairman, by July 22.

42 PENTAGONS

The Army Materiel Command keeps a mighty big supply room.

It has supplies equal to a 10-lane highway from Boston to Los Angeles and a double track railroad from Washington, D. C., to St. Louis.

It has materiel equal to a surfaced area more than half the size of Washington, enough acreage to completely cover Connecticut — plus one-third of Rhode Island, and it has enough building space to enclose 42 Pentagons.

Parents Can Claim Students As Exemptions

New York (AFPS) — It is not necessary for students to stop working in the summer after they earn $600.

A director of the Internal Revenue Service advises parents that it is possible to claim a son or daughter as a dependent on Federal income tax returns even if they earn more than $600, if the child is a student.

Taxpayers are urged to contact their nearest IRS office for further information as to the conditions under which they may receive the exemption on their 1965 return.

Horseback Riding Taught To Post Women by OWC

BY KATHRYN POPE

If you've envied those brave women going over the high jump on a gorgeous thoroughbred, or you'd just like to meander through the trails around Post on a rental horse, then the Officers' Wives Club has an opportunity for you.

The club began offering lessons in horseback riding to the ladies of the Post a year ago and the program has been booming ever since. Using the facilities of the Post Hunt Club, equitation is taught to beginning and advanced students on weekday mornings. Cost of the lessons is $1.50 per hour and $1.50 for rental of the horse.

Hunt Club instructors for the lessons are Sgt. James Colbert and Sgt. James Williams, who both taught horseback riding at Ft. Benning when Cavalry units were located on the Post. There are twelve fine rental horses available to women taking instruction and over 150 miles of developed trails for riders.

Membership in the Hunt Club is not required to take part in this activity, but instruction will be given only on the day alloted to the women's club classes. Teaching is available whether members wish to show, hack or learn.

Mrs. Francis L. Franklin, chairman of OWC riding activities will be happy to give interested persons further information. She may be contacted at 545-3315.

The Hunt Club, which co-sponsors the womens riding activity with the OWC, has a membership of over one hundred families who participate in its program. There are forty-six privately owned mounts at the stable.

The club, which has grown steadily during the past three years, offers a full program of horseback riding activities to dependents of military personnel.

The Junior Hunt Club is an organization for younger horsemen and sponsors overnight rides, parties and dances, and projects of special interest to that age group. Lt. Col. Arne H. Elliasson is director.

Pony Club Given Charter Teaches Youngsters Riding

The Henry L. Benning Pony Club, a non-profit organization dedicated to teaching youngsters how to care for and ride horses safely and happily was recently chartered on post.

For the last two years the organization operated under the charter of Claymore Plantation directed by Mr. John Bussey who gave much aid and support to the fledgling activity. Under the Claymore colors the Benning youngsters recently won the Southern Regional Rally in Atlanta.

Lt. Col. Francis L. Franklin, treasurer of the Fort Benning Hunt Club and Mrs. Franklin conceived the idea for the club and began work on its organization.

Pony Club is an international organization which started in England after World War I. Originally a part of the British Horse Society, it later became Pony Club, Inc. an organization exclusively for young people eight to 21 years old.

In order to become eligible for their own national charter, the Fort Benning youngsters had to complete one year of dismount work and operate successfully for one year with qualified instructors. This included lectures on the history of Pony Club, stable management, types of horses, proper feed and diseases, fox hunting, first aid, equestrian courtesy and clothes.

The Benning Pony Club district commissioner is Lt. Col. Calvin Roush (ret.) Mrs. Robert Williams is club secretary and Mrs. Max Spurlin is treasurer. Mrs. Lamar Anthony is instructor for the group.

CDCIA Ladies Say Farewell to Mrs. Eckland

Mrs. Kenneth E. Eckland was guest of honor at a recent luncheon at the Main Officers' Open Mess sponsored by the ladies of the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency.

The ladies presented a silver chafing dish to Mrs. Eckland, whose husband, Col. K. E. Eckland, former commanding officer of the Infantry Agency, retired June 30.

The luncheon was also the occasion for farewells to Mrs. Patrick B. Watson, wife of Col. Watson, who is being transferred to Hq., Combat Developments Command, Fort Belvoir, Virginia; Mrs. Joseph Hamilton Jr., whose husband, Lt. Col. Hamilton, is being transferred to USAREUR, Heidelberg, Germany; Mrs. Thomas D. Drake II, wife of Lt. Col. Drake, who departed July 6 to attend the Army War College; and Mrs. Minard P. Newton Jr., whose husband, Lt. Col. Newton, USMC Liaison Officer, is being transferred to Quantico, Virginia.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Forrest S. Rittgers Jr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Carr.

Geographical Wives Hold Coffee

Members of the Geographical Wives Club held a coffee June 25 in the East Room of the Supper Club of the Main Officers' Open Mess at Fort Benning.

Hostesses were Alice Celeste, Barbara Hannon, Ruby Midgette and Juanita Osborne.

Jackie LaMont, bridge chairman, announced that the group would meet to play on the first Wednesday of each month in the Normandy Room of the MOOM at 7:30 p.m.

Pat Seeley was named public relations chairman. Several guests were introduced and farewells exchanged.

There will be no July meeting. The next coffee will be held the first week in August.

2nd's Officer Wives Honor Mrs. Chiles at Luncheon

The last meeting of the 2nd Infantry Division's Officers' Wives Club was held in honor of Mrs. John H. Chiles recently in the Fountain Room of the Main Officers' Open Mess at Fort Benning.

Luncheon speaker was 2nd Division commander Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, who spoke on the subject, "We never had it so good." During his remarks, the general commended his wife, Lucy, as an "Army wife" over the last 28 years.

Mrs. John W. Gephart, club president, later cited the accomplishments of the organization in 1958.

"The group has truly flourished since its origin—this club has fulfilled a great mission," Mrs. Gephart said.

The gavel of the officers' wives club was then presented to Gen. Chiles for use in the 2nd Infantry Historic Museum.

Mrs. Chiles, honorary club president, was given a gift of silver as a farewell token for her "dedicated service to the organization."

It is not expected that the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club will be reorganized in Korea as the majority of military wives do not accompany their husbands there.

California Guard Has Proud Past In Over One Century of Service

Older than the State itself the California National Guard has a proud history of serving the State and Nation for more than a century.

The first volunteer militia unit to be formed in California was The First California Guard, organized in San Francisco on July 27, 1849

By December, 1854, California had within her limits 24 companies numbering 1500 men, organized, armed, equipped and ready for immediate service. Companies were organized for various reasons; some to protect settlers against hostile Indians, others to preserve law and order in mining communities. Some were more social in nature. All were uniformed at each member's own expense.

Old records tell of the Sacramento Hussars, who in gay uniforms with feather-adorned fur caps and red and yellow boots formed a mounted escort for the first Pony Express rider to reach Sacramento from Placerville on March 3, 1860.

The call for troops from California during the Civil War came "by telegram to farthest point West and thence by Pony Express to California." The state responded with 17,000 volunteers.

Five California companies were credited to the Second Massachusetts Cavalry Volunteers and participated in 25 engagements. Other California outfits guarded the Overland Mail route and formed the California Column which marched into New Mexico and Texas.

California again responded to the call during the Spanish War and her troops trod the soil of the Philippines.

California's modern National Guard originated with the Dick Law of 1903 which brought about greater federalization and standardization of all state military forces. Colorful nineteenth century units received almost all their supplies, arms and uniforms from the federal government.

California troops saw Mexican border service and with only a brief respite were called into federal service for World War I. The 40th Infantry Division was organized August 1917, composed of National Guard units of California, Arizona, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico. As a unit the 40th saw no active service at the front but its officers and men formed part of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 26th, 77th and 79th Divisions at St. Mihiel and the Argonne.

During the period between the wars, the California National Guard was reorganized and entered World War II with 12,000 members. They served and fought on every continent and in the islands of the Pacific.

Southern California's 40th Infantry (now Armored) Division was called to federal service for the third time when it served in Japan and Korea during the Korean conflict.

More than 1,000 California Air National Guard officers and men, members of the 146th Air Transport Wing, were on active federal duty during the Berlin crisis as were more than 300 California Army National Guard officers and men of the 132d Medical Company and the 123d, 161st and 3668th Ordnance companies.

Major California Army National Guard organizations are the 49th Infantry (Argonaut) Division, so called because most of its units are in communities associated with the gold rush days, and the 40th Armored (Grizzly) Division with units located throughout Southern California.

Col. Hamilton Given Medal

Lt. Col. Joseph Hamilton Jr., of Fort Benning's Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency, has been presented a Legion of Merit.

Col. Hamilton, who has been assigned to the U. S. Army, Europe, Heidelberg, Germany, was cited for outstanding service with the Agency from June, 1962 to June, 1963, as chief of the Combat Materiel Division chief of the Operations and Administration Division and Small Arms Weapons Study Program project officer.

The citation accompanying the medal read:

"While assigned as chief, Combat Materiel Division, Lt. Col. Hamilton demonstrated exceptional knowledge of combat materiel items in the areas of firepower, mobility and technical services."

"As small arms weapons study program project officer, Lt. Col. Hamilton recognized the magnitude, scope and impact to be created by this far-reaching project.

DOD Recommends Survivors Get Unused Military Leave Pay

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department has gone on record strongly recommending that unused military leave be paid to survivors, if death occurs while on active duty.

"The armed forces is the only group denied payment for unusued leave, if death occurs during employment," Brigadier General William W. Berg, deputy assistant Secretary of Defense (Military Personnel Policy), told the House Armed Services Committee.

General Berg explained that under existing statutes the payment of leave entitlement is authorized to members discharged or retired from the service and also to the surviving heirs when payment to the retiree had not been effected.

"It seems ironic to prohibit terminal leave payments to survivors of personnel who accumulate leave in an area such as Viet Nam, and who lose their lives in carrying out assigned duties," General Berg noted, "while at the same time authorizing terminal leave payments to more fortunate personnel who live to be remunerated for unused leave upon their separation from the service."

The logic of military terminal leave is sound, the committee was told, "since the government, in effect, is receiving additional productive man hours at the standard pay rate."

General Berg said that the logic applies, whether these additional services were performed by personnel still living or by those who are since deceased.

It was further pointed out that current statutes entitle survivors of civil service employees to payment for accumulated and current accrued leave at time of death.

197th Hears Gen. Heintges Bid Farewell

Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges took a few moments off from his final week of post activities Saturday, July 10, to say farewell to the men of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The general's visit took on an air of informality as the brigade's corps of officers and sergeants major left ed their Saturday morning duties to greet the man with whom they had served for almost a year.

He was greeted on his arrival by Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr., Brigade commander, and ushered into brigade headquarters where he was surrounded by well-wishers of the 197th.

After the exchange of greetings Gen. Heintges was presented with a gold plaque traditionally given to departing post commanders by the 197th. The plaque was inscribed with a farewell message and the crests of the brigade's individual units. The formal presentation was conducted by Col. Riley and Brigade Sergeant Major Othon O. Valent.

As the general departed from Brigade Headquarters the honor guard of Company C, 29th Infantry conducted a traditional ramp ceremony.

LIFE AND DEATH

The distance between your car and the one ahead may be the margin between life and death.

'Run Life,' Says Beyer

"There are three ways of living: running from it, running with it, or running it. Be a professional and run it," was the admonishment given 153 graduates of the Infantry Officer Basic Course last week.

Col. Donald A. Beyer, director of the Communications and Electronics Department, addressed the Junior Officers of Class No. 11. at Marshall Auditorium last week.

Distinguished honor graduate was the student commanding officer, Lt. David H. Lindsey who compiled a 94 per cent academic average .Other honor graduates were Lts. Rhomas L. Cubbage II and Raymond A. Mantle and Lts. Daniel L. Auvil, Steven R. Bleier, Michael J. Cummins, Patrick G. Dooley, Thomas L. Gregory, Lawson L. Lamar and Tirado J. R. Santana. Winner of the Military Stakes Award was Lt. Nicholas M. Pyle.

Estes Named New Post Chaplain Fills Position Vacated by Decker

A master parachutist and an accomplished magician has been named as Fort Benning's Post Chaplain.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes, who received his parachutists badge at the Infantry School in 1953 and who uses his skills as a magician to illustrate his spiritual teachings, succeeds Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker in the post.

Col. Decker retired from active service last month.

Stetson Graduate

Estes is a graduate of Stetson University in Deland, Fla., and has studied theology at Southwestern Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth, Texas, and Golden Gate Seminary at Berkeley, Calif.

Service schools he has attended include chaplains schools at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., where he took a basic course in 1945; Carlisle Barracks, Pa., administrative chaplain course in 1949, and at Fort Slocum, N. Y., an advanced chaplain's course in 1954.

Since he came to the post in 1960, Chaplain Estes has served as Student Brigade chaplain and Infantry School chaplain. He has been instrumental in the establishment of noon devotional services for Catholics and Protestants at The Infantry School, Bldg. 4. He frequently conducts the Protestant service in Marshall Auditorium.

In Demand

Estes is constantly in demand as a guest speaker on the post and in the surrounding community. He uses magic to illustrate sermonettes on spiritual truths.

He is a member of the Association of the U. S. Three West Point Cadets To Begin Goodwill Tour

WEST POINT, N.Y. (ANF) —Africa is the next stop for three First Classmen (seniors) at the U. S. Military Academy. Cadets Theodore B. Borek, David W. Britain III, and Michael D. Fry are taking part in Operation Crossroads—Africa, a summertime project aimed at building mutual understanding and friendship between the people of Africa and the United States.

Orientation

The cadets have completed an orientation session at Rutgers University in New Jersey to acquaint them with the African destinations. Borek is assigned to Nigeria, Britain to Malawi, and Fry will go to the Republic of Senegal.

The cadets will work side-by-side with African students and villagers to build rural schools and other community projects. Then they will go on educational tours of their country and at least one other African nation.

Lectures

When they return to West Point, the cadets will give lectures and talks relating their experiences in Africa and the impressions they have gained.

Operation Crossroads - Africa was begun in the summer of 1958 and is now an incorporated non-profit foundation. In 1961, when the Military Academy first participated, 192 students representing over 70 Americans and Canadian educational institutions visited 14 African countries.

Safety Goal Set by DoD

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has reminded the nation's 3.5 million Defense employees of the goal in the President's Mission SAFETY-70 drive: ". . .to reduce the number of injuries among Federal employees 30 per cent by 1970."

Full Support

In an open letter to the Defense Department, Secretary McNamara called on every command and agency to fully support the safety project.

"But success rests with the individual," he said, "in his work and in his relationship with those around him. Only constant awareness of safety measures and vigilance in observing them can make a job safe."

Save Lives

The 30 per cent accident cut sought by the President will save 200 lives annually, prevent nearly 45,000 disabling injuries, and save the government about $250 million.

Addressing himself to the Defense employees, two-thirds of them in uniform, Secretary McNamara remarked, "When any one . . .is less than fully effective, our mission suffers a proportionate loss."

NOW HE KNOWS!!

Reenlistment News

The latest DA message regarding reenlistment is worthy of careful study and thorough understanding.

With the cost of training and maintaining an army ever on the upswing, DA must be able to plan now for the zooming future. Under the new "interview and report" system, commanders are counseling men a year prior to ETS. Later, with eight months of service remaining, the soldier will be required to indicate his intent to reenlist or to leave the Army.

If a soldier signifies his intent to re-up and later changes his mind, he must serve a nine-month extension beginning with his original ETS. (A misunderstanding here could indeed cause some unhappiness.)

Others will be required to complete a "destination of enlistment," which can be withdrawn at any time up to the ETS.

Estes Named New Post Chaplain Fills Position Vacated by Decker

A master parachutist and an accomplished magician has been named as Fort Benning's Post Chaplain.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur J. Estes, who received his parachutists badge at the Infantry School in 1953 and who uses his skills as a magician to illustrate his spiritual teachings, succeeds Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker in the post.

Col. Decker retired from active service last month.

Stetson Graduate

Estes is a graduate of Stetson University in Deland, Fla., and has studied theology at Southwestern Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth, Texas, and Golden Gate Seminary at Berkeley, Calif.

Service schools he has attended include chaplains schools at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., where he took a basic course in 1945; Carlisle Barracks, Pa., administrative chaplain course in 1949, and at Fort Slocum, N. Y., an advanced chaplain's course in 1954.

Since he came to the post in 1960, Chaplain Estes has served as Student Brigade chaplain and Infantry School chaplain. He has been instrumental in the establishment of noon devotional services for Catholics and Protestants at The Infantry School, Bldg. 4. He frequently conducts the Protestant service in Marshall Auditorium.

In Demand

Estes is constantly in demand as a guest speaker on the post and in the surrounding community. He uses magic to illustrate sermonettes on spiritual truths.

He is a member of the Association of the U. S. REUNION SCENE . . . The Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla., is the locale for the 2nd Infantry Division's annual reunion. Although the division is no longer at Benning, many former 'Indianheads' are in attendance.

Chiles Guest of Sergeants Major; Leaves for Indianhead Convention

It's a real, real fine privilege to be here."

This was Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles' expression of gratitude Tuesday as more soldiers honored the departing former 2nd Infantry Division commander with a farewell luncheon.

Chiles was the guest at noon of about 25 to 30 sergeants major and senior noncommissioned officers at the Sand Hill NCO Club. Also present was Col. Tony F. Perpich, the general's Chief of Staff when the 2nd Division was merged recently with the 11th Air Assault.

In a brief farewell speech to the NCOs, Chiles expressed his love and admiration of "one of the finest combat infantry divisions in the U.S. Army.

'Love'

"Next to my family, my love was for the 2nd Division," Chiles said.

The sergeants major presented Chiles a small trophy replica of an infantryman dressed in full combat gear. Inscribed on the base of the replica was "Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, 2nd Infantry Division Soldier, from Sergeants Major."

The general is tending a busy schedule during his last days at Fort Benning.

He was to leave here around 9 a.m. today for Hollywood, Florida, where he will be the guest speaker tomorrow night at the grand banquet of the 2nd Infantry Division Association convention. The week - long convention is being held at the Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood.

Visits Bragg

The general flew up to Fort Bragg, N. C. Wednesday to observe soldiers formerly of the 2nd Division who have a role in the ROTC summer training program there.

Chiles and his aide, Lt. Jack Wheeler, stopped at Fort McPherson Wednesday night to attend a dinner honoring Lt. Gen. Louis Truman, the new Third Army Commander.

According to Wheeler, the general will return to Fort McPherson Sunday for other activities honoring Truman. He will return to Fort Benning a day or two before taking leave prior to assuming his post as Third Army Chief of Staff.

Benning Scouts Aid 'Goodwill'

Fort Benning's Boy Scouts this week are engaged in a post-wide drive to help the Goodwill Industries.

The drive started Monday when the agencies — Cub packs, Boy Scout troops and Explorer posts — distributed Goodwill collection bags to all homes on post. Today and tomorrow, the scouts will be collecting the bags and turning them over to the Goodwill Industries.

According to a Boy Scout spokesman, the scouts will pick up anything that can be repaired by the industry's handicapped workers. He named such items as clothin, electrical appliances, furniture, shoes, toys and bicycles.

Mounting Junk Car Heaps Cause Consternation for Army in Europe

The Army traditionally litters any area it occupies, especially in war-time when C-Ration cans and paper cover any temporary or hasty defensive position.

Now the armed forces are faced with another problem — another kind of litter — junked automobiles.

According to a recent Army Times article, the mounting heaps of junked cars belonging to American servicemen in Europe are causing European military officials headaches.

Apparently the European junk dealers don't wany any more scrap.

Ocean Dumping

"The Air Force studied a plan to haul the old clunkers away and dump them in the ocean, but the cost is too high," said the article.

Said one Army official in Germany, "It's tougher to clear post with a library book in your suit case than it is to leave an old car behind."

The article said that an estimated 30,000 cars a year are retired each year in Europe by military owners and junk dealers are showing increasing reluctance to buy the cars.

