Gen. Johnson, Army chief of staff, will arrive this evening to address the annual convention of Georgia American Legion and Auxiliary.

Saturday morning the general, a former commander of the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea, will visit with the new division's commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W.O. Kinnard and will also be given a series of briefings by staff members.

In addition to the two generals visiting the division today, Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Truman last Friday made his first official visit to Fort Benning and the 1st Air Cavalry Division as commanding General of the 3rd U.S. Army.

Gen. Freeman's most recent visit to Fort Benning was to participate in the rededication of the 23rd Infantry which was held in April.

The general was, as a colonel, the war-time leader of the 23rd Infantry Regiment. His masterful leadership in the battle of Chipyong-ni, in which the regiment was surrounded by four divisions of North Koreans, has became a legend.

Gen. Freeman became CONARC commander in February of this year, succeeding Gen. Hugh P. Harris who retired here at a massive review on Sightseeing Field.

Push Foes and Woes Aside

All of the political woes and foes of 12 freshmen U. S. congressmen were pushed from their minds last Friday as they took part in the training of the 1st Cavalry Division.

The congressmen were evenly split in their political loyalties but were of one enthusiastic opinion of the training they watched and took part in with the Sky Troopers.

The congressional group toured the division as a highlight to their trip to Fort Benning where they also witnessed Infantry School and Ranger demonstrations.

Rep. William L. Dickinson of Alabama, a big well-conditioned, athletic type of congressmen, said he was "impressed" by the Ranger demonstration on crunching hand - to - hand combat and physical confidence feats on high ropes, accompanied by a chilling lecture on snakes illustrated by a cottonmouth moccasin held in the lecturer's right hand.

The group included Georgia Congressman Howard (Bo) Callaway of Pine Mountain who said that Defense Secretary McNamara informed him he was enthusiastic over the Army's new airmobile concept.

Rep. Callaway quoted McNamara as saying he is "proud of its (the division) development." the Secretary feels that it is his baby, "a real accomplishment."

Viewing Sky Troopers in action was not enough for most of the Congressmen. As they watched some of the newcomers to the division taking their first training of the 2nd Brigade's rappelling tower, Rep. Callaway, Robert C. McEwen of New York and Raymond F. Clevenger of Michigan became so intrigued that they chose to try their luck from the 35-foot training tower.

Callaway and McEwen showed great form and were satisfied with two decents. Rep. Clevenger, who confided that he had been a "T-4 at Fort Benning 19 years ago," may have lacked in style but he made it up with determination as he completed the five required training leaps.

The 12-man group was evenly split between the division's three brigades. Maston O'Neal, D-Ga.; Prentiss Walker, R-Miss.; Henry P. Smith, R-N.Y. and George V. Hansen, R-Idaho had become so interested in shooting the new M-16 assault rifle that they were quite late leaving Col. E. B. Roberts' 1st Brigade.

William R. Anderson, D-Tenn.; John N. Erlenborn, R-Ill.; William L. Hungate D-Mo., and William D. Ford, D-Mich., not only became enchanted with training in water survival, cargo net climbing and M-16 rifle shooting at Col. Thomas Brown's 3rd Brigade, but also had a bash at bayonet training.

Also at the Anzio Room, the ladies got into the social swim on Monday, July 12th, with a luncheon to welcome Mrs. Guy A. Eberhardt who is Lt. Col. Mertel's new social hostess for the battalion. Heavy Weapons Program Started at 1st Brigade

Heavy weapons training went into full swing this week in the 1st Airborne Brigade, after a program began last week to qualify the men with the big guns.

Providing plenty of fire power, the heavy weapons in the airborne Infantry battalion now include the 106mm recoilless rifles, 81mm mortars, 3.5 in. rocket launchers, and hand-held 90mm recoilless rifles.

Combat support personel of the 1st Bn., 12th Airborne Cavalry underwent numerous classes on the 106s earlier in the week while awaiting delivery of the powerful weapons, which began coming in last Wednesday.

All training in the 12th was conducted under the direction of 1st Lt. Harry V. Smith, SFC Walter Hofmister and Sgt. Alfred Oyler. It moved at a rapid pace as the 106 crews prepare for live fire problems which are tentatively scheduled to begin tomorrow on Patton Range.

Troopers of the 1st Bn. 8th Airborne Cavalry raced through a tough series of crew drills early in the week, conducted countless practice missions, and moved to Coolidge Range last Saturday and Sunday for live firing.

The 81mm mortar training is being conducted under the supervision of the 2nd Bn., 8th Airborne Cavalry in conjunction with the Infantry Center's Mortar Committee.

This course includes crew training, live firing and qualification firing, and ended with a gunners exam which began yesterday and will continue through tonight.

Anti-tank personnel armed with the 3.5 rocket launchers and the 90mm RRs from the 2nd Bn., 8th Airborne Cavalry took mechanical training yesterday and today, and are scheduled to undergo qualification fire on Patton Range tomorrow.

Rumors

were fired at 125 meters, the others from 250 meters.

Each shot passed through eight thicknesses of ¼ inch plywood, four inches apart for a total distance of 30 inches.

When the shots pierced the first sheet of plywood they left almost perfectly formed circles, indicating there was no tumbling or keyholing effect as the projectile traveled toward or into the target.

At the fourth sheet of plywood it was apparent the projectile had begun to tip and was cutting an oblong hole in the target. As the projectile ripped out of the baffle and into space it left behind a nearly inch-long gash.

Sgt. Maj. Westervelt said there were only minimal signs of projectile shattering as it smashed through the last obstacles in the baffle.

As a further test, Sgt. Maj. Westervelt ordered his marksman to fire at two metal ammunition cans filled with water.

"We put a live frog inside the first can to prove the projectile wouldn't shatter," the sergeant major said. "When we took him out he was stunned, but uninjured."

In an effort to induce shattering the nose of one projectile was cut off before it was fired into the second ammo can.

"There was only a small amount of shattering, even then," he said, "And just like the first shot, it ripped into and out of the water filled can."

Some forms of sport ammunition have characteristics similar to those described in the rumors that have been circulating through the division, Sgt. Maj. Westervelt said. But none of them are in use by the division, he said.

UH-1 Search Lights Tested at Ft. Stewart

Preliminary tests in the use of a search light mounted on a UH-1 helicopter were completed at Fort Stewart recently.

The search light, borrowed from an armored unit, appears to have its best application mounted in the cargo compartment.

This allows continuous illumination by flying a circular pattern around the target. The light appears to give primarily a concentrated beam covering an area several hundred meters in diameter.

Personnel on the ground stated the illumination was compared to that of dusk or brighter. It was possible to observe human targets and aim at them through aiming sights.

The search light illumination produces a more desirable light than from flares due to its more natural effect. Personnel within the area of light were unable to detect any objects outside the lighted area.

A very important factor to the air crew was that ground personnel were unable to estimate the altitude or range of the aircraft.

With the blackout curtain installed behind the pilot and co-pilot seats, there were no adverse effects registered by light.

In future testing, the light will be mounted on a crank operated rocket mount, and also adapted to fit a M-6 machine gun system.

Possible intended uses of the system would be for target acquisition, local security illumination, a navigational aid and adjustment of artillery fire for both aerial rocket and tube artillery.

Now Used by Paratroopers

Horse Soldier Command

The century old rallying cry for Cavalry Troopers, "Boot to Boot, which has been common in the 1st Airborne Brigade for the past year, is now more appropriate than ever in the 1st Calvalry Division.

Revived last year in the brigade's parachute battalion, by the present Brigade Deputy Commander and former commander, Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark, "Boot to Boot" became a standard phrase in the Rakkasan trooper's vocabulary.

It became the unofficial semi-final jump command during parachute operations as the troopers lined up boot to boot and began shuffling toward the door of their aircraft while awaiting the command "Go".

It further supplemented the old airborne slogan "All The Way" becoming the answer to this standard greeting exchanged between officers and men during occasions for saluting.

In the air or on the ground, in tactical situations or at sports events, and even at social functions, "Boot to Boot" was heard as a sign of recognition among the paratroopers.

Originating with the horse soldiers (U.S. Cavalry), the cry "Boot to Boot" were the last words heard before the command "Charge" as mounted Cavalry troopers closed in on a perfect line prior to charging their enemy.

CAVALAIR COMMENTARY

BY J. D. COLEMAN

Those in the 11th Air Assault Division and attached units will recall a statement made about a year ago by the division commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, concerning the scrutiny under which the division was operating. He said, paraphrasing a quotation that gained some degree of fame in another time: "Never have so few been observed so often by so many."

The activation of an operational division was considered by many to signal the end of the intensive scrutiny. But the experiences of the past three weeks have shown that nothing builds interest like success, and the evolution of the 11th Air Assault Division (Test) to the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) was a success story. So now, in addition to the usual gamut of official visitors, the division has been receiving a larger-than - usual influx of reporters, photographers and comimentators.

They all want to know what makes the 1st Air Cavalry Division tick, what makes it different from other units and why is it special: The answers to these questions are, of course, known to most members of the division. It therefore often comes as a surprise that everyone is not as familiar as are we with what is being accomplished in this new and revolutionary concept. In a sense, it is a case of not seeing the trees for the forest.

The Information Office has been escorting the members of the news media around the division, showing them the hardware that is being used; discussing the techniques that were developed by the unique evolutionary process utilized in the test units; and talking to the people who made the concept click. They have, to a man, been impressed with what has been accomplished, both in development in tactical doctrine and in special equipment and material. But they have been even more impressed with the intangible and yet quite apparent thread of continuity that links all units, branches and organizations of this division.

This thread is the unqualified enthusiasm of the people who have or are making this concept work. Reporters have asked the question: "How do you personally feel about this concept of air mobility?" And, almost to a man, regardless of rank or station, the answer symbolizes enthusiasm and excitement. In a recent interview, Gen. Kinnard perhaps summed up the feeling of those who watched the airmobile concept evolve from theory to reality, when he declared: "It is a matter of great personal pride and satisfaction that certain ideas and beliefs have been vindicated. It's like seeing your kid graduate from school."

The enthusiasm so apparent in the division can be explained in many ways. It perhaps is the excitement of being in on the ground floor of the development of a tactical doctrine as historically signifigant as the development of armored tactics, or the growth of the airplane in a strategic role. Nearly everyone has an expressed or silent desire to be a part of history and there are few among us that have not, at one time or other, regretted that we could not not have lived at perhaps a more historical time.

Yet another reason for the unbounded enthusiasm and high morale is the freedom of thought that has been the hallmark of this organization. The success story that is the fruition of the air mobile concept certainly is as much the result of the intellectual climate cultivated in the test units as it was the original theory. This freedom of thought has resulted in a fantastic number of developments in doctrine, materiel and equipment. Taken singly, these developments may not be of lasting significance, but when grouped collectively, they become the very essense of the demonstrated success of the air mobile theory.

Peruvian Air Force Capt. Returns After Transition Flight Training

A Peruvian Air Force captain assigned to temporary duty at Fort Benning successfully completed training to become the first UH1 (Huey) qualified aviator from his country.

Capt. Guillermo Carbonel has completed his training with Company A, 227th Assault Helicopter Ban, and will return to his home in Lima, Peru.

His assignment upon return to his parent unit will be Chief Instructor Pilot to transition Peruvian aviators into the turbine powered UH1 helicopter.

The Peruvian government has recently purchased sixteen UH1D Helicopters in which Capt. Carbonel will conduct the transition training of his fellow aviators.

Capt. Carbonel is no newcomer to the aviation field. He has a total of 3400 hours of both fixed wing and rotary wing flying time.

He was sent to the states June 4, 1965 to become UH1 qualified, and has now completed all phases of qualification which included autorotations, formation flying, low level flying, air assault techniques and procedures, cross country flying, Red Dog Decca, and night formation flying.

When he returns to Peru he will continue to fly operational missions with his home reseue squadron and begin the UH1 transition school for the Peruvian aviators.

His stateside tours include assignments at Lackland Air Force Base for the language school, Fort Wolters, Tex. for H23 light observation helicopter qualification, Fort Rucker, Ala., for the instructor pilot transition course and to the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn., to complete transition into UH1B and UH1D helicopters.

Capt. Carbonel had many things to say about his trip to the states and his assignment to Fort Benning.

"I have enjoyed it very much here. I have had a wonderful time. The training was very hard, but I think it was very beneficial especially the air assault missions. All the training had a touch of reality to it. I think that Fort Benning is an outstanding post and the citizens of Columbus were very courteous and nice to me. There is not doubt in my mind that the best company, best battalion and division that I visited has been Company A of the 227th Assault Helicopter Bn., and the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile). I have made many friends and this has been my best home away from home."

The 227th Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Jack Cranford, and the Alpha Company Commander, Maj. Robert W. Mills, congratulated Capt. Carbonel on his outstanding performance and ability to successfully become an "air assault" aviator. They went on to wish him the best of luck on his return trip to Lima, Peru, and all of his future assignments.

Under Watchful Eye of Instructors

New Sky Troopers Learn 'Rappellers Trade'

By Hank Allison

"Lean back, Lean back — Keep your legs straight! O. K. now kick off, that's it — you're doing fine." Under the close watch of the instructors another Sky Trooper becomes a tower qualified rappeller.

Many new Sky Troopers just entering the Army's only airmobile division, have been learning this skill over the last few weeks.

Said one, "I knew that the rope was there and would hold me, but the scariest thing was leaning out backwards over that horrible drop."

The sergeants who teach this skill are like fathers teaching their sons to swim. They keep up a steady chatter of encouraging instruction as the neophyte leans out over "that horrible drop" for the first time.

The equipment used for this speedy way of transferring from air to ground is safety checked after each jump, and rightly so. One man returning to the top of the tower for his fifth and qualifying jump last week was sent to the ground by the ever alert instructor when his sharp eye detected a missing "safety pin" in the harness ring which supports the jumpers weight.

Said one new jumper, this is one of the most exciting things I have done since I entered the Army."

"LEAN WAY BACK, LEGS STRAIGHT, GOOD"

Food Expert Believes Self 'Oldest' Chief

CWO Loranzy D. Gatlin was promoted to the grade of W2 during ceremonies in the office of Col. Allen M. Burdette Jr., 11th Aviation Group Commander, on Wednesday July 14.

With over 24 years military service CWO Gatlin said "I am the oldest W-2 in terms of service and the youngest as far as time in grade goes."

Assigned as the food service supervisor for the 11th Aviation Group he can usually be found roaming around the mess halls throughout the Group assisting the mess personnel in devising and promoting ways to serve more appetizing meals.

CWO Gatlin received his warrant 18 months ago through a special program in which there were no restrictions on length of service or age of the applicants.

At the time he received his warrant he was serving as the NCOIC of the Fort Benning Food Service Section. Expertly qualifying him for Warrant Officer was the fact that he had spent all of his military career in the food service field.

Aerial Weapons Ships Assail Gunnery Course

By JIM WEAVER

The aviators of the 131st Aerial Weapons Company (formerly Company D), 227th Assault Helicopter Bn have recently completed the gunnery course at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Each newly assigned aviator received training in the left seat firing of the helicopter-mounted machine-gun systems utilizing the sighting station, then moved to the right seat to fire the system in the stowed position with rockets.

During the July 11-13 training period, aviators who were previously qualified in the system fired for proficiency.

The 227th Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Jack Cranford, joined the unit on the Fort Stewart range July 13 to observe the training and to fire the gun systems to maintain his own proficiency.

The gunnery briefings and live firing exercises are very real and events happen quickly.

"The deadly accuracy of the guns and rockets of this system is unbelivable", said Capt. Ronald David at the completion of his aerial weapons training.

"I was closing on the target fast. WHOM! My first pair of rockets were low but on line — WHOOM — WHOOM! ! The second and third pairs were right on target", excitedly exclaimed CWO George Weckerle.

27th Maintenance Battalion

They'll Take A Back Seat To No Unit

By Ray Paquette

When it comes to pride in an organization, members of Lt. Col. Granville M. Stagg's 27th Maintenance Battalion take a back seat to no unit in the 1st Cavalry Division.

As modern as tomorrow's Army, the 27th is geared to perform up to fourth echelon maintenance on about all categories of Army equipment except aircraft and, rumor has it, that some mechanics moonlight on the side and do a little of that too.

Sky troopers of the battalion were offered a unique challenge when the unit was activated as the 711th Maintenance Battalion in February 1963. That challenge was to tailor a maintenance battalion, with all its heavy repair equipment, to fit a light in weight, fast moving air mobile division.

How well they succeeded can be judged from one striking example: A contact maintenance set, which is a set of tools carried on a truck by one of the repair teams in a forward support detachment; once weighed 13,000 pounds. Through judicious pruning and downright inventiveness the weight of this set was reduced to 750 pounds, a fantastic reduction of over 95 per cent. These tools are used to repair all categories of Army equipment from rifles to artillery and from radios to trucks.

The 27th is an all purpose maintenance battalion. It performs repair and stocks parts for items of ordnance, engineer, quartermaster, signal and chemical equipment used by the Cavalry Division.

Sgt. Maj. Bobbie R. McGuire, battalion sergeant major whose military career includes initial service in the US Marine Corps, said, "If we don't have the part, we can usually fabricate it."

The Maintenance Battalion is organized into a Headquarters and Main Support Company and three Forward Support Detachments. A detachment is designed to support all of the equipment carried by an infantry brigade; everything from two wheel scooters to 105mm howitzers and a resupply of spare parts. The Headquarters Main Support Company "holds the fort" manning the divisional base shop area and performing a mission of higher echelon repair, maintenance and resupply of spare parts.

"My outfit keeps the division riding, shooting, and communicating" Sgt. Maj. McGuire said. "We do everything from repairing typewriters to radios and generators which supply power. We even have a group of canvas repairmen who could turn out a suit of sails for an old clipper ship."

The 27th Maintenance Battalion has a round-the-clock operational capability. Any time of day or night sees the shop areas going full blast. All of the shops are air transportable. Most of them have been repackaged into streamlined portable shelters which are air transportable.

Where it was estimated that 197 aircraft would be required to move the battalion shortly after its activation a more than 50 per cent reduction has been achieved and the organization can now be moved in about 92 aircraft.

Army Assists Nations Through Civic Action

In a remote village in Latin America a small child cries from hunger. Its small frail body indicates that it never had the proper nourishment. It is doubtful the child will live to see its first birthday.

At the same time in a small town in the United States a small child cries because it is hungry. This child is robust and healthy and in a matter of minutes its hunger will be satisfied. The future health and well being of this child in our modern society is almost assured.

In some countries of the world, a man's life expectancy is less than 40 years. In the United States is is double that. In the United States medical help is as close as the nearest telephone. In many countries there is no telephone and no doctor.

In Southeast Asia a farmer may work from dawn until dusk to scratch out a crop which may mean the difference between life or death for his family. If he has an exceptionally good year, he may have a little left over to sell or trade.

The U. S. Army as the result of studies conducted to improve its cold war capabilities has revived a technique that has worked so successfully in the past. This technique is Military Civic Action.

"Black Knight's" New Commander Hosts Buffets

The officers and ladies of the 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry were entertained at two cocktail buffets recently at the quarters of their new battalion commander, Lt. Col. Frederic Ackerson.

The regimental crest of the "Black Knights" and the crest of the 1st Cavalry Division greeted the guests at the front door. The colors of the division and of the 5th Cavalry were used in the yellow floral centerpiece with black trim, yellow candles and tablecloth.

Col. and Mrs. Ackerson welcomed a group of new officers to the battalion headed by Capt. and Mrs. John Pope. Capt. Pope came to the group from the 5l section of the 1st Brigade. Other newcomers include Lt. and Mrs. Carl Divinyi, Lt. and Mrs. Rufus Stephans, Lt. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, Lt. and Mrs. David Sigler, Lt. and Mrs. Melvin Evans, Lt. Emil Satkovsky, Lt. Robert Konrardy, Lt. Cyril Holomon and Lt. Charles Burrell.

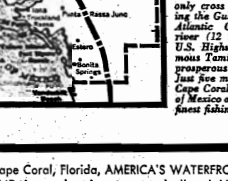
"Every person who invests in well-selected real estate in a growing section of a prosperous community adapts the surest and safest method of becoming independent, for real estate is the basis of wealth."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

No investment on Earth is so safe, so sure, so certain to enrich its owner as undeveloped realty. I always advise my friends to place their savings in realty near some growing city. There is no such savings bank anywhere.

GROVER CLEVELAND



LOCATION

Cape Coral enjoys one of the most beautiful and desirable locations in all Florida. Built on a vast stretch of high, dry, fertile land at the mouth of the Caloosahatchee River, Cape Coral is ideally located on the only cross state waterway linking the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean! Just across river (12 miles by road)—on U.S. Highway No. 41 (the famous Tamiami Trail). — is the prosperous city of Ft. Myers. Just five miles down river from Cape Coral is the fabulous Gulf of Mexico and one of the world's finest fishing areas.

Your Money Grows as Cape Coral Grows
THE RECORD PROVES IT!

History proves land in a growing community is one of the safest and most profitable investment mediums. Reason: land values tend to rise with population growth and development.

Cape Coral is one of the fast growing communities in fast growing Lee County. As Cape Coral's record-breaking development program picks up speed . . . as each road and waterway is extended . . . as more homes are built . . . as more people move in . . . we expect land values to continue climbing —because history proves INCREASES IN LAND VALUE GO HAND-IN-HAND WITH GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT!

"Cape Coral, Florida, AMERICA'S WATERFRONT WONDERLAND, is your best investment today" and this statement has been proven. The dollar growth of this area has been proven to be better than the national average of stock growth and the national residential real estate market. Cape Coral is growing in value by 15% annually . . . and this statement can be proven.

8th Cavaly Men Take To Water; Learn Survival

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 8th Cavalry has been jumping in and out of water for survival training every day during the past week.

The water-logged "Jumping Mustangs" are participating in a three phase program designed to make the soldiers competent when dealing with amphibious obstacles.

Those who can make the 50 meters free style swimming test for Phase I go on to Phase II, which involves the use of air mattresses, canteens, poncho rafts, and other military equipment for survival.

Phase III, the graduation phase, is a tactical river crossing using poncho rafts, and rope bridges.

Non-swimmers report to the Harmony Church Pool at 5 p.m. daily for remedial instruction.

Instructors were furnished by all units of the battalion; some were Rangers, and the rest were Jungle Experts, recent graduates of the Jungle Warfare School in Panama.

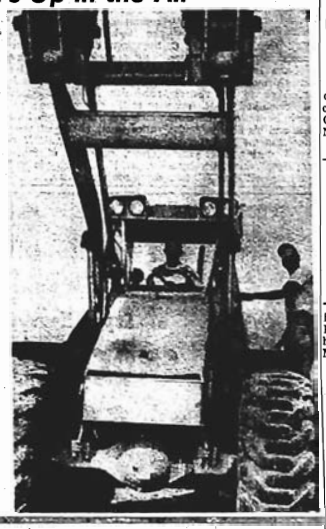
Cav Viet Nam Bound

It's Up in the Air



But it was on the ground that Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning's commander, got behind the controls of this behemoth last Friday to signal the start of the four and a half million dollar project to improve Lawson Army Air Field. Called for in the project is the extension of present runways and the construction of a new control tower. The contract is being carried out by the Deep South Construction Company and has a completion date of December, 1966. Lawson presently ranks eighth in the country in volume of daily operations. Officials expect to operate normally during construction.

President Orders Benning Division to War in Buildup

President Johnson Wednesday announced that he had ordered Fort Benning's 1st Cavalry Division to Viet Nam.

Speaking to a news conference at the White House, President Johnson said "I have today ordered the Air Mobile Division to Viet Nam."

He gave no details of when or how the division would depart for the strife-torn Asian country.

The commander of the 1st Cav. Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, said at a press conference Wednesday that his unit had mixed feelings about going to Viet Nam. "Separation from your family is always a matter of heartache and hardship," he said. For all the details, see page 27.

The 1st Cavalry Division, Air Mobile, was organized at Fort Benning less than one month ago with men and equipment from the experimental 11th Air Assault Division and the 2nd Infantry Division.

The unit has been undergoing intensive day and night training to make it ready for the mission the President gave it Wednesday.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commander of the 1st Cavalry Division has been quoted in the past as saying his outfit can carry out any combat assignment that may be given.

When Secretary of Defense, Robert McNamara, announced the formation of the new division two months ago he gave them an eight-week time table in which to prepare for possible deployment overseas. That eight week period ended prematurely Wednesday when the President made his announcement.

No Policy Change

During the news conference, President Johnson said the sending of additional forces to Viet Nam did not imply any change in the American policy of letting the Vietnamese carry the burden of the fighting with US forces primarily in a backup role.

No plans have been announced to replace the troops of the division when it departs Fort Benning.

DFC and Air Medals Top Lawson Field Ceremonies

A Distinguished Flying Cross and a citation for over 700 combat missions flown in eight months highlighed a ceremony at Fort Benning's Lawson Field last Friday in which three officers and three enlisted men were cited.

Lt. Peter J. Bailey was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism while particlpating in aerial flights in Viet Nam Aug. 24, 1964.

Heavy Fire

Bailey was cited for voluntarily removing two American advisors from an enemy stronghold while being fired upon heavily.

WO Mark A. King was presented 15 Oak Leaf Clusters to the Air Medal for accumulating over 700 combat missions in Viet Nam. In those 700 missions, King's helicopter was hit twice, the second wounding him to such an extent he was removed from the combat area.

The flyer also received a Purple Heart for wounds incurred and an Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service while in Viet Nam.

Capt. Joe D. Jobe was presented the Bronze Star Medal for "distinguishing himself by outstanding service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force" in Viet Nam from April, 1964, to April, 1965.

Meritorious Service

Army Commendation Medals were presented to Sp5 Roger R. Davis and Sp5 Terry L. Russ, both for meritorious service while in Viet Nam.

Also cited at the ceremony was PFC William Bryars for being selected Lawson Army Command soldier of the quarter for April, May and June. Bryars was awarded a trophy and a Savings Bond.

The 1965 Community Activities Association Fund drive got underway this week with Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, providing the impetus.

At a kickoff meeting of keymen and drive captains held Tuesday July 27 in Theater No. 1, Gen. York noted that it was the first time since arriving here that he had had an opportunity to speak to a large group. In spite of the fact the occasion was to ask for support in waging a campaign for money, he said he felt this particular campaign fully justified it.

Two units have already reported 100 percent participation in the CAA fund drive. The Physical Evaluation Board and Co. A, 4th Battalion, 69th Armor of the 197th Inf. Bde. were first in with their reports.

Outlined Work

Gen. York outlined the work done by the three main activities supported by the CAA and said the two visiting nurses made possible by the CAA were giving "yeoman service." He said they had made over 3,000 visits the past fiscal year, had averaged 1,200 immunizations per month and 300 "six-weeks checkups" per month. In addition to this, they had conducted regular programs of pre-natal counseling, poison prevention and tuberculosis clinics.

Speaking of the preventive dental health program which the CAA supports, Gen. York said the three dental hygienists took care of 4,800 children last year for cleaning and fluoridation of teeth to

Army Announces New Processing To Speed Hardship Discharges

Soldiers in the US Army can expect faster processing of hardship discharges in the future — this comes from a recent front page article by the Army Times.

According to the Times, cases in the past have been held up due to improper paperwork at the lower levels and by unneeded documentation when "the hardship is clearly obvious."

The article goes on to say that only cases in which there is some question as to hardship will be referred to "agencies as the Red Cross or the Selective Service for recommendations or home condition reports."

The Times reports Army spokesmen as saying "it is necessary that NCOs and officers at company level take a more important and personal part in counseling the soldier and processing his application."

"The do it quickly approach," which the Times says the Army has adopted, "is being taken because letters from the White House, Congress, other government officials and agencies are bugging the Army on hardship discharge cases."

"To make every one concerned happier," says the Times, "the Pentagon is suggesting seven hardship counseling steps.

1. "All enlisted men should be advised to talk to a designated unit officer and noncom if they have a personal or family hardship. Officers and NCOs picked for these jobs should know the rules for submitting hardship discharge applications and should be mature, understanding and patient.

2. "Soldiers should be told how to file applications and what supporting documents are needed.

3. "When formal application is submitted the soldier should be told 'about how long' it will be before a final decision is reached. If an unexpected delay occurs, the soldier should be informed and should also be told to let his family know about the delay.

4. "In processing hardship discharge applications the Army wants only those which are doubtful to be referred to agencies such as the Red Cross or the Selective Service for recommendations or home condition reports. Routinely referring obviously worthy cases to these groups wastes time and aggravates hardship situations.

5. "When a decision has been made to grant the hardship discharge the soldier should be told and advised when it is possible for him to leave. The soldier should also be advised to tell his family.

6. "When a hardship application is denied, the soldier must be told why in clear terms.

7. "In case of soldiers granted emergency leave, they should be advised of the correct procedures for filing hardship discharge pleas."

Senate Passes Bill to Assist Cold War GI

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The United States Senate has passed the Cold War Veterans' Readjustment Act, commonly called the "Cold War GI Bill," and sent it to the House of Representatives.

Similar bills have twice passed the Senate, but have been voted down in the House.

The current version applies to all uniformed personnel serving since the Korean Conflict and provides educational grants and housing loans similar to those afforded World War II and Korean Conflict veterans.

The Department of Defense position was clarified by an official who explained that since the bill's provisions would be administered by the Veteran's Administration, DOD has opposed only one provision.

This provision, he stated, encourages young men to leave service to take advantage of the benefits. DOD would prefer such assistance to be rendered in such a way as to not adversely affect retention in the service, the official said.

It was explained that DOD has a continuous problem of spending thousands of dollars training young men for the military, then losing them when they have reached the point where they are valuable.

Forsythe Speaks On Lieutenant's Big Challenge

Brig. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, welcomed the students of Infantry Officers' Basic Course No. 1 on July 22, reminding them that they must face the tremendous challenge of the commission which they have accepted.

Gen. Forsythe pointed out that their commissions symbolize the patriotism, valor, trust, fidelity and other professional abilities which they must now develop.

"This is not a gentlemen's course; it is a tough platoon leader's course," he cautioned.

The assistant commandant also stated that good Infantry platoon leaders are scarce, breaking down the six-letter word into the various characteristics of a good leader: studious, confident, active, responsible, courageous and effective.

decrease future dental care.

Gen. York emphasized that the services of these two agencies were of great importance to many of our service personnel and their families who were not able to pay for professional nursing and dental care.

Third Agency

Referring to the Youth Activities Club, the third major agency supported by the CAA, Gen. York cited the services YAC offers to military dependent youths and said it would cost approximately $50,000 to carry out its scheduled program of athletic and recreational activities, driver training and "revitalization" of the teen club.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commanding general of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), followed Gen. York to the rostrum and remarked that even though he wore a different patch and his division had a different name than the one carried during last year's campaign, his personnel would support the CAA fund drive with every bit as much enthusiasm if not more.

Gen. Kinnard referred to a comment by Gen. York regarding contributions from unmarried personnel and said he anticipated little reluctance from the bachelors. He pointed out that they are accustomed to being a part of a community, that they are part of this community and are aware of their obligations as such.

"Boot To Boots"

The 1st Cavalry commander concluded his remarks by echoing the old cavalry battle cry when he said the sky troopers would support the campaign, "boot to boot."

Following the first portion of the kickoff program, which was conducted by Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander and chairman of the fund drive, representatives from each of the benefiting agencies briefed the assembled keymen on the operation and needs of their particular facility. Mechanics of the on-post campaign, which will run through the entire month of August, were explained by CWO A. C. Marcereau, custodian of funds. Lt. Col. H. A. Morley is fund drive project officer.

Pay Call

Your Responsibilities

The requirement for accuracy in military pay is commonly thought to be a joint Personnel-Finance responsibility. This, to a large extent, is true, but you as an individual and recipient of the pay also share in this, and your responsibility is a very personal one. Human errors have and will continue to occur that in some instances will be reflected in your pay check. Underpayments are generally no great or prolonged problem. Most people seem to have a knack for detecting a shortage in the pay check and insist on prompt remedial action. Unfortunately this is not true in many cases where the check is a little fatter than usual and a little extra money can be used at the moment.

The first overpayment is sometimes easy to accept and one can justify keeping it by assuming it will automatically be rectified the following month. However, if it is the type of error that might continue from month to month over a period of time prior to being detected — you could be in for real trouble. After accepting and spending that first overpayment, the second and succeeding ones are much easier to take.

Don't kid yourself that the error won't be caught. The Army has an extensive audit system and eventually it will. The sad part of it all is that you probably will be faced with the prospect of making repayment at a time when you can least afford it.

Maybe you are one of those who are under the illusion that when the time comes to make restitution, it is simply a matter of several small installments on the easy pay plan. This again, unfortunately is not normally true. In order to repay by installments, first you must convince your unit commander that the debt was incurred in good faith on your part. Sometimes this is hard to do since you receive a voucher which itemizes your pay and allowances. Secondly, even if received in good faith, there are a number of types of overpayments that still cannot be repaid by installments.

You have more than earned your pay. It is yours. The Army is deeply interested in seeing you receive that which is rightly yours but you too can help in this undertaking and at the same time save yourself from future embarrassment by accepting only that to which you are entitled.

Examine the payee copy of your military pay voucher each and every month and promptly report either under or over pay amount to your unit personnel officer.

The Boy Scout

A Citizen's Training

Establishing values in today's turbulent times can be difficult indeed — particularly for a young man growing up in an era of modern conveniences, increasing crime rates and changing ideas.

There is no doubt that a young man growing up in this day and age needs guidance — lots of guidance to help him mature into a responsible citizen. Though this guidance should come primarily from the parents, there are many other sources that can help. One of the best of these is the Boy Scouts of America.

It is most refreshing to visit the Boy Scout's Camp McKenzie where Fort Benning boys have their week at camp.

After only a few minutes, it is most evident that the boys undergo an experience which does much toward molding individual characters and which will influence many of their actions in later life.

Their spirit and enthusiasm is contagious and the spectator soon joins in the singing and all that goes with a group of boys learning and having fun together. What a wholesome situation it is when compared to the many newspaper accounts of the misdeeds of too many of our teen-agers in today's supposedly enlightened society.

What were the boys learning at camp and what do they get from scouting in general? Simply stated, they learn resourcefulness, self-sufficiency and honor — values which are much needed these days but which can't be derived from screeching music, television and the like. They learn to fend for themselves, to "rough it" a little bit, and to enjoy themselves a whole lot. They learn pioneering, first aid, cookery, camping and many, many other skills which help to make them wholesome youngsters with a healthy outlook on life. They get the background which will help many of them develop into our leaders of tomorrow.

They also learn an appreciation of our nation's heritage and the values upon which America was established. The creed of the Boy Scout (from Cub to Explorer) encourages reverent, resolute and responsible patriotism. A good Scout can explain to anyone what he believes is his heritage, who created it, who preserved it, who defended it and how.

The Boy Scout program is open to youngsters and young men from 8 to 17 in the form of Cub, Boy and Explorer Scout activities. There is an active program here at Fort Benning but, unfortunately, too few of the boys associated with the Post are availing themselves of this splendid outlet for their energies.

With summer vacation in full swing but the reopening of school closer than many people like to think, it is a good time for both Fort Benning boys and parents to consider the many benefits of becoming involved in this outstanding character building, citizenship training and physical fitness program. It is indeed not too early to prepare to become a part of what over the years has proven to be one of the best youth programs ever developed in this country.

Why not give this some consideration now? Further details can be obtained simply by picking up the telephone and calling the Fort Benning Boy Scout office.

Is there any nobler purpose than that of the Boy Scouts of America in helping boys keep themselves "physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight?"

Boys and parents of Fort Benning, it's a fine program — why not become part of it?

"The Point of the Spear"

"We must continue to send responsible men to Vietnam who are trained to meet and defeat the Communist aggressor. Our Army is the point of the spear of freedom and a strong Army which is the point of the spear."

JOHN P. KENNEDY
Vice President

The Judge Says . . .

Some servicemen are so confused by the many papers which must be signed during a shipment of household goods that they fail to read what they are signing. The admonition to "read the fine print" in sales contracts is equally applicable to shipping documents; carelessness in the latter area may well preclude recovery for damage or loss to your property if a claim is later filed against the carrier or the United States.

In the majority of moves, the service member will be furnished an inventory which lists the household goods and the condition at time of pickup. A key to the symbols used to indicate condition can be found on the inventory itself, and the serviceman should familiarize himself with the symbols to insure that the exceptions noted by the packers conform to the true condition of the goods.

The service member should not sign the inventory until he is satisfied that the exceptions listed reflect the true condition of his property.

Just as it is important to make certain that the inventory is correct at the point of origin, it is also essential that the inventory be accurate when the goods are delivered at the destination. Any damage or loss incurred during shipment should be written on the inventory adjacent to the listing of the particular items damaged or lost. The serviceman should never sign an inventory before taking exceptions on all items for which he might later wish to file a claim.

Perhaps the major reason why service personnel and their dependents are not more diligent in protecting their property rights during a move is that they think the Army will take care of all the details. A useful reminder is that it is not the Army's property which is being shipped—it's your property.

Painful Sunburn Can Be Avoided By Simple Rules

This year's bathing suits are briefer than ever, so more of you will be exposed to the sun. You'll risk a painful sunburn more than ever, unless you follow some simple advice.

Be sure to use plenty of protective lotion, especially the first time out. Put on more lotion every time you come out of the water and don't lie in the sun too long.

Burns usually don't show up until a few hours later, so don't be deceived if you don't look red. Here's a good test to see if you're burning: Press a finger against your skin. If a white spot remains when you lift your finger, it's time to cover up with a shift or slacks.

If you can see yourself turning red, it's really too late to prevent burning, but apply lotion and cover up immediately to prevent a more serious burn.

Whether you're slightly pink or frankly red, you can ease the 'sting by gently smoothing cream or lotion into the skin with pads made of Kleenex tissues folded over three times. Tissue pads are softer and as a cushion between fingers and sensitive skin, apply lotion with less pressure than fingers.

Wear loose clothing if you are burned. Anything tight will make you extra aware of sensitive skin.

If you begin to peel, just keep up applications of lotion with tissue pads. This will help moisturize the skin while easing pain.

CORN MUFFIN TASTE TREAT

Snacktime Suggestion

A relaxed evening of television or reading calls for a supper that's quick and simple. Men especially will "take" to this Corn Muffin Sandwich, hearty with baked ham, red apple and cheese. A mustard - horseradish spread adds zip.

The crisp, golden "bread" slices for this sandwich are halves of large round corn muffins. Bake the muffin batter in five-inch glass dishes or, if you prefer, in a square baking pan.

The corn muffins are tasty contributors of six important nutrients — thamine, niacin, riboflavin, iron, calcium and protein — thanks to the enriched self-rising corn meal used in their preparation. The incorporation of baking powder and salt into self-rising corn meal speeds preparation, too, by eliminating measuring steps.

CORN MUFFIN SANDWICH

8/or 9 servings

8 Corn Meal Muffins or 9 Corn Bread Squares
1-3 cup butter or margarine, softened
4 teaspoons prepared horseradish
4 teaspoons prepared mustard
8 or 9 slices cooked ham
3 unpeeled red apples, cored and thinly sliced
8 or 9 slices (1 oz. each) Cheddar Cheese

Bake Corn Muffins or Corn Bread Squares; then preheat broiler. Set out baking sheet. Blend butter or margarine, horseradish and mustard. Slice muffins or squares crosswise in half. Spread with butter mixture and place on baking sheet. Cover bottoms with ham, apples and cheese. Broil tops and bottoms just until cheese melts. Serve immediately, open-faced.

CORN MEAL MUFFINS or CORN BREAD SQUARES:

Grease eight 5-inch baking dishes or a 9-inch square pan. Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Combine 2½ cups enriched self-rising corn meal, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 tablespoon dried shredded green onions. Blend 2 beaten eggs, 1¼ cups milk and ¼ cup melted shortening or oil. Add all at once to corn meal and mix until well blended. If necessary, add up to ¼ cup more milk to make medium-thick batter. Fill baking dishes or pan. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until brown.

Army Bandsmen Wanted With Talent in Woodwinds

Strike up the band. That's the latest word from ConARC Headquarters, Ft. Monroe, Virginia, in announcing shortages of Woodwind instrumentalists in Army Bands.

CONARC communications show present strengths in the Woodwind instrument category are only 52 per cent of total authorization.

In an effort to bring the bands up to full strength, CONARC has lowered the required audition score for woodwind instrument players.

Any RA enlistee achieving the minimum score or higher will be considered for MOS qualification within one year after enlistment, including 20 weeks of training at the School of Music.

High school and college students possessing musical skill are being encouraged to study woodwind instruments and further their musical careers by enlisting in the U. S. Army as a bandsman.

New MOS Code Adopts Letters for Skill ID

A revised Military Occupation Specialty (MOS) code for the Army's enlisted personnel is now in effect.

Effective July 1, the new system eliminates the decimal point from the old MOS code and uses letters of the alphabet in the third and fifth positions of the five digit job designation. By using letters, it allows for 24 additional identifications and specialties over the old system.

New and Old

To compare the new system with the old, the previously used code for a basic infantryman was 111.1. The new code is 11B1 with a fifth character added when the soldier has a specialization.

Occupational areas, career groups and special abilities are expressed by two numbers and a letter of the alphabet. The last two characters, a number and a letter, identify skill levels and special qualifications of the soldier.

The first number represents the occupational area. This is a term used to identify the major divisions of the MOS structure which permits the logical grouping of career groups having an occupational or function similarity.

Instance

For instance, the number one represents the "Tactical Operations" area, two represents the "Missile and Fire Control" field. There are 10 of these occupational areas. None are well-defined, and a tenth is identified by "O" for special assignments.

The second number identifies the career group. This number shows the relationship between military occupational specialties having similar mental, physical, and psychological requirements. It is used in combination with the first when identifying career groups.

The third character, represented by a letter of the alphabet, completes the job designation and tags the soldier's specific military specialty, a specific and distinct specialty calling for special abilities.

Letters

For example, "A" identifies the entry MOS, "B" through "Y" identifies advanced MOSs and "Z" is designated as a "capper MOS" which is authorized in certain fields and is awarded only to E7s, E8s and E9s whose job involves supervision of two or more advanced MOSs in the same career group.

The fourth character in the code establishes the levels of specialization and leadership. Digits one through five are used to identify the levels. The number one is used for the apprentice, two for the journeyman and three for the advanced journeyman and so on. The higher the number the higher the skill.

Qualifications

The fifth character, a letter of the alphabet, identifies special qualifications of the individual soldier. For instance, "A" would identify a soldier as being trained in the area of Technical Intelligence. "C" identifies one who is qualified for a chemical, biological and radiological job.

The letters "I" and "O" are not used.

The new system has reduced MOS numbers from some 1,350 to approximately 950.

According to the Army Times, the new system of denoting precise skill levels gives the qualified soldier a better chance of being placed in the right assignment at the right time, thus eliminating the element of luck in the promotion system.

Hospital Group Selects Hass For Membership

Maj. Robert F. Hass, adjutant at Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital since June, 1963, has been selected to membership in the American College of Hospital Administrators.

He will be admitted to the group Aug. 29 at San Francisco during the 31st annual convocation of the college.

The American College of Hospital Administrators is a professional society of men and women.

MATS Shows Troop Support Capabilities

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Military-Air Transport Service (MATS) is demonstrating the capability of the Air Force's newest jet transport in supporting Army requirements at three United States locations.

A C-141 Starlifter is making orientation flights with capacity loads of 123 fully-equipped troops at Ft. Campbell, Ky., Ft. Lewis, Wash. and Langley AFB, Va. The demonstrations and familiarization flights are part of the MATS "user" evaluation of the versatile, all-jet aircraft.

The C-141 has a range of approximately 4,000 miles when loaded with 63,000 pounds of cargo and can cruise at an average speed of more than 500 m.p.h. The Air Force has contracted for 132 Starlifters.

Benning Captain Wins Silver Star For Action at Dong Xoai, Viet Nam

TAN SON NHUT, RVN — Capt. Richard S. Jarrett, a former member of the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning, was recently awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

Brig. Gen. John Norton, commander of Support Command in Viet Nam, pinned the nation's third highest decoration for valor on Jarrett, an armed helicopter platoon commander.

Jarrett is due to return to Fort Benning this month and take a position with the tactics committee of the Infantry School.

Recalling the action for which he was decorated, Jarrett said, "For about four days, starting June 10th, we were involved in the operations in and around the village of Dong Xoai. It was a long haul from start to finish."

The cantonment of friendly troops there had been overrun by the Viet Cong, but some survivors managed to regroup at the eastern end of the hamlet.

"When we went in for low level reconnaissance passes, around 2:30 in the afternoon," he said, "it seemed that there were only about five friendly faces showing."

Intelligence Corps Seeks Senior Grade Volunteers

The Voice of an Angel

Pilots flying into Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. are hearing the voice of ex-model Meg Nepfel, indeed an angel to those who happen to be working in the Forney Army Airfield control tower. She has decided to take her Army career one step further by attending the WAC Officer Candidate School at Fort McClellan, Ala. (ANF Photo)

WASHINGTON — A pitch for non-coms to volunteer for vacancies within the Army Intelligence Corps is now being given top play by DA personnel officials.

Volunteers in pay grades E-5 through E-7 are wanted specifically to fill vacancies as military intelligence specialists, area intelligence specialists, and military intelligence coordinators.

The requirements for intelligence corps duty are spelled out in AR 614-40. Volunteers must have at least 30 months remaining service, have a higher than average aptitude, have a clean military and civilian record and must be eligible for a security clearance.

Stateside volunteers can apply immediately through their commanding officers for assignment to intelligence duty. Overseas volunteers must wait awhile. Also, they must file application at least 10 to 12 months in advance of their CONUS return date, the Army said.

Applicants are assured of a fast "yes" or "no" to their request. Each volunteer will be personally interviewed by an Army Intelligence Corps official. He'll be advised immediately as to qualification for intelligence duty. If qualified, the interviewer will assist in the preparation of the necessary papers and documents for application, the Army said.

Noncoms accepted for intelligence duty will be required to attend a course of instruction at the Army Intelligence Corps Center, Fort Holabird, Md., before awarding of new MOS.

Name Change

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U. S. Army Support Command, Viet Nam, was redesignated U. S. Army, Viet Nam on July 20 and its chain of command for vital logistics and administrative activities was revamped. General Westmoreland said the new title represents the formal establishment of an Army component command in Viet Nam to which all U. S. Army units will be assigned.

Tanker Knits Away Leisure Hours

By JOHN HICKAM

To look at his rugged countenance and hands, you'd never figure that he could turn out dainty doilies and beautifully knitted sweaters.

But he can and does and is man enough to admit it.

SSgt. Ernest Finger (whose last name is right in step with his hobby of knitting) is an active and particularly accomplished knitter who took up the needles as a child as many youngsters do. He just didn't put them down and as a result his wife and relatives wear some extremely pretty and expertly knitted sweaters, sox, dresses and coats.

Tank Commander

SFC Finger, a tank commander — a job hardly calling for nimble fingers — has been in the Army since 1946. Before that he put in an 18-month hitch in the Navy where he whiled away the time knitting aboard ship.

Finger presently is assigned to the 2nd Cavalry Squadron (Provisional), formerly the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry, 2nd Infantry Division.

"I took up knitting when I was five or six years old," he explained, "and learned from my mother until I was old enough to knit from instruction books. I didn't want others to do what I couldn't."

Besides knitting he also is adept at crocheting and has intricately patterned table cloths and bed spreads to prove it.

Finish Up Best

The Korean veteran prefers making sweaters and coats because they tend to finish up best and are very useful and practical garments.

It isn't unusual to find Finger knitting while on duty as Staff Duty NCO or when on guard in the guard house.

"It makes the time go by faster," he said, "and I can accomplish quite a bit."

Knitted or crocheted garments tend to last longer than conventionally woven materials, and to prove it the sergeant said his mother has a bed spread he knitted more than 20 years ago. She still uses it regularly and it is still in excellent condition. It took him seven months to make the spread.

Fancy Work

Although he has never entered his fancy work in fairs or contests, his wife and friends have encouraged him to do so. He has taught his nieces and nephews to knit and crochet, but says he can't depend on the boys to continue.

Finger suffered a heart attack in 1962 and was in the Valley Forge hospital, but he went right back to work as soon as he was released. Knitting and crocheting have been a profitable and therapeutic hobby for a tanker who just doesn't look like a "knit-one, pearl-two" knitter.

'Knit One, Pearl Two'

That's the 30-year-old hobby of SSgt. Ernest Finger who spends his spare minutes and hours with knitting needles in hand. A tank in the motor pool is as good as a rocking chair at home as far as this Fort Benning tanker is concerned. (Photo by Don Borders)

700 'Hueys' Join Army's Arsenal

ST. LOUIS, MO. (ANF) —More than 700 new UH-1 IROQUOIS helicopters will take to the air as Bell Helicopter Company, Fort Worth, Tex., begins delivery next year of the craft specified in a new $50 million letter contract awarded by the Army Aviation Materiel Command here.

More than 250 UH-1B models will be delivered starting in June 1966 and more than 450 UH-1D models will roll off the production line starting in October.

The contract covers the airframes only, with engines and avionics to be provided by the government through separate contracts with the manufacturers.

Army May Be Doubling Present Number of 'Chopper' Companies

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara announced that consideration is being given to doubling the number of helicopter companies in the Army.

"We have already substantially increased helicopter production," Secretary McNamara said, announcing that UH-1 Iroquois production is being increased 60 per cent and CH-47A Chinook production is being increased 100 per cent.

Each service uses the twin-bladed Iroquois, which has been modified into several versions, including the Army's UH-1B and UH-1D, used for medical evacuation and other transport purposes.

"These production increases, of course, will not take place overnight," the secretary said. "We will achieve the full 60 per cent increase in the Iroquois production by the spring of next year, and the Chinook at roughly the same time."

New non-divisional companies will be formed within the Army giving greater air transportation mobility Army-wide, an official said, pointing out that this in no way affects the present structure of divisional aviation battalions.

Each of the Army's divisions has an aviation battalion governed by tables of allowances, authorization and organization which will not undergo change through inactivation of companies elsewhere in the Army.

PERFECT ORBIT

NASA announces that the Tiros X weather satellite, launched from Cape Kennedy July 1, is in a near-perfect sun-synchronous orbit from which it will scan and photograph tropical storm breeding areas. Takes Understanding

Keeping the Dominican Peace Is a Job

SANTO DOMINGO, D. R. (Special) — It has been a quiet day with no reports of shooting along the Inter-American Peace Force corridor which divides the warring junta and rebel factions in this battle-scarred city.

It is now 11 p.m. and SFC Leon McGee has come on duty as the operations sergeant in the U. S. Forces joint headquarters.

To McGee operations are second nature after serving with the 25th Infantry Division during the Korean War as a first sergeant. He has over 14 years experience in the Regular Army.

Trouble Spot

He came to this trouble spot during the early days of the crisis from Fort Benning, Ga., and the 1st Battalion, 9th Infantry, a part of the 2nd Infantry Division, where he was the operations sergeant for intelligence.

"Looks like another long night, Leon," says the operations officer as he pours a cup of coffee. "Our check points along the corridor have been reporting everything as quiet."

For McGee quiet nights are good nights. It means that the military situation is cooling off and maybe he can soon return home to his wife Clara and their three children.

The nights when a cease-fire violation occurs along the corridor are nights that occur too often for McGee.

The phone rings, breaking into his thoughts of home. "Let's hope it's routine," he mutters as he picks up the receiver.

The call is routine. Perhaps this will be one of the nights when everything is quiet.

Deck of Cards

The time is 11:30 p.m. and the operations clerk comes up to McGee's desk noisily shuffling a deck of cards.

"Hey sarge, you ready for a game of gin? I've got to get back on the stomping you gave me last night," the clerk taunts.

The game starts and the operations section settles down to the monotony of waiting.

At 12:30 a.m. the phone rings. McGee picks it up. He hangs up.

"Well we have one," he says to the operations officer as he crosses over to the situation map.

"The rebels fired approximately 20 rounds of small arms fire into our position here five minutes ago," he says as he points to a position on the map. "We haven't returned the fire. There is no firing going on now. Looks like some more the same old harrassment."

Peacekeeping Orders

The orders for the peacekeeping force here are to fire only when the sector commander gives the word. Indiscriminate firing by the OAS peace force will not be condoned. The airborne paratroopers obey the order.

"You know it kind of gets on a soldier's nerves waiting for something to happen. I guess this is part of being a cold war soldier," the Fort Benning sergeant observes.

Time passes and there have been no further reports of cease-fire violation. The card game continues.

"I thought I had something to gripe about when I was called to come down here. I just got back from Europe last summer. I don't feel so bad now.

"A Lot of Guys"

"I've run into a lot of guys here who returned to the states only six months ago from duty in places like Viet Nam and Korea. My wife Clara is a good Army wife. I'm sure she realizes this," McGee says.

Dawn breaks and the operations officer leaves to clean up before going off duty. McGee yawns, puts the cards away and kids the clerk about his game. It has been a quiet night. There was only one incident. It was another night of keeping the peace in this troubled city.

Why We're in Viet Nam--An Answer

The question "Why are we in Viet Nam?" is constantly on the lips of the American soldier and public alike.

It is a question which is constantly thrown up to the soldier as he deals with the public in his day to day life.

Recently, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, gave the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco one of the most clear - cut answers to the question:

". . . Some Americans and many of our allies ask, how do we justify our efforts in South Viet Nam? I have no difficulty answering this question.

"First, we are involved from the political standpoint because we have committed ourselves to help them. In 1950, we agreed to furnish military aid against the Viet Minh and in 1951, economic aid. After the partition of 1954 — in 1955 to be exact — we reaffirmed our 1950 commitment to provide military assistance and advice. We did so following a policy supported by four different Presidents who agreed that America must be willing to help nations threatened by communist aggression. If we are to believe public opinion polls and the fact that congressional opinion generally reflects public opinion, the great majority of Americans have agreed with their Presidents in this matter. Whether we, as individuals, agree is now somewhat beside the point as the faith of our friends and the little people who look to us as the pillar of freedom would be badly damaged if we backed down.

Equally Cogent

"From the strategic standpoint there are other, equally cogent reasons. Red China is the great power in Asia. Just as the Soviets historically have always sought control of a major warm water port, the Chinese have longed for control of the rice rich lands of Southeast Asia. The Red Chinese are no exception. As you know, the small, relatively undeveloped Southeast Asian nations are incapable of defending themselves alone against a great power. Should we not assist these nations, it is predictable with great certainty that they would be subjected to intolerable communist pressures which could well force them to accommodate the communists in some way. These pressures could not only affect the mainland nations but those offshore as well, including the Philippines, Indonesia, and others.

"The decision, then, is not limited to whether we should help the Vietnamese but rather includes the larger question — should we assist any nation of Southeast Asia to resist Chinese pressure and - or aggression. Should we give up in Viet Nam, there is no question that communist expansionism would be encouraged and pressure on the remainder of the area greatly increased. Unless we discard our objective of containing communist aggression, defeat in South Viet Nam will force us to draw a new line somewhere in Southeast Asia and try to defend that. This would be most difficult. We would wind up, and probably rather quickly, facing the very same situation we face today in Viet Nam, only with weakened morale and political uncertainty on the part of those being supported, plus a much less defensible position, militarily speaking.

"Another essential related reason for us to continue our present course is the effect our defeat would have within the communist world. We are all aware of the somewhat different approaches of the Soviets and the Red Chinese to world affairs. The violent, xenophobic and sometimes irrational tendencies of the Chinese leaders, together with their incipient nuclear power, appear to pose the greater danger to world peace.

Mission of Army Studied By Visiting College Girls

Approximately 120 women are getting an insight into Army life yesterday and today as students of the WAC college junior course visit Fort Benning.

Primary purpose of the visit is for the women to learn about the mission and organization of the Army in the field.

Each woman is a cadet corporal in the enlisted Reserve for four weeks and is considered in student officer status while attending a month-long course at Fort McClellan, Ala. This is the ninth year of the program for college women between their junior and senior years.

Yesterday at Fort Benning's Marshall Auditorium, the visitors were welcomed by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commandant of The Infantry School. Then the epic poem, "I Am the Infantry," was presented.

Their itinerary included observing a river crossing problem near Bradley Landing, airborne training at Eubanks Field, a rifle company in the attack problem at Cactus observation post and Ranger confidence training.

They also observed a scout dog demonstration, and toured Fort Benning and the Infantry Museum.

Thursday evening they attended a buffet and dance at the Gold Bar Club sponsored by the 2nd Battalion, Student Brigade.

After a tour of Lawson Army Airfield today, the visitors will depart by bus for the return trip to Fort McClellan.

Overseas Policy Changes Define Criteria for Viet Nam Assignments

The Department of the Army recently announced changes in overseas assignment policies and redefined the criteria by which personnel are to be chosen for tours.

The purpose is to establish all long tour areas, including the continental U. S. (CONUS), as the rotational base for short tours.

For short tours of duty overseas, volunteers will be chosen first to fill an appropriate personnel requirement.

Following on the list of selection priority are personnel with the longest time in CONUS, personnel returning from a long tour area, those serving in a long tour area and returnees from short tours other than Viet Nam.

Except for volunteers, no individual will be assigned to Viet Nam who has served a normal tour there in the previous 24 months.

Heading the list of men who will be selected for long tours of overseas duty are returnees from short tour areas with the longest time in CONUS. Personnel completing short tours and others who fill the necessary Department of the Army requirements will be considered next.

60 Days Leave

Personnel selected for overseas assignment may be authorized a maximum of 60 days leave when assigned to a short tour in the Pacific area from Europe or the U. S. Army Southern Command.

A minimum of 15 days leave will be allowed all personnel unless directed otherwise by the Department of the Army.

Personnel assigned to a unit on the date the unit is alerted for overseas deployment and who have been officially notified of acceptance to a service or civilian school will be given the choice of remaining with the unit or attending the school.

TDY Status

Members of alerted units who are absent attending a formal course of instruction in a TDY status will continue school and join their units upon completion of school.

Special criteria are applicable for assignment to Viet Nam in addition to those above. Qualified personnel who volunteer for Viet Nam duty may be assigned according to personnel requirements.

Personnel serving on command tours will serve the minimum tour for their grade. Those engaged in training aviators or aviation maintenance men will not be sent to Viet Nam unless replaced by personnel not eligible for overseas assignment.

Men in units alerted for deployment to Viet Nam and who have already received overseas assignments to units in Viet Nam will deploy with their unit.

Members of alerted units who have at least 60 days of service left from the date of embarkation will accompany their unit overseas.

Two Students Knowing Too Much Present Problem for Instructors

A case of knowing too much for the course was the recent problem for the Infantry School's Electronics Department and netted two bright students graduation honors and a letter of commendation from the assistant commandant.

Two soldiers, Pvts. James C. Street and Neil T. Gargiulo, reported to the Communications - Electronics Department for instruction. The problem arose when the committee headed by Capt. Ronald I. Spinks discovered the two privates had associate degrees in electronics.

The committee felt that to put them through the regular course designed to teach from the ground level on up was not necessary. It was decided that both of the students should be allowed to take an accelerated course.

This course of action proved to be beneficial to both the committee and the students. After only four weeks of training in a course that is scheduled for 12 weeks, the two young men took the final exams and both received high enough scores to become honor graduates of the class.

Street, who has an associate degree in electronics from the New York State University Agricultural and Technical Institute at Farmingdale, Long Island, recorded a 96.5 per cent average in his instruction. Gargiulo has an associate degree in electronics from the Fayetteville (N.C.) Technical Institute. He recorded a 96.7 per cent.

Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, said in a letter commending them on their achievement, "Your outstanding record is indicative of your ability to apply civilian knowledge to furthering your military knowledge and increasing your value to the United States Army."

Pvt. Gargiulo is a member of the New York National Guard undergoing six months of active duty while Street will serve two years.

Army Major Only Service Member to Get Fellowship

WASHINGTON (ANF) — A 33-year-old U. S. Army major is among the 15 Americans selected by President Johnson to receive the first White House Fellowships.

Maj. Ronald B. Lee, assigned to the Army Materiel Command Headquarters here, competed with 3100 other applicants for the Fellowships, created to give young people with top leadership potential the opportunity to work directly with either the Vice-President, a Cabinet member, or one of four presidential assistants.

It is anticipated that the experience will aid each Fellow in attaining a deeper knowledge of top level government which will be of use as he advances in his profession.

Only Military Winner

Stamps or Military Crests?--Army Brat Collects Crests

BY JOHN HICKMAN

Most boys save stamps or coins, and it's only natural that an Army brat would collect patches or crests.

Sgt. Maj. Cread R. Roberts of the 2nd Cavalry Squadron (Provisional) chose the latter and today — 30 years after he started — he has more than 2,700 of the crests in one of the most complete and well displayed collections in the United States.

His favorites are those of the Cavarly units. And justly so as his father was a first sergeant of Troop A, 3rd Cavalry which was garrisoned at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont. His father served in the same troop from 1914 until 1940. Those were the days when the U. S. Cavalry still had horses and not armored personnel carriers and tanks.

Collection of 17

A collection of the crests from today's 17 active Cavalry units hangs in the sergeant major's office. He arrived at the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry in June, just a short time before the "Garry Owen" Squadron colors were packed up and shipped to Korea with the 2nd Division colors.

He has served in the 2nd, 3rd, 7th and 11th Cavalries during his 23 years in the Army. His tenure with "Cav" unit began in 1952.

The veteran of two wars began saving the ornamental bits of metal and enamel at the age of 10. It was in 1922 when the Department of the Army authorized the wear and, in fact, the existence of distinctive unit insignia.

There is an organization of collectors which has some 350 active members and calls itself the American Society of Military Insignia Collectors. The society, of which Roberts is a member, meets annually during the Labor Day weekend and publishes a quarterly magazine which carries illustrations of crests, news of interest to collectors.

Other Types

"The Society also promulgates other types of Army 'symbols' including rank stripes, unit patches and other identifying devices. The Society's purpose is to "promote military history, customs and traditions," he explained.

His favorite crest is a large, oblong insignia from the 26th Cavalry which met its demise in 1942 in the Philippine Islands. The 26th Cavalry, mounted on horses, attacked a Japanese tank column: it was the story of beast versus machine. The machines inevitably won, but only after the cavalry inflicted many casualties on the Japanese tankers. That attack heralded the end of the traditional horse cavalry as an effective weapon. It marked the end of an era.

Some of the more unusual insignia which the Army produced include a pair of mules which face each other when pinned on a soldier's shoulders. These were from the 2nd Field Artillery Battalion. Regiments of the 45th Infantry Division had Indian heads on the top of its crests, much like the 2nd Infantry Division's symbol. Another was the spotted black ocelot of the 65th Coast Artillery Regiment.

Only Army Crests

While some collectors keep all types of crests — foreign as well as those of the United States; all services as well as the Army — Roberts saves only U.S. Army crests. Categorized by major branch, he owns 281 armor, 941 artillery, 331 engineer, and 528 infantry.

The largest known collection belongs to a lieutenant colonel in the reserves in New York. He boasts more than 7,000 crests, and collects all kinds.

A retired army nurse, Lt. Col. Beatrice M. Dare of Washington, devotes most of her time to research and heraldry. As vice presient of the Society she prepares information for collector - members.

Equally Important

Quick to point out that collecting the crests is only a portion of the hobby, he says that knowing the history about the units and the heraldry displayed on the crests is equally important.

Some of the battalion and division crests are cryptic when it comes to gaining meaning from the symbols. He can and will outline the geneology of a unit at the drop of a crest. Just try him on a Cavalry unit and look out for the facts and figures.

He will have a chance to collect even more crests before his retirement from the Army. Just a few weeks ago Lt. Col. John P. McArdle, commander of the 2nd Cavalry Squadron (Provisional) and the 4th Squadron, 7th Cavalry until July 1, administered the oath of enlistment to Roberts for a three-year reenlistment.

'Waste-Line' Watch Saves Money

President Johnson's Cost-Cutting Plan Costs Post $8,000--Saves $231,000

By IDA C. EVANS

Watching the "waste line" not only helps keep the budget "slim and trim" but has paid off to the tune of $7,749 in Incentive Awards for Fort Benning employees during Fiscal Year 1965.

"It isn't just the top planners and supervisors who come up with ideas for saving the government money," according to Frank Spear, administrator of the Incentive Awards program for the post. "Often it is the man near the bottom who is in the best position to see a duplication of effort or a short cut to the desired goal."

"During the calendar year 1964, government employees in the nation made 463,551 suggestions," Spear said. "Of these, 118,500 were adopted. Cash awards for money-saving suggestions averaged $40 each and totaled $3.3 million."

President's Call

Post employees are heeding President Johnson's call for a "new spirit of cost consciousness and improvement by every supervisor and employee," according to Spear.

The Incentive Awards Committee approved 356 cost cutting suggestions from among 1,308 proposed during the fiscal year. "The outlay of $7,749 represents $6,149 paid out for suggestions expected to save the government $231,386 per year, while the remaining $1,600 was for suggestions that will result in benefits that cannot be estimated on a dollar basis," Spear said.

A suggestion that reduced a 180-hour task to a 15 minute machine calculation brought a $200 award to Guy Y. Moore, chief of the Army Supply Status Reporting System for The Infantry Center Supply Control and Storage Section.

Butting My Head

"I was practically butting my head against the wall trying to figure out how to cut down on the time it took to check 65,000 IBM cards for data we needed for our stock account report," Moore recalled.

"I had tried out several ideas over a period of three months when I started taking a work simplification course taught by the Comptroller Section. The things I learned in the course helped me crystalize my thinking and perfect the solution to my problem. The man-hours saved, they tell me, will save the government $5,361 a year."

Not so easily calculated will be the benefits of a suggestion made by Robert L. Helle who is the military testing supervisor at the Testing Unit of the Adjutant General Section. His $200 cash award was compensation for a "better mousetrap" type of work improvement suggestion, Spear said.

Scoring Key

"I had to do something about the scoring key we used to grade Morse Code tests," Helle explained. "The answer key that came with the test manual had to be cut out and folded fan-shape, then refolded as each line of the test was scored. There was lost motion in folding and refolding, danger of grader error when the key was returned to the test paper, and then the paper keys would wear out before we finished grading the papers."

Helle transferred the correct answers to a rigid template he made, cut out to reveal student responses when placed on top of the test paper. This suggestion, which has been adopted Army-wide, has resulted in "improved operations of major significance," Department of the Army officials said.

Hospital Problem

Mrs. Thelma H. McKibben solved a problem at Martin Army Hospital's Outpatient Clinic where she is a receptionist.

"Sometimes a patient asks about a 'little red pill' or 'pink pill,'" she said. "I suggested that we type on the label, not only the prescription number, name and date, but the actual name of the medicine and the size of the tablet, unless the doctor advised against it."

Mrs. McKibben's suggestion is valuable for several reasons; the most important is that when a child accidentally takes a drug, the label on the bottle identifies the contents. This makes it unnecessary to check the number with the prescription file. The suggestion resulted in $100 for Mrs. McKibben. It is expected to be a time-saver worth $4,593 per year.

Heyward T. Risher got $100 for suggesting that metal in-boxes be used instead of the more expensive wooden ones. This suggestion grew out of a study of supply catalogues.

Wins $160

Miss Jeanette Zuback, an accounting clerk in The Infantry School Operations Office, was given a $160 award for eliminating a daily strength report since needed information could be found on a weekly "Gains and Loss" report. The change will save $3,126 per year.

Machine shop foreman Lewis E. Taylor solved a problem of locking up M-14 rifles in racks made to fit the weapons before the butt plate was modified.

"Units had gun racks and rifles," he said, "but the problem was how to secure the weapons when the locking bar did not fit."

Taylor designed a new locking bar, which was adopted Army-wide. He received $150.

"I believe in this Incentive Award program," Taylor said. "I keep after my people all the time to make suggestions. It brings in a nice bit of ready money but the main thing is it saves money — in the mill right now and we yours and mine, that tax No. 3 has several suggestions are going to keep them com- dollar."

"WASTE-WATCHER" . . . Guy Y. Moore of the Supply and Control Section receives his certificate of commendation and an award for $200 for a suggestion which saved the Army nearly $5,400. Moore received the award from Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, former commander of the Infantry Center.

Magna Carta Day To Gen. Bradley

PHILADELPHIA (AFPS) — The Magna Carter Day award for 1965 was presented here to General of the Army Omar N. Bradley by William H. Perot, Marshal of the Baronial Order of the Magna Carta.

Mr. Perot explained that the award is always bestowed upon a distinguished gentleman who, by his actions in public and private life, has championed the principles proclaimed by the Magna Carta at Runnymede, England, June 15, 1215.

NO HAVEN

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The South Carolina Supreme Court has ruled in effect that constant nagging does not constitute grounds for divorce. The ruling was in answer to a contention that a wife's constant nagging constituted mental cruelty. The supreme court said the record of the case showed nothing more than incompatibility.

Gen Norton Deputy CG In Viet Nam

Brig. Gen. John Norton, former assistant commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning who went to South Viet Nam to take over the Army Support Command, has been named deputy commanding general of U.S. Army in Viet Nam, Army spokesmen said.

The new command structure in Viet Nam has done away with the Support Command and has put additional responsibilities into the new office. The Support Command had charge of Special Forces operations for U.S. units.

The introductions of large U.S. combat units into the area brought an even greater task for the logistics operations headed by Gen. Norton. The new establishment is ". . . an Army Component Command with all U.S. Army units assigned to it" according to the announcement made in Saigon.

The commanding general of Military Assistance Command in Viet Nam, Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, will be commanding general, responsible to U.S. Pacific Headquarters, Hawaii, with Gen. Norton as deputy commanding general, and Brig. Gen. Richard J. Seitz as assistant deputy commanding general.

Test Squad Gets Vote Of Thanks

Twelve men of Company C, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry were recently honored by the United States Army Infantry Board for their participation in an experimental program designed to test modifications of the M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier.

The men, Sgt. Marion D. Calvert, Sgt. Donald D. Neal, Sgt. Alan M. Perryman, Sgt. Everett R. Croney, Sp4 William B. Murray, Sp4 Roger L. Adams, Sp4 Samuel L. King, PFC Kenneth Conway, PFC John K. Moyer, PFC Peter Martinez Jr., PFC Charles L. Rodgers, and Pvt. Robert J. Rodriques, were the recipients of a letter of commendation from the USAIB and were selected to represent the board at further tests of the vehicle to be held at Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

The Aberdeen tests will be conducted in order to improve the assault capabilities of the M113. Original tests involving the 12 men of the 58th were designed to investigate the effectiveness of the installation of side port-holes in the vehicle. The squad, under the direction of Sgt. Calvert, was initially selected from a field of six squads to represent the Infantry Board during the mechanized demonstration.

Sp4 John McGill presents the Third Army Tennis Championship Team Trophy to Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, who accepts on behalf of the Infantry Center. McGill was the winner of the open singles championship at the Third Army tennis tournament held at Fort Stewart two weeks ago. He also teamed up with Capt. Starks and Aure Victors In Center Golf Playoffs

The Infantry Center Golf Playoffs came to a close last week with Nathaniel Starks taking top honors in the open division and Garmon Aure placing first in the senior category after three days of competition at the Main Officers' golf course.

Starks, Aure and four other top competitors were chosen to represent Fort Benning at the Third Army golf championships to be held at Fort Jackson, S. C. from August 9 to 13.

Forty men were enteed in the 72 hole competition. Starks took the open with a score of 282 while Aure's 303 was good enough to land him top spot in the senior category.

Three other Fort Benning team members selected from the top competitors in the open were Carl Seldon and James Wiley who both shot a 295 and Robert Sutton with a 314.

Howard Holbrook was runner up in the senior division with a 309 and will be the second team member in the senior category for the Third Army tourney.

428th Medics Wallop TSB, 11-5; Wood Hits Bases Loaded Homer

With bad ball handling plaguing the team all the way, The Student Brigade was slapped with its third straight defeat of the half by a 428th Medical Battalion team which managed to multiply seven hits into 11 runs through seven TSB errors.

Medic shortstop Joe Wood gave a big boost to the Medic's 11-5 win by blasting a bases loaded homer over the left field wall in the seventh inning.

Henry Andrews pitched eight innings for the Medics, chalking up his second win of the half. TSB starter Arlan Clark took the loss for the brigade which began the half by winning its first four games.

TSB is now tied with the Infantry Center Troop Command for first place in the league.

It was a Medic game from the beginning. In the first, the 428th bagged a single run when Ulysses Davis scored on Raul Guerrero's single. They followed up in the second with three more runs to take a 4-0 lead. Joe Wood bagged his first rbi of the evening in this inning by sending a triple to left scoring John Keyser.

TSB latched onto two runs in the third to get into the scoring column for the first time. Thurman Woody led off the inning with a walk and was followed by Glen Kelly who singled to right. An error by the center fielder and a wild pitch by Clark brought them both home.

After the Medics bagged single runs in the third and sixth innings to make the score 6-2, Wood stepped up in the bottom of the seventh and unleashed his powerful bat on a fast ball by TSB reliefer Jimmy Alkire, for a grand slammer that cleared the bases and boosted his evening's rbi total to five.

TSB scored three runs in the eighth but the Medics were too far out in front to be hurt and won by a big six run margin.

197th Wins Tussle With 428th Medics

Doubles by Geral Burgess and Billy Williamson, resulting in a three run seventh inning, gave the 197th Infantry Brigade a 5-3 win over the 428th Medical Battalion at Gowdy Field last week.

It was the second meeting of the half for the two teams. The Medics whipped the brigade, 5-2, in their first encounter.

Duane Eichorn, who came to the mound in the sixth inning to relieve 197th starter Burgess, earned his first win of the half. Mike Morris, who pitched the first six for the Medics, was handed the loss giving him a two win, one loss record.

The Medics were able to send their first batter of the game home with a run. Joe Wood led off the first with a walk and then stole second. With two away, center fielder Raul Guerrero smacked a single to left sending Wood home.

The 197th retaliated quickly. With two away in their half of the first, Eddie McLean lined a single to right and was followed by Tom Groce who gave him a game-tying ticket home by hitting a single to left.

In the top of the second, three 197th errors allowed right fielder Grady Lane to score an unearned run breaking the tie in favor of the Medics.

The score remained 2-1 until the fifth when the Medics clamped onto their last run of the game through Walt Waiss' long double to left which brought Wood galloping home.

In the seventh, with the Medics on top 3-1, the 197th launched a scoring attack which netted them three runs and eventually the game. With one away, Medic pitcher Morris walked Bill Rich and Bobby Coe. After Farrell flied out, Burgess blasted a double to left scoring Rich and Coe. Williamson followed suit with another double to drive in Burgess with the third tally of the inning and the game-winning run.

The Medics brought in Ronald Rahr to relieve Morris but the damage was done and the Medics were not to recover.

The brigade picked up another run in the eighth to make the score 5-3.

CTC Emerges Victor In Hit-Fest With TSB

It was a batters' game all the way with 22 men crossing the plate as the Infantry Center Troop Command turned back The Student Brigade 14-8, at Gowdy Field last week.

WICKER

JIM MUNDY

CTC's Floyd Wicker was king of the big bats, blasting four hits including a home run in his six trips to the plate.

CTC got 15 hits while TSB netted 10. When the smoke cleared, it was Jim Mundy who emerged the victor. Mundy came to the mound in the fourth to relieve Doug Talmadge and went out in the fifth after CTC had gone ahead for good, TSB starter Arlan Clark took the loss.

The scoring began in the second inning when Wicker led off with a single and was pushed home by a Rosy Spence single and a TSB error.

In the third, the Troop Command followed up with three more runs to take a 4-0 lead. Center fielder Eli Amaro led off the inning with a long double to left. Bill Nordan walked and Rosy Spence was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Then with two away, Mundy brought everyone home with a big double to left.

TSB came from four runs behind to take a temporary lead in the fourth by bringing five men home.

Mickey Carmack led off the inning with a single and was followed by Bill Turley who walked. After catcher Jay Curley drew the second walk of the inning to load the bases, pitcher Clark blasted a triple to the left field wall scoring TSB's first three runs.

Clark then scored on an error that put Fred Blosser on first. After stealing second, Blosser was singled home by Bob Sheridan to put TSB out in front by a slim one run margin.

CTC was not long in turning the tables on TSB. In the top of the fifth, a Troop Command hitting barrage, including doubles by Bob Hodges and Spence, sent four men home to make the score 8-5.

TSB picked up single runs in the fifth and sixth innings to come within one run of the Troop Command but were to come no closer.

In the seventh, CTC scored two more runs and in the eighth unleashed another scoring attack which produced four more tallies. Floyd Wicker accounted for two of runs when he hit a homer over the left field wall with one man aboard.

TSB picked up another run in the ninth but was still six runs behind when the game ended.

Blankenship Gets Three Pistol Wins

Service Pistol Champ

SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit shows his winning form. Thompson, who narrowly missed the individual championship in the pre-Camp Perry pistol matches at South Bend, Ind., on Sunday, July 25, fired an 881 out of 900 on Monday to win the individual service pistol title. Later, he led the Army Blue No. 1 team to victory in the service pistol team competition. Firing with him were Sgt. John Lawson, SFC Howard Parker and SSgt. Hershell Anderson. The four-man crew, coached by MSgt. Mack Salmon, posted a 1,149 total.

By Lee LaCombe

SFC William Blankenship of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit withstood a closing challenge by his teammate, SFC Ralph Thompson, to capture his third pre-Camp Perry pistol championship with a three day total of 2652 at South Bend, Ind. on Sunday, July 25.

Thompson, who started the day trailing by eight points managed to close the gap after the first two .45 caliber matches and finished in a point deadlock with Blankenship.

But the Army's five time national champion had put 145 of his 270 rounds in the x-ring while Thompson only managed 127x-ring shots for second place.

The two teamed with SSgt. Emil Heugatter and SSgt. Hershell Anderson to capture Sunday's .45 caliber team match with a 1178 and give the Army's Blue Squad the aggregate title with a 3507. This was four points higher than the Marine Corps Blue Team.

On Saturday, Blankenship had topped the 200 entry field in the center fire pistol matches with a total of 883 out of a possible 900 points. Friday he ground out 890 out of a possible 900 to capture the .22 caliber championship.

Blankenship had also fired anchor on the U. S. Army Blue Squad which won Friday's team event with a four man total of 1,183 out of 1,200. Firing with him were Heugatter, Anderson and Thompson. MSgt. Mack Salmon was the successful team coach.

Three of Friday's four fired matches went to the Army marksmen.

Sgt. Donald Jaynes of Army Europe took the first event, the slow fire event, with a 197. Dave Berardy of the Army's Eastern squad won the rapid fire with 200-16x and Thompson placed first in the timed fire with 200-18x, only one x-ring shot off the national record.

Sgt. F. Higginson of the Marine Corps broke the Army's string of victories with a perfect 300 in Friday's national match course, but his 13 x-ring shots were well off the national record.

Know How Wins Fight, Not Big Muscle

BY DICK MINNIG

At the command "Ogoshi," a girl of ten, a red ribbon binding her delicate blonde curls, grabs the boy standing near her and flips him head over heels to the mat below. She is practicing "the gentle art" or "the way of suppleness."

Over 250,000 men, women and children in the U. S. are learning judo and paying up to four or five dollars an hour for lessons. At Fort Benning, "the gentle art" is taught free of charge twice weekly at Briant Wells Field House.

About 40 students of judokan, ranging in age from eight to 30 are instructed in the sport by Marcel Carles, a stocky well-built man of 29 with brown eyes and curly brown hair. An ex-soldier, he now lives in Columbus.

Marcel holds a third degree black belt and won the Southeastern Amateur Athletic Association judo title at Birmingham, Ala., in 1960. He moves quickly about the mats with an air of confidence and vigor, encouraging his students or providing correction and assistance where needed. Born in France, he speaks an English draped in French vowels and consonants.

YAC Sponsors Kids

The judo club meets on Monday from 7 to 9 p.m. and on Saturday from 3 to 5 p.m. The first hour of each session is devoted to the younger set and is sponsored by the Youth Activities Club (YAC), but the older students can watch and practice the instruction if they desire. The second hour is exclusively for the adults. Marcel is assisted by Ivy King of Columbus, a brown belt who is Marcel's oldest student and who donates his free time to aid in the instruction.

Each class begins with a warmup session and giggles and groans from the kids who seem to enjoy loosening up with rolls and falls even though a sore scalp and a sheepish grin sometimes accompanies a poorly executed roll.

"The kids like the sport," says Marcel. "To them the throws and falls are just as much fun as taking hurdles."

Judo Code

As we were talking, a small boy came up to Marcel and asked in lowered tones for permission to leave the room. Marcel nodded his assent and said, "All the youngsters have to ask before they can leave the mat. It's part of the judo training and discipline. We try to teach them respect for a code."

"You'll notice that after every encounter two opponents will always bow. That's part of the courtesy and respect of the code. They must thank their opponent for helping them learn."

Marcel first came to the U.S. in 1959 after leaving France and spending several years in Cuba as a judo instructor. He began to learn judo in 1949 and has been a black belt for over ten years.

In 1959 he was inducted into the Army and came to Fort Benning to instruct rangers in unarmed combat techniques. In that same year, he founded a judo club at Fort Benning. In 1961, the club was chartered by the Judo Black Belt Federation which acts as technical administrator for the sport and is responsible for its traditions, techniques and standards. YAC has been sponsoring the childrens' judo classes for over three years.

Judo's origins are obscure. It's techniques are believed to have been originated by Lama monks in China as a defense against robber bands. After remaining an obscure and jealously guarded skill for centuries, it was popularized in the last century by Jigaro Kano of Tokyo. Today there are judo clubs in all the major countries of the world and judo is recognized as one of the best forms of physical training known.

Asked about the reason for teaching youngsters judo, Marcel replied, "The first reason is to give them something that keeps them occupied and active. Through judo we also teach them self-confidence, aggressiveness and the will to win. We also try to instill in them a respect for a system of knowledge. In judo, the children see that they must learn and apply what they knew or else get beaten.

"The adults learn for their own reasons," Marcel continued. "Most come here because they always wanted to learn judo and never had the facilities available or could not afford to learn. Here we are happy to teach them at no cost."

After instruction in techniques, the last part of each class is devoted to competition. Judo is a competitive sport and only through the actual application of techniques can proper footwork, use of body weight and reacting be learned.

"To win all you must do is throw your opponent," said Marcel. "Here we know how to fall and we do it upon a mat so as not to get hurt. In a real fight, an opponent would not have such an easy landing and it would be easy to subdue him."

Right Pace

Marcel always tries to set a proper pace for kid judokan. He says, "I don't want to go too fast because they will get discouraged and I don't want to go too slow because they will get bored."

"The first thing a student must learn is to have confidence in himself and overcome his fear of falling. If one falls properly, he cannot get hurt. In the five years we have been instructing here, we have had only one minor injury," he added.

Along the walls of the judo room are charts showing the various throws which must be mastered in order to be eligible for the various belts of proficiency which begin with the white belt and progress through the brown to the black belt. For the youngsters, there is a junior class of belts in order to give them an incentive to learn while not compelling them to meet adult standards.

Problems

Marcel's biggest problem in instructing stems from the nomadic nature of Army life.

"As soon as we get a good judo group together, they are all transferred to different parts of the world," he says. "We have a large turnover here with as many as eight or ten new students each month and as many leaving because of duty."

Marcel pointed to a young man standing against one of the walls of the room. "He has been away in the boondocks for quite some time and has just come back."

The young man was James Gosselin, a judo brown belt now assigned to the 95th Evacuation Hospital. Gosselin learned judo while stationed in Japan and Korea and has taught combat judo for the Army.

"The biggest problem with the kids," said King, "is to keep their attention. They like to wrestle each other but if you keep their attention, they're quick learners."

Vicky Blackwell is one of Marcel's teenage students and has been taking instruction for about three months. Her father is a battalion operations sergeant with the 1st Cavalry Division. She began learning judo because she "was tired of the same old routine."

Her mother, Mrs. Eleanor Blackwell, comes to the field house twice a week because she enjoys watching her daughter have fun. Asked whether she would become a judokan, she replied, "It's awfully tempting." And it is.

Order Met With Mixed Emotion

Preparations for Movement

The word has come to send them on their way to some distant shipping point and the arduous task of loading the vast stores of air mobile equipment into CONEX containers and on to flat-bed trucks that the division will be deployed is well under way. The general feeling among Sky Troopers is that when it's time to move, they will be fully prepared.

General Kinnard Feels 'Good Spirit' Permeates Proud 1st Cavalry Units

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard said Wednesday his unit received the order to go to Viet Nam with "mixed emotions."

The general's statement came less than three hours after President Lyndon B. Johnson announced in a Washington press conference that he had ordered the "new airmobile division" to Southeast Asia.

Facing his own press conference then, Gen. Kinnard explained what the order meant to him and his men:

"I think any unit that has been given the word to move to combat has rather mixed emotions. The 1st Cavalry Division is no exception."

He said that separation from families is always a matter of heartache and hardship, but that a "spirit permeates the unit" which will put it in good stead overseas.

"We're a proud unit. We think we're good," he said. "We think we have great capabilities for the kind of combat going on in Viet Nam."

Gen. Kinnard said he has had indications that 'many wives plan to remain in the Fort Benning area after their husbands have left for overseas. He said that both the Department of the Army and the division had a special rear detachment to work with them.

"There are plans," he said, "to form a loose, but effective organization of wives — such as functioned during Air Assault II tests. Lists of the dependents would be published and they could get together and help each other."

He spoke also of establishing a dependents' center which conceivably would serve as a nucleus for family services.

Gen. Kinnard, who said his first official notice that the unit was going to Viet Nam came in the president's press conference, said that by late Wednesday afternoon he had received no deployment date.

But, he said: "We have been and are very busy putting the finishing touches on the division for deployment when ordered."

Agency Augmented to Aid 1st Cavalry's Dependents

The deployment of the 1st Cavalry Division will, in the words of the division's commander, bring "hardship and heartache" to the wives and families of the men involved.

But, the general said, "a great many people are going to do a great many things to ease these hardships."

The Department of the Army has offered guidance to Fort Benning to provide assistance to the dependents of men ordered to Viet Nam.

The 1st Cavalry Division now has plans in action to reinforce the efforts of the post by augmenting its Community Services Agency to assist division dependents who will remain in the area.

According to Capt. Glen C. Stephens of the Division G-1 (Personnel) it is estimated that the division group will be in operation next Monday in Building 5 on the Fort Benning Main Post.

This service agency will be staffed by three officers and 16 enlisted men who will be specialists in the numerous fields in which problems may crop up. They will be directed by Capt. Frank R. Kerhl, officer-in-charge.

According to Capt. Stephens these specialists will form a "central coordinating point" established to "be sure that dependents get the assistance they need."

During a press conference Wednesday afternoon Gen. Kinnard stated that attempts were now being made to contact local officials in an effort to establish their support of the dependent service center. Merchants and real estate agents, for instance, will be contacted to assist in locating housing or to gain the support of local automobile repair agencies.

CAA Sets 1965 Goal For 1st Cav Troops

The goal for the 1965 Community Activities Association Fund Drive at Fort Benning has been set and project officers for the 1st Cavalry Division will soon be named.

The charity drive will run from July 27 to Sept. 10 and the 1st Cavalry Division's goal is based on one-quarter of one day's pay per individual.

The Community Activities Association Fund Drive is principally concerned with many of the activities, and helpful organizations that are found at Fort Benning.

For example, it sponsors the "Visiting Nurses Program." This service was designed to provide health, education and assistance to dependents of military personnel. Two registered nurses are employed and their services are available free to military personnel and their families.

These services include visits to young mothers following their discharge from the hospital, advice to new parents on the proper care of their babies, and they also assist in administering shots for dependents at the Immunization Clinic.

The fund also sponsors the Youth Activities Club which coordinates and organizes

CAVALAIR COMMENTARY

BY J. D. COLEMAN

One of the more hallowed traditions in the Army is the "surprise" promotion ceremony. And it also is one of the most trite. Not that we would have it any other way, but consider for a moment, the "surprise."

2nd Lt. Shrdlu has on this particular morning, served 17 months and 30 days. He is a reasonably intelligent lieutenant and has perused the regulations which state that second lieutenants are promotable to the exalted grade of first lieutenant upon completing 18 months of service. Having discussed this at some length with his contemporaries — promotions being a sometimes topic of conversation among lieutenants — he has learned that rarely does the coveted silver bar fail to come through on schedule.

And so, on this 17th month and 30th day, our young hero is all aquiver with anticipation as he awaits the summons before the commander. He knows it will come — he likely has taken the precaution of wearing a jacket with pin-type bars instead of the cloth insignia — but he is not just sure how. Here, in stark reality, is the first real surprise. What pretext will be used to summon Lt. Shrdlu to the presence of the commander?

Perhaps it will be because he has "fouled up" on guard, or maybe he filed an erroneous report. At any rate, he is soon standing in front of his commander, where he receives an icy reception and growled greeting. And then, after hearing the indictment of his wrong-doing tolled off, and properly demonstrating the appropriate degree of fear and apprehension, the atmosphere clears and the commander smilingly reads the promotion order. Simultaneously, the office begins to fill; his company commander, his fellow platoon leaders, the executive officer and a number of assorted headquarters strap-hangers.

At the conclusion the question inevitably will be asked: "Were you surprised?" And, just as predictably, the answer, from the youngster who well knows the importance of this hallowed tradition: "Gee, I was just scared stiff that I had really fouled up?"

Now, if you think this sort of promotional musical chairs is limited only to the young-at-heart and low-in-rank, look again at your service newspapers. How many stories do you see, or have you seen, regarding "surprise" promotions of captains, majors, and lieutenant colonels.

The major change in routine is that the pretext is more sophisticated, in keeping with the advanced rank and age of the promotee. The lack of real surprise still remains, despite the fact that second lieutenants are the only ones enjoying a set time-in-grade requirement for promotion to the next higher grade.

About the only time where there is real, genuine surprise is when a company commander calls in a private or PFC and hands him a set of stripes and a promotion order. As a general rule, private soldiers being the fun-loving American boys that they are, the summons to the commanders' office bestirs a heavy attack of conscience and the immediate reaction is not "what did I do," but, "I wonder how he found out."

But trite or not, hackneyed or otherwise, this way of promoting is a strong part of Army tradition. As much as we may poke fun at our traditions, would we really have it any other way? How dull it would be to get your stripes, or bars or leaves through message center.

But there remains one puzzling facet of this promotion tradition. After the congratulations are received and the hands are shaken, the recipient of the promotion must then host a promotion party. He receives the best wishes but buys the beer.

Shouldn't it really be the other way around?

For Voting Program

Airborne Cav Battalion Earns 3rd Army Prize

Company D of the 1st Airborne Brigade's 1st Bn, 12th Airborne Cavalry has qualified for two Third U. S. Army citations, one of which has already been received, and the other forthcoming.

The company picked up the first citation for an outstanding accomplishment in achieving 96 per cent participation in the Army - wide voting program for last year.

The citation, signed by former Third Army Commanding General, Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Rich, was received by the company last week, attesting to the excellent work performed by the officers and NCOs of Company D in conducting the voter drive last year.

The second citation, which is expected to arrive at any time, is the Third U. S. Army Certificate of Proficiency as a result of the recent Command Maintenance and Management Inspection.

