Study of Communism

Labor Unions Act as Agencies For Domination of the Worker

The fact that Communist labor unions do not represent workers, but instead act as agencies of the Soviet government, can also be seen in the world at large. The Soviet government directs the Communist - dominated World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU) which incorporates all labor unions inside Communist states and those unions in non-Communist states that are run by Communists.

Shortly after Fidel Castro assumed power in Cuba in 1959, the Cuban labor unions were told by Castro to join the WFTU. This was one of the many signals that the Castro government was moving in the direction of communism.

What is the main purpose of the WFTU? It hardly ever concerns itself with the economic conditions of workers. Its main activity lies in propagating the official Communist line throughout the world. In particular, it engages in ceaseless anti-American propaganda that has little to do with the economic interests of workers.

This concern with high politics along Communist lines often betrays Communist agents who try to infiltrate and gain control of free labor unions. Whereas the true labor-union leader is primarily concerned with promoting the welfare of union members, a Communist - inspired labor leader will spend most of his time trying to persuade his union to pass resolutions on atomic disarmament, foreign policy and other issues that have little to do with the genuine and practical interests of workers.

The Communist in a free labor union does not ask himself, "What is best for the members of my union?" but rather, "What is best for Moscow?"

World War II provided a telling illustration of this attitude. Between September 1939 and June 1941, Russia was a "friendly non-belligerent" on the side of Nazi Germany. Communists in Britain and the United States stirred up strikes — not to help British or American workers but because Moscow wanted to weaken Britain and the United States, the two main opponents of Nazi Germany.

As soon as Russia was attacked by Germany on June 22, 1941, Communists immediately switched their line. Now strikes became treason and Communists everywhere demanded that workers put in sixty, seventy and eighty hours a week to speed up victory against Germany.

Of course, this sudden patriotism on the part of American and British Communists did not deceive anyone, for it was obviously no coincidence that the Communists discovered the need for rapid industrial production only after Russia was involved in the war. What it showed was that Communists everywhere had only one loyalty — to Communist Russia.

Lack of Freedom

Not only does the worker under communism lack the freedom to join labor unions which represent him, he also lacks — or has frequently lacked — the freedom to change jobs.

In 1938, for example, the Soviet government introduced "work books" for all employed persons. They are still in effect. These work books contain the whole work record of the bearer, his past behavior and a detailed description of his personal background.

While employed, a worker cannot keep this work book but must surrender it to the plant manager. Thus he is prevented from changing jobs without the permission of management. Violations of this law were originally punishable by prison sentences of two to four months. In 1956, a new Soviet law provided that prison sentences were to be replaced by "disciplinary action and public censure." This might mean a demotion to a lower - paying job, less housing space or whatever seemed appropriate under the circumstances.

The Soviet government has another means of restricting the freedom of workers to move about as they please. Since the government controls all urban housing, it can prevent newcomers from moving to already densely populated areas by making housing unavailable.

At various times since 1917, large cities like Moscow or Leningrad have been closed off in this way to workers who might have gone there to seek employment. Similarly, the government can direct the flow of labor into remote areas by holding out various attractions — better housing, higher wages and other benefits.

Army Planes Needed For Combat Continuity

WASHINGTON —"We do not plan to compete with them." That's one of the latest statements from Army Chief of Staff Gen. H. K. Johnson on the still unresolved Army-Air Force battlefield aerial support debate.

Johnson has told a special House Armed Services airlift sub-committee that the Army intends "to improve its battlefield mobility through the use of Army aircraft where it offers us a significant tactical advantage. . ."

This does not, he said, reduce Army dependence upon the Air Force for strategic and tactical airlift.

"We contemplate an overlap with Air Force capabilities only to the extent needed to provide continuity of operations. We do not plan to compete with them."

Johnson made an indirect plug for Defense Department permission to purchase the CV-7 Buffalo twin - engine transport. DoD has denied previous requests.

The Chief of Staff told the legislators that Army aircraft are particularly designed to support ground elements. "For example," he said, "the Caribou (CV-2) and its follow - on Buffalo (CV-7) are well suited to perform the short haul Army missions into unimproved landing areas. In this role these aircraft act as the link between the long range, bulk carriers (e.g. C-130 Air Force transports) and Army helicopters in the forward areas."

The Buffalo carries payloads of three to five tons and is visualized as a companion workhorse with the current CH-47 Chinook helicopter, already used in Viet Nam and destined for other Army units.

Trainees Get Language Instruction

FT. GORDON, Ga. (AFPS) — Each service has a vocabulary of its own and new recruits have to learn it.

For some 90 Spanish-speaking trainees at the 2nd Training Brigade here this is particularly difficult. They speak just enough English to make their basic needs known.

To help these trainees and give them enough of a command of English to learn the soldier's skills, special off-duty classes have been set up. Each Spanish speaking trainee attends English class twice a week.

The lessons are scaled to familiarize the students with the vocabulary used in basic combat training and the meaning and pronunciation of words.

'Thank You' Mail Boosts Morale Of Americans in Viet Nam Fight

By JOE TREASTER

AN KHE, Viet Nam — With the mouse roar of anti - war demonstrations in the ears of Americans, the flow of mail to the collective "U. S. soldier" has shown a marked increase.

Piles of letters beginning "Dear Soldier," "To My Hero," "Dear G.I. Friend," "Dear American in Viet Nam," daily arrive at the 1st Air Cavalry Division camp.

Each letter is a personal "thank - you" to the men at war to insure America's freedom.

"These letters are especially significant," said Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, commander of the division, "because they are sent to the soldiers from total strangers. It's a lot different to get a word of praise from someone you've never met than from your mother or father or some other loved one. The letters from the public to the soldier must truly be from the heart."

Here's a sampling of the mail:

Janet Sue Hot, 21, Peoria, Ill.,: "I hope this letter, in some small way, will let you servicemen know how much I appreciate what you're doing in Viet Nam.

"When I was born my father was just 19 years old fighting on the front lines of Italy. His experience helps me to know what you must be going through."

Kurt Huff, 11, Tuba City, Ariz.; "We appreciate your efforts to drive back the Viet Cong in Viet Nam. We will give you all the support possible. Some crazy guys over here are protesting that they don't want to send their boys to Viet Nam, but we know you want to support the United States."

Mrs. M. Wistar Gary, Columbus, Ga.: "You are all in our prayers each day.

"The job you are doing is for every American and we do appreciate it. I have a son who is 15 and we feel that you are maintaining our way of life for him."

All Heroes

Debbie Lentz, 10, of Phoenix, Ariz.: "In my opinion anyone who is fighting for America is a hero . . . I almost cry when I think about how lonely you are, away from your friends and family. I know that you're probably not very thrilled that you got sent over there, but you can be sure that you're doing something with your life and that it's not wasting away. Everyone there is a hero to me and all Americans."

Mrs. Wilbur W. Kolb, West Allis, Wis.: "I know at times it must be hard to think that we back here don't realize what is going on over there. But the majority of us do know and care about what you are doing and we are thankful and praying for our men."

Miss Gail Talbert, Chattanooga, Tenn.: "Others like me here at home feel that we should do all we can to back you boys through letters, prayers and other ways as you daily face death, loneliness and the other pains brought by war.

"I know for a fact that many of you feel it your duty to help in this fight against communism. I know and understand that you would like to be back home. Both of these feelings are good. I'm glad you chose to be unselfish, not thinking only of yourselves but for the peoples of the world."

Classes Write

Entire classes from several schools have written letters. Here are some excerpts from the letters sent from the class taught by Stephen Halper at Tuba City Junior High School, in Arizona, 75 miles from the Grand Canyon:

Huskie Bighorse, a Navajo Indian boy: "Here's a fat hello to all the cavalry that are in the war to keep North Viet Nam back from South Viet Nam. We in the U.S.A. are proud of you."

Debbie Lynn Bryant: "Thank you very much for fighting to keep a small country free from Communism."

Faye Townsend: "Are people there very different from people here? I hate war because my uncle was killed in the war. He is buried in Hawaii."

Bennett Jackson: "When you're sleeping in your foxhole don't stick out your toes because they might be hit by a bullet."

Rates Change For Social Security

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1965 have changed the soldier's contribution rates for old age, survivors and disability insurance. Beginning January 1, 1966, a soldier will give 3.8 per cent of his base pay for these benefits.

In addition, .35 percent of his base pay will be deducted to provide hospital insurance for the soldier and his wife upon reaching age 65.

He can also take the option to voluntarily enroll for medical insurance. This plan is financed by $3.00 monthly premiums and a matching payment from the government.

17-Year-Olds Exempted From Viet Nam Service

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has directed that 17-year-old service personnel be exempt from duty assignment in the Republic of Viet Nam (RVN).

This will not affect personnel on sea duty in contiguous water areas nor in overseas assignments elsewhere, a Defense spokesman said.

Effective immediately, the services will cancel or modify orders for any 17-year-olds now destined for the RVN and divert them to other appropriate assignments.

On Feb. 1, all 17-year-olds in RVN will be reassigned to other places according to service requirements.

Officials say the action was taken to make assignment policies uniform throughout the services. The initial recommendation came from the Marine Corps, which adopted a similar policy during the Korean conflict.

It was explained that 17-year-old personnel account for a small part of the service forces and it is not necessary to draw on them for current RVN requirements.

There are roughly 50,000 17-years-olds in the service or about 1.8 percent of the total forces.

Exact numbers currently in the RVN are not available but estimates place the total at less than one percent of the 148,280 U.S. service personnel there.

The new policy was made following a comprehensive review of DOD military personnel assignment policies and RVN strength requirements.

Army Explains Insurance Program's Small Print

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Soldiers who drop out of the new servicemen's group life insurance program may have a more difficult time than they think reinstating coverage when they change their minds.

In addition, the Army is advising soldiers that if they go AWOL for more than 30 days they'll have to meet good health standards for reinstatement. No death benefits will be paid survivors of men who are shot or executed because of a military crime.

Once a soldier drops his insurance or loses it because of unauthorized absence, he cannot reinstate it without a military medical examination and approval by a medical officer.

Subject to Approval

All reinstatements are subject to approval by the commercial firm handling the military group insurance program. While the goal is to make it as "easy as possible" for servicemen to reinstate coverage, officials point out that there may be some instances in which the insurance company's rules could be "justifiably" stiffer.

Sometimes men are approved for continued active duty even though they have medical problems that would cause an insurance company to increase its premium rates.

This could be true of men injured in combat or even older men who have experienced heart trouble or diabetes, officials told Army Times.

Minimum Dropouts

The Defense Department, to keep insurance dropouts to a minimum, plans to make it as hard as possible for men to give the coverage up.

Every soldier is now in the process of completing a form (DA 3054) to designate beneficiary, mode of settlement, amount of coverage ($5,000 or $10,000) and whether he wishes to retain or drop the insurance.

For soldiers to reduce the coverage or drop it entirely, they must state their intention in writing on the Army form. An explanation will be entered in the "remarks" section of their military pay voucher indicating insurance had been dropped at their request.

Each soldier policyholder will eventually receive a certificate (VA Form 29R290) explaining rights and benefits available to him under the new program. The form is now being drafted by the Veterans Administration, the agency responsible for administering the program.

And to make sure service beneficiaries get a good deal, the VA is retaining "final say" on who is and who is not covered. Commercial company rules will be limited to standards approved by VA, officials said.

PROUD FATHER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — James Campbell, 41 years old, had such a good excuse he was dismissed when he was hauled before a police magistrate on a charge of blocking traffic and then giving the police trouble. He admitted to the magistrate that he had had a bit too much to drink. But he explained that he was celebrating the birth of his first child after 19 years of marriage.

Pregnancies Ruled Reason For Delays

Soldiers with wives who are at least seven months pregnant may apply for deferment of overseas assignment according to a recent Department of the Army ruling.

The legal wife of the soldier who submits application for deferment must be in her seventh month of pregnancy at the time of the application or by the time the individual is scheduled to report to the overseas replacement station or port of embarkation.

According to the message, it is mandatory that the soldier does not depart his home station until final action has been taken on his request for deferment.

Soldiers reporting for overseas movement at port of embarkation will not be granted a deferment unless it can be established that the individual was not given the opportunity to apply for deferment at his home station and his request meets the requirements, the regulation says. The applicant must have medical evidence to support his wife's pregnancy.

Personnel being reassigned to Viet Nam either as a member of a unit or as individuals will not be granted deferment except by Department of the Army action. The ruling calls for these applications for deferment to be expedited to headquarters, Department of Army office of personnel operations.

Book Review

Story of Communist Dictator Told

Since The Bayonet began reviewing books, it has treated only more recent publications.

This week's book, however, was first published in 1950. Nevertheless, this book is as important today, if not more so, as it was 15 years ago, for it is the biography of the man who must be considered one of the free world's severest enemies—Mao Tse Tung.

Also, Robert Payne, the author of this biography, has kept up with the fast moving pace with which Red China has jumped into the arena of World powers and has added the progress of Red China after 1950 in the revised edition published in 1961.

It is often not enough to be able to recognize your enemy. In the cold war and the political battles fought on a world-wide level in our day and age, it becomes necessary to study the history of the one you do battle with and be able not only to predict his strategy but to understand the reasons behind it.

In the 16 years since Red China was proclaimed a "People's Republic," Payne's book says it has overcome the feudal economy which had bogged it down for thousands of years had and has become a first class communist dictatorship. Payne says all of this can be accredited to one man- Mao Tse Tung.

Mao led the people of Red China in revolt against the Chinese Feudal lords. He also drew up the plans for the People's Republic of China and has ruled the 669 million people there since the revolution with the iron hand of an undisputed dictator.

Mao's rise to power is a fascinating one and it is told by a man who has spent much of his life studying and living in China and who has watched the rise of the communist leader. Payne brings out all of the wonders of Mao, his great military stratagem, his ability to sway the millions of Chinese people, and his talent for building a society unlike any other in the history of man.

Payne's is more than just a book about a man but the story of a people and an idealism and the way one man has molded the two into one of the most frightful threats to man's freedom the world has ever known. . .MIKE GROGAN

Bloomquist Named Top Army Aviator

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Maj. Paul A. Bloomquist, an Army helicopter pilot, was named "Army Aviator of the Year" at the seventh annual luncheon of the Army Aviation Association of America held here Oct. 29.

Maj. Bloomquist was cited for ability and acts of courage while assigned to the 57th Medical Detachment (Helicopter Ambulance) in the Republic of Viet Nam.

In a letter to the Army Aviation Association, Army Surgeon General Leonard D. Heaton said that the 57th Medical Detachment had provided fine medical support to the troops in RVN and had shown that the helicopter ambulance is a versatile means of evacuation which can be adopted for total battlefield support. He credited much of this to Maj. Bloomquist's leadership.

The award is made annually to the Army aviator who has made an outstanding individual contribution during the previous year.

ONE PER CENT IMMUNE

About one per cent of the human population is completely immune to dental decay, a dental scientist recently reported during an American Dental Association meeting. Dr. Gordon E. Green of Detroit said that tests showed the saliva of these caries (decay) immune persons contained an anti-bacterial protein.

Benning Basketball Season Opens

197th Wins 3 Battles On Monday

In the season - opener at Kelley Hill Field House, the 58th Infantry scored a 66 to 60 victory over The Student Brigade in an overtime thriller to chalk up one of three wins on Monday for 197th Infantry Brigade basketball teams.

In the overtime period, Leroy Myers came through with three clutch field goals to sew up the triumph. Myers totaled 14 points for the contest with C. B. O. Ralston adding 20, Herman Mack 15, and Buddy Lowe 10.

In the second of the two games at the field house, the 577th Engineers, CTC threw a scare into the 197th Brigade Troops team when they blitzed their way to an 11 to 0 lead in the first eight minutes of play.

But the Brigade Troops contingent came back to tally 18 points in a row before the Engineers could manage another marker.

John Bass paced the Brigade Troops attack with 12 points followed by Gordan Kay with 10 points and Howie Keene and Joe Huttie with nine each.

At Briant Wells Field House, the 29th Infantry scored a 117 to 26 romp over the 10th Aviation Group to give the 197th Brigade three wins in four games on Monday.

29th Inf, 39th Trans Score Wins

A fast moving 29th Infantry team steamrolled the 10th Aviation Group, 117 to 26, at Briant Wells Field House Monday night to open the Infantry Center basketball season on main post.

Smooth running plays, a hard driving offense and an alert defense made the 29th look invincible against a poorly organized and understrength Aviation squad. The 29th piled up 68 points to their opponent's 16 in the first half and held the 10th to only 10 points in the second half.

Teamwork seemed to keynote the 29th's floor game as they continuously drove for the basket and a score. The 10th, tired by limited substitutions and denied good shooting postion by the 29th defense, failed too often in long scoring attempts at the hoop. The 29th, using a two squad system, always kept a fresh five on the floor.

Spearheading the 29th's offensive drive was high scorer and team coach Don Harnum who tallied 30 points. Runnerup in the scoring poll was Bob Frazier who dropped in 20 points and third was Monte Clausen who hit for 13.

39th Trans Wins

In the second game of the doubleheader at Briant Wells on Monday, the 39th Transportation Battalion edged the 10th Artillery, 60 to 58, as the two evenly matched teams battled neck to neck to the final seconds of the game.

The 10th's John Murry was high scorer, sinking 25 points. Roger Reynolds and Bill Reddick of the 39th paced their team effort with 14 points each.

FAVORED JINX

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The role of favorite has been a jinx in Big Eight football since the league ended Oklahoma's 13-year reign.

Army Mule Likes Flowers

From The Army Times

WEST POINT, N. Y. — Whenever an Army mule mascot needs a harness, Ted Flowers of Alexandria, Ind., can depend on a ducat for the Army-Navy football game.

Precedent was set in 1962 when USMA was looking around for harness for three cadet mule riders. Only Flowers could meet the harness specifications but he stipulated: "As for the cost, there will be none. I consider it an honor to make them for the U.S. Military Academy."

He did, however mention that he'd like a ticket for the game so he could see his handiwork on parade.

This year mule mascot Hannibal II needed a harness. USMA remembered where to go for it this time. Again Flowers turned down cash and got a ticket in its place.

So, if you're one of the 103,000 at the game this year, give a special cheer for the proud harness-maker from Alexandria, Ind.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

Merited Master of Sport

NEAR THE BEGINNING OF THE BASEBALL season in 1961, Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin orbited his way into the world's attention by becoming the first man to circle the globe in space. A jubilant Soviet Union awarded him the coveted title of "Merited Master of Sport", claiming Yuri had broken every existing aviation record by his flight. At 32, record breaking Yuri was catapulted to hero status and accorded the USSR's highest athletic honor.

That same baseball season other things were happening in America. Yankee Roger Maris was headed for an orbit of his own in his attempt to reach Babe Ruth's magic mark of 60 home runs. No one in the history of sports ever received such intensive coverage for so long a time. Americans became infatuated with the spectacle of a mortal man approaching the accomplishment of one of their legendary folk heroes. Americans like Russians became infected with the record breaker, the hero.

In our complicated, technological world where achievement has become increasingly the result of interdependent action, individual successes seem to grow scarcer and more significant. We want to be assured that the individual human being can still make the scene through strength of mind or body.

Hail the Record Breaker

IN SPORTS, the hero is easily recognized. He is the record breaker, the man who goes one better. He is the guy who sets the top mark for others to shoot at. Our modern day heros are the Babe Ruths, the Otto Grahams, the Sterling Mosses, the Gary Players. A Mickey Mantle picture card is worth a hundred Emilio Zapatas.

Criticism is often levelled at the heroes, sometimes labeled "Glory Boys." Recently outfielder Wes Covington of the Philadelphia Phillies gave his reasons for the Phillies' drop from pennant contention to sixth place in the National League this year.

Covington charged that manager Gene Mauch lost control of the club. He said the main problem was that Mauch allowed the club to be too individualistic in its thinking. Covington explained:

"To have a winning team, players cannot have a selfish attitude."

He said in cases where a hit would have given the team a big run, the batter still would go for the long ball. As he put it:

"Everyone thought he was a home run hitter or a 20 game winner.

America loves its heroes and we long to be an American hero. Babe Ruth was per-

Benning Grid Champs Face Officers Tonight

A tough team of captains from Officers Career Course (CAR) No. 1 will tangle with Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry at 8 p.m. tonight at Doughboy Stadium in a touch football benefit game for the Ft. Benning Teen Club.

Company D clinched the Infantry Center grid championship last week in a hard fought battle against Headquarters Company, The Student Brigade. The CAR team issued a challenge to the champs at the end of the game and the teams agreed to meet tonight in a "Teen Club Bowl."

The CAR team topped The Student Brigade touch football tournament which concluded three weeks ago but were ineligible to participate in the post finals. According to special services regulations, teams composed of members on student status are not allowed to participate in post-wide competition.

Attendance at tonight's game is open to everyone in the Fort Benning-Columbus area. No admission will be charged but donations to the Fort Benning Teen Club can be made at the gate.

A half-time show will be given with music provided by the Infantry Center band.

haps our greatest sports hero and the idol of millions of baseball fans of yesterday and today. He gave us one of our greatest lessons. Heroes are human!

Babe's Achilles' heel was his stomach. He always had a taste for the unusual in food. His breakfast juice often consisted of a pint of bourbon and a pint of ginger ale in equal doses and in between games of a double header he liked nothing better than a jar of Mrs. Lou Gehrig's pickled eels.

The Fatal Apple

ONE DAY in 1925 he enjoyed a pre-game snack of 12 hotdogs, a quart of soda and one apple. Along about the sixth inning, the Babe doubled over with stomach pains. "I know," he groaned, "I should'na et that apple."

Ruth never got into shape that year. He batted under .300, hit a paltry 25 homers and was fined $5,000 by Yank manager Huggins. Without their hero, the Yanks collapsed into the second division and the shock jolted Ruth into good behavior. Inspired by his example the Yanks climbed back into the baseball driver's seat and have set a winning record never approached by another team. Two years later in 1927, Ruth set his 60 homer star in the heavens and his own figure in American sports mythology.

We still have a penchant for hero making. Recently the New York City Council considered a resolution to establish a day of celebration for home town hero Sandy Koufax. There was debate over the wording of the resolution which described Koufax as the best pitcher in the history of baseball. The resolution wasn't passed until it was changed to read, "one of the best," leaving the door open for other heroes to follow.

And follow they will. But a word of advice to hero lovers and hero makers. Remember the apple the Babe "shouldna et."

A BIDDY LEAGUE FOOTBALL LINE MIGHT BE SMALL BUT IS TOUGH
The Eight Through 10-Year Old Boys Will Finish Up Their Grid Season Next Week

Benning Youngsters Near End of Grid Season

More than 300 Fort Benning youngsters were nearing the end of two months of action packed football this week as the Youth Activities Club (YAC) sponsored Pee Wee football season entered its final stages.

Post boys from eight to 13 years old have been participating in the play which is divided into a Biddy and an Intermediate League.

The undefeated Huskies nabbed the Intermediate League crown last week. The league is composed of boys 11 to 13 years old. The Huskies, coached by Howie Vandersea, piled up 130 points in garnering their five win, no loss record. Their opponents only managed to score 12 points all season.

Huskies vs All-Stars

The Huskies are scheduled to face the Intermediate League All-Stars in a pre-Thanksgiving game at 6 p.m. on Nov. 24 at Doughboy Stadium.

The All -Star team will be composed of the best eight players from each of the three squads that competed against the Huskies in season play.

The Golden Eagles took second place in the Intermediate League with a four win, two loss record. The Redskins finished third with a two win, four loss mark and the Mustangs finished in the cellar.

Biddy League

The Biddy League season will end next week. The league is composed of boys from eight to 10 years old. years old.

In Biddy League action last week, the Red Devils scored an 11 to 0 win against the Tigers and a 12 to 6 triumph over league - leading White Knights. The win against the Knights put the Devils into a tie for first place.

A tough Devil defense managed to hold the usually high scoring Knights to only six points. The Devil defensive unit has given up only 18 points to seven opposing teams all season.

The Devils garnered touchdowns on an end run by Rodney Walker and a Bobby Harrow pass to Roger Maldanado.

An awards ceremony will take place for both Biddy and Intermediate players prior to the Intermediate League All Star game. Col. Jess W. Walls of The Student Brigade, chairman of the football program, will make the awards.

TENNIS WINNER . . . Dave Raney of The Student Brigade won the Class A singles championship of the Main Officers Club annual fall tennis tournament last week beating runnerup Don Gunther 6-4, 6-1 in the final match. The Class A singles ended the officers club competition which began last month.

Mail Comes To Children From Santa

SCOTT AFB, Ill. (AFPS) —For the 11th consecutive year, military and civilian employees of all services can make sure their children get a real letter from Santa Claus at "Santa Claus House, North Pole."

Members of the Air Force's Air Weather Service, Detachment 1, 55th Weather Reconnaissance Squadron at Eielson AFB, Alaska, are making the Santa letter possible.

Here is the way it works. You write a letter to your child, signing it Santa Claus. Address the letter to the youngster and affix the proper return air-mail postage from Alaska.

Place the letter or letters in a large envelope and mail to Santa's Mail Bag, Care of Detachment 1, 55th Weather Reconnaissance Squadron, APO Seattle Wash. 98737.

GIs Going Overseas Must Consider Families

WASHINGTON — A disturbing number of soldiers alerted for duty in Viet Nam apparently have given too little thought to personal affairs and care of their families while they're overseas.

That's the gist of an unspecified "number of reports" funneling into the Pentagon.

As a result, the Army wants field commands to make sure that their men are prepared to move out quickly.

As a corollary of the "getting people ready campaign," the Army is finding out that soldiers don't know all they should about emergency allotments.

This is particularly true of the Class X allotment which is designed to furnish financial support of dependents under emergency conditions.

It is of special value for quick moves since the allotment is handled by the local finance office and doesn't involve the processing and time required for allotments handled by the Finance Center.

In their counseling of troops, commands are also being directed to cover the desirability of updating wills, having extra copies and making them available to dependents, power of attorney, joint bank accounts, insurance, savings, rights and benefits due dependents, military clauses in leases and selection of locations in which to settle dependents if ordered overseas.

MANAGING SENATORS

Some Turkey!

Pam Rodgers wishes you a hearty Thanksgiving. That's just about the time you'll be seeing her in American International's "Dr. Goldfoot and the Bikini Machine." Pam is a girl who likes her turkey well done and her men medium-rare. She's a redheaded eyeful who has caused many a cameraman and the Bayonet editors to "Thank Heaven for Little Girls."

Synopsis

WHEN THE BOYS MEET THE GIRLS . . . Handsome, rollicking college senior Harve Presnell is expelled from college when he shows up in the men's dormitory with a line of chorus beauties. Playboy Presnell is advised by his deceased father's board of directors to attend Cody College in back-woods Nevada, to cool off. Connie Francis, the local mailman, has a problem in the form of Phin, her gambling father. Connie, with Presnell's help turns the dairy ranch into a Dude ranch and the entire college, including a group of British pop singers, pitches in. Though the cows are gone from the ranch, Presnell takes the bull by the horns and a hell-bent for leather chase winds up at the end of the Nevada rainbow. Louis Armstrong is also featured.

HARLOW . . . Carol Lynley as Jean Harlow is spotted playing bit parts and is given a screen test. She is given a sizeable role in a feature film which makes her a star. Harlow has a feud with actor William Mansfield (Efrem Zimbalist Jr.) who thinks little of her acting. After a disappointing marriage, in which her husband commits suicide, she goes away by herself. At a welcome back party, she again meets Mansfield, who has changed his opinion of her, and they fall in love. All seems to be going well with her career in films and she plans to wed Mansfield when she is taken mortally ill and dies in his arms. Barry Sullivan and Ginger Rogers also star.

McLINTOCK . . . Tough, brawling, hard fighting John Wayne portrays a land and cattle baron who meets his match when it comes to tough-mindedness in - his own wife! His wife is played by Maureen O'Hara, who slugs it out with and for the man she loves. More trouble comes with the arrival of a band of bedraggled Indians to meet a train bearing their chiefs, just released from prison. Wayne is wild and wonderful, according to the blurbs.

Actor Must Eat Oysters on Cue In New Movie

Not only does Robinson enact a famous gambler in the new Martin Ransohoff production, co-starring Steve McQueen, Ann - Margaret, Karl Malden and Tuesday Weld, but he is also depicted as an oyster fancier. What is more, the briny delicacies came from France!

Through arrangements with a Beverly Hills restaurant, four dozen oysters packed in ice were shipped to Hollywood daily from Paris for the duration of the filming.

VOL. 24, NO. 12 | FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1965 | 48 Pages — 10c

Infantry Center Plans Staff Section Changes

Col. Lemmon Is New Deputy Chief of Staff

Col. Johnson G. Lemmon is the new deputy chief of staff of Fort Benning's Infantry Center.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Ernest J. Lansing, acting deputy chief of staff since June. Lansing is now secretary to the general staff.

Lemmon and his wife, Army Nurse Maj. Mary J. K. Lemmon, came to Fort Benning from Korea, where she was chief nurse at the 548th Dispensary while he was inspector general of Eighth U. S. Army.

Maj. Lemmon, head nurse at Martin Army Hospital's emergency room, retired Tuesday after 20 years of service.

Lemmon is the son of Col.

'G' Designations Dropped For 'Director' Titles Here

The long familiar designation G-1, G-2, G-3 and G-4 will soon be a thing of the past at The Infantry Center at Fort Benning.

The new designation is Di- and Director of Logistics. of Intelligence, Director of Operations and Training, and director of Logistics. These four, and a fifth director, the Comptroller, constitute the coordinating members of the General Staff of the Infantry Center.

By Dec. 1 signs beside doorways at the center's headquarters will no longer bear such legends as "AC of S G-4."

Members of the Center's General Staff, heretofore known as Assistant Chiefs of Staff G-1 (Personnel), G-2 (Intelligence), G-3 (Plans and Operations) and G-4 Logistics), have been renamed.

More Authority

Approved by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commander and published by the Comptroller as Infantry Center Regulation 10-1 (dated Oct. 7, 1965), the change gives more authority to the general staff.

Members of the general staff will directly supervise members of the special staff officials said, "within their primary areas of activity."

The special staff is comprised of such activities as range control, reserve components, special services, civilian personnel, data processing and the surgeon's activities.

Each such activity will operate under the supervision of its appropriate director, rather than continue merely under the administrative supervision of one of the "G's" as in the past.

No New Idea

The dropping of the "G" designation is not new. It has been an accomplished fact for some time now at Army level.

It is not planned that there will be any change in the "G" designation of the division-size unit or the "G"s" sections of the smaller units.

The new organization will permit making day-to-day technical decisions at the lowest practical level, officials said.

The added responsibility in supervision placed upon the directors is planned to relieve the chief of staff of many administrative and minor decision making tasks. By reducing the "span of control" of the Chief of Staff he will be in a position to

'No Dog' Hunt Policy Still Stands

The installation policy of hunting deer without dogs will be continued this year, according to a decision recently handed down by the Fort Benning Fish and Game Association Board of Directors.

The decision was reached following a request by some members for a change in policy and a subsequent visit by a committee from the post association to the Georgia Fish and Game Commission in Atlanta.

According to Jack A. Crockford Georgia Game Commission director, experience since 1925 shows that where dogs have been permitted, the deer population in that area has diminished rapidly.

Fort Benning's deer herd has increased very satisfactorily the past few years even though there still remains some areas where it is below the potential of the natural habitat. This growth, post officials say, is matched by an increase in the number of hunters in the area.

Any change in the present hunting policy, officials say, which would tend to decrease the herd while the number of hunters is increasing, would cause a great deal of dissatisfaction.

Viet Nam 'Lift' For Christmas Gifts Underway

Approximately 8000 pounds of Christmas packages, "A Gift of Love," from the local community, departed Lawson Army Airfield Monday enroute to Savannah, Ga., for transhipment to Viet Nam, members of the 1st Cavalry Division and Vietnamese children.

Third District Representative Howard H. (Bo) Callaway, representatives of the commanding general of Fort Benning and other local dignitaries were on hand to see the shipment off aboard a U.S. Air Force Reserve C-119 airplane.

Approximately 4000 packages of gifts were in the shipment. Boxes for the girls contained dolls, and other toys for the boys. Each package also contained a lightweight sweater, hard candy, and a bar of soap.

The gifts were gathered during various campaigns conducted in the area, and were contributed by relatives of servicemen here, the Toy Manufacturers of America, Columbus Downtown Merchants, Tom Houston Peanut Company and friends of WRBL-TV.

One of the Army's original paratroopers and a member of the first airborne battalion returned here last week to speak to airborne graduates and see his son become a paratrooper.

Brig. Gen Melvin Zais, director of enlisted personnel, at the Department of the Army, also made the final qualifying jump with his son 2nd Lt. Barrie E. Zais.

Gen. Zais once served with the 501st Parachute Battalion which was formed at Fort Benning in September 1940 and was the Army's first such unit.

Lt. Zais is a 1965 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy and of the Ranger course at The Infantry School.

The general in his address to the 700 graduates reviewed the changes in the airborne concept in the past 25 years. He urged the paratroopers to go where the action is - Vietnam."

Gen. Zais, a native of Fall River, Mass., served in the European Theater during World War II. He commanded a parachute battalion and was executive officer of a parachute combat team which later was attached to the 82nd Airborne Division.

Following World War II, he was G-3 (plans and operations officer of the 82nd before becoming an instructor and chief of the Airborne Department at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

In 1962-1963, he served in Turkey where he was advisor to a Turkish brigade which he accompanied to Korea. He next commanded the 82nd's 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, at Fort Bragg, N. C.

He then served in the Pentagon as Chief of the Doctrines and Combat Developments Division in the G-3 Section Department of the Army. When the 101st Airborne Division was organized under the Pentomic concept, he was assigned as chief of staff and then as commander of the 187th Airborne Battle Group which was the test unit for the battle group concept.

He returned to Europe where he was G-3 of the Seventh U.S. Army for three years. On his return to the U.S. he served as deputy to the J-5 (chief of the Plans Directorate), Headquarters, U.S. Strike Command, MacDill Air Force Base, Fla.

Following his promotion brigadier general on June 1, 1964, he was assigned to his present position.

Gen. Zais, a master parachutist, is a graduate of the short course and the regular course at the Command and General Staff College, the Armed Forces Staff College, the National War College, and the Advanced Management Program at the Harvard School of Business Administration.

the 357th Troop Carrier Squadron, a Reserve Unit from Brookley Field, Mobile, Ala., by Rozell Fabiani, women program director of WRBL-TV. Crews would speed the doll on the first part of her trip to Vietnam.

Wives of servicemen in the First Cavalry stationed at Fort Benning and ladies in the Columbus area have worked late at night sewing costumes for the 200 dolls.

Included in the shipment was a Christmas tree requested by a unit commander in Viet Nam for his troops.

However, the Chief of Staff will still maintain his direct access to the Special Staff Sections.

The Infantry Center Directory issued early in November, reflects the new designation of the Directors of Personnel, Intelligence, Plans and Operations, and Logistics. The next directory, to be issued Dec. 1, will embody further new designations contingent upon the title changes. For instance, the position titles within the office of a director will conform to the change.

Lemmon

(Ret.) and Mrs. Kelly B. Lemmon of Camp Hill, and the brother of Brig. Gen. Kelly B. Lemmon Jr., 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Texas.

A bachelor of philosophy graduate of Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., he entered the service in September, 1939, at Fort Omaha.

He served in the Aleutian campaign with the 7th Infantry Division during World War II. In 1942, he was a student in a battalion commander's and staff officer's course at The Infantry School.

The colonel has served overseas 10 years during a military career that has included assignments with the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky., from 1958 to 1960, as a battle group commander with the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash., from 1961 until he was named the post's chief of staff in 1964.

'Gift horse'

Insurance bill boon to soldiers

There's an old adage that says "one should not look a gift horse in the mouth."

The "gift" is involved in a recent piece of legislation of enormous significance to the U.S. armed forces — the $10,000 group life insurance plan for each of its members. True, cost is $2 per month. . .but for the coverage received. . .the small monthly deduction still makes the $10,000 insurance practically a gift.

Of course, participation in the insurance program is not required and those who wish lesser coverage ($5,000) or no coverage at all may get their wish simply by stating their desires.

Before declining such coverage, however, it would be worth the while of anyone contemplating such a move to think about what he might be "throwing away."

Whether or not he needs it at the moment, practically everyone ultimately finds a need for insurance. And, to get so much coverage at so little cost without having to undergo a physical examination is a bargain in the truest sense of the word.

Additionally, the possible difficulty of getting back into the program at a later date (since reentry requires that the applicant meet the physical standards of the participating commercial insurance companies) and the conversion privileges available upon termination of one's active duty are significant factors also worth considering.

Announcement of the recently enacted $10,000 insurance coverage was welcome news to the armed forces and undoubtedly most members of the military services are eagerly participating in the program.

For those few having second thoughts, it would be wise to remember that this is plainly and simply a "good deal" which at best would be difficult to equal anywhere.

It really isn't a good idea to "look a gift horse in the mouth! and the $10,000 life insurance now available to us surely isn't an exception to that "rule."

The legend of toothworm

DENTAL IMPRESSIONS

NATHAN GRACE — PREVENTIVE DENTISTRY OFFICER

In the annals of medical folklore, perhaps the most persistent and universal of beliefs is that of the "Toothworm."

It survives to some extent, even to this day, in some out-of-the way places.

It was thought that toothaches were caused by a demon that was identified by a worm which had to be destroyed if the pain was to be eliminated.

In short, the pain was produced by the worm gnawing at the tooth.

This theory was considered a scientific fact by many noted physicians and medical writers during the Roman period, middle ages and even as late as the 18th century.

In a Egyptian papyrus dated somewhere between 1200 - 1100 B. C., an ancient incantation refers to a worm eating the roots of the teeth and sets forth a combination of ingredients guaranteed to eliminate the culprit, one of which is beer.

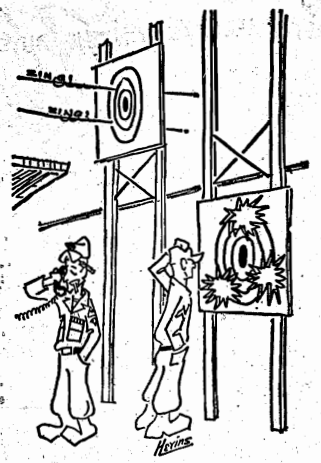
'The Point of the Spear'

"It's most cautious to most responsibilities we must continue to have a strong country and a strong alliance and a strong Free World and we do that we need a strong Army which is the point of the spear."

JOHN F. KENNEDY



"Number two has a fine shot group, but we think there's been a mistake somewhere!"

Final payday near in UG fund drive

With payday coming up Tuesday, it's time to remember that the United Givers Fund Drive is still in progress and that contributions are still needed for this vitally important annual fund campaign.

Benefiting 27 public service organizations which depend upon it for support and, in many cases, their very existence, the United Givers Fund Drive enables its member organizations to continue their outstanding work in a variety of fields.

It includes agencies which are devoted to the fight against cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, cancer and heart disease as well as organizations which work with young boys and girls in an effort to make them better citizens of our great country.

Every dollar given to the United Givers Drive is a dollar which strikes another blow against pain, hardship and deprivation. If you haven't done so already, won't you give generously to United Givers with the knowledge that your contribution will not only help alleviate suffering among our fellow men but will help our youngsters grow up to be better citizens as well.

The Judge Says . . .

"You mean to sit there and tell me that my wife can sell my car without my permission just because I gave her a general power of attorney?" "Do I need a will if I have already given my wife a power of attorney?"

These are some of the questions quite frequently asked of the Legal Assistance Officer. Therefore, it is necessary to acquaint the soldier with the scope and use of powers of attorney.

A power of attorney is an instrument authorizing a person to act as the agent or attorney of the person granting it. It is often called a letter of attorney.

There are two classifications of powers of attorney: the general and the special (or limited) power of attorney. Both of these instruments authorize one person to act for the grantor (who is the one allowing another to act for him).

The general power of attorney can be a dangerous piece of paper for the grantor if given to an irresponsible person for it authorizes that person, on behalf of the grantor, to buy, receive, lease, accept or otherwise acquire: to sell convey, mortgage...or otherwise encumber or dispose of; or to contract or agree for the acquisition, disposal, or encumbrance of; any property whatsoever and wheresoever situated, be it real, personal or mixed . . ."

This instrument also authorizes the agent of the grantor to "make or endorse checks in the name of the grantor and to make deposits or investments in or withdrawals from any account of the grantor."

However, these are not, by any means, the only authorities given by the grantor to his agent in a general power of attorney. In essence, the general power of attorney allows the agent to act for and in the name of the grantor in almost every type of transaction.

On the other hand, the special or limited power of attorney only allows the agent to handle a particular transaction for the grantor and in the special power of attorney that one transaction is specifically defined.

For example, the grantor may draw up a special power of attorney authorizing his agent to sell his car, to ship his household goods, etc. By doing this, the grantor has spelled out the limits of his agent's authority and the agent has no power to do anything else.

Third parties dealing with an agent on the basis of a written power of attorney are not prejudiced by any private instructions, either written or oral, unless such instructions are in some way referred to in the instrument.

The power of attorney is terminated by the expiration date on the instrument, by the death of the grantor or the agent, and by special notice of termination recorded in the same courthouse wherein the power of attorney was recorded (if it was recorded). Third persons who are without notice of an unrecorded revocation may be justified in presuming that the general power of attorney still exists.

It is a good practice to give a copy of the written revocation to the agent and to get him to sign a receipt for it. Also it is best to recover all unused copies of the power of attorney.

It is apparent that a will and a power of attorney are not the same thing for the power of attorney stops at the death of the grantor whereas a will only goes into effect at the death of the testator. Therefore, a person has not made a last will and testament giving all his property, for example, to his wife, when he makes out a power of attorney naming his wife as agent.

Post Office Ready For Christmas Rush Of Viet Nam Mail

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Military postal units in Viet Nam are getting ready for the Christmas mail rush by adding personnel and equipment for the holiday season, officials here say.

Although there have been some complaints about mail service to Viet Nam, postal officials here consider it "a very good service" and characterize the complaints as "minor."

They say the buildup in Viet Nam has not caused delays in mail reaching our forces there because the postal capability was considered and increased with the buildup.

Most letter mail goes to Viet Nam by commercial aircraft and the normal time from the date of mailing until it reaches the serviceman is three or four days. Regular first class mail takes a little longer than airmail because it doesn't move by air within the U.S., officials say.

Packages take from 35 to 45 days. The chief delay is caused by the fact that it takes 20 days for even the fastest ships to make the trip. A new law just signed, however, will cut this time because many packages will go by air.

The Army and Air Force Postal Service headquarters in the Pentagon says persons writing to servicemen in Viet Nam should use the following form (this is an example):

Cpl. John E. Doe, RA3200000
Co B, 1st Bn, 12th Infantry
APO San Francisco 96000.

Since military personnel frequently move and therefore acquire new addresses, the postal service says correspondents should use the last address furnished by the serviceman.

Military personnel should keep their correspondents advised of their correct address and point out mistakes correspondents make when addressing mail to them. Military personnel should also submit locator cards to the Area Postal Director, APO San Francisco 96322.

Candidates See Newest In Airmobile Techniques

Members of the 187th Pathfinder Detachment of the 197th Infantry Brigade recently demonstrated the newest in airmobile techniques to members of the 55th Company of the Officer Candidate School here at Fort Benning.

Approximately 150 officer candidate students took part in the problem which was designed to give them practical experience in the airmobile tactics presently employed by the Army.

The Pathfinder Detachment directed operations from two locations. Under the supervision of Lt. William Jones Jr., the candidates were loaded into four CH-47 Helicopters at Orion Road and conveyed to Eelbeck Strip where terminal guidance for the landing was provided by Pathfinders Lt. John Maxwell, and Sgt. Donald Fodor.

After the landing the officer candidate troops secured a number of objectives near the landing strip.

Upon completion of the maneuvers Lt. Jones, Sgt. Bernie Pye, and PFC Ronald Freeman demonstrated the mobility of a Pathfinder team when they jumped into the landing area.

According to Lt. Jones, the parachute jump was made, "to familiarize the officer candidates with a Pathfinder team's method of entry into an uncharted area.

"Normally we would make this type of entry before the maneuver but in this case we waited until afterward in order to show the candidates how we operate," he concluded.

Lebanese Officers Visit Fort Benning

Field training techniques, a visit to officer candidate classes, a tour of the Airborne Department of The Infantry School, and a trip to Fryar Field to see parachute jump training is on the itinerary for two officers from Lebanon as they visited Fort Benning Tuesday through today.

The Allied visitors are Major Francois B. Genadry, deputy commandant of the Lebanon Military Academy, and Major Fawzi I. Khatib, G-3 (Plans and Operations), deputy chief of staff for military operations, Lebanon.

Wednesday morning they met with Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School before they started on their tour of the school.

Gen Truman Sees Supply at Work

By SAM RUSH

There aren't many supply requisitions that have their processing tracks dogged by a three - star general but a morning with a Fort Benning requisition slip recently showed the Third Army commander the inside workings of the post supply system.

To get a first hand look at requisition processing, Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman followed a supply request through the pipeline from the time it was prepared and submitted at the unit level until the transaction was completed.

Without supplies and equipment an Army is useless. The how and when and where this material is obtained are important to an Army commander and Gen. Truman wanted to see personally how the supply system operates at Fort Benning.

During the past fiscal year Fort Benning supply personnel processed approximately 824,000 line items, and the purchasing and contracting branch procured about 105,000 items through local purchase procedures.

Dollar Value

Total dollar value of these transactions processed by some 850 individuals was approximately $198 million, representing supply receipt of $96 million and issues of $102 million.

Following a briefing on the organization of the consolidated supply system and on the over-all picture of its flow process, Gen. Truman began his travel with a requisition slip at the 505th Truck Company, commanded by 1st Lt. Albert H. Cote, Jr., of (1 Washington Ave.) Morristown, N. J., where the request for two supply items was initiated.

On a 3 by 7-inch punch card, the request went to the Edit Branch, where it was processed before going to the Key-Punch Section for preparation of a transaction card.

This transaction card later became the document that provided the proper coding for costing and updating inventory records in the Data Processing Section.

Then at the Posting Branch, Gen. Truman saw the card reviewed against the balance of supply on hand, and if the stock was available, the posting clerks marked the transaction card to show the quantity to be issued.

Goods Issued

When the request got to the Storage Division, a warehouseman pulled the item from the bins and issued the goods to the requesting unit.

This, Gen. Truman learned is the normal flow processing where stock is available in the station inventory. When it is not on hand, instead of marking the quantity issued, the transaction card is coded to reflect the quantity due out to the unit.

The original request is then forwarded to the Procurement Branch where a requisition number is assigned and the required delivery date is entered on the issue document.

This document is then forwarded to the Key-Punch Branch for preparation of a requisition and subsequent transmission to the appropriate depot through a transceiver hook-up.

While the character of military supply has varied with the changing technology of warfare, it has always had the basic aim of providing military forces the essential materiel that keep them alive, let them operate their vehicles, and give them the power to fire their weapons of combat.

A requisition slip, accompanied by a three-star general or not, goes a long way in accomplishing this mission.

CARD ENTRY . . . Gen. Truman watches a civilian employee prepare to post an entry to a stock record card at the supply control and storage center. Mrs. Lyla M. Williams does the posting.

AUTOMATIC PROCESSING . . . The system of automatic data processing of supply records is explained to Gen. Truman by Mrs. Zella W. Bowling, supervisor of the machine room.

PACKAGED ITEMS . . . Gen. Truman, right, commander of Third U. S. Army, inspects supply items, in the issue warehouse, packaged for release to troop units at Fort Benning. Maj. Joseph L. McCoy, chief of the Supply Control and Storage Section is at right.

FINAL STOP—THE STORAGE BIN . . . Inspecting the supply storage bin area, Gen. Truman, left, could have picked up the requisitioned part if it were in stock. James F. Loudermilk, right, storage officer supply control and storage section, explains the operating procedure to the general.

Nov. 28 Set for Homage To Viet Nam's Defenders

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — President Johnson has proclaimed Sunday, Nov. 28 as a "day of dedication and prayer" honoring the men and women of the Republic of Viet Nam, the United States and all other countries who are risking their lives to bring about a just peace there.

The President re-emphasized that the United States "remains ready without condition for the international discussions that can lead to lasting peace."

President Johnson explained the purpose of the United States in Viet Nam is to help open the way for social justice in place of unprovoked aggression and peace instead of war.

"There can be no social justice or economic progress without security from external attack and from terror in the night," he said.

The proclamation noted that in assisting the people of Viet Nam to resist unprovoked aggression, "the United States and other nations are carrying on the honored tradition of defending a people's right to freedom."

Nov. 28 was set as a national day of rememberance, "dedicated to those Americans who are committing their lives, blood and energies in the defense of the world peace."

Grueling Test Course Checks Army Vehicle

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. (ANF)—General purpose vehicles likely to find their way into future Army inventories will be a tougher, more agile lot than their predecessors.

They'll have to be—to meet the basic specifications for engineering and service tests prescribed by the U.S. Army Test and Evaluation Command for tomorrow's military transport.

Test vehicles going through the TECOM mill follow a grueling punishing course. During their ordeal, they are subjected to more than the average wear-and-tear they might expect to encounter in a normal lifetime with troops in the field.

The trials are conducted at a network of proving grounds and test installations spanning the cold of the Arctic, the arid wastelands of deserts and the steaming Panamanian jungles.

Representative of the nimble-footed breed in the offing is the XM-656, prototype of the vehicle expected to replace the five - ton cargo truck.

Designed and built by the Ford Motor Company, it features an eight-wheel drive, power steering, power brakes, a multi-fuel power plant, six-speed transmission and a built-in swimming capability.

The XM-656 underwent tests under simulated combat conditions in Alaska during Exercise Polar Strike and was put through its paces in the tropics at Fort Clayton, Canal Zone.

It also performed at Fort Lee, Va.; at the Artillery Board, Ft. Sill, Okla.; the Infantry Board, Ft. Benning, Ga.; and the Armor Board, Ft. Knox, Ky.

Prior to the construction of the prototypes, a test rig of the same vehicle completed 40,000 miles in durability tests at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

It's all designed to insure that the finest fighting men in the world have the best possible equipment—adding up to Army readiness—the optimum of personnel, materiel and unit readiness.

Appliances Help Us Live Better

Today there are over 166 electric appliances helping the American family live better electrically. Believe it or not, such things as electric birdbath warmers and cradle rockers do exist!

You can also have an electric back scratcher or foot warmer, depending on your need of the moment.

Even Fido comes into his own with electic dog clippers and electrically heated dog houses. And fishermen and their wives will welcome the electric fish scaler.

Most of the 166 products are in fairly common unsage and the list keeps growing. Ten years ago, who would have thought of the electric toothbrush, pencil sharpener, floor washer or can opener?

Cav Pilot Teaches English To Children in Spare Time

By HANK ALLISON

AN KHE, Viet Nam — An Army captain has become part-time schoolmaster to children in this central highlands village.

Capt. Warren E. Mullen of the 1st Air Cavalry Division is teaching Vietnamese children to speak English at the request of their regular teacher.

Mr. Jean Grand, teacher, principal and administrator of the 33-pupil school, felt an American would be able to help his students learn correct English pronunciation.

Grand's wife washes soldier's fatigues to supplement his $25.00 a month teacher's salary. When the unsuspecting captain entered the schoolyard with an armload of laundry, Grand asked him if he would teach the children to pronounce a few words.

"A Lot of Words"

Since that day, only a few weeks ago, Mullen has taught the children to pronounce a lot of words.

"I didn't know if he would want anything to do with us," said Grand, "but I could not see any harm in asking."

Mullen, a platoon leader in the cavalry divison's 20th Aerial Rocket Artillery said he was glad to help and has been coming back twice a day ever since, except when he's called to fly against the Viet Cong.

Grand, a North Vietnamese refugee, fled to South Viet Nam in 1954 after the Geneva agreement of that year ended the Indochina War.

He educated himself by studying borrowed books and he now teaches chemistry, mathematics and English.

Most Are Boys

Grand said most of the students are boys. Vietnamese girls, he says, must stay home to help with domestic chores.

"The people of this area are very poor," said Grand, "many do not have the money to send their children to the school."

Tuition, which buys books and pays Grand's salary, is 150 piastres (about $1.20) per month for each student.

Mullen, whose wife Patricia and four children are living in Santa Rosa, Calif while he is in Viet Nam, is expecting a package from home with crayons, coloring books and reading primers.

"I just like kids," said Mullen, "and these are eager to learn."

Some of the men in Mullen's battalion with farming experience are preparing to help villagers learn better ways to raise cattle and crops.

"When these farm boys get out there," said Mullen, "everyone will learn a lot."

Special Shovel Used to Start New Club Pool

Ground has been broken for a new $250,000 enlisted men's swimming pool behind Fort Benning's Kelley Hill Service Club.

Manning a specially constructed three-handle shovel for the informal ceremony were Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander; Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr., commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade; and Maj. Charles B. Badgett of The Infantry Center Special Services Section.

The pool, which is scheduled for completion next spring, will be 75 by 165 feet with 4,538 feet of bathhouse space. There will be a 10-foot sunbathing area on the east side and also a picnic area.

COURT NOT IMPRESSED

CUNEO, Italy (AP) — Vando Pasotti was sentenced to eight months recently for stealing the rear view mirror from a truck in a junkyard. He told the court he came here looking for work but needed the mirror for shaving so he could make a better impression in applying for a job.

Industry, Education and Government Join Forces

A continuing program to place Job Corps graduates in jobs gets under way this month with the combined efforts of business, industry, education and government.

The first young men are completing their training in the unique residential - educational centers set up by Job Corps, a major youth program in the President's War on Poverty.

The men's and women's urban Job Corps centers are operated under contract by major corporations, leading universities and colleges, and state agencies. This unique combination of training skills provides the assurance of a well-trained graduate.

The rate of graduations will increase rapidly until the Spring of 1966 when it is estimated that 5,000 young men and women will be graduating from centers each month.

When these young men and women graduate they will have the work skill training which will fit them for many occupations in which there is a present and foreseeable need. The Job Corps training also provides basic education and the development of proper work habits and attitudes.

Early graduates from Job Corps centers have been placed in such occupations as retail sales, welding, office and clerical work, food service and preparation, machine shop, auto and small appliance repair.

These graduates have demonstrated their value to their new employers and it is anticipated that this source of trained employees will be a welcome addition to the American work forces.

Regional meetings of business and industry leaders have been scheduled this month — the West Coast and Rocky Mountain states at the Parks Job Corps Center at Pleasanton, California on November 3; the Eastern states at the Rodman Job Corps Center at New Bedford, Massachusetts on November 5, and the Middle Western states at the Custer Job Corps Center at Battle Creek, Michigan on November 12.

The Parks Center is operated by Litton Industries, Inc.; Custer by U. S. Industries, and Rodman by IBM's Science Research Associates. Other business firms involved in operating Job Corps centers are ITT's Federal Electric Corporation, Ford Motor Company's Philco Corporation, Packard Bell Electronics, Burroughs Corporation, Xerox and Westinghouse Air Brake.

American businessmen will receive information about the availability of Job Corps graduates by direct mail, through local and regional business and industry councils, and by various American business leaders.

Nearly 14,000 young men and women now are in training in Job Corps centers. In addition to the eight men's urban training centers and the five women's centers now in operation, Job Corps also operates 54 conservation centers, where young men are receiving basic education and work skill training through doing long-needed conservation work. Additional centers will open during the coming months.

Division Using M-22 Missiles in Combat

AN KHE, Viet Nam — As the U. S. Army wades deeper into the support of the Viet Nam struggle, new weapons are used to fight this war of guerrillas.

One weapon adaped for use in Viet Nam is the M-22 missile which was fired for the first time in combat by the 1st Air Cav. Division.

Basically designed as an anti-tank weapon, the M-22 is a wire guided missile which, according to Maj. Morris J. Brady, executive officer of the 2nd Battalion, 20th Aerial Artillery, "will be used against the tough targets, that is, bunkers, roadblocks and caves, against which our 2.75-inch rockets are inadequate."

The M-22 is a transistorized version of the better known SS-11 missile originally used by the French.

The squatty M-22 more closely resembles a bomb than a missile but its rocket motor can propel it at speeds up to 420 miles per hour.

The warhead of the M - 22 is a shaped charge capable of penetrating 17 inches of armor plate or any known tank.

The missile is guided by a special sight and a stick similar to an airplane control which the pilot moves to the right or left, forward or backwards. The stick movements are transmitted to the missile through a thin wire, 3300 meters long, coming out of a spool at the end of the rocket.

Davision officials have said that the M-22 is ideally suited for the stable and highly maneuverable platform offered by the helicopter and an ideal weapon for the new air-mobile 1st Cav. Division.

At present, the 2nd Battalion, 20th Artillery, the Army's only aerial rocket battalion, has three UH-1B helicopters armed with the new missile and claims the capability of putting in the air 12 such ships whenever needed.

Senator Sees Prospects 'Good' for New GI Bill

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON— The chief backer of a GI Bill for "peacetime" veterans predicted this week that if the House of Representatives gets to vote on a GI Bill next year it will win by a four-to-one vote.

Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D., Tex.), who this year won Senate approval of his bill to help veterans get to college, made the prediction in a Veterans' Day statement.

In his statement, Yarborough pointed out that Congress passed a substantial number of proposals this year to help Americans improve their education.

These include the Higher Education Act, which provides the first federal scholarships in the nation's history. Some 130,000 students will get scholarships ranging rom $200 to $1000 per year, depending on academic ability and financial need.

The bill also provides federal insurance of loans to students. Under this plan, the government pays the interest on loans made by private lenders while the student is in school. After graduation, the government will pay one-half of the interest up to three percent.

Other new laws provide money for retraining, vocational schooling and for new libraries and laboratories.

Yarborough's GI Bill was approved by the Senate by a four-to-one vote. It now rests in the House Veterans Committee.

Range Device Counts Hits On Targets

FORT GORDON, Ga. (ANF) — Conferees at the Army Training Center's Commanders' Conference here got a look at some new wrinkles in rifle marksmanship training which use automatic devices to pop up targets for the proper length of time and then record the hits scored.

The "Basic Rifle Marksmanship (Trainfire) Range Programmer" allows a range officer to preset any combination of trainfire targets; proper target activation and exposure time are automatic, as is a cease-fire horn which sounds if no hits are scored.

The "Hit Count Printer" eliminates the need for scorers in the pits of known-distance ranges. Electronically recording each hit scored on a target, the device stores this information until the firer completes the exercise. Then it records the score onto a data punch card.

FOLLOW NOSES

SYRACUSE, Sicily (AP) — The police used their noses to recover the loot in a warehouse robbery recently. Nearly 1,000 pounds of stolen coffee was found hidden under a pile of dry leaves in an olive orchard after the aroma led the police to the cache.

Coast Guard Work Load Heavy in Cuban Exodus

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — U. S. Coast Guard officials report heavy traffic in the Florida Straits handling the influx of Cuban refugees to this country in Operation Exodus.

For weeks the Coast Guard cutter Diligence has been working with other Coast Guard air and sea units assisting boats in distress. Many small craft are arriving in Florida and increased traffic is noted going the other way to pick up refugees.

Coast Guard patrols have been operating in the Straits for several years, mostly to prevent anti-Castro raids against the Cuban mainland.

Incoming traffic since the Castro takeover, however, numbers more than 100,000 refugees to this country according to a Coast Guard official.

Typical activities during the current operation include supplying fuel and provisions to small craft in distress. The occupant of one incoming boat receiving Coast Guard assistance pounded on his boat's hull shouting "Viva Johnson."

Some of the boats are poorly provisioned, an official said, citing examples where occupants subsisted for many days on sugar and water while adrift before the Coast Guard found and rescued them.

Incoming refugees are taken into the Coast Guard Receiving Center at Key West, Fla. They are given shots by the Public Health Service and interrogated by the Immigration and Naturalization and the Customs Service.

Army Chorus Builds Friendship in Europe

STUTTGART, Germany (ANF) — "The Red Coats Are Coming!" The cry which gained renown in the Revolutionary War has taken on new meaning for U. S. Army soldiers and European civilians. The point of references is the "red-coated" singers of the Seventh Army Soldiers Chorus.

The 40 Goodwill Ambassadors have been winning friends and entertaining people for the past three years — singing to soldier and civilian audiences in Germany and France. A new pinnacle was reached in October when the soldier-singers crossed the Alps into Italy — another step towards fulfilling their aim of entertaining troops wherever they are stationed.

Since the end of World War II, Seventh Army — now commanded by Lt. Gen. William W. Quinn — has been working closely with local citizens to further mutual goodwill. The harmony which is the keynote of the Chorus' performances blends with the Seventh Army's program.

Raising their voices in a variety of songs—show tunes, spirituals, traditional military numbers, popular standards, and international folk songs—the Chorus literally builds "friendship through music." It is the belief of the singing-soldiers' director, 1st Lt. Carl W. Bond, that music can create a type of understanding that arms and force can never achieve.

Work Improvement Suggestions Now Bring Higher Cash Awards

Military personnel will soon be eligible for cash awards as high as $25,000 for work improvement suggestions, Fort Benning officials have announced.

A change in the Incentive Award Program, affected by a bill recently signed by the President, not only increases the amount a military man can receive for an approved suggestion but makes it possible for officers as well as enlisted men to participate.

No awards can be made under the new plan until Change 4 to Army Regulation AR672-301 comes out sometime within the next 30 days. Post officials said that information received from Third U. S. Army indicates that suggestions made by military personnel since Sept. 22, will be considered for the higher awards authorized by the change.

Under previous regulations, an enlisted man could receive an award of $15 to $75 at the Fort Benning level, according to Frank Spear who is in charge of the Incentive Awards Program on the post, and another $100 if his suggestion was rated best in a quarter at Third Army level.

The new schedule of awards, expected to give the program "a shot in the arm," allows either an officer or an enlisted man to get up to $25,000 for a suggestion, Spear said.

"If our Incentive Awards Committee assigns a cash value on a man's suggestion any where up to $1,000, his awards can be approved at the Fort Benning level," Spear added.

If the suggestion is of such value that the award assigned is greater than $1,000, he continued, any part of it between $1,000 and $1,500 must be approved at Third Army level, from $1,500 to $5,000 by the Department of the Army, and from $5,000 to $25,000 by the Department of Defense.

Spear said the Incentive Award at Fort Benning has been "looking forward to this for 10 years."

More information of the new regulations will be available in the near future, Spear said.

Scout Meet To Be Held At Benning

One of the high points of post scouting activity will take place Dec. 3-5 in the form of the Fort Benning Boy Scout District Camporee at the reservists' summer encampment area near Camp Pine Knot.

The event will start at 3:30 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 3 with in-processing. Saturday will feature patrol competition, troop demonstrations and a district campfire in the evening.

Church services and presentation of awards will highlight Sunday's activities which will end the camporee at about 2 p.m.

More than 100 boys from Fort Benning Boy Scout troops are expected to attend Maj. Lemual Thomas of Lawson Army Aviation Command is project officer for the event.

Competition during the camporee will be geared toward the Top Patrol of the District award. Judging will be continuous throughout the two days of activity, officials pointed out.

Adults are invited and encouraged to view the troop demonstrations from 2 to 4 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 4. Signs will mark the route to the encampment area according to Boy Scout spokesmen.

The camporee is part of the continuing program afforded boys involved in scouting, a spokesman added.

ATC's Hanks Speaks At NCO Graduation

Hanks discussed the importance of the training job and the challenge of being a drill sergeant.

A number of the graduating drill sergeants will be assigned to Fort Benning's Training Center, officials said.

Army Heritage

US Soldier Has Played Major Role in Preserving Freedom Through 190 Years of Army's History

The war that rages now in Viet Nam marks the 13th major war that the United States Army has engaged in in its 190-year history.

The first American Army, the small Continental Army, was first formed in 1775 and consisted of several infantry companies, 1200 men, who followed George Washington to its first major battle, the Battle of Bunker Hill, in June of 1775.

Six years later the Continental Army had engaged in 11 campaigns of the Revolutionary War and had won independence for America.

Following the Revolutionary War, the Army was disbanded and by 1784 it had shrunk to about 100 officers and enlisted men. But in 1812 the United States was at war again and patriotic Americans were called upon once more to join the Army and fight the British.

Permanent Army

The War of 1812 lasted three years and demonstrated the country's need for a permanent Army that could be reinforced by a militia and volunteer forces. In 1815 and 1816 laws were passed that set up a Regular Army, National Guard and Army Reserve.

The Mexican War of 1846-47 proved the necessity of the Army once more. Ten major campaigns were fought in the war and once it was over our Army effectively performed its first large-scale mission of occupation and military government.

Less than 20 years after the Mexican War the Army divided and soldiers were fighting men they had fought side by side with before.

The Civil War was the largest the American soldiers had ever fought in. More than two and one half million men bore arms for the Union side alone, fighting 25 major campaigns in four years of bloody battle and finally preserving the Union.

But even before the War Between the States a war was going on in the Western part of the country that was to last 100 years. The Indian tribes, in an effort to protect their lands, waged battle after battle against the "white eyes". The last campaign was fought against the Pine Ridge Tribe in January, 1891.

War With Spain

In June, 1898, the Army landed in Cuba to fight Spain marking the first time an American soldier went into battle to protect the rights of a foreign people. Two months later they left Cuba as the victors and Cuba, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Philippine Islands were free of Spanish domination.

Less than a year after the War with Spain, American troops again were engaged in battle, this time in the Philippines against Philipinos who were oppossed to the passing of their islands into American possession.

The Philippine Insurrection lasted until 1913 and while it was still being fought, Army units from the islands were sent to China to protect Americans against the Boxer rebellion.

One short campaign was fought by the Army between the Philippine Insurrection and World War I. From March 1916 to Feb. 1917 American Army units trampled through Mexico in search of bandit Pancho Villa. The action helped to stabilize the U. S. relations with Mexico.

On April 6, 1917, Congress declared war against the Central Powers (Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria). Our Army's strength at the time was about 200,000. In the greatest mobilization our country had seen up to that time, four and one half million men eventually served in the wartime Army.

Following World War I, the wartime force was rapidly demobilized. In 1920 the National Defense Act established the peactime strength of the Regular Army at 175,000.

During the 1920s and 1930s the Army steadily improved its organization, its training and schools system, and its facilities for planning and management. When war again came to Europe in Sept. 1939, the Army had a workable nucleus for the necessary expansion to emergency strength.