80 A Month

The 'Times' pointed to the examples of Toule Air Force Base in France and Ramstein Air Force Base in Germany which each pick up 80 abandoned cars a month.

The chief problem lies in the serviceman who gets orders to rotate back to the states but can't get rid of his "clunker" and most certainly doesn't want to bring it with him. He abandons it in a parking lot or on a deserted street.

According to the article in the Army Times, armed forces officials are studying ways of making it compulsory to show proof of disposition of the automobile when clearing post.

Troopin' the Line at Fort Benning

Fifteen men were recently awarded the Good Conduct Medal from The Student Brigade. Receiving his sixth award was SFC Lean Hall and SFC Richard J. LaValley was given his fourth award.

Accepting second awards were SFC Bruce W. Thomas Jr., SSGT David E. Seanor, SSGT Thomas A. Kelley, Sgt. Harold D. Blaney, Sgt. Joseph A. R. Boyer and Sgt Dalmus R. Creech. Also, Sp4 Davis M. Lindeman, OC Robert A. Cannon, Sp4 Charles Galetta, Sp4 Bobby L. Jenkins, Sp4 Artemus E. Mounts, Sp4 Kenneth G. Reese and PFC John L. Tefke received first awards.

First Lts. Joseph P. Chapman and Howard L. Claybrook were recently welcomed to the 2nd Missile Battalion, 42nd Artillery, by Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, the battalion commander.

Prior to their present assignment, Chapman and Claybrook served with the 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery, at Fort Benning.

Capt. Leroy C. Bell was presented a letter of commendation by Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber for his meritorious service with the 2nd Missile Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery.

Nine members of The Student Brigade received the Good Conduct Medal recently. They were Sp4 Robert A. Bengivenga, Sp4 Lowell T. Hutchinson, PFC Douglas Hovik, Sp4 David N. Lindeman, Sp4 James A. Macklin, Sp4 John D. Noble, Sp4 Leonard F. Russo, Sp4 Robert W. Sargagnola and Sp4 James E. Williams.

On July 12 Maj. John P. Soukup received a letter of commendation from Col. Jess W. Walls, commanding officer of The Student Brigade, for his service while assigned to TSB. Soukup had served as personnel officer and Brigade S-1 until his reassignment as chief of School Personnel.

The Student Brigade reports that one new officer, 2nd Lt. Bobby C. Chapman, was assigned during the period recently while Lt. Col. Leon G. Simmons retired and Capt. Rafael Sanchez-Saliva was reassigned to USARPAC, Korea.

• • •

Mrs. Nathan E. Rustin, a clerk-typist in the Administrative Services Division of The Infantry Center Adjutant General Section, recently received $15 for a work improvement suggestion at Fort Benning. She proposed the elimination of a report form. Col Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, made the presentation.

• • •

James M. Porter, was recently honored for a storage system he devised to save space in Fort Benning's Dry Storage Warehouse. Col. Earl F. Holton presented Porter $25 for the storage suggestion and $20 for devising a stock control chart for the warehouse.

• • •

Four Army nurses have recently been assigned to Martin Army Hospital at Fort Benning.

They are Maj. Alice M. Dziondziak, Maj. Elizabeth E. Angell, 2nd Lt. George W. Holcombe, and 2nd Lt Robert J. Wehner.

A Smiths, Ala., resident, William A. Buzbee, has earned the gratitude of Fort Benning officials by suggesting a way to eliminate a traffic bottleneck near his office. He proposed that the curb be recessed at the corner of Hall St. and Vibbert Ave., between the First National Bank and the Civilian Personnel Section. Moving the curb has widened the street, easing the flow of traffic and reducing the possibility of accidents. Buzbee, chief of the Position and Pay Management Division of the Civilian Personnel Section, received a letter of appreciation from Col. Earl F. Holton, Deputy post commander.

Military pay clerk, Harold R. Hartin, recently received $15 at Fort Benning for proposing the revision of a form used to make corrections to payrolls. His suggestion eliminates the necessity for handwritten corrections. Hartin is a member of The Infantry Center Finance and Accounting Office.

• • •

Mrs. John Lenevich recently received $15 from the deputy post commander, Col. Earl F. Holton, for a work improvement suggestion. She proposed that a medium heavy staple remover be purchased for use on extra thick documents to make it unnecessary to pry staples loose with scissors, pocket knives or other expedients. Mrs. Lenevich is a manpower reports clerk in the G-1 (Personnel) Section of The Infantry Center.

• • •

Two Army nurses have been assigned to Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital. They are Capt. Walter E. Courson, Jr., and 1st Lt. Jacqueline M. Kennedy.

• • •

Lt. Col. Milford R. Downey, was recently presented a bachelor of science degree in general studies from the American University by Maj. Gen John A. Heintges, former commanding general of The Infantry Center.

A $40 award recently went to Ellis W. Davis, for devising a way to save the government $1,053 per year at the Quartermaster Sales Store where he is a cashier-checker. He worked out a more efficient and economical way to file work orders. Making the presentation was Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander.

• • •

Robert W. Hightower recently received a letter of appreciation for proposing a file to control advance travel payments of personnel assigned to temporary duty, an innovation that has improved the morale of individuals concerned, according to officials.

• • •

A traffic safety recommendation made by Roland J. Fouilhe resulted in a letter of appreciation presented by Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, at Incentive Awards ceremonies at Lawson Army Airfield. Fouilhe, who proposed changing a "Yield" sign to a "Stop" sign at the Indianhead Road exit from the field, is an aviation training instructor.

Management analyst, Roscoe E. Duncan, recently received $25 for a time saving suggestion. Duncan proposed that lists of personnel slated for Incentive Awards include job titles. The suggestion is expected to expedite preparation of news releases by The Infantry Center Information Office. Duncan is a member of the Management Services Office at Martin Army Hospital.

• • •

Richard E. Cragg of Headquarters Co., 197th Infantry Brigade was recently promoted to Staff Sergeant. Sgt. Cragg previously served with the 6th Missile Battalion, 8th Artillery in Korea.

He is currently assigned to the Personnel Management section of the 197th.

• • •

Mrs. Ben H. Willis has simplified an accounting task at Fort Benning's Infantry Center Data Processing Section. She proposed a daily machine listing of data processing cards to check for discrepancies as they occur rather than at the end of a month. For the suggestion, Mrs. Willis, a control clerk in the section, received a letter of appreciation.

• • •

Company C, 577th Engr. Bn., CTC held a Battalion party for officers recently. Farewells were given to Lt. and Mrs. Liston L. Edge and Lt. and Mrs. Richard D. Carlisle, who are departing Fort Benning for new assignments in Germany.

At Third Army Tennis Tourney

Clarence Dougherty of Fort Campbell, Ky. (L) found the going rough against Don Gunther of Fort Benning in the Third U. S. Army Tennis Tournament earlier this week. Here Dougherty congratulates Gunther who beat him by scores of 6-2 and 6-1.

Tennis Men Win Three

The Fort Benning Tennis team chalked up three victories in three matches in the opening round of the Open Singles competition of the Third U.S. Army Tennis Tourney at Fort Stewart earlier this week.

Don Gunther led the way for the Benning team by defeating Bud Dougherty of Fort Campbell, Ky. in the second match of the day by scores of 6-1 and 6-2. Both men played an offensive brand of tennis, returning smashes with smashes in one of the hardest fought sets of the opening round.

Scott Allen also recorded a win for the post by defeating John Horner of Redstone Arsenal, Ala., 6-1, 6-1. Allen's well placed shots proved too much for Horner.

Dave Raney defeated Roger Curtis of McClellan, Ala., 6-1 and 6-0 to give Benning its third win of the day. Curtis is the only Navy man entered in the tournament.

John McGill, winner of the Fort Benning tennis playoff in the Open division, drew an opening round bye.

Grid Officials Needed on Post

A Fort Benning Football Officials Association is being organized to officiate youth, flag and touch football on post during the coming season.

All interested persons, especially those with officiating experience, are urged to attend a meeting at Briant Wells Field House this Sunday at 6 p.m.

An official's clinic and rules study will be held prior to the season's play. For further information contact SFC Smith 454-3689 or 545-3370.

Knight's Six Hitter Holds Top Spot For TSB in 7-2 Win Over CTC

BY DICK MINNIG

In their first meeting of the season's second half, the Student Brigade rolled over the Infantry Center Troop Command at Gowdy Field Monday night to hold first place with a 3 win, 0 loss record.

Jimmy Knight pitched the full nine innings for TSB, giving up only six hits to CTC batters. It was the second win of the half for Knight in two appearances.

Third baseman Mickey Carmack who went three for five and bagged three rbi's shared the TSB batting honors with catcher Voy Curley who had three hits for four trips to the plate and drove in one run.

The first half champs used four hurlers in a vain attempt to halt the TSB scoring. Starting pitcher Doug Talmadge who was knocked out in the third was handed the defeat.

CTC Scores First

The game began hopefully for the Troop Command when they quickly scored a run in the first on Bill Nordam's stand up double which drove in Eli Amaro.

CTC hopes received a blow when TSB bounced back with two runs in the second and followed with two more in the third to take a three run lead.

In the TSB second, leadoff batter Thurman Woody drew a walk and stole second. John Wilson singled him home with TSB's first run to tie it up. Then catcher Voy Curley smacked the two and one pitch for a triple and put the brigade out in front. TSB stayed out in front for the remainder of the game.

TSB's two runs in the third came in on two singles and a double. With one away, short stop Glen Kelly walked and was moved to third by a Bob Sheridan single to right. When Woody followed with a single down the right field line to drive in Kelly, CTC decided to pull pitcher Talmadge.

Verne Anderson came to the mound in an attempt to squelch the TSB scoring threat but had little success. Carmack, his first batter, hit a bouncer off the score board in center field for a ground rule double, scoring Sheridan with TSB's fourth run.

CTC scored once in the bottom of the third when Floyd Wicker lined a single to center scoring Amaro but this was the last time a Troop Command player made home. Knight allowed CTC only two singles in the final six innings.

TSB's Gets Three More

TSB got three more runs in the sixth but these were just excess baggage.

CTC Defeats 197th In See-Saw Contest

The Infantry Center Troop Command, first half baseball champs, narrowly beat the 197th Infantry Brigade 9-8 in a see-saw battle at Gowdy Field last week.

CTC won the game in the bottom of the ninth when a single by Bob Hodges drove in Rosy Spence with the winning run. Floyd Wicker who went to the mound from first base in the eighth got credit for the win.

The lead changed hands throughout the game. A Jim Munday single scored the first run for CTC in the second inning but the 197th retaliated in the third with a run to tie it up.

In the fifth the 197th nabbed another run when Bill Rich scored on an error by the CTC third baseman. But the Troop Command quickly evened it up again in their half of the inning when Bill Penny scored on an error.

In the seventh the 197th scored three times on two hits and three CTC errors. First baseman Duane Eichhorn singled and was followed by Bill Brannock and Emmett Glee who got on through errors. Center fielder Charlie Farrell then singled home two of the runs and Glee scored on another error. CTC continued the see-saw battle by bounding back with five runs in the bottom of the seventh in a scoring rally composed of two singles and five 197th errors.

With the score 7-6, the 197th scored twice in the ninth to take the lead again. Billy Williamson and Farrell led off with a pair of singles, followed by right fielder Tom Groce who blasted a triple to send them both home.

CTC was one run in the red when they came to bat for the last time. Wicker drew a base on balls and catcher Rosy Spence singled to left. With two on, Jim Munday singled home Wicker with the tying run and Bob Hodges' single ended the game by driving in Spence.

SPORTS

(This week's column was written by Mort Lindner.)

I've been reading various reports that Cassius Clay or Muhammed Ali or whatever he calls himself is seeking an annulment from his wife because she isn't a good Muslim. It's tough for boxing that an odd-ball character like Clay is the heavyweight champion. Whatever happened to the days when men like Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano, etc. presented such a fine example for the youth of America?

* * *

Some of the best and cheapest entertainment in Columbus from my point of view is the Columbus Yankees baseball games. Servicemen and adult dependents pay only half-price ($.75) with presentation of their ID cards. Admission for kids is just $.50.

* * *

And, speaking of the Columbus Yankees, I believe that it would be in their best interests to present my wife, two children and myself with free season tickets. Rationale behind this statement is that we've attended six ball games—all exciting contests and, more important, all won by Columbus.

I guess Columbus is doing that because my wife confided to me that she would be very disappointed if the Yankees lose when we go out to Golden Park.

My German born wife, incidentally, has become quite a baseball fan. Matter of fact, I almost fell off my seat when she yelled out for the umpire to "get a pair of glasses" after a particularly bad call at home plate. That was quite a contrast from the first game we attended when she told me it wasn't polite to yell out to encourage a Columbus batter "to whack one out of the park." Times change. . . so do people. . .and what's a good ball game without a little noise from the crowd?

SP5 "Mitch" Yamanaka, announcer at USAIC major unit league baseball games, is leaving The Bayonet to attend OCS at Fort Benning. Yamanaka has been editor of The Bayonet since January 1965. I look forward to greeting him as Lt. Yamanaka in the future.

It must have been embarrassing for St. Louis Cardinal Ken Boyer, the most valuable player in the National League last year, to be fined for straying off second base when he lost count of the number of strikes on the batter. Most valuable players aren't supposed to make "boo-boos" like that.

Cincinnati's Jim Maloney must have been a bit down-hearted upon losing to the New York Mets recently in the 11th inning, 1-0, after pitching 10 complete innings of no-hit baseball. However, de did get an immediate $1,000 raise in salary for his sterling efforts in that contest. That should have cheered him up considerably.

France's Michel Jazy must be quite a runner. During June, he not only set a new world mile run record of 3:53.6 but also lowered the international two mile standard to 8 minutes, 22.6 seconds. Off-hand, I would say that that's moving at a pretty fair pace.

MTU Shotgun Champ

MTU Tops Skeet Meet

Shotgun shooters from the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit dominated the Georgia State Skeet Championships at Albany Sunday with PFC Kevin Onka leading the way by winning the individual 12 gauge title with a perfect 100 birds.

M-Sgt. Max Quick and PFC Bud Brown teamed up to take the two-man team title with a perfect 200. Brown was also runnerup for individual honors with 100 birds.

The MTU marksman made it a clean sweep of the 12 gauge events when they topped the field in the five-man team match with a total of 496 out of 500.

Firing on the squad were Onka, Brown, Quick, Pfc John Lilly and Pvt. Richard Kulesh.

Individual results of the 12 gauge, Quick placed first in AA with 100 birds and Maj. Thomas Gillmore was Class winner with 100 birds.

In earlier matches Brown won runnerup spot in the .23 gauge event with 99 targets, tying the winner Bob Beesch, who also had 99. Brown was also runnerup in the 20 gauge with 98 targets and Kulesh took AA honors in this match with 98.

The Army's five-man team was runnerup in the squad competition in the 20 gauge with 482 birds, one behind the match winner.

TSB Wins By Forfeit Over 197th

The Student Brigade won its second game of the USAIC baseball season's second half last Saturday evening when the 197th Infantry Brigade team failed to appear on Gowdy Field at game time.

The forfeiture gave TSB a two win, one loss record and was the second defeat in two games for the 197th.

The game has been originally slated for July 6 as the second half opener but rain forced it to be rescheduled.

Willis Sets New Mark

The Army National Trophy Rifle Group invaded Quantico, Va., over the weekend to participate in a regional high power match in which both the Marine Corps and Air Force participated.

The Army got off to a fast start with a pair of victories in the 1,000 yard match.

SFC Leonard Willis slammed out a 100 with 42 v-ring shots, surpassing a mark which has stood at Camp Perry since 1939. In that year Marine PFC A. L. Wolters fired a 100 with 27vs in the Wimbledon to set the current standard.

The soldiers followed this up with a victory in the long-range team match.

The six-man crew of SFC Robert Lancaster, Capt. Paul Renne, SSgt L. Aslin, SSgt Carl Pritchett, Sgt. Charles Davis and Sgt. William Duncan posted a total of 598-94v to win the match.

In the regional competition SFC James McQuien dropped only one point over the five-match course of fire but had to settle for second place when the Marines' Sgt. J. Jones also dropped only one but had 60 of his shots in the v-ring to 53 for McQuien.

The soldiers netted a pair of individual victories when SSgt Alfred Falcon captured the off hand match with a 100-8 and McQuien led the field in the 200-yard rapid fire event with a 100-7.

The other three matches went to two Marines and a civilian.

In the four-man team the Air Force eked out a narrow one-point victory over the Army Eastern quartet, 995 to 994.

Pistol Group Victorious In Two Championships

BY LEE LA COMBE

The Army's National Trophy Pistol Group sent a two pronged attack into Kentucky and North Carolina over the weekend and emerged with resounding victories in the Midsummer Pistol Championships at Fort Campbell and the North Carolina State Championships at Charlotte.

At Fort Campbell, SSgt. Emil Heugatter of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit jumped off to a quick lead by taking the .22 caliber and Center Fire aggregates. He then had to withstand a late surge by teammate SFC Ralph O. Thompson to capture the individual Midsummer title by a narrow margin.

Both men finished with 2,655 totals, but Heugatter won on the basis of 149 x-ring shots to 136 for Thompson.

At Charlotte SFC Robert Whitacre of the MTU ground out a 2,645 to outdistance teammate Sgt. Merriweather Jones by seven points and take the individual crown.

The Army swept all of the team matches at both events.

At Campbell, the four-man team of Heugatter, Thompson, SFC William Blankenship and SSgt Hershel Anderson took the .22 title with 1,177, the Center Fire with 1,182 and the .45 event with 1,179. The winning coach was MSgt Mack Salmon.

The [illegible] results at Fort Campbell were:

dedicated professionals man a million dollar operation

BY JIM BAKER

A tall, thin, retired master sergeant who remembers when there was no crafts program at Fort Benning, now looks proudly about and says gruffly, "we stress safety around here or there'd be fingers all over the floor."

Hugh Cook runs a complex of eight crafts shops which require an annual budget of better than two hundred thousand dollars to finance the 800,000 man hours of participation each year.

Hubert L. Odom sits behind a glass-topped desk in the Special Services tower and can run statistics on the athletic phase of the special services operation at Fort Benning very much like a computer on election night.

Old Shoes

Capt. George Lott, who recently stepped into the two-and-a-half-year-old shoes of Maj. Roger Miller, sits opposite Odom and next to his desk is an artists' design of a new Chattahoochee River marina for small craft which would cost an estimated $125,000. He wonders wistfully if the money can be obtained for the project.

Lott is Fort Benning's head of a million and a half dollar yearly operation. He replaced Miller who is bound for Viet Nam in the near future.

In addition to these people there are countless others — a total of 104, military and civil — who are very bit as dedicated.

All will join with the soldiers of Fort Benning and the rest of the army to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Special Services next week.

25 Years Ago

Twenty-five years ago, at Fort Benning, there was one eight lane bowling alley, two motion picture theaters, two swimming pools — one for inlisted men and the other for officers— one golf course, no crafts shops, one 18,000 - volume library, and one service club.

Today there is a post-wide sports program — unheard of in 1940, four service clubs, three bowling alleys, eight crafts shops, one - nine hole golf course, four gymnasiums, eight libraries, one little theatre, three recreation areas, one sign shop, six pools and a supply warehouse.

The chief disappointment to the majority of special services personnel — to hear a soldier say "Gee, I wish I knew this was here two years ago." It means only one thing to these professionals who specialize in serving soldiers — that there are some who never take advantage of what is offered the soldier for his leisure hours.

Grass Roots

Although Special Services will celebrate its 25th anniversary next week, it has a history that goes back into the grass roots of American armies.

Earliest records show that professional entertainment was provided the troops quartered outside Vicksburg by the Lombard Brothers of Chicago.

Soldiers stationed near cities were often given opportunities to go to town to attend performances of leading actors and actresses. Records also show that not many took advantage of the opportunity.

According to the official history of Special Services, "Reading ranked high among camp diversions.

Reading materials were distributed throughout the army by the United States Sanitary Commission, later known as the American Red Cross, and the US Christian Commission, the forerunner of today's YMCA.