This inspection, designed to evaluate unit proficiency in maintenance and management operations, gave Company D a 100 per cent grade in organizational maintenance operations, and 97 per cent in material.

In discussing these outstanding results, Company D's commander, Capt. John G. Gergulis heaped credit upon the lower ranking enlisted men, who he said went all out for the inspection, and the excellent supervision of the officers and NCOs.

Fires Arsenal Of Weapons

The 1st Bn., 8th Cavalry showed the way for the Mustangs by appearing on every range where the men were firing and fired every weapon in the battalion's inventory, fired most of its weapons during the past week. Prominent among the firers were the Sky Troopers from Company D, commanded by Capt. Vandoster Tabb.

The soldiers fired their new 106mm recoiless rifles for the first time. The recon platoon received its jeeps and fired its rifles and machine guns. All units sent select personnel out to fire the M-79 grenade launcher.

Headquarters Company received four 50 caliber machine guns. Men from the company learned about the loud report and heavy weight of the gun during a long day on the range.

Down Cargo Nets From Chinook

1st Brigade Develops New Troop Extraction Method

By Charles Jameson

An ocean cargo net and a Ch-47 Chinook teamed up in the 1st Airborne Brigade last week to provide a fascinating new method for extracting troops from dense terrain.

After three days of intense work and experimentation an impressive demonstration was viewed Saturday morning on Kelley Hill by the commanding general and the two assistant division commanders.

After throwing out the monstrous cargo net, the troops raced out of a concealed position and quickly scrambled up the lines into the hovering helicopter in record time.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, Brig. Gen. John M. Wright and Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles, accompanied by 1st Brigade Commander, Col. E. B. Roberts looked on as 1st Brigade Deputy Commander, Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark, supervised the fast-moving operation from the ground.

Further demonstrating the potential value of the cargo net technique, the volunteer squad then exited the hovering chopper, climbing down the lines, after which they were greeted by Gen. Kinnard, who talked with each technique in detail.

Teaming up with his old friends, the former Rakkasans, Col. Clark called for volunteers from the 1st Bn., 12th Airborne Cavalry Wednesday to help work out the details on his novel idea, and oprations began Thursday.

Heading the list was SSgt. Joseph L. Norman of Company C who functioned as NCOIC with Sgts Bible and Umseld and Kravz of Company B; Vandusen, Jackson and Drummond of Company C; and Crary, Ruiz and Harris of Company D.

Thursday the volunteers began figuring the details, rigging the chopper and establishing safety porcedures while SSgt William F. Phelps of Brigade S-4 and Col. Clark designed an A Frame for the tail gate of the chopper which the troops could climb over to avoid the direct 90 degree turn into the chopper at the top of the cargo net.

With the loose ends sewed up Thursday, extraction operations began Friday on the Kelley Hill rappelling field, and first man to scramble up the net was Col. Clark himself, followed by individual members of the squad.

The squad began climbing the lines two at a time, and then graduated through larger groups until the entire squad was smoothly and rapidly being picekd up and put down.

This concept, the first to be devised for picking up troops, not only permits extraction from an area where landings may be impossible, but it also provides a means for putting down a large group of men into a small unlikely area, thereby avoiding an open area which fire.

Pioneer pilots from the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Bn., CWO Virgil L. Morris and WO Donald Yockey who piloted the Chinook stated that in spite of the immense weight of the cargo night, the flight characteristic of the aircraft were not adversely effected.

After spending considerable time with the troops and thoroughly going over the equipment, Gen. Kinnard said the concept was a good one, and gave his nod of approval to continue with the project.

CASSON BECOMES WEDDING COACH
Newlyweds Were Drawn To Reception

At Main Post Chapel

Military Color Added To Wedding

The Main Post Chapel was the scene Saturday, July 24 as Capt. R. C. Fisher of the 1st Aviation Company, 10th Aviation Group and Miss Betty Sue Pinkerton of Franklin, Tenn., were joined in Holy Matrimony by Chap. (Maj.) James Pulley.

The maid of honor, Mrs. Lucian Trent of Knoxville, Tenn. wore a full length white gown and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Al Shauf, Lawton, Okla.; Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Mary Louise Wolff, Columbus, Ga.; Miss Mary Fraser Harper, Auburn, Ala. and Mrs. James Chase of Memphis, Tenn., wore full length blue gowns and carried traditional bouquets.

The best man was 1st Lt. Edward R. White. The ushers were Capt. Thomas Carabelle, Henry Smith, and Mr. Frank Pinkerton and Mr. Joe Pinkerton Jr. of Franklin, Tenn.

A highlight to any military wedding is the traditional arc of swords under which the bride and groom pass at the conclusion of the ceremony. Sword bearers for the occasion were various officers from the 1st Aviation Company.

The newlyweds chose a unique form of transportation from the chapel to the supper club, that of an old casson drawn by a company jeep.

Later at the club, Mr. & Mrs. Joe Pinkerton and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Fisher Sr. were hosts for a reception.

Earned Colonel Dorcy Award

Former Soldier of Year Assigned to 1st Brigade

The first winner of the Col. Ben Dorcy Award for being Soldier of the Year in the 1st Calvary Division was recently assigned to the 1st Airborne Brigade.

SFC Hungwoon Ahn received the award right after it was instituted in 1961, stated Sgt. Maj. Junior Cook, who was his first sergeant in Korea.

The presentation was made by Col. Dorcy's widow, affectionately known as "Mother Dorcy".

Mrs. Dorcy flew to Korea to make the presentation as an honored guest of 1st Calvary Division, which sponsored her trip. Mrs. Dorsey has kept a close connection with the 1st Calvary Division since the death of Col. Dorcy in 1926.

Col. and Mrs. Dorcy designed the original 1st Cavalry patch in 1921 while stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas, and after approval and adoption by the Army in January, 1922, the colonel received a special medal for his contribution.

The handsome trophy that Sgt. Ahn received along with the award has an exact of replica of the medal awarded Col. Dorcy in 1922, inlaid in the center portion of the trophy, flanked on the left by the 7th Cavalry Crest, and on the right by the 1st Calvary crest.

Sergeant Ahn was assigned Company E of the 7th Cavalry at the time he received the award, and was accompanied to the ceremony by Sergeant Cook, then first sergeant of Company E.

Sgt. Ahn was reassigned to the 1st Brigade last week from the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Kentucky where he served as a platoon sergeant in the 2nd Bn, 501st Airborne Infantry.

Division Embodies Cavalry Spirit

The cavalry is dead, mourned old soldiers. The horse has been replaced by unfeeling and unfelt - for machines. Gone is a glory and tradition built up through the centuries.

But the cavalry is not dead. Yes, the horses are gone. But the cavalry was more than just horses. It was a spirit and soul, tradition and color. What are these things you might ask. Other elements of the Army possess these same characteristics and they are not cavalry.

Other elements of the Army possess these characteristics. But not to that intense, aggressively vital degree found in the cavalry.

The spirit of the cavalry is not just the glint of sunlight on sabers and the creaking of saddle leather. It is rather a dedication to duty, disregard for danger and personal comfort. It is recklessness combined with discipline. And, it is respect for tradition when that tradition is the inspiration needed to carry forward to a brighter future.

One of the places in the modern Army where this basic spirit of the cavalry can be found is in one of the old cavalry units — the 1st Cavalry Division. The units which were to form the division were born in that restless period of the nation's history which marked the great westward expansion and these units played an important part in its progress.

The movement of the land-hungry pioneers soon aroused the fury of the Indians and blood-drenched orgies followed. The government immediately increased the frontier forces with new Army Units.

The 1st Cavalry Division was activated as a regular Army division on Sept. 12, 1921. In the years which followed, as the army went through various reorganizations some of the units went into inactive status and all of them underwent redesignations changes. But the division was born "of" the cavalry. It was, is, always shall be a "cavalry" unit.

No, the cavalry is not dead. Its spirit, its methods and traditions endure. They are the heritage of the Army. The historic cavalryman may be gone, but he has left behind him traditions our soldiers live by.

As long as there are organizations like the 1st Cavalry Division the cavalry will live on.

Special Patches Seen Throughout 8th Cav.

The Mustangs of 1st Bn. (Airborne), 8th Cavalry, possess an interesting variety of specially trained men. Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Mertel, battalion commander, observed at a recent training session on river crossing that a large number of men wore special patches.

In addition to the usual number of Rangers, there are Jungle Experts in each company who just completed the Jungle Operations course in Panama. Then, there are the Recondo soldiers, graduates of the 101st Airborne Division's Recondo School. Rivaling these are Raiders, who completed the 82nd Airborne Division's Raider School.

All these men are highly proficient in patrolling, river crossing, ambushes, and guerrilla tactics. Col. Mertel observed, however, that all of them made an equally big splash when they fell off the one rope bridge.

General of the Army

ARMY'S HIGHEST COMMAND

WASHINGTON (ANF)— The title of General of the Army has been held by eight soldiers in 190 years. The only man to be called General of the Armies was John J. Pershing.

The prestigious rank was created back in Revolutionary times. George Washington was appointed "General and Commander in Chief of the Army of the United Colonies . . ." just four days after the Army itself came into being.

In 1798, anticipating a war with France, Congress authorized the title of "General of the Armies of the United States." The post was never filled, however, and with Washington's death, President Adams suspended further appointments to that rank.

Omar Bradley is the most recent member of this distinguished circle. He received the Army's top rank in 1950.

Though General Eisenhower resigned his commission during his first presidential campaign, the full rank and title were restored to him by President Kennedy.

Employs 'Hammer, Anvil and Tongs'

Commander Knows Counter-Guerrilla Skill

BY JIM LULL

"Employing effective counter - guerrilla action is a language, and tactics cannot be successful unless the men of the command know that language — that's why I try to simplify it as much as I can."

Col. William R. Lynch, commander of the division's 2nd Brigade, has a favorite example — known as the "hammer, anvil and tongs" concept.

Col. Lynch does not claim to have fathered the theory. "It's not new, and anyone who claims authorship is probably wrong," he said.

According to the veteran infantryman, the "hammer, anvil and tongs" theory has reached a peak of efficiency when applied with an air mobility capability.

"The hammer, anvil and tongs are significant of three separate assault forces — each with it's own specific mission — but directed from one headquarters," Col. Lynch explains.

"The anvil is nothing more than the large blocking force normally composed of about half the entire manpower. The hammer is the rapid assault force that applies the final blow to the enemy assembly, and the tongs, a highly mobile, quick moving team that harrasses the enemy from either side.

"This concept can be employed by a unit as small as one company and still be highly effective," Col. Lynch hastened to add.

"Under normal circumstances, the force commander would send his 'tongs' to begin driving the enemy toward the blocking team (or 'anvil') that he has then established. The final order would be to send out the 'hammer' and hit the enemy from the side or rear, pushing them directly into the 'anvil'."

Col. Lynch compared this technique to the "noose theory" of surrounding the enemy from all sides and applying equal pressure by saying, "especially with an air mobile capability, the theory I have described is vastly superior."

As evidence of his "firm belief" in the concept, Col. Lynch personally displayed the traditional metal hammer, anvil and tongs in front of the brigade headquarters building on Kelley Hill. A special ceremony was held July 1st, when the brigade received it's new colors, to emplace the metal items at the base of the brigade sign.

Referring to what Col. Lynch terms the "language" of an aggressive Army, he said, "The nickname we have given this tactical procedure has become an easy reference for all commanders. They immediately are aware of what type of aggressive movement should be conducted when told to employ the 'hammer, anvil and tongs'".

Col. Lynch cited maneuvers that occured during the abbreviated existence of the 11th Air Assault Division to prove the effectiveness of the theory.

"Colonels Moore, Dallinga and Tully all used this particular tactic and in all cases it met with tremendous success," he commented.

"To initiate a successful hammer, anvil and tongs aggression requires a lot of patience and hard work. Emphasis must be placed on the ability of 'tongs' team to do an effective reconnaissance job and supply the adequate intelligence needed to establish the 'anvil' and finally apply the 'hammer'."

Maj. James B. Scanlon, who was awarded the first Oak Leaf Cluster to his Commendation Medal, distinguished himself while serving as assistant G-3 with the experimental division.

He was instrumental in the development of the division standard operating procedures and air assault techniques manual, and served as a shift leader in the division Operations Center during the period of test and evaluation of the airmobile concept.

Colorful Reveille Greets Arrivals At 8th Cavalry

The 1st Bn. (Airborne) 8th Cavalry held a colorful command reveille last Saturday, welcoming its newest arrivals. Lt. Col. Kenneth D. Mertel briefed the men on the importance of combat readiness as one of the Army's 16 divisions and commended the efforts made by all in converting to airborne.

Next the color guard, selected from the Recon Platoon of Company D, posted the colors to the center of the battalion formation. Capt. Charles B. Stone, battalion S-2, read off the history of the battalion while each of its nineteen battle streamers were held up one at a time.

While the unit colors were held out, the heraldry of the motto, crest, and shield were explained. Last, diplomas were presented to those men who recently completed Airborne School as part of the special cycle run for the 1st Cavalry Division.

Veteran of Vietnam War Writes Winning Article

An Army captain who wrote an award winning article describing duty in the Republic of Viet Nam was presented a check for $125 by Maj. Gen. H. W. O. Kinnard, commander of the Sky Troopers, at the 1st Cavalry Division Headquarters, July 27.

Capt. Chad C. Payne's article, "Mission," was selected as the best submitted story of the year by the Aviation Digest, sponsor of the award.

When asked about the story Capt. Payne stated, "I was just trying to write an article that told about a normal airmobile assault against the Viet Cong. I was aiming the story at my fellow aviators in the states who didn't know what to expect when they got over there."

He wrote the article while stationed at Bien-Hoa, which is located about 15 miles northeast of Saigon in the Republic of Viet Nam.

The captain found out about the award in a most unusual manner. He said, "I was sitting down looking through a magazine when I came upon an article that caught my eye, I started to read it and was surprised when I realized it was mine."

He has been with the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), formerly the 11th Air Assault Division, for about a year.

The captain was part of the initial force of 11th Air Assault soldiers to go to the Dominican Republic, during the recent crisis there. He stayed there a month and served as platoon leader.

The 28-year-old officer is no stranger to the airmobile concept. While stationed with the 82nd Airborne Division in 1962, he participated in the initial tests of the assault techniques now successfully utilized by the 1st Cavalry Division.

Capt. Payne represents the fourth generation of cavalrymen in his family which dates back to his great-grandfather who served in the civil war.

"I guess you can say I grew up with the cavalry. I remember my father leading his horse-drawn artillery soldiers on maneuvers when I was a little boy."

Capt. Payne entered the Army in Feb. 1960 after completing ROTC training at Oklahoma State University where he was awarded a degree in journalism.

The captain's decorations include the Distinquished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 18 Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Viet-Nam and Dominican Republic Expeditionary Medals.

A Saga of the Seventh Cavalry Regiment

1876-Heritage Of Honor-1965

The saga of the battle of the "Little Big Horn has been immortalized in song and story, but the men of the "Garry Owen" have historic ties to this heroic episode. It was the men of the 7th Cavalry who fought and died so gallantly in "Custers Last Stand."

What follows is the story of events surrounding the circumstance of that battle as pieced together by a correspondent of the Bismark Tribune. Included are excerpts of his story as it ran in a Tribune Extra on July 6, 1876.

The story begins as Maj. Gen. George Cook, commander of the Department of the Platte (river), sets out with 1000 men to corral a large number of Indians who had left their reservations in the Black Hills of Dakota Territory. At the same time, two columns of cavalrymen under the command of Brig. Gen. Alfred Terry, commander of the Department of the Dakota are marching south up the Yellowstone River Valley.

On June 17, 1876, Crook's troops fought an indecisive engagement on the Rosebud river with a large band of Sioux and Cheyenes under Chief Crazy Horse, Sitting Bull and others. Crook then moved back to the Tongue River to await reinforcements.

Meanwhile Terry had discovered the trail of the same Indian band and had sent Custer and the 7th Cavalry up the Rosebud to locate the war party and move south of it. Terry planned to close in from the north.

A correspondent with Custer's party wrote the Tribune, "We leave the Rosebud tommorrow and by the time this reaches you we will have met and fought the red devils, with what results remains to be seen. I go with Custer and will be in at the death."

On the morning of June 22, Gen. Custer took up the line of march on the trail of the Indians. Urged by Gen. Terry to take additional soldiers, Custer refused, having full confidence in his men and their ability to defeat the Indians. They set off alone.

The 7th Cavalry proceeded up the Rosebud and discovered an encampment of some four to five thousand Indians on the Little Big Horn. Immediately ordering an attack, Custer divided his forces so as to strike the camp from several directions. The surprised Indians quickly rallied and drove off Maj. Marcus A. Reno's detachment which suffered severe losses. This phase of the action was reported as follows: "Custer, with his usual vigor pushed on, and attacked the village near its foot with companies C, E, F, I and L. Reno, having in the meantime attacked at its head with three companies of cavalry which, being surrounded after a desperate hand - to - hand conflict in which many were killed and wounded, cut their way to a bluff about 300 feet high . . in gaining this position, Reno had to recross the Little Horn and at the ford the hottest fight occured."

According to the accounts, the Sioux dashed up beside the soldiers, in some instances knocking them from their horses and killing at their pleasure. The unit succeeded in crossing though the trip was made under "galling" fire.

Maj. Reno's detachment by this time had been joined by Capt. Frederic W. Benteen's detachment and this combined force was able to withstand heavy attacks until the Indians finally withdrew late the following day. Since no further contact was made with Custer's group until the following day, we can follow the account of the Indian assault on Maj. Reno's men as reported in the Tribune: "The Indians charged the hill time and time again but were repulsed with heavy slaughter by its gallant defenders. Soon however, the Indians reached bluffs higher than those occupied by Reno and opened a destructive fire from points beyond the reach of cavalry rifles. Nothing being heard from Custer, Col. Weir was ordered to push his command along the bank of the river in the direction he was supposed to be, but he was soon driven back, retiring with difficulty."

The Indian force at this time had received additional reinforcement and at times literally swarmed up the hillside. The cavalrymen were able to hold out until night fell, at which time the Indians withdrew.

Working at night strengthening their positions for the assault they knew the morning would bring, the soldiers were using knives and tin cups in place of the spades and picks they needed. The next morning the Indians returned to the attack.

By mid - afternoon the second day, the defenders were in a bad way. The blazing sun had increased their desire for water and the tongues of the men were swollen and their lips parched. Something had to be done.

Brave men volunteered to make a try for water, knowing full well that to leave their positions meant almost certain death. Displaying the spirit of true cavalrymen the attempt was made, and though one man was killed and several wounded, precious water was obtained. Somewhat refreshed, the men returned to the battle with spirits high and defended their position at high cost to the Indians throughout the day and that night.

On the afternoon of the 27th, the Indians suddenly panicked and stampeded, not even bothering to remove their dead. Not knowing what had occurred, the defenders could only sit tight and hope. Within a short time, Gen. Terry and his men rode into sight.

At this point a lieutenant with Terry's group answered the feared question. He reported that he had found Custer dead, with one hundred and ninety cavalrymen also slain. Gen. Terry himself sought the spot and found it to be true. The Tribune records the scene as follows:

"Of those brave men who followed Custer, all perished; no one lives to tell the story. (One Crow scout who claimed to have witnessed the battle from hiding was later found.) Those deployed as skirmishers lay as they fell, shot down on every side, having been entirely surrounded in an open plain. The men in the companies fell in platoons and like those on the skirmish line, lay as they fell, with their officers behind them in their proper positions. Gen. Custer, who was shot through the head and body seemed to have been among the last to fall.

"The squaws seemed to have passed over the field and crushed the skulls of the wounded and dying with stones and clubs."

Custers body had not been mutilated, perhaps out of respect to the courage and fighting ability of this cavalry soldier.

Despite the outcome of this battle, the engagement distinguished the 7th in setting the pattern for fighing men in courage and devotion to duty. Fourteen troopers engaged in this battle received the Medal of Honor, and the regiment was awarded a campaign streamer, one of six it earned in the course of the bloody Indian Wars.

From 1866 to 1965, ninety-nine years of devoted service to their country has set apart the dedicated troopers of the 7th Cavalry and Gen. Custers favorite song, "Garry Owen", is the call to arms to soldiers of the 7th everywhere.

Captain Keeling Named Brigade Chemical Chief

Keeling, formerly brigade chemical officer for the First Brigade of the 2nd Infantry Division on Sand Hill, assumes the position vacated by Capt. Harlan J. Brady.

Keeling was cited for outstanding chemical operations during the 2nd Division's operational readiness testing this spring.

Capt. Brady, who served with the brigade headquarters during its association with the 11th Air Assault Division, has been named assistant division chemical officer for the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Brady officially assumed that position early this week.

Sky's the Limit On Duffle Bags

WASHINGTON — Military passengers on commercial airlines may check through, free of charge, one duffle or B-4 bag regardless of size or weight and may carry on board baggage with maximum size of 43 inches, the Civil Aeronautics Board has ruled. The change applies to domestic travel only.

The previous limit had been 40 pounds for the duffle or B-4 bag, and passengers over the limit had to pay an extra amount. The overseas rate remains at 66 pounds.

Military Seeks More Linguists

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The armed forces need more people trained to speak a foreign language than ever before, according to Colonel Jack M. Duncan, USA director of the Defense Language Institute (DLI).

Colonel Duncan said DLI expects a student input of nearly 7,000 into its full-time foreign language programs during FY66. This figure represents the requirements submitted to DLI by the armed services.

Foreign language students are trained at DLI schools here and at Monterey, Calif., as well as at the State Department's Foreign Service Institute; Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.; Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., and other DLI contract schools.

Work Begins on Lasting Kennedy Grave Memorial

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A contract for construction of a permanent grave for President John F. Kennedy at Arlington National Cemetery has been awarded by the Office of the Chief Army Engineers. Construction is expected to begin this summer.

Army officials said provisions will be made to accommodate the thousands of persons who visit the present grave site daily. Work is expected to take 14 months.

The grave will be located on a hillside overlooking the Potomac River at a site adjacent to the present temporary grave just east of the Custis-Lee Mansion.

There have been no major changes to the design since its announcement last November, an official said. Construction is designed to blend into contours of existing terrain and includes a walkway from the graveside to the Custis - Lee Mansion and a circular walkway 210 feet in diameter.

Walks and terraces will be of white marble from Proctor, Vt. and granite from Deer Island, Maine.

The $1,408,350 contract was awarded to the Aberthaw Construction Company, Boston, Mass., lowest bidder.

Just a Little Confused

'COMBAT READY'

By BY EDWIN R. ANDREWS

The phone rang. I answered it.

The voice at the other end sounded blonde, and a little bewildered.

"This is Judy Jones," she said. "Can you help me locate my husband? He's PFC Jim Jones, in the Medical Battalion of the 2nd Division."

"I'm sure you are having trouble," I said. The 2nd Division is in Korea."

"Korea! Ye gods! He just walked out—said he was going to work. Why, the poor fool doesn't even have extra underwear with him. I . . . "

I tried to calm her, and apologize for my bluntness.

"You don't understand. I should have said it a different way. The 2nd just sent their official records and colors to Korea, along with a few men. Your husband didn't go. I imagine he's among the several thousand men who came to the 11th Air Assault Division."

Then she remembered. "Oh—that's right. Jim's been talking a long time about a joining up or something like that; what with the baby to take care of, I hadn't paid much attention. Oh well; where's the 11th Air Assault Division? And do I ask for the 11th Medical Battalion, like I asked for the 2nd, when he was in the other outfit?"

I just made my second mistake; this early in the morning. I just don't think too fast.

"As a matter of fact, there isn't any 11th Air Assault any more. It was de-activated the other day, and. . . ."

"De-what? Are you trying to tell me Jim's been out of the Army all this time — and I'm still ironing these cotton pickin' fatigues? I'll wring his neck! Boy, that Mr. Mc What's-his-name must have more power than I figure—just to turn out that many men from the Army, and. . ."

I managed to stop the torrent.

"What I started to say was that the 11th was de - desig — re-named. They brought the 1st Calvary Division from Korea at the same . . ."

"Gosh, no wonder a body can't find a house around here, with three . . . Oh, you mean they just brought their flags and all, like the Second did when they moved over there?"

A pause. The voice became very thoughtful.

"Say, can you tell me why they did that?"

"Well, I said, "they . . . it was supposed to . . . I'll tell you — why don't you just put the baby to bed early tonight and ask Jim—okay?"

"Okay; that sounds like a good idea." She hung up.

'Be It Ever So Humble. . .'

Loneliness Has Its Points

BY
EDWIN R. ANDREWS

25th Infantry Division Artillery, Korea, 1954 — The young soldier was peeling potatoes out behind the messhall when my jeep stopped in the battery area. So — since I was on "chaplain patrol" — I decided to start my visiting with him. I walked up the hill, found an apple crate, and sat down to make his acquaintance.

"And when do you rotate back to the States?" This was the "Number 1" conversation starter in Korea, particularly on a first meeting. I sat back to watch his face light up, to hear excited descriptions of Brooklyn or Texas — and learned again the basic lesson: don't ever predict how the American soldier will react.

"Don't know," he replied gruffly. "Makes no difference anyhow." His paring knife continued its bumble work, now digging viciously into the eyes of the potatoes.

I had no answer, but my face asked the obvious question. After an uncomfortable silence, he answered it.

"You see that mad rush down there"? I followed his gesture to the orderly room, and saw the beginnings of one of the Army's most cherished formations: mail call.

"I never go," he said flatly. "There's no reason to go; letters never come for me. Nobody to write them. And why hurry back to the States? There's no place to go."

Nobody . . . no place . . . Could it be, I wondered, that when this man heard "Be it ever so humble", he had nothing to bring before his mind but a folding cot in Battery B, 8th Field Artillery? Were there no pictures in his wallet, no keepsakes in his footlocker? I had heard of the homeless, the completely alone in this life; but to meet and talk to one . . .

I can only hope I contributed something worthwhile that day; but frankly, I doubt it. I was too busy recognizing for the first time how much difference there is between being lonely and being alone.

For a long time after that visit, as I read the letters from home telling me to get plenty of sleep and keep my feet dry, recalling me to the house in El Paso with the old chevrolet in the yard, I often saw again a lone figure — a soldier with a country to defend and no hearthside to call his own.

Hard as it is to see sometimes, loneliness has its points.

2nd Battalion

12th Cavalry 'Digs In' For 1st Field Exercise

By Gene Wilver

Conducting their first 2nd Brigade controlled field training maneuver, the 2nd Bn., 12th Cavalry, commanded by Lt. Col. Earl Ingram, set up field operations in a location near Box Springs Road on the reservation last week.

Using a varied assortment of CV-2's, Chinooks and UH-1D sorties to fly the troops to their positions, the battalion arrived shortly after 2:00 pm., and began "digging in" to fortify their location. Foxholes were dug, tents raised and a security element was placed around the battalion command post.

The first day Company B, commanded by Capt. Graham Avera, was assigned the mission of securing a hill and they did so with positive results.

During the night, Company B also made night raids on the "enemy position" and pushed the aggressors back.

The following day was filled with company attacks by Company A commanded by Capt. Dean Knox. They were followed by Company C, under the command of Capt. William Child, and Company B in succession.

That night Companies A and C conducted raids and as a result of constant barraging from the companies the enemy was forced to retreat.

The final day the 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry attacked the aggressor team in total and destroyed the enemy force.

Operations Man Now Field Grade

The operations officer of the 133rd Assault Support Helicopter Company received the gold leaves of a major this week.

Mrs. Smith confided that she was often referred to a "Pocahontas", thanks to her husband's famous namesake.

Maj. Smith served previously with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea from 1960 to 1962.

The major came to Fort Benning and the 11th Air Assault Division in 1964 from Fort Rucker, Ala., where he was assigned to the Department of Maintenance.

Maj. Smith attended Stetson University in DeLand, Fla., where he was graduated and commissioned through the ROTC program in 1954.

Remember What It Means, Keep It Shining

"Let The Whirlybirds Have The Gold Shoulder Patch"

EDITORS NOTE . . . The following article is reprinted from the July 19th issue of The Arizona Daily Star, the morning newspaper of Tucson, Ariz. J. F. Weakock included these thoughts of the 1st Cavalry Division in his column, "Desert Notebook".

I'm not certain what they will say, but there will be quite a bit of acidulous comment when the word gets around in Korea, where the old 1st Cavalry Division is still holding down the lid.

The "word" being the fact that the gold Cavalry patch, with its horse's head, and the regimental bar diagonally across the shield, is pinned on a whirlybird outfit!

That is the way it is going to be. The helicopter unit, that is, those used for reconnaissance and combat, will become known as the 1st Cavalry Division!

WEACOCK

When the old boys who first wore that patch when it was designed at Ft. Bliss in the early twenties, and all of those who wore the crossed sabres before them, get the word, there will be real revolt in Fiddler's Green. That, for those who may not have heard, is the rendezvous on the other side of the river for all good horse soldiers. There the duty is always pleasant, the girls friendly and the burbon properly aged.

But time apparently marches on, and the First Cavalry mounted and mechanized, now finds its honored emblem is going to decorate the snub nose of a helicopter, as it flogs its way over the jungle terrain of Viet Nam, either to support troops on the ground with aerial fire, to deliver the groceries and the ammunition, or even the troops themselves.

Just what will be done with the division which carried the golden shoulder patch with such distinction in World War II and which Gen. Walter Krueger called the "best Infantry outfit he had in the Pacific," is still to be told. But the odds are good that if there is a trouble spot (and when isn't there one) the division will be there with its light mechanization, getting to the hot spot first and going in on foot, rifle in hand.

The designation of the helicopter to "Cavalry" status is not too odd when one checks its special ability in such affairs as the Viet Nam deal.

Cavalry, for many, many years, was designed and trained to screen the movements of other troops, to carry on reconnaisance missions, to obtain information and get it back where it would do the most good as rapidly as possible.

Its other mission, brought to a peak of performance in the Civil War (on both sides of the argument, for that matter) was to seek out, strike, destroy and get away.

Both in the Union and Confederate armies Cavalry leaders were developed to perform their allotted duties so well that they are still used as models in military ability and deportment.

But when Secretary of War Patterson moved the units into the machine age, the horse and mule gave way to the reconnaisance car, the light tank and motorized transport. Even then the men of the First Cavalry Division managed to retain their old guidons — guidons whose staffs were loaded with silver rings denoting engagements all over the West, in the islands and in Mexico, and the crossed sabre insignia was stenciled on their mechanical mounts from jeep to tank.

In fact, not too long ago, on the post at old Fort Huachuca, where the shades of many old horse soldiers still ride when the moon is high, an officer walked down the hall of the club with the gold shield and black horse head on his shoulder, and a shining leather swagger stick tucked under his arm. Admittedly, he had left off his spurs, but the spirit was still there and it was not going to be dampened by any scientific surroundings, however complex.

Just a few days ago, another officer, a bird colonel with "retired" written behind his name on his card, dropped in to say hello. When asked what regiment he had been with, his answer was quick and to the point—"The seventh, of course," he said. "Was there another!"

Such was and is the spirit of the old Cavalry, the spirit that took it through the dangers, the frustrations and boredoms of some of the most isolated and neglected stations the Army had to offer, from the days of the birth of the nation until today.

There was Marion, the "Swamp Fox," helping bring the colonies to life; there was Sheridan, riding from Winchester, to turn defeat into victory; there was Beauty Stuart, leading his tattered Southerns in a wide sweep around the Army of the Potomac as he acted as the "eye" for Lee.

Let the whirlybirds have the shoulder patch, but let them also remember what it means and keep it shining.

Rifle Competition Champ Takes Company Lead

Capt. Presley W. Kendall who recently departed the United States Army Marksmanship Training Unit at Fort Benning has assumed command of Support Command's Headquarters Company and Band, 1st Cavalry Division.

Capt. Kendall, well known in rifle shooting circles, is holder of over 400 trophies, 600 medals and 115 place settings of sterling silver all acquired in over 18 years as a rifle competitor.

Kendall, who has helped Army marksmanship teams show the US Flag in competition in 21 countries, was 1964 National position champion and international prone champion for that year. He helped the US Army team to defeat the Russian and North Korean teams in the World Championship Match held in Cairo, Egypt in 1962 and tied for position on the 1964 US Olympic Rifle Team.

Capt. Kendall, who has recently completed the Company Grade Infantry Career Course at Fort Benning, is an avid Scuba diver and participated in the raising of the Confederate Gunboat Muscogee from the Chattahoochee river in 1962.

STRESSING A POINT . . . The commander of the 1st Cavalry Division, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard stresses a point to national newsmen during an informal press conference following the president's announcement of deployment of the 1st Cavalry.

In the United States a farmer may work long hours but he will produce crops sufficient to supply himself and hundreds or perhaps thousands of other people.

During the last two decades this world in which we live has witnessed a great change. From the deserts of North Africa and the Middle East to the jungles of tropical Africa, the Far East and Latin America comes a cry, a cry that has in the past few years grown into a never ending roar.

This cry is the voice of millions upon millions of peoples in the developing, politically unstable and socially primitive countries calling for a better way of life.

Since the end of World War II the map of the world tatorship and are struggling the new countries of the world have come into existhas changed drastically as tance or have gained their in-

Many other countries have in the developing areas of the world.

The development of mass communication media have made the peoples of these developing areas realize that a better way of life is possible.

These people want to rise out of the poverty and squalor in which they live. They want their children to receive an education. They want an adequate supply of food and medical aid when it is necessary. They are willing to work for a better way of life, but they need help.

The free world can best help these people and should help them. In this era of the cold war these countries are potential battle grounds. The side that wins the support of the people will win the battle.

For several years ways and means have been sought to gain the initiative in the cold war. The free worlds effort has been directed toward bolstering friendly foreign countries economically and militarily.

This objective is being carried out so that these countries can withstand communist pressures and establish internal stability which will promote economic and social development. Our aim has been to help others so that they may help themselves.

FT. LEWIS CANNON 'FOR THE BIRDS'

FT. LEWIS, Wash. (AFPS) A swallow family here has decided to live dangerously. The mother has built a nest in the barrel of a 75mm cannon belonging to the 16th Artillery and hatched an undetermined number of children.

Service Club 1 Slates Pet Show

Saturday, 31 July is the big day for animal lovers because that is the day when Service Club 1 sponsors its second annual Pet Fair. Already excitement and interest is mounting.

The Service Club Staff wishes to remind young people that the maximum age for entering is 15. This, however, does not apply to pets, for they may qualify in a "youngest" or "oldest" category. Other categories will include "most unusual pet", "most beautiful cat - dog", "most talented pet," "smallest pet" "best groomed pet", "pet with best disposition", "most obedient pet". First, second and third prize ribbons will be awarded in each category.

Rules and regulations will be posted in the Service Club. Notably, all pets must be on leashes or in a cage (or container); owners must remain with their pets at all times and must be the only person handling them (however, help may be used in exhibiting); and finally, entrants must register no later than 1:30 p.m.

Army to Require Security Checks On All New Soldiers Says Article

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — National security checks will be given Army newcomers as part of a four-step program to tighten security standards within the services.

The Pentagon announced this week it was establishing an "ultra-sensitive" security program to sharply reduce the number of soldiers who defect or are locked up for spying for a communist power.

In an effort to detect "poor risks" early, the Pentagon is requiring a national security check on all first-term enlistees and draftees while they are undergoing basic combat training.

Local Check

Under present standards, Army newcomers receive only a local policy check. But the more extensive, more expensive, NA checks call for a check of the records of all government agencies on each new man entering the Army.

In other steps, the Pentagon is requiring all "ultra-sensitive" military positions will be subjected to "extraordinary security procedures, including periodic reinvestigations," the Pentagon said.

In addition, DoD is requiring all future requisitions of personnel for high - level "ultra-sensitive" positions to indicate the officer's degree of security clearance.

Clearing House

A central clearing house is being established within the Pentagon to control the assignment of civilians to ultra-sensitive positions, the Army said.

It will not only determine the eligibility of new civilian employees for government jobs but the clearing house has also been given the responsibility of determining whether employees have the right security clearance to hold them.

The Defense Department is studying the possibility of having all of the various service security investigations conducted by a single service. A recent DoD study of the military's security standards concluded "that expensive duplication of efforts exists under the present system because the three services maintain separate investigative offices."

At Present

For the present, each service will continue to conduct its own security investigations. However, DoD is urging more interservice cooperation in developing security checks as a means of reducing the overall number of service personnel involved in investigations.

DoD is instructing the Army and Air Force to accept part of the Navy's existing backlog of personnel checks to bring them up-to-date with their security programs.

Within a year as a further step to tighten standards, the Pentagon plans to establish a central index of DoD investigations; a centralized DoD investigative file; and a central National Agency Check processing center to keep track of its checks.

Expansion Planned For 'Chopper' School

FORT RUCKER, Ala. (ANF) — The Army plans to boost the number of pilots trained each year from the present 1,800 to 2,400 and to increase the number of men undergoing maintenance training by more than 6,000.

The step-up in training steams from the need for more aviation personnel to increase the mobility of the Army.

The lion's share of the pilot training buildup will come in the Rotary Wing Aviator Program where helicopter classes will be almost doubled from the present level of 96 per class to 175. The larger classes will begin reporting to the Army Primary Helicopter School at Fort Wolters, Tex., in September. The training at Fort Wolters will be increased from 12 to 16 weeks. Tactical training conducted at Fort Rucker will be cut from 20 to 16 weeks, thus the overall time required for flight training will remain at 32 weeks.

Wins DFC In Viet Nam

Lt. Peter J. Bailey, right, is awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism while participating in aerial flights in Viet Nam on Aug. 24, 1964. He was cited for voluntarily removing two American advisors from an enemy stronghold while under heavy fire. Col. William M. Zimmermann, commander of Lawson Army Air Command, makes the presentation.

The Teen Beat

With Bette Jean Spratley

Looking for extra loot? If you're willing to put out a little effort for it (not "as little as possible" either) the YAC Youth Employment Bureau might be your answer. Located at the Teen Square clubhouse, the bureau matches up dependent teens willing to mow lawns, wash cars, babysit, etc., with people looking for someone to do these chores. The telephone number is 545-1627 for either potential employer or employee.

Applications are now being taken for bowling, judo and swimming classes. For further info on bowling contact Mr. Haymond, 545-4272. Classes start the second week of August. Judo is taught all year round by Marcel Carles whose home phone is FA 3-8057 and office phone FA 3-7303. Beginner swimming and lifesaving classes are scheduled to start Aug. 2 and you can get more details by calling YAC, 545-2130.

". . .And there was Tarzan painting white stripes on black zebras, etc., etc. . ." Have you been caught on this one yet?

Would like to use some names in this column if some of you will provide me with the material.

Driver training instructors are needed by YAC to keep the program going. Anyone interested (not hot rod jockeys) please call 545-2130.

The weekly dances are becoming the thing to do each Friday night. Tonight we'll have the Gintrees, with the time changed. Now it's 8 til 12 midnight (we always stay that late anyhow). Price 50 cents stag and 75 drag.

An outdoor dance being planned for Friday night, the 13th, out at King's Pond. More on this next week.

Two hundred and fifty membership cards have been sold so far. Got yours yet? Better get going, we've got a lot of things planned, and they're for members only.

All you key punchers who managed to survive the typing course just completed and were given certificates, please come to Faith School Monday, Aug. 2 at 9 a.m. with certificates in hand. I don't know why!

I guess Capt. McIntyre takes it to heart when someone says, "Cool it, Dad." Anyhow, YAC wants to buy a used window air conditioner in good working order. Call Bob Hight, 545-4747.

Got a grievance, a gripe, a suggestion, an extra five 'til payday? Call Tom Sweet, 545-5838.

Division, Three Brigades to Be Activated

Fort Benning to Get New Brigade

The population vacuum which will be created at Fort Benning when the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile) moves to Viet Nam, will be partially compensated for early next year, according to an announcement by the Department of Defense Wednesday.

In a DoD news release it was disclosed that a new Army division is to be formed, and an additional three brigades are to be activated. One of these is to be stationed at Fort Benning. The brigade strength will approximate 3,800 and will be composed of three infantry battalions, an artillery battalion and other support command and control elements.

The other two brigades, according to the official news release, are to be stationed at Fort Devens, Mass. and Fort Campbell, Ky.

No announcement was made as to where the new division is to be activated, but December 1965 was given as the target date.

The time-table for activation of the brigades is: Fort Devens, October, 1965; Fort Campbell, January, 1966; and Fort Benning, February, 1966.

Designations of all the new units are to be announced later.

Agency Plans Special Orientations; Real Estate Board Set to Find Homes

Families of soldiers sent overseas on short notice, can get the right information and help with any of their problems by contacting Fort Benning's Community Services Agency (CSA).

Presently the Agency is experiencing a heavier than usual work-load with the impending deployment of the 1st Cavalry division to Viet Nam. To assist in the heavy load Capt. Frank Kerbel and 19 members of the 1st Cavalry Division have been attached to the Agency until the bulk of the immediate problems can be resolved.

Established in November, 1964, the agency is equipped to help dependent wives do all the things their husbands would normally do, Maj. Shirley Sneed coordinator of CSA, said.

Primary problems confronting division wives are housing and transportation. Whether the problem be a move to a distant home town or into Columbus, or forms to be filled out, or a personal problem, the dependent wife should go to CSA for advice and help in finding the solution.

Approximately 1,900 1st Cavalry families have decided to remain in the vicinity of Fort Benning. One such family is that of the commanding general, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard.

Mrs. Kinnard is urging the wives to consult CSA for help

1st Cav Gets Ready for War

Loading freight cars and vehicles with equipment, grabbing much needed rest whenever possible, lines of equipment scattered everywhere tell the story of a division getting ready for war. Everywhere on Harmony Church and Sand Hill are signs of a division mobilized—ready and waiting for the word to "MOVE." (Photos by Don Borders and Pierre Beaule)

Youths Bolstering Post Work Force

President Johnson's Youth Opportunity Program has given the Fort Benning work force a shot in the arm.

The impact of 325 young trainees hit the post at a time when the post was facing a manpower shortage.

According to civilian personnel management spokesmen the young trainees "deserve every dollar they are being paid for their summer work."

Throughout Post

Throughout the post they are working as typists, clerks laboratory technicians and warehousemen. They were hired in response to an appeal for jobs from the President for the 16-21 age group.

The program works two ways. According to A. E. Melock civilian personnel chief at Benning, both profit from "this exceptional opportunity."

After an official luncheon in the Main Officers Open Mess, board members were briefed on the operation of The Infantry School.

Following the briefings the board convened to perform a comprehensive review of the Army's system for officer education training.

Yesterday and today the Board is operating from Fort Benning and visiting Fort Gordon, Ga., Fort McClellan, Ala., Fort Rucker, Ala.

The Army officer school system has been the subject of periodic review since World War II. The last comprehensive review was the "Williams Board" of 1958, which has guided the education and training philosophy of the Army for the past seven years.

Since that review, there have been significant changes affecting the Army and the professional requirements of its officers. It is the mission of this board to examine the present school system to see how well it has kept pace with those changes and how well it is prepared to meet the foreseeable changes of the future.

Gen. Haines and his group will depart from Lawson Army Airfield this Sunday.

Youth

officer of the post's civil work force said he was "enthusiastic about the way the youngsters are adapting to the situation.

Indications

"They show every indication that they consider this a genuine opportunity to learn new skills," he continued.

Of the 20 youths assigned to the Storage section, James Loudermilk, storage officer, says he's "Tickled to death with these fellows. They don't think this program is a hand-out deal. They take it seriously and give us value received every day. I feel like they are my own boys and I say that with great pride."

The purpose of the campaign is to provide meaningful work and job training as well as adequate wages for this "baby boom" group.

Services

in solving legal, financial or other serious problems.

The general's wife expressed appreciation to Columbus Mayor Ed Johnson and the Chamber of Commerce for their cooperation in meeting problems faced by 1st Cavalry Division wives.

The Chamber of Commerce has established a Central Real Estate Office at the Black Angus (Ranch) Restaurant at the Traffic Circle to help with the housing problem. The office will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

People in the community are requested to call in listings of rentals or property for sale. The telephone number is MU 9-1422.

When a unit is deployed overseas, each military man or his wife will fill out a CSA Dependents Registration Card whether or not the family will remain in the immediate community.

The agency's service to dependents of a deployed unit includes an orientation at Marshall Auditorium in Bldg. 4, where a panel will give specific information on where and how to attend to the details of relocation or adjustment to the sudden move from the post.

Areas Helped

Legal assistance by the Staff Judge Advocate Section, medical care at facilities of the post surgeon and counseling by chaplains are areas in which dependents are helped.

Maj. Sneed advises the dependent wife to consult CSA first, no matter what the problem may be.

"We are here to help you solve your problem and to put you in touch immediately with the proper individuals or units to assist you," she said.

Brigade

position of the new units, the defense department release said they would be "built around a nucleus of experienced officers and non commissioned officers drawn from other elements of the active Army." Newly inducted or enlisted personnel are to make up the balance of each's strength.

Plans call for the division personnel, and that of the brigade to be formed in October, to be given basic training and advanced individual training in the unit rather than in Army Training Centers. Those assigned to the other two brigades will be put through the training centers and will have completed basic and advanced courses by the time they report to their units.

According to the release this system "will provide for the simultaneous training of the greatest possible number of men during the time the army is expanding the capacity of its training centers."

Loan Trap Can Hurt Unwary GI

The August 2 Infantry Center Daily Bulletin warns soldiers to beware of "unethical practices pertaining to mortgages on GI or VA loans."

The notice submitted by the office of the assistant chief of staff, G-1, warns that the practices presently in parts of Florida and Georgia may spread to the Columbus area.

"This practice involves the purchase of equities from military personnel who own homes and who must—due to departure from the area, dispose of them — usually on very short notice," the statement explained.

"All personnel should be advised that the mere sale of an equity in a home on which there exists an outstanding mortgage does not relieve the owner from his obligations under the mortgage unless the mortgage company consents to the transaction and executes a release of mortgage," the notice concluded.

Directive Tightens Lie Detector Policies

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Defense Department has tightened its policy on the use of lie detector tests to secure information that normally can be obtained through skillful investigation and interrogation.

A new DOD directive lays down the ground rules for polygraph (lie detector) examinations that may be given to personnel in the military services and defense agencies.

Prior to examination, the directive states, an individual must be advised of the opportunity to obtain and consult with counsel of his own choice, and must give written consent to the examination.

A person being examined must also be made aware whether the area of an examination contains a two-way mirror or other device for monitoring.

The directive provides assurance that no adverse action will be taken if an individual refuses a polygraph and permits a person either under or associated with an investigation to request a polygraph.

A polygraph examination will not be given to persons who are not in sound physical or mental condition, the directive notes.

During a criminal investigation a polygraph examination may be used only where the alleged crime is punishable by death or confinement for a term of one year or more.

Polygraph examinations may also be conducted as part of a counterintelligence or personal security investigation when access to information higher than confidential is sought.

Show Some Heart

By TOM SELLERS
Of The Columbus Ledger

Most people had known for weeks that the 1st Cavalry Division at Fort Benning was getting ready for Viet Nam, but the official announcement still landed here like the blow of a sledgehammer.

If it's true that 20,000 to 22,000 troops will leave, along with a substantial number of dependents, whole neighborhoods of Columbus will be decimated. Out where I live in the southeastern part of the city, moving vans will become a way of life. And the economic impact of the loss — at least temporarily — can't help but be severe.

Down the Drain

Yet it seems almost indecent to bewail the dollars headed down the drain when one considers the grim business that these men are going into. People are fighting and getting killed and no one has reason to expect that the 1st Cavalry will find it any different over there.

Many of those destined for Viet Nam are our neighbors and beloved friends; surely this community won't let them depart believing that the only reason we liked them was the payroll they brought us every month. Above all, it is no time for avarice to show; it is a time instead, for quiet meditation and prayer.

Everyone Affected

The church that I attend on St. Mary's Road will lose its musical director and a number of its most faithful workers. (Even our pastor caught the fever the other day; he decided to go to Germany to work among military families, and in his letter of resignation he said he had been "placed on orders for duty in another camp.")

Scout troops will lose Scoutmasters; P-TA's their presidents. Maybe the fellow down the street whose lawn mower you were in the habit of borrowing is packing his gear; you know you're going to miss him! Children will be separated from adored playmates. I could name a hundred ways that people will be affected, but a few examples tell the story.

But Columbus has been an Army town for nearly half a century; the city and the post are wed, for better or worse, and the marriage has survived more wrenching breakups than this one. It would seem that Columbus would be fatalistic about these sudden departures; and meanwhile ought to make every effort to broaden the base of its economy so that prosperity would not be so crucially dependent on the military.

Like Homesickness

Since a portion of the dependents of 1st Cavalry members will remain in Columbus, there is much that can be done to share with them the hardships of separation. This problem may even become of such magnitude that it will require community action. I should think that the City Commission and Chamber of Commerce, along with influential civic clubs, would lend their attention to programs that would boost the morale of bereft families.

And rather than spending all our time demanding that Washington dispatch new troops to the post, we might better attempt to show that we appreciate those who've been here in the past. These were our men, too; they ought to have letters written to them; get newspapers and homemade cakes and tape-recordings of familiar voices.

Maybe the war in Viet Nam is different from any of the others, but some things haven't changed. Like homesickness, and the yearning to know that old friends still care.

Chaplain's Corner

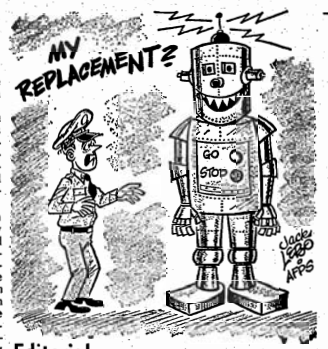
'Love Thy Neighbor'

By Chaplain (Maj.) Michael R. Rusnock

Sometimes when we hear that modern communications and transportation have brought people closer together, we forget that the worst wars in history have occurred in just this period of heightened contact.

The mere act of bringing people closer together in physical and intellectual contact will never of itself guarantee harmony. There must be, first of all, spiritual contact, a sharing in the realization that we have all been created by the same Father and for the same purpose.

"But I say to you, Love your enemies: do good to them that hate you: and pray for them that persecute and calumniate you: That you may be the children of your Father who is in heaven, who maketh his sun to rise upon the good, and bad, and raineth upon the just and the unjust." (Matthew 5:44-45)



Editorial

Defense Takes Men

This is an era of automation!

Today we can sit in our car, push a button and the windows roll up. Push a button on a vending machine and out pops a pack of cigarettes; push more buttons and an assembly line of soft drinks, lunches, fruit and even wearing apparel appears.

Data processing machines, tabulation cards, numbers and more cards continue to make the wheels of industry and science turn swiftly. In short, machines today can do almost anything.

But, have you ever seen a machine that can produce qualities of leadership? Inspiration? A machine that can produce determination?

No, you haven't, and chances are you never will! Machines are man's servant — not his master. Machines cannot love freedom, or country, or the democratic way of life, or respect the dignity of man.

So, Mr. Serviceman, it's not yet time for you to worry about being replaced by a machine!

Your human traits of skill, creativity, courage and determination still, and always will, remain the major ingredients of our military strength and our country's security.

Whether you fight on land, sea or in the air, your mastery of the equipment you use, coupled with determination and common sense, can mean the difference between victory and defeat.

So it boils down to this. A machine has yet to be built, and it seems very unlikely that it will be built, to replace the human mind. In the defense of America's democratic institutions from their enemies, the absolute weapon is man, the thinking man, not a machine.

Your mind is what makes you indispensable. Are you prepared to use it? (AFPS)

The Surgeon Says

Burn or Tan?

The sun is beneficial to all living things. The sun is our friend and like any friend, it should be treated with proper respect. It is never the sun's fault if you allow a severe sunburn or other solar injuries to spoil your vacation, keep you from work, or put you under a doctor's care.

Results of continued exposure to the skin are additional hardening or thickening. As this builds up, the outer layer begins to look leathery, rough, dry and blotchy. Over a period of years continuing exposure can produce changes in deeper layers of the skin. These chronic degenerative changes cannot be reversed.

A sunburn is similar to a heat or fire burn. It is commonly classified as first or second degree burns. Damage may vary from a mild, uncomfortable redness to a painful, extensive skin eruption of blisters and in severe circumstances, fever, chills, pain, and swelling, even advancing to shock and delirium.

The old proverb, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is particularly applicable in preventing a sunburn. Those who wish to avoid harmful effects of Ultra Violet Radiation but crave a sun tan should schedule exposure to the sun's rays in gradually lengthening doses.

For the average adult, 15 or 20 minutes on the first day is the maximum limit of safety. This period should be much less for children since they can stand only about half the Ultra Violet light exposure of an adult. There are several converging lines of evidence that the Ultra Violet rays in sunlight are an important factor in producing certain types of skin cancer.

About 90 percent of skin cancer is found on exposed areas, principally the face.

In the United States, there is more skin cancer in the Southern states where there is also more sunshine.

Skin cancer can be produced in mice 100 percent of the time by using Ultra Violet light of shorter wave lengths.

Sun tan preparations vary a great deal in composition and effectiveness and the ultimate test is that of actual use. For best results, the preparations should be reapplied at least every two hours particularly to exposed areas of the nose, shoulders and V of the neck and more often if swimming removes it.

It is pretty much a matter of trial and error to determine the most effective sun tan preparation. This conclusion is drawn from a study of 56 commercial sun tan creams, lotions, and oils. More than one-half did not list active ingredients on the label.

In any event, the technical names of ingredients and their qualities as light absorbers would be meaningful to the especially informed. It is generally best to schedule your exposure to the sun gradually. Treat your friend the sun with deep respect, or the sun can treat you with a deep and painful cancer.

The Teen Beat

With Bette Jean Spratley

Wanta thank all you people for the nice things you said about my first column last week. Don't, hardly think Dorothy Kilgallen or Heloise have much to fear from me though. Incidently, my career as the Teen Beat scribe is going to be short-lived. Heading north in a couple weeks to get acquainted with the Ohio State campus, my new for (?) years. Know it will be a drag being a Buckeye freshman instead of a Baker senior.

Everyone's been talking about the "revitalized" teen program on post, but there are some teens that need "devitalizing." They get rid of excess energy by banging their fists on the walls or with chinups on the rest room pipes: result — broken pipes! Maybe we need to add a gymnasium to Teen Square or some warning signs about eating more than 12 pieces of that certain cereal they advertise on the "boob tube."

Here's more on that King's Pond dance we mentioned last week. It'll be next Friday (the 13th) and will also be a hayride. Eight trucks will leave Teen Square at 7 p.m. with dinner to be served in the rec hall after we get to King's Pond. The Gintrees will play for dancing from 8 p.m. until midnight. We should get back to TS by 1 a.m. Tickets are 75 cents each and MUST be bought in advance. They're on sale in the TS office from 1 a.m. until noon, 2 p.m. until 5 and 8 p.m. until 11.

Added info on the hayride and dance. Only 20 private cars may be driven and it'll cost you. You got to get a special driving permission ticket and it costs $1 extra. No one will be permitted into the rec area in a POV without that dollar permission ticket. Oh yes, dress for this gala event. . .slacks (no shorts) sweat shirts, football jerseys or what have you? And remember this is for MEMBERS and their guests.

And there's a dance tonight also . . .at Teen Square, with the Gintrees. Price 50 cents stag, 75 cents drag and it's from 8 p.m. until midnight. There were almost 200 at TS last Friday night.

Along with judo and bowling classes, we've got another archery class starting Aug. 16. You have to register by Aug. 13. Fencing classse are planned for the near future. Watch for more details.

Still need names to put in this column. How about calling BJ at 545-2416. So much for this scene, hope you make the next one.

Mrs. Ben H. Ward, 545-3546, has been named reservations chairman, while Mrs. Walter Robertson, 689-3832, will assume the duties of publicity chairman. Mrs. Ward succeeds Mrs. Earl W. Buchanan and Mrs. Robertson replaces Mrs. John L. Pope.

Succeeding Mrs. Gale Thompson as corresponding secretary is Mrs. Robert J. Everhart, 323-5467. Mrs. Tony Perpich resigned the position of second vice president and Mrs. James Muir, 545-3897 has been elected to fill the vacancy. Both new officers were elected by the OWC Executive Board.

Walker, 545-2219; Horseback Riding, Mrs. Francis L. Franklin, 545-3315, Adult Charm and Modeling, Mrs. William Fraker, 689-0745 and Slim 'n' Trim, Mrs. Edward R. Gear, 689-5904.

Participants in these activities must be members of OWC. Membership may be obtained when registering for classes.

Colorful Adhesive Tape Brightens Any Kitchen

Why not make your own pop art for your kitchen? Refrigerators, cabinets, and breakfast nook walls all lend themselves to pop and op designs.

While art collectors and museums hang original oil paintings of professional artists' soup cans, fresh fruit and vegetables, meat counter, and comic strips in their gallery, you can make your own designs for the kitchen with colored adhesive covering.

Just a few simple shapes and colors are all you need. Make a mural of citrus fruit for your cabinets or the wall over your breakfast nook. Use rolls of willow green, canary yellow and tangerine adhesive covering.

Use pans and bowls of varying sizes as patterns for limes, lemons, tangerines, oranges and grapefruit. The size of the fruit and the number you use will depend on the amount of space you have to cover. Lay the patterns on the wrong side of the rolls and draw around them.

Use whole circles for complete fruit and half or quarter circles as wedges. Then cut out the fruit shapes. Move them around on a large table or the floor to decide how to arrange them on the cabinet or wall. Then, when you have decided how they will look best, peel off the backing and press the adhesive side of each lime, lemon, tangerine, orange and grapefruit to the surface.

A Discussion

The 'Four Freedoms' and Communism

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles about the nature of communism. They are based on the text by William Ebenstein, "Two Ways of Life." This installment discusses the differences in the interpretation of "The Four Freedoms." Succeeding articles will discuss the history, aims, doctrine, both economic and social, and the challenge communism presents to democracy.

In a famous speech to Congress on January 6, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt listed four freedoms essential to the well being of man: freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear. These freedoms are almost universally recognized today as basic. How do they fare under communism — which claims it is the only system under which true freedom is possible?

Speech

With regard to freedom of speech, Ebenstein's book makes the point Communists regard speech, both verbal and written, as an instrument for molding opinion. As such, it must be carefully controlled according to Communist thought. The idea that people should be free to say or print what they please is rejected as "bourgeois nonsense". This policy is applied not only to the people as a whole but to leaders of the Communist Party itself. Many leaders who have disagreed with the "man in power" have either met death or simply dropped out of sight.

Freedom of speech in the U.S. implies freedom of silence as well, that is, the right to say nothing on controversial matters. However, in a Communist country, silence is often interpreted by the government as secret opposition. A person must actively praise government leaders if he wants to get ahead or, in some places, to survive. Communists well understand that silence is not just absence of speech, but that it can often be a very strong form of communication, says Ebenstein. The man who hangs back and says nothing is often a man to bear watching according to Communist philosophy.

The punishing of silence is part of the basic Communist principle that a person is held accountable not only for his acts but also for his thoughts. The totalitarian state is not satisfied if citizens merely obey the law in their outward acts.

Religion

Freedom of religion comes off no better in Communist society than freedom of speech. According to Communist doctrine, religion is the "opiate of the people." It is an institution created by the ruling class to make the exploited masses accept their miseries more cheerfully while looking forward to a better life in the next world. Communists say that in a classless society, religion will inevitably be discarded.

In Russia, the communists took no chances. As soon as communism was established, the government began systematically to repress religion. As a result, most churches in the Soviet Union have since been turned into warehouses, movies or stores. In the few churches that have been permitted to continue, worship is still possible. However, because churches are so few, the long distance many people must travel in order to reach them makes attendance a practical impossibility.

Moreover, Sunday is not respected as a general day of rest in Russia and other Communist countries. Stores and factories operate on Sundays so that millions of people who have to work are unable to attend church even if they want to. Persons who consistently refuse to work on major religious holidays are harassed and punished. All the official pressure of government and party is against church attendance; no one can get ahead in any important career if he is known to be a "believer" who regularly goes to church.

Free From Want

With the welfare of the individual in the Communist state being secondary to the economic goals of that state, freedom from want comes out a poor economic second in Russia and other Communist countries. In the Soviet Union, the government has decided arbitrarily that emphasis should be placed on the building of factories and on production of military armaments rather than on the manufacture of consumer goods. If the emphasis on meeting the needs of heavy industry results in economic want for millions of Soviet citizens, this is of comparatively little importance to the communist rulers.

Actually, much of the economic want which exists in the Soviet Union and other Communist countries would seem to be planned so as to get a maximum manpower expenditure from the people.

For example, wages are kept low so that a father rarely earns enough to support his family adequately. His wife must generally have a full time job if the family is to simply subsist. Consequently, in the Soviet Union, more than 50 per cent of all women have to work.

When people get old, they receive pensions, which generally amount to about 50 per cent of monthly wages. This would seem to be a favorable contrast to pension plans in the U. S. where percentages may often be lower. However, in the Soviet Union, the wages themselves are so low that, in the majority of cases, even 100 per cent of monthly wages is not enough to sustain a person. The result is that older persons must take on various jobs to supplement the income from their pensions.

From Fear

The absence of freedom from fear is perhaps the single most oppressive feature of the Communist system. A sense of insecurity runs through all human relations. A person never knows whom to trust or distrust and he finds it difficult to make plans for the future. Political police can arrest a person without a judicial warrant and send him off to prison or even execute him without trial. If a trial is held, it is often more a mockery than a real hearing. The difference between democracy and communism has perhaps been best expressed in this saying: "In a free country, a knock on the door in the early morning means the milkman is there; in a totalitarian state, that knock means the secret police have come to snatch a member of he family."

Fear, for example, keeps most Russians from inviting foreigners to their homes. Although there is no law specifically forbidding Soviet citizens from inviting foreigners to their homes, people are afraid to do so for fear of informers — and any neighbor might be an informer for the police. "Who knows," the Russian reasons, "some day I may be charged with having had contacts with foreign spies, and one of my neighbors will swear that he saw a foreigner enter my apartment."

"Reflex"

The "conditioned reflex" of fear is further illustrated by an incident in Viborg which is near the Russian-Finnish border. Viborg was a Finnish city annexed by the Soviet Union at the end of World War II. In the center of Viborg, a woman, when asked whether there were still any Finns in the city, replied, "I don't know." The equivalent would be for a foreign visitor to El Paso, Texas to ask a passer-by whether there were any Mexicans in the city and to receive "I don't know" for an answer. The woman in Viborg did not even think about what to say. "I don't know" seemed to be the automatic reflex, acquired after many years of experience.

Saying "no" to the question would be an outright lie and saying "yes" might be an admission that Viborg was once a part of Finland. So which should she get into trouble?

Fear even enters into the family relationship in the Soviet Union and other Communist countries. Parents hesitate to express anti-Communist ideas in front of their children, not so much because they are afraid the children will denounce them, but because a child at school may innocently tell the teacher what his father and mother said at home. Direct denunciations have also occurred and fanatical young Communists have denounced their parents out of spite or loyalty to the party.

Quite a deplorable system, isn't it? It is indeed one of the worst and most oppressive in the history of mankind.

'Love-Filters' Used in Test

"Love - filters" prepared from the "love-lanterns of fireflies will soon be used to find out whether there are microbes in space. Proper decontamination of spacecraft cannot be assured until this has been determined. At least 10,000 fireflies collected by 4-H Club youngsters in Florida are being used for this task by space agency scientists. This project may also have important side benefits in helping to discover means of combatting cancer.

Employing luciferin, luciferase and adonosine triphosphate, the chemicals which cause the tail lamps of fireflies to light when they are seeking mates, scientists believe they may also come upon the closest thing yet discovered to the spark of life. These chemicals are mediums of energy-transferance in human beings, animals, plants and microbes. Without this chemical aid, for instance, the human heart would cease to beat.

Six Non-Coms Given Grade Boost At Control Command Ceremonies

Six of Fort Benning's non-commissioned officers donned master sergeant and 1st sergeant stripes last week in one of the biggest promotion ceremonies in many months at the 2nd Control Command Headquarters.

Col. Fred O. Jackson, commander of Control Command, a left over body of about 6,000 soldiers from the 2nd Infantry Division, called the sergeants into his office to pin the stripes and extend his personal congratulations.

"It's been a long time since we've had this many E-8 stripes," said Jackson. "This is a rewarding moment for me to see you get these much deserved promotions. They're very difficult to obtain."

On hand for the promotion ceremony, in addition to the six elated sergeants and their wives was a room full of officers, representing each NCO's unit or section.

While five master sergeant stripes were handed out. Eugene P. Isabella, of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2d Medical Battalion, received the only chevrons of a 1st Sergeant.

Isabella, a native of West Pittsburgh, Pa., has nearly 19 years in the Army. He served in Vietnam from May of 1964 to November 1964.

Isabella joined the 2nd Division in February and was assigned to the medical battalion.

Torres - Martinez, a native of Aibonito, Puerto Rico, has been in the Army for about 15 years. Since coming to Fort Benning in November 1963, he has worked as an operations sergeant for the Test, Evaluation and Control Group. He is currently the operations sergeant in headquarters of the Control command's 1st Brigade.

Dyer, the division artillery's intelligence sergeant, left Crawford, Nebraska in 1949 and has been in the Army ever since. He saw action in the Korean War and has attended two radar schools in Germany plus the Operation and Intelligence School at Fort Sill, Okla.

MSgt. Cox saw action in five major campaigns during World War II and earned the Bronze Star Medal. He's the intelligence NCO at the 12th Artillery Honest John Battalion. A native of Tupelo, Miss., Cox was drafted in 1942.

Lebo, who has 21 and a half years of military service — the longest of the new E-8s — was introduced to military life in 1943 with a tour in the U.S. Coast Guard. He served in the Air Force until 1947 at which time he transferred to the Army.

Lebo was assigned to the 2nd Infantry Division in June of 1964 and worked in the Fire Support Element of the Division Artillery. In May Lebo took over as 1st Sergeant of Headquarters Battery.

MSgt. Bowen, an expert in administrative and personnel matters was assigned to the 2nd Division's 2nd Administration Company in September of 1964 and has been the Personnel Management Supervisor.

Army Test Fires Lance Missile

DALLAS, Tex. (AFPS) — A successful development firing of the Army's newest battlefield missile, the Lance, from a tactical version of the system's lightweight launcher, has been made at White Sands Missile Range.

Army authorities describe the lightweight launcher as an important feature of the highly mobile Lance system.

Lance is being designed to provide fire support, both nuclear and non-nuclear, to infantry, armored and mechanized divisions. The first Army missile to use prepackaged storable liquid propellant.

Two Post Employees Honored for Service

Two Fort Benning employees were decorated July 29 with the army's second highest civilian award, the Meritorious Civilian Service Medal.

They are Tillman A. Barefoot civilian personnel officer who received his third award of the medal, and Miss Annie B. Wheelus, an operations assistant at The Infantry School.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commander, presented the medals.

Barefoot heads a force of 3,200 employees on post recently rated as one of the best in the Third Area.

A Department of the Army inspection report in September stated the post excels in its program for assistance and guidance to supervisors and in equal employment plans and progress.

During the period for which he was cited, January, 1964, to February, 1965, Barefoot made a valuable contribution to industrial relations in the community by his negotiations with the Chattahoochee Valley Metal trade agreements.

Miss Wheelus was awarded the medal for her work from January, 1957, to December, 1964, in the Brigade and Battalion Operations Department. As an operations assistant, she has coordinated and supervised programs of instruction for an average of 10,00 students per year. Her work involves posting the educational requirements laid down by The Infantry School's director of instruction, and assisting instructional and committee chiefs and instructors as they prepare training schedules.

Physical Dates Announced For School Start

Physical examinations for military dependents who will enter schools or kindergartens in the fall at Fort Benning or in the surrounding civilian community for the first time will be administered Aug. 6, 13 and 20, officials announced.

The examinations will be given between 8 and 10 a.m. at the Physical Examination Section, Bldg. 396, Martin Army Hospital Annex.

Dependents whose last names begin with the letters A through J will be examined Aug. 6, K through R on Aug. 13, and S through Z on Aug. 20.

Officials said all children must be accompanied by a parent. Immunization records for each child must be brought to the examination section. Children needing shots will receive them at the Immunization Clinic after the physical.

The Reactions to Youth Opportunity

Eddie James Crowell

One of the trainees at the Post motor pool is Eddie James Crowell of Phenix City, who attends South Girard High School. Eddie likes his work. "I've learned to tune an engine, adjust brakes, check the master cylinder and many other things," he said.

Walter James Alexander

At the Equipment Branch of the Supply Control and Storage Section is Walter James Alexander of Smiths, Ala. He thinks the things he is learning about stock storage and issue techniques will "help me in the future." Walter hopes the program will be resumed next summer.

"I'll be a senior this fall at Wacoochee High School in Salem, Ala.," he said. "After I graduate next spring, I'd like to come back to Fort Benning for more of this practical training.

Miss Kay Weaver

A Talbot County High School senior, Miss Kay Weaver of Waverly Hall, Ga., is a mail distributer in the Supply Control and Storage Section. She has learned to operate a Xerox machine, mimeograph, and a calculator.

Miss Elsie McDaniel, administrative assistant in the section, said, "It is remarkable how having Kay here to take on so many routine responsibilities has eased the work load. This releases our regular staff to devote their time to more technical duties. Kay has certainly given us a lift."

Miss Carol Elkins

Miss Carol Elkins of Columbus, is working as a typist. She plans to enter Columbus College in the fall.

"I'll hold down a regular job during the day and go to college at night," she said. "Having a chance to work as a trainee this summer is giving me good experience. When I go for an interview for my first real job I will have more confidence because of this training. Someday I hope to enter Civil Service."

Gen York Honors Retiring Soldiers; Chapel Field Scene for Ceremony

In his first mass retirement ceremony since assuming command of Fort Benning, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York last Tuesday presented Army Commendation Medals and clusters to 31 soldiers.

On Chapel Field, a color and honor guard and The Infantry Center Band set the stage for the final military ceremony for the retiring men.

Gen. York said it was always a sad occasion for him to say farewell to those reaching the end of their active Army careers.

He added, "Those of you standing here today have served your country faithfully and have brought credit upon yourself and the United States Army during the last 20 or 30 years of your active military service. I know this to be true by virtue of the fact you are here today."

Heads List

Lt. Col. Vernon T. Mergler headed the list of retirees. Col. Mergler with 29 years of service received the Army Commendation Medal (ACM) for meritorious service.

Receiving the first Oak Leaf Clusters to the ACM were Maj. Henry J. Baring, retiring with 23 years service; Sgt. Major Sherman A. Moore, 24 years; M-Sgt. William H. Curry, Jr., 23 years; SFC William A. Bowman, 22 years; SFC Samuel W. Stone and Sp7 Loren E. Crowder both with 20 years.

27 Years

SFC Leo O. Warren, 27 years; SFC John I. Byrd, 20 years, SFC George H. Donaldson, 25 years and SFC Carvin Poole, 30 years.

Sgt. John M. Rohl and Sp5 Gordon E. Prescott both with 21 years, Sp5 Vinson Biddy Sr., 24 years and Sp5 Biddy Sr., 24 years and Sp5 Samuel O. Johnson, 22 years.

Also retiring were SFC Nathan B. Taylor, and SSgt. William T. McDougal both with 20 years.

Disposal Sales Hours Changed

The Property Disposal Retail Sales Store at Fort Benning, located in Bldg. 1123 on 10th Division Road, has announced a temporary change in its hours of operations.

The store, which was previously open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. every Wednesday, will now operate only on the first Wednesday of each month during the same hours, officials said.

The change is temporary and dependent on the changes in the store's work load.

ROTC Scholarships Given 400 High School Grads

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The first four-year scholarships to be given by the Army at colleges and universities offering the ROTC program have been awarded to 400 outstanding high school graduates.

The Army on July 15 announced the names of 600 ROTC college students who will receive two-year scholarships starting with their junior year in college this fall.

Both the four-year and the two-year grants, which are authorized by the ROTC Vitalization Act signed by the President on October 13, 1964, will pay for tuition, textbooks and fees and provide the recipient with a subsistence of $50 a month for the duration of his award.

Recipients of the four-year scholarships were selected from more than 3,000 applicants. Selection of the award winners was made by a board of senior officers in Department of the Army based upon each applicant's high school academic and extra-curricular records, the scores he received on a standardized aptitude test, his physical qualifications and interviews by Army officers.

Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor, himself an ROTC graduate from Yale in 1939, said, "The scholarships being offered by the Army for the first time this year will help provide the motivated, high quality, college-educated officers needed by the Army."

The scholarship winners will join thousands of other college freshmen entering the ROTC program this fall — a program that provides approximately 85 per cent of the officer input needed by the Army each year. This year some 11,800 ROTC graduates from the 247 ROTC colleges and universities are being commissioned as second lieutenants in the Regular Army or the Army Reserve.

Normal ETS Releases Planned For Viet Nam 'Short Termers'

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — Vietnam-bound soldiers will be released on their normal separation date (ETS) even if they have been overseas no more than 60 days, the Army said this week.

The Army, to assure that units are as combat-ready as possible, is requiring all soldiers assigned to units that are alerted for Viet-Nam duty to go with their units overseas, if they have 60 or more days service time remaining.

However, the Army plans to return all soldiers stateside in time to be separated on their normal ETS. This policy is subject to change in the event the Pentagon decides to extend enlistments as part of its Vietnam crisis buildup, officials told Army Times.

The Army wants its units being deployed to Vietnam to have as much personnel "experience" as possible. Permitting soldiers with 60 days or more remaining to stay home "will deprive you not only of the necessary experience but would hamper unit morale as well," one official said.

He said the Army also wants to phase its replacements in over a period of a year instead of having to replace the entire unit at once. To rid the rolls of short-termers before the unit goes overseas would create a situation in which everyone would be eligible for stateside return at the same time.

This kind of rotation would "greatly" hamper the unit's combat readiness.

The Army feels it's better to send short-termers with units even if they have to fly them home by jet at great expense to make their normal ETS. Army policy in the past has been to pull short-termers from units.

While it's possible for non-volunteers to be sent back to Vietnam, the new Army tour policy as spelled out in the July 21 issue of Army Times requires that they spend at least 24 months Stateside before they can return.

Army's Decision Pending On Fire Support System

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A decision on the Army's Advanced Aerial Fire Support System (AAFSS) is due after Sept. 1. Two major U.S. aircraft builders are competing for the development contracts.

As visualized by the Army, the weapons - carrying aircraft would be capable of vertical short take off and landing (V-STOL) and be able to exceed 200 m.p.h.

The AAFSS would be used primarily supporting troop-carrying helicopter operations in the forward combat zone providing machine guns, rocket, missile and grenade firepower.

Last March, the Army let six-month contracts to Sikorsky Aircraft and Lockheed California Company for the project definition phase. This phase is conducted on a research basis determining the best way to develop a given project.

Both aircraft manufacturers have released artist's concepts showing similar versions. Each are jetpowered two seaters with helicopter blades for hovering and stub wings for fast forward flight.

Lockheed-California worked with another of its experimental aircraft, exceeding 272 m.p.h., in its AAFSS studies.

Sikorsky's version features a "rotoprop" in the tail section that may be swiveled 90 degrees from the side to the extreme rear. In the side position the "rotoprop" helps guide and stabilize during slow flight. When in the rear position, it pushes the aircraft adding to the forward flight speed.

DELTA BOOSTER

NASA has announced it is negotiating with the Douglas Aircraft Corporation, Santa Monica, Calif., for Delta space booster launch services. The vehicle has launched more NASA satellites than any other booster and has a success ratio of 90 per cent with 30 successful launches out of 32 attempts. Delta's most recent success was the launching of TIROS X (Television Infrared Observation Satellite) for meteorological purposes.

Khaki Shirts Being Phased Out in Army

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON—The long-sleeve khaki shirt with the standup collar will be neither issued nor worn after June 30, 1966, Pentagon officials report.

"All long - sleeve khaki shirts in DSA (Defense Supply Agency) and Army stocks, or in the hands of individuals, will have the sleeves shortened by 1 July 1966," they said.

The Army Tan (TW) long and short sleeve shirts are no longer a mandatory purchase item for officers. They will not be worn, Army officials previously announced, after June 30, 1968.

DSA and the Army have already taken scissors to some of the khaki shirts. Two inches have been trimmed from the sleeves of certain sizes of the shirts in heavy supply to meet needs for other sizes in short supply.

Although alteration costs amounted to nearly $130,000, new shirts would have cost more than $380,000, the Defense Department said.

Short Notice Now Straining Leave Policy

Short notice before overseas movement is placing a strain on the Inspector General and Adjutant General section of the Infantry Center.

Col. M. W. Kendall, assistant chief of staff, G-1, issued the latest word in leave policy for the Center.

Leave prior to overseas movement "will be granted on an individual basis to those to whom it is a matter of necessity," the colonel's statement said.

"Determination as to the requirements for this leave will be of such length as is compatible with the individual's desires and the requirements of the alerted unit," the statement continued.

Conflict between leave duration and known departure dates are to be settled by the commanding officer of the gaining unit, the statement concluded.

Reserve School Departs Post

Reserve personnel assigned to the Raleigh USAR School, commanded by Col. Norbert B. Watts, departed Fort Benning Saturday, July 31, to return to civilian life in their hometowns.

The school conducted the active duty phase of instruction for the second and third year Infantry officer career course for Third U. S. Army area reservists.

During the two-week encampment some 220 Reserve officers participated as students in the course. Most of these reside in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina and Tennessee.

Colorado, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, New York, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin were also represented.

The Infantry School supported the Raleigh School with instructional material, training aids, supervision, and instructional facilities. Instruction was conducted by Reservists who normally instruct in some 50 USAR schools and satellites in the Third Army area.

Each student officer normally attends 24 instructional drills at his hometown Reserve school throughout the year. The instruction during the two - week active duty completes the year's training.

The Infantry officer career course requires four years to complete, and constitutes the military educational requirements for the promotion to the ranks of major and lieutenant colonel.

Summer Reserve Headquarters

Tent City-A Home Away From Home

Tent City Reservists' New Home

Story By LANNY THOMAS

A jeep winds its way down Buena Vista Road in Fort Benning's blistering summer heat and after eight miles it pulls into "Tent City" in a remote area of the reservation.

"Tent City" is not a gypsy or circus encampment, or a religious revival of bygone days as may appear on a moment's glance. It's the home for many of the nation's Army Reserves who come here each summer.

As the jeeps turns off the smoldering pavement and stops in the tent community, the driver may pause, wipe his forehead and slur: "hell! it's hot out here." But, the Fort Benning soldier is usually a welcome sight to any number of about 500 reservists who may be spending their annual two weeks of the summer in the woods.

The soldier may be transporting supplies to the bivouac area, purifying water from a stream or operating a telephone switchboard. Despite occasional complaints of the torturing August sun, "PFCs," "Sp4s," sergeants and others are doing an integral part in the smooth, timely as a clock operation of several Fort Benning units supporting life in the post's only tent metropolis.

Although the operation of reserve training is run independently by the unit, they depend on Fort Benning's Reserve Control Section commanded by Lt. Col. Earl Sturm, for overall support and direcion. Cpt. Fields is the coordinator of the camp and mans his post from dawn to dust.

"The camp has worked real fine this year," said Fields. "No major flaps!" We started clearing the area and getting ready for the reserves in April and everything has gone real well."

Reserves are housed each summer in the tents because of a shortage of barracks space on post, according to Sturm. The Reserve control section, with a staff of 10 persons, deals with about 6,000 reserves each summer. Out of this number it is necessary for about 500 to stay in tents, two weeks at a time.

Two units currently in the field are the 5th Howtizer Battalion of Tampa, Florida and the 439th Engineer Company, from Pennsylvania. Other reserve units, depending on the type, train on various parts of the post.

For instance, the 3345th Medical Hospital of Alabama has worked in Martin Army Hospital and also operated all of the dispensaries at Harmony Church for the 1st Air Cavalry Division.

Just about all units in Center Troops Command and Main Post have their hands in the batter one way or another, according Capt. Charles E. Blanchard, S-3 officer of the Reserve control section. Blanchard offers the reserves full support with training aids, including a well trained staff of sound and signal people.

Training support offered the reserves ranges from setting up the rifle ranges to arranging the billets, preparing the food and piping the water for daily showers. The Post Fire Department also keeps a fire engine in the area, ready to hustle into action in an emergency.

"Our main mission is to run all maintenance and services in "Tent City" said Fields.

The 197th Brigade and the Reserve component secton ere largely responsible for constructing the tent community, a city with 200 tents, seven mess halls and one officer's mess.

The "edge" of nightfall in "Tent City" draws a steady, slow trek of men from the rows of tents to the showering and shaving facilities provided by a platoon of the 577th Engineers. Water is transported from a nearby purification truck at a creek to a huge open rubber tank where the warm sun keeps the temperature right for showering.

In addition to the necessities, reservists are being provided PX facilities, bus service back and forth to garrison and three movies a week compliments of Special Services.

Trexler Moving To Post G-1 Job

Lt. Col. Tommy Trexler last week left his post as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, 2nd Control Command, for a job with the Infantry Center G-1 Section.

At a farewell party—cake and ice cream call in the old conference room of the 2nd Division—Trexler expressed thanks for "loyalty from my subordinates—right down to the private."

Jungle Fighting Nothing New For U.S., Says Army Chief of Staff

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — While all Army elements are not trained specifically for the jungle war the U.S. faces in Viet Nam they are trained thoroughly in the use of their weapons and equipment under varying conditions, according to the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson says that jungle war is not new to the Army.

The 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii and the Southern Command in the Caribbean provide special training that can be used to advantage in Viet Nam.

"In addition to this training, there exists in the Army a reservoir of experience among many of our officers and senior enlisted men who fought with as well as against guerrillas in the jungles during World War II," he said.

"Twenty-one of the Army's 37 World War II battle streamers were awarded for campaigns in the Pacific, not to mention those campaigns of our country's earlier history which occurred in jungle and guerrilla environments."

A number of units, including the 173d Airborne Brigade (now in Vietnam) and the 25th Infantry Division, have received intensive jungle war training. For several years the 25th has operated a Jungle and Guerrilla Warfare Training School. Nearly 12 — soldiers plus men from other services attended the school in the last year alone.

In a speech to the Georgia American Legion convention at Columbus, Johnson made these points:

— U. S. bombing raids have failed to disrupt Viet Cong supply lines. He termed as "ominous" the ability of the VC to maintain combat strength despite heavy losses.

An average of 12 local government officials are murdered by the VC each week in addition to kidnappings and other terrorism. So far 1600 civilian officials have been assassinated.

—The Viet Cong recently has been equipped with new arms, including automatic weapons, rocket launchers and recoilless rifles made in European satellite nations.

—Since the first of the year, America intelligence belives that enough ammunition has been moved into South Viet Nam by land to "resupply over 50 regular VC battalions, each with an average strength of about 40 men, for almost a month of intensive combat," Johnson said.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

Something new has made its appearance under the lights of Gowdy Field. The relative silence from the stands which accompanies most major unit baseball games was shattered last Friday when the Student Brigade took to the floodlit diamond against the 428th Medical Battalion. TSB brought two Officer Candidate Companies to the field en masse to turn up the noise decibels in support of their nine.

Early last week a contingent of airborne trainees, complete with shorn heads and vocal cords that shattered glass, made their cheering debut in support of TSB's baseball effort.

This was just an indication of what was to follow. In last Friday's twilight, the candidates marched into Gowdy Field with a big bass drum, garbage can covers, peerless voices and a long-suffering goat called Mr. Newton who will eat anything that is luckless enough to wander near.

The candidates, nearly 400 strong, planted themselves behind TSB's dugout and kept up the noise from the cry of "Play Ball," to the ninth inning roar of victory. Their endurance was commendable.

The clamor livened up the game for both players and spectators, and I suspect that a few more non-paying customers were magically drawn through Gowdy's gates by the unaccustomed sound emanating from the field.

In addition to yells, cheers, grunts and howls of encouragement or disappointment, the OC repertoire included such all time favorites as "The Wiffen Poof Song", "When the Saints Go Marchin' In", "Little Girls Have Pretty Curls But I Like Oreos", "Charlie Brown", and an appropriate chorus of "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

The classics were not neglected and when Medic starter Duane Eichorn was relieved by Bill Brannock in the seventh inning, the candidates came up with a dirge-like rendition of "Beethoven's Funeral March."

Mr. Newton made several appearances on the field to cries of "We want goat". At times he seemed to disconcert the plate umpire who finally thumbed the goat off the field on one occasion.

While it was a refreshing change to hear the crowd noise which goes so well with baseball and all spectator sports, I suspect that the candidates presence was not voluntary. They boosted attendance by at least 500 per cent but the increase was like an artificial price support.

The OC's were there under orders. Their obvious mission was to keep up the noise and they succeeded, although at times the noise was for noise sake and not especially in support of the team. At times the candidates seemed to be playing their own game.

But whatever the reasons behind the appearance of the TSB cheering section, I wish it were the start of something big. The players deserve the support which has been lacking up to now. As a last comment, TSB won the ball game.

Errors Give 197th Win Over Medics

Four errors and a passed ball made a four run seventh inning out of three single and turned defeat into victory for the 197th Infantry Brigade in their 7-5 win over the 428th Medical Battalion at Gowdy Field Tuesday night.

Trailing by two runs in the bottom of the seventh, Geral Burgess, Al Sumter and Billy Williamson hit singles and were all given free tickets home through bad ball handling by the Medics. Duane Eichorn also went on to score on an error after drawing a walk.

It was the 197th's fourth victory of the half against five losses. The setback gave the Medics a 3 win, six loss record.

Pitcher Geral Burgess, who relieved starter Bill Brannock in the fifth inning, was credited with the win. Henry Andrews was knocked off the mound in the seventh and was handed the loss.

The Medics took an early lead in the bottom of the first after Walt Waiss and Jose Parilla were driven home by Jimmy Wesley's single to left.

After the 197th scored a run in the top of the third, the Medics came up with two more runs in their half of the inning when Mike Morris and Wesley both scored on errors.

With the Medics on top 4-1 in fifth the brigade struck back with two runs of their own. Lead off batter Eddie McLean reached first base on an error and then stole second. With two away, Tom Groce stepped up to the plate and singled McLean home. Another error gave Groce a free passage to the plate with the second run of the inning.

The Medics picked up their last run in the bottom of the fifth when Parilla was hit by a Brannock pitch and came home on singles by Waiss and Morris.

The Medics failed to score for the remaining four innings and the 197th's four tallies in the seventh sewed up the game for the brigade.

CTC Blanks Medics On Hankinson Hurling

Shutting the 428th Medical Battalion out of the scoring column while yielding only six hits, Bernie Hankinson pitched his way to victory for the Infantry Center Troop Command at Gowdy Field last week in an 8-0 romp over the Medics.

It was Hankinson's second win of the half against one loss. Mike Morris, who was relieved in the seventh by Ronnie Rahr, was handed his third loss of the half.

Fifth inning homers by Bill Penny and Rosey Spence helped to pile up the runs for CTC in their fifth win of the half.

CTC sent home its first batter of the game with what proved to be the winning run. Eli Amaro led off the bottom of the first with a double to left and then scored on a passed ball and a fielding error by the Medic shortstop. A Spence single drove in Bill Nordan with the second run of the inning.

HANKINSON

Breaking a tie with the Student Brigade for the league lead, the Infantry Center Troop Command rolled over TSB 9-1 at Gowdy Field Monday night to claim top spot in the team standings.

It was the sixth victory of the half for CTC against 3 losses. The Troop Command already holds the first half championship title.

Doug Talmadge went all the way for CTC giving up only five hits. The only run scored by TSB was unearned. Bill Turley stayed on the mound the full nine innings for the Brigade despite buffetings given him by Troop Command batters.

A five run first inning, coming on four singles and two errors gave CTC an early advantage which was never seriously threatened.

Eli Amaro led off the inning with a walk. And was followed by Bill Penny and Bill Nordan who singled to load the bases. A passed ball brought Amaro home and sent the other runners ahead one base.

With men on second and third, clean up batter Floyd Wicker belted a solid single to left bringing Penny and Nordan.

Wicker then scored on a fielder's choice and Carmen D'Ambrosio's single drove in Bob Hodges with the fifth run of the inning.

TSB got its only run of the game in the top of the second when an error by CTC short stop Hodges put Bob Sheridan on the base pads. A wild pitch by Turley brought Sheridan home.

CTC bagged two runs in the third on a wild pitch which allowed Rosey Spence to score and a single by Bill Nordan driving in pitcher Talmadge.

Seventh inning singles by Hodges and Billy Fox drove in the Troop Command's final two runs.

The Army was slated to take on the Navy champs Wednesday in final play for the cup.

In Tuesday's action, John (Bitsy) Harrison, two time all Army singles champ, defeated the Air Force's Henry Jungle, 7-5, 6-4.

Rudy Hernando, the current inter-service singles champ, continued the Army triumph by beating Fred Shunk and the Army's open singles' victory was completed by Ed Hoehn and Dale Scwicker in matches against the Air Force's Stanly Hack and Tom Robinson.

The Air Force struck back in the afternoon by taking two out of three doubles matches. Fort Benning's John McGill and Schwicker of Fort Carson, Colo., comprised one of the Army teams which met defeat at the hands of the Air Force.

Final play in the Tourney will begin on Saturday to determine the singles and doubles champions in both the open and senior divisions.

Championship Shoot Under Way

Competition Tougher This Year

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Although there are fewer shooters entered in the National Pistol Championships here this year, competition for individual and team honors is expected to be tougher than it has been for a long time.

The race for the individual crown won for the past five years by the Army's SFC William B. Blankenship of the Marksmanship training Unit, began Tuesday and was due to end late yesterday afternoon.

Three team matches are scheduled for today and the pistol phase of the month-long Perry shoot will end Saturday with firing of the National Trophy, Individual and Team matches. During the past six weeks, the Army's national trophy pistol group has been engaged in training matches.

Paced by Blankenship, the soldiers took all of the individual titles at these matches and the bulk of the team events.

In their final warmup at South Bend, Ind. in the Pre-Camp Perry championships, Blankenship and team mate SFC Ralph Thompson, tied in overall score with 2652 and the national champ took the crown on the basis of more x-ring shots.

The Army won the 22, 45-service pistol and grand aggregate team championship with SSgt. Hershel Anderson and SSgt. Emil Heugatter joining Blankenship and Thompson to win the first two.

But the other service teams have been busy this month too.

In their only shoulder-to shoulder clash with the Air Force in Georgia state matches, the Army men won the individual race and took two of the three team events.

In two meetings with Marine and Navy squads, the Army has lost only one match but the other three scores are firing better scores this year and all can field four-man teams capable of cracking 3500 in the team aggregate.

Not until the last round goes down range will the champion likely be decided this year.

Machuca Beats Record In .22 Caliber Match

By LEE LaCOMBE

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — One national match record fell Tuesday as nearly 2000 of the nation's top shooters took to the firing line to compete in the national individual championships.

The Army's sergeant Santiago Machuca slammed out a 198-7x in a 22 caliber slow fire match to take first place and better the old mark by 3x-range shot.