In Dec. 1941, a Japanese attack of our naval base at Pearl Harbor brought us into World War II. In this war the enemy was not in a single country or region, but rather on several continents far from our shores. Americans were required to perform combat and related duties under almost every known condition of climate and terrain.

Army's Behind the Scenes Work Important Part of Space Program

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The U. S. space program's upcoming twin - launching of the GEMINI 6 and 7 orbital flights and the long - awaited rendezvous in space will mark a major step in the Army's behind - the - scenes contribution to our race for the stars.

Since the first United States satellite roared into orbit in 1958 and the first radar contact was made with the moon, the Army has been sharing its skills and facilities with our space scientists. Army experts have been working in dozens of fields such as personnel, construction, transportation, planning, material resources, and research.

In recent months, the Army has conducted a global study of emergency landing areas for both the GEMINI and APOLLO programs, taken part in after-splash-down recovery missions for MERCURY and GEMINI space shots, and provided hospital and medical personnel at key locations during each launching.

During FY 1965, Army officers, enlisted men, and civilian personnel filled 1,800 positions in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), while the Army Corps of Engineers supplied $307-million-worth of construction work.

The astronauts' silvery space suits, symbols of our space pioneers, have been developed and tested at the U. S. Army's Natick, Mass., Laboratories. Special suits for the space vehicle service personnel have also been created at Natick; used in environmental test chambers and areas of extreme cold, they will protect a man from rapid temperature changes between 250 degrees Fahrenheit and minus 90 degrees.

Tasty meals and snacks for the long, tiring trips through space are other Natick specialties. Specially preserved and packaged, they are crumb - free and highly nutritive.

In addition to studies of lunar mobility and base development requirements, future Army space projects also include helicopter transportation for APOLLO spacecraft Lunar Excursion Module Adapters. The adapters are extremely delicate, yet cumbersome to handle; manufactured in limited quantities, they are worth about one million dollars each.

Moose-Car Wrecks Cause Headaches

Moose - automobile accidents have become a serious problem at Fort Richardson, Alaska. There have been over five hundred such collisions in the past five years.

To solve the problem, the post game management agent has adopted a device with two mirrors mounted on a pole at right angles to each other and set at a forty-five degree angle to the road. Automobile lights strike the mirrors and are reflected into the forest.

The theory is that the moose will stop to stare at the lights in the forest instead of rushing at the approaching car.

Regulation Change Makes Civil School Entry Harder

WASHINGTON — Mental standards have been tightened for enlisted applicants for civil schooling in Change 1 to AR 350-200.

Statements from Army officials that too many enlisted applicants for assignment to civilian schools, colleges and universities are not qualified academically are now being borne out by this tightening.

A new requirement added to the regulation is subparagraph 8.c. (12) says that applicants for training must have a standard score in aptitude area GT on the AFQT of 120 or higher.

The changes to the regulation also make clear that the Army will not depend solely on voluntary applications for training to fill its quota. This does not mean that the Army will order individuals to school against their will.

"Although interested officers and enlisted men may apply for civil schooling. . . nothing in this regulation should be construed to prohibit officer career branches or the Enlisted Personnel Directorate from inviting applications," the change says.

Attending school will continue to be voluntary. But the Army may take the initiative in recruiting highly qualified members of the Army for school.

GOD'S STRONGMAN HERE TOMORROW
Paul Anderson Will Speak at Rally

Champion Weight Lifter to Appear At Post Gym Religious Rally Tomorrow

The world's strongest man will make an appearance in an Army Training Center gym tomorrow night, not at an athletic affair but at a church service.

Paul Anderson, well known champion weight lifter and "the world's strongest man" will appear tomorrow evening at the Kimbro Gymnasium to speak and demonstrate his amazing strength at a protestant rally service to be held at 7:30.

Anderson, who has lifted more weight than any other man in history—6,270 lbs in a back lift — makes a great deal of appearances at religious affairs. Last year he appeared at Fort Benning for a retreat service held in the 2nd Division.

The strong man is interested in religion and particularly in helping young people. Aside from his tours and appearances as a weight lifter, Anderson has founded and operates a foster home for teenagers in Vidalia, Ga. Assisted by his wife, Glenda, he endeavors to develop good citizens through spiritual guidance, education and physical fitness.

Anderson is also a certified lay teacher.

He holds national, world and Olympic weight lifting titles.

Post OCS Expansion Program One Phase of Troop Buildup

The first candidates have now entered Fort Benning's Officer Candidate School under the new expansion program that will increase the school's officer output by about 2,000 new second lieutenants per year and help cut down the shortage of officers needed because of the Viet Nam war.

Young lieutenants are not all that is needed in the current troop buildup going on throughout the Army, according to the December issue of the Army Personnel Letter.

"With the buildup in Viet Nam, additional forces will be needed," the letter said. "Like the other services, the Army must provide its share of these additional forces. Voluntary enlistments have been stepped up and the Army receives the lion's share of individuals from the increased draft call."

The letter went on to say that because of the expansion of the Army, captains and lieutenants are needed in almost all branches.

Several programs have been started to supply the Army with more company grade officers, the OCS expansion being one, the letter explained.

Other programs designed to fill the needs include the concurrent call to active duty of qualified civilians, warrant officers and enlisted persons of all components of the Army and the easing up of age limitations for officers being recalled to active duty.

The Army has stated that for those officers wishing to be called back to active duty, maximum age limitations may be waived for one year for 1st lieutenants and up to two years for captains.

"In addition," the letter said, "captains with dates of rank earlier than Dec. 31, 1962 may be called back to active duty and selected majors with outstanding records of service may apply and if accepted for recall will be assigned to fill existing major vaconcies in some branches."

The letter urged those persons wishing to apply for direct commissions or for recall to contact any army headquarters, corps headquarters, training center, reception station or recruiting station for additional information assistance in preparation of applications.

Warrant officers and enlisted personnel serving on active duty who currently hold reserve commissions and who are interested in applying for recall to active duty should contact their unit commanders.

MARKSMANSHIP TRAINING . . . SFC Thomas M. Blas, instructor with the marksmanship committee, shows men of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, USATC the proper firing techniques using the M-14 rifle. The course of instruction is at Malone Range.

Preparation of Rifle Firing Ranges Problem Met by Training Center

Among the problems encountered when the U. S. Army Training Center was put in operation, was the preparation of ranges in the Sand Hill area for use in basic marksmanship training.

Capt. Earnest Neumann, chief of the marksmanship committee was given the mission of preparing these ranges for use no later than Nov. 1.

It was found that many of the ranges, out of operation in many cases well over one year, were over grown with vegetation, some with sections washed out in heavy rains, and in one case a range had to be revamped from a known distance to a field firing range.

After surveying the situation Newmann arranged to send a part of his newly assigned personnel to Fort Jackson to learn and observe range firing techniques there. After a short stay, the men returned to Fort Benning and immediately started the task of bringing Training Center's ranges back into a state of readiness.

The 14 officers and 48 enlisted men assigned to the marksmanship committee literally worked with hand tools to smooth out and erase choking vegetation from the long - unused ranges. According to Neumann his people worked long, hard hours, seven days a week in order to meet the operational deadline.

A number of training aids also had to be constructed. They constructed wooden replicas of the ranges. They are used in the first phases of training.

On Nov. 1, the ranges were ready for use. Approximately 2,500 recruits receive daily training on 11 operational ranges. This training begins with an orientation on the history of the present basic marksmanship program and progresses to introductions to the 25 meter range, the field firing range, record firing range and the target detection period.

Neumann added that without the cooperation and hard work of his committee, things would not be running as smoothly as they are today.

Mess Hall Suggestions Win Contest

Winners of a contest which called for ideas on how to redecorate the 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command mess hall were presented with Savings Bonds for their efforts.

1st Lt. Paul Hric of Company B and PFC Samuel A. McFarland were each presented with $50 bonds for their suggestions for redecoration.

Among the parts of the mess hall the two men suggested needed changes were the lighting, drapery, floor design and ceiling tiles. New table centerpieces and redesigned chair covers were also among suggested changes.

The contest, which was open to all personnel of the 1st Battalion, was judged by the battalion commander, sergeant major, mess steward, mess officer and one E4 or below from each company.

The contest was originated by MSgt Bob Mylott, 1st Battalion S-2 NCOIC, after hearing several complaints about the [illegible] among members of the battalion.

Mental Illness Affects 10 Per Cent of Nation

Ten per cent of our nation's population is suffering from a mental or emotional disorder and each year over half a million people are admitted for the first time in mental hospitals and psychiatric wards of general hospitals for psychiatric treatment.

The astounding facts were stated in a recent interview with Dr. Leslie S. Williams, president of the Muscogee Mental Health Association.

The association is one of the twenty - seven local agencies which receive dollars from the United Givers Fund Drive currently in its sixth week on post.

Dr. Williams said, "The greatest health problem in our nation continues to be that of mental illness, with its resultant staggering losses of human and financial resources to the family, community and nation.

"The Muscogee Mental Health Association is attempting to acquaint our local community with this problem and to help everyone in this area to accept mental illness with the same attitude that physical illness is accepted.

"We are trying to persuade people to seek help in the early states of mental illness to increase the likelihood of its being helped," said Dr. Williams.

The Muscogee Mental Health Association is active with several special projects.

Annually, they arrange for high school students to visit the Milledgeville State Hospital. The Association also publishes a Directory of Public Mental Health Resources Available to Citizens of Muscogee County, Georgia, and provides hymn books for use in the chapels at the Milledgeville State Hospital.

Jump Pay Considered for Soldiers Unable to Fill Requirements

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Stirred by the pay problems of paratroopers in Viet Nam, Pentagon officials are working on a legislative proposal which would allow men qualified for hazardous duties to draw their extra pay without actually making jumps, flying planes or doing similar risky jobs.

In Viet Nam, U. S. paratroopers are in combat; but because of shortages of airplanes, their missions, time and other factors, they are unable to make their required jumps. The new proposal sponsored by the Army would let them continue drawing their jump pay each month.

Under present rules, the troopers may have to forego their jump pay for months until they can make qualifying jumps and then they are paid retroactively.

Morale Problem

The Army feels it is a serious morale problem when qualified jumpers in combat have their pay delayed through no fault of their own. The Army wants the money to keep coming in monthly, whether or not the men actually jump.

Fliers who are unable to fly because they are in remote overseas assignments where regular flying is impractical are already protected by an annually - approved rider on the Defense Appropriations Act.

The Air Force and Navy are reported to be going along with the Army in its quest for permanent legislation to cover all forms of hazardous duty.

Basically the new proposal would remove actual performance of the hazardous duty as a qualification for drawing the pay if a man is compelled by military necessity not to participate in the hazardous duty. The new measure simply does away with the requirement for performance of the duty before drawing the money.

Regular Jumps

The troopers involved would be able to qualify in the usual way if they were in the states where there are plenty of planes to jump from and where qualifying jumps can be scheduled regularly. Paratroopers now are required to make at least four jumps a year to keep drawing the money.

The proposal is expected to get Defense Department approval but then it must get Bureau of the Budget, Administration and Congressional approval. No extra costs are expected to rise out of the measure if it is passed by Congress since the men would have been paid retroactively when they were finally able to make the required jumps or flights.

If the Administration gives its approval, the measure could go to Congress early in the new session which starts in January.

Back From Obsolescence

'Old' Antiaircraft Guns May Return to Action

A phased out antiaircraft gun like the two presently in the hands of the 10th Artillery of the 197th Brigade may get the nod from the Army to come back into active service.

The M-42, 40mm, twin-mount, self-propelled antiaircraft gun was phased out of the active Army. It was the last time that the ground Army had an organic air defense capability.

Now the gun is being considered for return to active duty as a part of a composite forward area air defense battalion.

The study of the weapon and the air defense concept is presently going on at Fort Bliss, Texas.

The M-42 "duster", as it was known in its hey-day, is being considered in the Fort Bliss study for combination with the Chaparral missile, a ground to air version of the Air Force's "Sidewinder."

The gun is deadly against low flying aircraft and its flat trajectory makes it a valuable aid in support of front line elements.

The "duster" is capable of engaging moderate speed aircraft at a range of 1,640 meters and it has a range of 5,000 meters against surface targets. The gun can track a target as much as 40 degrees per second.

The "duster" is remembered by veterans of Korea not so much as an antiaircraft weapon but as an effective means of checking the communist "human wave" assaults.

The 40mm is also particularly effective against ground troops caught up in thick woods or underbrush.

It is capable of firing while on the move and can be employed as a substitute assault vehicle against lightly armed troops.

The M-42 has a cruising range of 100 miles at speeds up to 45 miles per hour. Its fording depth is listed at 40 inches and its calculated weight at 24 tons.

Targets Shoot Back

The soldier was a little slow in engaging the aggressor that popped up to his right front and he immediately felt a stinging sensation on his right arm.

The firer had just lost his match with a well trained simulated aggressor who fires with deadly accuracy when advancing soldiers, or their weapons fail to respond with equal or greater speed and accuracy.

This was an experiment-it could have been the real thing, as many of our troops in Viet Nam will attest.

The recent action took place on Wallis Range at Fort Benning where the United States Army Infantry Board in conjunction with the Human Engineering Laboratories, tested various type small arms to determine with which weapon the soldiers could fire the quickest under stress with the greatest degree of reliability.

The aggressor silhouettes were connected to a pellet gun which fired at the soldier provided individual targets were not engaged and hit within two seconds from the time they were presented. If the silhouette was hit, the pellet gun was deactivated until the next silhouette appeared.

To protect vital parts of the body, to include the face and eyes, the soldiers wore protective masks and other protective equipment. There were no injuries incurred in the experiment; however, a number of welts and "bee sting" type wounds were noted on the "slower" firers' arms and legs.

The experiment was very successful and provided considerable vital information according to Board officials.

The men conducting the experiment praised the efforts of the firers from the 197th Infantry Brigade who entered into the experiment with enthusiasm and a keen spirit of competition.

From the Career Counselor

Common Complaint Has No Basis

One fairly common complaint of the younger soldier is that the Army offers less personal freedom than civilian life. Older soldiers feel just the opposite.

Since there are various kinds of freedom, and differences of opinion regarding the same, it should be fine for the sake of argument.

To condense Webster's lengthy definition as much as possible, one can say simply that freedom is the absence of restraint.

Some first-termers claim that one freedom advantage of civilian life over the Army is that a civilian can always tell the boss off and-or quit his job without fear of breaking a law.

To an extent this is certainly true. But it would seem foolhardy to say that the average civilian is free to do so when he pleases, for there are many restraining factors such as eating regularly; making payments on the house, car, furniture; keeping shoes on the kiddies and insuring one's earning power by preserving a good business reputation and job seniority.

Finding a new job might be easy but this much is certain: good jobs usually require seniority and are definitely not available to "job - hoppers."

In the soldier's case it is true that he cannot quit until the end of his hitch, but he does have what I feel are infinitely more profitable alternatives than sacrificing invested time or logistics or unreconcilable differences between a soldier and his supervisor, he has the right to solicit the impartial mediation of the next higher in authority, right up the chain of command.

If this fails to satisfy the grievance then he can turn to specialized agencies such as the Inspector General or Judge Advocate General, etc.

As far as justice is concerned (an intrinsic part of true freedom) any soldier's case which may warrant it, is guaranteed consideration and judgment of not only the highest military authority, but, if need be, by the Congress of the United States for it is no less than this supreme lawmaking body which governs military justice.

In the event of just plain job dissatisfaction, a soldier has excellent opportunities to change jobs, location, or both, without losing a single day's pay or job seniority. Of course, this is not always possible at the precise moment it happens to strike his fancy, yet it is nice to know that it can be done with much less sacrifice, and sometimes more easily in the Army than in civilian life.

Although the laws of the Constitution guarantee all citizens certain rights and protection, they do not infringe upon the administrative discretion of civilian employers regarding grievances with employees.

Most civilians must live with the knowledge that it is possible even though rare, for him to put in twenty or thirty years of faithful service with a particular concern and then be dismissed for one mistake, or because of a prejudiced whim of a supervisor. A soldier knows that this can never happen to him unless he breaks a written law—in which case he is guaranteed the right of trial under the most democratic of systems.

In the final analysis, a civilian's freedom to tell the boss off and-or quit his job can hardly be considered an advantage by comparison with the soldier's lot.

Army's Mohawks Do Recon Job

BY JOE TREASTER

AN KHE, Viet Nam — They sit on the apron of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's metal-planker airstrip looking like a half a dozen giant mosquitoes.

The Army calls them Mohawks, the pilots who fly the high-performance, twin-engined airplanes call them "Hawks".

In the cavalry division they've got one job: reconnaissance. And they do it 24 hours a day.

Maj. Thomas E. Dupree, the soft-talking Mohawk unit commander works his 11 pilots in fireman-like shifts with 24 hours on duty, 24 off.

The Mohawk cruises at 220 miles per hour, reacts to the pilot's slightest touch and can bump down onto unimproved, dirt runways almost as abruptly as a feathered hawk. And pilots swear by it.

"It's a great special purpose airplane," said Maj. Dupree, "It can't be compared with anything else in the Army inventory. Flying the Mohawk makes you feel 10 years younger."

In addition to the 11 pilots, 109 other men work to keep the six aircraft in top flying condition, and to interpret the intelligence information they bring back from their flights.

"Complacency has killed a lot of men," Maj. Dupree said, "We're not complacent and certainly not nervous about our responsibilities."

Exhibit Shows Airborne Training 'All the Way'

Airborne Display Here at Benning For Soldiers View Until Dec. 20

By Sgt. Maj. Al Spratley

The saga of the Airborne soldier is graphically told in a new Army exhibit currently on display in the main lobby of the Infantry School Building.

Now an integral part of the U.S. Army Exhibit Unit's traveling stock in trade, the display will be at Fort Benning and in the Columbus area for approximately four weeks after which it will return to Cameron Station, Va., for refurbishing and then go on tour throughout the U.S.

The exhibit was opened to the public for the first time in October when it was displayed in the foyer of Washington's Sheraton Park Hotel at the annual meeting of the Association of the U. S. Army.

Sponsored by the Infantry School's Airborne Department and the Office of the Chief of Information, the exhibit entitled, "U. S. Army Airborne — All the Way," tells a story as new as the paratrooper of tomorrow and one as old as the Parachute Test Platoon of 1940.

The Army's paratrooper of the future is shown in original artwork — artists' concepts of the men and means of tomorrow's Army Airborne Forces.

Three - dimensional scenes and color photography set the pace for a presentation of today's airborne strike forces, the Army's instant - response soldiers who stand ready to meet any enemy's challenge to national security, anywhere, anytime.

The airborne soldier's rugged training is highlighted in a sight and sound visit to Fort Benning's Parachute school with photographs and narration over individual listening devices.

Visitors to the exhibit also have a chance to go "all the way" on a tactical training parachute jump by means of a "look down to see" circle-rama theater. In a color movie especially filmed for the exhibit, viewers join paratroopers aboard a U. S. Air Force C-141 and "jump" with them from 1,250 feet to impact on the drop zone nearly two minutes later.

Many other sight, sound and touch panels round out the quarter century saga of the Airorne soldier.

While in the Infantry School Building (Bldg. 4) the exhibit will be open and operational from 7:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. Lt. Col. Frank L. Lillyman, deputy operations officer of the Infantry School, has been project officer for the exhibit since its inception. A veteran paratrooper from the 503rd Parachute Battalion, Lillyman furnished a number of the historical pictures from his personal files.

Aerial Observers Await Rescue In Rice Paddy Surrounded by VC

BY JOE TREASTER

AN KHE, Viet Nam—For 30 minutes a pair of 1st Air Cavalry Division aerial observers crouched in a rice paddy surrounded by Viet Cong, awaiting a rescue team.

A VC bullet had crippled their two-seater helicopter and dropped the men into a "hot" area, where three enemy companies and a mass of automatic weapons had earlier been spotted. The downed fliers were armed only with pistols.

Capt. Paul D. Masterson and SSgt. Buford Allman were calling in artillery, and fighter-bombers on a Viet Cong concentration when the helicopter was hit.

"When we lost our engine I started auto-rotating and steering away from where the artillery was landing," Masterson said. "She sat down beautifully. Neither of us got scratched."

The two hurriedly removed the ship's radio and buried themselves in the waist-high rice shoots.

"We were sure we were going to have trouble," Masterson said. "But we didn't have to fire a shot. No one fooled with the helicopter while we were there."

The UH-1D Hueys slid into the paddy for the rescue, while two smaller Hueys—UH-1Bs—armed with rockets circled overhead.

Then, according to one of the rescue pilots, came a smattering of small arms fire.

"But they didn't hit us," he said. "We made it out all right. It was sort of routine."

Gen Heintges Renews Cav Friendships

By MARV WOLF

AN KHE, Viet Nam — Lt. Gen. John A. Heintges, the new deputy commander of U. S. Military Assistance Command, Viet Nam, (MACV) visited the 1st Air Cavalry Division last week.

Gen. Heintges comes to Viet Nam from Korea, where since August he commanded the I Corps. He previously commanded the U. S. Army Infantry Training Center at Fort Benning and his visit to the "1st Team" gave him an opportunity to renew his acquaintance with Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 1st Air Cav. commander.

Most of Heintges' brief visit was occupied by a briefing by major subordinate command leaders, but afterward he found time to examine a number of captured Viet Cong weapons, many of Chinese manufacture. The weapons were taken in the action at Plei Me.

Entire Training Unit Qualifies On Rifle Ranges

Fifty - two officers from 29 Allied countries, students at the Air Command and Staff College, Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala., visited Fort Benning last Friday.

Regularly scheduled as a supplement to the Air University curriculum, the tour is one of several groups from the university to visit The Infantry School this year.

The trainees of company A, 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, of the Army Training Center, completed their record firing Nov. 19.

Replacements Beef Up Cavalry As Short Timers Head for Home

BY HANK ALLISON

AN KHE, Viet Nam — They come in by the hundreds from Army posts all over the world. They ask: "When will we get our rifles?" or "Where are the Viet Cong — are you sure it's safe to walk around the company area after dark?

They are the replacements sent to beef up the 1st Air Cavalry Division, taking the place of men who have finished their tours.

There is a big difference in the two groups. The new ones are excited and always have a steady steam of questions. The veterans just sit there and smile knowingly. They talk among themselves as they contemplate their return to civilian life. Most of them have served a two or three year stint in the Army.

SSgt. Charles E. Mayle of Steubenville, Ohio, is the man who must feed, house and oversee the assignment of the new soldiers.

"We expect about 1600 new replacements by the end of November," says Mayle. "We are preparing to house them now."

The men stay at the replacement center just long enough to have their records processed, matching their skills up with a job in a unit.

One of the happiest parts of Sgt. Mayle's job is complying with a new Department of Defense requirement that all men stationed in the Republic of Viet Nam be immediately promoted to the grade of P-FC.

"This gives a lot of new soldiers a real head start on the road to the higher ranks," said Mayle. Most of the men promoted in the first group had less than five months of active duty behind them.

Since cloth "stripes" are not available in the 1st Cavalry's camp, Mayle has a stencil the size and shape of the new stripes, and a team from the replacement detachment paints the insignia on shirt sleeves with a can of spray paint.

"It's not by the book, but they sure look proud sporting those new stripes," said Mayle.

"We expect the biggest influx to come between now and the end of December," said Sgt. Mayle. "It might become a bit of a hassle then, but we'll handle as many as step off the airplane," he said.

After they leave the detachment, the men are sent directly to the company that needs them.

As the men who have finished their tours line up with their baggage ready to load aboard trucks on the first dusty leg of their journey out of the Army, additions to olive drab uniforms and duffle bags stand out vividly.

Bush hats, petite Vietnamese dolls, local "coolie" hats and berets sit atop each stack of belongings. Inside plastic bags marked "Air Viet Nam" are new cameras, watches and presents for families who will probably be so glad to see their sons and fathers that the "goodies" will quickly take a back seat.

They all smile, and as one happy PFC said, "I'm not getting short any more — I'm next — see ya later".

Post Visited By Peruvian Army Officers

Four officers from Peru were at Fort Benning this week for a firsthand look at Infantry training, school operations, and weapons employment and field firing.

Senior officer of the group was Lt. Col. Isaac Torres Espinoza, G-2, Army Center of Military Instructions, Peru.

Others were Maj. Luis Villacorta Boydo, instructor at the Artillery School; Maj. Jorge Sotomayor Motin, cavalry instructor at the Cavalry School, and Maj. Luis Arenas Munoz, Engineer School instructor.

Col. Torres and his party arrived in the U.S. Nov. 5. Before arriving at Fort Benning, the group visited Washington, D. C., Fort Belvoir, Va., Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Fort Bliss, Texas, and Fort Sill Okla. They departed Fort Benning for the return trip home Wednesday.

At Fort Benning the primary interest of the visitors was on the organization and mission of The Infantry School, observation of all phases of Infantry recruit training, school organization including school troop support, methods of instruction, utilization of training aids, planning of instruction, general school operations, nonresident instruction, development of doctrine and training literature, and observation of Classical instruction.

ATC Cooks Kept Busy

In addition to the turkey there was a ton of fresh shrimp, a ton and a half of white potatoes, 1,000 lbs. of cranberry sauce, a ton and a half of dressing, 1,500 lbs. of green beans, 1,500 lbs. of sweet potatoes, 1,500 lbs. of crisp relishes, 500 lbs. of butter, a ton of fresh fruit, a half ton of candy, a quarter ton of nuts, 30,000 parkerhouse rolls, 4,000 pies, 1,000 lbs. of fruit cake, 750 gallons of gravy and 3,000 gals. of milk.

Christmas Gift-Shopping For Servicemen Is Easy

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Christmas gift - shopping for servicemen overseas is no problem, according to the American Red Cross.

Field Directors have been asking American troops around the world what they would like to find in their holiday stockings.

Topping every list were homemade things representative of the family and items from their old school and hometown.

Most military men would like to receive homemade baked goods, a sweater, photos of the family, recorded messages by family and friends, and the local newspaper.

Then, of course, there's always money.

Frequently - mentioned random items are stationery kits, small metal mirrors, and pre-sweetened powdered drinks.

Although selecting a gift is no problem, getting it to the serviceman can be, if you don't act soon.

Gifts for the Far East, Southeast Asia, and other distant areas, should be mailed as early as possible.

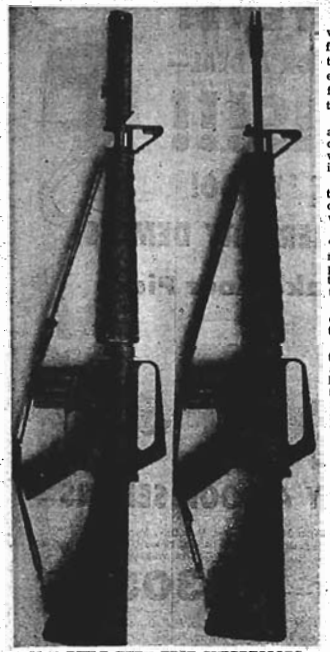
Brake Tested to Reduce M-16 Recoil



M-16 RIFLE WITH TEST SUPPRESSORS

The search for better weapons for America's Infantryman has led from the 15-pound, muzzle-loaded, single-shot squirrel rifle of Revolutionary War times to today's M-16.

The six-and-a-half pound automatic rifle must be considered as the ultimate weapon when compared to its predecessors.

At Fort Benning's Infantry Board, testing is being carried out to perfect the weapon even further.

The early weapons "kicked like Kentucky mules," according to reports. Today's M-16 has the least recoil of any of the modern weapons.

Testing goes on — to reduce the recoil, and the tell-tale muzzle flash.

Currently undergoing test at the Infantry Board are two types of muzzle brake compensators for the M-16 rifle, designed to reduce the recoil and muzzle climb of the weapon when firing.

One model was designed at the US Army Human Engineering Laboratories, Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and the other model was designed at Springfield Armory, Springfield, Mass.

Preliminary tests showed the Springfield compensator looks identical to the one presently employed on the M-16 but in actuality it is one inch longer.

The Human Engineering brake was found to reduce noise but accuracy and flash suppression was not as accurate.

Army Surgeon Operates On Vietnamese Patients

By JIM LULL

AN KHE, VIET N.M. — For several weeks the 1st Air Cavalary Division has conducted extensive military operations near here — recently, an "operation" took place at the division's base camp that should better the lives of a young Vietnamese boy and his uncle.

The "operation" occurred on a table at the division's Company B, 15th Medical Battalion.

The young boy, Nguyen Tuan, and his uncle, Nguyen Hui Tong, underwent surgery to correct a cleft lip. Both operations were entirely successful, according to Maj. Phillip Warner, company commander and surgeon.

The 2nd Brigade medical team had discovered the hereditary misfortune of the the two villagers during a recent "sick call" in the village of Binh Kho. A few days later, it was decided to evacuate the two, families permitting, to base camp for the necessary surgery.

"It was a new adventure for both of them," said Lt. Jack Bellis, the medical crew's anesthetist. "The boy even waved his arms up and down like he was flying all throughout the chopper ride back here.

"The family they left behind was even more excited," Bellis said. "They never anticipated the possibility of correcting the problem. Matter of fact, I'm sure that they never thought something like this could be done," he said.

When they arrived at base camp, the doctors immediately took up a collection to buy the 7-year-old child some clean clothing and a few toys.

"Then I gave the young ster a bath," Bellis said. "He looked at me in disbelief — I think it was the first time for the little guy."

No Complications

The operation held no complications, medically or otherwise. "They both were real good patients,' 'said Capt. William Loftus, assistant surgeon. "They'll both pull through with no trouble," he said.

The operation normally performed by plastic surgeons, lasted just over two hours. "They'll be drinking out of straws for a while," said Capt. John Zleznoch, dental surgeon assisting Dr. Warner. "It will more than likely be the first time that they have done that too," he said.

"The important thing about an operation like this is that everyone back in their home village can readily see the good we have done," said Dr. Warner. "It's a good way of keeping their confidence in us built up."

For five days the patients will wait in the recuperating tent then will be air-lifted home.

The two operations were part of the civil-affairs medical assistance program currently underway in the 2nd Brigade.

Trainees Hear Welcome From Columbus Groups

The men of 1st Battalion, 1st Brigade of the Training Center gathered at Kimbro Gym last week to hear a series of welcome addresses given by various church and Armed Forces Social Groups.

Representatives from the Armed Forces YMCA, the USO and Pastor Clarence Younce of the South Side Baptist Church of Columbus told the men that they were more than welcome in Columbus anytime.

Mr. Gordon H. Kitchens from the Columbus USO told them that while they were in the service they were part of the USO and that every door would be left open to them to come to Columbus to relax and enjoy the atmosphere at the USO headquarters in downtown Columbus.

The Executive Secretary of the Armed Forces YMCA told the 1st Battalion troopers that they were certainly more than welcome in Columbus and he also gave them a brief orientation on the points of interest in Columbus.

Increased Draft Call Has Trainees in Tents

From The Army Times

FORT JACKSON, S. C. — During the next few Basic Combat Training cycles here, more than 16,000 trainees will be housed in eight-man tents now under construction to keep pace with the increased draft call.

Sixteen construction sites dot the vast Army reservation and will contain 256 tents when the program is completed. The target date is December 26.

Though workmen are busy pouring concrete slabs and digging trenches for the tent sites, construction of permanent steel and concrete barracks complexes continues on schedule.

An eight - barracks complex is 85 per cent finished and a 12-barracks complex is 30 per cent completed according to post resident engineer R. L. DeBeaugrine.

All the new complexes will have central heating, classrooms, motor pool and a supply and headquarters building. Each unit will be almost self-supporting and will provide greater efficiency and control than with existing facilities.

The assembling of the 256 fire - resistant quarter—master-issued tents is done during the weekends according to officials.

"All the new construction going on here will not allow the troops to move into their quarters since the construction is under way at sites where troops were previously housed," an official stated.

While the tents will not have the permanent facilities of the steel and concrete buildings, they are being constructed and arranged to allow for stoves to be placed in them.

Officials explained that building the tents is an additional load on the fixed manpower force of the post engineer which is normally utilized for the repair and maintenance of existing facilities.

Planning for each tent area requires a survey. After a site is selected, ground is broken, concrete slabs are poured to support latrine facilities and trenches are dug to bury electrical cables and to house sewer and water lines. Utility poles are even being erected for safety purposes.

Services to Continue Buildup in Viet Nam

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — All services will provide more men and weapons for a further buildup in Viet Nam according to Pentagon sources.

The strength total there, counting the naval forces offshore, now totals nearly 200,000 men and is expected to climb at least another 50,000 by the end of the fiscal year, June 20, 1966.

The addition of men going to Viet Nam was announced by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara but he released no figures.

The Defense Secretary said also there would be some more military base closings announced soon and that the new closings would save a half billion dollars a year. The McNamara announcement confirms an earlier Times story that new closings were coming.

Despite the savings from the closings, McNamara said he would go to Congress for an additional supplement to the current fiscal year's Defense budget. He got a $1.7 billion increase in August to conduct the Vietnamese war. How big the new request will be was not revealed.

Reports from the capital indicate that the new buildup in South Viet Nam will double the number of tactical U.S. aircraft now there, increase the number of helicopters dramatically and that at least a brigade of Army troops and perhaps a sizable Marine Corps force will be sent to the war area.

McNamara said the buildup could be accomplished without further involuntary extensions of active duty tours and without a call up of reserves.

Radar Tested for Use In All-Weather Mapping

FORT BELVOIR, Va. — Exploratory development of global and tactical all-weather mapping data reduction systems utilizing radar photography in place of the conventional aerial photography is being conducted by the Army Engineer Geodesy, Intelligence and Mapping Research and Development Agency, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Use of high-resolution, side-looking radar is expected to provide the all-weather mapping capability currently lacking due to camera limitations under cloudy skies, heavy ground haze or precipitation, officials said.

Successful employment of the system would permit reasonably fast original mapping where it is now most urgently needed in regions of the globe unfavorable to the aerial camera.

Radar obtained from the airborne system can be used to revise existing maps, to prepare radar mosaics of large areas, or to produce new, small scale topographic line maps. While the system's initial map product is not expected to have the high quality obtained from aerial photography, it will have the advantage of timeliness for tactical use.

Communist State Rules Factories, Work Force

In Soviet factories, the worker who loafs on the job may find his pay cut by twenty-five per cent for several months. If he persistently fails to meet his assigned quota of production, he may get no pay at all. The worker who — even unintentionally — damages tools or wastes materials may find that such losses are deducted from his pay.

But the most serious crime is stealing property from the factory since all property belongs to the government. Prison terms of ten to fifteen years or even longer slave-labor sentences, have frequently been imposed for such crimes.

In 1961, the death penalty was introduced as punishment for extreme cases of theft of government property. Yet theft remains a persistent problem in Communist-run industries. Workers steal not only because they are poorly paid, but in order to "get even" with their bosses.

Pushcart Story

The following story illustrates humorously how a man in Russia can steal "government property" and get away with it.

Workers leaving the factory are daily watched by special guards. Outside one factory, the guard noticed an old worker leaving the factory with a push-cart. The guard searched the push-cart but found only sawdust, old papers and other junk without value. This happened day after day, always with the same result: nothing of value was ever found in the push-cart.

Finally, after the old worker retired, the guard said to him: "Now that you are retired you can explain to me what you were up to all those months before your retirement. I know you were stealing something. What was it?" The old, now retired worker answered: "Push-carts."

Women Workers

One of the Communist criticisms of the capitalist system is that under it women are not treated fairly and that they suffer from many inequalities and discriminations which only communism will abolish. Again, let us look at the facts:

Women make up only thirty-two per cent of the total labor force in the United States whereas they make up fifty-three per cent of the labor force in Communist Russia. The most striking contrast is in the field of construction.

Only three per cent of the persons employed in construction in the United States are women whereas the percentage in the Soviet Union is thirty-one. When it comes to work—particularly hard work — women under communism are not only equal to men but "more than equal."

The visitor to the Soviet Union sees women everywhere doing the hardest jobs — digging ditches, repairing streets, loading freight in railroad yards, building houses and factories, and working in mines, lumber camps and steel mills. No job is considered too hard for a woman.

In many cases, one can see entire gangs of road workers, construction workers or factory workers made up of women. However, supervisory and administrative positions are generally held by men, whereas the more unskilled a job is, the more it is likely to be assigned to women.

While in Russia the writer saw several factories and in each the picture was the same. Nearly all the unskilled labor force was female and the managers and supervisors were all men. Similarly most of the positions of responsibility in government and in the Communist party are held by men.

Of course, with respect to such high-level jobs, the discrimination against women is probably no worse than in non-Communist countries, the United States included. But the difference between Communist and non - Communist countries continues to be substantial when it comes to low-paying and physically exhausting forms of work.

INTO THE FRYING PAN

MADISONVILLE, Ky. (AP) —While fishing, Henry Teague caught his lure in a bush and gave a big jerk to free it. A bass spotted the lure, made a leap for it, but missed. The fish landed in Teague's boat.

The 29th Infantry clinched its third straight win on Monday night at Briant Wells Field House by beating 54th Quartermaster Battalion 88 to 67 and moved into a tie for first place with the 58th Infantry.

Don Harnum paced the 29th team, sinking 18 points. Harnum's game average this season now stands at 24. The 29th has managed a 91 point offensive average in action so far while holding a defensive total of 53.5.

In other action Monday night at Briant Wells, the Student Brigade handed the 10th Artillery its second loss on a 85 to 79 score.

Nelson Talley was high scorer for the brigade, hitting for 20 points. Johnny Murray of the 10th was high man for the game with a 25 point effort.

In a double header at Kelley Hill Field House, the 197th Brigade Troops defeated the 69th Armor 53 to 47 and the 39th Transportation Battalion walloped the 577th Engineers 99 to 62.

58th Inf Takes Third in Row

The 58th Infantry overcame a five point deficit in the final three minutes of play last Friday night at Kelley Hill Field House to edge the 577th Engineers 59 to 58 and chalk up their third straight win.

In other contests the 10th Artillery pounded the 54th Quartermaster Battalion 88 to 68, and the 69th Armor dropped their second in a row 92 to 72 to TSB.

C. B. O. Ralston fired in three quick buckets with three minutes remaining as the 58th came from behind to grab the victory in a contest which was a see-saw battle all the way.

Herman Mack got the 58th off to an early lead when he pushed in 16 points during the first - half. He wound up with scoring honors for the evening when he totaled 22 points. Ralston wound up in second place with a game total of 18 points.

Doug Talmadge set the scoring pace for the 577th with 20 points while Bill Penney was a constant play setter for the Engineers throughout the evening.

Guard Gerald Burgess hit with 10 out of 15 shots from the floor to grab game scoring honors with 22 points. He was aided by Herman Manigo who notched 15 counters, Johnny Murray with 11 points and Walt Burroughs who copped 17 rebounds and 19 points.

The 69th Armor faded after a good first half as the Student Brigade fast - broke their way to their first victory of the season after an opening game loss to the 58th Infantry.

Judy the Chimp Gives Youngsters Hints on Bowling at Post Alleys

The monkey shined at the main post bowling alley last Saturday morning only it wasn't exactly a monkey. It was anthropopithecus troglodytes, more commonly known as chimpanzee, and her name was Judy. Judy thinks acts and seems more human than ape and if you watched her knock down the pins you would have begun to think about your own bowling average with a little less smugness.

Judy is the world's only bowling chimp, according to Sandra Lee Chapman, her handler and trainer who is personnel director for Colonial Bread Company's educational program. Judy has an average of 90.3 and a high game of 133. She normally uses a 16 pound house ball, says Sandra.

The chimp put on two bowling exhibitions at the main post alley and one at Sand Hill lanes. On Saturday morning she competed against two Benning youngsters at the main post alley.

Judy and Sandra have been visiting schools throughout the south recently giving school children lectures on primates. Primates are the order of mammals which consists of men, apes and monkeys.

The educational exhibit, which also includes aspects of animal biology and science is presented in 3,000 schools a year on a national basis, ranging from kindergarten to the college level.

According to Sandra, Judy is the thirteenth bowling chimp, all of whom have been named Judy. The chimp has appeared on the Les Crane television show.

Judy is only three years old and it will be another eight years before she reaches full growth, says Sandra. The normal life expectancy for chimps is about 35 years.

Sandra says it only took Judy about one month to learn how to bowl and that the chimp learns most things very rapidly. She is able to eat with a knife and fork, is toilet trained, has her own bedroom and takes bubble baths in a bathroom. The only trouble with Judy's baths, remarks Sandra, is that she likes to eat the bubbles.

Judy is very jealous and possessive and loves attention and applause, like most human children, says Sandra. She eats, plays and gets into mischief like a human three year old. "I think she understands most of what I say to her," Sandra adds.

Judy was born in the New Orleans Zoo and for the first year and a half of her life, she lived with a human family. Then she was taken and trained by Terry Clinc of Colonial Bread. Sandra has been traveling with and caring for Judy since last February.

The chimp had a bad day Saturday bowling against her human opponents and was beaten. Sandra said it was probably because the chimp was distracted by the children clustering around the alley to watch the match.

But Judy had a cold that day and from time to time Sandra had to wipe the chimps nose. Because of their close physiological similarity to humans apes are the only animals besides man who can catch the common cold. Perhaps Judy should have taken some Bufferin.

It was a big sports week for little women at Fort Benning as these photos by Bayonet photographer Mike Geydoshek show. Champs Beat Officer Challengers Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, Fort Benning touch football champs, whipped a team of officers from Career Course No. Two, 26 to 6, at Doughboy Stadium last Friday in a post season battle to benefit the post's Teen Club.

In piling up the winning score, Company D quarterback Jim Holder took to the air and receivers Don Boccia, Gary Ciampi, Monte Clausen and Ted Hampton as he has all season. Halfback Boccia and ends Ciampi, Clausen and Hampton got one TD each.

After the final and deciding game of the post championship playoff last week, the CAR team challenged the champs to the benefit game. Company D immediately accepted.

Company D scored in the opening minutes of the game for the only tally of the first quarter. Holder threw a long one from his own 20 to Ciampi on the CAR 40. Ciampi then sprinted into the clear for six ponts.

An interception of a Holder pass by Tom Mercer set up CAR's only score. Mercer brought the ball to the "D" 24 and quarterback Paul Salker then connected with Bill Tobin in the end zone for the touchdown.

D Company scored once more before the half ended. A series of successful pass plays brought "D" to the CAR 19. Holder than ran out to his right and flung a pass to Hampton in the end zone. Holder then connected with Boccia for two extra points.

Neither team scored in the third quarter but in the final period of play Holder hit receivers for two touchdowns.

Ciampi intercepted a pass and brought the ball to the CAR 22. Holder moved the ball to the 8 on a series of short passes and then rolled out to his left and flipped the ball to Boccia waiting in the end zone.

U. S. Army Athletes Duel Iraquis at Baghdad Meet

WASHINGTON — Iraqi military and civilian athletes trained last summer by U. S. military coaches were slated to compete last week against military athletes from USAREUR and learn the secrets of their success.

Twenty - five USAREUR athletes were sent to Baghday, under a joint DoD-State project, to compete against Iraqi civilian and miliary basketball, track and boxing teams. When not actively competing, the U.S. athletes will visit and conduct clinics at various sports clubs in the Baghdad area.

The purpose of this sports tour is to provide technical assistance to Iraqi sports groups, foster mutual understanding and cement friendship between the Iraqi and U. S. military forces.

The four U. S. coaches sent to Baghdad last summer, in response to an appeal from the Iraqi Minister of Defense, were: Capt. James E. Willard, USAF, basketball coach; Lt. (jg) Richard D. Beaver, USNR (Plebe swimming coach, USNA), swimming coach; Sgt. Robert J. Carmody, USA (Olympic bronze medalist), boxing coach; and SFC Rodney J. Trahan, USA (assistant track coach, West Point), track.

Following American coaching, the Iraqi military basketball team defeated the top civilian team by 30 points and the track and field team won the national championship and established four national records.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

The Bear Bryant Hilton

LAST MONTH "Sports Illustrated" published an article entitled, "The Bear Bryant Hilton." It dealt with the lush dormitory for athletes at the University of Alabama. The author described the dorm as "Bryant's palace away from home for proven players".

The pleasure dome cost one million dollars, houses 130 boys, is air-conditioned and decorated in Italian provincial. In addition it has its own library, TV, study and recreation rooms. The dorm's staff includes two full-time dieticians who supervise the boys' menu which includes steak every night and twice on Sundays. A swimming pool will soon be added.

Comments from readers were immediate and generally unfavorable. One reader deplored the fact that educational facilities were being sacrificed while "fattened lambs revel in the luxury of their Bear Bryant Hilton." Another criticized "Bryant's thick-carpeted, neo Gothic cow barn where prize beef on the hoof is fattened and cloistered for a Saturday afternoon barbeque."

While reader criticism may or may not be justified,it raised in my mind some of the old ghosts of amateurism versus professionalism and the widespread notion that amateur sportsmen should receive no consideration or payment for exercising their talents.

As early as the 5th century B.C., athletes were divided into amateurs, who competed for the love of the sport and personal glory, and professionals who used their skill to earn a living. Professionalism and corruption were held responsible for the termination of the ancient Olympic games by the emperor Theodosius in A.D. 394.

The Olympic Oath

IN RECENT YEARS the Olympic oath with its avowal of amateurism has probably caused pains of conscience in many athletes. Charges and counter charges of professionalism fly back and forth between competing nations every modern Olympiad.

For some countries no amateur problem exists. In the Soviet Union and other iron curtain nations, sporting and athletic achievements have their set material rewards. There is a definite scale of bonuses and the prospects for top notch athletics are considerable. The USSR has a seven year plan which sets a target of 5000 to 6000 skilled athletes annually. Athletic talents are spotted early and nurtured closely.

In France, the De Gaulle government backs athletes with government money and sponsors state-backed athletic competitions.

The Australians have reached a novel solution in solving part of their amateur problem. Their amateur tennis players legally receive only an official expense allowance. But players usually sit down to play poker with the promoters of their matches and the tennis men always win.

In the U. S. it seems that only if an athlete turns professional can he hope for reward in return for all that he puts into a sport. In other fields, going professional is a sign of success. In many sports there is the feeling that the athlete is somehow falling from an amateur state of grace.

Bring Home the Trophies

WE IN THE U. S. ask our athletes to bring home the cups and trophies but then feel our responsibility ends. Every four years we may throw a buck into the Olympics fund to send "our boys" over there. Then we sit back in

(See AFTERMATH, Page 46)

GOLF WINNER . . . Lt. Col. Joseph Halloran putts his way to a trophy last week in the annual golf tournament held by the officers of the 577th Engineer Battalion, Infantry Center Troop Command. He won the final playoff round and the tourney with a 75 foot chip shot into the cup.

Club Slates Tournament

The Fort Benning country club has slated a pre-holiday turkey tournament for all club members on Dec. 18.

Entry fees are $1.50. Entrants playing the Lakeside course will play a "blind bogie" and those on the Pineside will play a "dog fight" point system.

Participants are invited to organize their own foursome and should have an established handicap.

It was also announced this week that the U.S. Golf Association handicap system has been programed in to the club's computer. Handicaps for members will be computed twice a month, according to a spokesman for the group.

The club's practice putting green has been enlarged to 18 holes and a new nine hole putting green has been opened in front of the club house, a spokesman said.

Lights are also being installed on the practice driving range which will soon be open in the evenings.

Film Musical Setting Long Run Records

HOLLYWOOD—"My Fair Lady" is now in its second year of screening and well on the way toward fulfilling the prediction of its backers that it would become the most successful motion picture in history.

The Warner Bros. film starring Audrey Hepburn and Rex Harrison has grossed more than $30,000,000 in theatres in the United States and Canada and other $16,000,000 in other countries, according to Jack L. Warner, president of Warners and producer of the hit.

At New York's Criterion theatre where the world premier took place Oct. 21, 1964, "My Fair Lady" has grossed $2,850,000 and is still playing 10 performances weekly.

Service Club Show Spoofs Basic Training

Basic Blues," a comedy skit concerned with the trials and tribulations of the basic trainee from the time he receives his draft notice until his graduation from basic training was presented last week in Service Club two by Company C, 1st Battalion, 1st training Brigade.

Composed, directed and produced by trainees, the show was attended by an estimated 500 soldiers and guests. Mrs. Madeline Parks, service club director, called the production a success.

Scenes included military drill classes, the recruits first haircut, sick call, Army "chow."

AT THE Movies

Synopsis

SERGEANT DEADHEAD: Girl-shy and accident-prone Sergeant O. K. Deadhead (Frankie Avalon), stationed at the Air Force's Smedley Missile Base, is engaged to understanding Women's Air Force (WAF) Corporal Lucy Turner (Deborah Walley). When he accidentally explodes a miniature rocket during a WAF drill, Sgt. Deadhead is confined to the guardhouse. Sgt. Deadhead escapes from the guardhouse and hides aboard a secret rocket missile scheduled for launch, which is to orbit a chimpanzee to test possible personality chances in space. The ensuing complications and hilarious mixed-up events are not to be missed.

MAN'S FAVORITE SPORT: Handsome bachelor Rock Hudson is a star fishing equipment salesman and author of a best selling book on the piscatorial art, who has never fished in his life! Because of the professional know-how of his book, Hudson is forced to compete in a fishing tournament. Rock manages to get into some weirdly wild predicaments with lovely Paula Prentiss, who is a tournament public relations representative at his fishing lodge. You can be sure that "Paula" is one mermaid that Rock doesn't intend to let get away, even if it means his getting hooked in the end.

MAKE LIKE A THIEF: American Richard Long is being deported from Finland. As he is standing on the bridge of a freighter about to sail for America, handcuffed to a detective, he is seen through the telescopic sight of a rifle. The rifle is held by a hired gunman. The gunman fires as Long moves to light a cigarette and the detective is hit. Long leaps with the body of the detective into the harbor and swims to shore. All Long has to do now is to stay alive until he can find out who is intending to kill him and why? A spine-tingling suspense-thriller not to be missed.

Medal of Honor Winner Calls For Citizen-Soldier Teamwork

The Teen Beat

BY SHARON GRACE

Hi there, everyone!

Now that football season is over, football seems to be the thing with the kids here on post. Last week (Nov. 19), one of the CAR classes played the 29th Infantry's football team over at Doughboy Stadium.

Dressed in unusual little cheerleading outfits consisting of white shorts or cutoffs, and football jerseys, one of the most uncoordinated groups of cheerleaders ever to perform led the fans. Out there jumping and yelling were Tobi Taylor, Barbara Cronk, Barbara Wisdom, Glenda Sudderth, Peggy Green, Cindy Gramling, Kathy Hundley, Jehe Burnett, Sue Adams, Sherry Spurlin, Vickie Nikas, Sue McNally, me and many others.

Let's talk about the remodeling of Brat Barracks. Did you know that $4,250.00 have already gone into improving the Brats building? This includes a front porch and a beautiful snack bar in the area where the pool tables used to be.

The snack bar will be run by the PX and will sell cokes, ice cream and all kinds of other food stuff. Food will be eaten on tables and chairs set up in the area.

Pretty good, huh?

Plans for Brats include a beautiful new front, a nicer ceiling, opening of the upstairs area and balcony, and creation of new rooms (Pool Room, Ping Pong Room, Card Room, Dancing Room, etc.)

Ought to take about five years and about $20,000 but Brat Barracks is really going to be something to be proud of when all these plans go into effect.

That's about it for now gang! Be good, have fun, see ya next week!

BY REGGIE CAPES
Of The Columbus Ledger

"Teamwork will win in Viet Nam" believes Capt. Roger Hugh C. Donlon, America's only Congressional Medal of Honor winner since the Korean War.

Holding up an automobile bumper sticker with the words "Win in Viet Nam," he said he had learned how important teamwork is in Viet Nam and that teamwork between the fighting men and the people here in the states is just as important.

His talk, ostensibly a report on "a typical day for Special Forces in Viet Nam, came out strongly as a plea for support of this country's involvement in the war.

He said, "We are all fighting the war, even if in more pleasant surroundings here than in Viet Nam."

Donlon emphasized that Special Forces spend more time in "a civic battle" than in actual combat with the Viet Cong.

He explained that winning the confidence of the Vietnamese — through medical aid, construction work and general social welfare help— occupies much of the skill and talent of the green beret wearers.

This "civic battle" should be supported here in the states, said Donlon.

It was the other kind of battle that pushed Donlon into the headlines and into the White House where President Lyndon B. Johnson awarded him this country's highest honor on December 5, 1964.

Commander of the Nam Dong Valley Special Forces camp, Capt. Donlon, despite the easy chair and expect to see video tape triumphs of American athletes.

grenade sharpnel wounds in the leg, shoulder stomach and arms, repeatedly exposed himself to heavy enemy fire on June 6, 1964 when the Viet Cong attempted to overrun the camp.

At the time, the battle was reported as one of the strongest enemy pushes of the war.

Donlon, during the six hour battle, submitted finally to medical aid when medics insisted he "would die from loss of blood" if he did not stop, according to newspaper accounts.

On guard duty when the battle started, Capt. Donlon almost lost his life with the first shell.

At the insistence of the audience — Capt. Donlon was reluctant to talk about his part in the battle — he recalled that he almost lost his life with the first shell fired in the battle.

On his way to wake up a man for guard duty, a building he was about to enter disintegrated in a flash of white.

A white phosphorus explosive shell had destroyed the building and signaled the Viet Cong to attack.

Teamwork went into action that first round died out. Donlon said the men rolled out of bed and into their combat positions in a matter of seconds.

Their radio operator sent a message for help and had just completed it when he was blown out of the building by an explosion.

Picking himself up, he ran to his battle station.

Capt. Donlon told how one man died after stopping Viet Cong soldiers from blowing up their ammunition dump as well as numerous other acts of personal courage that he witnessed.

He said "every man in that outfit deserved the medal awarded to me."

Aftermath

Is it really virtuous not to play for money! What really matters is that an athlete plays well.

It's only natural that rewards should be given to a man who excels by virtue of a particular talent. In most countries athletes have become an exploitable national product. Why shouldn't they get some measure of compensation. And why shouldn't our players in the Bear Bryant Hilton be rewarded when they fill up football stadiums on Saturday afternoon with paying customers? Perhaps the scared cow of amateurism should be lead to the stockyard.

Soldiers Develop Cheap Camouflage for Missile

FT. BLISS, Tex. (AFPS)—Four men here have developed an inexpensive approach to camouflaging the Hawk missile system.

In the past, extreme costs, reduced mobility and difficulty in operation have been principal problems in developing a workable camouflage system for missile units. The new development overcomes all of these difficulties using unserviceable parachutes and umbrella frames. The apparatus costs less than $50.

The idea for the parachute camouflage came to Capts. Fred R. Clifton and Charley A. Carver, MSgt. Charles W. Ezzell and SSgt. Frankie L. Sharp during a field exercise last April.

Tests have been conducted in wet and dry environments, using the camouflage over rotating antennae of missile radar systems, with no loss of operational capabilities.

Marine Corps representatives here were impressed [illegible]

send pictures and drawings to their Hawk missile units recommending immediate application.

Photos and drawings have been submitted to research and development offices of the Combat Development Command, Redstone Arsenal, Ala.; the Engineer Laboratories, Ft. Belvior, Va.; and the Army Mobility Command, for study.

First Trainees Graduate

1000 Men Complete Center's First Cycle

Over 1000 men will march out of recruit status here today as they pass in review at the Army Training Center's first graduation ceremony and end a two-month course designed to transform them from civilians to soldiers.

The men, from the 1st Battalion, 1st Training Brigade, are the first graduates from the center which began operation in October in the Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas as a result of the increased draft call and military build up. According to training center officials, 1000 to 1100 men will follow the first graduates weekly.

For most of the 1000 men who graduate today, Army life began around Oct. 1 with a three-day stay at the Center's reception station in Harmony Church. There they received their Army clothing issue, were processed and tested.

The first training cycle began on October 11. Two hundred non-commissioned officers, selected from post units for an intensive course at Fort Jackson, S.C., formed the basis of the new company cadre.

The basic combat training course is designed to teach the fundamental skills of military arts and science to the individual soldier. According to Training Center spokesmen, each trainee must learn the essentials of military bearing, appearance, courtesy and discipline. Emphasis is on practical work rather than classroom instruction.

Post Initiates Safety Program for Christmas

Soldiers going on leave in their own cars this Christmas are going to have to take enough leave time in order to drive to and from their destination safely, in the light of the latest post safety directive.

The new directive says no more than 30 per cent of a soldier's leave time may be taken up with driving.

The directive, a result of the command's concern over the number of deaths here and in Third Army last Christmas, provides commanders with a mileage-time-distance chart to figure amount of leave needed by the soldier who will be driving this Christmas.

The directive encourages people driving long distances to do most of their driving during the daylight hours.

Each soldier is going to be required to attend a safety orientation before he departs on leave over the holiday. Under the terms of the lesson plan provided in the directive, soldiers will be briefed on the principles of defensive driving and the mechanical safety of automobiles.

In an accompanying letter, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, urged all soldiers to become fully aware of and to observe all the traffic rules and regulations.

He added that the holiday season hazards are "magnified by the thousands of people attempting long trips out of proportion to the time available to them.

"Speed weary drivers, unsafe vehicles and alcohol will combine to create hazards from which some will not escape," he added.

According to the post safe-

Chief of Staff Is Nominated For First Star

Col. Robert M. Williams, Infantry Center chief of staff, has been nominated for the rank of brigadier general by President Johnson.

Williams has served as chief of staff since May 1964 and before that time he commanded the 197th Infantry Brigade at Fort Benning.

The Senate is expected to confirm the nomination in January 1966.

Before Williams' arrival at Fort Benning in 1963, he was chief of the U. S. Army Section, Military Advisory Group in Spain.

Also on the list to receive their first stars are Col. Burnside E. Huffman, a na-

Soldier's Medal Presented Here

An act of heroism which may have prevented a major tragedy has earned the Soldier's Medal for a post mechanic.

Sp4 Harvey Clements Jr. of the 505th Company, 39th Transportation Battalion, was awarded the Soldier's Medal, the highest peacetime award for heroism, for his actions while working in a 2nd Division motor pool last November.

While Clements was working in the motor pool, a trailer filled with gasoline caught fire. The fire was particularly dangerous because several other gas-laden trailers were parked nearby.

One of the mechanics, Sp5 Ben Maness, immediately reported the fire and rushed to get an extinguisher.

In the meantime, Pvt. Bruce Chambers, who was working nearby, jumped into the cab of the trailer and pulled it away from the others.

It was then that Clements, seeing the vehicle could explode at any moment, jumped on the burning tanker and opened all of the vents, thereby releasing the pressure inside and making an explosion impossible. Several fire extinguishers went into action and the fire was put out.

The citation accompanying the medal praised Clement's prompt action and courage and credited him with "preventing injury and the loss of valuable government property."

Since the incident, it has been determined that faulty wiring in a tail light caused the fire. When Clements recalled what happened he said merely, "It was pretty hot."

Safety

ty office, a widespread publicity campaign and safety program is in high gear to acquaint everyone at Fort Benning with the potential hazards encountered during Christmas and New Year holidays.

Fort Benning's chief of staff, Col. Robert M. Williams, has urged the exercise of self discipline along with common sense and mature judgment while driving this holiday season.

Also being stressed during the holiday period is the broad spectrum of post recreational facilities in order to reduce the amount of highway travel during the holiday season.

Commanders are being urged, according to the safety office, to establish safety inspection service for soldiers' automobiles.

Trainees

rifleman and adaption to Army procedure are also stressed.

According to center spokesmen, much of the training received by the new graduates came under the committee group. The committee group is composed of instructors who are experts in a particular skill.

Committee groups provided training in marksmanship, first aid, hand-to-hand combat, grenades, counter-insurgency operations and other skills.

The largest block of instruction under the committee group deals with the use and maintenance of the M-14 rifle, the basic hand weapon of the Army today. Emphasis is placed on firing with a minimum of time devoted to explanation and demonstration.

Trainees are also taught the principles of chemical, biological and nuclear warfare and were required to negotiate an infiltration course under simulated battlefield conditions.

During all phases of the training program, the trainees undergo a rigorous course of physical training designed to develop strength, endurance, agility and coordination.

In the last week of training, a proficiency test is given to determine whether each trainee is to be graduated to more advanced training.

Chief

tive of Columbus and former chief of staff of the 2nd Infantry Division at Fort Benning and Col. William A. Becker, the 1st Cavalry Division Artillery commander.

Williams received his commission in 1938 after graduation from Texas A&M. His combat duty includes World War II participation in the Rhineland, Central Europe and Ardennes-Alsace campaigns in the European theater.

Among Williams' decorations are the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with two oak leaf clusters and the Army Commendation Medal.

War Buildup Halts Outs This Christmas

An early separation program during the Christmas Holiday period will not be in effect this year, a Department of Army letter has stated.

In past years the Army has maintained an annual policy of authorizing early separation of soldiers scheduled for release during the Christmas season.

This year, however, due to the buildup of forces in Viet Nam, the Christmas early-out program will not be in effect, the letter said.

Army's 'Missing in Action' Cases Reviewed After a Year's Wait

WASHINGTON — In the Viet Nam war, as in others, there are agonizing days and weeks for a family told only that a man is "missing." Sometimes he is rescued after the first report is sent. Sometimes he escapes or is known to have been captured alive by the enemy.

But sometimes there is the grim note that his name has been transferred from the category of missing or captured to "Dead."

Here is the military system for listing an individual as missing and transferring him to the category of dead:

Men unaccounted for in battle or in noncombat accidents or incidents (such as a plane that disappears outside a combat area) are carried as missing until their exact status can be determined. This may be a matter of hours. It can run into weeks or months.

If a man has been lost and the body is not recovered, the first placement of his name is in the missing category.

If witnesses later testify that the man could not have lived, a board rules him dead. If conclusive evidence from responsible persons cannot be obtained, the man remains in the missing category.

Each case is reviewed a year after the initial missing report. If there is no conclusion he is alive, a presumptive finding of death is issued. In this event, the legal date of death is one year and one day after he became missing.

If the body is recovered or if positive evidence of death is obtained, the date of death becomes the date upon which he became missing. However, pay and allowance are made to the next of kin up to the date of notification instead of being cut off or required to be returned as of the exact date of death.

The determination that a man is detained is made when he is known to have been captured and when there is no conclusive evidence that he died afterward. This requires the statement of responsible eye-witnesses.

Determination of Capture

The Defense Department casualty report, covering the period from Jan. 1, 1961 through November 1, this year, lists the current total missing in Viet Nam as 91.

Since 1961, the summary shows 170 persons were declared dead after being reported initially as missing. Eleven "returned to control," which means they got back by any of several ways, including escape.

Army Deletion In Sports Slate

From The Army Times

When the Army dropped tennis from its list of approved interservice championships for 1966, the edict had a major side effect on Air Force and Navy. Recently, for instance, the Air Force issued a revised regulation for its interservice schedule and tennis was deleted.

The other services, however are not going along with the Army cut in golf and they've agreed on a "sort-of" Interservice tourney in the sport, August 25-28 at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Heritage of freedom will never die

Twenty-four years ago the United States was pulled into mankind's greatest conflict by the Dec. 7 attack on Pearl Harbor. We all know the story of the attack and the war that followed. We have read of the toll in lives and hardship suffered by the successful defenders of freedom.

Today we are engaged in a struggle of equal, if less violent, proportions. Only in comparatively small places — Korea and the Republic of Viet Nam — have Americans come into direct physical battle with potential destroyers of freedom.

The end of this struggle is not in sight. The war in Viet Nam could last a long time. The moral, social and economic struggle in which the forces of democracy and communism engage will probably last longer.

The Americans at Pearl Harbor contributed much to the battle we fight today. They left a heritage of courage, will power, strength and faith in the American way.

This year, on Dec. 7, we owe those men a moment of thought — a promise. Every day that we serve in the armed forces we must continue to uphold our heritage so that freedom's torch never dies in the United States and lights the darkness for all the peoples of the world. (AFPS).

The Judge Says . . .

'Sales contracts provide minimum requirements'

The first, and probably most important, document involved in buying a house is the sales contract.

It forms the basic agreement between the buyer and seller and sets the pattern for the events which are to follow. Most of the time a printed form is used for this contract.

The form is usually set up to provide the minimum requirements of common law and the statutory law of the state where the land is located. The special agreements between the buyer and seller, if any, must be added. Generally speaking the following matter should be covered:

Identity Stated

Identity of the seller and buyer and their obligation to sell and buy respectively; the purchase price; a general description of the property involved; the terms of the sale - or how the purchase price is to be paid, the type deed to be given and the kind of title guaranteed (it should be marketable); and how taxes, interest, insurance, and rent are to be prorated.

Also, the time of conveyance and when possession is to be given; who is to bear the loss in case of damage to the property after the contract is signed but before settlement date; and any special agreements incident to the particular transaction, such as conditioning the sale on the obtaining of an FHA appraisal in a certain amount, the obtaining of a certificate of termite inspection, etc.

Most of these matters are fairly obvious and cause little or no trouble. There is one area, however, that creates a problem and warrants brief discussion.

Stock Clauses

This is a matter of settlement date or time for performance and the interrelated question of possession of the premises. A stock clause used in one locality reads substantially as follows: "The purchaser agrees to comply with the terms of the sale herein within set number of days from the date of acceptance by owner or as soon thereafter as title can be examined and papers prepared. . . ."

The seller's obligation is not even mentioned. When the real estate agent or the seller says that 60 days or 90 days is the usual time for settlement, one automatically thinks that two or three months is more than enough time for everything to be taken care of. The problem arises when arriving on the 60th day with wife, children and dog, one finds he cannot get possession for one reason or another and has to move into an apartment or motel.

This can involve a real hardship to a purchaser. The situation occurs more often in new construction where the house is not completed by a promised date.

The whole thing arises usually through a basic misunderstanding.

The average person understands that when an act is to take place in 60 days, the act will occur in that time. This is not necessarily so in the law of contracts.

Contract Specifications

Unless the contract specifies that "time is of the essence" either party would have a reasonable time after the time specified in which to perform his part of the bargain. A reasonable time would depend on the particular circumstances of the case.

It is recommended that the desirability of making time of the essence in a contract involving new construction always be considered. With an existing house, the question of getting actual possession can be handled by specific agreement for a certain day which has no relation to the time of settlement or closing.

This may involve the purchaser having to pay rent for the period between possession and settlement but the amount is normally just sufficient to cover the seller's mortgage payments, insurance, etc. Don't forget that in a transaction involving real estate the advice and services of a lawyer are usually required and are always desirable.

'The Point of the Spear'

"We must continue to meet responsibilities we must continue to have a strong country and a strong alliance and a strong Free World, and to do that we need a strong Army which is the point of the spear."