"Secretaries"

Later, during the early 1900's YMCA "Secretaries" became the first of the "service club girls"

Records also show that the turn of the century saw the responsibility for providing reading materials for soldiers placed on the Army's quartermaster.

By 1899 the YMCA was operating 133 recreation tents in 24 military camps. Still there was no organized athletic program.

With World War I more and more civilian organizations came to the aid of soldier morale. Under government-af control and approval the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, built Liberty Theatres in the camps, distributed books and generally improved the facilities for the soldier to spend his off-duty hours.

It was not until 1940 that the name special services came to be applied to the programs that began during the civil war.

Since that time special services has developed Army - wide in very much the same manner it has developed at Fort Benning.

Army regulations clearly state that the special services program is specifically aimed at the low-ranking soldier, It is designed for every one and it is there for everyone.

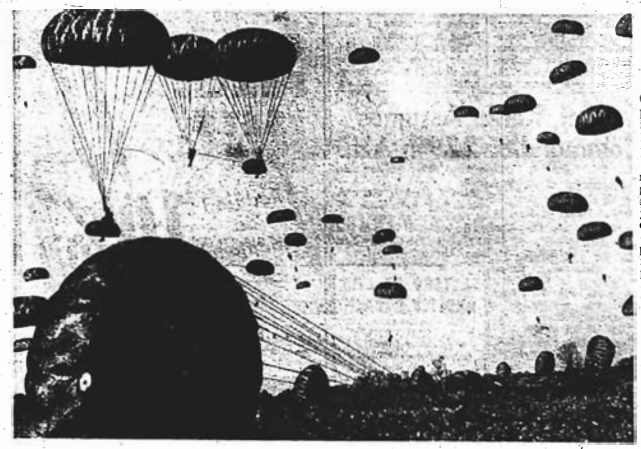
Jump School Training Completed



NEW PARATROOPERS FLOAT GROUNDWARD IN GRADUATION JUMP
Three Weeks of Rugged Training Ended On Fryar Drop Zone

Paratroopers Fill Ranks Of All-Airborne Brigade

Approximately 500 paratroopers of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) Wednesday completed a rugged three-weeks of training qualifying them to become members of the division's 1st Airborne Brigade or to fill numerous airborne positions throughout the division.

The two jumps made Wednesday completed the five paradrops required to qualify as a paratrooper. The first jump was made Monday afternoon following a long wait outside Air Force C-130 transports at Lawson Army Airfield while Air Mobility Department instructors at Fryar Field, the drop zone, held off the jump because of high winds.

The students had their second jump delayed Tuesday morning but got in two daring the afternoon.

On hand for the graduation ceremony, held Wednesday on the drop zone, were the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard and Col. E. B. Roberts commander of the Airborne brigade.

In discussing the airborne volunteers, Col. Roberts stated that he was "highly impressed" by the number and caliber of the men who elected to take the grueling training.

More than 360 of the men going through the training were members of the 1st and 2nd Battalions, 8th Cavalry who will, along with the 1st Bn., 12th Cavalry, make up the units of the all airborne brigade.

The 1st Bn., 12th Cavalry was previously qualified when, as the 1st Bn., 187th Infantry of the 11th Air Assault Division, they were trained as the division's only infantry battalion.

Many of the airborne volunteers were combat veterans, with considerable military service who preferred to undergo the three weeks of intensive ground and aerial training of jump school in preference to leaving their units.

"We had a very high percentage of men going all the way through this course, and it is a great credit to them," said Col. Lamar Welch, head of the Air Mobility Department.

"There haven't been many quitters," the colonel said, "some just didn't have the [illegible] and the department is proud to have trained men for two tactical units in a single class."

In addition to the two infantry battalions who are now jump qualified, there are many new jumpers in such units as the 2nd Bn., 9th Artillery; the 8th Engineer Bn.; 11th Aviation Group; 15th Medical Bn plus jumpers who will fill paratroopers positions in the Support Command, Military Police, Signal, Maintenance and Supply Units.

Top Generals Plan Tours Of New Air Cavalry Units

By Jim Graham

For the next few days the 1st Air Cavalry Division will come under the critical eyes of some of the Army's highest ranking generals.

Next Tuesday morning, Gen. Paul D. Adams, commanding general of the U.S. STRIKE Command, will arrive for a day of observation and briefings on the Army's newest concept.

Gen. Paul L. Freeman, commander of the U. S. Army Continental Army Command, will be on hand to look over the new division on July 23.

Lt. Gen. Harvey Fischer, deputy commander of the U. S. Continental Army Command spent last Tuesday morning observing the training of the divisions men.

Gen. Fisher arrived Monday at Lawson Field and attended the farewell review and reception for Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges.

The general toured the Harmony Church training sites of the Sky Troopers and watched pilots negotiating the helicopter confidence course Monday afternoon.

After returning to the division headquarters Gen. Fisher was briefed by the staff of Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, on the new Air Cavalry Division and the change techniques now in progr

Gen Kinnard Featured In Documentary

An interview with the commanding General of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard will be a featured highlight of an NBC Radio special documentary, "The New War in Viet Nam" to be aired Sunday at 7:00 p.m. on station WDAK.

The news feature provides an analysis of present trends in Vietnam plus a look at the United States goals and present hurdles that must be overcome.

In a taped interview, Gen. Kinnard will discuss the Army's newest concept, the airmobile Cavalry Division. Many of the techniques and much of the equipment developed by [illegible] have had minor [illegible] a good class, Mexico.

Freshman Congressman Hosted by Sky Troopers

The 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) was host yesterday to twelve freshmen congressmen, as they were given a first hand look at the Sky Troopers in action.

Among the group were Georgia Congressman Howard (Bo) Callaway of Pine Mountain and Maston O'Neal of Bainbridge.

Ten other representatives were flown to Ft. Benning from Washington, escorted by Army officers. They were: Henry P. Smith and Robert C. McEwen, Republicans of New York; Prentiss Walker, Republican from Mississippi; John E. Erlenborn, Republican from Illinois; William L. Dickinson, Republican from Alabama; William R. 1st Cav Sets Associations 18th Reunion

By Marv Wolf

Troopers of the 1st Cavalry Division Association will assemble for the 18th Annual Reunion in Kansas City August 20, 21 and 22. The Hotel President, one of Kansas City's leading hotels, will serve as command post for the visiting cavalrymen.

In addition to providing an opportunity to re-estebhish old friendships, the Association members are expected to take full advantage of all the historic viewing in the Kansas City area.

According to a statement released in the Saber News, the Associations official publication, the reunion will be highlighted by a trip to Independence Mo., to view the world reknowned Truman Library where former President Harry Truman will briefly address the group.

Former members of the division, as well as those those currently serving as "Sky-Troopers" who are interested in either the Association or the reunion are encouraged to write to the Registrar, 1st Cavalry Division Association, P.O. Box 11201, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

CAVALAIR COMMENTARY

BY J. D. COLEMAN

One of the more fascinating aspects of human behavior is the uncanny ability of soldiers to seize upon some symbol, badge or slogan as an indicator of unit cohesion. The soldiers' habitual adopting of livestock for mascots is but one example. Another is the choosing of a nickname for a unit . . . "Manchus" — "Bull Eagles" — "Kaniengehagas" — "Rakkasans" — were but a few that were familiar around here in the past. The future, of course, will bring new ones to the fore, with "Black Knights' — "Cacti" — "Garry Owen" and "Mustang" replacing the older sobriquets.

But this drive toward identification with symbolism is manifested in other ways. When the battalions of the 2d Division were first loaned to the 11th Air Assault Division in July 1964, the majority of the troops were quite nonchalant about the significance of the Air Assault Badge. And, the personnel of the original Air Assault battalions were equally patronizing to their new brethren.

Even when the Air Assault Badge was awarded the loaned battalions in December, there was considerable bantering among the troops about the relative merits and value of such an award. But now, with "new fish," as it were, coming into the fold, this Air Assault Badge, and all it stands for, has become quite important. It is a status symbol about which the "veteran" of Air Assault II can regale the newcomer with tales of rappelling derring-do and "Eagle Flights" and an occasional breath-taking "bandit-break."

It becomes, in short, the symbol of belonging. And all soldiers, whatever their branch, need this sense of belonging — of identification. This is why the Army maintains its system of unit lineage so the individual soldier may retain something upon which to orient his desire for identification.

What are the drives and motivations that goad a man to volunteer for the dangerous, arduous and generally unrewarding tasks that are found in the combat arms? To call it a hunger for experience would be over-simplifying, but none-the-less accurate. To satisfy that hunger drives a man to do things and take chances that a lesser man would spurn as being foolhardy and without rationale. Yet to miss that experience fills those so driven with almost a sense of guilt.

How typical it is to be in a group and hear talk of some activity or operation involving exposure to personal danger, real or imagined, and, not having participated, be left with the troubling, hidden knowledge that one might not have gone all the way.

And this feeling of having gone all the way leads to that sense of belonging. Yet few will admit it as such when pinned down. Ask an airborne infantryman why he belongs, and the odds are that he will reply: "I'm in it for the money." But does the hazardous duty pay . . . more honorarium than compensation . . . really attract? What about the helicopter riding infantryman or artilleryman; the rappelling sky trooper? What drives him to acceptance of that mission. Money? Obviously not, for there is none. But perhaps it is that unfanthomed hunger for experience.

Whatever it is, however it is manifested, we can be grateful for it. Because without this inner drive there would be too few to man the ramparts.

227th Incoming Aviators Receive Helicopter Transition Instruction

The 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion has initiated a helicopter transition course for the large number of incoming aviators.

The course has a ground school with an intensive flying program as a second requirement.

The helicopter transition course is organized, directed, and supervised by 227th personnel.

The ground school is conducted by Capt. Harris E. Haynes and the Chief Flight Instructor is Capt. Joe T. Gimeskey.

The ground school is 20 hours in duration and includes courses of instruction in aircraft equipment, tion, turbine engine operation, emergency procedures, protective mask instruction to include proper fitting and wear, proper preflight instruction and aviation safety.

The flight instruction includes three courses of instruction. The first course is for those aviators that have had only observation helicopter qualification and includes 25 hours of local flying instruction.

The second course of instruction is for those aviators that are cargo helicopter qualified and includes ten hours of local flying instruction. The third course of instruction is for those aviators that are UH1 helicopter qualified but need local transition and cludes four hours of local flying instruction.

The flight courses include instruction in day and night formation flying, pathfinder operations, external and internal loads, nap - of - the - earth (low level) flying, altitude and low level autorotations, wearing of the protective mask, M24, under actual flying conditions, and confined area operations.

Over twenty six aviators have successfully completed the courses of instruction since its initiaton on June 29, 1965.

Graduates recieve certificates signed by the 227th Batalion Commander, Lt. Col. Jack Cranford.

Twelve Leave Headquarters

General Hosts Gathering For Cav Senior Officers

BY JOE TREASTER

The commandiag general of the 1st Cavlary Division (Airmobile), his headquarters staff and the division's senior officers met socially for the first time in a dinner-dance at Fort Benning's Main Officers Open Mess Wednesday evening.

Many of the officers at the party had served with Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard when he commanded the 11th Air Assault Division. A number of key men, however, came from the 2nd Infantry Division and other units throughout the Army.

To 12 men leaving headquarters — six to other jobs within the division and six to places as distant as Alaska— — the general presented silver cigarette lighters inscribed with the dates of the men's service. The lighters bore 11th Air Assault crests.

Gen. Kinnard and Col. E. R. Roberts, commander of the 1st Brigade, who served as chief of staff of the Air Assault Division from its formation Feb. 15, 1963, exchanged plaques carrying crests of all the deactivated division's units.

"This plaque will hold a treasured position in my home," Gen. Kinnard said. And from Col. Roberts: "This is my most prized possession. Thank you."

The general specifically thanked Col. Roberts, Lt. R. M. Shoemaker and Lt. Col. O. O. Osburn — three men who had come with him from the 101st Airborne Division to found the air assault division — for their service and loyalty.

Referring to the recent casing of the 11th Air Assault Division colors, Gen. Kinnard admitted he was not dry-eyed.

"It was like losing a member of the family," he said. "It was a sad moment. But I take satisfaction from the fact that the 11th Air Assault Division proved the Army's air mobile concept and in being a part of establishing the first air mobile division."

GIRL FRIDAY PRAISED . . . Col. Allen M. Burdette, 11th Aviation Group commander presents a plaque to Mrs. Eleanor Caplan for outstanding service as the Group Commanders private secretary. Mrs. Caplan departed recently for a new position with Purchasing and Contracting Fort Benning.

At Annual Party

Aviation Group Officers Really Get In The Swim

Officers of the 11th Aviation Group held their annual "Swimming Party" at the Main Officers Open Mess last Friday night.

Honored guests for the occasion were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Harry W. O. Kinnard, Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles and Col. and Mrs. George S. Beatty, Jr.

The purpose of the party was to welcome Col. Allen M. Burdette, as new Group Commander and say farewell to departing officers and their wives.

Informal dress was the order of the evening for the poolside festivities.

The fun filled evening got underway when Lt. Col. Robert S. Little Jr., group executive officer introduced Col. Burdette who then stepped into the spotlight and introduced all newly assigned officers and their wives.

Among those welcome to the 11th Aviation Group were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Arne Eliasson, Lt. Col. Harold G. Keebaugh, assistant division aviation officer and Lt. Col. Robert S. Kellar, commanding officer, 229th Assault Helicopter Bn.

Departing members of the Aviation Group were then presented plaques commemorating their service to the unit. Col. George S. Beatty Jr., former group commander and now division Chief of Staff was presented a plaque and Mrs. Beatty received a silver tray.

Highlight of the evening was a bathing beauty contest with Maj. Delano DeGenefee, assistant group S-1 acting as Master of Ceremonies. Colonels Burdette and Beatty were the judges with Gen. Kinnard casting the deciding vote in the event of a tie.

The only thing different about this contest was that all of the contestants were hard flying Army aviators dressed in female bathing suits and wearing outlandish make-up.

Picking a winner from among the bevy of dazzling beauties was not an easy task for the astute judges but finally after several consultations a "Miss 11th Aviation Group" was chosen to reign for the coming year.

Gen. Kinnard presented the surprised winner with the banner of the championship. The inner modestly declined to be identified other than as a holder of the Miss Alfa Bits" title.

An outstanding buffet, poolside dancing and swimming rounded out the full evenings activities.

Aviation Ladies Coffee Is Held At MOOM Pool

Ladies of the 11th General Support Aviation Company met at the pool of the Main Officers' Club for their monthly coffee on July 1, 1965. Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. John N. Dailey and Mrs. Jackson C. Stevens.

Mrs. Paul E. Carpenter, wife of the company commander, welcomed the following newcomers to the company: Mrs. Frank Bullock, Mrs. Robert Humphries, and Mrs. Charles Sweeney.

Mrs. Wilbur G. Hudson and Mrs. Frank Bonnarens announced that they were making plans for the group to go on the Heritage Tour in August.

Fall Fashions Shown For Artillery Ladies

The ladies of the 2nd Battalion, 20th Artillery were entertained July 7 by the ladies of Battery C with a fall fashion show and luncheon at the Holiday Inn restaurant.

Mrs. Roger J. Bartholomew and Mrs. Charles R. Palmer met the guest at the door and presented them with nametags in the shape of aerial rockets. The centerpiece at the head table was a large rocket spouting real smoke. This decoration was created by Mrs. Donald L. Becker.

Mrs. Nelson A. Mahone, Jr., wife of the battalion commander, presided at a short business meeting before introducing Mrs. Joseph Beverly moderated the fashion show. Modeling were Mesdames Charlie Hooks, Richard Washburn, Edward Balda, James Spears, and Robert Schultz.

Special guests were Mrs. Horry L. Ford, Miss Margaret Jones, Miss Hazel Hughes, and Miss Nelda Hughes.

July Coffee Held By Maintenance Unit

The ladies of the 27th Maintenance Battalion enjoyed a lovely coffee at the Normandy Room July 13.

Hostesses for the coffee were Mrs. Cecil Jones and Mrs. William Thacker.

The theme of the coffee centered around the new 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile). The nametags were made depicting the Air Cavalry patch. An arrangement for the centerpiece contained a helicopter and horse surrounded by green artificial flowers.

Guests of honor were Mrs. John Hennessey and Mrs. Thomas Buchanan.

The Aircraft Crew Chief

Diplomats With Greasy Fingernails

The 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) is chock full of hard - working, industrious soldiers who never seem to get the appropriate publicity or credit for the many things they accomplish while doing their daily mission. In our type of unit, one which is predominately concerned with aviation, one man fits into this category and stands out above all others. He is the crew-chief.

Each and every aircraft assigned to an aviation unit has its own crew - chief, and in some instances, larger aircraft have more than one. This man's mission is to insure that the aircraft is in top flying condition, clean both inside and out, and is as safe as it is humanly possible to be, at all times.

Each aircraft is different. For this reason, crew-chiefs after they are initially assigned to a particular aircraft, seldom "crew" another ship. In certain instances pilots may change ships on a day - to - day basis, but crew - chiefs almost never do.

"Every time we lift off, I get a feeling that is part pride, part happiness and part conceit. I may have just spent six hours pulling an inspection, skinned my hands in a dozen different places, been frustrated enough at times to scream, but as I feel the chopper lift us off the ground, it's all worth it," explains Sp5 Lowell Pirkle, a veteran of more than 7,000 hours of flight time as a crew-chief.

Today's crew - chief is first of all a sharp soldier. He is constantly on public display and seems to have an unconscious flair for those million and one things that draws the line between just a good soldier and a really sharp one. Secondly, he is a first-rate mechanic. He knows his aircraft better than he knows himself. In most cases he has attended at least two training schools and has spent many more hours of his own time absorbing knowledge from technical manuals concerned with his particular ship.

Last, but certainly not least, he is a diplomat. He deals daily with a wide variety of people, ranging from other crew-chiefs and technical inspectors to pilots and co-pilots in large numbers.

When asked how most pilots think about their crew-chiefs, WO Raymond C. Clayton, an instructor pilot in more than six different Army aircraft explained it this way, "I depend on my crew chief. I have to. If he says the plane is flyable, I take his word for it, without asking questions. He is trained solely for this purpose. If something is wrong, he doesn't hesitate to tell me about it. With this type of a system, how can we go wrong?"

Few people realize that for every hour that an aircraft spends flying it takes approximately nine man hours of maintenance time on the ground. About one half of the total maintenance the crewchief is authorized to handle. Special teams, trained in particular pieces of equipment, pull the higher echelons of maintenance, but when they do, you will normally find the crewchief there too, increasing his knowledge.

Vets of First Team Welcome Air Cavalry

Since the organization of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), former members of First Team have sent words of welcome and congratulations to the Army's newest cavalrymen.

Lt. Gen. Charles G. Dodge, commanding general of the Fifth Army, sent words of esteem to Commanding General of the 1st Cavalry Division, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, for becoming the "First Soldier of the First Team". He expressed that he could "think of no one I would rather see hold the reins of that great division."

Pride in his former unit seemed to leap from the pages of his letter as the general reminded the men of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) of the proud traditions which they have inherited.

The general expressed hope for the retention of the colors and designations of the old Cavalry regiments that have been represented in the division since its organization more than 40 years ago.

Further best wishes to all Air Cavalrymen came from a combat veteran of the 12th Cavalry Regiment.

Henry R. Hernandez of San Antonio, Tex., joined the division in New Guinea and stayed with it until 1945 while the division was in Japan.

Pathfinders Graduate Terminal Guidance Class

The 11th Pathfinder Company (Prov) graduated thirty newly qualified Terminal Guidance Team Leaders today in ceremonies at the 11th Aviation Group chapel.

The occasion marked the completion of the third Terminal Guidance Team Leaders Course conducted by the Pathfinders and the first one for the new Airmobile Division.

The goal of the Terminal Guidance Team Leaders Course was to train selected personnel from the 1st Cavalry Division in the procedures and techniques of establishing and operating platoon - size landing sites for UH-1 IROQUOIS and CH-47 CHINOOK aircraft.