All four of Tuesday's events were fired with the small caliber weapon and the competitors returned to the firing line Wednesday for four more matches with center fire guns.

One other match, the primed fire, went to an Army man, SSgt Hershel Anderson who topped the fire with a 200-16x, one x-range shot short of the record.

Capt. Thomas D. Smith of the Air Force emerged as the first day leader in the race for individual honors in the 4-match total of 889.

Soldiers Can Expect Less Charity Drives

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — Soldiers may face fewer charity demands on their wallets starting this fall. The Army has approved a one-shot charity drive this year for some 65 locations in the U.S. Next year the combined welfare campaign will be extended to additional stateside locations and overseas.

Locations at which the combined charity campaigns are authorized this year have a "substantial" military population and more than 1.4 million civilian employees, the Army said.

While the combined effort figures to trim the number of calls for contributions soldiers will continue to be asked in other campaigns to support Army charities.

Some posts have been using the one-shot charity campaign with great success, officials said.

Contributions under the combined plan have been "substantially higher" than in previous separate campaigns, the Army said.

On the plus side for the Army is the anticipation that the one charity drive a year plan will save time and expenses.

With the combined giving effort, the Army is also introducing charity payroll deductions for soldiers at selected posts. Reaction to the monthly deduction plan has been mixed with some officials and soldiers fearing increased pressure as a result.

However, it is understood that the Army will issue another warning soon on charity drive pressure. Unlike one issued last year the new warning will not be classified.

Gen York Greets Visitors From School of Americas

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commander of The Infantry Center, welcomed 24 Allied officers from seven Central and South American countries to Fort Benning last Wednesday.

Gen. York said he had recently returned from the Dominician Republic where he served with some of their countrymen and was favorably impressed with the military competence and efficiency of those with whom he associated.

The general told the visitors, "We are delighted to have this distinguished group here, and are pleased that you have chosen to visit Fort Benning. We hope your visit will be both pleasant and rewarding."

Outlined Mission

Gen. York outlined the mission of The Infantry School as one to train Infantrymen to fight well in any location in the world, under any condition or type of terrain.

He said, "We hope that when you leave here you will have gained some knowledge that will benefit you on a future assignment."

The visitors are members of the U. S. Army School of the Americas, Fort Gulick, Canal Zone, and represent Guatemala, Nicaragua, Venezuela, Chile, Ecuador, Argentina, and Paraguay.

Briefings on the history, organization and mission of The Infantry School, and a briefing by the school's Operations Office on the scheduling of training were given for the visitors.

Bradley Landing

The Allied officers saw a river crossing problem at Bradley Landing Wednesday and airborne training at Eubanks Field, and a Ranger hand-to-hand combat demonstration at Watson Field Thurday.

A tour of the new Infantry School, Bldg. 4, and of the Infantry Museum are also included on the itinerary.

The group will depart from Lawson Army Airfield Thursday afternoon to return to their school.

New Regulation Restricts Wedded WACs

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of the Army has announced changes in its policy covering discharge from the service of enlisted women who marry while on active duty.

Army Regulation 635 - 200 now requires WACs to complete at least one year of service at their current duty station and up to two years of service after Army schooling before they may leave the Army because of marriage.

In addition, an enlisted woman stationed close enough to establish a joint household with her husband is not eligible for discharge.

These and other changes affect WACs who enlisted or reenlisted on or after July 1, 1965.

Engineer Unit Takes Summer Training Here

About 110 Army Reservists of the 439th Engineer Company (Float Bridge) from Chambersburg, Pa., are undergoing two weeks active duty at Fort Benning.

The Reservists are participating in Operation Sky Thrust II, an air transported operation jointly conducted by Army and Air Force Reservists. Army Reserve units from throughout the country are airlifted to summer training sites hundreds of miles from their home stations.

The Chambersburg unit flew to Fort Benning July 24 aboard six Air Force Reserve C-119 Flying Boxcars. They will conclude their training Aug. 7 and return to their home station.

WAC Major Earns Medal For Heroism

HEIDELBURG, Germany (ANF) — In ceremonies here on July 15, Major Wilma Fay Bolling, a member of the U. S. Women's Army Corps, was awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism.

Major Bolling, who is assigned to the Intelligence Division, U. S. Army, Europe, received the award from General Andrew P. O'Meara, USAREUR Commander-in-Chief, for her actions in saving the life of a young girl engulfed in flames.

The 9-year-old girl was in the serving line of an officers' club when a portable heating device exploded and covered the girl and her father in flames. Major Bolling who was seated across the room rushed over and pushed the girl to the floor, using her own body to smother and extinguish the flames.

The Soldier's Medal is awarded for heroism that involves the voluntary risk of life under conditions other than those of conflict with an armed enemy."

MRS. KINNARD (LEFT) GOES HOUSE HUNTING

Civilian and Military Leaders Combine To Offer Numerous Family Services

By JOE TREASTER

Another day of brisk business was expected today for a makeshift real estate office which grew out of a joint military - civilian effort to relocate families of 1st Air Cavarly Division soldiers bound for Viet Nam.

Since the "office" — two tiny tables, a telephone and a list of "several hundred" available homes — opened at 1 p.m. Tuesday in a corner of the Black Angus Ranch restaurant, traffic has been steady.

The Columbus Real Estate Board voted Monday to establish the service and strong support has come from the Chamber of Commerce. Cooperating with the board is the Columbus Home Builders Association.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 1st Cavalry Division commander, spoke of a need for a central clearing office for home rentals in press conference last Wednesday afternoon shortly after President Johnson announced ordering the unit to Southeast Asia.

"Many wives plan to stay here," the general said. "They've been happy here—they've been well received and understood. We plan to get in touch with local officials with the view of getting help from them. Real estate and the family car are among matters of concern."

In his press conference Gen. Kinnard said his wife and their six children planned to remain in the area and that Mrs. Kinnard had offered to be "the momma of the division."

When the realtors met Monday Mrs. Kinnard was there with her husband to offer advice about the needs of military families. On opening day she was the fourth woman in line.

She talked briefly with Mrs. Patrick G. Williams, a licensed real estate salesman, who along with Mrs. R. B. Brady Jr., volunteered to operate the office, and left with the addresses of three prospective new homes.

"It's very wonderful of the Columbus people to do this for us," Mrs. Kinnard said. "It will help the women tremendously — especially those with children. I'm looking forward to a very pleasant stay here."

Even though she was separated from her husband during World War II, Mrs. Ki-

Initial Mass Jump Made By Division Paratroopers

By CHARLES JAMESON

More than 2700 paratroopers led by the division's all-airborne 1st Brigade made their first major mass parachute drop Tuesday on Fryar Drop Zone as a major tactical organization.

At exactly 11:00 a.m., Col. E. B. Roberts, brigade commander, exited the lead aircraft in a serial of ten C-130 air transports, and the mass parachute operation was underway.

Following Col. Roberts out of the lead aircraft was the Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, and Assistant Division Commander, Brig. Gen. Richard T. Knowles.

The sky over Fryar was repeatedly darkened as hundreds of paratroopers in human waves descended to the drop zone after being discharged from the thundering aircraft.

With each unit assigned or attached to the 1st Brigade for the operations, an approximate breakdown of

Originator of Air Mobility

General Howze Views Realization of Plans

By CHUCK LOWENHAGEN

General (Ret.) Hamilton Howze, one of the originators of the air mobility concept, spent two days at Fort Benning this week witnessing the hustle and bustle of activity as the fruit of his planning labors, the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) made final preparations for deployment to Viet Nam.

General Howze was the chairman of a board of officers, that late in 1962 recommended to Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, the formation of an air assault division. This recommendation was approved and became known as the 11th Air Assault Division (Test), one of the units used to form the present 1st Cavalry.

Arriving Monday morning, General Howze and his party spent most of the day being briefed by Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard and his special and general staff officers.

Emphasis was placed on the steps the air cavalry unit has taken to decrease its weight and increase its speed and maneuverability. The days briefings also touched on the subject of battlefield resupply and the ease with which the division can accomplish almost any supply mission required of it.

In typical air mobility tradition, General Howze was transported from one briefing to another via UH-1 IROQUOIS helicopter.

Early Tuesday morning, found the general at the 3rd Brigade where Col. Thomas W. Brown, brigade commander, discussed the tactics that his units use so effectively to accomplish their missions.

The 3rd Brigade is the Red Cross Field Team to Accompany Division

A team of five American Red Cross field representatives joined the 1st Cavalry Division recently and are now completeing preparations to accompany the division when it is deployed to South Viet Nam.

Mr. William W. Peterson, field director for the division, explained that his team's mission will be to supply all Red Cross services to the men of the 1st Cav while they are enroute and for the duration of their stay in Viet Nam.

With Mr. Petersen, who comes to the division from the Red Cross office at Fort Gordon, are Edward J. Vanenzuela, who will work with the troops of Support Command; Henry M. Checkiou, 3rd Brigade; R. Danial Newhouse, 1st Brigade and A. D. Robenson who will accompany the 2nd Brigade.

The Red Cross is in the business of helping people and according to Mr. Peterson, "we strongly encourage anyone who needs the Red Cross to take advantage of our services."

The field director explained that to make emergency contact with any member of the division while overseas that the person here in the "states" should first get in touch with the local chapter of the Red Cross. When this is done the local chapter will relay the message to national Headquarters in Washington, D.C., who will in turn contact the field representative with the division. The message will then be passed to the trooper concerned.

personnel went something like this:

From the brigade's assigned units were 570 from the 1st Bn., 8th Cavalry, 605 from the 2nd Bn., 8th Cavalry, 680 from the 1st Bn., 12th Cavarly and 180 from the 1st Brigade Headquarters.

Attached units provided 545 jumpers with 240 from the 2nd Bn., 19th Artillery, 150 from the 8th Engineer Battalion, 145 from Support Command and 15 from the 545th MP Company.

A more beautiful day could not have been asked for, with bright sunshine and virtually no clouds. Winds throughout the day making landings a pleasure for most.

The entire operation went off like clockwork with teamwork evident in each area. The Departure Airfield Team and the Drop Zone Team did a magnificent job, and things ran smoothly at both ends.

Medical coverage on the drop zone was provided by the Medical Platoon of the 1st Bn., 12th Cavalry.

home of two units relatively new to the air mobility concept. The 2nd Bn., 7th Cavalry was transferred to the new division on July 1st. The 1st Bn., 7th Cavalry joined the division in July 1964, exactly one year earlier.

The rest of Tuesday morning was spent discussing tactics with Col. William R. Lynch and observing the men of his 2nd Brigade participate in rappelling training.

Tuesday's activities were completed when Gen. Howze watched as three battalions of Col. Elvy B. Roberts' 1st Brigade made a mass tactical parachute jump on Fryar Field in neighboring Alabama.

A technique currently being developed for putting more Sky Troopers on the ground faster, was witnessed by the general when he saw members of the division descend from a hovering CH-47 Chinook on a cargo net. This new method of delivering the infantry "faster and fresher than ever before" has been aptly nicknamed, "the Spider Web."

Early Wednesday morning, General Howze left Fort Benning. This is the second time in as many months, that the son of the first commander of the 1st Cavalry Division has visited the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), the final result of a concept he helped to create.

nard said she had never before faced the problem of re-establishing her family in a temporary home.

"But I've seen women faced with the problem. — I remember the Korean War. It's especially hard on the younger wives. I wanted to get something like this going especially to help them. I feel if we can stick together we can really have a kind of nice year."

Mrs. Max A. Clark, wife of the assistant division aviation officer, was one of the first to take advantage of the service.

"This is the fourth time I've had to part with my husband — World War II, the Korean War, a hardship tour in Korea and now Viet Nam. know how hard it is to get established without help. I appreciate what the people of Columbus are doing," she said.

According to Fort Benning officials, families living on post have 60 days from the date of their sponsor's (father, husband, etc.,) departure to find a new place of residence.

Early this week one of the volunteer workers, Mrs. Williams, said an official indicated to her that the service would operate for "about four weeks. And of course we'll be open longer if we're needed."

"If the operation is anything like it was in 1963, business will be brisk all through the first couple of weeks," she said. "We were open six weeks then and it didn't taper off until the last few days.

Each day this week, she said, the number of visitors has increased and the "phone has rung constantly."

Gen. Kinnard has said that about 2,200 families indicated they will stay in the area while, 4,824 have said they will relocate elsewhere and 800 appeared to be undecided.

It was the 800 undecided families that Mrs. Williams felt certain would use the said "I hope all the families will come to us. We want to let them know that we care about them. We like them and we want them to stay in Columbus."

As military families collect information about new homes, they are handed a four - page mimeographed booklet from the Chamber of Commerce designed, according to a cover message, to "help you make your plans."

Information in the booklet ranges from how to license the family's pet dog to enrolling youngsters in public schools.

A statement in the booklet from the Columbus Automobile Dealers Association appears to be almost a direct answer to Gen. Kinnard's press conference appeal for assistance in matters automotive:

"The Association is extremely anxious to do its part in making the transition for the families of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) as easy as possible. We are well aware of the fact that automobile repairs are usually taken care of by the man in the family and that it is not normally easy for the housewife. We will do our best to make this a pleasant task for them."

AUSA Taps Division and General As Worthy of Presidents Medal

BY JOE TREASTER

The 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), its commanding general and a unit sergeant major this week were nominated for Association of the United States Army awards, a spokesman said.

According to Sgt. Jessie Brewer, administrative assistant to the secretary of the Columbus - Phenix City-Fort Benning chapter of the association, both the division and Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard were placed in contention for the "President's medal" and Sgt. Maj. Lawrence E. Kennedy of the 1st Squadron, 9th Cavalry was nominated for the Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Medal.

The President's medal recognizes contributions by a group or individual—usually an individual — to the Army and the other medal is for service to the Association, Sgt. Brewer said.

The division nomination stemmed from achievements recorded by the airmobile unit's predecessor, the 11th Air Assault Division (Test).

Gen. Kinnard commanded the test unit since its inception Feb. 15, 1963 and remained in charge when the name changed.

Medical Men Learn Asian Peculiarities

The day President Johnson announced the 1st Cavarly Division (Airmobile) was going to Viet Nam, a six-man team began instructing the unit's medical officers in problems peculiar to Southeast Asia.

Cavalry Division surgeon James E. McCarty said some 84 persons were attending a three-day series of classes — 44 medical doctors, 30 medical service corpsmen, five dentists and five Army nurses.

Heading the group of instructors was Col. William Tigertt, commandant of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research.

The Chaplains Diary

The Story of a Good Samaritan

BY
Edwin R. Andrews

This is a story with no names. The chaplain who played the Good Samaritan insists it stay anonymous. In fact, when I telephoned him about it, he exploded:

"Where did you hear that?"

I explained that a friend had told me on my trip to North Carolina, and that I had heard it, too, from the man — now stationed at Fort Benning — whom he had befriended.

"Good Samaritan stories have a way of getting around," I said.

"Well," he replied, "there was a need that had to be met. It was that simple."

See if you agree.

Back in the early '50's, during the really dark days of the Korean conflict, a young man — lets call him Joe — then assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division was desperately wounded in action.

After many weeks of tedious treatment, Joe finally arrived at the hospital in Fort Campbell, Ky., for the last stages of hospitalization and convalescence. There he progressed to the point where the doctors said that so long as he was close by, and could check in with them every day, Joe did not have to live on the hospital ward. He could live out on the Post — but no further away from medical help than that.

This was all Joe needed to know. He hustled down to the Housing Office and made arrangements for his family to live in quarters on the Post. Then he called his wife in Chicago, and asked her to come, with their small child, to Fort Campbell.

He had gotten word that his wife was on the way when the bottom dropped out of everything! The Housing Office called to let him know that a terrible mistake had been made; he didn't have quarters after all. There he was, bound to stay near the hospital, with a family on the way down, and no place to put them when they arrived.

Some way — Joe never has learned just how — the story of his desperation got to a friend, a friend he had never met. This friend — a chaplain, as it happened—came around to the hospital to see Joe. By the time he arrived, he had a solution to the problem all worked out. And he would not be argued out of doing things his way.

It was simple! The chaplain, who had been stationed at Fort Campbell for some time, went back to the Housing folks to talk them into his plan: They were to take his quarters and assign them to Joe. This took care of the immediate crisis, and since the chaplain's family was visiting out of town at the moment it left him some time to locate quarters for them out in town.

But Housing officials disagreed. They had to think of priorities and seniority, and all the rest. At this point, the chaplain asked, and got, help from the Deputy Post Commander; the General was able to set aside the priority problems, and the quarters were transferred.

It all happened so quickly that Joe's family was in the Guest House only one night. And — luckily — quarters were found out in town before the chaplain's family returned from their visit.

"I'm sure that any sound thinking person who saw the need would have done the same thing." This was the comment of the chaplain to me on the telephone.

But there was Another Person who once said, "I was a stranger and you took me in."

Mrs Kinnard Plans To Remain As Division's 'Mama'

Mrs. Harry W. O. Kinnard, wife of the 1st Cavalry Division commander, has revealed her plans to remain in the Fort Benning-Columbus area to act as the "mama" to the wives of division men while they are in Viet Nam.

"I get cold shudders when I think back to the 1950's when so many young women were left to fend for themselves while their husbands struggled in Korea." said Mrs. Kinnard. She expressed her hope that through a combined effort this same situation will not face division wives.

Mrs. Kinnard, along with the other ladies of the division, has begun a campaign to take advantage of the combined efforts of the Columbus-Phenix City Chambers of Commerce and the Fort Benning Community Services Agency.

The Community Services Agency has been agumented by a staff of men from the 1st Cav. All of their efforts will be toward one goal — to assist the families of men overseas with the problems they may incur.

The agency is established as a sort of referral agency. They hope to be able to clip a great deal of the Army's "red tape" so that when a person comes to them with a problem they will be able to find a solution or to guide the person to the exact spot where that solution lies.

The office in Building 5 on Main Post will be on call 24 hours per day to handle any emergency.

The area Chamber of Commerce has made many efforts to aid division dependents. Mrs. Kinnard was among the first customers at the central real estate board placed in operation at the Black Angus restaurant in Columbus. This board is staffed from 9:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily including Saturday. They have available a centralized listing of all housing sales and rentals in the area.

The Chamber of Commerce has also made available a fact sheet giving information ranging from how to license the family dog to where to file your income tax.

The activities of the division wives clubs will continue. The wives "Buddy System" will also be maintained for all ladies of the division who are interested. Also remaining in effect will be the well organized "intelligence system" often better known as the telephone committee.

Throughout the area there will be numerous opportunities for the ladies to employ their extra minutes. The wives organizations will continue their volunteer work. The Chamber of Commerce is preparing a listing of job opportunities in the area and a listing of credit and non-credit educational courses will soon be available.

ENDS SERVICE CAREER . . . Lt. Col. Edward C. Meyer (L), 3rd Brigade deputy commander, pins the Army Commendation Medal on CWO Stanton L. Beedy. The ceremony took place last Saturday and marked CWO Beedy's retirement with over 20 years of active duty.

20th Artillery Ladies Gather For July Coffee

The coffee meeting of the ladies of Battery C, 2nd Battalion, 20th Artillery was held last Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Gene D. Kleese.

Mrs. Roger J. Bartholomew, wife of the battery commander, assisted Mrs. Kleese in pouring coffee and tea and serving an assortment of delicious rolls and finger sandwiches to the guests.

Announcements of special interest to the ladies were made by Mrs. Bartholomew and Mrs. Morris J. Brady, wife of the battalion executive officer.

A sad farewell was extended to Mrs. William F. Koehler, wife of the departing battery commander, and to Mrs. Ira E. Greeley, wife of the departing battery executive officer.

Mesdames Jack S. Agnew and Al R. Woodruff whose husbands have recently joined the unit, were warmly welcomed into the group.

Maintenance "First Lady" Bid Farewell

Mrs. Barbara Grahams home in Oakland Park bustled with activity this past Wednesday. The officers wives of the 27th Maintenance Battalion gave Mrs. Betty Stagg, "First Lady" of the battalion, a farewell luncheon.

Mrs. Randy Jones presented Mrs. Stagg with a silver bracelet from the wives. Guests included Mrs. Hennessey and Mrs. Levi.

Hail and Adieu Wished Ladies At 21st Arty

Twenty-two ladies of the 1st Bn., 21st Artillery met in the quarters of Mrs. Raymond L. Dimmick for a lovely morning coffee recently. The wide variety of "goodies" enjoyed by all included fruit, sandwiches and delicious deserts. Mrs. Robert Short was co-hostess for the informal affair.

Engraved silver bread trays were presented as farewell gifts to: Mrs. Richard D. Anthony, Mrs. Robert Dente, Mrs. Carl P. Bryant, Mrs. Joseph P. Chapman, Mrs. Edmond Marlowe and Mrs. John Maxheimer.

The following ladies were welcomed into the battalion: Mrs. Dan A. Hillsman, Mrs. Sam G. Smith, Mrs. Harold Hamilton, Mrs. Maureen Dudick, Mrs. Henry A. Simpson and Mrs. William G. Riddle.

CAVALAIR COMMENTARY

BY J.-D. COLEMAN

One of the questions invariably asked by newmen visiting the 1st Air Cav Division is "How many men do you have that are going back to Viet Nam for a second tour?" The answer is, of course, difficult to pin down in exact numbers. But, as Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard noted in his press conference on the day of the presidential announcement, the number runs into the hundreds.

It is quite natural to focus attention on the individuals who had recently served in Viet Nam. That war is here and now, and the acts of courage by those who could have avoided this trip, but didn't, surely merit more than passing mention.

But it seems that there are other generations of warriors that everyone seems to have overlooked and without whose experience and wisdom, this division would be in less than perfect shape. For the younger reader, it should be remembered that there was a pretty important war fought between 1941 and 1945 and a considerable number of those who contributed to the ultimate victory over the Axis plan to journey to Viet Nam with the 1st Air Cav Division, and an inconsiderable number of those World War II veterans were members of the "First Team" during that late unpleasantness.

Then in 1950, there was another fracas, It wasn't called a war then either. But call it a police action, brushfire war or whatever, the men who were there bled and died for an abstraction called freedom.

There are numerous veterans of the Korean War who add to the experience quotient of this division. For thousands, including former members of the "First Team" the months of July, August and September 1950, meant facing the stark realities of combat for the first time. The survivors of those first dark, grim days now observe a somewhat melancholy 15th anniversary of an initial exposure to fire.

It generally is agreed that this division is as well stocked with experienced combat veterans, representing all arms and all grades, as any unit ordered to an active theater. But of what value is this experience to the youngster, the recruit? Can it help him when he is faced with his moment of truth?

Those who have themselves faced that awful moment; who have felt fear grab them by the nape of their scruffy neck and shake their vitals to the core; they will remember the value of a quiet word of confidence from a man who may have been there before. It quiets the anxiety and stills the imagination. The word of encouragement may come from a colleague, one perhaps less impressed with the pageantry of death than yourself, and it may be effective. But the real lasting impression will be made by that individual who has lived through all this once before and who can, with authority, give assurance that terror's bark is worse than its bite.

This is of great value to the individual, of course, but what about the unit. Does this experience quotient enhance the effectiveness of the organization? Those who have had occasion to observe a unit get a combat mission while in CONUS, then organize, train and move to a theater of operations, will agree that one of the greatest assets a platoon leader can have is a combat-wise platoon sergeant. And, similarly, the sergeant's greatest assets can be squad leaders with proven combat skills.

Because when the book learnin' is through and the field expedient training begins, the words - to - the - wise from those who have gained wisdom the hard way, makes very good listening to the prudent soldier. And soldiers alerted for a combat zone have a way of getting prudent suddenly.

Then when all training is completed and the unit is committed, how will this combat experience count? Will the lessons learned as a platoon leader and company commander 15 years previously help today's battalion commander? Of course they will. Just as the lessons learned in Viet Nam last year or the year before will help all commanders and leaders.

In The Fury of Mock Battle

A Young Man's Desperate Grasp

BY
Edwin R. Andrews
4th Armored Division, Fort Hood, Texas, 1957

"CEASE FIRE!"

The hoarse yell, repeated, stopped the guns. Then there was a confusion of voices, calling for the ambulance, and the floodlights came on. Emergency!

I had just been congratulating myself that this was the last group to cross the infiltration course tonight. Everyone, cadre and trainees alike, was very dirty, very tired of the din of simulated battle.

Tired or not, I'll never forget how awesome the infiltration course was that night. Tracer bullets ripped red wounds in the dark sky; echoes of the guns' deadly clatter seemed to come back as a roar of pain from nature herself. Spouts of dirt from the demolition pits settled in the still air, making ghost figures of everyone.

It looked and sounded—and felt — dangerous.

And of course, that's the basic idea: to acclimate a man to the sound and fury of battle, so he won't panic when the time actually comes. But in every item the safety of the soldier comes first.

Machineguns firing over the heads of the crawling men on the course were locked securely in place, and could fire in only one direction; tracers were added so this direction of fire could be constantly checked. The dynamite, exploded to simulate artillery and mortar fire, was in carefully fenced pits; no charge was set off when a man might be hurt by it.

And now something big had gone wrong, in spite of all precautions.

I raced around to the front and onto the course. Pushing my way through the group, I came to where one of my troopers lay on his back, hit high in the chest by a defective round.

As I knelt beside him and reached for his dogtags, I spoke quietly, beneath the babble of voices.

"Can you hear me, son? This is the chaplain."

His hand, caked with grime and sweat, moved instantly and locked upon my own. In the pale light, I saw his lips move, and bent to catch his words.

"You won't leave me — will you, Chaplain?"

"No, son," I answered. "I won't leave you."

And so it was. I walked beside his stretcher to the ambulance. We rode the wild mile to the hospital, our hands still interlocked. In the emergency room, I stood close by while the doctors examined the wound, and found that the bullet had lodged in the breastbone. Our man was not in serious danger!

"But he might have been," said one of the doctors. "If that wound had been a half-inch higher, and punctured the aorta . . ." His voice trailed off, and he shrugged and turned away.

I said goodnight, and hurried back with the good news. On the way, I gave thanks that the soldier's life was not in danger, and that I had been able to help.

But as I flexed the fingers that only minutes ago had been caught in a young man's desperate grasp, I realized that it was not me at all he had sought in his time of need.

He was reaching for God's hand. And so should we all.

2nd Battalion 'Firsts'

Several Training Items Unique at 5th Cavalry

Several items on the 2nd Bn 5th Cavalry's training schedule this week were unique since it was the first such training for several months.

The men of the battalion first participated in hand to hand close combat training which can be fun but, more than likely, a "bruising" experience, or so some of the men claimed.

The instruction was a refresher in various throwing techniques, offensive and defensive holds, and the methods by which they may be broken, and ways to disarm an assailants with knives, pistols and rifles.

The next "new" training was several hours of bayonet training, unique since it was the first experience for the men with bayonets fixed to their new M16 rifles. The companies took the 11th Infantry Square and exercised their lungs as they wielded their new weapons through the intracacies of parries, thrusts and holds.

Patton Range was the scene of LAW firing. This is the Army's new Light Anti-tank Weapon. This is a light weight, collapsible, totally inclusive telescopic type weapon which, when stretched out, contains its own sight, firing mechanism and round. The men fired for familiarization and qualification as they tested their respect for the LAW.

Mustangs Make 1st Mass Jump

The "Jumping Mustangs" of the 1st Bn (Abn), 8th Cavalry made their first mass drop this week.

Lt. Col. Kenneth C. Mertel battalion commander, led them Tuesday on a mass exit over Fryar Field drop zone.

Following the drop, the companies were deployed up to the northern corner of the reservation for three days of patrolling, squad and platoon tactics and raids. For many of the Mustangs this was their first time in the field together.

Squad and platoon leaders stressed individual combat actions and getting to know the chain of command. Later exercises will test the company and battalion chain of command.

Senior Aviator Wings Awarded

Culminating long hours of effort and study, Monday, Aug. 2, was a significant day for Capt. William R. Lenderman, 2nd Bn., 5th Cavalry, as he was awarded his Senior Aviation Badge.

Capt. Lenderman is the S-3 Air for the battalion.

The Captain entered the Army in 1956 and completed Infantry Officers Basic Course at Fort Benning that year. He is a graduate of Airborne School, Flight School and the Infantry Officers Career Course.

For 5th Cav Platoon Sgt

Re-Up, Leave, Surprise Promotion All Happen in Rapid Succession

In a rapid succession of events, Sgt. Curtis L. Arms, Company A, 2nd Bn., 5th Cavalry, reenlisted June 4 for an additional six years of service and then proceeded to California for a 30 day leave. During his absence Arms was promoted to his present rank of PSgt. E-7. His reenlistment and leave, while important events, paled to the excitement generated by the additional surprise stripe.

Arms entered the service in November of 1947 and completed his basic training at Fort Ord, Cal. He served with the 25th Division in Japan and Korea until 1951 and then returned to the 6th Division at Fort Ord. In 1954 Arms went to Fort Lewis, Wash. and the 2nd Division where during this tour he saw temporary duty in Alaska at the Artic Instructor's Course. Following another stint at Fort Ord, he returned to Korea for a year and served with the 1st Cavalry Division.

In 1963 Arms came to Fort Benning and his present assignment as platoon sergeant, 1st platoon, Company A with the 2nd Bn., 38th Infantry now redesignated the 2nd Bn., 5th Cavalry.

Mass Mobilization

Times Have Changed

The world situation being what it is, many a reservist is casting a watchful eye at his mailbox these days, while in Washington, Pentagon officials are struggling with the problem of how to cope with the possible wrath of those affected by the possibility of a call-up.

To the monarch of a small African republic being invaded some thirty years ago, no such problem of delicacies existed. Witness his mobilization order:

"Every one will now be mobilized and all boys old enough to carry a spear will be sent to Addis Ababa.

Married men will take their wives to carry food and cook. Those without wives will take any woman without a husband. Women with small babies need not go.

The blind, those who cannot walk, or for any reason cannot carry a spear are exempted.

Anyone found at home after the reciept of this order will be hanged."

Commendation Medals Presented at 5th Cav

An awards ceremony and review was conducted last Saturday morning by the 1st Bn., 5th Cavalry, at Essebagger Field.

Lt. Col. Frederick Ackerson, commanding officer of the battalion, presented three Army Commendation Medals to two officers and senior enlisted man of his battalion. Once this was accomplished, the three men joined Col. Ackerson on the reviewing stand to observe the troops pass in review.

First to receive the Commendation Medal was Maj. Ellwood W. Brown, the former battalion executive officer. His award, with one Oak Leaf Cluster, was presented for exceptionally meritorious service as the executive officer of the 1st Bn., 5th Cavalry. Major Brown will retire at the end of this month.

Next to receive an award was Maj. Cecil M. Henry. Maj. Henry was honored for his meritorious service as the battalion S-3 (Operations) officer. He will be further assigned to attend schools.

PSgt. Isaac W. Davis received his commendation medal for execptional service during the period when the 1st Bn., 5th Cavalry was administrating Advanced Individual Training in their unit. He personally took charge of the trainees and with just a few cadre, put the trainees through the rugged eight week training.

After the awards, Col. Ackerson spoke briefly about "the deep loss that will be felt in the future by losing these three men." He continued, "The lineage and honors of the 5th Cavalary are exceptional. I feel quite certain that this battalion will live up to the standards of the 5th Cavalry."

Col. Lynch and Col. Ackerson then greeted all the officers and the men that received awards.

Two NonComs Upped to E-8 At 2nd Brigade

Two 2nd Brigade noncommissioned officers were promoted to the ranks of master sergeant and first sergeant here this week.

Promoted to their present ranks were 1st Sgt. William H. Stanfield and MSgt. Leroy W. Mitchell.

Sergeant Mitchell, a World War II and Korean War veteran, is now the chief supply sergeant for the 2nd Brigade. 1st Sgt. Stanfield is the new first sergeant of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry.

Sergeant Stanfield has had many interesting assignments in the past, beginning with a tour of duty in the World War II Pacific theater with the 43rd Infantry and including a stint as an instructor of reserve officer candidates at Westminister College in Fulton, Mo.

Sergeant Mitchell served with the 11th Engineer Battalion in Korea, and the 17th Cavalry and 69th Armor at Fort Benning.

Modern 'Farriers' Keep Todays Cavalry in the Air

BY RAY PAQUETTE

The commanding officer of the 15th Transportation Corps Battalion, Lt. Col. Charles W. McQueary describes his unit as the "farriers" of the 1st Cavalry Division.

Farriers, in the old cavalry, were the specialists who shod horses, repaired wagons, treated sick horses and, in general kept the cavalry outfits riding and rolling.

The 15th TC Battalion repairs and maintains the division's aircraft. They also stock and supply aircraft parts. They are responsible for keeping the 1st Cavalry Division in the air.

When Capt. Gary Bill joined the 11th Air Assault Division in February, 1963, the small maintenance outfit to which he was assigned was a sharp contrast to the present battalion. "We were to perform something called "B" level maintenance on aircraft," explained Capt. Bill. "No one was quite sure what "B" level meant but we went ahead and did what aircraft repair we could when we were called on."

The 611th Aircraft Maintenance and Supply Battalion, redesignated the 15th Transportation Corps Battalion (Aircraft Maintenance and Supply), is now the largest battalion in the division.

The battalion has struggled mightily with the problem of weight and mobility of its tools and shop vans. Large truck mounted shop vans have been reduced to small, air transportable, wheeled boxes called shelters. These shelters open like tall square umbrellas into self contained shops. They have their own light and power systems and the tools necessary to maintain and repair aircraft.

Each of the companies in the battalion has a unique parts ordering system known as the "transceiver." Transceiver, a word which marries transmitter and receiver, describes a piece of radio apparatus which can transmit and receive information. This system permits each company to order needed aircraft parts from anywhere throughout the Army.

The Battalion Adjutant, Maj. Don E. Finney, says the division's alert for duty in Viet Nam has brought about the "25-hour day."

While Troopers Take Leave

A Safety Lesson Well Learned

Three troopers of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) narrowly escaped death by asphixiation while on leave near Mesa, Arizona last Thursday.

PFC's Hank Allison, Ken McConnell and Marvin Wolf all of the 15th Admin Company were enroute to Los Angeles, Calif. in Wolf's 1964 sedan when the incident occurred.

The lethal fumes from the car exhaust were introduced into the passenger area by a series of mechanical coincidences; the auto's trunk, filled to overflowing with baggage, would not close completely and a gap of ¼ inch was created at the corner, just above the end of the exhaust pipe. The pipe ended in a parallel position to the ground and thus the fumes were sucked up into the trunk.

Because the car was being driven at relatively high speeds on long stretches of interstate highway, the suction caused by the open window caused air to be drawn from the rear part of the passenger compartment, sucking the dangerous carbon - monoxide vapors up into the interior and wafting them throughout the car.

The trio, who complained of headaches that would not respond to ordinary forms of medication such as aspirin, finally stopped a policeman in Mesa, Arizona, and were directed to a nearby fire station where all three received oxygen.

According to Capt. Bob Winn, of the Mesa Fire Department, such accidents are far from rare and are among the most dangerous of the hazards connected with automobiles.

The operator who administered the necessitator treatment to the Benning trio said that from the looks of their eyes and complexions, the monoxide poisoning might soon have proved fatal.

An extension pipe costing less than two dollars that directed the flow of exhausts down and to one side, and a careful repacking of the trunk to allow it to close fully were all the steps necessary to allow all three to continue.

FOR OUTSTANDING DUTY . . . MSgt. Aubrey O. Spurlock, 3rd Brigade operation NCO, receives the Army Commendation Medal from Lt. Col. Edward C. Meyer, deputy brigade commander. Mrs. Maxine Spurlock admires the certificate that was presented for her husband's outstanding duty while he was Operations NCO of the Test Evaluation and Control Group.

Progress Made On 'Spider Web'

More progress was made last week on the 1st Airborne Brigade's new method for extracting troops by helicopter as improvements were made in what is becoming known as "The Spider Web."

During the week, a large ladder-type net was made from flexible ½ inch steel cable with metal tubing encasing the horizontal cables which is 80 feet long when dropped from the Chinook.

The flexible steel net was much lighter than the ocean cargo net, and worked out much better. Another type was made from 8,000 pound test canvas strapping which was also an improvement over the cargo net.

Another demonstration was conducted Monday morning for Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, who climbed the metal net and discussed the project at length with Lt. Col. Harlow G. Clark, deputy commander of the 1st Brigade, and originator of the extraction method.

Tuesday afternoon the novel technique was viewed by Gen. (ret.) Hamilton H. Howze during his visit to the division, at which time a demonstration was conducted by the original pioneer crew.

SIGNAL

As you drive, avoid sudden stops and lane changes. Signal your intentions.

8th Cav Meets POR Deadline, But 'Carefully'

Well over 90 per cent of the Mustangs qualified in Phase I, II and III of the water survival program, and the magic 100 per cent was reached in other areas.

The job was accomplished by decentralizing the responsibility for all five company commanders.

Thus, on one day Delta Company had some men firing machine guns, some men going down the cargo nets, some qualifying with mortars, others learning to pack 106's and still others getting shots.

As one man observed, "You have to be careful about staying with the right group, or you might get all the shots two or three times and never fire you weapon."

Battalion Commander, Lt. Col. Kenneth B. Mertel immediately started the Mustangs into field shakedown training.

That Others May Aid Themselves

Military Civic Action--A Program of Many Facets

The primary role of the Army in military civic action is to help the military forces of friendly countries so that they in turn can help their own people. From the U. S. Army point of view, this is not a glamorous, "horn tooting" program, but it is one that is vitally important.

To date, the Army has played a major role in the military civic action field, but the other services have been on hand to assist and support the Army in appropriate phases of the program.

In addition to providing civic action mobile training teams, when requested, the Army has and is prepared to continue to dispatch technical teams to assist the military forces of friendly countries develop their technical proficiency.

Last year a follow-on civic-action mobile training team was in Colombia working with the Colombian armed forces in expanding its program. Twenty - nine medical teams were dispatched to Viet Nam to perform civic action duties.

These teams, together with Vietnamese counterparts, brought professional medical service to people who have never before received such help, as well as providing on - the - job training for village and district health workers.

Aviation elements the world over have participated in disaster relief programs and in Viet Nam are actively engaged in civic action missions.

The Navy has provided Sea Bee Technical Assistance Teams to work in coastal and river areas.

Each year, hundreds of foreign military students attend U. S. Army schools here and abroad. In this regard, the Army initiated a Civic action Course at the U. S. Army Civil Affairs School, Fort Gordon. This course trains U. S. and foreign personnel in civic action techniques. Many of our personnel being assigned to MAAGs and Military Missions have attended this course. Our MAAGs, Military Missions and units overseas all take part in helping our friends help themselves.

In areas of the world where large U. S. Armed Forces are stationed the soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines have contributed materially to promoting harmonious military - civil relationships.

It should be realized that civic action is a many-sided program, ranging from the proper action and attitudes of the individual soldier toward the people, to the performance of useful projects by military units. Military civic action has untapped potential. The potential lies in the basic needs of the underprivileged who will benefit; in the unselfish desire of the military to help others rise above squalor, poverty and disease; in the superb knowhow which inherently characterizes the U. S. servicemen; and in the imagination and determination of those who plan for a peaceful advance of freedom.

An Adventuress Ride Brings Wanderer In

By MARV WOLF

Ubiquitous — present, or seeming to be present, everywhere at the same time; omnipresent. All this according to Websters New World Dictionary, to members of the 1st Cavalry airmobile) ubiquitous means helicopter. Nowhere was this more apparent than at Birmingham Airport, last Friday evening as this reporter bounced off the Air National Guard C-97 that had departed the a.m. from the Van Nuys Calif. Airport.

My automobile safely esconced with my family, my personal affairs attended to, my goodby's said and my mental attitude Viet Nam oriented I had earlier lined up transportation as far as Birmingham, Ala.; but lacked a means for the final leg to Benning. In the back of my mind however was a wistful notion about all those helicopters one sees flying about the reservation these days, and the probability of one making an appearance in time for me to hitch a ride to my outfit.

Before the last engine on the C-97 had shut down my ears caught the familiar sound of rotary blades biting air. As I scanned the horizon hopefully the oddly distinctive silhouette of an UH-1D (Huey) came into sight.

After landing, one greysuited aviator detached himself from the now - resting bird and fled across the field at full speed toward the operations building.

Detaching myself from the gathering knot at the foot of the aircraft loading ramp "Gosh," exclaimed one weekend warrior crewman, "a helicopter!" I moved to the ship, and was greeted by a captain of artillery, who cordially wanted to know my problem.

"Need a lift to Benning, if that's where you're from," I inquired hopefully.

We're from Benning" shouted the pilot courteously, "But I'll have to ask the major."

So saying, he made his exaggerated duck under the spinning swishing blades and talked briefly with the pilot. This done, the captain returned to me and screamed politely that I was lucky indeed to find as benevolent a skipper as his. If I would fetch my bag immediately I had a lift, he said.

That is, if they could ever get off the ground, which was far from certain since their battery was dead.

Returning to the baggage in front of the four engine craft with as much false heartiness as I could muster, I glanced at my watch for the benefit of my National Guard taxi drivers, mumbled something about the chopper being right on time and left amidst cries of admiration and wonderment of my skill and daring in scheduling such a marvelous connection.

Shouts of "Boy, did he ever luck out" were mixed with remarks about comparative methods of air travel such as, "He must be out of his mind to climb into that one - engine flying fan. After flying in that '97' of ours no godfearing feline would risk another flight so soon." Mingled with these inspiring remarks were a few encouraging shouts of "Well, it doesn't make any difference, he's going to Viet Nam anyway, if he doesn't crash."

While these joyous morsels kept floating at my back, I raced across the field — spurred on by my benefactors clenched fist and piston-like pummeling of the air, as well as the ever-increasing whine of the Huey's engine.

Arriving at last, out of breath after that mighty run across sixty - long yards of undulating runway, I found the interior of the craft nearly full of assorted commissioned aviation - types. They at once assured me that although the battery was indeed kaput, my host, Major Batholomew, the much esteemed commander of Battery C 2nd Battalion (Aerial Rocket) 20th Artillery, would see to it that we would all arrive safely.

In fact, my hosts went on to say, as we took off, that so supremely confident was he of our arrival that he had installed Crow Hawk in the right-hand control seat, complete with blue goggles through which he could vaguely make out the details of the cockpit interior.

"How does he see where he's going," I screamed as we ascended.

"He can't," replied my seat-mate, the captain who had helped me aboard. "He's going for an instrument check ride."

"Oh," I returned.

About an hour later, the lights of Columbus hove into view and shortly I found myself on the ground at some where called Apparri, wondering about the wonders of air travel and how I had covered some 2400 miles since shortly before lunch.

Insigna Change Halted

Department of Army has granted an 11th hour reprieve to thousands of enlisted men scheduled to sew on new grade insignia and adopt new titles Sept. 1.

According to a DA message sent to the field Wednesday, the directive which would have required the mass rocker removal and "sewing bee" has been "suspended indefinitely."

Regardless of personal feelings about the impending change, and despite the historical precent set when a similar plan was scrapped several years ago, many soldiers already had their new stripes sewn on in preparation for the Sept. 1 deadline. It was not expected that many would express annoyance at the prospect of changing them back again.

In explaining the reason for the last minute move, DA said "In the Spring of this year, the Army initiated a review of selected NCO positions and the relationship between these positions.

"It has now become evident that a more searching analysis is required in order to establish definitively the proper proportion of NCO grades in the organizations the Army has created as a result of conversion to the reorganized infantry division (ROAD) three years ago and the conversion to a new combat logistic structure this year.

"Since insignia is an identification of an individual's position, the army has decided a more thorough examination of positions will be required before further insignia changes are made."

The Army's Highest Praise

The Commanding General of the 1st Cavalry Division, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard (Right), receives the congratulations of Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, 3rd Army Commander, after receiving the Distinguished Service Medal. The nation's highest noncombat service award was presented to Gen. Kinnard for his leadership of the experimental 11th Air Assault Division. For complete details, see page 21. (Photo by Robie Ray)

Services Agency Sets Orientation For Next Week

The Community Services Agency at Fort Benning this week announced the times and dates for the orientation of wives of men bound for Viet Nam.

They will be held in Marshall Auditorium, Building 4 this coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 16, 17 and 18. They are scheduled to get underway each night at 7 p.m.

Maj. Shirley Sneed, chief coordinator for the Agency, made the point that all wives of men who are going overseas are encouraged to attend, whether or not their husbands are in the 1st Cavalry Division.

Maj. Sneed will preside at the meeting which will be an informal panel discussion during which transportation (both personal and household goods), quarters, medical care, registration of vehicles, mess privileges, identification cards, financial assistance in emergency cases, religious assistance and legal assistance will be explained.

Maj. Sneed said a question and answer period will follow the orientation. She emphasized that if answers to specific problems could not be given at the time, answers would be obtained to any and all questions.

Dependents who have not yet registered with the service agency may do so at the auditorium on the night of the orientation, the major said.

She went on to emphasize that information obtained at the time of registration is used solely for the purpose of helping dependents and kept in the strictest confidence.

Additions to Active Forces

McNamara Describes Build-Up

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has disclosed that some 340,000 personnel will be added to the active forces and certain reserve forces will be raised to a high state of combat readiness to meet world-wide U.S. military commitments.

In Congressional testimony, Secretary McNamara said the Department of Defense believes the build-up can be achieved without calling reserves or ordering involuntary tour extensions, except as authorized by law for the Navy.

Even here, he said, officer tour extensions will be selective and enlisted extensions will generally be limited to not more than four months.

Active force plans call for adding a division and other units to the Army, numbering some 235,000 personnel, providing 30,000 additional personnel for augmenting Marine Corps units, and activating certain new units; increasing the Navy's ships, ship-manning personnel and other support by 35,000, and augmenting Air Force strike and airlift capabilities by 40,000 men.

Reserve forces being brought to a high state of readiness include a three-division and six-brigade Army force; the Marine Corps' Fourth Division - Aircraft

The Judge Says . . .

The purchase of a house is a significant event in anyone's life. The house will become an important part of the family's life and the focal point of each individual's memories in the years to come.

However, purchase of a house should be considered from another — a less romantic — angle. When a house is purchased, the buyer is obligating himself to pay a large sum of money over a long period of time.

When one signs the papers necessary to transfer the house to his name, he has agreed to pay the full amount of the mortgage in monthly installments. If the payments are not made promptly, he has agreed to permit the mortgage company to foreclose and sell the house. If the house is sold for less than what is owed, the purchaser must pay the deficiency; that is, the difference between the total amount owed on the house and the price for which it is sold.

This debt is not avoided by getting someone to take over the payments or assume the mortgage. If the person who assumed the loan fails to make his monthly payments, the person who originally borrowed the money will be responsible for paying the deficiency. Of course, he can then attempt to recover his money from the person who assumed the loan and whose fault it was there was a foreclosure in the first place. Nevertheless, he has had the trouble and expense of having paid the deficiency.

Many people seek to avoid the responsibilities and obligations that go with purchasing a new home by merely assuming another person's loan. It should be observed that the obligations are just as great. But their effect might be postponed long enough for the person primarily liable to be affected before the person who assumed the loan is held responsible.

Regardless of whether one purchases a house directly or assumes another's loan, he should make certain that he knows the legal effect of all documents he signs and that the documents are completely filled out prior to signing.

Be certain that every term of any agreement or guarantee is in writing and signed by those making it. Never sign any document unless it is completed and unless you understand it. If you have any doubts, make an appointment to see the Legal Assistance Officer or Soldiers Advocate so that he may examine the documents and explain their effect to you.

Army Studying Waterway Routes

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A proposed Central American sea-level canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans will be studied by the Army Chief of Engineers, Lt. Gen. William F. Cassidy, for the Interoceanic Canal Study Commission.

The Panama Canal is currently the only water link allowing ocean-going ships a short cut across the Central America land mass.

Corps of Engineer personnel will collect and evaluate scientific data in Panama and other countries to determine the best location, means of construction and cost of a new canal.

In addition to a sanctuary, the Center is equipped with religious education facilities, a chapel library, social hall, dining room and kosher kitchen.

In the sanctuary, gold drapes flank the Ark which will house the Torah.

Handwritten on parchment, the Torah Scroll contains the first five books of the Bible. Kept in the Ark of Jewish Temples, Synagogues and chapels, it is unrolled and read each Sabbath during the year. Beautifully decorated, the Torah figures prominently in Jewish worship services.

Wing; and nine F-100 squadrons, four RF-84 squadrons, and 11 C-124 squadrons in the Air Force.

The Defense Secretary said reserve force readiness could be greatly facilitated by realignment of Army reserve components as proposed in the FY66 budget.

"In my judgment, the realignment should go forward without further delay," he said, explaining it would concentrate men, equipment and civilian technicians in units needed for contingency plans, instead of spreading them over a large number of units having no military requirement.

Airborne Trooper Taking Shape

PINE LOG AND SCULPTOR
Sgt. Kirk

BY JIM BAKER

An airborne trooper is being born in McCarthy Hall at Lawson Air Field under the mallet, wood chisels and sharp eyes of an airborne instructor.

The trooper is not the ordinary flesh and blood sort of airborne trooper but one growing out of a Southern pine log which takes 28 men to carry it.

The trooper is taking shape under the skillful chisel of Sgt. Charles D. Kirk of the jump committee.

The life - size statute of a fully equipped airborne soldier came as a result of the insistence of Maj. Donald D. Dowie, chief of the jump committee.

Kirk says that when Dowie first asked him to make a statue he thought that he was talking about a miniature.

He explained that he began carving small wood statues years ago when he was stationed in Japan.

He had no idea this latest commission would involve a work of such magnitude.

Kirk explained that his other works — the miniatures — were all executed with a jackknife. This is the first time he has worked with chisels and hammer.

When completed, the figure will stand about five feet, 11 inches, according to its carver.

He has seen combat action in Korea and was stationed in Japan immediately after the end of the Korean War.

It was in Japan where he started carving wood figures.

"I did everything with a pocket knife," the sergeant said. "Sometimes I used an X-Acto carving blade," he added.

The master parachutist has been carving people, statues, animals and wood reliefs ever since.

Adlai Stevenson Left His Mark on History

An outstanding American died last month, leaving behind a record of public service and patriotism, and his own articulate views of our unique America and its role in the world today.

He was Mr. Adlai E. Stevenson, who was namesake and grandson of a vice president (1893 to 1897), and who served in the diplomatic service, as governor of Illinois and as ambassador to the United Nations from 1961 until his death. He also twice was the Democratic nominee for the presidency, losing both times (1952 and 1956) to President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Mr. Stevenson served as special assistant to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox in World War II for which he received a Distinguished Service Award. He also served as an apprentice seaman during World War I.

Using his insight and great gift for words, Mr. Stevenson during the years of his public life often succinctly stated the facts of life for Americans, and others on this globe, in a world of nuclear weapons and greedy Communist overlords. Below are some of Mr. Stevenson's thoughts, as important to us today and tomorrow as on the day he uttered them:

"My definition of a free society is a society where it is safe to be unpopular." — 1952.

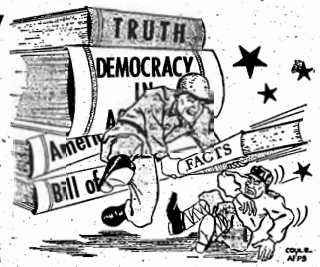
"It has fallen to America's lot to organize and lead that portion of the world which adheres to the principle of consent in the ordering of human affairs. It is an assignment we undertook not by choice but by necessity and without prior experience. The burden is without historical parallel and so is the danger, and so is our response. The first phase is ending. The outward thrust of aggression in Europe has been arrested. Now we shall have to address ourselves to Asia, to perpetual siege and to the unending tasks of greatness. For the quest for peace and security is not a day's or a decade's work. For us it may be everlasting." — 1954.

"We cannot forget that it is not illusion, propaganda and sedatives, but truth, and truth alone, that makes us free." — 1960.

"Communism has yet to be the popular choice of one single nation anywhere on the face of the globe. Where it has extended its control, it has been in the same classic role —as the scavenger of war and of ruined revolutions." — 1962.

"We have no alternative but to keep the balance between an appeasement which would betray us by weakness and a brinkmanship which would destroy us by miscalculation. On this tight rope above the abyss, we cannot indulge in adolescent showmanship or Chinese acrobatics. We have, sanely, calmly, to preserve our strength and our caution, our full defensive might and our ever-readiness to negotiate, our dedication to the cause of allied freedom and our search for reasonable accommodation. The path is not exciting. It sets no trumpets braying or drums beating. It revolts the ideologists. But this adventure has in it the most precious of all possibilities — that our children and our grandchildren may survive to build a saner, better, more law-abiding world." — 1964.

Our most POWERFUL weapon...



Community Relations

A Two-Way Street For Both Sides

Last week the editorial page carried a guest column by Tom Sellers of the Columbus Ledger. It was a strong appeal to the people of Columbus to make the separation for the men and families of the 1st Cavalry Division easier.

In the column, Sellers said that although the people of Columbus will feel a tremendous economic impact, it "seems indecent" to bewail the loss of dollars when compared with the human life that may be lost in the fight to protect and preserve a free way of life. Sellers appealed to the community "to show some heart."

Now it is the soldier's turn.

Relations with the Columbus community are not just the responsibility of the civilian, the soldier is necessarily a part of this bargain. The soldier has the responsibility of being honest and decent in his dealings with the citizens of Columbus if he expects to receive the same treatment.

Recently it has come to light that a larger-than-usual number of bad checks have been cashed by members of units alerted for, or on their way to, Viet Nam.

All the cooperation on the part of all the well-meaning citizens of the community, both civil and military, is not worth a whit if the soldiers who leave this community, perhaps never to return, leave a taste of bitterness in the mouth of everyone involevd.

Community relations are a two way street and war does not excuse us from our social and financial obligations.

Now it's time for the soldier "to show some heart."

'The Point of the Spear'

From the Surgeon:

Hospital Needs Your Cooperation

BY HAL B. JENNINGS JR.
Post Surgeon

As post surgeon and commanding officer of Martin Army Hospital, I am in great hopes that the dependents of active duty military personnel, retired military and their dependents will bear with us during these trying times.

The ineconveniences you experience in the medical services we try to maintain for you have increased greatly this summer.

This is due to the normal recurring summer permanent change of station shortage of medical personnel, the additional losses of medical technicians and specialists to bring up to full strength the units going to Viet Nam, and the loss of the division medical personnel from whom additional hospital help was obtained in order to care for non-active duty personnel.

Everyone must realize that medical care for our active duty personnel is of first priority. The health and welfare of the command, the conservation of fighting strength, is paramount.

Medical care of authorized dependents and retired personnel is on a permissive basis only. The Government has no absolute legal obligation to provide these persons medical care in military facilities.

Because we have traditionally cared for this group, it is usually assumed that this care was a right instead of a privilege. This permissive or allowable aspect makes it possible for the hospital commander to refuse medical care to retired and dependent personnel should the medical resources become too austere.

I do not ever intend to refuse medical treatment to this group. I feel there is a strong moral obligation to provide this medical care. In order to continue this care, I ask your indulgence of the additional inconveniences you may experience. Waiting time will be lengthened for many with less urgent medical conditions. The decision as to which patient should be taken next for treatment will be the doctor's, based on the medical condition of the patient.

Many times this will be in conflict with what the individual patient thinks his priority should be. In order to save professional time for patient care, this decision on priority must be the doctor's responsibility to direct or delegate as he sees fit.

Until additional professional and technical help arrives, we have cancelled our doctors' routine ordinary leaves. In addition to their extra duty rosters and night work for emergency surgery and treatment, we have also extended the hours of their normal duty work week. Thus, we shall try to maintain an assemblence of medical service to you all. In turn, I ask your cooperation and indulgence. Ask yourself this question before your next clinic visit: Is this hospital visit really necessary?

Quote of the Week

"Our glory is peace, not war; our greatness is in people, not power. The history of America is a history of outstanding achievements by individuals." — President Johnson at ceremony awarding 30 Presidential Medals of Freedom, Sept. 14, 1964.

Big Book Boost and Air-Conditioners Help Needs of 197th Infantry Brigade Readers

Two air-conditioning units, more than 300 popular best sellers, a number of paperbacks and a large selection of study-manuals are all part of a renovation plan now underway at Library Five of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

Probably the most important addition to the library is its new selection of books for which original plans were made almost six months ago. At that time it was felt by Library officials that the present monthly supply of 71 books furnished by the Special Services organization was not quite enough to cover the needs of the brigade's readers.

The McNaughton Library of Williamsport, Pa. was contacted and plans made for the use of that library's unique rental-purchase program.

The McNaughton Library furnishes an original outlay of approximately 300 books for rent according to specialist Raymond Stringfellow, NCOIC of the 197th's library. Each month the McNaughton Library adds 40 books to its original shipment.

Stringfellow pointed out that it is then the job of he and his staff to check on 40 books that have failed to interest the brigade's readers and are not circulating. In this way a constant new supply of 40 books is being added to the library each month as the 40 non-circulating books are sent back and 40 new ones sent to take their place.

Among the new additions to the library's shelves are such best sellers as Saul Bellow's "Herzog," Bel Kaufman's "Up the Down Staircase," and Fletcher Knebel's "Night of Camp David."

Stringfellow said that as soon as the new books are all shelved and categorized, a weekly list of new additions will be published in the Daily Bulletin to aid readers looking for something new to read.

In addition to the new books, the Number 5 Library has added a series of Job and Test Training Manuals published by the ARCO Publishing Company and designed to aid readers in acquiring and testing their skills in a variety of subjects including everything from gardening to administration.

Other new supplies include a set of sports manuals published by the American Association for Health, Education and Welfare and a series of language records in Spanish, German, Russian and French.

Future plans include the addition of approximately 50 new magazine subscriptions which would double the library's current supply.

Stringfellow added that the library is making an attempt to increase its number of reference materials of which there is already a large assortment. "We now have everything from the latest Rand McNally Commercial Atlas to a Volkswagen Repair Manual," he said.

General remodeling plans include the installation of two air-conditioning units and the refinishing of furniture.

Specialist Stringfellow's staff includes Sp4 Klaus Hillman, Sp4 Paul Laumer and PFC Sam Dunlo.

The library's hours are 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays while on weekends and holidays the library is open from 1 to 4 p.m. and from 5 to 9 p.m.

ENRICHED FLOUR

Nutritionists advise eating four or more servings of enriched breads daily. Biscuits, muffins and all other baked products prepared from enriched self - rising flour not only contribute essential B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, and the minerals iron and calcium, they also provide easily utilized food energy and protein. Enrichment adds nothing to the cost or calories of baked products.

'Jumping Mustang' Wives Hold Final Get-Together

"Airborne all the way!" was the theme of the "Jumping Mustangs" ladies monthly coffee as the officers' wives of the 1st Bn. 8th Cavalry (Abn) recently met at the home of Mrs. O. W. Dillon for their last regular get-together. Mrs. R. S. Talmadge greeted the guests at the door with miniature paper paratroopers with the guest's name on each open chute.

Each lady was given a paper arrow labeled with her name which was placed on a large U. S. map to indicate where she was planning to live during her husband's Viet Nam tour. A large majority of the families will remain here at the home of the Air Cavalry and others will be scattered across the U. S. and Germany.

Lt. Col. Kenneth Mertel was the guest of honor. He gave a talk on Viet Nam and discussed the situation there.

After answering questions, Col. Mertel joined the ladies at the refreshment table where Mrs. Guy Eberhardt and Mrs. R. W. Muldrow served coffee and punch.

The table was decorated in the Airborne theme with a drape made from a cargo chute behind a centerpiece of highly polished jumpboots. Pumpkin - colored grape sprays and various other flowers surrounded the centerpiece.

Also in the arrangement were an overseas cap with an airborne patch, a bronze Airborne statue and the now familiar green t-shirt of the "President's Own" 1st Cavalry Airmobile Division.

The ladies were served a buffet of canapes, cheese cake, cherry and blueberry tarts and almond tea ring.

After the business meeting, the ladies played bingo led by Mrs. R. S. Talmadge, Mrs. J. H. Nickels and Mrs. O. W. Dillon, hostesses for the coffee.

Citadel Official Advises Grads Of Infantry Officer Basic Course

One pat on the back is worth 16 kicks in the pants, 160 graduates of an Infantry officer basic course were told at Fort Benning Tuesday, Aug. 10.

Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Reuben H. Tucker, commandant of cadets at The Citadel in Charleston, S. C., guest speaker at the commencement exercise, advised the officers to be prepared for any assignment.

"No matter what your job," he said, "remember that as a leader, the important thing to ask is "Does this individual perform to the best of his ability?"

"Those of you who will find yourselves in training establishments will find that you have to be doctor, lawyer, and adviser to the men under you," he continued. "Take this in your stride and give the best answer possible to each individual's problem. Many commanders fail to counsel the members of their command.

"If a man is doing a good job, say so. I have found through the years that one pat on the back can do away with the necessity for 16 kicks in the pants."

Gen. Tucker told the class to be "doers."

"If you receive an order, go and do it," he said. Don't come back with 10,000 questions. You commander wants you to take over and get the thing done. I grant you that in the process you will make mistakes, but be the type that does the job. No one can ask more of you."

Gen Tucker presented a letter of academic achievement to the distinguished honor graduate, 2nd Lt. Richard G. Thurman, who made an average grade of 97 per cent. Thurman also received an engraved pen and pencil set.

Second Lt. Carleton Thompson received an Infantryman statuette as winner of the Military Stakes Award, a trophy presented to the student who makes the top scores in certain technical fields such as map reading, weapons proficiency, first aid, communications and adjustment of artillery fire. Thompson scored 950 out of a possible 1,000 points.

Another statuette went to 2nd Lt. Duncan B. Dowling, for scoring highest on physical training tests, making 450 out of a possible 500 points.

In addition to the awards, Gen. Tucker presented diplomas to each graduate.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commandant of The Infantry School who introduced the guest speaker, expressed the School's pride in the class and best wishes for the future as "you move on to higher responsibility."

"I don't have to tell you that none of us knows what is in store for us," Gen. York said. "Our country is engaged in a war. Many of our comrades in arms are facing it now. You, too, may become involved."

"The enemy is both dedicated and fanatic. If we are going to defeat him, we can be no less dedicated. If this is going to remain the 'land of the free', it must also be the 'land of the brave,'" Gen. York said.

A highlight of the commencement exercise was a presentation of the epic poem, "I Am the Infantry."

MPs Urge Measures To Lessen Auto Thefts

Fort Benning military police officials are urging car owners to take steps to help decrease car thefts in the Fort Benning area.

The American Automobile Association points to a heavy increase in "joy riding" thieves and that such a thief seldom steals a car unless he is invited to do so by the owner's carelessness.

All keys should be removed from the auto when it is left unattended. Keys left in a vacant car are an open invitation for theft. Even a spare key thought hidden is often found by the professional car thief.

A rule to remember is "if the thief can get into a car, he can steal it."

Given enough time, even the rankest joy riding thief can jump the ignition wires. Closed and locked windows and doors present a time-consuming barrier to both amateur and professional, police say.

Cars are ofen stolen only for valuable articles they are transporting. Any valuables left in an unattended auto should be locked in the glove compartment or trunk or at least covered with an old blanket or newspaper.

Lights and people deter thieves so it is best to park in a reputable, attended lot or on a well-lighted, well-populated street. The ideal mark for a thief is the car parked on a dark, industrial side street at night, where there is no likelihood of interruptions or witnesses.

These simple precautions, if taken, can easily cause a thief to pass up a likely prospect. It is always best to make it as difficult as possible for him."

Copter Carts Moon Rocket Nose Cone

An aircraft carrying a 4,800-pound nose cone, the tip of a moon-bound Apollo space craft, landed at Lawson Field last Monday and took off again Tuesday, Aug. 10 for Cape Kennedy, Fla.

Twenty-eight feet high, the LEM (Lunar Excursion Module) adapter left the factory in Tulsa, Okla., suspended on a sling about 50 feet below a CH-47A Chinook helicopter.

The $1 million cone made five stops on its trip to Cape Kennedy. It stopped the first night in Little Rock, Ark., and then at Columbus, Miss.

It stayed the weekend in Columbus and then left for Fort Benning. After leaving Lawson Field, it made one more stop in Jacksonville, Fla., before reaching its destination.

Two helicopters were used in the freighting of the adapter, both being flown by members of Fort Benning's 147th Aviation Company (Medium Helicopter).

MAH Given Palm Tree By Army Reserve Unit

A palm tree was presented to Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital Tuesday, Aug. 10 by an Army Reserve unit from Coral Gables, Fla.

Col. Chauncey M. Stone, commander of the 324th General Hospital, on the post for two weeks of training, presented the tree to Col. Hal B. Jennings, Martin Hospital commander.

The palm tree was given to the unit by the City of Coral Gables for presentation to the Fort Benning hospital.

The Reserve hospital unit arrived on the post Sunday (Aug. 9) with 60 officers, three warrant officers, 23 nurses and 293 enlisted men.

The 324th will operate four wards at Martin while at the post as well as supply personnel for clinics, laboratories, operating and emergency rooms and administrative offices, officials said.

"To the best of my knowledge," Col. Stone said, "this is the first time a Reserve unit has been given the full responsibility of operating wards in an active Army facility. We're looking forward to the stepped-up work here. In the event of mobilization, our high priority unit would operate a 1,000-bed hospital."

The unit will return to Coral Gables Aug. 21.

Two separate senior status reviews were held last week at York Field as the officer candidates of the 54th and 53rd Companies, 5th Student Battalion of the Student Brigade moved into the final phase of their training.

Reviewing officer for the 54th Company ceremony was Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, post commander. The event marked the first appearance of Gen. York at an OCS Blue Day review. Other members of the official party included Col. Jess Walls, commanding officer of TSB; Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, commanding officer of 5th Student Battalion; and Capt. Glenn H. Wilson, commanding officer of the 54th Co.

The afternoon ceremony also marked another first. The candidates of 53rd Company are a reserve component class and this was the first time an OC(RC) company had ever held a senior status review.

Maj. Gen. Alfred C. Harrison, adjutant general for the state of Alabama, was the reviewing officer. He was accompanied on the reviewing stand by Col. Walls, Lt. Col. Nett, and Capt. Larry G. Riddick, commanding officer of the 53rd company.

CONARC Awards Educational TV Contracts for Training Centers

FORT MONROE, Va. — Contract awards totaling almost 1.7 million dollars for educational television equipment were announced by training officials at headquarters, U. S. Continental Army Command (CONARC).

One contract ($895,495.00) provides for the installation of television transmission units, called playbacks, at 17 U. S. Army training centers and schools throughout the Continental Army Command. A second contract ($775,000.00) was let for fully equipped mobile vans for video tape production.

The Ampex Corporation of Redwood City, California, was the successful bidder on both. Installation of equipment at the 17 schools and training centers will begin immediately with a target completion date of early next year.

Infantry School

The Infantry School at Fort Benning already has educational television and playback facilities.

Under terms of the mobile van contract, two are scheduled for early delivery. The other three will not be ordered until later in the fiscal year. These vans will permit the organization of mobile video tape production teams which will travel throughout the command producing training tapes for the various schools and training centers. The two on current order will be assigned to the US Army Ordnance School, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and the US Army Artillery and Missile School, Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

The Army is one of the pioneers in the development of educational television and has been using it in training on a regular and constantly increasing scale since 1953.

These new contracts represent a major expansion of the current limited facilities into an integrated video tape TV training network.

Standardized instruction in common subjects, exploitation of the best instructors in a given subject, plus faster and more efficient training will result from this program.

Nine Sites

Dual channel playbacks will be installed at nine training sites. These facilities, known as Playback As, permit the simultaneous transmission of two different tapes to multiple classroom locations. Single channel playbacks, known as Playback Bs, will be installed at eight schools and training centers. These broadcast one tape at a time to a multiple number of receivers. Each of these facilities is of the closed circuit type and cannot be picked up on unconnected receivers such as are normally found in the home.

Reduction in the size of equipment, major increases in equipment efficiency, mass production resulting in lowered initial installation costs and maintenance of equipment were factors in the decision of the Continental Army Command to expand its educational television facilities at this time.

Spokesmen stated further expansion of Army educational television can be expected in the next few years.

Army Materiel Command Marks Third Year of Huge Support Job

The Army's Materiel Command this month marked its third anniversary as one of the largest and most complex elements created in the reorganization of the Army three years ago.

The Army Materiel Command consists of a nationwide network of some 95 military installations and 97 activities engaged in developing, producing, supplying and maintaining weapons, equipment and other materiel for the Army.

Gen. Frank S. Besson Jr., commanding general of Materiel Command, operates with a 21.2 billion dollar inventory and an annual expenditure of 7.1 billions of dollars. He has under him in AMC 18,000 military and approximately 150,000 civilian personnel.

Seven Commands

The AMC Headquarters in Washington, D.C., operates seven major subordinate commands including five commodity - type commands which are responsible for research, development, production and procurement in their assigned commodity areas. They are: US Army Weapons Command, Munitions Command, Mobility Command, Missile Command, Electronics Command, Supply and Maintenance Command, and the Test and Evaluation Command. The US Army Infantry Board, located at Fort Benning, Georgia, is a subordinate activity of the Test and Evaluation Command.

Accelerated response to the Army's need for better weapons, equipment and supplies has become the hallmark of the US Army Materiel Command, according to Fort Benning Infantry Board officials.

"This month, as the command begins its fourth year, increasingly complex and demanding world-wide requirements are being met with less personnel, fewer facilities and substantial dollar savings to the taxpayer," they added.

Message

In a message addressed directly to the men and women of AMC, General Harold K. Johnson, Chief of Staff of the US Army, said: "Increased and helicopter armament, advanced evaluation of the Laser Rangefinder, improved reliability of missile systems, and the development of a nuclear capability of the 155-mm howitzer are but a few of the important projects developed by the Army Materiel Command. Through your program to expedite supply procedures and improve quality in every phase of development, the efficiency of the Army has been improved. You have provided our combat soldiers with the tools of modern warfare to see, move, shoot and communicate their way to victory."

In terms of the Department of Defense Cost Reduction Program, Gen. Besson estimated that AMC would show a savings of more than $500,000,000 during FY65.

Additionally, Gen. Besson, in an anniversary message to AMC personnel, said: "Our support for the soldier in the field — Korea to Berlin, from the Dominican Republic to Vietnam — is on schedule. The weapons, equipment and supplies we are providing are worthy of the men who use them. This is no time, however, to rest upon our laurels. As the pace quickens, the mounting demands upon our skills and experience must be met by each of us with determination, dedication and with a real sense of urgency."

Viet Girls Used In Psy-Warfare

"Psy-War" or psychological warfare, as it is more properly known, has a high priority in the Republic of Viet Nam.

Under a program called "Chieu Hoi" or "open arms," the Vietnamese Information Service uses young Vietnamese girls to broadcast invitations to the Viet Cong to surrender to government forces, promising them complete amnesty. The broadcasts are made from aircraft flown by American pilots. Villagers are told not to cooperate with the Viet Cong and are warned to stay clear of target areas during air raids.

Part Two--History

Communism and Growth in Russia

Editor's Note: This is the second installment on Communism. This chapter deals with the history of Communism and why it appealed to the Russian people.

Karl Marx believed that the prospects for communist revolution would be most favorable in the advanced countries of Western Europe, because there the polarization of classes would be sharpest as the result of capitalist industrialization. Marx regarded Russia as a semi-barbarian, backward empire offering no chance for the early spread of communism.

The exact opposite of what Marx expected happened: communism made little headway in Western Europe, but triumphed in Russia. There are three main reasons for this paradox — so utterly contrary to Marx's "laws of history."

First, tsarist Russia possessed no tradition of resolving social conflict through constitutional government. As a result, relations between different social groups and nationalities were tense, sullen, and hostile. Thus the Marxian theory of class conflict was more in accord with social reality in Russia than in Western Europe, and its promise of a future "classless" society strongly appealed to reformers as the cure-all for Russia's social ills. It is significant that Russian was the first language into which Das Kapital was translated from the original German.

Second, in economic and educational development, Russia was the most backward country of nineteenth-century Europe. There were only the few rich and educated and the many poor and illiterate, with virtually no middle class in between. Even as industry began to develop toward the end of the nineteenth century, no strong middle class emerged in Russia. Because industry came late to Russia, she skipped the stage of the small workshop and the small factory and developed large enterprises from the outset.

This was in contrast to Western Europe and the United States where industrial development for over a century had been carried on through many small enterprises. In Western Europe and the United States the small businessman became the main element of the middle class and, in fact, the dominant element of society as a whole.

Although industrialization in Russia did not produce a significant middle class, it did create a new urban working class, concentrated in a few of the large cities, such as Moscow and St. Petersburg (Leningrad). This working class lived in misery and degradation, had little political protection, and saw little hope of improving its lot by legal action. What is more, the concentration of workers in a few places made it easier for communist propagandists to awaken in these workers a sense of class solidarity.

The third reason for the triumph of communism in tsarist Russia was the nearly complete absence of religious support for social or political reform. In Western Europe, during the nineteenth century, most reform movements had been inspired and led by Christian ministers and laymen who took their religion seriously. Social and political reform was to them no more than the application of Christian love and cooperation to practical problems of economics and politics.

By contrast, Russian movements of social reform lacked this religious root. The Russian Orthodox Church was completely dominated by the tsar and was thus unable to provide inspiration or leadership for reform. Moreover, the highly mystical beliefs of the Russian church encouraged people to rely on miracles rather than on human effort as the means of overcoming misery and injustice. To a surprising extent the complicated and obscure language of Marx's writings blended with the spirit of Russian mysticism. The Marxian doctrine of sudden salvation through a single "Miraculous" act (revolution) gave Marxism a kind of religious appeal.

The belief in miracles was widespread in Russia and could be found among all social classes, from the illiterate workers and peasants to the imperial family itself. Self-styled "saints" and "miracle workers" roamed the countryside, and were often revered and idolized.

The best known of these "miracle workers" was Gregory Rasputin, a simple Siberian peasant, who wandered throughout the length and breadth of Russia as a self-styled "man of God" who could perform miracles. Gradually, Rasputin was able to convince members of the Russian clergy that he possessed supernatural powers, which eventually allowed him to gain entry into the tsar's palace in St. Petersburg. One of the tsar's children was seriously ill, and the empress quickly came to believe that Rasputin was able to help her child. During the next eleven years, Rasputin acquired a dominant position in Russia through his influence the empress. Many Russians of all classes were concerned over Rasputin's power, since he exhorted the tsar to rule as an absolute autocrat, and not go give in to popular demands for constitutional government.

Rasputin's notorious career was ended in 1916 when he was assassinated in a bizarre plot by a group of Russian nobles.

RASPUTIN . . . Even though he was illiterate, Rasputin gave the impression of great wisdom through personality.

Post's Academic Building Named Winner of Engineer Design Award

The Infantry Center's Building 4 has been named as the winner of a world-wide Army Corps of Engineer architectural design competition.

The eight-million-dollar Academic Building at Fort Benning was named the winner this week, according to Savannah Engineers.

The award was established for the first time this year. It is designed to further the chief of Engineer's program to improve the quality of design for military construction. It is open to field designs for Army facilities produced by any Corps of Engineer District world wide, according to Engineer officials.

Savannah District nominated Abreu-Robeson, Inc. Architects and Engineers of Atlanta and Brunswick, Ga. for their design of the Academic Building.

The seleetion of this nominee for award by the chief of Engineers was made on the basis of architectural appearance, satisfactory solution of functional problems, economy of design, and construction and quality of architectural concept.

The unique design of the huge building, with its 12 acres of classroom floor space (completed in May 1964) is the folded plate concrete construction of the roofs of the classroom wings.

An awards ceremony was scheduled for Savannah, Ga., Thursday, August 12 at 10:30 a.m. in the Savannah Electric and Power Company auditorium.

The Hon. Daniel M. Luevano, assistant secretary of the Army for Installations and Logistics, was to present a plaque to the Abreu-Robeson firm and a "Distinguished Architectural Award" to the Savannah District.

Lt. Gen. William H. Cassidy, Chief of Engineers, explained the purpose of the recently initiated awards.

Other dignitaries scheduled to be present at the event were Charles M. Nes, first vice-president of the American Institute of Architects; Bernard Rothschild, director of the South Atlantic Region of the AIA; Joseph D. Murphy of St. Louis, Mo., one of the three judges; Brig. Gen. John C. Dalrymple, director of Military Construction, Office of the Chief of Engineers; Max Barth, Office of the Secretary of Defense for Installations and Logistics; and Col. John C. Potter, acting South Atlantic Division engineer for the Corps of Engineers.

Gannon Named Commander Of Armor Bn

Lt. Col. Vincent Gannon, a graduate of the United States Military Academy and a veteran of both World War II and the Korean conflict, was recently named commander of the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, 197th Infantry Brigade.

The holder of numerous decorations and awards including the Army's Bronze Star, Gannon takes command of the 4th Battalion after having completed a year of study at the U. S. Army War College in Carlisle, Pa.

In addition to the War College, he has attended the Armed Forces Staff College in Norfolk, Va. and the Command and General Staff Course at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

Gannon's previous assignments include service in the office of the Army's Deputy Chief of Staff; G-2 operations officer with the 25th Infantry Division; and three years as a member of the staff at the United States Military Academy.

Extra Personal Care Required To 'Stand Tall' During Summer

During the summer months each soldier should give increased attention to personal appearance. Heat and increased physical activity make "standing tall" a more complicated problem for everyone.

Everyone knows the basic rules for wearing the Army uniform; however, let's quickly review them:

Don't leave your barracks or your area unless you are in prescribed uniform — and that uniform is clean and well pressed.

Keep your brass bright and your shoes clean and polished.

Be sure your uniform is in good repair.

Don't alter the general appearance of your uniform. You should have it tailored if necessary for proper military fit, but beware of uniform alteration that results in too-tight a fit, the pegged-trouser look or the pegged-jacket look. A good rule to follow — if the alteration is noticeable, you're not properly fitted.

Keep all your buttons buttoned. When neckties are not required, however, the collar of the shirt may be left unbuttoned — and make certain that your T-shirt is clean and not torn.

Keep cuffs buttoned on long-sleeved shirts at all times — never roll up the sleeves.

Wear regulation socks.

Don't mix uniforms.

Don't add unauthorized emblems. Such civilian accessories as watch chains or fraternity pins must not be worn on the uniform.

Wear the service cap (with visor) or the garrison cap (overseas) as directed by your commanding officer. The garrison cap is worn tipped slightly to the right. Check your cap band regularly to be sure no sweat line shows through; guard against the sweaty hat band.

Remember that regulations for the wearing of the uniform apply at all times, both on and off post. When you are in uniform, be in correct uniform.

As a soldier and member of the United States Army, you are the Army to those citizens who come in contact with you. Your appearance and your conduct represent the Army to the American public.

Personal appearance establishes the first impression. It sets the climate for later opinions about you and about the Army in the minds of those you meet, see and work alongside.

The sharp soldier — neat, proud, and wearing a proper uniform — provides a positive image for the Army and for himself to the American people. He helps make his family, his friends, all citizens who meet him proud of their Army and of him.

One sloppy, careless, out-of-uniform soldier, however, can badly damage the Army image.

Make sure that sloppy soldier is never you, nor any member of your unit.

Help build the Army image.

Newlyweds Reunited In Viet Nam

TAN SON NHUT, RVN (AFPS) — A newly-married couple was happily reunited here at the U.S. Army's 1st Logistical Command after two months of separation, disappointments, order changes and urgent telephone calls.

Second Lieutenants Louis R. Tripp, an Adjutant General officer, and Karen A. Callaghan, an Army nurse, were planning a big wedding for next October. Then Lt. Callaghan received orders to an unknown location overseas. They made some fast decisions and were married May 15.

Lt. Tripp telephoned the Adjutant General Career Branch and volunteered for duty wherever his wife was being stationed. Three weeks later he received orders for duty in the Republic of Viet Nam.

At this time his wife was aboard a troop ship about two weeks away from the RVN. Lieutenant Tripp flew by jet and was there to welcome her. He is the first American soldier known to be reunited with his wife in Viet Nam since dependents departed last February.

Tropic Tent Gets Test In Panama

FORT AMADOR, C. Z. (ANF) — It looks very much like a modern church, but it's designed to be a command post, first-aid station, mess tent, or field maintenance workship. It's the Army's new tropical utility shelter, now getting a jungle workout at the U. S. Army Tropic Test Center at Fort Clayton, C. Z.

The use of A-frame construction gives the shelter its church-like appearance. Large triangles of braced netting form the basic tetrahedral shapes and suspended overhead is a big rectangle of nylon.

Specifically created for hot-wet and hot-dry climates, the shelter can be erected in 35 to 45 minutes.

It was developed by the U. S. Army Limited War Laboratory at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. and is being tested here by Infantry, mechanized, and aviation units as well as environmental health and motor pool personnel.

Safety, Comfort Sought In Clothing Development

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army is seeking greater safety and comfort for aircraft pilots and crew members. Research and development of an "air conditioned" flight helmet is included.

Officials are working at Natick Laboratories, Mass., perfecting a safer flight helmet, more flexible and comfortable body armor, and a cold weather boot that lets pilots feel the foot controls. Natick is an Army Materiel Command field agency.

Creation of the new 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) with some 400 helicopters has focused attention on the Army's increased safety and comfort needs.

Progress has been made on a new nylon helmet protecting wearers against small arms fire and shrapnel, officials disclosed, and research is continuing on an unbreakable, shatter-proof visor completing the assembly.

Improvements are also being made in body armor, and cold weather boot research is continuing, an official said.

Crewmen in the Republic of Viet Nam have asked for a cooler flight helmet, but officials say the solution is not readily at hand. Methods being studied include forcing outside air through the helmet and installing battery or electrical cooling units.

Preventive Law

Viet Nam Bound Soldiers Should Check Insurance

The serviceman bound for Viet Nam should be aware that many areas of his personal affairs are going to need close attention if the well - being of his family at home is to be safeguarded. While preparing a will and power of attorney, he should not neglect the careful checking of his life insurance policy.

The family of one of the first Americans to be killed in Viet Nam as a result of hostile action has not been able to obtain the face amount of the policy. The policy contained a clause which limited coverage to a refund of premiums paid if death results "while engaged in military or naval service in time of war or as a consequence therefor." Such a restrictive clause is commonly referred to as a "war clause." These war clauses were common during World War II and the Korean conflict. However, such clauses almost disappeared from life insurance policies until their gradual reappearance in the early days of 1965.

If a serviceman already has a policy in force, the war risk clause can have no effect upon him. By law, these clauses cannot be added to policies already in effect. They can only be inserted in new policies. Notwithstanding, a careful review of all insurance matters will help to assure the insured that his policy has been kept up to date.

Although policies without war risk clauses can still be obtained from many of the leading insurance companies, most companies have publicly announced the possibility of including such clauses in the near future. The Legal Assistance Officer (located in Building 1679) will furnish legal advice relative to the interpretation of any war exclusion or other doubtful provision in your policy.

Men Wanted For Army's Pilot Program

With the current trend toward air mobility, the Army is calling for aviation-minded young men to take advantage of its rapidly expanding flight program.

Because of the length of time needed to train aviators, qualified applicants are needed now.

The Department of the Army recently increased the number of classes and class input for its Warrant Officer flight training program. The program provides for a four-week preflight course at Fort Wolters, Texas followed by either a 34-week fixed wing course at Fort Rucker, Ala. or the 33-week rotary wing course at Rucker and Wolters.

Specific details about the program are contained in Army regulation 601-108, titled "Personnel Procurement: Warrant Officer Flight Training Option". Army regulations 611-85 and 611-110 also apply to this program.

RULES TIGHTEN

The Defense Department has tightened its policy on the use of lie detector tests to secure information that normally can be obtained through skillful investigation and interrogation. A new DOD directive lays down the ground rules for polygraph examinations that may be given to personnel in the military services and defense agencies.

NOT INTERESTED!

Some people immediately take this attitude when an insurance man calls.

Why? Could it be because they hate to be reminded of a fact they'd prefer to forget? Their families—the wives and children they love so much—are not adequately protected.

The truth is most men can't afford to be "not interested." The average American father owns only enough life insurance to carry his family for a year or two.

We can show you any number of John Hancock Plans which will give your family a better chance. Absolutely no obligation, of course.

New Device Pinpoints 'Down-at-Sea' Aircraft

POINT MUGU, Calif. (AFPS) — A device which, combined with the Missile Impact Location System (MILS), can pinpoint the location of aircraft downed at sea was tested in Hawaii recently.

Called a Sound Fixing and Ranging Device (SOFAR), it is a five to nine pound, five to 10-inch explosive package with a time fuse that can be set to explode at a water depth of 2,500 feet. In principle, it functions like a depth charge. The MILS system is primarily used to locate missiles fired down the Pacific test range.

An aircraft downed at sea could drop the SOFAR and the sound of its explosion would travel through the water to hydrophones set at the same depth. These would pick up the sound and transmit it by cable to MILS sites. At the sites, drum graphs, much like seismographs, would record the sound. The sound and the time it was received would also be recorded on electromagnetic tape.

MILS operators, when told that a plane was lost, could search the graphs recorded during the approximate time period and determine the exact time of the SOFAR detonation. Data from the sites would then be compiled and plotted by a central MILS coordinator and the location of the downed aircraft determined within a few miles.

A search plane could then be sent to the area of the plane and pinpoint its location for rescue ships.

PRESENT COURSE

The Mariner 4 will be followed in its present course by earth stations until about the middle of September, when it will be some 190 million miles from our planet. It will then be given a fond farewell until 1967, when it is expected to swing back to within about 30 million miles of the earth. It is hoped that communication with the space satellite will then be re-established.

Candidates Set Record For Course

The 51st Officer Candidate Company set a new record for the Leadership Reaction Course last week.

Completing 41 per cent of the problem, the student delete officers beat the old record of 36 per cent.

The company was divided in half. The first section took the gruelling test the following day. The lead group completed 43 per cent of the problems and the second group completed 39 per cent.

The old record was shared by a US Military Academy class and the 50th Officer Candidate Company. The 50th Company set the record earlier this year.

Of the 51st candidate class, one team completed five out of five missions in the leadership course. Records show this has only been done rarely in the past ten years.

The team was comprised of Candidates Howard Mahler, James Wilcox, James Vawter, Larry Thomas and Michael Magnan.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

VICE PRESIDENT Hubert Humphrey, speaking to sports writers on the eve of the Cleveland Browns-College All Star game in Chicago last Friday, applauded sports as the great American asset, observing that citizens who vent their anger against umpires and referees aren't apt to start a revolution.

If this is the case, and we have the vice president's word for it, we needn't fear a revolution at the Officer Candidate School in the near future. The candidates gave plate umpire George Hutchings a good going over at the Student Brigade - 428th Medical Battalion game last Friday night.

The OCs, in company strength, were busy cheering TSB with the aid of Mr. Newton (their mascot) when ump Hutchings objected to the goat's unbaseball-like presence on the field. Newton has been making frequent appearances at the games in support of The Student Brigade's baseball efforts.

From that point on, there was a parting of ways between the OCs and the ump. Contrary to Hutching's directions, the bearded billy, led by his OC keeper, kept reappearing on the field to cries of "We want goat!" from the stands.

Finally, with patience rubbed raw, Hutchings gave the goat the get-off-the-field-or-else sign and Mr. Newton made the long walk to the TSB bull pen. Or was it goat pen?

The crowd was irked, especially the OCs who sent up a haunting cry of "Ump hates goats", cleverly calculated to wreak havoc with Hutching's morale. When he called over the Medic bat boy to give some instructions, the candidates took up a cry of "Ump hates kids", accompanied by a medley of boos and hoots.

The abuse continued to rain down on Hutchings throughout most of the remainder of the game but the imperturbable ump took it with a stoic water-off-a-duck's-back umpire philosophy and continued his calls without a flinch.

No matter how hard the candidates tried, they couldn't get Hutching's goat or their own goat back on the field!

FROM THE ASSOCIATED PRESS comes these two interesting items.

Right handed pitcher Bill Faul of the Chicago Cubs says that he goes into a quiet corner about ten minutes before game time and starts counting to blank out everything. When he gets into the game, he just concentrates on that big catcher's mitt. Faul says he hypnotizes himself and is able to hypnotize the batters.

It seems to work. In his last 26 innings, he has given up only one run.

The only thing that breaks his subconscious state is a detrimental remark from the crowd. Then, says Faul, he just blanks out.

THERE'S BEEN A BREAK in the cold war. Poland may get its first golf course but first it must do something about its cows. Members of the American embassy in Warsaw have been seeking permission to set up a course. But so far they've been offered only decadent land or even rock piles.

Says the chairman for the Central Committee for sports and tourism, Wledzimierz Reczek, "We need grass for the cows. I am not against golf. I am just partial to the cows."

Meds' Morris Blanks TSB On One-Hitter

In a gruelling pitchers' battle at Gowdy Field last Friday night the 428th Medical Battalion blanked the Student Brigade, 1-0, on Mike Morris' one-hit pitching.

Morris had a no-hitter going until the sixth inning with only one TSB batter reaching first after being hit by a pitch. In the top of the sixth, TSB cacther Jay Curley managed to line a single down the left field line to squelch the no-hit attempt.

The Medics' single run came in the bottom of the third when, with one out, Walt Waiss smacked a standup triple down the right field line to drive in Ulysses Davis.

At the end of nine innings TSB was still scoreless and only six brigade batters had reached the base pads.

Morris managed to strike out 15 TSB batters during his pitching performance while giving up only three bases on balls. The win was his second of the half against two losses.

TSB starter Jimmy Knight gave up only three hits for the full nine but was handed the loss.

The victory was the Medics' fourth of the half against six losses. The defeat gave TSB a five win, five loss record and dealt a blow to the brigade's hopes of overtaking the league - leading Infantry Center Troop Command.

TSB Defeats 197th, 11-8 To Get Shot at Half Crown

Starting the Playoffs

Col. Lón D. Marlowe Jr., commanding officer of the Infantry Center Troop Command, gets ready to throw out the opening ball at WAC Field Monday night to start the week-long CTC softball playoffs. In first night's play, the 506th Engineers beat the 505th Transportation Company, 11-10 and C Company, 1st Battalion walloped the 139th Military Police Company by a resounding 24-1.

The Student Brigade tapped the run register in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings at Gowdy Field Tuesday night to surge out of an eight run hole and beat the 197th Infantry Brigade, 11-8. The win gave TSB a shot at the Infantry Center Troop Command for the second half championship.

After five and a half innings of play, the 197th had piled up a big eight run lead and it looked like smooth sailing ahead. A win would also have given the 197th a chance to win the second half crown.

In the sixth inning, already ahead by three runs, the 197th unleashed a five run scoring blast that appeared to put the game on ice. Duane Eichorn accounted for three of the runs by smacking a home run into the center field scores board with two men aboard.

In the bottom of the sixth TSB began to turn the tables when Thurman Woody scored on a wild pitch and Bob Sheridan was driven home by Jay Curley's sacrifice fly.

In the seventh TSB landed more runs to cut 197th's lead to three. With one away Bob Schultz drew a walk and scored on a passed ball and a single by Woody. Woody scored on a Sheridan single to right field and Mickey Carmack socked the third single of the inning to score Sheridan.