JOHN F. KENNEDY
35th President

Adequate insurance— a must for drivers

How much auto insurance is enough?

That, of course, depends upon the individual, his financial condition and the amount of risk he wants to take.

However, it's a good bet that many persons are lulled into a false sense of security by the purchase of enough coverage to meet post and, where applicable, state auto insurance requirements. "After all," reasoning might go, "I should be in good shape now that I've got the coverage Fort Benning requires."

This may be true. But, it might also be a disasterous conclusion.

Post requirements are for $10,000-$20,000 personal liability and $5,000 property damage coverage. With speed limits being what they are on the post, chances are that this coverage is sufficient for most accidents which might happen on the military reservation.

But, what about a possible head-on collision at high speeds on the open highway with a half-dozen or more persons involved. Will the total of $20,000 personal liability insurance cover all the death and injury claims which might arise as a result of this type accident? — Probably not!

If it turns out the coverage is not sufficient, chances are that financial disaster would be imminent for most of us if we were judged to have been at fault. It would be disaster in the form of making up the difference between the amount of insurance the driver was carrying and the judgement against him as a result of the accident.

The difference in premium for a minimal amount of personal liability insurance (for example, $10,000 per person and a total of $20,000 per accident) and an amount which undoubtedly would be sufficient in the worst possible accident (say $100,000 per person and $300,000 total per accident) is comparatively small. One well known insurance company quotes the difference between these two amounts of coverage as being less than $10 per year.

Though rates may vary among companies, the difference between minimal and adequate coverage is basically quite small when dealing with reputable auto insurance firms. As a matter of fact, it is almost miniscule when weighed in the light of value received.

On the one hand, a person has an amount of auto liability insurance which might easily be inadequate and which could result in his being in moral and financial "hock" for the rest of his life should be involved in a serious accident.

On the other hand, the man with adequate coverage knows he has enough to take care of the situation under the worst possible circumstances.

The difference between the levels of coverage and security may be less than $10 per year.

While we should constantly be on guard to avoid accidents, it is a good idea to be prepared in the event one should happen. Having enough liability insurance is one of the prerequisities of being properly prepared.

In this connection, it is indeed interesting to note that the small difference in cost between the purchase of minimal and adequate auto liability insurance probably represents one of the biggest bargains available to the consumer today.

It's definitely worth looking into. It might save any of us lots of trouble and grief in the long run.

Information program seen as leadership tool

En route to Viet Nam where he is to assume his new post as deputy commander, U. S. Military Assistance Command, Viet Nam, Lt. Gen. John A. Heintges, former Fort Benning commander, offered these reflections on the Army's command information program, in his words, "a tool of leadership."

"The political and military issues of the cold war are real and extremely complex. The company, battery and troop commanders receive plenty of material to assist them in carrying out their responsibility to keep their soldiers informed. But in the final analysis, the most important ingredient for insuring success of the program is the attitude and interest shown by one man—the man who has final and absolute responsibility for 'GETTING THE WORD DOWN TO THE MEN WHO DO THE WORK' . . . that man is the unit commander himself."

The Surgeon says:

'So you've got a virus-- there are plenty around'

"I have a virus."

Yes, you may have a virus. More than 80 human viruses have been discovered in the past 12 years. The illnesses produced by these viruses are varied.

Symptoms may range from those of a cold, and aching painful muscles, to complete paralysis.

In general, viruses are divided into two types — those that affect the gastro - intestinal tract, and those that affect the nose, throat and lungs.

Both types are found world-wide, are spread by person - to - person contact, produce epidemics at times, produce illness in children more commonly than in adults, and may produce minor, insignificant illnesses as well as more serious diseases.

Diagnosis is usually made on a clinical basis since laboratory methods require special facilities and are expensive and time consuming.

As a result of the work of Doctors Salk, Sabin, and others, we now have vaccines to protect us from the dreaded virus, polio.

The common cold is the most viral illness seen. Much work is being done to make a vaccine to give some protection against the cold, but many known types of viruses are involved thus making the preparation of a single vaccine difficult.

Military recruits are frequently hard hit by a viral disease resembling influenza. A vaccine for this has been used by the U. S. Army in some areas. More research is needed to perfect this.

Other viruses may cause fever, sore throat, pneumonia, eye inflammation, pleurisy, nausea and vomiting, diarrhea, and more serious illnesses. Old known viruses are those that cause measles, chicken pox and such.

"Can't I have a shot of penicillin?"

No, a shot of penicillin or other antibiotics is generally of no value in treating viral infections. The more serious infections are hospitalized and treated in a prescribed manner. For the minor illnesses, aspirin, fruit juices, rest, plenty of water, avoidance of fatigue, and restriction of excesses of alcohol are recommended. Nose drops and antihistimaines offer some relief from the symptoms of a cold, but should be limited to a few days use.

Methods of prevention of viral illnesses are limited to avoiding unnecessary contacts with known cases, keeping general health good, and assuring good adequate diet and rest. Use of vitamins in adults is recommended only for specific cases where the physician feels they are indicated.

Some ways to lose your belongings

For those who are burdened with excessive property and money, the provost marshal proposes the following simple rules:

Rule One: Store clothing, shoes, radios, cameras, gifts, groceries and similar articles in your automobile.

Rule Two: Leave the windows down and or the doors unlocked.

Strict adherence to these rules is guaranteed to reduce property ownership and flatten wallets within a short time. In addition to reducing wealth, these rules should shatter any naive idea that private property is somehow immune to theft.

Of course, these "rules" are ridiculous because no one wants his personal belongings to be stolen and yet we, through thoughtlessness, do adhere to these same rules every day.

We consistently leave articles of value in our automobile where they can easily be seen by observant eyes and just as easily removed through unlocked doors or open windows.

On the care of baby teeth

Many parents labor under the delusion that it doesn't make any difference if a child's "baby" or deciduous teeth are cared for or not since they fall out eventually anyway. It is indeed extremely important that they be properly cared for. Some of these so-called baby teeth remain in the child's mouth until he is 11 or 12 years of age, assuming that they are conscientiously maintained.

Deciduous teeth function exactly as do permanent teeth in chewing, speaking and for appearance. One additional, very important function of these primary teeth is the maintenance of space for the permanent teeth soon to replace them. Thus, if a deciduous tooth is lost prematurely and is not replaced with a space maintainer, the other teeth drift into the empty space.

Consequently in this case, there is not sufficient space for the permanent tooth to erupt in its proper position and the teeth are crowded, irregular and "crooked."

Plans for future meetings and activities were discussed. New methods of playing and teaching the organ were demonstrated by Mrs. James Conley and Mrs. Charles T. Poole Jr.

The Organ Club will meet the second Monday of each month. The next meeting will be on Dec. 13 at 8 p.m. at the Colaianni Music Company. The program will feature a performance by a guest organist.

According to a spokesman for the group, new members are being sought among the OWC members, their families and bachelor officers. Organ lessons for both children and adults are being offered.

Army Daughters Mix Work and Play

BY DEBORAH LONG

On the first Saturday of every month, off the Supper Club's main ballroom, one of Fort Benning's "all-female" organizations meets. The Junior Army Daughters of America (JADA) has its membership open to all high school girls interested in fun and work. At present, more than 50 girls attend the monthly luncheons.

Johnette Brickhouse is president of the group and is assisted by Mary O'Neill, vice-president; Cindy Wilson, recording secretary; Debbie Robertson, corresponding secretary; and Anne Beatty, treasurer.

JADA will hold its annual Christmas Ball on Dec. 23 in the main ballroom of the Main Officers Club. Debbie Robertson and Sandy Schaffer are chairmen for the affair and they expect at least 75 couples to attend. The dance, for JADA members only, will be from 8 till 11 p.m. with music by "The Abstracts." Tickets are now on sale at Columbus, Baker and Pacelli High Schools.

Hospital parties are also held each month for wards at Martin Army with Tina Yokum acting as chaiman. The fun hour usually begins at 2 p.m. Cookies and refreshments are served to the patients and ping pong interests most when the party is held in the recreation hall.

Of course, membership in JADA is just as much work as fun. There have been many successful charity projects of which the group is proud. Each December JADA distributes Christmas baskets to needy families in the Columbus-Fort Benning area. Baskets usually range in price from $15 to $20, depending on the amount of food brought in by members.

Money for the "touching up" of baskets this year will come from profits made at the recent JADA "Turkey Get-Away" which netted $94. The group also holds bake sales and clothes drives.

Until last month, JADA girls babysat for families in the area and gave JADA 10 per cent of their night's earnings to boost the treasurer's "money box".

Katie Hennessey, hospitality chairman, will be happy to introduce JADA to any new arrivals on post. Interested girls should contact Katie at 687-0497.

See ya' next month!

Plei Me Battle Earns Praise From Military Leaders for 1st Cavalry

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Army Chief of Staff Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Adm. U. S. Grant Sharpe, commander in chief, Pacific, and Marine Corps commandant Gen. Wallace M. Greene have sent congratulatory messages to the 1st Cavalry Division for its performances in battle around Plei Me, Viet Nam.

Johnson told Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard, 1st Cavalry commander, that "Your sky soldiers and their brave Vietnamese allies carry the hopes of free men everywhere as they repel the heavy enemy attacks.

"The Army and the nation take pride in your display of courage, determination and fighting skill. The brave and resolute performance of the 1st Cavalry Division in this battle is in keeping with the finest traditions of the American soldier."

The top marine said that at Plei Me the Army had demonstrated "the steadfast fortitude, indomitable spirit and ready skill to engage a tenacious enemy.

"On behalf of the U. S. marines, I extend congratulations and appreciation to you (Gen. Johnson) and your forces for the accomplishment of a most formidable task"

Pacific commander Sharpe cabled Gen. William Westmoreland, Military Assistance Command, Viet Nam commander, and Kinnard:

"I join Americans everywhere in hailing the valiant action of the officers and men of the 1st Cavalry.

"The victory you have achieved in the battle of Ia Drang is a victory for free men everywhere. The communist aggressors from North Viet Nam now know they are no match for the sky soldiers of our formidable 1st Cav."

In major engagements in the Plei-Me area, the 1st Cavalry has been credited with chewing up several North Vietnamese army regiments, killing more than 1600.

In the battle, biggest involving American troops in Viet Nam, the 1st suffered the heaviest casualties of the war.

The Civilian Becomes A Soldier Under Drill Instructors' Firm Hand

BY RAYMOND HAYES

The new phase of life that began for basic combat trainees almost two months ago at the U.S. Army Training Center here will come to a close today, with the first graduation of over 1,000 members of the 1st Battalion, 1st Training Brigade.

Following today's graduating cycle, classes of 1,000 to 1,100 will graduate each week from the center for the next 52 weeks.

For those graduating today, Army life began with a three day stay at the U.S. Army Training Center Reception Station. The Reception Station, located in the Harmony Church area, processes the new inductee or enlistee into the Army.

The first stop was the Initial Reception Point (IRP) where trainees fill out a number of forms. After the first part of seemingless endless paperwork, the new GIs were introduced to a man that seemed very determined to turn the "eight-to-fivers" into a 24-hour fighting man.

The man wearing a broad rimed hat was a drill sergeant. This man, with a command voice like a clap of thunder, stayed close to the trainees for the eight weeks of training.

After completion of processing, clothing issues and testing, the trainees found themselves on a bus heading for a basic training unit.

At the outset of training at 1st Battalion, 1st Brigade, the men were made aware that basic combat training is a program of military training designed to teach the fundamental skills of the military arts and sciences to the individual soldier.

They were shown that every individual soldier must learn and learn well the essentials of military bearing, appearance, courtesy and discipline as well as other basic military techniques and procedures regardless of his particular branch or field of military endeavor.

Emphasis was placed on training the new soldier in the duties of the individual rifleman, upon indoctrinating him in the ways of the Army and on preparing him for subsequent training in more advanced skills.

A good deal of the training received by the graduating class came under the Committee Group. The Committee Group is made up of a number of instructors who are experts in a particular field. They gave training in marksmanship, first aid, hand - to - hand combat, grenades, counter-insurgency operations and many more phases of the military arts and sciences.

The committee devoted a large block of instruction in teaching trainees the use of the M-14 rifle — the soldier's best friend. During this block of instruction, emphasis was placed on practical work with minimum time devoted to explanation and demonstration. The culmination of many hours of weapons training was the record qualification firing. The troopers from the 1st Battalion qualified as expert riflemen, sharpshooters and marksmen depending on the accuracy they demonstrated on the record firing range.

The trainee also learned how to use hand grenades. The phase of training was conducted using dummy and practice grenades, progressing in final training to the use of live grenades.

The basic principles of chemical, biological and nuclear warfare were also taught.

Intelligence training familiarized the trainee with the principles of counterintelligence in denying the enemy information. Also taught were escape and evasion techniques. One of the most interesting exercises was the close combat course.

In this training, the necessity for mutual support and teamwork as a member of a fire team was taught. Maneuvering through obstacles over a controlled course was accomplished by applying the principles of "fire and movement." As on the battlefield, live amunition was used. The trainee learned to use his weapon quickly and accurately on surprise and fleeting targets normally presented by the enemy.

The infiltration course, which is negotiated under "live" fire is designed to prepare the individual soldier to withstand the initial psychological shock and physical stress of combat.

During all phases of the eight weeks of training, the men were exposed to constant physical training. This type of training helped to develop the physical traits of strength, endurance, agility and coordination; and to develop the mental traits of confidence, aggressiveness and teamwork.

Soldiers, Families Give Thanks

Nearly 400 Fort Benning families shared a traditional Thanksgiving meal with soldiers last week in unit mess halls throughout the post.

A large number of the military dependents were the families of men fighting in Viet Nam. They have been left behind by the men of the 1st Cavalry Division and most live in Columbus.

Among the units hosting the dinners was the 1st Battalion of the 29th Infantry which shared turkey and all the trimmings with 50 families of soldiers in Viet Nam.

The six mess halls of 10th Aviation Group served dinner to 2013 persons last week including 538 dependents and guests. Fifty of the guests were the families of men once assigned to the group and who are now in Viet Nam.

The Center Troop Command also celebrated Thanksgiving with dependents. The Commands' 39th Transportation Battalion hosted a special dinner for the families of men in Viet Nam.

The wives of these men come from all parts of the world and many speak with foreign accents. But they know the full meaning of Thanksgiving.

The dinner drew grateful response from the families and from the men in Viet Nam who were unable to share Thanksgiving with their wives and children this year.

The following is a letter received by the Commanding Officer of CTC from one 1st Cav trooper:

"Please accept my thanks for the considerate gesture of hospitality that you and your command have made to the wives and dependents of the 1st Air Cavalry division.

In future years, I will often recall, that while I was stationed in Viet Nam, the members of Center Troop Command graciously shared their Thanksgiving dinner with my family.

As a remembrance of this thoughtfulness, my family and I will annually extend to Center Troop Command an open invitation to share Thanksgiving dinner at our home in Columbus, Ga."

Sincerely yours
Paul J. Bradley

Where Have All the Rugby Balls Gone?--Ask 'Greta', She Has One Answer

(AP) — Goats have won some small fame for their ability to eat indigestible items like tin cans. Now let's add the name of a two-year-old Alsatian dog named "Greta."

Greta fancies footballs, the kind the English use in a rugby match. She is owned by a 45-year-old widow, Mrs. Nancy Bate, who lives in Warrington, England, right alongside the Warrington Rugby Union Club.

Only a hedge and a fence separate her back yard and the rugby field. Quite often a ball is kicked into her garden and there to greet it is Greta.

She pounces on any football that comes her way.

Cavalry Volunteers Rebuilding One-Doctor Hospital in Viet Nam

BY MARV WOLF

AN KHE, Viet Nam — A group of some 20 volunteers of the 1st Cavalry Division's 15th Medical Battalion are rebuilding the small, one-doctor hospital serving the people of Antuc Province.

Highest priority on the renovation schedule went to building a three-strand barbed wire fence around the clump of hospital buildings.

"We need a fence to keep out the chickens, pigs and cows that wander around the hospital grounds. Also, the fence will help keep Victor Charley out if he decides he doesn't like our doctor," said Sgt. Maj. Lloyd R. Daniel.

The next project is to erect four large general purpose tents, move all the patients and staff into them, and then disinfect the entire three-building complex.

"After it's been completely cleaned, we plan to plug up all the holes and cracks we can find, then give the place a complete paint job. If we can acquire some more land, we're going to build the doctor a house. Right now he and his wife and their four children have to share the hospital with his patients. It's pretty crowded," Daniel said.

Since the clinic is without electricity or running water, the medics plan to install a portable generator and open an abandoned well. In addition, modern surgical equipment will be installed.

According to First Sgt. Leonard Julian of Columbus, the hospital has been handling between 100 and 120 patients a day. Besides the doctor, there are only his wife, a nurse and two male assistants to run the entire clinic.

"To date the morgue has enjoyed the most business," said Julian, indicating a sagging stucco structure with two doors, vacant except for some Viet Cong corpses. "But when the villagers learn that we plan to feed the sick who stay, the volume of patients will probably double."

At present, only those patients who are unable to walk or who have communicable diseases are housed overnight by the clinic. Any food or clothing they require must be brought by relatives or friends.

The medics think that the renovation project will take at least a month.

Once the "new look" has been achieved, Capt. (Dr.) Larry McKinstry of Columbus plans to begin working with the Vietnamese staff.

"When word gets around that An Tuc Province has, at last, a first-rate hospital," Capt. McKinstry said, "we expect to be flooded with patients."

Honor Ceremonies Greet British Officers Here

Fort Benning welcomed three British officers to the home of the Infantry with an honors ceremony on York Field Tuesday morning.

Senior officer of the group was Maj. Gen. Peter Young, director of Infantry, British Army. He was accompanied by Maj. Gen. Richard A. Fyffe, commander of the British Army Staff in Washington, D. C., and Lt. Col. Philip Pardoe, British liaison officer, U.S. Army Combat Developments Command, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Local commander for the honors ceremony was Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commanding general of Fort Benning.

Troops from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, commanded by Capt. Max G. Marx, provided the honor guard. Battery A, 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery, commanded by Capt. Willis R. Bunting, fired a 13-gun salute.

The visitors were briefed on the history, development and administration of the Infantry School; toured the academic building, the Mobility Department and Officer Candidate School; and visited the U.S. Army Infantry Board.

Wednesday, they were briefed on the U.S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency and saw airborne training on Eubanks Field before departing from Muscogee County Airport.

Benning Nurses To Hold Meeting On Post Monday

The Registered Nurses Association of Fort Benning will meet at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the second floor conference room at Martin Army Hospital.

Information will be available on the American Red Cross volunteer program and on a refresher course for Registered Nurses to be conducted at the hospital in the near future.

Wounded Soldiers to be Airlifed In New Airmobile Surgical Center

By Nick Palladino

AN KHE, Viet Nam . . . The 1st Air Cavalry Division is currently constructing the first airmobile surgical center in existence for use in forward combat areas where evacuation by chopper can often be a hazardous and time - consuming proposition.

With the addition of this new equipment many battlefield casualties can be saved because "We'll be able to treat them on the spot," Jueri J. Svjagintesv, commanding officer of the division's 15th Medical Battalion said.

The flying operating room — large enough to hold 14 people and support four surgical operations at the same time — can be sling loaded beneath a CH-54 "Flying Crane" and transported anywhere.

Svjagintsev explained that before his unit came up with this idea they would have to risk flying serious casualties out of a combat area or else perform a make-shift operation under poor conditions.

"How can a doctor undertake a delicate operation with sand blowing around, copters buzzing in the background, and a murderous climate draining the energy and resistance of his patient," he said.

"Our new center will have all the equipment necessary to perform almost any operation, air conditioning to purify the air and keep the interior of the pod at a comfortable temperature, hot or cold running water, adequate lighting and a full stock of all necessary supplies and drugs," the colonel said.

"Time can be the difference between life and death and with this new surgical center we're going to have the time and facilities to save lives," he said.

Request Approved Allowing PXs To Carry Wider Range of Items

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Stateside exchanges will soon be able to carry a much wider price range of products and some new ones, including tape recorders, have been added to the list of things that can be sold.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman, Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, has approved a Defense Department request to allow the new price ranges and lines.

A 1949 agreement between the committee and the military services requires the Pentagon to get approval of major price and line changes.

The new items will not be immediately available since it takes time in the purchasing pipeline to place orders, receive merchandise, mark it up and get it on the shelves.

The new orders mean that there will be a wider range of portable typewriters, footwear for sports, drinking glasses, men's civilian shirts, record players, cameras and projectors, auto seat covers and luggage racks.

New items coming to the Stateside exchange shelves for the first time will be tape recorders, pre-cut lengths of yard goods and women's gloves.

In the typewriter field, for example, only very low-cost machines can be sold now. When the change goes into effect soon medium price typewriters will be sold. The expensive ones are still out. Only one of the 10 American-made typewriter models could qualify under the old cost limitations. Now most of the companies will be able to sell their machines in the exchanges.

Better Quality

The old regulations said only white civilian shirts could be sold in the service stores. The change will bring in better quality, higher priced shirts and also permit other colors, such as the stipped buttondown shirt or the popular blue oxford buttondown shirt. Shirts now on sale in the exchanges are in the $4 retail price range. Soon the prepackaged $5 and $6 shirts will become available.

Tape recorders were added to the list of items which can be sold because more and more men in uniform are using tape as a substitute for letters home. In addition, the roll and pitch on small naval vessels makes ordinary records impractical. The tape recorders solve those movement problems. They are also useful to military men in language study.

Less Increased

The record player line will be increased because companies have improved their products and the electronics industry has added many extras which are not available in the low cost record players now sold in the exchanges.

About the same is true of cameras where electric eye exposure control and other improvements have made them more expensive and under the old cost limitations unavailable in the Stateside exchange for military men.

Exchange managers and purchasing agents will soon be getting guidelines from headquarters on how to prepare to handle the new lines.

ATC Trainees First to Receive PFC Stripes

Two new soldiers now in training at Fort Benning's recently established Army Training Center were the first basic trainees on post to receive the stripes of a private first class.

John F. Veld and Eildrfonso Rivera, both of Company E, 1st Battalion, 1st Brigade, were promoted to PFC after completion of six weeks of training.

Both of the trainees have prior military service. Veld served in the Marine Corps from 1955 to 1959 and Rivera served with an Army transportation unit in France from 1959 to 1962.

DENTAL VISITS

Children should begin regular visits to the dentist as soon as all first teeth have erupted at age two and a half or three, according to the American Dental Association.

Salvation Army Dedicated To Helping Area's Needy

The Salvation Army, a member of the United Givers Fund, is a social organization with a religious aim and it is now in its 72nd year of serving the needy of the Columbus - Phenix City-Fort Benning community.

Maj. Arthur J. Kinlaw, officer in charge of Salvation Army activities in the Chattahoochee Valley, said recently that "needy families come in every day for emergency relief. When they come for assistance, we endeavor to help them in every way, regardless of race, color or creed."

The Salvation Army is one of the 27 agencies which receives United Givers Fund dollars from Fort Benning. The drive is now in its seventh week.

Kinlaw stated that the mission of the Columbus Salvation Army is "the same as it is world-wide: to help people both spiritually and materially when help is needed."

The Valley's Salvation Army bastion consists of The Citadel at 1714 2nd Avenue and a Beallwood Corps at 5101 12th Avenue, which began January 21, 1951, as an outpost of the Citadel.

There is also a Salvation Army thrift store at 2208 2nd Avenue where clothing and furniture is sold rather than dispensed as charity. The prices are low; a pair of shoes might go for 50 cents.

"You might outfit an entire family for less than two dollars," said Maj. Kinlaw.

In "need" cases, or with fire victims who are destitute, the articles are given free.

"General" William Booth, a Methodist minister who started the Army in London in 1865 by preaching to the poor, changed its name from The Christian Mission to The Salvation Army in 1878. The Salvation Army reached the United States in 1880.

The Valley Salvation Army will receive $34,730 this year from United Givers to carry on its philanthropic activities. This amount is in addition to the annual income of approximately $35,000 which is received from meeting collections, the thrift store, street collections and donations.

Activities of the Salvation Army include ladies leagues, men's clubs, musical instruction, chapel services, scouting programs, Bible classes, Junior Legion, transient and family service including meals, clothing and furniture.

Army Strength Highest Since 1962 Buildup

WASHINGTON — Even though the 235,000 - man increase in Army strength has not yet been acutely felt outside training centers, Army strength for the first time since 1962 already exceeds a million men.

Preliminary indications are that on Sept. 30, 1965 there were 1,002,471 men in the Army. In June 1962 Army strength reached 1,066,000.

University Offering Math Grants to Retired Officers

DURHAM, N.C. — Retired military officers are being offered an opportunity by Duke University to pursue a special program preparing them to teach high school math or math through calculus in college.

This is the ninth consecutive year in which this program has been offered by Duke with the support of grants by the National Science Foundation.

Through support of the Foundation, all instructional costs are defrayed; a book allowance of $75 and a stipend of $50 per month are provided. Duke pays a stipend of $600 for the internship teaching performed by the retiree during the academic year.

The time required to complete the 1966-67 program is approximately one calendar year. Following successful completion of the program, the retiree is awarded the Master of Arts teaching degree (MAT) by Duke.

Since inception of the program at Duke, 85 retired officers have completed the course. Of the 84 living graduates, 74 hold teaching appointments for the 1965-66 academic year: 58 at the college-junior college level and 16 at technical and secondary schools. Fifteen officers are now enrolled in the 1965-66 program.

To be eligible for the program, the applicant should have a bachelor's degree and must have completed mathematics through calculus.

Interested persons should write to the chairman, Department of Mathematics, Duke University, Durham, N.C. Applications should be filed not later than April 30, 1966.

LOOKING AHEAD

The next great advance against dental disease will be the development of a coating for the teeth which will reduce the ability of bacteria to cling to the tooth surface, Dr. Gilbert J. Parfitt, Vancouver, Canada, suggested at a recent American Dental Association meeting.

Such coating would affect both dental decay and gum disease, since both dental disorders are affected by the collection of material containing bacteria around the teeth. He added that removal of this material is difficult, since the "bacteria adhere to each other and to the tooth surface with tenacity."

Defense Department Seeking to Benefit Career Veterans in Revision of New Cold War GI Legislation

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department is now seeking ways to modify cold war GI Bill legislation so it will benefit career military men as well as young men who serve for a short time.

The Pentagon's review of GI Bill legislation is being conducted by DoD's assistant secretary of defense for manpower. Once completed, the DoD position — for or against the legislation — will be presented to a special White House study group which is now looking into the entire peacetime benefits program.

The Pentagon has traditionally opposed passage of a peacetime GI Bill on the ground that its educational and other benefits encourage young men to leave the service after their first tours. This enticement has been offered at a time when the armed forces' main personnel problem is retention.

Study Group

In addition to The Defense Department, the White House study group is composed of representatives from the Budget Bureau; Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare; Labor Department; and the Veterans Administration. The study group's recommendations were scheduled to go to the President early in November but probably won't go forward now until December.

The group is now awaiting recommendations for or against the legislation from all of its agency members. Once these recommendations have been received, the study group will meet to thrash out an Administration recommendation.

It could be part of the President's legislative program for the upcoming year which will be presented to Congress sometime in January. Whatever the Administration's position, the House Veterans Affairs Committee plans to make the Cold War GI Bill its number one order of business in the upcoming Congress.

Defense is considering a number of measures — none yet finally agreed upon — which would enhance the attractiveness of the bill for men who stay with the colors for a career or for more than one hitch.

The major Defense aim is to not only provide educational benefits for short-term veterans but also for men still in the service and those who retire and need education for a second career.

Possible Changes

The changes the Defense Department is looking into would make it possible for some men to leave the service, get their education and then return. Another change would require men to serve longer before getting their benefits.

A third revision being studied would give men who have combat experience more benefits than those without it.

All of these things are still under study but it is clear that Defense's intent is to change the bill so it will aid retention rather than increase retention problems as the Pentagon feared the original bill might do.

Whatever favorable recommendations are adopted by the White House study group, officials believe they will call for grants rather than loans, much like the World War II and Korea GI Bill education programs. One of the recommendations put forth by Republicans last session was for education benefits on a loan basis.

The Administration recommendations would be offered as amendments to the GI Bill introduced by Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D., Tex.). The measure, S-9, has already passed the Senate.

The House Veterans Affairs Committee held several open hearings on it and other GI Bill proposals late in the session. It agreed to postpone further debate until the next session to give the White House study group time to develop its own recommendations.

Extends Benefits

Briefly, S-9, would extend GI benefits to all men who have entered the military service since Jan. 31, 1955, with benefits ending upon termination of the draft. The measure would provide one and one half days of school aid for each day of service. The monthly allowance would be $110 for single veterans, $135 for those with one dependent and $160 for those with two or more dependents.

S-9 would also provide home and farm loan benefits. Members of the White House study group believe its recommendations will also call for veterans home loan benefits. These are now available, be available under the GI to peacetime veterans from the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) but at a higher interest rate then would FHA-insured loans.

Col. Peot Named Member Of Shooting Committees

COL. PEOT
MTU Commander

Col. Joseph J. Peot, commanding officer of the U. S. Army Marksmanship Training Unit, has been appointed as a member of two international shooting committees and this week was in Santiago, Chile to observe the World Moving Target Championships.

The Marksmanship Unit, home of the Army's premier rifle, pistol and shotgun shooters, has placed three men on the 12-man U. S. squad which is competing in the event in Chile under the sanction of the International Shooting Union.

Peot, on his return from South America, journeyed to Washington, D. C., to represent the Army at the quadrennial meeting of the U. S. Olympic Committee, Nov. 29-30.

He was notified of his selection as a committee member by the Department of Army.

While in the nation's capital, he attended a meeting of the National Rifle Association's International Shooting Committee as the Army representative. He was appointed to this group by Harlan B. Carter, president of the NRA.

Peot has commanded the Marksmanship Unit since July 1963 and in the intervening months the unit has placed shooters on the U. S. Olympic team which participated in the Games at Tokyo in '64, winning seven of the 12 medals taken by the shooting team, including a pair of Gold Medals. They have fired successfully in international matches with European nations and Canada.

On the national level, MTU's soldiers have won numerous American individual and team titles and have consistently been the leaders in competition with the other services in annual matches.

Families of Soldiers Killed in Action to Get Large Death Gratuity

A $5,000 death gratuity is now payable to survivors of veterans who died while in active service between January 1, 1957 and September 29, 1965, Pete Wheeler, Director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, said this week.

The veteran's death, under a law passed by the last Congress, must have occurred (1) as a direct result of actions of hostile forces; (2) or, as a direct result of an accident involving a military or naval aircraft, or an aircraft under charter of the Department of Defense, Army, Navy, or Air Force; (3) or, as a direct result of the extra hazard of military or naval service; (4) or, while performing service for which incentive pay for hazardous duty or special pay is authorized, according to Veterans administration regulations.

The $5,000 gratuity will be reduced by any GI life insurance proceeds paid to any beneficiary, or the amount of death compensation and indemnity received on account of the death.

The veteran's unremarried widow, his children, his parents, or others are entitled to the gratuity, in that order of precedence.

One eligible for the gratuity must file a claim on or before September 29, 1966. Payment of the gratuity bars all future compensation and indemnity payments.

Defense Board Members Visit Infantry Center

About 40 members of the Inter - American Defense Board, senior officers from the U.S. and 15 Allied countries, visited Fort Benning Nov. 29-30 for a orientation on Infantry activities.

The visitors were briefed on the history, organization and development of the Infantry School, toured the school's academic building (Bldg. 4), and saw field demonstration of Infantry airborne and Special Forces training.

Following their arrival at Lawson Army Airfield, they were guests at an official luncheon in the Main Officers' Open Mess. An official reception was held for the group at the Open Mess.

The Inter - American Defense Board is a special planning agency of the Organization of American States, which coordinates common defense measures of the Western Hemisphere and establishes the broadest basis for military cooperation.

It consists of representatives of all of the American Republics except Cuba, a total of 20 countries. Current chairman of the board is Vice-Adm. Bernard L. Austin of the U. S. Navy.

IBM Jockeys' Appeal Gets Willing Mascot

BY JOE TREASTER

AN KHE, Viet Nam — The 1st Air Cavalry Division's IBM machine jockeys—the men who mechanically keep tabs on more than 15,000 soldiers — are in the process of getting themselves a mail-order mascot.

Their choice, strangely enough, was a shapely, 23-year-old hazel-eyed, honey blonde.

For weeks the 39 men, mostly single and in their early 20s had pined for a mascot, not knowing exactly what would fit the bill. Then, PFC Harold Blubagh of Washington, D. C., whose youngish appearance had won him the nickname, "Cruit" (for recruit), flipped open his wallet to a picture of his sister.

The problem was solved: Miss "Cruit" would be the mascot, if only she'd say yes.

So off went this appeal to the beauty in Washington, D. C.:

"While other companies in our immediate vicinity proudly flaunt a variety of animals (an armadillo, a mongrel pup), we have nothing, not a mouse, a sparrow, a blade of grass; nothing. You can well imagine our state of morale and, low though it may be, it is steadily plummetting."

Would Miss "Cruit" Blubaugh be their mascot?

Indeed she would wrote Miss Blubaugh in an affectionate reply. And a full-color, 8-by-10 photograph of her in a swim suit would be on its way to Viet Nam soon. The IBM jockeys finally had a mascot.

Status of Women Seen Doubtful When State's Welfare Is at Stake

Why do women in Communist countries work at full-time jobs — including those involving the kind of back-breaking labor closed to women in most countries either by custom or law?

First, the law discriminates against women who stay at home. To be eligible for social security or medical care, a woman must be "productive." Raising children and keeping a home neat and pleasant is considered productive by the Communist rulers — but not as productive as making steel for tanks or laying rails for railroads.

Second, most men are unable to support their families on their wages or salaries. The government — interested in putting as many people to work as possible so as to increase production — sets wages and salaries at so low a rate that the wives simply must find employment to make ends meet.

The monthly wage of the average Soviet worker is about seventy-five dollars. This covers the food bill — and little else. Wives of Communist party bosses or of highly-paid industrial executives do not need to find jobs. However, the mass of women have no choice but to go out of the home and earn some money.

Communist Propaganda

To offset such facts, Communist propaganda often makes the point that three-quarters of Soviet physicians are women as compared with a much smaller percentage in non-Communist countries. This is supposed to prove that there is no discrimination against women — for if they are driven into doing the heaviest kind of manual labor, they are at least given the chance of becoming physicians.

But actually this is only part of the picture. Physicians are not that numerous and a simple comparison of figures shows that there are many millions of women doing heavy manual labor in industry and agriculture but only about a quarter of a million women in the medical profession.

Moreover, the earnings of the Soviet physician are very modest. She (or he) earns the same salary that a high-school teacher earns. In other countries, as in the United States, for example, the typical physician earns about three to four times as much as a high-school teacher.

The suspicion arises, therefore, that gifted women are directed into the medical profession in the Soviet Union because there are not enough able men willing to do that kind of work for so little money. Although virtually all medical work is done in government-run clinics and hospitals, there are a few outstanding specialists who have a very lucrative private practice for wealthy people; but women generally do not reach such high levels of professional status.

Then, too, Russian college girls find it easier to enter medical school or schools of education than to enter fields like physics, chemistry, business and government. Officially, this discrimination is not admitted; in practice it exists, which even devout Communists will admit — unofficially.

Bravery Stands In Night Assault

By Hank Allison

AN KHE, Viet Nam — They came in by night in a lightning - fast air-assault.

Elements of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's 9th Cavalry were surrounded and heavily engaged with a numerically superior North Vietnamese Army force eight miles west of Plei Me.

At midnight, Capt. Theodore S. Danielson, commander of Company A, 1st Battalion 8th Airborne Cavalry, got the word to move in and reinforce the surrounded cavalry men.

As the lift helicopters came for their landing they drew heavy fire.

The 3rd Platoon, moving into positions on the southern edge of the landing zone, started to reinforce the sparsely held line. They began to take casualties almost immediately.

First Hit

One of the first hit was Lt. John B. Hanlon leader of the 1st platoon. Paralyzed from the waist down, Hanlon continued to lead his men for thirty minutes. He directed movement, shouted orders and held on.

Finally, realizing that he was slipping into a state of shock, Lt. Hanlon turned over command of the platoon to SFC Kenneth A. Reveer.

Sp4 Raymond Ortiz, a medic from Headquarters company, 8th Cavalry, wounded three times himself, continued to move up and down the lines treating wounded riflemen.

The combined 1st Cav force fought through the night and in the early morning hours the enemy fire diminished.

Enemy Withdrawn

With 13 men injured or dead, the 3rd platoon of Company A prepared to assault the ring of enemy soldiers. But the North Vietnamese had withdrawn, leaving only a few snipers.

As the sun came up, the men looked around them at the littered battlefield.

They had done what one combat-hardened platoon sergeant called "the near impossible", the landing of an entire company in an air assault relief operation in the dark under heavy enemy fire.

SANTA CLAUS

Willie Mays will be a kind of Santa Claus in Oregon and Washington state. The outfield star of the San Francisco Giants has offered to tour Job Corps centers in the two states during the Christmas season. Says Mays: "If there's anything I can do to encourage youngsters to further their education, or to train for good jobs, I'm happy to do it."

"The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts, bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or a party."

Heat Reflecting Paint Developed For Missiles

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. (ANF) — Olive-drab paint that reflects solar heat and helps to camouflage Army missiles in flight has been developed by the Army's Coating and Chemical Laboratory here.

Considered a breakthrough in a "nearly impossible search," the paint reflects the sun's infrared rays, an ability heretofore the domain of light-color finishes. The reflecting properties keep temperatures down within the missile's complex interior.

But light color on the outside also brought with it ease of detection when the missile was in flight. Using the OD finish, the missile is swathed in an "aerial camouflage," thus combining both important needs in one layer of paint.

143 Career Officers Get Diplomas

Maj. Gen. Beverly E. Powell, commander of the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky., was the principal speaker at the graduation ceremony and presented a special award to the distinguished honor graduate, Capt. Wallace H. Duncan.

Gen. Powell addressed the graduates as fellow students, saying he considered himself a student striving to learn something new every day.

He said, "When a day goes by that you do not learn something new, it may be considered as a day wasted."

The general, who has a unit of his division in Viet Nam, discussed methods of warfare being employed in Southeast Asia and read excerpts from letters sent to him by some of his officers.

He said, "The fundamentals you have been taught here are sound. Now you must help train our Army's most important resources, the basic man. Today's American soldier has no equal, he will follow where you lead. You must train him as a fighting machine."

CG Visits United Givers Headquarters

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commanding general and Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander, along with men from the Infantry Center Troop Command, met with representatives of the United Givers at their headquarters in Columbus Monday.

Temp S. Davis Jr., president of the local UG, welcomed York and the other post representatives and expressed his appreciation for the efforts which have gone into the Fort Benning United Givers Drive. Davis introduced the UG executive director, Martelle Layfield; Joe Flowers, treasurer; and Mrs. Mary Young, UG publicity director.

Gen. York thanked Davis for the opportunity to meet with the fund drive representatives and to be able to tour some of the agencies benefiting from the campaign.

The group visited the Edwina Wood School for retarded children; the Cerebral Palsy Center where they saw youngsters being taught through the use of speech therapy; the Armed Forces YMCA, the home away from home for the serviceman; and the South Columbus Boys' Club, which has a large membership of military dependents.

Post Arty Unit Changes Commanders

The 2nd Battalion, 42nd Artillery, 197th Infantry Brigade held a change of command ceremony at Essebagger Field last week.

Maj. Herbert H. Martin, formerly the battalion's executive officer, assumed command upon the departure of Lt. Col. Charles F. Parker who has been assigned to the University of Chattanooga as head of the Military Science Department.

The battalion's new commander has been with the unit since its organization under the 11th Air Assault Division in May 1964.

Other changes in the battalion's command and staff structure were also made concurrently. Maj. James W. Cain, formerly the battalion S-3, was appointed battalion executive officer while Capt. Loyal G. Hightower assumed the S-3 position. Capt. Gilbert L. Muchmore and 1st Lt. Daniel W. Fletcher will command the two batteries.

KENTUCKIANS PAID

Following the War of 1812, Kentuckians who had soldiered in it were paid off at Lexington with five wagon loads of silver from Cincinnati. The silver came from settlers who had bought land throughout Ohio from the Federal Land Office. The money was mostly in Spanish silf dollars.

PX Style Trends Shown At Meeting in Atlanta

From The Army Times

Style trends for clothes to come on sale in the exchanges next spring and summer were revealed at the big semi-annual clothing clinic in Atlanta.

For almost every member of the family, the so-called "permanent crease textiles are going to be popular. This is true in boys' wear (particularly trousers), men's wear, women's slacks and even girls' blouses.

Expect to see the prices on boys' tailored suits and sports coats to be higher.

This has been caused by increases in basic piece goods costs plus a new union increase which became effective in June.

The look for women's sweaters in the exchanges will be in sleeveless shells with turtle, mock turtle, V, boat, cowl and jewel necklines. There are going to be some three-corner, colonial-style girls' hats for sale.

The excise tax cut authorized this year has had no major effect on exchange sales, officials say here. "People tend to buy these commodities whether there is an excise tax or not," one reported.

The pay raises, however, have had a different effect. New figures from the exchanges show that the average serviceman spends about $45 a month in the exchanges. About a year ago, the figure was only $34 a month. Officials say the increases have been caused by pay raises, mainly, and the fact that military families have more disposable income than they had several years ago.

Not to be overlooked, though, are the improvements in the exchanges. There's been an ambitious modernization program and improved merchandising techniques.

A lot of the stuff military people buy in the exchanges is stomach-bound. For example, the exchanges' food operations sell about 400 million cups of coffee a year, 60 million hamburgers and 28 million hot dogs. About 12 per cent of the food sales volume is in ice cream and milk shakes and drinks.

Electric portable typewriters are coming to exchange shelves as well as the sturdier regular portables announced earlier. Officials at exchange headquarters say there are at least two U.S. - manufactured electric portables now on the market which can qualify under the new rules.

Exchanges have been advised not to stock men's military dress shoes made of Corfam or other plastic materials. The Defense Supply Agency says it won't authorize the plastic shoe material for regulation military footwear.

We go to all the trouble of redesigning our interiors, improving our handling, and refining our Wide-Track ride, and some people buy us just for our looks.

Our new Executive Hardtop Coupe.

Just once we'd like to have people fall in love with the inside of our cars before they flip for the outside. Why, this year alone we've made available brand-new wraparound buckets. Profile bench seats. More rich, genuine walnut paneling. And nicer instrument clusters you've never seen.

We even had our engineers take our test cars apart piece by piece to come up with improvements that, incredibly enough, make our Pontiacs smoother, quieter, more enjoyable to drive.

Really, though—we don't care which feature gets you inside a new Pontiac, as long as it gets you there. And it will. At least judging by the number of Pontiacs you see on the road.

Credit Union Offers Loans

Warren A. Wyrick, president of the Infantry Center Federal Credit Union announced that complete Union services, including loans, will now be available to all military and civilian personnel who were members of the Credit Union as of Nov. 30, 1965.

For those personnel who become members after Dec. 1, 1965, services will be provided to the maximum extent possible, consistent with the expansion of the Credit Union office staff and the acquisition of more office space during the month of December, Wyrick said.

He added complete service to all members is planned for Jan. 1966, at which time the enlarged office staff will be operating in expanded facilities.

He urged all military personnel who have not become members of the Union to join.

Credit Union field representatives are located in all major units, he concluded. They can be contacted for further information and details on advantages of membership.

Quick Geography

America's Trademark as Varied as the Nation

Mention most countries and people generally picture characteristic and distinctive physical features — the Alps of Switzerland, the islands of Greece, the fjords of Norway. Mention the United States and the picture is a composite.

The U. S. is a huge country (3,615,211 square miles, 17 times larger than France). It embraces almost every geographic formation to be found anywhere: mountain ranges and deep canyons, great river systems and landlocked lakes, rolling plains and fertile delta areas, forests and woodlands, even deserts and swamps.

The continental U. S. is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on the east, the Pacific Ocean on the west and the Gulf of Mexico on the southeast. Across its northern boundary, the U. S. shares an unfortified, 3,986-mile border with Canada and in the south a land border with Mexico of about half that length.

But this land mass comprises only 48 of the 50 states. Alaska, which itself is more than twice the size of France, juts out into the sea from northwestern Canada and Hawaii is a series of islands in the Pacific 2,400 miles from the mainland.

Every race, every creed, every national origin is reflected in the composition of the American people who now number over 192 million and who are increasing at a rate of about three million annually.

The multiracial nature of the population is a reflection of the great immigration from abroad which has continued throughout American history.

Mobility is a hallmark of the American people in the 20th century. Each year one American in five moves to a new home.

Since World War II, increasing numbers of Americans have moved to the western states, particularly to California, Colorado and Arizona.

California has recently succeeded New York as the most populous of the 50 states.

Space-Age Complex

The major growth on the east coast has been in Florida where the magnets have been sunshine and a space-age industrial complex. One interesting oddity is that Rhode Island has nearly four times the population of Alaska although it is 483 times smaller.

The U. S. is more urban today than ever before. Today two Americans of every three live in a city or in the suburban fringe of a city and the trend towards urbanization continues.

For example, from 1950 to 1960, Tucson, Ariz., increased from 45,000 to 212,000; Houston, Tex., from 596,000 to 938,000; and San Diego, Calif., from 334,000 to 573,000.

Surrounding all metropolitan centers are suburban satellites, garden communities of homes, shopping centers, churches, schools and recreational facilities. Two-thirds of all families live in separate households and six out of 10 own their own homes.

Training Film Will Outline Asian Policy

WASHINGTON — U.S. military men will soon be seeing "Why Viet Nam," a new Armed Forces film, which outlines U.S. policy in the Southeast Asia struggle.

The 32-minute film produced by the Armed Forces Information and Education office in the Pentagon opens with President Johnson explaining the basic points in the struggle. There are scenes from Viet Nam depicting the points.

Then Secretary of State Dean Rusk explains what the I&E office calls "numerous attempts on the part of the United States and other nations to bring about a ceasefire in Viet Nam."

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara is in the film giving assurance that "the United States seeks no wider war."

Prints will soon be made ready for distribution from Armed Forces film libraries.

A civilian or Reserve organization may borrow a print of "Why Viet Nam" for public, non-profit showing from one of the Armed Forces Film libraries serving the state or area in which it is located. Requests from the various states should be addressed to the commanding generals of their area armies or to the CGs of U.S. Army Alaska, Pacific or Military District of Washington.

Viet Cong Introduced to New Gun In Heavy 1st Inf Bombardment

BIEN HOA, Viet Nam — Six guns belched out their innards with an angry roar that shook the ground here. Seconds later, 20 miles away in War Zone D, the Viet Cong were introduced to the U. S. Army's newest killer - the long range 175mm gun.

The firing marked the first time the 175mm self propelled gun has been fired in combat.

Honors for the firing mission went to the 2nd Battalion, 32nd Artillery, 23rd Field Artillery Group stationed at Bien Hoa. Lt. Col. L. L. deCorrevont commands the battalion.

As the firing mission began at the Bien Hoa cantonment area, the six 31-ton guns rolled off a dirt road and lined themselves across an open field. Crews worked fast and all guns were ready to fire in minutes.

Autographed

The first round out was autographed by visiting Brig. Gen. Charles Mount, assistant division commander, 1st Infantry. It read simply, "Story about that." Also on hand for the historic firing was Vietnamese Brig. Gen. Nguyen Xuan-Thinh.

Three volleys were fired from the huge guns. The target was a suspected Viet Cong regimental headquarters. A forward observer flew over the target area to adjust fire from the guns.

The observer, Lt. Joseph Kent reported that the guns were on target and the devastation was complete. Since the target area was wooded, a body count could not be made but two dead VC were seen laying in a clearing. Some of the rounds were bursting at tree level and completely clearing everything within a 100-meter radius. Buildings in the target area were destroyed.

The 175mm gun is something the VC are not going to like, according to Col. Dyson, 23rd Field Group commander.

"They knew the range of our eight inchers (howitzers) and stayed clear of it," he said, "Now with the arrival of the long range one seventy-five, they have no safe haven. They never know when we'll hit them."

New Variable Reenlistment Pay Won't Affect Present Pro-Pay Rate

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — As Defense and service experts were working out the new variable reenlistment bonus rules last week, the following general outlines of how the new benefit will probably operate were learned:

1. The new program won't push any skills off the pro pay list. This could change in later years but for now the the services are unwilling to stir up the morale problems such a shift would generate.

2. Some skills will qualify for both pro pay and the variable reenlistment bonus.

3. Some skills will continue to get neither and some will get one or the other.

Strong Inducement

4. It is unlikely that there will be any recoupment of the bonus from men who are later shifted out of the skill for which the bonus was paid but there will be strong inducements for men not to shift.

Defense personnel officials have been meeting with their service counterparts to establish guidelines and the ones noted above seem to be generally agreed upon at the Indian level, although the top-level Defense and service officials haven't had a crack at them yet.

Of major significance is the one about retaining all the skills presently on pro pay—or at least not deleting them to substitute the bonus.

Four Times Bonus

The bonus is paid only to men making their first reenlistment and it can amount to the usual reenlistment bonus plus four times that amount.

This is an expensive benefit and for a long time it was thought Defense might substitute the bonus for some of the skills now on pro pay. This would work a hardship on men drawing pro pay in those skills—men who have already made their first reenlistment. If the skill were removed they would lose the extra cash they have been getting.

Sentiment among those working on the program appears to be against such an approach, although as the bonus program shakes down over the years it is possible it will edge out some pro pay skills.

VIET NAM FORCE

The United States had 165,700 armed forces personnel in the Republic of Viet Nam as of Nov. 20. Broken down by services, there are: 101,000 Army; 39,100 Marine Corps; 17,150 Air Force; 8,200 Navy, and 250 Coast Guard.

The Game Of Seven Errors

In copying his original drawing, the artist purposely changed the second drawing in at least seven subtle ways. If you can find them, rate yourself in the double-O-seven class. To check your answers, turn the page up-side down.

Historic American Battlegrounds Landmarked by Old Army Forts

ALBANY, N. Y. — Eleven forts are among the historic shrines which attract tourists in New York State.

They recall the days when the territory of the Empire State was a battleground in the French and Indian Wars, the War of the Revolution and the War of 1812.

During the Revolution, more than 300 engagements were fought on New York soil and it was also the scene of the principal engagements for the War of 1812.

Larger Forts

Among the larger forts are Old Fort Niagara near Niagara Falls; Fort Ontario on Lake Ontario at Oswego; and Fort Ticonderoga on Lake Champlain.

All are massive stone structures with long and impressive military careers. Both Old Fort Niagara and Fort Ontario were active military posts for more than a century.

Fort Crown Point, a Lake Champlain post, is in ruins. Another ruined fort is Fort Putnam on the grounds of the United States Military Academy at West Point. Fort Ste Marie de Gannentaha at Syracuse is a completely modern reconstruction of a French frontier post established in 1656.

Two other forts have been reconstructed on their original sites, Fort Ann, north of Glen Falls, and Fort William Henry at Lake George. Fort Mount Hope is a reconstructed blockhouse at Ticonderoga.

Cav Soldiers' Request Answered; Feast on Thanksgiving Pheasant

By NICK PALADINO

AN KHE, Viet Nam — (Delayed) — Members of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's post office had roast pheasant for Thanksgiving dinner thanks to a Richmond, Vt., meat packing firm.

PFC R. J. Granahan said that he found a mail order catalogue in the post office and showed it to some of his fellow workers.

"Nobody knew where it came from, but we glanced through it and saw the advertisement for smoked pheasant and we were immediately sold," he said.

The postal people weren't immediately sure if Harrington's Custom Cured Foods would send the pheasants to Viet Nam, but they decided to write and find out.

They all contributed something for the price of two pheasants and the air mail costs and wrote the meat company.

Harrington's in a quick reply to the soldiers stated, "You bet we'll forward your order by Air Parcel Post as you requested, and if it's all the same to you perhaps you won't mind the few extras that we have added to your package with our good wishes."

The few extras included three loaves of canned bread and a variety of candies for the cavalrymen. The company also paid the extra postage due on these additional items.

When asked what preparation had been made for the eating of these prize pheasants, Granahan said "Well, it's not something you want to rush into, we slowly gathered the makings of a real feast."

It may not have been a turkey dinner at home, but the 1st Cavalry's mailmen made a start in the right direction.

Infantry Board Tests New Poncho

The increased need for ponchos in the wet, tropical conditions of Viet Nam has started the U.S. Army Infantry Board at Fort Benning testing a new light weight poncho.

The test poncho is the same size and shape as the standard model now in use but weighs over a full pound less. The test model weighs 1.3 pounds in comparison with the 2.6 pound weight of the present poncho.

Lt. Robert B. Connolly, test officer at the board, is currently directing tests to determine whether the new poncho can hold up under use in a wide range of occupational duties.

Infantry Board officials said that the tests are part of the board's continuing program designed to make the American soldier the most effective and best equipped soldier possible.

SEEKING CONTRACTS

NASA is seeking the negotiation of contracts for studies of an instrument capable of analyzing and controlling a two-gas atmosphere system for future manned spacecraft. Manned spacecraft have thus far utilized a single gas system — oxygen — for their crews.

Textile Executive To Speak to Group

He will discuss "Management in the Textile Industry."

Cav Heliport Carved Out With Bare Hands

AN KHE, (1ST CAV-10)—Bridges, culverts, barbed wire fences and what may well be the world's highest heliport are concrete evidence of the presence of the 1st Cavalry's 8th Engineer Battalion in Viet Nam.

The Army combat engineers are continuing to make improvements toward the defense and livability of the Sky Troopers camp.

One of the major projects of the 8th Engineers is the construction and defense of a helipad and a forest of radio towers that will grow above the crest of Hon Cong mountain which rises 1200 feet above the division's enclave.

The defense of the Air Cavalry's home has been strengthened by the construction of barbed wire barriers and the placement of land mines around the camp's perimeter.

The hustle and bustle of activity began in mid - August when the 8th Engineer's advanced party landed at Nha Trang and moved inland to lay out the living area for the division.

Using entrenching tools and bare hands everyone from colonels to privates hacked away, clearing the area now known as the "Golf Course."

While a huge crop of calluses and blisters were being harvested in the fields near An Khe, halfway around the world the remainder of the battalion was boarding the USNS Darby facing what was to be a 26-day voyage from the east coast of the United States to the bay at Qui Nhon.

El Salvador Officers Visit Here

Six officers from El Salvador arrived at Fort Benning Wednesday for a four-day visit to see individual and small unit training and weapons employment.

Senior officer of the group is Col. Jose Luis Escobar Ezeta, deputy chief of staff, armed forces of El Salvador.

Others are Lt. Col. Mario Hernandez Mendez, Lt. Col. Jose Luis Marquez, Lt. Col. Santos Gomez Vasquez, Maj. Jose Oscar Aguilar Martinez and Maj. Luis Alonso Vasquez.

Their itinerary included a meeting yesterday with Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, briefings and seeing company tactics and weapons problems.

Today the visitors will see range training and long range patrol operations, Ranger and communications demolitions and anti-tank weapons firing.

Col. Escobar and his party arrived in the United States Nov. 20. Before coming to Fort Benning, the group visited Washington, D.C., and Fort Bragg, N.C. After departing here tomorrow they will visit the U. S. Coast Guard Base at New Orleans.

CARON IS O.K.

MOSCOW — The Russian newspaper "Soviet Culture" has given its approval to actress Leslie Caron. The Moscow newspaper commented recently:

"She is far from being a sex bomb. Otherwise she would have been forgotten long ago."

The Soviet paper added:

"To put it plain you always believe her. This is the highest compliment an actress can be given."

Miss Caron was in Moscow for the premier of her firm "The L-Shaped Room."

Defense Board Officials See Infantry Training

Seven generals, two admirals and 30 other senior officers, members of the Inter-American Defense Board representing the United States and 15 Allied countries, arrived at Fort Benning Monday to see the Infantryman training with the tools of his trade.

Following their noon arrival at Lawson Army Airfield, they were guests at an official luncheon in the Main Officers Open Mess. An official reception was held for the group Monday evening at the Open Mess.

At the new academic building, the visitors met with Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning's commanding general, and then were briefed on the origin, development and administration of the Infantry School.

Following the briefing, the visitors went to the Victory Pond area where the various ground vehicles available to an Infantry commander were shown and demonstrated for them.

Tuesday they observed a counterguerrilla operations problem at Highley Hill and watched airborne training at Eubanks Field (including a free-fall parachute demonstration) before they departed.

Tax Officials Offer to Help Viet Veterans

WASHINGTON—Write us! That's the advice from Internal Revenue Service to soldiers who have filed tax claims as a result of Viet Nam service in 1964.

The advice is aimed at those Viet Nam veterans who have filed claims and have not heard from IRS within six weeks after the date the claim was filed.

IRS said that soldiers falling into this category should write the district director of the IRS area in which they filed.

Army Times queried IRS on the Viet Nam tax situation after complaints that soldiers had not heard from IRS after filing their claim.

President Johnson had promised last spring that income tax refunds for 1964 Viet Nam service would be handled on a rush basis by IRS.

A spokesman for IRS said that while no figures were available on the number of Viet Nam tax claims filed and processed, the agency had no reason to believe that its program wasn't running smoothly. He said that the claims were given "expeditious handling."

The officials added that soldiers who have filed for refunds and had not heard from IRS within six weeks of the date of filing should contact IRS and ask why.

ID Cards Available Here for Retirees

Fort Benning's Retired Activities Branch has announced that if a retired serviceman's identification card needs replacing, he must present the following documents before a new card can be issued.

A copy of retirement orders and the old ID card, a copy of the marriage certificate in the case where it is the retiree's spouse whose card needs replacing and a birth certificate if the card is for a retiree's child.

Cards for retirees and dependents can be issued at any Army, Navy or Air Force installation, official, here stated.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

Who is the Greatest?

CASSIUS (MUHAMMAD ALI) Clay and Floyd Patterson finished their business in Las Vegas last week but the heavyweight boxing world still has some business that needs tending. Clay wears the crown of a king and sinches up his trousers these days with the championship belt given to him by Ring Magazine. But the World Boxing Association has a pretender to the throne by the name of Ernie Terrell.

The big question now would seem "will the pretender become the contender" or is Muhammed Ali telling the truth when he says "I am the greatest."

The legal part of the question rests on the power behind the throne. Ring Magazine, the bible of the boxing world, recognizes Clay as the champ along with most people with a discerning eye toward boxing and the great unwashed mass of fight fans. But the WBA, a loose federation of boxing commissions, and 48 states recognize Terrell as number one ring master in the heavy weight division.

Though 48 out of 50 is a good legal mark, if you asked any kid of twelve who is champ, he would probably answer Cassius Clay and that's good enough for me.

Terrell is little known except to those who follow boxing closely. He is a creature of the shadows as far as the public is concerned and crowns don't shine in the shadows. Clay is so well known he is instantly recognized by either of his two names.

The Dethroned King

THE WBA TOOK the purple mantle from Clay's shoulders last February because of "actions detrimental to boxing". Among these actions were: agreeing to a rematch which the WBA did not sanction and bad conduct at the weigh in before the Liston-Clay title bout, an incident which cost Clay a $2,500 fine. The association also erased Liston's name from the boxing lists for his performance in that bout, for numerous traffic violations and for carrying a concealed weapon.

Pretending that Clay no longer existed, the WBA held a tournament to find its own world champion. The tourney was a mastery of illogic. In February Patterson beat Canadian George Chuvalo and in March Terrell defeated Eddie Machen (who had been beaten by Patterson). Terrell was then mysteriously crowned champ of WBA's world. Patterson and Terrell were scheduled to meet but never did.

But Clay believes he is the greatest. In a recent interview in "Ebony" magazine, he said of Terrell and WBA, "The WBA claims Terrell is champ but that's not so. I'm still king. I get mail from all over the world and all of it is addressed to Muhammad Ali, heavyweight champion of the world. I wonder how many letters the other guy gets like that. The WBA means nothing to me. As long as I am recognized in New York City, that's all that counts. Everybody goes there. Naw, I'm not impressed with the WBA and any of its fighters including Terrell."

World Enough for Him

CLAY FIGURES as long as he is recognized in New York City where everyone goes and where all the big money is, that's all the world he needs.

But Clay has long been a question mark as a fighter in the minds of many. His rise was fast and phenomenal; too fast and too

Engineers Defeat Quartermaster, 39th Trans Wins

The 577th Engineers beat the 54th Quartermaster Battalion, 83-45, in the first game of a doubleheader at Briant Wells Field House Monday night with the 39th Transportation Battalion following up with an 86 to 78 win over The Student Brigade.

The 577th led all the way in its clash with Bill McCrawley topping the scoring poll at 17 points.

On Wednesday night the 29th Infantry dealt the 58th Infantry its first loss of the year 88 to 76 and took the league lead with six wins and no losses.

In other action the 577th Engineers beat 10th Artillery 82 to 76 and TSB rode over the 54th Quartermaster Battalion 89 to 71. The 197th Brigade Troops team got a free forfeit win over the 10th Aviation Group.

TSB was ahead at half time in its battle with the 39th but the transportation unit came on strong in the second half to clinch the win. Bill Reddick of the 39th was high scorer for the game with 20 points. Bob Morgan second the 39th's scoring effort with 17.

High men for TSB were Dallas Miller with 19 points and Tom Chakeres with 17.

Benning Hosts Meeting On Physical Conditioning

Fort Benning hosted four days of discussions and demonstrations this week designed to show the latest concepts in physical conditioning.

Forty-three civilians and soldiers are attending the physical fitness conference which is scheduled to end today. Taking part in the program are representatives from the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Department of the Army, U. S. Continental Army Command, Army Air Defense Command, Marine Corps, Air Force, U. S. Military Academy, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Armies and the Military District of Washington.

Heading the list of civilians attending the sessions is Simon McNeilly, coordinator of state and federal fitness programs for the President's Council on Physical Fitness. McNeilly, a nationally known physical educator, spoke to the conference Wednesday on the progress of the national physical fitness program.

The conferees arrived here on Tuesday and were processed. On Wednesday, Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, officially welcomed them to Fort Benning.

The conference is under the direction of the Ranger Department headed by Col. I. A. Edwards. Among the topics being covered are the Army physical fitness program, the need for physical fitness, its national progress and new concepts and developments by the Infantry School.

With the exception of a water survival techniques demonstration at Briant Wells Field House and hand-to-hand combat and bayonet demonstrations at Watson Field, all presentations were in Infantry School classrooms.

Fort Benning basketball fans were treated to an old-fashioned donnybrook thriller Monday night at the Kelley Hill Field House when the high - scoring 29th Infantry quintet staved off a determined effort by the 197th's Brigade Troops club and salvaged a 70-66 verdict to preserve its season's unblemished mark at 5-0.

In other league contests, the 10th Artillery split a pair of games in dropping a 63-56 tussle to the 58th Infantry while grabbing an 82 - 54 triumph over the winless 69th Armor.

The 29th-Brigade Troops battle featured the sharpest shooting exhibition displayed on post thus far this season. Combined figures show that the two clubs fired the ball through the hoop at a 60 per cent clip.

Monte Clausen was the big gun for the 29th with a total of 29 points. He hit with 70 per cent of his attempts from the floor. Backing up Clausen in shooting were Glen Martin and Don Harnum with 12 points each and Bob Frazier who contributed eight points and 14 rebounds to the victory.

Sparking the Brigade Troops attack was Howard Keene who pushed in 18 points followed by Joe Huttie with 17 and Walt Burroughs who added 12 points and 15 rebounds.

But the biggest point of all was scored by Bill Brannock who only totaled four points for the evening. With three minutes to go, the 29th had built up an 11 point lead. Then the 197th struck for five straight field goals to bring the score to 67-66.

At this point, Brannock drove the basket and drew the foul that iced the 29th victory. After dropping in his first, Brannock missed the second foul shot but Clausen was there to grab the rebound and popped in a 10 foot jump shot to put the game out of reach.

The 58th found the 10th Artillery pesky for most of the first half, then came on strong to grab its fifth straight victory. C.B.O. Ralston led the scoring parade with 20 points while Mitchel Bass added 16, Herman Mack 10 and Leroy Meyers 11.

In grabbing its victory over the 69th Armor, the 10th Artillery was paced by Johnnie Murray who totalled 30 points. Donald Rumley added 18 while Gerald Burgess fired in 14 and Herman Manigo added 10.

Benning Kids Finish Pee Wee Grid Season

More than 300 Fort Benning youngsters finished up two and a half months of Pee Wee football last week with an awards ceremony and a grid battle between the Intermediate League All-Stars and the Huskies at Doughboy Stadium.

Col. Jess W. Walls, commanding officer of The Student Brigade, presented awards to the winners and runnersup of both the Biddy and Intermediate Leagues. The Biddy League is composed of boys eight to 10 years old with youngsters 11 to 13 making up the Intermediate League.

The grid season was sponsored by TSB and supervised by the Youth Activities Club (YAC).

The Red Devils, coached by Jim Martin, topped the Biddy League with an eight win, one loss, one tie record. The Tigers, coached by L. M. Thomas, were runners up.

In the Intermediate League, the Huskies copped first place with an undefeated season and then went on to whip the Intermediate League All-Stars, 27 to 13, in an annual Thanksgiving eve battle at Doughboy Stadium.

The Huskies piled up 130 points in garnering a five win, no loss record for the season. Their opponents only managed to score 12 points.

The team, coached by Howie Vandersea, used a strong running game against the All-Stars and scored in all four quarters. A tight Huskie defense yielded only four first downs and recovered five All-Star fumbles to help dominate the game.

Huskie TDs were scored by halfbacks John Carter and Jim Fox, quarterback Gus McLoed and fullback Pete Calin.

Linebackers Dennis Southern and Calin made 75 per cent of the Huskie tackles.

The All-Star squad was composed of the best eight players from teams facing the Huskies this year. Halfback Steve Gouchenouer, quarterback Mike Averette and end Bob Brown were standouts on both offense and defense for the All-Stars. Gouchenouer scored on a 90 yard interception and Averette on a 10 yard quarterback keep.

The CAR officers came out on top, 44.5 to 39.5, in the match play. Points were awarded for each nine and eighteen holes played and best ball for the CAR team and was their low shooter.

Ken Griffith and Larry Welsh were low CAR scorers.

Each member of the winning team received a new ball as a prize.