This training will make it possible for infantry or artillery units, for example, to select and set-up their own pick-up areas during night operations when regular Pathfinder personnel are not available. In general this capability will add considerably to the flexibility of the unit commander.

The course itself included refresher training in land and aerial navigation techniques; familiarization with aircraft, Pathfinder equipment and procedures, and practical work in the selection and organization of helicopter pick-up and landing zones for both day and night operations.

A written examination was given half-way through the course to determine which of the students had progressed with the classroom work to proceed with the practical field work.

Officer and NCO students for the course were sent from each major and separate unit in the division. This included personnel from 2nd Bn, 12th Cavalry and 2nd Bn., 7th Cavalry, two infantry units who are relatively inexperienced in the airmobile concept.

"It has been real good training," commented Lt. John Marcy, a platoon leader in Company C, 2nd Bn., 7th Cavalry. "Working with the Pathfinders and pilots has given me a look at both the aviation and the infantry sides of the Division."

Lt. Marcy's spirit and interest in the Terminal Guidance Course has been evident in all of the courses held. The twenty - two personnel who were graduated from the first class in August, 1964, were able to assist greatly during Air Assault II. Qualified personnel were called upon again during January of this year to supplement the regular Pathfinders during training exercises.

Credit must also be given to the aviation units — 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion, 20th Artillery Aviation Section, and 2nd Aviation Section — who supported the course in the usual professional manner.

8th Cavalry Makes Units First Jump

Pushed by heavy rains, the 1st Bn., 8th Cavalry, made the first parachute jump in the unit's history last Wednesday when 56 officers and enlisted men of the battalion jumped at Fryar Field.

The rainy weather postponed the jump one day.

Led by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Kenneth Mertel and the executive officer, Maj. Guy Eberhardt, the members of the "Mustang" battalion were the first group of the 8th Cavalry to jump.

The battalion became an airborne unit after joining with the first airborne Brigade of the 1st Cavalry Division on July 1st. For many of these who jumped Wednesday, it was their first jump in several years. The drop was executed without any injuries, and the general comment was that of SSgt. Dunn of Company B who had jumped last in 1960, "It was a beautiful jump; after I landed I felt like going up and dropping again."

Quick Thinking Pilot Averts Copter Crash

The quick thinking and skillful actions of a 229th Assault Helicopter Bn. pilot was credited recently with saving the lives of the nine men aboard his aircraft.

WO Raymond R. Secrest of Company B was piloting a UH-1D in a flight of four helicopters participating in a troop lift. On board was a crew of three and six infantrymen.

During flight, WO Secrest heard a loud noise from the engine compartment and noticed a rapid loss of speed. He went in to autorotation — the method of landing a powerless helicopter — while his co-pilot, WO Richard S. Armstrong turned off all switches.

From an altitude of 400 feet, WO Secrest successfully maneuvered the helicopter into an area so small that a normal power-on landing would have been difficult.

Minor damage to the helicopters skids and main rotor blades was the only damage received and all of the men came through the ordeal without a scratch.

the division when it was a test vehicle are now employed in the Viet Nam conflict.

The opposing points of view on the U.S. stand in Viet Nam will be voiced by Georgia freshman Congressman Howard (Bo) Callaway and Professor Hans Morganthau, professor of political science at the University of Chicago.

Congressman Calloway advocates an increase in the tempo of U.S. involvement while Prof. Morganthau feels that U.S. withdrawal from Viet Nam is in order.

The radio documentary will also feature on the spot reports of the current developments in the Viet Nam conflict.

Phenix City Children Look Close At Facinating World of Air Cavalry

Thanks to a far - sighted minister, a warm - hearted Army chaplain and a bevy of Sky Troopers, some 20 Phenix City, Ala., children Thursday got a close look at the new 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

First and second graders from the Girard Elementary School rode Army jeeps and tiny mechanized "mules;" talked with each other over helicopter radios and sitting alongside crew chiefs and pretended to fly the aircraft.

Lt. Col. Jack L. Cranford, commander of the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn., told them about combat helicopters and Chap. (Capt.) Charles Gibbs of the 11th Aviation Group, who coordinated the tour, took them through an Army chapel.

The children are from a play school whose mission is to provide a frame of reference for the youngsters who seldom leave the immediate area of their homes.

According to Rev. Harold McKeithen, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Phenix City, the twice-weekly, nine week program is called the Girard Summer Play School.

The school meets in a three room house which the church leased and renovated, but McKeithen stresses that the course is non-religious and consists of a Tuesday session of arts and crafts or story reading and a Thursday tour which is intended to make the earlier lessons more real in the childs mind.

Other tours planned include a visit to a turkey farm, the Oliver Dam, the Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts, the Royal Crown Bottling plant and a visit to a restaurant for lunch.

The children were selected by their regular term teachers who felt that they would profit by the chance to get out and see part of the fascinating world about them.

134th Aviation XO Promoted to Major

In a ceremony conducted in the office of Lt. Col. Gregory L. Olney, 10th Aviation Group executive officer, Maj. John W. Fust Jr. was promoted to his present rank.

Others present at the ceremony were Maj. Thomas G. Ziek, commanding officer, 38th Air Transport Battalion, and Maj. Ted N. Phillips, commanding officer, 134th Aviation Company.

Maj. Fust has assumed duties as executive officer, 134th Aviation Company, replacing Maj. Dal W. Hurst who has reported for duty with the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Maj. Fust entered the Army in August, 1954, upon graduation from the University of Kentucky ROTC program. In addition to the Infantry Officer Basic Orientation Course and the Infantry Officer Career Course, Maj. Fust is also a graduate of the Airborne and Ranger schools. He is fixed - wing and rotary - wing rated and is qualified in the O1A, U6A, U1A, CV-2B, OH-13, OH-23 and H-19 aircraft. He has flown in excess of 3,000 hours and is rated as a Senior Army Aviator. He is also the holder of a Special Instrument Card.

Maj. Fust has served a tour of duty in the Rebublic of Viet Nam, serving as executive officer of the 61st Aviation Company. His decorations include the Army Commendation Medal, the Air Medal with two clusters and "V" device and the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal.

Secretary Earns DA Service Award

Mrs. Iris O'Farrell, secretary to Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, division commander, recently received an award from the Department of the Army commending her for "a year of outstanding service as a Department of the Army civilian.

At Charlie Company

New CO Introduces Specialized Training

In an effort to broaden the training conducted by Charlie Company, 1st Bn, 5th Cavalry, Capt. John L. Pope has led his men through two sessions of specialized training during the course of the past week.

Capt. Pope stated that "this would help get personnel of Charlie Company ready for any terrain on which they might operate."

The first of these sessions was conducted in mountain and cliff side rapelling techniques. Training consisted in demonstrations and practical exercise in use of hasty rappel, swiss seat and the body (hip - shoulder) rappel. Primary instructor for this session was SSgt. William J. Griffin.

Personnel of the company were also given a class in expedient river crossing techniques. After construction of the two rope expedient bridge, the troopers watched their new commander Capt. Pope make a negotiation of the bridge prior to its traverse by the remainder of the company.

Following this, the "Black Knight" troopers were given training on the construction of the expedient "commando raft" and later put this into practice. All individuals helped in the construction of these rafts and later crossed the Upatoi Creek using them.

This training was observed by both the 2nd Brigade commander Col. William R. Lynch and the battalion commander Lt. Col. Frederic Ackerson who both commented favorably upon the conduct of the training and its applicability within the insive training now being conducted by the 1st Cavalry Division.

Acting 'Top Sergeant' Earns Commendation

Roy L. Flosi, the acting first sergeant of the former 11th Air Assault Division's Headquarters Company, was awarded the Army Commendation Medal and performed a "first", in what is now adopted as a 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) tradition yesterday.

Sergeant Flosi, although a sergeant first class in rank, was honored for his performance as acting first sergeant of the headquarters unit by Col. George S. Beatty, 1st Cavalry Division Chief of Staff.

The awards ceremony, held at the division headquarters building, was highlighted by the cutting of a cake with the Air Cavalry Division's own special cake knife. The knife, fashioned from a helicopter tail rotor blade, has previously been wielded only by senior division officers on special occasions.

Platoon Sergeant Flosi was the first enlisted man to be accorded the honor of using the unique "knife."

While the cake was served, senior noncommissioned officers of Sgt. Flosi's unit recounted his "superb" organization of platoon to provide combat security to the headquarters outfit.

Sgt. Flosi announced at the ceremony that he will leave soon for a post with 7th Army G-3 (operations) in Germany.

15th Supply and Service Battalion

Cav's Busiest Outfit; Unique to Army

BY RAY PAQUETTE

All of the services performed by the 15th Supply and Service Battalion are vital to the 1st Cavalry Division, for without them gasless aircraft would be stranded, wheels would shriek for lack of grease, weapons would remain silent and thousands of empty stomachs would grow in a vast crescendo of unsatisfied hunger.

By far the busiest organization in the 1st Cavlary Division, the 15th Supply and Service Battalion is also the only one of its kind in the U. S. Army.

The unit was activated in February 1963 as the 408th Supply and Service Company and its multiple supply and service missions soon made it apparent that a battalion size organization was needed to perform the myriad tasks required to support the Air Assault Division.

Redesignated the 15th Supply and Service Battalion, 1st Cavalry Division on 1 July 1965, this organization is now set up for continuous operation.

Much of the essential supplying, procuring and servicing for the Cav division is the 15th's business.

Within its organization are contained four supply platoons, the division Supply Office, the division Petroleum Oil and Lubricants Office, the division Ammunition Office, the division Parachute Office, an Aerial Equipment Support Company, a Truck platoon, and a Cargo Handling Platoon.

During field operation this battalion spreads over a vast acreage including a large airstrip, several heliports, a huge gas dump, an ammunition storage area, and many other separate storage areas containing everything from the food for the division to the spare maps needed for divisional operations.

Many of the 15th Supply and Service Battalion personnel accompany divisional combat units to areas well forward of the division base and from forward positions insure that the fighting troops are well supplied with necessities to sustain combat operations.

The 15th's table of organization was recently augmented when an Aerial Equipment Support Company was added. The former 16th AES Detachment became a company with the divisional redesignation.

Members of this unit are skilled specialists in the parachute packing and aerial delivery trade. Their careful work assures that supplies and equipment dropped from the air to troops on the ground arrives in an undamaged condition ready for instant use.

All highly qualified parachutists, these men are responsible for packing the chutes used by the airborne elements of the division. They have extreme confidence in their work and most of them make weekly parachute jumps to display this confidence.

Highest Peace-Time Award Presented to Rescue Squadman

Sixteen members of the 37th Air Transport Battalion were honored at a retreat and awards ceremony held on June 29 by the battalion.

SP4 John Pappageorge, of the 187th TAC, was presented our nation's highest peacetime award the Soldiers Medal by Maj. William M. Jenkins. SP4 Pappageorge was cited for heroism on June 24 1964 near Ridgeway, S.C. when he rescued injured personnel from a burning aircraft with complete disregard for his own safety.

Capt. Charles W. Nix, 187th TAC, was presented the Air Medal with the First through Fourth Oak Leaf Clusters for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight in Vietnam. Capt. Nix also received the Army Commendation Medal for exceptionally meritorious service in Vietnam.

Capt. Julian T. Caraballo and CWO Ralph M. Fitch, of the 187th TAC, received the Air Medal and CWO Robert P. Sword, 17th Aviation Company, received the 6th Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight as crew members of a CV-2B Caribou on a ferry flight from the United States to Saigon, Vietnam.

Sp5 Leonard B Magolenes, 187th TAC, received the Air Medal and Sp4 Charles N. Gogron, HHC, 37th ATB, received the Air Medal with the First through Eighth Oak Lead Clusters for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight in Vietnam.

Receiving Oak Leaf Clusters to the Air Medal for their meritorious service in Vietnam were Capt. Charles S. Perrone, 1st Aviation Company, Eighth through Seventeenth Oak Leaf Clusters: Capt. Donald C. Brewer, 187th TAC, Fourteenth through Eighteenth Oak Leaf Clusters; Capt. Norman L. Alley, 1st Aviation Company, Third through Sixth Oak Leaf Clusters; and SP5 Douglas M. Lee, 187th TAC, First Oak Leaf Cluster.

The Army Commendation Medal was presented to Capt. Francis D. Schwartz, 187th TAC; 1st Lt. John J. Springer, 187th TAC; CWO Kenneth G. Donley, 188th TAC; and SP5 Jerry W. Jacobs, 187th TAC, for their exceptionally meritorious service in the Republic of Vietnam.

Also honored was SP5 Harvey L. Nolen who received the Army Commendation Medal for performance of meritorious service on the occasion of his retirement.

Armed Hueys To Stewart For Gunnery

Last Saturday afternoon the newly designated 131st Aerial Weapons Company took off for Fort Stewart, Ga., to receive gunnery practice in the armed UH1B helicopters.

Still known as the "Tigers" of the 227th Assault Helicopter Battalion the old "Delta Company, aviators along with the newly assigned aviators will participate in required quarterly range firing from July 11 through July 14.

Capt. James M. Stamper, will be director of operations while at Fort Stewart.

5th Cav Fires New M-16 Rifle

Among the recent training exercises in which the 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry has participated, Saturday, July 10th, was perhaps the most interesting and unique for it was the first time the men of the battalion had ever handled their newly assigned M-16 rifles.

The battalion fired first at Brinson Range where zero and familiarization firing was accomplished.

The subsequent exercise at Marten's Range consisted of a timed exercise to locate pop up type targets at varying distances and place effective fire upon them from the foxhole and unsupported positions.

Alpha and Headquarters Clash In Slow-Pitch Softball Action

July 7 found the 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry Headquarters and Company A paired off for continuation of the slow - pitch softball competition with the teams tieing four to four.

McDonald pitched the seven innings for Headquarters, allowing five hits. Hernandez allowed four hits as Alpha's pitcher.

Alpha Company pulled ahead in the second on three runs by Johnson, Clark and Barker. Headquarters first run came in the third as McDonald slammed a home run into right field.

Headquarters picked up three runs in the fifth as Gilmore, Julio and Roberts scored.

Moore provided Alpha's tieing run in the seventh when he came home on a hit by Tate.

Charlie Company bested Company D five to four in the second game.

Delta's pitchers Bowers and Micklon gave up eight hits to the opponents.

Muras' first inning score and another in the third, plus two by White and Ratley accounted for Delta's four scores.

Cottman, Standafer, Buchanan and Christian brought home scores in the fourth, while Pilson's run in the fifth gave Charlie Company their edge.

Cottman, Charlie's pitcher, gave up nine hits.

REENLISTMENT VAN'S NEW LOOK
Sgt. Maj. Cook, Sgt. Prolago and Col. Roberts Hang the Sign

1st Brigade Reenlistment Van Takes on New 1st Cavalry Look

The 1st Airborne Brigade's mobile reenlistment van took on a "new look" this week as the old 11th Air Assault Division signs and emblems were replaced by 1st Cavalry Division signs and insignia.

Making the change last Wednesday was Brigade Commander, Col. E. B. Roberts and SSgt. Louis L. F. Prolago, Career Counselor who purchased and remodeled the vehicle over a year ago for the express purpose of providing a convenience to career personnel.

The van is a carryall van converted into a mobile reenlistment office, complete with plush seats, desk, refrigerator and stove, and even has a telephone which can be plugged into a regular commercial line.

In constant use both in and out of the field, Prolago serves iced tea in the summer and hot coffee in the winter, and provides first class comfort for potential reenlistees.

Although commonly seen during field training exercises, the van had its biggest workout during AIR ASSAULT II in the Carolinas, where Prolago interviewed numerous soldiers, and reenlisted nineteen troopers, including former 1st Brigade Sgt. Maj. Joe Haluski.

During the mammoth exercise, numerous trips were made to Fort Jackson, S. C. and Fort Gordon, Ga. as potential reenlistees were transported to and from the two installations.

This hard driving reenlistment program has kept the 1st Brigade right on top in retraining high caliber personnel, as was evidenced early this year when the 1st Brigade took permanent possession of the division's reenlistment trophy for having the highest personnel retention rate of any major organization in the division in 1964.

Paratroopers Make Day and Night Jumps

More than a thousand parachute jumps were made in the spearhead 1st Airborne Brigade last week, during a two-day period of day and night parachute operations.

Utilizing both Lee and Fryar Drop Zone, the series of airborne operations, which had been postponed earlier in the week, began Thursday afternoon on Lee Drop Zone among intermittent rain squalls, and continued through Thursday night and Friday.

Leading the night drop Wednesday evening as a jumpmaster for the 1st Brigade Headquarters was the organization's number one enlisted man, Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook who was making his first jump since rejoining the 1st Brigade.

The airborne operations resumed again Friday afternoon and during the afternoon and evening the remainder of the paratroopers, many of which were making their first drop after refresher training last week, were able to make their proficiency jumps.

Hampered by rain and high winds early in the week, all jumps were rescheduled and executed in the two day period without incident, with a total of twenty - two sorties being flown by C-130 "Hercules" air transports.

Participating in the operations were paratroopers of the 1st Airborne Brigade Headquarters, 1st and 2nd Battalions, 8th Cavalry and the 1st Battalion, 12th Cavalry.

Jaros Pitches Aviation Group To 4-0 Victory

Wally Jaros, Headquarters, 11th Aviation Group pitched a no-hitter recently and brought his softball team to a 4-0 victory over the Special Troops team.

Jaros faced the minimum number of batters in the seven inning game, while striking out fourteen of the opponents. Only one man reached first base and was forced out an a double play.

Jaros led in hits for the game, receiving a one-run homer and a two-run double. Additional hitting came from Cliff Long's one-run double.

This was the second victory in a row for the Aviation Group and the third win of the season against five losses.

Chaplain Promoted

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Charles R. Nichols was promoted to his present grade by Lt. Col. Lloyd J. Piccou, the Division Artillery executive officer recently.

War-Time Cavalryman Returns

CAVALRY VETERAN RETURNS TO UNIT
CWO Bing Presents Insignia

A veteran war-time Cavalryman of 25 years ago returned to his former unit last week to participate in the first retreat ceremony of the newly designated Air Cavalry unit.

CWO James E. Bing, former Cavalryman and now adjutant of the 1st Bn., USAIC Troop Command, returned to the unit with which he served in combat and presented a memento of the past to the 9th Cavalry Sky Troopers.

A pair of crossed saber Cavalry collar insignia which CWO Bing wore during his service with the 9th Cavalry was presented to Maj. Don Radcliff, executive officer of the newly redesignated Cavalry squadron.

The treasured momento was presented to commemorate the historical past of the 9th Cavalry Squadron with the present and future of this proud unit.

Maj. Eberhardt Assumes Executive Officer Duties

The 1st Bn., 8th Cavalry recently received a new executive officer. Maj. Guy Eberhardt came to the "Mustang" battalion from the job of S-4 at the 1st Air Assault Brigade. He replaces Maj. Robert Muldrow, who has been with the unit since late 1963.

Maj. Eberhardt, originally from St. Louis, Mo., joined the Army in 1949 and went through OCS at Ft. Riley, Kan.

In 1950 he served as platoon leader with the 19th Infantry in the Korean conflict. For three years he served with the 10th Mountain Division's Leadership School at Ft. Riley. After a tour in Germany from 1953 to 1956, he returned to the States as an instructor at the Transportation School, Ft. Eustis, Va. and then received another overseas assignment in Turkey from 1961 to 1963.

In 1963 Maj. Eberhardt joined the 11th Air Assault Division as S-4 officer at 1st Brigade Headquarters. He holds the CIB, Parachutist Badge, Army Commendation Medal, and the Purple Heart.

This year he attended the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Levenworth, Kan., graduating in May 1965.

229th Task Force Aids Drought Stricken Area

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — In keeping with the people to people program the Company A 229th Assault Helicopter Bn Task Force recently performed a vital timesaving service.