Eleven TSB batters came to the plate in the eighth and after the smoke cleared TSB had brought six runs home and romped ahead, 11-8. The bulk of the scoring came on three errors and three bases on balls with singles by Bob Blosser and Carmack the only hits in the six run scoring spree.

The winning pitcher was Arlen Clark who came to the mound in the sixth, just before TSB's scoring blast. Wendell Tate was handed the loss. Tate was the third of four 197th pitchers to face the TSB onslaught.

Post Golfers in Lead For 3rd Army Crown

After the first two rounds of play at the Third Army Golf Championships at Fort Jackson, S. C., Fort Benning's team has taken a 17 stroke lead with a total score of 590.

Army Wins Tennis Open Honors At Annual Inter-Service Tourney

The 1965 Inter-Service Tennis Championships came to a close last week with the Army taking home the open singles and doubles honors and the Navy victorious in the senior singles and doubles at San Antonio's Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

The Army's Rudy Hernando became the interservice open singles champ for the second year in a row by defeating John (Bitsy) Harrison, a big six foot military policeman from West Point. The 26-year old Hernando, from Fort Sill, Okla., lost the first two of five sets to Harrison, 6-2 and 6-4 but came breezing back to cop the next three sets 6-2, 6-0 and 6-3.

The Navy's Jack Candland of the Naval Air Station at Sanford, Fla., took the senior singles crown by defeating the Army's Phil Hardie Jr., a doctor at Sam Houston's Brooke Army Medical Center. In 45 minutes of play, Candland took Hardie in straight sets of 6-1 and 6-3.

The Navy senior team beat a senior Army team of Hardie and John Dennis by score of 8-6 and 6-1 to win the senior doubles crown.

The Army team of Harrison and Hernando captured the open doubles crown by overthrowing the Air Force pair of Henry Jungle and Stan Hack, 6-4, 7-6 and 6-3.

Maj. Gen. William A. Harris, Fort Sam Houston commanding general, presented the awards following the final competition.

As open singles champ, Hernando got the Risely Bowl plus awards for the Army's open doubles and Leech Cup triumphs.

Harrison, representing the Army team, was presented the huge Leech cup won earlier in the week by the Army for the fifth year in a row.

Fort Benning's John McGill, Third Army singles champ, was a member of the winning Leech Cup team. McGill was eliminated in the open singles quarter finals by champ Hernando.

Shooting Soldiers Get Twin Wins

Blankenship Overthrown In National Champ Race

BY LEE LACOMBE

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Army pistol shooters rocked Camp Perry's famous ranges Saturday as they rolled to an unprecedented twin victory in the national trophy individual and team matches as the 1965 National Pistol Championships drew to a close last week.

Earlier in the week PO Donald Hamilton of the Navy withstood a driving finish by defending champion SFC William. Blankenship of the Army to take the national championship with a 2649 total, six points higher than second - place Blankenship. But the Army champion slammed back Saturday to capture the national trophy individual crown with a record - setting 294-16x, three x-ring shots higher than the old mark set by Capt. William McMillan of the Marine Corps in 1963.

Unable to click successfully in Friday's team events, the soldiers showed their superiority Saturday as they swept the top five places in the National Trophy Team Championship. The two national trophy matches were established by Congress and are shot with the service pistol and service ammunition issued to competitors on the firing line. Army Blue topped the team field under the tutleage of MSgt. Mack Salmon with an 1,143-37x.

Sparked by a terrific 295 by Sgt. Donald Jaynes, Army Europe grabbed second place with 1,134 and was followed by Army Western, 1,130, Army Eastern and Army Pacific with 1,128 each. The Army had entered only five active duty teams in the match.

Second Straight Year

It was the second consecutive year that the Blue squad had taken this coveted championship. Sgt. John Lawson and SP5 Roger Willis, the two new shooters that are required on all teams entered, started the Blue team on the road to victory by dropping just 37 points out of a possible 600. SFC Ralph Thompson and SSgt. Hershel Anderson cinched the victory when they followed by losing only 20 points for the winning 1,143 total.

Earlier in the week competitors saw the greatest race for individual honors in the history of the national matches. Going into the final 30-shot event of the three day grind, only nine points separated the top eight men in the field. Hamilton refused to fold under the pressure although Blankenship had managed to pull within just a few points.

Hamilton took the lead after the center fire matches and Blankenship leap-frogged several competitors to move into serious contention four points behind Hamilton and one behind Air Force Capt. Thomas Smith who was in second place. The race was a shot-for-shot battle through all four of the .45 matches which ended the battle and it wasn't until the last round went down range that Hamilton had the title. It ended a fantastic five - year reign as the national champion for Blankenship.

Pair of Records

Army shooters set a pair of individual records during the three days of firing. Sgt. Santiago Machuca bettered the record in the .22 caliber slow fire match with a 198-7x, three x-ring shots over the old mark and Sgt. Bonnie Harmon banged out an 898-39x to raise the center fire aggregate records by two points.

The women's race was also a nip and tuck affair with only x-ring shots separating the first two finishers. Trude Schernitzauer, a civilian from Lowell, Mich., edged Capt. Gail Liberty of the Air Force by six-x-ring shots. Both girls finished with 2,554 totals.

Defending champion Capt. Sallie Carroll of the Army had managed to come within one point of the winner at one stage on the last day but fell back to third with a 2,550.

On Friday the Marines eked out a narrow victory over the Air Force in the .22 caliber matches but the men in blue blasted out a record 1,174 in the center fire and a winning 1,161 in the .45 to take the team title going away with an aggregate of 3,518, 13 points higher than the old mark which they had set.

Saturday it was strictly Army day and a long parade of soldiers went to the awards table at the closing ceremonies Saturday afternoon.

Smallbore riflemen took over the Perry ranges this week and the month - long championships end with 10 days of high power rifle competition during the last part of August.

Army Pacific Team Wins In Quantico Rifle Contest

QUANTICO, Va. — U. S. Army Pacific slammed out a record-breaking score of 1,275 points Tuesday to capture the Infantry Trophy rifle team match at the Interservice High Power Rifle Championships here.

Close behind were two more Army squads with Europe coming in second at 1,265 and Army Blue finishing third with 1,254.

The Pacific squad, coached by SFC Robert Varner and SSgt. Robert Little, easily erased the old record of 1,267 set last year by Army Europe. Firing members of the winning team were SFC Burl Branham, SSgt. Dennis Lilly, SSgt. Robert Ferguson, Sgt. Terry Daugherty, SFC Gilbert Garcia and SSgt. James Starkes. SSgt. Edward Hakla and Lt. Walter Cramer were alternates.

It was the second straight successful showing for the soldiers against the best marksmen of the other services.

Monday they snapped up four of the first five places in the six-man team match. The Air Force took first with an 889-79V and Army won the next four.

Eastern Region was runnerup with 886-73V and Pacific Red with 885-65V was third.

U.S. Loses Track Meet To Soviets

First Lieutenant Billy Mills, U.S. Marine Corps, big hope for the 5,000 meter event, was lost to the team before the meet started. The Olympic champion became ill and could not compete.

A victory in the 5,000 meter by Russia's Pyotr Bolotnikov and a one-two finish in the high jump carried the Soviet team to victory.

IN A RUT

How is this for being in a rut? The last four shut-outs won by the New York Yankees have been by scores of 3-0. And, the last four shut-outs the Yanks have lost also have been by score of 3-0.

The Fort Benning Little Theater has announced tryouts for its first production of the 1965-1966 season. The group will present "The Hostage" by Brendon Behan, opening 6 October 1965.

Peter Hajduk has been named to direct the three-act comedy. Hajduk will be directing his first major production, although his lighting and technical assistance have played an important role in Little Theater productions during the past two seasons.

This summer, he also directed a one-act drama, "Snow Angel," as part of the theater group's work shop program. His home is Buffalo, New York, where before entering the Army he worked in semi-professional theater.

"The Hostage" was the Irish poet - playwright's Broadway success of the 1962 season. Set in Dublin, the story concerns an outlandish group of Irish Patriots attempting to manipulate the British government through the kidnaping of a soldier. The play is filled with typical Irish nonsense and bawdy song.

GROUP 'O' TO BE WALKING BLOOD BANK

A "walking blood bank," unique to the Army, is being formed by the men of the 1st Cavalry Division.

For the past two weeks Maj. Mercer E. Conrad and a team of 15 medical specialists from the U.S. Army Medical Research and Development Command have been busily implementing the Universal Blood Donor Identification Program.

Approximately 35 per cent of the military population has type "O" blood which can be given safely to any individual. Maj. Conrad and his team have been taking samples of blood from all individuals in the division who have been previously identified as belonging to group "O". After confirming the blood type and analyzing the samples the medics will be able to identify those men with type "O" blood who can be safely used as universal donors.

These safe donors will serve as "walking blood banks" who can be requested to provide blood for transfusion purposes when the tactical and medical situation dictates.

Maj. Conrod stressed that these donors would only be called upon in an emergency situation. "There may be an instance," the major explained, "when an outfit could be cut off from their main unit and have men who have sustained serious injuries. With a safe type "O" donor available blood transfusions could be made on the scene."

Maj. Conrad claims that the inspiration for this unique plan was adapted from a similar one used by the German's infamous Rommel, leader of the Afrika Corps. This volunteer unit was made up solely of men with type "O" blood.

"But," said Maj. Conrad, "Rommel didn't know that there are a small percentage in the type 'O' group who can not be safely used as universal donors."

The results of the blood sample tests will be given to the major and separate unit commanders who will have a "U" placed on the troopers ID card and "dog tags" to identify the individual as a universal donor.

General Accepts Medal as Leader Of Air Mobility Concept Pioneers

By JOE TREASTER

The commander of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) Wednesday received he nation's highest decortion for meritorious service in a miniature review on he headquarters front lawn.

Pinning the Distinguished Service Medal to the tunic of Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard — in recognition of his leadership of the experimental 11th Air Assault Division, foreruner of the airmobile unit — was Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, commander of the Third U.S. Army.

"You must know," Gen. Kinnard told representatives from every unit in the division standing before him in khakis and combat helmets, "that I accept this honor as your representative and your leader."

"You men have been pioneers in the true sense of the word. You have undergone hardships and danger and you have done it with your eyes on the goal.

"I will wear his medal proudly because I wear it for you."

In the citation signed by Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor, Gen. Kinnard was credited with translating a concept of organization into a realistic element of great significance to the readiness posture of the Army.

"Despite the absence of guidelines and the shortage of resources, he proved the validity of the concept of air mobility through experimentation and actual application."

The commendation specifically recognized the general's efforts between Feb. 1963, when the experimental division was formed, and Dec. 1964, the month when the most elaborate in a series of tests was completed.

The Air Assault Division was retired from the Army's roles July 1 and its troops were merged with those of the 2nd Infantry Division to form the cavalry division.

Soldiers from throughout the headquarters area stood in clusters on the grassy

Viet Nam Bound 'Copters Readied for Sea Travel

At a sleepy little naval station some 280 miles south of Fort Benning, more than half of the Viet Nam bound 1st Cavalry Division's 434 helicopters this week were methodically being reduced to immobile, non-flyable lumps of machinery.

Most of them were being enveloped in cocoons that would protect them from the abuses of the sea, sun and salt laden winds.

Others that would ride to the South China sea below the decks of either the carrier U.S.S. Boxer or the smaller Kula Gulf, a converted escort ship, were fitted with wooden base frames that would seat them squarely on the ships' floors.

The rotar blades that pull the hellcopters into the air were either removed or lashed into place.

The last cavalry helicopter bound for Viet Nam reached the U.S. Naval Station at Mayport, Fla., near Jacksonville Tuesday.

It touched down on a concrete strip at the end of a long line of airships which had begun landing there in the final days of July.

By today the line had diminished and the last helicopter was awaiting the crane ride that would put it aboard ship. As the helicopter had inched toward the loading

Cav Deputy G-3 Earns Legion of Merit Medal

The Legion of Merit Medal was presented to a new 1st Cavalry Division officer.

Lt. Col. John A. Hemphill, Deputy G-3 of the first team, joined the division June 30 when the 2nd Infantry Division combined with the 11th Air Assault to form the new 1st Cavlary Division (Airmobile).

While serving with the Alaskan Command he developed and formulated the joint Commendation medal and was instrumental in the planning and success of the training manuevers conducted by that organization.

Division Commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard spoke highly of Col. Hemphill at the ceremony. He said, "I'm glad to be the one to present this medal to you because I've heard a lot of good things about you and I'm glad to have you in the division."

Col. Hemphill entered the Army in June 1951 after graduation from the military academy at West Point, N.Y.

The colonel holds the Distinguished Service Cross, Bronze Star for valor with 1st Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart with 1st Oak Leaf Cluster for actions in Korea, and the Army Commendation Medal among his numerous decorations.

He was both surprised and elated to receive the award. When asked how he felt about being presented the decoration the colonel replied, "I was very pleased and I consider it a great honor to be recipient of the Legion Of Merit award.

New CAMPS Pay System Automates Army Finance

Pending final approval by Department of the Army officials, a new computerized finance system will go into use by the 1st Cavalry Division. It is being readied now.

The new system will not only reduce errors in pay to a bare minimum, but will give every soldier in the unit several choices as to how he wishes to be paid.

Called CAMPS (Centralized Automated Military Pay System), it reduces errors in pay by transferring all financial data on a man's account to magnetic tape. According to, Maj. Warren W. Lamm, project officer in charge of installing the new system, the computer that utilizes this type data has such a system of checks and double checks that it almost makes pay errors a thing of the past.

The pay of all division soldiers will, upon adoption of CAMPS, be divided into several different classes. The first is "norm pay." This is the amount that the individual elects to receive in cash at the end of each month. In the case of the 1st Cavalry Divison, this amount may not exceed $200.00 while the Sky Troopers are serving in Viet Nam.

The choices which can be made under the new system, all concern the remainder of the pay after the norm pay is subtracted. This amount can be mailed to your bank in the states, to your dependents, or retained by the finance center until you return to the states and request payment.

Checks for the remainder of your monthly pay after norm pay is subtracted may also be mailed to you, reaching you about the 15th of each month. This is not advised for members of this division because check cashing facilities may not be available and checks are easily lost, Maj. Lamm, said.

For those assigned stateside, this new system will allow a man to have two pay days a month, one by cash on the last day of each month and one by check on the 15th of the following month.

Maj. Lamm said the 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized), at Fort Carson, Colo. was the first unit to adopt CAMPS several months ago. According to Col. J. O. Hunnicutt, Director of CAMPS Operations, it has been a great success.

Troop Ships To Get News

The written word informing the troops of the First Cavalry Division's activities will not die on board the ships headed for Viet Nam.

The Division Information Office recently announced that newspapers—in most cases mimeographed — will be produced on all troops; printed and distributed daily.

According to division information officer, Maj. Charles L. Siler, the various newspaper staffs will be provided by the information personnel headed for Viet Nam with the unit.

Division and brigade staffs have been split into teams with intent to provide maximum coverage on all vessels.

Commendation Medal Goes to TEAM Sergeant

A veteran of 13 years Army service was presented the Army Commendation medal Tuesday at 2nd Brigade Headquarters.

SFC Eugene Hopkins, now serving as assistant intelligence sergeant at 2nd Brigade Headquarters, was cited for his work with the Graphic Aids Department of Project TEAM (Test and Evaluation, Air Mobility).

While with the Graphic Aids Department, SFC Hopkins prepared charts illustrating the effectiveness of air mobility concepts then being tested.

After the completion of the Air Assault II mobility tests, SFC Hopkins worked with Project TEAM to consolidate the material gathered during the tests, compile it into a final report and, eventually, into training texts of now proven air mobility concepts.

For Duty in Viet Nam

More Cash for Everyone

By Hank Allison

One of the most drastic changes to the 1st Cavalry Division soldier's way of life as a result of the president's order to Viet Nam will be his financial status—there'll be more money for everyone.

In the case of the lower enlisted ranks the move should mean a relatively large increase in pay. Special pay for duty subject to hostile fire will net each soldier $55.00 per month during his stay in Viet Nam. This is paid to all soldiers enlisted, commissioned and warrant.

Overseas pay, payable only to enlisted men varies from $8.00 for grade E-1 to $13.00 for grade E-4 on up to $22.50 for grades E-7-E-9.

Family separation allowance type II will be paid to all officers, warrant and enlisted men entitled to Basic Allowance for Quarters. This is a $30.00 addition to the usual monthly allowance.

Enlisted men and warrant officers serving in the Viet Nam theater will not be required to pay any income taxes during that period. Officers are exempted from income taxes on the first $200.00 of each month's pay in the Viet Nam zone.

Allotments for the support of dependents are stressed as a good means of providing for any home emergency while serving a tour in Viet Nam. Payments made to a soldier for hazardous duty pay, foreign duty pay, family separation allowance, hostile fire pay, clothing allowances proficiency pay, separate rations, and officers basic allowance for subsistence in tactical situations may not be allotted to dependents.

wharf, men of the 1st Transportation Corps Battalion, on temporary duty from Corpus Christi, Tex., and a handful of bare chested civilians, carefully tied-down or removed vital organs that could be damaged at sea, rinsed the fuel tank and coated it with light oil, installed heavy armored seats for the pilot and co-pilot and dabbed preservative on the engine and exposed metal parts.

The work went quietly, unhurriedly. Navy-paid civilian security guards sauntered around with the blank looks that are their trademarks.

"We've had no trouble," said guard Frank Small, a retired sailor with both wrists in permanent casts. "A couple of newspapermen tried to sneak some pictures, but we confiscated the film. That was before they were allowed into the helicopter strip. It was a restricted area then."

The placid scene was in contrast to the hustle and bustle 415 miles west at Mobile, Ala.; where the remainder of the division's aircraft were being readied for shipment. Most of the division's supplies and equipment had been convoyed to Mobile and stevedores were busy packing it aboard their ships.

A seaman stationed at Mayport, along with some 500 other sailors, said the invasion of soldiers and had done little to disturb his community's seaboard calm.

plain behind the reviewing stand or rested on elbows in their office windows. Five rows of folding chairs flanking the generals were ablossom with colorful sun bonnets. Bare headed at front row, left, was Gen. Kinnard's wife and their six children.

Although Gen. Truman was visitnig the division for the second time, he said he could "already sense the feeling of motivation and dedication of each man."

He said he presented the Distinguished Service Medal "through him (Gen. Kinnard) to all the men of the cavalry division" — many of whom wore the patch of the experimental unit.

"I didn't plan this as a farewell visit," Gen. Truman said, "but that's the way it has turned out. I want to express to you best wishes from all of the Third Army. I'm sure we'll be hearing of your gallant deeds in Viet Nam."

CAVALAIR COMMENTARY

BY J. D. COLEMAN

Most of us have, from time to time, suffered from that mysterious malady known as "foot - in - mouth - disease." This disease strikes swiftly and the unwary have been known to suffer attacks at most inopportune moments. It is universal, and strikes our civilian brethren as much as it troubles those in uniform.

However, the Army, being wont to attach specific titles to all things to distinguish them from non-Army matters, calls this malady by a more approbation—OVERLOAD. In fact, one of the infantry battalions in this division has gone so far as to give overdue recognition to those who have distinguished themselves in the field of OVERLOAD.

Before delving into this recognition, it might first be desirable to pinpoint the symptoms of the malady. This best can be accomplished by citing cases:

ITEM: A captain, who shall remain nameless, stoutly maintaining that all rumors about the 11th Air Assault Division becoming the 1st Cavalry Division with a subsequent ticket to Viet Nam were nothing but rumors. This in itself was meritorious, because all good soldiers should help stamp out rumors. But he went even further. He moved his family in from a snug setting off post to quarters on post. He now is clearing those quarters, simultaneously with pulling his foot from his mouth. This was diagnosed as an acute case of OVERLOAD.

ITEM: A Company commander-type, after bragging loud and long about the superior leadership that had his unit remaining free from the division's D. R. rap sheet for a period of a couple weeks, with the obvious aspersions on the leadership abilities of his less fortunate colleagues, finds no less than six of his heroes in the toils of the law in less than a week. An outstanding, almost clinically perfect, case of OVERLOAD.

There are, of course, many other less flagrant cases of OVERLOAD, but these two examples should establish the overt manifestations of the disease.

A couple of months ago the 2nd Battalion, 38th Infantry, now the 2nd Battalion 5th Cavalry, designed an award to be given weekly to the qualified individual that became a distinguished victim of OVERLOAD.

The following is an excerpt from the order establishing the award:

"5. In addition to the great personal satisfaction of being recognized among his peers as an overload of distinction, the Overload-For-A-Day shall also be entitled to:

"a. The privilege of purchasing for the Battalion Commander whatever potable liquid the Commander desires.

"b. The privilege of receiving from each officer of the battalion senior to the recipient, one portion of whatever potable liquid the recipient desires.

"c. A Letter of Recognition from the Battalion Commander.

"d. The privilege of prominently displaying and properly safeguarding the coveted OVERLOAD Medal from the date awarded until the next honoree is designated. Additionally, it shall be mandatory that the recipient wear the medal within the battalion headquarters building.

"6. At present, the concept of the program is to maintain the OVERLOAD Medal as a traveling trophy. However, should circumstances warrant, due consideration may be given to a permanent trophy for that individual who clearly and repeatedly distinguishes himself in the field of OVERLOAD."

Now it would be a shame to limit this recognition to a single battalion. This reporter would appreciate nominations of individuals who suffer publicly from OVERLOAD so that they may receive due recognition. The precise identity of the person would not, of course, be revealed, but like the examples cited above, the close associates of the cited OVERLOAD would have a speaking suspicion that their old buddy was getting the business.

Down to Sea in Jeeps, Cavalry Rolls to Mobile

By Hank Allison

Since President Johnson ordered the 1st Cavalry Division (airmobile) to Viet Nam, all areas of the unit have been humming with activity 24 hours a day. Packing, loading, waterproofing and just plain cleaning up were only the start. Soon long convoys began moving toward the ports.

Several convoys had as their destination, Mobile, Ala.

The movement of machines was not without casualties. As convoy after convoy moved toward the sea, some soldiers saw their role change from driver to guard. One 18-year-old private first class, sitting by his disabled jeep said: "I've been here since yesterday morning. I sure wish that some one would pick me up."

The jeeps moved on — people came out to watch, and wonder at the seemingly endless stream of olive drab men and equipment.

The proprietor of an Alabama cafe said, "I know you boys aren't supposed to tell anyone about that equipment, but we know where it is going and we're mighty proud of y'all."

The convoys moved on, stopping to refuel on a spur of Interstate Highway 65. Refueling crews worked furiously to get the men back on the road and moving.

The men on the refueling crew were from the 577th Engineer Battalion. They daily drove from the refueling point to Fort Benning to refill their 1200-gallon tankers. After four days on the job they had no complaints, only an appeal and a message: Take our picture, and tell everyone how we spent four days sleeping in the middle of a four lane highway."

As the convoys entered Mobile, people driving by in their cars hooked or waved and shouted encouragement to the Army drivers.

On the Alabama State docks . . . another scene of hectic activity as the vehicles, after final shipping preparations, were loaded aboard transport ships.

Said one stevedore working in the foreward hole of the Ruth Lykes: "I don't know why it is, but it seems that every so often, someone can't seem to believe that we (the United States) won't let them attack our allies. Then we 'has' to give it to them; and 'Uncle' has it to give."

Then he shook his head and remarked, "You boys take it easy over there now. Think about your families. It really hurt when my little brother didn't come back from Korea."

In the galley of the Ruth Lykes, a seaman said: "You boys just get over there, we will have your gear waiting for you."

Swing Bowl's New Home: Jump School

BY NICK PALLADINO

A bowl presented to the commander of the 11th Airborne Division in 1954 found a new home after a brief ceremony at 1st Cavalry Division headquarters this week.

The Swing Bowl, presented to Lt. Gen. (ret.) Joseph W. Swing by "The officers and ladies of the 187th Regimental Combat Team," is made of sterling silver. Much of the metal came from the paratrooper "wings" of the 187th's jumpers who melted them down while the unit was in Japan.

When the 11th Air Assault Division was activated in 1963, Gen. Swing donated the bowl to the division since the 187th was part of the experimental unit.

After the colors of the 11th were again retired last July 1st, Gen. Swing asked that the bowl be sent to the airborne department, United States Infantry Center (USAIC) for exhibition in the museum there.

Maj. Donald D. Dowie, chief instructor of the jump training committee, and a former member of the 187th (he donated two sets of jump wings to the bowl) accepted the bowl in the name of Col. Lamar A. Welsh, director of the airborne department, from Lt. Col. Harlowe Clark, the last commander of the 187th, presently the deputy commander of the 1st Brigade.

AUSA Honors Sergeant Major For Recruiting

A certificate of appreciation was awarded to a 1st Cavalry Division Sergeant Major Monday for his "outstanding contribution and dedication" to the Association of the United States Army (AUSA).

Sgt. Maj. Lawrence E. Kennedy, of the 1st Squadron, 9th Cavalry, was presented the award by Oscar L. Betts, president of the local chapter of ASU at division Headquarters.

During the presentation he said: "This man has probably gained more members for AUSA than any other individual connected with the organization."

Sgt. Maj. Kennedy, when queried about how he first became interested in AUSA stated: "I was reading the Army Times while stationed here with the 3rd Infantry Division in 1956 and saw an article that stated, there wasn't one member of AUSA in the division."

The sgt. maj. said that in a few months he had personally accounted for more than 60 members.

A Division Goes to War . . .But What of the Man?

By Ken McConnell

What is it like to go to war? What preparation is necessary for an individual to move from a safe home in the United States to a war ravaged country in Southeast Asia?

The difficulty in moving a division, such as the 1st Cavalry Division is an enormous job. But what of the man himself? To him, getting his family situated and ready for his departure is the main concern.

With just days, maybe hours left, a million thoughts were racing through some 15,000 heads this week as to what to do.

Some were very serious, some joked and some were quiet. Some wanted to talk . . . "Mom doesn't want me to go; my dad's proud though . . . " . . . My girl was crying when I left, she said: 'hurry back, nothing is going to happen to you."

Sp4 Robert S. Volland said he had been having a party for the last week saying goodby to buddies that were staying behind. When asked his feelings he replied "Im not happy; not sad. If you're goin', you're goin' That's the breaks."

Capt. Nathan M. Pulliam, said, simply: "I'm ready." His family is staying in Columbus. The news of his assignment to Viet Nam came as no great surprise to his wife, he said.

"It was inevitable. I was going whether the division went or not."

Selected on Merit

2 Year Promotion Wait 'Worth It,' Colonel Says

By JOE TREASTER

The man who commanded the first infantry battalion assigned to the organization which eventually became the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) last Thursday was promoted to full colonel, ending a two year waiting period.

"It's two years to the day that my name has been on the promotion list," said Col. John J. (Thunderbolt) Hennessey. "It was a long wait, but it was worth it."

Exchanging the silver oak leaves on Col. Hennessey's lapels for the "biggest birds we could find" were his wife, Mary, and Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, the division commander.

"Thanks for waiting," the general said, shaking hands with Col. Hennessey," and congratulations for all your fine work."

Despite the waiting period, division officials explained, the 1944 West Point graduate's promotion to colonel came ahead of many of his contemporaries. Two years ago, they said, he had been selected for colonel because of "outstanding" performance of duty — moving him into an earlier promotion group, but at the bottom of the list. In addition, they said, the list had been unusually long.

One of the first to follow Gen. Kinnard in congratulating Col. Hennessey was Col. George S. Beatty, division chief of staff.

Col. Beatty has been Col. Hennessey's immediate superior in three assignments since the newly promoted officer came to Fort Benning in early 1963 as commander of the 1st Battalion, 187th Infantry (Airborne), a founding unit of the 11th Assault Division (Test). July 1 the Air Assault Division and 2nd Infantry Division troops were merged to form the airmobile unit.

From battalion leader Col. Hennessey moved to deputy commander of the 1st Brigade, the unit's parent organization. In both jobs he reported to brigade commander Col. Beatty.

For three months this year Col. Hennessey had charge of the brigade as Col. Beatty became the chief of staff. Then Col. Hennessey was given his recent assignment — commander of support command — and Col. Beatty was his boss again.

Final Rifle Check Out Set Today

By Jim Lull

Final firing for qualification with the new, lightweight M-16 rifle is being held today on Brinson and Mearten Ranges in the Harmony Church area.

"Between 400 and 600 troops will do their qualifying firing today," said Lt. Earl D. Aull, project officer.

Most of the men firing are new arrivals to the division who have not had an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the weapon. Others who will be on the ranges missed firing due to training commitments.

Lt. Aull, assigned to Company C, 2nd Battalion, 7th Cavalry, explained that the procedure today will be primarily the same as in the past.

"The men will first be transported to Brinson Range from their home unit. There they will get a class on finding their battlesight zero by adjusting the windage and elevation keys," he said.

"We should keep the ranges going all day," Aull said. "The record firing will actually take place on Meaten Range."

Before any firing is initiated, Lt. Ronald Miller, weapons platoon leader from the same outfit, will conduct a class on proper weapons sighting.

All instructing personnel are from the 2nd Battalion, 7th Cavalry.

According to Aull, a total of 12 shots will be fired in groups of three, to establish battlesight zero's.

During the record firing, eight practice rounds — followed by 40 rounds for score will be discharged. An expert score is 28 or more hits.

KENNEDY GRAVESITE

Construction is underway on the permanent gravesite of President John F. Kennedy at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Virginia. Under a $1.4 million contract awarded by the Office of the Chief of Army Engineers.

Col. Buie Gets Commendation, New Assignment

Lt. Col. David M. Buie, former deputy commander of the 1st Cavalry Division's Third Brigade Wednesday received an Army Commendation Medal for service to the brigade.

The award was presented by Assistant Division Commander Brig Gen. Richard T. Knowles. Col. Buie was cited for his performance and "meritorious service" between Nov. 18, 1963 and July 25, 1965.

During that time, Col. Buie displayed "exceptional knowledge and skill which, combined with his initiative and ready acceptance of responsibilities, contributed immeasurably to the efficient and effective accomplishment of the missions of the Brigade," the medal accompanying citation stated.

As a result of his "ability to analyze problem areas and to arrive at logical solutions," the citation stated, "he was able, at all times, to render invaluable advice to all elements of the 3rd Brigade."

A unit spokesman indicated Col. Buie's medal was the last award to be presented to a member of the 3rd Brigade prior to its departure for Viet Nam.

Lt. Col. Buie has been reassigned as the headquarters commandant of the Infantry Center.

Aviation Group Operations Man Makes Colonel

Lt. Col. Walter B. Russell, operations officer of the 11th Aviation Group, was promoted from Major last Thursday.

Col. Russell, a senior Army aviator and master parachutist, is a combat veteran of the Korean conflict. Among his awards and decorations are the Silver Star, Combat Infantry Badge and the Purple Heart.

Before his assignment to the 11th Aviation Group in January, Col. Russell was the executive officer of the 228th Assault Support Helicopter Battalion.

When We Get 'Over There'

'What's for Chow?'; Food Service Has News

By Jim Lull

A question that has undoubtedly entered the minds of 1st Cavalry Division men since the announcement of their deployment to Viet Nam is "what type of chow do you suppose we'll get over there."

Chief Warrant Officer Paul A. Bows, food service technician for the Second Brigade, admits the chow won't rival Antoine's of New Orleans, but hastens to add that "it will probably be better than they expect."

CWO Bows, promoted to W-2 Tuesday morning, said "The meals given in Viet Nam will not be the type rationed to the troops in garrison." (Garrison meals served in mess halls are referred to as "Class A" meals.)

"The way it looks now, the men will first receive the normal 'C ration' issue upon arrival, and immediate action to introduce the 'new B ration' to the troops."

According to Bows, "There will be new dehydrated foods and canned items. Beef and gravy as well as pork and gravy will be popular choices."

"There will also be dehydrated meats — primarily pork chops, steak and fish," he said.

The brigade food technician feels that "this type of meal is definitely an improvement on 'B rations' of the past."

"One point I feel important to emphasize is the fact that there are two primary morale factors in the Army—the pay they receive and the food they eat— and in combat, where the men don't have the opportunity to spend a lot of money, food is the largest single factor."

15th Medical Battalion

Cav's Airmobile 'Angels of Mercy'

By RAY PAQUETTE

Direct heirs to the 11th Medical Battalion, the 1st Cavalry Division's 15th Medical Battalion has a proud history which goes deep into the past of both its former division and the Cavalry division.

According to its Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. Jueri J. Svjagintsev, the medics are "as ready to go as we will be."

Perfectly qualified for his job as Medical Battalion Commander, Col. Svjagintsev is a combination doctor, airplane and helicopter pilot whose military service includes duty as a US Navy pilot. In most ways he reflects the talents and professional abilities concentrated in the medical battalion.

The organization is made up of four companies and a 12 helicopter "Air Force." Each of the three letter companies are assigned to support one of the division's three brigades. This setup gives each of the brigades what amounts to a field hospital capability right with them. In actuality these companies man the brigade medical clearing station, provide for sick call, emergency medical and dental care, and evacuation of patients.

Support of the 1st Cav's 1st "Airborne" Brigade made it mandatory that most members of the Medic's Company A be airborne qualified. Many of this unit's personnel have recently completed Fort Benning's airborne course and the outfit has a high percentage of jump qualified medics including both of its doctors.

Equipped with 12 UH-1D helicopters, has the dual mission of providing air evacuation of casualties and crash rescue service.

Each "Huey" can carry up to six patients in addition to its pilot and crew. The crash rescue aircraft are complete with a complement of two fire fighters, a medic, and a flying crew. The ship carries a sling load consisting of a ball like fire extinguisher baptized "Sputnick". This fast moving team has the capability of being airborne within seconds after an emergency call and on the accident site within a handful of minutes.

Air ambulances provide the normal means of evacuation within the battalion and require pilots to fly under all kinds of weather procedures and over all types of terrain. The "Huey" ambulances move directly to casualty sites or unit aid stations under any type of conditions to evacuate patients and casualties.

Each clearing station maintains a surgical capability that is not normally found in other type of army division. These personnel perform the life saving surgery after a soldier has been wounded and prepare the patient for further evacuation.

When Division Deploys

Rear Detachment Men Handle 'Zeroing Out'

BY JIM LULL

The 1st Cavalry Division's "rear detachment" has completed final forming stages this week and given the mission of "zeroing out" the property left behind and reassigning undeployable personnel.

Division Inspector General, Lt. Col. F. A. McEntee, is in charge of the operation that he estimates will involve approximately 600 - 700 soldiers.

According to Col. McEntee, the rear detachment personnel will stem from three main groups.

"Of course men whose wives are expecting the birth of children will stay back until ten days following the arrival," Col. McEntee said.

"Those men who have not been naturalized to become citizens will remain here — as well as several others with various personal problems that warrant their non-deployment," he said.

Headquarters for rear detachment will be located in building 4017 in the Harmony Church area, with Col. McEntee the commander "until all men have been reassigned." At that time the colonel will proceed to Viet Nam to join the division main.

By the middle of the past week each major commander, separate battalion and separate company commander had designated an officer to command the rear detachment of their specific unit.

Single element representatives of the general's staff sections, as well as the staff judge advocate, adjutant general, aviation and provost marshal will remain with the detachment.

Negotiations to insure adequate coordination with main post sections has taken place over the past weeks to expedite the clearance of the 1st Cavalry Division from Fort Benning.

No Career Soldier, He's Looking Forward to War

When the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) lands in Viet Nam Information Office staff writer Jim Lull will be with the 2nd Brigade. He'll be carrying a rifle like the other soldiers, but his job will be to watch the action and report it to the world. Whether he's firing bullets at the enemy or words back home to the states. It'll be from a combat infantryman's view. He's going into combat just like most of the men of the division and this week the 20 - year - old Private First Class paused in his preparation to sketch his feelings.

I really don't know why.

I guess it's a combination of things. I don't plan to make the Army a career, and sincerely hope I am discharged on time.

But, you see, I really want to go to Viet Nam with the 1st Cavalry Division. Sure, it is going to be dangerous — not one of us will deny that. The life is going to be rough—much rougher that I have ever experienced. I know that—you know it too.

But what if I had been reassigned from the 2nd Infantry Division to another unit to fulfill my military obligation? I wouldn't have been happy.

First, the sense of loyalty I have to my country, which for the longest time didn't seem as prominent as it does presently, would have suffered. It would seem like, "I am in the Army, but somebody else is doing my job. He's protecting me and my family and the girl I left at home."

Then, I am sure that my masculinity would have been talnted. I am no professional boxer — or big game hunter. But every man possesses to some degree a sense of masculinity — and I would not have been sure of mine if I'd seen my buddies going to war without me.

There is an air of excitement surrounding the men of the unit. And, I've noticed the pride the men take. It really is amazing. The Army is largely composed of enlisted men from all walks of life and most of them choose to return to their civilan status. But, it is these men—just as the career soldiers seem to be proud of the unit and are putting themselves in the frame of mind required for the mission we now have. I would feel inferior —in my own way if I let them down, by doing less than my share.

I don't like eating cut of a can and sleeping in the great outdoors for any extended length of time. And, the thought of engaging someone in real combat has me concerned. But, you see, I have a powerful force somewhere inside me saying: "You can do it — and you will do it — or you could never live with yourself again."

Over the past two weeks I have met some who are not concerned — who don't care, and just want to go home. Well, I immediately gain a feeling of animosity for them, to an extent. Sure, we are wearing the uniform of the United States Army and in that sense I have a fraternal attitude, but I wish they wouldn't feel that way.

I want to go home someday too just like they do. And I am confident that I will.

A Test of Stamina and Ability

150 Miles By Horse A Story of Another Era

It took 2nd Lt. C. P. Walker more than 27 hours to make a 150-mile round trip to Oro Grande, N. Mex., from Fort Bliss.

The year was 1937. The 24-year-old West Point graduate was riding a horse.

Lt. Walker was one of 18 8th Cavalry lieutenants who competed in an endurance ride. Riding a troop horse named Boono, Lieutenant Walker won with a time of 27 hours, 17 minutes, and 20 seconds.

According to Col. Innis P. Swift, then 8th Cavalry commander, the time set by Walker under those conditions had probably never before been equalled.

Second place winner, Lt. B. Palmer, Jr., was nearly nosed out when Angelic, his horse, was frightened by the cheering of spectators and refused to cross the finish line. Lt. Palmer dismounted and dragged her across.

The purpose of the ride was to test the endurance of the officers and horses and to reconnoiter various unfamiliar roads and terrain.

The officers were judged on time to cover the route, best reconnaissance notes made of the terrain, and condition of their horses 24 hours after completion of the ride.

Half the contestants were disqualified at different stages of the trip for poor conditions of their mounts.

Lt. Walker's horse lost 40 pounds and the lieutenant lost five. Both had been in top condition at the beginning of the ride from long weeks of training.

The ride started at 7 a.m. on a Saturday morning in March at Newman Road across Dyer Street from William Beaumont General Hospital. It ended after 10 a.m. Sunday.

The route of the ride made a huge circle from Fort Bliss to Oro Grande and return. Stations along the way provided water and grain and checked the condition of the horses. There were enforced stops totalling seven hours, "a safety precaution for the protection of government property — the Cavalry horse," said Col. Swift.

From Fort Bliss the riders went to Newman, to Nations Salt Well, Gray's Ranch, Wood Ranch, Campbell Well, Mack Tank, and Oro Grande. They returned by Cox Globe Well, Belvin's Windmill, Dona Ana Target Range Camp, and back to Fort Bliss.

The men had a compass flashlight, and a few maps. There was no moon to lighten their way at night.

Several riders got lost. One went nearly 50 miles out of his way, getting back to Fort Bliss five hours after Lt. Walker. Two others lost an hour and a half by missing the road out of Oro Grande.

Lt. Walker, who said it was the "toughest 150 miles" he had ever travelled, gave credit for winning the race to his horse Boono. "His courage and stamina I have never seen equalled in a horse," he said.

Col. Swift anticipated some controversy over his published opinion that the ride probably set a record and he got it. One protest was that an express rider 60 or 70 years earlier had ridden a pony "nearly 300 miles" between Chihuahua and El Paso making the trip "in three consecutive nights, hiding by day. And next week made the distance back in the same time."

Col. Swift, who later became commander of the famed 1st Cavalry Division and a major general, did not concede defeat. He explained that a actual riding time, weight the horse carried, terrain, familiarity of rider with the terrain, and various other conditions had to be considered when comparing the rides. (He didn't mention the fact that no Apaches were chasing the lieutenants and had made speed more desirable for the pony express rider.)

"As compared with the well-known El Paso - Chihuahua road," he said in a letter of explanation dated March 10, 1937, "much of the 8th Cavalry course was across country over mountains, rock and sand, and in an area never before reconnoitered by most of the contestants.

"Their horses were chosen from the troop horses of the 8th Cavalry, purchased at the regular price of $165.00 each, as compared with the $600.00 price of the Express pony. Our purpose was not to prove that these 18 horses were of a superior class. We trust that we have shown, however, that any good well-bred horse is capable of covering great distances at relatively high rates of speed. All 18 of these horses who started this ride are absolutely sound today and doing full duty. In this day of motors we trust that no one will begrudge us the pride that we take in this splendid achievement of these 18 young officers of the 8th Cavalry, who have so well upheld the reputation of their Army and regiment."

Chaplain's Diary

What Makes Ministers In Olive Drab Run?

By Edwin R. Andrews

"Airborne all the Way"—the traditional yell went up before I could get well into the hospital room, and pretty speech of good cheer, which, as it turned out, wasn't much needed anyway.

There were two beds in the room, both occupied by chaplains with injuries from parachute jumping. One was from Fort Benning's Student Brigade. He had a hip injury, but was already harassing the doctors to return him to duty. Nevin Snyder, from our division, had just been admitted with a back injury.

Nevin opened the conversation by declaring, "I just want you to know that this doesn't change my opinion of airborne work," and launched at once into a detailed description of the jump, all slippery and icky and terrific, of the airborne. I had him stop from time to time to translate, for I'm only a "leg," as they put it — a lowly person not of the airborne elite of our Army.

Basic Problem

The basic problem, as Nevin put it, was a "Mae West"—some of the risers (lines from the parachute to the jumper) had caught on top of the canopy, preventing its opening fully.

He had "popped" his reserve chute, only to have it blow into his face without opening. So he came down much more rapidly than he should have, and had to absorb the shock. He tucked in his chin to prevent head injury, and fell in just the right position. The cool thinking prevented serious injury and Nevin soon returned to duty with his troops.

I wondered, as I left, just why Chaplain Snyder, along with many, many others, took such chances. Why, as a professional man and older than the troops he works with. . . . He is happy to deal with the aching bones and muscles that go with physical training and road marches . . . to say nothing of the "cot time" (confinement to hospitals).

Why He's There

And why are other chaplains slogging through Ranger training and keeping the killing pace? Why are the chaplains needed in Viet Nam still available from volunteer lists?

I heard a remark about Nevin Snyder just the other day that helps to answer those questions. His brigade chaplain said: "If you want to know where Nevin is, ask where his troops are. If they are jumping, he is. If they are taking PT, or rapelling, or eating 2 a.m. before leaving for Fort Stewart on maneuvers, that's where you will find the chaplain."

This is the philosophy all of us have heard since we entered the military chaplaincy: The chaplain, as minister, goes with the troops. He does his best to "be all things to all men," and with the leverage of this personal association, he influences the soldiers of his parish to higher moral standards and deeper faithfulness to their religious principles.

Replaces Old Friends

In other words, he takes the place, as best he can, of the friends, counselors and leaders the soldier left behind when he entered the armed forces.

This sense of mission and purpose has caused some generals, and has been responsible for quite a few citations for chaplains. But the real reward comes in a remark heard from time to time where soldiers gather to tell their stories: "And, you know, I looked around — and the chaplain was there."

Pilots' Sweethearts Win Texans' Attention

By Hank Allison

"Project Pat" — It sounds like a code name for a plan to win a girl's attentions. Actually, it involves a lot of "girls" — the sweethearts of the 1st Cavalry Division's pilots.

In order to get to Viet Nam and be ready to perform the job they have been assigned, the 1st Cavalry's UH-1 "Hueys" must be protected from the elements and the salt spray on the ocean voyage.

Troops of the 1st Transportation Corps Battalion from Corpus Christi, Tex., have been working in 10 hour shifts from 6 to 2 a.m. daily at Mobile, Ala., and Mayport, Fla. to prepare the 1st Cavalry "horses" for the voyage. That's what "Project PAT" is all about.

After removing the rotor blades, the helicopter crews wrap the main rotor shafts with heavy paper and tape. The next step is to cover all events, turbine intakes and exhausts, and the gaps between the bodies and doors with the ever present Army "green tape."

After all openings are sealed, the helicopters are towed into an immense aircraft hanger where the men of the 1st T. C. Battalion further protect them with a process called "Spray Lap."

First a black, water-soluble emulsion is sprayed over the entire body of the helicopter and allowed to dry. This spray, when dry, is covered with a white plastic preparation which does not adhere to the first layer and surrounds the body of the helicopter like a white cocoon. The whole process takes about 15 hours and when dry will protect the metal of the helicopter indefinitely."

The last step is to stencil "glass, fragile," "no step" and "use no hooks," on various parts of the "cocoon."

When the decision is made to active status, it will be necessary to make only a small incision in the "cocoon" and peel it off. The black water-soluble layer can then be washed off and the tape removed. In a short time the bird can be back in the air.

About 90 men from the Corpus Christi unit are involved in the project and, according to reports from the "management," are keeping a little ahead of schedule.

Said Airman Second Class Luccio Ricci, who works near the Project PAT headquarters, "The Army ought to be proud of the troops that are working on those choppers. They really have been working. The airmen who have watched them have really been impressed."

'My Husband Is Going To Viet Nam. . .'

My husband is going to Viet Nam and like hundreds of other men, it will be the third war for him to fight in.

My husband is a 'Soldier' and I am proud of him. I know the things people are going to say — they said it when he went to Korea. but he's been in one war" etc. I know they mean to express their sympathy, but no one need tell a wife she will be lonely, and she must be strong, and she must not feel sorry for herself.

She knows these things. I don't know what it is I object so strongly to, whether it is someone telling me how many times he has been in war, or how I should take it, or the overwhelming sympathy.

A soldier's wife doesn't want pity. A soldier's wife knows all about the waiting and loneliness and just as a soldier can do what must be done, so can a soldier's wife. I believe soldiers' wives object to all that smothering pity they receive from well meaning friends and relatives.

We aren't sniveling cry babies, our husbands have a job to do, and they will do it. We are proud of them.

I wrote a poem that I hope expresses the things I've written about.

Thanks for reading my gripes.

Mrs. Aubrey Spurlock

'We Know'

Yes, we know he's going to war again.
Yes, we know the danger he'll be in.
Yes, we know a while we'll have a lonely life.
Yes, we know. I am a soldier's wife.

Yes, a soldiers' son must be a man,
And his daughters know and understand.
Men will fight for right and freedom must be won
And a soldier does what must be done.

So stand tall my children lift your chin
We shall show the pride we have in him.
He must know we're strong and we can stand alone
Until the day when he comes home.

Gen Kinnard Gets Official Farewell

Fort Benning's Infantry Center officially bade Viet Nam-bound 1st Cavalry Division and its commander farewell at a review Wednesday.

On the reviewing stand was Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commander of the division, who left Wednesday on the first leg of a trip which will eventually take him to Viet Nam and his combat-bound division.

During the review, a statuette of Fort Benning's "Follow Me" infantryman was presented to Gen. Kinnard by Maj. Gen. Robert York, Benning commander.

"This little ceremony today is to give us in the Infantry Center and The Infantry School an opportunity to say farewell to Gen. Kinnard and through him to the officers and men of his division," Gen. York said.

"No division in history . . . has been tested so thoroughly . . . now he and his division are to be in the eyes of the world for the indefinite future," Gen. York added.

Gen. Kinnard, in reply to Gen. York, said the division had been "on a rather tough road and under a lot of close scrutiny since it was simply an idea."

He added the Army's air mobility concept would not have succeeded if it had not been for the "support, good wishes and friendship of the people here at Fort Benning and in Columbus.

"We leave behind us fond memories and our gratitude and thanks, but more important, many of our dependents who have found as we did, that Columbus is a hospitable place," Gen. Kinnard said.

$1.1 Billion Price Tag On Pay Bill

A vote last week by Congress sent to the President for signature a bill which will hand Fort Benning enlisted personnel an increase in pay of at least 11 per cent.

For those headed to combat zones, the bill has added benefits.

Nearly 4.2 million men on active duty, in the Reserves and on the retired list will benefit from the bill which carries a $1.1 billion price tag.

Final Congressional action came when the House of Representatives agreed, by voice

Maj. Radcliff Cavalry's First Casualty

The 1st Cavalry Division suffered its first casualty in combat Wednesday when Maj. Donald G. Radcliff, a member of the division's advance party to Viet Nam was killed when ground fire struck the helicopter in which he was a passenger.

Maj. Radcliff was executive officer of the 1st Squadron, 9th Cavalry and one of the pioneers in air cavalry tactics, flying and gunnery tactics.

News of the major's death arrived at Benning even before the division had completely embarked on ships for the move to Viet Nam.

Troops Go Each Night This Week

Final elements of the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) were scheduled to leave Fort Benning early this morning on the first leg of their more than 10,000 mile trip to Viet Nam.

Early transportation plans had called for the last of the division's more than 15,000 men to board chartered buses and passenger trains in the predawn hours.

At their destination — an Atlantic port — they were to load onto a Navy transport for the final segment of their journey to somewhere in Viet Nam.

Each day since last Sunday, duffle bag toting troops in khakis with steel helmets, rifles and combat packs have groped their way through the early morning darkness for their ride to the coast.

One bus that was to leave this morning, carrying a relatively small group, rolled not toward a seaport but to Warner Robins Air Force Base near Macon, Ga.

At Warner Robins, the men—designated as the "advance party" — were to become passengers on a Military Air Transport Service (MATS) airliner.

Earlier this week, Wednesday, the division commander, Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, and his staff left from Lawson Army Airfield on the notes of the Infantry Center band. An honor guard had ushered them into their aircraft. Parts of the band were playing this morning when the last troops left.

Gen. Kinnard and his party were scheduled to make at least two major stops before arriving in Viet Nam: Washington, D.C., and Kansas City, Mo.

In the nation's capital, the cavalrymen were scheduled to be subjects of the Defense Department press conference and to meet with high

Portable Dental Units Used by Army in RVN

TAN SON NHUT, Vietnam (ANF) — Personnel of the U. S. Army, Viet Nam, will be receiving dental care with the aid of two portable dental console units which recently arrived in the Republic.

The units provide the dental officers of the 36th Medical Detachment (Dental Service) the latest in modern field dental equipment.

According to Lt. Col. George F. Mayer, commander of the 36th, the Army is the first military service to use the new units.

Weighing approximately 160 pounds, the unit comes in two parts. One is a motor used to power the console section.

The portable units feature dental equipment used in the U. S., a built-in water system, and a three-way syringe with an air nozzle.

Washington officials.

And they are expected to reach Kansas City for the final honors of the 1st Cavalry Division Association's annual reunion.

Sometime before the first shipment of troops left Fort Benning, assistant division commander, Brig. Gen. John M. Wright Jr., landed in Viet Nam.

He conferred with Gen. William Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Viet Nam, and surveyed the areas which the division is likely to occupy initially.

From Gen. Wright's reports, Gen. Kinnard has gotten perhaps his most accurate picture of the situation he will be facing as leader of the Army's first division-size force to land in Viet Nam.

Under the measure's provisions, enlisted men with more than two years' service are granted an 11 per cent boost in basic pay. An average of 6 per cent increase is slated for officers in the same category.

The biggest single raises go to enlisted and commissioned personnel with less than two years service. The private with less than two years service will get a 17.3 per cent raise while the officer will get nearly a 23 per cent raise.

Allowances for quarters and subsistence are not changed by the bill.

The bonus package for servicemen in combat zones, to immediately include Viet Nam, grants a jump in combat pay from $55 to $65 a month.

where he took part in a Defense Department press conference Thursday. He is flying to Kansas City, Mo., to address a convention of the 1st Cavalry Division Association Saturday. He will attend a conference in Hawaii later next week and then will fly on to Viet Nam to join his division.

According to officials, the last of the division left Fort Benning early this morning, leaving only a rear "clean-up" detachment which will later join the division in Viet Nam.

Army-Wide Centers Set to Aid Families

WASHINGTON — Army families around the world will be the direct beneficiaries of a new Department of the Army program designed to bridge the gap between the individual soldier and the many agencies that exist to help him in solving personal problems, both major and commonplace.

Called the Army Community Service Program, it will soon establish conveniently located information centers at every Army post, camp and station and operate them on a formal basis to channel personal questions and problems to the military or civilian assistance organization that can best handle them.

Fort Benning already has a Community Services Agency.

It is presently handling requests for help from members and dependents of the 1st Cavalry Division now enroute to Viet Nam.

Army Halts 'Mauler's' Production

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Mauler program, developed by the Army to serve as a mobile air defense missile system to protect frontline troops against enemy aircraft and short-range missiles and rockets, will be terminated by Sept. 30.

Technical difficulties associated with mounting a fire control radar and guided missile launcher on the same vehicle caused significant delays and increased costs. Development costs to complete the program would have been in excess of $180 million.

A re-evaluation, taking into account recent improvements in the Hawk missile system and the promise of new types of forward defense systems, simpler and cheaper than Mauler, caused the Army to stop its development.

Although the technical feasibility of the Mauler system has now been established, the Army has decided to select the alternative systems for deployment. Studies are underway to determine what continued development of Mauler components may be of value to the U.S. or allied nations.

Gen Forsythe Opens Infantry Officer Course

"You are attending the greatest how-to-do and what-to-do school in the world," said Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, at the opening of Infantry Officer Basic Course No. 2 last week.

The assistant commandant of The Infantry School pointed out the specific demands stated in the certificate which is given each officer upon commissioning and discussed in detail how each man must live up to his commission in order to succeed.

He then commented on the six important characteristics of a leader: stating that they must be studious, confident, active, responsible, courageous and effective.

Commanding officer of the 217 U.S. Army officers and one allied officer is 1st Lt. Lawrence J. Dacunto. The group is composed of 13 first lieutenants and 204 second lieutenants.

Community Activities Needs Help Now

The Community Activities Association Fund Drive is well into its third week of operation and it appears to be going poorly! No doubt, the state of flux in which Fort Benning currently finds itself is responsible, to some degree, for the slow response.

On the other hand, it may be that many have fallen into the old trap of taking things for granted. Seldom do people give to a fund drive without some remorseful remark.

Yet they take for granted the facilities, activities and agencies which these fund drives support. It is a fact of life that in this day and age people seldom receive something for nothing.

Again, as in the past, we are asked to contribute our "fair share" to the CAA Fund Drive. The "fair share" system was, devised to act as a guide and to bring as little inconvenience as possible to any one contributor. It is easy to see where the individual soldier, without dependents, is carrying his load toward the support of this fund drive when he contributes his "fair share".

What about those who benefit directly from the services provided by the CAA Fund Drive? There are many who fall into this category.

Last year, CAA Funds provided 1,200 immunizations per month to dependents; 300 babies received their six weeks examinations each month; there were 3,000 visits through the Visiting Nurses Program; approximately 5,000 boys and girls participated actively in the YAC Program; 234 Christmas food baskets were distributed to needy military families; and the Preventive Dental Health Program provided free cleaning and fluoridation for the teeth of approximately 4,834 children.

Take a moment to think what these activities and services would cost and then ask yourself if the "fair share" system of giving would not be more meaningful if it was regarded as the "minimum" rather than a "maximum" guide.

'Bored Stiff'

Effective Classes

Anyone can get up before a group of people and give a class. But, how many can be effective instructors?

The answer is practically anyone can be an effective instructor if he wants to be. The only essential ingredients are prior preparation, a little imagination, self-confidence and desire.

A person assigned the job of teaching a class has a big responsibility — bigger than most people realize. He has the task of teaching other people something the Army feels they ought to know. And, even more important, he has the very big job of doing it effectively.

This is a dual responsibility. The instructor not only owes the Army the effective utilization of an hour or more of a good many soldiers' time but he also has an obligation to give his fellow soldiers a class which teaches them something and which does not "bore them stiff."

Unfortunately, too many classes nowadays are boring. It often amounts to a tragic loss of man hours in a day and age when the Army simply cannot afford the luxury of wasted time and lost motion.

If you happen to get the call as an instructor, remember the last "lousy" class you sat through and make sure you don't inflict the same kind of instruction on others.

A good class isn't that hard to give and the benefits can be long-lasting. Remember, it only takes some prior presentation, a little imagination, self - confidence and desire to give you the formula for success for one of the most important responsibilities in today's modern Army.

War on Waste No Part-Time Effort

Last October 31, President Johnson declared war — not war in the usual sense, with guns, tanks and missiles — but war against an enemy just as dangerous as any our country ever encountered. It was war against waste — waste in government spending.

Actually, the war began months earlier when the President assumed office, but the October date was the formal declaration, signaling the start of a systematic and long-range government - wide cost reduction program.

The President, in laying down the ground rules for his across-the-board cost-cutting program, cited the Defense Department's Cost Reduction Program as an excellent example of what can be done to trim government spending. He asked all government agencies to pattern their programs on that of the Defense Department.

As members of the Defense Establishment, we can be proud of the President's praise and we can be equally proud of the records piled up in the four years of the DOD program's existence.

Efforts to cut costs made by service men and women at all echelons have kept the DOD program consistently ahead of its goals — and have done so without damaging the strength of the nation's defenses.

In fact, President Johnson noted, our military strength has continued to mount. Without the record savings achieved by the Defense Department in the last four years, the President added, we would be ill-equipped to meet the situation we have encountered in Viet Nam or the many other world-wide commitments we have in the cause of peace and freedom.

But, despite the President's praise and our excellent record, we can't afford to relax our efforts.

The President pointed out that controlling waste is like bailing out a boat — you've got to keep at it.

Stricken Families

The average household with children under 18 can be faced with a multitude of problems inherent in raising a family. For the Army widow and her children, these problems are compounded. This woman no longer has the strong right arm of her husband to lean upon in time of family need.

Since 1900 the Army Relief Society has been bridging the gap with personal concern as well as financial aid for widows and orphans of Regular Army officers and enlisted men on active duty or retired.

Because the widow with children under 18 has more and greater responsibilities than the widow with older children, the ARS has a special working committee to help her meet these unique needs — the Junior Relief Committee.

In the 12-month period ending March 31, 1965, the Committee processed 59 new cases, half of which needed continuing help. These 59 widows had a total of 167 dependent children. In addition, 12 families receiving help during the preceding year, still required assistance. The financial aid given these 71 families amounted to $33,796. Some required one-time help, others needed assistance for many months or throughout the year.

The Judge Says . . .

Many personnel who married aliens now eligible for naturalization fail to realize the advantages of naturalization of their spouse as well as the disadvantages which they may encounter because of failure to obtain their naturalization.

Aliens are not eligible for a U.S. passport and as a result may experience delay or difficulty in re-entering the United States if they travel overseas as an alien. In addition, difficulty may be encountered in obtaining civilian employment in the United States.

There are special naturalization benefits allowed the wife of a citizen of the United States. Basically, an alien wife who meets all other requirements and whose husband is a citizen of the United States is eligible for naturalization if, immediately preceding the date of the filing of her petition, she has resided in the United States for three years after lawful admission for permanent residence. She must have lived in marital union with her citizen husband during the entire three year period and the husband must have been a citizen for the entire period.

For at least half of that period, in aggregate, the applicant must have been present physically in the United States. She also must have lived in the State in which she files her petition for at least six months and continuously in the United States from the date of the filing of her petition to the time of admission to citizenship.

Application is made on Immigration and Naturalization Form N-400 which is an "Application to File Petition for Naturalization." In addition, a reasonable test will be made of the applicant's understanding of the English language including her ability to read, write and speak words in ordinary English usage. She will also be tested on her knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals of American history as well as the principles and form of government of the United States. These tests are made by examiners of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The applicant must have two witnesses that will attest to the applicant's moral character.

After the applicant has been tested and has established her qualification to petition for naturalization, an officer of the Immigration and Naturalization Service will assist her in filing the actual petition for naturalization in a court having naturalization jurisdiction.

The Good We Do

Unsung Heroes of the Dominican Republic Now Have Their Story Told to the Public

For thousands of persons living in the Dominican Republic, Santa Claus came early this year.

He wore the green fatigue uniform of a soldier in the United States Army.

The stories of individual American compassion are now being told although years from now the story may not make the history books as a part of the story of the Dominican Republic.

There was Sp4 Jimmy L. Finch, of the 325th Infantry 82nd Airborne Division, who wrote a letter to his father, William L. Finch, of Riviera Beach, Fla., describing the poor living conditions and widespread poverty among the people.

Vast Campaign

So the senior Mr. Finch pitched in back in Florida and organized a vast campaign that encompassed several communities to gather food and clothing and medical supplies.

Thus was "Operation Dominican" born and, before it ended, 16 communities had sent 12,128 pounds of goods to the people of that troubled little nation.

Then there's the story of PFC Henry L. Debiec of Reading, Pa., a medic, who was on duty the night a young Dominican man ran to the aid station and said his wife was about to have a baby.

The 21 - year old soldier hurried to the house and — too nervous and busy to worry—delivered a healthy baby boy to the couple. Then he took both mother and baby back to the battalion doctor to make sure they were all right.

One warm evening, Capt. Robert E. Smith and 1st Lt. John O. Johnson of the 82nd Airborne Division were sitting on the front porch of the house that served as the command post for the 2nd Brigade.

An Entire Village

Let's do something really fine for these people," they said. "Instead of adopting an orphanage or school, let's adopt an entire village."

And that's just what they did—at a tiny village called San Luis, 10 miles from Santo Domingo. No village was more badly in need of a Good Samaritan. Stagnant water lay in clogged drainage ditches, trash and garbage littered many streets. Hungry mothers carried thin, undernourished children while the men, idled by the closing of the sugar cane factory by the crisis, gazed listlessly and wondered how they could survive. People were sick. schools and churches closed.

Then in came those "ugly" Americans. Within three days, engineers from the 307th Engineer Battalion had cleared 800 meters of drainage ditches, hauled away 40 truckloads of garbage and hired an average of 25 civilians. They were paid in food, brought in through Smith's help.

In the next few days a school re-opened. A chaplain held services.

A week later a true miracle of the division went out and had been worked in tiny San Luis. Over 30 tons of food had been distributed, more than 1,000 persons had been given medical aid, 250 men of the village had been given employment, 350 children went back to school—and a town of despair had begun to live again with hope.

On that Sunday of Thanksgiving, Chaplain Edward J. Kita celebrated Mass for 192 people of the village. After it was over, mothers shyly approached and asked the padre if he would baptize their babies.

British Colonel Gains Parachutist's Wings

Parachutist, professor, doctor, Army officer — these are the many roles played by British Lt. Col. Donald Macmillan of Leeds, England, who was awarded the "wings" of a qualified parachutist in a ceremony at Fort Benning last week.

Col. Macmillan, a reserve officer with the 44th Parachute Brigade of the Royal Army Medical Corps, is also a qualified physician and presently a professor of hospital administration at the University of Leeds.

Due to come to the United States to present a paper at a medical symposium at Cornell University, Col. Macmillan was unable to attend the two weeks of annual active duty training required of all British Army Reservists.

Through correspondence with the British War Office and the British Embassy in Washington, he was granted permission to take his two weeks of training at Martin Army Hospital.

Upon his arrival at Fort Benning he noted that, in addition to being the home of The Infantry School, it was also an airborne training center. Long interested in the airborne concept and a qualified parachutist in his own country, Col. Macmillan asked for and received permission to attend the airborne course.

On Thursday, Aug. 12, upon completing his five qualifying jumps, he was awarded the "wings" of a qualified parachutist by Col. L. A. Welch, director of the Airborne Department.

The Teen Beat

With Bette Jean Spratley

This is my last column but, when I leave next week for Ohio State I'll take away many fine memories of YAC and Teen Square, not the least of which is a swollen finger. Those pool balls are hard!

I'll also remember the generous vending machines at the Teen Club. Where "up north" can you get from five to 10 bottles of pop for one dime and then get your money back? For that matter, where else down here except at the Club?

With all that pop though you've got to watch your weight. Best way to do that is to dance it off with the Gintrees. There's a dance scheduled tonight from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Help! That's the call going out from YAC these days. They need football coaches for the upcoming season. How about you, you and you volunteering?

So far, that hayride is still planned for next Thursday night although it still has a "tentative" tag on it. If it works out, trucks will leave Teen Square at 7 p.m., with dinner in the "rec hall" at King's Pond when we get there. The Gintrees will play dance music until midnight. Tickets are 75 cents each and must be bought in advance.

Anyone wanting to drive their own heap (who would want to) must pay an additional buck and only 20 of those will be allowed. You've got to buy that dollar permission ticket or you can't get your POV into the King's Pond area.

Wear casual dress but no shorts. We should get back to Teen Square about 1 a.m. Keep in touch with the YAC office to find out if the hayride is still on or it has been pitched out the window

Bill O'Dell, manager of the Youth Employment Bureau has some sentiments he wants aired. Here they air (ouch) . . . he and the rest of the YAC staff want to bid farwell to Janice Schoonover who has been secretary in the YEB and thank her for her help this summer.

So I'm writing "30" (whatever that's supposed to mean) and hereby turn this space over to my successor, Kathy Marlowe. Lots of luck and it's been nice knowin' you

Teacher Shortage Critical In Columbus Area Schools

The Muscogee County School District needs teachers at the elementary level, according to R. Brice Carson, personnel superintendent.

"To date the severe reduction in personnel at Fort Benning has resulted in the loss of at least 25 teachers," said Carson's office.

He went on to say that time is so late now that the School District is hiring teachers out of their field in order to fill the drastic shortage in elementary teachers.

A statement by Carson said other fields in which there were vacancies are in speech correction, junior and senior high math and science, French and occasionally English and social studies.

The assistant superintendent's office said it hoped that it would not have to double the work load of some of its teachers in the system to make up for the shortage.

The shortage of teachers is attributed in great part to the departure of the soldiers of the 1st Cavalry Division to Viet Nam. The number of dependents of these men who usually take positions in the school system has decreased correspondingly, according to school officials.

Many wives of soldiers teach in the school system while they are stationed here.

In making an appeal for qualified teachers Carson's office reemphasized that the need for teachers, especially in the elementary grades, is critical and pointed out that the starting salary is $4,700 per year.

Recruiting Team Here From 101st

A recruiting team from the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., will spend a month here seeking volunteers in all ranks and job titles to fill vacancies in the famed "Screaming Eagles" division.

Due to a significant loss of personnel to the 1st Cavalry Division and the deployment of the 1st Brigade of the 101st to Viet Nam, the unit is in need of airborne troopers, according to officials.

The team, composed of one officer and two enlisted men, held and will hold introductory classes at Theater No. 2 at 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. Aug. 13, 18, 20, 25 and 27 to screen and select enlisted volunteers for training and assignment to the 101st.

Interested applicants who can meet the qualifications will be placed on orders for training at Fort Benning with assignment to the 101st Airborne Division after instruction.

Further information may be obtained from members of the procurement team by contacting the Post Re-enlistment Office in Bldg. 5 or by attending one of the introductory classes.

Marines Build American-Style Still To Ease Water Shortage in RVN

DA NANG, RVN (AFPS)—South Viet Nam is far from the green hills of the United States, but an old-fashioned American-style still is in daily operation here alongside the radio section of Headquarters Company, Ninth Marine Regiment, Third Marine Division.

The unusual thing about this still is that it doesn't produce an alcoholic beverage — but pure, distilled water.

When Headquarters Company arrived in Da Nang in early July, the radio section chief, SSgt. Donald J. Brown, discovered the supply of distilled water was short. His battery-powered radios couldn't function without it. A check revealed the entire division was suffering from the same problem.

Searching for a solution, SSgt. Brown knew just the man to see: Cpl. Aubrey G. Dalton of Knoxville, Ky.

Cpl. Dalton called on Privates First Class Joe A. Mcsherdon, Trafford, Ala., and Clarence B. Jones, New York, N. Y., to assist him. A five-gallon gas can, some copper tubing, a wastebasket, considerable ingenuity, and bottles for the finished product put them in business.

The still is capable of making a half-gallon of distilled water an hour. The only thing limiting the amount produced is lack of bottles. Cpl. Dalton and his crew are now supplying the Third Marine Division — with distilled water.

Lt Gerald Knapp Named Honor Grad of OC Class

Graduation speaker was Brig. Gen. William R. Buster, commanding general, XXIII Corps Artillery, Kentucky National Guard. Gen. Buster told the graduates, "as citizen soldiers we are committed to serve when and where directed."

He also said that as reserve officers it would sometimes be hard for the graduates to give full support to double careers, one civilian and the other military, however "we must find the best way, not the easiest way to perform our duties."

Scientists at Post Agency; Review Infantry Studies

Fort Benning last week played host to the commander of the Army's Combat Developments Command and its Scientific Advisory Group.

Visiting the post and the Command's Infantry Agency were Lt. Gen. Ben Harrell, commander of Combat Developments, and seven leading scientists from across the nation.

The scientists periodically meet and conduct visits to go aver the progress of the varied studies carried out by the agencies of the Developments Command.

The group was briefed on the current studies of the Infantry Team. The Team is composed of the Infantry Center commander, the assistant commandant of the Infantry School, the commander of the Infantry Board and the commander of the Infantry Agency.

Also on the agenda was a demonstration of the combined arms team in the attack.

The final day of the two-day visit was marked by panel discussion of recent developments in the Infantry branch.

The scientists visiting the post were:

Dr. Harold Agnew, weapons division leader, Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, N. M; Dr. Harold O. Davidson, president of Davidson, Dalbird and McLynn Inc., Bethesda, Md.; Dr. G. E. Kimball, vice-president, Arthur D. Little, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.; Dr. C. C. Lauritsen, professor of physics, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Calif.; Mr. David C. Reports of Lack In Viet Supplies Misleading

U. S. officials say there is an abundance of everything needed in the Republic of Viet Nam and troops elsewhere "are in the best shape ever" for conducting ground combat operations.

This information is in reply to reports of equipment shortages affecting ground combat capabilities, which officials term misleading.

Shortages do exist, officials admit, but they are normal and corrected as they appear. This is why reserves and inventories are maintained, officials claim, explaining that some 24,000 new items come into the inventory every month.

Other reports saying the Defense Cost Reduction Program has reduced inventories to unacceptable levels were termed untrue. Officials say the opposite is true, pointing out that cost reductions strengthen the forces by eliminating waste.

Russell Extolls Military At Jewish Center Opening

A U.S. senator and Fort Benning's two major generals along with the Third US Army chaplain and leaders of Georgia's Jewish Community were on hand at the Post Jewish Center Sunday.

They, along with some 250 persons, had come for the dedication of the center and to see the presentation of a Torah — a scroll bearing the five books of Moses in the old testament.

"Both will enrich the spiritual life of this, the greatest of all our military stations," said Richard B. Russell, Georgia's senior senator and chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Harry Sunshine, an Atlanta businessman and lifelong friend of Sen. Russell, presented the Torah to post commander Maj. Gen. Robert York through the National Jewish Welfare Board (NJWB) — official representative of Jewish servicemen since 1941. The Torah was presented in honor of Sen. Russell.

"I am deeply aware that the effectiveness of the Army strongly depends upon morale," Gen. York said, "I feel certain this Torah and new Jewish center will contribute significantly to our morale here."

Men of the 544th Construction Engineer Battalion spent two and a half months converting the two-sotry former office building into a religious center which chaplain's assistant PFC Jacob Koplowitz called "a 500 per cent improvement" over the building less than a mile away that had served for years as the Jewish center.

Although services have been held in the new center for several months, Chaplain (Capt.) Alan M. Greenspan said the dedication was delayed "until we could add a few last finishing touches. We wanted everything to be just right."

In his featured address, Sen. Russell praised the National Jewish Welfare Board.

PERMANENT TEETH

Parents often do not realize that their child's first permanent teeth have erupted, because the six-year molars do not replace primary teeth but appear back of the primary molars. Cavities form easily in the six-year molars because they have small grooves on the chewing surfaces that tend to hold food particles. A dentist should check the teeth soon after they erupt, usually when the child is six.

told how he has seen religion still active in Godless Russia and called for public support of U. S. committments in Asia.

"The cost and the sacrifices necessary to fulfil our committment and to achieve our purpose (in Viet Nam) should be shared as broadly as possible by all elements of our population and not just by those who must be prepared to fight and to die in armed combat," he said.

Asian Conflict

Sen. Russell recalled President Johnson's recent announcement that thousands of American fighting men would be poured into the Asian conflict and pointed to the stream of 1st Cavalry Division soldiers which had begun moving to Viet Nam that morning.

"I am sure," the senator said, turning to Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commander of the cavalry division, "that a new star will be added to the escutcheon of the American soldier by the men under your direction and command."

Earlier, Gen. Kinnard had been presented a medallion for service on behalf of the Jewish Welfare Board "as a token of our esteem and as a wish for good luck."

Gen. Johnson Comments

Chief of Staff Goes Into the Philosophy of the Soldier and His Pay

General Harold K. Johnson, Army Chief of Staff, recently discussed the military pay structure in a statement before the Senate Armed Services Committee. Because of the current interest in this subject, The Bayonet reprints the following excerpts from the General's statement.

". . .Before addressing the specific problem of pay, I would like to review the Army today. The Army is stationed in 101 countries with approximately 41 percent of its total strength overseas . . . I have visited many elements of the Army during the course of the last year and have been pleased to find an unusual vitality in the force, a deep sense of the importance of the mission they are performing, a dedication to the cause they serve, and a particularly noteworthy attentiveness to improving the capabilities of all elements of the force. These attributes lead to improvement in the quality of performance of the Army as a whole.

Policy For Officers

"The current policy of up or out for officers, which forces retirement before an estate can be established, is one of the most serious and less well understood penalties faced by the career military man. This means that the 30-year career soldier must retire around age 50 to 55, and beginning a second career after the age of 50 is extremely difficult.

"For many men, this latter age is when they face the heavy expenses of paying for college educations for their children, while also facing the prospect of buying a house and getting settled in a new community. The problem of a second career is compounded for military personnel by the severe legal limitations upon a retired person's activities. I believe the soldier should be able to pursue a military career without the disruptive spectre of having to prepare for a necessary second career. Thus, recognition for this aspect of military service is required in any analysis of the pay structure. . .

Decrease In Benefits

". . .Over the years there has been a decrease in some of the so-called fringe benefits for military personnel. . . . Thus, not only have pay scales lagged, but the military family must now pay for many services which were formerly considered a part of their compensation. As a compensating factor, dislocation allowances and family separation allowances have been added, although the dislocation allowance is taxed. . .

". . . I support a periodic review of the pay structure to ensure that equity is maintained between the several parts of the military pay structure and that a reasonable interrelationship is maintained between military compensation, other federal salary systems and the private sector of the economy."

Pay Philosophy

". . .I believe it is proper to review the philosophy behind military pay. Military pay is the compensation, granted by the Congress under the authority of our Constitution, for the total commitment of our nation that is borne by all who serve in the armed forces. This commitment, once made, requires each person in uniform to stand ready to defend this nation at the risk of his life.

"Our Armed Forces bear the major burden of providing the United States' presence in the furtherance of our world - wide commitments. Few of our citizens enter the service in search of financial affluence, and considering the hazards of military life, there is no pay scale that will adequately compensate the serviceman, because the price tag for volunteering to die cannot be computed. On the other hand, an unreasonable burden should not be levied on the taxpayer. Consequently, equitable compensation lies somewhere in between, but it must consider and allow for certain considerations that are unique to the military.

Unique Considerations

"What are some of these considerations?

"The military profession is a 24-hour-a-day calling and requires complete dedication, with no pay for overtime. Even with this deep sense of dedication, the serviceman still has the very human aspirations to feed, clothe, house and educate his family in a manner comparable to his civilian counterparts. Quite often today the head of a military household finds that, if he is dependent solely upon his military pay, he lacks the financial resources to provide his children the education necessary to compete successfully in the scientific and affluent society in which we live. Thus, the man in uniform must consider his personal objectives as they concern the well-being of his family.

"The estate-eroding factors of military life should also be considered. These factors include the career-long transitory status of the military and of their families, the short full - earning period caused by relatively early mandatory retirement, and the lack of a voice in the amount and type of compensation. Thus, an analytical review of military compensation should consider an additive or supplemental factor to allow for estate erosion conditions that conflict with the natural aspirations to build a suitable estate during the prime earning years.

Army Nets $10,000 Worth of Bugs

The "Bugs" came to the Army.

And for a change the bugs were welcome. And not just an ordinary type of welcome either. This welcome was accompanied by all of the "Pomp and Circumstance" the Army normally reserves for its more distinguished visitors.

The historic "quadrangle" at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., was the scene last week of an impressive ceremony dedicated to the arrival of the bugs. Lt. Gen. Robert W. Colglazier Jr., commander of the U. S. Fourth Army, was on hand to officially welcome the bugs.

This unusual event came about when Mr. Charles D. Orchard, 57, a well-known San Antonio scientist, presented the U. S. Army with a rare and comprehensive private insect collection, valued at approximately ten thousand dollars.

Mr. Orchard spent some 50 years assembling the collection, which will be turned over to the Entomology Branch of the Fourth Army Medical Laboratory which conducts studies of medically important insects.

Coral Snakes

Army entomologists first learned of the collection last fall when they were called to Orchard's residence near Fort Sam Houston to capture a deadly coral snake which had established living quarters on the patio.

"My collection was getting just too large," Orchard explained, "and having spent a good deal of time with military scientists, I knew they could put it to good use." Most of the specimens in the collection have already been identified, mounted and indexed.

Started at Eight

Orchard, from Alice, Tex., began his collection when he was only eight years old, but didn't pursue it seriously until his high school years. In 1933 he and several other enthusiasts founded the Southwest Scientific Society to broaden their knowledge in various fields of science.

The Society offered many facets of natural science to explore. Orchard chose the insect field and developed also an interest in archeology, malacology and geology.

Orchard continued to build his massive collection in the South Pacific, while serving as a civil engineer on various islands during World War II.

Included in the rare collection are flies, ants, wasps, butterflies, moths, grasshoppers, cockroaches and many other assorted arthropods tagged with locator cards from as far away as Australia and as close as the Salado Creek in San Antonio.

OC Gateways Dedicated By Gen York

In a ribbon cutting ceremony held recently at the entrance to the 5th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, two newly-constructed gateways were dedicated by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander.

The arches were constructed by the officer candidates of 54th Company over a two month period and stand as a tribute to those who have graduated from the officer candidate school and to the men who will attend it in the future.

Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, commander of the 5th Student Battalion, pointed out that each arch is lighted by two small lamps symbolizing the four lights which guide the candidate up the path to his commission. The lights represent desire, dedication, discipline and duty.

Officials Deny Seventh Army Move to RVN

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Reports that entire units of the Seventh U. S. Army will be moved to the Republic of Viet Nam after the Federal Republic of Germany elections are not true, according to Army officials.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has repeatedly stated that U. S. forces and equipment will not be diverted from Europe to Southeast Asia.

The number of Army personnel planned for Europe at the end of next June is exactly that of last June, an official said.

This does not mean that individuals completing a normal tour in Europe will not be sent to the RVN. A recently announced change in Army assignment policy provides for reassignment from a short tour area to a long tour area and vice versa.

10th Aviation Now Teaching Flight Course

The 10th Aviation Group has begun formal CV-2 Caribou training, taking over the instruction, both air and ground, previously conducted at Ft. Rucker, Ala., according to group training officials.

The first class, numbering 17, began training in the twin engine transport aircraft on August 5 and is expected to complete the course in approximately seven weeks.

All training will be conducted in the Fort Benning area and is being administered by instructor pilots from the 135th Aviation Company.

The course includes 42 hours of flight including 26 hours of contact, 12 hours of instrument instruction and four hours of tactical techniques employed in the CV-2. Ground school includes 43 hours of instruction on systems, maintenance, weight and balance, aircraft loading and types of aerial resupply.

Area airports being utilized in the course are Souther at Americus, Ga. and Callaway at LaGrange, Ga.

Post Children Begin School September 1; Registration Set for Monday and Tuesday

Registration of school children who live on the Fort Benning reservation will be conducted this Monday and Tuesday, school officials announced.

The 1965-1966 school year will open Wednesday, September 1.

"Registration will be conducted by housing area and grade between 9 a.m. and 12 noon and between 1 and 3 p.m.," they said.

Registration and school hours will be much the same as last year, officials added.

They pointed out that all schools except Patch will serve a hot lunch for 30 cents each day.

A decrease in the number of military police personnel on the post makes it necessary for school authorities to keep all children at school during the lunch period.

MPs will supervise school buildings before and after school but not during the noon hour. This is due to increased area coverage for the reduced number of post military policemen.

In the Benning Park Homes area, dependent children for the first through the fifth grades will register at Loyd School on Santa Fe Rd. and sixth through eighth grade children will register at Faith School on Running Ave., off Lumpkin Rd.

Dependent children living in other military areas will register as follows: NCO Capehart housing area, off Custer Rd. from Arrowhead Rd. and Baker St., first through sixth grades, at Loyd School.

NCO Capehart area, from McGrath, Bostrom and McGraw Sts., first through sixth grades at the New School on Custer Rd.

Custer Terrace, Battle Park, Upatoi Terrace and Officer Capehart housing areas, first through sixth grades at Wilbur School on Custer Rd.

Main Post housing area registration, except the new NCO Capehart area and quarters on Indianhead Rd. and Meehan St., first through fifth grade children, at the Edward White School on 1st Division Rd. Sixth grade children will register at Faith School.

New NCO capehart area and quarters on Indianhead Rd. and Meehan St., first through sixth grade children, at the new school on Lavoie St.

Registration for kindergarten, special classes, and seventh through the 12th grades from all housing areas will be conducted at Faith School.

The places designated for registration does not necessarily mean that a child will attend school at that location, officials said.

A child must have reached the age of five years on or before Jan. 1, 1966, to enter kindergarten and six years by that date to enter the first grade. Birth certificates will be required to enroll children in either kindergarten or the first grade, officials stated.

Parents registering new pupils are requested to bring immunization records for smallpox, DPT-diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus and polio series.

All students living on the military reservation, including Benning Park Homes, who wish to attend a public high school in Muscogee County must register on the post, even though they attended school in the county last year.

Registration will be conducted during the regularly scheduled hours on Aug. 23-24, in the Art Room at Faith School. Students who arrive at Fort Benning after these dates will be registered at the Dependents Schools Administrative Officer in Bldg. 880-A.

Muscogee County High Schools require dependent students who live on the post to obtain an approval slip from the Fort Benning dependents school officer in order to attend county high schools. This approval slip may be secured at the time of on-post registration. Birth certificates, record of promotion or grade placement, and immunization record are also necessary.

Detailed information for registration in the county schools will be published in the local papers.

Classes will begin Sept. 7 in the public high schools. There will be no charge for Fort Benning students properly registered with the post dependent schools, officials said.

Transportation will not be furnished for registration, but will be available on the first day of school, Sept. 7. Transportation schedules will be distributed at registration.

High school students will be transported to Muscogee County High Schools beginning Sept. 7. Students must obtain a bus pass from the dependents schools officer at the time of registration.

Kindergarten children should be accompanied by a parent on the first day of school, officials said. The pupils will be assigned to either a morning or afternoon session, depending on the area in which they live. Both kindergarten and first grade students should wear name tags with address and telephone number, during the first month of school, officials suggested.

All kindergarten pupils will attend Patch School. According to plans, children in the first through sixth grades will attend the school where they were registered if possible. Changes necessary to equalize sections and facilitate transportation will be announced before Sept. 1. All seventh and eighth grade students will attend Faith School.

Hours for the 1965 - 1966 school year are 9 to 11:45 a.m. or 1 to 2:45 p.m. for kindergarten; 9 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. for the first and second grades; and 8:30 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. for the third through eighth grades.

27 Scouts Hold Tour Of Prison

Twenty scouts of Fort Benning's Troop 37 participated in a two - day encampment at Andersonville, site of the historic Civil War prison, on August 14th and 15th.

During the trip, the Scouts accomplished various historical projects in cooperation with the Andersonville Development Steering Committee, a group creating a historical complex at Andersonville to serve as a memorial and tourist attraction.

The trip was part of the historic trails program of the Boy Scouts of America which is designed to create a greater appreciation for the history that surrounds America and to develop an awareness and insight into America's heritage.

Ray Carter, senior scout of Troop 37, was in charge of the trip, for which he had accumulated background material concerning the site and its history which was studied by the scouts.

The trip will help the troop earn the Historic Trails Award given to Scout units which participate in a historical activity.

The real payoff of the historic pilgrimage, according to Scoutmaster Steve Geyer, is not a badge or award but rather a growing realization of our nation's ideals.

Stevenson Stamp Due in October

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A five-cent postage stamp in memory of the late United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson will be issued at Bloomington, Ill., where he is buried.

Postmaster General John A. Gronouski said work has started on the design and expressed confidence it will be an outstanding one, reflecting the taste so well exemplified by the late ambassador and the high ideals he supported.

Plans are to issue the stamp Oct. 23, in connection with the nationwide observance of the UN's 20th anniversary Oct. 24.

Armed Forces Build-Up To Take Nearly a Year

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Addition of 340,000 personnel to the active forces will be completed in about a year, officials have revealed.

Some 300,000 will be added by July 1966 and 40,000 by October 1966. This does not mean all these will be required in the Republic of Viet Nam, it was pointed out.

Current plans call for a 125,000 - man force in Viet Nam, representing a "hole" that must be filled elsewhere. The increased strength allows for personnel in transit between assignments, training, and maintaining strengths for worldwide commitments.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara recently said the personnel ratio over the Viet Cong is three-to-one. He believes, as other U. S. officials do, this ratio is inadequate.

A specific ratio has not been given, but estimates run as high as 10-1, which officials think excessive, considering greater mobility and better equipment of U. S. - RVN forces.

Increasing U. S. forces in RVN from 75,000 to 125,000 will create a more favorable ratio balance, officials believe, saying the Joint Chiefs of Staff agreed against calling up reserves during the recent build-up.

Spokesmen point to reserves as a "perishable commodity" meaning they are called up for a year, and if not needed for several months, their full potential is not used.

The objective in RVN, as previously stated, is to convince the Viet Cong and the North Viet Nam government they cannot achieve domination over the RVN.

Ground attacks are taking heavier tolls against the Viet Cong and continued air attacks in the north reduce the flow of men and equipment

Bill Introduced in Congress To Grant Free Insurance

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Action which could provide life insurance for servicemen is moving forward on two fronts as both the Pentagon and Congress consider how to handle the problem. Some commercial insurance companies have refused to write policies for men headed for Viet Nam and one major company has written a "war clause" in its new policies which makes the coverage useless for men assigned to the war area.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd's Senate Finance Committee set hearings to consider S2127, a bill authored by Sens. Herman Talmadge, and George Smathers which would give $10,000 free life insurance to men assigned to combat areas.

The Pentagon, on the other hand, has a longer-term proposal in mind which could provide very low-cost group life insurance to men in service no matter where they are assigned.

There are a number of advantages and disadvantages to the S2127 approach. They will undoubtedly be discussed during the hearings.

For men with dependents, the present Dependents Indemnity Compensation is far better than the insurance plans. DIC pay $120 a month plus 12 per cent of the pay of the grade of the deceased serviceman. Over the average combat widow's lifetime, DIC pays far more than $10,000 to the widow and children of the serviceman.

However, unless he has indigent parents, the average unmarried military man can not provide for his parents through DIC. They get little compensation from the government when he is killed.

As the buildup in Viet Nam grows, more and more unmarried young men are going into combat. They are having a more difficult time getting life insurance and only a very few can qualify for DIC.

The free $10,000 insurance would be an advantage to them, but it has some drawbacks as well. The bill as now written does not cover men killed in stateside training accidents, for example. Furthermore, as the insurance program grows, there may be a tendency to limit DIC.

S2127's coverage would end after the man leaves the combat zone, except for those who die of injuries sustained in the combat zone.

Both the Veterans Administration and the Defense Department are expected to testify before the Byrd committee. Defense has been reviewing all the factors in the case and at press time had not established a position on the Talmadge-Smathers bill.

The Pentagon's group insurance proposal was headed for the President's cabinet-level retirement study and it is not expected to report until some time after the first of next year, but Defense could hurry action along in the face of the mounting insurance problem of Viet Nam bound men.

A Family of Nations

Barker Family Soon Becomes Dozen

BY EDWIN R. ANDREWS

"Do you accept Allen and Marjorie as your father and mother? Will you love them and obey them?"

Catherine, Nora, Charles, Faith, and James — the Alverson children — stood with John and Dale — their Korean brothers by adoption.

"I do," they answered.

The date was Pearl Harbor Day — December 7, 1963. The place was the chapel at Il San (The Mount) Orphanage, near Seoul, Korea. The occasion was the wedding of United States Army Sergeant Allen Barker and Mrs. Marjorie Alverson, a volunteer worker with the orphans of Korea.

The wedding was the event of the year for the children. Some of the orphans were entranced by the American custom of kissing the bride. Others were strangely moved at the unusual question requesting allegiance to the new family from the children to be included in it.

Still others accepted the ceremony with Oriental stoicism, their eyes on the wedding cake they had seen carried into the back of the chapel on the shoulders of six of the children. The cake was large enough — three feet high, four feet long, and two and one-half feet wide — to provide a slice for every orphan in the home.

"I wanted it larger," says Mrs. Barker, "but we had to adjust its width to the size of the narrow Korean doors."

The ceremony was unique, and it brought together two unique and useful people.

The family circle has grown since the Barkers returned to this country. A baby boy — born at Martin Army Hospital, Fort Benning, Georgia — is now nine months old.

Valued Jewel

"We named him JADE," say the Barkers, "in remembrance of the valued jewel of the East."

Ruth and Rachel, the Lumbee Indian twin girls, were brought into the family only a short time ago.

The Barkers heard that they possibly could be of help in the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board's work among the Indians around Pembroke, N.C., so they drove there to talk to those in charge. While there, they were introduced to Gladys Locklear and her nineteen-month-old twins, who needed a home: to the Barkers, this meant "our home." For that matter, the twins' mother was included in the home for a time, while she attended school in Columbus.

And much of the talk in the household now concerns the expected arrival of two more Korean boys. There is Richard, who sang "Home Sweet Home" (in Korean) at the wedding. He saw the Barker children packing to come to the United States; so he started packing too.

Sergeant and Mrs. Barker's solution to the problem was to start arrangements for him to be their child, along with David, whose superior intelligence had set him apart from the rest of the orphans in the home.

Since immigration laws limit the number of Korean adoptees to two per family, Congressman Carl D. Perkins, from Allen's district in the United States House of Representatives, has introduced a special bill permitting Richard and David to enter this country. The Barker family presently awaits completion of the official necessities with all the patience they can muster.

Once all of this is done the family circle will include twelve children, from infants to teen-agers. The ties of love have knit together one home representing two continents and three races.

Hard at Work

This is the family now, happy and hard at work on their small farm near Shiloh, Georgia, with Sgt. Barker commuting to his Army duties at Fort Benning.