SFC THOMPSON Tops Pistol Tourney

Thompson Wins Benning Monthly Pistol Tourney

BY LEE LA COMBE

As the weather improved Saturday, so did the shooting of SFC Ralph O. Thompson. The Army Marksmanship Training Unit noncom posted a near - record aggregate score of 2,669 points out of a possible 2,700 to win the monthly pistol tourney sponsored by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club.

After a slow start with the .22 pistol, Thompson slammed out a record-breaking aggregate of 394-51x in the Center Fire as he swept all four of the fired matches. The old mark was 391-43x set by SFC William Blankenship who also holds the national, three-gun aggregate mark with a 2,674.

Thompson kept up his hot pace with the .45 to take that sub-aggregate, also with 892, one point shy of the record.

He won six of the 12 fire matches and three of the four aggregates to dominate the match.

Teammate Sgt. Robert Whitacre was his nearest competitor as he joined a very elite circle by posting a 2660 total, a score normally good enough to win most matches.

Whitacre took the only sub-aggregate missed by Thompson as he nabbed the .22 total with 891-46x.

H. Barbien took the Master aggregate with a 2,596; Maj. Carolyn Reinbold of Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., was the High Service Expert with a 2,389; and policeman Edward Kvietkus of Columbus took the Expert Civilian crowns with a 2,368.

HE WAS CLIPPED

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Eddy Blakely lost part of his pants at a ball game here. The police said someone cut out the pocket containing his wallet and made off with $75.

KEANE'S CARDINALS

In his three full years managing the St. Louis Cardinals, Johnny Keane won 270 National League games and lost 216. Manager Walt Alston's Los Angeles Dodgers were 280-206 during that period.

'Carbine' Williams Shows Super Machine Gun Here

BY JIM BAKER
Editor, The Bayonet

An old man with sideburns down to his mouth, a handshake like a vise and a .45 caliber pistol on his belt came to Fort Benning recently to show military officials his latest weapon idea.

David M. Williams — better known as "Carbine" Williams—was a fiery and hard-bitten man of 65 who stood before a contingent of Fort Benning soldiers and showed them his latest weapon — a machine gun that fires hardware store ammunition at the rate of 2,000 rounds per minute.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, was on hand to try out "Carbine's" new weapon and expressed his interest after hunkering down behind it to squeeze off a couple of belts of ammunition.

Also on Hand

Also on hand to hear about and see the weapon were the heads of the post's two testing agencies — Col. Phillip Hooper of the Combat Developments Agency and Col. James Muir of the Infantry Board.

Williams told the audience at Hook Range that he had developed the incredible weapon in response to the seeming inability of the U. S. forces to stop the Communist "human wave attacks' effectively.

The 2,000 round per minute rate of fire is faster than any gun of its size and type.

Williams explained that because of the gun's small caliber, it can be fired indefinitely with no appreciable rise in its heat.

In the past, there always has been a problem with machine guns becoming overheated when fired for prolonged periods at such high speeds.

The "floating chamber" principle which has revolutionized semi - automatic and automatic weaponry since World War II is Williams' invention and it is this principle which allows his newest machine gun "to obtain the maximum operating energy from a small cartridge."

Less Than Nine Pounds

He says his finished model as he sees it "will weigh less than nine pounds" and be capable of being fired from the shoulder as well as a tripod. It will have a total length of 20 inches, he said.

The gun fires regular "long rifles" .22 caliber cartridges.

His combat model would fire the more lethal magnum cartridge.

He said the gun would have an effective range of 300 yards, "ideal for the human wave attacks in Viet Nam."

"With two or three of these in a defensive position, you could really stop a whole bunch," he added.

Williams, the inventor of the World War II carbine from which he got his name, says one of the chief advantages of the new weapon is the light weight of the ammunition.

"Five hundred rounds weigh less than a pound," he added.

Soldiers could carry much larger amounts of ammunition than they can now with the much heavier NATO ammunition fired by the M-14.

Williams first thought of the floating chamber when he was a prisoner in solitary confinement at Caledonia State Prison, N.C.

Hit Twice

Williams estimates that with the speed at 2,000 rounds per minute, most soldiers fired upon by his weapon would be hit twice before the gun could move on to other targets.

Williams has no idea what it would cost to produce his machine gun since his prototype model was handmade in his Godwin, N.C., gun shop.

Ross E Beard, a Camden, S.C., gun collector, says Williams even makes his own tools to manufacture his guns.

Beard, who is writing the biography of Williams, said the inventor holds 59 major patents on his guns and gun mechanisms.

First Gun

Making guns is nothing new to Williams. He made his first when he was 11 years old. It featured all wood construction — even the barrel was wood — fired black powder and buckshot.

Williams was jailed in 1924 for shooting a deputy sheriff who raided his whiskey still. After serving 10 years, he was given a full pardon. After his release, he was instrumental in the founding and organization of the National Deputy Sheriffs Association.

'Carbine' carries a .45 caliber pistol "loaded with armor - piercing) stuff." When asked about the armor - piercing ammunition, he replied, "Wouldn't want no one shootin' at you from a car and not be able to shoot back."

For Williams, if he can sell the Army on his new machine gun, there'll be plenty of opportunity for U.S. infantrymen to shoot back.

Vietnamese With Infected Hand Saved in Operation by 'Cav Doc'

By Nick Palladino

AN KHE, Viet Nam—A 70 year old Vietnamese man will soon be going home alive and healthy thanks to the efforts of a 1st Air Cavalry doctor whose quick treatment saved his life when it hung in the balance.

Vo-Ghiep, a resident of An Khe, had his hand crushed in the gate of an American truck while boarding the vehicle.

A medic at the scene, who first noticed the injury, said the old man didn't say anything about his hand for two days and continued to work with other refugees that are employed by the Cav on brush-clearing jobs.

"He didn't say a word to anybody and nobody noticed it" the medic said. On the third day the old man walked up to the medic and showed him his hand. He was immediately rushed to the hospital at the 15th Medical Battalion.

Capt. Larry S. Matthews took one look at the hand and knew he had to do something fast. Vo-Ghiep had gangrene.

Blue Team Wins Two In Tourney

The U. S. Army Blue team captured two team matches as the Army Marksmanship Training Unit handgunners swept all four of the team events Sunday in the monthly tournament sponsored by the Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club.

The Blue team, composed of SFC Ralph Thompson, who took the individual title Saturday with a 2,699 score, Sgt. Robert Whitacre, SSgt. Emil Heugatter and SSgt. Merryweather Jones, took the .22 event with 1,183 and the .45 caliber match with 1,174.

Army Grey nabbed the Center Fire with 1,176 and Army Gold completed the sweep by winning the Service Pistol match with 1,160.

DANGEROUS CHANGE

When you change from driver to pedestrian — that is, get out of your car — be sure to check for approaching traffic before you open the door to step out. Too many people have made the fatal mistake of reversing the procedure.

Heat Fells Actor In Embalming Room Filming

HOLLYWOOD — Steve Morse was overcome by the heat on the set of "The Loved One," the screen version of Evelyn Waugh's satirical novel, when he played a 60-minute scene in an air-tight embalming room.

The famous Keheney mansion in Beverly Hills was used for the picture with the ground floor of the marble chateau fitted out as a funeral home and the huge kitchen temporarily converted into an embalming room.

Despite its elegance, the residence has everything but air conditioning and the 115 degree heat felled Morse. However, after a few minutes rest with a couple of ice packs on his head, the actor commented: "If you've got to pass out, an embalming room is the place to do it."

"The Loved One" is currently breaking records in its world premier engagement at Cinema I in New York.

LEMMON'S SHOES

Steve Harmon, who portrays Ensign Pulver in Warner Bros.' "Mister Roberts" series for NBC, believes his career in the show started off on the right foot because the Navy shoes issued him for the role were the same ones worn by Jack Lemmon in his Oscar-winning performance in the motion picture version.

Post Scouts Competing For Top Patrol Award

Competition for the District's top patrol award will be the prize as more than 100 Fort Benning Boy Scouts begin a two day camporee today at the reservist's summer encampment area near Camp Pine Knot.

Scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m. today, the event will last until Sunday afternoon. Judging for the award will be continuous throughout the session as the boys vie for camporee honors, according to Boy Scout officials.

The camporee is part of the continuing program offered boys in scouting. Camporee director is Maj. Lemuel Thomas of Lawson Army Aviation Command.

After registration today, the boys will set up camp and have supper. This will be followed by individual troop campfire programs.

The program will be in high gear on Saturday as the boys begin their camporee events and contests. They will include signaling, blindfolded compass course, height judging, first aid relay, fire building and water boiling, fire by flint and steel, knot relay, tent pitching, stick relay, sack race, tug of war and log chopping.

Saturday afternoon will be spectator time as Boy Scout troop demonstrations will take the spotlight from 2 to 4 p.m. For those who plan to attend, signs will mark the route to the encampment area, says a Boy Scout spokesman.

All interested adults and their families are invited and encouraged to attend, he added.

On Saturday evening, there will be a District camp fire program to which adults are also invited.

Highlighting Sunday's activities will be church services and a closing ceremony which will feature the conferring of awards.

Soldiers With Less Than 4 Years

Pentagon Makes Short Discharge Possible for Viet Nam Volunteers

Fort Benning soldiers with less than four years of service can now take a short discharge for the specific purpose of reenlisting for Viet Nam duty, a Pentagon message has stated.

The Viet Nam option is also available to soldiers being discharged under normal separation and those who have been out of uniform for less than 90 days.

However, officials stress the option is not available to soldiers who have been alerted for overseas "individually or as part of a unit."

The change is designed to make it "administratively" easier for men who want to volunteer for Viet Nam to do so "without regard to length of time in Continental U.S. since last oversea tour," the Army said.

One Year Tour

Men who reenlist for the Viet Nam option will be required to serve no more than the normal one-year tour.

The option is also available to soldiers now serving in oversea areas. Those who reenlist from another oversea area will be authorized immediate reassignment to Viet Nam. They will be given a minimum of 15 days' delay en route for Stateside leave, the Army said.

The restrictions "which require completion of specified period of overseas service are not applicable to this option," the Army told the field. The A.F.L. season is over.

For the Viet Nam option, soldiers must be fully-qualified for reenlistment in the Regular Army. No waivers of physical standards, age or other requirements will be granted, the Army said. All POR (preparation for overseas rotation) processing, including physical examination must be completed before reenlistment.

Motivated Soldiers

Soldiers must be "highly motivated, professionally competent and of higher mental and emotional stability and capacity to act under stress."

They must be "fully qualified physically and medically" for field service in their MOS in Viet Nam."

A firm commitment for assignment to Viet Nam must be obtained from the Army's Office of Personnel Operations, ATTN: EPADR-1, before reenlistment can be approved. The minimum reenlistment period for the Viet Nam option is three years. However, soldiers can reenlist for three, four or six years, whichever they choose, the Army said.

The Army recently stopped permitting men on overseas orders, either as individuals or with a unit, from taking a short discharge in order to apply for special assignment or service school. The move was designed to bar soldiers from escaping combat duty through the short discharge route.

The new rules are designed to permit a soldier who wants to get into combat a chance to do so without any restrictions.

AFL to Expand To Ten Teams

(AP)—The American Football League is all set to expand to ten teams by 1967 and may make it 12 by 1969. The league owners met at Houston, Texas recently and formally picked Miami as the ninth team.

League president Joe Foss says the tenth team probably will be selected from among Chicago, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Milwaukee and Washington. And, says Foss, "expansion beyond the tenth team definitely is contemplated." Foss said the tenth team may be named after the A.F.L. season is over.

phenomenal. The public goes for the hard way up. The long baptism of fire always seems more wholesome and easy victories are always suspect.

Clay beat Liston in two battles. Sports writers and a public who once considered Liston invincible now say he was nothing but a bum. Clay beat Patterson last week and showed remarkable adeptness. But now the question arises how good was Patterson, and with a bad back at that.

Clay still looms as a question mark but criticism leveled at him is now leveled with tongue in cheek since he has beaten all comers.

And perhaps in the near future a ring announcer will grab his microphone and say "ladies and gentlemen, in this corner the heavyweight champion of the world", and pause as two figures step out toward the center of the ring to settle something.

Building Four Now 'Infantry Hall'

15 Medals Given Posthumously For War Heroism

A Silver Star topped the list of 15 medals presented posthumously to Mrs. Jack W. Sanford on behalf of her husband who died June 16 in Viet Nam.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, presented the decorations last Friday. Maj. Sanford was former commander of the Mavericks, 3rd Armored Platoon of Company A, 502nd Aviation Battalion.

Mrs. Sanford, 3542 Gentian Blvd., accepted the awards at Fort Benning's Infantry Center in ceremonies attended by relatives and close friends.

In addition to the Silver Star, the third highest award for heroism. Gen. York presented Mrs. Sanford a Distinguished Flying Cross, first oak leaf cluster; a Bronze Star and the first oak leaf cluster to the medal with V device for valor; the Air Medal, ninth, 10th, 11th, 15th, 16th 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th oak leaf clusters, of which

General Order Proclaims Building Four's New Name

BY SAM RUSH

The multi - million dollar headquarters-school complex will now be known by a name instead of a building number.

Until now the building has been known as 'Building Four,' 'The Academic Building' and 'The School Building.' As a result of General Order Number 149, it will be known as "Infantry Hall."

The Hall, a project begun in 1951, reached this fitting finale when Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, decided on the new name after consideration of several names submitted by Fort Benning personnel.

Infantry Hall, the huge "H" shaped, six-story, multi-million dollar building, two years in construction, was dedicated on June 5, 1964.

It was the culmination of a plan originating in October 1951 during the tour of the late Maj. Gen. John H. Church.

First Proposed

The project was first proposed for inclusion in the 1952 fiscal year Military Construction Army (MCA) Program at a cost of $3.8 million. It was not until the tour of Gen. Paul L. Freeman in 1958 that the project won final approval at a cost of approximately $10 million.

The academic and administrative center of Fort Benning houses 32 classrooms.

The center sixth-story part of the building houses 135 office spaces. These include the offices of the post commander and the assistant commandant of The Infantry School and most of the general and special staffs of the Center and School.

The Infantry School library dominates the first floor of the central, six floor section. The library is spacious and offers ready access to research material.

In the wings of the build-

Boy Scouting Awards Presented At Annual 'Pot Luck' Dinner Here

The presentation of coveted scouting awards highlighted the annual Fort Benning Boy Scout District "Pot Luck" dinner held at Service Club No. 1 on Tuesday.

Among the awards presented was the Boy Scout Distinguished Service Citation. It went to Maj. Lemuel Thomas, SFC Burton O. Chapman, Maj. George W. Adamson, Officer Candidate Brice Warren and PFC Earl Taylor who were cited as being the most outstanding district scouter, commissioner, cubber, scoutmaster and explorer advisor, respectively.

The citation accompanying the award praised the recipients for "outstanding, unselfish and dedicated leadership to the boyhood of the Fort Benning District."

Taylor was on the receiving end for three other citations as he was presented the scouter's training, arrowhead honor and 10 year veteran's awards.

Also honored at the dinner was Mrs. Wilma Chapman who received a Certificate of Appreciation for "distinguish-

Benning Infantry Chorus Plans Busy First Week

The Fort Benning Infantry Chorus will make its debut with a busy week beginning Tuesday with a recital at the Artillery Ball.

The following day they will sing for a social gathering of the members of the Office of the Director of Personnel.

Dec. 20 and 21 they will tour the post on a low-boy trailer singing Christmas carols at commissaries, PXs, and quarters and troop billeting areas.

Don Mailey, chorus director, says the newest addition to the Fort Benning musical world already has a large repetoire of religious, current and classical selections.

are requested to make reservations by telephoning Mrs. George Brown at 561-8875, according to Snavely.

Freeman came to Fort Benning in May 1958 as commanding general of The Infantry Center and commandant of the Infantry School. He left the post in 1960 to take the three-star position of deputy commander of Reserve Forces, CONARC. In January 1961, he was appointed commander of Joint Task Force Four, U.S. Atlantic Command.

Freeman was commander, U.S. Army Europe and commander of the Central Army Group before the appointment to his CONARC position in March 1965.

ed and outstanding service to the scouting program through her unselfish and devoted time given to Den Mothers' work shops, handicraft instructions and assisting in Cub Scout roundtables."

Conferring of fall roundup awards was also on the agenda and they went to Cub Scout Packs 27, 37, 39, 51 and 227; Boy Scout Troops 27, 127 and 237; and Explorer Posts 54 and 142.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert H. York were among some 300 persons who attended the dinner. Purpose of the yearly gathering of parents, scouters and friends of scouting is to recognize the outstanding work done by Fort Benning leaders and to create a better understanding of district scouting operations.

The evening's program also included a yearly progress report by Jim Stroud, district scout executive, and the installation of 1966 district officers by Wistar Gary, merchandising manager of the Tom Huston Peanut Co. and 1965 Chattahoochee Boy Scout Council president. Col. R. J. O'Neill, director of the Infantry School Company Tactics Department, will continue to head up the district committee for 1966.

Menu for the evening included fried chicken, potato salad, deviled eggs, cole slaw, tossed salad, beans and cake.

Chorus

Marshall Auditorium Tuesday.

They accompanied the Wives chorus in the finale and presented "The Sleigh," a Russian Cossack song, under Mailey's direction.

At present there are 20 members in the chorus and they are looking for 16 more.

Roy Lothner, Special Services entertainment director, said "The need is for enlisted personnel in the grade E-2 and above." He added that final acceptance of the applicants will be based on an interview and audition by the choral director.

He urged anyone interested in joining the chorus to call him at the Entertainment Section at 545-5641.

Lothner said anyone chosen for the chorus would be assigned special duty and attached to Fort Benning's 283rd Army Band for rations and quarters.

He urged anyone with background or choral experience in schools, churches or community projects to audition for the chorus.

Mailey was the choral director of the 1st Cavalry Division when it was stationed in Korea.

He studied music at Middle Georgia College and has been actively associated with choirs, he says, "As long as I can remember."

He studied voice under Norman McLean at Wesleyan College in Macon. He also studied voice under Dr. Arthur L. Rich, Mercer University, Macon. He is presently working toward a masters degree in music at Auburn University.

Medals

the 15th and 20th carry the V device for valor; the Army Commendation Medal; and the Purple Heart, third oak leaf cluster.

The family group attending the ceremony included Sanford's mother, Mrs. Virginia Tignor; sister, Miss Silvia Sanford, and aunt, Mrs. Rosie Lee Rogers, all of Rainelle, W. Va.; and Mrs. Sanford's aunt, Mrs. Lucile French of 2419 Martha's Loop.

Close friends of Sanford who came to the post from Fort Rucker, Ala. were 1st Lt. Anthony Clemente and 1st Lt. Robert Bergquist, who were flying with the major when his helicopter was shot down and Col. Roy Creek, Maj. Alfred Iler, Capt. Charles Humphries, Capt. Bruce Kramer and Capt. Ernest Estes.

Gen. York said of the presentation, "Never have I seen one individual receive so many such awards in one ceremony. This is a testimony to the kind of man that Maj. Sanford was. I know that you, Mrs. Sanford, and his mother are proud of him."

As "Maverick Lead," Maj. Sanford was by choice leading an armed platoon rather than holding the executive position entitled him by his seniority. He had volunteered for duty in Viet Nam, with the understanding that he would be permitted to go into battle.

He had already earned a Distinguished Flying Cross in November 1964 in a battle that cost the Viet Cong 144 men. That fight marked the first use of a tactic Sanford devised for throwing smoke markers over a battlefield to prevent the enemy from sighting troop landing zones.

Flying his aircraft low enough to attract enemy fire in order to locate their exact position, and engaging the enemy singlehanded in an encounter Dec. 27, Sanford displayed the gallantry that earned for him the Silver Star, according to reports.

On Jan. 26, Maj. Sanford led his unit to the aid of friendly troops when he learned that they were pinned down by enemy fire. It was for his heroism on that day that he received the oak leaf cluster to the Distinguished Flying Cross.'

On June 16, Sanford heard that an American advisor had been ambushed by guerrillas. Although he and his men had flown a mission already that day, they went to look for the American.

When they spotted a body in a floating sampan on a canal, Sanford, flying the lead, headed for the area. His helicopter was hit by ground fire and exploded. Guerrillas shot mortar rounds at Sanford and his crew. Clemente, Bergquist and other members of the platoon of "Huey" gunships silenced the mortars while another helicopter crew picked up the men.

Yuletide

clude Christmas music played by the Infantry Center band and vocal selections by Officer Candidate and Infantry Center choruses.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commanding general, will make a brief address and then will mark the opening of the holiday season by lighting two Christmas trees in front of Infantry Hall.

Fort Benning officials have invited all soldiers and dependents to attend the ceremony and share in the start of the post's Yule season. They also noted that this will be the first official opening of the season in the post's history.

Student Brigade Awarded Top Reenlistment Prize

The Student Brigade at Fort Benning received two trophies on Tuesday for its high percentage of reenlistments for July, August and September.

The three-foot-high trophies, engraved with the name of the unit and the dates, were presented to Col. Jess W. Walls, brigade commander, by Infantry Center Commander, Maj. Gen. Robert H. York.

The awards were made at the Commander's Conference at Infantry Center headquarters. They are the commanding general's reenlistment and first term reenlistment trophies.

The trophies are presented each quarter on a rotating basis to the unit or units with the highest percentage of overall and first term reenlistments.

The Student Brigade had a score of 45.3 per cent on overall reenlistments and 20.4 per cent on first term reenlistments.

Gen. York said the brigade's record for the July-September period indicates "a high degree of command interest and enthusiastic support of the reenlistment program by all members of The Student Brigade."

Slow your driving down, it's much less expensive

With many either taking or contemplating vacations, it is a good idea for all of us to remind ourselves to obey legal speed limits while making that trip home or elsewhere.

Notwithstanding the safety aspects of driving too fast, getting stopped for exceeding the legal speed limit can be downright expensive . . . disasterously expensive in many cases. Not only that, if you get stopped in some exotic "out of the way place" and don't happen to have bond money available, you're just liable to be in for at least a little bit of difficulty.

It might take a little longer to get there . . . but in the long run, it's a good bit safer and considerably less expensive to avoid the speed traps which often spring up during the holiday season by driving carefully and within the legal speed limit.

'The soldier is legally bound to support dependents'

A man must support his wife and children. This is a statement of the law applicable in every state in the United States. Violation of this law subjects the offender to both civil and criminal penalties by civilian authorities. If the offender is a serviceman, he may also be subject to military discipline for bringing discredit upon the service.

Since the Class Q allotment has been discontinued for all grades above E-4 and for those in grade E-4 with more than four years service, nonsupport claims have flooded commanding officers.

Although each case must be considered individually, the Department of the Army has recommended that a member at least support his dependents in the amount of the superseded Class Q.

The majority of claims arise where the serviceman is living apart from his family. This situation often occurs in military life and is no excuse for the non-support of dependents. In fact there are no excuses for non-support.

The Judge has heard many statements by military personnel offered as justification for non-support. While there exists a valid marriage, the legal duty of support remains.

The Judge is frequently asked, "How long must I support my wife and children?" Briefly, a man must support his wife and minor children until a judicial decree from a civilian court states otherwise.

If any member has any doubts as to his duty to support his dependents, he should consult his commanding officer, soldiers advocate or his legal assistance officer.

Ancient chinese dentistry

In early Chinese literature, frequent mention is made of dental disease.

In the oldest known medical work, written by Huang-Ti in 2697 B.C. and entitled "Neichung", the distressing characteristics of toothache are described in fine detail.

The Chinese called it "Ya-Tang" and it appears to have been as common in those days as is today.

In Huang-Ti's work, there are actually two chapters that relate to diseases of the mouth. Nine types of toothache were recognized and on the opposite side to where various remedies listed to the pain is felt."

For some strange unknown reason, in prescribing medicine to relieve toothache, it was either inserted into the ear or nostril, a portion of the following prescription, is ancient text reveals the insertion of needles into various parts of the body. In the "Roast a cut at garlic and crush it between the teeth, mix with chopped horseradish the needles are to be inserted make into a paste with and six others for pain in bone, mix with corn pit and the gum introduce one into the nostril counteract each of them. "Acupuncture," still a favorite among certain native practitioners of tal pains. It consists of the recommended to relieve dental treatment of toothache, in the Orient, was also

Dedication results from early training

Often it has been said that when a person becomes a member of the military service he must turn against certain basic facets of his upbringing.

Not many of us like being separated from loved ones. Few prefer regimentation and strict discipline. Living and working under extreme hardship does not have universal appeal. No one favors being shot at or learning to kill.

Why then do America's fighting men respond so well to the call to arms and perform so splendidly in battle? American history books are filled with the heroic exploits of our fighting men and daily we receive accounts of brave deeds performed in the Republic of Viet Nam.

The answer is that the American "fighting man" is a proud American who loves his freedom and heritage. When he dons a military uniform he is still the youngster who used to deliver the morning paper, the mechanic from the garage down the street or the young man just out of high school. But in uniform he is his country's symbol of justice and democracy.

Not all return to civilian pursuits when a national threat has passed. Many stay on for various reasons, identifying themselves as Americans in uniform dedicated to selfless service.

These men are America's strength. All their early lives were spent studying and traning for peaceful pursuits. Now they are devoted to learning basic and advanced military skills.

The truism is few people in the United States desire war and the inevitable consequences. Most, however, realize that only by protecting their way of life can they hope to enjoy the benefits of earlier training and study.

Fortunately for our nation, our young men have proven time and again they are willing to withstand the rigors of service and do their part. No, they are not born as fighting men, but as good Americans who fight when necessary and sometimes die for their country and loved ones. AFPS)

The Judge Says . . .

'Know the Georgia laws'

Sgt. Jones is a thoroughbred Texan. He's in Georgia but his permanent home is in Houston. Sgt. Smith is a native of Atlanta, stationed at Fort Benning.

Must both purchase Georgia tags for their cars? Must either have a Georgia operator's license? If you can answer these questions correctly, your status as a legal expert should be secure.

Under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, a military owner of a vehicle need not purchase state license tags in the state of his military residence as long as he has current tags from the state of his permanent home.

Sgt. Jones would therefore not be required to purchase Georgia tags if he had current Texas tags. On the other hand, Sgt. Smith, residing in Georgia and a legal resident thereof, can be required to purchase Georgia tags.

Sgt. Jones may register his car in Georgia but should be aware of the possible liability for personal property taxes.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act does not apply to dependents in this respect. If Sgt. Jones' wife owns a car in her own name, she may be required to purchase Georgia tags even though her domicile is in Texas and she had Texas tags last year.

What about operator's permits? Even though Sgt. Jones registers his car in Georgia, he need not obtain a Georgia operator's license provided he has a valid drivers license from the state of his permanent residence.

Georgia has extended the same immunity to servicemen's dependents. Therefore, Sgt. Jones' wife need not obtain a Georgia operator's license if she has a valid permit from the state of her domicile. Smith, a resident of Georgia, can be required to obtain a Georgia operator's permit.

Boy scouting provides youths an outlet

Last Friday marked the beginning of a two day Boy Scout camporee at Fort Benning.

When the camporee was completed, well over 100 Fort Benning Boy Scouts had camped out two days and three nights and participated in a variety of competitive events designed to select the top patrol of the district.

This is another fine example of a wholesome, energetic program in action . . . a program which is designed to and actually does help our youth keep themselves "physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

It's indeed a program which all young men would do well to look into.

Do You Understand Your Child?

Think you understand your child? One eminent child psychologist gives this test to find the answer. State yes or no to the following:

1) Does your child laugh easily?

2) Do his temper tantrums occur less than once or twice a week?

3) Does he go to sleep without throwing the whole household into a dither first?

4) Does he like a large variety of foods or eat well without making a fuss?

5) Does he have friends who like him and with whom he enjoys playing?

6) Is he often noisy?

7) Do you have to pick up after him?

8) Does he keep his bed dry at night?

9) Is he free from such habits as thumb-sucking, constant whimpering or entertaining daydreams for long periods of time?

10) Can you leave him without having him cry and protest as though you weren't going to return?

If you have answered yes to all questions, you've got a superbly well - adjusted child. If you answer no to all of them, you may be heading for problems.

If the answers are a little yes, a little no—the child psychologists say, be patient. Remember: you're bringing up a human being, not a robot.

EGG COLOR

Which has the best quality—white or brown eggs?

Well, the color of the egg shell has no bearing on the nutritive value of the egg. Egg shell color is a breed characteristic of the hen.

The cooking performance, as well as the nutritive value of eggs of the same grade are identical, regardless of color.

SELECT GRAPEFRUIT

If you want a juicy grapefruit, select from those which are heavy for their size.

This is a fruit-buying tip from Mrs. Rita Waters, Extension Service nutritionist.

Mrs. Waters explains that pulp that is full of juice weighs the most. Fruits that have relatively smooth, thin skin are usually juicy.

Caseworkers Celebrate Birthday

BY JEAN KENNEDY

Red Cross volunteer caseworkers serving Fort Benning recently celebrated their first anniversary here.

From the original group of 10 volunteers which began last year, only Mrs. Maurice Kendall and Mrs. Laurence Berger are still at Fort Benning.

Volunteer caseworkers assist the American Red Cross professional staff in giving welfare aid to servicemen and their dependents. The volunteers job includes interviewing, counseling, reporting and obtaining necessary records and information.

Volunteers presently training on the job are Mrs. George I. Forsythe, Mrs. Bob E. Edwards, Mrs. William Hanks, Mrs. Chester Mead, Mrs. Jesse Dumas, Mrs. Elmer Keane, Mrs. Smith Hersman and Mrs. Sherman Ensley.

The volunteer casework course consists of 20 hours of classwork and 10 hours of on the job training. Classes are instructed by Mr. Bill Higgs, Red Cross field director, and assisted by Mrs. Laurence Berger, chairman of casework service.

Last month, 17 volunteers served 174 hours along with seven registered nurses who served 46 hours in assisting the bloodmobile.

Beginning in January, plastic blood containers will be used for blood donations. All volunteers with experience in massaging plastic blood containers or who are interested in learning this procedure should contact Mrs. Colin J. Campbell, blood program chairman at 689-8289.

Anyone wishing information concerning the next American Red Cross volunteer basic training course should call the Martin Army Hospital Red Cross office at 544-3300 and leave their name, address and telephone number with the secretary. A basic training course will be offered as soon as there are enough ladies available for instruction.

Lipstick Science Comes To Aid Women's Beauty

Comedians a number of years back delighted their audiences with a little game of peeking into a woman's purse to see what variety of odd gadgets she carried. Some of the things were unusual, startling or laughable.

Always there was a lipstick, and on rare occasions, two. Today, however, if the game were played, the purse of any well - groomed woman would contain at least two and probably four lipsticks. . .a whole wardrobe . . .in a variety of shades to go with a change of clothing, make-up, hair color or even mood. Along with the lipsticks there could be a lipliner pencil or a lipliner brush.

A recent survey shows that men abhor the colorless lips of last year. They hate the smeary, messy look of lips that look as though they are so dry that they will crack if the woman smiles. They also dislike lips that obviously show they have been redrawn or reshaped into unnatural lines.

Cosmetic firms have listened and developed new textures that are the answer to the modern woman's needs . . . moist, light, soft and natural. Moisturizing lipsticks will do for lips what moisture lotion does for the skin. Lips are warmed to life by the blending of several shades of lip color and contouring them to appear perfectly shaped, alluring and natural.

To keep the dewy, moist appearance, do not blot lips. One can learn to use a lip brush or a lipliner pencil. The pencils look just like those we used when we were children to color paper dolls and are just as easy to use. The brush is a trifle more difficult but gives a very smooth line.

197th Infantry Brigade Plans End Of Go-to-Church Drive on Sunday

The executive secretary of the General Commission on Chaplains and Armed Forces Personnel will be on hand Sunday to take part in a combined awards and farewell ceremony at the 197th Brigade's Kelley Hill Chapel.

Dr. A. Ray Appelquist, the commission's executive secretary, will present awards at the ceremony which will climax the brigade's month-long "Go-to-Church" drive, according to Brigade Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Lester Burnette.

Awards will be presented to Brigade Commander Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr. and Battery A of the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery. In addition, Chaplain Burnette will preach a farewell sermon entitled "Manpower For God" before departing for Korea where he will serve as deputy chaplain of the I Corps Group.

According to Chaplain Burnette, Col. Riley will receive a certificate of appreciation awarded by the General Committee of Chaplains and Armed Forces Personnel with Headquarters in Washington, D. C.

In addition to making the awards at the ceremony following the 11 a.m. Protestant service, Dr. Appelquist will meet with all the Protestant chaplains of the post upon his arrival Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Appelquist is also the editor of "The Chaplain" and "The Link," magazines for Protestant chaplains and Armed Forces personnel.

"This certificate of appreciation is a rare honor and is only given to commanders who have shown an unusual interest and participation in the total religious program of their commands," the chaplain added.

In addition to the award for Riley, two plaques will be presented to Capt. Willis R. Bunting, commander of Battery "A" of the 2nd Battalion, 10th Artillery.

During the 197th's November campaign to increase attendance at religious services, Bunting's battery placed first in both categories of brigade competition. The battery placed first in both the total attendance category and in the percentage-of-total - strength - attending category.

For Chaplain Burnette, Sunday's service will be his farewell before departing for Korea. Assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade since July of 1964, Col. Burnette has served as chairman of the Main Officers Open Mess tennis committee and as vice-president of Youth Activities Club during his tour of duty here at Fort Benning.

Buchanan entered the Army in 1941 and was commissioned through OCS at Fort Benning in 1942. During World War II, he served in Europe.

Provost Marshal Interview

Holiday Time Provides Opportunity for Thieves

Fort Benning's Deputy Provost Marshal, Lt. Col. Bert Weiner, had some good advice this week for post soldiers and dependents during the coming holiday season.

Weiner warned that there will be increased opportunities for theft during the holidays because many soldiers will be carrying larger amounts of money for trips home and Christmas gifts. He advised extra caution.

There will be larger crowds in the commissary, PX, banks and civilian shopping facilities, he said. These crowded conditions provide an excellent opportunity for pickpockets and thefts from shopping carts and automobiles, Weiner said.

Lock Up Gifts

He advised that Christmas packages should not be openly displayed in parked automobiles. If they must be left unattended, they should be locked in the trunk, he urged.

Col. Weiner reminded women that purses, especially shoulder bags, can be easily opened by thieves without an owner's knowledge. He stressed that purses should never be left unattended in stores, automobiles or shopping carts.

He said that it is a good practice to carry only enough money required for immediate needs.

He also said that dishonest door-to-door salesmen are active during the holidays. He recommended that soldiers and dependents avoid these people.

Unoccupied Targets

Talking to military families living in the Fort Benning-Columbus area, Weiner said burglaries often occur in houses unoccupied during the holiday season.

He recommended that families leaving home should advise neighbors of this fact.

For Easiest Travel, Know Transit ABCs

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Some of the troubles soldiers have been encountering in using reduced air — and to a far smaller extent—rail and bus plans could be shortstopped if travelers knew more about the ground rules governing such travel.

The Army - operated Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service says that "little difficulty has been experienced by military travelers on leave using rail or bus."

But the terminal service says it "continues to receive numerous complaints from military personnel, their families, members of Congress and air carriers relative to incidents occurring while traveling on leave via air transportation."

Transportation officials believe that some of the trouble could be avoided if soldiers knew more about the travel plans, tariff rules and requirements.

Soldiers may be able to save themselves some holiday travel problems by learning the ABCs of the travel plan they want to use.

Generally, travelers are asked to check with their local travel agents for the latest information on fares and regulations. Soldiers should be aware too that the reduced rates are offered voluntarily by the airlines "and any mis-use of the privileges may cause their cancellation."

The transportation service has listed eight "know - them" points for men using reduced air travel plans.

They are:

Passengers must travel in uniform.

—Air stand-by passengers may board aircraft "only" after all confirmed reservation passengers.

—Air stand-by passengers are subject to removal at any point so that the carrier may seat confirmed reservation passengers.

—Most carriers make known the dollar fare for men traveling on reduced travel plans but say only that their reduced fare is 50 per cent of the one-way, prop plane first class fare.

—Proof of authorized leave or discharge must be shown.

—A copy of a document proving official leave discharge must be surrendered to the airlines in some cases.

—All airlines (as of November 4) except two (Bonanza and Los Angeles Airways) have a system-wide tariff for military stand - bys.

—Some lines will accept a signed statement of eligibility for special rates but only if the passenger displays the document showing he is on leave.

—It's a misconception, says the terminal service, and the cause of many complaints, but many soldiers apparently believe that showing of an ID card automatically entitles them to reduced rates.

PILOTS WANTED . . . UH-1 Bell Iroquois helicopters, workhorses of the Army's airmobile concept, await pilots at the Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala. The Army is seeking civilian and military applicants between the ages of 18 and 30 for the Warrant Officer flight training program. Young men selected for the 36-week aviator training course will learn to fly the UH-1 Huey both as a troop carrier aircraft and as a tactical weapons platform, capable of firing rockets and machine guns.

2nd Brigade Now Schooling 4090 Trainees

The 2nd Brigade of Fort Benning's Army Training Center, commanded by Lt. Col. Robert E. Baden is getting into the swing of training.

The brigade now has four battalions with 4,090 trainees in training and one battalion being filled which will start training in the near future.

The 6th Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. William Rousseau, is in the first week of the eight week cycle.

The 7th Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Ambrose Holper, has been filling this week and will start training in the near future.

The 8th Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Erling T. Smeds, is presently in the fifth week of training.

Maj. Howard J. Blumhardt is commander of the 9th Battalion. The unit is in its fourth week of training.

The 10th Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Thomas G. Banks, is in its third week of training.

Iroquois Unit Tops Scout Camporee

The Iroquois patrol of Troop 127 won top honors as the Fort Benning District Boy Scout camporee came to a close last Sunday after two days of competition at the reservists' summer encampment area near Camp Pine Knot.

Designated as the top patrol of the district at the termination of the camporee, Iroquois Patrol is composed of Lewis Goodman, Jimmy Cain, Joe Goodman, Dave Stalker and George Hartnet. Close behind the winners in the best patrol contest was Flaming Arrow patrol of Troop 37 while Beaver patrol of Troop 54 finished third.

Some 130 boys participated in the camporee which began last Friday and ended Sunday. Twenty five adults also "loaned a hand" with Maj. Lemuel Thomas of Lawson Army Aviation Command serving as camporee director.

Highlighting the program were the camporee events and contests which took place Saturday. They included signaling, blindfolded compass course, height judging, first aid relay, fire building and water boiling, fire by flint and steel, knot relay, tent pitching, stick relay, sack race, tug of war and log chopping.

Other high points of the camporee included individual troop campfire programs Friday evening; troop demonstrations and a district campfire Saturday; and church services and a closing ceremony Sunday.

A Boy Scout spokesman said the camporee was part of the continuing program offered boys in scouting.

SPIRIT OF MEN

"Wars may be fought with weapons, but they are won by men. It is the spirit of the men who follow and of the man who leads that gains the victory." — General George S. Patton Jr.

Test Agency to Mark 46th Year

Whether he wears it, shoots it, drinks from it or rides in it, the American Infantryman can be sure it has been tested and approved by Fort Benning's U. S. Army Infantry Board which celebrates its 46th anniversary next week.

The board, established here on Dec. 15, 1919, conducts tests on the Fort Benning reservation to determine whether weapons, clothing and other equipment are suitable for Infantry and Armywide use.

It is concerned with the comfort and well-being of the Infantryman as well as with the quality and effectiveness of his equipment.

As part of the U. S. Army Test and Evaluation Command, the board also gives guidance to developers of new Army equipment and assists the Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency in establishing realistic test standards.

The board also selects Army training aids and periodically rechecks the performance and suitability of standard Army issue now in use.

During the years since its origin, the board has been known by many names. In 1945 it was called the Army Ground Forces Board No. 3 and 1948 its name was changed to Army Field Forces Board No. 3. The board got its present title in 1957.

Col. James Muir Jr. heads the agency and directs the work of the board's 37 officer members. Liaison is maintained with the Marine Corps and the Canadian Army.

The board is divided into four test divisions which are responsible for different parts of the Infantryman's equipment.

The small arms division, headed by Lt. Col. Earl D. Roberts, tests all shoulder-fired weapons with the exception of rockets and recoilless devices, machine guns and weapons sights.

Lt. Col. James A. Sudderth is chief of the supporting Weapons Test Division which tests rockets, special antipersonnel weapons, recoilless and anti-tank weapons and grenades.

The division also handles mortars, communication and surveillance equipment, ammunition, training and maintenance items.

The Field Equipment Test Division has the broadest base of operation and is directed by Col. John C. Cousgill. The section handles items ranging from protective clothing, chemical weapons and rations to tentage, mines, wheeled and track vehicles and ammunition.

The newest addition to the board is the Combat Conditions Test Division directed by Lt. Col. Paul T. Hackett. The division develops combat test conditions and procedures which are used to measure the effectiveness of equipment in combat.

In addition to the test divisions, the board has a personnel and administrative section, an operations division and a supply and maintenance division. A headquarters company provides enlisted men for the board's work.

Army Successfully Fires Missile From Underground Launch Pad

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Army has successfully launched its SPRINT anti-missile missile in guided flight from an underground cell of the type designed for operational use at White Sands Missile Range, N. M.

The SPRINT is one of two missles being developed for the NIKE X system to intercept intercontinental ballistic missiles in flight.

The 27-ft long SPRINT, the first Army missile to use a "pop - up" launching technique, was ejected from its underground cell by a gas-driven piston. Its first-stage motor ignited after the missile was in the air.

Guided in flight by ground-based radar and computers, the SPRINT carried instrumentation instead of a warhead in its nose section. It was not fired at an actual target.

SPRINT's companion missile —the long range ZEUS— would be capable of intercepting attacking warheads outside the earth's atmosphere, while the high - acceleration SPRINT would be used to intercept targets once they have penetrated the atmosphere.

Western Electric is prime contractor for the NIKE X system and Bell Telephone Laboratories is responsible for system design and development. The SPRINT is being developed by the Martin Company at Orlando, Fla. Hercules Powder developed the SPRINT propellant.

SPRINT SPRINTS . . . The Army's newest anti-missile missile rises high above White Sands Missile Range, N.M. during a test flight from an underground launch cell. Being developed as an interceptor missile for the NIKE X missile defense system, the high acceleration of the SPRINT will allow it to reach out and destroy an attacking intercontinental ballistic missile or submarine launched missile within seconds after launch. SPRINT is being developed by the Martin Co., Orlando, Fla.

SEA - GOING COWBOYS

In Toronto, Canada, six men taking part in a rodeo had to turn into sea - going cowboys to get back a 1,500-pound Brahma bull that went for an impromptu swim. The bull threw his rider at the rodeo, thundered out of the nearest exit and a block away plunged into Lake Ontario. Six cowboys boarded a police boat, lassoed the bull and towed him to shore. He was pulled out of the lake by four horses.

Building Receives Official Name

Fort Benning's multi-million dollar headquarters-school complex, shown above, got a name this week after being called a variety of names since its dedication in June 1964. The building which houses Infantry School classrooms, staff and administrative sections will now be known as Infantry Hall. In the past it has been variously called the Academic Building, Building Four or the Infantry School Building. The new official designation is the result of general order 139 issued this week by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commanding general. Gen. York selected the name after considering several suggestions from the staff of the Infantry School.

MICE IN BOMB

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) — A Truax Air Force Base bomb squad checked three old aerial bombs found recently on the Fred Anstett farm near Baraboo and decided they were perfectly harmless practice bombs. But just to be sure, they dismantled one and, to their surprise, found it was not empty. It contained a family of mice.

Could You Take Over Her Duties Too?

Wives are important executives in the management of the business of the home. Your wife fills a number of important jobs—general manager, secretary, treasurer, nurse, food manager, chef, maintenance crew, laundress, chauffeur, receptionist, etc. If anything happened to this key woman you couldn't take over her duties in addition to your own as breadwinner for the family. All too often "wife insurance" is completely overlooked. The loss of a wife and mother is always tragic, and she can't ever be replaced in the hearts of her family. However, the financial loss alone can be staggering to the wealthy as well as to those families in moderate circumstances.
Franklin Life has introduced a unique plan that offers the maximum protection for the minimum premium. This contract, The Mother's Family Protector, includes not only the wife but all children ages 0 to 18. The initial amount of protection on the wife at age 30 is $11,500. Each child has $1,000 insurance. Total premium for wife and children is only $3.00 per month.
The plan includes other valuable benefits. Without any obligation, why not return the coupon today.

Boy Scouts Set Meeting Saturday

Fort Benning will host a top level Boy Scout conference tomorrow as leaders from the 12 districts of the Chattahoochee Council will converge on Infantry Hall from Georgia and Alabama to attend a district officers training conference.

After registration is completed between 1:30 and 2 p.m., the conference will begin with a general session for the more than 75 persons expected to attend the meeting. This will be followed by separate sessions for the various operating committees of a district.

The conference is expected to end at approximately 7 p.m. after the completion of the evening meal in the Hall's cafeteria. Cost of the event will be $1.50 per person to cover the evening meal and training materials.

Any interested scout leader or prospective scout leader is invited to attend the conference designed to review in detail the various functions of a district committee.

PFC Designs Distinctive Peace Patch

SANTO DOMINGO — A distinctive patch, designed by an Army PFC to be worn by soldiers in the Dominican Republic, has been approved by Gen. Hugo Panasco Alvim of Brazil, commander of the Inter-american Peace Force (IAPF).

PFC Kenneth A. West, 1st Psychological Warfare Battalion, submitted his design along with nearly 20 others when IAPF headquarters announced it was seeking an official insignia.

His patch is light blue and white on a dark blue background. Two hands, one holding a sword pointing down and the other holding the traditional palm branch pointing upward, symbolizes the war and peace theme.

Under the sword are the letters FIP, the Spanish language abbreviation of the IAPF (Fuerza Interamericana de Paz), and beneath the hand holding the palm leaves are the letters OEA, Spanish abbreviation for the Organization of American States (Organizacion de los Estadoes Americanos).

Before entering the Army West worked as an artist in Cincinnati, Ohio, following study at the Central Academy of Commercial Art.

National Agency Checks Required On Army Enlistees; Draftees Next

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — National agency checks (NACs) now are required on all Army enlistees. The new ruling went into effect November 1. For draftees, however, NACs will not be required until next July 1, officials told Army Times recently.

The phasing schedule is designed to ease the Army's already heavy workload at the processing stations. Because of the Viet Nam buildup, unusually large numbers of draftees are entering the Army.

Officials feel that to make the NACs a requirement for everybody at the present time would be just "too much of a workload on both the processing stations and the Army's investigation force."

By next July, the Army is hopeful that current manpower input levels will be back to normal so the security checking won't be an impossible task. Recruiters currently conduct only local police checks on enlistees.

$2 Per Man

The checks, which cost the Army an average of $2 per man, will be launched on each man almost immediately upon his entry into the Army. He'll be required to fill out the necessary forms at the processing center with checks being inaugurated after entry into basic combat training.

"The objective is to have each man's check completed by the time he finishes BCT so there won't be any delay in his entering service school or taking a job requiring an NAC," officials said.

The average NAC takes about 25 to 30 days to complete. It would take longer if something serious comes up in a man's background which would require a complete background investigation.

FBI Check

The NAC is primarily an FBI check. However, records of other government agencies are checked in situations where the Army feels they may have some information to furnish on a soldier's background.

For example, a check of a man who has been in the employ of the federal government would certainly require touching base with the Civil Service Commission.

Successful completion of an NAC makes a soldier eligible to handle security matters up to "secret" clearance. His commander must give his okay before a soldier is actually allowed to handle classified material.

An NAC will be required in the future on all enlisted men with no prior service or those with more than a six-month's break in service, officials said.

Once an NAC is granted, it will remain in force for as long as the man remains on continuous active duty, unless the clearance is withdrawn sooner because of something the man does while on active duty.

In addition to requiring NACs on all Army enlisted newcomers, the Army is now in the process of requiring NACs on all E-7s, E-8s, and E-9s. E-6s holding E-7 positions also will be required to get an NAC. Eventually, the Army's entire enlisted force will be cleared for up to Secret.

It will be some time before NACs will be required on REP personnel of the National Guard and Army Reserve, officials said.

WAR AND PEACE

"If we desire peace, one of the most powerful institutions of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war." — General George Washington

LBJ Fixes 'Inequity' In Paratroopers' Pay

AUSTIN, Tex. — President Johnson has corrected what was described as an "inequity" in military pay discovered by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara during his recent inspection tour of combat areas in South Viet Nam.

Joseph Laitin, assistant White House press secretary, said Mr. McNamara had found that some paratroopers in three Army units had not been able to make the number of jumps required to qualify for extra incentive pay because they had been involved in ground combat.

The Secretary communicated this to Mr. Johnson when he returned and this week the President approved an amendment to Executive Order 11157, under which a paratrooper may earn incentive pay if his commanding officer determines that ground combat has prevented him from making the necessary jumps.

The jump requirement says that a paratrooper has to perfrom one or more jumps during any three consecutive months to qualify for incentive pay during that period. The incentive pay amounts to $55 a month for enlisted men and $110 a month for officers.

At Martin Army Hospital

Steam Plant Gets Color

A good idea and some buckets of paint recently gave the steam plant at Martin Army Hospital a practical face lifting.

The maze of pipes running throughout the plant, which provides steam for heating, cooking, sterilizing hot water and air conditioning, have been painted bright colors. Besides adding a touch of brightness, the colors provide an identification system.

Tired of following a pipe around to its originating point to find out what it contained, four employees assigned a color to each. Metal insulating bands around each pipe were painted: red for oil, black for steam, silver for air, yellow for gas, blue for chemicals and brown, green or orange for water. The color key is painted on the wall.

On the face of the plant's three boilers, each valve is painted according to the color key.

The employees who planned and carried out the color-identification scheme are Samuel M. Carver, Joseph L. Hotard, Hoke S. McLeod and John T. Smith, all of Columbus.

"Our steam plant has become a show place for visitors," John A. Grant, acting chief of the plant, said.

There are three water boilers with a total capacity of 75,000 pounds of steam per hour, Grant said. The primary fuel is natural gas with oil as a stand-by fuel.

The steam plant is operated by the post engineers, under the direction of George E. White, chief of utilities, and Louis Noell, chief of the Mechanical Branch.

President Cites Viet Ranger Unit

SAIGON (AFPS)—A U. S. Presidential Unit Citation (PUC) has been presented to the Republic of Viet Nam's 42nd Ranger Battalion on behalf of President Johnson.

In presenting the citation, General William C. Westmoreland, commander, Military Assistance Command, Viet Nam, said, "The heroic action of the 42nd Ranger Battalion of the RVN affords the world still another example of the courage, and steadfast determination with which a brave people struggles to preserve its freedom."

General Westmoreland also stated, "Few nations have been subjected to such a ruthless and relentless assault on their basic liberty; none have fought more heroically in defense of that liberty than the people of South Viet Nam."

Three other RVN units have also received the PUC.

At ceremonies in Soc Trang, the U.S. Army's Company A, 502nd Aviation Battalion, was presented the Vietnamese Gallantry Cross with palm for extraordinary heroism in combat for action against the Viet Cong early this year while in support of a Vietnamese Army force.

BILLET PROOF...

Army Sergeant Beaten by Best As Trackman

By JIM CONNOLLY
Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.

SFC Peter "Rupy" Ruplenas, 47, has gathered more than 100 trophies, medals and plaques during a track career that began as a high school student in 1935 at South Boston, Mass., and ended in 1955.

Rupy never became one of the really big names in track but he can claim to have been beaten by some of the very best. In 1941, while stationed with the Eighth Air Force in England, Rupy ran in a mile meet and was beaten by only one high school boy. The boy's name happened to be Roger Bannister.

A career Army man with 20 years service behind him, Rupy jokes about how he started running in South Boston. "I was too small to fight the Irish," he says, "so I had to learn to run." During his career he has competed against such track greats as Olympic veterans Curt Stone and Lou Gregory.

Gregory raced Rupy up Japan's Mt. Fuji, setting a new mark for bottom-to-top trio.

Though he hasn't participated in any track meets since 1955, Ruplenas still stays in good shape. At the age of 47 he can still score 424 out of a possible 500 on an Army physical training test.

No, Sergeant Peter Ruplenas was never one of the really great names in track, but as he says, "If it wasn't for bums like me, track wouldn't be run." It takes more than one man to make a race. (AFPS)

Retirees Must Find Employment To Get Maximum Social Security

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — A military retiree who is separated while in his late 40s or 50s had better continue working if he expects to draw maximum Social Security benefits.

This is the gist of an official opinion offered to a reserve lieutenant colonel by Social Security Administration Commissioner Robert M. Ball when the officer asked if his military earnings could be "frozen" to provide him with the maximum old age benefits.

In his letter to SSA, the officer said he had been paying into Social Security regularly and, if he were of eligible age now, he would be receiving maximum payments.

"Now comes the problem," he writes to SSA, "suppose I retire completely and live on my retirement pay; or take a job that does not pay into Social Security; or even work for as little as $100 a month just for spending money. In either case, what happens to my Social Security payments?

"Is there any way I can tell Social Security: 'I have met your requirements for retirement and my account with you is in good order. And now I would like to freeze my status until I reach the age where I can apply for retirement.

"If this is not possible, does it mean that each year I do not find employment which earns maximum Social Security, my credits will be lessened accordingly by the time I reach 65?"

Receives Reply

The colonel submitted a statement of his earnings with his letter to SSA and received this reply from Commissioner Ball which says in part:

". . .As the statement indicates . . . you have enough social security credits to qualify for old-age insurance benefits at age 62 or later. This is true even though you may never again work in employment covered by social security. The longer you work, though, the higher your benefit amount will be when you reach retirement age.

"Under the social security law, a person who, for any substantial length of time, either has low earnings in covered employment or has stopped working in covered employment, could qualify for a smaller benefit amount than a person who either has relatively higher earnings or has continued working in covered employment. This occurs when such low or no earnings are enough to decrease the overall average yearly earnings upon which his benefit amount is based.

Number of Years

"In obtaining this average yearly earnings figure, it is necessary to determine the number of years that can be used . . . The number of years generally used in retirement cases is five less than the number of years elapsed after 1936 or 1950, whichever will give the higher benefit, and up to the year the worker reaches age 65 (62 for women).

"According to your date of birth, your benefit amount will be based on the average of your 38 years of highest earnings after 1936, or alternatively, on the average of your 26 years of highest earnings after 1950 . . .

"We believe the present provision for excluding five years of low or no earnings, however, gives substantial protection against the lowering of the average yearly earnings because of relatively brief periods of unemployment, illness, low earnings or work in noncovered jobs. In addition, periods during which a worker is under a disability (as defined in the law) can be excluded in the figuring of his average yearly earnings.

". . .For a person to qualify to have his social security earnings record 'frozen' or excluded in figuring his benefit amount, he must be disabled within the meaning of the social security law and have filed a disability application. The disability 'freeze' applies only to those who are unable to perform substantial gainful work and who also meet the special earnings requirements . . ."

Army Helicopters Have Built-In Smoke Screen

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Helicopter pilots in Viet Nam are now able to supply their own smoke screens for concealing aerial assaults and troop landings.

The job formerly required a smoke generator on the ground or a conventional aircraft fitted with a smoke dispenser because the helicopter rotor quickly dispersed smoke generated by the craft.

Solution to the problem came in the form of an adapter for the XM-3 rocket launcher, usually mounted on UH-1B Huey helicopters. It allows the launcher to spill out nearly 300 smoke grenades which fall below the rotor downwash to lay down a 1,000 meter smoke screen.

The Army's Limited Warfare Laboratory at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., developed the adapter in less than a month, fashioning it from existing pieces of hardware.

They're now working on a technique which mixes smoke fuel with the helicopter's hot exhaust to generate a volume of smoke so thick that the downwash will not dissipate it.

Benning National Bank Declares Sixth Dividend

The Board of Directors of the National Bank of Fort Benning have declared a $1 per share cash dividend.

The dividend is payable to shareholders of record on Dec. 1, 1965 and will be paid on Dec. 14, officials said.

In making the announcement, William A. Lyman, president, stated "we are most pleased that we can pay our shareholders this dividend.

"This is the sixth consecutive cash dividend paid by our bank in its eight full years of operation. These dividends have been made possible only through the excellent support of our shareholders and our customers," he added.

The National Bank of Fort Benning, organized in 1957, lists among its customers and shareholders people with addresses throughout the free world, both military and civilian.

Commenting on the Electronic Data Accounting System installed in early 1965, Lyman said, "Our computer has helped our operation and has been of tremendous benefit to our customers. We look forward to even more benefits from this most exciting innovation in bank accounting."

Communism's Claim

'Inequality Abolished With State-Owned Property'

Official Soviet propaganda claims that class inequality has been abolished because all means of production (factories, land, etc.) have been taken over by the state.

According to Communist doctrine, there can be no inequality when productive property is no longer owned by private owners, or capitalists. In the Communist view, only capitalists can exploit workers and thus create inequality.

Experience in the Soviet Union and other Communist states has disproved the story. It has been clearly shown that inequality is possible — not to say inevitable — in Communist states because the ruling group is limited by no such restraints as those that have been slowly and painstakingly evolved in democratic nations.

Specifically, Communist experience has shown that inequality imposed by harsh government policies can be more drastic than inequalities created by dealings among private citizens.

Under democratic capitalism, the person or group who feels unfairly treated can appeal to the government (and often does) for protection against inequality. Democracy thus offers political protection against social inequality. Under communism, the citizen or group who feels unequally treated cannot protest to the state because it is the state itself which hands down policies of inequality.

Boss Does Well

The worker sees for himself that his boss in the state-owned factory drives a car, wears good clothing, lives in a three-room apartment in a "desirable" neighborhood and enjoys other luxuries of this sort.

In the face of such evidence, the worker can hardly take seriously the fiction that, just because the manager does not own the plant, the manager and workers belong to the same class of "toilers."

Contrary to Communist theory, economic classes are created by differences of income and style of living and not by ownership of the means of production. After all, in capitalist countries, too, industrial managers generally do not own the factories they run (the stockholders do) — they just have higher salaries. The same logic applies to Communist state-owned industries.

There are two principal ways in which the Soviet government promotes economic inequality: through its taxation policy and through its wage policy.

In its taxation policy, the Soviet government favors the wealthy over the poor by emphasizing sales taxes rather than income taxes as a main source of government revenue. The sales tax has what in tax policy is called a regressive effect.

Since everybody pays the same amount of money in sales taxes when buying an article, the poorer person is hit harder proportionately than the wealthier person.

Distributes Burden

By contrast, the personal income tax makes it possible to distribute the tax burden according to people's relative ability to pay. This is called the principle of progressive taxation. Under this system, a person of low income pays a low percentage of his income as income tax. As his income goes up, the percentage of his income tax also goes up.

In the Soviet Union, the government derives only eight per cent of its revenue from personal income taxes whereas in the United States the federal government derives fifty-four per cent of its revenue from personal income taxes. On the other hand, sales taxes contribute over fifty per cent to the revenue of the Soviet government but only twelve per cent in the United States.

As a result of this Soviet policy, half of the price the Soviet citizen pays for his clothing is tax. The sales tax on meat, butter and laundry soap makes up two-thirds of the total price, and on sugar, salt and cigarettes, the tax is even higher. On some items, the sales tax is several times as high as the basic price of the article. In the United States, even where state and local sales taxes are levied on essentials like food and clothing, the rates seldom rise above three to four per cent.

Higher Income Groups

In 1960, the Soviet government announced that by this year income taxes will be abolished altogether. This means that the tax position of the higher-income groups in Russia will be improved even more since what the government does not raise in income taxes it must raise in sales taxes and other indirect taxes that fall hardest on the poorer classes.

Inheritance taxation in the Soviet Union shows a similar bias for the wealthy as contrasted with the American approach that favors the less well-to-do.

McNamara Speech Taken As OK for New Air Cav

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary McNamara has blessed in advance an expected Army recommendation that a new airmobile division be formed.

The defense chief's blessing came in two somewhat differing statements to reporters in Saigon.

According to one transcript of the secretary's remarks on the effectiveness of airmobility and the new 1st Cavalry Division in Viet Nam, "I was immensely impressed by the effectiveness of the division.

"Not only by the valor and courage which we've come to expect of American combat personnel, but by the degree which the concept of increased mobility and increased fire power on which the division is based has proven out.

"I am sure the result will be that we will wish to add another air cavalry division to the forces of the U. S. Army," the official transcript quoted McNamara.

For Viet Nam Use

The new airmobile division would be available for use in Viet Nam.

Generally, first press reports from Viet Nam created the impression that more than one new airmobile unit would be created soon.

As the McNamara party was leaving Saigon, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, told newsmen that "at least" one airmobile division would be created.

At about the same time there was an unconfirmed report that the Army was asking the Joint Chiefs of Staff to convert the 101st Airborne Division and the 82nd Airborne Division into airmobile divisions.

Such a paper may exist in the Army but it is doubtful that it represents a current Army stand. No such paper is now at the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

According to informed sources, the Army has made no recommendations yet to McNamara on the creation of another airmobile division.

The Army has until the first of the year to inform the Secretary of Defense of its "mix" of airmobile and airborne divisions.

The Times article says there is considerable doubt that the Army will be able to handle the manpower — pilots, mechanics and other aviation specialties — problems and machinery required for a new division patterned on the 1st Air Cavalry.

Pilot Shortages

In fact, there has been sentiment within the Army staff to say no to proposals of another airmobile unit because aircraft and pilots which do not now exist have already been allocated to already anticipated requirements.

Army aviation has not yet recovered from the FY 1965 budget cuts in training and aircraft production.

The article continues saying "since McNamara appears to want another airmobile division next year, the Army obviously will have to cough up the stuff to meet the task."

MISS IBM JOCKEY . . . Miss Anne Blubaugh of Marlow Heights, Md., mails a color photo of herself in a bathing suit to the 1st Cavalry Division's IBM jockeys in Viet Nam. Anne's trip to the mail box is the culmination of a search begun weeks ago by the Viet Nam-based soldiers—they needed a mascot. One day, Pfc Harold Bluebaugh flipped open his wallet to a picture of his sister—a 23-year-old, hazel-eyed, frosted blond. The soldiers' problem was solved—they had found their mascot.

Chief of Special Warfare School Addresses New 2nd Lieutenants

Three guidelines for new Infantry officers were outlined for 144 Officer Candidate School graduates at Fort Benning last week by guest speaker Brig. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commandant of the U. S. Army Special Warfare School at Fort Bragg, N. C.

The general told the young second lieutenants to "check everything and keep on checking, make decisions and plan ahead."

It is not enough to check once and expect everything to remain in order, he said. Efficiency requires constant checking and rechecking as long as operation is in effect, Gen Stilwell added. He showed the students a glowing flashlight in apparently good condition. A check, however, revealed that it was impossible to turn the light off.

"Check everything," he urged, "over and over."

Turning to a more serious vein, the speaker advised the graduates to make decisions rather than shunting the responsibility off to someone else.

"Many men shirk making decisions," he said. "They take the easy way out passing the problem on to someone else."

"When a decision is too difficult," Gen. Stilwell continued, "it is because you don't know enough about the problem. The solution is then to study more. If the facts are before you, the decision is easy."

The third guideline, plan ahead, should lead the officer to "visualize the worst and plan thoroughly enough for any event," the general said.

Gen. Stilwell presented a number of awards to 2nd Lt. Jerry J. Austin, honor and distinguished graduate and leadership graduate. His average grade was 99.11 per cent. The awards included a letter of achievement from The Infantry School, an Association of the U. S. Army plaque, an Infantry man statuette and a "Follow Me" plaque.

The speaker, assisted by Mrs. Austin, the lieutenant's wife, pinned the gold bars of his new rank on the honor graduate.

The Career Counselor Says:

Army Security Agency Considered Careerist's 'Cadillac of Options'

Assignment in the Army Security Agency is known in the career counseling field as the "Cadillac of Options."

For the qualified soldier it offers much for consideration as a career field.

What is the United States Army Security Agency?

More commonly known as the ASA, it plays a distinctive and important role in the national defense.

It is a field operating agency and has the mission of providing electronic communications security in support of the field armies and the national defense effort of the United States.

To fulfill its mission, Army Security Agency units are equipped with the latest in electronic equipment strategically located throughout the world.

Satisfy Demands

To satisfy the demands of its ever - expanding mission, the Agency maintains its own military schooling system in addition to utilizing the facilities of other Department of Defense and U. S. Army service schools.

It offers enlisted men opportunities to advance to the top of any field in which they qualify.

Young men reenlisting for the Security Agency have the opportunity for training in languages, electronics, communications and other technical and administrative fields.

The soldier might qualify and be trained as an analytic equipment operator, foreign language specialist, direction finding operator, field radio repairman, fixed ciphony repairman, general cryptographic repairman, microwave equipment repairman, Morse interceptor, radioteletype operator, signal analyst or teletypewriter repairman.

In addition, qualified soldiers with prior - service who reenlist for the ASA are permitted to select a school of their choice and make no commitment until informed whether or not a vacancy exists in the school.

Choice of Stations

Where is a member of ASA stationed?

The Security Agency has units throughout the United States. Units also are stationed at choice locations in Europe, the Pacific, Far East, Middle East and Caribbean.

In the case of schooling, qualified prior - service personnel may reenlist for a specific ASA unit and location of their choice and be assured of their selection provided a vacancy exists in grade and military occupational specialty.

What are the enlistment qualifications for the ASA option?

A soldier must be a high school graduate or the equivalent and meet the qualifications for reenlistment prescribed in AR 601-210. He must be of excellent character and have unquestionable loyalty to the United States, be a United States citizen and if he is married his wife must also be a citizen? He must possess personal habits or traits of character unquestionable from a security standpoint.

Interested soldiers are urged to look into the ASA career field by seeing the career counselor.

Two Planes Leave With Viet Nam Gifts

Two plane loads of Christmas packages left Fort Benning's Lawson Army Airfield last week en route to troops in the 1st Cavalry Division in Viet Nam.

The shipment, in two C-119 Air Force Reserve planes, was the third and fourth.

Some 8,000 pounds of cakes, cookies, books, toothbrushes, wallets, toys, lightweight clothing and other gifts were aboard the two aircraft. One plane load was bound for Jackson, Miss., and the other for St. Joseph, Mo., for transhipment to National Guard planes for the final leg of the journey to Viet Nam.

The Air National Guard planes took off last week for the final "Operation Christmas Cheer" flight to the men of the 1st Cavalry Division who will share the Christmas cargo with Vietnamese families.