A recent drought had stricken 860,000 acres of vitally needed sugar fields in the troubled Dominican Republic.

A survey of the stricken area was desperately needed to see how much damage had been done and what corrective actions would be required.

However a conventional ground survey would take well over two weeks to complete. This problem was overcome by using a Task Force Helicopter piloted by WO Gayle L. Bishop.

The mission was to fly a Dominican survey party over the area at "nap of the earth" level and survey by air.

Plaque Goes To Brigades Best Mess

Charlie Company 1st Bn., 12th Cavalry battalion took the 1st Brigade's monthly "Best Mess Award" last Monday, it was announced by Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook.

This was the second such award for the Company C mess hall, managed by Sgt. Daymon F. Horn, who took the first such award in the brigade last January right after the program started.

The award consists of a handsome outdoor sign, and a "Best Mess" plaque for indoor display, both of which are inscribed with the unit designation and the month for which the award is made.

A veteran of ten years in the food service business, Sgt. Horn has served as a cook since 1955, and a mess sergeant since 1959, and attended the food service school at Fort Riley, Kan., in 1957.

Sgt. Horn passed credit for the win on to his cooks.

8th Cavalry Has 'Bang-Up Time' During Classes on Booby Traps

An extensive course on land mines and booby traps launched this week's combat training Monday for the 1st Bn, 8th Airborne Cavalry, known as the Mustangs.

The comprehensive course, covering two hours of instruction and two hours of practical work, was attended by the entire battalion Monday afternoon, with all personnel participating in the laying of mines and placing of booby traps, and disarming and removal.

Providing the instruction was Company A, with SSgt. Norman Soltow and Sgt. Richard Radertscaer serving as principle instructors and supervising the practifal portion, which required all of the men to work with the mines and traps.

The unit were broken down into two - man groups and assigned to a lane supervised by an NCO. Each team was given a device simulating a booby trap with an actual percussion cap.

Teams were then required to set the traps, after which they were inspected by the graders. Each team was then required to move to another teams area, disarm and remove the trap. Needless to say, many percussion caps were exploded during the disarming process.

Combat Support Outfit Greets New Commander

Capt. Billy L. Whorton recently took over command of Delta Company, 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry. Delta Company is the combat support of the Air Cavalry battalion and provides reconnaissance, anti - tank and heavy mortar support to the battalion in addition to acting as the alternate battalion CP in event of emergency.

A native of Kings River, Ark., Capt. Whorton has a military career that stretches back some eleven years and includes service as a military policeman and motor sergeant in Germany, duty in Korea and varied stateside assignments. He obtained his commission through the Officer Candidate School and is a graduate of the University of Omaha.

No stranger to the arts of company commandership, Capt. Whorton had commanded Charlie Company of the old "Rock of the Marne" battalion where he had compiled a division record of superiors in every area inspected during the AGI

Check and Medal Presented

Freedom Foundation Cites Letter Writer

A 1st Airborne Brigade trooper, Sp4 Ashland F. Burchwell of the 2nd Bn, 8th Cavalry received a National Freedom Foundation Award last Thursday afternoon.

Burchwell received a check for $100 and the George Washington Medal from Maj. Anthony Carroll, battalion executive officer, during an informal ceremony at the 2nd Bn, 8th Airborne Cavalry headquarters.

The check and honor medal from the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge, came as the result of the military letter contest which Burchwell entered last March.

The letter, titled "My Vote-Freedom's Privilege" placed in the top fifty of the military letter category. Several thousand such letters were received from servicemen around the world.

Calling Dallas, Tex., home, the 24-year-old Sky Trooper enlisted in the Army in June, 1958 immediately upon graduating from Pershing High School in Detroit, Mich.

Sp4 Burchwell is currently assigned to the battalion Headquarters Company where he serves as company clerk. His last assignment was in Germany with Company B of the 1st Battle Group, 19th Infantry.

CBN Training Combined In 1st Brigade Schedule

The first phase of Chemical, Biological and Nuclear Warfare was added to 1st Airborne Brigade combat-training last week as hundreds of troopers studied toxic agents and preventive actions, with a practical workout in the gas chamber at Clark Field's chemical building.

Directly supervised by the 1st Brigade Chemical Section directed by Maj. Willis Rosning, the program qualified personnel of the 1st Bn, 8th Airborne Cavalry, and the 1st Bn, 12th Airborne Cavalry last Monday, while the 2nd Bn, 8th Airborne Cavalry went through the course yesterday.

Preceeding the actual work in the gas chamber was a two - hour orientation class on toxic agents, adjustment and theory of the new protective mask and working of the flutter valve, with each mask inspected for proper fitting and operation.

Following the orientation class, each unit proceeded into the chamber where they were required to unmask for brief periods, providing name, rank and serial number, in order to experience the effects of exposure to gas.

Particularly impressive was the strong CS Gas, which was used during the practical phase, bringing tears and nausea and a real appreciation for the protective mask.

Key representatives from each battalion participating was SSgt. James H. Carpenter of the 1st Bn., 12th Airborne Cavalry, SSgt. Chrisopher Braun of the 1st Bn, 8th Airborne Cavalary and SSgt. Robert Nicholson of the 2nd Bn, 8th Airborne Cavalry.

Also taking the training along with the 1st Brigade units were personnel of Company A, 8th Airborne Engineers and other elements from the division providing direct support to the 1st Airborne Brigade.

8th Cav Takes Hard Training

The 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry, is going through a double load of training.

The battalion has been assigned to the 1st Brigade and will become an airborne unit; last week a large number of airborne recruits began to arrive in the battalion and a group of experienced NCO's are expected to come from the 82nd and the 101st Airborne Divisions. In addition to these new men, the battalion, as Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Mertel, the new battalion commander, said, "is very lucky to count with such a large number (over 250) of the old officers and enlisted men of the battalion that volunteered to go to airborne school and thus remain with their unit."

While these volunteers have just completed the three week jump school, the new men and the old hands, who are already qualified, are training with the cargo nets under the direction of instructors of 1st Brigade, and this week the battalion members will also become familiarized with their new weapon, the M-16 rifle.

At the present they are getting acquainted with the mechanics of the M-16 but later in the week they will begin to fire for familiarization and then for qualification.

Officers Retain 'Nuclear Prefix'

Three officers of Battery C 2nd Bn. Aerial Rocket) 20th Artillery returned to the unit recently after completing a one week refresher course on nuclear weapons employment.

The classes held on main post were attended by Capt's Donald L. Becker, Richard F. Washburn and Francisco Trevino, Jr.

Successful completion of the course verifies the prefix five of the MOS for another two years.

187th SOM

Sp4 Rhodlee A. Braa, Flight Dispatcher for the 187th T.A.C. was recently selected 10th Air Transport Brigade Soldier of the Month for June.

Gen. Chiles Given Command Of 2nd Division Once Again

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles will leave the U. S. Aug. 11 to once again take command of the 2nd Infantry Division now in Korea.

Gen. Chiles was slated to become the Chief of Staff of Third U. S. Army until he received a phone call from General Harold K. Johnson, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, asking if he would "like to take over his division again."

This will be the fourth time that Gen. Chiles has held a major command position in the division. He has spent a total of nine years with the division and has held every rank in the division except second lieutenant and brigadier general.

He first joined the Indianhead Division at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, in 1941 and served with it through the landings at Normandy and the march through Germany until it returned to the United States and was stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington. He served in five campaigns with the 2nd Division in Europe during the war.

Gen. Chiles joined the division for the second time in 1951 during the Korean War. He served as regimental commander of the 23rd Regi-

$4.5 Million Lawson Airfield Expansion Project Underway

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Chief of Staff to Speak To Legion Here Tonight

Gen Harold K. Johnson, the Army's chief of staff, is scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning this evening to speak at the Georgia State American Legion convention in Columbus.

Gen. Johnson will address an 8 p.m. dinner tonight at the Ralston Hotel honoring outgoing state commander Frank Kelly of Savannah and Auxiliary president, Mrs. W. T. Parkman of Tifton.

The chief of staff is slated to leave from Lawson Army Airfield at 11:50 a.m. tomorrow.

Other military personnel expected to attend the dinner are Maj. Gen. George V. Underwood Jr., Army chief of information; Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commanding general of The Infantry Center; and Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Fort Benning personnel, equipment and weapons will be in the annual American Legion parade at 5:30 p.m. Saturday. The parade, which begins at Third Ave and 12th St., will have an honor and color guard furnished by Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade; The Infantry Center Band; and various motorized displays of equipment and weapons.

Mounted elements with drivers will include a quarter - ton commander vehicle, Davy Crockett missile, 105-mm howitzer, 155-mm howitzer, 8-inch howitzer, Honest John rocket, Little John rocket and 106-mm recoilless rifle mounted.

It is estimated that over 450 persons, along with the Legion color guards, Drum and Bugle Corps, and fire fighting equipment displays from Atlanta, will participate in the parade.

The best American Legion drill team will be selected and will give an exhibition at Golden Park at 6:30 p.m.

According to a Legion spokesman, over 3,000 Legion members will attend the convention. They represent 13 districts of two to six posts each.

The convention officially closes Sunday (July 25) at 1 p.m.

Gen Truman Takes Over Reins of Third US Army

Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman assumed command of the Third US Army at an Honor Guard ceremony with a 15-gun salute at Hedekin Field, Fort McPherson, Ga. Thursday, July 15.

Gen. Truman, who served as chief of staff and deputy commanding general of Third Army from 1953 to 1955, returns to Fort McPherson from Stuttgart, Germany. He has commanded the VII US Army Corps for the past two years.

He succeeds Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich as commanding general of the Third Army, which has some 160,000 troops stationed at military installations throughout its seven-state area.

As VII Corps commander, Gen. Truman directed the maneuvers and activities of the 3rd and 24th Infantry Divisions and the 4th Armored Division. These divisions are parts of the Seventh US Army, considered to be one of the most powerful ground fighting forces the United States has ever fielded in peacetime.

NEW COMMANDER
Louis W. Truman

Gen. Truman, a native of Kansas City, Mo., is a 1932 graduate of the US Military Academy and was graduated from the National War College in 1949.

Upon his promotion to lieutenant general in 1962, he assumed the dual posts of deputy commanding general for Reserve Forces, Headquarters, U.S. Continental Army Command (USCONARC), Fort Monroe, Va. and commander, Joint Task Force

Gen York Breaks Ground; Plan Normal Operations

A four and a half million dollar program to expand the facilities at Lawson Army Airfield got underway yesterday when Fort Benning's commander, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, officially broke the ground.

CONARC COMMANDER, Gen. Paul L. Freeman is visiting the 1st Cavalry Division today for an orientation visit. He is scheduled to depart Fort Benning this evening. See story page 19. (Sketch by Thomas A. Moore)

The expansion contract was awarded to the Deep South Construction Company of Montgomery, Ala., and has a completion date of December 10, 1966.

Although the project is extensive, officials said the work is being planned so it will not interfere with the Lawson Field operations.

Primary necessity for the new project is to permit Lawson Field to accommodate the new Air Force C-141, medium cargo and transport plane.

The work now underway at Lawson Field will permit Fort Benning to provide landing facilities for any aircraft needed by the Army in the foreseeable future.

The new project provides for strengthening the existing primary runways, taxiways, and aprons, and extension of the primary runway and taxiway 2,000 feet to the southeast.

Also included in the contract is a new nine - story steel and masonry flight control tower and a new 12,000 square - foot operations building, new field and approach lighting, and installation of an Instrument Landing System.

Lawson is presently the busiest airfield of its kind in the world according to Lawson flight officials.

The new expansion will make it one of the largest in the world, the officials said.

It also ranks as the 8th busiest airfield in the United States along with such behemoths as Kennedy International and La Guardia in New York.

Lovvorn, assigned to the school's Communications-Electronics Department, was presented $60 and a letter of appreciation by Gen. Forsythe.

President Okays Medal For Service in Viet Nam

Washington (AFPS) — President Johnson has signed an Executive Order authorizing a Viet Nam Service Medal for members of the United States armed forces who served in that Southeast Asian country after July 3 of this year.

Upon application, the new medal may also be awarded in lieu of the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal awarded to qualified individuals for duty in the Republic of Viet Nam between July 1, 1958 and July 4, 1965. However, no person may be awarded both medals for duty in RVN.

Also, no person is entitled to more than one award of the Viet Nam Service Medal.

In his executive order, President Johnson explains that the Viet Nam Service Medal shall be awarded to members of the armed forces who serve in Viet Nam or contiguous waters or air space, as defined by regulations to be prescribed by the military departments and approved by the Secretary of Defense.

Designs for the Viet Nam Service Medal and ribbon have been prepared by the Army's Institute of Heraldry and are awaiting approval.

When the Coast Guard is not operating as a service in the Navy, regulations will be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, no longer authorized for service in RVN, is awarded in recognition of service either in a United States military operation; an operation in support of the United Nation; or operations of assistance to friendly foreign nations, such as the Republic of Viet Nam.

Other than for service in RVN, the expeditionary medal has been awarded for participation during specified periods in the Lebanon landings, the patrol of the Taiwan Straits and the defense of Quemoy and Matsu Islands, the Berlin Crisis in 1961, the Cuban blockade, the evacuation from the Congo, and current operations in the Dominican Republic.

Chiles

ment at that time. He took the 2nd Infantry Division Command in October of 1964.

The new commander of the 2nd was on leave when the word came that he would join the division for the fourth time and serve as its commander for the second time.

"I was most happy to accept this assignment," said Gen. Chiles.

The 2nd Infantry Division, which had reached a high state of readiness during long training and had supported the 11th Air Assault Divisions tests by loaning combat battalions, had its colors sent to Korea in exchange for those of the 1st Cavalry Division when the Army organized the new airmobile division commanded by Major General Harry W. O. Kinnard.

General Chiles will be greeted in Korea by his former sergeant major, Robert Brown, who went there to escort the division colors and became sergeant major of the division there.

Truman

ce Four. In February 1963, he was designated deputy commanding general, USCONARC, and remained commander of the task force.

Served in Karachi

From 1956 - 58 he served with the Military Assistance Advisory Group, Pakistan with headquarters in Karachi.

During the Korean War he commanded the 22nd Regiment, 40th Infantry Division and served as assistant division commander of the 2d Infantry Division in Korea.

Truman was stationed in Hawaii in 1941 during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. He went to Europe with the 84th Infantry Division in August 1944 as Division chief of staff.

In 1940 Gen.Truman returned to Fort Benning, Ga., where he had attended the Infantry School. Next followed an assignment with the 2nd Armored Division.

His decorations include the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Legion of Merit with cluster, the Bronze Star Medal with three clusters, the Army Commendation Medal with two clusters and the Combat Infantryman Badge with one star. He also has numerous campaign ribbons and decorations from foreign governments.

42nd Artillery Reassigned To 3rd Army

The 2nd Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery was recently redesignated the 2nd Missile Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery. The 42nd, formerly a key element of the 11th Air Assault Division Artillery, has been reassigned to Third Army and attached to the 197th Infantry Brigade.

At the present time, the 42nd Artillery has been reduced in strength from three firing batteries and one headquarters battery to one firing battery and a headquarters battery. The battalion has been laboring diligently retraining its personnel in conventional ground warfare, turning in excess equipment, and preparing for Technical Proficiency (Nuclear) Inspections and Annual Training Tests.

Anonymous Sergeant Sought

A Lanett, Ala. man is seeking the identity of a Fort Benning sergeant who performed an act of service to his wife when she fell on a sidewalk in Columbus.

According to a letter from Clyde Blakely of Lanett, a sergeant who identified himself only as being associated with an "Army Safety Squad" at Fort Benning, carried the woman into a drug store after her fall, Wednesday, April 18, 1965.

Blakely is trying to locate the sergeant and has appealed to THE BAYONET to help.

Any information concerning the sergeant, his present whereabouts or his identity may be sent to the Editor, THE BAYONET, Fort Benning, Ga. or to Mr. Clyde Blakely, Post Office Box 345, Lanett, Ala.

Sp5 Byron Wins $100 in Contest For Freedom Letter

A member of Fort Benning's Lawson Army Air Command was awarded $100 and a George Washington statuette recently for a letter written in connection with the Freedom Foundation's 1964 Freedom Letter Contest.

William D. Byron, a senior flight simulator operator, was presented the award for his letter "My Vote: Freedom's Privilege." The letter won second place in the annual contest for service members on active duty. There were over 5,000 participants in Byron's category.

Col. W. M. Zimmerman, commander of Lawson Army Air Command, presented the awards.

State Flag Collection Given to 1st Cavalry

An almost complete collection of state flags was handed over to the 1st Cavalry Division last week to be flown during military reviews and other ceremonies.

Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, commander of the 2nd Infantry Division before it was merged with the 11th Air Assault Division, relinquished the 46 flags he had collected while serving here.

A spokesman for the general said that he thought the 1st Cavalry should have the flags since the division would be having numerous functions and was newly activated at Fort Benning.

Gen. Chiles started collecting the flags and was hoping for a complete set, all 50, to be flown on Marne Field during military ceremonies.

Words and Their Use

Words are more powerful than bombs. They give expression and form to ideas and then ideas have consequences.

Thoughts, good and bad, struggle for a place under the sun. We are told that it was with words that God created the heavens and earth.

"Let there be light and there was light."

And again, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." Maybe it has been from God that men have learned to express themselves and to communicate their thoughts to one another.

Assuredly, the vocabulary a man uses speaks for the kind of man he is. It shows the measure of his faith or his despair, his wisdom or his befuddlement, his inner resources or his bankruptcy.

Words, oral or signaled, seem transient and unstable, yet it is those words that tell the whole story of mankind: his hopes, his dreams, victories, his defeats, his joys and his plaguing doubts.

James, the brother of our Lord, put it aptly when he wrote, "By your words are you justified and by your words are you condemned. With words we speak of love's tender meaning, we address ourselves to God, or we curse those who taunt us."

It would seem that the very sounds we mutter cast their continuing reverberations across the centuries. Unlike stone walls or iron girders words have a tensile strength that defies all measure.

The words of Moses, thundering from Sinai, remain as convincing today as when he repeated from God, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain. . ."

Untarnished and unaffected by rust, the materials used by Moses in wielding a motley group of slaves into a conquering nation have a capacity today to put stamina into our backbones, to give integrity and moral fiber to our character.

Kingdoms rise and fall, nations come and go, but words live on to reward or rebuke, to bless or to blame. At times we wish that some of our words could be forgotten. We say things for which we are later ashamed—shoddy things.

At other times we want all our words remembered, for we have spoken them in all earnestness. "I give my word," we declare, "and my word is my bond." In fact it is that sort of thing that makes us realize that the Bible is well named, for it is frequently called God's word.

And from this book comes, "Do your best to present yourselves to God as one approved, a workman who has no need to be ashamed, rightly handling the word of truth." Avoid such godless chatter, for it will lead people into to more and more ungodliness, and their talk will eat its way like gangrene.

Defense Anniversary

Eighteen years ago July 26, President Harry S. Truman signed the National Security Act of 1947. His signature marked the beginning of a new era in the defense of the nation.

The National Security Act created an organization called the National Military Establishment. This was the forerunner of today's Department of Defense.

The legislation established a Secretary of Defense, who was to be primarily a coordinator, developing general policies for three Executive Departments — the Army, Navy and Air Force. The secretary was authorized three special assistants and the services of three well - established agencies — the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board.

The first Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, found his powers to be insufficient for the task confronting him. In 1949, he recommended substantial changes, many of which were incorporated into the 1949 Amendments to the National Security Act.

The amendments stressed that the Secretary of Defense was to be the principal assistant to the President in matters of Defense. The Army, Navy and Air Force lost their executive status and became military departments within the single Executive Department of Defense. The amendments also authorized a chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, increased the size of the Joint Staff and set up uniform budgetary and fiscal procedures for the defense establishment.