But — "Whence came they, and whither do they do?"

The story begins, in a sense at least, in Somerville, New Jersey. Here Marjorie, the present Mrs. Barker, lived with her husband, a mechanical engineer, and their four children. The parents decided to strike a balance between boys and girls in their own family by adopting a Korean child.

They were in the process of acting on an appeal from Harry Holt, the Oregon farmer who gave his fortune and even his life to the task of placing Korean orphans in American homes, when they found that another child of their own was expected.

Shortly after the birth of Jimmie, Marjorie's husband died suddenly of bulbar polio.

Marjorie gave herself to the challenge of being mother and father to her children. A doctor suggested a job outside the home to prevent possible emotional complications.

With her work at the Johnson and Johnson Company, and later with the Hillsboro Township School Board, Marjorie continued her interest in Harry Holt's massive project of helping Korean orphans, and gave what she could of her income to further the work.

Marjorie felt that her work in the schools of New Jersey could be well-used in Korea, and offered her services. She was accepted on the same terms as all the rest of the participants in Harry Holt's project: if she wished to provide her own fare to Korea, and support her family there, a house would be built to shelter them.

First Work

Marjorie's work took her to Mr. Holt's hospital for babies in Seoul. Here, all that she had heard and read about the desperate plight of the fatherless and the abandoned in Korea came to life.

"Somehow," Marjorie says, "it's different when you start past a doorway on the street, hear a small infant sound and pick up the bundle yourself. You know then that you have personally saved a life."

She tells of passing along the streets in snowy weather, and seeing small children with faces and hands wrapped in newspaper against the bitter cold; of going with fellow workers to the City Baby Hall to pick among the children there for those with the best chance of survival and the least chance of bringing worse disease into their small hospital.

Isn't it awful to have to "shop" that way? But we had no choice — we could care for only a certain number," she said.

After her "apprenticeship" in Seoul, Marjorie's place of work was moved to the school at Il San, the farm Harry Holt had established for his children. On the day she was to go to this new location for the first time, a friend helped her locate a ride. The young man who offered Marjorie the ride was an Army sergeant named Allen Barker. He was going to Il San to accomplish purposes of his own — noble purposes which later were to be shared, though neither knew it then . . . Meanwhile, conversation during the ride proved interesting and revealing.

Allen Barker was a Kentuckian from Grayson, and this was his third tour of duty in Korea. He had served there first in 1950, with the 1st Cavalry Division. Even in the midst of battle and bloodshed, he had been distressed by what he saw of the sad plight of the very young and the very old of the country.

"Do Something"

"It bothered me," says Allen. "I made up my mind that when I could, I must do something about it."

The chance to help came in 1958, when he was sent back to Korea, this time to join a unit of the Korean Military Advisory Group. Here, in the north - central part of Korea, Allen's unit sponsored Chyong - Pyong — a Catholic orphanage.

Allen's interest extended beyond the orphanage, though. In partnership with the chaplain of the 1st Corps of the Republic of Korea Army, he organized classes with a triple attraction: they gave training in English, offered Bible study, and served as a prayer fellowship. His association with the Korean Officers Christian Union led to yet other fruitful friendships.

This second tour of duty, after as many extensions as the Army would permit, ended for Allen in March 1960. He was ordered to duty at Fort Meade, Maryland, and soon amazed his friends by asking how he could arrange to get back to Korea. The official answer was that two tours were enough; there could be no more.

What he could do — and did — was to submit a request for shipment to ANY overseas area. And in November 1960, orders came for him to proceed to Korea. Such are the ways of the Army — or was God's hand in this?

Despaired

This time the assignment was to the 728th Military Police Battalion, and Allen despaired of being able to work again with his beloved Chyong - Pyong Orphanage. A short visit to the institution, though, set his mind at rest, for it was in good hands and the work he had helped to start was going well.

A new interest was soon provided. Allen was given the job of locating a particular orphanage for his commanding officer, and in the search he found not only this one, but another was in truly desperate straits. Through his leadership, Allen's battalion "adopted" the orphanage and work started among the children. It was just as if he had never left Korea—until — Dale, a Korean orphan brought new and personal dimension to his work.

"I soon realized that up to then my interest, while real, had been sort of general or impersonal I wanted to help all the children. But Dale began to be — for me — the symbol of all the children. And I wanted him as a member of my own family," the sergeant recalled.

Since Allen was a bachelor, this presented problems. As always, he set out to do his part in surmounting them.

Someone suggested that he talk with Harry Holt, and arrange with him for Dale to live at Il San until some married member of Allen's family could be persuaded to take him into their home.

It was to accomplish this mission that Allen Barker was traveling from Seoul on the day in July when he and Marjorie Alverson met and had their first conversation together.

"He impressed me," says Marjorie. "He treated the Koreans he met with a genuine kindness I had seldom seen. And in telling me about his experiences with the orphans, he showed a real feeling for them that I could share."

The ride ended with the mission accomplished. Dale was to live with Marjorie's five children. As it happened, he entered the house on the same day as John, another Korean orphan, Marjorie's first choice for adoption.

Friendship and communion of interests ripened into love as Allen came more and more frequently to visit. He and Marjorie discussed their hopes and plans for working with children, until finally it was decided that these should be one hope, one plan, that these two people should be one.

And so they were married, their solemn vows echoed by seven treble voices and witnessed by the myriad bright brown eyes of Il San.

Tour Ended

When Allen's tour of duty in Korea ended in February 1964, the Barker family moved to Fort Benning, Ga.

A primary concern for both Allen and Marjorie was their own family, cramped for living space in Post quarters. And what would happen if Allen were ordered overseas again? To this problem then, they addressed themselves, confident that there was a solution — another step combining human initiative with divine guidance.

The search took them, after a time, to Shiloh, a small Georgia town some twenty-five miles from Columbus. Near here, the Hobbs family was selling their farm, an eighty-three acre tract, with a house and the usual barns and sheds. But the real estate agent had had some trouble here; at the time the Barkers arrived to talk to them, the owners felt other prospective buyers did not properly appreciate the homestead they had labored to build.

"It was our dream," says Marjorie. "We knew before we had walked through the house that this must be our home." This was the attitude the Hobbs had been seeking; they were satisfied that they had finally found the "right" people for their place.

Armor Battalion to Hold Organization Day Fete

Members of the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor, will take a day off from their normal activities next Tuesday, August 24, when they open their doors to the public for the annual Organization Day celebration scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. on the battalion parade field.

Although the day's festivities are open to the public, it is expected the celebration will have its greatest appeal with the wives and children of the men of the 69th.

Events will begin with a battalion review at 9:30 a.m. on the parade field. After the review, visitors will be invited to view a static display of equipment used in its duties. Tanks, jeeps and other armored vehicles will highlight the exhibit.

In conjunction with the static display, youngsters and adults alike will be afforded an opportunity to actually ride in the equipment on exhibit.

The 69th was constituted on July 15, 1940 and was activated the 31st of that month at Ft. Knox, Kentucky. After a number of redesignations, the 69th was assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade on September 24, 1962.

The 4th Battalion holds 16 streamers from campaigns waged in both World War II and the Korea.

Presidential Unit Citations were awarded the 69th for its actions in Saipan, Tinian, Okinawa and Wonju-Hwachon.

The 69th Armor is commanded by Lt. Col. Vincent deP Gannon with Maj. Lynwood Duke serving as executive officer.

Military Medal Designer Retires

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Miss Elizabeth Will, designer of the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Purple Heart Medal, has retired after 42 years of government service.

Miss Will was an employee of the Army's Institute of Heraldry as a Heraldic Specialist. She designed the Presidential Flag, seals for the Department of Defense and the Air Force, service coats-of-arms and various other heraldic emblems.

US Changes Announced In Viet Nam

SAIGON (AFPS) — Changes in U.S. control within the Republic of Viet-Nam's I, II and III Corps have been announced by General W. C. Westmoreland, commanding general, U.S. Military Assistance Command, Viet-Nam.

Major General Lewis W. Walt, USMC, commander, III Marine Amphibious Force, has been placed in operational control of the U. S. advisory effort in I Corps.

A newly - created Army Task Force Alpha will control U.S. ground combat forces in II and III Corps under Major General Stanley R. Larsen, USA, former deputy chief of staff for Operations, U.S. Army, Europe.

Col. Howard B. St. Clair, USA, senior I Corps advisor heading U.S. advisory detachments, will now report directly to General Walt, instead of MACV headquarters.

General Westmoreland termed the change a "streamlining move" to consolidate the U.S. effort and to facilitate U.S. and RVN operations.

The II and III Corps task force will initially include several Marine Corps officers, with General Larsen reporting directly to General Westmoreland on tactical U.S. force employment in the two-corps area.

Area AUSA Leaders To Meet This Monday

Officers and directors of the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA) will caucus over chicken and rice this Monday night, August 23, at the United Oil Farm to discuss plans for the local fall meeting and the annual meeting in October, it was announced Tuesday.

In a departure from the format of previous semi-annual meetings, the local chapter plans an outdoor barbecue next month at Victory Lodge with a demonstration of Rangers in Action as part of the program. Date of the meeting and further details will be announced later, according to AUSA officials.

The annual meeting, scheduled for the Sheraton Park Hotel in Washington, D. C., October 25-27, again will be the focal point for delegations from overseas as well as stateside chapters.

The Fort Benning chapter won the award last year as the "largest" and in previous years has brought back plaques for "best publicity program," "most active in pursuit of AUSA aims and objectives," and in 1961, its first plaque as "largest" in the national organization.

Hopes for honors this year ride on two nominations the local group has submitted for The President's Medal and two for the Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Medal.

The 11th Air Assault Division (Test) and Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard have been nominated in separate petitions as the organization, or individual, contributing most to the advancement of the United States Army during the period ending June 30, 1965.

Sgt. Maj. Lawrence E. Kennedy and Sgt. Maj. Al Spratley were each nominated for the Biddle Medal in recognition of their "contributions to the advancement of the Association of the United States Army."

World Peace Conference To Meet in Washington

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The chief justices and leading lawyers of more than 100 nations will meet here Sept. 12-18 for the Second World Conference on World Peace Through Law.

Some 2,000 delegates speaking dozens of languages, and from every culture, religion and political order in the world, will confer on ways to establish a permanent clearinghouse of ideas, programs and experiences pertinent to the extension of world peace.

According to conference sponsors, much of the friction between nations today, with minor disputes growing into major ones and even wars, could be prevented if the nations had available an expanded and more workable world court system, including regional lower courts.

Improving the role of the International Court of Justice at The Hague and establishment of area courts armed with newly written laws and procedures could remove many existing hindrances and irritants for expansion of world trade, economic development, investment, travel and communications, sponsors said.

Sergeant Decorated For Service

A sergeant in the 428th Medical Battalion has been honored for his part in saving the survivors of a hotel-bombing in Viet Nam.

Sgt. Leroy Brookshire worked in the wake of an attack in February on an enlisted men's hotel in Qui Nhon, Viet Nam, which was demolished during a Viet Cong raid.

For his efforts in aiding the survivors, Brookshire was this week presented an Army Commendation Medal along with an Air Medal for other meritorious service in Viet Nam.

He was cited for rescuing men, trapped in the ruins of the hotel. According to the citation he "worked tirelessly in the debris." For 24 hours he supervised the first aid station and administered to the trapped men.

Gen Wheeler Describes Viet Nam War Strategy

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A preponderence of military power can throw the Viet Cong off - balance and help Republic of Viet Nam and U. S. Forces retain the initiative, even if the Viet Cong run instead of fighting.

The strategy was revealed by Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, USA, in an address to the 2nd Armored Division Association at its annual reunion here.

He explained the objective will be to keep the combat tempo at such a rate that the Viet Cong will be unable to take time to recuperate or gain balance.

"They will be on the run," he said, "and one thing we have learned about guerrilla warfare is that once you have the guerrillas on the run, they run downhill to eventual defeat or, at least impotency."

Continued raids will be made on North Viet Nam and steps will be taken as necessary to restrict the infiltration of supplies and men into the south, Gen. Wheeler said.

The combination of forcing guerrillas to run and at the same time reducing their supplies and replacements provides a strategy which Gen. Wheeler said, in his opinion, gives the best assurance of military victory in South Vet Nam.

Gen McCown To Head RVN Support Force

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has named Brig. Gen. Hal D. McCown, USA, to head the newly-created Viet Nam Support Expediting Task Force. Four other military members and one of five civilians were also named.

Others assigned to the 10-man task force are: Col. William A Whitman, USN; Col. Harry Sachaklian, USAF; Lt. Col. William W. Storm, USMC; and Max O. Stewart, a civil service management analyst.

The task force will check on inventories and monitor emergency requests from Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commanding general, Military Assistance Command, Viet Nam.

Engineers Dump Junked Autos Into Mississippi

NEW YORK (AFPS) — The Army Corps of Engineers may have come up with a solution to President Johnson's drive to "junk" automobile junkyards.

In the Mississippi River, near Vicksburg, Miss., the Engineers have been piling hundreds of junked cars along four dikes jutting out into the river to help catch driftwood, debris, sand and sediment. As the muddy barrier builds up, water is diverted, thus deepening the main channel.

At some dikes the Engineers are using the bulk method of dumping the cars; in other places, the cars are cabled together to form a vertical screen. An assessment will later be made of the two methods to use them in other areas.

Unit of 29th Infantry Gets Ready To Support Florida Ranger Class

Company A of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry this week prepared their gear for a trek to North Florida where they will support a number of Ranger classes during a gruelling three weeks of activities.

The Ranger Camp recently initiated a new program for its trainees which will directly affect the support missions of the 29th. Instead of the usual agenda of seven graded problems, this mission will add four more to bring the total to eleven.

The new additions to the problem list will consist of combining the airmobile concept of movement with joint airborne and amphibious operations.

One of the highlights of the three weeks of action will be an assault on Santa Rosa Island. The Ranger candidates will be put ashore by assault boats and will then set their sights on the accomplishment of two separate missions.

Acting as the aggressor force, Company A will be bent on providing the maximum amount of harrassment to the Rangers. The trainees will be subject to day and night ambushes by Company A, thus ruling out any thoughts of rest and relaxation by the Ranger candidates.

Capt. Willard E. Golding, commanding officer, said he expects the three - week mission to provide valuable training and experience for both his troops and the Ranger candidates.

New Ruling Bars Reenlistment To Traffic Violating Soldiers

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Soldiers with a bundle of traffic tickets or caught driving while drunk can no longer reenlist in the Army without a waiver, the Army announced this week in a major change to its enlistment policies.

"Civic responsibility is as important for reenlistment as military responsibility," one official told the Army Times. The Army feels that a soldier intent on making the service a career will drive more carefully if he knows it will affect his future.

The new policy, as spelled out in change 1 to AR 601-210, requires a soldier to show a "good" traffic record before he can be reenlisted without a waiver. For example, a soldier with an accumulation of three traffic tickets within the 1 - month period prior to reenlistment must get a waiver from his commander to reenlist.

"More Than Four"

"Those who have had four or more minor traffic violations regardless of time elapsed between violations require a waiver," the regulation orders. The Army does not consider parking tickets and other non-moving traffic ordinance violations as minor traffic violations for reenlistment purposes.

No waiver is required for a soldier who has had less than three minor traffic violations within the 18 month period preceding reenlistment, the Army said.

The new Army reenlistment policy is particularly tough on soldiers with tickets for such major traffic violations as drunken driving, accidents resulting in death or injury, or for hit and run violations.

Require Waiver

The Army considers these major violations not minor violations, officials told Army Times. These types of violations are considered so serious that they require a reenlistment waiver for any single such incident.

Commissary Closes Annex For Repairs

Fort Benning commissary officials have announced that one-half of the commissary sales store will be closed for one month.

It is necessary, they said, to install new walls, ceiling and an air conditioning system.

They said the old building or the "Exit Building" will be open for business as usual and will stock the essential items from the closed section of the store.

The temporary entrance to the commissary will be opposite the main exit doors of the store, Building 108.

Officials went on to suggest commissary patrons shop the store before payday or after the fifth of the month to avoid the "payday rush."

They also announced that the main store will close for inventory on August 23 and the Custer Terrace Store will close on the 24th.

CTC Takes Post Baseball Crown

Benning Baseball Champs

Meet the Infantry Center Troop Command, the 1965 Fort Benning baseball champs who played their way to two consecutive season half victories and a 13 win, 7 loss record on their way to the crown. Kneeling (L-R) Doug Talmadge, Bill Penny, Floyd Wicker, Billy Fox, Roger Terry and Bernie Hankinson. (Standing) Ron Hodges, George Wright, Bill Booth, Carmen D'Ambrosio, Eli Amaro, Bill Nordan, Jim Mundy and coach Bill Smith.

Wicker Pitches 3-Hitter In 9-3 Romp Over TSB

By DICK MINNIG

Holding the lead from the first inning, the Infantry Center Troop Command battered The Student Brigade, 9-3, at Gowdy Field last Friday night to cop the second half championship and win the 1965 Benning baseball crown for the second year in a row.

The triumph left CTC the undisputed master of the diamond. The Troop Command edged the 428th Medical Battalion, 2-1, at Gowdy Field on June 25 to win the first half championship.

In their victory drive, CTC batters clouted 12 hits off TSB hurlers Jimmy Knight and Arlan Clark. Starter Knight was the loser, going three-and-one-third innings and giving up five runs.

Floyd Wicker, clean-up batter for CTC, also went the full nine innings on the mound for the Troop Command to get his second win of the half on a three hit performance. Wicker made only three relief appearances prior to the game.

With two away in the top of the first, Wicker socked the first pitch into left field for a double, driving in Bill Penny with CTC's first run. CTC never let go of the lead nor was TSB ever a serious threat.

CTC came up with two more runs in the second to take a 3-0 lead. Billy Fox reached first on an error and was followed by Bob Hodges and George Wright who hit singles to lead the bases. Eli Amaro then tapped a single past the mound into center field to send Fox and Hodges home.

In the fourth inning CTC batted around the order to pile five more runs into its lead and set the Benning baseball crew securely on its head.

Hodges led off the inning with an infield single and was sent to third when George Wright singled to center. Amaro then clouted a long sacrifice fly to bring Hodges home. With one away, Bill Penny smashed a double to right center scoring Wright.

At this point TSB decided to bring in Clark to relieve Knight but Clark fared no better. Bill Nordan sent Clark's first pitch to the center field fence for a standup triple driving in Penny.

Continuing the CTC scoring spree, Wicker lined a single to right sending Nordan home with the Troop Command's seventh run. Wicker came home on an error with CTC's eighth tally.

Behind by eight runs, TSB got its first score of the game in the bottom of the fourth when Thurman Woody smashed a standup triple to right and scored on a sacrifice fly by Bob Sheridan.

The brigade picked up another run in the sixth when an error by Wicker put Woody on first and a fielding blunder by Hodges allowed Woody free passage home.

Both teams got their final runs in the eighth. CTC nabbed [illegible] when Bosco Spen-

Army Marksmen Smash Records At Quantico Inter-Service Match

BY LEE LACOMBE

QUANTICO, Va. — The Army culminated a smashing performance in the sixth annual Interservice Rifle Championships here last week, with a pair of record efforts in the two big team matches.

Sgt. Ronald Turner started the soldiers off on the right foot by leading the Army to a 1-2-3 finish in the individual race for honors with a 499-54v. He was followed by SFC W. E. Vest with 499-46 and Sgt. Charles Davis with 498-55v.

The Army's Pacific entry outdistanced the star-studded service field in the Infantry Trophy Team Match with a sparkling 1275 points, eight points above the old record sent in 1964 by Army Europe.

On the last day of competition Army outlasted a tenacious Air Force squad to take the interservice team championship with a 10-man score of 2,474-259v, a solid seven points above the record set in 1961 by the Army. The Air Force finished with 2463.

Firing members of the championship team which was coached by SFC Kenneth Ravencraft and SFC Fernando Muniz were Sgt. Charles Davis, Sgt. Ronald Turner, Sgt. Bill Petersen, Capt. Paul Renne, SFC Leonard Willis, SFC James McQuien, SFC Alfred Falcon, Sgt. Arpail Gapol, Sgt. Abelardo Lopez and SSgt. Norman Skarpness.

Aslin became a shareholder of the Army Rifle Division record of the same match when he tied the Marines' SSgt. W. B. Dobbi.

Price fired a perfect 100 with 44vs and Aslin and Dobbie posted 100 with 20vs.

Sgt. Noah Bailey smashed a pair of marks when he captured the individual Long Range title with a 200-31v and the Service Rifle Division of the 1,000 yard match with a 100-16v. Davis tied another record in the Any Rifle Long Range Aggregate when he won the match with a 200-39v and also took the Any Rifle Division of the 1,000 yard event with a 100-19v.

First Lt. Carl Guenther gave the Army another victory when he placed first in the standing 200 Yard Match with a 100-10v.

HOW THE WEST WAS WON — Billed as the mightiest adventure ever filmed, it stars James Stewart, Debbie Reynolds, Gregory Peck, Carroll Baker and John Wayne. The show features a large and famous cast of cameo players in addition to the regulars. It's an adventure about the land of Daniel Boone, Abraham Lincoln, Lewis and Clark, Clay and Webster, Buffalo Bill Cody and Wild Bill Hickok, The Pony Express, Billy the Kid, Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson and Pat Garrett.

DINGAKA — Billed as "exciting adventure — drama in color," this one stars Stanley Baker and Juliet Prowse. Baker portrays an embittered South African society lawyer assigned to defend a native tribesman against a charge of attempted murder. Juliet Prowse is the wife who suffers from her husband's dedication to success.

THE CURSE OF THE FLY — Third in the "FLY" series of science-thrillers, continues with the activities of the Delambre family, which has been trying to conquer the fourth dimension for three generations. Now, with Brian Donlevy as head of the scientists, their experiments are finally crowned with success.

UP FROM THE BEACH — A story of death, waste and absurdity in stark human terms. Set against the background of the massive Normandy invasion by the Allies in June 1944, the story takes place one day after D-Day. Cliff Robertson plays U. S. Army sergeant responsible for the safety of 23 French civilians who are caught between the opposing gunfire. His orders are to move the people from the village of Verville to the beach, where they will be evacuated to England. Red Buttons, a private, is ordered to guard a captured German major, Marius Goring, commandant of the village. "Beach" is based on the novel by George Barr and stars Cliff Robertson, Red Buttons, Irena Demick and James Robertson Justice.

INDIAN PAINT — Based on the best - seller by Glenn Balch, it is basically the story of an Indian boy, the son of the chief of the peace-loving Arikara tribe, and of his almost heroic efforts to raise a colt. To the boy, the colt means more than life itself. It stars Johnny Crawford and Jay Silverheels.

Visual Impact Set for Soldiers Before Labor Day

What happens to an automobile crashing into a stationary object at 80 miles per hour will be graphically illustrated at Fort Benning's Sightseeing Field, Thursday, Sept. 2 at 10 a. m. and 2 p.m.

A car donated by the Property Disposal Office will be attached to a helicopter, lifted 215 feet and dropped to the ground. The 215-foot fall has been calculated by officials of the Fort Benning Safety Office to simulate an 80 mph crash into a stationary object.

The demonstration is intended to warn those taking to the highway over the Labor Day weekend holiday.

Military Teenagers Overseas Cause Less Trouble Than American Peers

From the Army Times

FRANKFURT, Germany—Teen - age military dependents in Europe behave like angels in comparison to their "crime-ridden" U. S. counterparts, according to Army and Air Force police officials. The latest FBI annual crime report said that nearly half the persons arrested for serious crime in the U. S. last year were under 18.

In the U. S., percentages of youth arrests in the seven categories of serious crime were: homicide, 7.7; forcible rape, 18.8; robbery, 27.6; aggravated assault, 14.8; burglary, 51.4; larceny, 54; and car theft, 64.4.

In contrast to rising crime figures among stateside teenagers, the "crime" rate among military dependents in Europe is so low that "We don't even keep statistics on them," according to Brig. Gen. Harley L. Moore Jr., USAREUR Provost Marshal.

Minor Incidents

Air Force police say the same thing. "We have so little teen-age crime that even relatively minor incidents stand out," said Col. William W. Overton, chief of Security & Law Enforcement, USAFE.

"We have no serious crime problem among dependent youths," Overton said. "We have what amounts to small family problems."

Overton explained that in military communities, everything comes to the attention of everybody. "If a teenager has an argument with a cab driver, everybody in the housing area knows about it the next morning," he said.

"The trend throughout the U. S. of ever-higher crime among teen-agers is not reflected among teenager dependents or very young soldiers over here," Moore said.

"We have a different brand of kids in the military from those in civilian life," Moore pointed out. "Their old man has his thumb on them all the time."

Overseas military communities lack the U. S. slums and broken homes that leave youngsters wandering free to commit serious crimes, Moore feels.

"And we have a tremendous advantage," he added, "in that we ship out families that can't control their kids."

Running down the FBI serious crime list, Moore gave a negative to rapes, murders, robberies. Even car thefts, a serious problem in the U. S., are almost unknown among Army teenagers in Europe.

There are practically no crimes of violence committed by American teen-agers overseas," Moore pointed out.

Over in Wiesbaden, Overton said, he had a complaint in the past month about a teenager driving around in circles and raising dust. "That was about the most serious teen - age incident that week," he said.

Discipline

Military families live by a system of discipline and this rubs off on the offspring, Overton said. "Our communities here can't be compared to civilian communities in the U.S."

Publicity given to statside youth crime makes European commanders conscious of problems before they can arise, Overton said. He connected the lack of teen-age crime problem in Europe directly to the large-scale teen-age activity programs that keeps military youngsters too busy to allow them to get into serious trouble.

In addition to the difficulty of committing crimes in the military housing area, Overton said that foreign police cooperate with military police in keeping an eye on American teen - agers. "German cops tell us everything," he said.

Infantry Board Chief Awarded Legion of Merit

Col. James I. Muir Jr., president of the Infantry Board at Fort Benning, Tuesday, August 10, was awarded the Legion of Merit.

Muir came to Fort Benning after serving as acting director for strategic plans and policies, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations, Department of the Army. He was cited for exceptionally meritorious service while in that assignment from February 1963 to June 1965.

The citation read in part:

"Col. Muir's broad professional knowledge, astute analysis of politico - military problems, and sound recommendations were of intrinsic value to the director, to the deputy chief of staff for military operations, and to the chief of staff in the formulation of strategic concepts, plans and policies of great significance to the national defense effort."

The medal was pinned on the colonel by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commanding general, with Muir's wife, Lucile, and son, Charles, looking on.

Night Patrol Costs Money

DA NANG, RVN (AFPS) — Private First Class Arthur W. Wolf, serving with the Third Marine Division here, found his last patrol to be expensive.

On payday night, before he was called out to go on patrol, PFC Wolf tucked five $20 bills away in his sock.

When he remembered his hidden money, he was waist deep in mud. Removing his boot, he found the wet shreds of what had been $100. For the past few days he has been trying to find out if Purple Hearts are awarded for "wounded wallets."

The Fort Benning Little Theatre will stage Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" for the 1965 Third US Army Tournament of Plays to be held in November. In announcing the selection, FBLT president Les Muchmore said, "The concensus of the group is that with this drama we will certainly equal if not surpass the quality of our two previous competition plays, both of which were award winners."

FBLT won best production, director and actor for "The Zoo Story" in 1963; and best production, actor, set design and ten other awards for "The Caretaker" in 1964.

Wes Carr

Director for "The Glass Menagerie" will be Wes Carr, who noted that this year, FBLT will compete for the first time for best actress and supporting actress awards; the two previous FBLT entries in the Tournament had all-male casts.

The Third US Army Tournament of Plays includes productions by major installations throughout the Third Army area. All plays are viewed by a travelling panel of judges. Fifteen categories of participation in play production are eligible for awards (in money to the Central Post Fund of the winning installation and statuettes to individuals).

Williams' First

"The Glass Menagerie," Williams' first Broadway play, is somewhat autobiographical. The cast includes the legendary Amanda Wingfield; her poet son Tom (a facsimile of the playwright); her crippled daughter Laura, who collects glass animals; and a gentleman caller, who is "the long delayed but always expected something that we live for."

Open tryouts for all four roles will be held September 12 and 13 in the Playhouse on Main Post, phone 545-2992. Prior membership in the Little Theater is not required of those wishing to read for parts. Vacancies on the technical crew (also eligible for tournament awards) will be filled during the tryouts.

Rehearsals of the competition play will begin in October after the close of FBLT's season opener, "The Hostage." Production of "The Glass Menagerie" will be 10-14 November, with judging on the final performance.

Now it surely makes sense to be a "one toothpaste family" with Colgate even if you are the whole family.

Colgate Toothpaste is ideal for every member of your family. Compared with the well known fluoride brand, Colgate with Gardol was clinically tested, clinically confirmed unsurpassed in reducing new cavities. Even among children at the most cavity-prone age!* What wonderful reassurance for families everywhere.

What's more, everyone will enjoy that clean Colgate taste. Encourages brushing as your dentist recommends. So refreshing for your breath, too. It stops mouth odor instantly for most people. Be a one toothpaste family. Choose Colgate, the one that does it all.

Don't let service life rumple your hair

Keep that just-combed natural look

Service life is no soft life for your hair. It takes an awful beating in the service from sun, wind and water. That's why so many servicemen use 'Vaseline' Hair Tonics. They're especially formulated to fight dryness, the dryness that comes because you can lose natural hair oil every day. 'Vaseline' Hair Tonics take the place of natural hair oils, work like natural hair oils to give your hair a healthy look, keep you looking naturally well groomed. Don't let dry hair catch you offguard. Take your pick of these three 'Vaseline' Hair Tonics at the PX today!

'Vaseline' Hair Tonic ... the modern hair tonic, clear, clean ... a man's choice in grooming.

'Vaseline' Cream Hair Tonic keeps hair in place without stiffness ... gives you that just-combed look.

September Pay Raise Now Official

Smiling WAF Is Angel To Viet-Bound Troopers

BY MARV WOLF

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Not many of the thousand-odd sky troopers of the 1st Cavalry Division's advance party have failed to notice the pert smile of the WAF who brightens the passenger service desk here.

Bound for more serious tasks in Viet Nam, as the vanguard of the divisional force, the troopers couldn't help notice Airman Third Class Connie Manies as she went about assisting transient servicemen who have more than 700 inquiries for her daily.

Connie, who hails from Muskegon, Mich. takes it all in her stride — even the fellows who, lacking any official reason to approach her, will make one up such as "When does the next bus leave for Hickam?"

Some two-thousand overwater miles separate Travis from Hickam Field, Hawaii. Connie takes it all in stride and returns the answer in kind.

She seems to realize that for the many outgoing troops who pass her desk each day, some bound for the war in Viet Nam, she may very well symbolize part of what soldiers are fighting for over there.

Connie claims she enlisted in the WAF in August 1964 "to broaden her sense of human relations."

At 19, she prefers straightening out the myriad problems for the traveling serviceman to baby sitting, car - hop waitressing or any of the things most girls her age do.

Soldiers to Feel the Boost In Next Month's Pay Line

BY JIM BAKER

President Johnson last week put his signature on the Military Pay Raise Bill and Fort Benning's soldiers will feel the effects of the raise in the pay line September 30.

Aside from the general 11 per cent raise for enlisted soldiers with more than two years in the Army and six per cent for officers, soldiers with less than two will get as much as 22 per cent in the way of a raise.

Officers with less than two years of service will get 22 per cent and enlisted men in the same time-in-service category will get a 17 per cent increase in pay at the pay table September 30, under the terms of the new pay law

Less Publicized

Some of the less publicized features of the pay bill as President Johnson signed it into law include: 4.5 per cent raises for retired personnel, a raise in combat pay from the present $55 to $65, raises in reenlistment bonuses by as much as four times for certain enlisted men, provision for free mailing privileges from Viet Nam, and the requirement for an annual review of the military pay structure.

The variable reenlistment bonus provided in the new law will go to some 19,000 men this year at a cost of almost $22 million.

The law says the Secretary of Defense can designate critical skills for which those reenlisting for the first time can get up to five times the present bonus. Maximum amounts would range from $4320 to $5232 for a four year enlistment up to pay grade E-5 for over four years of service. For six-year reenlistments, they could range as

Dislocation Allowance Tax Fought

Fort Benning soldiers who have been "coming up short" on their dislocation allowance since July 28 can take heart that it is going to a good cause—the Internal Revenue Service has declared it is taxable income.

Fort Benning finance officials say the dislocation allowance is paid a married man upon permanent change of station and it amounts to one month's quarters allowance.

Since July 28, the Finance Office has been withholding 14 per cent of the dislocation allowance as income tax.

There is still hope that the Internal Revenue Department's ruling will be reversed. It has started another battle raging on Capitol Hill, according to unofficial sources.

The Department of Defense is trying to get the ruling reversed, saying the special allowance is to help defray the cost of permanent change of station moves and should not be included in gross income, which the IRS declares it to be.

Rep. Harry Porter, D-Va., introduced a bill, HR 5293, which would mean a reprieve from the ruling, making dislocation allowances payable as an "allowance of quarters" on permanent change of station.

Two New Schools Mark Opening Sept. 1

Two new dependents' schools under construction this summer will be ready for occupancy when the fall term opens Sept. 1, officials said this week.

Yet to be officially named, they are located on Custer Road and Lavoie Street.

Each with 21 classrooms, the educational plants include libraries and multi-purpose rooms used as auditoriums, gymnasiums and cafeterias.

Principal of the school on Lavoie is Mrs. Mary H. Sherrick. She will oversee a faculty of 17 teachers.

The school on Custer Road will have as principal, a recent addition to the administrative staff, Jack L. Mahon. A faculty of 20 or 21 teachers is planned, according to school officials

Patch School — the first permanent school on Post—has 13 classrooms, a faculty of 14, an auditorium and a library. Mrs. Mildred Carter is principal.

Wilbur School was built in 1950 with additions completed in 1955. There are 14 classrooms, a faculty of 17 teachers, a library and a multi-purpose room. Principal is Rupert C. Nunally.

Faith School has 30 classrooms. Other facilities include a library, cafeteria, multipurpose room, areas for industrial arts, home economics, science, art and music. Ralph R. Toole is principal and George C. Nix is assistant principal of a total of 30 teachers.

Loyd School has 23 classrooms, a library and a multi-purpose room. M. Todd Yates heads a faculty of 23.

Edward A White School has 16 teachers for 16 classrooms, a library, and a multi-purpose room.

General York Sees 197th Infantry on Official Visit

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York took his first official look at the workings of the 197th Infantry Brigade last week.

Accompanied by brigade commander Col. Jacob Riley Jr, the general set a rapid pace as he hop-scotched from one unit of the 197th to another pausing intermittently to check equipment, offer a suggestion, or quiz personnel on their responsibilities.

Gen. York was greeted by Company C, the official honor guard company of the 197th in a traditional ramp ceremony. After a short introduction to the brigade's corps of officers, the general proceeded to the office of Col. Riley where he was briefed on the operations of the 197th.

After the discussion session, he hustled into his planned itinerary of visits with an inspection of the barracks, mess hall, supply room and recreational facilities of Headquarters Company of the 29th Infantry.

Attracting specific comment from the general was the employment of the Army's emergency medical kit which can provide first-aid for as many as 150 men in time of nuclear attack. First Lt. David J. Wright, mortar platoon leader, also explained the security system used to protect the kits from misuse.

Stopping for a quick cup of coffee in the Headquarters mess hall, which recently received the brigade's annual "Best Mess" award, Gen. York and his party then proceeded to the 26th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon where PSgt. Harvey Parrish explained the platoon's duties and led the touring party through the 26th's kennels, hospital and feeding facilities.

The pay raise which will cost well over a billion dollars a year is a culmination of eight months of effort by chairman L. Mendel Rivers of the House Armed Services Committee. At the beginning of Congress last January, Rivers began pressing for a pay raise for the uniformed services. Last spring he introduced a bill which became the basis for the new pay raise despite a bill supported by the Administration which called for raises averaging half as much as the new increases.

Unanimously Approved

The result was a bill unanimously approved by the House to raise military pay an average of 10.6 per cent.

The 10.6 house bill was changed in the Senate last week when the senators threw out selective increases for each rank and grade, and substituted an across-the-board 11 per cent and 6 per cent raise for enlisted men and officers. However, the senators accepted the House figures for officers and men with less than two years' service.

The senators also tacked on increased retirement pay and combat pay. After Senate passage, Rep. Rivers decided that instead of asking for a conference to compromise the differences in the two bills, he was going to ask the House to simply accept the Senate bill. And that is what happened by a voice vote.

The new bill becomes law on the first day of the month after the President signs it which means an effective date of September 1.

Heliborne Padre Works as Medic In Viet Nam

DA NANG, RVN (AFPS) — Lieutenant Commander Hugh F. Lecky, Chaplain Corps, USN, has the name of "Heli Padre," given to him by the men of the Marine Aircraft Group (MAG)-16 here, because he spends most of his time on helicopter missions.

He accompanies helicopter crews on airborne assault strikes and medical evacuations, carrying his chaplain's kit on his left hip, a corpsman's bag on his beltline and faith in his heart. These are his only weapons.

Lecky, a former enlisted hospital corpsman, was the first Navy chaplain to be wounded in action in the Republic of Viet Nam. This occurred while the Protestant chaplain was administering first aid to wounded RVN soldiers and civilians. Fragments of a Viet Cong mortar round hit his right leg. He stopped long enough to dress his own wound, then continued to aid the others.

The "Heli Padre" has been on more than 150 missions and hundreds of U. S. Marines and RVN soldiers have been comforted and treated by him.

Arty Battalion Finishes 3-Day Field Problem

After being assigned to the 11th Air Assault Division, Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber's "Little John" battalion is now "back down to earth."

The 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery recently completed a three day field problem on the Fort Benning reservation.

Extensive training as a wheeled vehicle unit is presently underway and the bulk of the recently concluded field exercise centered around the problems pertaining to vehicular movement and control. A two squad aggressor force—led by Capt. Loyal G. Hightower Jr., the battalion liaison officer—added realism.

This exercise was the first the battalion will undergo in preparation for its annual training test to be held early this fall.

Soldier's Medicare: Some Answers

A few weeks ago The Bayonet published a detailed chart showing what medical care is available at civilian sources and what the government pays and what the service member pays.

There has been much recent discussion about the Dependents' Medicare Act since so many dependents reside in the Fort Benning area.

This brings to mind three important questions:

What dependents are eligible for treatment in civilian facilities?

What is the difference between dependents residing with their sponsor; and those residing apart from their sponsors?

What type of care is authorized?

In answer to the first question it is simply that only the wife, dependent husband, and children of members of the uniformed services on extended active duty are eligible for treatment in civilian hospitals at government expense.

To answer the second question, dependents residing apart from their sponsor may choose between civilian medical facilities and those of the armed forces. The important thing for dependents to remember here is that they must have a Dependent ID Card (DD 1173) and must inquire of the civilian hospital if they participate in the Dependents' Medicare Program.

Dependents residing with their sponsors who desire medical care at government expense must contact a uniformed service authority to determine whether the required care can be provided in a nearby uniformed service medical facility. If it cannot be provided, the dependent must obtain a "Nonavailability Statement" from the appropriate service authority in order to have authorized care from civilian sources paid for by the government.

The answer to the third question is that only certain types of care are authorized under the present provisions of the Dependents' Medicare Program.

Types of care authorized include:

Outpatient care: obstetrical and maternity care; care of infant born outside a hospital; emergency care for injuries; before and after hospitalization tests and procedures; and X-ray and radioisotope therapy.

Inpatient care: acute medical conditions; contagious diseases; most surgical conditions; and acute emotional disorders.

Certain types of care are not authorized. These are postpartum care of newborn infants on an outpatient basis; chronic diseases; domiciliary care; ambulance service; prosthetic devices and other medical supports or aids; certain surgical care (cosmetics surgery, removal of tattoes); speech and child guidance therapy; and routine outpatient care.

It should also be noted the government will not pay for medications dispensed or prescribed by a physician on an outpatient basis and procured by the dependent or sponsor from civilian sources.

Physicians furnishing authorized outpatient care to dependents may include in their bill the cost to them of the drugs they administer by injection. Medication furnished by a hospital to a dependent during hospitalization is included in the hospital bill.

'The Point of the Spear'

Letter Typifies

Last week The Bayonet published Mrs. Aubrey Spurlock's reaction to her husband going to war for the third time.

In her letter Mrs. Spurlock said essentially that she doesn't need any sympathy because she recognizes that her husband has a job to do in Viet Nam. She added that she recognizes that she also has a job to do in being a good wife and mother while her husband is away again. She finished the letter with a poem which reflected her feelings on the subject.

This was a most moving letter. Simply stated, it personifies the spirit which has made America great.

Here is a woman whose husband is going to war once more but who refuses to smother herself in self-pity. Here is a woman who has again "risen to the occasion" when her husband was called upon to help combat aggression for the third time.

What a refreshing contrast this is to the so called pacifists who have tried to block our troop trains; the demonstrators who have picketed against the U. S. role in Viet Nam; and the destructive riots in some parts of our country.

Many demonstrators against U. S. involvement in Viet Nam would do well to turn the pages of history to see that, if communism aggression is not stopped in Viet Nam now, it will be but a matter of time (and probably only a very short period of time) before we are resisting the communist onslaught in other parts of the world.

As General Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff recently said, "Should we give up in Viet Nam, there is no question that communist expansionism would be encouraged and pressure on the remainder of the area (Southeast Asia) greatly increased.

"Unless we discard our objective of containing communist aggression, defeat in South Viet Nam will force us to draw a new line somewhere in Southeast Asia and try to defend that. This would be most difficult. We would wind up, and probably rather quickly, facing the very same situation we face today in Viet Nam, only with weakened morale and political uncertainty on the part of those being supported, plus a much less defensible position, militarily speaking."

No matter how we feel individually, all of us would do well to examine Mrs. Spurlock's letter for an outstanding example of one American's reaction to her loved one's participation in the awesome struggle against totalitarianism. It is indeed a true example of patriotism.

An Everyday Affair; Highway Safety

For practically every major holiday period in the U. S., there are widespread safety campaigns designed to remind people to drive carefully and save lives on our nation's highways.

These are commendable efforts and undoubtedly result in making many people think twice about how they drive during holiday periods. Even though holiday death rates are often alarmingly high, there can be no doubt about the effectiveness of these safety campaigns when measured in the light of many more vehicles and thousands more people on the road each year.

Safety, however, is not a subject to be relegated only to holiday periods as demonstrated by a recent Saturday-Sunday weekend period in Georgia which took more lives than the 4th of July holiday break. What this proves again is that safety is an everyday affair. . . that one must practice safe driving habits all the time . . . and that one must drive defensively whenever he gets behind the wheel.

The moral of this story is an obviously simple one. Drive carefully all the time, be safety conscious continually and drive safely today and everyday so that you and yours may live to drive tomorrow.

The Judge Says . . .

Contracts are extremely important when purchasing an automobile.

In auto installment contracts, dealers usually add a substantial sum for "Credit Risk." This type of contract is called "Time Price Differential" and the contract is designed to show the CASH PRICE at the top and to hide the "Time Price" later on in the contract.

In other words, when discussing the price of a car with a dealer, you discuss cash price. If you pay cash you pay the price he agreed to accept. However, if you cannot pay the full cash price, the time price for this same automobile can be several hundred dollars higher.

This "time price differential" bears no relation to the cash price and is not governed by Usury Statutes.

These contracts are plainly marked "Time Price" if you will only take the trouble to look. You will recognize them by the emphasis on the CASH PRICE, then the downpayment is listed, then the TIME PRICE follows, usually as 24 payments of $39.93 each, etc.

These amounts usually are not multiplied out on the face of the contract and are not easily computed mentally.

All the blanks on the contract should be filled in or lined out, and the total amount computed, before signing.

Draft Age Now Lower

Washington (AFPS) — Doubling draft calls will place a greater load on examining and induction stations and the Army will have younger men in the ranks than last year, said Selective Service director Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

By law, selective service can take all qualified persons between the ages 18½-26. The policy is to take older persons first, then work down to the younger ones.

In future months, more 20-year-olds may be taken.

Draft calls have an impact on the enlistment rate, the general explained, citing figures for the past 20 years which show enlistments increase about 60 days after newspaper notices of increased draft quotas.

Married men and students are not exempt from the draft, Gen. Hershey explained. They are still classified as available, but the policy is to defer them until all single men have been selected.

Men of 1st Inf Bn Give Most Blood To Red Cross

The men of the 1st Infantry Battalion (Provisional) recently proved to be the "bloodiest" in the 2nd Control Command.

At a blood donor clinic last week they were assigned a quota of 70 pints of blood. The men of the battalion under the leadership of Sgt. Maj. Calvin C. Wallis and 1st Sgts. Elmo Smallwood, Herbert Pennington and George McGee went over their quota by amassing a total of 109 pints of blood.

According to unofficial sources, the Infantry unit was the only one in Control Command to overstep its quota.

Red Cross field representative Melvin Ensley turned out early this week to congratulate and thank the men of the battalion for their zeal and cooperation in making the drive "a success."

Television Program To Treat Viet Nam

Army officials this week suggested that soldiers watch the television program "The Agony of Viet Nam," to be aired Sunday on Channel Nine at 5 p.m.

They described the program as an incisive probe into the war and U. S. involvement there.

The show deals with an examination of the country and its people, the face of the enemy, the background and history of the conflict there and the issue of America's increased involvement in the war.

BONDS INCREASE

Washington (AFPS)—Public holdings of Series E and H Savings Bonds gained $100 million last month, the U.S. Treasury Department has reported.

Sales during July represented a three per cent increase over the same month last year, while redemptions at cost price were 1½ per cent above last year's figure.

COOKOUT AID

Outdoor cooks can always use a silent partner. A handy one is a roll of double layer paper towels.

Just fasten a towel holder to the side of your garage, a wall near your patio or the end of a picnic table. That way, your towels are right where you need them for quick wipe-up jobs or handling hot or greasy forks, skewers, and spatulas.

HISTORY IN THE MAKING . . . The first paratroopers ever to make a drop from a jet aircraft jumped from a C-141 jet transport last week at Fort Bragg, N.C. The new jet is capable of carrying 125 paratroopers at one time.

Fort Bragg Site of First Para-Drop From 'Starlifter' Jet Aircraft

Special to The Bayonet

FORT BRAGG, N. C. — A new chapter in the history of airborne operations was opened August 16 as the first static - line jump from a jet powered aircraft took place over Ft. Bragg's Sicily drop zone.

The huge Lockheed-Georgia C141 is the ultimate aircraft now in operation for transporting men and material.

The first man to exit the new plane was Col. Joseph Ryneska, president of the Airborne, Electronics, and Special Warfare Board, an organization instrumental in the development of the Starlifter. The board, in conjunction with the U. S. Air Force, was responsible for testing the airdrop and air delivery phases of the C-141.

Col. Ryneska and MSgt. Morris R. Swan, the chief test and maintenance NCO for the project, were presented with a small statue naming them the first officer and enlisted man to make the "jet" jump.

Among the jumpers on the historic flight were Maj. Gen. Joe S. Lawrie, commanding general, 82nd Airborne Division, XVIII Airborne Corps and Ft. Bragg, and members of the Airborne, Electronics and Special Warfare Board and invited guests. A total of 81 men jumped from the plane during its five passes over the sandy Sicily drop zone.

The C-141-Starlifter, one of the world's largest planes, is the first basically military orientated plane designed to meet the same structural criteria required by Civil Air Regulations and is licensed by the Federal Aviation Agency for commercial usage.

The primary mission of the Starlifter is to shorten the closing time between objectives and to deliver more men and equipment than has ever before been possible.

The Starlifter, with its maximum cruise speed of over 450 knots, can carry more than 100 completely equipped combat-ready paratroopers. Comparisons with older aircraft show a great advantage in every respect.

The Honorary Jumpmaster for the jump was Brig. Gen. Joseph Stilwell, commanding general, U. S. Army John F. Kennedy Center for Special Warfare (Airborne).

Army personnel from Fort Campbell, Ky., Fort Lewis, Wash., and Fort Hood, Texas, as well as Fort Bragg troops are among those who are taking part in the field tests of the "Starlifter," the first jet transport to be designed for use in parachute drops.

Tests are being conducted at many posts throughout the United States and are expected to continue for six months.

Purpose of the tests is to ascertain the time required to load and unload the aircraft, to judge the loss of human effectiveness as a result of extended flights and to test sanitation and heating facilities for troops.

The tolerability of the noise level in cargo compartments, the adequacy of emergency procedures and effectiveness of the unit loading plan will also be examined.

Scheduled is a five-hour test aloft, involving 120 troops, including serving a full course meal to determine the problems of feeding so many men in flight.

LAST SHIP LAUNCHED

New York (AFPS) — The last ship to be built at the 164-year-old New York Naval Shipyard, Brooklyn, was launched Aug. 14. The ship is the amphibious transport dock USS Duluth.

The shipyard is scheduled to be closed next year.

Former Ambassador Speaks

US Goals Should Deter Viet Cong

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A four - pronged United States objective in Viet Nam has caused problems for the Hanoi government which should deter them in their aggression against the Republic of Viet Nam.

This view was presented by former U. S. Ambassador to RVN Maxwell D. Taylor and General Earle G. Wheeler, Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, during a televised interview.

Neither official predicted utter defeat for the Viet Cong, but they said they would rather be sitting in Washington with their problems than sitting in Hanoi facing the problems of that government.

The U. S. objective, it was pointed out, is to: (1) strengthen ground forces by helping build up RVN forces and adding whatever is required of U. S forces to blunt and bloody the Viet Cong; (2) simultanously conduct the air campaign against North Viet Nam, convincing Hanoi that theirs is a losing operation; (3) assist the RVN to achieve internal stability; and (4) to maintain the open clear position that the United States is ready to sit down and talk with any sincere peace searcher.

The over - riding problems facing Hanoi were explained as: how to offset the American commitment, which they now see is unlimited; how to limit devastation to their homeland; and how to accomplish the former two without inviting the traditional hated enemy of both the South and North Vietnamese, Red China, into Viet Nam.

General Wheeler said there are probably Chinese advisors and Soviet technicians in North Viet Nam, but no Chinese advisors have been seen in the RVN.

Nation to Honor Polish-American On October 11

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Johnson has designated Oct. 11 as General Pulaski Memorial Day in commemoration of the 186th anniversary of the Polish patriot's death from wounds received while leading a cavalry charge in the siege of Savannah, Ga., during the American war of independence.

Count Casimir Pulaski served in the Polish army and later joined his father and brothers in the rebellion to free his country from Russian control in the early 1770s. His efforts failed and he fled to Turkey. He later met Benjamin Franklin who enlisted his aid for the Americans in the Revolutionary War.

The Count joined George Washington's forces at Philadelphia in 1777 and distinguished himself at Brandywine for which he was promoted to brigadier general. He later organized an independent cavalry force (Pulaski's Legion) and was serving with this group when he died.

Infantry Agency Hosts Conference On Soldier's Protective Clothing

Protective clothing for the combat soldier of the future was the subject of a conference hosted by Fort Benning's Infantry Agency last week.

Titled "Mandrake Root," the study gave members of the Combat Developments Command's Infantry Agency a look at the latest testing in the field of protective clothing for the infantry soldier.

Col. N. I. Shapira of Combat Developments introduced the study and briefed Agency members on the objectives of the "Mandrake" study.

Mr. B. L. Karpel of Combat Development's Chemical Research and Development Laboratories and Mr. A. J. McQuade of the US Army Laboratories at Natick, Mass. outlined the present status of the different types of clothing now under development.

They explained there are two basic types presently being studied.

The first is an impregnated liner worn under the soldier's field uniform which would protect him from the effects of chemical warfare. This liner has already been accepted and is scheduled for early procurement according to officials.

The second type of protective outfit under development was explained as an "expendable protective overgarment using charcoal impregnated urethane foam, laminated to a textile material to form a two-piece garment."

According to study conference spokesmen, both the types of clothing require soldiers to wear protective masks, gloves, hoods and socks.

The study also outlined the work that is being carried out on a type of uniform similar to the ones worn by the nation's astronauts while in outer space.

The uniform would keep the soldier's body temperature at a constant level whether he were at the North Pole or in the steaming jungles, officials explained.

Marine Corps And Navy Extend Tours

Washington (AFPS)—Regular Navy and Marine enlisted personnel will receive an involuntary extension for a period of four months following normal expiration of their enlistments, the Secretary of the Navy has announced.

The extension affects Marines whose enlistment expires Aug. 20 or later. Navy retentions will become effective for all those enlistments expiring Sept. 15 or later.

Those Navy personnel who voluntarily extended in response to Secretary Nitze's request last May will be given credit for the duration of their voluntary extension.

Voluntary retirement for regular Navy and Marine Corps officers may be withheld for 12 months. Similarly, regular officers' request to resign may also be withheld but will not be deferred more than one year. Reserve officers on active duty and involuntary retirements will not be affected.

Personal hardships will be taken into consideration.

New Bills Would Impose Penalties For Threats to Service Families

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — A bill calling for fines up to $10,000 and 15 years imprisonment for anyone sending harassing or threatening communications to service members or their families has been introduced by Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D.-Conn.

The bill, S.2351, would amend Chapter 115, Title 18, U. S. Code, adding a section titled "Subversive communications to members of the Armed Forces or their families."

The bill has been referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Dodd names recent incidents of such harassment and placed them on a par with treason. He said there is absolutely no doubt in his mind that the incidents are part of the communist conspiracy in this country. Their purpose, he said, is to undermine the morale of American forces in Viet Nam.

The proposed legislation covers service members and their families during wartime or in military operations abroad, including the familes of deceased service personnel.

Specifically, the bill guards against threatened physical harm or abuse because of military service rendered or to be rendered by service personnel.

Further support has come from Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher, D.-N.J., who has introduced a bill in the House making it a federal crime to use any communication method to threaten or harass American servicemen or their families.

Rep. Gallagher drew attention to malicious and vulgar messages ridiculing a serviceman killed in the Republic of Viet Nam.

Labor Groups Lead in Tsar's Downfall

Editor's note: Part three of the Bayonet's treatment of Communism is a continuation of a study of the history of its rise. It is based on the book, "Two Ways of Life" by William Ebenstein, professor of Political Science at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

While workers in tsarist Russia could not express their discontent as openly as could workers under a democratic government, they were nevertheless able to engage, to a limited extent, in political activity. Under the tsar free labor unions were formed around 1900; some were organized by social reformers, others by Socialists, and others by radical Leftists.

About the same time, many radical newspapers and magazines — ranging in the political spectrum from Leninist communism to Western constitutionalism—made their appearance. Pravda, the official communist paper today, was started in 1912. While it and other radical publications were subjected to harassment and persecution by the government (such as occasional fines, or jail sentences for stubborn writers), the fact remains that anti-government publications were allowed to circulate right up until the start of World War I. Thus practically all of Lenin's writings between 1912 and 1914 were published and circulated in Pravda.

This growing political agitation against the status quo was not without its effects. Many elements in the ruling classes realized, from 1900 onward, that some constitutional reform of the tsarist autocracy was inevitable. This readiness for reform was heightened after Russia suffered a humiliating defeat by Japan in 1905.

Representative government was established in a Duma, or parliament, elected on the basis of limited suffrage and endowed with limited power. Freedom of political association was expanded, censorship was relaxed and political and economic conditions of the working class were somewhat improved.

But these reforms were too little and too late. The period between 1905 and 1914 became a fateful race between those Russians who wanted constitutional government and economic progress along Western lines and those who wanted violent revolution along communist lines.

Russia's entry into World War I in 1914 on the side of France and Great Britain provided new opportunities for revolutionary groups. The backwardness of Russia was revealed even more in war than in peacetime. Militarily, Russia was badly beaten by Germany.

The reason was not lack of fighting spirit among the Russians, but lack of fighting material and lack of competent military leadership and organization. More Russians died because of poor medical facilities than at the hands of the Germans. The war hastened the disintegration of order and authority and opened the way for the overthrow of the tsarist regime.

By early 1917, Russia was in a state of near collapse. In addition to the crushing military defeats suffered at the hands of imperial Germany, the Russian economy was virtually paralyzed.

Agricultural production had declined sharply. Transportation broke down and other elementary necessities of life became unavailable or were in desperately short supply. Even many persons who before the war had been loyal to the tsarist government became eager for change — and radical change if necessary —since in their view things could only get better through change.

Unrest, discontent and disloyalty to the tsarist regime spread even to the armed forces and the police. When, in March of 1917, thousands of people staged peaceful hunger demonstrations in Moscow and St. Petersburg, the unexpected happened. Instead of firing on the demonstrators when they refused to disband, members of the police (and later soldiers) mingled with the crowd, openly expressing their sympathies with the demonstrators. At this point, governmental authority crumbled, and within a few days the tsar abdicated. Soon after, he and his family were taken by communists to Ekaterinburg in eastern Russia where they were killed by guards who thought Czechs and White Russian troops might rescue them.

Dinner Guest Problems? Serve WW-I C Rations

Got a problem with that unexpected dinner guest?

Don't panic. Just whip up to your handy cupboard and solve the problem with some of the U. S. Army's 47-year old emergency rations.

If you don't remember where they are, they were the ones granddad brought home from the "Great War" of 1917-18.

While the Army does not recommend these as staple items for your dinner table, the Quartermaster Museum of the U. S. Continental Army Command's Quartermaster School at Fort Lee, Va. reports that some they recently opened were found to be still edible.

Packed in metal containers, each ration consisted of a half-pound bread and meat item, three one-ounce chocolate bars, a gram of pepper and 3-4 of an ounce of salt.

After receiving the 1918 rations from Mrs. William W. Webb of Swathmore, Pa., Horace Mann, museum curator, forwarded test samples to the QM School Subsistence and Food Service Department and to the Army's Natick, Mass., Laboratories.

The latter furnishes data on food analysis to the QM School which is incorporated into instruction given in the several food service classes at Fort Lee.

Other rations acquired by the museum in the past few years and found to be edible include hardtack crackers from the Civil War and tinned soup from the Adolphus W Greenly Greenland expedition of 1884.

Mr. Mann said the QM museum is interested in obtaining any other such items both for historical interest and display as well as testing.

Fight With Knowledge

No one realizes more clearly than the United States serviceman that the world is involved in a great conflict: the struggle between democracy and communism.

We all know the conflict exists. Many of us probably wouldn't be in uniform if it didn't. But how much more do we need to know about the conflict?

There should be only one answer — much more! We are the armed forces have a vital role in the conflict. We pledged to support and defend our Constitution. We are the instrument of security for our nation. We are a shield against the continuing threat of communist military aggression while the contest is carried on in other areas — political, economic and psychological.

Because we have this personal involvement, we need to understand the basic facts about democracy, communism, and the clashes between the systems. It is important for us to keep informed about world events. We must learn to recognize the relationship of international developments to the conflict between governmental systems.

Why must we know all those things? Because we and our allies must stand ready to assist communist military aggression in all parts of the world.

We achieve this readiness by learning more about the forces which threaten us, in order to combat them more efficiently. We achieve this readiness by gaining a fuller appreciation of the principles for which we stand. And we achieve this readiness by realizing that in a very personal sense, the fate of our nation and of the free world depends upon how well we do our jobs.

Getting this knowledge is the easiest part. All it takes is a trip to the Information and Education Office in your outfit, or the library. The Department of Defense has long been aware of the need to keep its men informed and has an extensive program to do just that.

The information is all there, practically at our fingertips. Why wait for a formal invitation to take advantage of it? (AFPS)

Sec of Def Wants Report On Cost Reduction Steps

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has requested service secretaries and the director, Defense Supply Agency, to submit a report on actions being taken to ensure that top priority emphasis is being given to the Cost Reduction Program.

The report is due Sept. 15.

In a memorandum, Secretary McNamara noted that cost reduction accomplishments to date have exceeded expectations. He credited the active support of the military departments, and defense agencies for savings of $4.6-billion attained during FY65.

By FY69 and each year thereafter, the Defense Department hopes to show a savings of $6.1-billion.

Cost Reduction Program concepts are more important today than ever before the secretary said.

"With the increased support and expenditures required in Viet-Nam," Secretary McNamara pointed out, "it is essential that our resources be applied in the most efficient manner possible."

He said unnecessary or marginal operations must be eliminated and operating efficiency must be increased wherever necessary.

The management improvement actions taken or initiated during the past four years must continue to be applied and new improvement and innovations sought, the memorandum stated.

YANQUI - SI?

NEW YORK (AFPS) — What is a Yankee?

Depending upon where you're from, the definition to that word could vary as much as 360 degrees.

To a foreigner, a Yankee is an American; to an American, a Yankee is a northerner; to a northerner, a Yankee is a New Englander; to a New Englander, a Yankee is a Vermonter; and to a Vermonter, a Yankee is a person who eats pie for breakfast.

Longest Space Mission in History Needs Less Support From Services

The longest space mission in the history of manned orbital flight — set to end Sunday — is being supported by less military people and equipment than some of the earlier manned launches, according to space and defense officials.

Approximately 10,000 people, 28 ships and 135 aircraft of the Department of Defense have been selected to support the eight - day mission of Gemini - Titan 5 (GT-5), piloted by Lt. Col. L. Gordon Cooper, USAF, and Lt. Commander Charles Conrad, USN.

Primary reason for the smaller force is the confidence and experience gained during past launches. This experience has enabled DOD planning elements to stabilize support and still fulfill requirements with fewer people, ships and aircraft.

The Army, Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard pilots participating in the mission will fly virtually every type of operational aircraft during GT-5. Air Force F - 4C Phantom IIs were scheduled to fly in formation with the Gemini booster during its liftoff phase.

Army helicopters have been assigned to West Africa. Navy and Coast Guard helicopters and long range planes will also be used. Additional helicopters are on alert in the launch recovery area and other aircraft will be used in primary and contingency recovery areas.

The prime recovery area will be located approximately 500 miles from Cape Kennedy in the Atlantic Ocean southwest of Bermuda. There are, however, three other landing areas to which recovery teams have been assigned. They are the east Atlantic near the Canary Islands, the mid - Pacific north of Hawaii and the west Pacific near Okinawa.

In the primary recovery area, the aircraft carrier USS Lake Champlain will be waiting to retrieve the astronauts and spacecraft.

Approximately 65 attended the outdoor ceremony at Sand Hill.

America--Strong and Free With Sound Government

Our Government was established in its present form to avoid the abuses of arbitrary authority that led to the Declaration of Independence and the Revolutionary War.

The men who wrote the Constitution as our framework of government combined our democratic ideals with a practical means of realizing them. They designed a representative Government in which the final authority always goes back to the people.

In this form of government there is easy communication between the governed and the government. Every citizen has the right to vote for the candidate of his choice and to let his representatives know what his views are. Lack of this ready communication between the American colonists and their British rulers set up a barrier which made impossible the solution of colonial problems.

Three branches of Government were set up to insure a proper system of checks and balances. The Legislative Branch makes the laws, the Executive Branch carries them out, and the Judicial Branch judges the constitutionality of laws and the acts of the other two branches. No branch is dominant over the others. All work together under the "balance of powers" principle which has given our Nation its great strength and stability.

We Americans will have a good government as long as we assume our obligations as citizens. These obligations include voting, maintaining an active interest in governmental affairs, and serving in the Armed Forces in time of need. When each of us does his part in making our Government work, we shall continue to progress toward the full realization of the American goals and the United States will continue to remain strong and free.

American Military Doctors Tend Lepers in Viet Cong Held Jungle

BIEN HOA AIR BASE, RVN (AFPS)—Three American military doctors have been giving their free time to care for members of a leprosarium in the heart of Viet Cong controlled jungles.

Captains Calvin C. Chapman and Hans W. Polte, USAF, and Joe F. Altmonte, USA, pack their medical kits and fly by helicopter once each week to St. Joseph's Leprosarium. It is in the middle of Viet Cong infested war zone "D," 30 miles north of Saigon.

The Catholic leper colony is one of 10 such institutions in the Republic of Viet Nam. It is supported by the Vietnamese Ministry of Public Health and by charitable organizations in seven countries, including the United States. Father Leonard Berset, a Swiss priest, has run the facility since its founding in 1959. Sister Marie Antionette, the only trained nurse at the colony, assists him.

The three doctors go about their work quietly and efficiently, apparently oblivious to the possibility of contracting the disease, and the more imminent danger of the surrounding Viet Cong. The colony has been attacked several times, and was overrun in 1962. Two sisters were captured and held for 25 days.

The doctors explained that since the patients were already being treated with drugs for leprosy, they try to take care of the side effects from the disease, doing minor surgery and cleaning open sores.

Captain Polte, an Air Force dental surgeon, has been able to do only emergency work, but plans to give the patients more selective dental care in the future.

18 Hours Later Private Leaves Listening Post

The 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry (Airborne) completed a three-day parolling problem at the north end of the Fort Benning reservation just before it left for Viet Nam. Each rifle company was assigned a patrol base location and was required to clear the zone of guerrillas.

The company bases were so well hidden in the woods that members of the battalion staff had difficulty finding them. Using overlapping sweep techniques, the riflemen of the units criss-crossed their assigned areas.

PFC Arthur Valdez of Company A set an example of devotion to duty. Assigned to a listening post, by his squad leader, he was inadvertently left behind in a night movement. He stayed there for 18 hours.

"We do more than look at their throats and send them on their way with an aspirin," was the way registered nurse Hazel Macus explained Fort Benning's Visiting Nurses Program.

Supported by the Community Activities Association, the Visiting Nurses Program is one of the big features of the activity.

Through Association support, more than 3000 calls are made in homes surrounding the Benning reservation, according to Maj. Elizabeth Angel, head of the program.

The visiting nurses advise cripples learning to walk when their shoes don't fit properly and point families in the right direction when they are in need of economic or social help.

They visit the aged, the invalids and the underprivileged.

They do all this on what the Association can provide for them from its annual fund drive.

The Association is now conducting its yearly drive and with less than a week to go, it has only reached 41 per cent of its $50,000 goal.

It also provides immunization for dependents free of charge, Christmas baskets for the needy and, last but far from least, helps to support the Youth Activities Program and the more than 5,000 children who participate in it.

Fund drive officials were issuing a final appeal this week to all Fort Benning personnel to take a second look at what they have given and ask themselves if this service is not to the benefit of everyone at Fort Benning, even if they do not directly receive benefit from it.

Timothy Richards is one of eight children who is visited by the nurses at Fort Benning.

Tim is like many other children except he has a defect — he's deaf.

Because the nurses have been visiting his home and family, they have been able to help him. They pointed his parents in the direction of the Cave Springs School for the Deaf in North Georgia.

The paper work has been submitted and now the parents are waiting to see if he will be accepted. Mrs. Macus feels certain he will.

This is the story gleaned in just a few minutes with Maj. Angel's staff — Mrs. Macus, Mrs. Ruby O. Farr, Maj. Clementine Turner and Lt. Caroline Brodkey.

They all tell similar stories — one of service and dedication.

Can we afford to chance the possibility of curtailing or slowing this service?

ROUTINE VISIT . . . Mrs. Hazel Macus, a registered nurse and one of two civilian nurses working in the Visiting Nurse Program, advises members of the Richards family of the openings for Timothy (center) at the school for the deaf. Just a part of the service.

BABY EXAMINATIONS . . . Six week examinations for babies are carried out at the Dependents' Immunization Clinic on an average of 300 per month. This is just one of the services provided by your CAA fund contribution.

New Weapon

10th Arty Sergeant Operates 'Big Lights' Which Help Stop Viet Cong Night Fighters

BY JOSEPH HUTTIE

"A maximum effective range of 12,000 meters, a weight of 1,186 pounds, highly flexible in its mobility and a good weapon to have in almost any tactical situation."

These are the words used by SSgt. Ernest N. Stump in describing a piece of equipment for which the Army appears to have unlimited hopes of success in the combat areas of South Viet Nam.

Stump is a member of Delta Battery, 10th Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade and the weapon he described is measured in candlepower instead of fire power, for it's not a new "big gun" but a 30 inch searchlight currently employed in the Asian Republic in an attempt to sap the night-fighting effectiveness of the Viet Cong.

Only Unit

As a member of D Battery, Stump is a part of the only 60-inch searchlight unit currently operating within the U. S. Army. However, two 30-inch units were recently activated at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma and according to Sgt. Stump are undergoing training in preparation for action in Viet Nam.

Although the Army's use of the 60-inch lights here at Fort Benning is mostly in support of USAIC problems, Sgt. Stump's knowledges of the effectiveness of their smaller counterpart, the 30 inchers, comes as a firsthand observer of their use in Viet Nam.

When the Army first decided that the lights would provide a definite advantage in night fighting with Viet Cong forces, Sgt. Stump was assigned to a seven - man fact - finding team which evaluated the illumination qualities of the 30-inch light under battlefield conditions.

With the exception of the officer in charge of the operation, Lt. Roger A. Brown of Ft. Bragg, the entire team was composed of men from D Battery of the 10th Artillery.

They Serve

Those serving with Sgt. Stamp were Sgts. Johnnie L. Frederick, William L. Mosley, James L. Taylor, R. L. Williams and Moses E. Smith.

The group left for Viet Nam in November 1964 and returned in March 1965. Their mission carried them from the Mekong Delta in the southern part of the country into the highlands of the north where the fighting has increased in intensity during the past few months.

Stump said the lights proved to be an extremely potent weapon in fighting the Viet Cong. "Most of the action over there is at night, but when we employed the lights, often times there just wasn't any fighting," he added.

The operations of the special American unit called for them to train 65 enlisted men and nine officers of the Vietnamese Army in the use of six, 30-inch lights, made in America.

Lights Assigned

The lights were assigned to three separate units, and while two of the groups remained static in their positioning, Sgt. Stump and his men moved their two lights wherever the fighting moved.

The lights were used for backing up ground forces, aiding in ambushes staged by the Vietnamese, illuminating outposts under attack, and providing light for air fields according to Sgt. Stump.

Although the results of the use of the lights under battlefield conditions was highly favorable, Sgt. Stump pointed out that the actual mechanical operation of the lights was a constant problem to him and his men.

He cites one incident in particular. He and his unit had positioned the two lights on high ground about 4,000 meters from the big air base at Bien Hoa during a heavy fire-fight between Viet Cong and Vietnamese forces. Suddenly without warning one light went dead. In setting up the lights, Sgt. Stump pointed out that he attempts to vide 360 degrees of light for the troops using it. "In this case the provided light was cut in half and we were lucky to get out of there," he adds.

Lights Constructed

The lights are constructed with interlocking electrical circuits according to Stump and, when one circuit blows, they all go thus blacking out the light. Since then, modifications following the recommendations of Stump's fact-finding unit have been made to the lights with the hope of eliminating the breakdown problem.

Commenting on the Vietnamese troops he trained, Stump expresses a great deal of satisfaction in their performance. "Although they don't completely compare to our boys, you have to remember that they have very little if any technical knowledge. This plus the language barrier makes things difficult. But all in all the Vietnamese did a class-A job with the lights," he says.

Although a number of the Vietnamese officers working with Sgt. Stump spoke fluent English there wasn't much you could do to completely overcome the problem of language. "You just point, add some sign language and well, that's about it."

Adequate Security

The security provided for the lights was adequate according to the sergeant. "We usually had an infantry company guarding our perimeter or an armored guard when we were moving with a convoy," he said.

The Vietnamese soldiers had a great deal of respect and confidence in the use of the lights although there were some in their number who felt that the lights offered too ample a target.

Asked what he thought the role for the lights would be in future fighting in Viet Nam, Sgt. Stump answered, "Well we did a good job when I was over there, at least we had a feeling that it was a good job. I think we proved that the lights made a good weapon."

House Subcommittee Halts Merger Of National Guard and Reserve

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — A House Armed Services subcommittee has apparently stayed off — at least for now — the Pentagon proposal to merge organized units of the Army Reserve with the Army National Guard. The Defense Department had hoped to get the merger started this fall, following completion of the summer camp period.

However, the subcommittee left the door opened for future compromise. In a statement signed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert and Reps. Porter Hardy Jr., Alton Ennon, G. Ellicott Hagen, Speedy O. Long, William G. Bray, Bob Wilson and Alexander Pirnie, the subcommittee called the merger of the two forces at the present time "not in the national interest" but left the door open for further discussions with the Pentagon.

"The committee will continue discussions with the Department of Defense on this subject and is determined to resolve the question of future reorganizations of the reserve components by recommending the enactment of positive legislation on the subject.

"Enactment of such legislation will prevent a repetition of the unfortunate turmoil and confusion that has occured in both the Army Reserve and National Guard as a result of the Department's premature announcement to merge the Army Reserve components," the statement said.

The Pentagon expressed "regret" at the House subcommittee action and added that failure to realign the structure now will "compel the Army to retain non-essential units to the expense of forces which are required by our current contingency plans."

It said that Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor and the Chief of Staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, have again reviewed the proposed plan and believe its adoption is in the national interest. The two top Army officials said they see no military justification for diverting to non-essential units the troops who should be used to raise the readiness of units for which there is a clear and established need.

Failure to go forward with the realignment will necessarily result in more men being taken out of civilian life into the armed forces.

The Defense Department said it would start discussions immediately with the subcommittee and develop a plan that will make the Army's reserve forces truly combat ready.

The Reserve Officers Association asked "that the voice of our experience be heard" in any future discussions on the reserve components. "Our Association, its leaders and its rank-and-file membership stand ready to work with the Pentagon authorities in a sincere and earnest program to restore morale, and to make the Reserves what they should be. . . supported and trained and organized in units which are manned, equipped and ready for vital service to our country."

While the merger may have been temporarily stopped, support to the low - priority Guard and Reserve units — already low, may become even less noticeable. The Pentagon plans to beef up its new division and brigades with some equipment from according to sources.

Reservists Complete Instruction

About 200 Reserve and National Guard officers from five Army areas are finished their final week of instruction recently in an Infantry officer career course taught by the Pittsburgh, Pa. U. S. Army Reserve School at Fort Benning.

The students came to Fort Benning Aug. 1 for a two-week course to finish up the instruction they have taken throughout the year in their home units. The Pittsburgh School, under the direction of Col. Hiram A. Carpenter Jr., was selected to provide the instruction for the two weeks.

During the initial week the officers were instructed in counterinsurgency, fundamental of artillery employment, field fortifications, ground vehicle command, land navigation, missile, rocketry and other Infantry subjects.

In their second week the students were given three comprehensive examinations. Successful completion provides a systematic means by which both sudents and instructors may be evaluated.

The Pittsburgh School has conducted summer training for Infantry students for the past 14 years. It is being supported by the 2093rd Dayton (Ohio) USAR School commanded by Col. Norman P. Cowden.

131 New 2nd Lieutenants Get Bars at Ceremonies

Guest speaker for the Officer Candidate School graduation was Col. Fred O. Jackson, commanding officer of the 2nd Control Command (Provisional), Fort Benning.

Col Jackson, whose son was among the class graduates, spoke on one of the principles of leadership: setting the example.

The former OCS graduate pointed out that setting the example encompasses many aspects of leadership, citing appearance, attitude, respect, and honesty as a few. Col. Jackson also cautioned the graduates that they cannot accept the privileges of an officer before they accept the responsibilities too.

Distinguished honor graduate of the class was Douglas E. Coulter who compiled a 97 per cent academic average and received the outstanding leadership award.

High scorer on the physical combat proficiency test was Jeffrey F. Chandor with a perfect mark of 500 points. Lynwood B. Johnson was awarded the Weapons Department trophy for excellence in the weapons examination and marksmanship tests.

Members of the official party included Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School; Col. Jess Walls, commanding officer of TSB; Maj. Stanley S. Scott, executive officer of the 5th Stu. Bn.; and Capt. John H. Crittenden, commanding officer of the 52nd Co.

Rules Change to Allow Enlistment by Draftee

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Army regulations are being revised to permit a registrant who has received an induction order from Selective Service to enlist in the active Army, National Guard or Army Reserve.

Under current law, the Army or the other services cannot enlist any man who has an induction order from his local draft board. The policy change, to be spelled out in a forthcoming revision to AR 601-210, was directed by Selective Service in a recent bid to get more volunteers into the armed forces.

A Selective Service spokesman said it had been informal policy for some time that there could be a temporary lifting of induction orders for youths arranging to enlist and be taken at once. He said written instructions to carry out the policy are now reaching local draft boards.

Meanwhile, an Associated Press survey of 21 states show 13 planning to tighten rules deferring college students from the draft. Draft boards that have been liberal in giving students deferments in the past say they are going to get tough to meet heavy draft calls beginning in September.

The AP survey shows at least 13 planning to review the status of deferred students. At least two others in the survey are considering such action.

Washington (AFPS) — The Army has announced the first formal school course for Entac, an anti-tank guided missile scheduled for assignment to infantry units including those in Europe and the Far East.

The first three-week, 30-student course was slated for July at Ft. Gordon, Ga. Similar courses are planned throughout the year.

Entac was developed by the French Government. The system consists of a 27-pound missile fired from a 10-pound boxlike projector, with an effective range between 400-2,000 yards.

Orientation Visit

Brazilian Generals Shown Post's Infantry Training

The commandant of the Brazilian National War College, Gen. Henrique Fleiuss, and his party visited Fort Benning this week on a two day orientation visit.

At 7 p.m. Monday, the visitors were guests at a reception held at Fort Benning's Main Officers Open Mess. At the reception, Gen. Fleiuss received a "Follow Me" pin, the distinctive insignia of The Infantry Center, from Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commanding general of Fort Benning.

Tuesday Gen. Fleiuss observed various phases of Infantry training. At Victory Pond he saw a demonstration of ground vehicles available to the Infantry commander.

Presented Demonstration

The demonstration presents the Army's general purpose vehicles which includes personnel and cargo carrying type trucks, and special purpose vehicles used by Armor, Engineers, Ordinance and other technical services to transport weapons and or special equipment.

Vehicles demonstrated range from the main battle tank (M-60) to the M-113 armor personnel carrier capable of carrying a team of Infantrymen into combat.

After the demonstration, the visitors inspected the vehicles at close quarters.

Gen. Fleiuss and his party also attended a briefing on the history, organization, and administration of The Infantry School.

They were given a tour of the new $10 million academic building where they saw The Infantry School's new closed - circuit television instruction system.

Train Airborne

After a tour of the post, the group went to Eubanks Field to observe Airborne training. Here the visitors saw Airborne students participating in "jump" school physical conditioning, practicing correct exit and landing procedures from a full size wooden airplane replica, and then saw them jump from the 34-foot tower and the 250 foot free fall parachute tower.

General officers accompanying Gen. Fleiuss on his tour of U. S. defense installations are: Lt. Generals Armando del Noronha and Milton Barbosa Guimaraes; Maj. Generals Enio da Cunba Garcia, Almerio de Castro Neves, Jacintho Pinto de Mours, Roberto Juliano Calvancante de Lemos, Lindolpho Ferraz Filho and Candido Flarys de Cruz; and Rear Admirals Jurandyr da Costa Muller de Campos and Joao da Fonseca Ribeiro.

The group departed Fort Benning Tuesday and will visit Huntsville, Ala.; U. S. Navy activities at Norfolk, Va.; Continental Army Headquarters, Fort Monroe, Va.; and U. S. Air Force activites at Colorado Springs, Colo., Omaha, Neb., and New York City.

Most Auto Deaths Occur at Night When Extra Alertness Is Needed

As night falls and fewer of cars use the highway, some motorists are lulled into a false sense of security. Since the chances of a fatal auto accident or a serious injury are greatest at low visibility periods after dark, according to officials, they warn drivers to be extra alert after dark.

"Nighttime accidents account for three out of five traffic deaths and almost half of all pedestrians killed in traffic are struck down between 6:00 p.m. and midnight," they point out.

To help motorists drive safely after dark, the following tips are offered:

Allow more distance for stopping your car. With reduced visibility, recognition of traffic signs and the driver's response to them, is delayed.

Slow down at night. After dark, every driver needs the extra reaction time that slower speeds allow.

Base your speed on your headlight range. Headlights can light up about 350 feet of roadway. At 50 mph you need about 243 feet to stop, but at 60 mph, you need about 366 feet to stop. Overdrive your headlights and you're in trouble.

Keep your windshield and headlights clean. A spattered windshield magnifies the glare of oncoming headlights and dirty headlights on your car cuts your visibility.

Protect your eyes. Do not wear sunglasses at night or during low visibility. Look slightly to the right of oncoming headlights.

Be extra careful passing. Observe the headlight range of the cars you're following. Pass only if the road looks clear.

Look to the sides of objects rather than straight at them. Focus on the edges or outlines of objects. Eyes are designed to pick up images more sharply that way than by staring head on.

Avoid steady driving around your usual bedtime. A driver's alertness level drops sharply about the time he is accustomed to going to bed.

Use your lights carefully. Don't drive after dark unless all headlights and signal lights are working.

Modified Engine Uses Ammonia

FT. BELVIOR, Va. (AFPS) — Enlisted engineers assigned to the Nuclear Power Field Office here have found another use for the housewife's standby — ammonia.

A pick-up truck has been modified to operate on ammonia, an ammonia-acetylene mixture, or regular gasoline. It starts like an ordinary engine. The housing around the ammonia cylinders is closed while the truck is operated. Warm engine exhaust is passed through the housing to maintain pressure in the cylinders and counteract the refrigerant action of evaporating ammonia. Since ammonia burns more slowly than gasoline, the spark had to be increased by widening the sparkplug gap.

The modification demonstrates the feasibility of ammonia as an engine fuel. It is one of the fuels under consideration by the Army for production by a nuclear powered energy depot. The objective of the project is to develop a combat fuel system that will relieve the Army of some of the restrictions imposed by long petroleum supply lines.

Helicopters Make First Night Attack

SAIGON (AFPS) — What is belived to be the first night helicopter assault against an enemy in military history has been conducted in the Republic of Viet Nam by a United States Marine rifle company.

A USAF C - 123 aircraft dropped one and a half million candle power flares to light two rice paddy landing zones as the Marines began the first phase of "Operation Midnight." In the Aug. 12-13 operation one Viet Cong (VC) was killed and 30 suspected enemy were detained.

Airlifting the Marines into two separate zones, 12 miles northwest of the Da Nang Airfield complex, were 20 helicoptes from Marine Medium Helicopter Squadrons 361 and 261.

Post Service On Laundry Now Normal

The Post Quartermaster this week announced that service on individual laundry has been resumed.

For the past several weeks service has been discontinued because of the heavy workload caused by preparing the 1st Cavalry Division for movement, officials said.

According to Lt. Col. Samuel Dobresk, chief of the Quartermaster Services Division, laundry service for individual bundles and one day service on uniforms has been resumed.

Dobresk urged everyone to economize by using the monthly payroll deduction plan which costs soldiers only $4.40 per month.

Troopers can sign up for the service at their unit supply activity and turn in as many as 25 pieces of laundry a week.

New Insurance Bill Would Mean Increased Benefits for Single GI

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON —A government-sponsored life insurance program for single servicemen to match the benefits now provided survivors of military members with dependents is a goal of the House Veterans Affairs Committee as it continues closed-door sessions on the entire GI insurance program.

In an exclusive Army Times interview, Rep. Olin Teague (D., Tex.), chairman of the House committee, predicted his group will report out legislation this session establishing an "indemnity or grant program to cover the single serviceman with no dependent parents."

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee approved a bill this week that would provide free $10,000 life insurance to all servicemen serving in combat zones since 1962. The indemnity would stop upon the serviceman's return to the States. The $10,000 would be paid to beneficiaries over a 10-year period, with interest.

Permits Policy Conversion

The measure would permit combat men to convert their policies, when they leave the service, to non-participating policies similar to those issued during the Korean War.

Teague said the insurance subcommittee of the House Veterans Committee has already held two closed-door sessions on the indemnity insurance proposal.

His comments on insurance were just one of a number of veterans items covered in the Times interview.

The chairman said his committee plans to hold hearings late this month or in early September on legislation to extend GI Bill benefits to men of peacetime service. The Texas lawmaker, a World War II combat hero, said he has had meetings on the subject with "almost everyone in the Administration from the President on down" but so far all he's had in the way of a commitment is a promise that they will give the issue further study.

He said he's attempting to get some kind of veterans education measure that will be acceptable to not only the Administration but Congress as well. "If they don't come up with a recommendation for a moderate bill, they may get something they didn't want at all." Congress, he predicted will pass a much broader bill on its own if the Viet Nam situation worsens.

Meeting Scheduled

On Teague's schedule is a meeting with Defense Manpower chief Norman Paul, one of the major objectors to congressional attempts to revive the GI Bill of Rights. The Pentagon opposes the legislation on grounds that it would encourage men to leave the service.

He said the Pentagon was currently studying ways in which "we can provide educational opportunities for men who serve." Teague said he plans to offer the Pentagon something he feels they can accept while providing educational benefits to veterans of cold war service.

"I have no objection to the Pentagon setting up a vast in-service education program," Teague told Army Times. But he said the decision to permit the Pentagon to go ahead with such a program was the responsibility of another congressional committee (Armed Services).

In whatever form a veterans education measure does emerge from the House committee, it will probably be "open end" to provide benefits for as long in the future as the nation continues to rely on the draft for manpower.

The insurance probe was kicked off following charges from servicemen that they were encountering difficulty getting insurance protection from commercial companies once they are put on orders for Southeast Asia.

Benefit Available

Benefits now available to survivors of military members are "more than generous" under the Dependency and Indemnity Compensation program, Teague said. He noted they were better than the benefits available to survivors of World War II and Koren War veterans.

However, he said the lone category of military persons not provided any type of death benefit is the serviceman with no dependent parents.

While the major concern of the committee is to provide survivor coverage for single servicemen, Teague said he was also looking into the possibility of providing some sort of comprehensive insurance coverage — either government or privately sponsored for all members of the armed forces, not just limited to single servicemen. However, this proposal is believed to have less of a priority than the proposed indemnity or grant program for single servicemen.

The Latest Statistics

Manual Provides Tips on Improving Highway Safety

It happened to some 9,600 Americans each day last year, and it could happen with frightening ease — to you.

That was the average daily toll of people killed or injured in automobile accidents in 1964. More than 85 per cent of these cases involved driver violations according to statistics published in Casualty Court, The Travelers Book of Street and Highway Accident Data.

The booklet discusses some of the tragic misconceptions motorists have. Speeding, for example, still causes over 40 per cent of highway casualties despite the well-publicized fact that most accidents occur at speeds under 40 mph!

The Reason

The reason, misunderstood by many motorists, is that speeding is not equivalent to high speed. A car can be speeding when it is going only 37 mph—if conditions dictate a speed of 20.

One of the commonest — and most deadly — of highway driving errors is hugging the left traffic lane. Another is pulling out from the curb, or entering a highway from a side road, without due regard to oncoming cars. In any hundred miles of traffic, one expert estimates you may have to press your brake 10 times for this reason.

Since driver error accounts for most accidents, your best protection is a greater knowledge of how to avoid highway risks. Here are 10 tested ways to increase your highway safety.

Check Frequently

1. Check your speedometer frequently; after long hours of steady turnpike driving, drivers tend to develop the illusion that the car is going slower than it really is. Remember that legal speed limits were set for ideal road conditions. Don't endanger yourself by always going "as fast as the law allows" — or even faster.

2. Stay in one lane as much as possible. On the highway, stay over to the right. Cross the center line only when passing or turning left. Don't weave or hog the road.

3. Watch not only the car in front of you, but the car in front of that one. "Drive 1,000 feet ahead", as veteran truckers do, so that you'll spot irregularities in traffic patterns. Glance frequently at the rearview mirror to get the traffic picture around and behind you. Keeping your eyes moving not only helps you prepare for traffic problems — it's a good way to avoid deadly "highway hypnosis".

"Passing Fancies"

4. "Passing fancies" account for thousands of traffic deaths and injuries each year. When passing, start from well behind the car in front of you so you have a clear view of the road ahead. Watch the other car's exhaust pipe for smoke puffs—a lazy puff means he has taken his foot off the gas, perhaps in preparation for a turn. A sharp spurt of smoke may mean he is speeding up to keep you from passing him.

5. Never take a chance by cutting in on a car approaching in the opposite direction—even on a straight stretch of road. According to safety experts, it's almost impossible to judge the speed of an oncoming automobile.

Prime Cause

6. Avoid tailgating! It's a prime cause of highway accidents. Some safety experts think the old rule of "one car length for every ten miles of speed" is all right on city streets, but should be stretched on modern high-speed highways.

7. When stopping for other than traffic reasons, be sure that all of your car is clear of the traveled roadway. Never stop on a curve or near the crest of a hill. This is particularly important when changing tires at night. Run on the "flat" to a safe stopping place — rather than run the risk of being flattened yourself.

8. Always slow down before entering curves; don't increase your speed till you have had a chance to determine the sharpness of the curve and the presence of other traffic. Never try to pass on the approach to, or while rounding, a blind curve.

Even One Drink

9. Think before taking even one drink. A substantial portion of each year's casualties are caused not by the obviously drunken driver, but by the partially drunken driver whose judgment and reason were subtly — and dangerously — impaired by alcohol.

10. Avoid anger! Never turn "teacher" when someone's foolishness annoys you—or you both may learn the high cost of hospital bills. Always give the right of way especially when the other fellow is wrong.

JOINT EFFORT

206-Foot Icicle Aids Cold Region Research

Constantly studying arctic and subarctic conditions and testing new cold - weather equipment and military hardware, the lab operates in a man - made polar environment with temperatures as low as 58 degrees below zero.

The jumbo icicle is a prominent part of the lab's new outdoor test facilities. It was formed by drilling into the earth to the proper depth then lining the hole with concrete, filling it with water and turning on the refrigeration.

Now the ice shaft is being used to develop ice core drilling techniques for use on the polar ice caps. Suspended from a tower directly overhead is a unique thermal drill, a device which melts its way through deep ice while drawing into a chamber a large ice core so that an undisturbed sample of centuries - old ice may be withdrawn

Tests are also planned on an electro - mechanical drill, a recent development designed to permit the thermal drill to pierce rock formations that may be encountered in deep snow and ice.

Year - around analysis of snow, ice and frozen ground will be expanded with the completion of a "perma-frost patch," a plot of ground 20 feet in diameter and artificially frozen to a depth of 50 feet. It will be slammed by diesel and vibratory hammers in pile driving tests and also serve as a realistic foundation for studies of new cold regions' construction materiel.

Legal Assistance--Help for Soldiers

The function of the Legal Assistance Officer is to advise military personnel and their dependents on their personal legal problems. Documents such as wills, affidavits, and powers of attorney, will be prepared as part of that service. The services of a notary public are available at the Legal Assistance Office without charge.

Army regulations prohibit a Legal Assistance Officer or any other officer of the Judge Advocate General's Corps from representing you in court proceedings or being your personal attorney. Therefore, if after discussion of your problem with a Legal Assistance Officer you decide a civilian attorney is needed in order that you may be properly represented in court, you must retain him at your own expense. Civilian attorneys on occasion will adjust their fees to fit the serviceman's financial condition.

If you or your dependents are completely without funds legal aid or free civilian legal service may be obtained. Free civilian legal aid is generally available only in cases in which a real need exists and there is an absolute inability to pay. Civilian attorneys will not give free legal aid in obtaining a divorce because a divorce is regarded as a luxury and not a necessity.