According to local officials, more than 100 individuals from American Legion posts, civic organizations and Fort Benning have aided in collecting and loading the products in the last three weeks.

Final contributions were received on Dec. 1, approximately 4,000 pounds from Athens and 200 pounds from Fort Valley, Ga.

SANDWICH TIP

You can make a delightful sandwich filling by mixing cut-up dried beef with cream and blue cheese. Good proportions are one jar (2½ ounces) dried beef, one package (3 ounces) cream cheese and one ounce blue cheese. Use on rye or whole wheat bread.

1st Cav Report:

Boom Town Springs Up As Cav Troopers Settle

HANK ALLISON

AN KHE, (1st Cav.-IO) — The Americans are here and the town is booming.

Along Highway 70 — a new road constructed by the 70th Engineer Battalion connecting the big 1st Cavalry Division camp with Highway 19 and the village of An Khe — shops are starting to spring up.

Laundries, hardware stores — all selling the same brand of sheet metal washpans, woven chairs and candles — and shops that carry a little of everything — are popping up like mushrooms.

Farmer's Market

Rolling down Highway 19, heading for the village, you notice a scene not unlike the big farmers' markets in many American cities.

Shops now stand along the side of the road where a few weeks ago the only thing moving was an occasional water buffalo which had escaped from its rice paddy.

More than 2,000 of the villagers work at clearing land around the perimeter of the Army camp. Those too young or too old to swing a brush scythe pound the dirt from the soldiers' fatigues on the smooth rocks in the Song Ba River.

One reason commerce is flourishing in An Khe, Army officials believe, is the protective cordon of troops alert for marauding bands of Viet Cong.

Refugees from Viet Cong controlled areas pour into An Khe weekly, raising the population by as much as 200 persons per week. Refugee camps are being set up to shelter the homeless as quickly as possible. Permanent housing is in the future.

The plans call for An Khe to be a model city and those initially skeptical are becoming believers.

Capt. Stanley S. Seesler, assistant civil affairs officer said "The people were very skeptical of us at first but now they see we are here to stay and they are ready to pitch-in and work alongside our men to improve the district."

It is no wonder that they were a little unimpressed at first. The people of the central highlands have seen a lot of armies come and go. The French and Japanese had marched past them before the Americans came.

"I think the big difference is that we have taken an interest in the people." Capt. Sessler said. "Our biggest battle is to win the people's support. Then the Viet Cong will have no place to hide."

Study of Officer Careers Shows Structure Adequate

WASHINGTON (ANF) — The Department of the Army study of technical missions, structure, and career development (Project TECSTAR) has been completed. Analysis of that and related studies has shown that the existing officer career structure is basically sound, the Department of the Army has announced.

Review of the TECSTAR report also revealed "problem areas" for continued study, such as a possible realignment of the Signal, Quartermaster, and Ordnance branch functions.

TECSTAR was set up to determine whether there is a need for changes in the Army's officer career systems in the light of the increasing number of officers with special technical skills and qualifications.

Focus of the study was the Army's current methods of matching the right officers to the right jobs, particularly those requiring specialized talents and training, while keeping an adequate mobilization base of combat arms officers.

The identification of officer command and technical functions was studied, along with officer qualification codes and the distribution of officer resources.

Army Decisions

DA has announced that the branch system and specialist programs will continue to be used as the structure for career development. The military occupational specialty (MOS) will also be retained for the classification and control of officer position and assignments.

Specific decisions by DA call for the development of any changes to selection criteria for promotion, school assignment, and retention; announcement, through career management offices, of the basis for selection board decisions; and the study of statistical trends in officer management to determine their impact on the officer corps. A Department of Army staff element will be charged with these responsibilities.

Problem Areas

Although no major revision of the system is planned, DA officials report that work to improve the existing management system will continue. Review of the Army's officer requirements, distribution by grade and branch, and opportunities for promotion and advanced qualification have spotlighted several "problem areas." The Chief of Staff has ordered further action in these areas.

Designated for additional examination are the functions of the Signal, Quartermaster, and Ordnance branches. This will be preliminary to a consideration of a possible requirement for a realignment of those branches.

Also to be studied are provisions for making public the composition of selection boards and the criteria for their promotion, senior service school, and retention decisions.

Evaluation of the TECSTAR report also revealed the need for a continuing monitor of conditions and trends in the officer corps in order to promptly forecast the need for changes or improvements.

Use Professional Advice When Selling Your Home

BY ANDY LANG
AP News Feature

Selling your house? Why not do as the professional does?

The man who makes a living buying and selling old houses has a system. Before he puts an old house up for sale, he makes it salable. Doesn't everybody? Decidedly not.

Real estate dealers will tell you that, on the contrary, some persons neglect the maintenance of their houses when they are getting ready to put them up for sale. The theory seems to be that, since they will be selling soon, why spend money on property which will belong to somebody else?

We're not referring now to major capital improvements but simply to things which will make a prospective purchaser look with favor on the house. It would be interesting to know how many times a house remains on the market for many months when it could have been sold quickly merely with the addition of a coat of paint.

A house with a shoddy exterior, peeling and dirty, turns away a prospective buyer before he gets to the front door. As a result, he may pass up a solid house at a reasonable price because he decided not to go inside.

"Fixing Up" Expenses

Remember this important point: if you paint your house for the specific purpose of making it more salable, you can add the cost of painting to what are called "fixing-up expenses" at tax time.

Your local income tax office can advise you of the details about this, since some of them are a little complicated, but generally, if the painting is done within 90 days before the sale, the cost can be deducted from the sale price for tax purposes. Thus, the money you spend on painting the house can help you to sell it faster, may get you a better price and gives you a tax advantage.

There are many other things, some of them seemingly trivial but actually important, that can help you to sell your house. Door squeak? Oil the hinges. Faucets drip? Change the washers. Dirty dishes in the sink? Clean them and put them away before a prospect appears. Beds unmade? Straighten them out. Cracks in the wall? Patch them.

Small Matters

Many persons feel that neglected small matters usually are a sign of neglected big matters. Psychology plays a more important part in the sale of a house than most persons think.

Here is an actual example told to us by a real estate broker: after looking over a house they seemed to like, a couple told the broker in his office they had decided to reject it. He asked why. Because, the woman explained, every closet they opened was jammed to capacity, indicating there wasn't enough closet space in the house. Actually, the broker said, there were plenty of closets but he couldn't convince the woman of that.

Management Told Man Still Essential

The major role man still plays in modern industry despite all the automation and push - button processes was the theme presented to 57 members of the Armed Forces Management Association at a meeting recently at Fort Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess.

Charles D. Broadwell, personnel director of the U. S. Rubber Company's plant in Opelika, Ala. and guest speaker at the dinner meeting, said "We believe in building men as well as products at our plant."

In outlining the training necessary to introduce new employees to the highly specialized field of producing tires, textiles and plastics, the speaker gave the underlying personnel policies of his company.

"We believe in man, as well as our responsibility to make a good product. Industry must meet equal responsibilities to stockholders, customers and employees," he said. "Strive to improve your product and at the same time, give your employees an incentive."

"Cooperation between both management and labor is necessary to meet the end objectives of any enterprise," Broadwell continued. "It is a two-way street. You have to look out for the welfare of your employees. Remember, you both have the same motive - money - making a profit."

Experimental Copter Nears Speed Mark

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. (ANF)—The world's fastest rotorcraft, the Army's XH-51A compound helicopter, is now capable of flight at even higher speeds, according to engineers at the Lockheed California Co., developer of the craft.

Combining a rigid-blade helicopter rotor with stub-by wings and an auxiliary jet engine, the compound craft is said to have a 300 mile-per-hour record within its reach.

Using only half of the thrust of its wing-mounted jet engine, the XH-51A flew at 272 miles-per-hour earlier this year. Despite the unusually high speeds for a helicopter, the craft has proved to be extremely stable and maneuverable in flight.

WACs See Training In Action

Fifty-eight students of the basic officers and officer candidate classes at the WAC School, Fort McClellan, Ala., are visiting Fort Benning this week to see Infantry training.

Ten of the students are officer candidates and made the trip with the basic officers class to see training techniques and weapons employed at The Infantry School.

The group arrived by bus Wednesday and will depart this afternoon.

The itinerary included a visit to Infantry Hall where they were welcomed by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York and then briefed on the history, development and administration of The Infantry School.

Following a tour of Infantry Hall (Bldg. 4), they visited Watson Field and Hook Range to see field training.

Air Force Base Defeats Benning At Golf Tourney

Fort Benning golfers were defeated by Maxwell Air Force Base players, 158 to 84, last week at the "Bent Shaft Open" golf tournament hosted by the Alabama installation.

The 108 golfers from the two military installations played under best ball rules during the annual one-day tourney.

Lt. Gen. Ralph P. Swoford, USAF, Ret., Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander and Maj. Gen. Arno H. Luehman, Air College commandant were among the participants in the tourney on Maxwell's par 71 East Course.

Better Basketball

University of Houston Zone Press Makes a More Enjoyable Game

BY GUY V. LEWIS
Houston Basketball Coach
Written for AP Newsfeatures

I began using a number of pressing defenses five seasons ago. Now they are a trademark of our University of Houston teams. Five basic reasons for using the press or pressure defense have encouraged our continued use of this type of action.

First, and possible the most important, I believe the press helps a coach get almost 100 per cent effort from his players. There is no place for a loafer while using the press. The fans as well as his coach and teammates can spot him. To make the press effective, the players must play to their maximum at all times.

Pride in Defense

Secondly, our players have developed a great pride in playing defense. The press gives them a feeling of superiority. By using it they know that they can dominate or overpower a team. No matter how far they fall behind, they feel they can come back and beat the other team.

For example, we trailed another team throughout the first half of a game last winter by as much as five minutes of the second half, we pressed them and outscored them 21 - 4. This broke the game wide open and we won by a large margin.

The Press

This leads right into the third important point. The press is a great asset for a for a fast - break team it speeds up scoring opportunities and leads to many easy baskets. Thus, the press is also an important offensive weapon. It has a tremendous adverse effect on the other team's morale. Steals and easy layups demoralize an opponent. Our press has often been called "organized confusion."

These first three reasons for using the press lead to a fourth reason. The press makes defense a fun game instead of drudgery. True, playing the press correctly is still very hard work. However, it's fun because you can score from it.

The fans love it. Pressing tactics tend to make a much more exciting game from a spectator standpoint. And, the defensive player receives his share of recognition in the sports pages along with the high scorers and rebounders.

Finally, the press brings out the hustler, the guy who never quits, the real 100 per center who truly loves to play. One of our top pressing players a couple of seasons ago was a 135 - pound youngster only 5-feet-8. Had he not been a real hustler, he probably would have played very little because he was not a great shooter and certainly lacked size.

Although desire can not be coached, the pressing defense is definitely a "desire defense." Players with more desire and less ability, using pressing tactics properly, can beat players with more ability who lack desire. There is no substitute for desire. The press makes you realize this.

Helicopters Getting New Rocket Launcher System

REDSTONE ARSENAL, Ala. — The Army has announced the development of a new lightweight launcher which will be used on helicopters to fire the 2.75-inch rocket.

Called the XM-158, the rocket launching system will go into the field in early 1966.

A versatile system which can be used with a variety of other helicopter armaments, the XM-158 consists of a seven-tube reusable pod. In tests at Redstone Arsenal, the system has successfully fired more than 500 rounds.

Designed to replace pods with limited reusability, the new launcher is an "in-house" development at the Army Missile Command. Work was done by the Ground Support Equipment Laboratory of the Research and Development Directorate.

The new launcher will give units increased capability with much less logistic support requirements.

The XM-158 can be assembled in minutes and is considerably lighter and less expensive than similar systems now being used.

The Missile Command's Test and Reliability Evaluation Lab conducted tests during the program. The overall development program was completed two months ahead of schedule.

Army Seeking Some Officers For Air Duty

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Under a new Army program, a limited number of highly qualified captains with ground combat experience in Viet Nam may be selected for flight training.

The program is designed to enhance the capability of Army aviation to provide better support to the ground force combat commander by training as pilots men who have had ground combat experience.

Captains with not more than two years in grade who have served in Viet Nam in subsector or battalion advisory positions, in Special Forces A or B detachments or at company or battalion level in U. S. units and who are otherwise qualified may apply for flight training.

Interested officers will find the program outlined in Department of the Army Message 737419 dated Oct. 22, 1965.

'Impractical' Machine To Cost 114 Million Dollars

STANFORD, Cal. — They're building "the world's largest impractical machine" at Stanford University here and it will cost U. S. taxpayers a tidy $114 million!

This is simply the scientist's way of saying that the two-mile long research instrument currently under construction at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center will be probing for completely new knowledge and that practical future uses of what knowledge is obtained cannot be predicted.

The instrument consists of a 10,000-foot long copper tube through which electrons will be propelled at the phenomenal speed of almost 186,000 miles per second (speed of light). Produced will be a beam of high-energy electrons about the size of a dime in cross-section. These electrons will be used for the study of extremely minute atomic particles in an effort to understand the mysteries of the sub-microscopic universe. The particles are of the incredible thickness of one-sixth of a billionth of an inch!

The four - inch diameter tube will bore through the Palo Alto countryside in a concrete tunnel 25 feet below the earth's surface, primarily to shield laboratory personnel from radiation generated inside the pipe.

Known as SLAC, the entire complex will be a national facility, available for experiments by scientists according to the significance of their projects. Established under contract with the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, the project will have taken five years to build when completed in 1966, and will require 850 people and $20 million a year to operate.

"When spending money on an applied device, you do have to question the need for it. But when spending money on fundamental research that may change our whole way of looking at nature, the question of the need is premature. We cannot afford to be ignorant of the most fundamental type of structure on which everything depends. What the nation is investing in this accelerator and the contribution which Stanford is making in terms of its land are used to buy knowledge and fundamental understanding of nature."

EXCAVATION WORK . . . Construction moves ahead on the klystron gallery (top) above the ground and the tunnel 25 feet below the surface which will house the main accelerator tube.

TWO-MILE TUBE . . . About 100,000 copper discs similar to this one the young lady is peering through, brazed together with an equal number of copper cylinders, will form the world's largest research instrument. It's the Stanford Linear Electron Accelerator, a two-mile long tube now being installed 25 feet below the earth's surface at Stanford, California.

Army Swaps Pistols From .45s to .38s For Fliers, Crewmen

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — Army fliers and aviation crewmen are going to get a new sidearm. The weapon will be the .38 caliber police special revolver, replacing the .45 caliber pistol.

Army officials here confirmed the switch last week and said that purchase of the weapon was unnecessary since stocks of the .38 were available from U.S. inventories. The .38 is already used by pilots of the other services.

Pentagon spokesmen acknowledged the change to the .38 as the Army announced it had awarded a $1.9 million contract for 43.9 million .38 caliber rounds.

Several types of rounds are available for the .38. The Air Force Special Warfare Center at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., reports that the weapon fires a satisfactory flare round, an important consideration for downed aviators. Important too for survival purposes is a .38 birdshot round. Ball and tracer rounds also are available.

According to Capt. Robert L. Webster Jr. of the Army Aviation School at Fort Rucker, the .45 auto is a "very poor" weapon for survival hunting.

Writing in Army Aviation Digest, the officer indicated that the switch to the .38 revolver is dictated by its reliability plus its definitely superior qualities as a survival weapon.

Webster said that Army aviation soldiers who prefer sidearms other than the .38 or .45 "might consider the .357 Magnum revolver which is available for private purchase.

"It fires any .38 special round of ammunition without modification or damage to the pistol. . .

"Using the .357 Magnum round ball, the magnum revolver kills deer, wild pigs and similar size animals."

The .38 is expected to be available soon on an exchange basis as TOEs and regulations are changed.

WAC Joins Sgt Maj Minority

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Sergeants major are a military minority, their six-stripes-and-a-star chevrons representing long service and outstanding records. But it's not a male-only group.

The Woman's Army Corps now has six sergeants major. Newest addition to the elite circle is a tall blond New York State native named Frances M. Tait.

Assigned to the Office of the WAC Director, Sgt. Maj. Tait received her new insignia from the number-one WAC, Col. Emily C. Gorman.

Entering the Army in August 1944, Tait received her basic training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and went on to serve in France and Germany. She has held several personnel assignments, attended the Naval School of Justice and been first sergeant of the WAC Detachment at the Brooklyn (N.Y.) Army Terminal.

McGiffert Takes High Army Post

David E. McGiffert, 39, a native of Boston, Mass., was sworn into office last week as the Under Secretary of The Army.

McGiffert came to the post from the office of the Secretary of Defense where he had served as assistant to the Secretary of Defense (legislative affairs), since July 1962.

McGiffert was born in Boston on June 27, 1926. He lived in Chicago from 1926 to 1939 and in Berkeley, California, from 1939 to 1944. He briefly attended the University of California in 1944.

He served in the Navy as an electronics technician's mate from 1944 to 1946 and then returned to civilian life to complete his education. He attended Harvard University, Cambridge University and in 1963 received his law degree from the Harvard Law School.

McGiffert was associated with the firm of Covington and Burling in Washington, D. C., from 1953 - 1955 and again from 1957 to 1961. He was a lecturer in law at the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1956.

Players But No Fans

BASKETBALL IS BACK at Fort Benning but the fans ain't. We can hardly muster enough onlookers for a good cheer these days at Briant Wells Field House.

The only sounds on the court are mostly sounds of the game itself. Bouncing basketballs, thumping and squeeking sneakers against a wooden floor, the whistles of officials and the score keeper's buzzer sound off but the cheering section doesn't. The only shouts of encouragement come from the players themselves or a lonely buddy or two in the empty stands.

This is nothing out of the ordinary for Fort Benning. The sports picture here has been marked (or marred) this year by public apathy. Spectator sports here are generally played without the spectator and most games are played simply because participants enjoy playing.

A crowd sometimes shows up for a championship game when appeals are made on the unit level for support but the season is usually a long estrangement between players and fans.

The boys who compete on the courts and diamonds here are soldiers rather than professional sportsmen but they usually play their best. The action is live, not canned, and the unpredictable nature of any game always entertains.

Two games are played Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Briant Wells and Kelley Hill Field Houses beginning at 6:30 p.m. Try it some night. It's free.

Can the Best Man Win?

HERE'S MORE ON the Cassius Clay - Ernie Terrell scene and the mixed-up world of heavyweight boxing. It is still doubtful whether Terrell (World Boxing Association champ) will face Clay (Ring Magazine champ) to decide who is the greatest. The WBA's pretender may never become the contender.

"Sports Illustrated" commented last week on alleged underworld connections in Terrell's camp. The magazine advocated, "Here is a chance for the WBA to regain at least a modicum of its long lost prestige. It has the power to strip Terrell of the title it conferred on him unless he divests himself of his questionable associates. Until this happens no state should permit a Clay-Terrell match."

One wonders who the WBA would make king if it dethrones Terrell. It already stripped Clay of the title last February for "actions detrimental to boxing." The WBA might find itself without king or a kingdom soon.

As for Clay, some time ago he said of Terrell "I don't think anything of him because he can't draw at the gate. Me, I can draw $10 million with the right opponent, but Terrell isn't it."

What ever happened to the days of "May the best man win?"

I read something recently by Robert Daley, an expert on the European sports world. It applies here. Daley wrote, "If sport were pure, there would be no organizers, coaches or managers. A boy would compete only because he wanted to and only as long as it pleased him.

"But sport is not pure and often a boy is formed into an athlete by others for motives which have nothing to do with sport."

Spiritual profit has been punched out of the ring these days and job doesn't seem to have been done by the boxer's fists.

Undefeated 29th Infantry Squad Leads Benning Basketball Battle

58th Infantry, Engineer Unit Gain Victories

The 58th Infantry walloped the winless 10th Aviation Group, 89 to 25, at Kelley Hill Field House last week while the 577th Engineers were beating The Student Brigade, 66 to 60, at Briant Wells.

Herman Mack was high scorer for the 58th in its sixth win of the year, hitting for 20 points. C. B. O. Ralston seconded the 58th scoring effort with 18 and Leroy Myers hit for 12.

Fred Coger was high man for the Aviation Group with 12 points.

In action at Kelley Hill Field House Wednesday night, the 29th Infantry preserved its unblemished season's record by beating the 577th Engineers 84 to 47. It was the 29th's ninth straight victory.

At Briant Wells on Wednesday the 197th Troops handed the Student Brigade an 82 to 64 loss and the 58th Infantry defeated the 54th Quartermaster Battalion 91 to 45 in the second game of the double header.

The 577th brought itself up to a five win, three loss record by its win over TSB. Bill McCrawley hit for a big 27 points to grab the evening's scoring honors and was backed up by Rosey Spence with 14.

Dallas Miller was top man for the TSB at 14 and Tom Chakeres was second with 13 points.

Monday Night

In action Monday night, the 197th Troops team handed the 54th Quartermaster Battalion a 80 to 60 loss and the 69th Armor got its first league win by beating an understrength 10th Aviation squad, 55 to 45.

The Troops' Gordon Kay hit for 24 points in field goals to claim the game's scoring crown. Howie Keene added 18 points to the Troops' victory and Oliver Barnes 12.

Bob Cook of the 54th hit for 16 points in field goals and garnered four more from the foul line to lead Quartermaster scoring.

With 16 points, Chandler Mann was high scorer in the 69th Armor's victory over the 10th Aviation Group. The Aviation team played the game with only six men.

Tops 100 Points In Triumph Over Armor Unit

The league-leading 29th Infantry topped the century scoring mark last week for the second time this season as seven men fired up double-figure point spreads in their 109 to 47 conquest of the 69th Armor.

Monte Clausen pushed his yearly average closer to the 20 point mark with 25 points for the night. He also added 11 rebounds to the 29th's cause. Clausen was followed in scoring by Bob Frazier with 16, Aaron Johnson with 14 and Don Harnum with 12.

Theodis Coleman was high scorer for the 69th Armor with 19 points. He was seconded by Chandler Mann who hit for 12.

The 29th added some free padding to its league lead on Monday night when it was awarded a forfeit win over the 10th Artillery. The 10th failed to field enough players at game time.

29th Wins Two

In moving into second place with a 7-1 record, the 39th Transportation Bn. staved off last minute scoring barrages in games against Brigade Troops and the 58th Infantry contingents.

Trailing by 11 points at halftime against the Troops last week, the 39th "fast broke" its way to an 11 point lead only to see the sharpshooting Troops scramble back to a 74-72 lead with two minutes remaining.

But clutch foul shooting and two quick fast breaks gave the 39th an 80 to 77 verdict.

The 39th's Bill Reddick was high man for the evening, hitting for 28 points from the floor and garnering four more points from the foul line. Walton Burroughs led the Troops scoring with 29 points and was backed up by Gordon Kay with 19 and Howie Keen with 17.

In its contest with the 58th on Monday, the Transportation unit forced the running Infantry entry to play slowdown basketball at crucial times and then worked for the sure bucket to win the game, 85 to 81.

Roger Terry garnered 18 points in field goals and raised his game total to 25 with seven markers from the foul line to lead the 39th's scoring. He was seconded by Bill Reddick with 14 points.

C. B. O. Ralston also hit for 25 points to top the 58th Infantry's scoring poll. Tommy Rowe hit for 17 points and Buddie Love scored 14.

Conference Here Discusses Ways To Improve Physical Readiness

Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe welcomed more than 40 officers and civilians here last week for four days of talks on the Army's physical conditioning program.

Gen. Forsythe said that the purpose of the conference was to re-evaluate and try to improve the program's effectiveness.

Among topics covered were the need for physical fitness, its national progress and new concepts and developments by the Infantry School.

The conferees are in positions with direct access to the commanding officers of Army units, the general said. He pointed out that commanders should maintain the physical readiness of their men at all times.

Gen. Forsythe hoped that the exchange of ideas during the conference could result in a sounder physical program. He described it as one which could be worked into a daily schedule instead of being served in large chunks during training programs.

This would mean more training for combat ready troops and less for units not involved in combat, he said.

The conference was conducted by the Ranger Department under the direction of Col. I. A. Edwards. The department has been instrumental in developing new physical training techniques to support the Army's physical readiness program.

Last Wednesday afternoon at Briant Wells Field House the conferees saw a demonstration of Army Drill 3, a program of physical exercises worked out by the department for use when ground conditions are poor.

In addition they saw a demonstration of water survival techniques in the field house pool.

Represented at the meeting were the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Department of the Army, Army Air Defense Command, Marine Corps, Air Force, U. S. Military Academy, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth U. S. Armies and the Military District of Washington.

Heading the list of civilians attending the conference was Simon McNeilly, coordinator of state and federal fitness programs for the President's Council of Physical Fitness. A nationally - known physical educator, he spoke to the conference on the progress of the national physical fitness program.

With the exception of the demonstrations at Briant Wells Field House and hand to hand combat and bayonet demonstrations at Watson Field, all presentations were in Infantry School classrooms.

BY JOE HUTTIE

The 197th Infantry Brigade, led by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, set an impressive record in the recent Infantry Center Smallbore Championship Matches while sweeping the first six team spots and garnering five out of the top six individual trophies.

Leading the team competition was Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry with first place victories in both the rifle and pistol competition. Following Company C in both the rifle and pistol categories was Company C, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry.

Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry grabbed a third place in the rifle competition and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 4th Battalion 69th Armor, copped third place in the pistol standings.

In the individual rifle standings, Lt. Victor A. Brown of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry shot the highest score with 247 out of a highest possible 300.

Brown was followed by PFC John A. Munn, Company A, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry and Sgt. Robert L. Wilson, Company A, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry.

Capt. Sallie Carroll of the Center Troop Command ruined a complete sweep of the competition by the 197th when she fired a 277 in the pistol shoot-off to take first place honors.

Capt. Carroll was followed in the standings by Sgt. Jerry L. Albert of Company C, 1st Battalion, 58th Infantry and Sgt. William Zorn of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry.

For Company C of the 29th Infantry, it was the second time in recent weeks that its rifle and pistol teams gained trophies for the battalion. The 197th's honor guard company also captured the brigade trophies in both the rifle and pistol competition.

A Dog's War or No?

Army, Marines Making New Breed

BY JOE HUTTIE

The Army and the Marines joined forces with 28 grey-haired fighters of another breed last week in a training program that may produce still another in the long line of Marine Corps traditions.

This unusual cross-service combination will employ the 26th Scout Dog Platoon of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade as the experienced teacher, a contingent of 36 Marines as eager students and 28 thoroughbred German Shepards as the objective of intensified study.

The purpose of the inter-service cooperation is the formation of a Marine scout dog unit patterned after the already extant outfit of the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The Marines, under the command of Lt. Robert Wilder, arrived last Friday and immediately set about getting their gear stowed away before the grueling 12-week training program began.

Host Company

Capt. Arthur Bair, a recent returnee from the conflict in Viet Nam, will serve as the host company commander and project officer for the operation. He will be assisted by Lt. John Clark, commander of the 26th Scout Dog Platoon, and members of the platoon's staff.

The program of training will begin with a course in basic obedience, in which the Marines and their dogs will become familiar with one another, says Sgt. Charles Paris, operations and training NCO for the combined effort.

The introductory step will be followed by courses in basic dog handling, basic scouting and advanced scouting.

"The whole program is set up to train the handler and his dog to act like one," said Paris.

Sgt. Charles Gaston, who will serve as an instructor for the training period, adds, "These dogs have almost unlimited ability. But they will only be as good as their handlers."

"These dogs are just like humans. Some are quick to learn, others are slow-witted. Some cooperate, some are stubborn. You just don't know what to expect until the dog and the man start working together," Paris points out.

Fresh Dogs

In the case of the Marines, they will be handling fresh dogs, untrained and unbroken. The first phase of the program will concentrate on making the dogs obey their individual masters. "During this time the dogs will become one-man animals and their handlers will learn the characteristics of their dogs," says Paris.

The dogs and their Marine masters face a strenuous test in the weeks ahead. Obstacle courses, escape and evasion, scouting, swamps and bad terrain, and ambush training are just a few of the problems that the two companions will face.

For the Marines the biggest problem will be "learning their dog," according to Paris. "These dogs are just like a man's rifle. You have to get to know their every move," he adds.

At the end of the twelve week training period the Marines will be able to judge the distance and the direction of an enemy simply by the feel of their dog, the scout dog cadre say.

But before that time the soldiers will face many problems probably the most testing of which will be a dog's habit of "keeping his nose to the trial," says Sgt. Gaston.

Sense of Smell

The instructing sergeant points out that the dogs sense of smell is 40 per cent more acute than a human's, his hearing 20 per cent more accurate, and his eyesight 10 per cent keener. "But a dog's biggest aid is his sense of smell. And we try to get him to rely on this more than anything else," the sergeant claims.

"At first these dogs will have a tendency to put their nose to the ground. As a result they will pick up the scent of almost anything and take you on a wild chase," he adds.

Thus a great deal of the dog and handlers' training will concentrate on distinguishing between the true scent and the false one. The 26th scout dog personnel won't be much of an aid during this phase of the program as they will be harassing the Marines and their dogs with decoy after decoy.

Sgt. Paris is quick to make one point clear. "We don't want to break the spirit or will of the animal. We just want to make him use as much of his capability as possible."

There are good dogs and bad ones according to the scout dog instructor. But it isn't usually until the training program is underway that the bad animals can be weeded out. A few of the more popular ailments that will show a dog unfit for duty are man-shyness, when the animal just can't work with a human; pride which makes the dog act just like a stubborn child; and actual physical sickness.

Avoiding Ailments

To avoid the ailments which hamper a dog's performance in the field, members of the Scout Dog Platoon maintain a clinic in which each dog receives regular treatment. Kennels are kept immaculately clean, and a careful diet of dry meal and horsemeat complete with vitamin supplements is prepared according to each individual dog's needs.

Before the dogs are chosen for this type of mission they must pass rigid standards. In addition to passing a complete physical examination the dogs must prove to be aggressive, prove to be without shyness toward humans, display courage in the face of gunfire, and attack when provoked.

Once the Marines and their dogs complete the training program, still another problem will always remain, according to Sgt. Paris,

"Men too often become too overconfident when they have dogs on patrols with them. They think because of the dogs they are infallible. It just isn't so," he says.

Members of the visiting Marine platoon will be hosted by companies B and D of the 29th Infantry during their stay with the 197th.

Hair or No Hair, All in Day's Work For Movie Actor

Rod Steiger was grateful that he had six months between his award-winning role in "The Pawnbroker" and his current portrayal as Mr. Joyboy, chief embalmer in MGM-Filmways' "The Loved One."

For his title role in "The Pawnbroker," Steiger had to shave his head. In contrast, for his portrayal as Mr. Joyboy in "The Loved One," the actor not only had to let his hair grow but had it bleached bright gold and marceled daily!

Also starring Robert Morse, Jonathan Winters and Anjanette Comer, the Martin Ransohoff production was directed by Academy-Award winner Tony Richardson — his first film since "Tom Jones."

PENN. TURNPIKE

The Pennsylvania Turnpike, which extends 360 miles from New Jersey to the Ohio border, was the first of the great modern toll routes. It was opened in 1940.

Synopsis

THE HEROES OF TELEMARK — This story of high-adventure stars Kirk Douglas, Richard Harris, Ulla Jacobsson and Michael Redgrave. Come frozen hell or high adventure they had the strangest mission under the midnight sun — to stop the Nazis from developing the atom bomb. The true adventure of nine men of Telemark, Norway who blasted a war wide open.

A RAGE TO LIE . . . Beautiful debutante Suzanne Pleshette's promiscuous behavior threatens her position in society. When Bradford Dillman proposes, she accepts and the first years are good ones during which she remains faithful. When Ben Gazzara returns to town, Pleshette begins an affair with him. Although she later ends it, Dillman learns of her infidelity and decides to leave her. However, Pleshette convinces him of her love and she stays. Ironically it is the imaginings of a neurotically jealous wife that prove to be Pleshette's undoing as she is made to face the full consequences in this powerful drama.

GHIDRAH THE THREE-HEADED MONSTER . . . The balance of the universe has been upset by the entrance into the earth's atmosphere of a brilliant meteorite. The people are totally unprepared for the shock of seeing a three-headed monster with wings, flames spuing forth from its multiple mouths, emerge from the fireball from outer space. It is Ghidrah the dark wings lift it into flight as it soars off to ravage the planet Earth. Godzilla and Rodan are reactivated from hibernation and with Mothra, battle for the world. In a smash climax the irrestible forces meet an immovable object and the Earth literally trembles from the impact.

YOU MUST BE JOKING . . . Maj. Terry-Thomas, British Army psychological officer who is himself badly in need of psychoanalysis, devises a 48 hour "initiative" test to find a serviceman representative of today's complete, quick-thinking soldier. Chosen to take the test, in reality a scavenger hunt for various items, are Michael Callan, U.S. Air Force lieutenant chiefly interested in women and horse-racing; Sgt. Maj. Lionel Jeffries, kilted disciplinarian from a Highland regiment and a staff sergeant who uses Army requisition slips instead of money. Terry-Thomas blows-up a storm in his wildest, wackiest laugh-hit.

SITUATION HOPELESS BUT NOT SERIOUS . . . It's a strange, laugh-it-up treatment of a story about two American flyers who are shot down over Germany during World War II and taken prisoners by a very meek and very eccentric air warden (Sir Alec Guinness). Kept as captive guests in his house they are totally unaware of the war's result (we won) — and they're not about to be told. But when they are released, still under the illusion that the war is on and that Germany is winning — well, the situation becomes hopeless.

Story of Allied Invasion Hoax To Be Filmed

"The Courier" has been set as the title for the MGM Filmways' Production of Mladin Zarubica's best - selling novel, "The Year of the Rat," it was announced recently.

The story deals with an intricate Allied hoax which successfully deceived Hitler into believing that the Allied invasion was to take place at Calais rather than Normandy.

"The Courier" is scheduled to be before the cameras in the summer of 1966 at MGM's London studios with location filming planned for Germany, Denmark and Spain. Screenwriter, director and stars are expected to be announced shortly.

Unit Readies Wall Lockers For Use Here

The Maintenance Platoon Company has the nuttiest of the 54th Quartermaster (and boltiest) job yet. The platoon has been tightening some 250,000 nuts and bolts on wall lockers destined for use by men in Fort Benning's new Army Training Center and Officer Candidate School.

There are 2500 wall lockers being put together or rebuilt by the platoon. The Training Center will get 1400 and OCS the remaining 1100.

A five-man team led by Sp5 Frank Deluecas has been assembling the lockers and making sure others are in top repair. Ten other men from the platoon work in a maintainence shop to perform major repair jobs and welding.

Says Delucas, the cost of repair for most lockers is only about $1.50 while a new locker costs approximately $10.75. "We repair all we can", he said.

SPACE CAPSULES

Studies of various Ranger moon-shot pictures cause scientists to believe that the Earth's satellite may be covered with a deep layer of loose material. This would mean that men landing on the moon may have to wear something akin to snowshoes to keep from sinking below the surface. Machines exploring the moon will also have to take this loose formation into consideration. Russian and American scientists estimate the dust-like material to be from 16 to 26 feet deep. The dust appears to be deep enough to be troublesome and something will have to be done to meet the problem when man makes his first landing. At any rate, the matter is under study.

YOU OWE $35,000.00

Statistics show each person eats $10.00 in food weekly. If averaged for a lifetime, with life expectancy of 66 years, this amounts to approximately $35,000.00.
This is by far the largest single expense to be met by any individual. It is especially difficult for the head of the family. If your average food expenditure is $25.00 per week, in 15 years it will amount to $20,000.00.
CONCLUSION: Have Money . . . Quit eating????
This is ridiculous, but what are you doing to reduce your cost of eating?

Can you match these examples of... Humor in Uniform?

The Editors of The Reader's Digest pay $100 for all original anecdotes they publish in the regular Digest department, "Humor in Uniform." Here are three examples...

THERE WAS a water shortage in Kodiak, and an order came from the commanding general that passes and liberty would be canceled until the water supply was back to normal. All the armed forces complied except a small outpost of Seabees, about 30 in number, under the command of a rough-and-ready chief warrant officer. Saturday evening came and the Seabees stormed the nearly abandoned city, only to be rounded up by MP's and returned to their base. The chief warrant officer was brought before the provost marshal and asked if he had received the general's order.

"Yes, sir."

"Then why didn't you comply?" roared the provost.

"Well, sir, I didn't think it applied to us."

"And why not?"

"Because my men don't drink no water when they go into town, sir," replied the chief.

—ROBERT L. JAMISON (Colorado Springs, Colo.)

One phase of our course on explosives at Lowry Air Force Base, Colo., dealt with the exacting job of removing fuses from live bombs and other projectiles. After days of exhaustive study of many types of fuses, one troublesome and obnoxious student asked the instructor, "Isn't there an easier way to learn this?"

"Yes, son," the instructor replied. "In your case, I strongly recommend trial and error."

—GORDON G. BRAINARD (Winsted, Conn.)

Navy fighter pilots training on Oahu during World War II were ordered not to swim in a certain cove where the surf crashed dangerously against a steep sand beach. But, being young and, in their own opinion, indestructible, some of the men swam there anyhow. One was thrown against the sand and dislocated his shoulder. More serious than the injury was the problem of how he should reply to "Cause of injury" in the required report, without disclosing that he had disobeyed orders. With a flash of genius, he wrote: "Tossed by a WAVE."

No disciplinary action was taken.

—A. E. RAMSEY (Manhasset, N.Y.)

If you, or someone you know, have had an experience in the armed forces that you think is as amusing as these, you may win $100 by sending it along to us. The story must be true and previously unpublished. Maximum length should be 300 words. Send your contribution to Dept. V-H, Humor in Uniform Editor, The Reader's Digest, Pleasantville, N.Y. 10570. Be sure to include your name and address.

Six Routes to Service Post Seven Days a Week

BY JIM BAKER

Fort Benning soldiers are going to get free bus service to all points on the post beginning in the new year.

On Jan. 3 the Post Transportation Office will have six buses operating free of charge for all soldiers, civilian employees and dependents on official business, according to the Post Tranportation Officer, Lt. Col. Francis L. Franklin.

Several months ago, a study of the present bus service was initiated by the post and conducted by Lt. Peter Chomyn of the Transportation Office.

According to Chomyn, the military bus service will replace the one currently operated by Howard Bus Lines on the post. He added that Howard will still provide the bus service to and from Columbus to Main Post, Sand Hill and Harmony Church.

Military service will only replace the 15-cent service provided by the civilian firm from the Main Post Bus Station to Martin Army Hospital and the Lawson Field NCO Club.

Chomyn added that the military service will provide greater service than the one presently in operation. Also, it will run from 7 a.m. to midnight daily, he said.

Dependents will only be allowed to use the bus between Martin Army Hospital and the Main Post Bus Station. Col. Franklin added that this service would "on a space available basis only."

Lt. Chomyn said dependents would not be allowed to use the service to go shopping at the commissary.

One feature of the new bus service will be 'point of origin' scheduling. Soldiers will not have to go looking through a detailed schedule for bus time at a certain stop.

Chomyn said the schedules have been worked out so that at each terminal passengers can easily determine when the next bus is due to arrive.

He explained that several of the routes servicing Kelley Hill and Harmony Church have already been in operation. They are operated by the individual units involved, he said.

These services are being worked into the overall schedules, the lieutenant stated.

Main Post Bus No. 1 will make bus stops at the Old Hospital, Building 35, Bus Station, Finance Center, Cuartels, OCS Area Dispensary No. 2, Infantry Hall, Dental Clinic, Service Club No. 1, Bowling Alley and Lawson Field NCO Club. The bus will run seven days a week from 7 a.m. until midnight. During duty hours the bus will operate on an hourly schedule. After duty hours the bus will operate on a half hour schedule.

Main Post Bus No. 2 will operate primarily for the purpose of transporting the WAC Company, the dental technicians and visual aids personnel to their place of duty. Twice daily this bus will also operate between

10,000th Recruit Is Processed Through Center

The U. S. Army Training Center at Fort Benning processed its 10,000th trainee this week.

Pvt. Ronald A. Staley, having this distinction, went through the normal routine of processing into the Army.

First he was issued his uniforms, received his shots, the inevitable "GI" haircut and was later tested for proper classification.

After processing, he was assigned to Company D, 7th Battalion, of the 2nd Brigade.

THE BAYONET will soon have two openings on its editorial staff. Anyone (GI or civilian) with abilities in [illegible] should contact Bob Brantley at [illegible]

Band Plays, Choruses Sing as Post Opens Season With Tree Lighting

BY IDA EVANS

Some 300 people turned out Monday for a tree-lighting ceremony which officially opened the Christmas holiday season at Fort Benning. It was the first time since the post was established in 1917 that Benning has held an official opening, one official said.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commander, pulled a switch which simultaneously lighted two outdoor trees and one inside Infantry Hall. Spectators watched from the area surrounding the Infantryman Statue.

"We should pause to reflect at this time of the year, not only upon the blessings we enjoy and Him whose birthday we celebrate, but also upon the ideals we treasure," Gen. York said. "It is these ideals of freedom, liberty and justice for which we are being challenged today.

"While we enjoy this Yule season, let us remember our comrades in arms, serving and fighting far away to preserve these ideals on which our nation was founded."

The general also commended the unique lighting of the facade of Infantry Hall. Red lights in certain windows spelled "Noel," with the umlaut over the "o" formed by two red lights on the roof.

Christmas music was played by The Infantry Center Band, directed by CWO Clyde W. White.

A program of vocal music was sung by The Infantry Chorus, directed by Spt Franklin D. Mailey and The Officer Candidate Chorus, under the direction of 2nd Lt. J.W. Thompson of Smackover, Ark.

During the holidays, the tree lights will burn each day from sundown until 11:30 p.m.

Twenty-foot cedars, cut from the Fort Benning reservation, are outside. Flanking the Infantryman Statue, each tree is decorated with more than 100 light bulbs in tradi-

Bus

Building 35, Bus Station, Infantry Hall and Martin Army Hospital.

There will be three smaller 20-passenger buses running between Harmony Church, Kelley Hill, Martin Army Hospital and Main Post, according to the Transportation Office.

These buses are operated by th 577th Engineer Battalion, the 58th Infantry and Martin Army Hospital.

They are operated primarily during duty hours with limited schedules on weekends and holidays, Chomyn said. Dependents are authorized to travel on these buses between the Main Post Bus Station and Martin Army Hospital. No fee will be collected.

He added that military bus stop signs will soon be posted in prominent areas. Schedules will also be posted in every major area he said. "Major units have been given schedules and timetables. Anyone who desires more or additional schedules may contact the Transportation Motor Pool, Motor Transport Branch at 545-1411," he concluded.

Lighting

tional colors of the Christmas season.

Inside the lobby of Infantry Hall, the 16-foot high fir door tree was decorated by personnel of the Special Services Section, under the supervision of Miss Madeline J. Parks, director of Service Club No. 2, and Sgt. Fred W. Borders, chief of the Special Services Sign Shop.

Bill Milam, chief of the Roads and Ground Branch, Building and Grounds Division, Engineer Section, was in charge of erecting the giant outdoor trees, while the lighting was supervised by James Norman of (94 Visa Dr) Columbus, chief of the Electrical Unit, Utilities Division.

Dentistry has patron saint

St. Apollonia, the patron saint of dentistry, was born in Alexandria, Egypt about 200 A.D.

During one of the periodic persecutions of Christians, around 249 A.D., she was tortured by having all her teeth cruelly broken and then extracted after which, according to one version, she plunged herself into a fire.

In another version, she was burned at the stake. Even while undergoing this excruiating torture, she is said to have prayed that all who remembered her martyrdom in the future would be spared dental pain.

One Man's Opinion

'Mrs. Fasttalk' and her special magazine sale

BY M. S. LINDNER

I was at home the other day when the phone rang.

After I answered, the voice on the other end said, "This is 'Mrs. Fasttalk' and I represent the 'Red Hot' distributing company in Atlanta."

"Oh," I replied curiously.

"Yes," she continued, and "I want you to know that you have been selected to receive absolutely free of charge for the next 24 months Esquire, Saturday Evening Post and Field and Stream magazines. The only thing we want to know is if you think you will enjoy these magazines if we send them to you."

"If it's free, by all means," I replied.

"Now," she continued, "this is part of a national promotional campaign sponsored by another well known magazine which you will also receive."

"Sounds fine to me," I answered.

"However, since these are out - of - state magazines, there is a small service charge which amounts to only 38 cents a week. No one is going to bother you for the money. We use the honor system and you can pay as you receive the periodicals" . . .

"Sounds good," I said.

"Additionally, you do not have to limit yourself to these magazines. To show you what a fine selection we have and to prove that everything I've said is absolutely true, I am going to send one of our representatives to see you at your convenience.

Incidentally, when would it be convenient for him to call?"

At that moment (during which the caller continued to talk at 'fire engine' speed), I jotted down 38 cents per week times 52 weeks and came to the astonishing conclusion that it was a lot more than it sounded at first. As a matter of fact, it amounted to $19.76 per year which I quickly concluded is far from being free.

I then interrupted by saying, "Just a minute ma'am, that amounts to about $20 a year, doesn't it?"

"A little less," she replied.

"Well," I said, "I don't really think that I'm interested after all."

"But," she responded, "just one of these magazines costs $.35 per copy on the newsstands."

"That may be true," I shot back, "But I can probably get the magazines direct from the publishers for about the same cost as the service charge which you've quoted me."

"All right," she said, "thank you."

She then hung up.

Moral of this story is that you've got to be awfully careful of supposed 'prize packages' such as this one.

It may actually have been a good deal though I kind of doubt it. However, it's a cinch that the magazines were not going to be free by any stretch of the imagination.

If you're approached by this woman or others like her, it might be a good idea not to 'bite' right off the bat but rather to consider carefully the supposed 'free deal.'

It often turns out that free is not so free after all in this kind of a transaction.

The Judge Says . . .

'Be sure of your grounds when dealing with landlords'

At some time in their careers soldiers have to rent quarters in a civilian community for themselves and dependents. Dealing with a civilian landlord is a possible trouble spot if the soldier does not understand his rights and obligations under the tenancy agreement.

There are two types of tenancy agreements — written and unwritten. The written lease spells out the specific rights and obligations of the parties and is generally advisable if your move is a semi-permanent one.

The unwritten or oral agreement is equally as binding by law, but being oral, it is sometimes subject to misinterpretation by the parties. The laws governing rentals by oral agreement vary from state to state, but the general principles are the same in most states.

The most common tenancy under an oral agreement is from month to month. If you pay your rent every month and do not have a written lease, you probably are renting under this type of tenancy.

In the State of Georgia, you must give your landlord 30 days notice of a pending move. The landlord, if he wishes to terminate your tenancy, must give you 60 days notice. Should you fail to give 30 days notice, you are liable for the rent for the 30 day period even though you have ceased to live there.

However, if the landlord should re-rent the property at any time during the 30 day period, you are only obligated to pay for the time that the property was empty.

It is a good idea to insist on a written waiver of the 30 day notice period if you are transferred by official orders. Most landlords will agree to this, and it will save last minute confusion.

Before entering into any written lease agreement, it is a good preventive measure to bring it to your Legal Assistance Officer to get his opinion as to your rights and obligations. Legal assistance is available to all members of the armed services and their dependents.

Paul Revere had short-lived career as dental surgeon

A skilled colonial engraver, gold and silversmith, an ironworker, one of the earliest American artisans with copper and copper - plating, a true patroit and a dentist, Paul Revere indeed deserves the immortality he has earned.

His impressive achievements run the gamut from cannon to coins, from exquisitely ornate gold and silverware to artificial dentures. Although he practiced dentistry for less than six years before he finally forsook it, he numbered among his patients such prominent personages as General Washington and General Joseph Warren.

It is significant to note that the body of Gen. Warren, when it was exhumed from a hastily dug grave at the foot of Bunker Hill, was identified by an artificial tooth placed by Dr. Revere. This type of identification of human remains is the first record in the United States of such a proceeding.

Actually, very little is known of this phase of Paul Revere's career. It has been established that Dr. John Baker was his preceptor and teacher, and it is thought that he was interested only in the mechanical as opposed to the clinical aspects of the profession — a factor which caused his career to be short-lived.

OWC Announces New Schedule For 1966 Hobby Instruction

The new year will bring another opportunity for members of the Officers' Wives Club to acquire new skills and hobbies as classes in almost all of the hobby and instructional activities will begin in January.

Mrs. Tyron Tisdale, first vice president, has said members who wish to participate in any of the activities should call the respective chairman without delay as classes are quickly filled.

Mrs. Tisdale has announced the addition of a new class never before offered by the OWC.

Furniture finishing, refinishing and antiquing will be taught by Maj. James W. Bricker. The series of five lessons is scheduled to begin Jan. 4. Members may register by calling Mrs. Bricker, telephone 689-6535, Mrs. Tisdale said.

The knitting classes will have instruction in the arts of needle point and petit point, she added.

Mrs. D. A. Fox, 545-4900, will accept registration for these classes. Classes will begin Jan. 13 and continue for six weeks.

Six weeks of beginners instruction in square dancing is being offered to OWC members and their husbands.

LEATHER TIP

You can darken brown leather shoes or belts by rubbing them with milk to which a few drops of household ammonia have been added, according to UK Extension clothing specialists. As soon as dry, polish with a soft, clean cloth.

Classes will be held Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. in the OWC School of Dance Building. Couples may register by telephoning Mrs. H. E. McCracken at 687-2803.

Instruction in intermediate and advanced sewing is scheduled to begin during the second week of January. Classes will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings for eight weeks. Sewing chairman is Mrs. Miles Becker at 324-5300.

Mrs. Edward Gear, chairman of "Slim 'N Trim," offers members the use of Stauffer couches and reducing belts for taking off extra inches. The equipment may be used any morning, afternoon or evening for six weeks. Contact Mrs. Gear at 689-5904.

Membership in the Officers' Wives Club is a requirement to participate in any of the activities, an official said.

Membership cards can be obtained from unit commanders' wives, or by telephoning Mrs. R. S. McCaul, 545-3407.

A new series of classes will also begin after the first of the year in the following activities:

Art, Mrs. D. Barraclough at 545-4598; cake decorating, Mrs. G. Morill at 687 - 1853; charm modeling, Mrs. W. Fraker at 689 - 0745; Japanese flower arranging, Mrs. J. Kent at 545 - 3115; gourmet cooking, Mrs. C. Jones at 545 - 7349; French, Mrs. S. Walinsky at 689 - 6723; German, Mrs. W. Hacker at 545-1108; Spanish, Mrs. C. Army Wives Weekly Recipe

Lemon Meringue Pie Supreme

7 tbsp. cornstarch
1 ½ c. sugar
1 ½ c. hot water
3 eggs, separated
2 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 tsp. grated lemon peel
½ c. fresh lemon juice
9-in. baked pie shell
¼ tsp. cream of tarter

Mix cornstarch, 1 ½ cup sugar and salt in saucepan; gradually stir in water. Cook over direct heat, stirring until thick and clear, about ten minutes. Remove from heat. Stir ½ cup hot mixture into yolks, stir this back into hot mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring for two to three minutes. Remove from heat. Stir butter, lemon peel and juice; cool.

Pour mixture into baked pie shell. Beat whites with cream of tartar until frothy, beat in six tablespoons sugar, a little at a time. Beat until meringue stands in firm peaks. Spread out filling, making sure it touches crust all around. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes or until delicately brown. Cool.

Note: To freeze lemon meringue pie supreme, place pie in freezer at zero degrees. When frozen, slip into plastic bag or wrap with moisture vapor - proof material. Will keep three to four weeks at zero degrees. You may freeze egg whites separately, then bake meringue on pie after it comes from freezer. Prepare crust and filling as directed; freeze whites in covered container. Cover pie with inverted paper plate; fasten with tape. Wrap, seal and freeze. To use whites thaw them to room temperature, then proceed as directed in recipe. Do not thaw pie before adding meringue. Yield: six servings.

The artist's eye takes an impressionist view of Viet Nam war

A peace-loving nation goes to war. With it goes the nation's youth, its talent — chemists, historians, writers, cartoonists and artists.

From World War II came the famous "Willy and Joe" of Bill Mauldin. Ernie Pyle was read on every front page in America. John Steinbeck wrote his collections of war stories.

From Viet Nam come the great letters of dedicated patriots—such as James Polk Spurill in "The Line is Drawn" — a collection of exerpts from letters to his wife.

There is also the work of America's newest Medal of Honor winner, Capt. Roger Donlon, "Outpost of Freedom."

There are as many stories as there are soldiers.

Recently came a collection of impressionist paintings by a colonel who visited Viet Nam.

They are reproduced on this page in black and white.

—The wounded being lifted from the hut.

—The partly gay, partly ominous blur with only glimpses of calm that is Saigon.

—The largest of the paintings, entitled the "Parentless Ones," tells the cruel unfeeling story as old as war itself.

— Wherever one goes in Viet Nam, the helicopter is the most obvious symbol. Here it is represented as both murderous and vulnerable and as the work horse that it is.

—Finally there is the dark foreboding peace of the personnel carriers in the Mekong Delta—somewhere near the enemy lurks.

These are the artistic representations of Col. Robert B. Rigg. . .This is the way he sees Viet Nam.

It is more than the way he sees Viet Nam. There is a promise for humanity in his translation of brutality into comprehensible form.

It is the yearning of mankind for reason and form—something to base his ideals upon. The ideals that will some day lead to world peace. . .JIM BAKER.

Paintings by Robert B. Rigg in the Information Digest

General Freeman Draws Comparison for MOWW

The commander of the U. S. Continental Army last Friday made a historical comparison between the walled cities of Berlin, Germany, and Tientsin, China, in an address to the Columbus chapter of the Military Order of World Wars.

Titling his topic as "The Tale of Two Walls," Gen. Paul L. Freeman Jr., speaking at Fort Benning's Main Officers' Open Mess, wondered if perhaps history was not repeating itself.

The former commandant of The Infantry School and commander of The Infantry Center suggested that in the Far East the United States had done too little too late for China, and that this may be the case in Viet Nam.

Drawing on his more than 30 years of experience, much of it in the Far East, Freeman compared the Berlin Wall with one the Japanese built in Tientsin in 1937 following an incident at the Marco Polo Bridge to seal off the Japanese district from the rest of the city.

In making comparisons Freeman drew an ominous parallel between the Japanese and the Communist ambitions.

He noted that the pretense of an internationally controlled city in Berlin was paralleled by a similar theory for the Chinese capital of Tientsin in the 1930s.

Following the Mukden incident Chinese trains which carried international guards to protect against marauding Chinese bandits had to submit to the dictates of the Japanese. Now in Berlin, Allied convoys must submit to the whims of the Russians.

In the Far East to avoid increasing tensions, U. S. troops on train guard were deprived of their weapons. The 15th Infantry, Gen. Freeman's old unit, used its boxing squad to protect Americans aboard the train.

Japan, eventually challenged, walked out of the League of Nations, today the Russians when challenged threaten to walk out of the United Nations.

The Japanese set up the puppet state of Manchuko under "emperor" Henry Puyi. In Europe, the Communists established the satellite state of East Germany under Walter Ulbricht.

The general noted that after Dec. 1937, when the Japanese sank the U. S. Gunboat Panay, America did not challenge the Japanese onslaught in China. Instead she withdrew and except for token forces, brought her troops home.

There was no parallel here with Berlin, but as Europe realigned itself to the establishment of East Germany as a Soviet satellite, he recalled some parallels in China.

The German government moved to Bonn. As the Japanese advance become more determined, the nationalist Chinese government moved from Peking to Chungking.

Then by 1941 America seemed to wake up and started to actively support the Chinese. In the air Gen. Claire Chennault and his Flying Tigers came to the support of the Chinese, while over the Burma Road supplies and equipment poured in to the beleagured nation.

"But it was too little too late, there had been too much appeasement," the general said. "China was already lost to become our enemy today."

"As I stood before the Berlin Wall with Mayor Willy Brandt in May of 1962, I had the feeling I had seen it all before. In China, and perhaps in Southeast Asia, history was repeating itself."

HOT STEAM BATH

CHICAGO (AP) — Things got a little too hot recently for 15 persons in a Turkish bath in downtown Chicago. The patrons were taking steam baths at the Loop Turkish Baths when smoke mixed with steam flowed into the steam room. A fire had started in a ventilating duct. Damage was minor but the 15 patrons dressed hastily and fled into the street through clouds of thick smoke and steam.

Red Cross Planning More Clubmobiles For Viet Nam Troops

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — U. S. troops in Viet Nam will be seeing a lot more of American Red Cross clubmobile girls in the year ahead.

Red Cross officials said last week they hope to have clubmobile units in operation at 10 key locations in the besieged Southeast Asian nation in 1966. A total of 80 girls will be required to staff the 10 units.

Seventeen ARC club-mobile girls, whose job it is to provide unit - level recreational outlets for U. S. servicemen, now are assigned to Viet Nam. Nine are quartered at the ARC clubmobile center at Danang which opened last summer and eight at the Nha Trang - based branch which went into operation November 17.

A third unit, to be set up at Bien Hoa, will be open by early January at the latest, Red Cross officials said.

Ten of the 17 clubmobile girls currently in Viet Nam were transferred from a similar ARC operation in Korea last month. A Red Cross spokesman said clubmobile units in Korea had been purposely overstaffed in recent months in anticipation of a program buildup in Viet Nam.

Forty-five clubmobile girls are still serving in Korea. The Red Cross also operates a series of community-oriented center programs in Europe with a staff of 24 girls.

Miss Mary Lou Dowling, national director of the Red Cross clubmobile operation, is in the Far East on a survey trip. Further details on the expansion of the Viet Nam program should be announced on her return.

Counting field directors and hospital workers, ARC staff in Viet Nam now totals nearly 100, an eight - fold increase over a year ago.

Robert Nett Is Promoted To Colonel

Lt. Col. Robert B. Nett, a Medal of Honor winner and deputy commander of Fort Benning's Student Brigade was promoted to colonel Dec. 9.

In an informal ceremony in the office of Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, Mrs. Frances K. Nett assisted the general in pinning the new rank insignia on her husband's uniform. The Netts' son, Robert B. Nett, Jr., was also on hand for the ceremony.

Nett served with the 305th Regiment, 77th Infantry Division, during World War II. While a first lieutenant commanding Company E, 305th, in the Philippines, he led an assault against a reinforced enemy battalion. For this action he was presented the Medal of Honor.

His other medals and decorations include the Bronze Star Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Air Medal, Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, and Combat Infantryman's Badge.

In addition to the Far East, Col Nett has served in Germany and more recently in Viet Nam.

FULL BIRD . . . Mrs. Robert B. Nett, assisting Brig. Gen. George I. FAULTY REPORTS

In 1951 both the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals got identical reports on pitchers in their farm system. The report said, "No fast ball, will never make it in the majors."

The young Giant was Hoyt Wilhelm, who will begin his 17th year in the majors next year and the Cardinal was Stu Miller, who will start his 15th season.

Group Working to Train Youths Not Qualified for Armed Forces

Volunteers rejected by the Army as educationally below par can qualify through training for military service without lowering required standards, a supervisor of the Washington, D. C. Youth Services Project said recently.

The National Committee for Children and Youth is working with young men who want to enter the service but whose educational background renders them non-productive, Leon G. Leiberg said in an interview at Fort Jackson, S. C.

He said through a crash program, special education and vocational training they can qualify for service. In a test project in Washington, D. C. and Baltimore, Md., 500 men at each city have been trained to qualify for military service.

Successive Grants

The National Committee for Children and Youth's project is sponsored by two successive grants from the Department of Labor. The project will not lower the standards set by the services, Leiberg said, but, in fact, it plans to raise the individual's qualifications.

He was accompanied by Rayford J. Myes, counselor of the Washington, D. C. Youth Services Project and Wendall Wright, counselor of the Baltimore Youth Services Project.

The training given by the Youth Project has a three-fold objective," Leiberg said. "First, the project gives the youth the necessary back-ground he will need for service training. Second the prospect raises his educational standards, and third, it gives him the incentive to further his education."

Mental Standards

Revisions in mental standards for enlistment or induction, announced by the Department of Defense in November, place greater weight on educational attainment for qualification for military service for both enlistees and inductees.

Previously, acceptability for the draft was based on passing a general trainability test, the Armed Forces Qualification Test, and in some cases on the results of a supplementary aptitude test, the Army Qualification Battery.

Now, young men who pass the AFQT are accepted if they either pass the supplementary test or have graduated from high school.

Leiberg explained that the training received through the youth service projects enables the men who have not graduated from high school to pass the supplementary tests.

The National Committee for Children and Youth was created by the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Defense Department Sets State Voting Information

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Defense is going to issue monthly voting information bulletins so military men can be kept informed about changes in their state's laws which may affect their voting rights.

These monthly bulletins will be in addition to the new "Voting Information Pamphlet, 1966," which gives an up-to-date rundown on voting rights for military men in each state.

Defense, along with the Department of Justice, is also making a survey of laws in states where there are military installations to see if there are any "preconditions" which might bar Negro servicemen from exercising their ballot. The survey is required by the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The report on the survey is to be completed by June.

The attractive new voting pamphlet is timely because voting registration and procedures were affected in a number of states by adoption of the 24th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and the Voting Rights Act. The amendment bars collection of poll taxes for federal election and the Voting Rights Act is aimed at ending discrimination at the polls.

About the poll taxes, the pamphlet says "Only two of the 50 states—Alabama and Texas—have required members of the armed forces to pay poll taxes, and Mississippi exempts all federal service personnel, including wives and dependents, who apply for ballot with the Federal Post Card Application."

WAC Officers Visit Post; See Training

Army officers of the fairer sex from three countries visited Fort Benning last week for a look at how the Infantryman trains.

Included in the group of WAC officers and officer candidates from Fort McClellan, Ala., were Vietnamese 2nd Lt. Luu Thi Huynh-Mai, and Japanese 2nd Lts. Kazulo Watanabe and Yoko Najenuma.

The officers saw Fort Benning's Infantry School headquarters — Infantry Hall — airborne training, a "Buddy seat" ride and a demonstration of the combined arms team in the attack.

Lt. Jane D. McCoy of Center Troop Command was the group's escort officer.

Past Year Sees More Cargo Than Ever Go To South East Asia

Defense shipping to Southeast Asia by the Military Sea Transportation Service (MSTS) has more than doubled this year.

A requirement for some 300,000 measurement tons last January has risen to nearly 725,000 tons monthly for the last half of this year, where it has leveled off. MSTS officials say present capacity is more than enough to meet U. S. requirements and Republic of Viet Nam port facilities are adequate and improving daily.

Tonnage figures do not include petroleum, oil and lubricants (POL), which are primarily carried by petroleum vessels. There has been no significant rise in POL shipments since the RVN buildup, an official said.

Present MSTS capability includes 20 Navy - owned ships, 59 de - mothballed ships, 57 U. S. flag ships carrying defense cargo on regularly scheduled commerical runs, and 38 U. S. flag ships chartered outright. Officials expressed optimism that this ship level can be maintained, despite continuing requirements to negotiate contracts.

Advanced Training for Infantrymen To Include Week of Jungle Warfare

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON— A special nine-week Viet Nam oriented advanced individual (AIT) training program is being set up at Fort Gordon, Ga., and Fort Polk La., to train men right out of basic training for jungle fighting, the Army disclosed last week. First groups begin training this month.

Officials have turned down all suggestions to tailor basic combat training (BCT) to any specific theater of operation or branch, however.

The Army is under heavy pressure from commanders in Viet Nam to put more infantry tactics in BCT but officials feel that any changes in this area should be concentrated in advanced individual training (AIT).

The Army is expanding AIT from eight to nine weeks for Viet Nam bound soldiers to "prepare them as fully as possible" for Southeast Asia duty.

The first eight weeks will be generally the same as the regular AIT now offered soldiers in infantry AIT. In the ninth week, trainees will be given a five-day field problem under a simulated Viet Nam environment, officials told Army Times.

The Viet Nam oriented AIT will generally be limited to infantrymen on orders for Viet Nam. The Army plans to take a company a week at both installations for the special AIT will be in addition to regular AIT offered trainees at Gordon, Polk and other training centers.

While the Gordon and Polk programs are limited to trainees just out of BCT, it is just part of an overall Army effort to give every soldier "the best training and equipment possible" for survival.

The Army feels a specially-adapted AIT is needed to give men with no more than two to three months active military service additional training on jungle warfare.

Every soldier bound for Viet Nam is required to attend a minimum 16-hour training program on Southeast Asia. As part of its orientation program, the Army plans to distribute in the near future a pamphlet entitled "Lessons Learned in Viet Nam."

While no major changes are planned in the regular BCT and AIT programs, the Army is urging training center commanders to put more stress in intelligence training.

Officials say particular attention must be given to this subject to insure that recruits realize the importance of "properly and expeditiously" reporting battlefield conditions.

The Army is adopting a new plastic pugil stick, shaped more like a rifle than the present one for training soldiers in hand-to-hand combat during BCT.

The Army has also asked the Infantry Center at Fort Benning, Ga., to study the possibility of developing a new combat course that puts pupil training, hand-to-hand combat, and confidence training all into one block of instruction.

Working Under Communism

Inequalities in Soviet Wage Scale Perpetuated by Emphasis on Skills

Editor's Note: The following is a continuation of The Bayonet's feature treatment of communism based on the book by William Ebenstein entitled "Two Ways of Life." Ebenstein is a professor of political science and government at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

The Soviet government has inherent inequalities in its wage policy as well as its tax policy.

In every industrial society —whether capitalist or Communist — the single most important instance of inequality is the different pay scales for skilled and unskilled workers. More people are affected by the wage gap between these two groups than by any other.

Consequently, the tendency in democratic capitalist countries has been to equalize incomes within the working class whereas in Communist states the trend has been to increase the spread between the incomes of different groups of workers.

In the United States before World War II, skilled workers generally earned about two-thirds more than unskilled workers. At present, the gap has been narrowed to only one-third more. By contrast, Soviet skilled workers earn four to five times more than unskilled workers.

Class inequality in a large group such as the military is also much greater in the Soviet Union than in the United States. For example, the proportion between the pay of the buck private and that of the highest officer is 1 to 114 in the Soviet Union but only 1 to 20 in the United States.

Moreover, the greater inequality among Soviet Army personnel is social as well as economic. At the end of World War II, when the American and Soviet armies made contact in conquered Berlin, the American soldiers were astonished to see the extent to which rank-consciousness determined all social relations in the Soviet army.

Five Economic Classes

The foregoing discussions show clearly the falseness of Communist claims that there are no classes under communism. Actually, there are at least five distinguishable classes in the Soviet Union and the same holds true of other Communist states.

