The National Infantry Museum houses one of the most significant collections of military artifacts in existence. The new $100 million museum is located just off Main Post on South Lumpkin Road.

Columbus is a real Southern town where residents still drawl and say “ma’am.” A town with fascinating history at every turn. Located on the banks of the Chattahoochee River, it was planned in the early 1800's, and much of its history has been preserved. It’s also a busy industrial center that speaks the new language of a multicultural society and global economy.

On September 18, 1918, the Adjutant General directed that the Infantry School of Arms with all personnel, property and equipment move to Columbus, Georgia. Since then, generals and privates alike have shared the experience of learning the art of soldiering at the Home of the Infantry. They also share the rich military heritage that has evolved over the years to make our troops and our post second to none.

“I Am the Infantry, the Queen of Battle, Follow Me!”

Fort Benning is located in Southwest Georgia, just south of Columbus, Georgia. Approximately 90 minutes southwest of Atlanta.