You will receive the most benefit from the legal assistance program if:

1. You consult the Legal Assistance Officer before you take doubtful action. If you delay seeking advice until after you have taken the action, the advice may, of necessity, be limited to sympathy.

2. Visit the office in person. Telephone conversations are generally unsatisfactory to both parties, particularly when your question is one which cannot be answered immediately over the phone. Appointments are not necessary.

3. When visiting the legal assistance office, bring all letters, documents, and other papers concerning your problem.

Gen Johnson Praises AMC

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army Chief of Staff General Harold K. Johnson has praised Army Materiel Command (AMC) members for giving combat soldiers the tools to see, move, shoot and communicate their way to victory.

General Johnson said AMC has kept abreast of scientific and technological advances and provided the Army with more timely support with materiel of higher quality.

The Army Chief of Staff mentioned several accomplishments in recognizing AMC's third anniversary which was observed earlier in August.

Those mentioned included increased delivery of helicopters and helicopter armament, advanced laser range finder evaluation, improved missile systems reliability, and development of nuclear capability for the 155 mm howitzer.

NATIONAL FLOWER

Many nations have selected flowers as their emblems, but some seem to have more down-to-earth than others. The national flower of El Salvador, for example, is the white flower of the coffee tree — logical enough for a leading coffee-growing country. And the national flower of Wales is the leek, a vegetable that resembles the onion, according to World Book Encyclopedia.

Homing Glider Improves U.S. Air Drop Capability

CAMP PICKETT, Va. (ANF)—Paper airplanes and old inner tubes, in the arsenal of many a victorious childhood army, may soon earn laurels in the U. S. Army.

The smooth glide and simple shape of the paper airplane plus the durability and light weight of resin-coated fabric resembling an inner tube have been mixed in the creative kettle of Army research and revelopment to produce the Precision Drop Glider, a revolutionary device for dropping supplies and equipment to troops in confined areas.

A team from the the U. S. Army Aviation Materiel Laboratories at Fort Eustis, Va., has been testing the glider here and reports considerable success.

The glider is also fitted with an electronic homing device that responds to signals from the desired point of impact on the ground.

Launched or dropped from altitudes of 500 to 30,000 feet, the glider can swoop silently through cloud cover, darkness, and bad weather to touch down within 100 yards of the target.

3rd Infantrymen Now Relieved At Grave Site

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—A 12-man security guard and guide force has relieved soldiers of the 3rd Infantry "Old Guard" at the Kennedy gravesite in Arlington National Cemetery.

The soldiers were pressed into service as temporary pedestrian traffic controllers and guides when it became obvious the late President's grave would attract an unusual number of visitors. Ten million people have already passed the gravesite.

The new civilian force, which assumed the post July 31, wears uniforms similar to those worn by guards at Federal office buildings. Old Guard soldiers continue to man the sentry post at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, an assignment they have had since 1926.

Gen York Tells Officers Of Course Improvements

BY LARRY FROELICH

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commanding general of Fort Benning, welcomed the members of Career Course No. 1 on Tuesday morning at the Infantry School.

Gen. York cited with pride a number of changes which have taken place in the CAR course in order to provide better instruction and training for officers.

He listed the new emphasis on the subjects which directly effect the officers; reduction of the school week to 30 hours; the opportunity to supplement planned studies with elective courses; and reduction of classroom sizes, when possible, to 50 men.

Gen. York pointed out that the students will now have time for self-improvement by additional reading and study time. He added that they should consider their relationship with the faculty to be a team effort in which everyone helps through the exchange of ideas and the elimination of excess.

He then mentioned the three areas of increased emphasis in regard to their course of studies, citing unit readiness, counterinsurgency and airmobile operations.

Gen. York commented on Viet Nam by saying, "this challenge is so subtle that few are aware of it. We are engaged in this war at a time when other nations are looking at us as the rampart of freedom. If our country is to remain the land of the free, it must also be the home of the brave."

CAR Class No. 1 is composed of 184 army officers, 4 USMC captains and 12 allied officers representing Brazil, Finland, Ireland, Laos, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia and Thailand. Capt. Milton C. Shattuck Jr. will be class leader.

Capt. Claude E. Fernandez Jr., commanding officer of Detachment No. 1, 2nd Student Battalion, The Student Brigade, will be the cadre commander.

Army Accepts Armored Vehicle

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The last of five pilot models of a new armored fighting vehicle has been accepted by the Army. The first was accepted in mid-May.

Models of the Mechanized Infantry Combat Vehicle (MICV) were produced to test concepts of an infantry carrier with increased firepower, speed, range and amphibious capability.

As planned, the MICV will have a top speed of 37 m.p.h., a maximum 400-mile range and armor protecting an 11-man squad from small arms fire and artillery fragments.

Firepower includes a turret mounting a 20mm gun and a 7.62 coaxial light machine gun. Grenade dispensers will provide close-in protection. Hull firing ports permit all-around firing by the infantryman.

A $2-million contract was let by the Army Materiel Command to Pacific Car and Foundry Company, Renton, Wash., which designed the pilot vehicles and conducted development and fabrication.

FOOD DISTRIBUTED

Washington (AFPS) — U. S. Army Civil Affairs officials have reported that over 1,900 tons of food have been distributed to families in the Dominican Republic since the first of May.

Food distributed to the Dominicans consist of beans, wheat, flour, corn meal rice and powdered milk. The foods are sent to the Republic through the Agency for International Development and distributed by personnel of the 82nd Airborne Division.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

No Predictions

IT'S ALL OVER for another year. Bats, baseballs, gloves, spiked shoes and caps are packed away in do-not-open-til-spring boxes. There are padlocks on the gates of Gowdy Field and the diamond lies fallow.

This is the time for wrap up, prediction and projection, but as an Army sports writer, I cannot talk as my civilian counterpart might at end of season. The Army is not a place where the sports picture of the future can be painted with any certainty.

Brig. Gen. John Norton once said during his term as assistant commandant of the Infantry School, "A soldier is a nomad." If this year's baseball season has revealed anything, it has revealed the meaning this description must always have for Army sports.

During the baseball season's first half, four out of the eight participating teams had to withdraw from competition because of a major military reorganization which resulted in the formation of the 1st Cavalry Division (Air Mobile). The division is now in Viet Nam.

Men of Divarty or the 3rd Brigade who were playing on Gowdy Field this season may soon be on a rice field playing a different game. This year's pitcher for the 428th Medical Battalion might be standing on a mound of Okinawa, German or Korean dirt tomorrow. Yesterday's power hitter cannot be counted on to clout the homer next season because he might be driving a jeep.

In the Army there can be no talk about trading, only of permanent changes of station and discharge. There are no up and coming rookies or draft choices. There is only the promising new guy in the company who was drafted. Even on a wider scale military life can disrupt the best laid plans of mice and managers. This was illustrated recently when the football Giant's Joe Namath was alerted for his selective service physical exam. The $400,000 quarterback may soon be a $78 a month "slick sleeve."

Other pro football players and men in all civilian sports activities are becoming acutely aware of the draft.

In Columbus there is a similar situation where the Mustangs are facing problems. Officials of the club recently cancelled their rental of Memorial Stadium for two games against Chattanooga which were scheduled for tomorrow and last Saturday.

William Carter, president of the club confirmed that the Chattanooga club wanted the games moved to their home ground. But the Mustangs may be in for some personnel problems since most of their squad is composed of former Fort Benning Doughboys stationed here.

As soldiers they are not always able to travel long distances and duties sometimes conflict with schedules.

Carter added that the club has not committed itself to the Southern Football League beyond a game to game basis. This seems a wise decision in view of the nature of Army life.

A Lebanese Boy

THE AMERICAN FOOTBALL League will have a franchise in Miami in 1966. The franchise holder will be television and movie star Danny Thomas. Thomas and associates reportedly got the franchise for $7,500,000.

Thomas said in explaining his investment in the Miami Club: "You can't show me any Lebanese boy raised in Toledo, Ohio who didn't want to own a Miami Ball Club."

Baseball Star Visits 7,8,9

Homer Montgomery (R), secretary of the Central NCO Mess, welcomes former baseball great Johnny Vander Meer to the 7,8,9 Club on Tuesday. In April of 1946, Vander Meer, the only man in baseball to hurl back-to-back no-hitters, pitched the first game ever played at Gowdy Field. It was a summer exhibition battle between the Cincinnati Reds and Boston Red Sox. (Photo by Curt Becker)

On Tuesday four games were played at the post softball field with Headquarters Company, 10th Aviation Group beating E Battery, 10th Artillery, 7 to 4, in the opener. The loss put E Battery out of contention.

The 690th Ambulance Company followed by ripping the 135th Aviation Company, 14 to 7. The victory gave the 690th a one win, one loss record and put the Aviation Company out of the playoffs with two losses.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, TSB got its first playoff win against one loss by beating Lawson Aviation Command, 10 to 5. It was LAC's second defeat and put them out of the championship race.

Closing Tuesday's play, Company C, ISB scored its second playoff triumph by topping Martin Army Hospital, 7-4.

Four games were played on Wednesday with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, TSB getting their second victory by winning the opener against Headquarters Company, 10th Aviation Group 7 to 0. In the second game the 690th Ambulance Company beat Martin Army Hospital 11 to 1 to put Martin Army out of the race.

Some strange cargo was dropped recently to the Navy's Mobile Construction Battalion in Viet Nam.

The cargo, coming from Thailand, was rigged for drop along with 13,000 pounds of construction and repair equipment.

The equipment was dropped first, then a cage labeled "Airborne Sea-bee" was dropped. Private Boo Boo, a bear cub, the Seabee's new mascot, came in under fire and landed with flying colors.

Army Sets Two Rifle Marks

Meredith Breaks Record In High Power Contest

BY LEE LACOMBE

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Army rifleman completed their most successful venture in the individual portion of the National High Power Rifle Championships Tuesday by capturing seven out of 12 events including the men's and women's titles.

Both 1st. Lt. David Meredith and 2nd Lt. Margaret Thompson, from the Army's Marksmanship Training Unit posted record breaking scores in capturing their respective titles.

Meredith who took over the lead in the men's division Monday, slammed the door on all of his pursuers by cleaning the final match and recording a fantastic 796-79v out of 800 points to smash the old record by four points.

Lt. Thompson led on the first day, dropped back on the second and then rode to an amazing victory in the Navy Cup Match to win the women's crown with a 783, three points higher than the old mark.

She is the first woman to ever win an individual high power rifle match and did it against more than 2500 of the nation's best riflemen in one of the most gruelling matches, the 200 yard standing event.

Defending Sp5 Barbara Hile was runner up with 778 points. She previously had won the title four times.

Meredith who went into the final day of competition with a one point edge fired a perfect 150 out of 150 in the last match and needed every point as his nearest foe, T-Sgt. Kenneth Horst of the Air Force also cleaned all his targets but wound up second, just one point behind Meredith.

Making the finish all the more spectacular was the fact that both men were firing on the same relay only a few targets apart and each could see what the other was doing.

Grouped at 794 were four more soldier competitors from the MTU.

They were Sgt. Willie Jordan, Sgt. Bailey, Sgt. William Carrion and Sgt. Arpail Gapol, all bettering the old record.

PFC Louis Behling got the Army off on the right foot when he won the President's Match on opening day with a record score of 150-17v. SSgt Herbert Duncan added to the Coast Guard Trophy Match with a record tying 100-15v, and Sgt. Hector Andujar took first in the Nevada Trophy Match with a record tying 150-21v.

Sgt. Charles C. Davis won the preliminary aggregate tying with a 150-23v and SFC Cecil Stevens completed the victory parade with a 100-14v winning total in the rapid fire preliminary.

The rest of the week of competition was devoted to the national trophy matches and team events.

Ray Rush III, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ray Rush Jr., was the winner in the 16-year-old and under singles, beating runnerup Neal Wright 7-5 and 9-7.

Rush was also champion and Wright runnerup in the 14 and under singles.

MTU's Thompson Gets Rifle First for Women

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Second Lt. Margaret Thompson of Fort Benning's U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit set Camp Perry buzzing Monday when she became the first woman ever to win a high power rifle match since the matches began sixty-one years ago. Thompson took top honors in the Navy Cup Match with a score of 100-05v.

SFC Chester F. Hamilton, also of USAMTU, was second with a 100-3v. Marine Corps' SSgt Earl J. Manning posted a 100-02v for third place.

Top honors in the Crowell Trophy match went to John A. Clerke, a civilian competitor from Santa Monica, Calif., with a score of 100-19v.

Marine Cpl. Daniel Sanchez took the Army Cup Match crown with a score of 100-18v and teammate SSgt. John A. Fowler was runnerup with 100-18v. Fort Benning's Wilfrid R. Yunk took third position.

Sports Oddity

(AP) — In a game between Springfield and York of the Eastern League this week, a single was turned into a triple play.

Here is how it all came about. York had a man on first and another on second when the batter singled to right center. The York base runner moving from second to third pulled up at third. The man on first tore around second and went to third.

The throw from the Springfield outfielder went to third. The runner coming from first was tagged out. The runner ahead of him broke for the plate and was tagged out. The batter who had kept on running was by now close to third. A throw was made to the base and he was tagged out to complete the triple play.

SILENT TYPE

(AP) Assistant coach John Sandusky of the Baltimore Colts has nicknamed rookie Glen Ressler "Gabb." Noting that the lineman from Penn State is the strong, silent type, Sandusky explains: "Glen rooms with Mike Curtis. When Curtis said hello to him, Ressler punched Mike in the mouth and told him he talked too much."

A HIGH WIND IN JAMAICA — Set in the Caribbean of the 1860s when steam-powered warships were slowly chasing pirates off the seas. Among the last of the pirate ships is one commanded by grizzled Captain Anthony Quinn and his first mate James Coburn. Quinn and his crew of disgruntled buccaneers capture a sailing vessel, murder its crew and inadvertently kidnap some children on their way to school in England. The children have the run of the ship and eventually it becomes difficult to discern between kidnappers and the kidnapped.

THE TRAIN — Academy Award - winner Burt Lancaster portrays an area inspector of the French Railway Service during the German occupation of France. Openly forced to cooperate with the Nazis, he is actually one of the Resistance leaders. French art, which has been looted from museums and homes, is being taken out of Paris and into Germany before the city is recaptured by the Allied forces. Lancaster devises a desperate plan to stall "THE TRAIN" without destroying the priceless art. After deliberately crashing two locomotives together, he is hidden by Jeanne Moreau, a widow, who aids the Underground in its fight to resist the Germans. Colonel Von Waldheim (Paul Scofield) works his men all night to clear the wreckage. When "THE TRAIN" leaves the yard, Lancaster and Von Waldheim meet in a suspense filled action - packed climax for their inevitable showdown!

CAA FUND DRIVE . . . Maj. Gen. Robert York (left), Fort Benning commander turned over the first contribution of the drive to deputy post commander, Col. Earl Holton when the drive started a month ago. At the time he appealed to all Benning soldiers to contribute. To date only 41 per cent of the CAA goal has been reached. Drive officials, with one week remaining to reach the $50,000 goal, this week appealed to soldiers to dig deep and put the drive over the top.

Remember: Information Idly Given Can Endanger Our Military Security

"Did you hear that my unit is going overseas?"

"No. When are you leaving?"

Conversations such as this one between a soldier and a waitress at a bar on the outskirts of an Army installation do occur. Go into practically any off post establishment anywhere in the world and it probably won't take too long to find a discussion of troop movements, military projects, or new military equipment.

Freedom of speech is a right granted to Americans by the Constitution of the United States. However, the abuse of this right by some individuals in Government service presents a serious threat to national security.

Easily Heard

Such information could easily be heard by foreign intelligence agents and may be just what is needed to complete the over - all intelligence picture of a specific operation.

A one-time espionage agent working in the U. S. said he was able to pick up valuable information — particularly in the Baltimore - Washington area — with little difficulty because "Americans talk too much."

He said that on one occasion a young Ordnance officer provided, with very little prompting, needed information on experiments being conducted at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland. The agent, a Polish colonel who defected to the U. S. in 1959, revealed these facts in his book, SPY IN THE U. S.

Loose Talk

The subject of "loose talk" drew the attention of the Commanding General of Second Army recently. In a Command letter to area posts, it was pointed out that "the dangers inherent in 'loose talk' are readily apparent. This is especially true in instances where troop movements are involved."

As an example, the conversation concerning the unit scheduled for overseas duty could have been overheard by an espionage agent, who would have immediately started the sabotage wheels rolling. The end result might have been the destruction of the ship or aircraft carrying the unit to its destination.

"In view of this danger," the letter went on, "commanders at all echelons are reminded to give their attention to insuring that all personnel in their commands are aware of the 'need - to-know' principle as defined in paragraph 26, AR 380-5 (Safeguarding Defense information)."

Need to Know

The cited regulation describes "need-to-know" as the term given to the requirement that dissemination of defense information be limited strictly to those persons whose official duties require knowledge or possession thereof.

It states further that no person is entitled to knowledge or possession of defense information solely by virtue of his grade, office, or security clearance.

The responsibility for determining whether a person's duties require that he have access to defense information and whether he is authorized to receive it rests upon the individual who has possession, knowledge, or command control of the information involved, explains AR 380-5.

Does this feeling of responsibility for security exist also for members of civilian firms in private industry? It certainly does as many employees may not know some of their employer's vital trade secrets or how they're protected.

According to legend, there are only two persons who know the secret seventh ingredient of a leading soft drink. These two persons are not allowed to travel together just on the chance that an accident might kill both of them. Even harder to believe is that the company's president does not have access to the formula.

Security

Whether security involves the secrets of the military forces or of private industry, it is definite that persons employed to uncover vital information bear little resemblence to their counterparts in fiction, the screen, or TV. Most of them are trained to appear barmless and commonplace.

Consequently, any momentary neglect to follow sound principles of everyday security measures — including the discussion of defense information with persons without a need-to-know — is spotted quickly and fully exploited.

It is apparent that loose talk increases when people are drinking. At such times, they become more relaxed and exercise less constraint. Public drinking establishments in the vicinity of defense installations are ideal locations for foreign intelligence personnel to gather desired items of security information.

Sometimes information is carelessly revealed by individuals who do not possess security clearances or access to defense information, but who may have obtained their knowledge by observation, previous association, or past experience.

An officer in the Office of Chief of Staff, Intelligence, pointed out that "military personnel should not live with the mistaken notion that what they do in their leisure time is their own business. If what they do off-duty can have an adverse affect on the nation's welfare, then those activities become the Army's business."

Rumors

Closely allied to loose talk are rumors. Everyone knows how quickly a rumor can spread throughout a unit, installation, or community.

A rumor often starts because someone misinterprets the meaning of something he sees or hears, and the garbled story passes from person to person.

Rumors are frequently started by the enemy as a propaganda device or an intelligence technique. In World War II, morale - destroying rumors were planted by the enemy concerning U. S. ship losses. In addition to affecting morale, the enemy hopes that public announcement to counter the rumors would include facts which might provide intelligence information.

Danger

The conversation cited at the beginning of this article concerning the unit slated for reassignment can also be used to show the danger of rumors. Suppose it was rumor and not fact that the unit involved was scheduled for an oversea area. Consider what an unnecessary disruption such a rumor would have if it got back to other members of the unit, to families of unit members, or to civilian communities in which unit members reside. Consider also what the effect would be if similar rumors involving other units in other parts of the nation were generated at the same time.

River Crossings Prep 1st of 8th For Viet Nam

The 1st Battalion 8th Cavalry, just prior to departing for Viet Nam, made tactical river crossings at Victory Pond.

Lt. Col. Kenneth E. Mertel, Battalion Commander, directed the exercise to give the men as much realistic training as possible before encountering the many rivers of Viet Nam.

Company A, led by Capt. Ted Danielson, put most of its men across on inflated air mattresses, which each man normally carries in his pack. The men of the Combat Support Company made poncho rafts capable of carrying all their heavy equipment and a large quantity of ammunition.

A LABOR DAY REMINDER . . . The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry used these autos and dummies to bring home a safety point during a recent holiday weekend. They are intended to be a visual reminder of what can happen when holiday spirit takes over from common sense driving. Safety officials at Fort Benning urge everyone to have a pleasant, accident-free week-end.

Heat Remedy

Temperatures have been running about average for the past weeks — HOT, HOTTER and HOTTEST. Julie Kelly, 3, and Cecil Rogers, 3, came up with a solution to the heat at Russ Pool. The remedy is not recommended if the soldier happens to be in uniform. This unique photo was caught by The Bayonet's roving photographer Mike Geydoshek. Are you a photographer? Do you have any interesting photos? Bring them to The Bayonet and maybe they'll make print.

Ranger Training Gets New Guerrilla Influence

Soldiers Shown 80 MPH Crash For Long Labor Day Weekend

Fort Benning soldiers Thursday got a demonstration of what happens to an automobile when it hits a stationary object at 80 miles per hour.

A helicopter picked up a junk automobile and dropped it on Sight Seeing field from 215 feet illustrating exactly how a car is demolished on impact.

The show was staged twice yesterday in an attempt to get soldiers to drive safely over the Labor Day holiday weekend.

Safety officials here were alarmed with the National Safety Council tally of 715 deaths on the nation's highways last Labor Day and are using the salvaged cars as part of the campaign against death on the highways this weekend.

The demonstration was presented yesterday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The cars were donated by Fort Benning's Property Disposal Office.

Fort Benning safety officials issued a plea to soldiers to drive slowly and safely over the weekend. They pointed to the fact that speed is a factor in almost every type of accident. They asked everyone to be alert to the unusual traffic conditions during the last weekend of the summer and to adjust their driving to the road and the weather.

In his official holiday message, Benning commander, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York urged all personnel to be extremely careful over the holiday. He said:

"During the forthcoming Labor Day weekend the menace of the highways will be at its greatest and the recreational hazards will increase significantly

The 1st Cavalry at Sea; '. . .Boredom and Training'

BY HANK ALLISON

AT SEA WITH THE 1ST CAVALRY DIVISION — It's hot, it's crowded — it's an Army troop ship. A sea of olive drab humanity swarms over her decks, the only distinction from man to man being the combination of green, black and brown dye he used when coloring his "T" shirts before leaving Fort Benning.

Training continues as usual, although allowances must be made for space Early in the morning, the shouts of men doing calisthenics fill the air, almost before the ship has had time to shake the sleep from her eyes.

Some changes have been made, and our once starched and creased Army has changed into a rolled up sleeves and go to work force. The shiny boots, pride of many a second lieutenant, have given way to tennis shoes, more practical on the often slippery decks.

Even at sea, the division continues work to remain combat-ready.

A massive orientation program to prepare the men

Fort Benning's Florida Ranger Camp has instituted a new concept in counter-guerrilla training.

According to Ranger training officials, students will be required to execute counter-guerrilla operations utilizing tactics similar to those currently being employed in South Viet Nam.

Speed of Movement

Much emphasis is currently being placed on the need for speed and flexibility of movement in guerrilla operations. This technique of guerrilla fighting is being integrated into the Rangers' overall training program by placing the student in a centrally positioned patrol base from which he will launch training operations for 17 days.

At this base the student will be taught such techniques as stream crossings and small boat maneuvering. "The particular classes will be of aid to the student when he carries out realistic counter - guerrilla operations," Ranger trainers say.

Fording

As the student moves across the country, he will now understand various stream fording techniques that will make previously unpassable waters fordable.

In addition to maneuvering small boats downstream, the Ranger students will land their craft and assault and destroy guerrilla installaas millions of people are having a last summer fling. Speed, weary drivers, unsafe vehicles, and alcohol will combine to create vehicle accidents from which hundreds will not escape.

Crash

"The dead will include many chance-takers. For many, the happy holiday period will be saddened by the death or injury of loved ones.

"Last Labor Day we were very fortunate not to have the death toll include personnel of Fort Benning. To attain a similiar record this year I urge each of you to use common sense in taking precautionary measures to avoid the potential holiday hazards, explicitly observe traffic laws, avoid driving after drinking or while fatigued, drive defensively, use seat belts, and observe safety in your recreational activity.

"During the Weekend — STAY ALERT — STAY ALIVE. WE WANT YOU BACK."

for the terrrain they will meet in Viet Nam is under way. The soldiers are also training daily in combat tactics, the care of weapons and all the other skills that make a soldier.

Below decks there is another world, much different from the one topside. In hot compartments surrounding the ship's furnace room (which uses over a barrel of fuel oil a mile), work the kitchen crews, the administration men and others who clean and mop the labrynth - like passageways. Though some would like to forget it, there must be K.P.s to help prepare the thousands of meals consumed by the men daily. At night there must be a cup of coffee and a sandwich for the men who are busy preparing the ship for the coming day.

After the training, the details and all the other tasks are through, there is the problem of what to do with your time off. Some just watch the water go by, some wish the water would just stand still for a minute and let their shattered equilibrium catch up with it. The rest of the men lie around on the decks, sleep in the sun or read one of the books provided by the Red Cross.

Mail doesn't come every day as it did at Fort Benning. In the evening, a lot of pictures of wives and girls are produced, and there isn't a man aboard who wouldn't comment to his bunkmate "Boy is she a looker."

It is reminiscent, say the veterans of World War II and Korea, of those troop movements. It isn't like being reassigned to an overseas duty station, they say. There is an apprehension in the air. You can sense it in the way they watch the ship's wake from the fantail.

Ranger

tions and strongholds.

Students will also utilize helicopters and motorized vehicles to plot the withdrawal course of the guerrilla forces thus enabling them to stage surprise attacks on the enemy.

These new maneuvering techniques will also allow Rangers the flexibility necessary for quick reinforcement of friendly defensive positions where a guerrilla attack seems imminent.

The Ranger student will also be engaged in search and destroy missions in guerrilla held territory. Successful accomplishment of their tasks will depend heavily on their ability to maneuver quickly and accurately.

Flaming Arrow

A technique to be employed in directing friendly forces in the direction of the enemy during an attack or withdrawal will be the "flaming arrow." This is an operation in which a series of burning gasoline cans are used to point the way to an enemy attack or withdrawal.

As the Ranger student is airlifted into a guerrilla area, the friendly ground forces will direct the dropping aircraft toward the guerrilla force's movement.

The students will be required to attack guerrilla - held villages, destroy the enemy position, and then hold the village. To accommplish this mission the Rangers will move quickly to a predetermined landing zone and establish an encirclement of the village to be attacked.

Coordination will be the key to the operation. No longer will the Rangers operate as separate patrols but as a company instead. The platoons, led by Ranger students, will have to coordinate the stoppage of the guerrilla force's withdrawal.

A great deal of the effectiveness of the students' training will depend upon their ability to intercept and organize intelligence gained from various sources.

TSB Gymnasium Gets Renovation

The Student Brigade gymnasium recently underwent a complete interior renovation under the supervision of 2nd Lt. Arnold Jomes, special services officer, and his staff.

The regulation size basketball floor has been cleaned, sanded and varnished while a large blue and white "Follow Me" patch was painted in the center circle at midcourt. All rooms have been painted as have all the floors and cement fixtures. A badminton court has been added.

The gym's facilities also provide the necessary equipment for wrestling, volleyball, gymnastics and weight lifting. There is an electric score board and clock for basketball.

The TSB gym is open during normal duty hours until company basketball season gets underway and then the winter schedule with its evening operating hours will go into effect. The winter schedule is normally initiated in November but no definite date has been set yet, Jones said.

Explorer Scouts Get New Charter

Explorer Scout Post 142, sponsored by Lawson Army Aviation Command, was recently presented with its charter.

In presenting the charter, commissioner Ken Forsyth delivered a recruiting challenge whereby each explorer was enjoined to bring in one new member by the end of the year. Post 142 currently has twelve members but expects to grow to more than 30 by January.

Post 142's specialty is aviation with emphasis on surveying as many fields of interest as can be investigated within the immediate locality as well as occasional trips to outlying areas connected with aviation.

The unit meets at 7 p.m. on the first and third Thursday of each month at Lawson Field. Boys interested in joining Post 142 should contact Sp5 William D. Byron at 545-7503.

$85-A-Month Private Gets $70,000 Sweepstake Prize

Special to the Bayonet From the Daily Oklahoman

FORT SILL, Okla., — "See here, Private Levandowski. . .just because you won $70,000 in the Irish Sweepstakes. . ."

That's what $85-a-month Pvt. Thomas Levandowski, was hearing recently at Fort Sill—and it's true.

He holds half interest in a ticket his mother bought for $3.75 last January in the famous Irish race. The ticket was a winner, $140,000 worth.

Fort Sill authorities learned of the soldier's good fortune because he was so eager every day to get his mail. He's been expecting his check for $70,000 any day.

Levandowski, a draftee who has been in the Army almost three months, has known about the winning ticket long enough to have calmed down a little bit.

"The government will get some of it," he said, "about 46 per cent of the $70,000, and I will invest the rest. But right now, in the Army, it doesn't make any difference in my life at all."

His life at Fort Sill is what life is for most Army privates — with or without $70,000. He wears the traditional "white sidewalls" burr haircut, fatigues and a pained expression when sergeants speak to him.

He's assigned to B Battery, 7th Training Battalion in Fort Sill's Artillery Training center.

Levandowski, still single, heard about his winnings in a call from Bob Day, newsman with the Grand Rapids Press in the soldier's Michigan hometown. He wasn't very calm about it then, Day said.

"What . . . Wow! You just made me the happiest man in the world," Day quoted the 5-foot, 11-inch GI as saying then.

Owner of the other half of the ticket is Mrs. Ida Mae Levandowski, Grand Rapids.

Levandowski said he didn't even know the race had been held when Day called him. He won on a horse named Meadow Court.

"I never heard of the horse," he said. "I had no idea where the ticket was until my mother found it at home — luckily, or we wouldn't have gotten a penny without it."

Waiting for the check to arrive in the mail "makes each day kind of exciting," he said.

The Chaplain Says:

Words Express Unique Ideas

Words express ideas. There is one word which expresses a rather unique idea. That word is courage.

It was Hemingway who described courage as "Grace under pressure" and the late John F. Kennedy in his book, "Profiles in Courage", cites incidents in the lives of several statesmen to prove that courage is grace under pressure. Courage has a way of moving people and of extending itself to the faint hearted.

Only men of character, as President Kennedy points out, can produce a courageous life. A man without character may seemingly succeed in performing glorious deeds of valor, but the motivation behind the acts may be selfish, malicious or even stupid.

It took more than a bit of courage for Samson to knock the brains out of a thousand of his enemies with the jawbone of an ass.

The widow Judith also answered to a challenge beyond the routine duties of a Jewish woman. She risked her life, her honor and her nation's deliverance in beguiling General Holfernes. She was a heroine and a woman of exceeding courage long before she cut off the drunken general's head with his own sword.

Certainly our Lord's life is pre-eminently the most courageous in all history. To know in advance what is to befall you and deliberately, from a motive of love, walk into the galley of death is courage that defies description. The night that the God-man prayed in the garden of Gethsemane, and foresaw what was just ahead, leaves you an example in courage that is equaled only by His acceptance of the Cross and His walk through the city streets to die at Calvary summit.

It was the life of Christ that gave the martyrs courage to laugh. They had a sense of humor in facing their executioners that must have the axe-man many sleepless nights.

The life of Christ gives you and me the courage to resolve to follow Him despite the many roadblocks and detours of life. It takes courage to say no to evil, to face ridicule for being good, and to be exact in your duties to yourself and to God and your country.

Labor Day Message

Labor Day 1965 is an appropriate occasion to note the American worker's contribution to our nation's strength. Working men and women in countless shops and factories are producing arms and supplies vital to our military forces. This equipment is playing an important role in resisting the current threat to the freedom and independence of countries in Southeast Asia as well as our own security. This serious threat can be overcome only by the efforts of all Americans. In this effort, it is reassuing to know that American labor, as a production partner, is on the same team with the armed forces. This teamwork, we are confident, will be able to meet successfully the challenge ahead.

The Department of Defense welcomes this opportunity to salute American labor.

'The Point of the Spear'

"If's most continue to meet responsibilities and must continue to have a strong country and a strong alliance and a strong Free World, and to do that we need a strong Army which is the point of the spear."

JOHN F. KENNEDY
35th President

The Judge Says . . .

"Finders keepers, losers weepers." Is the old rhyme true or false?

There are some rather fine distinctions and exceptions to the "finders keepers" maxim that have plagued the courts — and finders — for many years. In the first place, the finder is not entitled to keep the property unless the original owner is unknown and cannot be located. Neither may he keep it unless the object is truly "lost" and not merely "mislaid."

In general, property is legally "lost" when parted with involuntarily — through accident, neglect, forgetfulness or any other unintentional circumstances.

Property is not lost in the legal sense when voluntarily left by the owner, intending to pick it up later — even though he fails to do so. Such property is "mislaid."

Thus, if one loses a watch or bracelet on the street by having the clasp break, not knowing where or when it was dropped, it is legally "lost." The same is true of a fountain pen falling through a hole in one's pocket unobserved. In such cases, the finder owns what he has found against all but the true owner.

On the other hand, a package left on the seat of a bus is "mislaid" rather than lost. The proper custodian to hold the property for the owner would be the driver or other person in charge.

Remaining unclaimed, the property sometimes goes to the custodian, sometimes to the finder. The distinction here is based on whether the property is found in a private or semi-private place, or a place used by the general public.

The Surgeon Says

Unseen Picnic Guests

Going on a picnic — don't let the "bugs" spoil your fun.

Certain insects — ants, flies, mosquitoes, and more serious, ticks are often uninvited guests. "Bugs", which doctors worry about most, inhibit contaminated food and water, causing definitely unpleasant conditions which have spoiled many outings. Too frequently many people invite these "bugs" to their picnics.

The "bugs" most often found at a picnic are the staphylococci, which form a toxin stable to heat (cooking does not destroy it), the salmonella family and the streptococci, both of which must be living to cause trouble.

Usually we think of hamburger as the most common villain in food poisoning; however, cooked foods, especially potato salad, cream-filled pastries, and cured meats are most likely to be the bad actors.

Hamburger cooked thoroughly at the picnic site will generally destroy most of the bacteria providing it has been refrigerated below 50 degrees.

Prevention and avoidance are the keys to a pleasant picnic outing. So don't do things with food on a picnic that you wouldn't do at home.

For example, you don't keep potato salad in the sun on the window sill from early morning to supper time. Nor would you prepare the tuna fish salad and leave it in the sun.

Remember the trunk of your car is just as hot, if not hotter, than the window sill. For a joyous outing, don't make up your picnic sandwiches the night before. Keep your picnic food cool, 50 degrees F or below, from the time you prepare it until you are ready to eat it.

Cooked foods and sandwiches should be kept in the ice chest along with the beverages. Another reminder is to carry a sufficient supply of potable drinking water; even a sparkling, sunlit stream can be filled with contagion. Remember these tips and "the bugs" won't be at your next picnic.

Our Constitution

A Studious Look At Our Government

Editor's Note: The following is one of the most lucid explanations of the role of tri-partite government to cross the editorial desk of The Bayonet. The author of the article is Diana Reische, National Affairs magazine editor. It is her introduction to an examination of the 89th Congress at work.

"Constitutions," wrote Alexander Hamilton "should consist only of general provisions; the reason is that they must necessarily be permanent, and that they cannot possibly calculate for the possible change of things."

And what a "change of things" this nation has undergone in the 178 years since a small group of 18th century gentlemen met in Philadelphia to devise a framework for their fledgling country.

Their document was brief as constitutions go (many state constitutions run far longer). But it has proved to be more flexible and more durable than perhaps even its most optimistic framers might have hoped.

Under it, with remarkably few changes or amendments, the U. S. has developed from the precarious experiment in democracy of 13 small states on the fringe of a continent—to a continental nation that ranks first among the world's industrial powers. But through all changes from a small rural nation to a powerful atomic - age giant, the basic Constitutional framework has remained unchanged. The three coequal branches of U. S. government remain: legislative, executive, judicial.

Since the Constitution was written, about 8,000 amendments have been suggested. Only 24 have been adopted—and 10 of those (the Bill of Rights) were proposed by some of the original authors.

In fact, since the government began functioning in its present form in 1789, the two houses of Congress have endorsed just 29 amendments (including the original 10 in the Bill of Rights). The states have given their approval to only 24 (14 in addition to the original 10).

As they walk the halls of the Capitol, the 535 members of the present Congress are surrounded by reminders of this continuity. In the corridors and meeting rooms they pass the busts and paintings of the Congressional, Presidential, and Judicial greats who preceded them. Thus even the most eager supporter of rapid change is constantly reminded of the strength of tradition and of continuity.

They are aware, too, of the restraints laid upon them by the Constitution they have sworn to uphold. Because the men who wrote the Constitution feared unchecked power, they established three branches of government, each with powers, but each with built-in restraints upon those powers, each with powers to check the actions of the others.

This very separation of powers has led inevitably to conflicts between the branches — between Congress and the President; between Congress and the Court; and between the Court and the President. Such conflict has sometimes been bitter and disruptive. But often the very conflict has strengthened the vitality and flexibility of the country.

To the writers of the Constitution, the three branches of government were equal, but Congress was perhaps "more equal." To them Congress came first, for it was to be closest to the people, most responsible to their needs and demands. Thus Article I, Section I created the Congress. The rest of the government flowed from that beginning.

Touch of Vanity May Do Wonders For Your Health

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (AP)—If you've spent all your life thinking that vanity is an undesirable quality, stop. A California doctor says that a touch of vanity in middle age may be good for your health

Dr. Jose Montero of the Stanford University School of Medicine reported to the American Congress of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation in Philadelphia that the efforts of middle-aged people to stay young can help ward off many degenerative diseases. Such diseases, he says, include heart trouble, diabetes and hardening of the arteries.

The doctor also says that hard work is good for you. Dr. Montero says that a recent study of 27,000 men and women 80 years or older who were essentially free of degenerative disease showed that most had been working 60 years or more in physically-demanding occupations.

Company Tactics Dept. Holds Officer Club Party

One hundred officers and ladies of the Company Tactics Department, The Infantry School, attended a party last Saturday at the Main Officers' Club.

Guests welcomed by Col. R. J. O'Neill, department director, included Mrs. Richard W. Ellison, wife of Lt. Col. Ellison, former chairman of the Platoon Tactics Committee who is in Viet Nam, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil H. Gear, parents of Capt. Edward Gear, a member of the department.

The spirit of the "Wild West" will hit the Main Officers' Club at 7:30 p.m. on October 2 when the Daughters of the United States Army (DUSA) stage their annual "Forty-Niner Party". The affair is held each year to raise funds for post charities and other philanthropic activities of DUSA.

Army Wives Weekly Recipe

This week's recipe is from Mrs. Francis E. Naughton, OWC, Fort McPherson, Ga.

COFFEE-BRANDY PIE

1-2 to 2 dozen ladyfingers
1 tbsp. gelatin
1-4 cup brandy
1 1-4 cup rich milk
2 tsp. instant coffee powder
1-2 tsp. salt
3-4 cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
2 eggs separated
1-4 tsp. cream of tarter
1 cup heavy cream
1 cup chopped walnuts

Split ladyfingers and arrange over bottom and sides of a buttered nine inch pie pan, flat side down to make a crust. Soften gelatin in brandy. Combine milk, coffee powder, salt, 1-2 cup of sugar, vanilla and beaten egg yolks in top of double-boiler. Cook over hot water until mixture thickens slightly, about ten minutes.

Add gelatin, stirring until dissolved; remove from heat and cool. When mixture begins to jell, fold in egg whites beaten to a meringue with remaining 1-4 cup of sugar and cream of tartar. Fold in stiffly beaten cream and 3-4 cup walnuts. Mound filling in ladyfinger crust. Garnish top with 1-4 cup chopped walnuts and a few walnut halves if desired. Chill until firm. Yields six to eight servings.

Household Tip

(AP) If you notice wrinkled clothes in a dryer, it's because the clothes have been over-dried.

Miss Doris Oglesby, an extension home economist at the University of Georgia, says that over-drying is sometimes the result of setting the control for too long a period. Sometimes its because articles of widely varying weights have been dried together.

If thin cotton blouses are dried with heavy, absorbant towels, the blouses will overdry. If they must be dried together, set the time for the lighter weight articles and reset for the heavier ones after removing the light ones, Miss Oglesby recommends.

Club Changes Meeting Place

Due to the renovation of the country club, the Officers' Tuesday Night Duplicate Bridge Club will meet at the Salerno Mess, Bldg. 2756-A until further notice.

All officers, their dependents and guests are cordially invited to attend. Play begins promptly at 7:30 p.m. Fractional master points are awarded each week and a whole master point one night in the month.

197th Brigade Women Hold Lake-Side Picnic

The ladies of the 197th Infantry Brigade recently held a luncheon by the lake-side summer home of Mrs. Jacob L. Riley. Swimming, bridge and the swapping of picnic foods were among the day's activities.

The next brigade luncheon is scheduled for September 22 and will be sponsored by the ladies of the 10th Artillery under the guidance of Mrs. Michael Malone, wife of the battalion commander.

Plans for the luncheon were recently outlined at the battalion coffee held in the home of Mrs. Paul Trower. Other business included the presentation of farewell gifts to Mrs. Thomas Miller, Mrs. Guy Thurmond III and Mrs. Roy Meeks.

Mrs. Robert Hasty Jr. and Mrs. Grover Katzman, a recent bride, were welcomed to the battalion.

Mrs. Trower and Mrs. Willis Bunting formed a new hospitality committee and Mrs. Hasty was selected as new treasurer.

With the start of a new social season close at hand the brigade bridge committee is planning to organize a one night a week bridge group. Letters are being sent to the ladies of the brigade in order to determine the number of interested persons.

If a sufficient number of ladies desire to play, games will be held at the Womens' Club Workshop.

RETIRING PROVOST MARSHAL . . . An infantry Center "Follow Me" plaque is presented to Col. Howard B. Keith Heim Top Grad Of ACAR Class No. 4

Capt. Keith M. Heim last week was named the distinguished graduate of the Infantry Officer Associate Career Course, Class No. 4 at graduation exercises in Fort Benning's Marshall Auditorium.

Guest speaker at the exercise was Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder Jr., commanding general of XII U. S. Army Corps, Atlanta, Ga.

Gen. Snyder told the 138 graduates, which included allied officers from eleven foreign countries and both active duty and reserve components of the U.S. Army that they should "remember well the instructions received and the lessons learned while members of this class, for we are truly at war.

"You must continue to broaden your knowledge, and not only keep abreast of developments, but you must pioneer new thinking. The challenge and opportunities are manifold, the Army is expanding and the opportunities are there for your seeking and exploitation," he added.

Gen. Snyder also told the graduates "leadership is one of the most essential qualities of a good officer. The ability to handle subordinates is a difficult task. Many times you must be tolerant and understanding, but man must be master of his tools."

Gen. Snyder was introduced by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning Commander.

As the distinguished graduate of the class, Heim received a letter of academic achievement signed by Gen. York and an engraved desk pen set from the 2nd Student Battalion.

Heim, who came to the career course from duty with the 1st Cavalry Division in Korea, will soon be leaving for an assignment with the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Columbus Police Give Orientation To Explorers

Members of Fort Benning's Explorer Post 54 were the recent guests of the Columbus Police Department for an orientation on local law enforcement procedures.

During their visit, the members of Explorer Post 54 toured the local court room and arsenal room; heard a lecture on the mission of the detective bureau and the use of lie detectors; and were briefed on the utilization of photography and fingerprinting in crime detection.

Col Wells Retires; Gets Award

Col. Howard B. Wells, Infantry Center provost marshal and former president of the Chattahoochee Valley Peace Officers' Association, received the Legion of Merit last week during retirement ceremonies at Chapel Field.

Wells retires with over 25 years of service.

He came to Fort Benning in October 1962 to take over the provost marshal position. Previously he served in the law enforcement field at White Sands Missile Range, N. Mex.; with the Provost Marshal General in Washington, D.C.; and overseas in Japan, Korea and Germany.

A graduate of the Military Police Officers' Advanced School at Fort Gordon, Ga., Wells was elected president of the Chattahoochee Valley Peace Officers' Association in June 1964 and served in that position until June 1965.

Col. Wells is married to the former Miss Margaret Childs. They have two sons, one attending Mexico State University at University Park, N. M., and the other, a private in the Army is stationed at Fort Sill, Okla.

Shift in VC Tactics Stirs Optimism in Viet Conflict

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Changing events over the past few weeks have led some high United States officials to voice cautious optimism for a solution to the immediate military situation in Viet Nam.

A change in tactics and the high fatality rate among Viet Cong prompted the present consensus.

Recently, the Viet Cong have invoked terror and harrassment on villagers instead of engaging in large unit operations.

This change in tactics is a reflection of the high level of activity by Republic of Viet Nam forces, officials said, made possible by introduction of United States combat battalions as strategic reserves.

RVN forces previously held in strategic reserve can now be introduced into combat.

The optimism received impetus in mid-August when the biggest United States search and destroy operation of the war in Viet Nam was conducted against Viet Cong forces about 55 miles southeast of DaNang near the Marine Corps complex at Chu Lai, on the South China Sea coastline.

The successful assault was made by units of the Marine Corps' 7th Regimental Landing Team, supported by air, artillery and naval gunfire.

U. S. Army helicopters and light observation planes, Navy amphibious ships, a cruiser and destroyer, and Air Force transports participated in the mission, known as Operation Star Lite.

The mission materialized from intelligence reports indicating a Viet Cong force of about 2,000, situated in the Chu Lai area.

Preliminary reports indicate the Viet Cong may have suffered an estimated 1,000 killed, several hundred wounded and more than 100 captured.

Success of Operation Star Lite is attributed to accurate intelligence, quick response and security of operations plans, officials said.

It is anticipated that RVN forces will also engage in future actions in the Chu Lai area.

Television comes to the aid of the Queen of Battle

RECORDING THE PRODUCTION IN THE VAN
The Director Integrates Shots from the Cameras

Schooling at the Infantry Center got a modern shot in the arm last week when the television section of the Infantry School opened for business.

On hand for the opening was Fort Benning commander, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York and assistant School commandant, Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe.

Television has recently become a large part of the Army's teaching program. Recently the Army authorized 1.7 million dollars for the installation of closed circuit television at 17 installations in the United States.

The School's two fully equipped studios, control rooms and motorized control van represent an investment by the Army of more than a quarter of a million dollars.

With the advent of closed circuit television, Infantry School instructors can bring squad firing demonstrations, employment of demolitions, and even river crossings right into the classroom.

Officials emphasized the new television addition is not meant to replace the instructor but to give him greater range in his classroom.

With the video-tape capability the TV section now has, it can produce and play back anything from how to mount the smallest transistors in one of the Army's latest radios to the mechanized company in the attack.

The motorized control van means the section can move to the field to film many of the School's operations for later presentation in the classroom.

As the operation is presently set up, the section can air four different programs simultaneously to different classrooms.

All this is carried out by the three officers, 16 enlisted men and one civilian who work as engineers, directors, cameramen and illustrators.

Vietnamese Waif Keeps Vigil For Corpsman Killed in Action

Da Nang, RVN (AFPS) — A four - year - old, barefooted Vietnamese girl walks up the main street of the village of Le My every morning. Her face has the stereotyped look of sadness common among children here.

Her daily journey is linked with her sadness. She is looking for the man who gave her the dog-tag she wears and the nickname "Debbie."

Her search is in vain, because the man, Navy Hospitalman Robert P. Dionne, was killed in action last July.

Dionne was attached to the Second Battalion, Third Marine Division, when the unit liberated Le My from the Viet Cong. He was instrumental in developing a medical aid station for the Vietnamese people and it was during this time he "adopted" Debbie.

She had an eye iafection and Dionne was her "doctor." After several treatments, Debbie's eye was fine. She kept coming back to the aid station to see her American friend.

The corpsman would take her by the hand and they would walk to the village "supermarket" to buy soft drinks and candy.

Dionne gave Debbie his dog-tag, a medallion with the Virgin Mary's countenance on it and a rolled penny inscribed with the Lord's Prayer.

Debbie still keeps her daily vigil. Second Battalion Marines who served with Dionne have tried to fill the gap, buying soft drinks and candy, but it isn't the same.

In the evening Debbie walks back down the dusty road to her unknown home. The dog-tag engraved "Dionne, R. P." swings to and fro as she walks. Sometimes she is crying.

A MOMENT OF HAPPINESS . . . A U.S. Marine consoles "Debbie" by telling her a story. The four-year-old Vietnamese girl was "adopted" by Navy Corpsman Robert P. Dionne after he treated her infected eye. Dionne was killed in the line of duty, but Debbie, who wears the dog tag he gave her, still comes to the medical aid station to find her friend.

67 Fort Benning Teenagers Spend the Summer Filling Ranks of Martin Army Hospital Volunteers

BY IDA C. EVANS
Special From
The Army Times

Sixty-seven boys and girls at Fort Benning rallied this summer to fill a gap left by the transfer of many of the American Red Cross Volunteers who have been working at Martin Army Hospital. Designated "Volunteens" they were trained to carry out routine, non-technical tasks throughout the hospital.

The number of adult volunteer workers always drops in the summer, according to Col. Hal B. Jennings, hospital commander, due not only to transfer but because mothers must stay home with their children while school is out. The Volunteens, who have more time to help during vacation, not only filled this void but "formed a fine nucleus for an adult volunteer group in the future" the colonel said.

Mrs. Herbert E. Wolff is chairman and Mrs. Anthony Slovacek co-chairman of the Volunteen program of the post. Two teen-age girls served as assistant chairmen, arranging schedules to provide Volunteens in all areas of the hospital where there were duties appropriate to their training and age level.

The assistants were Mary Beth Joseph, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Vern L. Joseph, and Sandy Bartholomew, daughter of 1st Sgt. and Mrs. William A. Bartholomew.

Volunteens took a two-day intensive course, which includes basic instruction given to all Red Cross volunteers, as well as orientations by staff members of the hospital and local and area Red Cross. They made tours of the hospital and received on-the-job training.

The boys and girls worked as receptionists or clerks in the outpatient, dental, well-baby, orthopedic and pediatric wards, and as assistants in the radio station, centralized materiel section, laboratory, physical therapy section, Red Cross Recreation Hall and at the central appointment desk.

Volunteens performed many personal services for patients such as writing letters, making phone calls or shopping. They played games with convalescent children and sometimes fed small patients. They folded linens, arranged flowers, and even helped patients brush their teeth or comb their hair.

Perry Gardai, who worked in the physical theraphy section, is the son of Chaplain (Capt.) and Mrs. LaVern W. Gardai. He rubbed ice packs on sore muscles, so it "would not hurt when the men do their exercises," he said. "I helped them with the weights they had to lift. Of course, I don't do anything technical—just helped out, but I've learned a lot." he said.

Ronald Jennings, son of Col. and Mrs. Jennings, worked in the laboratory. He was trained as a Volunteen nearly two years ago in Germany. A senior at Columbus High School, he plans to major in nuclear physics, perhaps at Ann Arbor. Ron spent at least three days a week in the laboratory working under the direction of the doctor in charge.

Another Volunteen was Susan Gingrich, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Robert B. Gingrich. During the three years she has worked at the hospital, she has found that the experience "teaches you to understand other people and appreciate their problems."

The O'Byrne twins, Shelia and Sharon, saw their work at the hospital as a definite step in their plan to become psychiatrists. Daughters of Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Thomas W. O'Byrne of Baltimore, the girls were graduated from Pacelli High School in Columbus in June and plan to enter Columbus College in the fall. They will major in psychology.

Volunteen service is a good way to find out if you really want to be a nurse, according to Carla Morgan, daughter of CWO and Mrs. Charles H. Morgan, and Stephanie Stenberg, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Edwin S. Stenberg Jr. The girls worked in the central materiel section of the pediatric ward.

Karen Wolff, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Wolff, answered the telephone at the central appointment desk.

"Every call was different," she said. "We had to know the hours and days each clinic was open, as well as have a lot of general information about the hospital. Then, too, we had to be very accurate in putting down the names of the patients so their files would be pulled and ready when they reported to a clinic for their appointment."

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Military men serving in Viet Nam can send first class mail to the United States free, but there is some confusion about whether it will go airmail once it hits U. S. shores.

The reason is that the amendment to the pay bill which authorizes the free mail did not specify that it be carried by air. Pentagon and Post Office Department officials have had their heads together since passage of the pay bill to iron out this and some other problems and the best bet appears to be a new bill which is now under consideration by the House Post Office and Civil Service Commission.

Furthermore, the Post Office Department wants the Pentagon to pay it back for carrying the mail. Postal officials say it will cost them about a nickle for each piece of military mail they handle and they want to be reimbursed.

ANOTHER DEFICIENCY in the pay bill mail amendment was that it carried no provision for free mail for men wounded in Viet Nam and evacuated to hospitals outside of the war zone. The Defense Department says it wants hospitalized Viet Nam veterans to have the free mail advantage too.

The bill which is supposed to solve all the problems is HR 10441 on which hearings have already been held by the House Committee.

But there are things wrong with that bill, too. One of these is that there would be a reduced rate for parcels under five pounds mailed to people in the service overseas. Both departments feel it is wrong to provide special mailing privileges to the general public as this would do.

A GREAT PORTION of first class mail goes by air anyway, say PO officials, but the Defense Department wants the Viet Nam mail to have priority and be assured of airmail travel.

Also coming up soon will be rules on how men in Viet Nam should mark their envelopes to take advantage of the free mail privilege. In the Korean war they put their military address and serial number in the upper left hand corner of the envelope. Now they can write "free" in the upper right corner of the envelope.

Cooperation Saves Navy Men at Sea

WIESBADEN, Germany (AFPS) — Intra-service cooperation brought emergency relief to 13 Navy officers and men aboard the destroyer USS Goodrich in the Mediterranean.

The naval personnel were under observation for suspected food poisoning. A special drug, botulism antitoxin, was needed to treat the men.

Navy medical authorities in Naples sent a plea for the drug to the preventive medical officer at Headquarters, United States Army in Europe. Army supplies of the antitoxin were exhausted but some was obtained from the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

The next problem was getting the drug to the stricken men. Headquarters, U.S. Air Force, Europe, was called in.

A Wiesbaden AB jet was diverted in flight to Evreux AB, France: An Army helicopter delivered the antitoxin from Paris and the jet was on its way. It landed in Naples just 6½ hours after the original request was sent out.

All 13 Navymen recovered.

Shipboard Cav Reporter Recounts Passage Through Panama Canal

Editor's Note: Jim Lull is a 1st Cavalry Division information specialist en-route to Viet Nam with the 2nd Brigade. The following account was taken from the Aug. 20 issue of the "Buckner Banner," the ship's newspaper.

BY JIM LULL

The experience of passing through the world famous Panama Canal yesterday will stand out on the "memory list" of thousands of men aboard the USNS Gen. Simon B. Buckner.

Comments such as "I've always heard about this place, but never thought I would be here," and "this is one heck of an operation," were evident through the entire day.

The actual passage through the canal did take slightly more than eight hours as advertised. Under the careful guidance of the pilot and the informative word of the narrator, men of the 2nd Brigade were back at sea about sundown last night.

The building of the canal, in the early 20th century, was a task that for years seemed impossible. The first tangible efforts to construct the Panama Canal began in 1880 by the French Canal Company.

Since its opening over 50 years ago, more than 250,000 ships and over one billion tons of cargo have gone through the waterway. The United States is the prime user of the canal.

On our journey through the canal, we traveled a total of 36 miles. By using this "shortcut", we saved about 7,000 miles on our trip.

Two days or more prior to our arrival at the Cristobal breakwater, the Canal Zone authorities were waiting to guide us through and schedule our transfer from the Atlantic to the Pacific through the tremendous system of locks.

The pilot who navigated us through is a professional seaman, familiar with every part of the channel's tricky geographic personality. Our trip through the zone is one of the rare instances when someone not organic to the vessel is in command.

Benning expects to have a minimum of ten crews participating in the three day 67 mile canoe race from the Columbus City Docks to Eufaula, Alabama.

Representing Post 142 were its president, Dan Lewis, and members Bob Copeland, Lewis Lee and Mike Brady. Post 54's attendees were its president, Bill O'Dell, and members Jeff Krauskopf and Chip Williams. Advisors Earl Taylor and William Byron chaired the meeting.

The next meeting of the District Explorer Cabinet will be held at 7:30 p.m. on September 23 at the new YAC offices at the Old Post Gym.

Emergency Proposal

House Armed Services Committee Considers Enlistment Extensions

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — An emergency proposal for holding Army and Air Force men in service involuntarily beyond their terms of enlistment is under study in Congress. The Navy and Marine Corps have the power of involuntary extension and they have put it into effect, extending enlistments for four months.

The House Armed Services Committee started out with a bill to give such help-in men a 25-percent pay raise for involuntary service. The bill was sponsored by the committee chairman, Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.).

Midway of a three-day hearing on this proposition, the Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. David L. McDonald, said he was sure the other service chiefs — his colleagues on the Joint Chiefs of Staff — would like to have the same power the Navy has.

Next day Assistant Secretary of Defense Norman Paul appeared before a closed-door session of the committee, and members disclosed that a bill will be drafted to give all services equal power in that respect.

Whether such a new bill can be worked out in form suitable to the committee and the rest of the Congress was still a question.

Committee members said that in the Navy - Marine enlistment papers there was a proviso — "in small print, but legal," as one witness said — pointing out the possibility of involuntary extension. It is in the contract.

But for Army and Air Force, it was said, no such provision is in the contract they have signed. Some committee members indicated they thought it would be unfair to change the enlisted contracts now in force.

This made it appear more likely that the new bill, if drafted, would apply to future terms of enlistments than those now in force.

It was authoritatively reported that the pay raise plan the committee started out with has been ditched. It raised problems of different rates of pay for different men in the services.

Gen. Wallace Greene, Commandant of the Marine Corps, was the only witness in the public hearing to endorse the pay differential for the involuntary extendees.

Greene said the Marine Corps will be getting more men — possibly some from the draft — but they won't be ready until next spring.

Members of the House Committee criticized Navy Secretary Paul Nitze for not telling them ahead of time that the Navy was going to extend enlistments.

He said it was an oversight and a mistake on his part not to have done so.

Committee members started out by criticizing the Navy for resorting to the legal authority they have for the move. It is based on a combination of a 1941 law and a national emergency declared by President Truman in 1950. Some of the lawmakers seemed surprised that an emergency declaration would hold good for that long.

Other said that if the services need the power to hold men in, they ought to have it in a newly-passed, clearly stated act of Congress.

Under present law, it was said, Army and Air Force enlistments can be extended only after Congress declares war or a national emergency.

MAH Cuts Dependents' Sick Call

Martin Army Hospital officials this week announced that, effective Aug. 30, no sick call for dependents will be conducted during the morning hours at Martin Army Hospital. Any specialty clinics which have issued appointments for morning hours will not be affected by this restriction, they added.

They said this action is necessitated because Martin Army Hospital is presently operating with less than half of the medical officers that were present last year this time. Because of the absence of general duty medical officers, the specialists on the medical staff are now operating all post dispensaries in the morning for military sick call."

It was pointed out that in the past general duty medical officers assigned to the divisions on post were available to augment the medical staff at the hospital. Emergencies only can be treated in the Emergency Room MAH.

Cavalryman Reminisces

Ship Music Replaces Soldier's Thoughts of War

BY J. D. COLEMAN

ENROUTE TO VIET NAM — The sound of a wailing saxaphone drifter over the dark waters, splotched with the lights of the passing vessel. The sounds of talk and laughter form an undertone for the staccatto taps of the drum, and for a brief period, for many, it is a time for reminiscing.

It is a time for forgetting that the band crowded into a corner is clothed in grimy fatigues; that the instruments are tarnished and battered; that the piano has the tune of a barroom steinway; are that the bass has frayed strings and a taped yoke.

Just for a moment as Sgt. John Hodges, the lead tenorman, slides into the solo spot from "I Left My Heart in San Francisco" each individual in the audience could be anywhere . . . anywhere but on a ship bound for Viet Nam.

Music Has Charms

Music does indeed have charms to soothe the savage beast, . . and to provide forgetfullness and a poignant respite from the harsh realities of things to come. For that brief instant, one sees not a fatigue - clad pick-me-up band that only that very day got together for first rehearsal, but a club combo wailing and swinging. The sob of the sax and the shriek of the trumpet provide that bitter-sweet moment of memory.

Yet it it still too early for the real effects of this music to be felt. The audience is still too close to the past. . . . applause is scattered, almost perfunctory. But it will improve with each passing day . . and night. And on the night before the dawn of that certain day when realities unfold. . .then will there be applause and cheers and, perhaps, even tears. It has been thus in the past and it will be thus again in the future.

Who are these men who provide this respite from reality. . .this booster for the morale?

For those who have heard them play, it came as no surprise to know that many were professional musicians before coming in the Army. Some are from the 1st Cavalry Division band, while yet others are members of the 2nd Brigade Task Force and yet even another is a member of the ship's crew.

Sgt. Hodges has been an Army bandsman for 17 years. His best instruments are the clarinet and alto sax, but here on the Buckner, he plays lead tenor, and, more or less, sets the pace for the rest of the group.

Sp4 William Short is also a division band member and before joining the "First Team" was a member of the 2nd Division Band. He plays the piano with the ship's band, but regards the alto and tenor sax as his primary instruments. Before induction, he played professionally with club groups in Reno, Nev., and San Juan P. R.

PFC John Barrett, 13 months with the 1st Cav band, plays the barritone sax with the Buckner Combo, but has played professionally as an electric guitarist. In Columbus, Ga., he played with the Gimps, and while in New York, prior to induction, Barrett was associated with Joey Dee and the Starlighters.

Another "First Team" bandsman is PFC John M. Stepanek, who alternates on the alto sax and piano with Short. His musical experience included combo work while matriculating at Purdue University where he obtained an AB in sociology.

Two drummers provide the basic rhythm for the ship's combo. One is a division bandsman and the other is a member of one of the units aboard the Buckner. Sp4 John Thompson has been with the division band for a year-and-a-half. He began playing the "skins" in high school in Grand Rapids, Mich. A man from the Aerial Rocket Battalion, the 2nd Battalion, 20th Artillery, is the other drummer. PFC Sam Lovell, who has been in the Army since January, began playing while in high school in Dekalb, Ill.

Tell by Blisters

You can always tell a bass man by the blisters on his fingers, and PFC Dean Sorenson is no exception. With tape on his right hand, he bangs out the rhythm for the combo. Sorenson, a radio telephone operator in Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavarly, played professionally with a family group in California before trading his primary instruments, a tenor sax and guitar, for a PRC-25.

The ship's special service stores do not possess the magic of an electric guitar, so PFC Walt Matterson, a radio teletype operator for Headquarters, 2nd Brigade, makes do with the common, garden - variety string guitar. It suffices however for the purposes intended. . .rhythm and counterpoint for the band. Matterson played with professional Rock - N - Roll groups in Philadelphia before coming in the Army.

Another musician from Philly is Sp4 Ronald Iaconelli, who plays second tenor sax in the combo. The harmonies he plays are a far cry from the modules of the radios he works on as radio repairman for Bravo Company, 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry. He also played professionally in the city of Brotherly Love before coming on active duty.

Lone Civilian

The lone civilian in the group is Jimmy Young, an able bodied seaman making his third trip aboard the Buckner. His trumpet, warbling in the best tradition of Harold McGee and Dizzy Gillespie, provides the brassy melodic counter for the throaty sax section. Young has been playing for nearly 13 years and, while a member of MSTS, usually finds himself a part of a ship's band.

No group can be complete without a leader and the NCOIC of the Division Band Detachment aboard the ship fills this bill well. He is M-Sgt. Conrad D. Oller, a veteran of 23 years of Army band work with the slide trombone.

All bands, of course, need a thrush. But with the fairer sex just not available this trip, the vocal chores are taken over by Lt. Dennis Campbell, platoon leader of the Recon Platoon of the 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry. Campbell, who has played some saxaphone and guitar in his career, prefers to warble in dulcet tones such ballads as "Kansas City" and "Long, Tall Sally."

The band will play every other night in both the troop and cabin lounges.

Warrant Officer Builds Missile Safety Device

Eni AFB, Colo (AFPS) — A new safety device which reduces the possibility of accidental missile firing has been developed here by a warrant officer of the Army Air Defense Headquarters.

Chief Warrant Officer Ira O. Odom developed an automatic light for the control panel of the man who fires the missile. The light tells the panel operator whether a firing simulator, used in training, or an actual missile is hooked up.

The modification in an additional factor in the prevention of accidents during training. It has been adopted by the Army and is being installed at Nike-Hercules sites around the world.

The Reaction to War

Viet Nam's 'Clammy' War

BIEN HOA — War was new to most of these Army paratroopers until they went into Zone D and got muddy in it. It was something they read about all through their young lives, a novelty they used to flip through at magazine stands, coming from World Wars I and II and Korea.

But it used to be unreal, distant, and could always be flipped off like a light simply by waiting for the TV program to end, or walking out of the movie house, or closing the covers of a comic book, or turning to other games and illusions of youth.

Then all of a sudden, it wasn't a novelty anymore.

There's jungle ahead and all around. You come out of the deeper water and find yourself now in ankle-deep water with mud and plant rot lying around that makes a stinking muck. The bugs and mosquitos are at you and you walk into more chest high elephant grass.

You come across huge burnt out places devoid of vegetation where napalm bombs have been dropped. There's some sniper fire off on your flank and everybody takes cover. In a little while you're moving again.

The birds around issue crazy shreiks. They yell and scream and flap around in the trees overhead. Sound travels clearly and far in the jungle. You have to stick close to your buddies because you can't follow footprints in areas covered by water. And sometimes the undergrowth in these areas is so thick that if you take your eyes off a man for too long you'll lose him.

In the high grass it's easy to follow. Each man leaves a crushed trail as he goes. It rains intermittently, pours or drizzles. Then it goes away and the sun comes back. If you're in the open, the light burns into you and sweat pours out of your insides. If you're in the shadows cast by the jungle's thick tree canopy, you're a little better off.

But, everything drips water. You wake up in the morning soaked. Everything is soaked and it doesn't even have to rain. Moisture hangs in the air — the air is clammy. You and your buddies make coffee and it tastes good, like at the Waldorf.

British Airmen Get Caribou Training Here

BY WADE LADUE

The use of the CV-2 Caribou aircraft by armed services of other nations is being spotlighted by the visit to Fort Benning of two officers and an NCO from the British Royal Air Force this week.

The men began a four day familiarization tour of the 134th Aviation Company on Tuesday prior to returning to Kenya, East Africa to begin a CV-2 transition program with the Kenya Air Force.

The officers, Flight Lieutenants Tom D. Scott and Chris J. Hyatt, and Sgt. Keith A. Glenn arrived at Muscogee County Airport Monday night following flights from Kenya and London.

The trio are inspecting the entire operation of the 134th and the CV-2 transition program currently conducted by the 1st Aviation Company.

Throughout the week they have seen demonstrations of CV-2 capabilities such as low level extraction, para-drop techniques and short take off and landings. In addition, Hyatt and Glenn have been involved with the maintenance and technical supply systems used by the 134th.

Cav Troopers in RVN To Get Variety of Chow

Special to The Bayonet

EN ROUTE TO VIET NAM — A question that has undoubtedly entered the minds of 1st Cavalry Division troopers since the announcement of their deployment to Viet Nam is "what type of chow do you suppose we'll get over there?"

CWO Pal A. Bows, food service technician for the 2nd Brigade, admits the chow won't rival Antoine's of New Orleans but hastens to add that it will probably be much better than the men expect.

Bows, promoted to W - 2 last week, said "The meals given in Viet Nam will not be the type rationed to the Garrison in garrison." Garrison meals are referred to as "Class A" meals.

"The way it looks now, the men will first receive the normal "C" ration issue upon arrival and immediate action to introduce the new 'B' ration will be taken," he said.

According to Bows, "There will be new dehydrated foods and canned items. Beef and gravy as well as pork and gravy will be popular choices."

The brigade food technician feels this type of meal is definitely an improvement on 'B' rations of the past.

"One point I think is important to emphasize. That is that there are two primary morale factors in the Army — the pay that we receive and the food that we eat. In combat, where the men don't have the opportunity to spend a lot of money, food is the largest single factor."

Ranger Students Get Introduction To Air Mobility

An entire ranger class was recently introduced briefly to the advantages of air mobility as the 134th Aviation Company of the 10th Aviation Group transported students to third phase training at the Eglin Air Force Base reservation in Florida.

This marked the first time a Ranger class has been transported by air to a new phase of instruction and training in the nine week course.

Six CV2 aircraft from the 134th were utilized in airlifting the 120 students along with instructors and medics. The mission was completed in less than two hours—thus enabling the instructors to begin the Florida three week phase without the long delay caused by use of surface transportation.

Ranger Department officials have expressed complete satisfaction with the new mode of transportation for their students.

The flight was led by Capt. Ralph Nadmann, 134th first flight platoon leader.

SEEING IN DARK

One of the most interesting experiments to be carried out by Project Gemini is the D-15, which will attempt to provide astronauts with the ability to see in the dark by using a low light level television system. This is to be tested on Gemini flights in 1966-67. During orbital flight, the transition from day to night occurs rapidly, with total darkness lasting for about 30 minutes. In an article written for Electronics, a McGraw-Hill publication, by three technicians of the Aero-Electronic Technology Department, it is stated that the new device will present views of the dark side of the earth.

Diving into the Landscape

A skydiver heads for the landscape in the same fashion as does the new sky diving team of the Airborne Department. The Department has formed the team to demonstrate the military value of skydiving to visitors. It is composed of airborne instructors who are also members of the Fort Benning Skydiving Club. Chief among the tactical uses of skydiving is the fact that the skydiver can steer himself into a much smaller drop zone by this method. Officials say the regular static line jumper requires a much larger drop zone.

Jump Team Formed By Airborne Chutists

A nine-man, free-fall parachute team has been organized in The Infantry School's Airborne Department to demonstrate military free-fall capabilities to visiting dignitaries.

Organized and headed by 2nd Lt. Allen Becker, the team is comprised of members of the Airborne Department who are proficient in free-fall techniques. Each member of the team also belongs to the Fort Benning Sport Parachute Club, an organization devoted to skydiving.

The free - fall parachute jump is different from the regular military jump as the parachutist has the responsibility of opening his own chute instead of it being done automatically. This enables the jumper to pinpoint his drop so he can land in a much smaller drop zone than is required by the jumper using the standard "static line."

The first practice jump was made by three members of the team at Fort Benning's Eubanks Field Tuesday. The jumpers wer SSgt. Leo N. Kryske who has 1,164 jumps to his credit; Sgt. Harold Blaney, who has 530 jumps; and Sgt. Richard Morgan with 418 jumps.

The team will be shown primarily in practice problem 5,000, an airborne orientation for visiting dignitaries.

'Pie in the Sky' Planned For Modern Army Menus

NATICK, Mass. (ANF)—Pie - in - the - sky is a tasty reality at the U. S. Army Natick Laboratories' Food Division here where a bewildering and mouth-watering array of convenience foods is prepared for the American astronauts. . . as well as the combat troops of all the armed services.

The Army's food experts specialize in miniaturizing pre - prepared dishes and packaging them in the most convenient manner for their military customers. As a result, familiar table fare appears in odd sizes and odd shapes, retaining all its flavor while its caloric and nutritional value are enhanced.

Typical chow processed at Natick includes coffee with cream and sugar that resembles a wafer - thin square floor tile, au gratin potatoes in bite size cubes, and tuna salad shaped like a candy bar.

Though sophisticated methods of dehydration, freeze-drying and compression, such exotic examples of Army food wizardry are becoming more and more commonplace. In addition to the obvious need for these items on the lengthy Gemini and Appollo space flights, the soldier in the field has a continuing requirement for food in flexible, nearly weightless packages to replace the cumbersome tin cans of an earlier day. His unit can be spared the difficult, time-consuming job of constantly carrying bulky food preparation equipment.

Despite the wide application of their creativity in the kitchen, the Army's space chefs at Natick are proudest of having made it possible for a weary soldier, miles from the nearest messhall to begin a tasty nutritious evening meal with a special touch by adding water to his pocket-size bar of shrimp and his wafer of cocktail sauce.

British Major Serves 3rd Army As Part of Exchange Officer Plan

FORT McPHERSON, Ga. —Can you imagine an Army major working in a finance office who never earned a dollar, until recently?

British Major John Anthony Castley of the Royal Army Pay Corps is such a man. His pay has been in pounds sterling.

He has been assigned as the Third US Army assistant finance and accounting officer as part of an officer exchange program in the United States. Not only is he abreast of British pounds, shillings, and pence, he also knows all about dollars and cents.

The officer exchange program is designed to increase the understanding of methods and techniques of military functions common to both nations and thus help cooperation in joint commands such as NATO and SEATO.

Maj. Castley is at McPherson as one of seven British officers assigned to duty in the US Army, while a like number of US officers serve in British Army positions.

First in Finance

Although there have been other British officers performing duties in the US Army, Maj. Castley is the first in the finance program. Before coming here in July this year, he attended the US Army Finance School in Indianapolis, Ind., and will be reassigned after a two-year tour at Fort McPherson.

There are apparent advantages for combat officers knowing methods of cooperating forces and there are similar advantages in cross-training among the suporting functions.

For instance, much of the funding and budgeting for NATO components of all nations is done by the office of the Director of Budget and Finance for NATO and the director's slot itself rotates among NATO members.

The National Service Act (similar to our Selective Service Act) started Castley's military career in June 1940. He took examinations which gave him entry to the three month Officers Cadet Training School (equivalent to our OCS).

Before entering the Army, Castley had been studying to become an accountant. However, after receiving a commission as a second lieutenant in the Royal Armoured Corps, he found that he enjoyed military life and could continue his studies in accounting.

So, in early 1952, he took tests, applied for, and received a Regular Army commission as a paymaster.

Posted to Egypt

After two years in Manchester, learning the basics of military finance, Castley was posted to Egypt and then, in 1955, to Cyprus during the attempt by the Greek guerrilla force, EOKA, to force union with Greece.

The major remembers his assignment at Aquaba, Jordan well, because the unit lived in tents on the desert. In early 1956, he became the paymaster for the 10th Royal Hussars Armoured Cavalry and worked from 5:30 in the morning until early afternoon to escape the heat.

Castley remembers watching, as a neutral spectator, the battle three miles away in which the Israeli Army launched its attack on Egypt in the Sinai Desert.

After hostilities ceased, Nasser cut off the Suez Canal supply lines to the British and supplies came by ship around Africa. As a result, the unit subsisted for five months on "compo rations," the British version of "C" rations.

The Hussars returned to England in August 1957 and Castley left the unit to complete the Cost Accountants Course at the Paymasters Training Center. During later assignments, he continued his accounting studies on a part-time basis. In June 1961, he passed the final series of examinations which made him an Associate of the Institute of Cost and Works Accountants which is equivalent to becoming a Certified Public Accountant in the United States.

Army Conducts Survey For Info on Credit Unions

WASHINGTON — Installations are being surveyed by the Army to determine their attitudes and plans for credit unions.

The survey follows congressional hearings which advanced the thought that credit unions might be of great benefit in the military community.

The Army is asking the following questions:

Is there a credit union in operation at your installation?

If not, do you contemplate the establishment of one?

Does this credit union service both military personnel and civilian employes as shareholders and borrowers? If not, is a change in policy under consideration?

What leading practices are followed by the credit union, i. e.,

(1) What grades are eligible to borrow?

(2) What is the maximum loan made?

(3) For what purposes?

(4) What other limitations are imposed?

(5) What means are employed to inform individuals of the advantages offered by credit unions?

Attention all motorists! School is now open. We would like to remind you that children should be seen and not hurt. Be extra alert for youngsters darting out into the streets. Be sure your car is in safe driving condition . . . especially your brakes. Why not have it safety checked today!

U.S. Strength In Its Men Says LBJ

Washington (AFPS) —President Johnson signed the 1965 Military Pay Raise Bill Aug. 21, explaining, "It is the soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines — not the weapons or the ships and planes—who are the real bulwark of our military might."

The bill raises the pay for all members of the armed forces beginning Sept. 1.

President Johnson explained the bill contains many provisions recommended by the administration which make certain that pay of this country's men and women in uniform is ample, on a continuing basis, to provide a standard of living commensurate with the goals of the Great Society.

At the signing of H.R. 9075, the pay bill approved by Congress, the President re-emphasized a message he made to Congress in January.

"The success of all our policies depends upon our ability to attract, develop fully, mobilize and retain the talents of outstanding men and women in the military services."

Since January 1961, the President has submitted and approved military pay increases totaling $1.7 billion annually.

President Johnson said the new bill recognizes the importance of the nearly three million Americans who wear the uniform of this country's armed forces.

"Their bravery and devotion is the reason America is the land of the free today," the President concluded.

Boating Deaths Can Be Lessened By Life Jackets

Washington (AFPS) — A recently completed Coast Guard study of boating accidents, which last year took 1,057 lives, has emphasized the importance of life jackets in pleasure boats.

Of the 1,057 boatmen drowned last year, 1034 had no life-saving devices of any kind aboard their vessels. The Coast Guard has recommended a life jacket for each person aboard, stored in an easily accessible place.

Life jackets approved by the Coast Guard are a type which will turn even an unconscious person right side up and float him with his face out of the water.

Film Released On POW Conduct

NEW YORK (AFPS) — A new training film on prisoner of war conduct, "Name, Rank and Service Number" (AFIF-138), has been released by the Directorate for Armed Forces Information and Education, DOD.

The objective of the 21 minute film is to demonstrate the effectiveness of the Code of Conduct when it is adhered to by U.S. servicemen who became prisoners of war.

The Aftermath

By DICK MANNING

FOOTBALL NOW CLAMORS for our sports' attention. The proexhibition season is underway and every weekend millions of Americans watch TV grid action in the comfort of living room colliseums.

At Fort Benning touch football begins in one week and for many football practice fills these late summer evenings.

But baseball still claims top billing on most sports pages. Football stories and publicity are still building to the huge proportions they will reach after the 1965 World Series is history.

With baseball and football running side by side through my mind, I thought about the contrasts between the two sports.

ACCOMPANIED BY BANDS, cheer leaders and the chill autumn air, football blasts off every fall with its explosive package of a dozen games. It is the game of colleges, boola boola and glorious half time spectacles in which 200-piece marching bands play ragtime to a three-quarter beat. With its short playing schedule, most championship races are close right to the finish.

Football seems a vast cinemascope spectacle where bodies crash together, splinter and move en-masse across a wide, 100-yard screen. It is a game where the cast of characters can change at a fantastic pace as offensive and defensive units switch about. It goes on through snow, sleet, rain and hail with sexy young girls leading supporting thousands in mass cheers.

BASEBALL IS THE GAME of the sedate seventh inning stretch. Its playing season runs through over 150 games and can either end with the bang of a close pennant race or the whimper of a league title on a 12 and one-half game lead. Baseball has its exciting moments but it is more an excitement of the mind not the emotions. It is most exciting when nothing seems to happen, when pitchers duel it out and fielders stop every attempt at the base pads.

In baseball there is no gang-cheering nor sexy girls, no parades, no pageants, no cinemascope, no technicolor. In contract to the wide screen spectacle of the football field, the geometry of the baseball diamond encompasses action like a picture frame. We know where everything is going to happen.

Substitutions came in singly and at a much slower pace in contrast to football's cast of thousands. We know who enters the game and when. This is different from football where figures run in and out at the fuzzy far end of the field.

FOOTBALL EXPLODES with an emotion that is sometimes difficult to contain. Where in baseball have you ever witnessed a scene comparable to the one in football where a thousand screaming fans rush onto the field to demolish enemy goal posts and carry away a splinter of the wood as if it were a fragment of the true cross.

My speculations eventually led me to the history department where I found some interesting facts about the origin of both games which went along with the general tempo of my conclusions.

Baseball is said to have developed from "stool ball", a game which originated in England about 1300. It was played by milk maids and farm hands. A ball was thrown at an upturned milking stool defended by a hand or stick. The winner was the person who scored the most hits before the ball hit the stool.

The story about Abner Doubleday inventing baseball at Cooperstown, New York was a publicity fabrication that originated in the 1930s to bolster flagging interest in the game.

Football had a much more violent and grisly origin. It developed from the English game of soccer which originated in the 11th century, a few years after Danish conquerors were expelled from England.

Drives to Post Triumph On 4 Playoff Victories

Finishing up five days of playoff battles, C Company, 1st Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command copped the 1965 Fort Benning softball championship at the post softball field last Friday night by beating runner-up Company C, Infantry School Battalion, 10 to 8. It was the second straight year the unit has won the title.

Friday afternoon Co. C, ISB narrowly beat the 586th Engineers 4 to 3 for a shot at C Company, CTC and the softball crown.

Ten teams, representing the major units of the Infantry Center, participated in the 20-game playoffs which began on August 23.

C Company chalked up a playoff record of four wins and no losses on its way to the championship. During regular season competition, the company won 18 while dropping only three.

In its final playoff tilt with Company C, ISB, the winners scored four runs in the first inning on doubles by Jimmy Rivera and Jimmy Garland to take a lead which they held for the remainder of the game.

The ISB team came within one run of C Company, in the third inning and again in the fifth when a homer by Fred Weber scored three runs but they could not bring enough men home to get the big win.

Marvin Laufer was the winning pitcher, giving up 10 hits. Gatlin was on the mound for the ISB team and was handed the loss.

National Rifle Championships End

Army Scores Two Wins In Team Competition

BY LEE LA COMBE

CAMP PERRY, Ohio—Army riflemen cracked out a pair of victories in team competition here last week as the 1965 edition of the National High Power Rifle championships drew to a close.

They also added one individual victory to their bag.

Army's Silver entry led a 1-2-3 Army victory parade in the Enlisted Men's Trophy Match.

All three teams finished with identical 887 scores out of a possible 900, but the Silver team had 61 shots in the v-ring. The second place team had 60 and third had 58 v-ring shots.

Army's Western Region entry, firing under adverse weather conditions, pounded out a terrific, near-record score of 595 out of 600 to capture the Rumbold Trophy Team Match. The six-man crew was only one point shy of the record set by the Army in 1960.

Lt. Donald Adams brought the Army's winning individual total to eight when he topped the field in the Member's Trophy Match with a score of 150-23v. The Any Rifle, 30-shot match was a new event here this year and Adams' score automatically becomes the record.

In the last two team matches Saturday and Sunday, the Army took a pair of second places.

Army Eastern was runner-up to the Air Force in the National Trophy Rifle Team Match with a score of 1451 to 1455 for the airmen.

Army Western took the place spot in the Infantry Trophy Rifle Team event with a score of 1204. The Marine Corps Eastern team won with a 1237.

A congratulatory message from Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Chief of Staff of the Army, was received and read to the Army rifle team by Col. Joseph J. Peot, commanding officer of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

The message extolled the fine showing of Lt. David Meredith and Lt. Margaret Thompson in winning the National Service Rifle titles in the men's and women's divisions and commended the entire team for their great performance in the matches.

Gen. Paul Freeman, commanding general, CONARC, witnessed the firing of the National Trophy Rifle Team event and personally congratulated the two Army officers for their championship efforts.

Donald Adams Captures Members Trophy Match

Lt. Donald Adams of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit put another victory in the Army bag last week when he captured the Member's Trophy Match with a score of 150-23v.

This three-stage event is a new match at the national high - power championship and his score will become the match record.

Two other events held last week went to Marine Corps guns and a National Guardsman took another.

Marine Sgt. Gilmer Murdock slammed out a 250-30v in the National Trophy Individual Rifle Match setting a new record in the process. It had been held by Army M-Sgt. Maxie Fields and was set when he fired a 250-30v in 1963.

The final shootoff in the Wimbleton Cup Match, a 1000 yard event, was the shortest match seen in recent years. The service rifle winner was decided on the very first shot when Maryland National Guardsman Sgt. James Laughland was the only one of the ten finalists to shoot a v-shot.

Post Club Slates Shooting Match

A two-day pistol match will be held this weekend by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club, according to Tom Kirkman, club secretary.

A three-gun aggregate will be fired Saturday over the National Rifle Association short course. Team events with each gun will be shot Sunday.

Benning Kids Top Swim Before Rain Ends Meet

Rain put an early ending on the YAC-sponsored swimming meet between Fort Benning and Warner Robins Air Force Base youngsters last Saturday but, before the action ended, post swimmers had garnered a 24 point lead.

The rainout was a disappointment to the Benning youngsters who were looking for a victory over the Warner Robins team which beat them in their first meeting by one point, according to team coach Jim Gilroy.

The competition was divided into age groups. In the eight and under class, Benning's Jimmy Hennesey captured the 25-yard free style event and Karin Rogers took the girls' 25-yard free style and back stroke.

In the nine and ten year old category, Kelly Griswold took the 50 meter free style for the post. Bill Lewis won the 50-meter free style and back stroke competition in the boys' 11 and 12 age group and Patti O'Neil took the 50-meter free style and back stroke events for the Benning girls.

In the 13 and 14 year old category, Charlie Wahle won the 100-meter free style and back stroke events and Sherry Spurlin took the girls' 100 meter free style contest.

Chip Beard copped the 100 meter free style honors for Benning in the 15 and up age group.

The meet was the last scheduled swimming contest of the summer. The YAC team will continue to hold daily practice sessions indoors at Briant Wells Field House between 4 and 6 p.m. All interested youngsters are invited to attend.

WHAT'S AN ERROR

George Allen, a defensive assistant coach of the Chicago Bears, has his own definition of the use of the word error.

Services to Give Bigger Bonuses To Some Critical Skill Reenlistees

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Department of Defense officials are working with the services to put the new variable reenlistment bonus into effect as soon as possible.

No definite date has been set, but one service official estimated it would be sometime in October before certain critical skill reenlistees would begin receiving the bonus.

Under the new military pay law, an individual serving in a designated critical skill could receive several thousand dollars in addition to the regular reenlistment bonus, based on pay grade, term of reenlistment and longevity for pay purposes.

Critical skill first-termers authorized the bonus would receive a down payment upon reenlisting, with annual payments made each year thereafter, an official said.

An example would be a critical skill E-4 completing a four year enlistment and reenlisting for four years. The normal bonus would be $864, four times a monthly base pay of $216. If authorized the maximum variable bonus, the individual would receive an additional $3,456 in four equal installments.

This means getting $1,728 on reenlistment (normal bonus and first variable payment), then receiving three annual payments of $864 for a $4,320 total.

An E-5 under similar circumstances would receive $5,232. For a six year reenlistment, the amount would be approximately $7,000.

The new bonus does not count against normal reenlistment entitlements. A person may collect up to $2,000 in normal bonuses during a service career.

In some meritorious cases, the variable bonus may be paid in fewer installments if the service secretary determines it to be in the individual's best interest.

Cav Heritage Preserved

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The Army's 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) uses helicopters for mobility but its horse cavalry heritage is preserved in the shoulder patch worn by present day members.

The shoulder insignia is a large yellow shield divided by a black diagonal bar with a horse's head in the upper corner.

A high ranking Army officer said the patch will not be changed, even though the division was recently reorganized and assigned the new airmobile role.

The 1st Cavalry was activated as a horse cavalry organization in 1921. The distinctive shoulder patch was designed by Mrs. Ben H. Dorcy, who resides at the Army Distaff Home here.

The insignia will not be worn on battle dress, the official explained, since its large size affords an excellent target in ground combat operations.

Truman Plane Gets Final Home In AF Museum

Wright - Patterson AFB, Ohio (AFPS)—The Independence, a VC-118 aircraft used by Harry S. Truman when he was president, is now a museum piece. It is parked at the site of the proposed new Air Force Museum to be built here.

Until retirement the transport aircraft, named for President Truman's hometown, Independence, Mo., was a command plane assigned to the Tactical Air Command at Langley AFB, Va.

The plane was put into service on Independence Day, 1947.

Columbus To Hear Army Band

A free concert will be given by the U.S. Army Field Band at Columbus' Three Arts Theater at 8 p.m., Friday, Oct. 15.

The 100-piece band, under the direction of Lt. Col. Robert L. Bierly, was organized in 1946 and has appeared in inaugural parades of Presidents Truman, Eisenhower and Kennedy. It has also given concerts in all 50 states as well as Europe and the Orient.

Combined in the concert repertoire are classical, semi-classical and popular selections, choral arrangements, novelty numbers and military marches.

Appearing with the band is the Soldiers' Chorus, which features the voices of members of the band under the direction of Sgt. Eugene W. Coughlin.

478 MILLION BONDS

Post Little John Battery Gets Technical Check

Fort Benning's Little John Firing Battery, Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery, recently underwent a battalion command technical inspection to test the unit's ability to handle its special weapons mission.

Battery A, commanded by Capt. Gilbert L. Muchmore, contains the "business" elements of the recently reorganized 42nd Artillery. The unit trains vigorously throughout the year to be proficient at assembling, testing, loading and firing the Little John Field Artillery Rocket.

Little John, highly mobile and accurate at ranges up to twenty kilometers, can deliver a variety of warheads, including chemical, conventional high explosive or nuclear, Muchmore said.

The firing unit, in addition to the technical operations, must show the ability to handle the weapon in complete security and safety. In this respect, Battery A is supported by elements of the 42nd Artillery's Headquarters Battery.

Service Injury Can Reopen GI Insurance

ATLANTA—A service-connected injury, though comparatively minor, creates eligibility for a wartime veteran to reopen his GI insurance policy, said Pete Wheeler, director of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

An otherwise eligible veteran does not have to be receiving compensation for the injury to be eligible for reopening his GI insurance. "For instance, a wartime wound may have left a permanent scar, which though not disabling, and therefore not compensable, is sufficent to meet the insurance reopening criteria," Wheeler said.

Any veteran receiving compensation for service - connected injury meets one test for insurance reopening eligibility.

A second requirement is that the veteran must have been eligible for GI insurance between Oct. 7, 1940 and Jan. 1, 1957. The full $10,000 coverage can be reopened, or any amount up to $10,000. Another category of the veteran who can reopen his insurance is one who has a non-service connected disability which renders him undesirable by commercial insurance companies at highest rates, Wheeler concluded.

Communism: Part IV

Democracy Follows Downfall Of the Tsar for Only Six Months

In the six months following the overthrow of the Tsar in March 1917, the Russian people had their only experience with true democracy. Dozens of political parties, representing all shades of political sentiment, were organized and hundreds of newspapers were freely published.

Perhaps the main beneficiaries of this new liberty were the Bolsheviks, the group of communists under Lenin's leadership. For example, Pravda, which had been banned in the summer of 1941, reappeared within five days after the fall of the tsarist government. The speed with which the Bolsheviks were able to resurrect Pravda as a potent propaganda weapon indicated that Lenin's underground cadre of professional revolutionaries had manged to survive and operate effectively during the years of wartime repression.

Bolshevik leaders looked with anxiety toward the approaching election of a Constituent Assembly scheduled for Nov. 25, 1917. They knew from the outcome of numerous local elections that the popular vote in a national election would go against them and that even the majority of suffering workers and poor peasants would not freely choose communism.

To forestall defeat, Lenin and his followers adopted a three-pronged strategy. They posed as "peaceful agrarian reformers"; they infiltrated other political organizations; and they made detailed preparations for armed insurrection and seizure of the government by force.