First, there is the top group of a few thousand families: the leaders in the Communist party, the government, the armed forces, the secret police, industry and science. These people travel abroad, know and enjoy the good things of life, have private limousines and chauffeurs, country houses, the best of medical care, and in general a standard of living not much different from that of the very wealthy and powerful in other countries. They attend gala openings at the theater and opera, their wives are bedecked with jewels and their children get the best education possible.

The second class is made up of nearly one million families on the next level of political, economic, military or scientific accomplishment. Also included in this class are successful Soviet novelists, composers and artists who can earn substantial incomes.

It is the upper professional class of Russia, living in a condition that is still luxurious by Soviet standards, although less so by Western standards. These people generally do not need to share an apartment with several other families but can have an entire two-room or even a three-room apartment all their own. They can afford good furniture and can see to it that their children get a college education or some specialized professional training. They make up the solid new well-to-do class of Russia, anxiously seeking status and security.

Third Class

The third class includes about two to three million families — what would be called the "middle-middle" or "lower-middle" class in other countries.

These people are employed as lower-grade government officials, military officers, engineers, factory foremen, highly skilled workers and successful collective farm managers. They live on a much more modest scale than their counterparts in Western countries but by Soviet standards — particularly in comparison with the mass of workers and peasants—they live well.

Moreover, as in most European countries, this class is proud of the fact that they belong to the "intelligentsia," that is, those who do not do manual work. Even selling stamps in a post office or filing cards in an office seems closer to "intellectual" work than being employed in a state factory or mine. Stalin and Khrushchev have frequently attacked this anxiety of people to acquire easy desk jobs but so far the Communist leadership has been unable to do away with the prejudice against manual labor.

Mass of Population

The fourth class includes the mass of the Soviet population: workers and peasants. The peasants are worse off than the workers because the government has always felt that industrial workers are more important in building Russia's economic and military power.

The Communists also know from their own experience that industrial unrest in the cities is more dangerous to the political stability of the regime than unrest in the countryside. Thus industrial workers are better paid and enjoy better social services than farm workers.

Although most industrial workers are covered by government social security and old-age pensions, farm workers are specifically excluded. Medical services are available to all Soviet citizens as a government service. However, half of the Russian population still lives in rural areas whereas only eleven per cent of the physicians live in such areas.

The masses of people in this fourth class of industrial bear the brunt of the deprivations and shortages of everyday life under communism. They live huddled together, several families in one apartment in the city or in one hut in the countryside.

Their children are unlikely to receive a higher education but will likely be workers and peasants, just as their parents have been. For the most part, they fatalistically accept their inferior station of life.

Last in Line

The fifth class is made up of workers in "correctional camps" — or in other words, slave laborers. It also includes "disadvantaged workers," persons who have had political trouble and have been assigned to menial, ill-paid jobs.

Technically, their labor is called "free," although actually they are only a cut above the slave laborers. Disadvantaged workers and slave laborers are the nearest thing to outcasts in a Communist society.

The gap in living standards and the resultant social inequality among these five classes cannot always be expressed in terms of differences in money incomes, important as such differences may be.

In the United States, for example, the lower-income person may drive a Ford or Chevrolet whereas the wealthier person drives a Cadillac or Lincoln Continental. But the difference between having a Chevrolet and having a Cadillac is far less than between having some kind of car (a privilege reserved for only a few in Russia) and not having one at all.

Similarly, in a typical American home, even the poor family usually has one bathroom whereas millions of middle-class families have two or three bathrooms. But the difference between these two groups is still less than between the typical Russian family who has no bathroom and the exceptional family that does have one.

Where living standards are high, as in the United States or Western Europe, economic inequality means, for the most part, a difference between "those who have" and "those who have more." In Communist countries, where living standards are low, economic inequality is much more keenly felt — for it means the difference between "having" and "not having at all."

Washington Sets Plan to Help African Nations

Plans for a program to protect 105 million people in 18 African nations from smallpox and measles were announced by the White House.

Africa is a major area of smallpox incidence and measles is one of the primary causes of death or disability among African children.

The Agency for International Development (AID) and Public Health Service officials are consulting with African and World Health Organization officials on plans for the campaign.

Tons of Gifts Being Flown For Viet Nam Christmas

Tons of candy, cakes and cookies — Christmas gifts from organizations and individuals throughout the United States—are being flown to soldiers in Viet Nam by Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard transports.

From Fort Benning's Lawson Airfield, an estimated 15 tons of gifts for soldiers fighting in Viet Nam departed during the last part of November and early December.

The Pentagon authorized the shipments to handle an "avalanche" of goodies donated by groups demonstrating their support of the U. S. effort in Viet Nam.

Air Force Reserve C-119s and Air Guard C-47s are hauling the holiday cheer to west coast stations and the longer-range C-97s are carting it across the Pacific to field commanders in Viet Nam. Air Guard crews expect to make an estimated 75 missions across the ocean.

The airlift — dubbed "Operation Christmas Star" — was set up after officials realized that Americans, anxious to show their support for soldiers overseas — were volunteering more gifts than normal Air Force transportation could handle.

The City of Columbus and surrounding environs, including Fort Benning, answered in response to the local American Legion's 'Operation Christmas Cheer' by compiling the 15 tons of gifts and "goodies" for members of the 1st Cavalry Division and other former Benning units now in Viet Nam.

At the urging of several congressmen, the Defense Department gave approval to the Christmas Star operation.

The call then went out for mas goods. In Pennsylvania Air Reserve and Air Guard alone, more than 75 tons of volunteers to man the transports needed to haul the staggering array of Christ- baked goods are being prepared for overseas distribution.

Col Lawson Is Honored Here By Group

Col. Joel W. Lawson recently received a framed certificate of appreciation for his outstanding work as president of the Armed Forces Management Association at Fort Benning.

The certificate was presented at a luncheon meeting at the Main Officers' Open Mess, attended by 75 members and their guests.

Lawson has resigned the presidency of the association. He will retire from the Army in January.

The meeting featured a film, "A Yarn about Yarn," and an address on "Management Problems in the Textile Industry." Guest speaker was Robert T. Davis, vice president of Swift Spinning Mills, Inc., Columbus.

The film followed the progress of cotton fiber from the blossom on the plant in the field to the packaged yarn ready for shipment from the mill.

Davis described the necessity for careful selection of the raw material from which yarn is made, as well as the expert processing of cotton fibers and testing of the finished cotton yarn.

The speaker described techniques used in the textile industry and the numerous checks and counterchecks made to insure the highest standards possible.

Casualties Mounting In Viet Nam

In the past five years some 1,300 U.S. service personnel lost their lives from hostile action in the Republic of Viet Nam.

Statistics for Jan. 1, 1961-Nov. 29, 1965 show that 1,103 were killed outright; 69 died from wounds; 182 died while missing; and two lost their lives while detained by enemy forces.

Additionally, 430 have died from non-hostile action causes.

Treasury Department Said Blocking End of Taxes On Dislocation Grants

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Proposals to eliminate federal tax on the dislocation allowance are stuck on dead center — mostly because the Treasury Department is worried about civilians wanting the same privilege.

That's the status of congressional proposals to make dislocation pay tax-free. The most important of these is HR 5293, a bill submitted by Rep. Porter Hardy (D., Va.), who is a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Hardy's bill would change the name of the dislocation allowance — which consists of an extra quarters allowance when a permanent change of station is made—to "allowance for quarters on a permanent change of station." The Pentagon supports the proposal but the Treasury Department and the Budget Bureau are against it.

Do It Another Way

One reaction to the Treasury's opposition is a suggestion by Brig. Gen. William W. Berg, deputy assistant secretary of defense, that the job should be done another way, perhaps by increasing the amount of the allowance to make up for the tax bite. But congressional aides said last week that such a proposal was not very likely to become law during the coming session of Congress.

Some 340,000 servicemen collected $40 million in taxable dislocation pay last year. But Assistant Treasury Secretary Stanley S. Surrey said the effect on any one individual is "minor." He estimated that tax relief would mean savings of less than $50 every two or three years at the most.

Personal Income

The allowance now is taxable because Internal Revenue Service has ruled that while actual transportation expenses are really the employer's expenses, and are therefore deductible, money in addition to actual transport expenses is considered personal income and must be included on the income tax form.

Treasury has turned down requests to change the ruling for servicemen, for various reasons, including what it calls administrative problems.

But the main reason is the effect it would have on government income because people in private industry would be allowed to deduct similar payments. To change the name of the military allowance, Surrey wrote to Congress, "would not deter private relief." And no matter what name is given to the allowance, Surrey said, it is "essentially a reimbursement for personal expenses."

House Armed Services Committee chairman L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.) opposes the Treasury view. He says the consensus of Congress when the allowance was authorized in 1955 was that the allowance was not to be taxable.

MERRY CHRISTMAS, 1776 . . . Gen. Washington at Trenton, N.J., December 26, 1776 matched surprise and endurance against the superior numbers and training of the British and the Continental Army won its first victory in long months of painful striving. The unit was Alexander Hamilton's company of New York Artillery—now Battery D, 5th Field Artillery.

ROTC Scholarships To Double in 1966

WASHINGTON — Army ROTC scholarships will be doubled next year, from the present 1000 to 2000, as a second step in phasing-in a section of the 1964 ROTC Vitalization Act authorizing the service up to 5500 scholarships.

Each scholarship comes close to covering a cadet's annual college expense.

The law limits to 4000 the number of scholarships the Army can award during the first four years the legislation is in effect. This could mean that Defense will increase the number of stipends in 1967 and 1968. The Navy, which has enjoyed the scholarship program for years, has over 5000 of its ROTC cadets under scholarship.

The Army gave 600 of its current year 1000 authorization to college juniors in the ROTC program, the remaining 400 to "outstanding" high school seniors. The Army is expected to make a similar arrangement, not necessarily in the same amounts, this year.

Each scholarship recipient receives tuition, fees, book costs, lab expenses, and $50 a month. At expensive schools this benefit could total well over $2000 a year.

Advanced ROTC cadets not under scholarship receive a $40 a month subsistence payment, for 10 months of both their junior and senior years

The 1964 law's other numerous provisions provided a $300 uniform allowance to all ROTC graduates, required that advanced cadet's enlist in the Army Reserve, improved summer camp pay and mileage rates, and authorized two-year ROTC programs.

Chief Surgeon Lauds Viet Nam 'Air Evac'

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — For the second week in a row helicopter evacuation crews in Viet Nam have been praised by a member of the Army staff.

Army Surgeon General Lt. Gen. Leonard Heaton is the latest to cite the Viet Nam soldiers.

Borrowing a Battle of Britain phrase from Winston Churchill to salute the evac crews, Heaton said that "never have so many owed so much to so few.'

He attributed in large measure the decline in the percentage of men dying from battlefield wounds to the "small, brave band of helicopter pilots" who go in to get the wounded under sometimes unimaginable conditions.

During War I about eight percent of the men admitted to treatment centers after being wounded later died. In War II the rate was 4.5 per cent, and in Korea 2.5 percent.

"In Army operations in Viet Nam from Jan. 1961 through Nov. 15, 1965 there had been reported 3699 Army personnel wounded or injured as a result of actions of the hostile forces," Heaton said. "Only 25 of these (less than one percent) had died of their wounds."

The general noted, however, that because the Viet Nam war is not similar to Korea and War II, he did not feel statistical comparison justified.

Heaton said that disease is the cause of most hospital admissions in Viet Nam. In October disease accounted for 75 percent of all hospital admissions. The most prevalent disease is diarrhea although the condition is seldom serious enough to be disabling.

Malaria is the number two disease.

Heaton said that men in Viet Nam were getting the best available care and deplored reports that created other impressions.

He noted that one difficulty facing Americans going overseas is that because they come from a very sanitary and relatively sterile environment they are "immunological virgins" and susceptible to many organisms.

In a speech recently at Fort Rucker, Army vice chief of staff, Gen. Creighton Abrams praised the medical service helicopter units and said that more of these units had been sent to Viet Nam in the buildup.

More than 50 helicopters are now performing in this role, Abrahams said.

Television Now Briefs Command

The weekly commanders conference has a new feature — televised briefings.

Last week was the first time Infantry Hall's closed-circuit television system was used for the briefings.

Col. H. E. Wolff, Infantry School director of instruction, was the commentator for a 10-minute summary of current Infantry School activities.

Pre-taped, the briefing was broadcast during the conference when a signal was relayed by telephone to the Television Section of the second floor of Infantry Hall.

The briefing is planned to give major commanders information about classes in session, major instructional events scheduled for the week and important visitors to the post, officials said.

OPENING POSTPONED

The opening of the Fort Benning Country Club night driving range has been postponed indefinitely according to an announcement issued by the club recently.

Question of American Allegiance Is Problem When the Serviceman Works for U.N. Forces

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — When an American military officer is assigned to an international command, to whom does he owe allegiance? What happens to his oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States when he carries out an order given by his United Nations commander? Or by a U. S. commander, for that matter?

These and related questions are tackled by an Army JAG officer in a recent issue of Naval Institute Proceedings.

Author of "Oath of Allegiance" is Lt. Col. Thomas H. Reese, who points out that the legality of actions by officers in the armed forces is determined after the acts by the courts, and not by the executive authorities who order the acts.

Reese writes that court review of a military officer's acts goes back to 1803 and that it is up to the courts to say what the law is. He also quotes Chief Justice John Marshall, who said:

"Allowable Limits"

"What are the allowable limits of military discretion, and whether or not they have been overstepped in a particular case, are judicial decisions."

The author says the whole question is complicated by the fact that it is not clear exactly where an officer owes allegiance. He takes an oath to support and defend the Constitution, but he is under the orders of the commander-in-chief, a specific individual. Gen. Douglas MacArthur stated one side of the problem in 1951 when he said:

Dangerous Concept

"I find in existence a new and heretofore unknown and dangerous concept that the members of our armed forces owe primary allegiance or loyalty to those who temporarily exercise the authority of the executive branch of the government, rather than to the country and its Constitution which they are sworn to defend."

Reese wonders what an American officer is to do if he is serving in a combined command — like a United Nations force — and he feels that an order would make him violate his oath to the U.S. Constitution. Reese's view is:

"Loyalty to the combined command is not breached and likewise, loyalty to the United States is not violated if the commander notifies appropriate U. S. authority that in his judgment certain actions of the combined command are against the interests of the United States.

Appropriate Action

"United States authority can take whatever action is deemed appropriate under the circumstances — this might perhaps include the recall of the commander if it were felt that he might become involved in an action incompatible with the interests of the United States."

Reese points out that while the U. S. President can't dictate the actions of an American officer acting as part of an international command, "he does have the power of recall."

What happens if an American officer acting as international force commander violates his oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States? Says Reese:

"The courts are powerless."

Major Logs 10,000 Hours of Flying Time

After making his first flight at the age of 16 in a Ford Tri-motor plane, a major at Fort Benning recently logged his 10,000th hour in an airplane.

If one were to convert the time into days, Maj. Raymond J. Kangas of the 10th Aviation Group has spent a little better than a year and two months in the air.

Of the 10,000 hours of flight time, the executive officer of the 174th Aviation Company has flown 1,500 in combat.

Kangas is a Master Army Aviator and is qualified to fly both fixed and rotary wing aircraft.

During World War II he flew light reconnaissance aircraft until he was shot down over France.

He is a 1949 graduate of Officer Candidate School and the Army's aviation school.

He flew the Army's L-19, Cessna, reconnaissance plane in combat in Korea and has been a flight instructor.

Kangas' decorations include the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, and the Air Medal.

GIs Face New Viet Weapons

U. S. troops in Viet Nam must have special training to cope with the enemy's crude but effective attempts to sabotage equipment, kill, maim and demoralize.

To deal with the problem, the Marine Corps has initiated a special school at Da Nang which forewarns the foot-soldier of all known types of booby traps used by the Viet Cong. Head instructor at the school, Sgt. John L. Saulnier says, "It's a display course, not a confidence course." Graduates however, gain confidence in knowledge.

At the "Punji Palace," as the school is called by the instructors, students are trained to recognize and combat some 25 ingenious booby traps devised by the enemy.

The "punji trap" consists of a foot-size hole in the ground containing a jaw-like trap consisting of steel spikes embedded in two wood blocks. A man stepping into the hole hits two trip wires which snap the spiked boards together above his ankle.

Another more deadly, device is a cocked cross-bow concealed along a jungle path and activated when troops disturb a hidden line across the path. A larger version of the cross-bow, armed with a longer, heavier arrow, is used against helicopters.

One of the worst types of booby traps encountered by U.S. Forces is the Z-10 mine. The Z-10, resembling a grenade more than a mine, contains two pounds of iron filled with three or four ounces of TNT which can be used against men or machines.

There is no sleeping in the Marine school. A nap could cost a student his life.

LOOKING UP . . . Cross rods are added to the reinforcing sections of a storage igloo (reinforced concrete building) by U.S. Army soldiers near Evreux Air Force Base, France. To build the igloo, men of the 553d Engineer Battalion (Construction) used 68 tons of reinforcing steel rods and 640 tons of concrete.

Alabama's State Taxes Again Levied

WASHINGTON — Alabamans in service, except those in Viet Nam, will have to pay state income tax again.

Last May, the Alabama attorney general ruled that military pay, regardless of where performed, was exempt from the state income tax.

His ruling resulted in hundreds of refunds retroactive to calendar year 1964 for servicemen who are legal residents of Alabama.

But in October the state legislature amended the income tax law. So beginning with the current (1965) calendar year only compensation received for service in a combat zone is exempt.

Therefore, only those in Viet Nam are excused from paying the state income tax and even they are exempt only for the pay they received while in Viet Nam.

Background Feature

Communist China Is Own Worst Enemy on Basis Of Foreign Policy in Seeking Admission to U.N.

Should Communist China represent China in the United Nations? This question has been raised 15 times in the U. N. General Assembly since the Chinese Communists conquered mainland China in 1949.

For 10 years (1951 - 1960), the Assembly voted not to consider the question. After all the Assembly in 1951 had declared Communist China an aggressor in Korea. That declaration still stands.

Four times, beginning in 1961 (no vote was taken in 1964) the General Assembly has debated a resolution to substitute the representatives of Peiping for those of Taipei in the U.N., and four times has voted against it. The last vote, in November 1965, was 47-47, with 20 abstentions.

The resolution does not ask the Assembly to admit Communist China as a new member but to admit it as the only representative of China and to expel the Republic of China.

The Assembly has always voted that this is an "important question," which requires a two-thirds majority vote, rather than a "procedural" one.

The Republic of China, now on Taiwan, was one of the original signers of the U.N. Charter and is one of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

Admission Arguments

The principal arguments advanced by the nations that favor admission of Communist China to the U.N.:

— The Chinese Communist regime governs mainland China and 700 million people and is therefore the only legitimate representative of China;

— As a corollary to the above, the Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek on Taiwan does not and cannot represent all of China;

— To be effective, the U. N. should be "universal" in its membership;

— The problems of Asia, particularly the Viet Nam war, cannot be settled without the participation of Communist China, the largest Asian power;

— Communist China is a nuclear power and the problems of disarmament and non - proliferation of nuclear weapons cannot be solved without the participation of the Peiping government;

— Communist China's scornful hostility to the U.N. and bellicose foreign policies might be modified if she were brought into the organization instead of being treated as a pariah.

Arguments Against

The United States, supported by the countries that also voted against any change in the representation of China in the U. N., maintains that:

— Communist China's aggression against Korea, Tibet and India and her support of North Viet Nam's aggression against South Viet Nam disqualify her for membership in the U.N.;

— In view of Peiping's open advocacy of war and violent revolution all over the world, to seat Communist China in the U. N. would only encourage it on its path of violence.

— Entry to the U.N. after Peiping's new arrogant conditions for its admission would be tantamount to "yielding to undisguised blackmail."

— Communist China is openly opposed to the goals of the U. N. There is no reason to believe that membership in the U. N. would "reform" the Peiping regime. Its entry would be a disruptive force that would work against the U. N.'s future effectiveness;

— There are no grounds for expulsion of the Republic of China for it is a sovereign state exercising effective control over more territory than that of at least 18 U.N. members and over a population larger than that of 83 members.

Two Chinas' Question

Some of the nations that voted for the resolution to admit Communist China to the U. N., as well as some of those that voted against it, believe that Peiping should be admitted but that the Nationalist government on Taiwan should not be expelled.

Some have suggested admission of both, one as the representative of China, the other as representative of Taiwan.

One obstacle to this solution is that both governments have so far emphatically refused to accept the "two Chinas" concept.

Communist Chinese leaders have made the ousting of the Republic of China the first condition for their acceptance of membership in the U. N.

Does Communist China really want to be in the U.N.? In a Sept. 29 news conference, the Chinese Communist Foreign Minister Chen I denounced the U.N. as a "tool of the United States."

He said the U. N. should be reformed, first by expelling the Republic of China, then by canceling its resolution branding Communist China and North Korea as aggressors and adopting a resolution condemning the United States as the aggressor.

In addition, Chen I demanded that the U. N. Charter be revised. "All independent states should be included in the United Nations," he said, "and all imperialist puppets should be expelled."

According to this formula the only nations allowed to remain in the U.N. would be those that agreed with Communist China's policies of aggression.

Automotive Center Devises Armor Plate For Viet Nam Trucks

A crash program just completed at the Warren, Mich., Army Tank - Automotive Center (ATAC) will provide armor plating protection against ambush attacks and sniper fire for soldiers riding along lonely Vietnamese roads in open trucks.

The armor plates, made of titanium, will be held in place by specially designed brackets that can be quickly installed on the trucks now in use in Viet Nam.

Military trucks offer little protection for personnel against unexpected small arms fire directed from concealed positions. The kits were designed by ATAC's Research and Engineering Directorate in response to the request for a fast, uncomplicated answer to the problem.

Fabricated as an in - house project of ATAC, more than 650 of the kits are in the process of being shipped to Viet Nam. They will be used on five - ton, 2½ - ton and ¾ - ton trucks and the M-151 jeeps.

The plating will be attached to the sides, rear and front of the vehicles with a section cut out for the drivers' side of the front windshield.

The complete kit for a five-ton truck weighs 1970 pounds. For the 2½ - ton, the ¾ - ton and the jeep the kits weigh 1740, 1020 and 370 pounds respectively. Each kit has an installation instruction manual.

The project was completed in about 10 weeks from the time the requirement came to ATAC until the kits were crated and ready for shipment.

Col. William J. Durrenberger, commanding officer of the center, said "This program is dramatic evidence of the capabilities of our people to respond quickly and effectively to unanticipated needs of our forces in the field. I think it is an excellent example of the flexibility of the materiel elements of the Army in fulfilling support responsibilities to the Army's fighting units."

No Inductees To Be Taken During Christmas Holiday

No Army inductees will be shipped to reception centers between December 22 and 26, Continental Army Command announced last week. A spokesman said the announcement was "in keeping with the Department of the Army policy concerning travel of inductees during the Christmas period."

CONARC said no inductees will be shipped from Armed Forces Examining and Entrance Stations (AFEES) to Army induction centers "after December 22" and that "normal shipping schedules for inductees will be resumed after December 26".

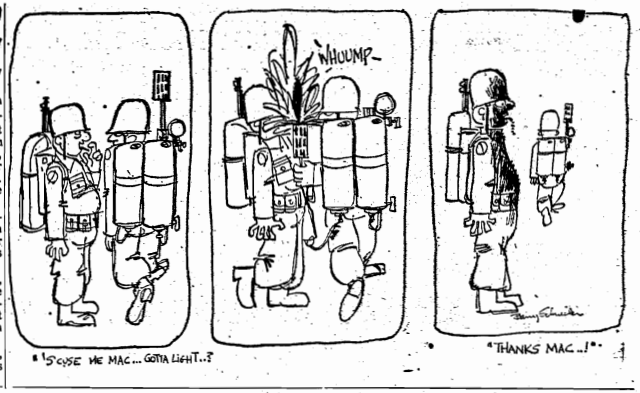
However, to meet its trained manpower commitments in Viet Nam, the Army plans to continue training centers in operation during the period, except for Christmas Day, officials told Army Times.

The December draft quota for the Army is 40,200. Meanwhile, Defense Department plans to continue "higher than usual" draft calls in January, asking Selective Service for a draft quota of 38,200 men. The call includes 8880 for the Marines.

The December total initially was 45,224 and included a request by the Marines for 5024 but the Marine Corps request was withdrawn.

The January call of 38,280, of which 29,300 is for the Army, is lower than the revised December quota but still higher than any quota since 1953.

The Navy and Air Force, as usual, made no requests for draftees.



McNamara's Planned Base Cuts To Save $410 Million a Year

WASHINGTON — Fifty-three thousand military and civilian positions will be eliminated and an annual savings of $410 million effected under terms of an announcement made by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Without decreasing military effectiveness or limiting this country's current and future activities in Southeast Asia, Mr. McNamara has directed that 149 actions be taken to close, consolidate or reduce military bases which are surplus to current needs.

Mr. McNamara said the Army, Navy and Air Force fully support each of the actions. He noted that, combined with similar decisions made since March 1961, these new actions will bring total savings resulting from terminations of unnecessary operations to $1.5 billion a year.

Additional details on the 149 actions to consolidate, reduce or discontinue Department of Defense activities in the United States and overseas also were announced by McNamara.

Military activities in 39 states and the District of Columbia are affected by 126 actions. The remaining 23 affect overseas activities including one in Puerto Rico.

McNamara said the majority of the actions result from basic force level and weapon systems changes which require the realignment of military forces and which permit the future consolidation, reduction or discontinuance of military facilities.

Remainder of the actions continue to emphasize consolidation of related activities and joint use of facilities among the military departments, he said.

Principal actions announced by the secretary include:

The basic bomber force and the base structure of the Strategic Air Command to be adjusted while maintaining the required strategic nuclear capability.

This will be accomplished by phasing out of the inventory older models of the B-52 bomber and all B-58 bombers. Six major base actions involved, along with realignment of the bomber force, will result in annual savings of $127.5 million.

Certain other bases, from which B-52 operations are being removed, are being retained for a new mission which will be disclosed subsequently.

Air Defense Reduced

A comprehensive study of the Continental Air Defense and Early Warning System has been completed which will permit a reduction in activities at Air Defense bases.

In addition, the reduced Soviet bomber threat and the technological advances in early warning detection systems will permit the discontinuation of the Navy's seaward and airborne extension of the DEW LINE, frequently called Barrier Forces.

The reduced bomber threat also permits the discontinuance of a number of NIKE-Hercules antiaircraft batteries. These actions will produce total savings of $150.7 million annually.

The Air Force will reduce eight Air Force Reserve and three Air Guard airlift squadrons in nine locations in the United States. This will save $28.2 million annually.

Department of the Defense actions will bring annual savings of $410 million and reduction of 53,010 personnel without decreasing military effectiveness or limiting current and future activities in Southeast Asia. Some 93,691 acres of land will also be released for non-Defense use.

Secretary McNamara said the 22 overseas actions, excluding Puerto Rico, will not be announced until a later date, after governments of the countries concerned have been consulted.

These actions are in Europe, the northern Pacific and the Western Hemisphere and will produce an annual saving of $81 million. No movement of combat military forces is involved.

In order to minimize the impact on employees and communities, the secretary said actions announced will be phased over a period of several years.

Soldiers' Cars Using More Gas Than Ever

Servicemen's cars are guzzling more gas than ever.

In 1965 the exchange service stations sold 2.2 million more gallons of gas than they did in 1964. The 1965 total was 18.2 million gallons.

Incidentally, you can check your gas consumption with the national average. The exchanges' management magazine says that the estimate of gasoline per private vehicle per month is 54 gallons. This is based on an average 10,500 miles driven per year.

The exchanges figure they sell you about half of the gas you use, or about 25 gallons a month.

'Digitek 100' Replaces Older Methods of Recruit Test Scoring

Fort Benning was a pioneer recently in something other than Infantry combat tactics. It was the first to use a new type of scoring computer.

The Training Center's Reception Station was the first such station to use the "Digitek 100" in scoring tests administered to the station's recruits.

The machine, according to MSgt. Irving J. Popp, the man who operates it, is replacing the "IBM 805s" in the business of scoring the Army's batteries of tests for recruits.

The 'Digitek 100' scores the tests at a rate of 2400 per hour while the 20-year-old, manually operated IBM machine scores at the rate of 400 per hour.

Popp pointed out that the 400 was a maximum with an experienced operator.

The machine arrived at the Reception Station Oct. 15. Before that time Popp said it was field tested in Washington.

Popp is an 805 operator who came to Benning from the Reception Center at Fort Knox when the training center began operation here in September.

He said before the installation of the 'Digitek 100' all the answer sheets had to be taken to Fort Jackson for scoring.

Unlike the 805 which required an operator to read the test score, the new machine is "printer compatible," in the language of computers.

It writes the raw score on the answer sheet as it whirrs through the machine, at the rate of 2400 per hour and frees 20 men for other duties, according to one spokesman.

In addition to Popp, Sp5 Gordon Gartley and Sp5 Eddie Enoch operate the new computer.

Popp pointed out that the new computer, although only used for the one purpose at the present, is capable of handling other tasks with adaptation.

He said at present, attempts were being made to mechanically convert the raw score printed on the test to the Army standard scoring system. Now the conversion is made manually, he added.

Digitek is handled somewhat like a baby in spite of its 771 pounds and comparatively large size.

For proper operation it has to be kept in an air conditioned room and given the computer's version of a bath. This is all done to keep it running at peak efficiency, Popp said.

The machine is much like the Buck Rogerish versions in the comic strips. It is black with red cowling covers and three rows of scanner lights which light up as the tests are being scored at a rate too fast for the human eye, Popp said.

In addition to converting the machine for scoring purposes, the machine may also be converted for key punch purposes and for other programs.

Popp foresees the day when it will be hooked directly with Washington via microwave to transmit enlisted men's data onto tapes for permanent records there.

All this for just one machine that now does the work of twenty men.

TOP RANGER . . . 2nd Lt. Jesse L. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Keeton Top Graduate From Ranger Course

BY JUANETA COATES

Second Lt. Jesse L. Keeton was presented the Darby Memorial plaque as the honor and distinguished graduate of The Infantry School's Ranger class which graduated last week at Fort Benning.

The plaque is awarded at each Ranger graduation in honor of Brig. Gen. William O. Darby and presented by the Ranger Battalions Association composed of members of the six World War II Ranger battalions.

Keeton also received a Ranger tab, Ranger guidon, and Association of the U.S. Army plaque and a year's subscription to Infantry Magazine.

Three other honor graduates of the class were 2nd Lts. Joseph B. Anderson, Jr., Blair K. Blacker and James H. Hennessee.

Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, addressed the 162 graduates.

Forsythe congratulated the class on completing the Ranger training and then spoke about what lies ahead of the graduates.

He said he had studied each comment sheet filled out by the students and he had taken interest and pride in them because they showed that the men were realistic, candid and demanding.

He told the men their job is to make the Army better for their service in it.

Forsythe said the military and national struggle was never the threat that it is today, "the threat that goes after the individual man. The Communists in Viet Nam are materialistic, but they are after the man," he stated.

"All of us can and should be critical of the national response to this problem," the general said.

Additional Armor Set For Germany Divisions

Three infantry divisions in Germany will receive additional armor during the first half of 1966, U. S. Army, Europe Headquarters has announced.

A mechanized infantry battalion in the 3rd and 8th Infantry Divisions will be outfitted with the new M-60 tank.

The conversion will give each of these divisions a battalion mix of six mechanized and four armor battalions.

The 24th Infantry Division will achieve an identical battalion mix by replacing one of its mechanized infantry battalions with the 5th Battalion, 30th Armor. The only round-out battalion now in the Federal Republic of Germany.

This unit will become an organic member of the 24th Division and will remain in the Federal Republic.

As a result of these changes, the equivalent of one mechanized battalion will be inactivated. All changes and conversions are part of program to further increase armor and firepower of U. S. Army Forces in Germany.

President Describes Nation's Peace Aim

This nation stands and works for peace in every land and there can be peace — especially in Viet Nam — whenever men and other capitals are ready, President Johnson has told members of the Business Advisory Council.

Speaking via telephone from the Texas White House to the Washington Council meeting, the President repeated, "This nation is ready to talk, unconditionally, anywhere, with peace as our agenda."

He also explained that American servicemen are fighting to preserve freedom and defend justice in Viet Nam and have put the needs of their government and country ahead of personal desires and hopes.

"No one of us — businessmen, laboring man, government employee — can ever forget that what American fighting men are doing in Viet Nam may well determine the shape and the form of your future, our future."

Peace in Viet Nam will come from courage, from constancy and from concern, the President concluded, noting, "Peace is our commitment. Peace is our goal. Peace will be the only victory we seek."

Defense Chief Claims 'We've Stopped Losing' War Against Viet Cong

After receiving a firsthand briefing in Saigon, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara says he doesn't want to forecast the number of United States troops that may be required in Viet Nam but will send whatever forces are needed.

"The road ahead will be long and hard," the Secretary said, after his seventh visit in five years to Viet Nam. "The most vivid impression I'm bringing back is that we have stopped losing the war."

This be credited to very substantial increases in South Vietnamese military strength and in the strength of free world forces — U.S. combat strength and forces provided by Australia, New Zealand and Korea.

These forces have very clearly denied the Viet Cong the victory they sought to achieve during the summer monsoon season, the Secretary noted.

"There is no question in our mind but what during that period they hoped to divide the country in half," he said, "and maul and dismember, and in a real sense, defeat the military forces of South Viet Nam.

"They have been defeated in achieving that objective."

Commissions Available For Medics

An immediate need for lieutenants and captains qualified in certain medical specialties exists in the Army Medical Corps, according to the Army Surgeon General's Office.

Qualified specialists in clinical psychology, medical laboratory areas, optometry, podiatry, entomology, social work, sanitary engineering and administrative work related to medicine may apply for commissions and concurrent active duty.

18 Finish Caribou Training

Eighteen pilots at Fort Benning last week completed the six-week transition course that teaches them to fly the Army's CV2B (Caribou) aircraft.

Conducted by the 10th Aviation Group, this was the third class to be graduated at the post, which has the only Army transition instruction which familiarizes and trains qualified pilots in the operation of the Caribou.

Lt. Col. Lester C. Robertson of Salem, Il[illegible] deputy commander of the [illegible], presented diplomas to the graduates in exercises at Lawson Army Airfield.

All of the pilots in this class, which consists of approximately 44 hours of flying in the Caribou and 39 hours of maintenance instruction and classroom work on the aircraft, will be assigned to Viet Nam.

Amvets Seeking Membership For New Post

Officials of the new Amvet's Post 69 have issued a membership appeal for all veterans discharged between Sept. 16, 1940 and Jan. 2, 1955.

They have announced that a special membership meeting will be held Sunday at the post home, 610 4th Ave., at 3:30 p.m.

Guest speaker at the meeting will be A. J. McClung, executive secretary of the Y.M.C.A.

Albert Washington, post commander, also announced that there would be a Benefit Dance Christmas Eve at the post home.

He invited all veterans to attend.

Congress May Get GI Bill 'For All' Early in 1966

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — A GI Bill to cover everybody coming into the military service in the future — no cutoff date — appears headed for passage in the House in January or February, House Veterans Affairs Committee chairman Olin Teague (D., Tex.) told a press conference last week.

Teague, just back from Viet Nam, predicted the GI Bill package will contain education and home and farm loan benefits and one new benefit — job placement assistance — for men of cold war service.

He said he would like to see a peacetime bill patterned after the Korea GI Bill but added that benefits may have to be scaled down to meet approval of the White House. Job placement assistance from the Labor Department is now only available to wartime veterans.

In addition to GI Bill legislation, the Texas lawmaker predicted early congressional action on raising Dependency Indemnity Compensation (DIC) rates for dependent parents.

The House included a raise in DIC payments in the veterans compensation measure but took it out after deciding that the program needed a complete overhaul rather than just a cost-of-living increase.

DIC payments for dependent parents are paid on a sliding scale, ranging from $11 to $83 monthly.

The annual amount parents receive is measured by an annual income test ranging from $750 to $2400.

It's possible the DIC review may cover rates paid widows and children. Rates for them are set by law. They get an automatic raise every time the military gets a pay raise.

Teague, in talks with servicemen in Viet Nam, said the peactime GI Bill was one of the three questions asked most of him during his overseas tour.

He said servicemen were also concerned about the chances of their tour of duty being extended. "They also wanted to know what we were going to do with those nuts demonstrating against American involvement in the Viet Nam war."

He said the peacetime GI Bill would be his committee's number one order of business in the next session and predicted House approval of legislation by early next year.

Educational TV Workshop Held on Post

An educational television workshop, paving the way for TV equipment in more service schools, was held this week at Fort Benning.

The workshop, hosted by The Infantry School which has already incorporated television into its instructional program, was attended by about 75 representatives from other schools.

Purpose of the three-day session, sponsored by the Continental Army Command (CONARC), was to discuss planning, production, utilization and operation of television facilities and procedures used in establishing and maintaining a TV production center and satellited stations in the CONARC television networks.

A number of other CONARC schools are scheduled to receive their first television equipment and will be going through a similar "shake down" period which The Infantry School recently experienced.

In addition to the workshop which opened Monday, the first formal meeting of the individual CONARC Regional Television Committees were to be conducted.

Viet Nam Exchanges Seek Building Funds

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service has asked for appropriated funds to rebuild any exchanges in Viet Nam which may be damaged in battle.

Unless the request is granted, the funds for refurbishing the facilities would come indirectly out of the pockets of servicemen because they would have to be paid out of non-appropriated funds which normally are used for welfare and recreation activities.

The non-appropriated funds come from exchange profits.

'Silent Night, Holy. . .'

Christmas Carol Written By Priest, School Teacher

BY LELO BRADLEY

Note: Mrs. Bradley is the wife of SFC Charles P. Bradley who is currently serving with the 1st Cavalry Division in Viet Nam. She is a native of Germany.

Silent night, holy night,
All is calm, all is bright;
Round yon virgin mother and child
Holy infant so tender and mild
Sleep in heavenly peace;
Sleep in heavenly peace.

The immortal Christmas song, "Silent Night," known the world over and sung in many languages, had its simple beginning in the tiny village of Oberndorf, near the famous town of Salzburg. For 136 years this Christmas carol has lifted the hearts and hopes of men with its simple celestial melody.

Franz Gruber, third son of a linen weaver, was a teacher, musician and sexton in the village.

The kindly man often delighted friends, family and pupils with melodies coaxed from a wheezy organ and a spinet that graced his home. In time, he met and became a close friend of a young priest, Joseph Mohr, a native of Salzburg who had been appointed to the parish church of St. Nikolaus in Oberndorf. Soon the friends became inseparable and through this relationship came the words and the music of the famous melody as we know it today.

A peaceful night lay over Oberndorf and the Orion's belt was conspicious in the starry sky. The crackling noise of huge cakes of ice rushing along on the nearby Salzach River interrupted the stillness of the winter night.

But Joseph Mohr could not be disturbed. The voices of his imagination were stronger than anything else. He had had an inspiration and there was one thought especially that he could not dispell from his mind. And so from the depth of his heart the kind young priest wrote the words of a poem . . "Silent night, holy night".

In the snow-bound village, schoolmaster Franz Gruber was busy setting up the old Navity tableau in the church. Satisfied, he left the church for his home, where he seated himself at the spinet to arrange his music for the holidays and the choir of Oberndorf.

A knock sounded at his door and Joseph Mohr entered the room of the schoolteacher. Out of his breast pocket Mohr took a sheet of paper covered with writing and passed it to Gruber and asked, "Can you set that to music?"

After reading the contents of these few lines, Gruber agreed with great pleasure. Mohr took his leave and Gruber, alone now in his room, stood in front of his spinet, deeply engrossed in the poem.

Then, he touched the keys. A heavenly inspiration seemed to enable him to create the wonderful melody. Far from the world weary, from the parish church of St. Nikolaus as it had never been heard before. The three part harmony, accompanied by a guitar and with a most uplifting melody, drew everyone's attention. Fascinated by their creation, Mohr and Gruber were standing in the choir, neither guessing that this was to become an immortal song.

After the song was finished Mohr and Gruber, poet and composer, stood surrounded by happy parishioners. Deeply moved the two friends shook hands; it had been the most wonderful day of their lives.

Perhaps the most unforgettable performance of this Christmas carol occurred January 5, 1915, during World War I when troops of the German and Austrian Infantry Divisions met.

Both contingents of troops halted, greeted each other and sang, first the Austrians with "Gotterhalte" and then the Germans joining in with "Heil dir im Siegerkranz."

Finally they joined in one great chorus and the solemn words of "Silent Night, Holy Night" rose into the air, blended with the roar and thunder of cannons.

Today, every school child knows the words and melody of the carol and singing stars of radio and television bring its joyous message of Christmas into homes throughout the land. But few know the story of its all but forgotten authors.

The church of St. Nikolaus where "Silent Night" was first heard no longer stands, having been destroyed by the great floods of 1899. Today, the Gruber and Mohr Memorial Chapel stands in its place and the memory of these two great men will be perpetuated through the centuries as the world sings their song each Christmas season.

Space Capsule

A 16mm color movie of the Gemini 4 flight has been made available for public viewing by NASA. A highlight in the film is the famous "walk" in space by Lt. Col. Edward H. White, USAF.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) is proceeding with its series of launches of the Orbiting Geophysical Observatory (OGO) satellites. This program consists of a series of seven flights. Four of the flights will be highly elliptical and three in near-earth polar orbits. The OGO mission is to concentrate on near-earth phenomena. Emphasis will be given to global mapping of the geomagnetic field and on measurements of the neutral, ionic and electron composition of the earth's atmosphere. Data will be correlated with solar, ultraviolet and X-ray emissions, and particle dumping in auroral zones and airglow.

The OGO spacecraft has completed its first year of operation. The 1,200 pound scientific satellite has been brought through this year by the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md. in one of the most unusual "success" stories of the space age. After its launch Sept. 4, 1964, its stay in space was problematical as two of its 13 boom-like appendages failed to deploy as planned. For a time it looked as if the apparatus was out of control. However, a team of experts went to work to develop a contingency operations plan to get as much useful information as possible from the satellite.

Data Required

A telecomputing service has been arranged for the Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md. Emphasis of the procurement, which will run to about $4,000,000, will be put on data required for the operation of the center which handles the heaviest traffic of scientific information on satellites and manned space flight support.

Research Program

To gain a better understanding of the effects of radiation in space and to help protect space travelers from possible ill effects, the Air Force Weapons Laboratory is carrying out a continuing research program. An instrument package constructed after two years of effort by the Laboratory was recently launched into the heart of the Van Allen Belt by a Blue Scout Junior Rocket. Shielding material used was similar to that to be employed in the Apollo space capsule. The package transmitted its information to stations downrange from Cape Kennedy and this information is now being analyzed and evaluated by the Laboratory.

Congressman Visits Post; Makes Airborne Drop Here

U. S. Rep. John O. Marsh, of Virginia is visiting Fort Benning this week for a week of annual military training.

Marsh, a major in the Army Reserve, arrived at The Infantry Center Sunday for the second of a required two weeks of annual training.

The first week (Dec. 5-11) was spent at the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center at Fort Bragg, N.C.

At Fort Benning, Marsh has presented several classes of instruction in his capacity as a Reserve officer; received briefings on new developments in Infantry training; and toured Infantry Hall and the new television facilities for closed circuit television instruction.

He also planned to participate as a grader in the leaders' reaction course and as a counelor for Officers Candidate Class No. 8. Marsh is a 1945 graduate of OCS.

Monday, he received parachute refresher training at Striker Hall and then joined Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School, and Col. Lamar A. Welch director of the Airborne Department of the School, for a parachute jump at Lee Field.

Marsh completed airborne training at The Infantry School last year and in Dec. 1964, at the age of 38, he became the first member of Congress to become airborne qualified at the School.

He selected airborne training instead of two weeks active duty with his National Guard unit, the 2nd Battle Group of the 116th Infantry, known as the "Stonewall Brigade."

Today, Marsh will be the principal speaker at the 11 a.m. gradution exercises in Marshall Auditorium for the Combat Platoon Leaders Course.

Rep. Marsh will depart tomorrow.

Arriving at Fort Benning Monday, Congressman Marsh visited the Airborne Department, took part in the leadership reaction course and spent some time with officer candidates of the 5th Student Battalion.

Marsh, a graduate of the Officer Candidate School here a little over two decades ago, also spoke to Class Number 8 on the opportunities afforded them as young Army officers. He stressed this theme with anecdotes from his own experiences as a candidate and a soldier.

Touring the post with the congressman was Brig. Gen. George I. Forsythe, assistant commandant of The Infantry School.

Being airborne qualified, Congressman Marsh, Forsythe and Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, commandant of the Infantry School made a jump over Lee Field.

Marsh, who now holds the rank of major in the Virginia National Guard (29th Division), received his commission in November 1945. Later he was stationed in Europe where he took part in the Allied Occupation of Germany.

After completing his tour of duty, he returned to the U.S. and entered public service and was elected to congress in 1962.

Helicopters Laying Screens on Assault

Helicopter pilots in Viet Nam are now able to make their own smoke screens to conceal aerial assaults and landings by using a newly developed adaptation kit for standard smoke grenades fired from the XM-3 rocket launcher below the helicopter's downwash. A full load of 288 grenades can lay a thousand-meter-long smoke screen.

PAYMENTS HIGH

Americans were spending an estimated 14 per cent of their disposable incomes on about $60 billion worth of installment debt at mid-1965.

The Aftermath

BY DICK MINNIG

OUR MOTTO "E Pluribus Unum" (out of many, one) has been so ridiculously reversed in the mixed up world of American sport that our eagle might well be hiding its bald head in shame at the next Olympic games in 1968.

Americans have divided sport into the two "never - the - twain - shall - meet" categories of the professional and the amateur. They have made further subdivisions with an organizational skill that would make General Motors blush. This skill has had adverse effects on America's athletic achievements.

The almost fanatical insistence here on the schism between amateur and professional sportsmen rivals in intensity the feeling toward the separation of church and state in government. This insistence has led to the exclusion of some of our top athletes from the Olympic games and other international competitions. The feeling that somehow money smirches has overridden the realization that many of our champions happen to be professional.

Beyond this great sports split lie others in the amateur and professional ranks themselves. Professionals are divided into major leagues, minor leagues, Class A Leagues and Class B leagues, American leagues and National leagues and so on ad infinitum. But since our professionals must unhappily remain primarily a domestic matter, their internal "unum" problems have little effect on the American sports effort abroad.

But it is otherwise in the amateur ranks. Last week's meeting of the American Athletic Union (AAU) in Washington, D. C. highlighted an "unum" difficulty in American amateur athletics that might well be costing us much in sports success.

THE AAU is an organization that was born in 1888 out of arguments then being waged against professionalism. It claims primary responsibility for America's amateur athletes and maintains an almost priestly care over the professional-amateur schism. Along with the U. S. Olympic Committee, it is a main cog in the machinery of American athletic participation abroad.

But for years there has been an annoying friction in the machine which has interrupted smooth operation. This friction has been caused by a long-standing feud between the AAU and the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), a rival track and field organization.

The point of contention between the two groups is the accreditation of America's track and field athletes for participation in U. S. and international events. In the shoot out between the two groups, the first casualties appear to be America's athletes.

Many critics blamed the AAU-NCAA feud for the loss of our men's track and field team to the Soviets in a dual meet last summer.

Realization that the feud was having harmful consequences on our athletes is not new. President Kennedy said at a news conference in December 1962, "Bickering between the two organizations is grossly unfair. There is no winner but there are many losers — thousands of American amateur athletes, the American athletic community and the traditions of American sportsmanship."

Kennedy appointed Gen. Douglas MacArthur to negotiate a truce between the combatants at least until after the 1964 Olympics. The truce held

Marine Wins Clay Pigeon Shoot Here

Bill Abbott of the Marine Corps dropped only seven birds during three days of firing to capture the Clay Pigeon individual championship here over the weekend with a score of 293.

Sp4 Kevin Onka of the Army Marksmanship Training Unit also missed only seven birds but placed second on the strength of the last round when he chopped down 24 to 25 for the winner.

Richard Loffelmacher of the Air Force was third with 289.

In the two-man competition, Abbott teamed with Billy Hicks for a winning total of 578, three birds more than the runnerup Air Force duo of Loffelmacher and Herman Mashburn.

The MTU's high twosome was Onka and Sp4 Gary Simonson who finished third with a 574.

The Air Force won the four-man competition with a total of 762, paced by Loffelmacher's 195 effort.

Onka and Simonson teamed up with PFC Michael Watkins and PFC Chuck Jenson for a total of 748 and second place. Onka had the high individual tally with a 195.

The Marines were third with 739. The three - day match drew a total of 20 entries.

Jenson had the best individual performance when he dropped 99 birds on the third day and became the only man in the meet to knock down this man.

The 197th Brigade Troops and the 39th Transportation Battalion cage teams chalked up victories this week in post basketball competition.

The Troops "close - call" verdict over the 58th Infantry by a 69-67 margin put the 58th deeper into third place behind the league leading 29th Infantry. Meanwhile, the 29th stretched its undefeated record to 10-0 with a forfeit win over the 10th Aviation Group while the second place 39th Transportation Battalion notched a 92 - 61 victory over the 69th Armor and grabbed a forfeit triumph over the 10th Artillery.

For the Brigade Troops, the victory avenged an earlier first half loss to the 58th which copped the initial verdict between the two clubs by a score of 58-55.

Howard Keene's 15 foot jump shot and recovery of a rebound in the last eight seconds of the game for the Troops saved the 69-67 victory.

With less than 30 seconds to go, the Troops held onto the ball biding their time for one last shot. Keene, a forward for the team, brought the curtain down with a 15 foot jumper with eight seconds left and it looked as if the Troops had their victory.

But 58th Infantry guard Buddie Love drew a foul and stepped to the free-throw line in a one and one bonus situation. The shot tottered off the side of the rim and Keene recovered the rebound to seal the triumph.

A tight contest from the start, the 58th and the Brigade Troops contingents had up to eight points leads at various times only to see them dwindle to nothing.

The win for the Troops came after an earlier encounter with the 577th Engineers which saw the 197th squad lead throughout the contest only to sputter away an eight point margin with less than three minutes remaining in dropping a 62-60 decision.

The Troops entry is now in fifth place in the post league.

Keene led all scorers in the 58th encounter with 23 points. Other Troop players hitting double figures were John Bess with 14, Walt Burroughs 13, and Melvin Williams 12.

B. C. Ralston topped the 58th's scoring attack with 22 markers. Leroy Myers added 18, Herman Meek 15 and Buddie Love 10.

Walls, commander of The Student Brigade, for meritorious service in connection with ground operations against a hostile force in Viet Nam during the period Oct. 1964 to Aug. 1965.

SETTLERS FOF AUSTRALIA

CANBERRA — Australia has attracted more new settlers, 140,157, in the year that ended on July 1, than in any year except 1949-50, when Europe was still suffering from the effects of the war, according to a dispatch to The Times, London. Announcing this, the Ministry of Immigration said the Government expected to welcome at least 145,000 settlers in 1965-66. They would include 90,000 assisted migrants of whom 70,000 would be from Britain.

Peacock Gives Elvis Presley Competition

Elvis Presley doesn't ordinarily have to face vocal competition in his movies, but he got it in his new MGM tuner, "Harum Scarum" — from a peacock!

A number of the colorful birds were placed in an Arabian garden set in which Presley sings to a group of harem beauties. One particular peacock became carried away with the song and repeatedly joined in on the chorus.

When a peacock sings, it is more of an eerie shriek than a melody, so director Gene Nelson had to give this one "the bird" and had it replaced by a potted palm.

Army Slates Liberal Leave Policy for DR

SANTO DOMINGO, D.R.— Military officials here have announced a liberal leave policy for the Christmas and New Year's holidays for U.S. troops stationed in the Dominican Republic.

The holiday policy in effect from Dec. 20 through Jan. 7 will permit nearly twice as many soldiers to return to the U.S. for the holiday season as the current leave system.

Under the new policy, provisions have been made for approximately 1540 men to return to the U.S. on seven-day leaves.

There will be two aircraft leaving San Isidro daily from Dec. 20 through Dec 31 excluding Christmas Day. The procedure for obtaining leave under this program remains unchanged from the present system.

The assignment of leave will be determined by the individual sections or units on an allocation basis, Army officials said.

Synopses

RAIDERS FROM BENEATH THE SEAS. . .Ken Scott stars as a daring bank robber and ringleader of a gang of thieves. The plot follows the adventures of four men who plot to rob $250,000 from a bank on Catalina Island. Their bold plan involves using skin - diving equipment and swimming to the island underwater, stealing the money and then disappearing with it into the sea. To them it looks like a perfect crime but they are destined to learn that nothing is perfect and certainly not crime.

SHIP OF FOOLS. . .Stimulating, exciting and compelling, Stanley Kramer has produced a motion picture that is for everybody. Based on the best - selling novel by Katherine Anne Porter, the story traces with humor, insight and irony a variety of situations and people aboard a German passenger freighter ploughing its way from Mexico to Bremerhaven in 1933. SHIP OF FOOLS stars the most spectacular cast of international stars ever assembled in a powerful compassionate study in human folly.

THE REWARD . . . This is an intense study of a manhunt in the desert. The plot centers on $50,000, the sum offered for the capture, dead or alive, of Efrem Zimbalist Jr., who is charged with kidnapping a young boy. Enlisting the aid of police officer Gilbert Roland, Von Sydow sets out on the track down the kidnapper and share the reward money.

THE DISORDERLY ORDERLY. . .Jerry Lewis portrays an eager but bungling hospital orderly more in need of treatment than most of his charges. Lewis becomes hopelessly and haliarously enmeshed in a series of ribtickling situations, each more preposterous than the other. Whether he's setting fire to a patients beard, spilling thousands of pills over hospital corridors or crashing a wheelchair, with patient, into an unbudging tree, it's Lewis forever in trouble and forever funny.

Christmas Theme Coffees Top Brigade Unit's Social Activities

BY ROBIN REINSTEIN

The Ladies of the 58th Infantry met in the home of Mrs. George Powers for their monthly coffee.

A special welcome was extended Mrs. Vernon J. Walters, wife of the new battalion commander. Other newcomers were Mrs. James Snooks, Mrs. L. O. Dover, Mrs. Michael Stull and Mrs. Ronald Bishop.

During the business meeting, Mrs. Snooks was appointed as new publicity chairman. Refreshments were served from a table decorated with evergreen and red candles. Mrs. Albert Alexander assisted with the serving.

The officers presented Boyd with a leather photograph album covering his tenure with the battalion. Also presented was a deep sea rod and reel, with a large fish attached, which was made of cardboard. Mrs. Boyd was presented an engraved silver tray.

The monthly coffee for the ladies of the 29th Infantry was held in the home of Mrs. Max Marx. Assisting as hostesses were Mrs. Carleton Vencill and Mrs. Victor Brown. A Christmas theme was used in decorating and Mrs. Brown made felt Christmas trees lavishly decorated with sequins for each guest.

Newcomers introduced included Mrs. Arthur Bear, Mrs. John Rains, Mrs. John French, Mrs. John Gagne and Mrs. Roger Harms. Farewells were said to Mrs. Melvin Jones.

It was decided the January coffee will be replaced by a trip to a local furniture store for a tour and discussion of the newest trends in home decorating.

The ladies of the 10th Artillery met at the home of Mrs. Robert Butler Dec. 8. Mrs. Michael Malone, wife of the battalion commander, introduced newcomer Mrs. Pat Donovan.

The ladies of the 69th Armor met in the home of Mrs. Arthur Tritsch for their monthly coffee. Co-hostess for the event was Mrs. John Hood. During the business meeting, Mrs. Dale Botkis assumed the duties of treasurer for the group. Congratulations were extended to Mrs. James Flowers on the birth of her daughter Stacy, born Thanksgiving Day.

The next coffee will be held in the home of Mrs. James Ritter with Mrs. Norman Benton assisting.

ADMIRING SANTA . . . An airborne Santa was one of the decoration attractions at the recent Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club Christmas luncheon in the ballroom of the Main Officers' Open Mess. Admiring the "jumping" Santa are Mrs. B. G. Hammer, left, and Mrs. J. D. Stotts.

at governmental urging but now the fight is on again.

THE TWO ORGANIZATIONS have been at each others throats, running rival meets and threatening reprisals against athletes competing in events sanctioned by the other group.

The government, alarmed at America's sinking athletic fortunes recently jumped into the act again. The Senate Commerce Committee, began an investigation of the feud. The investigation yielded a resolution authorizing vice president Hubert Humphrey to set up a five man arbitration panel. Both sides also agreed to a cease fire on reprisals against individual athletes. But even this temporary truce was to be short lived.

Last week at its meeting in Washington, the AAU claimed it alone possesses control over all track and field competition during the Senate controlled moratorium and charged that some NCAA coaches and athletes have been boycotting AAU meets despite the truce.

Clifford Buck, AAU president said, "All open competition must be conducted under the sanction of the appropriate AAU district association and exclusively under the rules and procedures of the AAU as the only duly constituted authority for open competition. No other sanction is required. No other sanction need be accepted."

And of athletes who do not seek or want this sanction, Clifford said they "are not authorized to compete."

Anything but America's athletic fortunes to be at stake in the fight between the two groups whose self-professed aims are the improvement and promotion of athletics among amateurs. A settlement without governmental intervention would have been achieved long ago if the case were otherwise.

At stake seems the perpetuation of an organization for an organization's sake. E pluribus Unum has been reversed here because the primary goal of furthering athletics has been lost in a heirarchical power struggle.

Goals cannot be neglected in the world of athletics or in the world at large because in the words of President Kennedy, then "there is no winner and many losers."

LARGEST GARAGE

The world's largest garage, with 2,700 parking stalls on four levels of seven acres each, was opened recently at San Francisco International Airport. It cost $9.5 million, the Associated Press reports.

FORT BENNING, GEORGIA, HOME OF U.S. ARMY INFANTRY CENTER

VOL. 24, NO. 16 | FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1965 | 28 Pages — 10c

From the CONARC Commander

Seasons greetings:

Christmas, the commemoration of the birth of Christ, is a time to pause and reflect upon the blessings bestowed upon this nation by a wise and generous God, whose Son's birth we honor.

While we enjoy the festive season, we should remember those far from home who fight and serve to preserve the Christian ideals of liberty and justice.

It is fitting as we enter the New Year that we rededicate ourselves to preserving peace through preparedness and defending our nation against those who would destroy it.

Let us all fervently pray, each in his own way and according to his own belief, that the heritage of freedom, passed to us by our forefathers, will be graced with peace as we pass it on to those who follow.

Paul L. Freeman Jr.
General, United States Army
Commanding

From the Chief of Staff of the Army

Throughout the world, Christmas is a time for rejoicing and renewed hope, as men are inspired anew with the universal message of peace and good will. Today, as almost two thousand years ago when the joyous news was first proclaimed, Christmas expresses the yearning of men everywhere for peace, for freedom, for individual dignity.

Many of you are serving far from home and your loved ones at outposts along the frontiers of freedom. For those of you in Viet Nam, this Christmas will be an especially hard one. But wherever you are serving, you may be proud in knowing that your achievements are contributing to the preservation of freedom. Our nation and free men in every corner of the world look upon your selfless service with a deep sense of gratitude and pride.

To all members of the United States Army, both military and civilian, and to your families, I extend my personal best wishes for a most Blessed Christmas. As we enter the New Year, let us renew our faith in the ideals of this holy season and rekindle our hope that the inspiring light of these ideals will prevail over the forces of darkness and ultimately bring peace with freedom and dignity to all mankind.

Harold K. Johnson
General, USA

From the Secretary of the Army

As Christmas of 1965 is observed throughout the world, I wish to extend warmest greetings to all the men and women, military and civilian, of the Army, and to their families.

The Christmas season is a time to reaffirm that good will toward men and peace on earth are the highest aims of mankind. Through your service you are making a major contribution toward reaching these goals. You deserve and are receiving the gratitude and support of your countrymen.

Our nation is deeply committed to what President Johnson has called "man's age-old struggle for a better life and a world of peace." You may take justifiable pride and satisfaction in the part you are playing in reaching this great goal. Your efforts guarantee that freedom and the better life which accompanies it are enjoyed by hundreds of millions of your fellow men.

Your performance of duty in posts at home and outposts abroad is extending the American tradition of service to the nation. With personal pride in your accomplishments, I extend to each of you best wishes for the holiday season and the New Year.

Stanley R. Resor

From the Fort Benning Commander

I would like to extend Holiday greetings to all Fort Benning personnel and to our many friends in the Columbus-Phenix City area.

With so many of our comrades, friends and neighbors serving in distant lands this year, I earnestly hope each of you will devote thought and prayer to their safety and to the true spirit of Christmas: good will, charity and peace for all mankind.

Mrs. York joins me in the sincere wish that each of you will have a very merry Christmas and a New Year filled with happiness.

Robert H. York
Major General, USA
Commanding

From the Commander-in-Chief

This is a season of hope and rejoicing as we celebrate the birth of the Prince of Peace. It is a time for renewing ties of brotherhood with all men of good will, everywhere on earth.

Our thoughts are especially with the man and woman in uniform. We ask that you may enjoy a full measure of this season's happiness. Far from your home and loved ones, you make it possible for all the rest of us to enjoy more fully the meaning of Christmas. For your sacrifice we are forever indebted.

We grieve for those who have made the supreme sacrifice, for those who bear wounds for freedom's sake, and for their families.

We rededicate ourselves in this season of good will to the ultimate promise of peace made 2,000 years ago. To fulfill that hope remains our urgent quest.

Lyndon B. Johnson

From the Secretary of Defense

On this holiday, celebrated throughout the Christian world there is good cause for all men to pause and rededicate ourselves to "Peace on earth, goodwill toward men."

On behalf of the Department of Defense I wish for all of you and your families the joy and blessings of Christmas and health and prosperity for the coming year. May 1966 be a year in which the world moves closer to peace.

Robert S. McNamara

From the Third Army Commander

To all members of the Third U.S. Army:

With approach of Christmas and the New Year, I extend my warmest best wishes for a joyous holiday season to all members of the Third U.S. Army, and to your families.

As the old year ends, I wish to express my appreciation for your outstanding performance of duty during 1965, and to wish you a New Year of happiness and success.

Louis W. Truman
Lieutenant General, USA
Commanding

United Givers Drive Ends Here; Benning Tops Goal by $36,386

Training Unit Donors Swamp Kimbro Clinic

A blood donor drive at the Army Training Center Saturday was so popular that donors had to be turned away due to a lack of space in Kimbro Gymnasium.

Training Center officials said the Red Cross also reported that it had run out of containers to receive blood donations.

First Lt. Joseph Noto, project officer for the drive, said over 600 units of whole blood were given, adding that Red Cross officials were not prepared for such an onslaught of donors.

Company C, 9th Battalion of the Training Center's 2nd Brigade appeared at Kimbro Gym with 100 per cent of its company number who were eligible to give blood.

A request for donors had been made to the troops of Company C and the entire company to a man answered the call. Officials said a few had to be turned down because they were under age.

According to Company C officials, no special incentives were offered to the men and the response was strictly voluntary. The company had to be transported to Kimbro Gym in three shifts to prevent overcrowding.

The first donor from Company C was Pvt. Robert Copeland of Norfolk, Va. Copeland is a 1965 graduate of the Norfolk Division of Virginia State College. He has a degree in sociology.

Company C is commanded by 1st Lt. Larry G. Vacek. The first sergeant is William E. Higgins and the senior drill sergeant is SFC R. C. Wright.

Fund Drive Leaders Praise Contributors' Generosity

Donating $36,386 over its established goal of $60,000, Fort Benning officially brought the United Givers Fund Drive to a close on Monday after two months of campaigning.

The total Fort Benning donation, $96,386, helped the local United Givers Fund Drive exceed its goal of $718,644. It represented 160.6 per cent of the established goal for post soldiers and civilians.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, presented a $69,000 check to James A. Byars, vice-chairman of the local drive, on Dec. 14. This was followed by a $27,338.79 check presented by Col. Earl F. Holton, the post UG Drive chairman, on Dec. 17.

Lt. Col. Harrison A. Morley, post project officer for the drive, predicted late donations will push the Fort Benning total over $100,000.

Praises Spirit

In praising the outstanding spirit with which post military and civilian personnel responded to the fund drive, Morley said that everyone has reason "to be proud of this achievement."

He also thanked "the drive captains and keymen who gave so freely of their time and energy.

"In keeping with the spirit of the season," he added, "I am sure each contributor shares with me the heart-warming knowledge that we have helped to fill the outstretched hand of some needy person."

The Fort Benning drive was officially kicked off Oct. 20 at Theater No. 1 with a meeting for commanders, drive captains and keymen. At the meeting, Gen. York stressed full participation and the fact that the ensuing drive was important business.

Agencies Visited

Throughout the drive, Benning personnel visited many of the 27 agencies which benefit from post contributions. These included the local Cerebral Palsy Clinic, Armed Services YMCA, Columbus boys and girls clubs, Salvation Army, Red Cross and School for Retarded Children.

These tours were arranged by post and local United Givers officials. Miss Mary Young, UG tour director, led 16 such tours for Benning personnel during the past two months.

United Givers is a local, non-profit organization. It was organized in 1951 for united community action toward eliminating a multitude of fund raising campaigns and effectively financing civic health, welfare and youth services.

Certification

This year, for the first time, each recipient agency of Fort Benning donations had to certify in writing that

Congressional Visitor Honored By OCS; Visits Training Center

Rep. John O. Marsh, congressman from Virginia and national guard major, last week was installed in the Infantry officer's hall of fame and toured the Army Training Center where he spoke to the trainees and met his next door neighbor.

In the Wigle Hall ceremonies Marsh was presented with a certificate of honor as the congressman's picture was unveiled among those of other distinguished graduates of the Officer Candidate School.

Marsh graduated from OCS on November 14, 1945 and subsequently served with the occupational forces in Germany. He is now a member of the 29th Infantry Division, Virginia National Guard.

In accepting the certificate of honor Marsh remarked that the training he received in OCS played a significant part in his success in later life.

The Infantry officers hall of fame was conceived in the late summer of 1957 with the purpose of honoring those graduates who had distinguished themselves in either military or civilian life.

The building was officially dedicated on June 21, 1958 in honor of 2nd Lt. Thomas W. Wigle, a graduate of the OCS program who distinguished himself in action at Monte Frassino, Italy on Sept. 14, 1944, for which he was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

The hall of fame now has 214 distinguished members including 14 who have been the recipient of our nation's highest award, the Medal of Honor.