Further reorganizations in 1953 and 1958 gave the Secretary of Defense even greater flexibility. A new chain of command was established, running directly from the President and the Secretary of Defense through the Joint Chiefs of Staff to the unified and specified commanders, who were given full operational command over the forces assigned to them. This was a departure from the former system under which orders went to the military departments before reaching the unified and specified commands.

Many other steps were taken through the years to streamline and improve the defense establishment. Among these were the creation of the Defense Communication Agency, the Defense Supply Agency and the director of Defense Research and Engineering.

Thus, from a simple "coordinating" and policy - making position, the Department of Defense has evolved through the years into the strongest and most efficient instrument of national defense the world has ever known. (AFPS)

Army Relief Society

Chance for College

WASHINGTON (ANF) — A good example of the Army taking care of its own is found in the work done by the Education Committee of the Army Relief Society.

True to its pledge to provide assistance for widows and orphans of Regular Army officers and enlisted men, the Society recognizes the orphans' educational needs through a scholarship and special grant program.

Deriving its support from endowments, gifts and the allocation of 10 per cent of the donations made to the Army Emergency Relief, the Society, through its Education Committee, awarded 62 scholarships and grants during a one-year period.

The awards made during the 12-month period ending March 31, 1965 varied in amounts from $150 to $2050. Two students received more than $2000, 23 had scholarships ranging from $1000 to $1950, and the balance averaged over $500 each.

The courses of study undertaken by the students cover the gamut from teaching, medicine, law and engineering to post graduate work for advanced degrees. Although the normal prerequisites include the provisions that the applicant be unmarried and under 21, exceptions to the age requirement have been made. As of March 31, a brother and sister, both over 25, were working and receiving Education Committee aid in the advancement of their education at the same time. In another case, a young Army widow with a small child was granted help in obtaining a college education so that she could support herself and her child.

The excellent work and the determination to do well in all aspects of college life is the students' way of saying thank you for the faith placed in them by the Army Relief Society.

The Judge Says . . .

One of the most frequent and serious mistakes a soldier can make when financing a car is to fail to inquire into the type of insurance the finance company is including in his contract.

The finance company is not interested in protecting the borrower; it is only concerned with protecting the property on which it holds a lien. If the property is damaged or destroyed, its security is likewise damaged or destroyed. Therefore, it is always going to protect itself with adequate comprehensive (fire and theft) and collision insurance.

The thing for the individual soldier to remember is to protect his own interests. Make sure that the insurance in the finance contract affords some protection for the equity already paid into the cotract. Make sure there is the protection of liability coverage in case of a collision in which passengers are injured.

It should be noted that many states do not require mandatory liability insurance, and the finance company will not normally include such coverage in the insurance provisions of an auto finance contract. Therefore, it is essential to ask the finance company whether it has included liability coverage; and if not, it would be advisable to secure it.

In many cases, it is less expensive to obtain total insurance coverage (i.e. comprehensive, liability, collision) independent of the finance company. When acting independently of the finance company, always remember to name the finance company as a co-insured on the policy. If this isn't done, the company has the right to take out its own insurance to protect its interest.

The Soldiers Advocate Division of the Staff Judge Advocate's office is available to review your auto finance contracts and to advise you as to whether your insurance coverage adequately protects you.

Lawson Ladies Greet Newcomer to Benning

The wives of the officers of the Lawson Aviation Command recently gathered in the Normandy Room of the Main Officers Club for summer tea and coffee. Decorations consisted of an array of the beautiful fruits and vegetables that are now in season in Georgia.

Mrs. Ronald S. Briones served as hostess for the affair.

Mrs. William Zimmerman, wife of the LAC commanding officer, welcomed Mrs. Donald Atkinson to the group. Mrs. Atkinson is the wife of Lt. Col. Atkinson, who was recently assigned to the Command.

Mrs. Donald Ellerthrope and Mrs. Max Marks were guests for the affair.

A silver tray was given to Mrs. Jimmy Conrad who will soon leave for Tacoma, Washington where she will live while her husband serves a tour of duty in Viet Nam.

Mrs. George A. Crowell volunteered to help welcome the newly arrived wives of the Command to Fort Benning.

Post Housewife Will Describe Life in Saigon

A Fort Benning housewife who was evacuated from Viet Nam in February will discuss "Life in Saigon" at a meeting of The Infantry Center Women-of-the-Chapel at 10 a.m. on July 28 in the Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2605.

Mrs Clyde O. Johnson, wife of MSgt. Johnson of Kansas City, Mo., and her children spent two years in Saigon before the evacuation earlier in this year. Sgt. Johnson served in Viet Nam three years.

Hostesses at the meeting will be Mrs. B. R. Lord of Clarksville, Tenn. and Mrs. B. S. Silver of Kansas City.

Protestant women of the post are invited.

CDCIA Women Welcome Mrs. Hooper

A welcoming tea for Mrs. Philip L. Hooper, wife of Col. Hooper, new commander of the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency at Fort Benning, was held recently at the home of Mrs. William T. Gordon.

Heading the list of ladies who attended the tea was Mrs. George L. Forsythe, wife of Brig Gen. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Womanhood Skit To Be Presented At PWOC Dinner

A skit on womanhood will be presented at a dinner meeting of the Evening Protestant Women-of-the-Chapel (PWOC) at 7 a.m. on July 26 at Fort Benning's Religious Education Center, Bldg. 2605.

Directed by Mrs. C. R. Nichols of El Paso, Texas, the skit will be based upon the book "The Woman Beautiful," by Ruth Youngdahl Nelson.

The meeting will be sponsored by The Infantry Center PWOC.

Working women and others who cannot attend daytime PWOC meetings are invited. It is not necessary to make reservations.

Daughters of U.S. Army Seeking New Members

The Fort Benning Chapter of the Daughters of the United States Army (DUSA) is currently seeking members in the Fort Benning-Columbus area.

To be an active member of DUSA a lady must be the daughter or granddaughter of a commissioned officer in the regular Army. Associate (non-voting) membership is available to the daughters and granddaughters of National Guard and Reserve officers.

DUSA's purpose is to promote the social and educational life of Fort Benning and establish friendly relations with adjoining civilian communities, to preserve the traditions and ideals of the U. S. Army and to provide and maintain social contact among the daughters of Army officers.

All young women interested in becoming members of DUSA or those holding membership in other DUSA chapters are asked to call Mrs. Barbara Evans, 689-3603 or Mrs. Pat Sharp, 0989.

Prospective members may also attend DUSA's monthly luncheon on the first Tuesday of each month, 12:30 at the Main Officers Club.

Farewell Brunch Held by Ladies Of Airborne Dept.

The ladies of the Airborne Department feted Mrs. Vernon T. Mergler at a farewell brunch in the Anzio Room of the Main Officers' Club recently.

Centerpieces of garden flowers, arranged by Mrs. Herbert E. Sargent Jr. and Mrs. James M. Townsend, decorated small tables set with yellow cloths. Mrs. Mergler was presented with silver salt and pepper shakers as a farewell gift.

52nd Company 'Turns Blue' On York Field

After 18 weeks the officer candidates of 52nd Company, 5th Student Battalion (OC), The Student Brigade, attained Senior Status at a recent review held at York Field.

Reviewing officer for the "Blue Day" ceremony was Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of the Infantry School.

"Blue Day" is so named because the candidates are now authorized to wear Infantry blue shoulder tabs and helmet liners. At this stage of their training, while they do not as yet have officer privileges, they do command the same respect from junior candidates as is due a commissioned officer.

A general order which proclaimed the 52nd a Senior Company highlighted the ceremony as Gen. Forsythe attached an Infantry blue Senior Status Ribbon to the company guidon.

The ceremony, marking the beginning of the final phase of the 23-week course, is second only to graduation.

State Flags Fly In Mekong Delta

VINH LONG, RVN (AFPS) — To an American serviceman stationed thousands of miles from home, a symbol, letter or photograph from those he loves means a great deal.

In the remote outpost here, deep in the Mekong Delta, symbolic flags give members of the 114th Aviation Company a home-like touch.

The camp has only one street: the "Boulevard of the United States." Two rows of poles along the street proudly fly flags of each of the 50 states.

It all began when the unit decided to bring a little bit of America to the Republic of Viet Nam. Letters were written to each state governor. Their request was simple: "Please send us a state flag which we shall fly over our post here."

202nd Ladies Hold July Luncheon For 228th

The ladies of the 202nd Assault Support Helicopter Company were hostesses to the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion officers wives for their July luncheon.

The luncheon was held in the Supper Club amid a setting of articles from Hong Kong. Display tables showed beautiful linens, jewelry, water color prints and silk brocade materials.

On the luncheon tables colorful paper umbrellas added to the atmosphere. The centerpiece of fresh summer flowers was won by Mrs. Orlando Anzalotta.

Mrs. Benjamin S. Silver, wife of the battalion commander, presented farewell gifts to Mrs. Joseph Rutkowski, Mrs. Wayne Boles and Mrs. Robert Parker. The new ladies in attendance were each introduced and welcomed to the battalion.

Mrs. John Phillips showed color slides on Hong Kong and gave a very interesting commentary on different places she and Maj. Phillips visited there.

Takes Over Citadel

Gen. (Ret.) Mark W. Clark (R), recently retired from the presidency of The Citadel, discusses the college budget with his successor, Gen. (Ret.) Hugh P. Harris. Gen. Harris retired from the Army here at Fort Benning during colorful ceremonies in February.

Customs Law Has Barbs For Soldiers

Washington (AFPS) —Effective Oct. 1, 1965, a new law reducing customs duty exemptions will allow United States residents to bring back with them $100 in duty-free merchandise based on the fair retail value instead of the wholesale value, as provided in the previous law.

Elimination of the "to follow" privilege is part of the new law. Returning residents must bring their purchases with them if they are to be included in the exemption.

A reduction of the liquor allowance from one gallon to one quart per adult 21 years of age or older, and a reduction to $10 fair retail value of gifts which may be sent to the United States free of duty are included in the law.

Returning residents may bring back from the U. S. Virgin Islands, Guam and American Samoa, articles purchased there amounting to $200 fair retail value, not more than $100 of which may be acquired elsewhere than in those islands.

One gallon of liquor purchased in the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam and American Samoa by travelers 21 years of age or older and one quart acquired elsewhere than in those islands may be returned.

WAGS ON MAYFLOWER

NEW YORK (AFPS) — In the heritage of America, perhaps one of the oldest family lines belongs to a group who can't even brag about it.

That group is the dog family. The Pilgrims brought along two dogs on the Mayflower — a mastiff and a spaniel.

39th Transport Battalion Takes 3 Savings Awards

Three Army awards for 1965 participation in the "Star Spangled" Savings Bond Drive were this week awarded a post transportation unit.

The Secretary of the Army Savings Bond Award and two citations of the Third Army Savings Award were made to the 39th Transportation Battalion Wednesday.

Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy, post commander, presented the certificates to Capt. Roger T. Tancreti, Jr., executive officer of the battalion, in an awards ceremony in Col. Holton's office.

High Start

The 39th even started the drive with a high percentage of participation in the Savings Bond program. At the kick-off meeting for the 1965 campaign (April 29), the unit was presented a Minuteman Flag with One Star, also a second year award.

To be eligible for the awards, a unit must attain 90 per cent participation in the Savings Bond program. To receive the second award, the unit cannot drop below 90 per cent throughout the year.

Payroll Plan

The 39th was given the certificates as the result of 97.1 per cent participation in the Savings Bond payroll deduction plan and 97.83 per cent in Savings Bond purchases and soldier deposits.

Fiscal Year '65

DoD's Cost Cutting Exceeds Aim

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Without adverse effect on this country's military strength and combat readiness, the Defense Department saved $4.6 billion during FY65 — $2.1 billion more than originally projected — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has reported to the President.

If the present trend continues, DOD hopes to save $6.1 billion annually beginning in 1969, through the Cost Reduction Program, the report added.

In a memorandum accompanying the report, Secretary McNamara said, "Most encouraging for the future is the fact that more and more of the new opportunities for savings are being originated by the people responsible for carrying out the program — our military and civilian personnel and our major contractors."

Secretary McNamara explained that during the last four years the Defense Department has achieved:

— A 200 per cent increase in both the number and total megatonnage of nuclear weapons in the strategic alert forces.

— A 67 per cent increase in tactical nuclear weapons deployed in Western Europe.

— A 45 per cent increase in the number of combat-ready Army divisions.

— A 51 per cent increase in the number of tactical fighter squadrons.

— A 100 per cent increase in airlift capability.

— A 100 per cent increase in general ship construction and conversion to modernize the fleet.

— A 1,000 per cent increase in Special Forces trained to deal with counterinsurgency threats.

Much of the savings was achieved by exchange of excess stock between the services and through "value engineering," or specifying the standards of performance, reliability and durability of supplies required to accomplish the military mission.

2nd Div Association Ends 44th Reunion; Denver Chosen as Site for Next Meeting

By JOE TREASTER

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Old Soldiers of the 2nd (Indianhead) Division Association ended their 44th annual reunion at the Diplomat Hotel with the cornerstone layed for a scholarship fund and plans for a meeting next year in Denver.

Closing the three-day session last Saturday night, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, past commander of the active division, said the get-together had been "very spirited, very democratic."

He particularly praised Cecil C. Phelps, the Cincinnati attorney who served as head of the presidential nominating committee, for his conduct of the national elections Saturday morning.

The committee had named Charles Romick, a Dallas attorney, as their choice for president. But Irving Chayken, a Hammond, Ind., jeweler, was nominated from the floor.

Chayken had earlier gained nationwide attention when, in protest to the DeGaulle government, he returned to France the Croix de Guerre medal he had been awarded for heroism in 1918.

"I expected a pitched battle," said Gen. Chiles, "but Phelps handled the meeting beautifully and everything went smoothly."

When the votes were counted, Romick had won by a margin of more than 30, but Chayken was undismayed.

"I didn't really expect to win this year. It was my first time out and many of the people don't know me," he said, "but I'll be back. You can count on that. I'm willing to retire from my business and devote full time to this organization. That's how much I believe in it."

Before his climactic speech, in which he recalled a series of humorous incidents from his war - time service in Europe and Korea, Gen. Chiles presented the new association president a pair of checks totaling some $1600. The money, he said, was to be used as a keystone for the scholarship fund members had established earlier in reunion business meetings.

One check was from the 2nd Division Officers' Wives Club and the other came from the Warriors Club—the Active Army group that had been with the division at Fort Benning until the transfer of colors to Korea July 1.

"The wives' club was going to send down several glasses decorated with division crests," Gen. Chiles said, "but at their last meeting the glasses were offered for sale to the membership and they were all sold. The money was included in the scholarship fund donation."

Although the association membership set Denver as the site for next year's reunion they deferred from setting an exact date "until the Colorado organization has had more time to work out the details."

For most association members the reunion was three-days long, starting with registration Thursday morning.

But what reunion chairman Joseph Neuman considered a "surprising" 190 persons checked into the posh beachside hotel Wednesday. And a number of them began their reunion activity at a 6 p.m. early bird party, held aboard the Everglades excursion boat Jungle Queen as it motored down the Intercoastal Waterway.

President, until Saturday night, William G. Creech led a meeting of the national executive committee at noon Thursday to map the reunion's business course. Then came another boat ride. This time the reunion group toured Miami Beach's "Millionaire Row," which includes the home of prohibition-era mobster Al Capone. Showers canceled a scheduled watershow at the hotel pool Thursday night.

In business meetings Friday the scholarship fund was adopted and two by-laws were modified.

"There were," said President Creech, "no complications. Everyone understood what was to be done and that was it."

That afternoon a convoy of chartered buses took several members down Miami Beach's famous hotel strip, through the heart of Miami and then to either Villa Viscaya, the new county - owned ornate former estate of millionaire John Deering, or to the Sea Quartum, where performing porpoises dance on their tails, play ring toss and leap more than 15 feet into the air for a fresh fish snack.

Friday evening retired Marine Brig. Gen. Louis B. Rock delivered a stirring address at the annual memorial service, paying tribute to 2nd Division dead.

He explained what brought the old soldiers hundreds of miles to the reunions each year:

"You men faced death together. Many of you carry the scars of war on your bodies. In your minds, each of you can see a particular friend lying there in battle dress—dead. The image is as clear as it was 20 years ago. And that is what brings you here."

Among the guests at the reunion-ending banquet Saturday night were the mayor of Hollywood, a Dade County (Miami area) commissioner, and the state's attorney in Dade County.

Along with the special guests, past and present officials from the national and state organization addressed the group starting at about 7:30 p.m. It was nearly 10:30 before the featured speaker, Gen. Chiles, took the rostrum.

Scouts to Hold Monthly Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Fort Benning District, Chattahoochee Council, Boy Scouts of America will take place at 6:30 p.m., Sunday, July 25 at Camp McKenzie.

Scheduled to be held in conjunction with "Fort Benning Week at Camp McKenzie," the meeting will be preceded by an informal dinner at 6 p.m. After the brief business meeting is concluded, there will be a program before the Evening Council Camp Fire.

District organizers urged all members of the Fort Benning District Committee to attend the session.

Betts Named to Council Of AUSA National Group

Oscar L. Betts Jr., president of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA) and president of the AUSA Third Region, has been named an ex-officio member of the national Council of Trustees.

Betts, who has been active in AUSA work in the local chapter for a number of years, took over the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning gavel last January and will head the delegation to the AUSA Annual Meeting in Washington, D. C. this coming October.

The national headquarters has announced the annual meeting this year will be held October 25 thru 27. The Sheraton Park Hotel in Washington, D. C. will again be convention headquarters.

The three-day program will feature spokesmen of both governmental and military prominence to include the new Secretary of the Army, Stanley R. Resor, and the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson.

Again this year the Department of the Army will conduct a personnel conference for sergeants major and chief master sergeants at the hotel during the meeting. In conjunction with this meeting, the AUSA will hold a reception and buffet for the Army's top NCOs.

Army Doctors, Lawyers, Clergy To Celebrate 190th Anniversary

By IDA C. EVANS

Fort Benning's clergymen, doctors, and lawyers will commemorate the 190th anniversaries of the Chaplain Corps, Medical Corps and Judge Advocate General Corps next week.

Each of these three military groups of professional men date their origin from provisions made by the Continental Congress in 1775.

The Infantry Center Chaplain Section will stage an anniversary reception at 3 p.m., July 29 in Room, 260, Bldg. 35, to which officers, enlisted men and civilians of the post are invited.

Regular Duty Day

For personnel at Martin Army Hospital, the Medical Corps anniversary, which falls on July 27, will be observed as a day of regular duty.

There will be no special observance of the Judge Advocate General Corps anniversary July 29 at The Infantry Center Staff Judge Advocate Section.

True to the long and faithful history of the three corps, both in war and in peace, the Chaplain Section, personnel of the Post Surgeon's Office and of the Staff Judge Advocate (SJA) Section render an invaluable service to Fort Benning.

During the fiscal year that ended June 30, religious services conducted on the post numbered 7,903. They included Catholic, Jewish, Protestant, Episcopal, Lutheran, and Latter Day Saints (Reorganized) services, as well as a Protestant service conducted in Spanish. The combined attendance at the services was more than 721,000.

Largest Sunday School

The Army's largest general Protestant Sunday School is at Fort Benning. The enrollment is more than 2,000, with a teaching staff of 175. There are 55 enrolled in a Spanish Department of the Sunday School, 50 in a Latter Day Saints Sunday School, and 150 in an Episcopal Sunday School that meets during the winter.

The Infantry Center Chaplain Section's Religious Education Division conducted a Vacation Bible School in June with 1,860 enrolled and more than 300 teachers and workers participating in the school.

Character guidance is an important function of the Chaplain Section. Last year the chaplains conducted 4,096 character guidance lectures attended by 384,184 military personnel. More than 229,000 personal contacts were made through visitation.

Fort Benning chaplains conducted 604 services in the civilian community last year with an attendance of 124,390 worshippers.

Legal Affairs

With eight officers who are attorneys, one warrant officer, five enlisted men and four civilians, the Staff Judge Advocate Section handles the legal affairs of The Infantry Center.