During the spring and summer of 1917, when communist propaganda was freely allowed in Russia, Lenin emphasized land reform as one of the main aims of communism.

Like other underdeveloped countries, Russia was largely a peasant country. Yet most of the peasants did not own the land they tilled and their living standard was low. The Russian peasant and worker who sympathized with communism did not do so after a careful reading of the Marxist classics, but rather because the communists promised land redistribution and relief from the grinding poverty in which the peasants and workers lived.

As a matter of fact, the majority of the Russian peasants sympathized not with the communists, but with the Social Revolutionaries, a democratic socialist reform party. However, the Leninist slogan of "land to the peasants" appealed to many who knew little about communism.

The Bolshevik leaders, from Lenin down, made this promise in complete cynicism since they knew full well that individual ownership of land is incompatible with the basic long - term goals of communism. Yet, they did not hesitate to exploit the yearning of the peasant for land so long as such strategy would hasten the triumph of Bolshevik revolution.

Knowing that they were a minority party—even among left-wing political movements — the Bolsheviks began to infiltrate other political parties and the soviets (councils) of soldiers and workers. The purpose of this infiltration was to take over non-Bolshevik left - wing organizations by placing Bolsheviks in key positions. If such direct takeover proved impractical, the purpose of infiltration was to paralyze the rival organization through disruptive techniques or terrorism.

In particular, the communists managed to infiltrate, and gradually disrupt, the Social Revolutionaries, the largest political party in Russia. The Social Revolutionaries were dedicated to political democracy and social reform and were especially concerned with the problems of the peasants.

As a result of communist disruption, the Social Revolutionary party became divided into a Left group and a Right group. The Left group gradually developed close ties with the Bolsheviks. This group wanted both social reform and political democracy. But all too many members, when confronted with the choice between saving democracy by cooperating with non-socialists and establishing socialism by cooperating with the Bolsheviks, chose the second course.

They did so because the Bolshevik promise of immediate social change by revolution seemed more appealing than social reform through the slower processes of constitutional government. By contrast the Right group of the Social Revolutionaries understood that the issue of free government for the Russian people was more important in the long run than the issue of social reform.

Break Seen in Log Jam On Non-Quota Promotion

WASHINGTON — A legal logjam delaying certain non-quota enlisted promotions will be eased before long, Army officials indicate.

The delay has been caused by lengthy processing of appeals by soldiers who have been reduced in grade for inefficiency or misconduct. The non-quota promotions affected are those which can be made to fill the vacancies created by a reduction.

Under AR 600-200, a commander may promote men to fill such vacancies within 60 days after a reduction. However, the reg also says he can't do so until any appeal by the reduced man is decided.

Legal authorities questioned The Adjutant General about the policy, apparently in hopes that the 60-day limit on the commanders' non-quota promotion power could be interpreted to extend further when much of the time was consumed in the appeals process.

TAG turned thumbs down on the liberal interpretation of the reg, but Judge Advocate General officials now say the appeals processing will be speeded up instead.

More than 5000 men a year in grade E-5 or higher receive a bust in grade. One reduction from a high grade also may open a single promotion space in each grade below, down to E-4.

Col Perna Named AG To Fill Benning Vacancy

Col. Leonard P. Perna took over as adjutant general of The Infantry Center Wednesday.

He succeeded Col. Milton G. Schneider who recently retired from the Army.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Perna, he is a graduate of City College of New York, N. Y., where he was awarded a Bachelor of Social Science Degree in 1940.

Perna first came to Fort Benning as a private in February 1942. He attended the Infantry Officer Candidate School (OCS), receiving a commission May 1, 1942.

After graduating from OCS, he remained on the post until 1945, serving successively as assistant personnel officer of the 2nd Student Training Regiment; classification and assignment officer of the Student Training Brigade and later of the 2nd Student Regiment; and personnel officer of the Officer Candidate Reception Unit.

From Aug. 1962 until July 1965, Perna was deputy adjutant general of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

Other assignments he has held include program officer for the Adjutant General Office, Washington, D. C.; personnel officer at Headquarters, Eighth U. S. Army in Korea; chief of the Personnel Management Branch of the Adjutant General School at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; assistant executive officer in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel in Washington; and chief of the Personnel Management Branch, Headquarters, Seventh U. S. Army, U.S. Army Europe.

He has attended the Adjutant General School where he was graduated from the advanced course in 1960.

Col. and Mrs. Perna, the former Miss Edith Masucci, have two daughters and a son. Eileen, 21, is a senior at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia at Fredericksburg. Diane, 20, is a sophomore and plans to transfer from Mary Washington to Columbus College. Leonard Jr. will be in the eighth grade at Faith School.

Copter Pilot Gets DFC Posthumously

The Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism and the Purple Heart were awarded posthumously Monday at Fort Benning to a helicopter pilot who was killed in Viet Nam.

Mrs. Raymond C. Galbraith received the medals for her husband, CWO Galbraith, 35, of North Braddock, Pa., who was killed June 10 when the aircraft he commanded was shot down by the Viet Cong.

Galbraith's aircraft was in an assault formation against the Viet Cong when it was struck several times by enemy fire.

The citation accompanying the DFC read, "without regard to his own personal safety, he maintained his position in the flight and directed that ceaseless suppressive fire be placed on the enemy. He continued to press the attack until his aircraft was disabled by fire from the Viet Cong."

The Purple Heart was awarded for wounds he received in the enemy action.

Mrs. Galbraith and their two children, David and Richard, were present for the ceremony, Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, made the presentations.

field are said to have uncovered an unmistakably Danish skull. Being Englishmen, they were still put out at the Danes and vented their feelings by giving the skull a good kick. Other workmen joined in on the fun and began kicking the head back and forth.

The kids were quick to see possibilities in action and also began the kicking game but substituted a stuffed bladder for the skull which was too hard on the feet.

EVENTUALLY WHOLE TOWNS took part in the fun, with hundreds on opposing sides. The winners were the ones who kicked the ball into the rival's town. The play roamed over miles of surrounding country side. Old women, children, farm buildings and livestock; nothing was spared in the attempt to win. It was a mob scene affair which was described as "a combination of soccer and vandalism" and "more a friendly kind of flight than a fellowly sport or past time."

But whatever you prefer for your brand of excitement, baseball and football provide us with a balanced sport's diet. Following the natural tempo of the seasons, most people are ready for a change after a long hot summer of baseball. When spring comes again the sight of the diamond is novel to our eyes and we are again ready to hear the shout "play ball."

Post Scouts Hold Honor Ceremony

The presentation of two unit and eight individual awards highlighted a recent Court of Honor ceremony held by Fort Benning's Boy Scout Troop 37 at the Hideaway Scout House.

The troup received the Historic Trails Award and the National Camping Award.

The Historic Trails Award went to the troop for its recent visit and camping excursion to the Civil War Prison site at Andersonville, Ga.

The National Camping Award was earned by Troop 37 on the basis of its having had 75 per cent of the registered membership involved in extended camping activities during the past 10 months.

Scout master Steve Geyer, who completed his military service, was presented a plaque and letter of appreciation for his work with the unit.

Additionally, the ceremony featured the conferring of star rank on Ray Carter; the awarding of 2nd class rank to Cleave Yocom, Joe McMurdo, Tom Blumhardt, Glen Sturm and Rob Johnson; and the presentation of a hand axe and knife to scout Strum for selling the most tickets to the Scout exposition earlier this year.

Fifty-seven merit badges were also given to members of Troop 37.

Army Transport Groups Working To Beat Winter

THULE, Greenland (ANF)—As the early days of autumn approach, more than 200 men from the Army's 264th Transportation Terminal Service Company of Fort Eustis, Va., are working here to move vital supplies inland to Department of Defense installations before cold weather virtually seals off the overland routes.

Each summer for the past 14 years, the Army has worked at this port, more than 600 miles north of the Arctic Circle, unloading the cargoes of Military Sea Transportation ships.

This year, a small contingent of nine men from the 1099th Medium Boat Company of Fort Eustis is also taking part in the resupply work.

DeBrocke Joins CDCIA Staff

Lt. Col. William P. DeBrocke has joined the staff of the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency at Fort Benning. He recently graduated from the National War College, Fort Lesley J. McNair, Washington, D. C.

Prior to entering the National War College in August 1964, DeBrocke was assigned to the office, Chief of Research and Development, Washington, D. C.

DeBrocke received his commission at the US Military Academy, West Point, in June 1943. Foreign assignments include Guam, Hawaii, Korea, Japan and Europe.

Army Secretary Set to be AUSA Speaker

WASHINGTON (ANF) — More than 3,500 people are expected to attend the three-day annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army (AUSA) when it opens in Washington October 25.

Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor and General Harold K. Johnson, Army Chief of Staff, will be honored guests at the opening reception. Secretary Resor will deliver the meeting's keynote address October 25 and General Johnson will speak before the annual AUSA luncheon October 26.

The convention, to be held in Washington's Sheraton Park Hotel, will devote more than 60,000 square feet of space to industry exhibits reflecting the latest scientific and technical advances in the military field. Army displays and equipment will occupy another 30,000 square feet of exhibit space at the hotel.

The three - day program, supported by Army - interested civilians and traditionally well - attended by officers and enlisted men from around the world, will include formal presentations on air mobility, the Army's role in stability operations, Army operations in the Dominican Republic, combat developments and reserve and ROTC affairs.

Also planned is a reception hosted by the exhibitors, a luncheon for the sustaining (industry) AUSA members, a luncheon for the ROTC cadets in attendance, and the annual George Catlett Marshall Memorial Dinner.

The memorial dinner, a black tie affair, will climax the three-day session with the presentation of the George Catlett Marshall Medal for selflessness and outstanding service to country. Last year's recipient was General of the Army Omar N. Bradley. This year's choice has not been announced.

A new feature of this year's program will be workshops where AUSA chapter delegates may exchange ideas on chapter activities and problems. A similar workshop will be held for ROTC company representatives to promote the exchange of ideas among cadet members of AUSA.

A conference for sergeants major is also on this year's agenda. In addition, a reception and buffet luncheon will honor many top Army NCOs.

Registration for the convention will open at the hotel October 24. AUSA members may register in advance. For registration information write AUSA, 1529 18th St., NW, Washington, D. C., 20036.

Who's got a bagpipe? Or is it bagpipes?

Whether singular or plural, the Fort Benning Little Theatre needs one — or it — or them.

The instrument is required by the prop list of FBLT's season opener, "The Hostage," the late Brendan Behan's bawdy, adult comedy-drama about Irish patriots and their British "prisoner of war." Peter Hajduk is the director of the play to be staged Oct. 6-9. Hajduk also directed "The Snow Angel" for the recent summer workshop, and he designed the award-winning lighting for "The Caretaker" last fall.

Rehearsals for "The Hostage" began this week with a cast that includes Ella Hearne, Les Muchmore, Pat Brown, Gail Carr, Rick Sonntag, Monty Sims, Jerry Eubank and Tom Terefenko. The set will be designed by Pat Eubank.

Some positions on the production staff of "The Hostage" have yet to be filled. Those interested in helping FBLT stage the play are invited to call the Playhouse, 545-2992, or stop by Bldg. 2519 behind Main Post QM laundry.

Membership in the Little Theatre is open to all Fort Benning personnel, military and civilian — even if you don't have a bagpipe(s).

UNDER FIRE . . . Basic trainees fire from the sitting, squatting and kneeling positions under the watchful eye of an Army drill sergeant. The trainees are taking part in tests being conducted at Fort Gordon, Ga. to determine if the three positions should remain in the basic rifle marksmanship course taught at Army training centers.

PEACE GARDEN

The International Peace Garden, at the geographical center of North America, honors the many years of peace between Canada and the United States. It lies on top of a large plateau in the Turtle Mountains on the boundary line between North Dakota and Manitoba.

Non-airmoble Gift Goes To General

A scrapbook so large it took two men to carry it was presented to Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) commander as a memento of his 11th Air Assault Division days.

The scrapbook, all fifty plus pounds of it, was carried into Gen. Kinnard's office by Majors Charles L. Siler, division information officer, and Frank Henry, Gen. Kinnard's aide shortly before the division departed for Viet Nam.

The huge sheaf of mementoes, measuring some two-and-one-half by three-and-one-half by 1 foot was largely the product of PFC Glenn P. Andrews of the Division Information Office, who worked many long hours collecting photographs, clippings and other items documenting the period from Feb. 15th 1963 until June 30th, 1965 when the experimental unit was redesignated the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

Gen. Kinnard, upon seeing the scrapbook remarked that it was "tremendous, but hardly air-mobile".

DENTAL HABITS

Start your children on good dental habits as early as possible. Teaching them the importance of brushing, diet and regular professional care which will help them keep their teeth healthy for a lifetime. Make brushing teeth after meals as constant a habit as washing hands before the meal.

Muscle Building

Anthony Cihucki of the 29th Infantry works out with weights at Briant Wells Field House during his off-duty time and helps keep this segment of Field House activities in running order. Cihucki says it's a great way to keep in shape. The best way to cool off after the muscle building is a swim in the Field House pool. (Photos by Mike Geydoshek)

CODE OF THE U.S. FIGHTING MAN

VI

I will never forget that I am an American fighting man, responsible for my actions, and dedicated to the principles which made my country free. I will trust in my God and in the United States of America.

The provisions of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, whenever appropriate, continue to apply to members of the armed forces who are prisoners of war. Upon repatriation, the conduct of prisoners will be examined as to the circumstances of capture and through the period of detention with due regard for the rights of the individual and consideration for the conditions of captivity.

A member of the armed forces who becomes a prisoner of war has a continuing obligation to remain loyal to his country, his service and his unit.

The life of a prisoner of war is hard. He must never give up hope. He must resist enemy indoctrination. Prisoners of war who stand firm and united against the enemy will aid one another in surviving this ordeal. (AFPS)

197th Infantry Brigade Moving To New Location at Kelley Hill

Anniversary Issue

Twenty-four years of service to the soldiers of Fort Benning was marked today as The Bayonet rolled off the press. Pictured above is the first front page of The Bayonet. Except for it's size has it really changed that much? It still continues in the function in which and for which it was started—keeping the troops informed. This is the credo of The Bayonet today as it was 24 years ago. On Page 24 some of the scenes The Bayonet chronicled 24 years ago are reproduced for readers.

Officials Plan Continued Support of Infantry School

The Infantry Center's 197th Brigade comprising some 3,500 soldiers are now in the process of taking over a new home on Fort Benning's Kelley Hill.

Currently situated on grounds bordered by Sightseeing Rd. and the 1st Brigade Loop, the 197th is moving into buildings vacated earlier this summer with the move of the 1st Cavalry Division to Viet Nam.

Although official notification of the Brigade's movement was received Sept. 2 from Post Headquarters the actual shift of troops and equipment will be drawn out over a period scheduled to end Sept. 29.

Designated to move into new locations at Kelley Hill by the September deadline are the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, 183rd Chemical Platoon, 187th Pathfinder Detachment, 72nd Engineer Company and Headquarters Company of the 197th.

The 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry, 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery and the 4th Battalion, 69th Armor will not be affected by the move but will remain at their Harmony Church Locations instead. The Brigade's 26th Scout Dog Platoon will move to Kelley Hill at a later date, 197th officials said.

Involved will be the movement of tons of equipment and records, in addi-

Sunday Real Day Of Grace

BY JOE TREASTER
Special to The Bayonet

SOMEWHERE IN VIET NAM — The 1st Cavalry Division's first Sunday in Viet Nam turned out to be a genuine day of grace.

As had been expected, it was the day Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Chester R. Lindsey held his first service on Vietnamese soil. Amid the thud of distant explosions and the clatter of helicopters, the chaplain challenged his congregation "to make the coming year one of spiritual opportunity and growth."

But, unexpectedly for most, it was the first day showers became available, the first day the field mess halls served fresh-cooked meals and the first day the men could have a cool drink since finally there was ice.

The showers, the fresh food and the ice had come over the mountains from a seaport in 90 trucks of the

Sunday

19th Quartermaster Company, now in direct support of the cavalry division.

"The first convoy brought in 500 tons of supplies last night," said Lt. Douglas W. Klingman of Dallas, Tex. "And we brought in another 500 tons today."

Not Fired Upon

"We brought mostly food, fuel and ammunition. As far as I know, neither convoy was fired upon."

The quartermaster company had brought prefabricated showers in its convoy and 8th Engineer Battalion men, led by Lt. Daniel Brazil of Detroit, Mich., saw that they were properly installed near the water-purification station.

"The shower water hasn't been purified;" said one of the engineers, "but at least you don't have to worry about the leeches that jump on you if you jump in the creek. The creek is off limits anyway."

For most of the soldiers, it was the first chance to take anything but a steel helmet "birdbath" since landing in Viet Nam more than a week ago.

Although the men spent most of the day continuing to convert a portion of the jungle into a giant helipad, they began with a palatable breakfast and religious services.

Chaplain Lindsey called the turnout "quite good," and surmised that it was "two to three times the crowd we would have gotten from this size group at Fort Benning. Conditions like these bring out the religion in a man."

The chaplain said that in the future he plans to hold services on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, as well as Sunday mornings.

The soldiers awoke Sunday morning, in almost total disbelief, to the smell of frying bacon and scrambled eggs.

"I thought the 'Cs' would go on forever," said one sergeant, digging frantically for his mess kit.

'Real Good'

"Everyone said the food was real good. A lot of people came back for more coffee, and some fellows took bacon sandwiches with them to the field," said the 13th Signal Battalion's mess sergeant, Lewis Robinson of Asheville, N. C.

The bill of fare for lunch was C rations again, but for supper the men ate chipped beef, hash - brown potatoes, buttered corn, peaches and biscuits.

CWO Paul A. Bows of Avon, Mass., food advisor for the 2nd Brigade, said that for the next couple of weeks the men can expect to get B rations for breakfast and supper and Cs for lunch.

A rations, what the soldier normally eats in garrison, include fresh meats, eggs and milk. Bs are canned foods with powdered eggs and no fresh meats. Cs are the combat field meal designed to be eaten hot or cold. They are high-energy, high - protein foods packed into cans that require little storage space.

CWO Bows said that convoys every other day will continue to replenish supplies and bring to each mess hall about 400 pounds of ice. The "advance party's four mess halls Sunday night had iced-down peaches and were serving either iced tea or cold orange juice.

tion to the 3,500 men. The movement itself is expected to proceed smoothly with each individual unit directing the relocation of its men and equipment.

According to brigade commander Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr., it is hoped the movement can be accomplished without any disruption of the unit's regular schedule of events.

According to Col. Riley the relocation will be a "piecemeal affair" in order to continue operations which support Infantry School training. He added, "we intend to complete the move without disrupting our support of the Infantry School's problems."

In commenting on the advantages offered the Brigade by the move Col. Riley pointed out "we will now have our own defined area of responsibility."

According to Maj. Dana Tunmire, adjutant for the 197th the movement has a twofold purpose. "It will allow for both the expansion of the Brigade and other units at Fort Benning, while bringing us that much closer to areas where we conduct problems and offer support for the Infantry School," he said.

Facilities at Kelley Hill offer the members of the 197th a wide range of off-duty activities including a service club, library and gymnasium, all of which have been constructed since 1962.

the Infantry School. Although the general has been to Fort Benning on several occasions since assuming command of Third Army, an official spokesman at Fort Benning termed this his "first official visit."

Gen. Truman will also visit the Officer Candidate School, the 2nd Control Command (Provisional) and Lawson Army Air Command.

An official reception and dinner is planned for Gen. and Mrs. Truman for Monday evening in the Main Officers Open Mess.

The general will depart from Lawson Army Air Field on Tuesday after viewing an Airborne Demonstration at Eubanks Field.

Services Get Go-Ahead On Manned Space Lab

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The military services have been invited to submit work projects for testing during a $1.5 billion program to determine how military personnel can perform useful work in space for extended periods.

Called the Manned Orbiting Laboratory (MOL), the project was begun by the Air Force in late 1963 and $30 million was spent before it was shelved for further consideration.

President Johnson has now given the go-ahead for the Air Force to complete the project. Unmanned test launches and recovery operations are scheduled late next year. The first of five manned flights is planned sometime in 1968-69 from Vandenberg AFB, Calif., or Cape Kennedy, Fla.

Tests will determine whether a man can work in a pressurized laboratory orbiting the earth for 30 days. A defense official said most of the laboratory work will concern equipment repair and assembly to test man's capability in the space environment.

A Titan IIIC booster will push into space a 55-foot payload consisting of a two-man modified Gemini capsule at the uppermost tip, with the work laboratory below.

The pressurized laboratory will allow astronauts to emerge from the capsule to work in shirtsleeves rather than bulky space gear.

Astronauts will live in the laboratory and will only re-enter the unpressurized capsule when coming back to earth. The laboratory will detach from the capsule before reentering and remain in space.

Customs Laws For U.S. Customers

Some of the traveling-est people in the world are Army personnel and their dependents. Travel presents wide opportunities to buy exotic foreign goods and gifts. . .usually at very attractive prices. As long as the buying doesn't fracture the family budget, it's an exciting experience.

But there are other considerations. . .beyond the budgetary. Such complicated matters as international tariffs, trademark laws, contraband goods and the gold-flow problem are related to overseas shopping sprees.

Each year millions of persons enter the United States, and not a few of them are Army personnel returning from overseas assignments. The United States Customs and its police and investigative arm, the Customs Agency Service, have the mission to insure that these persons do not violate Federal regulations. The job is a big one.

Deliberate violations of customs laws by servicemen are infrequent. But violations through ignorance do occur, causing inconvenience and embarrassment, and sometimes sharp penalties.

Of special interest is a new customs law which will take effect on October 1st. Made necessary by the requirements of international trade and the national economy, it changes customs duty exemptions on merchandise being brought back to the States by overseas travelers and military personnel.

The $100 limit on such items will now be based on retail rather than wholesale. Returning residents will also be required to carry with them the purchases they wish included in the exemption.

Other provisions of the new law will cut back the liquor allowance and reset at $10 the retail value of gifts which may be sent home duty free.

These provisions vary somewhat for persons returning from certain U. S. island possessions.

The best and safest way to enjoy the liberal shopping privileges of international travel is to become familiar with the regulations. The Bureau of Customs, Washington, D. C., 20226, publishes a series of free pamphlets with helpful customs information for military personnel and their families. (ANF)

"Affirmative!"

BE AN Active MEMBER . . .

OF YOUR HOST COMMUNITY!

Servicemen Are Local Citizens

Servicemen have always upheld their responsibilities as American citizens. They pay taxes, vote and use their energy to defend this nation. On a large scale they are, in every sense of the expression, "good, solid citizens."

But what about on a smaller scale? We comprise a transient population, moving from community to community, or country to country. Seldom are any of us, single, or married with family in tow, stationed in an area that we consider our permanent home.

As transients we move into a host town or city, use its services, its roads and parks, theaters and social centers, and then move on. In doing this we too often ignore our host.

As citizens of the United States we have an obligation that goes beyond meeing our military responsibilities. The foundation of any country is the community; and we, as citizens, owe it to the nation and ourselves to become personally involved in non-political local activities.

This applies equally to those stationed outside the United States. Though the opportunities to become active participants may not be quite as numerous outside the United States, there is certainly ample chance to show interest in our host city and country.

There are few men and women in service who don't have some personal talent, interest and training to put to use.

Look around. Check into civic and service clubs, the Little League, church organizations. If there is an area of interest and you think you can do something constructive, offer your help. There are very few cases where you will not be more than welcome.

By joining and doing your part, you will be fulfilling your obligations as an American serving your host and making your own tour of duty more enjoyable. (AFPS)

Quote of the Week

"The Long Gray Line has never-failed us. Were you to do so, a million ghosts in olive drab, in brown khaki, in blue and gray would rise from their white crosses thundering those magic words: Duty, Honor, Country."—General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, at the U.S. Military Academy, May 12, 1962.

The Judge Says . . .

Thinking of buying a new home and settling down? How will you know whether you are receiving a good title to the property you purchase? The safest method is to have a title examination made — that is, a careful study of the abstract and other title evidence.

Here are a few of the common sources of trouble in real estate transactions to show why the minor expense of a title examination is justified.

Many persons sign "earnest money contracts" believing that they are mere receipts with no serious implications. In reality they may specify, among other things, the kind of title you must accept.

A "warranty deed" from a responsible seller is comforting to have but it is a poor substitute for a careful title examination. A warranty deed does not guarantee a marketable title.

Moreover, serious title defects may not come to light until long after the seller on a warranty deed is dead, has moved to an unknown address, or is bankrupt. Even if he is available a good title is much better than a lawsuit.

The fact that the seller has possession of an "Abstract" does not mean that he owns the property. An abstract is only a history of a title.

Some purchasers of land feel safe because the title is being examined at the time of purchase by an attorney for the mortgage lenders. This seems logical but is a dangerous theory.

Mortgage lenders are sometimes willing to accept less than a good record title as security. This is sound business for them because, among other reasons, the chances are that the mortgage will be paid off so that no expense in perfecting the title would ever need be incurred. It is risky business for you when you are putting your life savings into the purchase.

These are a few of the reasons why a title examination is an important safeguard to you. When it is completed, the attorney gives you a written opinion stating his conclusions as to who owns the land, the defects in or charges against such ownership, and the requirements to be met if any, to make good record title.

Off-hand this may seem a simple operation. In fact it is not. It requires the interpretation of numerous deeds, mortgages, wills, court decrees and other instruments; the consideration of the order in which transactions and events affecting the title occurred; and the application of statutes and court decisions to the various situations disclosed in the abstract.

In short, safeguard your investment by having the title examined before you buy!

Military Pay Certificates Replace Dollar in RVN

From The Army Times

SAIGON — Military Payment Certificates, scrip, are now in use for American forces in Viet Nam.

Military men are able to turn each of their dollars in for 118 Vietnamese piasters, 44.5 piasters better than the official rate which is 73.5 piasters to the dollar. On the black market dollars were bringing 130 to 140 piasters and that is one of the reasons for the switch to MPCs.

All Americans in Viet Nam must turn over their dollars by September 30. The MPCs are being issued in five, 10, 25 and 50 cent denominations as well as $1, $5 and $10. U.S. pennies will continue in use. The scrip must be used for purchases at all U.S. installations, USO and service clubs.

Troops in Viet Nam can buy Military Purchase Orders for safe keeping of funds they don't want to use in that country. These may be cashed only by those who buy them.

Dollars mailed from home must be converted immediately or sent out of the country.

Persons leaving Viet Nam for reassignment or on leave are not to carry more than $40 worth of piasters. Checks for U.S. dollars may not be paid to any Vietnamese.

The Main Officers' Club will be the scene of a fall Opening Tea, staged by the Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club, from 2 to 4 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 6.

The theme for the tea will be a "Latin American Festival."

Members of the Club are busy preparing to transform the Main Ballroom into a scene from "Alcazar," a Spanish castle. Moorish draperies will cover the walls. Outlying banquet rooms of the Officers' Mess will be decorated as "pueblos of the countryside."

The color scheme will feature the gay, sundrenched colors inspired by the cape of the matador at a bull fight.

Many authentic costumes and decorations have been loaned by members of the Club and their Latin American friends.

Hostesses for the annual membership tea will be dressed in picturesque Spanish costumes. Mrs. C. W. Youngman is costume chairman.

Mrs. R. M. Williams and Mrs. W. M. Preston are co-chairmen of the decorations committee.

Other committee chairmen are Mrs. D. G. Sherrard, refreshments; Mrs. Nathan Grace, posters; Mrs. James Stacy, invitations; Mrs. Neil Kemph, receiving line arrangements; Mrs. E. J. Lansing and Mrs. W. M. Zimmerman, custodians; and Mrs. William J. McNally and Mrs. Ross L. Johnson, publicity chairmen.

Mrs. Earl F. Holton is overall chairman for the tea.

Mrs. Maurice W. Kendall president of the Officers' Wives' Club, said the tea will feature tables set up to illustrate the varied activities sponsored by the organization. Activity chairmen and their representatives will be on hand to answer questions and enroll members, old and new, in educational, recreational and welfare projects.

Army Wives Weekly Recipe

MAPLE FILLED NUT ROLL

This week's recipe is from Mrs. Charles Walker of the Officers Wives Club, Schfield Barracks, Hawaii.

Six eggs, separated
Three-quarters cup sugar
Pinch of salt
One tsp. baking powder
One and one-half cups finely ground pecans or walnuts
Confectioner's sugar
Three quarters cup maple syrup
2 egg whites

Beat egg yolk until thick and lemon colored and add sugar, gradually. Add salt, baking powder and ground nuts. Add egg whites which have been beaten until a soft peak forms. Mix well. Grease a fifteen and one-half by ten and one-half by one inch pan. Line the bottom with waxed paper and grease again.

Spread mixture in the pan and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes until golden brown. Turn out on towel dusted with confectioners sugar. Carefully peel off waxed paper and cut off cake edges. Roll cake up in towel to cool. Cook the maple syrup until it reaches soft ball state, 238 degrees. Beat egg whites until soft peak forms. Gradually pour in the hot syrup, continuing to beat egg whites until the filling is very thick and glossy. Unroll the cake; spread with filling and roll up like a jelly roll. Yield: eight servings.

Take A Break

You can keep a tall, glass pitcher of iced tea in the refrigerator as a tangy refresher from time to time throughout the day. It helps to take even five minutes now and then to sit down; sip a tall frosty glass of something cool and instantly refreshing; and relax.

Your well-being and relaxation is important, too, and even if you think you are too busy to take a short break, you'll find yourself more able to continue and retain your personal peace of mind if you do so. Iced tea can be enhanced with a sprig of fresh mint, a round slice of fresh lemon and a few frosty ice cubes.

Nurses' Group Meets Monday

The monthly meeting of the Fort Benning Registered Nurses' Association, formerly the Professional Nurses' Club of Fort Benning, will be held at 9 a.m. this Monday, Sept. 13, in the second floor conference room at Martin Army Hospital.

Coffee will be served at 9:15 followed by a business meeting and a tour of the hospital at 9:30.

Weight Watcher Dreamy Treat

You'll wow your guests with this one. It costs pennies; it's a real dress-up dessert; and it's less than 100 calories per serving! Baked Lemon Pudding:

3 eggs separated
¼ tsp. salt
1 tablespoon sucaryl solution
1-3 cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon melted butter
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1½ cups skim milk

Combine 3 egg whites with ¼ teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon sucaryl. Beat until the whites stand in firm peaks but are still moist and shiny. Combine 3 egg yolks with 1-3 cup lemon juice, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 4 tablespoons all-purpose flour and 1½ cups skim milk. Beat until smooth. Gradually fold the egg yolk mixture into the beaten egg whites. Pour into greased one-quart casserole. Set casserole in a pan of hot water and bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Served warm, it's like souffle; cool, it takes on a cake-like texture. (To cool, keep casserole standing in pan of water. It prevents shrinking.)

LITTLE-KNOWN FACTS ABOUT WELL KNOWN WOMEN

Ella Fitzgerald made her first appearance before a paying audience as a dancer. But she got stage fright and couldn't dance a step. She sang instead. It launched her career as one of the greatest jazz singers of all time.

Chinese Communist boss Mao Tse-Tung's fourth and present wife is a former Shanghai song-and-dance performer now in her forties.

Collecting Can be Hobby With Inexpensive Delight

Collecting things can be an inexpensive hobby. Without fanfare, you can start today.

The trick is to start the hobby on a shoestring and watch the collection grow. Before long, it will be an absorbing interest for you and a source of fulfilling education and entertainment. Your collection could even become a property of value if you build creatively and painstakingly.

One United Nations delegate has a huge collection of matchbook covers from all over the world. Sounds silly? Not at all. Through his catalogue of matchbook covers, he can tell fascinating stories about the places he has been and the experiences he has had through the years.

Claudette Colbert started collecting interesting mugs years ago. They came from antique shops, junk shops and as gifts from friends all over the world — Spain, Japan Ireland, Italy. Today, the collection has great value. Each mug has its own personal story. Nicest of all, they're wonderful for serving everything from soup to coffee to hot toddies — and they're marvelously decorative as vases, pencil holders and candy dishes.

Want a collection idea you can start immediately? Start putting together a collection of restaurant menus. Before long, you'll have a scrapbook filled with memories of people and places.

Want another gem for collecting? Try picture postcards from around the world. It's the kind of collection that can delight you and your friends forever. A scrapbook can be bought for pennies Why not start now?

Former Pastor Here

Hundley Named Post Chaplain

Chaplain (Col.) Maury Hundley Jr. has been named post chaplain.

He replaces Chaplain (Col.) Silas E. Decker who retired June 30. During the interim between Chaplain Decker's retirement and the arrival of Chaplain Hundley, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Arthur Estes of Jacksonville, Fla., was acting post chaplain.

Chaplain Hundley came to the post from an assignment in Korea where he had served as chaplain for the Eighth U. S. Army since August 1964.

He graduated from Lynchburg College with a bachelor's degree. He has a Bachelor of Divinity degree from the College of the Bible, Lexington, Ky., and has undergone a year of special training in counseling at Duke University.

Pastor in Columbus

Although he had served as a student pastor for nearby churches while in school, Chaplain Hundley's first and only full-time civilian pastorate was in Columbus, Ga., where he was pastor of Central Christian Church from September 1941 to March 1942.

With the bombing of Pearl Harbor, he decided to become an Army chaplain. He had his physical examination at Benning and on Feb. 22, 1942 took the oath of an officer here. He preached his last sermon at Central the following Sunday, in uniform.

Captain Hundley entered the service at Fort Jackson, S. C. on March 9, 1942, becoming a member of the 121st Infantry Regiment of the 8th Infantry Division. The 121st was a Georgia National Guard unit known as "The Old Gray Bonnet Regiment," with headquarters at Macon.

Throughout World War II, he served with the 121st in the European Theater.

Served Since War

Since the war, Chaplain Hundley has served in varied assignments, including post chaplain at the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., from 1953 to 1955; chaplain of the 3rd Armored Division, 1955 to 1957; assistant chaplain for the U. S. Army Garrison, Headquarters, U.S. Army Europe (USAREUR), 1957 to 1959; operations and training staff officer, office of the Chief of Chaplains, Department of the Army, Washington, 1959 to 1961; and chaplain at Walter Reed Army Medical Center from 1961 until he went to Korea.

The chaplain holds a Bronze Star Medal and an Army Commendation Medal with three oak leaf clusters.

Chaplain and Mrs. Hundley have a son and three daughters.

Robert Hundley, 22, who graduated in 1964 from Lynchburg College, is pursuing graduate studies in philosophy at Union Theological Seminary in New York City. Martha, 19, is a sophomore at Lynchburg. Kathy, 16, is a senior at Baker High School in Columbus while Jane, 13, is in the seventh grade at Faith School.

Marine PFC Is Honor Graduate From Airborne

TOP GRADUATE . . . Marine Corps PFC Douglas E. Tremain has his airborne "wings" pinned on by Col. L. A. Welch, director of The Infantry School's Airborne Department. PFC Tremain, a member of the 1st Force Reconnaissance Company at Camp Pendelton, Calif., was the honor graduate among 561 men who completed the three-week jump course last week.

Marine Corps PFC Douglas E. Tremain was the honor graduate of The Infantry School's Airborne Class No. 6 Thursday (Sept. 2) at Fort Benning.

A member of the 1st Force Reconnaissance Company at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Tremain was top man among the two other Marines, 2 Navy, eight Air Force and 523 Army personnel completing the three-week course, considered one of the toughest given by the Army.

Tremain was presented a letter of commendation by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commandant of The Infantry School, and an airborne statuette.

AUSA's Fall Meeting To Be Largest in Years

The fall meeting of the Columbus - Phenix City - Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA), scheduled for Sept. 20 at Victory Lodge, promises to be the largest held here in years, according to Oscar Betts, chapter president.

Featuring a number of "firsts" including an outdoor barbecue, entertainment and an invitation to the wives of members, the social event has already attracted more than 500 reservations.

Col. William M. Preston, secretary, has extended the cutoff time for reservations, originally set at Sept. 7, to Monday, Sept. 13, in order to "give every member and every potential member a chance to attend." He said all reservations must be in by the close of business on the 13th, however, so that the Program and Activities Committee can insure sufficient food and beverages.

Previous spring and fall meetings have consisted mainly of a social hour, dinner and guest speaker. Sgt. Jesse Brewer, the chapter's administrative NCO, said it was decided to depart from that format this fall in order to attract more non-members and to give the wives a chance to meet each other.

Reservations may be addressed to AUSA, Bldg. 35, room 136 or by phone to 545-3444. The barbecue begins at 6 p.m. and is at Victory Lodge. There is no cast involved and all members are urged to bring wives and adult, non member guests.

Seat Belts Save Airman In Car-Crushing Mishap

TRAVIS AFB, Calif — A2C Mearl D. Thompson, 22-year-old medical technician at the base hospital, is living proof of the life-saving value of auto seat belts.

En route to his job in the hospital's intensive care ward from his home, his sedan collided with a pick-up truck at an intersection.

Force of the impact spun the sedan 180 degrees, flipped it upside down and slid it along the edge of the roadway ending with the roof crushed to the level of the hood.

Together with a twisted frame and wheels the car was a total wreck.

Airman Thompson unbuckled his seat belt and crawled from the wreckage unhurt except for a black eye and scratches.

His first words were "Thank God for my seat belt."

Former MAH Personnel Officer Sees Viet Conflict at Office Door

A former Martin Army Hospital staff member now knows what it's like to have the war in Viet Nam "right at the office door."

Maj. Donald M. Nay, whose family lives in Columbus, chief of the Personnel Division at Martin Hospital from June 1963 to January 1965, is deputy administrator for the Eighth Field Hospital in Viet Nam.

At 1 a.m. June 28, Major Nay was working at his desk.

"I normally live off base," he said, "but there'd been rumors going around that made us think the Viet Cong were going to hit — so I stuck around. At seven minutes past one," as he tells the story, "they hit with a fierce mortar barrage. The first several rounds landed about 100 yards from us, just across the street from my office.

"We don't think they were going for the hospital," he continued, "but that sort of thing can make a believer out of you fast. We didn't take any casualties here and it actually lasted no more than 15 or 20 minutes but it seemed like two days," he remembered.

Nay had been in Viet Nam only a month when the Eighth Field Hospital, largest of its kind in Vietnam, had its "most difficult test."

The provincial capital of Pleiku, in the central highlands, had been hit by a mortar attack. There were 76 Americans wounded.

"We got word on it at 2:30 in the morning, Feb. 7," Nay said. "The first patients began arriving about an hour and 15 minutes later."

"They had received emergency treatment by doctors in Pleiku and most of them were conscious, but very quiet — extremely quiet — some apparently in shock. But they were well disciplined. The last of them were in here by 5 a.m.

"The whole staff had been mobilized when we first got word, of course. Our people worked all day and all that night, about 36 hours straight with only cat naps here and there."

Nay said there were about 17 major surgical procedures in the first 23 hours.

"I was really impressed by the team work of our people," he said, "since most of them had not had much opportunity to work together previously. The staff was made up mostly of young fellows just out of medical school and residency."

Nay joined the Marine Corps in 1944 and served until 1946. After attending Boston University, he entered the Army Medical Service in 1951. From 1962 to 1965, he served at Murphy Army Hospital in Waltham, Mass. For two years he was an Army medical personnel counselor at Boston Army Base.

Five Soldiers Get ACM At 42nd Arty Ceremony

An awards ceremony at the 2nd Battalion 42nd Artillery last Friday saw five men presented Army Commendation Medals.

Hightower, the battalion liaison officer, was cited for meritorious service during the period May 1964 to May 1965 while serving as commanding officer of the unit's Battery C.

Adams, Headquarters Battery commander, was honored for his meritorious service during the period July 1964 to June 1965 while serving as battalion logistics officer and Headquarters Battery commander.

Bryant, the adjutant, was awarded the commendation medal for meritorious service during the period November 1964 to June 1965 when he was assistant executive officer of Battery A, 5th Battalion, 38th Artillery.

Bush, the personnel noncommissioned officer, was presented the medal for his meritorious service during the period January to July 1965 while serving in the S-1 section, Division Artillery.

Martin, the S-1 clerk-typist, received the commendation medal for meritorious service during the period January 1964 to June 1965 while serving in his present position.

Cape Kennedy Now Tourist Attraction

Washington (AFPS)—Cape Kennedy is fast becoming a top tourist attraction in Florida.

Thousands of visitors throng the nation's main spaceport on Sunday afternoons when drive-through tours are permitted, the National Geographic Society reported. Motorists follow a marked route past giant radar domes, the liquid oxygen fuel plant, and down ICBM Road for close-up views of missile launching pads, towering steel gantries and concrete control bunkers.

The tour has become so popular that a large Visitor Information Center will soon be built to handle some expected three million annual visitors by 1970. A closed-circuit television program is planned to explain missile technology.

Reusable Craft Seen in Future Space Projects

Washington (AFPS) — Unmanned military spacecraft becoming inoperative in space may some day be recovered and reused or repaired and resupplied in flight, saving millions of dollars.

This information was disclosed in Congressional testimony by Defense Director of Research and Engineering Dr. Harold Brown, who said "the 1975-85 time frame may very well include operational reusable spacecraft."

He said a rendezvous might be made with unmanned spacecraft for in-flight resupply and repair, but foreseeable improvement in recovery vehicles points to the recovery and reuse principle as being more feasible.

Private War of CSS Shenandoah Continues Months After Confederacy Lays Down Arms at Appomattox

Special to The Bayonet

NEW YORK —One of the most dramatic victories of the Confederacy occurred two months after the Civil War had ended - 100 years ago.

The impressive, though virtually unknown, Confederate victories were won in "The Private War of the C. S. S. Shenandoah," waged against the North in June 1865.

On April 13, 1865, Gen. Robert E. Lee trooped into the Virginia town of Appomattox and surrendered his forces to Ulysses S. Grant, ending war between the States.

But in that same month, the newly commissioned Confederate steamer, the C. S. S. Shenandoah, captained by James Waddell, was cruising the Pacific Ocean. Its mission: destroy the great New England whaling fleet hunting oil in the Pacific. With radio still decades away, Waddell was unaware of Lee's surrender.

While Confederate soldiers were laying down their arms, the "Shenandoah" was cornering and sinking four Northern whalers in the harbor of Ascension, one of the Caroline Islands in the Pacific. Aboard the whalers were detailed charts, mapping the route of the New England fleet in the Bering Sea.

War Chronicled

As detailed in the "disaster books" of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, which chronicled "The Private War of the C. S. S. Shenandoah," the Confederate raider steamed north. In its first encounter the Shenandoah cornered the bark Abigail in the icy seas north of Japan, imprisoned her crew and put the captured bark ("greasy" with whale oil) to the torch.

The Abigail was only an hors de'oeuvre. Skirting a northward path through ice floes and thick fog, the Confederate raider captured 13 more New England whalers between June 22 and June 28, 1865.

When Waddell seized the whaler "William Thompson," its skipper exploded with rage and shoved San Francisco newspapers describing Lee's surrender under Waddell's nose. But Waddell remained stubbornly unconvinced that the Civil War had ended.

Coincidence

One of the serio-comic aspects of "The Private War of the C. S. S. Shenandoah" concerned Captain James Clark. Back in 1863, Clark had lost one ship to the Confederate raider "Alabama". Now, Clark, commanding the "Nimrod" out of New Bedford, Mass. was captured by a Confederate officer off the "Shenandoah" — the same officer who had captured him two years before.

By June 26, the "Shenandoah" had taken so many Northern prisoners she was forced to tow them in whaleboats until more Northern ships could be trapped.

The Shenandoah climaxed its "Private War" against the North on June 28, 1865. Finding five Northern whalers becalmed, Waddell sent out separate boarding craft, capturing all five whalers simultaneously.

That afternoon, Waddell spotted five more whalers and took them into tow. Hundreds of Northern prisoners were herded aboard two of the captured whalers. The other eight ships were set ablaze.

Describes Destruction

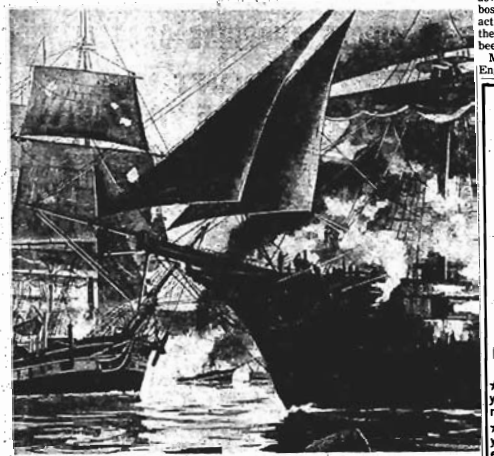
A sailor aboard the Shenandoah described the destruction of New England's whaling fleet in these graphic terms:

"The red glare from the eight burning vessels shone far and wide over the drifting ice of those savage seas; the crackling of the fire as it made its devouring way through each doomed ship, fell on the still air like upbraiding voices . . . When, one by one, the burning hulks went hissing and gurgling down into the treacherous bosom of the ocean, the last act in the bloody drama of the American Civil War had been played."

Meanwhile in July, New England shipowners began hearing disquieting rumors that the Shenandoah prowling the Pacific was bent on destroying their ships. The owners were unaware that their vessels had already been seized or burned.

Insured Property

Terrified, the shipowners negotiated with the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company to insure their property under an insurance contract containing the wording "lost or not lost". This wording, still utilized today, guarantees payment of a claim even though the item insured may have unknowingly to all parties already been destroyed or damaged before the insurance was arranged.



AFTER WAR ENDS . . . Unaware the Civil War had ended two months earlier, the Confederate warship Shenandoah is shown destroying New England's great whaling fleet in the Arctic Ocean in June 1865. This oil painting depicting the scene hangs in New York City in the famed Marine Library of the Atlantic Companies.

Chaplains' Aides Ride 'Shotgun' On Clergy Tours

Son Nhut Airfield RVN (AFPS)—Air Force chaplain services specialists have an additional duty in the Republic of Viet Nam. They ride "shotgun" for the military clergy who travel to outlying bases to conduct services.

Chaplains can't carry weapons for self-protection. But the specialists can. They serve as protection for combat zone "circuit riding" ministry.

Once at their destination the specialists set up altars to perform normal duties.

Vertical Assault Tactics Gets First Try in RVN

DA NANG, RVN (AFPS) — Operation Starlite, which broke the spine of a Viet Cong (VC) regiment 12 miles south of Chu Lai, was the first major battle to employ the Marine Corps doctrine of vertical envelopment.

The double-pronged thrust of vertical assault — over beaches by boat and from the air by helicopters — had been practiced by Marines since the end of the Korean conflict, and employed on a limited basis in the Republic of Viet Nam during other assaults.

Starlite demonstrated how devastating a major vertical assault can be. The 1st Viet Cong Regiment, considered by the VC to be one of its best, was decimated. Five hundred sixty-four VC dead were counted and more were expected when mop-up operations were over. One hundred eight confirmed or suspected Viet Cong were captured along with scores of weapons. Marine losses were reported very light.

Three squadrons were initially planned for the assault, but the entire strength of five helicopter squadrons was prepared for the battle, and as the fighting raged, helicopters were diverted from other missions and sent into assault landing points.

From off-shore, aircraft of the Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron (HMM) - 163, flying from the amphibious assault ship USS Iwo Jima, joined aircraft from Da Nang and Hue Phu Bai.

A 24-helicopter task force carried ground elements into position, armed copters provided gun-escort service to the troop carriers, and light fixed-wing observation airplanes coordinated air support for the battle.

Under heavy fire from the Viet Cong, helicopters flew ammunition, food and medical supplies to the four-mile battle front and evacuated casualties.

ON THIS DAY. . .

On September 13, 1814, Francis Scott Key put in word the patriotism he felt while watching the gallant defense of Fort McHenry under siege by the British fleet in Chesapeake Bay. His Star Spangled Banner was later adopted as the National Anthem. (ANF)

Capitol Building in Need Of Emergency Repairs

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Emergency measures have been put into effect to keep the west front facade of the United States Capitol from collapse.

According to U. S. Capitol Architect J. George Stewart, "a sonic boom or any kind of earth tremor" could collapse the 160-year-old sandstone and mortar wall "and send the dome crashing down."

The wall's condition stems from a series of problems: the original mortar used was not properly prepared; the nine-million pound cast-iron dome oscillates every day as it expands and contracts with the heat; and 30 heavy coats of paint in the last century have saturated the stone to the point that chunks of stone pull away whenever a paint blister breaks.

In addition to natural conditions the wall has suffered from two more violent stresses. During the War of 1812, the British put the Capitol to the torch. Masons, chiseling away all traces of the fire, also weakened the wall. In 1898 a gas explosion in the old senate wing weakened the wall's foundation.

As an emergency measure, all critical points along the wall have been shored up with timbers. A plan for major reconstruction that will leave the Capitol in sound condition is being developed.

Girls Don't Accept Men Who Make Donkeys of Themselves While Driving

Special to The Bayonet

Passing can be fun — if you're making one at a pretty girl. Passing can be exciting; if you make a 50 yarder for the winning touchdown. Passing can be embarrassing; if it's "out" after too much drinking at a party. Passing can also be fatal; if you're doing it on a blind curve at night.

In fact, passing can be dangerous almost any way you do it.

Safety Council officials say while driving, passing is unsafe on hills, curves, within intersections, at the approaches of or on railroad crossings or bridges, when another vehicle is approaching, when being overtaken and when the vehicle about to be passed is overtaking a third vehicle.

There are other places where passing is hazardous. For example, when you're driving by a school playground, or through a park, or at any location where pedestrian traffic is present.

It's safe to pass if conditions are right and certain precautions are taken, the National Safety Council says.

On-coming traffic is one of the biggest menaces to passing. You've got to be absolutely sure you've got time to pass. There's no formula. It's up to the individual driver's judgment. Best advice: when in doubt, don't!

Traffic from the rear can be troublesome too. Be sure no other vehicle is about to pass you.

Danger can develop fast if the vehicle you're about to pass starts to pull out to pass still another vehicle in front of both of you.

Let the vehicle you're about the pass know you're coming around. Use your horn. At night in addition to the horn, flashing the high and low headlight beams a few times will warn that driver ahead you intend to pass.

When it's clear in the on-coming lane and the driver ahead apparently has seen your signal, get around as quickly as you can. Then pull back into the right lane when your vehicle is well ahead of the one you just passed.

Summing it up — passing is necessary in traffic. You can't avoid it, but you can do it safely. Use caution, good judgment, and if there's any doubt, don't pass.

New Treetop Deck Aids Aviators in Thick Jungle

GROUND, Md. (ANF) — Dense jungle foliage has long been one of the greatest obstacles to unhampered Army aerial operations in tropical regions, but a promising new development now being studied at the Army's Limited Warfare Laboratory here may turn the thick growth to good advantage.

The Jungle Canopy System fabricates common building materials into a portable platform in the treetops, using the tangle of vines and branches as a sturdy foundation.

Two stainless steel nets, each 200 feet long and 20 feet wide, are stretched in an "X" pattern across the jungle canopy. Then a light-weight platform 18 feet across is laid at the center of the two nets.

The result is a small deck for loading and unloading helicopters in the densest jungle.

Service Vets Get Federal Job Breaks

Special to The Bayonet

ATLANTA — Federal employment preference has been extended to some Cold War veterans according to the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

Veterans who have received the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal after July 1, 1958 are granted federal employment preference under a Congressional act of 1944.

The medal, granted at the discretion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has been authorized for servicemen who participated in the following actions: Lebanon, July - November 1958; Viet Nam, beginning July 1958; Quemoy and Matsu Islands, August 1958-June 1963; Taiwan Straits, August 1958 - January 1959; Congo, beginning June 1960; Laos, beginning April 1961; Berlin, August 1961 - June 1963; Cuba, November 1961 - June 1963.

The Veterans Preference Act of 1944 gives wartime veterans, or holders of the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, a five - point preference when applying for Federal employment. The Georgia constitution prohibits establishment of a state or local merit or civil service system which does not give veterans preference equal to that given under federal laws.

Criteria for receiving the Expeditionary Medal and veterans' preference is participation in actions where hostile action by foreign force is imminent, even though it may not have materialized.

Field managers of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist Cold War veterans in determining eligibility for veterans preference, or in any other veterans' affairs matter, the department said.

Army Praises Bob Hope

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Veteran comedian Bob Hope visited the Pentagon recently for a luncheon given in his honor by Maj. Gen. Joe C. Lambert, the Adjutant General of the Army.

Hope was praised for his 23-year record of visiting troops stationed around the world. As a memento of the occasion, the entertainer was presented with an inscribed photograph of a weary but grinning soldier in full combat gear, symbolizing the lift that he has brought to the troops in time of stress.

The photo was presented by Gen. Lambert on behalf of the Department of the Army, executive agent for the Department of Defense in sponsoring Hope's famous annual tours to entertain members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Santa Claus in Green Aids Dominicans in Strife

Santa Claus wore Army Green in the Dominican Republic.

He came in the person of the soldiers who were assigned to the trouble spot when hostilities broke out months ago. The story of the trip from the North Pole or wherever he comes from won't be told in official after-action reports and the story probably won't make the history books.

The story is of worth because the Dominicans who were innocently caught up in the involved game of international politics being played in their homeland were the recipients of the Santas' largess.

The "after action" reports that will be read at the conference tables may never mention 14-year old Raldan A. Naivarro. He's part of the story.

The Maintenance Platoon of Hq. Co., 1st Bn., 505th Inf., 82d Division, met Raldan at an old garage in Santo Domingo. The lad came over to help the troops clean out the place. When they moved, he tagged along.

Well, as Sgt. Armando Olivas of Los Angeles, Calif., put it:

"Raldan has impressed not only myself but the whole platoon. We feel that if given the chance, he could become a top-notch auto mechanic."

Raldan will get that chance. The 19 paratroopers of the platoon pooled their cash to finance an 18-month correspondence course in auto mechanics for the boy.

Said Raldan: "This may make my dream come true — to become a mechanic — so good a mechanic that one day I can come to the United States."

Another chapter in the story is of how the wives of the 82d Airborne Division back in Fort Bragg, N. C., the division's home, banded together in their own "Operation Kindness" and sent tons of food and clothing to be distributed among the people.

And all the kinds of Biblical platitudes were proved to be true. Take the afternoon at the Brisas Del Caribe Hotel where Company A, 2d Battalion, 505th Infantry, was in position when an armed aircraft began strafing a radio station a few blocks away.

During Strafing

When the strafing began, PFC Rodney Motherhead of Sparks, Nev., started up the stairway of the hotel. Civilians were racing through the hallways in mass confusion. The soldier and a companion directed the people downstairs in orderly fashion, but one woman holding a small child sat huddled in a corner, sobbing with fear. Pvt. Motherhead helped the woman to her feet and she threw her arms around him and screamed in terror. But he reassured her everything would be all right, persuaded her to take the youngster and go downstairs.

When the raid ceased, the woman came up to him, smiled, and said she would like to do something for him and his fellow soldiers.

That was the day Company C stopped eating cold "C" rations and washing their own clothes. The woman and some of her neighbors took on the tasks of cooking and washing for the company — in gratitude for a single, small act of kindness.

When a Carmelite convent of cloistered nuns offered to do the laundry for some of the troopers, the latter responded by building room partitions for the sisters. For the first time the nuns have their own rooms, plus space for nine more sisters.

Set Up Post

The 407th Supply and Transportation Battalion set up its command post at a small Catholic grammar school, Collegio De Nuestra Del Socorro, outside Santo Domingo.

In return for making use of the space, Maj. Thomas Beatty, 407th Executive Officer, decided the unit ought to do something for the school.

He remembered PFC Ronald Bomba of Flushing, N.Y., an artist, had painted six-sized murals in the division mess halls at Fort Bragg. So he asked the teachers whether they would like a mural painted in one of their classrooms. They were delighted.

Bomba was flown back to Fort Bragg to buy paints and brushes with money contributed by his own companions. It took him three days to paint the mural — a scene of a Polynesian lagoon complete with palm trees. In one corner of the mural is a thatched roof hut with the "double A" 82d Airborne shoulder patch over the doorway.

Whenever students look at the wall of that classroom, they will remember — fondly — the American artist in uniform who added brightness to their school.

Countless Vignettes

The vignettes like these are countless — of the roads repaired, utility lines restored, rubble cleared and rebuilding begun.

The Dominican people were quick in responding.

Writing to Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, then 82nd Division commander, Mother Superior Maria Ranier, directress of the Sisters of Salesiana, expressed her thanks for the manner in which U. S. soldiers conducted themselves while quartered in their college.

Said she in part: "We have witnessed so many moving scenes in the treatment by these soldiers of the poor people who approached them . . . May God accept our prayers of thanks and reward the sacrifices (which may not always have been understood) of all the soldiers and may He bountifully bless you and your loved ones and all the people of the United States for the great social work that you are carrying out throughout the whole world. . . The loving gratitude for our brothers of the United States of America shall always live in the hearts of our humble college."

Honor Teachers

Said an American officer at a dinner, honoring volunteer Dominican teachers who helped re-open schools:

"We are not happy over the reason for our presence in the Dominican Republic, but we are happy to be here because of the many good friends we have made among the people of Santo Domingo. I hope that some day we can return under more pleasant circumstances."

ARMY EMPHASIZES DEGREES

The Army's emphasis on education produced a total of 1,316 baccalaureate or advanced degrees for officers and enlisted men taking part in the Army's education programs during Fiscal Year 1965. A record 721,773 course completions were accomplished through the Army General Educational Development Program.

from the playhouse

Open tryouts and readings for all four roles in "The Glass Menagerie," Tennessee Williams' classic memory drama, will be held Sunday, Sept. 12, at 2 p.m. and Monday, Sept. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Fort Benning Playhouse on Main Post, theater officials announced. The play will be entered in the 1965 Third US Army Tournament of Plays, Nov. 10-14.

In the two previous tournaments, FBLT won best production, actor and director awards for "The Zoo Story" in 1963; and best production, actor, set design and ten other awards for "The Caretaker" in 1964.

"The Glass Menagerie," Williams' first Broadway play and somewhat autobiographical of his early years, won the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award as the best play of 1945. It will be directed for FBLT by Wes Carr, who also directed "The Caretaker" in the 1964 tournament.

The cast of "The Glass Menagerie" includes the mother, Amanda Wingfield, about 50 years old; her poet son Tom, about 26; her crippled daughter Laura, about 24; and a gentleman caller (about 26) whom the playwright describes as a nice, ordinary young man.

Rehearsals for the tournament play will begin Oct. 11, after FBLT's season opener, "The Hostage." Vacancies on the production staff — also eligible for tournament awards — will also be filled at the tryouts for casting.

The FBLT Playhouse is in Building 2519, off Indianhead Road behind the Main Post Quartermaster laundry plant. For further information, call 689-2722 or 545-2992 after 7 p.m.

The public is invited to the tryouts for "The Glass Menagerie," whether to read for a part or simply observe the proceedings and meet the troupe, said one playhouse spokesman.

The Stamp of the GI Now On Viet Nam

History has stamped the American GI with an indelible mark of courage, ingenuity and a reluctant appetite for the blood and guts of war.

Stars and Stripes photographer, Sp4 Mike Mealy, took the accompanying pictures of the latest generation of GI now engaged in a war against a rarely-seen enemy in Viet Nam.

The faces and names have changed, even some of the tactics and weapons, but these men are from the same mold used only 12 years after Korea.

The men shown here are members of the 173rd Airborne Brigade as they go into their first combat in Viet Nam.

The action took place eight miles from Bien Hoa Air Base.

Soldiers, toughened by realistic training before transfer from Okinawa, scrambled onto helicopters for airlift from their campsite at Bien Hoa to the jungle. Intelligence reports indicated a Viet Cong base camp was established nearby. The mission of the force: "Locate and destroy, kill or capture the Viet Cong."

Thirty "Iroquois" helicopters provided the transportation and supporting fire. As the aircraft approached the landing zone, rockets blasted the terrain; machine guns splattered the area with bullets.

The helicopters landed, and the soldiers jumped to the ground, teamed up, and fanned out into the surrounding jungle, firing as they advanced.

Several 60mm mortar rounds exploded around the troopers as they pressed the attack and the Viet Cong melted into the jungle.

During the Civil War, 63 Federal regiments and 52 Confederate regiments lost more than 50 per cent of their men in a single engagement.

Communism, Part V

Lenin and His Followers Plotted Forcible Overthrow of Government

Editor's Note: Part five of The Bayonet's treatment of Communism is a continuation of the study of the history of its rise. Readers will recall that last week's installment dealt with the comparatively short duration of democratic freedom after the downfall of the Tsar. This week the takeover by Lenin and his followers is discussed. The series is based on the book by William Ebenstein, "Two Ways of Life."

During the summer and fall of 1917, Lenin and his followers began to lay detailed plans for an armed insurrection aimed at the forcible overthrow of the Provisional Government. Military revolutionary committees were set up by Lenin in the major cities of Russia. Each committee was assigned a specific political or military objective to be seized in a synchronized plan of action.

Such objectives included telephone and telegraph centers, railroad stations, newspapers, military installations, police stations, and other important government buildings.

Plan in Action

On November 25, 1917 Lenin's plan was put into action. The capital of Russia, Petrograd (St. Petersburg), and the main industrial center, Moscow, were the two chief targets. These two cities fell quickly and Lenin and his fellow - conspirators proclaimed themselves rulers of Russia. Most members of the Provisional Government who were at large were arrested at once. Some leaders, including Prime Minister Alexander Keremsky, fled Russia.

Surprisingly, the new Bolshevik regime under Lenin held the scheduled elections for the Constituent Assembly on November 25, 1917. The Bolsheviks knew that the idea of such an election—the first and only one in Russian history—was very popular among the Russian masses.

The hope of the Communists was that the voters would show their gratitude by voting for communism. In any event, the Communists planned for the possibility of electoral defeat. If the election should go against them, they would simply dissolve the Constituent Assembly by force of arms.

Electorate Pressured

Although the Bolshevik leaders made a concerted effort to pressure the electorate into supporting Lenin's ticket, the results were disappointing to them. The Bolsheviks obtained twenty - three per cent of the popular vote as compared with nearly sixty per cent for democratic socialist parties, which included the Social Revolutionaries and other minor parties.

The party that represented the middle class and advocated Western concepts of free enterprise and constitutional government was that of the Constitutional Democrats ("Cadets"). The weakness of the Russian middle class was reflected in the poor electoral showing of the Cadets, who polled only eight per cent of the national vote and whose strength was concentrated in a few large cities.

The conservative parties obtained another eight per cent of the vote and the rest went to smaller parties representing national minorities in the Russian empire. The main fight, then, was between the Bolsheviks and the democratic socialist parties. This fight the Bolsheviks lost at the polls by over two to one.

Scheduled Meet

The newly - elected Constituent Assembly was scheduled to meet on December 11, 1917, but the Bolshevik government felt that the unfavorable political balance had to be redressed before the Assembly could be permitted to meet.

Army Gaining in Meningitis Battle Infection Cases Decline This Year

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON—Efforts to contain the spread of meningitis among new soldiers are apparently paying off. Spokesmen for the Surgeon General report that through the first 32 weeks of this year the Army has lost only eight soldiers to the infection.

Last year 25 soldiers died of the disease. More than 230 cases of meningitis were recorded in 1964 compared with 131 so far in 1965.

Some Washington officials had been extremely pessimistic and predicted that this year's meningitis total would surpass that of 1964. So far, it isn't working out that way.

Last year the Army curtailed basic training at Fort Ord where the disease struck new soldiers hard. However, basic training was resumed at the California post in April.

Only five cases of meningitis (including those striking dependents) have been recorded at Ord this year. Fort Polk has reported 34 cases and one death.

Recruits at Fort Leonard Wood have been hit most severely with four lives taken by the disease.

It is the Army and medical contention that since meningitis is confined almost entirely to recruit training centers, service life is not responsible for the situation.

New soldiers carry the meningitis organism with them from civilian life, authorities say.

The Army has increased its funding of meningitis research from about $84.000 annually to $200,000.

In addition, doctors at Fort Leonard Wood began an evaluation of the effectiveness of injected gamma globulin in preventing the disease, while specialists at Fort Knox are checking the usefulness of the drug sulfisoxazole against meningitis.

Unit Moves Mountains Of Trainee Paperwork

FORT GORDON, Ga. (ANF) — Plowing through a mountain of several thousand written and performance test records is a weekly task at the 2d Training Brigade here, a task that's shared by many other basic training commands throughout the Army. The 2nd Brigade, however, is doing something about all that paperwork.

Now concluding a seven-month test conducted with the post comptroller's data processing division, the unit has shown that automatic techniques can save considerable amounts of time while effectively measuring the progress and spotting the deficiences of the trainees.

During the period, the individual tests were printed and administered on electric accounting machine cards. The time-consuming manual procedures of compiling, analyzing, and preparing weekly reports based on these tests were accomplished instead by the speedy machines at the data processing division.

In less than two days after each test, the scores were posted in each of 15 companies and the cadre was supplied with timely and more conclusive trainee evaluations. The system also gave the battalion commanders records of the proficiency of each of their subordinate units.

The Fort Gordon Comptroller's Office is now extending the data service to other units at the post.

Civilian Nurses Get Commission With Viet Duty

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Professional civilian nurses who are certified anesthetists or operating room specialist may now apply for direct officer's commissions in the U. S. Army Nurse Corps with assignment to Army hospitals in Viet Nam, according to a recent adopted Department of the Army policy.

Qualified nurses, regardless of prior military service, are eligible to apply. Further information is available at U.S. Army Recruiting Stations.

DA officials indicate that Army Nurses have been volunteering for Viet Nam service since 1962, and inquiries from interested individuals have increased during the past months.

1st Infantry Soldier Given Joint Services Medal at Ceremony

A sergeant in the 1st Infantry Battalion of the provisional 2nd Control Command recently received the Join Services Commendation Medal.

Maj. Billy Ragsdale, battalion commander, pinned the medal on MSgt. Clyde O. Johnson during a retreat formation.

He was cited for his service with J-3 operations of the Military Assistance Group in Viet Nam from April 1963 to February 1965.

The citation praised his assistance in the establishment of a monitering system for military operations while they are in progress.

Officer-Pilots To Get Viet Flying Duty

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Army officer-aviators below lieutenant colonel can expect transfer from their present career branch to an aviation unit, with some going directly to the Republic of Viet Nam.

Some of the officer-aviators will fill leadership positions, such as company commanders and operations officers. Others will be assigned as pilots, in some cases performing duties below that normally associated with their grade and responsibilities.

Normal career advancement will not be affected in either case, the Army said.

This temporary policy is designed to help meet increased RVN aviation commitments until the Army can increase its warrant officer pilot strength to about twice its present 2,400 level, while maintaining the officer-aviator strength at roughly 6,800.

Army Marks Old Defensive Site

Ft. Amador, C.Z. (AFPS)—The first in a series of 19 historical markers to be placed near significant portions of the old defensive installations of the Panama Canal was unveiled here by Maj. Gen. J. D. Alger, commander, U.S. Army Forces Southern Command.

The plaque marks Batteries Burnside and Buell, two of the old coast artillery batteries which formed the original defenses of the canal. When constructed just before World War I, the fortifications were among the strongest in the world, consisting of solidly emplaced 6, 14, and 16-inch guns supported by a number of 12-inch mortars. HAWK missiles have taken over canal defense.

Air Transport Unit Deactivated Last Week

The colors of the Army's first Caribou Air Transport battalion were cased for the last time and retired in ceremonies last week.

Col. J. Elmore Swenson, commanding officer of the 10th Aviation Group, received the cased colors of the 37th Air Transport Battalion from Maj. William M. Jenkins Jr., battalion commander.

The men and equipment of the 37th will remain with the 10th Aviation Group. The flight companies are scheduled to remain as individual units within the 10th according to a Group spokesman.

At the time of the deactivation of the battalion headquarters and the retirement of the colors, the 37th had approximately 225 men in each of its companies, the spokesman pointed out. These have been taken into the 10th Aviation Group, he said.

The history of the 37th goes back to February 1963 when it was activated here at Fort Benning in conjunction with the testing of the 11th Air Assault Division.

Attached to the 10th Air Tansport Brigade (now the 10th Aviation Group) to support the 11th, the 37th grew into a unit with more than 1400 officers and men and sixty-eight Caribou aircraft.

The "Big Bou," as it is known by men who fly the Army's largest fixed wing aircraft, came of age under the leadership of Lt. Col. Harvey D. Hawley, Lt. Col. Gregory L. Olney, Lt. Col. John W. Lauterbach and Maj. Thomas G. Ziek, past commanders of the battalion.

The unit and the aircraft established record after record. Flying around the clock on Air Assault II into the most primitive airstrips, under the most challenging weather conditions and with every conceivable type of cargo, the plane and the men helped to prove the idea of air mobility.

WAC Finds Good Care Among 2,900 Wolves

Special to The Bayonet From the Fort Lewis "Ranger"

What's it like to be the only WAC among 29 hundred men? "Well, I'm treated fairly well — actually they take good care of me," says 1st Lt. Andrea Dryoff.

She's the assistant administration officer in the AG section of the 104th Division training recently at Fort Lewis for annual Reserve summer camp.

The 25-year-old blonde is the wife of 1st Lt. Edmund Dryoff, an Army pilot now flying a Caribou in Viet Nam. Both Lt. and Mrs. Dryoff have the same date of rank, March 21, 1964.

Andrea made her own way through college. She won a home economics and board of regents scholarship and waited on tables to finance three years at Washington State University.

Saves Money

With money saved on summer jobs, she spent her junior year in France studying at the University of Marseille. She came back to WSU with a certificate in European studies and was graduated in 1962 with bachelor's degrees in home economics and political science.

After school Andrea decided to try the Army. While enrolled in the WAC Officer's Basic Course at Fort McClellan, Ala., she met Edmund who was then attending the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. They were married six weeks later while Andrea was still in training.

When their training was finished, they were reassigned to the Army Aviation School at Fort Rucker, Ala. The new infantry officer was learning to be a pilot and his bride was the administration officer of the School's Department of Maintenance. She had received the job by virtue of her experience as a private pilot while in college.

Sees More

"I got to see more of Eddie then, than I have since. He went to school at 4:30 but was home every day at 6."

Both were sent back to Fort Benning when the head of the family became an Army aviator in October of 1963. While her husband was assigned to the 11th Air Assault Div., Andrea became part of the pilot project for community service programs now being established Army wide.

A year later, Lt. Edmund Dyroff was sent to Viet Nam where he would spend a year. Andrea stayed on at Fort Benning until January of this year when she reverted to the Active Reserves.

Finds Unit

"I had a hard time finding a unit that could take me and it wasn't until last May that I found a position with the 104th," said the WAC lieutenant. She's the first woman to ever be assigned to the division.

Husband and wife will be reunited in a little over a month and they expect to be sent back to Fort Rucker where Lt. Dyroff, the aviator, will be a flight instructor.

When asked if she would continue her stint in the Army, Lt. Dyroff, the wife, replied, "I'll be transferred to the Inactive Reserves when Ed gets back so I can have the time to be a mother."

Andrea now lives with her parents in Battle Ground, Wash.

Free Mail For GIs in RVN Set

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Rules for using the free mail privilege granted to those serving in Viet Nam have been agreed upon by the Post Office Department and Defense. Briefly, here's what they do:

1. Allow free mail to anyone serving in the Viet Nam area, which the directive defines as the same used for income tax exclusions. This includes all of Viet Nam plus the contiguous waters.

2. Provide that personal letter mail and post cards be sent free, transported by air to the U. S. and within the U. S. by the fastest delivery method including air.

3. Give anyone hospitalized elsewhere than Viet Nam, whose hospitalization is a result of Viet Nam service, the free mail privilege.

These rules include mail sent to anywhere in the U.S., including Puerto Rico and to any possession of the United States. Army, Air Force and Navy post offices are included as well.

All the sender has to do is make sure the mail bears:

1. In the upper right corner of the address side, in the handwriting of the sender, the word "FREE" and

2. In the upper left corner of the address side, the name of the sender, his service number, grade and complete military address.

Mail sent under this free mail provision may not be registered, insured or certified.

New Bill Would Let GIs Win Monetary Awards

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Servicemen would be eligible for cash awards of up to $25,000 for money-saving ideas under a bill approved this week by the House and sent to the Senate.

The proposal, HR 8333, would give servicemen the same cash prizes that now go to civil servants. Under present law, military people who come up with bright ideas can get citations, commendations and only token cash awards out of non-appropriated funds.

It is estimated that if awards are made on the same basis as they are now given to civilian employees of the government, servicemen would collect more than $6.5 million a year. The ideas would be expected to save the government more than $186 million.

The bill was approved by the House last year but it died in the Senate. Chances of passing the Senate this year are considered some what better.

Civilian regulations, on which the military regulations would be based, now provide that a man with a money - saving idea collects five per cent of the first $10,000 that he saves the government the first year, with a graduated scale going downward for greater amounts. In effect, a man who saves the government a million dollars the first year would collect a prize of $2000, with another $1000 for every additional $1 million saved.

Tops for any one idea would be a $25,000 prize.

Acceptance of a prize would mean that the suggester could not collect anything else from the government in the future, even if he got a patent on his idea.

Under the existing civilian program, the Defense Department now accepts more than six suggestions per year for each 100 employees. The average cash award is slightly under $50.

Until 1963, the Defense Department always opposed the cash award program for military men, on grounds that it was inconsistent with the traditional "sense of duty." But it has supported the proposal in the last couple of years, partly because of the civilian program which saves the government an estimated $33 for every $1 paid in prizes.

Private industry uses the cash award idea extensively. General Motors last year paid $7.5 million to 29,000 employees and the Ford Motor Co. gives a new car to each employee who wins a $6000 top prize.

AF Instructor Constructs Plane Of Own Design

Luke AFB, Ariz. (AFPS) —An Air Force instructor pilot with the 4512th Combat Training Squadron here is building an airplane of his own design.

Capt. Keith E. Phillips, who teaches German Air Force students to fly the F-104G Starfighter, began construction of his aircraft while assigned to Myrtle AFB, S.C. as a pilot with the 354th Tactical Fighter Wing.

He completed one wing there before being transferred to Ft. Campbell, Ky., where he was a forward air controller with the Army's 101st Airborne Division. He continued work on his design and by the time he was assigned here the plane had developed enough to require a trailer for moving.

The airplane will be 17 feet long with a 20-foot wingspan, according to Capt. Phillips. He expects to have the craft, which has been checked at various stages by Federal Aviation Agency inspectors, ready to fly by the end of the year.

Army Continues Work on M-70 Tank Engine

Washington (AFPS) — Engine development continues on the M-70 main battle tank with announcement of a $2¼ million modification to an existing General Motors Corporation contract.

Contracting agency is the Army Materiel Command's Army Tank Automotive Center, Warren, Mich.

M-70 development is being carried on jointly by the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany with various contracts awarded to U.S. and German firms.

Perfect Weather Marks Country Club Golf Play

Under sunny skies with cool breezes blowing across the greens, Fort Benning's Country Club held a "two ball" handicap tournament at the Club course last Monday. Hundreds turned out to play in the near perfect golfing weather.

The tourney was played with full handicap. Low ball twosomes among the competitors were Lt. Col. David Barraclough and Lt. Col. Charles Pritchard and Lt. Col. Pritchard and son Jack with 60s for 18 holes.

Twenty-six prizes of golf merchandise, totaling over $175, were awarded to winners in the tourney which was open to all members of the Country Club with duly-posted handicap cards.

The tourney was part of a big golfing weekend for Fort Benning soldiers and dependents and was designed to keep personnel on post and off the highways during the Labor Day holiday.

In other action, Steve Busch won the golf competition at the Sand Hill course.

Steve Busch Tops Pack In Sand Hill Golf Contest

Nineteen year old Steve Busch of Columbus played his way to victory on a 12 stroke lead at the Labor Day golf tournament at the Sand Hill course this week.

Busch, son of retired Lt. Col. Charles A. Busch, recorded a 226 total for 54 holes of play during the three-day tourney. He shot rounds of 72, 78 and 76 to top the championship flite and take the tourney honors.

Runnerup in the championship flite was Telani Teleso with a 238.

A two way tie for third place resulted in a sudden death playoff between Mike Sikes and Sam Williams who had both shot 240 for the 54 holes. Williams copped the third place slot when he parred the first playoff hole while Sikes bogied.

Nat Daniels was the winner in the first match play flite and J. Sparks was runnerup. Gerald Wega took the first consolation flite.

Lou Hibble won the second match play flite and Lou Creazzo took second place. W. R. Schaub copped the second consolation flite.

All winners received prizes of merchandise. In addition, champion Busch was presented the Goforth Trophy for the top performance of the tourney. The trophy was donated by Sand Hill Course manager Harry Goforth.

The competition began on Saturday with a qualifying round and division of the 25 competitors into flites. The tourney was open to all active duty and retired military personnel and dependents in the Fort Benning-Columbus area.

A dinner and a movie were held at the conclusion of the play.

Army Pacific Holds Basketball Coaches' Clinics

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Coaches Hal Fischer of the Presidio of San Francisco and Guy V. Lewis of the University of Houston are conducting basketball coaches' clinics this fall for the U.S. Army, Pacific.

The pair was in Hawaii, Sept. 6-10 and will be in Okinawa, Sept. 13-17; Republic of the Philippines, Sept. 20-23; Japan, Sept. 27-Oct. 1; and South Korea, Oct. 4-8.

Fischer, the Presidio's athletic director, has coached seven all-Army basketball teams. This year his soldier-squad captured the inter-service title. He also coached an interservice team to victory in the national Amateur Athletic Union tourney in Denver last month.

Lewis has been head coach for Houston for 10 years. Three of his last five squads attended post-season invitational tourneys. His 1961-62 team rose to the quarter finals of the National Invitation Tournament in Madison Square Garden, here.

Starks Shares Top Spot At Interservice Tourney

Fort Benning's Nat Starks was in a three way tie for first place following the second round in the Interservice Golf Championships at Cherry Point Marine Air Station, N. C. on Wednesday. Starks had shot a 145 for 36 holes.

Army Lt. Don Clark and Air Force Capt. W. L. Simmons also shared the lead at 145 strokes each.

In the team standings the Army was in first place at 580, three strokes ahead of the second place Air Force. The Marines were third at 599 and the Navy fourth at 609. The tourney ends today.

Starks shot a closing round 70 last Saturday to win the All-Army Golf Championship with a 285 total, nine strokes ahead of Lt. Clark.

Starks took the lead in the 72-hole event after 36 holes. His rounds of 71-71-73-70 gave him a three-under par finish.

Clark, from Ft. Sill, Okla., shot a closing 75 for a 294 total.

Tied for third were SSgt. Orville Moody of Korea and PFC Allen Krueger of Ft. Ord, Calif., with 297s. Moody had 72-73-78-74, Krueger 71-72-75-79.

Rounding out the open division was Sp4 Denmon West of West Point, N.Y., with a 298 total.

In the All-Army seniors division M-Sgt. Agon Occhialini of Germany won with 305, followed by Lt. Col. Charles Bushee, Ft. Gordon, Ga., with 306 and Lt. Col. Webster Wilder (Ret.) of San Antonio, Tex., with 308.

The 3rd Army command led in team standings with 890 and the U. S. Army Europe finished with 906. The U. S. Army Pacific wound up the event with 908.

Top finishers, with the exception of Wilder, went on to represent the Army in the all-service tournament which began Tuesday at the Cherry Point Marine Air Base in eastern North Carolina. Wilder was not eligible since he is retired.

Airmen Hold Marathon Softball Game

(AP) A marathon softball game at Moody Air Force Base at Valdosta, Ga. lasted more than three days and broke a world record for player endurance before it was called.

The two Moody teams played for 77 consecutive hours and three minutes. There were 453 innings and "A" Team won over "B" Team, 767 to 718.

The endurance champion was Airman Second Class Jerry Spray of Penea City, Okla., who played 72 consecutive hours. After a rest in the hospital, he was reported to be all right.

The game, played for charity, was more of an endurance test than a sports match. About 200 Moody personnel took part to break the old record of 70 hours held by the 6921st Security Wing of Misawa Air Base, Japan.

Post Baseball Trophy

Col Earl F. Holton (center), deputy post commander, presents the Infantry Center baseball championship trophy to Col. Lon D. Marlowe Jr., commanding officer of the Infantry Center Troop Command, and SSgt. Joe C. Smith at Gowdy Field last week. Smith was the coach of the winning CTC baseball team which last month copped the Benning baseball title for the second straight year. In addition to the trophy, each member of the team received a wrist watch. (Photo by Phillip D. Reid).

Post Pistol Contest Won By Thompson

By LEE LACOMBE

SFC Ralph O. Thompson of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit overcame an early lead by teammate SSgt. Emil Heugatter and went on to win the monthly pistol shoot sponsored by the Fort Benning Rifle a n d Pistol Club.

The Army Blue squad composed of Thompson, Heugatter, MSgt. George Snavely and Sgt. Merriweather Jones, took all three of the team events in the two-day match which ended Sunday.

Thompson posted a three-gun total of 2,659 out of 2,700. Heugatter was runnerup with 2,654 and Jones took third with 2,647.

The match winner also topped the field in the Center Fire aggregate with 888 and the .45 aggregate with 880. Heugatter won the .22 aggregate with 891.

The Blue squad fashioned 1,170 in the .22 match, 1,179 in the Center Fire and 1,175 in the .45 event.

THOMPSON

Third Army Blue was runnerup in the first match with 1,170 and Army Grey took place honors in the other two matches with 1,156 and 1,162 points.

Snavely placed second in the individual .22 aggregate, also with 891 but with three x-ring shots less than Heugatter.

Power Food

Back in the days when George Gibson managed the Pittsburgh Pirates, one of his outfielders stopped by a neighborhood saloon one afternoon before heading for the ball park. Worried that Gibson might detect the odor of liquor on his breath, the outfielder got hold of an onion and chewed it carefully. He figured that would cover up the smell of whiskey and he was right.

Gibson detected the presence of onion all right. And when he questioned the player, the outfielder explained the onions gave him power. The outfielder had four hits that day, and Gibson from then on, urged all his players to have a steady diet of onions.

The New York Mets played their last game this week in Milwaukee because the Braves will be moving to Atlanta next year. The Mets were just as happy to say farewell to Milwaukee. In their nine games in Milwaukee this season, the Mets have failed to win once.

GETTING OLD

Pitcher Wade Blasingame of the Milwaukee Braves had to leave the game against the New York Mets in the eighth inning this week. He was asked why he left.

Replied Blasingame:

"I left because I was tired. I guess I'm getting too old." Blasingame is only 21 years old.

Military Sports Pact Embraces 35 Nations

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Shortly after World War II, the United States formed a sports alliance with six countries that has now expanded to 35, gaining Department of Defense sanction along with the Olympic and Pan American Games.

Each year more countries join the Conseil International du Sports Militaire (CISM) and the end is not in sight, according to CISM President, Brigadier General Royal Hatch, USAF.

Membership invitations have been extended this year to Kuwait, Republic of the Philippines, Ethiopia, Canada and Libya, the general said.

Member countries annually host 17 sporting events throughout the world. A recent example was a three-day track and field meet at Salonika, Greece, drawing some 100,000 spectators.

"All member athletes belong to their country's military services and some sports competitions are devoted primarily to military activities.

Typical of these were Sea Week in Norway, parachuting in Brazil and the military pentathlon in the Netherlands. An aerial pentathlon for jet pilots was also held this year in Sweden.

A less - publicized CISM undertaking is its research academy, headquartered in Brussels, which helps train coaches, assists military and youthful physical fitness programs and seeks safer sports equipment. Among the latter is a pneumatic boxing glove expected to reduce ring fatalities.

Sports Quote

Jackie Burke Jr., ace golfer and winner of the 1956 PGA, once commented on learning to avoid pressure.

Burke said: "I just belittle things. I belittle the shot I'm making, the hole I'm playing, the tournament, everything. 'Heck, I tell myself, 'It's warm and sunny and the country is green and, man, you're lucky to be alive and in the middle of all this. It used to be that I couldn't get into the right frame of mind at the right time. That was before I knew about belittling."

SPORTS QUIP

"When a man wants to murder a tiger, he calls it sport. When the tiger wants to murder him, he calls it ferocity." — George Bernard Shaw.

Synopsis

I SAW WHAT YOU DID—Three youngsters, left alone at night, play the "telephone game" of calling numbers at random and leaving such dire messages as "I know who you are and I saw what you did!" It's a fun game until they call John Ireland, who just murdered his wife. Ireland sets out to find and silence the supposed witness to his crime. Joan Crawford portrays an ardent widow whose more than neighborly relationship with Ireland leads to a night of terror. A gripping suspense - shocker.

THE GHOST—Terror runs along a wild course, sending off chills and provoking screams of fright. This at once is not only the haunting story of an adventure into that unknown land beyond the grave, but it is a powerful tale of a gorgeous woman and her lover caught up in a sizzling passion of love and a plan to murder her paralyzed physician husband and then share in the great wealth of his estate. It stars Barbara Steele and Peter Baldwin.

Three Nations Use Crime Lab Of Army Europe

FRANKFURT, Germany (AFPS) — A house opposite a quiet square in this city is the home of an Army unit with the job of assisting military crime investigators of the United States, Great Britain and Canada.

The building houses the U.S. Army, Europe's (USAREUR) Military Police Crime Laboratory. The unit is one of three such labs in the Army.

The staff, made up of U.S. Army officer and enlisted personnel and German civilians, serves field investigators in Europe, Africa and the Near East. Each staff member is highly trained in some specialized area of scientific crime detection.

The laboratory is organized in five sections — documents, fingerprint, chemistry, firearms and photography. It can provide forensic (criminal investigation) science capabilities comparable to those available in the largest American city.

TSB WELCOME . . . Lt. Col. Sidney J. Roche (right), S-1 officer of The Student Brigade, welcomes Maj. Donald R. Mortenson to the brigade headquarters staff. Mortenson, who will assume the duties of S3 left vacant by the departure of Maj. Robert E. Copeland, comes to Fort Benning from France.

ALLIED AVIATORS . . . Capt. Ralph E. Naumann (left), 134th Aviation Company flight platoon leader, explains interior passenger and cargo compartment features of the CV-2 aircraft to British-Royal Air Force Flight Lts. Christopher J. Hyatt (center) and Thomas D. Scott. The British officers are en route to Kenya as military advisers to the Kenya government on use of four of the CV-2 aircraft purchased for the Kenya military forces.

Army Trying for McNamara O.K. On Its STOL Aircraft Production

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON—The Army isn't quitting in its lengthy attempt to persuade Defense Secretary McNamara that it needs more short take off and landing aircraft. The effort to alter the DoD position comes as the Army nears the last of its available CONUS Caribou transport reserves.

Army Times reported last week that more Caribou transports from Fort Benning would probably go to Viet Nam to bolster U. S. operations.

The Caribou production line is still in operation and more could be purchased if permission were granted.

However, the Army would probably prefer to get a McNamara okay on production of a follow-on to the Caribou.

The follow-on is the Buffalo or CV-7, a larger and improved STOL transport. Two-thirds of the CV-7 test program is complete with Army officials reporting results "exceptionally good."

The new craft has met or exceeds every Army requirement for the plane.

Funds for Buffalo procurement were eliminated from the fiscal 1966 budget by the Defense Department on the grounds that Air Force C-130 transports could perform most of the missions the Army had staked out for the Buffalo.

Studies developed by the Army attempt to refute the DoD argument which some officials feel was actually based on budgetary economy.

Sources here say that the Buffalo program was boosted by the recommendations of the McNamara-created Army aircraft and manpower requirements board. It called for purchase of the Buffalo, as well as greater numbers of other Army aircraft, Army Times has learned.

The Caribou hauls a four-ton payload or 30 passengers into and out of short, unimproved fields. It has demonstrated its ability in Viet Nam as cails for more of the ships verify.

The Buffalo carries two tons more and has a larger cargo envelopes, but retains or betters the Caribou STOL characteristics.

Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Harold K. Johnson, said earlier this year that there was "still some reconciling to do between the jobs that Army aircraft can do, and until we get this reconciliation, we, I do not believe, are going to get authority to purchase" the CV7.

At the same time McNamara told Congressional committees that he saw no real requirement for the Buffalo. He admitted that his view "is not shared by many in the Defense Department."

Bolstering hopes for a reversal of the DoD position are recent changes of mind on Army helicopters and aviation training programs.

Rutgers Student Sweeps U.S. Pentathlon Meet

(AFPS) Paul Pesthy, a Rutgers University student from New Brunswick, N.J., won the 1965 U.S. Modern Pentathlon National Championship at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., last month.

He finished the five-day competition with 5,072 points, 65 points ahead of second place winner, 1st Lt. James H. Coots, USA, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Pesthy took an early lead in the first day's epee fencing match and held first place throughout the competition. Lt. Coots, who started in eighth place, climbed steadily through each of the five events, capturing second place after the cross-country run. By the final day of the competition, all but six contestants had withdrawn or were withdrawn from the riding event. Pesthy finished fourth in that event.

The pentathlon was an old Greek sport. The word means "five events." For centuries it was almost forgotten but was revived in 1912 and has been an Olympic event ever since. The modern pentathlon consists of five events—epee fencing, pistol shooting, swimming, cross-country run and horseback riding—with one event each day.

Modern pentathlon requires the same athlete to compete in each of the unrelated sports. Some athletes excell in certain sports more than others and it is rare an athlete can become expert in all five. Consequently, there is a strong challenge for participants in winning top honors.

Pesthy has competed in pentathlon events for several years. He was in second place in the nationals last year and was the only civilian member of the four-man team selected to represent the Union States in the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo.

Helicopter Units To Train on Post

The Army Tuesday announced the creation of a program to speed up activation and training of the new helicopter companies recently authorized by the Department of Defense.

Planned for Fort Benning, according to the announcement, are UH-1 "Huey" (Iroquois) helicopter companies composed of 261 officers and men each and CH-47 "Chinook" companies with 264 men per company. Seven "Huey" and two "Chinook" units are presently being activated here at Benning.

The announcement, said Fort Benning's 10th Aviation Group, will provide for centralizing a facility where the units can be quickly and smoothly organized and trained.

The Army has called for the new helicopter companies to be combat ready as soon as possible. School trained personnel, helicopters and other equipment will be channeled through Fort Benning to "greatly reduce the time required between activation and full combat readiness," the announcement went on.

Upon completion of the unit training program these companies will be available for deployment as required

OCS Program Gets 2,000-Man Boost

Officer candidate training at Fort Benning will be increased by an estimated 2,000 men in the coming year, according to a directive issued by the Department of the Army last week. The personnel increase is scheduled to begin next month.

Expansion comes as a result of the Army's current buildup of officer candidate training in all Army branches. Nearly 8300 more officer candidates will be trained in fiscal year 1966, according to the Army.

Expanded OCS classes will continue as long as necessary to meet the Army's requirements for junior officers, a department spokesman said.

More Classes

At Fort Benning the number of candidate classes in session at one time will be increased from six to nine. Each class is 23 weeks in duration. Last year 7000 candidates were trained here. Next year's total is expected to reach 9600.

Many of the facilities recently vacated by the 197th Infantry Brigade in its move to Kelley Hill will accommodate the expanded OCS program.