To be eligible for nomination to the hall of fame, the nominee must either be the recipient of the Medal of Honor, been elected or appointed to an office of national prominence, or have attained the grade of colonel while serving on active duty.

Marsh also visited the U. S. Army Training Center last week. He met with Col. Bob Edwards, Training Center commander and inspected ATC facilities.

While there Marsh spoke to the trainees of the 3rd, 4th and 7th Battalions.

After his speech he went into the audience and spoke to trainees of his home state.

It was during one of these informal talks that he had the opportunity to meet and speak to Pvt. Edward L. (Buster) Smoot.

Smoot is the Congressman's next door neighbor in LA THANH, Viet Nam — More than 2700 Vietnamese citizens were freed from Viet Cong control by soldiers of the 1st Cavalry Division in the Plei Me-Pleiku region.

Weary and hungry but relieved by their freedom, masses of refugees were airlifted out of the former Viet Cong stronghold in Army helicopters and transported to the newly established refugee village of La Thanh, 20 miles southwest of Pleiku.

Scores of refugees were provided food and medical assistance, and most important, an opportunity to begin a new and different way of life.

Supervising the project was the 1st Airborne Brigade's Intelligence officer, Maj. Wilmot A. Hall.

Silver Star Tops Awards Ceremony

A Silver Star for gallantry in action presented to a Columbus officer headed the list of 30 decorations presented to 25 military personnel in ceremonies on Fort Benning's York Field Dec. 15.

Lt. Col. Alton E. Park was cited for action on May 11 while serving as senior adviser to Phuoc Long Province in the Republic of Viet Nam.

Under intense mortar, artillery and small arms fire, he moved across open ground giving advice at one foxhole after another, the medal's citation read. After suffering two wounds, he was shot in the back and left by the Viet Cong for dead, it continued.

Col. Park remained in command as long as he was conscious, alerting his personnel to a Viet Cong ambush and preventing the loss of several aircraft and their crews, according to reports.

Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Infantry Center commanding general, pinned the Silver Star on Col Park's uniform.

Other decorations for heroism in Viet Nam went to Capt. Willard C. Conley who received a Bronze Star Medal with V Device for valor; Capt. Robert F. Dansby Jr., first oak leaf cluster to the Bronze Star with V Device for valor; and Maj. Richard S. Jarrett, Air Medal, 18th and 19th oak leaf cluster and Army Commendation Medal with V Device for valor.

Gen. York presented a Legion of Merit for meritorious service to Lt. Col. George J. Magner and CWO Oscar K. Weinmeister and a Legion of Merit, Air Medal and first oak leaf cluster to the Air Medal to Lt. Col. Arthur E. Lomax.

The first oak leaf cluster o the Bronze Star Medal was awarded to Maj. George W. Martin, Maj. George M. Osborne, Maj. Charles F. Logan and Capt. Charles T. Laws.

Receiving the Bronze Star Medal were Maj. Edward B. Benedit, Capt. James F. MacGill, Capt. Marcus J. Humble, Capt. Walter R. Bishop and Capt. Billy C. Brown.

Postal Superintendent Is Retired After 43 Years

Fort Benning's postal branch superintendent, Robert P. Richardson, retired last week with high praise for his 43 years of "exceptional service." He spent 35 of them with the Fort Benning branch.

For his retirement, an honor ceremony was held Friday at the Fort Benning post office. During the ceremony he received a citation and an honorary recognition certificate from the Postmaster General, Lawrence E. O'Brien.

The citation read: "...You have been faithful, conscientious and efficient in your position through many years of service. Yours has been an exceptional service since you have represented the Post Office Department to military personnel who are assigned to all countries of the world.

"I know that the realization of a job well done will bring you many happy memories. You contributed much to the Postal Service and the Department will miss you.

"I wish to extend my personal greetings and hope you will accept the honorary recognition certificate as a symbol of my deep appreciation for your lifetime of truly commendable service."

Fellow employes presented gifts which included a United States Savings Bond.

Mr. W. R. Mathews, assistant postmaster, presented the awards.

The Surgeon says:

'Recreation important adjunct of medicine'

Recreation is being more widely recognized as essential for everyone. If we are to live well-rounded, healthful lives, we need to learn to make the proper balance between work and recreation as either can be overdone.

In our busy work-a-day world, which is often referred to as "the age of anxiety," it is becoming more and more necessary for us to balance refreshing relaxation with our daily toil and anxieties. Recreation is assuming greater importance than ever before.

The effect of anxiety on all ages is now recognized. There is hardly a parent, teacher or social worker who cannot cite from personal experiences examples of persons torn by deep-seated anxieties.

The value of recreation lies in helping people to relax and the need for finding recreational outlets needs occasional emphasis. Medical practice has long appreciated the role of rest and relaxation in rehabilitating the sick mind and body.

As medical science develops ways of increasing the average life span, the need increases for more meaningful and zestful relaxation for everyone. Recreation has much to contribute, not only in rehabilitating the ill but in preserving wholesome physical and mental health in those who are not ill. Recreation is indeed an important adjunct to medicine.

Formerly there was a tendency to think of recreation chiefly in terms of competitive sports or strenuous activities, pursuits which win contests and develop big muscles.

Participation in this kind of activity is principally for the younger people. As the body progresses toward greater maturity, strenuous exercise is not recommended. Indeed, it can be quite dangerous.

Fortunately, the concept is changing. The scope of recreation is broadening to include many activities which may be undertaken by an individual or a small group.

In reality, any activity which is not harmful to the individual or to others can be recreational if it is "an experience providing immediate and inherent satisfactions to those who voluntarily participate in an activity."

Occasionally, hobbies have opened up to individuals new vocational opportunities. Especially important are recreational pursuits for older people. These interests should be developed before retirement from the work to which they may have devoted 30 or 40 years.

All kinds of personality problems, organic ills, intellectual deterioration and moral problems can develop in elderly persons who have come suddenly to the point of retirement without having developed a philosophy of true healthy relaxation and the enjoyment of creative use of leisure time.

The importance of recreation as a medical adjunct has been firmly established. Recreation has been called the adult's "safety valve for pent up emotional pressures and hidden fears."

Never underestimate its helpful and salubrious powers. Recreation must be considered as a part of a preventive social and medical approach to the daily life of every individual.

'Peace on earth, good will toward men'

Santa Claus comes to most of us but once a year and by the time the 25th rolls around we breathe a sigh of relief and say "thank goodness."

Unfortunately the idea of Santa seems to have clouded the other idea of Christmas—the idea of a Christ child who came to atone for the sins of the world.

The Messiah, the great deliverer expected by the people of his time, came into the world as a child bearing a message of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

Today and tomorrow as Infantrymen and soldiers, let us all pause and pray in our own way for "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

Let us remember the supreme sacrifice that is being made by many of our comrades-at-arms for the peace and security of a small Southeast Asian nation and in turn for the whole of Asia and the free world.

All the Santa Clauses in the world will not return those who have died . . . nor will they prevent death in Viet Nam.

But perhaps a prayer from one who has forgotten how to pray as well as from one with long practice at this art can bring us closer to the eternal idea of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

May our prayers guide the soldiers in the front lines as well as the leaders who seek a solution to conflict and war.

"Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men" —our prayer of hope — hope for all of us, hope for a younger generation, hope for the future of our civilization.

Hopefully there will come a day of peace—a time when everyone can and will rejoice in the Christian ideals of faith, hope and charity.

Christmas comes but once a year but its ideals are worthy of remembrance all year.

'The Point of the Spear'

"It's most cautious to most responsibilities we must continue to have a strong economy and a sound dollar and a strong Free World and we do that we cannot a strong army today is the point of the spear."

JOHN F. KENNEDY
35th President

The Judge Says . . .

'The law seems harsh in cases with automobiles'

Perhaps one of the most dangerous instrumentalities today is the automobile.

Because of the automobile's propensity to do harm when not properly used, the law governing its use and manner of employment has grown to tremendous proportions.

Generally, a person is liable for the damage he does by improperly using his automobile. This is true whether the damage is done to the property or person of another.

By "improperly" is meant that if a person negligently drives his vehicle and causes damage to another person, the driver will be held liable.

The idea of "negligence" in our law is very cold and many things which would not at a glance be considered negligent are negligence in the eyes of the law.

As an example of just how far the law has gone in this area, some states have held the owner of an automobile liable when he left the keys in his car and a thief stole the car and hit a pedestrian. The courts have ruled the owner was negligent by leaving his keys in the ignition.

Another area where the law has gone far to protect the public from misuse of the automobile is in the misuse of an automobile by a person other than the owner.

An example of this would be the situation when a person loans his car to a person who is intoxicated. If the intoxicated borrower has an accident with the car and causes personal or property damage to a third person, the owner of the car will be held responsible for the damages sustained.

Once again the law reasons that a person who loans his car to one who is intoxicated is negligent and is obviously putting a dangerous instrument in the hands of a person not capable of controlling it.

A third area which gives rise to liability is the area termed by the law as the "family car." In most cases where an automobile is used frequently by members of the family, the law will hold the owner, who is usually the husband or father, liable for its negligent use.

This means the husband or father will be liable for any personal or property damage caused by a member of the family.

The law is harsh on those who do not exercise care to insure that their automobile is used properly.

It is the position of the law that if a person is willing to so disregard the rights of other people by misuse of his automobile, then the courts will see to it that the public is protected.

Christmas Around the World

The Customs of Christmas Are Varied Everywhere; Every Country Celebrates the Feast Differently

NEW YORK — Skiing down a mountain with a lighted torch in your hand, strewing hay on the floor of your home, knocking on neighbors' doors in a symbolic pilgrimage, these are some of the ways you might find yourself celebrating Christmas in other parts of the world.

In token of Christ's birth in a manger, Poles spread hay on the floor and Lithuanians have straw under the tablecloth at their festive Christmas Eve meal.

The colorful Mexican posada or pilgrimage dramatizes the search which led Mary and Joseph to the stable. For each of the nine nights before Christmas, a couple dressed as Mary and Joseph goes from house to house. Only at the last house are they — and the parade of neighbors which is now following them — invited in for supper.

Novel Procession

An even more novel procession may be seen in the mountains of Austria.

According to researchers who have been collecting material on foreign Christmases, wood carvers in the little town of Oberammergau meet on Christmas Eve and ski down the mountain slopes with flaming torches in their hands, singing as they go!

Just about every country which celebrates Christmas has its unique bit of seasonal folklore or ritual. In Sweden, it's the feast of St. Lucia on Dec. 13, ushering in the Christmas season. Each community chooses a Lucia Queen to represent the young girl martyred for her religion centuries before in ancient Rome.

In families with daughters, the prettiest plays the role of Lucia. Her "privilege:" to wait on everyone else for the day!

But even the standard holiday features — Christmas dinner, Christmas presents and Yuletide decorations — have picturesque local variations.

Not only does Santa have numerous aliases (he's Julenissen in Denmark, Pere Noel in France, the Abbot of Unreason in Scotland), but in Italy HE is a SHE.

Italian kids place their trust in Befana, and old woman on a broomstick who brings gifts to good children and ashes to bad ones. (In older versions of the legend, she ate the juvenile delinquents).

Americans Champions

Americans are probably the champion gift givers, spending more than $27 billion for Christmas presents in a recent year, according to one survey.

But the bearded gent — and his counterparts in other countries — are kept busy. In many lands, they must make two trips a season.

The French exchange gifts on New Year's Day but the impatient young fry are visited by Pere Noel on Christmas Eve.

While waiting for Befana to come across on Jan. 6, Italian kids and their elders draw small gifts on Christmas Eve from a jar called "the urn of fate."

Leave it to the systematic British to establish Dec. 26 as Boxing Day. On this pugilistic-sounding occasion, servants and tradespeople are remembered with boxes of money!

Big Dinners

The date of the big Christmas dinner also varies around the world; many countries have it on Christmas Eve, before or after midnight services. Our traditional Christmas turkey does not appear on many menus.

The French "reveillon," a feast which occurs after midnight mass, is apt to feature oysters and sausages; in the French province of Brittany, buckwheat cakes with sour cream are served.

The Norwegian Christmas dinner features a fish called 'lutfisk.' At a Polish Christmas Eve dinner, the number of courses is fixed at seven, nine or eleven; a Lithuanian Christmas feast must include twelve courses, one for each of the twelve disciples!

During the Christmas season, Germans and Rumanians bake long, thin cakes that symboize the Christ child wrapped in swaddling clothes.

In the Ukrainian part of Russia, cattle are given the first taste of the Christmas supper because animals were the first to behold Christ.

In parts of rural Germany, this is carried one step further — cattle and their owners both fast the day before Christmas and eat well on Christmas Eve!

"Deck the halls with boughs of holly" is a traditional refrain in English and American homes but in Spain and Italy householders decorate with flowers instead of evergreens at Christmas time.

Trees Are Popular

The Christmas tree, popular throughout the United States and Northern Europe, is relatively rare in Southern Europe; the creche, or manger scene, usually replaces it.

In Sicily, many families use Christmas trees but they decorate them with apples and oranges instead of tinsel! This carries out an old tradition that all the trees bore fruit when Christ was born.

In England and France, the Yule log is favored; in some districts of England, whole families go to the forest to select their Yule log. Pear, olive and applewood are considered best and tradition says that the log must be large enough to last until New Year's Day.

Perhaps the most unusual Christmas tradition of all is the one still adhered to by some Swiss romantics. These folk advise a boy or girl to visit nine different fountains and take three sips from each at the time the bells are ringing for midnight services on Christmas Eve. After this odd rite has been completed, the future husband or wife will be found standing at the door of the church and a regular courtship will begin — if the spell has worked.

We'll still take mistletoe!

Special Books Featured Here By Libraries

Fort Benning's Special Services libraries are featuring reading materials and displays on Viet Nam.

Last week at the Main Post Library, Capt. Roger Donlon, Viet Nam Medal of Honor winner and coauthor of the book "Outpost of Freedom," was on hand to open a display of works on Viet Nam and the American participation there.

The display will be in the library for the next several weeks, according to Miss Virginia Hollowell, chief librarian. Next, the display will travel to PXs and other points on the post and perhaps even into the Columbus community, she added.

Themes of the Viet Nam display include "The Land and The People," the "Books Available" at the library on the subject and "The Participants" in the war who were formerly stationed here. Patches representing units serving there are displayed in one area.

Maps of the area also provide a large segment of the display, Miss Hollowell added.

TV Sought For U.S. Troops In Viet Nam

WASHINGTON — Television may be coming to Viet Nam for the first time.

Although officials refuse to comment, there are reports that consideration is being given to establishing an Armed Forces television station in the war area. Radio programs have been broadcast for the troops there for some time.

One of the main problems in establishing TV is the matter of receivers. They are much more expensive than radios and they don't have the same portability.

Presumably they could be put in the USO, service clubs and day rooms to serve large numbers of people. However, there are indications that the exchanges may carry sets for individuals as well.

REENLISTMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Vacancies exist in the general maintenance field for individuals with less than four years service for pay. This field includes the maintenance and repair of instruments (optical and mechanical) and electrical elements used for photography, antiaircraft artillery remote control and related fields.

OCS Applicants Assured of Delay In Transfers During Consideration

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Soldiers applying for OCS will not be sent overseas or moved to another stateside location or assignment until they have been notified of selection or non - selection for officer training.

The new assignment policy, as spelled out in change 7 to AR 350-50, exempts officer candidate applicants even from Viet Nam assignment, officials told Army Times last week.

The Army's need for qualified junior officers is critical.

The new assignment policy does not, however, apply to OCS applicants in overseas areas. The Army points out that they are subject to reassignment — either to the U. S. or to another oversea location — right up to the date they are notified of selection or rejection.

Once an oversea applicant has been informed of his selection, he's immediately shipped back to the states to start officer training.

So that the Army won't lose any potential officer candidates, applicants will be kept at current home station until selection or rejection for OCS. Once a soldier has received his OCS rejection notice, he will be reported to DA for assignment instructions, but not before then.

The regulation does not exempt all OCS applicants from overseas or new station assignment. Only those applicants who attain a composite score (115 on the OC Test and 110 on the General Technical Aptitude area) above the OCS selection cutoff score will be automatically exempted from transfer.

The exemption covers all soldiers who are alerted — either individually or as members of a unit — after OCS selection.

The Army considers an applicant any enlisted man or warrant officer whose application for officer training has been received by his or her immediate commanding officer.

Once a candidate has been selected for officer training, processing will go in accordance with AR 350-50, officials said. Applicants who fail selection will be subject to reassignment.

In those cases where the non - selected applicant's unit has been alerted for deployment, and time permits, "He will deploy with the unit," the Army said.

Soldiers who apply for officer training following completion of advanced individual training will be removed from AIT status to assigned status but remain at their AIT training installation.

Replacements at An Khe Paid Almost Immediately

AN KHE, Viet Nam — No matter what time newly assigned troopers arrive at the Replacement Detachment, the men in SSgt. Richard Marchetti's Pay and Travel Section will see that all incoming soldiers to the 1st Cavalry Division are paid in full the same day.

Often this means working until well after midnight, but according to Marchetti, the fourteen men in his section can handle it.

"My men go all out," said Marchetti. "Each man takes a personal interest in the man he's working for."

Paid in Hours

Marchetti added that although the incoming replacements often don't arrive until three or four in the afternoon, they get paid that same evening and they're usually surprised at the quick service.

"Most of them can't believe it; they've flown halfway around the world, been moved through a half-dozen receiving points, and traveled by plane, bus, truck and by foot, then suddenly somebody sits them down and an hour later they get their money."

"Usually they have accrued quite a lot, sometimes as much as a thousand dollars," he said. "We explain that there aren't many places to spend it over here; most of them buy money orders and send the money home."

Replacements Arrive

Often the replacements arriving are just out of advanced training and have departed their last assignment only three or four days earlier. Sometimes they have no records and not enough copies of their orders to cover the needs that the Finance Office requires.

"We make them temporary records or type true copies of their orders," said Marchetti. "We get them paid every time and they don't have to come back to fill out additional papers."

When large groups come in, Marchetti sits them down on a 35 foot earthen sill adjacent to his tent (he refers to it as his "patio") and conducts a brief class on properly filling out the necessary forms.

When the incoming soldiers are newcomers to the Army, they are usually surprised to find out that their pay has doubled.

"They forget to add both combat and overseas pay; when they left the states, they were making less than 100 dollars a month, now suddenly they're drawing almost 200. It's a big change and they have a hard time believing it."

Our holiday would not be complete if we didn't announce our greeting and thanks to all our friends and patrons.

GAYLORDS

One solitary life

Author Unknown

Here was a man born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman.

He grew up in another obscure village.

He worked in a carpenter shop until He was thirty, and then for three years He was an itinerant preacher.

He never wrote a book.

He never held an office.

He never owned a home.

He never had a family.

He never went to college.

He never put his foot inside a big city.

He never traveled 200 miles from the place where He was born.

He never did one of the things that usually accompany greatness.

He had no credentials but Himself. He had nothing to do with this world except the naked power of His divine manhood.

While still a young man, the tide of popular opinion turned against Him.

His friends ran away.

One of them denied Him.

He was turned over to His enemies.

He went through the mockery of a trial.

He was nailed to a cross between two thieves.

His executioners gambled for the only piece of property He had on earth while He was dying — and that was His coat!

When He was dead He was taken down and layed in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone and today He is the centerpiece of the human race and the leader of the column of progress. I am far within the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched . . . and all the navies that ever were built . . . and all the parliaments that ever sat . . . and all the kings that ever reigned put together have not affected the life of a man upon this earth as powerfully as has that . . . GI Coordinates Scout Activity Here at Post

STORY AND PHOTOS BY SFC AVERY WEBBER

For better than a year now a soldier at Fort Benning has been interchanging his Army greens with Boy Scout brown and soon will put on the Boy Scout uniform full time.

On the eve of the completion of his military obligation, Sp4 Wallace Earl Taylor has been receiving numerous awards and compliments for his service and achievements as scouting coordinator for the Fort Benning District of the Boy Scouts of America.

A member of Headquarters Company of the 197th Infantry Brigade, Taylor has served in this position for more than a year. He is due to leave the service February 19th.

Col. Richard J. O'Neill of the Company Tactics Department, The Infantry School, says of Taylor, "During my tenure as Boy Scout district chairman for Fort Benning, Specialist Taylor . . . has labored hard and he has done a superb job. He is dedicated to the enhancement of the scouting program. We are indeed most fortunate to have a soldier of his talents about whom scouting on this post revolves."

Enthusiastic

"Taylor is one of the most enthusiastic men toward the. . .program I've ever met. He is the best thing that has ever happened to the Fort Benning scout district," said Maj. Lemuel M. Thomas, a unit scout leader.

In recognition of his work with the scouts, Taylor recently received the Arrowhead Honor Award for the completion of special training for commissioners. He also was presented a plaque and certificate for his success in recruiting boys into the scout program.

Additionally, for his work in character building, citizenship training and physical fitness, he was awarded the Distinguished Leadership Citation and a scout statuette from the Chattahoochee Boy Scout Council.

13 Years in Scouting

During his 13 years in scouting, Taylor has also earned the Scout Training Award, one of scouting's highest honors.

A trained professional scouter, Taylor described his experience with the scouts at Fort Benning in this way: "I consider it a privilege to have had the opportunity to work with the scouts and to add continuity to the program."

As post scouting coordinator, Taylor is responsible for arranging and organizing trips to outlying areas for Fort Benning scouts and for setting up tours for neighboring scout units desiring to visit the post. This included arranging for billeting and food and coordinating with other agencies to make the tours a worthwhile experience.

Additionally, he maintains records and files of the various activities of the Fort Benning District. This includes keeping a number of charts on such activities as leadership training, assignments, goals, enrollment and health.

Scouting Literature

He also procured up-to-date scouting literature from which he prepared handouts; conducted recurring briefings for unit leaders; and handled supply and budgeting matters for the district.

In addition to his responsibilities as post scouting coordinator, he found time to be advisor to Explorer Post 54, consisting of 30 teen-agers. Post 54, incidentally, is one of Fort Benning's most active scouting units.

Basic at Ft. Jackson

Taylor entered the Army Feb. 20, 1964 and took his basic training at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Upon completion of basic, he took an advance leadership course at Fort Gordon, Ga., where he remained as a cadreman for four months to assist in training recruits.

Prior to entering the Army, he was the assistant district scout executive in the north - shore area of Long Island, N. Y. Before taking this job, he attended a 45 day training course for scout executives at Mendham, N. J.

Taylor is a graduate of Salem College, Salem, W. Va. He majored in human relations. Undecided as to the exact places, Taylor plans to continue his career with the Boy Scouts of America.

Army Buys 100,000 M-16 Rifles for '66

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON—The Army made a hard choice last week — it ordered 100,000 new M-16 rifles.

The contract calling for a $115 price tag on each of the lightweight 5.56mm rifles, specifies that all of the weapons be delivered between May 1966 and December 1966.

The Army had been hoping to postpone purchase of additional rifles until a small arms weapons study of "all available weapons" is complete.

Examining M-16

The field study group is examining the M-16, the highly publicized but experimental dart - shooting special purpose individual weapon and several other rifles, plus current doctrine and ideas on the use of rifles.

However, it has been apparent for some time that the Viet Nam war was outrunning the study.

The Army is getting bigger, there are men in combat and the Army was faced with a decision to either buy the M-16s, reissue War II M-1 Garand rifles or activate the shut-down M-14 production line.

Since reactivation of the M-14 production line was considered prohibitatively expensive except for a major war, and reissue of the War II Garand would likely have been a politically torrid issue, the purchase of the M-16 was the only course open.

1st Cav Issue

The M-16 — official Army designation is XM-16E1 — is already in Viet Nam combat use. Some 86,000 of the rifles were purchased from Colt two years ago and have been distributed to the 1st Cavalry Division airborne and Special Forces soldiers.

The weapon weighs about six pounds, can be fired automatically, has a 20-round magazine and is easily taken apart for cleaning and repairing.

Viet Nam reports on the M-16 and the 7.62mm M-14 rifle are good with the only adverse comments on the M-14 being that it is too large and too heavy for jungle use.

Limits of U.S. Objective in Viet Nam War Stated

United States bombing of North Viet Nam is designed to attack lines of communication over which North Vietnamese are infiltrating men and equipment into the South.

"I believe we should continue to emphasize that objective," Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said upon return to the United States from the RVN. He noted the U.S. has a limited objective in South Viet Nam and restated:

"Our objective is not to destroy the Communist regime in North Viet Nam. Our objective is to destroy the insurgency movement in South Viet Nam, destroy the Viet Cong who are seeking to take away the independence of this nation. Our objective, therefore, is to preserve the independence of the nation."

The Secretary continued, "It is our plan, however, to both achieve the independence of this nation (RVN), or help it achieve its independence and help preserve it, whatever that may require.

"We do not seek to widen the war or extend the area of conflict," he added, "and that is why to date we have not bombed Haiphong harbor."

Italian Policewomen To Wear New Attire

ROME (AP) — The Chamber of Deputies in Parliament has ordered policewomen to go on duty in fashionable attire instead of in uniform. Quick action by the Senate is expected.

No one is happier about the act than the policewomen, most of whom are young and pretty.

Many had blamed the uniform for keeping the women's police force below strength since it was organized five years ago.

Besides flat heels, the uniform consisted of a high-buttoned shirt and a calf-length skirt.

Wreck Yields 16th Century Spanish Gold

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Two Bermuda divers exploring a centuries-old Spanish wreck have found a 39-ounce gold-bar believed to have been made in the 16th century in the reign of King Philip II of Spain, the Bermuda News Bureau reported recently.

It said the bar might be worth $40,000.

The divers were Teddy Tucker and Bob Canton.

The news bureau said the bar bore the royal stamp of King Philip, who ruled Spain from 1556 to 1598, and had an assayer's "chip" at one end. The "chip" was used to determine the bar's purity.

The report said that according to Mendel Patterson, curator of armed forces history at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, the bar was the only complete one ever discovered that was made in the New World in the mid-1500s.

To The Members of the U.S. Armed Forces Serving in Viet Nam, and Their Families:

As we members of 50th Company (OC), are about to leave to rejoin our families and loved ones for the Holiday Season, we cannot help but remember that there are many men who, because of their beliefs, and their willingness to sacrifice in order to defend these beliefs, will not be with their families this Christmas. We are also remembering the many families of these men who are also making great sacrifices. It is to these people who must share a great portion of the burden of a nation at partial war, and unfortunately, in many cases shoulder this burden alone, that we wish to express our gratitude and our great feelings of pride to have these people as neighbors, friends and fellow Americans.

It is one thing to say that we are all loyal and willing to sacrifice for our beliefs, but when the real trial comes, many we find unfortunately, are not quite as willing to suffer hardships, continue in the face of setbacks, unhappiness and the loss of those dear to them, as when words would suffice rather than actions.

It is still another when people such as the members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their families, can in the face of innumerable hardships, loss of loved ones, and so many uncertainties, still remain firm in their beliefs, still remain determined to defend those beliefs, while asking for nothing, but the rapid and safe return of their loved ones. We feel that all too often these people, who are giving so much, are forgotten, or at the least taken for granted.

And now, during this Christmas Season, it is our united prayer that these people might find solace in the true meaning of Christmas. That the Spirit of Christmas might rekindle the flame of hope that peace may soon reign on earth. We pledge ourselves to the remembrance of people such as these, and to forever strive to show or express the great amount of pride we have for these people.

It is our sincere desire that this Yuletide Season might be a joyous one despite the circumstances surrounding it. Let us continue to be conscious of our responsibilities and strive in the coming months to assure that next Christmas we are all with our loved ones.

Civil Affairs Attempting to Win Vietnamese People Through Help

From The Army Times

SAIGON, Viet Nam — The road from Tan Son Nhut to the Tong Thein Orphanage was jammed with the usual early-morning crush of vehicles, pedestrians and cycles as PFC Walt Bosarge, driving a three-quarter-ton truck, carefully wended his way along the bumpy thoroughfare.

With him in the truck were 2nd Lt. Stanley J. Debeck, SSgt. Jim Broks, Cpl. Tom Kisner and Sp5 Wesley K. Young, all of the 90th Replacement Battalion at Tan Son Nhut's Camp Alpha.

They were on their way to fight a war, one which top military and civilian leaders say is the war that must be won before any solution is possible in Viet Nam. It's the war for the minds and hearts of the Vietnamese people — and it's being waged as relentlessly as any part of the conflict.

Orphanage Sponsored

The Camp Alpha contingent was just one of hundreds going forth this day to wage the quiet, unspectacular war to win the people.

Camp Alpha had arranged with the Vietnamese - American Association to sponsor a non - denominational orphanage. The association selected Tong Thein Hoc, home for 60 or more children ranging in age from one month to seven years.

The work at the orphanage has included cleaning and building new facilities, both in the kitchen and play areas, and the stocking of the orphanage with a variety of foods.

The 90th's battalion chaplain, Capt. Emmit T. Carroll said, "We want to provide the orphanage with basic commodities which will improve not only the children's diets but the orphanage's sanitation as well.

We're arranging for a modern gas stove, sterilizer and hot water heater. We also plan to build a vent over the stove to carry out smoke and fumes and to install a washing machine.

But, Carroll stressed, "we are not trying to take over and run the show. That would defeat our purpose entirely."

Indeed it would. The central thrust of the civil affairs program is aimed at making the Vietnamese people a self-sufficient, viable force capable of withstanding the brand of aggression exported by the communists.

To do this it is necesary to strike at the factors which make a country ripe for subversion: poverty, ignorance, hunger, illness and disease. Each of these points is covered within the civil affairs program and most are interconnected.

The Army's 1st Cavalry Division went to Viet Nam in August, highly - touted as the finest fighting unit for a guerrilla war. It now has one of the most extensive CA programs in Viet Nam.

Each major unit within the division has adopted a nearby village to advise and assist the people in improving their living conditions.

How is this "adoption" translated into practical gains? Let's look at the work of one 1st Cavalry unit.

The Division Artillery section was assigned the village of Tu Luong, population 554. Tu Luong comprises three hamlets at the end of a narrow, winding cart path.

Barely accessible to jeeps, it is considered an ideal spot for ambushes. For self-protection the village is enclosed within a triple-strand of barbed wire.

On their first visit to the village the Americans were greeted with mixed curiosity and hope. Capt. Richard P. Andrews sat with the village chief and his council and through a Vietnamese army interpreter explained the mission of his unit in Tu Luong. He asked what the village needed most.

The chief told him that a dispensary, schoolhouse improvements, a better road and a bridge to link the third hamlet to the main road would be helpful.

A week later the Americans were back with ground-breaking tools, boxes of C-rations and athletic equipment.

Meanwhile, Andrews wrote to the South Macon Evangelist Church in his hometown, Macon, Ga., asking for old clothes and toilet articles. The work continues at Tu Luong, winning neither headlines nor startling victories but winning friends.

Lt. Col. Robert J. Craig is the man behind the division's civil affairs program.

Doctors Helping in the Fight To Win Vietnamese People

SAIGON, Viet Nam — In a country suffering from a ratio of one Vietnamese doctor per 20,000 persons, the struggle to win the people of Viet Nam is being furthered each day through the efforts of U. S. military doctors and medics.

Working directly with the people, these medical men daily treat the sick and injured and take steps to prevent further illness.

The scope of this work ranges from elaborate, organized health programs to impromptu aid for sudden injury. Frequently, too, the American soldier finds himself in the role of make-shift midwife in the birth of a Vietnamese child.

Medical aid is not restricted to pill-pushing. Major surgery to correct congenital defects or perhaps save a life have become commonplace for the doctors.

Doctors and medics performing these services follow the action. While the 3rd Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division was fighting the bloody battles of the Ia Drang Valley, Capt. Felix Santiago and Sp5 Richard Jackson were holding sick call in a small refugee camp about six miles from the brigade CP.

Voluntary Teams

It's the same story in the 2nd Brigade. There a seven-man volunteer team follows the military operations.

Led by Maj. Meredith Hale, brigade surgeon, the group is composed of a combination of medical specialists. A dentist, two physicians, an interpreter and three medical aidmen make daily trips to areas in need of help.

"In just five days," Hale said, "we've managed to treat nearly 300 men, women and children right at their homes. At first they were frightened and timid, but after they see what we're doing they really warm up."

In a typical operation, Capt. John Aeleznoch, a dentist, looks at the patient first, then passes him to a general surgeon looking for eye trouble, fever, scalp diseases, ear infections or other ailments.

No Fancy Equipment

A lack of heavy equipment limits the team somewhat, but even without "fancy laboratory equipment, every trip has been well worthwhile," according to Hale. "I can't think of a better place for medical missionary work."

Probably the most dramatic contrast supplied by the medical men is the work they perform in healing Vietnamese wounded by the Viet Cong. When Nguen Minh Thanh was seriously injured by a VC booby trap near the village of An Dien, 173rd Airborne Brigade medics treated and later evacuated him. An 8-year - old friend, playing with him when he tripped the booby trap, was killed in the explosion.

Overseas Tours Increased For Civilian Employees

The Department of Defense has issued an order increasing tours of duty of certain civilian employees in overseas areas.

At present, in most areas, the standard period of time or tour of duty has been 24 months.

As a result of the new regulations, the initial tour in most areas, such as throughout Europe and in Japan, will be increased to three years. Subsequent tours will be two years.

Similarly, a number of the 12 and 18-month areas have been increased to 18 and 24 months.

Employees currently serving overseas will not be affected until completion of current tour. Any subsequent tours they agree to serve will be in accordance with the new provisions.

Training Center Officer Pinned Twice, Promoted

Capt. James H. M. Malley, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, U.S. Army Training Center, will always remember the month of November 1965 as being the one that saw him decorated twice and promoted once.

On Nov. 5, Captain, then Lt. Malley was awarded the Air Medal for participating in more than 25 aerial missions in the Republic of Vietnam. On November 6, he was promoted to his present grade of captain.

As a fitting close to the month, Capt. Malley was awarded the Bronze Star Medal on November 29. It was awarded him for meritorious service in Viet Nam from Oct. 1964 to Aug. 1965.

Malley, commander of Company B, is a 1962 graduate of West Point.

Malley's decorations include the Silver Star and Combat Infantryman's Badge.

His parents, MSgt. and Mrs. Leo H. Malley are stationed at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Possibilities Are Considered For 'Air Cav'

Impressed by the effectiveness of the 1st Air Cavalry Division during his visit to Viet Nam, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara indicated probability of adding another air cavalry division to the U.S. Army.

He noted the degree which the concept of increased mobility and increased firepower on which that division is based has proven out.

The new airmobile division would not necessarily be for duty in Viet Nam, but would be available for use there.

Treetop Landing Platform Devised for Helicopters

AN KHE, Viet Nam — A unique method of employing troops against Communist forces hidden deep in their jungle sanctuaries is being used by the U. S. Army here.

Helicopter crews of the 1st Cavalry Division are dropping combat troops onto portable landing platforms laid on top of the thick jungle forests.

Until now, helicopter units had to unload troops in a ready-made clearing, sometimes several miles from the enemy's location. The new method virtually eliminates any "safe" areas for the Communists.

The new device, called a jungle canopy platform, had been under development for a year. It was successfully tested in Hawaii and at the Limited War Laboratories, Aberdeen, Md.

Three Sections

The portable platform is flown to the landing zone by helicopters and laid in place by the same aircraft. It comes in three sections.

There are two wire mesh strips 200 feet long and 50 feet wide. The pilot drops one end of one strip into the trees until it snags, then runs the 200 feet out on top of other trees. The other strip is laid across the center of the first to form a huge cross.

In the center of the cross, a circular landing pad is laid in place and secured. According to Maj. David Hayes, who has been working with the platform since its inception, the whole operation can be done in less than 10 minutes.

"It takes very little time to train helicopter crews in this operation," Maj. Hayes said.

Several more jungle canopies will be arriving in Viet Nam soon. The one here now will be used to train other crews.

OAS Moves Forward

American States Proposals at Rio Seen Heartening for Inter-American System

At a time when international crises, wars, revolutions and discord between nations capture the headlines, it is heartening to be able to observe some positive accomplishments in one very important area of international cooperation.

This area is the Western Hemisphere. And the accomplishments were the work of the Second Special Inter-American Conference which was held from Nov. 17-30 at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The Organization of American States (OAS), formally established in 1948, is a regional alliance without parallel in any other part of the world. Twenty republics of North, Central and South America make up its present membership. (Cuba's Castro government was excluded in 1962.)

Coordinating Body

The OAS is the coordinating body for all inter-American agencies and provides machinery for the peaceful settlement of disputes and for cooperation for economic and social progress.

The OAS charter embodies the principles of the 1947 inter-American mutual defense treaty against aggression.

It also bans the intervention of any member state in the affairs of another.

Organization

As currently organized, the supreme policy-making body of the OAS is the Inter-American Conference, scheduled to meet every five years. For urgent problems requiring immediate action, a Meeting of Consultation of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs is held.

The OAS Council is the permanent executive body with headquarters in Washington, D. C. It has three major arms: Economic and Social Council, Council of Jurists, and Educational, Scientific and Cultural Council. The Pan-American Union serves as the secretariat for the OAS.

Purpose of Rio Conference

Although the Inter-American Conference is supposed to meet every five years, for various reasons no conference has been held since 1954. At that meeting, policies for Latin American economic, social and cultural development were adopted which, in 1961, were incorporated in the Alliance for Progress.

The 11 years since the 1954 conference had been a period of rapid change and problems of increasing complexity.

All members agreed that the major institution for dealing with these problems, the OAS, needed to be modernized so that they could be handled more quickly and effectively.

Complicated Task

In his address to the conference, Secretary of State Dean Rusk said: "The greatest and most complicated task which the inter-American system has faced in the past decade is the mobilization of collective efforts in support of a peaceful and democratic economic and social revolution."

Secretary Rusk made a number of concrete proposals for accelerating Latin America's economic development. He also announced in a message from President Johnson that the United States will be willing to extend the mutual commitment under the Alliance for Progress (due to end in 1971) beyond the 10 years originally planned.

The extent of U. S. contribution will depend on the progress made by Latin American countries on their own contribution to the effort.

Among Mr. Rusks proposals for improving OAS were:

—Annual OAS meetings of the foreign ministers;

—Strengthening the organizational relationship among the key organs of the system;

—Strengthening the role of the Secretary General by authorizing him to bring to the attention of the Council any matter that he thinks may endanger peace and security in the hemisphere;

—Possible desirability of establishing an inter-American peace force for the purpose of assisting any hemisphere nation in danger of a Communist takeover.

Delegates to the Rio Conference adopted far-reaching guidelines for major reforms to the OAS Charter. A committee from all member states will prepare a draft of the necessary amendments. These will be acted on by a Third Special Inter-American Conference at Buenos Aires next July.

The Declaration of Rio

Among the major recommendations were:

—Annual Inter-American Conference of foreign ministers;

—Greater authority for the Economic and Social Council and the Educational Scientific and Cultural Council by giving them equal status with the OAS Council;

An Act of Rio de Janeiro that spells out members' economic obligations for self-help and mutual assistance. It pledges the members to work toward the objective of a Latin American common market.

—Authorization for the OAS Council to seek peaceful settlement of border disputes;

—Consultation among member states after a coup has occurred. Decision on recognition of a de facto government is left to each member but the prospect of investigation is regarded as a step toward discouragement of coups.

No action was taken on an inter-American peace force.

The blueprint for broad reform of the OAS drawn up by the Rio Conference promises to give new dynamism to the inter-American system. Of perhaps greatest significance for the future was the far-reaching commitment by all the members to a program of mutual assistance in the economic development of the hemisphere.

US Planning More Support For OAS Goals

In a message delivered by Secretary of State Rusk, President Johnson told the Rio Conference of the Organization of American States that the United States will be prepared to extend mutual commitments beyond the time foreseen in the charter of Punta Del Este.

Pledging to help all American countries meet goals of the alliance, President Johnson said he recognized fulfillment of those goals would require continuation of the joint effort beyond 1971.

He said the United States' effort would be determined in light of progress made by then and contributions the other countries would be able to make by that time.

Girl Scouts Have Busy Christmas

The girl scouts of Fort Benning have been active this Christmas season with a variety of holiday projects.

More than 500 Christmas stockings were sewn by junior and cadette troops with the Youth Activities Club furnishing the materials. Maj. Patricia Ratcliff's Cadette Troop 169 filled the stockings in conjunction with the Red Cross. They will be distributed to patients at Martin Army Hospital on Christmas Day.

Also at Martin, the hospital recreation hall trees were trimmed by Mrs. Burton Chapman's Junior Troop 163 and its dining hall was decorated by Mrs. Frederick Eaddy's Cadette Troop 193. Additionally, post Brownie scouts made Christmas favors to be placed on all trays at the hospital on Christmas morning.

Army-Wide Sports Slate Nearly Meets Its Doom

BY GEORGE MARKER
From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — Army's "gone - to - war" sports program was nearly submarined, Army Times learned recently when a major commander suggested that the present four-sport 1966 schedule be scuttled for the duration.

The proposal came from a foe of the Army-wide sports program Lt. Gen. James L. Richardson, Sixth Army commander, a leading architect of the curtailment action taken last February while he was serving as deputy chief of staff for personnel (DCSPER).

Richardson's proposal came in the form of a TWX to CONARC asking:

1—An end of the Army sports program during the Viet Nam war.

2—Relief of his responsibility as host commander for the Army trials in both basketball and boxing.

CONARC forwarded the proposals made by Richardson on November 9 and, in its own request, asked other Stateside commanders to comment on (1) Richardson's suggestion to drop the entire Army - wide program and (2) if interested, to submit their own bids for the tourneys surrendered by Sixth Army.

When the 1966 slate was released in August, Presidio of San Francisco was named host to the basketball Army trials; while Fort Lewis was to be the site of the boxing Army trials.

The replies to CONARC began coming in during the next week and, on November 19, The Adjutant General notified Stateside commanders in effect to scratch Presidio of San Francisco and substitute Fort Carson as basketball host at the Army trials during February 10 to March 10. And Fort Lewis was replaced by Fort Bragg as sponsor of the boxing Army trials from March 1-28.

No word was received whether Sixth Army would participate in the sports program in 1966. An unofficial view was that it could hardly pull out because the Army is committed to support the U. S. in such international events at the Olympics.

The Aftermath

BY SP4 DICK MINNIG

THE ENTRANCE of the Soviet Union into the arena of world sport at the 1948 Olympics opened the eyes of many Americans to the direct correlation between our national image abroad and the showing of our athletes at international competitions.

But for most Americans sport remains the glossy world of the professional team and the professional hero. The names of all but the greatest of our Olympic contenders are soon forgotten while the second baseman for the Chicago Cubs is a topic for conversation and the Mickey Mantles and Jimmy Browns pale all else before their light.

Americans tend to look on sports as an entertainment — a stay at home and watch it on TV entertainment or a ride down to the ball park entertainment. And most always we love to watch professionals who are the best entertainers.

We are a nation of the big commercial sport, of marketable baseball and football. Domestic competition in most Olympic events pass almost unnoticed. Our athletic efforts abroad tend to be forgotten in the heat of a pennant race or a football championship.

Our international competitors come to light only briefly once every four years when emerging from some mysterious seclusion, they are expected to bring home the most trophies of any nation at the Olympic games. Everyone knows the good guys are supposed to win. Anything else would be disgraceful.

In the Soviet Union another sports world exists. It is a world not divided into the glossy world of professional and the twilight world of the amateur. It is a world that comprehends the value of athletic achievements in the cold war between nations.

IN THE USSR sport has been made to serve the national interest. The Soviet's guiding philosophy is that if the USSR has the best athletes it must appear to the other nations that the system that produced them must also be the best.

Sports are therefore carefully nurtured by the government as a vehicle to develop healthy citizens and as an effective means of propaganda. Sport within the USSR is given such great emphasis by the government that it is directed by a commission that would be comparable to a cabinet level post in the U.S.

According to John Gunther in his book, "Inside Russia Today", the Soviet sports successes of recent years have come as the result of "more or less the same reason that it was the first country to put sputniks into the sky—by fixity of aim, zeal and a rigorous concentration of national effort on good raw material."

In recent Olympic games, the Soviet Union has shown its superiority over American athletes. The reason does not lie in the lack of physical resources here but in the methods used to recognize, recruit and utilize national talents. Americans have been too concerned with their professional heroes and with big sports entertainment.

Cultivation of our "amateur" athletes is haphazard at best and the groups responsible for the organization of our international efforts have frequently squabbled among themselves. Recently the government, alarmed at our sinking athletic fortunes, stepped in to attempt a settlement of the long feud between the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Some critics blamed the feud for the loss suffered by the American men's track team to the Russians in two meets last summer.

OTHER RESPONSIBLE voices in our government have also voiced their concern. Robert F. Kennedy, then attorney general, wrote in "Sports Illustrated" last year, "Part of a nation's prestige in the cold war is won in the

'Copter' Laden With Ammunition Recovered by 'Crane' After Crash

AN KHE, Viet Nam — The heavy - laden Army CH - 47 Chinook transport helicopter labored through the night, carrying its load of 105mm artillery shells. Suddenly the twin - engined ship pitched downward, out of control.

It crashed, then turned over and tumbled 50 feet down into the bottom of a ravine.

Miraculously, the crew was unhurt but the helicopter was a shambles. Both sets of rotor blades were sheared off, both engines mangled and its interior a jumble of broken howitzer shells.

The next morning, a huge CH-54 'Flying Crane' helicopter from the 1st Cavalry Division's 478th Heavy Helicopter Company was assigned the task of recovering the downed 'Chinook' from Viet Cong infested territory near a tea plantation 12 miles southwest of Pleiku.

Flying Mission

Chief Warrant Officer James Oden was at the controls while CWO Bill Roundy, a World War II Navy fighter pilot, flew co-pilot.

Aboard the 'Crane' were the recovery project officer, Capt. Donald Vosel, and the crewchief, Sp5 Alonzo Rich.

The crippled aircraft lay loaded with explosives at the bottom of a deep ravine. Its weight approached ten tons — the limit a 'Flying Crane' can lift.

The warm air was dangerously thin, offering little "bite" for the six-bladed single rotor of the 'Crane.'

Oden's original plan called for sling-loading the disabled 'Chinook' and lifting it out of the ravine back to the An Khe base camp.

After fastening cargo straps to each of the four wheels on the upside-down 'Chinook,' a central ring was connected to the four straps and the 'Crane' hovered in, taking the ring with its winch cable.

Oden advanced the Crane's throttle toward full power, mindful of the face of the ravine a yard from his whirling rotor blades. Nothing happened. The load was too much and Oden realized he couldn't make it.

Releasing the sling gently, conscious of the explosive power trapped in the ammunition aboard the 'Chinook,' Oden took the 'Crane' up out of the ravine.

Ammunition Unloaded

Infantrymen guarding the 'Chinook' unloaded the ammunition and moved the heavy artillery rounds a safe distance away. The 'Crane' returned for a second attempt but again failed to dislodge the CH47.

Waiting until late in the afternoon when the heat began to subside, and with only 1,000 pounds of fuel aboard the 'Crane,' a final effort was made.

The Crane's 6000 horsepower engine groaned and the ship shuddered as it half-lifted, half-dragged the transport chopper up out of the ravine and through the treetops while struggling for altitude.

Actress Leaves Python at Home During Filming

Geraldine Chaplin had to part temporarily from her pet python, Emily, when she traveled to Spain for her starring role in David Lean's film of Boris Pasternak's "Doctor Zhivago."

Miss Chaplin, whose hobby since childhood has been zoology, acquired the five-foot baby python a little over a year ago and has kept a minute record of its eating, sleeping and living habits.

During the period that her mistress was working in "Doctor Zhivago," Emily became a prime attraction for visitors at the Paris Zoo.

Also starring Julie Christie, Tom Courtney, Alec Guinness, Siobhan McKenna, Ralph Richardson, Omar Sharif, Rod Steiger and Rita Tushingham, the Carlo Ponti production had its gala world premiere Wednesday.

Survey Shows Soldier Today To Be Larger Than World War II Trooper

From The Army Times

FORT JACKSON, S. C. — A Department of Defense survey team is here finding out that the new "breed" of soldier today is larger than his counterpart 19 years ago.

Approximately 70 body measurements of 420 recruits with less than two weeks in the Army and 180 other enlisted men stationed here are being computed.

Lengths, breadths, circumferences, body surfaces and selected measurements of the head, face, hands and feet receive careful checks by the 21-man team.

The study is designed to produce information to base future clothing size systems in the armed forces and to reduce the amount and cost of alterations of military wearing apparel.

Fort Jackson is one of the 26 Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps installations chosen by the Department of Defense to participate in the survey.

Approximately 20,000 servicemen will be measured. 6000 of them in a separate survey, being conducted by Air Force anthropologists.

Scientists are generally in agreement that the stature, weight and body size of males is increasing. Data gathered during an earlier survey made in 1946 was based on men leaving the service.

Men entering the military today are younger, averaging 18 years and have not reached their peak physical development as were the men checked 19 years ago whose median age was 22 years.

"It only takes the team 30 minutes to measure each man," said Sp4 Gerald Jasinski from Buffalo, N. Y., one of the 600 men who took part in the survey.

Jasinski was asked questions about himself and his family prior to the actual measuring. "I was asked to give my weight and height which was then measured," he said. "I was surprised to find that I was only six pounds off my guess."

Data Coded

The data received here is immediately coded and sent to the Army Laboratories in Natick, Mass. The laboratories, in conjunction with the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center in Philadelphia, are engaged in carrying out the survey.

Military personnel of all ages and ranks are included in the survey to insure a cross - section of the military population.

The Army General Equipment Test Activity of Fort Lee, Va.- is charged with conducting the measurement phase of the survey.

From Fort Lee comes word that special attention is being given to measurements of servicemen who must work in close - tolerance situations such as in the case of aviators and tank commanders.

For Special Clothes

GETA officials said it is "vitally necessary to obtain anthropometric data relative to those specific occupational groups if misfitting or expensive alterations are to be avoided when specialized types of clothing are issued and fitted."

The Fort Jackson test team is now in its second month of measuring according to 2d Lt. James A. Gardner of the Fort Lee Test Agency. Following its measuring here it will go to Fort Dix, N. J.

In 16 weeks the team will return here to remeasure a percentage of the permanent party personnel. Thirty-two weeks later they will again return to check on changes.

The survey team is operating in all six Army areas in the U. S.

Aftermath

Olympic games. In this quadrennial conflict, the U. S. has skidded steadily for the last 16 years. The record is there for all the world to see and note as a proof of a decline in our once acknowledged national energy."

Kennedy went on to say that Americans have never regarded athletics as part of their national effort but that other nations do.

"There is a persistent belief in the world today that a relation exists between athletic excellence and national strength," he said.

Kennedy advocated a sweeping nationwide program to recruit and develop athletic talent and to bring about a harmonious and effective leadership by sports organizations. He suggested an independent foundation to encourage and finance amateur sports and the institution of special programs for unfamiliar sports which have stirred little interest in the past. He also said that government should encourage the program with actions as well as words.

The president of the U. S. Olympic Committee, Douglas Roby, also gave some advice recently. Roby said, "We haven't enough people in competition. We've got to bring in more. That means a more comprehensive development program. It means work at the grass roots — clinics, seminars, competition. It means facilities. Do you know that in this vast country we have only one bobsled run, one toboggan run and not even one Olympic-size speed skating rink?"

"The job," said Roby, "will take sacrifice."

So far no sweeping programs have been forthcoming and little sacrifice has been in evidence. I wonder how we will fare at the next Olympic games in 1968 at Mexico City. Perhaps it will take another defeat to dislodge us from complacency and set us on the road to victory again.

Army Testing Rollbars To Reduce Jeep Deaths

Sports and racing cars have used rollbars for years and now the Army's M-151 jeeps are getting roll bars.

The bars were developed by the Army's Mobility Division at Warren, Mich. and are being tested in Germany on military police jeeps of the 3rd Infantry Division.

The roll bar, designed to protect the occupants of the vehicle in the event of a roll, is basically two bars attached at a "T" joint at the center of the top of the windshield.

A "U"-shaped bar outlines the top and sides of the windshield and is bolted to the floor of the vehicle on both sides. The other bar extends straight back from the "T" joint and then angles down to the floor of the jeep behind the front seats.

The heavy-duty seat belts are of the conventional type and the grab bar enables the passenger to brace himself in case of an accident.

The kits were installed on vehicles of the 3rd Military Police Company so that they will be in regular use under varying conditions.

President Gets Expansion Plan For West Point

President Johnson has received the 1965 report of the Board of Visitors to the U.S. Military Academy, with comments from the secretaries of Army and Defense concerning action planned to implement recommendations.

The Board recommended support of the Academy's plans for expansion to meet future needs, favorable action on its request for a $7.4 million deficiency appropriation for phase I of the plan, an increase in cadet pay and an increase in professors' pay to a level commensurate with pay at civilian institutions.

January Dates Set For USMA Candidate Testing at Benning

Candidates for admission to the United States Military Academy will undergo academic, medical and physical aptitude examinations Jan. 5-8 at Fort Benning.

Identical examinations are being held simultaneously at approximately 36 other Army, Navy and Air Force installations in the United States and overseas.

The local examinations are being conducted by a board of officers of which Col. Jacob L. Riley Jr., commanding officer, 197th Infantry Brigade, is president.

The board was appointed by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander.

Permission to take the examinations is limited to duly nominated candidates.

Riley emphasized that the local examining board does not have authority to issue nominations or to process applications for a nomination.

The total authorized strength of the Corps of Cadets and all sources of appointment and admission are specified by law. About 1050 new cadets are admitted each year.

The largest quota, representing about 85 per cent of the total, is allotted to the various states and congressional districts for nominations by senators and representatives.

Each senatorial seat and each congressional district may be represented at the Military Academy by no more than five cadets at any one time and new cadets may be admitted only as vacancies occur.

Applicants seeking a congressional nomination should apply directly to their senators or representative.

Riley advised that this be done a year in advance of the intended date of admission to West Point.

Riley stated that although the standards for admission are necessarily high, any healthy, intelligent young American graduating from high school with good grades should be able to qualify for admission.

The examinations consist of the college board tests in mathematics, English composition and Scholastic Aptitude.

Two Soldiers Decorated Posthumously

Two soldiers were posthumously honored at Fort Benning last week and the widow of one and the mother of the other were on hand to receive the decorations from the deputy post commander.

Col. Earl F. Holton presented an Army Commendation Medal to Mrs. John A. Sansing of Columbus, Ga., on behalf of her husband, Sp5 Sansing, who was killed in a helicopter crash at Fort Benning's McKenna Airfield Mar. 4. He was assigned to Company C, 228th Assault Helicopter Battalion, 11th Aviation Group, 11th Air Assault Division.

Others attending the ceremony included Mrs. Sansing's daughter, Lisa R. Sansing; her mother Mrs. W. O. Walls and her sister, Miss Brenda Walls.

Holton presented a Purple Heart to Mrs. Harry Boynton of Columbus, mother of Sp4 Frank Boynton who died in Viet Nam as a result of wounds received Sept. 18.

Boynton was serving with the 101st Airborne Brigade at the time of his death.

NO BRUSH OFF . . . Jolly Saint Nick (who masquerades as SFC Florian C. Pasko the rest of the year) visited The Infantry School Christmas party last week and had a "special" gift for Deputy Assistant Commandant Col. Talton W. Long. The wire brush he received is guaranteed to accelerate lagging staff actions when wielded properly and in the proper places. Sgt. Maj. John F. Whitley, TIS sergeant major, appears to enjoy the proceedings.—Photo by Paul Puckett.

Trainees Observe Christmas in Variety of Ways

Trainees at the Army Training Center here got a break from their usual fare of Army, Army and more Army last week by celebrating Christmas along with millions of other people around the world.

Tops on the popularity poll for Christmas activities among the trainees was leave and Training Center officials responded by granting it to large numbers of the new soldiers.

Eighty-eight per cent of the trainees in the 1st Training Brigade were given leaves or three day passes for the Christmas holiday. The brigade's 5th Battalion granted leaves to 98.5 per cent of its 1360 trainees.

Toil, Tests of '65 End As Benning Greets New Year

By Sgt. Maj. Al Spratley

Since 1918 Fort Benning has met the challenge of every stress and strain affecting the military establishment but the past year has probably taxed its resiliency to a greater degree than any other period in its 47-year history.

In any list of "10 top news stories" chronicling the post's activities in 1965, top position would have to be shared by those centered around the 11th Air Assault and 2nd Infantry Divisions.

Both were tenant units on the post this time last year. Today, the 2nd Infantry Division is in Korea and the 11th Air Assault Division, redesignated as the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), has already been baptized in the combat fire of Viet Nam.

Following in close order of news prominence was the Infantry Center's change of command; a new assistant

Chief of Staff's Message Calls For Commander's Personal Interest

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — Commanders have received a pointed reminder from the Chief of Staff on the importance of using common sense and consideration in personnel actions.

Three examples of financial hardships unnecessarily imposed on individual soldiers were cited as cases in point in a recent note to commanders.

These troubles were caused, said the Chief of Staff note, by the "apparent lack of personal interest on the part of responsible administrative officials, coupled with a failure to exercise effective administrative controls."

In one case, an E-5 soldier on orders for an unaccompanied overseas tour drew a $744 advance payment. The next month he drew a partial payment of $340. Then, overseas, he got additional partial payments totaling over $500.

Where all that money went wasn't reported but the fat was already in the fire when the Army received a complaint of nonsupport from the soldier's wife.

Faulty Procedures

Investigation by the Army revealed that "because of faulty administrative procedures, the soldier's requests for advance and partial payments were approved on a routine, indiscriminate basis."

"No efforts were made," said the Army, "to counsel the soldier or to verify the need for the payments. As a result, both the soldier and his family suffered financial hardships until the advances in pay were liquidated."

In another case early this year, a PFC applied for a dependency allotment for his mother — but the application never got past the unit level. It was rejected due to improper preparation of the application forms.

One of his younger sisters took another approach four months later. She complained to a "high government official" about the uncooperative attitude of authorities at her brother's duty station.

Bulk of Support

The soldier, before entering the Army, had contributed the bulk of the support of his widowed mother and nine younger sisters and brothers, she said. On Army pay, there was little he could contribute, she explained.

The sister's complaint was turned over to the Army and an allotment was soon set up for the mother who also received a retroactive adjustment check.

But as the Chief of Staff's note pointed out, by failing to give assistance when they should have, "officials involved in this case were responsible for genuine hardship and lowered morale of a family over a considerable period of time."

2½ Months Remaining

The last example cited the case of a sergeant who had only 2½ months remaining on his enlistment but was granted 40 days advance leave in violation of leave regulations.

When he returned for discharge personnel at the separation point made no attempt to figure out his pay status.

Instead he was paid travel allowance to his home, his records were forwarded to the Finance Center and allegedly he was led to believe he had more pay due which would be mailed later.

Now, the former sergeant is repaying the government $269 on an installment basis.

"It is quite apparent," said the Army, "that no one had impressed on the sergeant that pay and allowance do not accrue during periods of excess leave." The debt piled up by the sergeant resulted from his receiving pay and allowances while he was on excess leave.

Former Benning Family Selected for Gift Check

The family of a former Fort Benning soldier has been selected to receive a $25 Christmas gift from a Colville, Wash, hardware store.

Mrs. Neal Franklin, who lives in a trailer court on Route 1, Seale, Ala., across the river from the Fort Benning reservation, was nominated for the award by her mother, Mrs. Lyndall Hydorn of Colville.

SP5 Franklin, an air traffic controller assigned to Viet Nam, and Mrs. Franklin had buried their nine month old daughter in Colville just before the Christmas season. Franklin, on emergency leave, is due back in Viet Nam Jan. 1.

Mrs. Franklin and the couple's two sons, Douglas, 4 and Neal Jr., will remain in Seale while Specialist Franklin is away.

The R. E. Lee Hardware Company, sponsors of the Christmas gift competition, originally planned to give one $25 check. Nineteen letters came in from customers who wished to nominate a family for the gift.

The judges could not decide between two families, each of whom had recently lost a child. As a result, duplicate checks were presented to the Franklins and to the Daniel McClung family of Colville, whose son, Joel, died of leukemia the day the contest opened.

Capt. Poole Presented Bronze Star

Capt. Buddy J. Poole of Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command was recently awarded the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service against a hostile force in Viet Nam.

Col. Lon Marlowe, commanding officer of Center Troop Command, made the presentation.

Capt. Poole's citation read: "Through untiring efforts and professional ability, he consistently obtained outstanding results. He was quick to grasp the implications of new problems with which he was faced as a result of the ever - changing situations inherent in a counterinsurgency operation and to find ways and means to solve those problems.

"The energetic application of his extensive knowledge has materially contributed to the efforts of the United States mission in the Republic of Viet Nam to assist that country in ridding itself of the Communist threat to its freedom," it concluded.

Post Bridge To Be Closed On Two Days

Fort Benning officials have announced that the Chattahoochee River at Bradley Landing (the old pontoon bridge site) will be closed to all traffic on Wednesday, Jan. 5 from 2 to 5 p.m. and Thursday, Jan. 6 from 3 to 5:30 p.m. for the conduct of military training.

Patrol craft will be stationed both up and downstream to provide adequate warning to all traffic.

ROME (AP) — Repairmen who went out to learn why telephone service between Rome and Formia had broken down soon found the answer. Thieves had made off with more than 500 yards of the telephone cable.

DA has advised commanders that they are free to support the 1966 membership drive of the Association of the United States Army. While all joining must be on a voluntary basis, DA has suggested that an explanation of the AUSA's goals and performance will stand on its own merits.

Trooper in Viet Nam Gets Letters From People He Does Not Know

By Sp4 Marv Wolf

AN KHE, Viet Nam, —Sp4 Frederic Stone of Watertown, Conn., received six letters from people he had never known. He also began receiving letters from two sisters with whom he had long been out of touch.

A 44-year old communications specialist with the Army's airmobile 1st Cavalry Division, Stone was brought to national attention by a wireservice news story concerning a surprise birthday party that his buddies gave him.

Stone's buddies from the Cav Division's 15th Medical Battalion threw an elaborate party for the unmarried soldier and the story mentioned that Stone was receiving no mail.

Reponse to the story came mostly from women in the Columbus, Ohio area and from the region in Connecticut where Stone's family, including five sisters and an 80 - year old father, reside.

Mrs. Forest Porter, Sr. of Bloomingburg, Ohio, wrote: "The great American worm is turning. . .it takes the American people a while to get started, but when they do, they do so with a vengeance.".

She was referring to the wave of indignation for the anti - Viet Nam demonstrations.

Karen Louise Puckett, a 20 - year old receptionist in Columbus, Ohio, wrote a lengthy letter which began: "Dear Mr. Stone, I read the story about you and decided it was a shame that you did not get any mail from home. So right then I decided to write to you." She also enclosed letters from her sister Donna, 11 and her two nieces, Debby, 8 and Carmen, 7.

Stone also received a long letter from Mrs. Edward Worhly of Newark, Ohio. Mrs. Wohrly had accompanied her husband - doctor to the Far East where they they spent some 15 years doing medical work.

Said Mrs. Wohrly, "I have been in Hanoi and Haiphong six times. My husband and I were medical workers in Batang, Tibet and went via railroad to Kuming, Yonsam Province, and then by horseback for 70 days through Yannan and Szichus to Bangda Province in Tibet — interesting to say the least."

She went on to say she remembered her experiences in Viet Nam, recalling vividly the heat, insects and snakes. "Most people try to imagine what you soldiers are experiencing and sympathize with you—impossible," she said.

"I know what Viet Nam is like, although there was no war on then," wrote Mrs. Wohrly, "and if I were not 65, I would be serving as a nurse in Viet Nam now," she concluded.

Soldier's Medal Given To Post Enlisted Man

An Army private first class received the Soldier's Medal here last week for an act of heroism that prevented a near tragedy at Fort Benning last November.

PFC Bruce D. Chambers of Co. D, 1st Battalion, Center Troop Command, was given the medal, the highest peacetime award for heroism, for his actions while working in a 2nd Division motor pool last November.

While he was working at the motor pool, a trailer filled with gasoline caught fire. Chambers quickly saw an explosive threat from several other gas laden trailers that were parked nearby.

With complete disregard for his own safety, he jumped into the cab of the burning trailer and drove it away from the others. Several fire extinguishers then went into action and the fire was put out.

Another enlisted man, Sp4 Harvey Clements Jr., also received a Soldier's Medal last month for his action on the scene. Clements jumped onto the burning trailer and opened the vents, thereby releasing the pressure inside and making an explosion impossible.

The citation accompanying Chamber's medal praised his prompt action and courage and credited him with preventing possible injuries to men and loss of valuable government property.

Faulty wiring in a tail light was later found to be the cause of the blaze.

Col. Lon D. Marlowe, commanding officer of Center Troop Command, presented the award.

Plastic Items Health Hazard

Army medical officials advised this week that water filled plastic novelties manufactured abroad for cooling drinks and as infant teething rings are dangerous to health.

The surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service has examined the items bacteriologically and found that the liquid filler was grossly contaminated.

Benning soldiers and dependents are urged not to purchase any of the items and the Army-Air Force exchange service has stopped their procurement and sale.

One man's opinion

'Puff the dragon or... which magic picture?'

By MAJ. M. S. LINDNER

I'm not a cigarette smoker myself but I have often thought that I might have a hard time choosing the "right" brand should I suddenly decide to become one.

Reason for this is the myriad of cigarette commercials which are constantly shown on TV.

For example, there's one about "Harvey having a good thing going . . . pass it along." Of course, when we finally get passed along to Harv, there he is puffing away like a chimney.

Natu rally, the cigarette Harvey is smoking is the basis for his "having a good thing going" and all TV viewers are urged to "get a good taste going" by switching to that particular brand.

Then there's the one about the cigarette which is "springtime fresh." Idea seems to be to get a touch of spring by lighting up for the springtime freshness which the cigarette offers.

Or, how about the cigarette which takes you to a country all its own? All you have to do to get there is to smoke the product the sponsor is plugging.

Then there are those that go:

— "Show me a filter cigarette that delivers taste and I'll eat my hat."

— "Get a real cigarette."

— "Are those coupons valuable?"

— "Come up to taste."

— "We're particular."

— "We'd rather fight than switch."

And so they go . . . ad after ad designed to get you to smoke the sponsor's cigarette.

Purpose of these commercials, of course, is to keep the sponsor's product in the minds of the viewer through constant repetition. If nothing else, it does seem that the advertisers have succeeded in that goal.