In the past 12 months, the section has handled 835 legal claims, rendered more than 1,500 legal opinions and given legal assistance in more than 15,000 cases.

The services of the section include both advice to the command and to the individual soldier.

More than two years ago, a Soldiers Advocate Division was established by the Staff Judge Advocate Section to centralize legal services to the individual. The division provides assistance with problems concerning debts, wills, domestic relations, trusts, real and personal property, adoptions, change of name; sales contracts and similar matters.

Medical Service

The Medical Service as well as the Medical Corps dates its origin from July, 1775, when Gen. George Washington requested that provision be made "for the lives and health of both officers and men."

On the post, this responsibility for the health of military personnel and their dependents is met by Martin Army Hospital. An $8 million facility constructed in 1958, the 500-bed hospital averages 400 inpatients and 2,500 outpatients per day.

Medical Service personnel on the post include not only doctors of the Medical Corps but members of five other corps, the Dental, Veterinary, Army Nurse, Medical Service and Medical Specialist Corps.

Combat 'Choppers' Aid Ship-Shore Cargo Transfer

Md. (AFPS)—Curtailment of ship-to-shore cargo operations by adverse shore conditions may be a thing of the past if Army tests of an experimental transfer platform prove successful.

Called the Mark IV Ship's Wing, the device is designed to ease delivery of cargoes to the beach from ships at anchor or underway offshore. It can also be used to land troops, transfer casualties to hospital ships, for helicopter messenger service and many other landing and evacuation activities.

Basically, the device consists of a special cargo dolly, projecting far enough from the ships side to permit helicopters to pluck cargo from it, using sling loading techniques.

Commissary To Get New Face Lifting

Beginning Monday, Fort Benning's commissary will undergo extensive renovation. Officials estimated the cost of the face-lifting at $100,000.

Planned for the next three months are such renovations as new ceiling lights, air conditioning for the parts of the complex not now air conditioned, and new meat and frozen food display cases.

According to Lt. Col. Samuel Dobresk, chief of the Quartermaster Services Section, the Custer Terrace store will also receive an interior face-lifting. New air conditioning and shelves are planned, said the colonel. He added that the bulk of the cost will be for new and better freezing equipment.

"Temporary closing of at least some portions of the main store and some curtailment of services during the period of renovation will be necessary," the colonel stated.

Post Boy Scouts Honor Maj. Billon

Boy Scout Troop 39 recently honored Maj. and Mrs. John Billon for the contributions which they made to the troop during their stay at Fort Benning.

Billon has served as committee chairman for Troop 39 for the past three years. He was awarded a certificate of appreciation and a plaque by the unit at a farewell ceremony attended by an estimated 50 well wishers.

Billon departs Fort Benning for Fort Leavenworth, Kan. where he will attend Command and General Staff School.

Active Duty Service Home Buyers Aided by Federal Loan Programs

NEW YORK (AFPS) — When a member of the armed forces starts shopping for a home, he soon discovers there are numerous methods of obtaining financing. These include: Federal Housing Administration (FHA) In-Service loans, Veterans Administration (VA) loans and conventional financing.

FHA In-Service loans are based on Congressional legislation passed expressly to help servicemen buy homes. Maximum loan value is $20,000. Interest rate on the mortgage is limited to 5¼ percent. Monthly mortgage insurance premium charges of ½ of 1 percent are paid by the Department of Defense for the service member.

The FHA does not lend the serviceman money. The capital is made available through various lending institutions cooperating in the FHA program. FHA's part in the transaction is to insure against loss on the loan.

FHA regulations require that the mortgage be issued to pay for construction of a new home or purchase of an existing home. It cannot be used to refinance a home already owned or occupied by the serviceman. The mortgage must also cover a one-family dwelling and the serviceman or his family must live in the house or certify that failure to do so is a result of military orders.

The amount of the mortgage is based on FHA's valuation of the property to be purchased. A minimum down payment will be required, which may consist of an amount representing 3 percent of the first $15,000 of FHA valuation, plus 10 percent of the next 5,000, plus 25 percent of the valuation above $20,000 — or it may be 5 percent of the total FHA appraisal value — whichever is more favorable.

Although the mortgage is limited to $20,000, the serviceman may buy a home costing more, if he is able to make a down payment large enough to cover the difference between the amount of the mortgage and the sale price of the property which must be paid by the serviceman. No form of secondary financing is permissible.

A serviceman wishing to take advantage of the FHA-insured mortgage plan must first obtain a certificate of eligibility from his commanding officer. This certificate is available to any individual who requires housing, is serving on active duty and who has served on active duty for more than two years.

When the certificate is obtained and the serviceman has decided on the house he wants, he is ready to apply for the loan at any lending institution (bank, savings and loan association, mortgage company, etc.) that makes FHA-insured loans in the area of the property being purchased. If the institution is willing to lend the money, it draws up the mortgage and takes over all further arrangements.

Special Packet on Counterinsurgency With Up-to-Date Material Available

Up-to-date instruction on the full range of counterinsurgency subjects is now available in a special packet from the Department of Nonresident Instruction of The Infantry School.

Designed to provide comprehensive coverage of this significant field, the packet consists of three separate but integrated subcourses that cover counterinsurgency operations from platoon to brigade level. Also included are certain related special subject areas such as the role of the Military Assistance Advisory Group advisor and mob and riot control in counterguerrilla operations.

A feature of the packet is that, while situations are fictional, the brigade and battalion operations lessons utilize actual maps of Viet Nam to present instructional concepts. Another feature of the packet is the use of certain "programmed" lessons where the student himself is asked to participate in a tactical situation and provide his own answer to the problems as he sees it.

The attractively published material in the packet is based directly on problems taught resident students of The Infantry School. Illustrations are used where needed to clarify principles.

The counterinsurgency packet will be furnished without charge to military personnel desiring information of the subject alone. Those desiring military education credits will receive the packet as a part of the over-all nonresident career course.

For more information, interested personnel should write to the Department of Nonresident Instruction, Attn: Deputy for Army Extension Courses, U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning.

Perpich Headed for Fort Sill Assignment; Was Former 2nd Division Chief of Staff

By LANNY THOMAS

Col. Tony F. Perpich, who served formerly with the 2nd Infantry Division here as commander of Division Artillery and more recently as chief of staff, is headed for a job with the Army's Artillery Center at Fort Sill, Okla.

It is not known exactly what the colonel's assignment there will be.

Officers who worked with Perpich at the DivArty post and during his short assignment as chief of staff lauded him with compliments at a farewell gathering Monday in the division conference room.

Harmonious

Perpich threw praise to members of the general's staff for the "fine, harmonious way in which you worked together."

Officers presented the colonel mementos, including a plaque with all the division's crests, a pointer and a cartoonist's conception of the colonel behind his desk during a "hectic" day.

NEW ASSIGNMENT
Tony F. Perpich

Perpich moved up to become chief of staff in early June, just a few days before the announcement came that the division would be merged with the 11th Air Assault to form the 1st Air Cavalry Division.

Since then the burden fell on his shoulders to coordinate and work closely with the division commander, Maj. Gen. John H. Chiles, in plans and procedures for executing the merger and guiding the provisional division in a gradual phase out.

Followed Path

Ironically, Perpich has followed the path of another colonel since he came to the division in July of 1964. At that time, Perpich took command of DivArty, a position vacated by Col. Burnside E. Huffman Jr., who was picked for chief of staff.

Huffman left his job early last month—again it was filled by Perpich. Huffman is now at Fort Sill where Perpich also will soon be stationed.

Prior to his 2nd Division assignment, Perpich was a member of the Armed Forces joint staff where he held the position of operations and plans director (J-3) in the strategic operations division.

Drafted

The colonel, a graduate of the University of Minnesota, was drafted in the Army in 1942 while engaged in a Rockfeller Foundation Fellowship at an Arizona Indian Reservation.

He was commissioned through Officers Candidate School and later saw action in the Pacific in World War II and again in the Korean War as operations officer (S-3) of the 1st Cavalry Division Artillery.

Perpich graduated from the Army War College and worked two years in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff of Operations in Washington.

Lt. Col. Samuel Dobresk, chief of Quartermaster Services Section, also voiced a plea for laundry patrons to return old hangers to the "piece-rate turning point." It would result, in a reduction in operating costs, he said.

Space Lack May Curtail Laundry

A space problem is threatening the one-day laundry service for uniforms at the quartermaster laundry.

Laundry officials said the service would have to be discontinued if the failure to pick up uniforms promptly persists. They asked each soldier to do his part by picking up uniforms promptly.

Presently military personnel can get one-day laundry service on uniforms by turning them into the post laundry. The only way to combat the problem of the backlogging of uniforms is for soldiers to pick up their laundry daily.

YOUR CHILD'S TEETH

Proper home and professional care of your child's primary teeth is essential to the healthy growth of permanent teeth. Your child needs his first teeth for chewing, for speech and for appearance. Also the primary teeth hold the space for the permanent teeth to come. Your dentist urges you to see that your child's teeth receive the attention they deserve. Give your child's teeth a bright future.

Classic Feud Rewarding To Army Pair

FRANKFURT, Germany (ANF) — That old Kentucky feud between the Hatfields and the McCoys has finally been settled. Even more surprising, they've given up shooting at Federal Revenue Agents and started working for the Government.

Sixteen years ago, Capt. Harold R. McCoy began investing in U.S. Savings Bonds. Four years later, SFC Guthrie M. Hatfield started his Bonds program.

Small Fortune

Both soldiers are now stationed with the Army Security Agency, Europe, and between them own $10,000 in Savings Bonds.

The small fortune was amassed entirely through steady and systematic Savings Bonds payroll deductions.

Normal Financing Offers Home-Buyers Payment Flexibility

A serviceman preparing to buy a house may not be looking for a newly-built abode but may want something already "broken in." He may also be interested in a house where the monthly payment is comparatively low and would be equal to or lower than rent payments on the same building.

In this case, all the home-buyer needs is a down payment to get started. He may not have the necessary cash to make the down payment so he arranges a second trust (mortgage) to cover the costs. This he does through his bank or local lending agency.

The homebuyer has thus entered into a conventional financing method of buying a house.

While some of the terms of conventional financing are less favorable than those obtained through the Veterans Administration (VA) or the Federal Housing Authority (FHA), the buyer has more leeway in arranging payments — much the same as in buying a car.

In conventional financing of a home, the buyer may find it to his advantage to purchase a home that already has a high assumable VA or FHA loan. Here, the financing is already set up and paid on for several years and the buyer need only assume the remaining loan, take over the payments and either pay cash above the existing first trust balance, or pay a lesser amount of cash and negotiate a second trust mortgage — to make up the difference.

Conventional financing is also the manner in which persons ineligible for VA or FHA financing purchase a house.

Mathematics Exam Added To College GED

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—A mathematics examination has been added to the college comprehensive tests being administered at service testing centers.

Called GECCT (General Examinations Battery of the College Comprehensive Tests), five exams are now given instead of the four-part GEDT (General Educational Development Tests) which were withdrawn from Armed Forces centers June 30.

The GECCT allows up to 30 credit hours compared with 24 under the GEDT. These credits may be applied toward a baccalaureate degree or for military equivalency purposes.

Examinations in the GECCT consist of English composition, humanities, mathematics, natural sciences and social sciences-history.

The battery of tests are designed to determine a student's grasp of subjects ordinarily found in the first two years of college.

Dependent's Medicare

The Benefits Explained

We hear so much about Medicare today, let us see just what care is authorized and who as dependents are eligible. The question is often asked by our dependents today—where will I receive medical care if my husband is assigned overseas?

The answer is simply "dependents of military personnel are eligible for civilian medical care whose sponsors are not residing with them, and may choose between civilian medical facilities and those of Armed Forces or the US Public Health Service."

In many cases these dependents may live in close proximity to a Government medical facility but they still have a choice between these facilities and civilian medical facilities. In these cases (where dependents reside apart from their sponsors) it is not necessary for these dependents to obtain a nonavailability statement (DD Form 1251) from the nearest medical facility.

The type of care or service authorized, and what the dependent would have to pay and what the Government will pay, is listed in the following chart:

CASE OR SERVICE	WHAT YOU PAY ALL CHARGES FOR UNAUTHORIZED SERVICES.	WHAT THE GOVERNMENT PAYS
Hospitalization		Nothing
Authorized hospitalization in semipvt. ward accommodations.	The first $25 of hospital bill, or $1.75 a day, whichever is greater, for each admission.	Remaining hospital charges for authorized care.
Private hospital room.	The above charge, plus 25 per cent of difference between cost of private room and weighted average cost of semiprivate room, if doctor certifies that private room is needed. or Difference between cost of private room and weighted average cost of semiprivate room, if private room is for dependent's convenience.	Remaining hospital charges for authorized care.
Private-duty nursing care.	When the doctor certifies that this is needed, the first $100 of the cost and 25 per cent of charges over $100. In case of such certification, the total cost.	75 per cent of charges in excess of $100 when doctor certifies that this care is needed.
Laboratory X-ray test and procedures during an authorized hospitalization.	Nothing.	All charges for authorized procedures.
Readmission to hospital.	Except in obstetrical and maternity cases, patients readmitted to a civilian hospital within 14 days after discharge, due to an acute complication of condition for which originally hospitalization, pay $1.75 a day if they paid at least $25 for previous admission. (All admissions of obstetrical and maternity cases during and directly related to the same pregnancy are considered one admission.)	Remaining hospital charges for authorized care.
Physicians' services during hospitalization.	Nothing for authorized services.	All charges for authorized services.
Services required of a physician or surgeon immediately before and following hospitalization for a bodily injury or surgery.	Nothing for authorized services.	All charges for authorized services.
Pre- and post-hospitalization tests and procedures when hospitalized for a bodily injury or surgery.	Costs above $75 for authorized diagnostic tests and procedures before hospitalization; costs above $50 for authorized tests and procedures after hospitalization.	Up to $75 for authorized diagnostic tests and procedures before hospitalization; up to $50 for such tests and procedures after hospitalization.
X-ray, radium, or radioisotope therapy on an outpatient basis after hospitalization.	Nothing if such therapy is begun or prescribed during a period of hospitalization. Otherwise, you pay in full.	All charges if such therapy is begun or prescribed during a period of hospitalization.
Maternity care outside a hospital.	First $15 of doctor's charge for delivery performed in a home or office, if not hospitalized later in connection with the same delivery.	Rest of doctor's fees for complete maternity care and care of infant up to 10 days following delivery if not hospitalized.
Treatment of injuries on an outpatient basis.	First $15 of doctor's or dentist's charges for each injury treated. Multiple injuries to same person resulting from a single accident are considered one injury resulting one $15 payment.	Rest of doctor's or dentist's fees plus up to $75 for tests and procedures performed or authorized by attending doctor or dentist and for use of hospital outpatient facilities required for the treatment.
Services of self-employed anesthetists and physical therapists.	Nothing when doctor certifies that these are required for proper care and treatment of authorized cases. Without such certification, you pay the total cost.	All charges when doctor certifies that these services are required for proper care and treatment of authorized cases. Otherwise, nothing.
Services of a consultant if required for proper care and treatment of the patient.	Nothing for authorized services.	All charges for authorized services.

Guardsmen Fly Home for Bars After One-Week Benning Visit

Columbus Mayor B. Ed Johnson got a box of California oranges; the mayor of Sacramento, Cal., has a basket of Georgia peaches; and 154 senior cadets of the California (National Guard) Military Academy are ready for graduation and commissioning, following their tour of duty here this past week.

The guardsmen were flown from Vandenberg (Cal.) AFB to Warner Robbins AFB at Macon last Monday and arrived at Fort Benning late that night in buses provided by the Georgia National Guard.

Problem 2831

Early Tuesday the cadets began their itinerary by observing Problem 2831 (Employment of the Weapons Platoon) at Underwood Road and later had lunch in the field with Officer Candidate Class No. 7.

Also during the morning, Maj. Gen. Roderic L. Hill, California State Adjutant General, who accompanied the cadets on their trip here, made a flying trip into Columbus with the oranges and a letter of greetings from Sacramento Mayor William V. McKinney to the mayor of Columbus. Mayor Johnson reciprocated with the Georgia peaches.

Demonstrations

The Californians observed problems involving rifle platoons and armor platoons Tuesday afternoon, while Wednesday was devoted to Airborne and Ranger training demonstrations, briefings, Problem 4960 (Ground Vehicles Available to the Infantry Commander) and the "I Am the Infantry" production in Marshall Auditorium.

The cadets left for their return to the west coast early Thursday with graduation and commissioning exercises scheduled for Saturday, July 24 at Cam San Louis Obispo. They will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the national guard

Defense Studies Show Further Need for Draft Law

A year - long Defense Department study of military conscription concludes that the draft must be continued when the current law expires in 1967.

A recent article by Jack Raymond appearing in the New York Times spelled out the board's findings. The results of the study indicate that the draft will have to be maintained for the foreseeable future if the size of the armed forces, now totaling 2.6 million, is kept at this strength.

However, the analysts who contributed to the study of the military draft made certain recommendations for changes in existing practices. These included:

* * *

The draft of younger persons. At present, the average draft age is 22 to 23 years, as draft boards consistently call up the oldest eligibles.

* * *

A widening of deferment possibilities. Deferments are based on occupations, educational activity and family status for reasons of national interest or personal hardship.

* * *

Increases in military pay and fringe benefits as an incentive to enlist and re-enlistment.

The study was ordered by President Johnson last year after a flurry of published criticism of inequities in the draft.

Subsequently, during the election campaign, Senator Barry Goldwater, the Republican candidate, advocated abolition of the draft.

"Alternatives"

—At the time the President announced the study of the draft, he told a news conference that he would consider "alternatives to the present draft selection system, including the possibility of meeting our requirements on an entirely voluntary basis in the next decade."

He pointed out that the present draft law, passed in 1951 and extended every four years since then, was more than 15 years old. The original principle of equal sharing "may have drifted in practice," he said.

The study, ordered by the President was to have been completed within a year, that is by April of 1965. Delays forced an extension of the deadline to July. The investigative part of the task has been completed however.

Secretary of the Defense Robert S. McNamara was scheduled to have the first complete written version of the report on his desk last month.

Series of Studies

The study is actually a series of studies, some of them prepared by private experts, under the direction of William Gorham, the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Manpower.

The cost of the program of studies has been estimated at $1 million. It was described, when undertaken, as the most comprehensive analysis ever undertaken of the problems of military conscription in the United States.

The studies covered population growth, estimates of future military manpower needs, the effects of various economic and social conditions on enlistments, the attractions and vexations of military service, and various proposals for dealing with them that have been offered in the past.

The study's conclusion that the draft can not be abandoned in the near future is not considered surprising, in the light of various recent comments by Pentagon officials.

Ailes' Testimony

Secretary of the Army Stephen Ailes, in testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, was asked what he thought about the draft. He replied "I know of no substitute for it at this time."

The Army is the only military service that consistently resorts to the draft to meet it's manpower needs. There is a general agreement however, that volunteers for other services are motivated in part by a desire to avoid being drafted into the Army.

Under the law, most young men between the ages of 19 and 26 may be drafted if they are not deferred because of occupation or studies whose continuance is believed in the national interest, or because of marital status or hardship.

The draft prompted criticism, however. It has been said that young men with enough money to get married or enter college have an advantage over those who must go to work immediately upon leaving high school.

Compliants

In addition, the sometimes erratic way in which the draft has been carried out by various local draft boards has brought complaints. A youth drafted in one town might be spared in another.

The Army's rejection as a draftee of Cassius Clay has never been explained to the satisfaction of many observers.

The Armed Services need about 600,000 new recruits a year. About 100,000 are drafted. But 200,000 of the remaining half-million are said to be motivated by the threat of the draft.

When talk of the possible elimination of the draft began to spread, estimates fell. Each of the military services has complained about this regularly during Congressional hearings.

Lower Qualifications

The Navy, to avoid resorting to the draft, began accepting volunteers with lower physical and mental qualifications. The Army began raising its monthly draft requests. This month the Army is calling for 17,000 — the biggest quota since November, 1963.