The U. S. Army Artillery and Missile School at Fort Sill, Okla. will receive 2,700 candidates during this fiscal year compared to the 1200 trained in 1965.

Officer candidate schools will be established at Fort Belvoir, Va., Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Gordon, Ga., the Department of the Army

'Cav' Troopers Take Positions In Viet Nam

BY JOE TREASTER

ANKHE, Viet Nam — The 1st Cavalry Division has been arriving in Viet Nam all week.

Already 5000 members of the division have left the coast and are digging in at the division home here in the central highlands of Viet Nam on famous route 19.

Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard arrived here last week to take active command of his unit. Kinnard previously attended briefings in Washington and Hawaii before proceeding here.

The division established a beachhead at Qui Nhon and then moved inland to take up positions on Viet Cong infested route 19 between Qui Nhon and Pleiku.

Already here at Ankhe was a 1000-man advanced party who have been clearing a helicopter pad for the division in a unique operation called "Operation Golf Course."

As Division troops arrived, they found a portion of the jungle of the central highlands had been hacked away and an Army camp had taken root.

Three weeks ago the "advance party" sowed the seeds for the flourishing garden of

197th Moves to Kelley Hill Home; Business as Usual by Tomorrow

Days of planning merged into action this week as the 197th Infantry Brigade shifted its base of operations to its newly acquired home at Kelley Hill.

Although orders from post headquarters allow until September 29 for the completion of the move, brigade commander Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr. stated that he expects the 197th to be performing on an Kelley Hill location by tomorrow.

With the announcement of the move last week, individual unit commanders met to discuss the facilities of the new location. Maj. Dana Tunmire brigade adjutant, mapped out plans for the utilization of available office space and the members of the 197th were told that the actual movement of troops and equipment would be done according to the desires of individual commanders.

Commanders Sign

Company commanders spent the latter part of last week signing for the transfer of barracks facilities and equipment as the final phases of planning were approached.

With the start of the week, 2,500 of the 197th's total force of 3,500 men readied themselves for the move. Members of the 1st Battalion, 69th Armor; 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery; and the 26th Scout Dog Platoon continued their normal duties without interruption as they are to remain in their present locations.

The movement of the 10th Artillery served as the first indicator of things to come when it began moving its individual batteries on Wednesday. The rumble of trucks and big guns accompanied the shift as the 10th's six batteries scheduled their move so that two units move each day from Wednesday to today.

Avoids Disruption

The movement of troops and equipment was scheduled in such a way as to avoid any disruption in the program of support missions for the Infantry Center.

The only real difficulty encountered in the relocat-said.

At Fort Belvoir 1900 engineer candidate will be trained during the coming year. Fort Gordon will begin signal training for 900 candidates.

At the U. S. Armor School, Fort Knox, 2600 candidates will be trained for the Quartermaster, Ordnance and Armor branches. All candidates will receive 13 weeks of basic officer training at Knox and then will attend appropriate branch schools.

Candidates in the military police, intelligence, chemical, medical service corps and finance branches will attend Infantry OCS here, the Department of the Army said. After commissioning they will go to branch training schools.

Become 2nd Lts.

Graduates of officer candidate schools are commissioned second lieutenants in the U. S. Army Reserve. Outstanding soldiers may be designated distinguished military graduates and apply for a regular Army commission.

Men who apply for OCS must be U. S. citizens, or have applied for permanent residence or be on active duty in the U. S. Army. Applicants may be married.

Enlisted men or warrant officers on active duty must be at least 18½ years of age. They must be a high school graduate or have passed the equivalent general education development test of the Armed Forces Institute.

In addition, an artillery candidate must have credit for two years of high school mathematics, equivalent credit from the Armed Forces Institute or have successfully completed applicable artillery school subcourses.

Need 110 GT Score

Applicants must have a general aptitude area score of 110 or better and an OCS test score of at least 115.

Prospective candidates must be physically fit and of good moral character. A minimum score of 300 on the physical combat proficiency test is necessary for acceptance.

Candidates must have completed or received credit for basic combat training and advanced individual training and be evaluated and recommended by an examining board.

Male college students between the ages of 18½ and 28 may enlist in the Army in order to attend OCS after basic training. They must meet the same prerequisites as warrant officers or enlisted men already on active duty.

Train to support world-wide commitments.

Each Iroquois company will have 25 helicopters, nine armed escort UH-1Bs and 16 troop carrying UH-1Ds.

The UH-1B is armed with machine guns and 2.57 inch rockets. The UH-1D will carry 10 combat equipped troops plus crew.

Each CH-47 company will have 16 "Chinooks", each capable of transporting 33 combat equipped troops or payloads up to six tons.

Addition of these new helicopter companies reflects the growing importance of air-mobility in modern warfare, particularly in areas where the terrain is difficult and in situations where quick response or surprise are vital, Department of Army said.

The helicopter has also proved to be an effective, versatile means of transporting troops and supplies and recovering casualties, especially where roads are poor or insecure, the Army continued.

Fort Benning became the home of the Air Assault concept in 1963 when Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard was given the task of testing the systems under realistic conditions.

After completion of the tests, the Army organized the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile) and, under Kinnard's command, men of the division are now landing in Viet Nam to aid the South Vietnamese in their battle against Viet Cong guerrillas.

African Officers Visit Benning

Four officers from the African country of Upper Volta visited Fort Benning this week to see Infantry training methods and weapons.

Senior officer of the group was Capt. Moumini Ouedraogo commander of the Parachute Company, Upper Volta Army.

He was accompanied by Capt. Zerbo Saye, commander of the 2nd Infantry Company; Lt. Nena Traore, Garrison Company commander; and Lt. Bonde Bagnamou, commander of the Gendarmerie Company.

The Allied officers visited The Infantry School to see the latest training methods and techniques, training aids uses and production, maintenance operations for vehicles and weapons, field firing of Infantry weapons and tactical field problems.

The were briefed on the history, organization and administration of Fort Benning and on the use of the reservation in support of training before they toured the post.

The observed airborne instruction and training facilities at Eubanks Field and Ranger activities at Morgan Field.

The visitors departed Wednesday for Fort Gordon, Ga.

Moves

ion occurred when the personnel section of the 197th was forced to close shop today in order to shift Brigade records dealing with everything from pay to educational histories.

According to Lt. Gordon B. Brown, personnel officer, "There was just no other way we could accomplish the move. However, we will be ready and operational by tomorrow again."

It was expected that once the troop movement was completed work would begin on the minor improvements that became necessary with the deployment of the 1st Cavalry Division.

Welcome Center Set Up By Community Services

The Community Services Agency has established a Welcome Center for newcomers to Fort Benning, Maj. Shirley Sneed announced Wednesday.

The Welcome Center is the first of its kind for the post and is currently in operation under the direction of the Community Services Agency.

It is located in Building 1101 directly to the rear of the Pre-Kindergarten School on Bergen Street adjacent to the Officers' Golf Course.

Sneed said the mission of the Welcome Center is to provide newly assigned personnel with information, location and phone numbers of the various post facilities.

The plan for the Center and much of the equipment was acquired by the Agency through the courtesy of the wives' organizations of the 2nd Division, she added.

The Center, located in a two story building, houses a lounge area where the wife and children may remain and relax while the husband is processing or tending to other business on post. It also features a lending closet with a limited amount of household goods such as chinaware, silverware, pots, pans, baby cribs, irons, etc. for personnel to borrow on a short term basis while their household goods are in transit; and a hot plate and refrigerator which may be used for the preparation of smaller childrens' meals and the warming of formula for babies.

Personnel at Fort Benning who desire to contribute surplus items in support of this lending closet may do so at Building 1101, Maj. Sneed said. Pickup of these items may be arranged by calling the Center.

Various types of reading material are available and several pamphlets are on hand which provide information on medical care, legal advice, post transportation, housing and general information concerning the surrounding community of Columbus.

JAPAN SURRENDER

Japan formally surrendered, ending World War II, Sept. 2, 1945, on board the battleship USS Missouri.

The Welcome Center is open to all personnel newly arrived at Fort Benning and visitors are encouraged.

The hours of operation are from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon on Saturday.

Further information pertaining to the operation of the Welcome Center may be obtained by calling 545-7723 or 545-7444 during duty hours.

Men in Viet Nam Face Poison Snake Danger

SAIGON, RVN (AFPS) — One of the natural dangers faced by men serving in the Republic of Viet Nam is the poisonous snake.

Several kinds of poisonous snakes including a member of the cobra family are natural to the area.

One particularly deadly type is the krait snake. A krait bite is fatal to man 99 per cent of the time.

The krait is a nocturnal snake. It grows to lengths of four feet or more and frequents cultivated land and human habitations.

The krait is reportedly responsible for more deaths than any other snake in the RVN.

In one recent case at Tan Son Nhut Airfield a krait bit an Air Force sentry dog, "The Duchess," during a night patrol. With an injection of krait anti-toxin serum, the only known cure for the bite, and a lot of spunk, the Duchess pulled through and is back on duty. If the snake had bitten her handler, Airman Second Class Clifford F. Davis, it probably would have been fatal.

The Viet Cong (VC), quick to take advantage of any possible weapon, have also been putting poisonous snakes to work.

The VC have been known to "plant" the often - deadly bamboo viper in hidden holes and tunnels to strike at troops conducting search-and - clear operations.

NEW WEAPON . . . A Marine sergeant holds a bamboo viper he found in an unoccupied Viet Cong "spider" hole. The VC put poisonous snakes in holes and tunnels to strike at soldiers conducting search-and-clear missions.

Two Top NCOs Serve Together For Third Time

The military careers of two senior sergeants crossed for the third time recently at the 1st Provisional Infantry Battalion of the 2nd Control Command.

First Sgt. Rivera Santiago last week took over as the first sergeant of the unit's Company A. In the same battalion, serving as sergeant major, is Calvin C. Willis. Both men have served together on two other occasions.

Sgt. Maj. Willis and Santiago first served together in the 2nd Battle Group, 1st Infantry, 2nd Infantry Division in 1961-62. Their paths crossed in the 2nd Battalion, 23rd Infantry of the same division in 1963 and now they cross again.

Santiago holds the Silver Star Medal, two awards of the Army Commendation Medal and the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

GEMINI PHOTOS RELEASED

HOUSTON, Tex., (AP) — The manned spacecraft center here has released 250 photographs taken by Lt. Col. L. Gordon Cooper and Lt. Cmdr. Charles Conrad on the Gemini 5 flight. Most were terrain shots including 26 photographs of Red China and five of Cuba.

Provisional Unit Praised for Aid At Fort Bragg

A letter commending the performance of the 1st Infantry Battalion (Provisional) while supporting ROTC summer training at Fort Bragg, N.C. was received last week.

The battalion, as a part of the 2nd Division's Third Brigade, spent some two and a half months in North Carolina supporting the summer training. Ordinarily the 82nd Airborne Division supports the training at Bragg, but due to its earlier commitment to the Dominican Republic, the job fell to the 1st Infantry Battalion.

The letter came from Col. Fred O. Jackson, commander of the 2nd Control Command. He praised the unit for its ability to react with short notice to the requirements of the ROTC training.

The colonel's letter reflected the praise of the Fort Bragg personnel directly responsible for the ROTC training.

Post Boy Scout Commissioners Attend Meeting

Three members of the Fort Benning Boy Scout District attended the Chattahoochee Council's annual Commissioners' Training Conference at Lake Mobly on Sept. 11-12.

They are Burton Chapman, Fort Benning district commissioner; Bill McMillan, assistant district commissioner; and Ken Forsyth, neighborhood commissioner. Also participating in the program was Jim Stroud, professional scouting executive for the Fort Benning District.

The two day meeting was designed to bring participants up to date on latest scouting developments and techniques. In addition to the Fort Benning delegation, some 25 representatives from the other districts in the Chattahoochee Council attended the event.

Students Hear Human Research Unit Member

Maj. Gen. (Ret.) Edmund D. Sebree, a member of the U.S. Army Leadership Human Research Unit at the Presidio of Monterey, Calif., yesterday addressed the combined career classes at the Infantry School.

Speaking to about 400 students, Sebree discussed military leadership.

He was briefed on the activities of The Infantry School and toured the new Infantry School, Bldg. 4. He also visited the leadership committee of the Company Tactics Department of the School, the editor of Infantry Magazine and the U.S. Army Infantry Human Research Unit.

Sebree departed last night after an official luncheon in his honor.

The thought of starting a lawsuit may cross your mind, and you have only the slightest idea of when to sue and how to start a suit.

Our laws give us a written guarantee that money we loan, or that people we deal with will keep their word when we make a contract, or that we'll get what we are reasonably entitled to if hurt because of another person's negligence.

Suppose someone doesn't pay the money he owes us or smashes into our parked car and refuses to pay the garage bills. Or, maybe he claims that it was our fault when we sprained an ankle on his broken stairway and lost a week's work; and we feel sure that if he had taken care of his property, we'd never have missed that pay check.

The law gives us the right to go to court. That, we know.

Which court is the right one? Are we entitled to anything beyond the doctor bill or garage bill for all the trouble we've been through? Is it damages we want, or an injunction, or merely a return of property?

If we demand a money judgment for some wrong, or loss, or injury suffered because of another person's actions, we'd be asking for damages.

In addition to recovering actual expenses for the services of someone like a doctor or a mechanic, and receiving the equivalent of whatever pay is lost from being unable to work, we might be entitled to damages for our pain and suffering in case there's personal injury.

Perhaps we've been subject to ridicule, or loss of business, or our reputation has been given a bad name either through vicious gossip, malicious printed statements or false arrest. We might claim damages.

We may want the court only to enforce an agreement we have with someone by directing him to perform a specified act. Maybe we want to stop or prohibit an action or circumstances that will cause us harm. Then it's an injunction suit we want.

Maybe we want to get back something other than money loaned. This is known as "replevin."

Whatever it is, we'd be almost certain to come out ahead in the long run if we think about suing only as a last resort and only when our conscience tells us we are dead right.

Today's Space-Age Pales Buck Rogers

The man in uniform today may recall his childhood thrills following the exploits of Buck Rogers in the Sunday funnies.

Stout-hearted and strangely-garbed people zipped to eerie places in bullet-nosed, rocket-powered vehicles.

Those were make-believe years of bravado and exciting derringdo, enough to stretch the imagination of any youngster.

Similiar events unravel before the eyes of today's youngster in honest-to-goodness reality. Those of us who once marvelled at Buck Rogers now find ourselves participants in events which equal or surpass anything he ever attempted.

Today, television projects images of real-life astronauts donning strange-looking suits, boarding sleek, needle-nosed craft, zooming through the mysterious world of space and using rocket guns to propel themselves.

Television itself, in Buck Rogers' heyday, was a speculative medium, derided by some as being impossible to develop. Some military advancements were also scoffed at as being either impractical or impossible, but have since become almost commonplace.

Among those are surface-to-air missiles, vertical-short-take-off and landing aircraft, weapons scopes which allow troops to spot targets in darkness, winged aircraft achieving sub-orbital speeds and strategic missiles fired from underwater submarines.

Yesteryear's youngsters have certainly emerged in the likeness of their childhood idols. They have become astronauts shooting rockets, firing guided projectiles and flying vehicles many times faster than the speed of sound.

Military astronauts Cooper and Conrad, in their Gemini-Titan 5 spacecraft, recently set many new world space records with their eight-day flight. Their achievements would have seemed impossible or highly improbable as little as 20 years ago. But today, they are looked upon as only preliminary stages of a program destined to bring the universe within man's grasp.

The world is definitely on the go, especially for service personnel, and obviously, the sky is no longer the limit. (AFPS)

Desk-borne Troops Get Exercise Program

Physical training has been an integral part of military service since early colonial times. It is ironic that, as battlefield requirements are becoming more rigorous, physical readiness has in many cases taken a back seat to other stringent demands on the time of the desk-bound soldier.

In the words of Lt. Gen. John H. Heintges, former commandant of the Infantry School, "As the physical requirements of our daily life lessen, those of the battlefield become more and more demanding in physical stamina, manual dexterity and mental alertness.

"The best equipment in the world manned by highly skilled personnel is of little value if soldiers are not physically able to keep it in action under conditions of combat.

"The duties of people assigned to maintenance and administrative positions (often) make it impractical for them to participate regularly or at all in the unit's formal physical training program."

To cope with this problem, the Ranger Department of the Infantry School has prepared a voluntary physical training program with the fact that "time is precious" firmly in mind.

This new program is tailored to groups of platoon size or smaller and has proved to be extremely effective even on an individual basis.

The program is built around short (15 minutes or less) packets of exercises designed for execution in or adjacent to the individual's work area. Some of the exercises are merely revisions of current conditioning activities while others are completely new to the service. A few require simple, basic equipment; others require none.

It is Gen. Heintges' opinion that administrative, maintenance and other support personnel who lack the time and space for more complete physical training sessions could achieve the same high degree of physical readiness for the Army as a whole.

Not only should good health and physical excellence be achieved with a minimum of work loss, but the individuals participating should find the 15-minute periods of physical activity a welcome break in working routine. (ANF)

Dentistry In Russia

Editor's Note: Lt. Col. Nathan Grace will begin appearing regularly in the Bayonet and his subject will be dentistry. Be sure to follow his tips on dental care, background on the dental profession and his descriptions of common dental problems and their cures.

A comparison of the status of dentistry in Russia and the USA reveals a number of interesting differences.

In terms of distribution, there is one dentist per 4,000 persons in the USSR whereas we enjoy a ratio of one per 2,000 persons. Approximately 75 per cent of Russia's dentists are women who have completed a three year course of instruction beyond the high school level. This compares with an average of seven years of higher education for the American counterpart.

The Russian women perform most of the routine dental procedures. The remainder are accomplished by a "Specialist" group who average five or more years of professional training.

Russian children are required to visit a dentist at least twice every year. Adults, however, have no such compulsory program. Part of the antagonism to dentistry has been attributed to the reluctance of the average Russian dentist to employ anesthesia for filling of teeth and the common practice of placing stainless steel crowns on front teeth.

DENTAL IMPRESSIONS

NATHAN GRACE — PREVENTIVE DENTISTRY OFFICER

A visiting American dentist noted that Russian dental officers and clinics were clean, friendly and efficient although their professional standards were considerably lower than ours, their basic equipment barely adequate and the entire profession plagued with a scarcity of relatively common supplies.

Fort Benning Army Wives Keep Active

BY IDA C. EVANS
From the Army Times

To many wives living in the vicinity of Fort Benning, the early morning newscasts tell a sometimes frightening story of a day their husbands have experienced in a faraway trouble spot.

"We daily put fear and anxiety aside and fill each hour to the brim," said Mrs. Vern L. Joseph of Fon du Lack, Wisc. She is the wife of Col. Joseph, who is scheduled to return from Korea soon.

She and the couple's daughters, Mary Beth, 18, and Peggy Lee, 14, not to mention the family miniature French poodle, Garcon, maintain a glowing hearthfire while the colonel is away.

His hat rests on a table just inside the front door where he always places it when he returns from the post. His picture as a young lieutenant hangs on the wall. A more recent life-sized photograph vies for space on a table with the air-mail letters he writes.

Late last year, Mrs. Joseph found 12 women whose husbands were on assignments in such places as Viet Nam and Korea. They no longer belonged to any officers' wives' group on the post.

Monthly Coffees

Feeling that they needed each other's companionship and that they had problems they could share, Mrs. Joseph organized monthly coffees in various homes. The group, known as the Geographical Wives' Club, now numbers 70. The activity helps the wives present a solid front to the world, Mrs. Joseph explained.

"No one of us is alone. We get together and talk about the things that are uppermost in our minds.

"In a group like ours, we need to talk. No one nervously changes the subject to something more pleasant. We learn to think in terms of 'our' problems rather than 'my' problems.

"That is the only way to wait out a so-called hardship tour in a manner worthy of the military man whose life you have chosen to share."

At Home

At home, Mrs. Joseph enjoys sewing and doing needlepoint. Mary Beth, who is entering the University of Missouri, is a volunteer at Martin Army Hospital. Peggy Lee, a ninth grader, devotes many hours at the hospital as a Red Cross aide.

Mrs. Roy Whitaker of Japan, whose husband, Sgt. Whitaker, is in Korea finds that a full-time job in addition to taking care of two children, fills every day.

A skilled tailor, she makes alterations on custom-made uniforms at the Fort Benning post tailor shop. The Whitaker children are a daughter, Mary Jean, 9, and a son, Elroy, 4.

Far from home herself, English - born Mrs. Henry Rosiak, wife of MSgt. Rosiak, who recently left Fort Benning for Korea, plans to work as an American Red Cross volunteer at Martin Army Hospital.

She met her husband while doing Red Cross work in England during World War II.

Mrs. Rosiak is an associate member of the Non-Commissioned Officers Wives' Club at Fort Benning, is corresponding secretary of the Benning Women's Club in Columbus, and a member of the Ceramics Club.

Ceramic Hobby

Her hobby is making ceramics that will be appropriate as gifts. She says she has 15 full boxes in storage. One plaque she cherishes is a Bo Peep one she made for a little girl who since has died.

Another busy family is that of Maj. Robert B. Gingrich of Middletown, Pa. With her husband in Korea, Mrs. Gingrich and Susan, 17, and Robbe, 15, have kept themselves immersed in school activities the Fort Benning Little Theater, music and handicrafts.

Mrs. Gingrich takes pride in knitting argyle socks from patterns designed by her husband. He draws the design on graph paper, determines stitches, and writes out explicit knitting instructions.

Susan is a junior and Robbe is a freshman at Baker High School. In addition to performing with the Little Theater, both girls find politics exciting, particularly the campaigns involving their older brother, Newton Gingrich, who is in politics in Atlanta, Ga.

SHOE SIZE

The big offensive end of the Buffalo Bills, Ernie Warlick, was asked what size shoe he wears.

Ernie thought for a moment and replied: "I really wear a 12 but a 13 feels so good that I usually ask for a 14."

OWC Sponsors Pre-Kindergarten For Three and Four Year Olds

By Ida C. Evans

For 174 three and four year old youngsters at Fort Benning, the first step up the ladder of formal education is a pleasant one at the Officers' Wives' Club Prekindergarten in Bldg. 322.

Mrs. G. L. Brickhouse, principal, and Mrs. W. C. Brooks, assistant principal, operate the school with a staff of nine teachers.

The prekindergarten building is not only attractively decorated to appeal to the child but it has been equipped with safety devices to insure the security of the most adventurous young pupil.

Located on Baltzell Ave., adjacent to Bldg. 396, Martin Army Hospital Annex, the kindergarten is approached through a one way drive.

Protects Children

Small pupils arrive at the school by car pools and are unloaded at a fenced entrance. Met at the gate, they are escorted to their classes along porticos that are also fenced in for the protection of the children.

A well equipped playground has been provided with access only to the school building to prevent children from stepping onto the driveway.

School is in session from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday for a nine month term.

Every month throughout the school year, the prekindergarten program centers about a selected theme. September activities highlight school days and nursery rhymes. In October, the theme will be Halloween. Themes coinciding with seasonal points of emphasis key the instruction to the child's interests.

Improve Coordination

The three and four year old children improve their coordination through such activities as making things of construction paper. They cut, paste and color while learning to carry out simple instructions.

At this stage, the children also learn "one of life's most necessary lessons, how to get along with others," school officials said.

In addition to the regular "classroom" teachers, there is a music teacher, Mrs. Leslie Arneson, who spends two days a week at the school.

Mrs. Clifford McKibben, a registered nurse, visits the school three days a week, from 9 to 9:30 a.m. If a child has been absent because of a contagious illness, he must be examined by the nurse before he can return to classes.

Children of all active and retired military personnel may attend prekindergarten. They must be three years old before Jan. 2, 1966 to enter.

On the post residence is not a requirement for entering the prekindergarten. Car pools both on and off post provide transportation.

For further information call Mrs. Brickhouse at 545-7777 or Mrs. G. L. Olney, prekindergarten chairman for the Officers' Wives' Club, at 545-3728.

OWC Puts Final Touch On Its Season Program

Mrs. Maurice Kendall, president of the Officers Wives' Club of Fort Benning, recently met with Club officers and committee chairmen at an executive board session to complete planning for the Club's coming season.

The Club announced the formation of a senior citizens group this year. The activity is open to all mothers of officers or officer's wives who reside in the Fort Benning-Columbus area.

The OWC membership tea will be held on October 6, Club spokesmen said. Reservations are not necessary.

The tea will feature a fiesta theme to harmonize with the Spanish decor of the Officers Club. The color scheme will include varying intensities and hues of orange, red, yellow, pink and black. The Club decoration committee has molded pieces of found fabric into modern-day tapestries.

The Club also announced this year's committee chairmen. Cilla Black Sang With the 'Beatles'

BY MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Two years ago, when Cilla Black returned from holiday to her typewriter at a cable manufacturing company in Liverpool, England, she said to her boss, "I'd like to hand in two week's notice. I'm going to be a star."

He laughed and wished well the likeable redhead with the disarmingly natural manner who candidly says to herself, "I don't put on any airs and graces."

During her holiday, Cilla had made her first recording of a Beatle - written song, "Love of the Loved."

"I thought it did marvelous," she says. "It got to 25 in the charts, then completely dropped out never to be seen again the following week. But it was very good for a girl singer. Girl singers weren't getting a lookin at all, then."

Dancing Music

Cilla had known the Beatles since she was 16 and started going to small clubs in Liverpool where various rock 'n' roll groups provided music for teen-age dancing.

"One night a few of my friends said, 'Let Cilla sing with you.' I was very embarrassed. I remember Paul saying 'Do you want to sing'' and I sang 'Summertime' from 'Porgy and Bess' with them. After that we became friends and if they played other dates and I was there, they'd ask me to sing a song and I would — not for payment. It was a novelty to have a girl sing with them.

"It's very frightening when I think back. I wouldn't dream of getting up with anybody and not knowing the key even. This is the sort of thing you only see in movies. And I did this with all the Liverpool groups at one time. I think it was because of all the kids egging me on."

Beatles Brag

Cilla says, "Later the Beatles were bragging they had a manager and everybody was laughing at them because who ever heard of a group with a manager. One day they introduced me to Brian (Epstein) and later he took them up on what they said about me."

Cilla said her father turned thumbs down on all other would - be managers. "He would say, 'No, this one is a rogue,' or 'I don't trust these Londoners.' But everybody knows Brian Epstein; he's a Liverpudlian. My parents said yes to him."

(Cilla says a person from Liverpool is properly called either a Liverpudlian or a Merseysider. Liverpool is a shipping center beside the Mersey River.)

After "Love of the Loved," Cilla recorded "Anyone Who Had a Heart," which went to No. 1 on the British charts. She made a month - long tour, a nine-minute spot on the Beatles' Christmas show and TV appearances. "The Liverpool accent was very big in London," she says, "so I was on panels, just talking. It got a little boring for me. I wanted to sing."

Seven Songs

She did seven songs in a variety show booked into the London Palladium, twice a day and three on Saturday with Sundays off. Epstein expected the show to last four weeks and it ran eight months.

"You're My Love," has been Cilla's biggest record in the U. S. It also went to No. 1 in England. "Is It Love?" on Capitol is her only album released in this country.

Cilla, now 22, is looked to as a style setter in England. She once wrote a fashion page for a music newspaper, "Mersey Beat." Because she was known simply as "Swinging' Cilla" to Liverpool rock groups, the paper guessed (wrong) at her last name in setting her byline and wrote it Cilla Black instead of Cilla White. She kept the new name.

Simple Dresses

For performing, Cilla wears simple French dresses, sleeveless, fitted, with skirts gently flared. "I buy off the peg," she says. "It's an embarrassing subject but I guess girls do copy the way I dress. It might come from the fact I come from an ordinary home and maybe my ordinary ways of dressing has stayed with me in a chic way. Most of the things I buy, you can buy in any store anywhere."

Cilla recently appeared at New York's Persian Room. She also taped the song which made the biggest hit there, an untempo arrangement of "September in the Rain," and "Goin' Out of My Head" for the Sept. 12 Ed Sullivan Show.

During the trip, she decided there is a definite difference between British and American tastes. "In England, they like big ballads. Here they like them danceable — solid rock. When I go home, I'll record one for Britain and another one for over here.

"I like danceable songs anyway. It'll be a pleasant sort of go-berserk change."

HOME INSTINCT

Box turtles have a strong homing instinct, the National Geographic Society says. They promptly crawl back to their home territory from spots as far as three-quarters of a mile away.

'Cav' Troopers Settle into Viet Nam

The First Photos From Viet Nam

canvas and since then they've spent almost every day cultivating the crop.

First project for the advance party was to chop away trees and bushes on a 4,000-by-3,000-plot for the division's helipad.

After deciding that bulldozers would turn the site into a mud pit, assistant division commander Brig. Gen. John M. Wright led a "maximum effort" force in clearing the jungle by hand. In five days they cleared 50 per cent of the area; and while some 600 native workers finished "Operation Golf Course," the soldiers turned to improving individual unit area.

Hardships Unknown

Hardships that the bulk of the division may have encountered in their voyage across the seas are unknown to the advance party which flew to Viet Nam in three days. But the early arrivals landed as pioneers on a foreign soil with the assignment of insuring that problems they faced would not confront the others.

The troops arriving this week have been going directly from their ships to the highlands and thereby missing the advance party's experience of a few days in the staging area near Nha Trang — a sea of sand, tents packed on tents, biting briars and 120 degree afternoons.

In the mountains the troops found mess halls serving fresh cooked meals, barber shops, laundry service, regular mail delivery, piles of cool soft drinks and a stock of PX supplies — all things the advance party lived without for several days.

PAUSE THAT REFRESHES . . . PFC Charles Bowe, an automatic rifleman of Company C, 1st Battalion, 5th Cavalry from Pittsburgh, Pa., pauses in his perimeter foxhole for the best bath available to 1st Cavalry Division soldiers during their first days in Viet Nam. PFC Bowe and his partner, PFC Raymond J. Smith Jr., a grenadier from Anaheim, Calif., were part of the unit assigned to guard the "advance party."

A LETTER HOME . . . Lt. Wayne Davis of Wakefield, Mass., executive officer of Company C, 1st Battalion, 12th Cavalry, huddles in his pup tent after a day of work in clearing the Vietnamese jungle to write a letter home to his wife Linda.

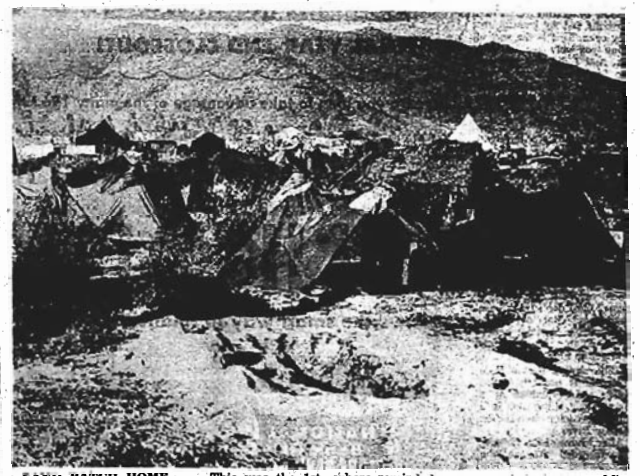
LOCAL LABOR . . . Natives of Nha Trang help build the bamboo and two-by-four showers that 1st Cavalry Division troops will use. Some 600 Vietnamese are employed in the development of the campsite in the central highlands.



SAND PATCH HOME . . . This was the 1st Cavalry Division's first campsite in Viet Nam. The mountains in the background reminded veterans of Korea. The sand that was everywhere reminded everyone of the Sahara. After less than a week in the sand patch near Nha Trang, the troops moved to a permanent campsite in the central highlands.

Gen Taylor to Speak At AUSA Gathering

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Soldier-statesman Maxwell D. Taylor will address the 11th annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army in Washington next month, the AUSA has announced.

Recently named a special consultant to President Johnson, General Taylor was the U. S. Ambassador to the Republic of Viet Nam until last month and earlier was the Army Chief of Staff and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He will speak at the annual George Catlett Marshall Memorial Dinner on Wednesday, October 27th, at Washington's Sheraton Park Hotel. Association officials report that more than 2,000 AUSA members and their guests will be in attendance.

Other special guests at the three-day AUSA Convention which runs October 25, 26, and 27 will be the Hon. Stanley R. Resor, Secretary of the Army, and Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Army Chief of Staff.

In addition to scheduled presentations on military affairs, the meeting will feature more than 70,000 square feet of industry and military equipment displays.

PUNTING OUTFIELDER

Army Nurse Who Refused to Quit Viet Post Receives Bronze Star at Ceremonies Here

An Army nurse who stayed on in Viet Nam even after her tour of duty was completed received a Bronze Star Medal at Fort Benning last week.

First Lt. Catherine Jean Schilling, credited with exemplifying the "true spirit of nursing for a new generation of Army nurses," was ready to leave for the United States when the attack on Camp Holloway at Pleiku and the subsequent bombing of the Qui Nhon barracks occurred.

A letter read at the award ceremony from the chief of the Army Nurse Corps, Col. Mildred I. Clark, said, "With service to others utmost in your thoughts, and without regard for yourself, you worked long hours caring for the sick and injured and refused to leave your post, even though you had completed your normal tour of duty in Viet Nam."

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commander, presented the medal.

The emergency came at 3 a.m. "There was no time to think about the fact that my tour of duty was over or that I had a plane to catch," the nurse said.

The wounded were coming into the Eighth Field Hospital at Pleiku as fast as planes could shuttle back and forth on the two-hour flight from Camp Holloway. Not only did all Eighth Field nurses return to duty, but other nurses from town came in, the lieutenant said.

"Some were members of the U.S. Overseas Mission, civilians or Red Cross volunteers. People even volunteered to act as runners," she added.

"With the Pleiku attack," she continued, "the casualties came in a rush of feverish activity, but two days later with the bombing of the barracks, they came in slowly as they were dug up from the ruins. We knew when one was coming for we kept up with the rescue efforts by radio."

"A few days later, when Gen. Westmoreland visited the hospital, awarding Purple Hearts, a Puerto Rican soldier asked me if I thought he might become a citizen of the United States. He was so proud of the Purple Heart and now he wanted to really belong to the nation he was serving," the nurse recalled.

"They were all so brave and so loyal. In fact," she said, "the bravery of the man whose leg had to be amputated before he could be freed from the wreckage of the barracks was tremendous."

Long overdue at Martin Army Hospital, Schilling returned to the United States and her new assignment in April.

Born in Lockport, N. Y., Lt. Schilling is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Schilling who now live in Barker.

Graduated from Central High School in Barker in 1959, she entered Millard Fillmore School of Nursing in Buffalo, N.Y.

"There was no decision to make," she said, "for I always knew I was going to be a nurse."

Studying under the Army Student Nurse Program, Lt. Schilling was graduated in 1962. After passing state board examinations, a basic orientation course at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and a year of general nursing, she went to Viet Nam in February 1964.

Life was normal there most of that 12-month tour of duty. "At that time there were few injuries from hostile action," she said. "It was pleasant and the nurses had time to sun and swim on the beach."

Then came the action for which she was awarded the Bronze Star. In the words of Col. Clark, "Lt. Schilling's noteworthy accomplishments have focused upon the meaning of nursing and our professional mission in the Army Nurse Corps, highlighting military nursing history."

Soldiers' Separate Rations May Increase, Says Article

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON—A decision is coming soon which could increase the commuted ration rates paid to 600,000 enlisted men, correcting a long-standing inequity which has denied them their full subsistence pay.

More than 200,000 Army enlisted men would be affected by the change.

Until now Defense has depended upon a technicality to save about $25 million a year at a cost to men on cummuted rations of at least eight cents a day.

Congress, at press time, was about to remove that tenchnicality and it will be up to the Defense Secretary to right the wrong. It's a complicated matter, but here is an outline of the situation:

Executive Order

Since 1954, by law and by executive order, the services are supposed to give each man eating in the mess hall about eight ounces of milk a day. This is called the standard ration.

Of course, the services pour out several times that to each man who wants it. To make up the difference between the standard ration and the need, the services buy milk from local dairies. They have been reimbursed for the amount they spend by the Agriculture Department. The Agriculture Department paid the money through its Commodity Credit Corporation.

The amount of the commuted ration, now $1.05 daily stateside, is based on the amount of money the Defense Department spends each day for the food it serves each person in the mess hall. But the government has been spending a good bit more than $1.05.

Money Paid

The Defense Department has insisted that since the money for the extra milk was paid by the Agriculture Department, it is not a part of the ration, and therefore the 600,000 enlisted men who draw commuted rations are not entitled to the money equal to the real cost of the ration.

Now, in the new Defense appropriations bill, the cost of the milk has been removed from the Agriculture Department and put directly into the Defense budget. Observers say since it is a Defense cost it "is difficult to see how Defense could decide other than to include cost of the milk when setting the new commuted ration."

Pentagon Decision

If the Pentagon decides for the enlisted men, it will mean about eight to ten cents a day for each man on commuted rations. This is not a lot of money, but it would end a lot of bitterness enlisted men have felt over the old procedures.

The matter should be decided within coming weeks as the Pentagon begins its new budget review cycle. The new rates will become effective January.

Officials predict Defense will try to have the item put back in the Agriculture Department budget next year.

Peruvian War College To Visit Fort Benning

The director of the Peruvian War College, Maj. Gen. Carlos Giral Morzan, will arrive at Fort Benning next Wednesday, Sept. 22.

Gen. Giral will be accompanied by Brig. Gen. Ricardo Vasi Verme, sub-director of the War College and 26 other members of the staff, faculty and students of the school.

The group will see Infantry training methods and weapons employment.

Commander for the welcoming ceremony at 4:15 p.m. Wednesday at York Field will be Col. Earl F. Holton.

Participating units will include an honor guard of troops from Company C, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade. The 13-gun salute will be fired by Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery.

The Allied group will be briefed on the organization mission of The Infantry School; visit classroom and field exercises and the Airborne and Ranger Departments; see post training facilities; and visit the Third U. S. Army training aids center.

An official reception is planned for Wednesday evening and a luncheon for Thursday at the Main Officers' Open Mess.

The visitors will depart Saturday Sept. 25 from Lawson Army Airfield for Miami, Fla., enroute to Peru. The group has been touring U. S. military installations since Sept. 10.

Post Visited By WAC School Commandant

Lt. Col. Elizabeth P. Hoisington, commandant of the Women's Army Corps (WAC) School, Fort McClellan, Ala., visited Fort Benning last week.

She was accompanied by Lt. Col. Marie L. Kehrer, assistant commandant.

After a visit with Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, The Infantry School's assistant commandant, the visitors were briefed on the structure and management of School training facilities.

Following the briefings they toured the new Infantry School, Bldg. 4, where they saw the recently completed closed circuit television system used for instruction.

The guests also visited the Fort Benning WAC Company, toured the officer candidate area, and observed a Tactics Department problem.

Maj. Happersett Gets Bronze Star

A Bronze Star Medal with a "V" device for valor has been awarded to Maj. Newlin R. Happersett of the Infantry School's Ranger Department.

Maj. Happersett distinguished himself by heroic action against a Viet Cong force June 25, 1964.

When the unit he was advising came under heavy attack, the major personally led the first assault under a rain of fire from enemy mortars and automatic weapons. He rallied his unit to break through the enemy lines and at one phase of the attack, he used a grenade launcher against an automatic weapons position killing eight Viet Cong, the citation accompanying the medal stated.

Maj. Happersett was presented the Bronze Star by Lt. Col. George Tassey, commander of the Ranger Camp at Dahlonega, Ga. Maj. Happersett is camp executive officer.

Navy Shortens Recruit Training By Two Weeks

Washington (AFPS)—Navy recruit training at San Diego, Calif., and Great Lakes, Ill., has been cut from nine to seven weeks.

The shorter cycle results from adding more hours to weekly training schedules, an official said.

Communism: Part VI

The Party Becomes the Only One Legally Permitted Inside Russia

The Communist party (the official title adopted by the Bolsheviks in 1918) now became the only legally permitted party in Russia and it served as the main instrument for fastening a totalitarian dictatorship on the Russian people. Party units were established in every city, town, village and hamlet. All were under the centralized control of Communist party headquarters in Moscow, the new capital.

Lenin, as head of the party and government, became the dictator of Russia. He established an elaborate network of secret police, whose job was to supplement the propaganda activities of the party and maintain the authority of the government through a system of terror and physical violence. Lenin also kept intact the strength of the Red Army as a final means of preserving communism at home and, later, of spreading it abroad.

In economic matters, Lenin, a practical-minded man, realized that Marxist economic theories could not save Russia from approaching economic collapse. The output of Russia's farms and factories declined steadily.

In 1921, Lenin introduced his "New Economic Policy."

Limited free enterprise among small businesses was permitted and peasants were allowed to sell much of their produce in the open market. Goods began to appear in stores and food became more plentiful. What Lenin called the "New Economic Policy" was actually the old economic policy of individual effort and free enterprise; it saved Russia in a period of near-collapse.

When Lenin died in 1924, the Russian people had nothing to say about who was to succeed him. Within the Communist ruling group there were two main contenders, Leon Trotsky and Joseph Stalin. Trotsky, who had been head of the Red Army during the civil war of 1917-1921, seemed to be the logical successor. He had been a close friend of Lenin and was personally very popular among Communists as a speaker and writer.

Stalin Won

Yet in the end Stalin won, for as secretary of the Communist party, he had managed to fill key party positions with men on whose loyalty he could count. Thus at the time of Lenin's death, Stalin had effective control of the party machinery, an asset that proved more decisive in the contest for power than Trotsky's popularity among rank and-file Communists.

Within a few years after Lenin's death, Trotsky was expelled from the party and exiled to Siberia. Later he was driven out of Russia, and after wandering throughout Europe — from Norway to Turkey — he finally settled in Mexico. There he was assasinated in 1940 by a Communist agent — allegedly on Stalin's orders.

Stalin was not a thinker but a practical and ruthless administrator. Even the reign of Tsar Ivan the Terrible (1530-1584) pales before the harshness and cruelty of Stalin's regime. In 1929, Stalin decided that the time had come to abandon Lenin's New Economic Policy and to put economic communism into practice.

Abandon Farms

Peasants were forced to abandon their privately owned farms and join collective farms. In protest, they slaughtered millions of cattle and Russia passed through conditions of near-starvation in the years 1931-1933. Their defiance was ruthlessly crushed. Millions of peasants perished in the process but Stalin had his way.

Also in 1929, Stalin embarked upon the first of his "Five Year Plans," designed to build up industry in the Soviet Union. For years, the people had to tighten their belts and live on low subsistence rations. Those who protested Stalin's harsh measures (and many who did not, but were unlucky) were sent off to slave-labor camps, providing the Communist rulers with cheap labor.

During Stalin's rule, Russia made enormous industrial progress but the cost in human suffering was greater than that of any other country in history undergoing industrialization. Conservative estimates place the number of slave laborers under Stalin at ten to fifteen million; some estimates range to twenty million.

In addition to slave labor, "purges" were widely used by Stalin as a means of enforcing his policies and maintaining his personal despotism. In the great purge of 1934 to 1938, the number of victims ran into the millions. The exact number will probably never be known but the most reliable estimates range from seven to fourteen million persons who were arrested and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment or forced labor.

Many of the victims who were executed—with or without trial — were Communist party members. Practically the entire group of "Old Bolsheviks," who had been Lenin's closest friends and associates, were liquidated.

The character of these purges is best described by an intimate associate of Stalin at that time, Nikita Khrushchev.

Many of the purge vicitims were executed on the basis of "voluntary" confessions of guilt. In a speech Khrushchev asked, "And how is it possible that a person confesses to crimes which he has not commited? Only in one way—because of application of physical methods of pressuring him, tortures, bringing him to a state of unconsciousness, deprivation of his judgment, taking away of his human dignity. In this manner were 'confessions' acquired."

New Regulations On Sea Safety Now Effective

NEW YORK, N. Y. (AFPS) — The new "International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea" became effective Sept. 1, 1965.

These revised rules were drawn up at the Fourth International Conference for Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS) in London, England in 1960. They must be followed by all public and private vessels of the United States including motorboats while navigating on the high seas.

Most drastic changes in the rules were made in respect to vessels engaged in fishing. Another significant change made concerns the conduct of vessels in restricted visibility. Other changes concern towboats and vessels being towed and pleasure boats operating on the high seas.

Free copies of regulations are available from local U.S. Coast Guard Marine Inspection Offices.

Benning Scouts Call for More Volunteer Help

The Fort Benning District of the Boy Scouts of America has issued a call for more adult unit leaders and neighborhood commissioners.

Because of recent personnel movements on the post, new scouting leaders are badly needed at present according to Boy Scout officials. Only prerequisites are an interest in the program and some scouting knowledge.

Interested personnel should call the Fort Benning scouting coordinator at 545-2416.

UNENDING QUEST . . . The XM-656 goes through a water obstacle at the Army's Tropic Test Center, Fort Clayton, Canal Zone. A prototype expected to replace some of the standard five-ton cargo trucks, the vehicle features an eight-wheel drive, power steering and power brakes, six-speed transmission and a built-in swimming capability. Weighing 15,600 pounds, the XM-656 is 4,000 pounds lighter than the standard M-54 which it may replace. The new version of the Army's workhorse, designed and built by Ford Motor Co., is air transportable. ANF Photo.

Army Places Contract For Trucks

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — The U.S. Army has awarded a $3,418,440 contract to the Ford Motor Company for advanced production engineering work on the XM 656, a new 8x8 cargo truck.

The new truck is intended to replace present Army five-ton and general purpose 2½-ton trucks. It will be used primarily to haul troops and cargo and to tow the 155mm howitzer. With special bodies it will also serve as a tank truck, dump truck or wrecker. It offers increased range and is amphibious and air droppable.

The XM 656 is equipped with automatic transmission, power steering and breaking, and weighs about 4,000 pounds less than the present five-ton truck. Its 210 horsepower engine burns diesel fuel, gasoline and other fuels interchangeably without adjustments to the engine.

Airmobile Soldiers May Get Flight Status Money

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's Military Pay and Allowance Committee is being asked to approve flight status for any member of an airmobile unit who must habitually travel aboard helicopters and planes as part of his job.

Army Times learned that the recommendation was sent to the committee late last month. No decision had been reached on the recommendation, although it was indicated that the Navy and the Air Force are not opposing the Army request.

Putting non-rated (that is men who do not qualify for parachute or direct aviation crew pay) soldiers on flight status presumably would qualify them for special hazard pay.

Flying Pay

Flying pay non-crew member rates are $110 a month for officers and $55 a month for enlisted men.

If the committee approves the Army recommendation, regulations will be reviewed to provide for special pay for airmobile soldiers, Army Times was told.

Legislation apparently is not needed to allow the Army to make the special payments for non-crew member flight duties.

Officials at Fort Benning began the drive for airmobile pay more than two years ago, but up until now have met with little success in their campaign.

Division officials here some weeks ago said that they had tried to ease the situation by asking for more jump spaces in the airmobile unit.

Army action seems prompted by the commitment of the new airmobile division — the 1st Air Cav. — to combat in Viet Nam.

While the bulk of the unit remains in transit to Viet Nam (as this was written), the division has already suffered at least one combat death.

Immediate Impact

While the immediate impact of special flight pay is to non-rated soldiers in the 1st Air Cav., approval of such a recommendation has much more significance for the future.

The Army must report soon on the mix of airborne and airmobile units it wants in its force structure and it appears that the Army will add at least one more airmobile unit.

One stumbling block in the Pentagon consideration of the airmobile pay request has been that existing regulations did not foresee the creation of airmobile units.

However, if the Pentagon's pay and allowances committee approves the Army request, the regulations can be rewritten easily.

While the special flight pay recommendation may be the most prominent change in flying pay rules, the entire aerial flight pay situation is under review.

Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel spokesmen said in July that "Department of the Army is currently reviewing the entire spectrum of incentive pay as related to its aviation activities.

Changes Caused

"This is caused by changes in both operational and organizational concepts."

In addition, the Air Force has been trying to obtain approval for waiver of the four hours a month requirement for flying pay. Apparently all but officially approved, the proposal is now being rewritten.

Several years ago an Army study group recommended that flight pay rules be overhauled by the services before the Defense Department got into the act.

"Particular attention should be devoted to the need for compensation of non-rated personnel habitually engaged in airmobile operations in proportion to that for rated personnel engaged in the same operations," the board urged in a now unclassified report.

'Iceman Cometh' To Amazement Of Montagnards

TAN SON NHUT AIRFIELD, RVN (AFPS) — An air drop of cold drinks to a Special Forces detachment in the isolated hill village of Dz Kak Sut turned into a moment of wonder and discovery for Montagnard tribesmen. The discovery was ice.

When a crew from the 310th Air Commando Squadron here learned that the Special Forces detachment at Dz Kak Sut had been without cold drinks for five months, they decided to do something about it. Five cases of cold drinks, thoughtfully packed in 240 pounds of ice, were air dropped to the detachment.

None of the primitive Montagnards had ever seen ice.

It was reported that the local chief stared in silent amazement as a small piece of the ice melted in his hands. He looked at it, sniffed at it and finally tasted it, before beaming his approval.

Stone Tombs Dotting Okinawa Threatened by Widening Cities

NAHA, Okinawa — As Okinawa's cities push outward and land values soar, the traditional cement and stone tombs that dot the island's fields and hillsides are becoming an increasing impediment to expansion.

The tombs of Okinawa are a familiar sight to the soldier who has been stationed there. One soldier said they were commonplace. "You find them all over," he said.

Thousands are being demolished as families transfer the bones and spiritual resting places of their ancestors to quieter — and less valuable — surroundings.

The unusual "house style" and "turtleback" tombs of Okinawan upper - class families, believed to derive from South Chinese Taoist influences, have reflected for several centuries the strong influence of ancestor-worship.

Focal Point

The tomb served as a focal point for family life and members often gathered at appropriate times for picnics or feasts in the presence of the spirits of ancestors. Tomb architecture has been described as one of the foremost expressions of Okinawan art.

There are said to be more than 30,000 of the turtleback tombs which have a domed construction and heavy walls forming a forecourt. Many Okinawans believe that the shape symbolizes a woman in childbirth and link the design to the primitive religious concept of "returning to the source," or the womb.

Turtle Symbol

Another theory is that the dome, usually built into a hillside, is patterned on a turtle's shell because that animal is a symbol of long life. Dr. Samuel Mukaida, head of the Cultural Affairs Division of the United States Civil Administration for the Ryukyu Islands, doubts both theories. He expresses the view that the design evolved fortuitously among a primitive and isolated people.

Many tombs were shattered in the fierce World War II battle of Okinawa in which about 100,000 Okinawans were killed. Many have been left crumbling and untended in subsequent years as families moved away or lost continuity with the past. The tombs, used as bomb shelters, saved many a life during the battle.

In the capital city of Naha and its widening suburbs, there are about 6,000 tombs that must be removed or relocated under the city plan put into effect this year.

The National Cemetery, established on a hill west of Naha in 1949, has room for about 2,000 additional tombs of the uniform, compact design now becoming popular. Officials are trying to obtain an additional 50 acres of land from neighboring communities.

Army Fires Anti-Tank Missile; Scores Hits Over a Mile Away

The Army has successfully fired a prototype of its new Supersonic Anti-Tank Missile, the TOW. Center hits were scored on tank - size targets more than a mile away, according to Army spokesmen.

The missile is being developed for use against such hard point targets as tanks and gun emplacements. TOW gets its name from the description "Tube - launched, Optically - Tracked, Wire guided." It is the first supersonic missile guided in flight by means of a two-wire link between the launcher and the missile, they said.

A major improvement of this weapon over present anti - tank missiles is the simplified and highly accurate aiming device. To fire at a stationary object or a moving target, the gunner simply aligns the crosshairs of his telescopic sight on the target and then launches the missile which automatically flies along his line of sight.

With the TOW, the gunner does not have to estimate range to the target, speed of the target or angle between the course of the target and his weapon.

All he needs to do is keep the cross hairs of his sight on the target while tracking it. Signals, transmitted through the two-wire link automatically correct the missile's course.

TOW can be carried by troops and fired from a simple light - weight launcher mounted on a tripod. It can also be mounted on a variety of ground vehicles including the armored personnel carrier.

The firings were conducted by the Army Missile Command at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. Data obtained from the firings will be used to refine the final design of the missile system.

Hughes Aircraft Company, Culver City, Calif., is prime contractor for TOW. Warhead development is under the Army Munitions Command, Picatinny Arsenal, New Jersey.

Army Nurse Bound for Viet Nam; Will Join Husband With Cavalry

A petite Army nurse at Fort Benning packed her size three uniforms and custom-made, size three combat boots to go to Viet-Nam.

Second Lt. Peggy Wells Enders is following her husband, 2nd Lt. Ronald H. Enders, who is en route to Viet Nam with the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

"I had no idea of going to Viet Nam," the nurse said. "About two days before Ronald was due to leave, my orders came. The biggest problem seemed to be suitable clothing for a combat zone. They just don't make fatigues and combat boots in my size."

When someone suggested that it would be easier to get her orders changed than to find combat boots in her size, she said, "If you can't locate boots for me, I'll go to the children's department of a shoe store and buy loafers—I'm going to follow my husband to Viet Nam."

She got the combat boots, made to order, in time to leave for Viet Nam.

Soldier's Escape Earns Presidential Message

Master Sergeant Issac Camacho, Fort Bliss, Texas, has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action and the Bronze Star Medal for outstanding meritorious service with the U. S. Army in the Republic of Viet Nam.

The sergeant, who recently returned from Viet Nam after escaping from Viet Cong captivity, received an on the spot promotion to master sergeant in the office of Maj. Gen. George T. Powers III at Fort Bliss on Sept. 3.

MSgt. Camacho received his decorations and a special message from the President of the United States in a parade and ceremony in his honor.

The message from President Johnson read: "Your service to your country in Viet Nam typifies the finest in the youth of our great nation. Your valiant efforts during a time of crisis deserve the highest praise. A grateful nation recognizes your deeds by awarding you a Silver Star for valor and a Bronze Star for meritorious service. Sincere thanks from the country you serve so gallantly."

At the time of his capture, MSgt. Camacho was a member of the 5th Special Forces Group (Airborne) and was on his second tour of duty in Viet Nam.

While stationed at Hiep Hoa Base Camp, 40 kilometers north of Saigon, the camp was overrun by 300 to 500 Viet Cong. Camacho was captured when he no longer had the means to resist.

The citation accompanying the Silver Star reads in part: "Sergeant Camacho . . . having successfully maneuvered through a hail of bullets and mortar fragments, calmly manned the mortar and began to concentrate his fire on the Viet Cong who were attempting to break the wall of the compound. Disregarding his own personal safety and realizing that he was the only man not pinned down by the Viet Cong, Sergeant Camacho continued to fire on the charging Communists."

CLOTHING ISSUES

Until planned changes in AR 700-8400-1 go into effect in October, the Army has issued a list of initial clothing allowances for individual enlisted personnel being assigned to Viet Nam. Olive green towels and underclothes are required for the first time in recent years. While the Defense Supply Agency stocks up for the OG issues, the Department of the Army has advised commanders concerned to dye available supplies of underclothes and towels. Other changes found in the list substitute the new tropical combat boot and fatigues for the standard items.

Hometown Honors VC Escapee

EL PASO, Tex. (AFPS) — A special forces soldier who recently escaped from the Viet Cong after 20 months of captivity received a hero's welcome in his hometown here.

"Isaac Camacho Day" was proclaimed by the mayor of El Paso as part of the United Latin American Citizens two-day observance of the annual Fiesta of Flowers.

Master Sergeant Isaac Camacho, 28, USA, Special Forces, was captured by the Viet Cong when his camp was over run in 1963. He was then on his second tour of duty in the Republic of Viet Nam.

MSgt. Camacho was honored with a military parade and review at nearby Ft. Bliss where he received the Silver Star and Bronze Star Medals for valor and meritorious service in the RVN and was promoted to his present grade.

Upon return to El Paso, MSgt. Camacho asked for reassignment to the RVN, but has been ordered to report to the 10th Special Forces Group in Germany.

In Plaid Fatigue Pants

British Major Serves with 197th

By JOSEPH HUTTIE

The sight of Maj. David C. Ward striding by in his flashing plaid fatigue pants and sporty grey beret might tend to startle the average Fort Benning soldier, but not the members of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

During the past 18 months, Ward has borne the distinction of serving two armies simultaneously. For although he is a major in the British Army, since March of 1964, he has bypassed his normal duties to serve in a wide variety of positions with the 197th in conjunction with the U.S. and Britain's Officer Exchange Program.

Shifting his duties continually from one unit of the 197th to another, Ward has become a familiar and colorful sight to the men serving under him. His last position with the brigade was that of battalion executive officer with the 29th Infantry; however, he has served in other duty posts such as brigade adjutant and executive officer of the 58th Infantry.

Ward is now scheduled to leave the brigade for a new assignment at Fort Benning but the unit and job have not yet been revealed.

A resident of Edinburgh, Scotland, he served with The King's Own Scottish Borderers on the Yemen frontier before coming to the U. S. The story of his selection as an Exchange Officer is a relatively simple one according to Maj. Ward. "One day I got a signal from the War Office asking if I were interested in coming to the United States. I was due for reassignment anyway and jumped at the chance," he said.

The major's attitude concerning the United States would surprise even the most worldly of its residents. "We (British) think of the United States in much the same way we think of the next parish back home. However, this country is actually more foreign than I found either France or Germany," he adds.

Ward cites the language as one instance of the difference between the two nations. "It's all a case of communication. Here when someone says it's the best or better on television or in a store you just don't take their comment for granted as you do back home. I guess it's a case of different attitudes," he points out.

However, the major is first a soldier and secondly a world traveler and it is when speaking about soldiering and the two armies that he has come to know that he is at his best.

Differences

Although one might at first think of British and American forces as being much the same in structure and administration, he is quick to illustrate the differences.

"Back home my battalion is much like a family. The officers, NCOs and enlisted men live together in the same building. We encourage the homey touch and the men are free to decorate their rooms in any way they feel will make them more comfortable," the major says.

However, he adds that the situations within the two armies is different since Britain no longer drafts men into the military.

Maj. Ward also adds that because of the difference in size and wealth of the two forces, there is less waste in the British Army. "It's just that we are forced to get more bang for the buck than you are."

He says that training techniques are quite similar although British soldiers pull much fewer details since much of the tasks that require details here are done by civilian employees in Britain.

Organized Games

One of the training techniques employed by the British Army that might interest American soldiers is that of organized games played during duty hours as part of the PT program. Games such as rugby and soccer are viewed as important aspects of the physical training program. The major also points out that British soldiers have less "bull" (spit and polish) to worry about than their American counterpart.

However, actual PT as performed by the British soldier might make the American troop cringe just a little. Maj. Ward refers to British PT exercises as "Battlefield PT!"

The reason for this is that the men do their drills and exercises dressed in full field gear.

The primary difference the major has noticed between the people of Britain and Americans is the tolerance displayed by members of our society. "In Britain if we disagree with our government, we have it out with them. Here you are much more tolerant of other people's views," he adds.

Disturbing Idea

One of the ideas that Americans appear to have that is quite disturbing to Maj. Ward is their attitude toward things that are old. He says, "Here it seems that the philosophy is, if it is old, knock it down and put up something new. Americans visiting Britain often pose the question as to why we have all the old buildings we do."

Maj. Ward claims that his three children have become "completely Americanized" while his wife Mary is having a wonderful time during her stay. "She's a bit of an artist you know so we have gotten to know quite a few members of the local art group," he says.

Only Regret

Major Ward claims his only regret since coming to the United States has been his inability to travel more. "It's just too much of a chore to pack the three kids in the back seat and drive a thousand miles. However, my wife and I are planning to go to Washington D. C. at the end of the month".

The major sums up his feelings concerning his past 18 months here by saying that it has greatly increased his knowledge and understanding of both the United States and its Army. "I now know what whys are behind the actions of your Army," he points out.

Student Brigade Moves Det Hq To Give Students Better Support

Providing better administrative and logistical support to students attending the Infantry School was the aim of The Student Brigade when it relocated its Detachment One Headquarters.

Under the new setup, career course students receive all distribution, supplies and administrative paperwork in a headquarters located under Classroom 1 in building four.

Prior to this arrangement, frequent trips between building four and Detachment One then located in the 2nd Student Battalion area, were required in order to contact the student for appointments and information. Past experience had shown that the trips were time - consuming and an inconvenience to the officers involved, TSB officials said.

The actual idea of moving the headquarters to building four originated with a staff study prepared by Capt. Claude E. Fernandez Jr., commanding officer of Detachment One in June.

Fernandez pointed out that approximately 80 per cent of the CAR students' academic hours were spent in building four and that less than four per cent of the student officers were actually billeted in Detachment One.

With the problems of insufficient parking space and the constant heavy flow of traffic in the vicinity of his detachment, he proposed support of the students could be greatly increased with the move to the Infantry School.

The staff study was forwarded to Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe who approved the move on August 15. With the support of TSB commander Col. Jess W. Walls and the efforts of the brigade S-4 (Capt. Joseph A. Villa), the brigade preventive maintenance section and Infantry School property section, the headquarters was constructed and furnished in time to service the students of Course One which opened on August 24.

The headquarters provides offices for the commanding officer, executive officer and one unit officer in addition to clerk - typist facilities. Distribution boxes, a mail room and a supply point have also been set up for the students' convenience.

Although still in its early stages, Fernandez has termed the new operation a "tremendous success" and points out that the students have reacted favorably to this. the latest in a series of changes designed to give the student "the best support" during his period of training at Fort Benning.

Capt. and SSgt Top Grads Of Ranger Class No. 1

Capt. William L. Shackelford and SSgt. Amos P. Byers were distinguished honor graduates of The Infantry School's Ranger Class No. 1 which concluded last week at Fort Benning.

They were among the 91 U. S. Army officers and 11 enlisted men and four Allied students who completed the nine-week course.

The honor graduates received letters of achievement from Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Ranger guidons and plaques from the Association of the U. S. Army.

Capt. Shackelford is leaving soon for an assignment in Viet Nam. Sgt. Byers is returning to duty with Headquarters Company, 187th Airborne Infantry Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Col. Robert C. Kendrick, commander of the 2nd Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division, which is currently on duty in the Dominican Republic, was guest speaker for the exercise.

Col. Kendrick presented a slide-orientation talk on the situation in the Dominican Republic.

PENNANT RACE

The tight pennant race in the National League, involving five teams, is the closest scramble in baseball history. And it has been close for a long time. Yet the Los Angeles Dodgers had occupied first place for all but 18 days of the season. And they had never been more than one game back until recently.

Martha Raye Plans Return To Viet Nam

NEW YORK (AFPS) — Comedienne Martha Raye, recently back from a three-week tour of U.S. military bases in the Republic of Viet Nam, announced that she is planning a four-week return engagement there.

In an interview with an AFPS representative, Miss Raye, appearing in summer stock at the Paper Mill Playhouse, Milburn, N. J., said she could not give a specific date for her return to the RVN, but did indicate she will leave shortly after her current show closed this week.

At the conclusion of her opening performance in "Everybody Loves Opal," Miss Raye made a plea to the audiences to send "mail, paperback books and adult games" to the armed forces in the RVN.

"The troops need them," she told her attentive audience. "I promised the boys there I'd deliver this message.

MARS LANDING BELIEVED

Dr. Robert Gilruth director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Manned Spacecraft Center, believes that man may land on Mars in the late 1970s or early 1980s. AUSA Holds Conference In Atlanta

A delegation from the Columbus - Phenix City - Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U. S. Army (AUSA), is scheduled to return here today following a two-day regional conference at Third Army Headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga.

Headed by Oscar L. Betts Jr., president of the local chapter and also Third Region president, the group left here Thursday morning to join with representatives from eight other chapters in a round of talks which were to center mainly around the Association's ROTC awards program and chapter organization and administration.

The conference was conducted by Maj. Gen. Paul A. Gavan (USA, ret.), director of regional activities. Other national officers scheduled to attend were Lt. Gen. Walter L. Weible (USA, ret.), vice-president and Col. Arthur Symons (USA, ret.), secretary.

Highlight of the conference was a banquet held Thursday night in the Fort McPherson Officers' Open Mess and attended by Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, Third Army commander. Col. Tyron E. Tisdale, secretary of The Infantry School and a veteran of Viet Nam combat, was the guest speaker.

Other local chapter officers accompanying Betts to the conference were: R. L. Hinson, first vice-president; Col. William M. Preston, secretary-treasurer; Charles S. Dailey, director and regional officer; and Sgt. Maj. Al Spratley, director.

Sgt. Jesse Brewer, chapter administrative NCO and regional secretary, also made the trip along with SFC Tommy Thompson who will replace Brewer later this year.

Georgia Veterans Chief Approves of New GI Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C. — "A reasonable expenditure for readjustment to civilian life cannot be equated with the idea of a bonus," Pete Wheeler, director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, said here in testimony before the U.S. House Committee on Veterans Affairs.

The committee, headed by Representative Olin Teague of Texas, is holding hearings on the Cold War GI Bill.

One argument presented by those against the bill is that today the draft - age man can plan ahead, therefore his career won't be interrupted by military service.

Answering this, Mr. Wheeler said, "The 'plan ahead' theory is completely dispelled by events of recent months. What young man could 'plan ahead' for an executive order extending his enlistment? But, even assuming a young man knew exactly when he would enter the service, and when he would be discharged, how could the best planning put him in the same competitive position of his non-veteran counterpart?

"The non - veteran has a two - year advantage in education, academic or vocational. He has a two-year advantage in job experience. He has gained this advantage because the federal government gave it to him, when it drafted the veteran. No amount of planning can erase this advantage."

"The success of the World War II and Korean GI Bills has been proven, Mr. Wheeler said. Congress, he pointed out, has applied the mass education aspect of the original GI Bill to solve other domestic problems, proving again the success of the GI Bills.

No organization and no individual has questioned the value of the educational results of the World War II and Korean GI Bills, Mr. Wheeler said.

He urged the House Committee to recommend passage of the Cold War GI Bill passed by the U. S. Senate. It would provide subsistence for the veteran while he is in vocational school or college, as well as home loan benefits like those of previous GI Bills. Senate Bill 9 would benefit more than 100,000 Georgia veterans, Mr. Wheeler said.

"The need to maintain a large military establishment will require the people of our nation to ask, or demand that about half our young men give up two years, or more of their lives to the military, thereby inflicting a disadvantage upon them, which this bill can, in part, remedy," he told the Congressmen.

Post Finance Urges Use Of Allotments

Military personnel at Fort Benning are urged by finance officers to take full advantage of Class E and Class L allotments for a savings or banking program.

Using a Class L allotment, officials said the service member may authorize his finance office to credit his bank account with the entire amount of his monthly net pay. The Class L allotment also may be used to make payable the net monthly pay to a dependent of the service member's choice. This type of allotment is handled by the local finance office and must be renewed each time the member is transferred elsewhere.

When using the Class E allotment, the service member may authorize the Army Finance Center at Indianapolis, Ind., to send a specified part of his monthly pay to a bank or savings institution or be can use the allotment to pay the monthly premium on a commercial insurance policy or payment of a home loan.

Role of the Navy Frogman Still the Same After 22 Years

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — During the 1943 invasion of Tarawa, a submerged coral reef caused heavy casualties to the Second Marine Division when landing craft ran ground more than a mile offshore. Many Marines waading to the beach were cut down by enemy fire.

As plans were being formulated for the invasion of Europe, it was recognized that obstacles near the beaches of France would have to be removed to avoid a disastrous number of casualties during the amphibious landings.

In the summer of 1943, a selected group of Navy and Marine volunteers began training at Ft. Pierce, Fla., to become the first Underwater Demolition Team (UDT). Graduates were assembled into six - man teams and sent to England. Their effective work in clearing beaches for the invasion of Europe and for other amphibious landings during World War II has become legend.

Today's combat divers work with better equipment and undergo more extensive training, but their work is essentially the same; intelligence collection and demolition of targets and obstacles.

The rugged training they receive produces men who are able to operate and be at home in a hostile oceanic environment and who can rely on their own endurance and knowledge as well as that of their team members.

Less than 40 per cent of candidates for UDT training complete the course. Every qualified member undergoes a demanding physical conditioning program which starts with calisthenics at dawn and includes long endurance swims, forced marches through loose sand and obstacle course runs. Special underwater training is usually followed by parachute jump school.

Underwater demolition teams rely on teamwork and the personal capabilities of each member in order to operate in an unfriendly environment under the sea.

Chief Dentist Named Here

Col. Edwin H. Smith Jr. has been appointed as the new dental surgeon at Fort Benning.

He succeeds Col. Hubert W. Merchant who now is dental surgeon at Fort Hood, Texas.

Smith came to the post from Fitzsimmons General Hospital in Denver, Colo., where he was chief of the Dental Service for two years.

Other assignments he has held include dental surgeon of the Heidelberg Medical Service Area from 1960 to 1963; chief of dental personnel, Dental Division, office of the Surgeon General, Washington, D. C., from 1958 to 1960; and chief of the Prosthodontic Section, Dental Service, Walter Reed General Hospital in Washington from 1952 to 1956.

Smith was educated at the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia where he received a doctor of dental surgery degree in 1940; Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., master of science in dentistry degree in prosthodontics in 1946; and the University of Maryland at Baltimore, a bachelor of science degree in 1963. He served his dental internship in 1940 at Walter Reed Hospital.

The dentist entered the service at Walter Reed in July 1941. He has served 92 months overseas.

Among his awards and decorations is an Army Commendation Medal.

THIS IS WORK?

What is work? A way to make a living? A way to keep busy? A glue to hold life together? Work is all these things and more. As an activity and as a symbol, work has always pre-occupied us. We do it and we think about it. "I go on working for the same reason that a hen goes on laying eggs," said H. L. Mencken.

Fast-Talking Con Men Set Sights On U. S. Soldiers

From The Army Times

HEIDELBERG, Germany — A small army of racketeering salesmen sits up all night in cheap hotels thinking up new ways to fleece military personnel, according to an Army spokesman here. A typical trick is for a salesman to stick his foot in the door, display a cuckoo clock, say "Give me ten dollars and my company will send you this thirty dollar clock."

The salesman takes the ten dollars and the cuckoo clock with him and disappears forever. Needless to say, there is no company and no clock ever shows up.

"These clock salesmen move in and move out with great speed," said a spokesman for the Judge Advocate General division. "They are fleet of foot and they make a good living by glib talk."

These crooks have no clearances from the military to sell in housing areas, the Army has no idea how many there are preying on American servicemen.

And since most men are ashamed to admit they have been taken so easily, they usually don't report the gypping.

Servicemen overseas are far more exposed to such smooth operators than they are in the U.S. because here they live in concentrated government housing areas.

Nothing to Help

Occasionally servicemen will show up at the military legal office to ask how they can get their cuckoo clock but there is nothing the military can do to help.

Best way to deal with this situation, the Army legal expert said, is to tell the salesman "If you want to bring your product in here and I like it, I'll keep it and pay you."

Americans don't normally complain to German or other foreign police about these thefts because the salesman has gone and they can't identify him.

These fast-disappearing salesmen may be Americans, Englishmen or Germans speaking good English.

They prey on husbands and wives alike but the most popular time to put in an appearance in government quarters is just after dinner when the family is relaxed.

And why do servicemen hand their cash to total strangers?

"The thing that makes crooked salesmen so successful is that most people have an inherent trust of other people," the JAG spokesman pointed out.

'Well-Dressed'

"These salesmen are normally well-dressed. You believe what they tell you."

The ten dollar racket, though, is far less troublesome than the contract deal, where a serviceman signs up for a set of books or a set of china, which [illegible]

Unfortunately, he signs two forms, one for the purchase of the goods and the other for a loan to cover the cost.

Even if the goods are never delivered, and even if the company the salesman claims he represented does not exist, the loan company is real enough and the payments must be made.

Current favorites among slick salesmen are suits, rugs, paintings, silverware and cutlery.

And books. "We're going to give you absolutely free, our set of encyclopedia (or medical books, bibles, etc.), for advertising purposes," the salesman tells the soldier at the door. "Absolutely free. All we ask is that you purchase the yearly supplement to bring the books up to date and that will cost a mere $14 a month for five or six years."

The Army spokesman said that soldiers who are persuaded to buy sets of encyclopedia for the education of their infant children forget that by the time the children are old enough to benefit from the books the information in them will be out of date.

"A new fraud or a new twist on an old fraud turns up every day," the spokesman said. "Some of them you can't believe."

The military advises servicemen to keep their signature in their fountain pens until they have had a chance to consult their legal officer.

"Once a guy signs, it is too late for a lawyer to do him any good," he said.

Veterans Affairs Quashes Hopes For Speedy Passage of GI Bill

WASHINGTON—As for that "Cold War" GI Bill: The cry now is "wait'll next year," say Army Times observers.

Though completely opposed in past years to Cold War GI Bill legislation, the Veterans Administration now says it's not so sure about it, and VA has asked Congress to drop further consideration of the measure pending a VA study, according to a recent article.

Capitol Hill observers are convinced that the VA request kills chances for a GI Bill this year.

A. W. Stratton, chief benefits director for VA, made the request during testimony before the House Veterans Affairs Committee. Stratton said the VA was appointing a special task force to study whether additional benefits are warranted for peacetime vets in light of increased draft calls and (Navy) enlistment extensions.

Conducts Hearings

The House group is conducting hearings on S-9, the Senate - approved version of the bill. It extends education and home and farm loan assistance to all men who have entered the service since Jan. 31, 1955 — cutoff date for Korean Bill benefits.

The schooling formula provides for one and one half days of schooling for each day spent in uniform up to a maximum of 36 months. Monthly subsistence would be $110 for single veterans, $135 for vets with one dependent and $160 for those with two or more dependents.

Stratton said the VA study group proposes to compare the readjustment problems present day servicemen are encountering with those of servicemen returning to civilian life after World War II and Korea.

He said the group would need to "analyze certain socio - economic data in order to determine the need and type of benefits which may be warranted."

From the material gathered, he said, "we hope to develop a sound position for or against the legislation."

Fifth Time

This is the fifth time that the Cold War GI Bill has been before Congress, but it is the first time that the VA has found it necessary to study veterans' readjustment problems. In the past, VA has voiced outright opposition to any benefits for peacetime servicemen.

The legislation has also come under fire from the Defense Department which sees the bill as an inducement for qualified men to leave service.

To make the measure more appealing to the Pentagon, the bill permits men to remain in the service for as long as 20 or 30 years and still reap benefits. But Defense prefers increases in service education and training to that offered by the Cold War GI Bill.

Rep. Olin Teague (D., Tex.), chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, said he has discussed this possibility with Rep. Mendel Rivers, (D., S. C.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Coverage Too Broad

Stratton told the House committee that VA was against S-9 because it feels the coverage of the legislation is too broad. This type of benefit, Stratton said, should be limited to situations where wartime service sharply disrupts career planning.

He said that present - day service does not present, on a wide-spread basis, the "same disruptions for career planning as does extended wartime service with its many uncertainties."

Stratton then noted the fighting in world trouble spots and draft increases and enlistment extensions. But, he said, "these facts alone do not resolve the question of whether additional benefits should be provided for benefits of current service."

This, he indicated, would be the task of the special study group. The study group will be composed of officials from the VA, the Defense Department, Budget Bureau, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Census Bureau and any other agency that would have an interest in the revival of the GI Bill program.

Off-Duty Studies Show Increase

Washington (APFS)—Some 1,300 Army personnel earned college degrees in FY65 with the Navy reporting approximately 10,000 personnel enrolled in college-level studies.

The services differed in reporting methods with the Army showing completions and the Navy figures reflecting enrollment. Air Force statistics are being compiled.

More than 50,000 sailors took high school or vocational courses, while 43,558 soldiers qualified for high school diplomas or equivalency certificates during the reporting period.

Individual course completions for the Army's General Educational Development (GED) program totaled more than 721,000. This includes 370,936 prepatory high school, 269,447 service job related, 10,425 high school subject area and 70,965 college course completions.

KENYANS ENROLL

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Five or six Kenyan students who left a Soviet university last April because of alleged discrimination and indoctrination are to enter Lincoln University this month. Dr. Marvin Wachman, Lincoln's president, said the group would enroll under arrangements worked out by the university and the Institute of International Education in New York. Twenty-nine Kenyan students left the Soviet university at Baku after staging a two-week strike. They complained of hostility and physical beatings.

Missile Battalion Finishes Benning Field Problem

The 2nd Missile Battalion (Little John), 42nd Artillery, commanded by Lt. Col. Charles F. Farber, recently completed a vigorous field problem on the Fort Benning reservation.

The exercise was in preparation for an Army Training Test in October and to increase the unit's overall combat effectiveness.

The training was bolstered by competition between firing sections of Capt. Gilbert L. Muchmore's Battery A and sections within Headquarters and Headquarters Battery commanded by Capt. James R. Adams.

Post Youngster Wins Top Swimmer Award

Eleven year - old Arne Eliasson of Fort Benning's Youth Activities Club (YAC) swimming team took the honors as best boy swimmer at the YMCA city-wide individual swimming and diving meet in Columbus last Saturday.

Eliasson, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Arne Eliasson, nabbed two first, two second and two fourth places in individual events which were open to youngsters and teenagers from the Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area.

Fourteen other boys and girls from Fort Benning participated in the meet. All but one are members of the YAC team.

Competition was divided in age groups from ten years old and under to a 15 and up class. It included 72 individual swimming and diving events.

Eliasson got his two victories in the 200 yard free style with a time of 2:34.2 seconds and in the 100 yard free style with a 1:06.5.

The youngster, who was chosen for the best boy swimmer award on the basis of best sportsmanship, attitude and effort, has been swimming for about three years. He practices regularly with the YAC swimming team at Briant Wells Field House.

Richard Han, also of the Fort Benning contingent, copped first place in the 100 yard breast stroke in the 15 year old and up group. He recorded a time of 1.17.5 seconds.

Billy Kendrick and Charles Wahle also made top showings. Kendrick won the 50 yard butterfly in the 11 and 12 year old age group in 34.7 seconds while Wahle nabbed first place in the 13 and 14 year old's butterfly with a 1:16 seconds time.

Other members of the Fort Benning contingent at the meet were Kelly Griswold, Ken Sanders, Bill Lewis, Hank Muir, Ricky Miller, Alain Frequelin, Karen Rodgers, Ann Dalcy, Michele Miller, Beth McLeod and Delores Rogers.

The YAC swimming team practices at Briant Wells Field House daily from 4 to 6 p.m. All youngsters are invited to join.

A Third Army basketball clinic will be held at Briant Wells Field House from Sept. 27 to 29, the Infantry Center special services office announced this week. Representatives from posts throughout the Third Army area will attend.

According to a special services spokesman, the clinic is designed to train personnel to run their own clinics on return to their posts.

Instructors for the clinic will be provided by the Third Army special services section.

Interested Fort Benning personnel should contact their unit athletic officers or the USARC special services office.

Inter-Service Golf Tourney Ends; Starks Finishes in Third Position

Starks Receives Army Discharge At End of Play

There was no triumphal homecoming for Sp4 Nat Starks at Fort Benning this week. Starks, winner of the Third Army and All Army golf crowns, received his Army discharge upon the completion of the inter-service golf championships at Cherry Point Marine Air Base last Friday and returned home to Atlanta.

Asked about his plans, Starks said without hesitation, "I would like to try the pro golf circuit. I have a few offers for a sponsor but I haven't decided which one to choose yet." He plans to begin next season.

The five-foot seven, 140 pound Starks began playing golf in high school and learned a great deal about the game while serving as a caddy at an Atlanta course.

In 1958 he entered and won his first tournament, the New Era Tourney of Atlanta. In the same year he was also crowned City Medalist.

It has been a big Army golfing year for Starks. He won one championship after another beginning with the Fort Benning golf playoffs in July. Last month at Fort Jackson, S.C., Starks led the Third Army tourney all the way to take the crown with a nine under par 279 for 72 holes of play.

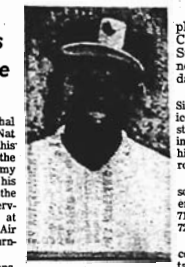
He went on to the All-Army championships at Fort Bragg, N.C. which ended September 4. On his arrival at Bragg, Starks said he nearest rival. He was described as a man who "never made a mistake" and as "a fine, steady golfer."

In winning the All-Army crown, he noted that the Bragg course was "not quite as tough as the one at Fort Benning."

Taking a third place at the interservice championships last week, Starks described his play as "erratic". He added "I was putting too quick, and the ball just didn't fall."

Always in good spirits, he jokingly remarked after missing a birdie putt in the third round, "The ball is dodging the hole."

But Navy rival Don Bollman was quick to add, "Starks has to be the best three par palyer I have ever watched." Bollman made this remark after Starks got his seventh bridie out of eight on a par three hole.



STARKS

Fort Benning's Nat Starks wound up in third place at the inter-service golf championships at Cherry Point Marine Air Base, N.C., last week. Starks tied for first place at the end of the tourney's second round but dropped behind after two days of what he termed "erratic" play.

Air Force Capt. Warren Simmons took the interservice open crown on an 11-stroke margin, firing a closing round 70 last Friday for his third straight under par round.

Simmons a physics professor at the Air Force Academy, also had rounds of 74, 71, and 67 and for a four-day, 72 hole total of 282.

His third round 67 tied the course record and his 282 total score was a new low for the tournament and six under par for the Cherry Point Course.

Wes Barfield of Homestead Air Force Base, Fla., took second place in the open with a five over par total of 293. His score was only one stroke better than Stark's score of 294. Barfield gained the same stroke advantage when he sank a 15 foot putt on the 16th hole for a birdie.

The Air Force won the title in the team standings for the first time since 1959 when its entry edged out the Army team on the closing day with a four-day 1183 score. The Army had a 1187 total. The Marines had 1189 followed by the Navy at 1209.

In the senior division of the tourney, Navy Commander Edward Peck took first place when he carded rounds of 74, 74, 77 and 76 for a 301 total. Army Lt. Col. Charles Knowles was only two strokes behind the winner with a 303. Knowles is stationed at Fort Gordon, Ga.

Navy Commander James Kinder of Camp Lejune, N. C., took senior's third place honors with a 309.

Starks, the Third Army and All-Army champ, was tied at 294 strokes with Marine Corporal Charles Lewis of Camp Pendelton, Calif. at the end of the final round. He took third place when he parred and Lewis tripple bogied on the third hole of a sudden death playoff.

Simmons' third round was the best he shot. Army Lt. Don Clark, who was tied for first with Simmons and Starks going into the round, described Simmons' play by saying, "He didn't miss a putt within ten feet."

Simmons made the turn with a four-under 33 and shot the back nine in a one-under 36. He shot a total of eight birdies for the round.

Starks' third round of 73, which was matched by Clark, put them both six strokes behind Simmons at 218. Starks, one of the pre-tournament favorites, faltered to a final round 76 while Clark fell to 79 putting him into sixth place at 297.

Proper Lighting Betters Childrens' Home Study

BY ANDY LANG
AP Feature Writer

Johnny and Jane often come home from well-lighted classrooms to study areas that don't even approach minimum requirements for comfortable "eye-work."

Industry has learned that better lighting can be the key to greater efficiency, higher productivity and fewer accidents. Modern schools too, have provided their students with scientifically engineered lighting to enable them to perform at their best. But many of these same children return to their homes to continue their studies in drably lighted, make-shift quarters.

Better Homework

There are many scientists who contend that children with quiet, private and well-lighted study areas perform their homework more willingly and with better results than those lacking such conditions, even when the latter group might normally do better work in the classrooms.

Parents haven't been entirely to blame, either. At least, not where lighting is concerned. There simply hasn't been any simple way to determine what is and what isn't proper lighting for home study. And few persons are going to hire lighting engineers to come in and make recommendations on what types of lamps to purchase and where to place them for maximum results.

Now, however, through the combined efforts of the Better Light-Better Sight Bureau, the Illuminating Engineering Society, Electrical Testing Laboratories Inc. and the lamp manufacturers, break-throughs in this area have been achieved. A national program has been launched to promote public awareness of the need for proper study lighting.

Engineers and designers have developed new light control devices that will do the job — and manufacturers are producing them according to rigid specifications. Such study lamps carry blue tags certifying that they have met these specifications and have the endorsement of the Better Light-Better Sight Bureau, a non-profit educational association.

There is no certainty that youngsters will find it any easier to do their homework solely because of better lighting, no matter what the scientists say. But it is good to know that parents concerned about the situation now have some reasonably sure method of selecting proper lighting equipment for Johnny and Jane.

12,000 Have Volunteered For Viet Nam

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON—More than 12,000 soldiers have volunteered for duty in Viet Nam in the last year, the White House reported. With 1,442 men asking for combat assignments in the first two weeks in August, the soldier Viet Nam volunteer rate is running at better than 100 men a day.

Recent monthly figures for Viet Nam volunteers ran like this: April, 925; May 945; June, 1,222; and July, 1,635.

Of the 12,000 soldiers who have asked for Viet Nam duty, more than 7,000 have already been assigned. The rest will be sent, the White House said, when vacancies occur in Viet Nam for their MOS.

Service Club 2 Gives Sgt Look At His Life

"This is Your Life — Sgt. Richard McPherson" was recently unfolded for the sergeant and audience at Service Club Two.

Selected for the honor by Miss Madeline Parks, service club director, McPherson is a part-time worker at the club.

Bill Nichols was master of ceremonies for the show which had the details of the young sergeant's life in script and photos supplied by McPherson's mother.

Some of the photos dated back to when the sergeant was five months old.

On hand for the show was McPherson's company commander and first sergeant.

EAR SEWED BACK ON

OSTERSUND, Sweden — A 4-year-old boy who had a ear bitten off by a dog had it sewn back within an hour, physicians at Ostersund Hospital reported.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Majvor Forslund, said that when ambulance attendants arrived to take young Thomas to the hospital, they took his ear with them.

About a year ago a 9-year-old girl had a hand sewn back on at the same hospital after it had been severed in an accident.

AT THE Movies

SEASIDE SWINGERS — A group of fun-loving teenagers make arrangements — independently — to take vacation jobs at a popular seaside resort. Among them are John Leyton, a would-be pop egotistic playboy; Grazina Frame, a vocal student; the Baker twins; Liz Frazer; and Freddie and the Dreamers.

* * *

THE CARPETBAGGERS — An epic in proportion, based on Harold Robbins' explosive best seller, the exciting drama begins during Hollywood's "golden years" and surges forward over three decades in the turbulent growth of Adam's manufacturing and entertainment industries. George Peppard portrays the role of Jonas Cord Jr., ruthless head of an industrial empire and a Hollywood film studio; blond beauty Carroll Baker is cast as the fabulous Rina Marlowe; Alan Ladd, in his final characterization, plays Nevada Smith, rugged man of leather and steel; while Robert Cummings takes the part of the unscrupulous actors' agent, Dan Pierce. A return engagement.

* * *

THE HUMAN DUPLICATORS — Superior beings of another world send cosmic agent, Kolos (Richard Kiel) to Planet Earth. Mission: create a colony of androids (human - like robots) to infiltrate industry, government and military of our societies. This sets the stage for invasion by the masters of the galaxy.

* * *

THE BATTLE OF THE VILLA FIORITA — Rumer Godden's poignant and surprisingly funny novel opens its heart to the screen. It stars Maureen O'Hara and Rossano Brazzi in an unconventional love story. O'Hara meets Brazzi, a noted Italian composer, at an art festival in London and rapidly becomes romantically involved with him. O'Hara tells her diplomat husband, Richard Todd, of the affair so Todd decides she should go to Italy with her lover. Their children, Martin Stephens and Elizabeth Dear, decide to invade the villa and unite their parents. The belligerent offspring invoke humor, pathos and near-tragedy, by drowning, in their fiercely determined efforts to destroy the lover's relationship. The tide of battle flows and ebbs and then a night of terror, for all concerned, brings a solution.

SKI PARTY — A "young-at-heart" fun film, it is a gay musical comedy about America's fastest growing winter sport.Frankie Avalon, Dwayne Hickman, Deborah Walley, Yvonne Craig, James Brown and The Famous Flames and Lesley Gore lead the all-star case. Ski Party is SNOW-A-GO-GO.

AZTEC METROPOLIS

When Cortes reached the Aztec city of Tenochtitlan in 1519 he found a metropolis equal in material aspects to many great European cities, the National Geographic Society says. Tenochtitlan contained temples, pyramids, palaces and aqueducts. It had 20 schools for the common people and others for the nobility.

College Grid Season Kicks Off

(AP) — Nebraska's brawn, a schedule of outstanding games on Oct. 16 and the Alabama-Louisiana State game appear keys to the 1965 season as college football starts hitting on all platoons this week.

The national champion, Alabama, represents the Southeastern Conference, which has produced four of the last eight titleholders. Alabama will face Georgia's Sun Bowl kings tomorrow.

Big, brawny Nebraska has about the best chance of any challenger to unseat Alabama — if the Crimson Tide will budge. The Cornhuskers open at home against Texas Christian.

Other feature games include Notre Dame at California, Texas A. and M. at L.S.U., Miami of Ohio at Purdue, Penn State at Maryland, Kentucky at Missouri, Oklahoma State at Arkansas, Army at Tennessee and Duke at Virginia.

Coach Bob Devaney of Nebraska says: "We should be improved, offensively, and defensively, but that's not enough to indicate we're national title material."

Huskers Are Strong

The facts are that the Huskers have 26 letter men — 16 of the top 22 —from the sixth -ranked, two - time Big Eight champion who won nine straight in 1964 before being upset by Oklahoma and beaten by Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl.

The schedule is favorable because outside foes include cribbing-riddled Air Force and the league slate has the roughest rival down the stretch.

Alabama is definitely in the picture provided squadmen, sophomores and redshirts shore up the gaps at tackle and guard. The Tide should be as sound defensively as last year, with a better running attack and a quarterback, Steve Sloan, who played more than his celebrated co-pilot, Joe Namath, at the throttle.

The showdown comes Nov. 6 at Baton Rouge, where Alabama tangles with L.S.U., a team with nearly twice the number of letter men, 30, but a tough schedule. The winner will have an inside track to the S.E.C. crown.

On Oct. 16, two other national championship contenders may well be determined as an ominous-looking Purdue squad invades the lair of Michigan's Big Ten defenders and Texas visits Arkansas in a battle of teams that are runaway choices to dominate the Southwest for the seventh straight campaign.

WHISTLE COUGH

TWEED HEADS, Australia — Bo-Bo, a popular dolphin, recently coughed up a steel whistle after aquarium attendants poured kerosene down her throat.

Bo - Bo swallowed the whistle, which dropped from her owner - trainer's hand, when she leaped at fish while being fed.

Nevertheless, there were fears for the 12-year old dolphin's life.

The whistle was found at the bottom of her pool.

Sweden's Gift to Flipper Fans

Basking between takes in shooting of new episodes of MGM-TV's "Flipper" series is lovely Ulla Stromstedt, Swedish art graduate. With help like this, "Flipper" may attract more than dolphins.

SHAVING POTS . . . The first helmets to be ordered by the government since 1958 move along the production line. The style of the "steel pots" is virtually unchanged from World War II models. Borg-Warner Corporation's Ingersoll Products plant in Chicago will make 732,000 of the helmets under contracts totaling $2.6 million.