Whether one smokes or not, one can only marvel at all the attention given this and other products through advertising . . . to include aspirin, detergents, laxatives, washday soaps, food and merchandise ad infinitum.

And, whether or not one realizes it, this advertising does have an effect on us all. If it didn't, it's doubtful that the advertiser would spend as much money as he does to convince us to buy his product.

So, here's to television even with its advertisements. Whether or not one appreciates the clever and then again not so clever ads, its sure hard to beat some of the free entertainment which they provide.

Besides, I'm not a cigarette smoker anyway so I don't have to decide whether or not the coupons are valuable; whether or not I want to come up to taste; or whether or not I'm particular. I'm more concerned with the problem of whether or not it's proper to offer a lady a "Tiparillo."

Happy smoking and Happy New Year!

Accept challenges the new year brings

As 1965 fades into history, we look toward the bright hope of 1966 and accept the unfolding challenges of a New Year.

We are pledged to assist free nations in their efforts to establish a more tranquil and secure future—a future that is free from oppression, ignorance, poverty and disease.

In the New Year, we will not falter. We will remain firm in our commitments. And we will not fail to bear any burden or endure any hardship in the defense of the democratic way of life we hold so dear.

We resolve to heed the lessons of the past, knowing full well the truth of Pericles' statement that "Freedom is the sure possession of those alone who have the courage to defend it." But we look to the future and reaffirm our faith in the ideals of free men and rededicate our thoughts, our words and our deeds to helping the Liberty Bells of 1966 ring out for all peoples.

We realize as did the late Sir Winston Churchill during Britain's darkest hours that "We have before us an ordeal of the most grievous kind. We have before us many, many months of struggle and suffering." But we take up our tasks of the New Year in buoyancy and hope. We are certain that our cause will not be suffered to fail among men.

We claim the aid of all freedom-loving men and re-echo the appeal of Sir Winston in saying, "Come, then, let us go forward together with our united strength." (ANF)

Prepare For Tomorrow

It's only human nature to put off or refuse to think about things which are distasteful. Certainly, the soldier's preparation for his family in the event of his death falls within this category.

The making of a will and keeping it current is an important first step in putting things in order. But, there are many other necessary preparations.

DO THIS

TO-DAY!

If something should happen to you, does your wife or your next of kin know what benefits are available? Are your life insurance policies, military service data, birth certificate, stocks and bonds, and other important personal documents in one place? Do you have a current record of your personal affairs papers complete with instructions for your next of kin to follow?

These are all questions every soldier should ask himself. If the individual can reply in the affirmative (and few can), then he has assured his own peace of mind and his family's welfare.

If the reply is negative, the soldier's first step in putting his affairs in order is a visit to his Legal Assistance Officer—a licensed attorney. This officer is prepared to give advice on the making of wills and other civil legal matters. A little time taken now may save your family additional heartaches during a difficult time. (ANF)

To live is resolution everyone should make

There are as many resolutions for the New Year as there are people who make them.

They range from ceasing smoking and drinking and eating less to liking the boss a little more.

Has anyone ever heard anyone else make the resolution to live through the New Year?

Last weekend we killed more people than ever before.

Christmas is traditionally a time of joy and peace. Last week it was mayhem and carnage for more American families than ever before.

The National Safety Council has no figure for the numbers of people who were injured and maimed for life or the amount of heartache and dollars lost over the Christmas weekend.

It has only one figure, the most gruesome storyteller of all—716 dead during the three-day Christmas holiday.

All the resolutions in the world won't do us any good if we are not around to live them out.

Let us all make one resolution. . .drive sanely, drive defensively, drive as though our lives depended on it.

We are making one resolution for the New Year and doing it before we get behind the wheel — to live through the New Year.

Won't you do the same?

The Surgeon says:

'Hospital appointment system needs support'

The outpatient clinic at Martin Army Hospital has followed an appointment system for some time to reduce patient waiting and avoid overcrowding of waiting rooms, laboratory and X-ray facilities.

We have stressed the idea that the patient is the most important person in our mission; that his treatment and comfort are our main concern and that he should see the same physician where possible.

But often these goals cannot be met. Military requirements for physicians cause frequent changes of physician assignments to the outpatient clinic. Overwhelming numbers of patients come in without appointments. A physician may become ill, leaving his patient to be seen by others with already full schedules.

Some illnesses cannot be acquired "by appointment only" and we make allowances for these acute illnesses and injuries which require immediate treatment before an appointment can be made.

For all these reasons, the appointment system has been made flexible. It cannot, however, withstand the abuse of the thoughtless patient with chronic conditions who comes in at his own convenience for a "recheck" when he could have made an appointment.

Grandmother used to treat our "colds" with aspirin, fluids and bed rest. Today we come to the emergency room, it seems. The result is overcrowding of already burdened X-ray and laboratory facilities, prolonged patient waiting periods, delayed treatment for the acutely ill, frustration, short tempers and unjustified harrassment of physicians, nurses, corpsmen and patients.

It is, therefore, desirable for the patient to recognize some of these problems, to understand them and to contribute to their solution by doing the following:

—Make full use of daytime clinic facilities by making appointments whenever possible. Call 544-1061 (Central Appointment Desk) or the appropriate clinic.

— Don't expect to be seen promptly if you just "drop in" without an appointment and have no acute illness.

— Go to the emergency room only for conditions requiring immediate treatment such as acute illnesses with fever, injuries, etc.

In this way the patient will make it easier for his own physician to see him promptly. More efficient medical care for all who need it will be the result.

A cooperative effort between the patient and the hospital will provide better patient care and an efficient as well as flexible appointment system is the first step to better patient care.

Morale can transform defeat into victory

Napoleon Bonaparte possessed a profound knowledge of the morale of an individual engaged in battle. He is reputed to have said on one occasion, "Every soldier carries in his knapsack a marshal's baton."—a remarkable tribute to the fighting man.

A review of history leaves no doubt that the confidence and respect expressed in those famous words brought to France victory after victory.

Napoleon's combination of military strategy and understanding of the motivations of men made him an irresistible force on the European continent for a quarter of a century—truly a manifestation of the genius of the man.

He knew that morale, invisible and intangible, is a powerful force. Morale can help overcome the most formidable obstacles—turn defeat into victory.

Morale cannot be left to chance. Individual and unit morale must be nurtured, for good morale is a key to military success. (ANF)

EM Comments Studied For Promotion Changes

WASHINGTON (ANF) — Soldiers' comments on the proposed major changes to the portions of AR 600-200 covering promotion and reduction of enlisted personnel are now being studied in the office of Lt. Gen. James K. Woolnough, the Army's deputy chief of staff for personnel.

Main thrust of the changes comes in the area of selection criteria. At present, a soldier must measure up to an Army wide list of requirements established by DA as well as a list established at the option of the local commander.

To hold the inequities in this system to a minimum, DCSPER has proposed that six standardized eligibility and selection criteria be added to DA's present nine requirements.

New Criteria

They would make it necessary for all soldiers to have a minimum time on active duty in all grades; fulfill the educational requirements; have a passing score on the physical training test; and have the appropriate security clearance.

Also mandatory would be selection board recommendations for promotion above E5 and the use of promotion qualification scores.

Also Proposed

Other changes being studied would give commanders waiver authority over more of these criteria and, at the same time, limit the number of criteria they could waive simultaneously.

The addition of a third level of promotion authority is also being proposed: company commanders would promote to grade E-4; battalion commanders to E6; and in a new level, commanders in the grade of colonel or above to E9.

A final proposal would make it possible for outstanding men to be promoted to E3 in six months instead of the present minimum of eight.

DCSPER officials feel that the future may find a centralized enlisted promotion system at DA Headquarters with an enlisted personnel efficiency report similar to the one now used for officers.

Decoration Champions Announced

Winners of the 1965 Outside Christmas Decoration Contest were announced last week by Roy Lothner, Fort Benning entertainment director.

Company B, 4th Battalion, 69th Armor placed first in the company level category for its decoration of building 4878 in the theme "Christmas in Viet Nam."

First place in the battalion level division went to the 6th Student Battalion of The Student Brigade. The battalion set up a two part decoration. One part featured a Santa Claus, reindeer and a Christmas tree and another portrayed the nativity with figures cast in silhouette upon a white screen.

Second place in the company level competition was won by Company H of the Infantry School Battalion which set up a giant Christmas Card in front of building No. 17.

The 46th Company, 4th Student Battalion (Abn.) won third place by decorating a 30-foot Christmas tree in the company area.

Lawson Aviation Command was the runnerup in the battalion level category. It featured a Santa Claus and sleigh being pulled across the sky by a CH-47 Chinook helicopter.

Third place was won by the 2nd Student Battalion, TSB with a display consisting of a lighted Christmas tree and a Santa Claus and reindeer.

Col. E. F. Holton, deputy post commander, presented plaques to the winners.

MAPS PRODUCED

More than 2,500 separate large scale maps and 80 medium scale maps of Southeast Asia have been produced by the Army Map Service and cooperating agencies under the Corps of Engineers. Some 26 million maps of the area have been printed and 23 million have been distributed.

Lt. Gen. Fischer Views Training Here Last Week

Lt. Gen. Harvey Fischer, deputy commanding general, U.S. Continental Army Command (CONARC), observed training at the U.S. Army Training Center last week.

Gen. Fischer was met at Lawson Army Air Field by Maj. Gen. Robert H. York, Fort Benning commander, and Col. Bob Edwards, commanding officer, U.S. Army Training Center.

Following a USATC briefing, Gen. Fischer and party observed pugil instruction held on Knight Field and then went on to Malone Range where they observed marksmanship instruction.

Another stop in the one-day itinerary included a complete tour of the Reception Station facilities where Gen. Fischer observed initial processing of new soldiers.

PASCO, Wash (AP)—City officials have had so many complaints that they have removed the "dead end street" sign from a street here. It was not because the sign was inaccurate but because it was on the road leading to the cemetery.

Women's Golf Group Holds Annual Lunch

Around a giant red stocking filled to the brim with packages and tables adorned with little Christmas trees, the Ladies' Golf Group recently held its annual Christmas luncheon at the officers' club.

After the luncheon the floral bouquet was drawn for. The goodies in the stocking were also drawn for by comparing phrases from "T'was the Night Before Christmas" at each lady's place with those picked from a box.

Red Cross Volunteers Slate Monthly Meeting

The American Red Cross Volunteers will hold their monthly coffee and awards ceremony at 2:30 p.m. on Jan. 14 at the Martin Army Hospital recreation hall. All volunteers are urged to attend the meeting which will include the presentation of service awards and letters of recognition.

During November, 205 volunteers served a total of 3,583 hours assisting in dental clinics, the field director's office on Main Post and at Sand Hill, and with the blood mobile.

The volunteers also assisted the hospital staff in clinics and in wards by providing recreation, running errands, writing letters and obtaining reading matter for patients. Some volunteers offered clerical assistance in the clinics offices and hospital library.

Beginning in January plastic blood containers will be used for blood donations. All certified volunteers with experience in massaging plastic blood containers or who are interested in learning this procedure should contact Mrs. Colin J. Campbell blood program chairman at 689-9289.

Anyone wishing information concerning the next American Red Cross Volunteer basic training course should call the Martin Army Hospital Red Cross office at 544-3300 and leave their name, address and telephon number with the secretary. Both civilian and military dependents may participate in the volunteer program. A basic training course will be offered as soon as there are enough ladies available for instruction.

College Students Return to Post, Hold Pizza Partv

Fifty students from 35 colleges and universities attended a pizza party for vacationing military dependents at Fort Benning Monday.

Sponsored by the Officers Wives Club, the party was staged at the Custer Terrace Pizzeria from 3 to 5 p.m.

Greeting guests were Diane Perna, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Leonard P. Perna, reservations chairman for the event; Mrs. Maurice W. Kendall, president and Mrs. Tyron E. Tisdale, vice president of the Officers Wives Club.

The students danced to recorded music.

Household Jobs Worth Over $8,000 Yearly

Consider these latest research figures on the house wife:

As a food shopper, you should be able to draw $1.50 an hour; as a nursemaid, $55.63 for 44.5 hours a week; for washing dishes, $9.30 for 6.2 hours. As cook, 13.1 hours would bring $32.75 . . . to say nothing of the pay you could collect as a dietitian, housekeeper, laundress, practical nurse, maintenance man, gardener and chauffeur.

In all, the statistical men say your tasks as housewife are worth a fat $8,285.68 a year, girls. There's only one catch to all this fancy figuring—try to collect!

Infantry Board Women Attend Christmas Lunch

The ladies of the Infantry Board held their annual Christmas luncheon last week in the Corregidor Room of the Main Officers Club.

The room was decorated with white chrysanthemums, red carnations, garlands of pine and other Christmas decorations. Christmas carols were played throughout the luncheon.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Kent S. Hasemeir, chairman, Mrs. Paul W. Lavendar, Mrs. Louis Adamucci and Mrs. Richard E. Bicknell.

Mrs. James I. Muir introduced the guests. They included Mrs. Robert C. Williams, Mrs. Mary Kehoe, Mrs. Walter Meinzen, Mrs. Monroe D. King and Miss Ginger Adamucci.

Proper Etiquette For Honored Guest

What is proper etiquette for the guest of honor at a party? She arrives first (at least a half-hour earlier), not last. She receives the guests with her hostess if it is a formal party.

She should be prompt in writing a note of thanks to her hostess and may even send a small gift, such as flowers. Important to know, too — unless the guest of honor is a house guest — no one leaves before she does, at least not without a good reason.

Tradition Since World War II

Bob Hope Entertains Soldiers In Viet Nam With Draft Barbs

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Bob Hope conquered this war zone this holiday season with a barrage of barbed remarks about college draft card burners.

Carrying on a tradition of entertaining American troops at Christmas that dates back to World War II, the entertainer, 63, braved a tropical sun and ignored a sprained ankle to keep an audience of 5,000 U. S. servicemen in a state of howling glee.

"I'm glad to be back here," Hope said. "Like Henry Cabot Lodge, I'm a two-time loser."

Then he got down to the subject that makes American servicemen in Viet Nam madder than anything else; peace pickets and draft card burners.

Draws Applause

Hope drew thunderous applause with each salvo:

"You men have a very important job, making the world safe for our peace pickets.

"The demonstrations are dying down back home, they've run out of matches. Now instead of burning their draft cards, they're burning their library cards.

"If you've seen the hairdos on some of these guys, you'd be glad they aren't on our side.

"But one thing, they are doing our side some good by sending their blood to the Viet Cong.

"Most of them are conscientious objectors. What they object to most is taking a bath."

Hope made a breezy reference to the terrorist incident that greeted his troupe in Saigon last Christmas Eve. A few minutes after the troupe arrived, the Brink Hotel, a U.S. officers billet, was blown up, killing two persons and injuring more than 100.

Friendly City

"Saigon is really a very friendly city," Hope said. "Last time I was here a hotel came out to meet me. This time the security is the tightest I've ever seen. Did you ever try to shave with two faces in the mirror? They call this the Paris of the East but most of the sidewalk cafes here didn't start off on the sidewalk."

Hope's entourage included actress Carroll Baker in a skintight dress; singers Anita Bryant, Kay Stevens and Jack Jones; a dance team called the Nicholas Brothers; a perpetual motion machine called Joey Heatherton, a tiny bombshell of a blonde who did a torrid watsusi with five GIs pulled from the audience; Dina Lynn Batts, who was Miss United States in the Miss World contest; Jerry Colona and Les Brown and his orchestra.

The show closed with Miss Bryant leading the audience in "Silent Night," just as the last flight of bombers headed home from the final air strike before the 30-hour Christmas truce proclaimed by the Vietnamese and U. S. commanders.

Presented Plaque

Then Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U. S. commander, presented Hope an engraved plaque and thanked him for giving up his Christmas each year to entertain the troops.

"You are one of the best friends the serviceman has," the general said, bringing down the heaviest volley of applause of the afternoon. "When you came here last year, there were 20,000 troops here. There are now eight times as many."

Smaller-sized citations were given to the others. The ceremony lost some of its military bearing when Miss Baker threw both arms around the general's neck and gave him a sizzling kiss.

General Kissed

Each of the other five girls in the cast did likewise until the face of the four-star general was a patch quilt of pastel-shaded lipstick.

Westmoreland took it all in stride with hardly the hint of a blush showing through his sun-bronzed complexion.

Hope and his troupe of 70 flew in from Thailand. Two ligaments in his left ankle were torn at an airbase Wednesday when someone accidently brushed him off the stage. Hope minimized the incident.

"I'll do anything for a laugh," he said.

Battalion 'Trains' Section Supplies Cav Troopers

By Sgt. Chuck Lowenhagen

AN KHE, VIET NAM—By this time the accomplishments of the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry of the 1st Air Cavalry Division during the recent battles in the Ia Drang Valley are history.

During the four days and nights that the battle raged, a constant flow of ammunition, food, artillery shells, and medical supplies that are the life-line of any combat unit were being dispatched to the 3rd Brigade unit by Capt. Gordon Rozanski of Columbus, Ga., and his battalion "trains" section.

The word "trains" in modern tactical language is derived from the mule trains of old that carried supplies to the fast moving horse soldiers in the days of Gen. George Custer and his famed 7th Cavalry.

Lt. Bobby Hadaway of Panama City, Fla., is the Supply and Transportation Platoon leader for the battalion and Capt. Rozanski's assistant. He and his men worked day and night during the Ia Drang valley battle to see that the front line soldiers were well taken care of.

In his words "We continually re-supplied complete companies in less than 10 minutes." He went on to say, "But we could not have done it without the aircraft."

Even though their normal daily duties classify them as supply specialists during the fighting, the 30 man section was forced to become an infantry unit on several occasions. The men flying in the re-supply ships occasionally had to stop unloading their aircraft and pick up rifles to help repel strong Viet Cong attacks.

EXAMINING PROTOTYPE OF TILCAR AMPHIBIOUS CARRIER
Vehicle Will Provide Close Support to Combat Infantryman

Amphibious Vehicle Subjected To Month of Extensive Tests Here

A new test vehicle, the Tactical Infantry Load Carrier Amphibious Remote (TILCAR), underwent extensive demonstration tests here this month by the U. S. Army Combat Developments Command Infantry Agency. The object of the tests was to display its capabilities and practical application to Infantry operations.

The automotive concept of the TILCAR was originally developed by the Bissett-Berman Corp. of Santa Monica, Calif. It has been modified for close support of the combat Infantryman.

It is an amphibious, ¾-ton, 12-power wheel, low silhouette, cargo vehicle with power train designed for cross-country or highway operations.

Low pressure, flotation terra-tires provide both a suspension system and tractive force. The driver is provided with conventional steering laterals and the vehicle's operation is similar to that of most full-track vehicles, with one notable exception: it can not throw a track.

As a platoon load carrier TILCAR can swim with a full load, climb steep slopes, cross ditches and ride over obstacles like heavier tracked vehicles. It can crawl with a foot patrol; hold the march pace of a foot column; or keep up with a vehicle convoy.

The frame uses the welded steel tubing associated with ultra-lightweight racing machines. This allows the loaded vehicle a ratio of ground pressure equal to that of the foot soldier. The flat deck storage area provides over 80 square feet for cargo, approximately the same as that of a ¾ - ton truck.

When air - transported, one vehicle can easily climb on top of another and be adequately tied down in stacks in military aircraft. With a gross weight of 2,215 pounds, it may be sling - carried by UH-1B combat helicopters. It may also be air- dropped by conventional parachute techniques.

1100 Men End Basic Training

Eleven-hundred men of the 4th Battalion, 1st Training Brigade here marched past a reviewing stand at Marshall Bowl last week marking their completion of basic combat training.

Lt. Col. Edward J. Kelly Jr., reviewing officer, told the near-capacity crowd of relatives and friends of the graduates that he was extremely glad to be able to call these men soldiers and that he was confident that they would stand proud as a result of the training they had received at Fort Benning.

Special guests at the pre-Christmas graduation were Col. Earl F. Holton, deputy post commander and Col. Lon D. Marlowe, commander of Center Troop Command.

The American Spirit Honor Medal went to Pvt. Joseph V. Estes of Nashville, Tenn.

GI Insurance Reopening Time Ends on May 2

Eligible veterans have only four more months to take advantage of the GI insurance re-opening law, Pete Wheeler, director, Georgia Department of Veterans Service, said recently.

The re-opening period will end at midnight, May 2, 1966, he said.

Eligible for a $10,000 policy, or for increasing the coverage of an existing policy to the $10,000 total, is a veteran who was eligible for GI insurance between Oct. 7, 1940 and Jan. 1, 1957 and who has a service connected disability, or who has a non-service connected disability which renders him uninsurable by commercial insurance companies at highest rates.

The requirement of disability applies to those who receive Veterans Administration compensation and to veterans who have a service-connected disability even though it is not serious enough to be rated as compensable.

Army Begins Intensive Malaria Program for Viet Nam Soldiers

From the Army Times

WASHINGTON — A "comprehensive, organized" anti-malaria campaign has been ordered by the Army.

Commanders are being told the malaria control campaign should consist of suppressive therapy by administering one tablet of chloroquine - primaquin to every man on the same day of each week. It must be given regularly and treatment continues for six weeks after departure from the malaria area.

Individual action should be a part of the campaign. Soldiers should be especially careful from one hour before dusk to one hour after dawn. Skin should be covered with clothing, mosquito head nets or repellent to avoid bites. And the use of aerosols are a must. These practices must become habitual, the Army says.

Field sanitation is playing a big role in this latest malaria drive. Tall grass, vines, brush and other vegetation must be cleared; larvicides should be applied to mosquito breeding areas; tents and other shelters should be sprayed.

In addition the Army has called for large scale anti-malaria control measures by preventive medicine units in the field. Intensive measures are to be taken near Viet bases or large troop concentrations.

Large stocks of personal protection equipment, insecticides and drugs must be maintained, officials say.

The Army realizes that some of the anti-malaria techiques will fall casualty to tactical requirements. "This risk must be recognized and evaluated against the advantage to be obtained," the Army said.

Official reports show a rapid increase in malaria in Viet Nam and the Army says that "preliminary reports" indicate that October cases in Viet Nam were seven times those of any previous month.

Rope Is Designed For Choppers

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. (ANF)—That long gap between the ground and a helicopter hovering at the treetops may be filled by a pulley-like device developed by the Army's Limited War Laboratory here.

The friction-controlled device, a small package of nylon rope, hooks, aluminum governors and a personnel harness can safely lower a soldier or 500 pounds of cargo.

Lab experts anticipate that it will be used to ease entangled parachutists from the trees and lower supplies from the treetop jungle canopy platform.

Wounded 'Cav' Soldier Wants To Get Back

From the Army Times

AN KHE, Viet Nam — While PFC John A. Cahill lies wounded in the 8th Field Hospital, cut down in mid - November by an enemy sniper in the Ia Drang Valley, he still nurses a healthy desire to return to action as a gunner "on one of those Hueys."

Assigned to Company B, 2nd Battalion, 7th Cavalry as a grenadier, Cahill was wounded on November 14, only a little more than two weeks after arriving in Viet Nam. This is his story:

"It was pretty dark when we marched into the area, and we figured we'd head out again in the morning, so we only dug hasty positions," Cahill remembers.

The first indication he had that trouble was brewing came when a soldier rushed through the thigh-high buffalo grass yelling that the Viet Cong were attacking the forward elements and heading toward the mortar position.

Cahill said he jumped into his foxhole and suddenly felt sorry he hadn't taken time the night before to clear a field of fire through the grass in front of his position.

Couldn't See a Thing

"When I got down where I felt safe, I couldn't see a thing," he continued. "All of a sudden there was fire all over the place.

"There were trees and bushes all around us and for awhile it looked like every one of them had a sniper in it. I loaded a grenade into my M-79 and blew one of them right out of the branches.

"My squad leader yelled that they were trying to take the mortars away from us. I don't know if they were but there sure was a hell of a lot of fire coming my way.

Sergeant Hit

"I saw a few VC run through the area but none seemed close to me. I noticed a sergeant get hit in the hole in front of me and I started to crawl over to try to get him back so the medics could help him.

"As I started to crawl toward him, I looked up and there was a VC standing over me. He looked about as surprised and scared as I did. I had just put a new magazine in my .45 so I used it before he could get me. He went down and I continued to crawl toward the sergeant again.

"When I got there he was in pretty bad shape but he still pointed out where the sniper was located. I was about to fire at him when he got me."

Cahill then pointed to the injury just below his left collar bone, then began describing how he and the wounded sergeant made their way back under heavy fire to where his squad leader was located.

Though Wounded

Even though wounded, he said, he loaded his M - 79 grenade launcher and tried to get the sniper who had them pinned down.

"I shot three times and just couldn't get him. Guess I was shook up or something. I gave the gun to my squad leader and he bounced three shots off the tree near the sniper. Finally one of the guys crawled around to the right and lobbed a hand grenade into the bushes. That's the last we heard of that Charley."

He's taking it easy now and is not only willing but anxious to get back to the Air Cav Division. "I'm going to ask them to let me be a gunner on one of those Hueys," he said.

ON LEADERSHIP REACTION COURSE
Candidates Given Tough Problems

OC Class Sets Record On Leadership Course

The 61st Company (Officer Candidate), 6th Student Battalion recently set a new post record on the leadership reaction course here.

Its score of 43.5 per cent completions put it above the former record holder, the 51st Company (OC).

The course, located in the Dixie Village area, is a test of individual and group reconnaissance, initiative and [illegible] a prime indicator of the leadership potential of an OC class in its earliest stages of training.

The 51st Company is now in senior status and welcomed the candidates of the 61st Co. into the OCS program last month.

The new record holders were awarded a certificate of achievement for their performance. Student Company Commander Richard S. Moss accepted on behalf of the company.

Rappell Aid Being Tested For Safer Use

WASHINGTON — No one is predicting when it will be ready but the Army's Limited Warfare Laboratory at Aberdeen Proving Ground is developing a new device that safely lowers a soldier or up to 500 pounds of cargo from a hovering helicopter, jungle tree or platform.

A number of lowering devices have been tested and used by the Army but there has been criticism of their safety features.

The new Limited Warfare Laboratory device consists of 150 feet of ¾-inch nylon rope able to hold more than 3000 pounds, a small aluminum ladder, hooks, a carrying case and personal harness.

The item has been service tested by the Test and Evaluation Command and is being re-examined to eliminate what are described as "minor" bugs.

Girls Ask Dog Prices; Ship Line Says Sorry

United States Lines has politely but firmly said "No" to two college girls who wanted to travel to Europe next summer at $50 apiece, occupying the dog kennels of the superliner United States.

The application for dog house berths was made by Suzanne L. Pineau and Hilde M. Lehmann, seniors at Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt.

The girls, from Bethesda, Md., and Cleveland, Ohio, respectively, said recently that they were serious in their proposal to the steamship line.

A spokesman for the company said the girls' request was unprecedented in the company's history and added that its rejection was based essentially on ethical grounds.

"Can one escape the requirements of life —in this case money — by disguise and pretense? Furthermore, can a society and a steamship company survive on deception?" the answer read, in part.

Acceptance of the application, the letter noted, could bring about "a dreadful chain of events. People would travel as cats, birds, excess baggage or even tangerines. In the end the confusion would become so great that we might be bounded into thinking we were an airline and by then our collapse would be complete."

Information Chief Given New Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maj. Gen. George V. Underwood, who has been chief of Army information for five years, will become commander of all United States Army Air Defense units in Europe, the Pentagon announced last week.

Gen. Underwood will report to headquarters in Kaiserslauten, West Germany, about Feb. 14.

Army's New Battle Tank Contract Sealed With GM

WASHINGTON — The Army has announced the signing of a $43,728,000 contract with General Motors Corporation, Indianapolis, Ind. for the completion of development work on the United States-Federal Republic of Germany Main Battle Tank Program.

The negotiations leading to the current contract were based upon design, configuration and major component selection decisions announced last June by the defense ministers of both countries.

This successful contracting effort guarantees uninterrupted progress for the new Main Battle Tank and marks a major milestone in the life of this unique, international materiel development effort, Defense Department officials said.

The contract provides for $11.7 million of the award to go to two sub-contractors, Continental Aviation and Engineering Corporation, Detroit, Mich., for a high horse power engine and National Waterlift Corporation, Kalamazoo, Mich., for a new type suspension system.

General Motors was selected as the U.S. contractor in July 1964 and since that date has completed its contribution to the initial phases of the tank program.

The current contract covers phase III that terminates with the fabrication of pilot models as provided under the basic agreement between the U.S. and the Federal Republic of Germany signed August 1, 1963.

The U.S. portion of the program is headed by Maj. Gen. Welborn G. Dolvin, headquartered with the U.S. Army Materiel Command in Washington.

Dolvin directs the technical effort located at the Army Tank Automotive Center, Warren, Mich., and maintains contact with his German counterparts through a liaison office in Bonn, Germany.

ANGLER HOOKS FOX

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Filinov went fishing recently and caught a fox in the Pacific Ocean, according to the Soviet prsss agency Tass, which gave this account: Mr. Filinov came upon the fox along the shore near his home on Sakhalin Island. It jumped into the ocean to get away from him. He whipped out his fishing rod and began to cast. After several tries the hook caught in the fox's hide. Mr. Filinov landed the animal, took it home and made a pet of it.

100,000 M.D.s Needed in U.S. In 10 Years

LOS ANGELES—Though leading the world in medical science, the United States faces a shortage of 100,000 doctors by 1975.

This is according to Dr. Eliot Corday, president of the American College of Cardiology and an associate professor of medicine at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Dr. Corday bases his estimate on the present doctor-patient ratio of one to 750. There should be one doctor for every 450 persons, in his opinion.

The shortage is due to lack, not of potential medical students, but of schools to train them.

men whose homes are near Fort Benning converged on the Training Center for holiday visits.

Soldiers living great distances from Fort Benning or arriving at the center too late for leave were given freedom of the Sand Hill area and provided with religious and special service programs.

A party at Chapel Center No. 1 was a highlight of Christmas activity in the 1st Brigade area. Gifts were given to each of the 250 trainees who attended.

Christmas parties and a Santa Claus gift program were held at Service Club No.2 and a tour of the Little White House at Warm Springs, Ga. was organized for 140 recruits.

Theater No. 6 and the Sand Hill Post Exchanges remained open extra hours for trainees and cadre who remained here during the holiday.

Activities in Columbus for trainees on three-day passes ranged from good old girl watching to an evening at the movies.

Commenting on his plans for holiday leave, Dennis Chambers of Scottsboro, Ala., said, "I've got seven brothers and six sisters and if I want enough Christmas dinner I'll have to get home early and stay late.

"It's always pretty lively around my house when everyone is home," he added.

Harvey Barger of Spring City, Tenn. said, "First of all we'll open all those presents. I have six sisters and one brother and in the afternoon we'll all sit down to dinner. Then I've got a lot of visiting to catch up on."

Lester Champion of Columbus remarked, "I live in Columbus and don't have any sweat getting home. We'll have a big dinner and I guess I'll just rest until I have to go back."

AVIATOR TESTS

An improved battery of tests has been adopted by the Army for evaluating potential aviators. Developed over the past several years, the new battery replaces three previous aptitude tests. Individual personality, leadership potential, receptiveness to flight training and other factors are measured by the test which is a prerequisite to approval for flight training.

1965 Busy Year at Fort Benning

commandant for The Infantry School; a massive retirement review for Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commander of the Continental Army Command; and a multi-million dollar expansion of Lawson Army Airfield.

In mid-June a tragic helicopter accident here took 18 lives and was headlined locally as well as in newspapers throughout the country.

The national military build-up in response to the crisis in Viet Nam had its impact on Fort Benning and made headlines here with separate announcements of expansion in The Infantry School's Officer Candidate program, helicopter company training and establishment of an Army Basic Training Center.

Since its activation at Fort Benning in February 1963, the 11th Air Assault Division had been the focal point for national attention, rumor and conjecture. It appeared predestined for Viet Nam action.

Rumor Becomes Fact

Rumor became fact last June 16 when Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara announced the merger of personnel and equipment from the 2nd Infantry Division with the 11th Air Assault Division and redesignation of the composite unit as the 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile).

In an elaborate ceremony at Gowdy Field on the Fourth of July, the colors of the 11th Air Assault Division were cased and retired. The 1st Cavalry Division colors, brought back from Korea for the ceremony, were unfurled and presented to Maj. Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard. Meanwhile, the 2nd Infantry Division colors were escorted to Korea to complete the exchange with the former 1st Cavalry Division there.

Six weeks later, President Johnson told the nation, "I have today ordered the (1st) Air Mobile Division to Viet Nam." The final increment left the post in late August.

On the heels of this milestone in the post's history came another sudden change when it was announced that Maj. Gen. John E. Heintges, Fort Benning commander, had been nominated for his third star and reassigned to Korea as commander of I Corps (group) there. He departed following a farewell review on July 12.

New Commander

Maj. Gen Robert H. York, commander of the 82nd Airborne Division and a former chief of staff of the Infantry Center, was named to succeed Gen. Heintges and arrived at Fort Benning on July 15. He was accorded honors and welcomed at a ceremony on York Field.

Earlier in the year, The Infantry School had experienced another command change when its assistant commandant, Brig. Gen. John S. Norton was reassigned to Viet Nam.

In February, Fort Benning was honored when Gen. Hugh P. Harris, commander of the Continental Army Command, selected this installation for his retirement ceremony. Over 10,000 troops took part in the review on Sightseeing Field while approximately 5,000 spectators turned out to honor the former Benning commander.

In mid-July, a $4.5 million expansion program at Lawson Army Airfield got underway when Fort Benning commander, Maj. Gen. York, mounted a bulldozer to officially break the ground. Already reported to be the busiest Army airfield in the world, the extension of runways and taxiways will make it the largest of its kind in the world when completed in December 1966.

The worst single air accident in Fort Benning's history happened on June 15 when two UHI-D helicopters collided in mid-air and crashed in a heavily wooded, swampy area near King's Pond. Fourteen 11th Air Assault soldiers, two pilots and two co-pilots lost their lives in the tragic accident.

OCS Expansion

The nation's military build-up and a resultant need for more junior officers had an impact on Fort Benning in September when it was announced that the post's officer candidate training would be increased by an estimated 2,000 men during the coming year.

Similarly, the build-up was reflected further when the Department of Defense authorized activation and training of helicopter companies. To speed up the program, Fort Benning was to activate a number of UH-1 (Huey) companies of 261 officers and men each and CH-47 (Chinook) companies of 264 men each.

The Sand Hill and Harmony Church areas, virtually deserted following the departure of the 1st Cavalry and 2nd Infantry Divisions, came to life again in October when an Army Basic Training Center was opened there to receive and train some 1,100 basic trainees a week. Approximately 3,000 permanent party personnel were programmed to man the center.

Other Top Stories

Although the foregoing were selected as the "top 10" news stories of the year, many others were of considerable importance to individual units and to the post as a whole.

Other prominent BAYONET headlines were: River Crossing Training Switched to the Chattahoochee; the Building 81 Contest; Easter Sunrise Services (attended by about 10,000); Rededication of the 23rd Infantry Regiment Colors (highlighted by the visit of Gen. Paul L. Freeman, CONARC commander); New Army Sports Policy Lays Benning Doughboys Football Team to Rest; Thousands View (Armed Forces Day) Show at Lawson Airfield; Fort Benning to Get New Brigade (still to be activated); 197th Infantry Brigade Moves to Kelley Hill; and Credit Union Gears Operations for Accepting Benning Soldiers.

These headlines once were news but now, like the 52 issues of the BAYONET in which they were published, merit but this brief summary as Fort Benning faces the future with traditional confidence and dedication to the Army and the nation.

From the Career Counselor

The 'Real Benefits' Are Worth Soldiers' Serious Consideration

In considering the Army as a career, one very important factor which deserves serious thought is "Service Benefits."

Let's start with assignments. Do you realize that there are over 400 different jobs you can get into? These include fields such as electronics, clerical, motor maintenance, electrical maintenance, airborne and special forces.

And, what about education? In the Army you can get high school or college educations through various education programs offered by the military. Additionally, the Army will finance most of your off-duty college work. Sure, it's hard, but have you checked the cost of a college education lately?

There are also such benefits as 30 days paid vacation a year, medical and dental care, travel opportunities, recreational facilities, commissary and PX privileges, income tax advantages and the survivor's benefits available to your dependents in the event of your death.

These death benefits include dependency and indemnity compensation, death gratuity, social security, accrued pay, burial expenses and $10,000 worth of life insurance for only $3 per month.

When it comes to retirement do you realize that in order to have an income comparable to that of an E-7 retired after 30 years service you would have to pay approximately $125 per month into a civilian retirement plan or have a capital investment of better than $125,000.

That same E-7 is also eligible for social security benefits at age 62 and continues to remain eligible for many privileges at military installations.

These are just some of the very tangible benefits which accrue to men in the military. They are worthy of serious consideration by all those contemplating their life's work.

Investigate all the possibilities, weigh them carefully and see your career counselor for additional details.

McNamara Asks Boost For NATO

Further strengthening of NATO forces in Western Europe was the primary emphasis of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara before the North Atlantic Council meeting in Paris.

He said there is a need to reverse the trend which we see in some of the nations of NATO to reduce their defense budgets.

"On balance," the Secretary explained, "the NATO nations have done very well to add to their forces and increase their budgets over the last five years.

"Many nations have increased them over 50 per-cent, but at present there are [illegible] to reduce these military contributions, to increase the inequities that exist at present among the member nations.

"We feel that the United States is doing more than its share and we feel we must insist our allies increase theirs," he stated.

Our New Year's Baby

The Bayonet's 1966 New Year's Baby is Sue Hamilton who is currently starring in the American International motion picture "Dr. Goldfoot and the Bikini Machine". Believe it or not, Sue once wanted to be a farmer. The editors of The Bayonet are glad she decided to forgo agricultural pursuits for a job where we can all appreciate her talents more easily.

U.S. Troops in Viet Nam Learn Humanitarian Actions Fight Reds

Special to The Bayonet From 1st Inf Div

Americans of the 1st Infantry Division have the primary mission of destroying Viet Cong in combat but Support Command units in Division headquarters are learning how humanitarian acts can also fight communism in Viet Nam.

Civic action projects have a far reaching affect, according to Capt. William R. Wills Jr., a medical officer with the Division's 1st Medical Battalion.

"We feel if we can win over the mothers and their children, they won't support the Communists," he said.

In Lai Thieu District in Binh Duong Province, 1st Medical Battalion doctors are providing badly needed modern medical treatment to more than 10 villages and four hamlets — roughly, 45,000 people.

It's a big job but with the help of local Vietnamese people the battalion is making outstanding progress.

Build Dispensary

When the medics first offered to aid the Province in November 1965, local inhabitants responded by building a six-room dispensary for Army doctors to hold sick call.

Until then, people badly in need of medical treatment had to travel to Saigon to see a doctor.

Each Monday and Wednesday a team of medical corpsmen, including two male licensed practical nurses, goes to the Province to hold sick call.

They treat minor ailments and refer the more serious ones to Army doctors who visit every Tuesday and Thursday.

In the morning the doctors hold sick call at the dispensary while afternoon activities consist of visiting four out - of - the - way hamlets containing refugees from Cambodia and Communist controlled areas of Viet Nam.

Language Barrier

The language barrier is overcome by the use of a 1st Medical Battalion Vietnamese interpreter, Sgt. Tran Van Loan. Doctors also use a prepared question and answer sheet written in English and Vietnamese when Sgt. Loan is not available.

Medical teams have found that skin problems, lung infections, T.B., diarrea, malnutrition, dietary deficiencies, parasitic infections and malaria are the most common ailments in the province.

Plans coordinated with Vietnamese Army Capt. Nguyen Nhu Trong, district chief, and Maj. Robert Cormier, U.S. military advisor for the district, include building a fixed bed hospital in Lai Thieu to be staffed permanently by nurses and corpsmen from the battalion.

They also hope to train 12 to 15 nurses from the local population to eventually take over a nearby maternity hospital that has no doctors or nurses.

Med Supplies

Medical supplies are being provided by the U.S. Overseas Mission in Saigon and various charitable organizations in the United States.

1st Medical Battalion doctors have also received 10 boxes of medical supplies from drug companies and practicing physicians in the U.S. who they have written.

In January doctors hope to start a campaign against T.B. in the Province by X-raying suspected victims and treating them.

The battalion will provide X-ray technicians and film and the Province will provide an X-ray machine through the Vietnamese government.

As the medical civic action in Binh Duong Province progresses through the untiring efforts of the 1st Medical Battalion, American - Vietnamese mutual trust and understanding is becoming an ever increasing thorn under the Viet Cong's hide.

Dead Engine Flying Not Pleasant Chore

BY SSGT C. JAMESON

AN KHE, Viet Nam — A dead engine in a flying helicopter is not a pleasant experience but add a fierce battle directly below with hundreds of enemy soldiers all around and you've got troubles.

But that's what happened to a TOC ship from the 1st Air Cav Division's 1st Airborne Brigade during the bitter fighting at the now famous Plei Me Special Forces Camp.

The flying TOC (Tactical Operations Center) ship was that of the 1st Brigade's 2nd Battalion, 8th Airborne Cavalry, and was flying directly above the special forces camp which was being subjected to a murderous assault at the time.

The Army helicopter was piloted by the 2nd Battalion, 8th Cav commander Lt. Col. James H. Nix and WO Kenneth R. Chapman, a pilot from the 1st Brigade's Aviation Section.

Other occupants of the stricken craft were Maj. Clayton J. Bachman, Spc George Gray, Capt. Robert W. Batts, Spc Robert L. Ruggiero and Capt. Thomas A. Ward.

While the occupants of the chopper were looking down at the battle, the engine suddenly developed a grinding noise and simultaneous loss of power. It eventually quit altogether.

Fortunately, the craft had plenty of attitude and after entering auto-rotation turned toward far-off friendly lines. Juggling the controls to make maximum use of rotor-blade pitch, the crew was able to play the rate of descent and choose a suitable touch-down point in a small field about 500 yards in front of the battalion's forward perimeter.

Meanwhile, having been notified of the emergency, a platoon from their battalion was dispatched to arrive at the scene of the power off landing in time to establish a defensive position around it.

World War II Message Turns Up In Viet Nam War 20 Years Later

CRANBERRY LAKE, N.J. (AP) — Twenty-one years ago a young girl working in a defense factory penciled a message on a mortar casing. It read:

"Please write Miss Charlotte Bell, Seeley Tube Co., Dover, N.J. age 19, 5 feet 6 inches, 145 lbs., blue eyes, blonde hair, please write, very pretty. Oct. 30, 1944-Halloween."

The mortar casing with its message was shipped off and Miss Bell forgot about it.

But it was finally delivered, in another war to other American servicemen — some of whom were not even born when Miss Bell jotted down the note.

In Viet Nam on the night of Oct. 30, 1965, exactly 21 years to the day, a mortar platoon of the 2nd Brigade, 1st Infantry Division at Bien Hoa discovered the note.

PFC Truman F. Lorentz of Pawnee, Okla., was opening cardboard tubes which contained 81mm mortar rounds. As Lorentz twisted the cardboard lid from one of the casings he noticed writing on the exposed side of the container.

Using his cigarette lighter, Lorentz read the message to the platoon.

"Give me her address, I'm going to write her," said the squad leader, Sgt. Glen Lee of Senior City, Pa.

The next day the letter was mailed to Seeley Tube. It was returned.

But Miss Bell, now Mrs. John F. Neal of Cranberry Lake and the mother of a 15-year-old son, was tracked down.

"I can't believe it, after all these years," she said.

"It was more or less just something to do. None of the 50 girls I worked with ever took any of those little notes seriously.

"I remember that all the girls at Seeley Tube Co. used to write little messages on the cannisters when things were slow. Some of us even got replies during the war. But after all it's been more than 20 years."

She said that several months after she wrote the note she left the company and worked at the nearby Picatinny Arsenal until her marriage in 1948.

Mrs. Neal still conforms to her description in 1944, blonde, and "very pretty."

The only difference is that she weighs 10 pounds less, 135.

GETTING READY

The Pittsburgh Pirates are bringing in all 40 players on their roster for a pre-season "convention" in Pittsburgh soon. General manager Joe Brown says . . . "We want to prepare them mentally, physically and psychologically to win the pennant next year."

To which somebody added this remark, "How will the Pirates prepare the other nine teams mentally, physically and psychologically for the same thing!"

Selection Criteria Announced

The Army has begun a policy of announcing selection criteria and releasing names of board members with this month's Presidential approval of 55 brigadier general temporary promotions.

The promotions are expected to fill vacancies occuring between Dec. 1, 1965 and Jan. 1, 1967. Sufficient recess appointments were also approved to fill vacancies until Congress reconvenes Jan. 10, officials said.

Full consideration was given to successful duty tours on joint, combined, allied and OSD staffs. Equal weight was given to Army staff service, the Army says.

Optimum consideration was directed to counterinsurgency qualification and performance; however, this was not considered a selection prerequisite.

The board considered all RA and AUS colonels with date of rank on or before Dec. 31, 1962, and recommended 55 in order of merit on a best qualified basis.

Primary zone of consideration for the board was year groups 1939-1942 with members instructed to select all but a few from the primary zone. Exceptions included selection of up to six from groups 1943 and later. Age criteria and age limitations were not established.

Fifty-two officers were selected from the primary zone and three from year groups 1943 and later.

Defense Dept Defers Funds

Department of Defense will defer $620,000,000 in military construction projects, including $160 million for military housing, following a review of expenditures focused on immediate requirements in direct support of combat forces in Viet Nam and elsewhere.

The go-ahead was also given by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara for $686 million in Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps high-priority military construction projects in 36 states, the District of Columbia and at 16 overseas locations.

The secretary emphasized that all projects that are immediately essential for the combat support of the armed forces and those which are urgently required for safety, health or other compelling reasons will proceed as scheduled.

New Year's Tip

Investment Trusts, Mutual Funds Can Cut Stock Market 'Watching'

NEW YORK (AFPS)—Investment trusts or mutual funds may be the answer for the small investor or the investor who doesn't want to bother with watching the stock market.

Investment trusts fall into two major groups, "closed-end" investment trust and "open-end" trust, commonly known as the "mutual fund." Basically, this is how an investment trust works:

Suppose 20 friends each had $500 they wanted to invest. They decide to pool their money and turn it over to a manager to invest for them. They have formed a miniature investment trust. Total capital invested would be $10,000 ($500 each).

Now suppose that in a year's time the investment grows to $12,000. That divided by 20 makes each investor's share $600. Others, seeing the results decide they want to join the pool.

The original investors must make one of two choices. They can restrict the pool to their capital, making the pool a closed-end-trust, or they can take in new members into the pool at its current value ($600 per share) with each additional $600 invested the same as the current capital.

The latter decision makes the pool an open-end trust or mutual fund.

If the members decide to limit the pool to its original membership, the only way a new member can join is to buy the holding of a current member. Shares of closed-end trusts can be bought on stock exchanges, same as other stocks.

Shares in open-end trusts (mutual funds) are bought and sold according to their net asset value (value of holdings divided by number of shares). Their prices change constantly because the funds investments are always changing.

For the investor who simply wants more diversification in his limited investments, the closed-end trust may be the answer. He should remember, however, that shares in closed end trusts are subject to fluctuations similar to other stocks.

The buyer of shares in a mutual fund usually must pay a commission, or loading charge of about eight per cent of the purchase price. He can usually cash in his shares without paying another commission although sometimes a small redemption fee is charged. The buyer of closed-end trust shares listed on a stock exchange would pay regular exchange commissions whether buying or selling.

Mutual fund owners usually pay an additional management fee of about one-half of one per cent of the net asset value. For the person who wants to avoid watching the market while spreading his investments over perhaps 100 companies the fee is reasonable.

The Aftermath

BY SP4 DICK MINNIG

TWO WEEKS AGO I tuned in a TV set in New York City and was treated to a taped corrida de torros from Mexico City. It seems the bullfight is popular enough in New York to warrant over an hour of prime air time.

My initial reaction to the fights was one of repugnance and surprise. The program was the closest I had ever come to a real bullfight and it was a shock. My conception of the fight had always been based on a native Hollywood notion of the dramatic battle between the brave bull and the shining matador. It was always an Anthony Quinn or a Tyrone Power who flicked the huge beast this way and that with his small cape, then deftly dispatched it with little show of pain or blood.

While, ideally, bullfighting can be like this, in reality it rarely reaches this point of perfection. As I watched, six bulls were killed (this is the usual number). Most were killed very clumsily and with little grace and poise.

And the bull does not face only an Anthony Quinn or a Tyrone Power. He battles a team of seven men who each have a special contribution to the corrida's inevitable outcome.

Each battle begins with cape men who tire the bull and measure his charges for the matador. Then the two picadors ride into the fray mounted on horses. Armed with long pikes, they induce the bull to charge and then fend off the attack by placing their weapons in the great neck muscles of the animal. This weakens the muscles so that the bull's head will be low enough at the end of the fight for the matador to kill him with a sword.

The banderilleros then run into the act and stick two barbed stakes into the bull's neck muscles. This further weakens and annoys the animal whose body is by this time, wet with blood.

The coup de grace is performed by the matador during the hour of truth. He is armed with a sword (estoque) and a small cape (mulete).

THE HOUR OF TRUTH is often a muddled two to five minutes. I am told that an experienced and courageous matador usually makes a swift and neat kill. Two of the matadors I viewed were butchers. One used seven swords to dispatch a single bull. He sliced several swords through the animal's side and glanced others off bones while the animal ran about confused and exhausted. He finally managed to hit home and the bull sank to its knees spitting blood.

The ideal target for the blade is between the shoulder blades at the junction of the neck. If inserted at the proper angle, the sword will sever the aorta and the animal will die quickly. Unfortunately this is not always the case.

A man called the puntillero then performed an act of surgical mercy by severing the bull's spinal cord. A team of mules entered the ring and dragged away the carcass while ground keepers wiped away the blood with their rakes.

Each fight was usually over in 10 minutes. There is a 15 minute time limitation set on each bout. Needless to say, the bulls never go the full fifteen.

Afficionados of the bullfight say that the corrida is not a sport and is therefore not a cruel sport. They say it is all ritual and ceremony.

I would agree it is not a sport. The bullfight is far removed from the complete uncertainty of a true sport. There is no winner or loser, no odds, no favorites. Whatever danger the bullfighter may be in, the fate of the bull is always sealed the moment he enters the ring. The man may be injured and is sometimes killed but the bull always dies. Since the outcome of the corrida is a foregone conclusion

Changes Made in Post Hoop Slate

The fluctuating Benning basketball picture made another switch last week to accommodate changes in the lineup of participating teams, the Special Services Office announced this week.

Instead of two halves of play as originally scheduled, the Special Services Office said that present plans call for three rounds of competition.

This will enable the 428th Medical Battalion and the Army Training Center to enter teams into the competition on an equal basis.

The 29th Infantry, which has topped the post's hoop action so far this year with a 10 win, no loss record, was declared winner of the first round of play.

The winners of each of the three rounds will play for the post championship in a double elimination tournament, officials said.

The 428th Medics plan to send a squad into the second round of hoop play which begins next week.

The Army Training Center is slated to enter the competition in the third round which will begin Jan. 31.

The 10th Artillery and the 10th Aviation Group have withdrawn from the battalion-level competition.

Play will be briefly suspended this month when Fort Benning will send 10 of its top hoopsters to the Third Army All - Star team basketball competition from the 24th through the 28th of January at Fort Rucker, Ala.

Basketball Schedule

FRIDAY: Briant Wells Field House — TSB vs. 39th Transportation at 6:30 p.m. 428th Medical Battalion vs. 29th Infantry at 8 p.m.

IRELAND'S POPULATION

Ireland had a population of one million in 1670, according to the National Geographic. By 1845 it had increased to eight million. When the potato crop failed in 1848, a million Irishmen starved to death; another million emigrated. Because of emigration and wide spread celibacy, the island's population has declined to the present level of about four million.

Skiing May Be Looked on as Fun But Is Also Good Transportation

Today, many people look upon skiing as great sport but for centuries Scandinavians relied on skis as a prime means of transportation. Further, many "soldiers on skis" distinguished themselves in World War II although they were following some very old ski-tracks.

The Swedes actually used skis in warfare as early as the Middle Ages. The Swedish-Finnish armies of the 16th and 17th centuries also included many ski troops and took part in a campaign in 1610 which advanced as far as Moscow.

Gustav Vasa, subsequently king of Sweden, covered the 53 miles from Mora to Salen, Sweden on skis in 1521. Today, his feat is commemorated annually with the world's greatest ski race, the Vasa Lopp.

Skiing has a longer history than you may realize for the earliest pair of skis found in Scandinavian bogs date back to around 2500 B. C.

The first skis of which there is any record were made of animal bone and were tied to the feet with leather thongs. The oldest words for "ski" are the Finish "suksi", Norweigian "ski" and Swedish "skida", originally used to denote a lath cut from a log. And in pagan mythology, Uller, the ancient Teutonic God of Winter, is depicted on skis with curved toes.

The earliest recorded ski competition took place in 1767 but skiing didn't become a sport until 1843. It was only 13 years later that skiing was introduced to California. Skis in France date from the Paris exhibition of 1878 where they were featured. In 1893 people on skis apeared in the Bois de Boulogne, the famous Parisian park.

The Ski Club des Alpes, with headquarters at Grenoble in southern France, was founded in 1896. By 1898, skiing as a sport was popular in that country, and ever since, the French have played a major role in the development of skiing, especially in the 20th century.

The first Winter Olympics here held in 1924 at Chamonix at the foot of Mont Blanc. Today Chamonix boasts six cable cars, 13 ski lifts, four ski jumps and two skating rinks.

You can learn the famed French ski method invented by Emile Allais, the 1937 Olympic winner at Chamonix. The "Methode Francaise de ski" is particularly spectacular to watch because the skier throws his body in the direction of his turn.

Chamonix has the highest cable car lift in the world — it climbs 12,600 feet above sea level. Another record for Chamonix is for speed achieved on the famous 2.03-mile "Piste Verte" downhill course. The 1962 downhill champion, Karl Schranz of Austria, averaged 50.76 m.p.h. on this course.

The highest speed ever attained by a skier was 109.14 m.p.h. set by Ralph Miller (U.S.) on the slopes of the Gargantua "Schuss" at Portillo, Chile in 1965. Think about that next time you're schussing down a snowy slope.

NEW RADAR TRAFFIC SAFETY EQUIPMENT IS HERE
Consists of Timer, Ticket Printer, Computer, Radio and Antenna

Fort Benning's Military Police traffic platoon has put into operation new radar equipment which can take all the argument out of a speeder.

One of the latest things in traffic safety, the recently purchased radar set is considered a mechanical marvel.

When the radar beam of the set is broken by a car, the equipment prints the rate of speed the vehicle was traveling and has a ticket all ready for any speeder who comes into its sights. There is no waiting for a citation to be written out.

The $2,000 set consists of a radar antenna that looks like an overgrown spotlight with a green lens, a radar timer, ticket printer and computer. It can operate from the power supplied from a car cigarette lighter outlet or direct from the car's battery.

It may be placed on the outside of a patrol vehicle or on the inside and beamed out the front or back window. It also may be used independently of a vehicle with power supplied by a portable battery.

Operating range of the radar is great enough that when a driver spots the set it is too late if he has been exceeding the posted speed limit.

The radar is used a minimum of two hours each day on the post and not necessarily in the same location during those two hours.

This new mechanical addition to Fort Benning's Military Police force is an important addition to the traffic safety program, according to officials.

HOSPITAL STUDY

A high - ranking DoD committeee is studying the hospital and out - patient clinics operated by the Department of Defense in the continental United States. Their report, to be submitted to the Secretary of Defense, will recommend improvements in the design and management of these facilities. The Army's Medical and Research Development Command is executive agent for the study.

Westinghouse Develops Heater of Future Uniform

PITTSBURGH—A heating and ventilating unit, part of an experimental heat - regulated infantry uniform, has been developed by the Westinghouse Aerospace Electrical Division.

Apollo astronauts will wear space suits with a bubble helmet which is smaller and lighter than the previous helmets, yet is more comfortable and provides more visibility. It is made from a plastic material called polycarbonate and is transparent except for a small section at the back of the head.

Absence of gravity in space will enable NERVA nuclear rockets to send Mars-bound men on a historic flight, leaving earth orbit at 91,500 mph. But without gravity forces, the crew will be physically unaware of the tremendous speed. Once out of earth orbit, the Mars space vehicle would slow to a steady cruise rate of 74,700 mph for the remainder of the 70,000,000-mile voyage. Such a mission would provide for 220 days of flight each way plus a short stopover for exploration of Mars.

The thermoelectric-powered prototype unit was developed under contract for the Army Natick Laboratories, Natick, Mass.

The back - mounted unit weighs 12.9 pounds. It delivers heating and ventilating air at the rate of 18 cubic feet per minute and at a static pressure of four inches of water.

A thermoelectric generator in the unit supplies electric power for an air blower. Heat for the thermoelectric generator is provided by a burner that uses fuels readily available in the Army's logistics system such as gasoline and diesel fuels.

Enough fuel for eight hours of operation is stored in a pressurized container mounted within the unit.

Airpower Big Factor In Limited Warfare

United States airpower in limited warfare has emerged from a secondary role to become a primary factor, according to Gen. John P McConnell, USAF Chief of Staff.

Speaking to the Detroit (Mich.) Economics Club, Gen. McConnell based this conclusion on "personal observations and impressions" while in the Republic of Viet Nam.

Increased military participation has brought a variety of unprecedented problems, he said, adding we were bound to learn a number of lessons.

The general mentioned problems caused by vast expanses of steaming and forbidding jungle hiding thousands of dedicated and well armed guerrillas.

"You must really see for yourselves what the South Vietnamese and our troops are up against," he said. "Never before were we engaged in anti-guerrilla warfare of this type, of this scope and under these conditions."

The only answer to this unprecedented problem, he said, was to shift a major burden of the fight to airpower.

Gen. McConnell cited various examples where this has been done including bombings, tactical air strikes, psychological warfare, and air rescue, evacuation and transportation.

Jobs Opened For Warrant Specialties

WASHINGTON — More career opportunities for enlisted technicians exist in the warrant officer field, the Army indicated last week.

It added 10 more skills (MOSs) in which it will appoint individuals qualified by knowledge and experience to the list published six weeks ago in DA Circular 601-13.

The original procurement list named 24 MOSs in which the Army wished to procure warrant officers from serving enlisted members, Reserve component officers, former commissioned and warrant officers or qualified technical experts with or without prior military training.

Those interested in a warrant officer appointment are referred to the circular for details on submitting an application. Fort Benning personnel are advised to consult their unit personnel sections to learn what jobs are open for warrant officer specialties.

Celebrity Shows Brighten Holidays for GIs Abroad

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department this year is sponsoring eight celebrity shows to help brighten the holiday season for troops overseas.

Several of the units, including the perennial Bob Hope and his troupe, are performing in Viet Nam. Others making the Viet circuit are actor Hugh O'Brian, The Brothers Four and Eddie Fisher.

In other areas of the Pacific, county fiddler Roy Acuff and his Smokey Mountain Boys, and the Wellingtons, a pop vocal group, are entertaining the troops.

Ronnie and the Daytonas, another singing group, are in Europe and the "Jimmy Case Show," a country music outfit, is visiting American troops still on duty in the Dominician Republic.

In addition to these special holiday shows, 13 regularly-scheduled troupes were scheduled to tour military installations over the holidays.

The shows are sent overseas by the Armed Forces Professional Entertainment Branch. Talent is provided by the USO American Theatre Assn., National Music Council and civic college and celebrity groups offering gratuitous service.

Viet Nam Replacements To Get Jungle Training

From The Army Times

WASHINGTON — The Army has ordered 50 percent more of its officers and noncoms being assigned to Viet Nam as individual replacements to take jungle training in Panama before being sent to Viet Nam. The idea is to prepare unit leaders as fully as possible for Viet Nam fighting.

The training will be in addition to the special AIT for new soldiers and the mandatory 16-hour orientation all Viet Nam - bound soldiers receive stateside. The jungle operations course runs two weeks and will be conducted at Fort Sherman, Canal Zone.

Tip-Off

A tip-off as to Army concern about the lack of experience among its unit leaders in jungle fighting came in a speech by Maj. Gen. Michael S. Davison, deputy assistant chief of staff for force development before the last Army Association Convention.

At the time, Davison said the Army was studying the possibility of sending still larger numbers of officers and noncoms through jungle training facilities in Panama and Hawaii.

The Army has decided to boost the number it puts through jungle training but because of the shortage of training space in Hawaii it plans to concentrate the stepped up training entirely in Panama.

The Army recently announced plans to bring the 25th Infantry Division up to 16,000 men. With the increased manpower, officials feel there is just isn't enough area to provide jungle training for the 25th Division and Viet Nam officer and noncom replacements as well.

Increased Strength

With the increase in division strength, the Army has also discontinued helicopter gunners training there. In the future, helicopter gunners will be trained in Viet Nam.

The Panama jungle course will have some field grade officers in attendance but will mainly be limited to company graders and selected noncoms, officials said. The course has been limited in the past to personnel being assigned to Latin countries, foreign nationals and National Guardsmen units and Army Reservists in units with special missions and Special Forces units.

In addition, the Army has sharply stepped up its language training for officer advisors being sent to Viet Nam.

All are now being required to attend a special, six-week course oriented toward Viet Nam in either civil affairs, psychological operations or intelligence. About 50 per cent of those who take this course will receive additional Vietnamese language training (12 weeks) at the Defense Language Institute.

Clarifies Program

Meanwhile the Army has clarified still further its new Viet Nam oriented advanced individual training (AIT) program for men right out of basic. While instruction is oriented toward infantry assignment in Viet Nam, the Army stresses that not everybody who takes the course will be assigned there.

In fact, officials expect only a small fraction of the initial classes at Forts Gordon, Ga., and Polk, La. will go to Viet Nam after graduation from their special nine-week AIT. However, officials expect the percentage of graduates going to Viet Nam to increase in future classes as the need for replacements increases.

Selection of the individuals to receive the special AIT will be made at Department of the Army level, based on the individual's aptitude for a particular job and the needs of the service. Men will be selected from basic training centers throughout the U. S.

To make sure that the men attending the course get the best instruction possible, the Army plans to put special emphasis on assigning officers and enlisted men with Viet Nam experience to trainer and cadre slots.

Canada Buys Many Aircraft Made in U.S.

WASHINGTON — Canada, Mexico and Brazil continue to be the leading Western Hemisphere importers of U.S.-built general aviation aircraft according to nine-month figures released by the Aerospace Industries Association.

The figures are based on reports from five member companies of the AIA's Utility Airplane Council.

Through the end of September, Canada had purchased 170 airplanes valued at approximately $5.6 million; Mexico 110 with a value of about $3.9 million; and Brazil 50 for more than $1.6 million. Twenty-two nations in this hemisphere purchased airplanes during the reporting period.

Around the world, leading purchasers include Australia (258), The Republic of South Africa (164) and Switzerland (162).

Fifty-nine nations around the world have made at least one general aviation airplane buy since Jan. 1, 1965.

General aviation airplanes are designated as all those not flown by military services or by scheduled commercial airlines.

Total units shipped through the end of September, this year, were 1775, compared with 1384 a year ago.

Dollar value also increased to more than $45 million compared with over $34 million in the same period in 1964.

'Bugs Bunny' To Bolster Cav Morale

By Spt Hank Allison

AN KHE, Viet Nam — About a month ago, PFC James Marshall of Anaheim, Calif., took up a collection among his friends in the 1st Air Cavalry Division's 15th Administration Company.

Marshall had reasoned that since many of the troops had been sending home for powdered soft drinks, it might be fun to take an offer from the Kool-Aid Company up on a grand scale.

The company had been offering a comical "Bugs Bunny" mug to drink the sweet stuff from for 25 cents. Marshall collected quarters from more than 200 of the men in the company for the big order.

Well, the mugs are on the way, but the General Foods Corporation, the makers of Kool-Aid, decided to go a little farther than just sending the initial order.

In the mail from the White Plains, N. Y. corporation are 200 additional mugs and a case of 432 envelopes of pre - sweetened Kool-Aid—enough to make a whooping 216 gallons.

Viet Nam Casualty Is First to Use New Portable Phones at Hospital

A soldier who was wounded in Viet Nam, PFC Willie Coleman of Bellglade, Fla., was the first patient to use one of six new portable paystation telephones at Fort Benning's Martin Army Hospital.

The call was placed last week just as two Southern Bell Telephone technicians completed the installation.

Willie, a member of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, called his mother, Mrs. Evalena Coleman in Bellglade.

Standing by were C. E. Beard, supervising service foreman of the Columbus office of Southern Bell, and Ted A. Compton, a representative of Western Electric Company Inc. in Atlanta.

Compton was on the post to gather material for an article he is writing for Western Electric and Southern Bell service magazines. The article will feature the use of the portable phones for bedridden patients.

Martin Hospital has used two of the cabinet pay phones in the past. Due to the influx of casualties from Viet Nam, six new phones were installed.

The pay phones are enclosed in wheeled bedside cabinets with 30-foot extension cords.

The phones arrived in Columbus Dec. 20. Installation began at once, making possible the call to Florida two days later.

"It was a crash project from the beginning," Beard said.

Aftermath

the bullfight seems to suffer from the monotony of certainty. And within this monotony there are often many ugly moments of butchery and bloodshed.

BUT TO PRESENT the other side of a story with which I must confess little familiarity, Ernest Hemingway writes in "Death in the Afternoon", "At no point in the fight is the object to inflict pain on the bull, even though pain is inflicted. The audience is not delighting in cruelty, it is absorbed in the technique of the art."

Afficionados say they do not go to the arena simply to see a man kill a bull in the safest manner possible. They hope to see skill, daring and grace. They want to see how close the man will dare let the horns come, how far he will go to please the crowd. To the afficionado, the fight is not between man and bull but between a man and himself.

And men do try to please the crowds and some go the limit in the struggle with themselves. Most matadors are gored at least once each season and many, including the best, are killed.

But whatever the reasons for the bullfight, the corrida today attracts larger crowds than ever. There are over 400 bull rings in Mexico alone and it is estimated that 1300 bulls are killed annually in Spain. Scalpers sometimes receive as much as $500 for a ticket to a big fight in Mexico City and now it is televised in New York.

And if bullfighting has moments of ugliness it is because, as one afficionado wrote, "bullfighting is an art but not all fighters are good artists."

But what of the viewers upon whom the life of the bull fight depends? Is it all art for art's sake?