Despite it's comprehensive

ARMISTICE

United Nations and Communist delegates signed an armistice agreement July 27, 1953, ending the fighting in Korea.

nature, the findings of the Pentagon draft study are expected to meet criticism. Many critics are expected to argue that a Presidential commission should have conducted the study rather than the Pentagon.

Former Senator Kenneth B. Keating argued for a Presidential commission when he raised the subject of the draft last spring. Similarly, James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, has lately called for a Presidential commission and condemned the expected result of the Pentagon commission in advance.

Early Critic

Patton, an early critic of the draft, whose correspondence with President Kennedy on the subject in August, 1963, disclosed Mr. Kennedy's concern, wrote recently in the National Union Farmer:

"It is probably true that the armed forces cannot be maintained at their present numbers without the draft, all other things remaining equal. The proper question is not whether we can end the draft? The proper question is what do we have to do to maintain the armed forces without the draft?"

Most professional military men appear convinced that military conscription cannot be abandoned.

A Class Apart

Most military leaders believe that an all - professional military force, desired by some, would be regarded by the rest of the country as a class apart, whereas it is the intent of most military men to find acceptance and involvement between the uniformed forces and civilian society.

Some of these attitudes have been put forward in the Pentagon study, although it is believed probable that they will not be incorporated in the final report. The report itself is expected to stress the importance of easing the recruiting and retention problems through higher pay, better housing, and educational and job - training opportunities.

Most Soldiers Committed To Combat Units

Washington (AFPS) — About two out of every three service personnel are in combat operating forces or combat support units, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Manpower) Norman S. Paul told Congress recently.

Maximum use is made of civilian employees in support-type activities, Mr. Paul noted, except where a need exists to provide an effective service force through rotation, training and personnel career development.

"Our objective must be to recognize the knowledge, skills and experience possessed by both military and civilian personnel, to match this knowledge, skill and experience to job requirements, thereby developing an effective military-civilian team effort," Secretary Paul said.

Each year about 500,000 first-termers are required to replace military personnel losses, Mr. Paul explained, adding that about 17 per cent of the total service strength is allocated to the training establishments, including trainees, and around 15 per cent is allocated to support activities.

Soldiers Eligible for Compensation On Disabilities From Viet Nam Duty

ATLANTA — Viet Nam Veterans are eligible for wartime compensation payments for service-connected injuries or diseases, Peter Wheeler, director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, said recently.

Amount of the compensation is based on the veteran's disability, Mr. Wheeler said.

Service - disabled Viet Nam veterans also are eligible for Veterans Administration hospitalization; National Service Life Insurance; and Vocational Rehabilitation, if the disability produces a severe employment handicap.

Survivors of veterans killed in Viet Nam are eligible for Dependencey and Indemnity compensation, based on the deceased veteran's base pay. Burial payments are made to the families of veterans who had a service - connected disability at their death.

Preferential consideration is given to honorably separated Viet Nam veterans, similar to the preference afforded World War I and II, and Korean War Veterans. All men who have served since January 1, 1957, are covered by Social Security on a contributory basis.

Men entering the service now are not covered by G I insurance, he said.

Federal and Georgia income tax exemptions are available to men serving in Viet Nam since January 1 of this year, Wheeler said.

The Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist any veteran or his dependent in filing claims for these benefits Wheeler said.

Gen Forsythe Speaks At TSB Chapel Service

Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, recent guest speaker at the Student Brigade Chapel, chose the layman's role in the bearing of the Cross as his subject.

The assistant commandant of the Infantry School told the congregation many people see a cross and think, "Look but do not touch."

He pointed out that the interpretation should be: "Here it is. Take one and carry it to the best of your ability."

"The layman often gets too wrapped up in his own profession and himself," he said, "when he should be more concerned with his fellow man."

Gen. Forsythe noted that it is easy for the layman to become more interested in the physical and material aspects of the church and not enough with the spiritual. Thus, the layman spends his time working on the church's program and other activities instead of seeking God's guidance and help.

He also said that the layman has to watch his own skepticism about the performance of those whose responsibility lies in conducting the church service. The layman should be less critical of the contributions of others and, instead, aid the church by practicing the church's teachings and by regularly attending the services.

The service was conducted by Chaplain Arthur J. Estes. The Chapel Choir sang the hymn "God of Our Fathers" under the direction of Capt. Donald Barry (Ret.).

MEN ON THE MOON

Apollo program chief Joseph Shea believes that the United States may be able to put men on the moon by 1970. His project comprises the $20 billion program to build and test a three-man spaceship for the moon shot at that time. United States space chiefs are considering the Apollo equipment — the capsule and the 7½-million-pound-thrust Saturn superrocket—for the construction of manned stations in orbit around the earth. To construct such platforms, astronauts will be able to profit from the experience gained by Lt. Col. Edward White when he made his historical "walk in space."

Third Army Tennis Champ

Fort Benning's John McGill, winner of the open singles in the Third Army Tennis Tournament at Fort Stewart last week, shows his winning form. McGill will go to the All-Army Tennis Championships at San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston, Texas along with Scott Allen who teamed up with him to win the open doubles crown at Fort Stewart.

Tennis Tourney Ends; McGill Victor in Open

The 1965 Third Army Tennis Tournament ended last week with Fort Benning's John McGill going all the way in the open singles division much as predicted by contestants, officials and spectators alike.

Teaming up with Scott Allen, McGill also helped bring the open doubles championship home to Fort Benning.

Winner of the open in the Infantry Center tennis playoffs last month, McGill won the crown by defeating Perry Fisher of Redstone Arsenal, Ala., 6-1, 6-2 and 6-0. This victory will send him to the All-Army tournament at San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston along with Allen.

In the open doubles championship, Allen and McGill beat Jack Tarr and Clarence Daugherty of Fort Campbell, Ky., 6-4, 6-2 and 6-3.

Leroy Stanley of Fort Bragg, N. C., came out on top in the senior singles division by defeating his teammate, Robert Nollenberger, 6-2 and 6-0.

Neither Stanley nor McGill were pushed in their climb to the top of the tourney for both won all their matches going away.

Stanley has earlier teamed up with Nollenberger to win the senior doubles crown by defeating George Williams and Ken Tracy of Fort Jackson, S.C., 6-1 and 6-2.

The four other members of the Fort Benning team were eliminated in preliminary competition. They were Dave Raney and Don Gunther in the open and Lester Burnette and Mial Stafford in the senior division.

Following the conclusion of each division of play, Col. Jene E. Mills, Fort Stewart executive officer, presented trophies to each of the champions and runners-up.

The tournament was marked by near perfect weather throughout.

League Leading TSB Beats 428th Medics

The Student Brigade chalked up its fourth straight win of the second half at Gowdy Field last week by defeating the 428th Medical Battalion 5-1 behind the five hit pitching of Arlan Clark.

It was the first win of the half for Clark. Medic pitcher Ronald Rahr was handed his second loss.

TSB hit the scoring columns first when left fielder Robert Blosser doubled home Jimmy Knight in the third inning. This was only a prelude to the TSB four run fourth.

Nelson Talley led off the TSB fourth inning by drawing a base on balls and went to second on a passed ball. Center fielder Thurman Woody reached first on an error which brought Talley streaking home with TSB's second run.

Mickey Carmack got the second base on balls of the inning from Rahr and, with men on first and second, Bill Turley slammed a double to left driving in TSB's third and fourth runs.

In the sixth, TSB scored its final run of the game to go out in front 5-0. Woody led off the inning with a triple to left and third baseman Carmack followed with a sacrifice fly to bring him home.

In the seventh, after getting only two hits from Clark for the first six innings, the Medics bagged their only run of the game.

428th Med Bn Trips CTC Nine In Victory Cemented by Errors

The 428th Medical Battalion defeated the Infantry Center Troop Command 7-4 at Gowdy Field on Monday night in a win cemented by CTC errors, which resulted in three unearned runs.

Henry Andrews, who pitched six and two thirds innings while giving up four runs on six hits, was credited with the win. Bernie Hankinson, relieved in the eighth by Jim Mundy, was handed the loss.

Medics Take Lead

The Medics took an early lead in the first with a single run. With one away, Walt Waiss nailed the first pitch for a single to left. After Jose Parilla got a base on balls, Raul Guerrero lined a single to left driving in Waiss with the first run of the ball game.

The Medics added another run in the second. Leadoff batter John Keyser drew a base on balls and was moved to second when Ulysses Davis singled to right field. With two away, second baseman Waiss drove a single to left bringing Keyser home to make the score 2-0.

CTC had to wait until the fourth to get its first run. Floyd Wicker led off the inning with a walk. Catcher Rosy Spence then looped a single to right scoring Wicker.

CTC Ties It Up

In the sixth, the Troop Command scored another run to tie the game up. With one away, Wicker got his second walk of the game. Spence followed, hitting the first pitch to right for a single. Trying to stretch his hit into a double, Spence drew a throw to second which was bobbled by the second baseman. Wicker seized his opportunity and dashed home for the tying run.

The game did not remain even for long. In the bottom of the sixth, the Medics capitalized on two big CTC errors, scoring three runs which later proved enough to win the game.

With one away, Jim Wesley walked and was pushed to third by a bouncing single to left by Grady Lane. First baseman Keyser followed with a single to left, scoring Wesley.

Medics Cement Win

Ulysses Davis came to the plate and, on the third pitch, catcher Spence threw to second trying to catch Keyser who was attempting a steal. The throw got by the CTC shortstop covering the bag and rolled into center field. Lane scored and Keyser headed for third. The throw from center went over the third baseman's head and Keyser streaked across the trip from first.

The Troop Command came back with two runs in the seventh to close the scoring gap. With two away and Bill Penny on first, Bill Nordan blasted the first pitch over the 325 foot mark in left field to make the score, 5-4. But that was the last scoring the Troop Command was to do.

In the eighth, the Medics piled up two more runs when the CTC first baseman allowed a throw to go by him with the bases full.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

John Mallick is a man who put his whole heart behind a team. For seven seasons as the head manager of the Fort Benning Doughboys, he served out rubbing alcohol, tape and a good humor to mend sore limbs and aching spirits. His philosophy for pain and disappointment was, "It only hurts when you lose."

Recently SFC Mallick retired after 19 years of military service in the U. S. Army, seven months after the Doughboys were officially retired by Army policy.

The Doughboys live on in record books and in the memories of players and fans who spent autumn Saturdays playing or watching the game. In retirement, Mallick lives in Columbus and in the recollections of the Doughboys, who remember him as a man of tremendous vitality and spirit and as the person who was always ready to lend a helping hand.

"The thing about John is that he was always smiling and always ready with a joke", said PFC Norbert Sebunia who played on last year's Doughboy squad. After a moment he added, "As far as morale went he did the most to hold the team together."

Lt. Mickey Heinecken, head line coach for the Doughboys, came to know Mallick well during the time they worked together. He described Mallick as a terrific booster for morale and as a person for whom the team put out a little extra.

Doughboy morale was good. Last year they swept through the season chalking up 11 victories, including the Missile Bowl at Orlando, Florida; a game which was dedicated to Mallick by the appreciative Doughboys. Mallick, undergoing medical tests at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C., convinced his doctors to allow him to fly to Florida to cheer the Doughboys on. Before the game, the Doughboys presented him with a desk pen set engraved "To John from his heathens."

In mid-season last year, Mallick had to curtail his more active support of the team because of illness which eventually forced him to leave the Army. But even then he lent his support for the team from his bedside.

Lt. Mickey Carmack recalled, "Mallick was always so happy whenever we won a ball game. Even when he went to the hospital he would send us telegrams of encouragement or congratulations."

Mallick is a great believer in physical conditioning as well as a dedicated soldier as his military record reveals. He has been awarded the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star, World War II Victory Medal, American Defense and National Defense Medals and the Good Conduct Medal.

Joining the Army as a private of Company K, 71st Infantry, New York National Guard, Mallick first came to Fort Benning in 1943 for airborne training. Later he was assigned to the 517th Parachute Infantry Combat team. During the Battle of the Bulge, while the team was attached to the 82nd Airborne Division, Mallick was wounded.

In 1945 Mallick was returned to the United States and was discharged from the Army. Returning to the service five years later, he spent several months in Germany as a squad leader, and came back to Fort Benning to help activate the 4th Infantry Division.

In 1951 he went back to Germany with the 4th as a platoon leader and sports NCO. A short time later he was sent to Special Services Section in Wurzburg as chief clerk.

At Wurzburg he attended clinics in baseball, basketball and softball and participated in the first USAR Soccer Official and Coaches Clinic.

When Mallick returned to the United States and was placed in charge of the post gym at Fort Dix, N. J., he was introduced to handball, which he was to pursue with his usual gusto.

Reassigned to Eniwetok Atomic Proving Grounds, South Pacific, as chief clerk and sports NCO, Mallick began instructing handball and built up such an interest in the game that a new handball court had to be built.

In 1957 he returned to Fort Benning and was assigned as supervisor of Briant Wells Field House where he played with and instructed enlisted men and officers in handball in addition to his regular duties.

Sp5 Charles Bellamy, who worked with Mallick at the field House, recalled that Mallick would sometimes play handball up to three hours a day. He said, "John was the best handball player on post. He would challenge anyone and I never saw anybody beat him."

Army Rifle Champ

SFC Leonard W. Willis holds the Winchester magnum with which he recently broke a 26-year old record for the Free Rifle Match on the 1000-yard range at Quantico Marine Base by scoring 100-42v. The old record for the match, in which the shooter can use any rifle, ammunition or sight, had been set in 1939 by Marine PFC Alfred L. Wolters, who shot 100-27v.

197th Rips CTC, 7-3; Eichorn Gets Victory

The 197th Infantry Brigade walloped the Infantry Center Troop Command, 7-3, at Gowdy Field last week on 11 hits and five CTC errors to hand the first half champs their second loss of the half.

Duane Eichorn went all the way for the 197th, winning his first game of the half and allowing CTC only seven hits. Doug Talmadge took the loss.

The 197th scored a single run in the first to take an early lead. With two away, Charlie Farrell singled and then stole second. A CTC error and a passed ball brought him home.

CTC evened it up in the fourth when third baseman Floyd Wicker slammed his first home run of the half with the bases empty.

The 197th quickly took the lead again by pounding out two runs in the fifth. Billy Williamson led off the inning with a single and stole second. Center fielder Farrell reached first on an error and moved to second on a passed ball which allowed Williamson to score. Right fielder Tom Groce singled to right bringing Farrell home to make the score 3-1.

CTC bounced back in the sixth with two runs to tie up the ball game again. Bill Penny singled to lead off the inning and was tripled home by the power hitting Wicker. After Roy Spence grounded out, Jim Mundy singled to left bringing Wicker home with the tying run and what later proved to be CTC's final score of the game.

In the bottom of the sixth, the 197th slammed in three more runs to go out front for good. With one away, Williamson hit a single to right and went to second on an error. After Charlie Farrell reached first on a fielder's choice, Tom Groce singled to center, bringing home Williamson with the winning run.

Farrell and Groce scored on a single by Eddie McLean and an error by the CTC center fielder to give the brigade a three-run lead.

The 197th scored another run in the eighth to make the score 7-3 when Bobby Cee drew a base on balls and came home on a Farrell single and a passed ball.

Beagle Club Organized

All Fort Benning personnel are invited to join the Muscogee Beagle Club recently organized at a meeting in the home of James A. Pounds Jr. of Columbus.

Pounds was elected president of the group and John H. Bray was elected vice president and chairman of the House and Grounds Committee.

Detailed procedures for having the club sanctioned by the American Kennel Club of New York were outlined by John Harris of Atlanta, past president of the Southern Federation of Beagle Clubs.

S. O. McPherson of Atlanta, secretary-treasurer of the Southeastern Association of Beagle Clubs, invited the Muscogee club to join his organization and to attend the judging school of the American Kennel Club in Hurtsboro, Ala., August 7-8.

The next meeting of the Muscogee Beagle Club will be held at 270 Hunter Road on August 2 at 7:30 p.m. For further information, call 689-5315.

TSB Suffers First Loss In Drubbing from 197th

The Student Brigade suffered a blistering 10-4 defeat at the hands of the 197th Infantry Brigade at Gowdy Field Tuesday night for its first loss of the second half.

TSB, going into the game with four wins under its belt, threw in three pitchers in an attempt to stop 197th scoring but errors at crucial moments bolstered 197th hitting to pile up the runs.

Bill Brannock went eight innings for the 197th and was credited with the win. TSB starter Bill Turley took the loss.

Both teams scored a run in the first. In the bottom of the second, the 197th took a one run lead when Brannock blasted a double to drive in Eddie McLean. From there on it was a 197th ball game.

Task Force Returns From Island Republic

The last contingent of 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) "Sky Troopers" who served in the Dominican Republic during the revolutionary crisis there returned to Fort Benning Tuesday night.

The 72 officers and men of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion had left Santo Domingo at 1 p.m.; landed at Homestead Air Force Base, Fla., at 4 p.m. and after an hour stop there, came on to Fort Benning.

They arrived at Lawson Army Airfield at 8:15 p.m. The men were met by wives, children, friends and The Infantry Center band.

Most of the soldiers had gone to the Dominican Republic on a rotation basis and had left during the first week of June.

Maj. Bernard B. Quedens, the task force commander, 1st Sgt. R. J. Sawotzky, PFC Otis C. Phillips, Sgt. Dennis L. Bergeron, Sgt. Charles R. Smith and others were in the original group of 229th soldiers to leave here May 2.

Maj. Quedens had nothing but praise for his men. The major said, "There were about 300 men who saw service there and I can't think of one that didn't do an exceptional job. I'm very proud of what we did there."

The major went on to say, "We put 1200 flying hours on the 20 Delta models (UH-1D transport helicopters) during the month of June alone. We had 90 to 95 per cent availability of ships."

Brig. Gen. John Wright, assistant division commander of the 1st Cavalry Division, Lt. Col. Robert Kellar, commanding officer of the 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion, and Maj. Bruce Crandall, commander of the 7th Special Forces Aviation Company (the groups' unit) were among those welcoming the men home to Fort Benning.

The crowd of women and children at Lawson Airfield gave the Army just enough time to get the formal welcome done and then ran out onto the apron before the operations building and gave their own welcome to their returning husbands and fathers.

M-16 Rumors Smashed

BY JOE TREASTER

First Cavalry Division Sergeant Major C. R. Westervelt this week conducted informal tests which he said should put an end to disparaging rumors about the M-16 rifle.

"It's a damn fine weapon," he said. "There are always doubts about a new weapon and that's what the tests were all about. I wanted to kill the rumors and misconceptions."

According to Sgt. Maj. Weservelt, none of the three most popular rumors have any validity. It is not true, he said, for example that:

1. The 5.56 mm projectile shatters upon meeting resistance.

2. As a result of the shattering there is no measureable penetration.

3. The projectile begins tumbling as it leaves the rifle muzzle.

In the tests conducted Tuesday on Martin Range with the cooperation of the 1st Battalion, 12th Cavalry, Sgt. Maj. Westervelt directed a randomly selected infantryman to fire 11 rounds into a plywood baffle. Five shots

Sand Hill Library Dedicated

In connection with Fort Benning's observation of the Army's Special Services 25th Anniversary, two portions of the Sand Hill Library were dedicated Thursday.

A continuous flow of coffee drinking visitors began trickling through the recently completed art and music rooms beginning at 10 a.m. Official opening of the two rooms came at 2 p.m. And at 7 p.m. Maj. Leonard B. Starr delivered a lecture on art.

Freeman and Johnson Briefed by Air Cavalry

The evergrowing list of dignitaries to visit the newly formed 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) was lengthened today with the addition of Generals Paul L. Freeman and Harold K. Johnson.

General Freeman, commanding general of the Continental Army Command arrived at Lawson Field at 9:00 this morning.

The total of his one day visit to the division will be devoted to a series of briefings by the division's general staff on the special advantages and problems involved with the establishment of the Army's first Air Cavalry division.
